Foreword

The dynamic multilateralism that best defines the United Nations made further advances in 2010. From high-level discussions on the Millennium Development Goals to the establishment of UN-Women, the year saw the United Nations continuing to break ground in advancing peace, human rights, development and justice.

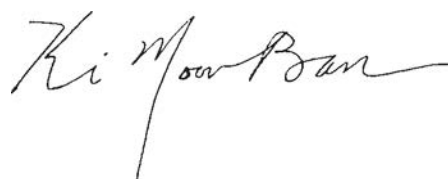

Multilateralism was central to the United Nations-led humanitarian response to the catastrophic 12 January earthquake in Haiti, which claimed hundreds of thousands of lives, including the Head of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti and 101 other United Nations personnel, and caused extensive injuries and widespread damage. While supporting recovery and reconstruction in Haiti, the United Nations also mobilized and coordinated humanitarian action throughout the year in response to international emergencies in other parts of the world.

My first Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict took office in April, and at year's end the Security Council adopted resolution 1960 calling for an end to all acts of conflict-related sexual violence. In a milestone for the long-standing efforts of the United Nations for women's rights, the General Assembly established the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women) as the centre of the UN system gender architecture. The Every Woman Every Child initiative was also set up to galvanize partners to save the lives of 16 million women and children by 2015.

Governments worked to ensure that action on climate change matched the grave threat faced by people and our planet. At the United Nations Climate Change Conference in Cancún, Mexico, they agreed on measures to build a low-carbon, climate-resilient future. The United Nations also completed the first successful Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) in ten years.

The United Nations provided its assistance to Member States by addressing such sensitive matters as the May humanitarian flotilla incident off the coast of Israel, the Commission of Inquiry into the assassination of Benazir Bhutto and the work of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon. To better support Africa, the General Assembly created the United Nations Office to the African Union in Addis Ababa.

With this edition on the work of the United Nations in 2010, the Yearbook collection further chronicles the often difficult but always essential global campaign for a better future.

About the 2010 edition of the Yearbook

This sixty-fourth volume of the Yearbook of the United Nations continues the tradition of providing the most comprehensive coverage available of the annual activities and concerns of the United Nations.

The present volume recounts how in 2010 the United Nations helped resolve conflict situations and build peace in countries worldwide, as well as reduce poverty, support national elections, counter terrorism and advance disarmament and non-proliferation. It also highlights the renewed commitment by world leaders to achieve the Millennium Development Goals by 2015; outlines the establishment of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women); and portrays the United Nations response—one of the largest ever mounted—in mobilizing and coordinating international humanitarian and economic assistance after the catastrophic 12 January earthquake in Haiti.

Readers can locate information by using the Table of contents, the Subject index, the Index of resolutions and decisions and the Index of Security Council presidential statements. The volume also features six appendices: Appendix I comprises a roster of Member States; Appendix II reproduces the Charter of the United Nations and the Statute of the International Court of Justice; Appendix III presents the structure of the principal organs of the United Nations; Appendix IV provides the agenda for each session of the principal organs in 2010; Appendix V gives the addresses of United Nations information centres and services worldwide; and Appendix VI lists the addresses of the specialized agencies and other related organizations of the UN system with their respective heads as at 2010.

Structure and scope of articles

The Yearbook is subject-oriented and divided into five parts covering political and security matters; human rights issues; economic and social questions; legal issues; and institutional, administrative and budgetary matters. Chapters summarize pertinent UN activities, including those of intergovernmental and expert bodies, as well as major reports and, in selected cases, the views of States in written communications.

Activities of UN bodies. The Yearbook puts the major activities of the principal organs of the United Nations and, on a selective basis, those of their subsidiary bodies in a narrative context of consideration, deliberation and action. The texts of all resolutions and decisions of a substantive nature adopted in 2010 by the General Assembly, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council are reproduced or summarized under the relevant topic. Such texts are preceded by procedural details giving the date of adoption, meeting number and vote totals (in favour–against–abstaining), if any, and an indication of their approval by a sessional or subsidiary body prior to final adoption. The texts are followed by details of any recorded or roll-call vote. Substantive action by the Security Council has been analysed and brief reviews of the Council’s deliberations given, particularly in cases where an issue was taken up but no resolution was adopted.

Major reports. Most reports of the Secretary-General in 2010, along with those of main United Nations committees, regional and functional commissions, and Special Rapporteurs, as well as selected reports from other UN sources, such as seminars and expert and working groups, are summarized.

Views of States. Written communications sent to the United Nations by Member States and circulated as documents of the principal organs have been summarized, in selected cases, under the relevant topics.

Multilateral treaties. Information on signatories and parties to multilateral treaties and conventions has been taken from the series Multilateral Treaties Deposited with the Secretary-General (ST/LEG/SER/E) (see treaties.un.org).

Terminology

Formal titles of bodies, organizational units, conventions, declarations and officials are normally given in full on first mention in each main section. They are also used in resolution/decision texts, as well as in the Subject index under the key word of the title. Short titles, abbreviations or acronyms are used in subsequent references in the main text.

Explanatory note on documents

A/- refers to documents of the General Assembly, numbered in separate series by session. Thus, A/65/- refers to documents issued for consideration at the sixty-fifth session, beginning with A/65/1. Documents of special and emergency special sessions are identified as A/S and A/ES-, followed by the session number.

A/C.- refers to documents of the Assembly's Main Committees. For example, A/C.1/- identifies documents of the First Committee, A/C.6/- documents of the Sixth Committee. A/BUR/- refers to documents of the General Committee. A/AC.- documents are those of the Assembly's ad hoc bodies and A/CN.- those of its commissions. For example, A/AC.105/- identifies documents of the Assembly's Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, A/CN.4/- those of its International Law Commission. Assembly resolutions and decisions since the thirty-first (1976) session have been identified by two Arabic numerals: the first indicates the session of adoption, the second the sequential number in the series. Resolutions are numbered consecutively from 1 at each session. Decisions since the fifty-seventh (2002) session are numbered consecutively from 401 for those concerned with elections and appointments and from 501 for all other decisions. Decisions of special and emergency special sessions are numbered consecutively from 11 for those concerned with elections and appointments and from 21 for all other decisions.

E/- refers to documents of the Economic and Social Council, numbered in separate series by year. Thus, E/2010/- refers to documents issued for consideration by the Council at its 2010 sessions, beginning with E/2010/1. E/AC.-, E/C.- and E/CN.-, followed by identifying numbers, refer to documents of the Council's subsidiary ad hoc bodies, committees and commissions. For example, E/CN.5/- refers to documents of the Council's Commission for Social Development, E/C.2/- to documents of its Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations. E/ICEF/- documents are those of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Symbols for the Council's resolutions and decisions since 1978 consist of two Arabic numerals: the first indicates the year of adoption and the second the sequential number in the series. There are two series: one for resolutions, beginning with 1 (e.g. resolution 2010/1), and one for decisions, beginning with 201 (e.g. decision 2010/201).

S/- refers to documents of the Security Council. Its resolutions are identified by consecutive numbers followed by the year of adoption in parentheses, beginning with resolution 1(1946).

ST/-, followed by symbols representing the issuing department or office, refers to documents of the United Nations Secretariat.

Documents of certain bodies bear special symbols, including the following:

CD/-	Conference on Disarmament
CERD/-	Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination
DC/-	Disarmament Commission
DP/-	United Nations Development Programme
HSP/-	United Nations Human Settlements Programme
ITC/-	International Trade Centre
TD/-	United Nations Conference on Trade and Development
UNEP/-	United Nations Environment Programme

Many documents of the regional commissions bear special symbols, which are sometimes preceded by the following:

E/ECA/-	Economic Commission for Africa
E/ECE/-	Economic Commission for Europe
E/ECLAC/-	Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean
E/ESCAP/-	Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific
E/ESCWA/-	Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia

Various other document symbols include the following:

L.- refers to documents of limited distribution, such as draft resolutions.

CONF.- refers to conference documents.

INF.- refers to general information documents.

SR.- refers to summary records and is followed by a meeting number.

PV.- refers to verbatim records and is followed by a meeting number.

United Nations sales publications each carry a sales number with the following components separated by periods: a capital letter indicating the language(s) of the publication; two Arabic numerals indicating the year; a Roman numeral indicating the subject category; a capital letter indicating a subdivision of the category, if any; and an Arabic numeral indicating the number of the publication within the category. Examples: E.06.II.A.2; E/F/R.05.II.E.8; E.08.II.C.2.

Report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization

Report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization

Following is the Secretary-General's report on the work of the Organization [A/65/1], dated 30 July 2010, submitted to the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly. The Assembly took note of it on 5 October 2010 (decision 65/505).

Chapter I Introduction

1. Over the past year, the world moved from being on the brink of a global economic depression to witnessing the beginnings of a global recovery. To be sure, the recovery is fragile and uneven, and there is no guarantee that a relapse will not occur. Unemployment remains unacceptably high, and vulnerable employment continues to rise. Economic volatility, eruptions of conflict, natural disasters, challenges to food security and strains on natural resources are unlikely to disappear. Moreover, analysis by the United Nations suggests that while Governments have made substantial efforts to stimulate growth and spur recovery, those efforts have not always met the needs of the poor and most vulnerable.

2. Nonetheless, there are grounds for a new optimism in what was previously a dim prognosis for millions around the world. Specifically, there is a convergence of several important elements that will help guide the United Nations through these uncertain times. The United Nations has a concrete framework to guide its action: the Millennium Declaration and the Millennium Development Goals. It has significant resources and knowledge to help address the current challenges, as well as increasingly robust partnerships with business, civil society and academia that will help elevate the response.

3. These measures will be adopted only if the United Nations is able to mobilize collective global political leadership and will. Over the past year, the Organization has sought to provide leadership and to generate such will. But this is not a task that can be successfully completed by the Organization on its own. The unswerving and proactive engagement of all Member States, developing and developed—especially at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals to be held in September—is essential.

4. In addition, over the next five years the Organization and its Member States must focus on accelerating progress through further measures. These include adopting innovative financing and investments needed to support the provision of global public goods, dedicating resources to promote peace and security, and mobilizing to meet humanitarian and human rights needs around the world.

5. In this challenging environment, the need to act has never been more pressing. One of the Organization's single most important choices will be whether to take action to leverage one of the greatest forces for positive change worldwide: women.

6. Women can provide the strength and dynamism that the world desperately needs in order to meet global challenges. They are the essential foundation on which the pillars of peace, security, respect for human rights and development must be built. Empowered women will heal societies disrupted by war, drive markets and economic growth, anchor families, and fight for justice, human rights and human dignity. Without their full engagement, the international system cannot meet the demands made of it.

7. This year, which marks the fifteenth anniversary of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the tenth year of the global effort towards the Millennium Development Goals, the message to Member States and the Organization is clear: gender equality and women's empowerment are indispensable goals that the United Nations must champion for the benefit of all.

8. In too many societies, discriminatory access to land, technology, finance, jobs and education persists, suppressing women's entrepreneurial spirit and condemning them to destitution and second-class citizenship. Violence against women—in all its forms—causes irrevocable suffering and undermines societal stability, peace and development.

9. For that reason, in 2010 the Secretary-General is encouraging the United Nations to lend its full support to programmes that empower women and protect them from discriminatory practices and violence. The leadership of Member States is essential.

10. Over the past decade, the international community was able to make considerable progress towards reducing poverty, promoting sustainable development, securing peace and stability, and promoting women's empowerment. As the Organization and its Member States look to the next decade, they should be even more ambitious. They should work together to strengthen the Organization so that it can be the hub for multilateral action and a catalytic driver of change. If collective force is brought to bear, a brighter future can be achieved for all.

Chapter II

Delivering results for people most in need

11. The year 2010 is proving to be critical for meeting the promises that the United Nations and the international community have made to those most in need around the world: promises to deliver on the Millennium Development Goals, promises to bring peace to conflict areas and stimulate recovery from conflict and natural disaster, and promises to promote human rights, the rule of law and democracy globally. The tragic earthquake in Haiti was a powerful reminder of the complex challenges that the Organization and its Member States must be ready and equipped to address.

12. The challenges are immense, but experience has shown that when strong commitments are backed by the right policies and adequate resources, even the greatest needs can be met and real progress can be achieved.

A. Development

13. Over the past two decades, with the establishment of the internationally agreed development goals, there has been a groundbreaking shift in the way in which the world thinks about development. The Millennium Development Goals, in particular, underpin an unprecedented collective endeavour to address the many dimensions of poverty and inequality, and to build a global partnership for development.

14. By identifying and embracing the Millennium Development Goals, Member States put human development at centre stage and resolved to spare no effort to transform our world into a safer, more equitable, more sustainable and more prosperous place.

1. The Millennium Development Goals and the other internationally agreed development goals

15. Five years away from the agreed target date of 2015 for achieving the Millennium Development Goals, success is still within reach but not guaranteed. The Organization and its Member States have made great strides. Yet, progress is uneven, gaps are significant and new challenges have emerged. Intensified effort on the part of all will be needed in order to accelerate progress towards the Goals.

16. Progress in poverty reduction has been unbalanced across regions and is now threatened in some parts of the world. In 2005, there were 1.4 billion people living in extreme poverty (living on less than $1.25 a day), down from 1.8 billion in 1990, with China accounting for most of the decline. Newly updated estimates from the World Bank suggest that, owing to the recent financial and economic crises, an additional 64 million people will fall into extreme poverty by the end of this year. Nevertheless, the momentum of economic growth in developing countries is strong enough to sustain progress on poverty and put the world on track to meet the poverty reduction target.

17. While there is no deadline for achieving "full and productive employment and decent work for all", no country can claim to have reached that target. The lack of progress in creating productive and decent jobs in urban areas, and stagnant farm productivity in many rural areas, have been the key reasons for the persistence of poverty and the rise in the numbers of the working poor. Women's lack of access to land, with secondary effects on access to credit, inputs and extension services, has also had serious impacts on food security. The food and energy crises and the global financial and economic crisis have further undermined progress.

18. Remarkable progress has been made since 2000 towards achieving universal primary education, with many developing countries having crossed the 90 per cent enrolment threshold. Primary school enrolment has increased fastest in sub-Saharan Africa. There is some concern that the rapid rise in enrolment may place undue pressures on the capacity of schools and teachers to deliver high-quality education.

19. The gender gap in primary school enrolment has narrowed over the past decade, although at a slow pace. Progress at the secondary school level, which is especially important for women's empowerment, has been even slower and in some cases is being reversed.

20. Addressing gender inequality and achieving women's empowerment remain among the most difficult goals, with cross-cutting implications. Worldwide, women's share of national parliamentary seats has increased only slowly, averaging 19 per cent as of January 2010. A number of developing countries, however, have led the way in using temporary special measures, including quotas, to make rapid progress in this area.

21. Violence against women and girls takes an unacceptable toll and is a serious impediment to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals globally. In recognition of this, the Secretary-General's campaign UNiTE to End Violence against Women encourages countries to adopt and enforce national laws to address and punish all forms of violence against women and girls, adopt and implement multisectoral national action plans, strengthen data collection on the prevalence of violence against women and girls, increase public awareness and social mobilization, and address sexual violence in conflict.

22. In the case of the health-related Millennium Development Goals, significant progress has been achieved. Globally, the number of deaths per year among children under 5 has been reduced from 12.5 million (1990) to 8.8 million (2008). The number of people in low- and middle-income countries receiving antiretroviral therapy for HIV increased tenfold in five years (2003–2008). Yet, rates of HIV infection among women continue to grow in some regions, with women and girls bearing the disproportionate burden of providing care to those who are ill. Major progress has been made in reducing measles deaths and in providing interventions to control malaria and tuberculosis. This includes a sharp decrease in the number of measles deaths across Africa and indications that malaria control measures may also be yielding results.

23. Nonetheless, current trends indicate that many countries are unlikely to achieve the health targets by 2015, particularly in the area of reducing maternal mortality, which has shown the least progress. Access to reproductive health services remains insufficient where women's health risks are greatest.

24. Despite an increase in the number of deliveries attended by skilled health workers in the developing regions, from 53 per cent in 1990 to 63 per cent in 2008, a recent academic analysis found an annual rate of reduction in maternal mortality of 1.3 per cent between 1990 and 2008, well short of the 5.5 per cent reduction needed in order to meet the Millennium Development Goal target. Access to maternal health-care for poor and rural women is an area of particular concern.

25. Some movement forward has been made towards halving the proportion of people without access to clean water. The number of people having access to an improved water source in developing countries rose from 71 per cent in 1990 to 84 per cent in 2008. But the proportion with improved sanitation increased by only 11 percentage points between 1990 and 2008. And the goal of improving the lives of at least 100 million slum-dwellers has proved to be much less ambitious than what would be needed to reverse the trend of increasing numbers of slum-dwellers.

26. Since 1986, the implementation of the Montreal Protocol has successfully phased out the production and use of more than 98 per cent of all controlled ozone-depleting substances. In contrast, the rate of growth of carbon dioxide emissions was much higher during the period 1995–2004 than during the period 1970–1994, and the trend has yet to change. While net deforestation rates have come down, partly because of reforestation efforts, around 5.6 million hectares of forest cover are still lost worldwide every year. The target of reducing the rate of biodiversity loss by 2010 has not been met. Nearly 17,000 plant and animal species remain at risk of extinction as a result of major threats such as overconsumption, habitat loss, invasive species, pollution and climate change.

27. Official development assistance delivered in 2009 was almost $120 billion. Flows of some $20 billion (in 2009 prices) in addition to the projected delivery will be needed this year to reach the Gleneagles Group of Eight official development assistance (ODA) target for 2010, which amounts to approximately $146 billion in 2009 prices. Of the shortfall, $16 billion will be required in order to meet the commitment for Africa. In 2008, ODA to the least developed countries was equivalent to 0.09 per cent of the total gross national income of countries members of the Development Assistance Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), with less than half of member countries meeting their target of 0.15–0.20 per cent of gross national income in aid to the least developed countries.

28. A number of important initiatives are currently under way with a view to accelerating progress towards the Millennium Development Goals and other internationally agreed development goals. In 2009, as a follow-up to the United Nations Conference on the World Financial and Economic Crisis and Its Impact on Development, the General Assembly charged an ad hoc open-ended working group with addressing a range of challenges in crisis response and reform. The working group has focused on mitigating the effects of the economic crisis on development, systemic reform issues and strengthening the role of the United Nations in global economic governance.

29. The United Nations system is advancing the implementation of its nine joint crisis initiatives designed to help countries weather and recover from the reverberating impact of the economic crisis, including the Social Protection Floor Initiative and the Global Jobs Pact. With a similar focus on employment and decent work, the system has come together in devising a plan of action for the Second United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty, which should contribute to a more coherent and integrated system-wide response to the economic crisis and its ongoing impacts.

30. Overall, the experience of the past year underscores the urgency of moving the development agenda towards nationally owned development strategies that combine bold economic growth with social and sustainable development goals. Such strategies should address full employment and decent work deficits, boost job creation through investment in green jobs and the expansion of public infrastructure, strengthen social protection, offer incentives to the private sector to retain existing jobs as well as create new ones, and reorient industrial policy towards a low-carbon development path.

31. The High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals in September will provide a unique opportunity to strengthen collective efforts and partnerships for the push to 2015, and to advance progress across the broader global development agenda. All stakeholders are strongly encouraged to engage in the summit process and to bring with them a renewed commitment to achieving the Millennium Development Goals by 2015.

2. The special needs of Africa

32. A decade of deep commitment to reform and political and economic stability is beginning to have an impact on Africa's development path. In fact, since 2000 sub-Saharan Africa has had a higher growth rate than a number of emerging economies. Overall, Africa has shown greater resilience to the financial and economic crisis than many other regions of the world and is expected to rebound faster than Latin America, Europe and Central Asia. Nevertheless, the crises have slowed the economic growth that Africa had previously experienced, reducing export earnings, remittances from the African diaspora and foreign direct investment. According to the World Economic Situation and Prospects 2010: update as of mid-2010, the aggregate economic growth rate in Africa was estimated to be 2.4 per cent in 2009 and is projected to be 4.7 per cent in 2010, down from an average of about 5.7 per cent during the period 2004–2007.

33. Even after the recovery gathers pace in advanced economies, the impact of the crises on unemployment and social welfare in Africa may linger, owing to the lack of social protection to offset the negative impact of a global recession on households and specific vulnerable groups.

34. Improving the status of women and girls in Africa requires specific attention if progress towards development is to be accelerated. Some positive steps have been taken. As of February 2010, 4 out of the top 10 countries in the world in terms of percentage of women parliamentarians were in Africa. Rwanda is the only country in the world in which women make up the majority of parliamentarians. Nevertheless, throughout the region, women still face violence and discrimination, are victim to harmful traditional practices and beliefs, and suffer disproportionately from hunger and poverty.

35. Africa has the potential to achieve the Millennium Development Goals. It has vast human and material wealth. Africa's people need neither pity nor charity; they need the tools to create jobs and generate incomes. Developed countries should make good on promises made repeatedly at summit meetings of the Group of Eight and the Group of 20, and at the United Nations, to double aid to Africa. Yet, according to OECD, in 2010 Africa is likely to receive only about $11 billion (in current prices) of the $25 billion increase (measured in 2004 prices and exchange rates) in ODA envisaged at Gleneagles. This is due largely to the unmet commitments of a number of major donors that give large shares of ODA to Africa.

36. The Secretary-General's Millennium Development Goals Africa Steering Group has focused on specific needs in such strategically vital areas as health, education, agriculture, infrastructure and trade. It has provided the international community with a clear sense of direction on what it will take to sustain Africa's own efforts to fulfil its abundant potential and achieve the Millennium Development Goals. For example, across Africa, progress is being made against diseases such as malaria, tuberculosis and AIDS. Africa is now on track to attain the objective of zero deaths from malaria by 2015 in sub-Saharan Africa. In addition, efforts of the United Nations system have focused on support in the areas of governance and institutional capacity-building, including through the strengthening of human resource and leadership capacity in public service at all levels, as well as e-governance and the utilization of information and communications technology for development. In these areas too, Africa's commitments have yielded fruit, and many countries are now enjoying political stability.

B. Peace and security

37. The duty to prevent, contain and resolve violent conflict is enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and forms a central pillar of the work of the Organization. Over the past year, the United Nations system redoubled its efforts to engage in preventive diplomacy, to improve its crisis response capacity, to manage violent conflict and to build sustainable peace following conflict. It is clear that if the United Nations is to better address political crises and resolve them more durably, such tools as peacekeeping and peacebuilding must be regarded as part of a political solution, not alternatives to one.

1. Preventive diplomacy and support for peace processes

38. Working closely with national actors, the United Nations has become more proactive, agile and effective in addressing rising political tensions and emerging crises. Throughout the past year, the Organization led or assisted mediation processes in more than 20 countries on four continents. The mediation support service has been professionalized through the building up of knowledge, capacity and a network of expertise, and a strategy on gender and mediation has been developed to promote more effective participation by women in peace processes. To support the latter, the Department of Political Affairs partnered with members of United Nations Action against Sexual Violence in Conflict in organizing a high-level colloquium on addressing conflict-related sexual violence in mediation and peace agreements. There have also been increased efforts to provide greater political support and guidance to United Nations country teams working in politically complex environments.

39. The Organization's efforts over the past year have devoted significant attention to Africa and the Middle East and have required the entire range of interventions, from conflict prevention to support for peace consolidation.

40. In Africa, the United Nations worked closely together with regional and subregional organizations to promote a rapid and peaceful return to constitutional order and avert violence in Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Madagascar and the Niger.

41. In Guinea, the International Commission of Inquiry conducted a thorough investigation of the 29 September 2009 massacre, paying special attention to the sexual violence that took place. In partnership with the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union, the United Nations engaged in preventive diplomacy. Together with those partners, the United Nations also conducted a needs assessment in the area of security sector reform, a critical element needed for the consolidation of long-term stability in the country.

42. The United Nations assisted the Government of Sierra Leone in both peace consolidation and conflict prevention. The former took the form of assistance in follow-up to key political agreements, while the latter involved confidence-building measures in preparation for the 2012 elections.

43. In Western Sahara, the United Nations continued to work with Morocco and the Frente Polisario, as well as neighbouring countries, to find a mutually acceptable solution of self-determination for the people of Western Sahara.

44. The United Nations facilitated the peace process in the eastern region of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, which contributed to a rapprochement between Kinshasa and Kigali. It also continued to assist in the peaceful settlement of the border disputes between Cameroon and Nigeria and between Equatorial Guinea and Gabon.

45. In the Central African Republic, the United Nations helped to shore up critical elements of the peace process, such as the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants. It further encouraged the participation of all armed groups in the peace process.

46. To bolster the conflict prevention architecture in West Africa, the Organization supported, through the Regional Office, the fight against drug trafficking and organized crime.

47. In Somalia, the Organization and its Member States implemented a strategy to support fragile peace processes. Throughout the year, preparedness plans were continuously updated in the event that the Security Council decided to deploy a United Nations peacekeeping mission.

48. In the Middle East, the Organization's political missions supported several countries navigating the difficult transition from war to peace. The Organization strived to create conditions conducive to a resumption of political negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians. The United Nations helped to manage a cessation of hostilities between Israel and Lebanon and encouraged the Government of Lebanon to develop a comprehensive border strategy to enforce the arms embargo. The United Nations has consistently advocated a full reopening of the crossings in Gaza.

49. The United Nations actively participated in the Middle East Quartet in supporting a broader Middle East settlement and responding to unfolding developments in the region. More recently, in the aftermath of the Israelis' attack on and diversion of a humanitarian flotilla bound for Gaza, the Secretary-General has been engaged in formulating proposals, consistent with the Security Council presidential statement on the issue (S/PRST/2010/9), for a credible, transparent and independent international inquiry into the events.

50. In Iraq, the United Nations helped to resolve a stalemate over the country's electoral law, paving the way for national elections in March 2010. Representatives of the Government of Iraq and the Iraqi Kurdistan Regional Government met under the auspices of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, through a high-level task force, to discuss Mission reports on disputed internal boundaries.

51. In Sri Lanka, the Secretary-General has engaged with the Government in line with the commitments made in the joint statement issued in May 2009. Accordingly, the United Nations system supports reconciliation and a sustainable political solution that addresses the aspirations and grievances of all communities; is providing assistance in the return and resettlement of displaced persons, including former child soldiers; and has called for an accountability process to address any alleged violations of international humanitarian and human rights law.

52. Engagements in other parts of the world included: assisting Governments in Central Asia in developing arrangements for the joint management of shared water and energy resources as part of a conflict prevention programme; supporting the dialogue on the name issue between Greece and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia; facilitating full-fledged negotiations towards a comprehensive settlement in Cyprus; and assisting in the peaceful settlement of the border dispute between the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela and Guyana.

2. Peacekeeping

53. Peacekeeping plays a critical role in helping to maintain or restore durable peace and stability in countries emerging from conflict around the world. United Nations peacekeeping reached an unprecedented level of 124,000 deployed personnel last year, as compared with only 20,000 merely a decade ago.

54. Creating an enabling environment for elections and negotiations was a core focus of four peacekeeping missions this year. In the Sudan, the United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS) supported the elections held in April 2010, while strengthening its capacity to protect civilians. UNMIS also began supporting key stakeholders in planning for the upcoming 2011 referendums and in engaging those stakeholders on post-referendum arrangements. Meanwhile, in Darfur, negotiations led to the conclusion of preliminary agreements between the Government of the Sudan and one of the coalitions of opposition groups. However, much remains to be done to ensure that the North-South peace process remains on track and that an inclusive and comprehensive peace agreement is reached for Darfur. Restrictions on the freedom of movement of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur continued to hamper the Operation's ability to implement its mandate.

55. In Côte d'Ivoire, disagreements over the final voter list led to the postponement of elections, amid several violent incidents. The United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the United Nations country team continued to provide support to the implementation of the Ouagadougou Political Agreements and the consolidation of peace.

56. In Afghanistan, the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) provided technical assistance to the conduct of elections in August 2009, including support for women's participation, and facilitated political dialogue to resolve the issues arising in their aftermath. UNAMA continued to support the coordination of international aid and assisted the new Government in assuming increasing responsibilities. Insecurity, however, poses challenges for the Mission's work, and a tragic attack on a United Nations guesthouse in Kabul on 28 October 2009 claimed the lives of five United Nations personnel.

57. Efforts to strengthen institutions and support stability and economic recovery dominated the work undertaken by yet another set of peacekeeping missions. The operations in Liberia and Timor-Leste focused on strengthening national security institutions and the rule of law while facilitating recovery and peacebuilding tasks. In Timor-Leste, the United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste supported the resumption of primary policing duties by the Timorese national police and continued to support the Government in strengthening state institutions. In Liberia, the Mission was able to continue its gradual drawdown, which is linked to the achievement of specific benchmarks.

58. Significant progress was also achieved in the peace process in Burundi, which has embarked on a round of critical elections that will extend beyond the summer. It is a sign of the maturation of the peace agreement between formerly hostile parties that the elections were peaceful, despite disagreements and contested results. The peacekeeping mission in the country was transformed into a peacebuilding mission on 1 January 2010.

59. The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon monitored the implementation of the cessation-of-hostilities agreement, contributing, under difficult conditions, to the establishment of a relatively stable environment in southern Lebanon. The mission has actively attempted to facilitate an agreement that would allow the Israeli forces to leave the northern part of Ghajar, as contemplated by Security Council resolution 1701(2006).

60. Haiti, with the support of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), had been making steady progress towards stability and economic recovery when the country was hit by a devastating earthquake. More than 220,000 persons were killed, including 101 of the Organization's own staff. More than 300,000 Haitians were injured, and damages and losses are estimated at $7.8 billion. A massive international assistance effort was immediately launched, and additional troops and police were authorized by the Security Council to support MINUSTAH.

61. Following the earthquake, MINUSTAH increased its overall force levels to support the immediate relief, recovery, and stability efforts. The Mission is providing logistical support and technical expertise to help the Government of Haiti to continue operations, supporting the Government in strengthening rule-of-law institutions at the national and local levels, and implementing its resettlement strategy for displaced persons. It is also supporting the Government and the Provisional Electoral Council in the preparation and conduct of the country's elections and coordinating international electoral assistance to Haiti in cooperation with other international stakeholders.

62. Withdrawal or drawdown dominated the peacekeeping strategies of two other missions. In Chad, discussions on the future of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad began after the Government had called for its withdrawal. Special attention was devoted to the continued protection of refugees and internally displaced persons, and to facilitating the provision of humanitarian assistance in eastern Chad. The drawdown has been successful thus far and is on target for completion by 31 December 2010.

63. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, a new phase began with the transformation of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo into the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo following the agreement between the Government and the United Nations that drawdown would be gradual and based on joint assessments of conditions on the ground. Meanwhile, given the ongoing insecurity in the east, the Mission continued its efforts to protect civilians and support the implementation of national plans to address the presence of armed groups, based on a policy of strict conditionality related to the conduct of the Forces armées de la République démocratique du Congo in terms of human rights. Efforts at stabilization and strengthening governance, including with regard to the security sector, also continued.

64. Over the past year, the widespread or systematic use of sexual violence against civilians in armed conflicts as a tactic of war was of great concern. The first report of the Secretary-General on the subject (S/2009/362) was issued mainly on the basis of reports from peacekeeping missions and identified serious gaps in the capacity of domestic security and justice systems to tackle impunity, as well as shortcomings in the provision of services for survivors. Among other key recommendations, the Secretary-General proposed the appointment of a senior person with the responsibility across the United Nations system for attending to the prevention and response to sexual violence in post-conflict and conflict situations. Subsequently, the Secretary-General appointed a Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict.

65. As part of a broader strategy for empowering women, the Secretary-General has encouraged Member States to provide more female peacekeepers. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations has developed gender guidelines for military peacekeepers, as well as a gender training strategy.

66. The continued scale of deployment and the diversity and complexity of mission mandates is not matched by adequate capabilities. In recent times, differing views within the Security Council and on the part of other stakeholders on the political strategy for missions, and insufficient consent by host Governments, have hampered the implementation of Council mandates in several operations. The increased demands have exposed the limitations of the basic systems, structures and tools of the Organization, which are challenged by the size, tempo and complex tasks of today's missions.

67. Under the banner of the New Horizon process, the Secretariat has worked intensively with Member States over the past year to examine these challenges and make recommendations to address them. In a series of Security Council and General Assembly deliberations, this agenda received broad support. The ongoing support of Member States for further implementation will be essential if the United Nations is to provide stronger peacekeeping capabilities in the future.

3. Peacebuilding

68. The past year saw momentum building behind United Nations peacebuilding efforts, with the implementation of a number of important recommendations set out in the report of the Secretary-General on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict (A/63/881-S/2009/304). Specifically, progress was made in the deployment of leadership teams in the field, in the development and implementation of integrated strategic frameworks for peace consolidation in certain field locations, and in the improvement of collaboration with the World Bank.

69. The Peacebuilding Support Office initiated a global review of international civilian capacities. The review is designed to examine how the international system can bridge persistent gaps in standards, training and the timely deployment of civilian capacities for peacebuilding.

70. The Security Council has requested the Secretary-General to submit a report on women's participation in peacebuilding, analysing the needs of women and girls in post-conflict situations and setting out recommendations to ensure that peacebuilding planning and financing processes respond fully to those needs.

71. The Peacebuilding Commission has remained engaged in the four countries on its agenda, with the support of the Peacebuilding Support Office and the integrated peacebuilding missions. Over the past year, it improved its working methods and strengthened its partnerships with the international financial institutions with regional and subregional organizations and with the national actors in the countries on its agenda.

72. The Peacebuilding Fund has provided funding assistance to an increasingly large and diverse number of countries emerging from conflict. As at 28 February 2010, with more than $334 million in deposits, the Fund had already allocated more than $196 million to 16 countries for a total of 115 projects.

73. The five-year review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture was launched in February 2010. The 2010 review process offers an excellent opportunity to reaffirm and deepen the political commitment to the role of the Peacebuilding Commission and explore ways in which to realize its full potential.

C. Humanitarian affairs

74. During the reporting period, emerging humanitarian challenges such as climate change, the food and financial crises, resource scarcities, population growth and urbanization increased vulnerabilities and humanitarian needs around the world. The year was also marked by the continuation of disasters associated with natural hazards and by an escalation in armed conflicts.

75. In support of Governments and working with other partners, the United Nations system responded to some 43 new emergencies: 33 natural disasters, 9 armed conflicts and 1 epidemic. In terms of regional patterns, 15 occurred in Africa, 14 in Asia and the Pacific, 8 in Latin America and the Caribbean and 6 in Central Asia. In comparison with last year, the number of new emergencies increased in Africa and Asia and the Pacific, while decreasing in Europe and Central Asia.

76. In Latin America and the Caribbean, the United Nations system was called to respond to the devastating 12 January earthquake in Haiti. Within 36 hours, the United Nations had deployed staff to coordinate and integrate the emergency response effort in the face of the loss of the Mission's leadership.

77. In March 2010, the United Nations, the United States of America and the Government of Haiti, with the support of Brazil, Canada, the European Union, France and Spain, co-hosted the ministerial-level International Donors' Conference "Towards a New Future for Haiti" in New York. The aim of the Conference was to mobilize international support for the development needs of Haiti in an effort to lay the foundation for Haiti's long-term recovery. Member States and international partners pledged $5.3 billion for the next 18 months to begin Haiti's path towards long-term recovery.

78. By the end of May 2010, emergency shelter materials had been distributed to almost all those identified as being in need and the revised Humanitarian Appeal of $1.5 billion for ongoing humanitarian operations had been 58 per cent funded, at $878 million.

79. In addition to relief assistance and the previously described mandated areas of support provided by MINUSTAH, the United Nations system is supporting the recovery efforts of the Government of Haiti by providing shelter, making cash for work available, removing rubble, supporting rebuilding efforts and, more broadly, strengthening the Government's capacity to deliver basic services. The events in Haiti point once again to the importance of disaster management and risk reduction, areas of competency that the Organization must further develop and expand.

80. While the United Nations has rallied to help the Haitians recover from the disaster, this is not a time for complacency. Much remains to be done, and the Organization and its Member States must strengthen their efforts to deliver on the commitments they have made to the Government and to the Haitian people.

81. The reporting period also saw the shrinking of humanitarian space as humanitarian workers came under attack. In Afghanistan, Pakistan, Somalia, Chad, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Sudan, the number of staff deaths, kidnappings and attacks increased. Attacks and threats against the United Nations have forced the Organization to review and adjust security arrangements and take measures to mitigate risks by changing the way in which programmes are implemented. At the same time, the Organization is working to ensure enhanced access for humanitarian actors and respect for humanitarian principles in a range of conflict situations. Advocacy efforts are helping to draw attention to neglected emergencies, attracting much-needed political and financial support.

82. Owing to a more tightly coordinated and needs-based humanitarian financing system, consolidated and flash appeals worldwide reached a value of some $10 billion over the past year, of which 71 per cent was funded. This represents an approximate doubling of the 2007 figures ($7.1 billion requested, 71 per cent funded) and a tripling of the 2004 figures ($3.4 billion requested, 64 per cent funded). Although funding for the Central Emergency Response Fund dropped from $453 million in 2008 to $401 million in 2009, some 23 Member States increased contributions in their national currencies. Another 17 countries joined the ranks of Fund donors in 2009, bringing to 117 the total number of Member States that have contributed to the Fund. Levels of funding for country-based pooled funds also decreased, from $407 million in 2008 to $339 million in 2009, while 5 emergency response funds were established in new countries, bringing the total to 18. Funding decreases were due largely to global currency fluctuations. The United Nations is asking Member States to increase the average amount contributed per fund, adjusted for local exchange rates. Funding for the humanitarian coordination system and common planning processes, including financing, has flattened and not kept pace with requirements.

83. There has been an increasing focus on accountability for funds, including the development of a draft performance and accountability framework for the Central Emergency Response Fund. Country-based pooled funds continued to make progress in strengthening their respective monitoring systems, notably in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, Iraq, the Occupied Palestinian Territory and Somalia.

84. The Organization focused on advancing three policy areas. First, the Organization joined with humanitarian partners to successfully advocate the mainstreaming of disaster risk reduction and management into climate change discussions. Secondly, it supported the Security Council's new informal Expert Group on the Protection of Civilians in developing more principled, transparent and systematic action on protection issues. Thirdly, it worked to embed gender perspectives more thoroughly into humanitarian response, contingency planning and integrated mission planning by providing technical support on gender equality programming.

D. Human rights, the rule of law, genocide prevention and the responsibility to protect, and democracy and good governance

85. The protection of human rights, the establishment of the rule of law, genocide prevention and the responsibility to protect, and democracy and good governance are prerequisites for the promotion of human welfare and permit the realization of a stable polity. Those elements provide the foundation for the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals. Without them, violence, corruption, inequity and conflict ensue, creating instability, uncertainty and societal fragmentation. For that reason, the Organization is unrelenting in its commitment to their advancement through its work around the world.

1. Human rights

86. Over the past year, the United Nations witnessed the negative impact of ongoing global challenges, such as the economic and food crises and climate change, on the status of human rights. Of particular concern were increasing incidents of xenophobia and discrimination against non-citizens and ongoing impunity for human rights violations.

87. In response, the United Nations system increased its efforts to integrate human rights into the development efforts of Member States. Accordingly, the United Nations Development Group established a standing mechanism to assist the United Nations system at Headquarters and in the field in mainstreaming human rights into policy development and operational activities.

88. The Organization also used the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the twentieth anniversary of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the twentieth anniversary of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families to remind the international community of the need to take decisive action to protect the most vulnerable groups, particularly women and children, migrants, refugees, internally displaced persons and asylum-seekers. Following the successful conclusion of the Durban Review Conference in April 2009, the Organization began to take practical steps to realize the aspirations reflected in the Outcome Document.

89. An increased presence of human rights expertise in the field enhanced the Organization's ability to provide assistance to Governments and other partners in addressing prevailing human rights challenges. Human rights officers supported the Human Rights Council's fact-finding mission to Gaza and the Secretary-General's Commission of Inquiry for Guinea in the aftermath of the violence that occurred on 28 September 2009 in Conakry. They also supported transitional justice processes in numerous countries around the world. In addition, the United Nations system continued to monitor the situation of children affected by conflict, as called for in Security Council resolutions 1612(2005) and 1882(2009).

90. The Secretary-General sincerely hopes that during the forthcoming review of the Human Rights Council in 2010–2011, the focus of discussions will be on building upon the achievements of the Council, such as the universal periodic review mechanism. The Council can and must do more to address serious and chronic human rights situations and respond to emerging crises. It should also strengthen its interaction with the independent experts who constitute the special procedures mandated by the Council.

91. As the September High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals approaches, the international community must seek to leverage the momentum generated in support of the Goals to strengthen the human rights commitment underpinning the Millennium Declaration.

2. Rule of law

92. Many of the world's poor and marginalized groups do not benefit from the protection provided by the rule of law. This is particularly true for the disproportionately high number of women who find themselves without access to justice.

93. Over the past few years, the Organization has been seeking to address that imbalance by expanding its programming worldwide. Over the past year, the United Nations system conducted rule-of-law programming in more than 120 countries, 19 of which host peace operations mandated by the Security Council, which have as part of their mission the goals of “addressing exclusion” and “enhancing justice and security for all”.

94. The link among peace, development and justice was strengthened through the outcome of the First Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court. The Kampala Declaration of the International Criminal Court, the amendments to the Rome Statute and the agreement on the crime of aggression adopted over the past year provide the international community with additional tools for fighting impunity.

95. In order to promote women’s empowerment in particular, the Organization took definitive steps to establish a deployable team of experts to strengthen the rule-of-law response to sexual violence in armed conflict pursuant to Security Council resolution 1888(2009), and to build on existing United Nations efforts in many conflict-affected countries. New United Nations rules on the treatment of women prisoners and offenders, and revised model strategies and measures on the elimination of violence against women in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice, have also been formulated. In addition, a global effort was launched to encourage Member States to deploy more women in the United Nations police, with a view to increasing their participation from 6.5 per cent to 20 per cent by 2014.

96. To enhance coherence, the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group issued system-wide guidance on a United Nations common approach to transitional justice. The approach is guided by the principle of the centrality of victims and international law, takes into account the particular context of the country situation, emphasizes the importance of combating impunity and upholding the protection of human rights in peace agreements, and calls for efforts to address violations of social and economic rights.

97. The Group also launched the United Nations Rule of Law website and document repository (www.unrol.org), a central resource making more than 1,200 United Nations documents readily accessible and linking 42 United Nations entities and 126 partners worldwide. Both initiatives are part of a broader United Nations effort to provide more strategic and effective rule-of-law assistance. Member States and other partners are encouraged to collaborate on strengthening global and country-level coordination and coherence in the area of security and justice.

3. Genocide prevention and the responsibility to protect

98. The concept of the responsibility to protect is gaining traction within the United Nations system. The Special Adviser who focuses on the responsibility to protect led the preparation of the January 2009 report of the Secretary-General on implementing the responsibility to protect (A/63/677) and, together with the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide, consulted widely with Member States and other stakeholders in the months leading up to the General Assembly’s three-day debate on the report in July. The largely positive debate led to the adoption of the Assembly’s first resolution on the subject, resolution 63/308, by consensus.

99. The Office of the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide continues to provide a unique analytical perspective within the United Nations system, to sound the alarm when necessary and to increase the capacity of the United Nations to prevent genocide. Over the past year, the Office strengthened its information management system that allows for the monitoring of developments in all countries. The Office put into practice an analysis framework to assess the risk of genocide in a given situation, which was made public and was welcomed by Member States, experts and non-governmental organizations. The Panel of the Wise of the African Union requested that it be integrated into the Organization’s early warning mechanism.

100. The office also expanded its outreach and awareness-raising activities. In an effort to mainstream genocide prevention and encourage a culture of prevention throughout the United Nations system and beyond, it established contacts with the African Union; the Organization of American States, including the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights; and the European Union.

101. Further conceptual, political and implementation work on the part of all stakeholders is necessary.

4. Democracy and good governance

102. Democratic norms permeate the fabric of the Organization and are strengthened by the progressive adoption of international standards and practices. The Secretary-General’s Guidance Note on Democracy has served as a key document in harmonizing the work of the Organization in support of democracy by establishing specific goals and norms.

103. Poor governance can be both a source and a consequence of conflict. Addressing weak governance, in particular by promoting the empowerment and participation of women, is now accepted as an integral part of approaches to development, conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding. Promoting good governance is also reflected in the mandates of many field missions, contributing to a measurable improvement in democratic governance in their host countries.

104. Over the past year, the United Nations provided electoral assistance to more than 50 Member States. In peacekeeping or post-conflict environments, such as Afghanistan, the Central African Republic, Côte d'Ivoire, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti and Iraq, it was provided through components of field missions of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations or the Department of Political Affairs. Technical assistance in the context of development, such as in Bangladesh, El Salvador, Malawi, the United Republic of Tanzania and Timor-Leste, was provided mainly by the United Nations Development Programme as part of its democratic governance programmes. In other contentious environments, such as Kyrgyzstan and Guinea, electoral assistance contributed to ongoing processes of the restoration of constitutional order, seeking to ensure inclusiveness and transparency, even under very difficult circumstances.

105. The United Nations Democracy Fund has enhanced the Organization's efforts by providing grants, especially to local non-governmental organizations, to strengthen the voice of civil society, promote human rights and encourage the participation of marginalized groups in democratic processes. To date, the Fund has received more than $105 million in contributions and has supported 271 projects worldwide.

Chapter III

Securing global goods

106. Addressing climate change, advancing on a global health agenda, countering terrorism and making progress on disarmament and non-proliferation have been priorities for the Secretary-General since he first came to office. These issues share some important traits: they can have a dramatic impact on human welfare and on peace and security, they ignore borders and affect populations indiscriminately, they are highly complex in nature, and the remedies needed are cross-sectoral in nature and require the coordination of activities across a broad range of actors. They constitute global threats that must be addressed if the global good is to be secured. The United Nations, with its engagement across a wide range of sectors and with its universal membership, is the only institution in the world that has the scope, expertise and legitimacy to be able to craft and implement effective policies to address these challenges.

A. Climate change

107. Political momentum on climate change swelled during the second half of 2009 as the world prepared for the United Nations Climate Change

Conference in Copenhagen in December. In September, the Secretary-General hosted a Summit on Climate Change with 101 world leaders, which helped to place climate change at the top of the global agenda. No issue is more fundamental to long-term sustainable development and prosperity, energy security, food security and international security.

108. While Copenhagen did not fulfil all public expectations, it was an essential step forward in global efforts to address the climate challenge. Copenhagen marked the largest-ever gathering of Heads of State and Government on climate change. Important progress was achieved in building a broad political consensus that can invigorate global negotiations.

109. The challenge now is to build on the elements of agreement that emerged from Copenhagen within the global, dual-track negotiating process under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change. Strengthening trust between countries and increasing the transparency and effectiveness of the process are critical. The ultimate goal remains an effective, ambitious and comprehensive global agreement that sets the world on the path towards low-emissions development and helps to catalyse clean-energy growth in developing countries.

110. The timing—and the precise form—of that agreement is for Governments to decide. Every year of delay increases the risk of dangerous climate impacts and adds to the human and economic toll.

111. Since the end of 2009, the Secretary-General has been working closely with the world leaders to ensure that the subject of climate change remains a strategic imperative. He is encouraging Governments to press forward with national pledges to minimize emissions and to take ambitious action at every level to strengthen mitigation and adaptation.

112. In addition, the Secretary-General is urging countries to build on the progress made at Copenhagen on an adaptation framework; an agreement on reducing deforestation and forest degradation; a system for measuring, reporting on and verifying mitigation and finance; technology development and transfer; and short- and long-term finance. The United Nations will continue to support Governments as needed in each of those areas.

113. To accelerate momentum, the Secretary-General launched a High-level Advisory Group on Climate Change Financing to identify potential funding sources to support climate action in developing countries. He will also establish a high-level panel on global sustainability to address the linkages between climate change and sustainable development.

114. There is still much work ahead of us. Global greenhouse gas emissions continue to rise, with climate impacts affecting millions of people worldwide, especially the most vulnerable. That is why the United Nations system is committed to assisting Governments in implementing existing and future climate change agreements while building global green prosperity. The United Nations system will continue to provide expertise and assistance within a sustainable development context, including in core climate-related sectors such as energy, water, food security and disaster risk reduction. In addressing climate change, the world can help to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and chart a path towards a safer, healthier, cleaner and more prosperous future for all.

B. Global health

115. The importance of health for economic productivity, social stability and security, and poverty reduction has been firmly demonstrated. Over the past year, the Secretary-General has called for a renewed focus on achieving the health-related Millennium Development Goals, which so clearly underpins progress in other areas.

116. A focus on results has spurred innovation, not just in terms of medicines and vaccines, but also in ways of doing business and raising resources, and in attention to measurement and the setting of priorities. The creation of new partnerships has produced impressive results, notably in the field of immunization and in the fight against AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria.

117. Over the past year, the influenza A (H1N1) pandemic reminded us of the rapid spread of new pathogens and demonstrated the effectiveness of the International Health Regulations promulgated by the World Health Organization.

118. Malaria still kills more than 800,000 people a year, most of them children under 5 and pregnant women. However, there has been tremendous progress over a short period of time: more than 150 million insecticide-treated nets were delivered to Africa during the two-year period 2008–2009, and nine countries have reduced child deaths by more than 50 per cent.

119. There has been measurable forward movement in the AIDS response. Since 2001, the global rate of new infections has decreased by 17 per cent. At the same time, HIV treatment access in low- and middle-income countries increased tenfold over a span of just five years, bringing to 4 million the number of people on antiretroviral therapy at the end of 2008. Today, the tools and techniques exist to virtually eliminate mother-to-child HIV transmission. HIV-based stigma and discrimination are being confronted more strongly, as demonstrated by several countries that have lifted decades-old travel restrictions on people living with HIV.

120. The global response to AIDS must be leveraged more effectively to meet women's health needs. AIDS remains the leading cause of death among women of reproductive age worldwide. A total of 15.7

million women are living with HIV. Shortfalls in public financing threaten the progress made in curbing the epidemic's spread and saving the lives of those infected. Four out of five low- and middle-income countries are currently not on track to reach their universal access targets.

121. The world has made unacceptably slow progress on maternal health, the critical indicator of the health and prosperity of a nation. With hundreds of thousands of women and girls dying in pregnancy or childbirth every year and 10 million to 15 million more suffering long-term disabilities, the Secretary-General has officially launched a global effort on women's and children's health. The global effort seeks to build upon and revitalize existing commitments, to secure new commitments from a range of influential partners and to provide organization and accountability for delivery at the highest levels.

122. Beyond the Millennium Development Goals, the United Nations has made major strides in the eradication of guinea worm. Attention to addressing non-communicable diseases such as cancer, heart disease, diabetes and stroke has also increased.

123. Yet, for all of these advancements, significant challenges remain in achieving better health. This is due largely to deficient health systems, threats to health security posed by pandemic influenza and other emerging diseases, and profound inequities—illustrating a failure to allocate adequate resources to health care for the poor, women and children. For example, there has been a relative lack of progress in improving access to treatment for the two biggest killers of children, diarrhoea and pneumonia. The strategic role of the United Nations in shaping the future of global health requires focused attention on support for equitable access to health systems that deliver high-quality services within a coherent policy framework.

124. Further effort is needed to support the formulation by countries of coherent national health policies, strategies and plans and their implementation in keeping with the scale of national and global health challenges. The United Nations will continue to play an important role through advocacy, the development of guidelines and the provision of support to countries in the development of innovative models for reaching those in need.

C. Countering terrorism

125. Terrorism is a major threat to international peace and security that calls for a firm and concerted global response. Mobilizing resources of the United Nations system to combat terrorism is crucial to that end, and the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force provides a key mechanism for doing so.

126. In supporting the implementation of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, the Task Force has launched initiatives, developed specific recommendations and support activities and produced reports on supporting victims of terrorism, countering terrorist financing, countering the use of the Internet for terrorist purposes, and private-public partnerships for the protection of vulnerable targets. The Task Force, together with the United Nations Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia, is assisting Member States in the region in developing an action plan on strategy implementation, with a particular focus on addressing conditions conducive to terrorism. It has also supported the International Criminal Police Organization in creating a Vulnerable Targets Referral Centre and an information system for the facilitation of enhanced information-sharing and the coordination of technical assistance delivery.

127. Counter-terrorism efforts must be systematically integrated into the broader agenda of international peace, security and development and must be in compliance with human rights, humanitarian and refugee law. In that spirit, and following the adoption of resolution 1904(2009), on the sanctions regime against Al-Qaida, Usama bin Laden and the Taliban, the Secretary-General, on 14 July 2010, appointed an Ombudsperson mandated to consider delisting requests from individuals and groups named on the Consolidated List.

128. The support of Member States will be essential for the continued implementation of the Counter-Terrorism Strategy.

D. Disarmament and non-proliferation

129. The year 2010 is proving to be critical for defining the direction that disarmament and non-proliferation efforts will take. The international community has achieved some meaningful progress, particularly in the nuclear arena. Positive developments have included the signing, on 8 April, of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Russian Federation on Measures for the Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms by President Barack Obama and President Dmitry Medvedev, the declarations by the United States and the United Kingdom of the size of their nuclear-weapon stockpiles and the successful outcome of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT). At the latter, a plan of action was adopted to advance nuclear disarmament, non-proliferation and the peaceful uses of nuclear energy over the next five years. The agreement on forward-looking action halts years of deteriorating confidence in the Treaty regime. The Secretary-General particularly welcomed the agreement on a process leading to the full implementation of the 1995 resolution on the establishment of a Middle East zone free of weapons of mass destruction. In addition, the Final Document of the NPT Review Conference noted the Secretary-General's action plan for nuclear disarmament and addressed the benchmarks outlined therein.

130. Less positive, however, has been the lack of substantive progress on the part of the Conference on Disarmament. There has been no progress on the peaceful and negotiated denuclearization of the Korean peninsula through the Six-Party Talks.

131. Similarly, the issue involving the nuclear programme of the Islamic Republic of Iran remains a matter of concern.

132. It is clear that more needs to be done. Following the successful conclusion of the 2010 Review Conference, States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and relevant organizations need to start implementing the action plan now. A nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East must be pursued with increasing urgency. The universality of the Treaty must be achieved. The action plan specifically mandates the Secretary-General to convene a high-level meeting on the margins of the General Assembly so as to reinvigorate the Conference on Disarmament.

133. The Conference on Disarmament must begin to work without delay, in particular to commence negotiations and substantive deliberation on the main substantive issues. New efforts are also required to achieve the early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, and the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism needs to be strengthened.

134. In the field of conventional arms, there have been some promising developments. In 2010, the Convention on Cluster Munitions entered into force. The United Nations will remain actively involved in all aspects of mine action and is firmly committed to continuing to support the implementation and universalization of the key humanitarian treaties, including the Convention on Certain Conventional Weapons, the Anti-personnel Mine Ban Convention and the Convention on Cluster Munitions, while seeking to strengthen synergies between them.

135. Importantly, in 2010 negotiations began within the United Nations on an arms trade treaty, to be concluded in 2012. Member States must develop a strong and robust treaty in order to counter the negative effects of unregulated arms transfers on regional stability, development and human rights.

136. The excessive accumulation and the easy availability of small arms and light weapons in zones of conflict and crime remain an issue of enduring concern. The recent initiative of the General Assembly to focus on the broader issue of armed violence, including how it undermines development, is a promising development.

137. The Secretary-General has highlighted the close relationship between disarmament and other global challenges, stressing that “the world is over-armed and development is under-funded”. The Organization will work with Member States to maintain and reinvigorate effective disarmament and non-proliferation norms so that stability and security can prevail and so that the resources necessary to combat climate change and achieve the Millennium Development Goals are liberated.

Chapter IV

Creating a stronger United Nations

138. Effective United Nations action across a wide range of issue areas is essential if the Organization is to attain its long-term objectives of delivering to those most in need and addressing the new set of twenty-first-century global challenges that confront the international community. The Organization must make an explicit effort to ensure that it takes action to modernize its processes, introduces cost-effective measures, and rewards excellence and achievement. It must also strive to ensure that the component parts of the Organization and of the United Nations system work well together, leveraging each other's respective strengths. In addition, the future of the Organization will rest in part on its ability to forge strong working relationships with a variety of stakeholders, including regional organizations and civil society. For that reason, outreach and partnership-building are important elements of the Organization's activities.

A. The Secretariat, the intergovernmental machinery, system-wide coherence and cooperation with regional organizations

139. With a view to strengthening the Organization, the Secretary-General initiated a number of important changes in human resource policy, in budget planning and in the accountability framework. These included adopting a variety of measures to support women's empowerment in the Organization and laying the groundwork for the establishment of a new gender entity. The Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly provided important platforms for stimulating discussion and forging consensus on a wide range of global concerns. Important progress was also made on system-wide coherence and the further strengthening of the Organization's cooperation with regional organizations.

1. The Secretariat

140. In order to deliver results for people most in need, the Organization must be able to recruit and deploy staff members quickly and efficiently, and staff must continually learn and grow. To that end, the Secretary-General is continuing to implement his human resources reform agenda, including by reducing the various types of employment contracts from 16 to 3, harmonizing conditions of service between staff in the field and those at Headquarters, and launching a new talent management system to modernize recruitment, performance management and staff learning and development.

141. As part of his efforts to strengthen the Organization, the Secretary-General has adopted various policies designed to empower and promote women working in the Secretariat. These complement the important initiatives he has championed to empower women in the context of war and internal conflict previously discussed: his seminal report on sexual violence in armed conflict (S/2009/362), his appointment of a Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict and his insistence on a zero-tolerance policy regarding abuse and violence in peacekeeping missions.

142. More women have been appointed by the Secretary-General to senior United Nations posts than at any time in the history of the Organization, and the Secretary-General has overseen a gender balance strategy and action plan within the Secretariat to ensure managerial and departmental accountability with respect to gender balance targets.

143. At the end of 2009, the Secretary-General provided the General Assembly with a comprehensive proposal to create a new United Nations gender entity, consolidating current structures and enabling the United Nations to provide enhanced support to our national partners in a more effective manner. The Assembly endorsed the Secretary-General's proposal by adopting unanimously, on 2 July 2010, the landmark resolution 64/289 on system-wide coherence. In the resolution, the Assembly, inter alia, called for the merging of the four parts of the United Nations system dealing with women's issues into one composite gender entity, the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, to be known as UN-Women. The Assembly also called for the appointment of an Under-Secretary-General to head the new body, and for the establishment of an executive board to provide intergovernmental support for and supervision of its operational activities. The Beijing Platform of Action, adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women, will serve as the framework for the new body's work.

144. A more strategic and effective budget is critical to identifying the results that must be delivered within a given time period and to determining whether or not goals have been achieved. To improve the presentation of the budget, the Secretary-General engaged in a dialogue with Member States that ex-explored various scenarios for ways in which to modify the format of budgetary documents and identified several options for further consideration. That important dialogue needs to continue, as the Secretariat requires a budget process that is less cumbersome and provides more flexibility to managers in the utilization of resources. Such flexibility should go hand in hand with increased accountability.

145. The Organization's service delivery and resource management will improve dramatically through the Umoja reform initiative, aimed at enterprise resource planning, and the introduction of International Public Sector Accounting Standards. Umoja will modernize the Secretariat's business practices, upgrade staff skills and put in place a single, integrated information system. The endeavour will enhance transparency and support improved performance monitoring and reporting of results, linked to objectives and resource usage. In anticipation of significant annual capacity improvements and cost recovery, the General Assembly endorsed the Secretary-General's proposal that Umoja be deployed through the "pilot first" strategy, which will provide the fastest and least expensive path towards benefit realization.

146. Progress on the Capital Master Plan is providing modern facilities to support the delivery of results. During the reporting period, offices and staff were moved to swing spaces with precision and efficiency, the North Lawn Building was inaugurated, the Security Council and the Economic and Social Council were successfully relocated, construction continued in the basements, and renovation work commenced in the Secretariat and Conference buildings.

147. The most fundamental way to ensure the efficient delivery of results for those most in need is to have in place effective systems for internal control and to strengthen accountability within the Organization and between the Secretariat and Member States. To that end, the Secretary-General completed the agenda for procurement reform during the reporting period by submitting reports on procurement governance and sustainable procurement, to be further considered by the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session. The Secretary-General's most urgent priorities for the remainder of 2010 and for next year are to strengthen personal accountability, promote a culture of results-based management, institute proactive risk management, and continue to analyse and monitor the implementation of the recommendations of oversight bodies in order to draw lessons for continued management improvement.

2. Intergovernmental machinery

148. In 2010, the Security Council has focused its agenda on intra-State conflicts, threats of terrorism, nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament and, increasingly, the security implications of transnational organized crime and drug trafficking. The Economic and Social Council has focused on the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals and has advanced accountability for global development commitments. Its annual ministerial review on gender equality and women's empowerment brought together Governments, the private sector and civil society at a number of events throughout the year. The Secretary-General's participation and his strong advocacy on behalf of women and public health built a greater sense of engagement. The 2010 session of the multi-stakeholder Development Cooperation Forum of the Economic and Social Council focused on increasing aid flows and quality, and policy coherence. The Forum process permitted an open debate among Member States, civil society, the private sector, parliamentarians and local Governments on promoting and improving development cooperation for the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

149. The General Assembly has been engaged in intensive preparations for its High-level Plenary Meeting on the Millennium Development Goals to be held at United Nations Headquarters in September. Important inputs on ways to strengthen the implementation of the global development agenda have been provided through the Assembly's high-level dialogues on "Water for Life" and financing for development, as well as through various informal meetings convened by the Assembly with the United Nations system, academia, civil society and the private sector.

150. The Secretary-General has increased his personal interaction with the intergovernmental bodies through numerous exchanges. In the case of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General briefed Member States on issues ranging from the meetings of the Group of 20 and the Quartet to the United Nations Climate Change Conference in Copenhagen, as well as the natural disasters in Haiti and Chile.

3. System-wide coherence

151. On 2 July 2010, the General Assembly unanimously adopted the landmark resolution 64/289 on system-wide coherence, which brought to a close a major intergovernmental process that had begun at the sixty-first session. In the resolution, the Assembly, in addition to deciding to establish a composite gender entity, adopted a number of important decisions in other areas of the system-wide coherence process. These included: introducing a new approach to determining the level of "critical mass" of core funding for funds and programmes; strengthening the participation of national policymakers of programme countries in meetings of the executive boards of the funds and programmes and the operational activities segment of the Economic and Social Council; enhancing the training of delegates of the permanent missions of Member States on the roles and responsibilities of governing bodies; inviting the President and the Bureau of the Council to convene informal coordination meetings with the governing bodies responsible for United Nations operational activities for development; requesting the Secretary-General, under the auspices of the Council, to prepare and put in place periodic surveys on operational activities for development, addressed to Governments of programme countries; and requesting the Secretary-General to commission a comprehensive review of the existing institutional framework for the system-wide evaluation of operational activities for development.

152. In the resolution, the Assembly approved a modality for countries to submit a common country programme document on a voluntary basis, which represented another significant step forward in improving the coherence of the United Nations development activities. In addition, the Assembly welcomed the intergovernmental meetings of countries implementing the “Delivering as one” approach held in Kigali in October 2009 and in Hanoi in June 2010. In the outcome documents of those meetings, the countries implementing “Delivering as one” affirmed that the approach had added value by providing renewed Government leadership to United Nations programmes and better alignment with national priorities, and had brought enhanced coherence and effectiveness to United Nations support. The Assembly also encouraged the Secretary-General to proceed with the independent evaluation of lessons learned from the “Delivering as one” pilots, with a report to be submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-sixth session.

153. During the reporting period, the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, through its three pillars, continued to advance a coordinated and collective approach to common United Nations system objectives. Noteworthy in that regard are the development of a coordinated United Nations system approach to climate change and the support provided to countries preparing United Nations Development Assistance Frameworks. Furthermore, in 2010, the Chairs of the High-level Committee on Management and the United Nations Development Group deployed a joint high-level mission to several countries to identify and address country-level bottlenecks in the area of business practice harmonization.

4. Cooperation with regional organizations

154. Today’s crises and challenges require multifaceted solutions, making cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations more vital than ever. The Secretary-General’s retreat with heads of regional and other organizations in January 2010 provided an important forum in which to discuss joint strategies for preventing and resolving conflict. Participants explored intensifying cooperation with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the League of Arab States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Caribbean Community.

155. In Africa, efforts to strengthen our partnership with the African Union within the framework of the Ten-Year Capacity-Building Programme included: strengthening the capacity of the secretariat of the African Union Peace and Security Council, collaborating on the establishment of the African Union Democracy and Electoral Assistance Unit, and supporting the development of a mediation strategy for Africa. The United Nations also engaged with the African Union to increase awareness about the importance of integrating a gender perspective into conflict resolution. In order to enhance further strategic partnerships with the African Union, the Organization’s presence in Addis Ababa has been restructured. Specifically, the United Nations has established the United Nations Office to the African Union, headed by an Assistant Secretary-General. The Organization continues to work closely with the African Union and the Economic Community of West African States to encourage an early return to constitutional order in Guinea and the Niger. In addition, the Organization has deployed several of its staff to the Southern African Development Community secretariat in Gaborone and to the Economic Community of Central African States to assist in building the mediation and early warning capacities of those subregional organizations.

156. Desk-to-desk dialogues continued with the European Union, the Organization of American States and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and a joint mediation training programme was conducted with the latter. Looking ahead, cooperative efforts with relevant regional organizations will be important in assisting the Government of Haiti in rebuilding after the 12 January 2010 earthquake.

B. Global constituencies

157. Civil society, the business community and academia are essential partners in our work to achieve the goals of the United Nations, particularly the Millennium Development Goals. Across the Organization, partnerships are a common and increasingly sophisticated mechanism for addressing priority challenges. Over the past year, the United Nations has made important strides in expanding the geographic and demographic diversity of its audiences and in leveraging the contributions of civil society in its work.

1. Strengthening partnerships with civil society

158. The Organization is actively reaching out to civil society and encouraging increased citizen engagement in the formulation and implementation of international policy. It is employing both traditional means of outreach and more innovative techniques, including the use of new media tools that help to inform and inspire the next generation of the global citizenry.

159. The past year saw a dynamic collaboration between representatives of civil society and the United Nations on climate change, disarmament and women's empowerment. The international community joined together in support of the "Seal the Deal!" campaign, a communications effort that helped to create massive global awareness of climate change as one of the greatest challenges of the twenty-first century. More than 1,300 people, representing 55 countries and 340 non-governmental organizations, came together for the 62nd Annual Conference of the Department of Public Information for Non-Governmental Organizations, on the theme "For peace and development: disarm now!", which was hosted by the Government of Mexico in Mexico City from 9 to 11 September. Non-governmental organizations participated in record numbers in the fifty-fourth session of the Commission on the Status of Women, commemorating the fifteenth anniversary of the Fourth World Conference on Women. A special event of the Economic and Social Council on smart philanthropy catalysed engagement by the private sector, foundations and civil society in the area of women's economic empowerment.

160. It is hoped that the same energy that civil society brought to these issues will be directed at making the September Summit on the Millennium Development Goals and its outcome a success.

161. It is heartening to note that the overall number of non-governmental organizations associated with the Organization continues to increase. This suggests not only that the Organization's outreach and communications are having an impact, but also, and more important, that mutual interest and respect exist between the two constituencies. The informed and active participation of civil society in the work of the United Nations is essential to making a difference in the lives of ordinary people.

2. Engaging the business community

162. Significant efforts have been made to enhance engagement with the business community. The revised Guidelines on cooperation between the United Nations and the business sector and the United Nations-Business website are milestones and essential to the modernization of the Organization. The Guidelines, issued on 20 November 2009, help staff to develop effective partnerships while ensuring the Organization's integrity and independence. Launched on 14 January 2010, business.un.org is the first online gateway to match business resources with the needs of the Organization with respect to humanitarian crises and long-term partnerships.

163. Important contributions were made by business to advance United Nations objectives. On 24 and 25 June 2010, the Secretary-General chaired the third Global Compact Leaders Summit, where hundreds of companies showcased work that is advancing development. The Summit launched many initiatives that are contributing to the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals, including the Women's Empowerment Principles, anti-corruption reporting guidance and an environmental stewardship framework. Two Global Compact initiatives, Caring for Climate and the CEO Water Mandate, continue to bring business solutions to these critical areas.

164. Looking ahead, encouraging corporate action in support of United Nations goals will remain a priority. The Organization must scale up this work by further building its capacity to partner with business and by facilitating greater collaboration among partners, including business, civil society, academia and local governments.

Chapter V

Conclusion

165. The Organization is more than just a collection of buildings, a sequence of meetings, a set of reports and consultations or even a set of principles and programmes. Fundamentally, the Organization is about its people and the passion and commitment that they bring to the work of the United Nations.

166. While the past year brought some important successes and achievements, it also brought tremendous losses in the work and life of the Organization. The United Nations lost more of its dedicated staff than ever before in its 65-year history. The relatives, friends and colleagues of those who gave their lives in the service of the United Nations should know this: the Organization will not waver from the ideals that they served. Their sacrifice will not be forgotten, and it will not have been in vain. The responsibility is now on those who remain to work tirelessly to reinvigorate and support the mission of the United Nations, for which colleagues gave their lives.

These new figures are not comparable with previously published estimates in which all households using pit latrines were considered slum households.

GOAL 8

Develop a global partnership for development

Target 8.A

Develop further an open, rule-based, predictable, non-discriminatory trading and financial system

Includes a commitment to good governance, development and poverty reduction—both nationally and internationally

Target 8.B

Address the special needs of the least developed countries

Includes: tariff- and quota-free access for least developed countries' exports; enhanced programme of debt relief for heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC) and cancellation of official bilateral debt; and more generous official development assistance (ODA) for countries committed to poverty reduction

Target 8.C

Address the special needs of landlocked developing countries and small island developing States (through the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States and the outcome of the twenty-second special session of the General Assembly)

Target 8.D

Deal comprehensively with the debt problems of developing countries through national and international measures in order to make debt sustainable in the long term

Notes: Except where indicated, regional groupings are based on United Nations geographical regions, with some modifications necessary to create, to the extent possible, homogeneous groups of countries for analysis and presentation. The regional composition adopted for 2010 reporting on Millennium Development Goal indicators is available at <http://mdgs.un.org>, under “Data”.

“Commonwealth of Independent States” comprises Belarus, the Republic of Moldova, the Russian Federation and Ukraine in Europe, and Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan in Asia.

Where shown, “Developed regions” comprises Europe (except Commonwealth of Independent States countries), Australia, Canada, Japan, New Zealand and the United States of America. Developed regions always include transition countries in Europe.

PART ONE

Political and security questions

International peace and security

Peacekeeping, peacebuilding, economic recovery in post-conflict countries and counter-terrorism strategies were among the key challenges addressed by the United Nations in 2010. During the year, the Security Council issued statements on the transition and exit strategies of peacekeeping operations, post-conflict peacebuilding, preventive diplomacy—especially in Africa—threats to peace caused by terrorist acts and protection of civilians in armed conflict. In October, the Council adopted a resolution welcoming the review of the UN peacebuilding architecture and requested all relevant United Nations actors to take forward the recommendations of the related report and improve the Peacebuilding Commission's effectiveness. Among other issues, the Council discussed its own role in maintaining international peace and security.

At the end of 2010, there were 15 peacekeeping operations, served by 120,927 uniformed and civilian personnel, including United Nations Volunteers. On 1 July, the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO) took over from an earlier UN peacekeeping operation—the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC). The United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) completed its mandate on 31 December.

Also at year's end, the United Nations was carrying out 12 political or peacebuilding missions, served by 4,286 personnel. The United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB) ended on 31 December; it was succeeded by the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB) on 1 January 2011.

International terrorist acts resulted in the deaths of hundreds of innocent civilians and injuries to many others, including in Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, Nigeria, Pakistan, the Russian Federation and Uganda. In Afghanistan, a terrorist attack took place against the United Nations operations centre in the western city of Herat on 23 October. A suicide bomb attack in the town of Khar in Pakistan on 25 December outside a World Food Programme distribution centre reportedly killed 45 people and injured many others. The Security Council and the Secretary-General condemned those attacks.

The General Assembly in September reiterated its condemnation of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, committed by whomever, wherever and for whatever purposes, as terrorism constituted one of the most serious threats to international peace and security. Nevertheless, the Assembly in December expressed concern at violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as of international refugee and humanitarian law, committed in the context of countering terrorism.

By a resolution on conflict diamonds, the General Assembly reaffirmed its support for the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme and for the Kimberley Process as a whole. The Assembly also adopted texts on a comprehensive review of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects, the peacekeeping support account, the financing of the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, the review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture and the criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on missions.

Regarding the financial position of United Nations peacekeeping operations, expenditures rose by 7.0 per cent, from $7,120.6 million to $7,616.1 million for the 2009/2010 financial year. Unpaid assessed contributions decreased by 4.4 per cent, from $954.0 million at the end of 2008/2009 to $912.2 million at the end of 2009/2010.

Promotion of international peace and security

Maintenance of international peace and security

Security sector reform

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. During its 2010 substantive session (New York, 22 February–19 March) [A/64/19], the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations stressed that security sector reform must take place within a broad framework of the rule of law, and underlined that security sector reform was a nationally owned process. UN engagement in providing assistance for security sector reform through peacekeeping missions should be undertaken at the request of the host country, and such assistance should be rooted in the country's particular needs and conditions. The sustainability of security sector reform depended on national ownership and the sustained support of the international community, in particular bilateral donors. The United Nations and the international community should avoid imposing external models of security sector reform and concentrate on strengthening the host country's capacity to develop, manage and implement security sector reform through inclusive consultation processes. The Special Committee reiterated the importance of incorporating gender perspectives in security sector reform programmes, and recognized and encouraged the continued assistance and advice of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) to UN peacekeeping and special political missions.

Rule of law, preventive diplomacy and role of Security Council

Security Council consideration (June). On 29 June [S/PV.6347], the Council held an open debate on the promotion and strengthening of the rule of law in the maintenance of international peace and security. It had before it a concept note submitted by Mexico [S/2010/322]. The Council was briefed by the Deputy Secretary-General, Asha-Rose Migiros, and the Under-Secretary-General for Legal Affairs, Patricia O'Brien. The Deputy Secretary-General said that the debates within the Council and the United Nations had expanded from a focus on the rule of law in war-torn societies to include strengthening the rule of law at the international level. That evolution was rooted in the fundamental principle that the Organization must act in accordance with fundamental standards of human rights in its own activities, operations and practices. In response to international crimes, the United Nations must redouble its efforts to build national capacities to hold alleged perpetrators accountable. The financial resources allocated for strengthening the rule of law in fragile conflict and post-conflict settings had not matched the rhetoric in importance; early and strategic responses required more comprehensive needs and threat assessment; a strategic approach that included security sector reform and equal attention to all components of the justice system was required; and the political nature of the exercise must be recognized. Some 36 speakers also addressed the meeting.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 June [meeting 6347], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/11 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment to the Charter of the United Nations and international law, and to an international order based on the rule of law and international law, which is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States in addressing common challenges, thus contributing to the maintenance of international peace and security.

The Council is committed to and actively supports the peaceful settlement of disputes and reiterates its call upon Member States to settle their disputes by peaceful means as set forth in Chapter VI of the Charter. The Council emphasizes the key role of the International Court of Justice, the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, in adjudicating disputes between States and the value of its work and calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider accepting the jurisdiction of the Court in accordance with its Statute.

The Council calls upon States to resort also to other dispute settlement mechanisms, including international and regional courts and tribunals which offer States the possibility of settling their disputes peacefully, contributing thus to the prevention or settlement of conflict.

The Council emphasizes the importance of the activities of the Secretary-General in promoting mediation and in the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, recalls in this regard the report of the Secretary-General of 8 April 2009 on enhancing mediation and its support activities, and encourages the Secretary-General to increasingly and effectively use all the modalities and diplomatic tools at his disposal under the Charter for this purpose.

The Council recognizes that respect for international humanitarian law is an essential component of the rule of law in conflict situations, reaffirms its conviction that the protection of the civilian population in armed conflict should be an important aspect of any comprehensive strategy to resolve conflict and recalls in this regard resolution 1894(2009).

The Council further reiterates its call for all parties to armed conflict to respect international law applicable to the rights and protection of women and children, as well as displaced persons and humanitarian workers, and other civilians who may have specific vulnerabilities, such as persons with disabilities and older persons.

The Council reaffirms its strong opposition to impunity for serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law. The Council further emphasizes the responsibility of States to comply with their relevant obligations to end impunity and to thoroughly investigate and prosecute persons responsible for war crimes, genocide, crimes against humanity or other serious violations of international humanitarian law in order to prevent violations, avoid their recurrence and seek sustainable peace, justice, truth and reconciliation.

The Council notes that the fight against impunity for the most serious crimes of international concern has been strengthened through the work of the International Criminal Court, ad hoc and mixed tribunals, as well as specialized chambers in national tribunals and takes note of the stocktaking of international criminal justice undertaken by the first Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, held in Kampala from 31 May to 11 June 2010. The Council intends to continue forcefully to fight impunity and uphold accountability with appropriate means and draws attention to the full range of justice and reconciliation mechanisms to be considered, including national, international and mixed criminal courts and tribunals, truth and reconciliation commissions as well as national reparations programmes for victims, institutional reforms and traditional dispute resolution mechanisms.

The Council expresses its commitment to ensure that all United Nations efforts to restore peace and security themselves respect and promote the rule of law. The Council recognizes that sustainable peacebuilding requires an integrated approach, which strengthens coherence between political, security, development, human rights and rule of law activities. In this regard, the Council reiterates the urgency of improving United Nations peacebuilding efforts and achieving a coordinated United Nations approach in the field among all parts of the United Nations system, including in ensuring capacity-building support to assist national authorities to uphold the rule of law, especially after the end of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions.

The Council considers sanctions an important tool in the maintenance and restoration of international peace and security. The Council reiterates the need to ensure that sanctions are carefully targeted in support of clear objectives and designed carefully so as to minimize possible adverse consequences and are implemented by Member States. The Council remains committed to ensuring that fair and clear procedures exist for placing individuals and entities on sanctions lists and for removing them, as well as for granting humanitarian exemptions. In this context, the Council recalls the adoption of resolutions 1822(2008) and 1904(2009), including the appointment of an Ombudsperson and other procedural improvements in the Al-Qaida and Taliban sanctions regime.

The Council welcomes the establishment of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, chaired by the Deputy Secretary-General and supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, and urges greater efforts by the Group to ensure a coordinated and coherent response by the United Nations system to issues related to the rule of law on the agenda of the Council.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to provide a follow-up report within 12 months to take stock of the progress made in respect of the implementation of the recommendations contained in the 2004 report of the Secretary-General, and to consider in this context further steps in regard to the promotion of the rule of law in conflict and post-conflict situations.

Security Council consideration (July). On 16 July [S/PV.6360], the Council held an open debate on optimizing the use of preventive diplomacy tools: prospects and challenges in Africa. It had before it a concept note submitted by Nigeria [S/2010/371]. The Council was briefed by the Deputy Secretary-General, who said that in recent years there had been a welcome emergence of stronger policy frameworks in favour of conflict prevention, particularly in Africa, with a growing capacity for operational response. Preventive diplomacy was being conducted by a broader array of actors than ever before, using a wide range of tools. That made it possible to consider multifaceted preventive strategies that were previously not an option. The Department of Political Affairs had been strengthened so that it would be capable of effectively carrying out its lead role in that area. In the previous year alone, the United Nations had supported, often in partnership with others, more than 20 peace processes, and responded to many more disputes that did not reach that level. The Organization had continued to professionalize its mediation support capacity. It had also attempted to develop new tools, including the use of investigative mandates to help defuse tensions in judicial cases with political implications. All of this held promise for preventive diplomacy in Africa. The United Nations saw a need to focus on strengthening partnerships, being prepared to persuade, and supporting and encouraging the role of women in prevention. The international community was urged to continue to invest in prevention. Thirty-two countries and the European Union (EU) addressed the ensuing debate.

On 16 July [meeting 6360], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/14 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations. The Council recalls Articles 33 and 34 of the Charter and reaffirms its commitment to the settlement of disputes by peaceful means and the promotion of necessary preventive action in response to disputes or situations, the continuation of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

The Council recalls that the prevention of conflict remains a primary responsibility of Member States. As such, actions undertaken by United Nations entities within the framework of conflict prevention must be designed to support and complement, as appropriate, the conflict prevention roles of national Governments.

The Council notes that, consistent with its functions in relation to international peace and security, it seeks to remain engaged in all stages of the conflict cycle and in exploring ways of preventing the escalation of disputes into armed conflict or a relapse into armed conflict, and recalls that, in accordance with Articles 99 and 35 of the Charter, the Secretary-General or any Member State may bring to the attention of the Council any matter which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

The Council recalls that early warning, preventive diplomacy, preventive deployment, mediation, practical disarmament measures and post-conflict peacebuilding are interdependent and complementary components of a comprehensive conflict prevention strategy. The Council notes the importance of creating and maintaining peace through inclusive dialogue, reconciliation and reintegration.

The Council reaffirms the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, and reiterates its call to increase the equal participation, representation and full involvement of women in preventive diplomacy efforts and all related decision-making processes with regard to conflict resolution and peacebuilding, in line with resolutions 1325(2000), 1820(2008), 1888(2009) and 1889(2009).

The Council recognizes the importance of a comprehensive strategy comprising operational and structural measures for the prevention of armed conflict, and encourages the development of measures to address the root causes of conflicts in order to ensure sustainable peace. The Council reaffirms the central role of the United Nations in this regard.

The Council recalls the previous statements by its President concerning the various factors and causes that play a role in inciting, worsening or prolonging conflicts in Africa and, in particular, the factors and causes that have been highlighted and addressed by the Council. The Council also notes that, especially in the context of Africa, implementation of effective security sector reform programmes, strengthening of human rights and the rule of law, protection of civilians, ensuring accountability, meaningful progress in sustainable economic development and poverty eradication, support for elections and the building of democratic institutions and effective control of small arms, inter alia, have become important elements of conflict prevention.

The Council also recognizes the increased material, human and financial resources required by peacekeeping operations over the last decade. Accordingly, the Council acknowledges the potential benefits and efficiencies that could be achieved through an integrated approach to preventive diplomacy efforts similar to the approach to peacekeeping and peacebuilding methods, which underscores the interrelationship between political, security, development, human rights and rule of law activities.

The Council encourages the development of peaceful settlement of local disputes through regional arrangements in accordance with Chapter VIII of the Charter and reiterates its support for the efforts of regional and subregional organizations, in particular the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the Southern African Development Community, the East African Community, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and the Economic Community of Central African States, as regards conflict prevention. The Council acknowledges the need for closer and more operational cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in Africa to build national and regional capacities in relation to the preventive diplomacy tools of mediation, information-gathering and analysis, early warning, prevention and peacemaking, and in this context the Council recognizes the important role that regional United Nations offices, such as the United Nations Office for West Africa, can play and stresses the valuable contribution of mediation capacities such as the Council of Elders, the Panel of the Wise and the good offices of the Secretary-General and his special envoys, and of regional and subregional organizations, to ensuring the coherence, synergy and collective effectiveness of their efforts.

The Security Council underlines the importance of continually engaging the potential and existing capacities and capabilities of the United Nations Secretariat, regional and subregional organizations as well as national Governments in preventive diplomacy efforts, including mediation, and welcomes the promotion of regional approaches to the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The Council further reiterates its support for the work of the Peacebuilding Commission and recognizes the need for greater coordination with the Commission. The Council further recognizes the need for greater coherence with all relevant United Nations entities in relation to the most effective use of preventive diplomacy tools at their disposal. The Council recognizes the important role of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Offices in supporting national efforts to prevent conflicts and in addressing cross-border threats. The Council also recognizes the value that the Ad Hoc Working Group on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa continues to add to the process of embedding preventive diplomacy practices into the conflict management architecture of the Organization. In this connection, the Council recalls the role of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on the Prevention of Genocide in matters relating to the prevention and resolution of conflict. The Council emphasizes the need for the full engagement of all relevant actors, including civil society, to sustain the momentum and perspective for a meaningful preventive diplomacy framework.

The Council recognizes the importance of enhancing efforts, including coordination among relevant bilateral and multilateral donors, to ensure predictable, coherent and timely financial support to optimize the use of preventive diplomacy tools, including mediation, throughout the conflict cycle.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to submit, within twelve months of the adoption of the present statement, a report containing recommendations on how best to optimize the use of preventive diplomacy tools within the United Nations system and in cooperation with regional and subregional organizations and other actors.

Security Council consideration (September).

On 23 September [S/PV.6389], the Security Council held an open debate on ensuring the Council's effective role in maintaining international peace and security. It had before it a concept paper submitted by Turkey [S/2010/461]. The Secretary-General said that the Council and the UN Secretariat should move beyond the idea of a clear-cut sequence of peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding. Those tools should be deployed in an integrated fashion, not kept in separate silos. There was no quick fix for broken societies. The task demanded patience, resources and a long-term commitment. The UN core business needed to be helping people to solve their conflicts, not just serving as a band-aid to keep troubles in check. There was a need to further develop the peacebuilding architecture, empower the Peacebuilding Commission and Fund, and promote greater coherence among the many pieces of the UN system that made up the peacebuilding picture. There was also a need to expand the work on prevention, in particular to improve the ability to read warning signs and trigger early action. The meeting was also addressed by Premier Wen Jiabao of China, President Yoweri Kaguta Museveni of Uganda, President Heinz Fischer of Austria, President Goodluck Ebele Jonathan of Nigeria, Chairman of the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina Haris Silajdžić, President Ali Bongo Ondimba of Gabon, President Michel Sleiman of Lebanon, Prime Minister Naoto Kan of Japan, President Abdullah Gül of Turkey, as well as the Foreign Ministers of the Russian Federation, Brazil, the United Kingdom, Mexico and France, and the Secretary of State of the United States.

On 23 September [meeting 6389], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/18 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security. The Council, in this regard, recalls its resolutions and the statements by its President in relation to preventive diplomacy, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

The Council recognizes the progress made in many regions of the world towards building a more peaceful and stable environment. The Council, however, acknowledges the evolving challenges and threats to international peace and security, including armed conflicts, terrorism, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and small arms and light weapons, transnational organized crime, piracy, and drug and human trafficking.

The Council thus reaffirms that international peace and security now requires a more comprehensive and concerted approach. The Council also underlines the necessity to address the root causes of conflicts, taking into account that development, peace and security and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing. To this end, the Council expresses its firm commitment to contribute to the enhancement of the effectiveness of the United Nations throughout the conflict cycle.

The Council welcomes the considerable progress made in refining and strengthening the United Nations preventive diplomacy, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding capabilities in recent years, and pledges to continue to contribute to the adaptation of these tools to changing circumstances. The Council also underlines that the relationship between these tools is not always sequential and that it is necessary to use them in a comprehensive, integrated and flexible manner.

The Council stresses that the comprehensive and coherent use of preventive diplomacy, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding tools is important in creating the conditions for sustainable peace. The Council undertakes to provide the necessary political support to ensure this overarching objective.

The Council also reiterates its strong support for the protection of civilians and reaffirms its conviction that the protection of civilians in armed conflicts, particularly women and children, should be an important aspect of any comprehensive strategy to resolve conflicts. The Council further reiterates its opposition to impunity for serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law.

The Council calls upon Member States to resolve differences peacefully and draws particular attention to the importance of preventive diplomacy as a cost-effective and efficient way of crisis management and conflict resolution. The Council encourages and reaffirms its support for endeavours aimed at enhancing the preventive capacities of the Member States, the United Nations, and regional and subregional organizations. The Council stresses, in particular, the importance of developing early warning, assessment, mediation and response capabilities of these actors, as well as ensuring a sound coordination among them.

The Council pays tribute to the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General in using his good offices, his Representatives, Special Envoys and mediators, as well as by regional and subregional organizations to help to facilitate durable and comprehensive settlements, and undertakes to continue to support their work.

The Council further commits to following closely existing and potential conflict situations that may affect international peace and security, engaging with parties undertaking preventive efforts, encouraging the steps taken to de-escalate tension and build confidence, and supporting efforts aimed at mobilizing the necessary expertise and capabilities available in and to the United Nations. The Council also recognizes the importance of enhancing efforts, including coordination among bilateral and multilateral donors, to ensure predictable, coherent and timely financial support to optimize the use of preventive diplomacy tools.

The Council underscores its commitment to continue to enhance the overall effectiveness of United Nations peacekeeping. In this regard, the Council reiterates its support to ongoing efforts, such as those of the General Assembly and the Secretariat, to bolster the effectiveness and efficiency of United Nations peacekeeping and to upgrade the United Nations capacity for successful planning, establishment, deployment, conduct, monitoring and evaluation, as well as transition and completion of peacekeeping operations, including those steps taken to speed the deployment of experts in policing and rule of law. The Council, in this regard, welcomes efforts by the Secretariat to advocate the development of partnerships among all stakeholders.

The Council recognizes that peacekeeping operations have become an increasingly complex undertaking, requiring an overarching political strategy for each mission, a deterrent posture consistent with their mandate, strong civilian and military leadership, adequate resourcing, as well as experienced, trained and equipped military, police and civilian personnel, with the ability to communicate effectively with local populations. The Council also acknowledges the need for improved military expertise and expresses in that context its intention to continue to look into the role of the Military Staff Committee.

The Council pays tribute to the invaluable role played by the troop- and police-contributing countries in keeping and building a sustainable peace in many volatile parts of the world and reiterates its commitment to strengthen consultations with them, while encouraging Member States with the necessary capabilities to contribute more police, military and civilian personnel, including female personnel, to United Nations peacekeeping and political missions.

The Council emphasizes that effective peacebuilding requires an integrated and comprehensive approach based on coherence among political, security, development, human rights, humanitarian and rule of law objectives and that peacebuilding perspectives need to be considered starting from the first stages of planning and implementation of peacekeeping operations.

The Council underlines that sustainable peacebuilding also requires national ownership, the development of national capacities and the empowerment of people affected by conflict. The Council stresses the need for continued progress by the Secretary-General in fulfilling his agenda for action to improve United Nations peacebuilding efforts in order to better respond to the core needs and priorities identified by the countries concerned. The Council looks forward, in particular, to the outcome of the civilian capacity review.

The Council also stresses the importance of progress in refining roles and responsibilities for the key peacebuilding actors, and welcomes, in particular, the important role of the Peacebuilding Commission in promoting and supporting an integrated and coherent approach to peacebuilding. The Council reiterates its support for the work of the Commission and expresses its willingness to make greater use of its advisory role. The Council looks forward to considering the facilitators' report on the 2010 review of the Commission.

The Council recognizes that a comprehensive and integrated strategy for peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding should involve all relevant actors, taking into account the unique circumstances of each conflict situation. The Council further acknowledges that sustainable peace and security can best be achieved through effective collaboration among all concerned parties on the basis of their expertise.

The Council reiterates its commitment to strengthening its strategic partnerships with and support to regional and subregional organizations, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter, in conflict prevention, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding. The Council also underlines that it should continue to strengthen its partnerships with all other relevant players both at the strategic level and on the ground, in particular the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council, the Peacebuilding Commission, international financial institutions, such as the World Bank, and civil society.

The Council also reaffirms the important role of women in all aspects of the prevention and resolution of conflicts, as well as in peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and recognizes that a concerted and determined approach that addresses the root causes of conflicts also requires a systematic and comprehensive approach to women and peace and security issues. The Council, in this regard, looks forward to marking the 10th anniversary of resolution 1325(2000) by taking action on a comprehensive set of indicators on the basis of recommendations of the Secretary-General.

The Council is fully aware of the responsibilities bestowed upon it by the Charter, and of the collective aspirations of the peoples of the world, which impel it to take effective action to maintain international peace and security and eradicate the scourge of war. The Council expresses its commitment to continue to fulfil its responsibilities in the most effective manner and in full cooperation with its partners. It further recognizes that successful accomplishment of this task requires a continuous process of reflection and adaptation of its practices in preventive diplomacy, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

Security Council consideration (January).

On 13 January [S/PV.6257], the Council held an open debate on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in maintaining international peace and security. The Council had before it a concept paper submitted by China [S/2010/9]. Prior to addressing the topic, the Council President and the Secretary-General expressed their grief at the devastating earthquake that had occurred in Haiti the day before. Turning to the topic, the Secretary-General said that hardly a crisis confronted the world community that did not require actors to cooperate at multiple levels—local, national, regional and global—in the search for solutions. That was why the relationship between the United Nations and regional organizations was so important. In Africa, the United Nations was cooperating closely with the African Union (AU) and the subregional economic communities; in Europe, the United Nations would continue to develop its wide-ranging relationship with the EU and with such partners as the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in the Balkans and elsewhere. In the Americas, the United Nations had a strong history of cooperation with regional and subregional bodies on Haiti and Honduras, and more recently on climate change and in combating organized crime. In the Middle East, Asia and the Pacific, the United Nations was working with regional bodies on issues as varied as Afghanistan, Iraq, Fiji, disaster relief and drug trafficking, and on building up the capacities of such regional partners as the League of Arab States and the Organization of the Islamic Conference. Improvement was needed in areas such as coordination and communication among respective intergovernmental bodies and secretariats, and better clarity in mediation arrangements. Peacekeeping deployments needed to strike the right balance between flexibility and efficiency, and increased cooperation on peacebuilding was recommended. Success would be measured not in terms of process or mechanisms, but in real improvements in the lives of those most in need. Representatives of 11 regional and subregional organizations, as well as 14 Council members, addressed the meeting.

On 13 January [meeting 6257], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/1 on behalf of the Council.

The Security Council recalls its previous relevant resolutions and the statements by its President which underscore the importance of developing effective partnerships between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant statutes of the regional and subregional organizations.

The Council recalls the purposes and principles of the Charter, reiterates its primary responsibility under the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security, and further recalls that cooperation with regional and subregional organizations in matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter, can improve collective security.

The Council expresses its intention to consider further steps to promote closer and more operational cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in the fields of conflict early warning, prevention, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and to ensure the coherence, synergy and collective effectiveness of their efforts. In this regard, it welcomes the strong cooperation initiatives already existing between the United Nations and regional organizations.

The Council commends the ongoing efforts and contributions made by the Secretariat to consolidate partnerships with regional and subregional organizations and welcomes the convening of the Secretary-General's retreat with heads of regional and other organizations on 11 and 12 January 2010. The Council expresses its intention to hold informal interactive dialogues with regional and subregional organizations in the future.

The Council reaffirms its commitment to the peaceful settlement of disputes, acknowledges the important contribution of regional and subregional organizations to the peaceful settlement of local disputes and preventive diplomacy, as they are well positioned to understand the root causes of many conflicts and other security challenges. The Council underlines the importance of utilizing the existing and potential capabilities of regional and subregional organizations in this regard, including by encouraging countries in the region to resolve differences peacefully through dialogue, reconciliation, consultation, negotiation, good offices, mediation and judicial settlement of disputes. The Council is resolved to strengthen United Nations support for the peaceful settlement of disputes through improved interaction and cooperation with regional and subregional organizations.

The Council invites the Secretariat and all regional and subregional organizations that have a capacity for peacekeeping to enhance their working relations and to further explore how their collaboration could better contribute to the fulfilment of United Nations mandates and goals, so as to ensure a coherent framework for peacekeeping. The Council underlines the importance of regional and subregional organizations enhancing their peacekeeping capabilities and the value of international support to their efforts, in particular to the African Union, in terms of the 2006 United Nations-African Union Ten-Year Capacity-Building Programme for the African Union.

The Council recognizes the role that regional and subregional organizations can play in post-conflict peacebuilding, recovery, reconstruction and development processes and affirms the importance of interaction and cooperation between the Peacebuilding Commission and regional and subregional organizations. The Council encourages the Commission to continue to work in close consultation with regional and subregional organizations, with a view to ensuring more consistent and integrated strategies for post-conflict peacebuilding and recovery.

The Council recognizes the need for close cooperation with regional and subregional organizations, as appropriate, for the coherent and effective implementation of its resolutions, including those on thematic issues applicable to a wide range of conflict situations.

The Council encourages the Secretariat and regional and subregional organizations to further explore information-sharing on their respective capabilities and lessons learned in maintaining international peace and security and to continue to compile best practices, in particular in the field of mediation, good offices and peacekeeping. The Council also encourages the strengthening of cooperation and dialogue among regional and subregional organizations in this regard.

Security Council consideration (May). At the Council meeting of 4 May [S/PV.6306] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in maintaining international peace and security, the High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy of the European Union, Catherine Ashton, briefed the Council on the EU commitment to an active partnership with the United Nations in promoting peace, protecting the vulnerable and helping people to live in safety and dignity. Council members welcomed the EU contributions to capacity-building in Africa and expressed their support for the cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional entities. They welcomed the EU support for the efforts of the United Nations in maintaining international peace and security, since the two organizations shared common goals and principles, such as the promotion of human rights, the rule of law, and development.

Security Council consideration (October). On 22 October [S/PV.6409], the Council held an open debate on peace and security in Africa. By statement S/PRST/2010/21 (see p. 113), the Council stressed the need for enhancing regular interaction, coordination and consultation between the United Nations and the AU on matters of mutual interest.

Intercultural dialogue for peace and security

Security Council consideration (May). On 26 May [S/PV.6322], the Council held an open debate on intercultural dialogue for peace and security. The Council had before it a concept paper [S/2010/248] submitted by Lebanon. The Secretary-General said that intercultural dialogue was crucial in preventing and ending conflicts. It could defuse tensions and keep situations from escalating; promote reconciliation in the aftermath of conflict; and introduce moderate voices into polarized debates. Prime Minister Saad Hariri of Lebanon said that dialogue stemmed from recognition of identities and respect for religious and cultural diversity. At the same time, those values must not be expressed in hostility towards others, leading to the drawing of religious and cultural borders. Fourteen Council members addressed the debate.

Conflict prevention

The General Assembly, by decision 64/563 of 13 September, deferred consideration of the item entitled "Prevention of armed conflict" and included it in the draft agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session. On 24 December, the Assembly, by decision 65/544, decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Conflict diamonds

Kimberley Process. The Kimberley Process [YUN 2000, p. 76], at its eighth annual session (Jerusalem, 1–4 November) continued its work relating to the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme (KPCS), which was established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 55] to stop the trade in conflict diamonds from fuelling armed conflict, protect the legitimate diamond industry and ensure implementation of UN resolutions on trade in conflict diamonds. As at 4 November, KPCS had 49 members, including the 27 members of the EU, which participated as a single entity represented by the European Commission, thus representing 75 countries. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 64/109 [YUN 2009, p. 40], Israel, on 8 December, transmitted to the Secretary-General the 2010 Kimberley Process report [A/65/607] in its capacity as Chair of KPCS.

According to the report, since the inception of KPCS there had been a dramatic improvement in the security situation in several diamond-producing countries to which the Process contributed significantly, notably in Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Liberia and Sierra Leone and some of their neighbouring countries. The only current case of conflict diamonds was in Côte d'Ivoire. Trade in Ivorian diamonds was prohibited by the Process rules and by a Security Council embargo. The Kimberley Process welcomed the application by Swaziland to become a participant and decided that its application would be considered as accepted without further plenary approval, once the Participation Committee had verified and approved Swaziland's final implementation of the Process's minimum requirements in its domestic system. The Participation Committee expressed its concern regarding non-compliance with the KPCS minimum requirements by Venezuela and Lebanon and called on those countries to comply with their commitments to the KPCS.

During the first half of 2010, the Kimberley Process Monitor to Marange (Zimbabwe) conducted two visits to the region, followed in August by a review mission led by Liberia and consisting of Australia, Ghana, India, Namibia, South Africa, the United States, the World Diamond Council, Global Witness and Green Advocates, in order to assess the overall compliance of Zimbabwe with KPCS minimum standards with regard to diamonds mined in the Marange region. As at December, the findings of the review team and its implications for Zimbabwe's request to restore unsupervised diamond exports under the Process were still being discussed.

Statistics formed an integral part of monitoring, and participants were required to submit statistics on a quarterly basis. As at 4 November, three participants (Malaysia, New Zealand, Venezuela) had not complied with all of the KPCS statistical requirements. As at December, the members of the Working Group on Statistics had completed 48 country analyses for 2009, with the remaining one (United States) yet to be completed.

Through the Working Group of Diamond Experts, the Process continued its work of footprinting diamonds from Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone in order to bolster the capacity of the West African Kimberley Process authorities to address potential contamination of their own productions by sanctioned Ivorian diamonds. The scientific Sub-Group on Characterization and Identification of Rough Diamonds of the Working Group of Diamond Experts was conducting preparatory work and scientific research on origin determination of sanctioned diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire as mandated by Security Council resolution 1893(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 186]; however, no diamond exports for scientific research under the exemption regime had been realized.

Being voluntary, the capacity of the Kimberley Process to withstand future challenges rested upon the goodwill and scope of commitment by participating Governments to apply the KPCS minimum standards, said the report. The rights and labour standards of alluvial artisanal diamond miners remained a challenge. The absence of organized structure for those miners posed a challenge to the Kimberley Process, as the miners were largely unregistered and operated in conditions that made them vulnerable to buyers. A further issue of concern was the gradual increase of cross-border online sales of diamonds, which had proved increasingly difficult to monitor. As for its next session, the DRC, the Vice-Chair for 2010, would succeed Israel as Kimberley Process Chair, with effect from 1 January 2011, and the position of the Vice-Chair would be decided by Kimberley Process participants according to the internal procedures.

(For information on the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004), which monitored the embargo on the import of rough diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire, and its Expert Group, see p. 195.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/137 [draft: A/65/L.52 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 32].

The role of diamonds in fuelling conflict: breaking the link between the illicit transaction of rough diamonds and armed conflict as a contribution to prevention and settlement of conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that the trade in conflict diamonds continues to be a matter of serious international concern, which can be directly linked to the fuelling of armed conflict, the activities of rebel movements aimed at undermining or overthrowing legitimate Governments and the illicit traffic in and proliferation of armaments, especially small arms and light weapons,

Recognizing also the devastating impact of conflicts fuelled by the trade in conflict diamonds on the peace, safety and security of people in affected countries, and the systematic and gross human rights violations that have been perpetrated in such conflicts,

Noting the negative impact of such conflicts on regional stability and the obligations placed upon States by the Charter of the United Nations regarding the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recognizing that continued action to curb the trade in conflict diamonds is imperative,

Noting with appreciation that the Kimberley Process, as an international initiative led by the Governments of participant States, has pursued its deliberations on an inclusive basis involving concerned stakeholders, including producing, exporting and importing States, the diamond industry and civil society, as well as applicant States and international organizations,

Recalling that the elimination of conflict diamonds from legitimate trade is the primary objective of the Kimberley Process, and stressing the need to continue its activities in order to achieve this objective,

Calling for the consistent implementation of commitments made by Kimberley Process participant States,

Acknowledging that the diamond sector is an important catalyst for promoting economic and social development, which are necessary for poverty reduction and meeting the requirements of the Millennium Development Goals in many producing countries, particularly in developing countries,

Bearing in mind the positive benefits of the legitimate diamond trade to producing countries, and underlining the need for continued international action to prevent the problem of conflict diamonds from negatively affecting the trade in legitimate diamonds, which makes a critical contribution to the economies of the producing, exporting and importing States,

Noting that the vast majority of rough diamonds produced in the world are from legitimate sources,

Recalling the Charter and all the relevant resolutions of the Security Council related to conflict diamonds, and determined to contribute to and support the implementation of the measures provided for in those resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1459(2003) of 28 January 2003, in which the Council strongly supported the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme as a valuable contribution against trafficking in conflict diamonds,

Welcoming the important contribution of the Kimberley Process, which was initiated by African diamond-producing countries,

Noting with satisfaction that the implementation of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme continues to have a positive impact in reducing the opportunity for conflict diamonds to play a role in fuelling armed conflict and would help to protect legitimate trade and ensure the effective implementation of the relevant resolutions on trade in conflict diamonds,

Acknowledging that lessons learned from the Kimberley Process may be useful for the work of the Peacebuilding Commission in its consideration of the countries included in its agenda, as appropriate,

Recalling its resolutions 55/56 of 1 December 2000, 56/263 of 13 March 2002, 57/302 of 15 April 2003, 58/290 of 14 April 2004, 59/144 of 15 December 2004, 60/182 of 20 December 2005, 61/28 of 4 December 2006, 62/11 of 26 November 2007, 63/134 of 11 December 2008 and 64/109 of 11 December 2009, in which it called for the development and implementation as well as a periodic review of proposals for a simple, effective and pragmatic international certification scheme for rough diamonds,

Welcoming, in this regard, the implementation of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme in such a way as not to impede the legitimate trade in diamonds or impose an undue burden on Governments or industry, particularly smaller producers, nor hinder the development of the diamond industry,

Welcoming also the decision of forty-nine Kimberley Process Participants, representing seventy-five countries, including the twenty-seven members of the European Union represented by the European Commission, to address the problem of conflict diamonds by participating in the Process and implementing the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme,

Noting the outcomes of the plenary meeting of the Kimberley Process hosted by Israel from 1 to 4 November 2010,

Welcoming the important contribution to fulfilling the purposes of the Kimberley Process that has been made and continues to be made by civil society organizations from across participant countries, and the diamond industry, in particular the World Diamond Council, which represents all aspects of the diamond industry in the Kimberley Process, to assist international efforts to stop the trade in conflict diamonds,

Welcoming also the voluntary self-regulation initiatives for the diamond industry announced by the World Diamond Council, and recognizing that a system of such voluntary self-regulation contributes, as described in the Interlaken Declaration of 5 November 2002 on the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme for Rough Diamonds, to ensuring the effectiveness of national systems of internal control for rough diamonds,

Recognizing that State sovereignty should be fully respected and that the principles of equality, mutual benefits and consensus should be adhered to,

Recognizing also that the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, which came into effect on 1 January 2003, will be credible only if all Participants have requisite national legislation coupled with effective and credible internal systems of control designed to eliminate the presence of conflict diamonds in the chain of producing, exporting and importing rough diamonds within their own territories, while taking into account that differences in production methods and trading practices, as well as differences in institutional controls thereof, may require different approaches to meeting minimum standards,

Welcoming the efforts to improve the normative framework of the Kimberley Process through the elaboration of new rules and procedural norms to regulate the activities of its working bodies, Participants and observers and the streamlining of the procedures for preparation and adoption of the decisions and documents of the Kimberley Process, thereby enhancing the effectiveness of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme,

1. Reaffirms its strong and continuing support for the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme and the Kimberley Process as a whole;

2. Recognizes that the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme can help to ensure the effective implementation of relevant resolutions of the Security Council containing sanctions on the trade in conflict diamonds and act as a mechanism for the prevention of future conflicts, and calls for the full implementation of existing Council measures targeting the illicit trade in rough diamonds, particularly conflict diamonds which play a role in fuelling conflict;

3. Welcomes the conditional admission of Swaziland to the Kimberley Process;

4. Recognizes the important contributions that the international efforts to address the problem of conflict diamonds, including the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, have made to the settlement of conflicts and the consolidation of peace in Angola, Liberia and Sierra Leone;

5. Notes the efforts to further strengthen implementation of the minimum requirements of the Kimberley Process, to review the implementation of import confirmation requirements and to examine the application of Kimberley Process Certification Scheme requirements in cross-border Internet sales;

6. Also notes the decision of the General Council of the World Trade Organization of 15 May 2003 granting a waiver with respect to the measures taken to implement the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, effective from 1 January 2003 to 31 December 2006, and the decision of the General Council of 17 November 2006 granting an extension of the waiver until 31 December 2012;

7. Takes note of the report of the Chair of the Kimberley Process submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/109, and congratulates the participating Governments, the regional economic integration organization, the diamond industry and civil society organizations involved in the Process for contributing to the development, implementation and monitoring of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme;

8. Acknowledges the progress made by Kimberley Process working groups, Participants and observers during 2010 in fulfilling the objectives set by the Chair to strengthen implementation of the peer review system, increase the transparency and accuracy of statistics, promote research into the traceability of diamonds, promote inclusiveness by broadening the level of involvement by Governments, industry and civil society in the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, foster a sense of ownership by Participants, improve information and communication flows and enhance the capacity of the Certification Scheme to respond to emerging challenges;

9. Notes that the annual reporting process on Kimberley Process Certification Scheme implementation is the main comprehensive and regular source of information on the implementation provided by Participants, and calls upon Participants to submit consistent and substantive annual reports in order to conform to this requirement;

10. Expresses appreciation to Bangladesh, Belarus and India for receiving review visits, and welcomes the commitment of those countries to continuously open their certification systems to reviews and improvements;

11. Acknowledges the efforts of the Kimberley Process to strengthen implementation and enforcement, and in particular to ensure coordination of Kimberley Process actions in relation to the occurrence of fraudulent certificates, to apply vigilance and ensure the detection and reporting of shipments of suspicious origin and to facilitate the exchange of information in cases of infringement;

12. Stresses that the widest possible participation in the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme is essential, and encourages all Member States to contribute to the work of the Kimberley Process by seeking membership, participating actively in the Certification Scheme and complying with its undertakings, and welcomes the increased involvement of civil society organizations in the Process;

13. Calls upon the Participants of the Kimberley Process to continue to articulate and improve rules and procedures to further enhance the effectiveness of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, and notes with satisfaction the systematization of the work of the Process with respect to developing transparent and uniform rules and procedures and improving the mechanism for consultations and coordination within the Process;

14. Notes with appreciation the willingness of the Kimberley Process to support and provide technical assistance to those Participants experiencing temporary difficulties in complying with the requirements of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme;

15. Also notes with appreciation the continued cooperation of the Kimberley Process with the United Nations on the issue of diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire, in accordance with the administrative decision on sharing information with the United Nations, and the continued monitoring of the situation in that country on the basis of the reports of the United Nations Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire, originally established by the Security Council in its resolution 1584(2005) of 1 February 2005, and through liaison with Côte d'Ivoire, and encourages the continued cooperation between the Kimberley Process and the United Nations in addressing the issue of diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire, with the ultimate objective of meeting the preconditions for the lifting of United Nations sanctions on the trade in rough diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire;

16. Encourages the continued efforts of the Kimberley Process to strengthen implementation of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme in West Africa, welcomes Guinea's efforts in this regard and Liberia's actions to respond to the continuing challenges to such implementation, and calls upon Member States that are Kimberley Process Participants to consider supporting Kimberley Process Certification Scheme implementation in West Africa;

17. Acknowledges with appreciation the adoption of the initiatives submitted by the Chair of the Kimberley Process concerning the cooperation of the Kimberley Process with the World Customs Organization, the establishment of the Sub-Working Group on Trade Facilitation and the establishment of the ad hoc committee for exploring the modalities of enhancing the efficiency of the Kimberley Process, with a view to providing administrative support for its activities;

18. Acknowledges the adoption by the plenary of the Kimberley Process of four additional administrative decisions, including on terms of reference for the Chair and the Vice-Chair of the Kimberley Process, procedures for the preparation and adoption of documents/decisions in the Kimberley Process, procedures for respecting confidentiality within the Kimberley Process, and the use of Kimberley Process certificates-based data;

19. Notes with appreciation the significant attention and effort devoted by the Kimberley Process to improving efforts related to enforcement, which led to the convening of an enforcement seminar, held on 24 June 2010 in Tel Aviv, Israel, and issuance of a corresponding report entitled "Diamonds without Borders: An Assessment of the Challenges of Implementing and Enforcing the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme", also notes with appreciation the active involvement of the World Customs Organization in the seminar, and notes that the cooperation between the Kimberley Process and the World Customs Organization underscores the need for international cooperation between national and international enforcement organizations;

20. Notes with satisfaction the progress of work performed on footprinting diamonds from Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone in order to bolster the capacity of the West African Kimberley Process authorities to address potential contamination of their own production by sanctioned Ivorian diamonds and on updating of the footprint of Marange diamonds from Zimbabwe;

21. Acknowledges with great appreciation the important contribution that Israel, as Chair of the Kimberley Process in 2010, has made to the efforts to curb the trade in conflict diamonds, welcomes the selection of the Democratic Republic of the Congo as Chair, and takes note that the Process has decided to take the decision on the Vice-Chair for 2011 by written procedure;

22. Requests the Chair of the Kimberley Process to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the Process;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "The role of diamonds in fuelling conflict".

Peacemaking and peacebuilding

Post-conflict peacebuilding

Security Council consideration (April). On 16 April [S/PV.6299], the Council held an open debate on post-conflict peacebuilding. It had before it a concept paper submitted by Japan [S/2010/167]. The Secretary-General, in his address to the Council, stated that three objectives of peacebuilding were to deliver peace dividends to conflict-affected people; to build State capacity; and to adopt a comprehensive approach that took into account political, security and social dimensions. The Chairperson of the Peacebuilding Commission, Peter Wittig (Germany), stated that the Commission would continue to explore measures to deepen UN collaboration with the main actors at the country level and monitor progress towards the attainment of critical peacebuilding objectives. Forty-seven speakers addressed the ensuing debate.

On 16 April [meeting 6299], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/7 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls the statements by its President, and emphasizes the critical importance of post-conflict peacebuilding as the foundation for building sustainable peace and development in the aftermath of conflict. The Council highlights the need for effective peacebuilding strategies to ensure durable peace and development.

The Council recognizes that sustainable peacebuilding requires an integrated approach, which strengthens coherence between political, security, development, human rights and rule of law activities. The Council recognizes the important role that the United Nations can play in supporting national authorities in the development of peacebuilding strategies that incrementally and comprehensively address priority needs. The Council encourages international partners to align their support behind these strategies at the international, regional, national and local levels.

The Council reaffirms the importance of national ownership and the development of national capacity, and underscores that peacebuilding strategies should be considered in a country-specific context. In this regard, the Council recognizes the need for national authorities to take responsibility as soon as possible for reconstituting the institutions and functions of government, with a view to addressing all key peacebuilding needs. The Council emphasizes that support for democratic, transparent and accountable governance is essential in order to achieve durable peace.

The Council highlights the importance of the peaceful settlement of political disputes in a post-conflict State and addressing the sources of violent conflict as essential elements for achieving sustainable peace. The Council recognizes the importance of advancing the peace process and peaceful co-existence through inclusive dialogue, reconciliation and reintegration. The Council reaffirms that ending impunity is essential if a society recovering from conflict is to come to terms with past abuses committed against civilians affected by armed conflict and to prevent such abuses in the future. The Council underlines the importance of holding free, fair and transparent elections for sustainable peace.

The Council recognizes security sector reform as essential to the peacebuilding process and affirms that security sector reform should be nationally owned. Effective security sector reform requires developing a professional, effective and accountable security sector, in particular national police and military capacities under the civilian oversight of a democratic Government. The Council highlights the importance of a sector-wide approach for security sector reform, which enhances the rule of law, including through the establishment of independent justice and corrections systems. The Council requests the Secretary-General to include, where appropriate and mandated, in his reports on specific missions an indication of their progress in supporting national authorities towards achieving coordinated and comprehensive international support for nationally owned security sector reform programmes.

The Council recognizes the importance of pursuing political stability and security alongside socio-economic development for the consolidation of peace. The Council stresses the importance of delivering early peace dividends, including the provision of basic services, in order to help to instil confidence and commitment to the peace process. The Council recognizes that the reintegration of refugees, internally displaced persons and former combatants, in coordination with security sector reform and disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, should not be seen in isolation, but should be carried out in the context of a broader search for peace, stability and development, with special emphasis on the revival of economic activities. The Council notes in this regard that high levels of youth unemployment can be a major challenge to sustainable peacebuilding.

While recognizing the importance of developing State capacity, the Council also emphasizes the importance of increased attention and coherent policies for the reconstruction of conflict-affected communities and the empowerment of affected people, in particular vulnerable civilians, such as children, the elderly, refugees and internally displaced persons. The Council takes note of the need for assistance for victims. The Council, in accordance with its resolutions 1325(2000) and 1820(2008), underlines the key role that women and young persons can play in re-establishing the fabric of society, and stresses the need for their involvement in the development and implementation of post-conflict strategies in order to take account of their perspectives and needs.

The Council notes that drug trafficking, organized crime, terrorism, illegal trafficking in arms and trafficking in persons could constitute transnational threats with an impact on the consolidation of peace in countries emerging from conflict, and underlines the importance of increasing international and regional cooperation on the basis of common and shared responsibility to address them effectively.

The Council reiterates the importance of launching peacebuilding assistance at the earliest possible stage. The Council recognizes the critical role of the Peacebuilding Commission in addressing peacebuilding priorities, particularly by marshalling support and resources and improving planning and coordination for peacebuilding efforts. The Council further recognizes the need for greater coordination with the Commission and looks forward to the 2010 review of the Commission and the recommendations on how its role can be enhanced.

The Council recognizes the importance of enhancing coordination among relevant bilateral and multilateral donors to ensure predictable, coherent and timely financial support for post-conflict peacebuilding. The Council underscores that funding mechanisms for addressing immediate post-conflict needs, in particular the Peacebuilding Fund, should play a catalytic role, which should be followed by more substantial, longer-term finance as soon as possible for the recovery and reconstruction efforts. The Council encourages greater synergy between the Peacebuilding Fund and the Peacebuilding Commission.

The Council recognizes the need to broaden and deepen the pool of civilian experts, in particular experts from developing countries and women, to help to develop national capacity, and encourages Member States, the United Nations and other relevant partners to strengthen cooperation and coordination in building such capacities. The Council looks forward to the recommendations of the United Nations civilian capacity review in the report of the Secretary-General, to follow up his report on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict.

The Council emphasizes the need for the United Nations system to strengthen strategic partnership with other international, regional and subregional organizations, as well as financial institutions, in particular by promoting coherence and coordination among their plans and programmes. In this connection, the Council looks forward to further strengthening of the cooperation between the United Nations and the World Bank at both the headquarters and the field levels, and to the Secretary-General including in his follow-up report details of the steps that have been taken in generating more timely, predictable and accountable responses for the key peacebuilding sectors as requested.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to presidential statement S/PRST/2009/23 [YUN 2009, p. 44], the Secretary-General in July issued a progress report [A/64/866-S/2010/386] on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict. He noted that peacebuilding was primarily a national challenge and responsibility, but the international community, including the United Nations, had a critical role to play in supporting the national agenda. Progress had been made in leadership, civilian capacity, financing and increasing system-wide coherence, but there was still a long way to go. The strategic and management changes needed at UN Headquarters to enable it to deliver more effectively would take longer than one year to translate into real impact on the ground. In some areas, such as predictability of response and national capacity development, much greater efforts were required with and from international partners. Over the previous year, efforts had been made to better assist in bridging leadership gaps in field missions. Seasoned managers from across the UN system had been deployed more systematically at short notice, for short periods of time, to bridge those gaps. There had been improved support from UN Headquarters to resident coordinators and UN country teams, focusing particularly on countries facing complex political challenges that did not have a resident UN peacekeeping or political mission. The lack of pre-mandate commitment authority and access to predictable and adequate financial resources meant that ad hoc arrangements were needed to conduct complex exercises, as in Guinea-Bissau, the Central African Republic and Nepal, creating obstacles to the smooth and timely establishment of new missions, integration with others and implementation of their mandates. There continued to be a gap in national capacities to ensure a stable transition from conflict to sustainable peace and development: the inability of national and community-level actors to manage or resolve new or recurrent tensions that might spark renewed conflict. The UN had accelerated its work to address that gap, developing guidance and training programmes to reinforce national capacity in conflict management, from natural resources to implementation of peace agreements. The Peacebuilding Commission had strengthened its partnerships with international financial institutions and regional organizations, including practical steps to institutionalize its relationship with the AU.

Security Council consideration (October).

On 13 October, the Council held an open debate [S/PV.6396] on post-conflict peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict, where the Secretary-General presented his report (see above), noting that the ultimate test was how well the United Nations delivered on the ground and gave people signs of hope, beyond mere words and promises. There was a need for predictable financing. The UN and its national partners required sufficient and timely funding, especially in the middle of a crisis response. Women should be put at the heart of peacebuilding, not only because of their peacebuilding needs, but above all because of their capacities.

On 13 October [meeting 6396], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/20 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls the statements by its President on post-conflict peacebuilding, in particular the statements of 22 July 2009 and 16 April 2010, and reaffirms the critical importance of peacebuilding as the foundation for sustainable peace and development in the aftermath of conflict.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 16 July 2010 on progress being made towards implementing the agenda for action to improve the United Nations peacebuilding efforts set out in his report of 11 June 2009, as an important contribution towards a more effective and coherent international response to peacebuilding, and urges the Secretary-General and all relevant actors to intensify work in translating this into improved effectiveness of operations on the ground.

The Council reiterates the importance of national ownership of peacebuilding efforts and priorities. The Council stresses the need for mainstreaming support to national capacity development in all United Nations peacebuilding activities as a system-wide priority, and looks forward to the recommendations of the review of civilian capacity in early 2011.

The Council emphasizes the need for early and predictable support in priority areas of peacebuilding, including reform of the security sector, restoration of the rule of law, respect for human rights, ending impunity, combating the illicit arms trade, drug trafficking and transnational organized crime, voluntary return of refugees and internally displaced persons, supporting peace processes, provision of basic services, restoration of core government functions, management of natural resources, tackling youth unemployment and revitalization of the economy. The Council underscores the vital role of the United Nations in supporting national authorities in developing an early strategy, in close consultation with international partners, to address such priorities, as appropriate.

The Council reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to move forward with efforts to further clarify roles and responsibilities within the United Nations system in core peacebuilding areas, strengthen capacities and ensure greater accountability in the delivery of assistance.

The Council welcomes and encourages more coordinated, coherent and integrated peacebuilding efforts, which includes forging stronger partnerships among Member States, regional and subregional organizations, the World Bank and other international financial institutions, other multilateral partners, civil society and the private sector with a focus on delivering greater impact and results on the ground.

The Council reaffirms the critical importance of timely, flexible and predictable funding for peacebuilding, and urges Member States and other partners to increase efforts towards achieving this goal, including through the replenishment of the Peacebuilding Fund and through multi-donor trust funds.

The Council stresses the importance of women's equal participation and full involvement in all efforts for the maintenance and promotion of peace and security, including peacebuilding. The Council reiterates the importance of addressing women's peacebuilding needs and their involvement in the development and implementation of post-conflict strategies. The Council, in this regard, underlines the importance of enhancing the mobilization of resources for initiatives that address women's peacebuilding needs, advance gender equality and empower women in peacebuilding contexts, and encourages Member States and other partners to render their support.

The Council takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on women's participation in peacebuilding and looks forward to its consideration, including with the participation of relevant parts of the United Nations system, including the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women).

The Council welcomes the important role of the Peacebuilding Commission in promoting and supporting an integrated and coherent approach to peacebuilding, including women's participation. The Council reiterates its support for the work of the Commission, and expresses its willingness to make greater use of the advisory role of the Commission.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to brief the Council and the General Assembly by 13 October 2011 and to submit a report no later than 13 October 2012 on further progress made in implementing his agenda for action, giving particular emphasis on the impact this has made on the ground, including progress towards increasing the participation of women in peacebuilding, taking into consideration the views of the Peacebuilding Commission.

Disarmament, demobilization and reintegration

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. During its 2010 session [A/64/19], the Special Committee stressed that disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) programmes were crucial components of peacekeeping operations, and that their success depended upon the political will and concerted effort of all parties. It was crucial that DDR was firmly established within a political process and that all actors were prepared for a multi-year programme. The Special Committee recognized that DDR was an evolving field and that related programmes should be tailored to specific contexts to ensure consistency with national strategies and address the different needs of female and male ex-combatants and their dependants. It stressed that the civilian reintegration of ex-combatants posed particular challenges, requiring concerted efforts to help jump-start the economy in order to create employment for ex-combatants and the wider community. As a result, the Special Committee requested the Secretary-General to conduct a thorough review within the next year on how the United Nations approached the issue, and to make the appropriate linkages with the wider issues of the return and reintegration of the displaced and economic recovery, ensuring that they were consistent with national priorities.

Rule of law

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. The Special Committee [A/64/19] recognized that creating and sustaining stability in the aftermath of conflict required that the causes of the conflict be addressed and that local rule-of-law capacities be assessed, restored and enhanced from the beginning of a peacekeeping operation. The Special Committee recalled the importance of respect for the rule of law as a vital contribution to building peace and justice and ending impunity. It reiterated the need for greater clarity and specificity in UN peacekeeping mandates on rule-of-law issues and requested that, where mandated, DPKO continue to ensure that rule-of-law and transitional justice were integrated into the planning of peacekeeping operations. The Special Committee recognized the importance of rule-of-law assistance being provided to host countries from the very outset of the establishment of new peacekeeping missions. It reiterated the need to ensure cooperation and coordination among all relevant UN actors, including through the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group [YUN 2006, p. 48], in order to ensure a holistic and coherent UN approach.

Other peacebuilding issues

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. The Special Committee [A/64/19] reaffirmed the need for DPKO to plan and conduct UN peacekeeping activities in such a manner as to facilitate post-conflict peacebuilding, the prevention of recurrence of armed conflicts and progress towards sustainable peace and development. The Special Committee underlined the importance of effective coordination between DPKO, the Department of Political Affairs, the Peacebuilding Support Office, UN funds, programmes and agencies and non-UN partners, particularly at the early stage of UN engagement in post-conflict situations. The Special Committee noted the efforts of the Security Council to improve its practices in order to ensure a successful transition from a peacekeeping operation to other configurations of UN presence. It underlined the need to formulate peacebuilding strategies and programmes that were integrated with host-nation strategies and programmes to ensure national ownership, and recommended that DPKO further explore opportunities for partnerships.

The Special Committee underlined the role of the Peacebuilding Commission in developing integrated peacebuilding strategies and marshalling resources for their implementation, ensuring fulfilment of mutual commitments on the part of stakeholders, enhancing coordination on the ground and promoting dialogue on cross-cutting issues. It recognized the need to support Governments in the delivery of critical recovery and peacebuilding requirements in immediate post-conflict environments.

Peacebuilding Commission

In accordance with Security Council resolutions 1645(2005) and 1646(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 94] and General Assembly resolution 60/180 [ibid.], the Peacebuilding Commission reported [A/65/701-S/2011/41] on its work during its fourth session, reviewing its activities from 1 July 2009 to 31 December 2010.

The fourth session coincided with the mandated five-year review of the UN peacebuilding architecture (see below). The Commission focused its activities on issues that were subsequently highlighted through the review recommendations, including strengthening partnerships with key regional and international actors, mobilizing resources, empowering youth, revitalizing the economy and providing support to political processes in the countries on its agenda—Burundi, Sierra Leone, Guinea-Bissau, the Central African Republic and Liberia, which was placed on the Commission's agenda in September. It was noted that the review should be a wake-up call to strengthen the collective resolve to deal with peacebuilding in a more comprehensive and determined way. The political momentum generated by the review, together with the Secretary-General's reports on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict (see p. 53), on women's participation in peacebuilding (see p. 1166) and on the causes of conflict in Africa (see below), as well as the tenth anniversary of the Brahimi Panel report on United Nations peace operations [YUN 2000, p. 83], had raised expectations of a more central contribution by the Commission to an evolving UN peacebuilding agenda. The Commission would focus on improving its effectiveness by generating better analyses and galvanizing action around critical and country-specific peacebuilding priorities; by improving its advice to the UN principal organs; by rationalizing its resource-mobilization efforts; and by strengthening partnerships with key operational bodies within the UN system, international financial institutions and regional actors. The Commission emphasized the need to reinforce the capacity of the Peacebuilding Support Office to support country configurations and facilitate its interaction with the field.

Review of peacebuilding architecture

On 19 July [A/64/868-S/2010/393], pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/180 and Security Council resolution 1645(2005), the co-facilitators of the review—Ireland, Mexico and South Africa—presented a report that looked at the mixed experience with the four countries on the Peacebuilding Commission's agenda and brought a number of issues into relief: national ownership and capacity-building; developmental aspects of peacebuilding; the need for coherence and coordination; and the importance of the regional dimension. The report dealt with issues relating to the Commission's Organizational Committee and the potential for distinctive contributions by each of its membership streams. It envisaged a more solid relationship between the Organizational Committee and the country-specific configurations, while allowing for the necessary flexibility. It noted that the main focus of the Organizational Committee should remain on strategic thematic issues; on building partnerships within and outside the United Nations; and on developing mutual accountability frameworks. Regarding the country-specific configurations, the report considered the challenge of how to combine innovation and vibrancy with weight and solidity, and recommended adding a country dimension to the chairing role, so as to buttress the support available to the Chair. It also recommended the establishment of country-specific configuration liaison committees in the field. According to the report, interaction with the Security Council had been limited and fell short of the expectations of 2005. The potential existed, however, to create a new dynamic between a more forthcoming Security Council and a better performing Peacebuilding Commission. The Commission's relationships with the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council also remained insufficiently developed, and the report recommended steps that might be taken. In that regard, the report noted that the co-parenting role of the Assembly should be more visible and meaningful. The Economic and Social Council could consider adding peacebuilding themes to its annual session; it could facilitate interaction between the Commission and UN funds and programmes as well as with the specialized agencies; and more regular joint events could be scheduled. For its part, the Commission could take the initiative of regularly updating the Council on aspects of its work. Regarding partnerships, the report noted a growing sense of the importance of strengthening the relationship between the United Nations and the World Bank and suggested a more structured input by the Commission at World Bank headquarters.

On 29 October [meeting 6414], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1947(2010). The draft [S/2010/557] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 1645(2005) of 20 December 2005, in particular paragraph 27 thereof,

Reaffirming the importance of the peacebuilding work carried out by the United Nations and the need for sustained support and adequate resources for this work,

Recognizing the role of the Peacebuilding Commission as a dedicated intergovernmental advisory body to address the needs of countries emerging from conflict towards sustainable peace,

1. Welcomes the report submitted by the co-facilitators entitled “Review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture”, which is based on extensive consultations with the United Nations membership and other stakeholders;

2. Requests all relevant United Nations actors to take forward, within their mandates and as appropriate, the recommendations of the report, with the aim of further improving the effectiveness of the Peacebuilding Commission;

3. Recognizes that the peacebuilding work of the United Nations requires sustained support and adequate resources to meet the challenges;

4. Requests the Peacebuilding Commission to reflect in its annual reports progress made in taking forward the relevant recommendations of the report;

5. Calls for a further comprehensive review five years after the adoption of the present resolution following the procedure as set out in paragraph 27 of resolution 1645(2005);

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 29 October [meeting 41], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/7 [draft: A/65/L.7] without vote [agenda items 13 & 115].

Review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 60/180 of 20 December 2005, in particular paragraph 27 thereof,

Reaffirming the importance of the peacebuilding work carried out by the United Nations and the need for sustained support and adequate resources for this work,

Recognizing the role of the Peacebuilding Commission as a dedicated intergovernmental advisory body to address the needs of countries emerging from conflict towards sustainable peace,

1. Welcomes the report submitted by the co-facilitators entitled “Review of the United Nations peacebuilding architecture”, which is based on extensive consultations with the United Nations membership and other stakeholders;

2. Requests all relevant United Nations actors to take forward, within their mandates and as appropriate, the recommendations of the report, with the aim of further improving the effectiveness of the Peacebuilding Commission;

3. Recognizes that the peacebuilding work of the United Nations requires sustained support and adequate resources to meet the challenges;

4. Requests the Peacebuilding Commission to reflect in its annual reports progress made in taking forward the relevant recommendations of the report;

5. Calls for a further comprehensive review five years after the adoption of the present resolution following the procedure set out in paragraph 27 of resolution 60/180;

6. Decides to include at its sixty-fifth session, under the agenda item entitled “Report of the Peacebuilding Commission”, a review of progress made in taking forward the relevant recommendations of the report.

(For information on the activities of the Peacebuilding Commission in Burundi, the Central African Republic, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia and Sierra Leone, see PART ONE, Chapter II.)

Organizational Committee

The Peacebuilding Commission’s Organizational Committee held two formal meetings in 2010. At its first meeting on 27 January [PBC/4/OC/SR.1], the Committee elected for one year, beginning 1 January, the Chairperson and two Vice-Chairpersons of the Commission, as well as the Chairpersons of its country-specific configurations on Burundi, the Central African Republic, Guinea-Bissau and Sierra Leone. The Chairperson said that much progress had been made since the Peacebuilding Commission’s creation. In addition to the four countries on the Commission’s agenda, the Peacebuilding Fund was assisting 15 countries through more than 100 projects, with contributions from more than 40 countries. Through the country-specific configurations, the agenda countries had received concrete support even in difficult political circumstances.

At its second meeting on 16 September [PBC/4/OC/SR.2], the Chairperson drew attention to a letter dated 19 July [A/64/870-S/2010/389] from the President of the Security Council to the Chairperson of the Peacebuilding Commission, which conveyed the Council's support for the request from the Liberian Government that Liberia be placed on the agenda of the Peacebuilding Commission. The Chairperson said that on the basis of the Committee's decision to place Liberia on the Commission's agenda, and pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/180 [YUN 2005, p. 94] and Security Council resolution 1645(2005) [ibid.], as well as the Commission's provisional rules of procedure, he understood that the Committee wished to establish a country-specific configuration on Liberia, with membership consisting, initially, of the members of the Committee, pending further consultations on additional members. The Committee also elected Jordan as Chairperson of the Commission's country-specific configuration on Liberia based upon prior informal consultations, as well as on the content of two letters to the Committee from Liberia and Jordan.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 51], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2010/36 [draft: E/2010/L.42] without vote [agenda item 1].

Membership of the Economic and Social Council in the Organizational Committee of the Peacebuilding Commission

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 60/180 of 20 December 2005 and Security Council resolution 1645(2005) of 20 December 2005, concurrently establishing the Peacebuilding Commission,

Recalling also, in particular, paragraphs 12 (b), 13 and 17 of General Assembly resolution 60/180 and Security Council resolution 1645(2005), establishing the institutional relationship between the Economic and Social Council and the Peacebuilding Commission,

Recalling further General Assembly resolution 63/145 of 18 December 2008, in which the Assembly, inter alia, invited other bodies with members elected to the Organizational Committee of the Peacebuilding Commission to adjust the term of office of their respective members so that the term of office of all members of the Organizational Committee could start on 1 January instead of 23 June,

Recalling Economic and Social Council resolutions 2006/3 of 8 May 2006 and 2008/38 of 19 December 2008 on the membership of the Council in the Organizational Committee,

Recognizing the important role to be performed by the Commission towards recovery, reintegration and reconstruction in countries emerging from conflict, particularly in Africa,

Recalling that due consideration is to be given to countries that have experienced post-conflict recovery in the composition of the Organizational Committee,

1. Decides that the distribution of the seven seats allocated to the Economic and Social Council on the Organizational Committee of the Peacebuilding Commission shall be as follows:

(a) One seat for each of the five regional groups, namely, African States, Asian States, Eastern European States, Latin American and Caribbean States and Western European and other States;

(b) In the election of members of the Council to the Organizational Committee whose term of office shall start on 1 January 2011, the two remaining seats shall be allocated to the regional group of African States;

2. Also decides that the established practice of the Council regarding members elected to its subsidiary bodies who are not able to complete their term of office shall apply to members elected to the Organizational Committee by the Council.

General Assembly action. On 22 December, the Assembly, pursuant to its resolutions 60/180 and 63/145 [YUN 2008, p. 56], elected Benin, Brazil, Indonesia, Tunisia and Uruguay as members of the Organizational Committee of the Peacebuilding Commission for a two-year term of office, beginning on 1 January 2011, to fill the vacancies occurring on the expiration of the terms of office of Benin, Chile, South Africa, Thailand and Uruguay (decision 65/411).

Security Council action. By a letter of 30 December [S/2010/690], the Security Council informed the Secretary-General that, following informal consultations, the Council had selected Gabon and Colombia as the two elected members of the Council to participate in the Organizational Committee for a one-year term, until the end of 2011.

Peacebuilding Fund

In response to General Assembly resolution 63/282 [YUN 2009, p. 49], the Secretary-General in September submitted the fourth annual report [A/65/353] on the Peacebuilding Fund, established in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 58] as a mechanism for extending critical support at the early stages of a peace process.

The report reviewed the Fund's operations and activities from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010. As at 30 June 2010, the total portfolio of the Fund (including deposits and interest income) had grown to $357.3 million. With an expanding donor base, which numbered 48, the Fund maintained its position as a global fund with one of the broadest donor bases of any multi-donor trust fund administered by the United Nations, and was acknowledged to be one of the key instruments for providing early support for peacebuilding. During the reporting period, the Fund allocated $63.51 million in 16 countries on security sector reform; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration; youth employment; national reconciliation; good governance; and rule of law, up from $43.94 million in 2008/2009. The Fund had 14 recipient UN organizations in 2009. Following the revision of its terms of reference in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 49], the Fund had improved efficiency with new management procedures and was shifting its focus to programme quality and better reporting of performance and impact. The goal was to enable the Fund to respond more effectively to the needs and challenges of post-conflict and post-crisis countries, thus preventing the risk of relapse into conflict.

Protection

Responsibility to protect

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/64/864] updating Member States on the responsibility to protect, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 63/308 [YUN 2009, p. 50], the Secretary-General addressed matters that were raised in the annex to his 2009 report [ibid.] and subsequently debated in the General Assembly [ibid.].

He noted that the political dialogue on how best to implement the responsibility to protect was off to a good start, although a number of implementation issues would require a continuing conversation among the Member States, the UN system and civil society organizations. The Secretary-General's Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide, Francis M. Deng, and the Special Adviser responsible for the conceptual, political and institutional development of the responsibility to protect, Edward C. Luck, had distinct but closely related responsibilities. Both sets of tasks needed to be pursued with vigour. It was essential to maintain the distinct elements of those two sets of responsibilities and to ensure the close working relationship of the two Special Advisers on the common elements of their activities, for example by employing common methodologies whenever possible. Ways needed to be considered to institutionalize the collaboration between the two Special Advisers, including options for a joint office. If situations of genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing or crimes against humanity persisted, and if national authorities were manifestly failing to protect their populations from those crimes, the Secretary-General would ask the Special Advisers to convene an urgent meeting of key Under-Secretaries-General to identify a range of multilateral policy options—whether by the United Nations or by Chapter VIII regional arrangements—for preventing such mass crimes and for protecting populations. The United Nations needed world-class early warning and assessment capacities, as called for by the 2005 World Summit Outcome [YUN 2005, p. 48], in order to ensure that it was not left with a choice between doing nothing and taking ill-informed action. The Secretary-General noted that his strategy for implementing the responsibility to protect called for an early and flexible response tailored to the circumstances of each case.

Protection of civilians in armed conflict

Security Council consideration (July). On 7 July [S/PV.6354], the Council held an open debate on the protection of civilians in armed conflict. The Secretary-General told the Council that it must broaden its focus to the causes creating the “huge common challenge” of non-combatants remaining targeted around the world. While the conduct of hostilities and their immediate consequences needed to remain a major focus, addressing that alone would mean treating symptoms rather than causes. He drew attention to such root causes as lack of good governance, competition for scarce resources and other factors such as ethnicity. Climate change, desertification and land disputes could be additional drivers of conflict, and a lack of effective security and rule-of-law mechanisms could exacerbate the problems. The Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs, John Holmes, and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Navanethem Pillay, addressed the day-long debate, along with delegates from 39 countries and the EU.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1894(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 60], the Secretary-General in November submitted a report [S/2010/579] on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, wherein he provided an update on progress made in enhancing compliance by parties to conflict with international law; compliance by non-State armed groups; protection by UN peacekeeping and other missions; humanitarian access; and accountability for violations of the law.

On enhancing compliance with international law, the Secretary-General urged Member States, UN actors and international and non-governmental organizations to support data collection and analysis of the human costs of explosive weapons. That was essential to deepening the understanding of the humanitarian impact of such weapons and to developing policies and practices that would strengthen the implementation of international humanitarian and human rights law. On enhancing compliance by non-State armed groups, a comprehensive approach would involve an increased understanding of the motivations of specific groups and their incentives to comply with international law, as well as strategies for engaging such groups to seek improved protection for civilians and safe humanitarian access to those in need. Member States should avoid introducing measures that inhibited humanitarian actors in their efforts to engage armed groups for humanitarian purposes. On the protection of civilians by UN peacekeeping and other operations, in advance of the drawdown of those operations, the Security Council, or Member States, should articulate benchmarks relating to the protection of civilians. The Council should establish a mechanism to measure progress against such benchmarks. Donor States were encouraged to anticipate and respond to increased funding requirements for the humanitarian and development actors that remained. On humanitarian access, the Security Council was urged to enhance accountability for grave instances of delays or denials of access for humanitarian operations, as well as attacks against humanitarian workers, including by referring the situation to the International Criminal Court (icc) or encouraging domestic prosecutions. On enhancing accountability, among other recommendations, the Secretary-General encouraged States to sign and ratify the Rome Statute of the icc.

Security Council consideration (November).

At a day-long debate on 22 November [S/PV.6427], the Security Council discussed the protection of civilians in armed conflict, including the report of the Secretary-General. Speakers included the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs, Valerie Amos, the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Alan Le Roy, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, Navanethem Pillay, and the Director-General of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Yves Daccord.

Ms. Amos said that any positive developments in the effort to protect civilians had been outweighed by the failures of parties to conflict to abide by their international legal obligation to protect civilians. Where humanitarian actors were unable to promote compliance with the law, the Council needed to do more to enforce, including by following through on the willingness to respond to conflict in which civilians were targeted or humanitarian assistance deliberately obstructed. Improved compliance with international humanitarian and human rights law would remain elusive without full acceptance of the need to engage with non-State armed groups. Experience showed that lives could be saved by engaging armed groups in order to seek compliance with international humanitarian law in their combat operations and general conduct, to gain safe access for humanitarian operations, or to dissuade them from using certain types of weapons. Mr. Daccord said that the reality on the ground was often dismal compared to the progress in policy and doctrine because of the lack of respect for international humanitarian law by State and non-State actors, coupled with the prevailing culture of impunity. The increase in non-State armed groups compounded that challenge. When armed actors were motivated by crime or banditry, it was harder to talk to them about their obligation to protect civilians. The constant evolution in the means and methods of warfare was another factor. Waging battle in densely populated urban areas, sometimes with highly explosive weapons, was just one example. True consensus on the meaning of protection was hard to achieve. It was essential to have clarity and transparency on the objectives of different actors, be they civilian or military, and to distinguish between them. It was also important to distinguish between physical protection—which humanitarian actors could not provide—and protection by promoting compliance with the law.

Some 55 speakers focused on the Secretary-General's five core challenges, with attention drawn to the quandary of enhancing compliance with international law by non-State armed groups. The point was made that engaging with them could confer unintended legitimacy on violent perpetrators of terrorism.

On 22 November [meeting 6427], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/25 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment regarding the protection of civilians in armed conflict, to the continuing and full implementation, in a mutually reinforcing manner, of all previous relevant resolutions and statements by its President, including resolutions 1265(1999), 1296(2000), 1325(2000), 1612(2005), 1674(2006), 1738(2006), 1820(2008), 1882(2009), 1888(2009), 1889(2009) and 1894(2009), noting, in particular, that resolution 1894(2009) marked a significant step in providing guidance to ensure the effective protection of civilians on the ground.

The Council takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General of 11 November 2010 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and the recommendations contained therein.

The Council recalls that on 15 March 2002 an aide-memoire was adopted, as a practical tool that provides a basis for improved analysis and diagnosis of key protection issues. The Council adopts the updated aide-memoire contained in the annex to the present statement by its President and stresses the need to continue its use on a more systematic and consistent basis.

The Council recognizes that States bear the primary responsibility to respect and ensure the human rights of all individuals within their territory and subject to their jurisdiction as provided for by relevant international law.

The Council reaffirms that parties to armed conflict bear the primary responsibility to take all feasible steps to ensure the protection of affected civilians and urges parties to armed conflict to meet their basic needs and give attention to the specific needs of women and children, refugees, internally displaced persons, as well as other civilians who may have specific vulnerabilities, including persons with disabilities and older persons.

The Council emphasizes that the promotion of peace processes and the achievement of sustainable peace and development as well as respect for human rights and the rule of law are of utmost importance for the long-term protection of civilians.

The Council remains committed to addressing the impact of armed conflict on civilians, in particular women and children. The Council expresses its deep regret that civilians continue to account for the vast majority of casualties in situations of armed conflict, including as a result of deliberate targeting, indiscriminate or disproportionate attacks and sexual and gender-based violence, as well as other acts that violate applicable international law. The Council demands that all relevant parties immediately put an end to such practices and reaffirms its readiness to adopt appropriate measures.

The Council notes with concern the humanitarian impact of conflict, in or near densely populated areas, and calls upon parties to armed conflict to give protection to the civilian population in accordance with applicable international humanitarian law.

The Council reiterates its strong condemnation of all violations of applicable international law and demands that parties to armed conflict comply strictly with the obligations applicable to them under international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, as well as implement all relevant decisions of the Council. The Council emphasizes in this context the responsibility of States to comply with their relevant obligations to end impunity and notes that the fight against impunity for the most serious crimes of international concern has been strengthened through prosecution of these crimes in national, international and 'mixed' criminal courts and tribunals, commissions of inquiry, as well as specialized chambers in national tribunals. The Council takes note of the stocktaking of international criminal justice undertaken at the first Review Conference of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, held in Kampala from 31 May to 11 June 2010. The Council also draws attention to the full range of justice and reconciliation mechanisms, including truth and reconciliation commissions, national reparation programmes and institutional reforms.

The Council recognizes the needs of civilians under foreign occupation and stresses further, in this regard, the responsibilities of the occupying Power in full compliance with international humanitarian law.

The Council reiterates the importance for all, within the framework of humanitarian assistance, of upholding and respecting the humanitarian principles of humanity, neutrality, impartiality and independence. The Council condemns and calls for the cessation of all acts of violence and other forms of intimidation deliberately directed at humanitarian personnel as such and calls upon all parties to conflict to comply with the obligations applicable to them under international humanitarian law to respect and protect humanitarian personnel and relief consignments. The Council underlines in this respect the importance of continuing the systematic monitoring and analysis of constraints on humanitarian access.

The Council stresses the importance of achieving durable solutions for refugees and internally displaced persons, in particular their voluntary, safe and dignified return, or local integration or resettlement.

The Council welcomes the proposals, conclusions and recommendations on the protection of civilians included in the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations. The Council stresses the importance of ensuring engagement by senior mission leadership on the protection of civilians, with a view to ensuring that all mission components and all levels of the chain of command are properly informed of and involved in the mission's protection mandate and their relevant responsibilities. The Council welcomes progress made by the Secretary-General in elaborating a conceptual framework, outlining resource and capability requirements and developing operational tools for the implementation of protection of civilians mandates. The Council emphasizes the importance of improving predeployment training for peacekeeping personnel on the protection of civilians. The Council encourages troop- and police-contributing countries to make full use of and provide feedback on these important materials.

The Council underlines that, in order to carry out their mandate, missions must communicate effectively with local communities and have the capacity to do so. The Council underlines, in this context, the importance of taking into account gender sensitivities and of making full use of all the tools available to the mission, in particular its public information and civil affairs components, such as civil affairs officers, community liaison interpreters and radio.

The Council reaffirms its practice of requiring benchmarks to measure and review progress made in the implementation of peacekeeping mandates, underlines the importance of clear benchmarks in the context of drawdown in peacekeeping missions, and stresses the importance of including indicators of progress regarding the protection of civilians in such benchmarks for relevant missions.

The Council recognizes the need for systematic monitoring and reporting on progress in protecting civilians in armed conflict. The Council further reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to develop guidance for peacekeeping and other relevant missions on the reporting of the protection of civilians in armed conflict. The Council reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to include in his reports on country-specific situations more comprehensive and detailed information relating to the protection of civilians in armed conflict.

The Council notes the practice of briefings to members of the Council by the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat on behalf of the United Nations humanitarian community.

The Council takes note of the Montreux Document on pertinent international legal obligations and good practices for States related to operations of private military and security companies during armed conflict.

The Council emphasizes that all civilians affected by armed conflict, including those suffering losses as a result of lawful acts under international law, deserve assistance and recognition in respect of their inherent dignity as human beings.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to submit his next report on the protection of civilians by May 2012.

ANNEX

Protection of civilians in armed conflictAide-memoire*For the consideration of issues pertaining to the protection of civilians in armed conflict

Enhancing the protection of civilians in armed conflict is at the core of the work of the Security Council for the maintenance of peace and security. In order to facilitate the Council's consideration of protection of civilians concerns in a given context, including at the time of the establishment or renewal of peacekeeping mandates, in June 2001 members of the Council suggested that an aide-memoire, listing the relevant issues, be drafted in cooperation with the Council. On 15 March 2002, the Council adopted the aide-memoire as a practical guide for its consideration of protection of civilians issues and agreed to review and update its contents periodically. It was subsequently updated and adopted as an annex to the presidential statement of 15 December 2003.

This is the fourth edition of the aide-memoire and is based on the previous deliberations of the Council on the protection of civilians, including resolutions 1265(1999), 1296(2000), 1674(2006), 1738(2006) and 1894(2009). It is the result of consultation between the Council and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs, as well as between the Office and concerned United Nations departments and agencies, and other relevant humanitarian organizations.

The aide-memoire is intended to facilitate the Council's consideration of issues relevant to the protection of civilians in armed conflict. To this end, it highlights primary objectives for Council action; offers, on the basis of the Council's past practice, specific issues for consideration in meeting those objectives; and provides, in the addendum, a selection of agreed language from Council resolutions and presidential statements that refer to such concerns.

Bearing in mind that each peacekeeping mandate has to be elaborated on a case-by-case basis, the aide-memoire is not intended as a blueprint for action. The relevance and practicality of the various measures described has to be considered and adapted to the specific conditions in each situation.

Most frequently, civilians are caught in circumstances of dire need where a peacekeeping operation has not been established. Such situations may require urgent attention by the Council. The present aide-memoire may, therefore, also provide guidance in circumstances where the Council may wish to consider action outside the scope of a peacekeeping operation.

I. General protection concerns pertaining to the conflict-affected populationA. Protection of, and assistance to, the conflict-affected population*Parties to armed conflict to take the necessary measures to protect and meet the basic needs of the conflict-affected population

Issues for consideration:

- Stress the responsibility of parties to armed conflict to respect, protect and meet the basic needs of civilian populations within their effective control.

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, acts of violence or abuses committed against civilians in situations of armed conflict in violation of applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law, including with regard to:
 - The prohibition against violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, cruel treatment and torture; enforced disappearances; outrages upon personal dignity; rape, sexual slavery, enforced prostitution, forced pregnancy, enforced sterilization, and any other form of sexual violence.
 - The prohibition against arbitrary deprivation of liberty; corporal punishment; collective punishment; and the passing of sentences and the carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court, affording all judicial guarantees which are generally recognized as indispensable.
 - The prohibition against the taking of hostages.
 - The prohibition against ordering the displacement of the civilian population for reasons related to the conflict, unless the security of the civilians involved or imperative military reasons so demand.
 - The prohibition against the recruitment or the active use of children in hostilities by parties to armed conflict in violation of applicable international law.
 - The prohibition against slavery and the slave trade in all their forms and uncompensated or abusive forced labour.
 - The prohibition against wilfully impeding relief supplies as provided for under international humanitarian law.
 - The prohibition of persecution on political, religious, racial or gender grounds.
 - The prohibition of any adverse distinction in the application of international humanitarian law and human rights law based on race, colour, sex, language, religion or belief, political or other opinion, national or social origin, wealth, birth or other status.
 - The obligation to respect and protect, to whichever party they belong, the wounded and sick, to take all possible measures, particularly after an engagement, to search for and collect the wounded and sick and to provide, to the fullest extent practicable and with the least possible delay, the medical care and attention required by their condition without distinction on any grounds other than medical ones.
- Call upon all parties to ensure access for relevant organizations, as applicable, to all prisons and places of detention.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council, where appropriate and on a case-by-case basis, to contribute to the protection of the civilian population, particularly those under imminent threat of physical violence, within their zones of operation. In doing so, request:

- That the protection of civilians is prioritized in decisions about the use of available capacity and resources, including information and intelligence resources, in the implementation of mandates.
 - The development of clear guidelines/directives as to what missions can do to protect civilians, including practical protection measures such as intensified and systematic patrolling in potential volatile areas, joint protection teams or early warning cells.
 - Systematic coordination, between the civil and military components of the mission and with humanitarian actors, in order to consolidate expertise on the protection of civilians.
 - That missions communicate with the civilian population to raise awareness and understanding about their mandate and activities and to collect reliable information on violations of international humanitarian law and human rights abuses perpetrated against civilians.
- Request that United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions develop comprehensive protection strategies in consultation with United Nations country teams and other relevant actors.
 - Request that reports of the Secretary-General on country-specific situations include information on the protection of civilians.
 - Request that United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions develop benchmarks and indicators of progress regarding the protection of civilians to measure specific developments in the implementation of their protection mandates.
 - Request troop- and police-contributing countries to ensure the provision of appropriate training to heighten the awareness and responsiveness to protection concerns of their personnel participating in United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to protect civilians.
 - Urge relevant regional and/or subregional bodies to develop and implement policies, activities and advocacy for the benefit of civilians affected by armed conflict.

B. Displacement

Parties to armed conflict and other relevant actors to refrain from, and take the necessary measures to prevent and respond to, the displacement of the civilian population

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, displacement in violation of applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law.
 - Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law, including with regard to:
 - The prohibition against deportation, forcible transfer or displacement of the civilian population, in whole or in part, unless the security of the civilians concerned or imperative military reasons so demand.
 - The obligation, in case of displacement, to ensure to the greatest practicable extent that the civilians concerned are received under satisfactory conditions of shelter, hygiene, health, safety and nutrition and that members of the same family are not separated, and that basic needs are met during displacement.
 - The right to freedom of movement and to leave one's country and seek asylum.
 - The right to non-refoulement under the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, the protection of which does not extend to any person with respect to whom there are serious reasons for considering that she or he has been guilty of acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.
- Underline the primary responsibility of States to respect and maintain the security and civilian character of camps for refugees and internally displaced persons, including disarming armed elements, separating combatants, curbing the flow of small arms in camps and preventing recruitment by armed groups in and around camps.
 - Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to take all feasible measures to ensure security in and around such camps and for their inhabitants.
 - Request that reports of the Secretary-General on country-specific situations include the protection of displaced persons as a specific aspect of the report.
 - Urge relevant regional and/or subregional bodies to develop and implement policies, activities and advocacy for the benefit of internally displaced persons and refugees.

Durable solutions for refugees and internally displaced persons, including safe, voluntary and dignified return and reintegration

Issues for consideration:

- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law, refugee law and human rights law, including with regard to:
 - Respect for the right of refugees and displaced persons to voluntary return in safety and dignity to their homes.
 - Respect for the property rights of refugees and displaced persons, without adverse distinction on the basis of gender, age or other status.
- Stress in relevant resolutions the importance of achieving durable solutions for refugees and displaced persons, including voluntary, safe and dignified return, and of ensuring their full participation in the planning and management of these solutions. Call upon all parties concerned to create the conditions conducive to allowing the voluntary, safe, dignified and sustainable return, local integration or resettlement of refugees and displaced persons.
- Call upon all parties concerned to ensure non-discriminatory treatment of returning refugees and internally displaced persons.

- Call upon all parties concerned to ensure the participation of refugees and internally displaced persons and inclusion of their needs, including their right to voluntary, safe and dignified return and reintegration, in all peace processes, peace agreements and post-conflict recovery and reconstruction planning and programmes.
- Encourage United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council, as appropriate and on a case-by-case basis, to support domestic mechanisms for addressing housing, land and property issues or their establishment by national authorities.
- Encourage United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council, as appropriate and on a case-by-case basis, to prevent the illegal appropriation and confiscation of land and property belonging to refugees and internally displaced persons and to ensure the protection of returning refugees and internally displaced persons.

C. Humanitarian access and safety and security of humanitarian workers

Parties to armed conflict to agree to and facilitate relief operations that are humanitarian and impartial in character and to allow and facilitate rapid and unimpeded passage of relief consignments, equipment and personnel

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate removal of, impediments to humanitarian access in violation of applicable international humanitarian law.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law, including:
 - The prohibition against using starvation of civilians as a method of warfare by depriving them of objects indispensable to their survival, including wilfully impeding relief supplies as provided for under applicable international humanitarian law.
 - Agreeing to relief actions which are humanitarian and impartial in character and conducted without any adverse distinction.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict and third States with their obligations under applicable international humanitarian law to allow and facilitate the rapid and unimpeded passage of relief consignments, equipment and personnel subject to their right to prescribe technical arrangements, including search, under which such passage is permitted.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council, where appropriate and as requested, to facilitate the provision of humanitarian assistance.

Parties to armed conflict to respect and protect humanitarian workers and facilities

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, attacks deliberately targeting humanitarian workers.

- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law, including the duty to respect and protect relief personnel and installations, material, units and vehicles involved in humanitarian assistance.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to contribute, as requested and within capabilities, to the creation of the security conditions necessary for the provision of humanitarian assistance.
- Encourage the Secretary-General to bring to the attention of the Security Council situations in which humanitarian assistance is denied as a consequence of violence directed against humanitarian personnel and facilities.
- Request that States include key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel and the Optional Protocol thereto, such as those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of United Nations operations, the criminalization of such attacks and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission and host country agreements negotiated with the United Nations.

D. Conduct of hostilities

Parties to armed conflict to take all feasible precautions to spare civilians from the effects of hostilities

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, all acts of violence or abuses committed against civilians in violation of applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law, including the prohibitions against:
 - Directing attacks against the civilian population or against individual civilians not taking a direct part in hostilities.
 - Directing attacks against civilian objects.
 - Launching an attack that is indiscriminate, i.e., of a nature to strike military objectives and civilians or civilian objects without distinction.
 - Launching an attack which may be expected to cause incidental loss of life or injury to civilians or damage to civilian objects or a combination thereof which would be excessive in relation to the concrete and direct military advantage anticipated.
 - Directing attacks against personnel, installations, material, units or vehicles involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, as long as they are entitled to the protection given to civilians or civilian objects under international humanitarian law.
 - Utilizing the presence of a civilian or other protected person to render certain points, areas or military forces immune from military operations.
 - Rape and other forms of sexual violence.

- Directing attacks against buildings dedicated to religion, education, art, science or charitable purposes, historical monuments, hospitals and places where the sick and wounded are collected, provided they are not military objectives.
 - Directing attacks against buildings, material, medical units and transport, and personnel using the distinctive emblems of the Geneva Conventions in conformity with international law.
 - Destroying or seizing the property of the adversary unless required by military necessity.
 - Using starvation of civilians as a method of warfare by depriving them of objects indispensable to their survival, including wilfully impeding relief supplies as provided for under applicable international humanitarian law.
- Request regular reporting by United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council on concrete steps taken to ensure the protection of the civilian population in the conduct of hostilities and on measures to ensure accountability for violations of applicable international humanitarian law.

E. Small arms and light weapons, mines and explosive remnants of war

Protection of the civilian population through the control of, and reduction in the availability of, illicit small arms and light weapons

Issues for consideration:

- Express concern at the detrimental impact of the proliferation of arms, in particular small arms, on the security of civilians by fuelling armed conflict, and request the mission to monitor the presence of arms among the civilian population.
 - Request States and regional and subregional organizations to adopt measures to curb and reduce illicit trafficking in small arms and light weapons, such as voluntary collection and destruction; effective stockpile management; arms embargoes; sanctions; and legal measures against corporate actors, individuals and entities involved in such activities.
 - Encourage strengthened practical cooperation between United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council aimed at monitoring and preventing the cross-border movement of small arms and light weapons.
 - Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to collect and dispose of or secure illicit and/or surplus small arms and light weapons as well as surplus ammunition stockpiles.
 - Consider imposing arms embargoes and other measures aimed at preventing the sale or supply of arms and related materiel of all types to parties to armed conflict that commit violations of applicable international law.
 - Encourage strengthened practical cooperation among relevant sanctions monitoring groups of the Security Council, peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Council and States.
- Request the establishment of a baseline arms inventory as well as arms marking and registration systems in situations where a United Nations arms embargo coincides with disarmament, demobilization and reintegration efforts.

Protection of the civilian population through the marking, clearance, removal or destruction of mines and explosive remnants of war, including cluster munition remnants

Issues for consideration:

- Call upon parties to armed conflict, after the cessation of active hostilities and as soon as feasible, to mark, clear, remove or destroy mines and explosive remnants of war in affected territories under their control, prioritizing areas affected by mines and explosive remnants of war which are assessed to pose serious humanitarian risk.
- Call upon parties to armed conflict to record and retain information on the use of mines and explosive ordnance or the abandonment of explosive ordnance, to facilitate rapid marking and clearance, removal or destruction of mines and explosive remnants of war and risk education, and to provide the relevant information to the party in control of, and civilian populations in, the territory.
- Call upon parties to armed conflict to take all feasible precautions in the territory under their control affected by mines and explosive remnants of war to protect the civilian population, in particular children, including issuing warnings, undertaking risk education, marking, fencing and monitoring territory affected by mines and explosive remnants of war.
- Call upon parties to armed conflict to protect United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council, as well as humanitarian organizations, from the effects of mines and explosive remnants of war and to make available information on the location of mines and explosive remnants of war that they are aware of in the territory where the mission/organizations are or will be operating.
- Call upon parties to armed conflict, States and other relevant actors to provide technical, financial, material or human resources assistance to facilitate the marking, clearance, removal or destruction of mines and explosive remnants of war.
- Call upon parties to armed conflict, States and other relevant actors to provide assistance for the care, rehabilitation and economic and social reintegration of victims of explosive remnants of war and their families and communities.

F. Compliance, accountability and the rule of law

Compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law

Issues for consideration:

- Call upon parties to armed conflict to take appropriate measures to respect and ensure respect for international humanitarian law and human rights law, including by:

- Enforcing appropriate military disciplinary measures and upholding the principle of command responsibility.
 - Training troops on applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law.
 - Vetting armed and security forces to ensure that personnel have a reliably attested record of not having been involved in violations of international humanitarian law or human rights law.
- Consider applying targeted and graduated measures against parties to armed conflict that commit violations of applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law.
 - Stress that the support of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions to military operations led by national armed forces is strictly conditioned on the compliance of those armed forces with international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law and on joint planning of such operations.
 - Call upon United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions to intercede with national armed forces if elements of the latter receiving support from the mission are suspected of committing violations of international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law and, if the situation persists, to withdraw the mission's support.
 - Request the mission to provide military training, including in the area of human rights, international humanitarian law, child protection and the prevention of gender-based and sexual violence, to the armed forces.

Accountability for persons suspected of genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes or serious violations of human rights law

Issues for consideration:

- Stress the importance of ending impunity for criminal violations of applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law as part of a comprehensive approach to seeking sustainable peace, justice, truth and national reconciliation.
- Call upon States to comply with their obligations to investigate, search for, prosecute or extradite persons suspected of committing genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity or other serious violations of human rights law.
- Stress the need for the exclusion of, and reject any form of, or endorsement of, amnesty for genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes or other serious violations of human rights in conflict resolution processes and ensure that no such amnesty previously granted is a bar to prosecution before any United Nations-created or assisted court.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to promote, in cooperation with relevant States, the establishment of effective arrangements for investigating and prosecuting violations of international humanitarian law or other serious violations of human rights law.

- Request the cooperation of States and United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council in the apprehension and surrender of alleged perpetrators of genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes or other serious violations of human rights law.
- Consider the establishment, in situations where local judicial mechanisms are overwhelmed, of ad hoc judicial mechanisms at the national or international level to investigate and prosecute war crimes and serious violations of human rights law.
- Consider the referral of situations involving genocide, crimes against humanity or war crimes to the International Criminal Court.

Protection of civilians through the restoration and enforcement of the rule of law, disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes and security sector reforms

Issues for consideration:

- Call upon States to ensure equal protection under the law and equal access to justice for victims of violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law, including women and children, and to take the necessary measures to ensure the protection of victims and witnesses.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to support restoration of the rule of law, including the provision of assistance in monitoring, restructuring and reforming the justice sector.
- Request the rapid deployment of qualified and well-trained international civilian police, justice and corrections experts as a component of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council.
- Call upon States and regional and subregional organizations to provide technical assistance for local police, judiciary and penitentiaries (e.g., mentoring, legislative drafting).
- Stress the importance of permanently disarming, demobilizing and reintegrating former combatants of national and foreign armed groups and assisting the victims in conflict-affected communities.
- Stress the importance of security sector reform and urge all international partners to support the efforts to professionalize and ensure the civilian oversight of the national security forces and the police.

Build confidence and enhance stability by promoting truth and reconciliation mechanisms

Issues for consideration:

- Mandate the establishment of appropriate, locally adapted mechanisms for truth and reconciliation (e.g., technical assistance, funding and reintegration of civilians within communities).
- Request, where appropriate, the establishment by the Secretary-General of commissions of inquiry and similar measures with regard to situations involving genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity or serious violations of human rights law.

G. Media and information

Protection of journalists, other media professionals and associated personnel

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, attacks against journalists, media professionals and associated personnel operating in situations of armed conflict.
- Call for compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law and respect for the civilian status of journalists, media professionals and associated personnel as well as their equipment and installations.
- Demand that States take all necessary steps to prosecute those responsible for attacks against journalists, media professionals and associated personnel in violation of applicable international humanitarian law.

Counter occurrences of speech used to incite violence

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, incitements to violence against civilians in situations of armed conflict.
- Demand that States bring to justice individuals who incite or otherwise cause such violence.
- Impose targeted and graduated measures in response to media broadcasts inciting genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes or other serious violations of human rights law.
- Mandate United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to promote the establishment of media monitoring mechanisms to ensure effective monitoring, reporting and documenting of any incidents, origins and contents that incite ‘hate media’.

Promote and support accurate management of information on the conflict

Issues for consideration:

- Urge parties to armed conflict to respect the professional independence of journalists, media professionals and associated personnel.
- Encourage United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council to include a mass-media component that can disseminate information about international humanitarian law and human rights law while also giving objective information about the activities of the United Nations.
- Request relevant actors to provide technical assistance to States in drafting and enforcing anti-hate speech legislation.

II. Specific protection concerns arising from Security Council discussions on children affected by armed conflict

Parties to armed conflict to take the necessary measures to meet the specific protection, health, education and assistance needs of children

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, violations and abuses committed against children in situations of armed conflict, including the recruitment or active use in hostilities of children by parties to armed conflict in violation of applicable international law; the killing or maiming of children; rape and other grave sexual abuse of children; abduction of children; attacks against schools or hospitals; and denial of humanitarian access for children.

- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law relating to children affected by armed conflict.
- Call upon relevant parties to develop and implement concrete time-bound action plans to halt recruitment and use of children, in close collaboration with United Nations peacekeeping missions, United Nations country teams and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict.
- Call upon all parties concerned to implement the recommendations of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict.
- Include specific provisions for the protection of children in the mandates of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council.
- Request that reports of the Secretary-General on country-specific situations include the protection of children as a specific aspect of the report.
- Call upon all parties concerned to ensure that the protection, rights and well-being of children affected by armed conflict are specifically integrated into peace processes, peace agreements and post-conflict recovery and reconstruction planning and programmes, including measures for family tracing and reunification, the rehabilitation and reintegration of separated children, and the release and reintegration of children associated with armed forces and groups.
- Urge States, United Nations entities, regional and subregional organizations and other concerned parties to take appropriate measures to control illicit subregional and cross-border activities harmful to children, as well as other violations and abuses committed against children in situations of armed conflict in violation of applicable international law.
- Urge relevant regional and/or subregional bodies to develop and implement policies, activities and advocacy for the benefit of children affected by armed conflict.

III. Specific protection concerns arising from Security Council discussions on women affected by armed conflict

Parties to armed conflict and other relevant actors to refrain from, and take the necessary measures to prevent and respond to, sexual violence

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, acts of sexual violence committed in the context of, and associated with, armed conflict.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with the rules of international humanitarian law and human rights law prohibiting rape, sexual slavery, enforced prostitution, forced pregnancy, enforced sterilization or any other form of sexual violence.

- Call upon parties to armed conflict to take appropriate measures to refrain from, prevent and protect all persons from all forms of sexual violence, including by:
 - Enforcing appropriate military disciplinary measures and upholding the principle of command responsibility.
 - Training troops on the categorical prohibition of all forms of sexual violence.
 - Debunking myths that fuel sexual violence.
 - Vetting armed and security forces to ensure that personnel have a reliably attested record of not having been involved in the perpetration of rape and other forms of sexual violence.
 - Evacuating to safety civilians under imminent threat of sexual violence.
- Request that reports of the Secretary-General on country-specific situations include sexual violence as a specific aspect of the report, including, to the extent possible, disaggregated data as to gender and age of victims; and request the development of mission-specific strategies and plans of action for preventing and responding to sexual violence, as part of a broader protection of civilians strategy.
- Urge relevant regional and/or subregional bodies to develop and implement policies, activities and advocacy for the benefit of civilians affected by sexual violence.
- Request troop- and police-contributing countries to deploy higher numbers of women peacekeepers or police, and to ensure the provision of appropriate training to their personnel participating in United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions on the protection of civilians, including women and children, and the prevention of sexual violence in conflict and post-conflict situations.

Parties to armed conflict to take the necessary measures to meet the specific protection, health and assistance needs of women and girls

Issues for consideration:

- Condemn, and call for the immediate cessation of, violations and abuses committed against women and girls in situations of armed conflict.
- Call for strict compliance by parties to armed conflict with applicable international humanitarian law and human rights law relating to the protection of women and girls affected by armed conflict.
- Call upon all parties concerned to ensure that the protection, rights and well-being of women and girls affected by armed conflict are specifically integrated into all peace processes, peace agreements and post-conflict recovery and reconstruction planning and programmes.
- Include specific provisions for the protection of women and girls in the mandates of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions authorized by the Security Council.
- Request that reports of the Secretary-General on country-specific situations include the protection of women and girls as a specific aspect of the report.
- Urge relevant regional and/or subregional bodies to develop and implement policies, activities and advocacy for the benefit of women and girls affected by armed conflict.

Equal participation and full involvement of women in the prevention and resolution of armed conflict

Issues for consideration:

- Urge States, United Nations entities, regional and subregional organizations and other concerned parties to ensure increased representation of women at all decision-making levels in national, regional and international institutions and mechanisms for the prevention, management and resolution of conflict.
- Call upon all actors involved in negotiating and implementing peace agreements to adopt a gender perspective, including by considering:
 - The needs of women and girls during repatriation and resettlement and for rehabilitation, reintegration and post-conflict reconstruction.
 - Measures that support local women's peace initiatives and indigenous processes for conflict resolution, and that involve women in the implementation mechanisms of peace agreements.
 - Measures that ensure the protection of, and respect for, the human rights of women and girls, particularly as they relate to the constitution, the electoral system, the police and the judiciary.
- Urge the Secretary-General and his Special Envoys to ensure the participation of women in discussions pertinent to the prevention and resolution of conflict, the maintenance of peace and security, and post-conflict peacebuilding, and encourage all parties to such talks to facilitate the equal and full participation of women at all decision-making levels.
- Ensure that Security Council missions take into account gender considerations and the rights of women and girls, including through consultation with local and international women's groups.
- Urge troop- and police-contributing countries to expand the role, numbers and contribution of women in United Nations operations, and especially among military observers and civilian police.

Sexual exploitation and abuse

Issues for consideration:

- Urge humanitarian and development organizations to take appropriate action to prevent sexual exploitation and abuse by their personnel, including predeployment and in-theatre awareness training and, in the case of United Nations actors, to promote and ensure compliance, including by civilian staff of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions, with the Secretary-General's bulletin on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse.
- Urge troop- and police-contributing countries to take appropriate action to prevent sexual exploitation and abuse by their personnel, including predeployment and in-theatre awareness training to promote and ensure compliance with the Secretary-General's bulletin on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse.
- Urge troop- and police-contributing countries to ensure full accountability in cases of sexual exploitation and abuse involving their personnel and to report to the Secretary-General on action taken.

An addendum to the statement provided a selection of agreed language.

Special political missions

Roster of 2010 political missions and offices

As at 31 December 2010, 12 UN political and peacebuilding missions and offices were in operation: 6 in Africa, 4 in Asia and the Pacific, and 2 in the Middle East.

On 16 December, the Security Council requested the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB), which was to replace the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB), for an initial period of 12 months beginning on 1 January 2011.

On 29 September, the Council extended the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone (UNIPSIL) until 15 September 2011. On 23 November, due to continuing instability and fragility of the political situation, the Council extended the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNIOGBIS) until 31 December 2011. On 14 December, the Council welcomed the recommendations of the Secretary-General to extend the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic (BINUCA) for a one-year period until 31 December 2011, taking into consideration the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) from the north-east of the Central African Republic.

With regard to Asia and the Pacific, the Council on 22 March extended the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) until 23 March 2011 and, on 5 August, extended the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI) until 31 July 2011. The Council on 15 September renewed the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) to 15 January 2011, and decided that its mandate would terminate on that day.

Strength: 55 international civilian staff, 39 local civilian staff, 1 military adviser.

Threats to international peace and security

International terrorism

Security Council consideration (February). On 24 February [S/PV.6277], following a briefing by the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Council adopted presidential statement S/PRST/2010/4 (see p. 1251), by which it called on States to continue to condemn all terrorist acts, irrespective of their motivation, whenever and by whomsoever committed, as well as the incitement of terrorism.

Security Council consideration (September). On 27 September [S/PV.6390], the Security Council held a debate on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts. The Council had before it a concept note submitted by Turkey [S/2010/462]. The Secretary-General told the Council that countering terrorism demanded a broad approach. That included measures to deprive terrorists of financial resources and mobility, and to prevent them from acquiring and using weapons of mass destruction; education, development, intercultural dialogue and conflict prevention to address conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism; a better understanding of the reasons people were drawn to violence; the strengthening of the legal regime; and better ways to share information and best practices by establishing national focal points and regional networks, and mobilizing civil society, the private sector and the media. Speakers included the Foreign Ministers of Austria, Brazil, Gabon, Nigeria, Turkey and Uganda; the United Kingdom Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs; and the United States Secretary of State.

On 27 September [meeting 6390], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/19 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.

The Council notes with concern that terrorism continues to pose a serious threat to international peace and security, the enjoyment of human rights and the social and economic development of all Member States and undermines global stability and prosperity, and that this threat has become more diffuse, with an increase, in various regions of the world, of terrorist acts, including those motivated by intolerance or extremism, and expresses its determination to combat this threat.

The Council condemns terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, reaffirms that any terrorist acts are criminal and unjustifiable regardless of their motivations, whenever and by whomsoever committed, and reaffirms that terrorism cannot and should not be associated with any religion, nationality or ethnic group.

The Council recognizes the important accomplishments made in the fight against terrorism and also acknowledges that gaps remain in the overall fight against this scourge, urges all Member States and the United Nations system to address them, and stresses the need to ensure that counter-terrorism remains a priority on the international agenda.

The Council reaffirms the importance of all its resolutions and the statements by its President on terrorism, in particular resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005), as well as other applicable international counter-terrorism instruments, stresses the need for their full implementation, and calls for enhanced cooperation in this regard.

The Council renews its call upon all Member States to become parties, as a matter of urgency, to the relevant international conventions and protocols, whether or not they are parties to regional conventions on the matter, and to fully implement their obligations under those to which they are parties, and commends the technical assistance provided by the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in this regard.

The Council recognizes that terrorism will not be defeated by military force, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone, and underlines the need to address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism, including but not limited to the need to strengthen efforts for the successful prevention and peaceful resolution of prolonged conflicts and the need to promote the rule of law, the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, good governance, tolerance and inclusiveness to offer a viable alternative to those who could be susceptible to terrorist recruitment and to radicalization leading to violence.

The Council recognizes in this regard that development, peace and security and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing, and underlines the international effort to eradicate poverty and promote sustained economic growth, sustainable development and global prosperity for all.

The Council emphasizes that continuing international efforts to enhance dialogue and broaden understanding among civilizations in an effort to prevent the indiscriminate targeting of different religions and cultures can help to counter the forces that fuel polarization and extremism and will contribute to strengthening the international fight against terrorism, and in this respect appreciates the positive role of the Alliance of Civilizations and other similar initiatives.

The Council reaffirms its profound solidarity with the victims of terrorism and their families, stresses the importance of assisting victims of terrorism and providing them and their families with support to cope with their loss and grief, recognizes the important role that victims and survivor networks play in countering terrorism, including by bravely speaking out against violent and extremist ideologies, and in this regard welcomes and encourages the efforts and activities of Member States and the United Nations system, including the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, in this field.

The Council reiterates its call upon Member States to enhance their cooperation and solidarity, particularly through bilateral and multilateral arrangements and agreements to prevent and suppress terrorist attacks, and encourages Member States to strengthen cooperation at the regional and subregional levels, particularly through regional and subregional mechanisms and coordination and cooperation at the operational level.

The Council reaffirms that Member States must ensure that any measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law, underscores that effective counter-terrorism measures and respect for human rights, fundamental freedoms and the rule of law are complementary and mutually reinforcing and are an essential part of a successful counter terrorism effort, and notes the importance of respect for the rule of law so as to effectively combat terrorism.

The Council underlines that safe havens provided to terrorists continue to be a significant concern and recalls that all Member States must cooperate fully in the fight against terrorism in order to find, deny safe haven to and bring to justice, on the basis of the principle of extradite or prosecute, any person who supports, facilitates, participates or attempts to participate in the financing, planning, preparation or commission of terrorist acts or provides safe havens.

The Council encourages Member States to develop and maintain an effective and rule of law-based national criminal system with provisions for judicial criminal cooperation regarding extradition and mutual legal assistance, in particular to expedite, simplify and give priority to extradition and mutual legal assistance requests in terrorism-related cases and to implement international and regional best practices in the field of extradition and mutual legal assistance, consistent with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law.

The Council reminds Member States of their obligation to ensure, in conformity with international law, that refugee status is not abused by the perpetrators, organizers or facilitators of terrorist acts.

The Council reminds Member States of their obligation to prevent the movement of terrorist groups by, inter alia, effective border controls, and in this context calls upon Member States to exchange information expeditiously and improve cooperation among competent authorities to prevent the movement of terrorists and terrorist groups to and from their territories, the supply of weapons for terrorists and financing that would support terrorists.

The Council reiterates the obligation of Member States to refrain from providing any form of support, active or passive, to entities or persons involved in or associated with terrorist acts, including by suppressing the recruitment of members of terrorist groups, consistent with international law, and eliminating the supply of weapons to terrorists.

The Council also reiterates the obligations of Member States pursuant to resolution 1540(2004), such as the obligation to refrain from providing any form of support to non-State actors that attempt to develop, acquire, manufacture, possess, transport, transfer or use nuclear, chemical or biological weapons and their means of delivery.

The Council reiterates the obligation of Member States to prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist acts and criminalize the wilful provision or collection, by any means, directly or indirectly, of funds by their nationals or in their territories with the intention that the funds should be used, or in the knowledge that they are to be used, to carry out terrorist acts.

The Council expresses concern at the increase in incidents of kidnapping and hostage-taking, in some areas of the world with a specific political context, with the aim of raising funds or gaining political concessions.

The Council reiterates its condemnation in the strongest terms of the incitement to terrorist acts and its repudiation of attempts at the justification or glorification of terrorist acts that may incite further terrorist acts, and recognizes the importance that Member States act cooperatively to prevent terrorists from exploiting technology, communications and resources to incite support for terrorist acts.

The Council considers sanctions an important tool in countering terrorism, remains committed to ensuring that fair and clear procedures exist for placing individuals and entities on sanctions lists and for removing them, as well as for granting humanitarian exemptions, and recalls in this context the adoption of resolutions 1822(2008) and 1904(2009), including the appointment of an Ombudsperson and other procedural improvements in the Al-Qaida and Taliban sanctions regime.

The Council reiterates its concern regarding the increasing connection, in many cases, between terrorism and transnational organized crime, illicit drugs, money-laundering and illegal arms trafficking, emphasizes the need to enhance the coordination of efforts at the national, subregional, regional and international levels in order to strengthen a global response to this serious challenge and threat to international peace and security, and encourages the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to continue its work in this regard, in collaboration with other relevant United Nations entities.

The Council recognizes the importance of the support of local communities, the private sector, civil society and the media for increasing awareness about the threats of terrorism and more effectively tackling them.

The Council acknowledges the technical and other counter-terrorism-related capacity-building assistance that United Nations entities and subsidiary bodies have provided to Member States, recognizes that some Member States lack the capacity to implement the Council's counter-terrorism and related resolutions and notes with concern that terrorist groups and other criminal organizations seek to exploit such lack of capacity.

The Council underlines in this regard the importance of capacity-building and technical assistance with a view to increasing the capabilities of Member States for an effective implementation of its resolutions, encourages the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism (the Counter-Terrorism Committee) and its Executive Directorate to continue to work with Member States, at their request, to assess and facilitate technical assistance, in particular in close cooperation within the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, as well as with all bilateral and multilateral technical assistance providers, and welcomes the focused and regional approach of the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate aimed at addressing the counter-terrorism needs of each Member State and region.

The Council reiterates the need to enhance the ongoing cooperation between the committees with counter-terrorism mandates established pursuant to its resolutions 1267(1999), 1373(2001) and 1540(2004) and their respective groups of experts, notes the importance of the ongoing interaction and dialogue of the committees with all Member States for their effective cooperation, encourages the committees to continue to pursue a transparent approach, and recalls its resolution 1904(2009), in which it requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the groups of experts to be co-located as soon as possible.

The Council reiterates its strong support for the adoption by the General Assembly of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy of 8 September 2006 and the institutionalization of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, in accordance with Assembly resolution 64/235, to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system, and the full participation, within their mandates, of relevant subsidiary bodies of the Council in the work of the Task Force and its working groups, and welcomes the adoption by the Assembly of resolution 64/297.

The Council encourages Member States to make every effort to conclude the negotiations on the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism.

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

In 2010, the United Nations strengthened its efforts to combat and eliminate international terrorism. The General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report [A/65/175 & Add.1,2] on measures to eliminate international terrorism, the report of the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 [A/65/37] and the report of the Chairperson of the Working Group established by the Sixth (Legal) Committee at the Assembly's sixty-fifth session [A/C.6/65/L.10], requested, by its resolution 65/34 of 6 December (see p. 1331), that the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) continue enhancing UN capabilities in preventing terrorism. It recognized, in the context of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy [YUN 2006, p. 66] and Security Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61], the Branch's role in assisting States in becoming parties to and implementing the international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, and in strengthening international cooperation mechanisms in criminal matters related to terrorism.

In resolution 65/62 of 8 December on measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction (see p. 535), the Assembly urged Member States to strengthen measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring such weapons, their means of delivery, and materials and technologies related to their manufacture.

In resolution 65/221 of 21 December (see p. 714), on protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, the Assembly expressed concern at the occurrence of violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as of international refugee and humanitarian law, committed in the context of countering terrorism.

Communication. On 10 December [A/65/622-S/2010/634], Iran, in identical letters to the Secretary-General, the General Assembly President and the Security Council President, said that in two separate terrorist attacks in Tehran on 29 November, two prominent Iranian physicists were targeted, resulting in the death of one of the physicists and serious injuries to the other and his wife. Another Iranian scientist was assassinated on 12 January.

Counter-Terrorism Committee

In 2010, the Committee established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61], known as the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC), held 14 formal meetings and four informal meetings. The Chairman of CTC submitted on 17 February and 12 July its work programmes for the periods from 1 January to 30 June [S/2010/89] and 1 July to 31 December [S/2010/366]. CTC was assisted in its work by the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (CTED).

On 31 January [S/2010/2], the Security Council announced that it had elected Ertuğrul Apakan (Turkey) as Chairman of CTC for the period ending 31 December 2010. On 20 December [S/2010/664], the Secretary-General informed the Council of his intention to extend the appointment of Mike Smith (Australia) as CTED Executive Director until 31 December 2011. The Council took note of that intention on 23 December [S/2010/665].

Briefing by CTC Chairman (May). Reporting to the Security Council on 11 May [S/PV.6310], the Chairman of CTC said that stocktaking had allowed CTC to enhance its regular dialogue with Member States and identify areas where the implementation of resolution 1373(2001) was inadequate. CTC had continued to conduct visits to Member States as a fundamental component of its efforts to monitor and promote the implementation of resolution 1373(2001). Along with comprehensive visits, CTED conducted shorter and targeted visits focused on one or two aspects of resolution 1373(2001). CTC and CTED had worked to enhance their dialogue with Member States, donors and beneficiaries on the facilitation of technical assistance. CTC continued to look for opportunities to match current and potential donors with recipients so as to enhance cooperation between the donor community and recipient States. In its dialogue with Member States, CTC had included discussion of their efforts to implement resolution 1624(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 102], which called on States to combat terrorism, including by prohibiting incitement to commit terrorist acts. To date, 108 States had submitted reports to CTC on their implementation of the resolution. CTC would continue to encourage those States that had not done so to submit the relevant information.

Report of CTC Chairman (November). Pursuant to resolution 1805(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 71], the Chairman of CTC in November presented a report [S/2010/569] that summarized CTED achievements from 2008 to 2010 and offered recommendations as to how CTED might better assist States in implementing resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005). The report concluded that CTED had continued to evolve in response to the needs and wishes of CTC and as its comparative advantage in the crowded international counter-terrorism field had become clearer. That comparative advantage lay, in part, in the fact that CTC and CTED, as subsidiary organs of the Security Council, carried the Council's full weight and authority. CTED was thus able to promote the importance of instituting counter-terrorism measures; help give legitimacy to such action internationally, regionally and nationally; and encourage Governments to work with their neighbours so that their common counter-terrorism defences were as effective as possible. Moreover, as a body of technical experts, CTED, working in close cooperation with partner organizations, was able to offer sensible, impartial advice in a field that was fraught with practical difficulties. In view of the ongoing and evolving threat posed to Member States by terrorism, such work would continue to be important and relevant.

Briefing by CTC Chairman (November). The Chairman of CTC briefed the Security Council on 15 November [S/PV.6424]. The Chairman said that since his briefing in May, CTC had tried to make better use of the thematic discussions it organized on such issues as crimes that funded terrorism and facilitating the provision of technical assistance to Member States. The discussions had proved to be highly useful in helping to understand the issues in greater depth and consider possible concrete steps that CTC could take. CTC had increased its dialogue and cooperation with other international and regional organizations and continued the practice of hearing briefings from international and regional organizations and UN bodies.

CTED review (December). Pursuant to resolution 1805(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 71], by which the Security Council decided to conduct a comprehensive consideration of CTED, the CTC Chairman, in December, submitted a report [S/2010/616] on the work of CTED. The report concluded that during the mandate period, CTED had fulfilled the tasks assigned by CTC, as set out in the CTC and CTED work programmes. CTC welcomed the measurable achievements of CTED, in particular its deepening dialogue with Member States in all regions, executing a more proactive strategy to facilitate technical assistance, and engaging in close collaboration and cooperation with its international, regional and subregional partner organizations and Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force entities. CTC believed that a renewal of the CTED mandate for a further three-year period would greatly serve CTC in enhancing the capacities of Member States to implement the resolutions of the Security Council.

Briefing by CTC Chairman (December). Briefing the Security Council on 20 December [S/PV.6457], the CTC Chairman stated that CTC should continue its strategic, focused and more transparent approach. That would help better monitor the full implementation of the relevant resolutions, identify the specific needs of each region or Member State, and enable CTC to interact and cooperate more intensively with all Member States. CTC was urged to dwell more on specific issues, such as incitement to terrorism and prevention. Capacity-building was a challenge for many countries and CTC would need to continue to focus on it.

Extension of CTED mandate. On 20 December, the Security Council, in resolution 1963(2010) (see below), extended CTED's mandate until 31 December 2013 and decided to conduct an interim review by 30 June 2012.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 6459], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1963(2010). The draft [S/2010/645] was submitted by France, Japan, Nigeria, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming that terrorism in all its forms and manifestations constitutes one of the most serious threats to international peace and security and that any acts of terrorism are criminal and unjustifiable regardless of their motivations, whenever and by whomsoever committed, and remaining determined to contribute further to enhancing the effectiveness of the overall effort to fight this scourge on a global level,

Reaffirming also that terrorism cannot and should not be associated with any religion, nationality, civilization or group,

Noting with concern that terrorism continues to pose a serious threat to international peace and security, the enjoyment of human rights and the social and economic development of all Member States and undermines global stability and prosperity, and that this threat has become more diffuse, with an increase, in various regions of the world, of terrorist acts, including those motivated by intolerance or extremism, expressing its determination to combat this threat, and stressing the need to ensure that counter-terrorism remains a priority on the international agenda,

Recognizing that terrorism will not be defeated by military force, law enforcement measures and intelligence operations alone, and underlining the need to address the conditions conducive to the spread of terrorism, as outlined in pillar I of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, including but not limited to the need to strengthen efforts for the successful prevention and peaceful resolution of prolonged conflict and the need to promote the rule of law, the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, good governance, tolerance and inclusiveness to offer a viable alternative to those who could be susceptible to terrorist recruitment and to radicalization leading to violence,

Expressing concern at the increase in incidents of kidnapping and hostage-taking committed by terrorist groups, in some areas of the world with a specific political context, with the aim of raising funds or gaining political concessions,

Reiterating the obligation of Member States to prevent and suppress the financing of terrorist acts and criminalize the wilful provision or collection, by any means, directly or indirectly, of funds by their nationals or in their territories with the intention that the funds should be used, or in the knowledge that they are to be used, to carry out terrorist acts,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States to freeze without delay funds and other financial assets or economic resources of persons who commit or attempt to commit terrorist acts or participate in or facilitate the commission of terrorist acts, of entities owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such persons, and of persons and entities acting on behalf of or at the direction of such persons and entities, including funds derived or generated from property owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such persons and associated persons and entities,

Reaffirming also the obligation of Member States to prohibit their nationals or any persons and entities within their territories from making any funds, financial assets or economic resources or financial or other related services available, directly or indirectly, for the benefit of persons who commit or attempt to commit or facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts, of entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by such persons, and of persons and entities acting on behalf of or at the direction of such persons,

Reiterating the obligation of Member States to prevent the movement of terrorist groups by, inter alia, effective border controls and, in this context, to exchange information expeditiously and improve cooperation among competent authorities to prevent the movement of terrorists and terrorist groups to and from their territories, the supply of weapons for terrorists and financing that would support terrorists,

Underlining that safe havens provided to terrorists continue to be a significant concern and that all Member States must cooperate fully in the fight against terrorism in order to find, deny safe haven to and bring to justice, on the basis of the principle of extradite or prosecute, any person who supports, facilitates, participates or attempts to participate in the financing, planning, preparation or commission of terrorist acts or provides safe havens,

Recognizing that development, peace and security and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing, and underlining the international effort to eradicate poverty and promote sustained economic growth, sustainable development and global prosperity for all,

Emphasizing that continuing international efforts to enhance dialogue and broaden understanding among civilizations in an effort to prevent the indiscriminate targeting of different religions and cultures can help to counter the forces that fuel polarization and extremism, and will contribute to strengthening the international fight against terrorism, and in this respect appreciating the positive role of the Alliance of Civilizations and other similar initiatives,

Reaffirming that Member States must ensure that any measures taken to combat terrorism comply with all their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Reaffirming its call upon all States to become parties to the international counter-terrorism conventions and protocols as soon as possible, whether or not they are parties to regional conventions on the matter, and to fully implement their obligations under those to which they are parties,

Reiterating its call upon Member States to enhance their cooperation and solidarity, particularly through bilateral and multilateral arrangements and agreements to prevent and suppress terrorist attacks, and encouraging Member States to strengthen cooperation at the regional and sub-regional levels,

Expressing concern at the increased use, in a globalized society, by terrorists of new information and communication technologies, in particular the Internet, for the purposes of recruitment and incitement as well as for the financing, planning and preparation of their activities,

Recognizing the importance that Member States act co-operatively to prevent terrorists from exploiting technology, communications and resources to incite support for terrorist acts,

Recognizing also the importance of the support of local communities, the private sector, civil society and the media for increasing awareness about the threats of terrorism and more effectively tackling them,

Expressing its profound solidarity with the victims of terrorism and their families, stressing the importance of assisting victims of terrorism and providing them and their families with support to cope with their loss and grief, recognizing the important role that victims and survivor networks play in countering terrorism, including by bravely speaking out against violent and extremist ideologies, and in this regard welcoming and encouraging the efforts and activities of Member States and the United Nations system, including the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, in this field,

Recalling its resolution 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001, by which it established the Counter-Terrorism Committee, and recalling also its resolution 1624(2005) of 14 September 2005 and its other resolutions concerning threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1535(2004) of 26 March 2004, 1787(2007) of 10 December 2007 and 1805(2008) of 20 March 2008, which pertain to the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate,

Welcoming the efforts of the Counter-Terrorism Committee to pursue a more strategic and transparent approach to its work, to seek to raise the visibility of its work within the wider United Nations and counter-terrorism community and to streamline its working methods, all of which have led to increased effectiveness, and urging that these efforts be intensified,

Noting with appreciation the continuing emphasis of the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate on the guiding principles of cooperation, transparency and even-handedness, and welcoming the increased regional and subregional approaches of the Executive Directorate to and thematic focus in its work, including in identifying and addressing technical assistance needs, as it continues to intensify its outreach efforts,

Underscoring the central role of the United Nations in the global fight against terrorism, and welcoming the adoption by the General Assembly of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy of 8 September 2006, the institutionalization of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force in accordance with Assembly resolution 64/235 of 24 December 2009, which will further enhance the efforts of the Task Force to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system, including in the field, and the call for the enhanced engagement of Member States with the work of the Task Force,

1. Underlines that the overarching goal of the Counter-Terrorism Committee is to ensure the full implementation of resolution 1373(2001), and recalls the crucial role of the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate in supporting the Committee in the fulfilment of its mandate;

2. Decides that the Executive Directorate shall continue to operate as a special political mission under the policy guidance of the Counter-Terrorism Committee for the period ending 31 December 2013, and further decides to conduct an interim review by 30 June 2012;

3. Welcomes and endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Counter-Terrorism Committee to the Security Council for its comprehensive consideration of the work of the Executive Directorate;

4. Urges the Executive Directorate to continue to strengthen its role in facilitating technical assistance for the implementation of resolution 1373(2001) aimed at increasing the capabilities of Member States and regions in the fight against terrorism by addressing their counter-terrorism needs, in close cooperation within the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, as well as with bilateral and multilateral assistance providers, and welcomes the focused and regional approach of the Executive Directorate to this work;

5. Encourages the Executive Directorate, in close cooperation within the Task Force and its relevant working groups, to focus increased attention on resolution 1624(2005) in its dialogue with Member States to develop, in accordance with their obligations under international law, strategies which include countering incitement of terrorist acts motivated by extremism and intolerance and in facilitating technical assistance for its implementation, as called for in resolution 1624(2005) and in the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy;

6. Also encourages the Executive Directorate to arrange meetings with Member States in various formats, with their consent, including for the purpose of considering advising, as appropriate, on the development of comprehensive and integrated national counter-terrorism strategies and the mechanisms to implement them that include attention to the factors that lead to terrorist activities, in accordance with their obligations under international law, and in close cooperation within the Task Force and its working groups, with a view to ensuring coherence and complementarity of efforts and to avoid any duplication;

7. Further encourages the Executive Directorate to interact, as appropriate and in consultation with the Counter-Terrorism Committee and relevant Member States, with civil society and other relevant non-governmental actors in the context of its efforts to support the efforts of the Committee to monitor the implementation of resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005);

8. Stresses the importance of a tailored dialogue among the Executive Directorate, the Counter-Terrorism Committee and Member States, and encourages the Committee and the Executive Directorate to continue to arrange meetings involving counter-terrorism officials from Member States and relevant international, regional and subregional organizations, with a thematic or regional focus relevant to the implementation of resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005);

9. Urges the Executive Directorate also to intensify its cooperation with relevant international, regional and subregional organizations with a view to enhancing the capacity of Member States to fully implement resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005) and to facilitating the provision of technical assistance;

10. Reminds that effective counter-terrorism measures and respect for human rights are complementary and mutually reinforcing and are an essential part of a successful counter-terrorism effort, notes the importance of respect for the rule of law so as to effectively combat terrorism, and thus encourages the Executive Directorate to further develop its activities in this area, to ensure that all human rights issues relevant to the implementation of resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005) are addressed consistently and even-handedly, including, as appropriate, on country visits that are organized with the consent of the Member State visited;

11. Highlights the importance of the Counter-Terrorism Committee/Executive Directorate work programme, and in this context looks forward to the holding of a special meeting, open to the wider membership, to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the adoption of resolution 1373(2001) and the establishment of the Committee;

12. Directs the Executive Directorate to produce an updated global implementation survey of resolution 1373(2001) by 30 June 2011 and in advance of the above-mentioned meeting that, inter alia:

—Assesses the evolution of risks and threats and the impact of the implementation;

- Identifies gaps in the implementation;
- Proposes new practical ways to implement the resolution;

13. Also directs the Executive Directorate to produce a global implementation survey of resolution 1624(2005) by 31 December 2011 that, inter alia:

- Assesses the evolution of risks and threats and the impact of the implementation;
- Identifies gaps in the implementation;
- Proposes new practical ways to implement the resolution;

14. Requests the Counter-Terrorism Committee to report orally, through its Chair, to the Security Council at least every one hundred and eighty days on the overall work of the Committee and the Executive Directorate and, as appropriate, in conjunction with the reports of the Chairs of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) and the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004), and urges the Chair of the Counter-Terrorism Committee to continue the practice of providing informal briefings, including with a regional or thematic focus, for all interested Member States;

15. Encourages the Executive Directorate to continue to report to the Counter-Terrorism Committee, on a regular basis or when the Committee so requests, through oral and/or written briefings on the work of the Executive Directorate, including its visits to Member States, the conduct of workshops and other activities;

16. Reiterates the need to enhance the ongoing cooperation between the Counter-Terrorism Committee, the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) and the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004), as well as their respective groups of experts, including through, as appropriate, enhanced and systematized information-sharing, and coordination on visits to countries and participation in workshops, on technical assistance, on relations with international and regional organizations and agencies and on other issues of relevance to all three Committees, expresses its intention to provide guidance to the Committees on areas of common interest in order to better coordinate counter-terrorism efforts, and recalls its resolution 1904(2009) of 17 December 2009, in which it requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the groups of experts to be co-located as soon as possible;

17. Encourages the Executive Directorate to continue joint activities, in cooperation with the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999), the group of experts of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) and the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to assist Member States in their efforts to comply with their obligations under the relevant resolutions, including by organizing regional and subregional workshops;

18. Welcomes and encourages the Executive Directorate's continued active participation in and support of all relevant activities under the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, including within the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force and its working groups, established to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system.

Reports of States. Between February and December, the Chairman of CTC transmitted to the Council President reports submitted by Member States on action they had taken or planned to take to implement resolutions 1373(2001) and 1624(2005). Reports were submitted by Panama [S/2010/68], the Democratic People's Republic of Korea [S/2010/139], Kyrgyzstan [S/2010/328], Palau [S/2010/348], Oman [S/2010/545], Uruguay [S/2010/572] and Micronesia [S/2010/695].

Nuclear and radiological terrorism

The General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), at its fifty-fourth session (Vienna, 14–18 September), adopted resolution GC(54)/RES/8 on nuclear security, including measures to protect against nuclear and radiological terrorism, in which it called on Member States to maintain the highest possible standards of security and physical protection of nuclear materials and facilities, and provide the necessary support to international efforts to enhance nuclear security through bilateral, regional and international arrangements. It called on States parties to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material to ratify the Amendment to the Convention and encouraged them to act in accordance with the objectives and purposes of the Amendment until such time as it entered into force, and encouraged States that had not done so to adhere to the Convention and adopt its Amendment. The Amendment would make it legally binding for States parties to protect nuclear facilities and material in peaceful domestic use, storage and transport; it provided for expanded State cooperation regarding rapid measures to locate and recover stolen or smuggled nuclear material, mitigate any radiological consequences of sabotage, and prevent and combat related offences. The Amendment would enter into force when ratified by two thirds of the States parties to the Convention.

Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

Review of implementation

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with resolution 62/272 [YUN 2008, p. 65], the Secretary-General in June submitted a report [A/64/818 & Corr.1] on the activities of the UN system in implementing the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. The General Assembly had adopted the Strategy in 2006 by resolution 60/288 [YUN 2006, p. 66].

The Secretary-General noted that while knowledge of the work of the UN system in the area of counter-terrorism had increased, especially among key practitioners, there was a need for an in-depth knowledge of the Strategy in order to translate into action provisions on national, regional and global levels. Member States and the 30 entities composing the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force were urged to increase their efforts and cooperation in that regard. While recognizing that the primary responsibility of implementation lay with Member States, the Strategy underlined the need for collective action at the regional level, particularly through the efforts of regional and subregional organizations. The Task Force welcomed continued partnership with civil society and the private sector in raising awareness and promoting implementation of the Strategy. Implementation would not be complete without the conclusion of a comprehensive convention on international terrorism, and Member States would need to reach an agreement and conclude the convention. Inputs from 14 Member States and nine regional, subregional and other organizations on implementation of the Strategy were annexed to the report. Two addenda contained input from two Member States [A/64/818/Add.1] and a regional organization [A/64/818/Add.2].

General Assembly consideration. On 8 September [A/64/PV.116 & 117], the General Assembly conducted the second review of the Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy. The day-long debate was addressed by the President of the Assembly, Ali Abdussalam Treki (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya), and by 43 Government delegations and observers. The first review had been conducted in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 63].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 September [meeting 117], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/297 [draft: A/64/L.69] without vote [agenda item 115].

The United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, contained in General Assembly resolution 60/288 of 8 September 2006, and recalling Assembly resolution 62/272 of 5 September 2008, which called for, inter alia, an examination in two years of progress made in the implementation of the Strategy and for consideration to be given to updating it to respond to changes, as provided for in those resolutions,

Recalling its resolution 64/235 of 24 December 2009 on the institutionalization of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force,

Also recalling the pivotal role of the General Assembly in following up the implementation and the updating of the Strategy,

Renewing its unwavering commitment to strengthening international cooperation to prevent and combat terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Recognizing that international cooperation and any measures undertaken by Member States to prevent and combat terrorism must fully comply with their obligations under international law, including the Charter of the United Nations, in particular the purposes and principles thereof, and relevant international conventions and protocols, in particular human rights law, refugee law and international humanitarian law,

Convinced that the General Assembly is the competent organ, with universal membership, to address the issue of international terrorism,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, within their mandates, in the implementation of the Strategy,

Underlining the fact that the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force should continue to carry out its activities within the framework of its mandate, with policy guidance offered by Member States through interaction with the General Assembly on a regular basis,

1. Reiterates its strong and unequivocal condemnation of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, committed by whomever, wherever and for whatever purposes, as it constitutes one of the most serious threats to international peace and security;

2. Reaffirms the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and its four pillars, which constitute an ongoing effort, and calls upon Member States, the United Nations and other appropriate international, regional and subregional organizations to step up their efforts to implement the Strategy in an integrated manner and in all its aspects;

3. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy: activities of the United Nations system in implementing the Strategy";

4. Also takes note of the measures that Member States and relevant international, regional and subregional organizations have adopted within the framework of the Strategy, as presented in the report of the Secretary-General and at the second biennial review of the Strategy, on 8 September 2010, all of which strengthen cooperation to fight terrorism, including through the exchange of best practices;

5. Reaffirms the primary responsibility of Member States to implement the Strategy, while further recognizing the need to enhance the important role that the United Nations, including the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, plays, in coordination with other international, regional and subregional organizations, as appropriate, in facilitating and promoting coordination and coherence in the implementation of the Strategy at the national, regional and global levels and in providing assistance, upon request by Member States, especially in the area of capacity-building;

6. Encourages civil society, including non-governmental organizations, to engage, as appropriate, in efforts to enhance the implementation of the Strategy, including through interaction with Member States and the United Nations system;

7. Calls upon the United Nations entities involved in supporting counter-terrorism efforts to continue to facilitate the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, as well as due process and the rule of law, while countering terrorism;

8. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider becoming parties in a timely manner to the existing international conventions and protocols against terrorism, and upon all States to make every effort to conclude a comprehensive convention on international terrorism, and recalls the commitments of Member States with regard to the implementation of General Assembly and Security Council resolutions relating to international terrorism;

9. Notes with appreciation the continued contribution of United Nations entities and subsidiary bodies of the Security Council to the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force;

10. Underlines, in that regard, the importance of greater cooperation among United Nations entities and of the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counter-terrorism efforts of the United Nations system, as well as the need to continue promoting transparency and to avoid duplication in their work;

11. Reaffirms the need for enhanced dialogue among the counter-terrorism officials of Member States to promote international, regional and subregional cooperation and wider dissemination of knowledge of the Strategy in order to counter terrorism, and in that regard recalls the role of the United Nations system, in particular the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, in promoting international cooperation and capacity-building as elements of the Strategy;

12. Welcomes the progress achieved towards finalizing the institutionalization of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force, in accordance with resolution 64/235;

13. Calls for the enhanced engagement of Member States with the work of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force;

14. Encourages the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force to develop a comprehensive website in order to ensure that its work is made accessible to a wider audience;

15. Requests the secretariat of the Counter-Terrorism Implementation Task Force to interact with Member States, including by providing quarterly briefings and comprehensive reports on the current and future work of the Task Force, in order to ensure transparency and to enable Member States to assess the work being undertaken by the Task Force and provide policy guidance and feedback on Strategy implementation efforts;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session, no later than April 2012, a report on progress made in the implementation of the Strategy, which could contain suggestions for its future implementation by the United Nations system, as well as on progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "The United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy" in order to undertake, by June 2012, an examination of the report of the Secretary-General requested in paragraph 16 above, as well as the implementation of the Strategy by Member States, and to consider updating the Strategy to respond to changes.

Terrorist attacks in 2010

In 2010, terrorist attacks continued worldwide, resulting in the deaths of hundreds of innocent civilians and injuries to many others. Those attacks were condemned by the Security Council, Member States and the Secretary-General, who called for increased efforts to combat the threat they posed to international peace and security.

Afghanistan

On 25 October, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/10070], condemned the terrorist attack against the United Nations operations centre in the western city of Herat on 23 October. While no casualties among the UN staff were reported, the Council regretted that a number of security guards were wounded.

Iran

On 16 July, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/9986], condemned the terrorist attacks that occurred on that day in Zahedan, causing numerous deaths and injuries.

On 15 December [SG/SM/13321], the Secretary-General condemned the suicide bombing at a mosque in Chabahar, directed at mourners commemorating the holy day of Ashura, which had reportedly left scores of people dead and many more injured.

Iraq

On 11 May [SG/SM/12884], the Secretary-General condemned the wave of terrorist bombings and other attacks on 10 May that reportedly claimed the lives of over 100 people and injured many more, mostly civilians.

On 10 November, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/10081], condemned a recent spate of terrorist attacks in which scores of civilians lost their lives and hundreds more were wounded. The attacks deliberately targeted locations where civilians congregated, including Christian and Muslim places of worship.

Nigeria

On 4 October, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/10048], condemned the terrorist bombings that occurred in Abuja on 1 October, causing numerous deaths and injuries.

Pakistan

On 3 September [SG/SM/13085], the Secretary-General condemned the terrorist bombings in the cities of Lahore and Quetta, which deliberately targeted Shiite Muslims and killed or injured scores of civilians.

On 5 November [SG/SM/13236], the Secretary-General condemned the terrorist attacks on two mosques in the north-west of Pakistan, which had reportedly left more than 70 people dead, including children.

On 28 December [SG/SM/13332], the Secretary-General said that he was appalled by the terrorist attack that took place on the morning of 25 December outside a World Food Programme distribution centre in the town of Khar, in the Bajur region, reportedly killing 45 people and injuring many others.

Russian Federation

On 29 March, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/9895], condemned the terrorist attacks that occurred in Moscow on that day, causing numerous deaths and injuries.

On 13 September, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/10025], condemned the terrorist attack that occurred in Vladikavkaz on 9 September, causing numerous deaths and injuries.

Uganda

On 12 July, the Security Council, by a press statement [SC/9980], condemned the terrorist attacks that occurred in Kampala on 11 July, causing numerous deaths and injuries.

Peacekeeping operations

In 2010, the General Assembly and the Security Council continued to oversee the management and operation of UN peacekeeping missions. The Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) continued to implement the recommendations of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, whose mandate was to review the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects.

Security Council consideration (February). The Council on 12 February [S/PV.6270] held an open debate on transition and exit strategies for UN peacekeeping operations. It had before it a concept paper [S/2010/67] submitted by France. The Secretary-General told the Council that a peacekeeping mission required a good entrance, which meant that its very mandate should address the root causes of conflict. It meant charting a path out of violence through a solid and sustainable peace process; articulating a clear goal that could be jointly owned by national stakeholders and the international community; and allocating in a timely manner enough human and material resources—including, if necessary, the rapid deployment of standing police and other civilian capacities. Exits needed to be equally well considered from the very outset of a mission. In assessing whether and when a peacekeeping operation should be drawn down, one needed to look at the strength of national governance structures, including for security and the rule of law, consider the prospects for socio-economic recovery, examine the risk that a country could backslide into conflict, and ask whether the security guarantee provided by uniformed peacekeepers was still needed. A key lesson of the 1990s was the need for some type of follow-on presence to protect gains and build durable peace.

The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations and the Under-Secretary-General for Field Support stressed that exit and transition strategies could be anticipated sooner than they currently were. Council members shared the view that transition and exit strategies should be planned at an early stage.

On 12 February [meeting 6270], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/2 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms the statement by its President of 5 August 2009 and its continued commitment to enhance further the overall effectiveness of United Nations peacekeeping.

The Council stresses, in particular, its commitment 'regularly to assess, in consultation with other stakeholders, the strength, mandate and composition of peacekeeping operations with a view to making the necessary adjustments where appropriate, according to progress achieved or changing circumstances on the ground'. The Council stresses that the overarching objective should be to achieve success by creating the conditions for sustainable peace on the ground, thereby allowing for reconfiguration or withdrawal of the United Nations peacekeeping mission.

The Council underlines that an advanced peace process is an important factor in achieving successful transition from a peacekeeping operation to other configurations of United Nations presence. It also highlights the importance of a host State protecting its population, managing political disputes peaceably and providing for basic services and long-term development.

The Council recognizes the importance of supporting political processes and national institutions, in particular for the rule of law, security and peacebuilding assistance, at the earliest stage. In this regard, the Council reiterates the urgency of improving United Nations peacebuilding efforts and achieving a coordinated United Nations approach in-country, as highlighted in the statement by its President of 22 July 2009 and in the report of the Secretary-General on peacebuilding in the immediate aftermath of conflict.

The Council underlines the importance of national ownership, constructive dialogue and partnership between national authorities and the international community in helping to address priority peacebuilding needs and the underlying causes of recurring instability.

Further improvement can be made in Council practice, supported by the Secretariat, to ensure successful transitions, by developing clear, credible and achievable mandates, to be matched by appropriate resources. The Council:

- Undertakes, whenever possible, to include in peacekeeping mandates a desired outcome of the implementation of mandated tasks and a clear prioritization of tasks to achieve it, reflecting the need to create favourable conditions for sustainable peace;
- Stresses the importance of an appropriate level of military expertise for the decisions of the Council;
- Stresses the need for precise and clear recommendations to be made available by the Secretariat, at least a month before mandate renewals, on the content of the mandate and any necessary adjustments, taking into account developments on the ground and the views of the host country, relevant troop- and police-contributing countries and other parties, as appropriate;
- Requests the Secretariat to plan military, police and other peacebuilding tasks in phases with clear objectives and taking into account local conditions that should be attained to allow mission success and transition from a peacekeeping operation, taking also into account the recent lessons learned from transitions to integrated peacebuilding offices;
- Recognizes the utility of strategic workplans and will consider extending their use in peacekeeping operations. Progress in achieving priority tasks laid down in Council resolutions should be measured, as appropriate, through benchmarks that can be easily monitored by the Council;
- Recognizes the importance of ensuring that mandated peacebuilding tasks are implemented as early as possible in a peacekeeping operation in coordination with the United Nations country team and with due respect for security concerns and the priorities of the host Government, taking into account pre-existing programmes and policies implemented before the inception of the operation. In this regard, the Council reaffirms the need to fully implement the integrated mission planning process and also notes the importance of the integrated strategic frameworks. The Council also notes the importance of the civilian capacities review currently being undertaken by the Peacebuilding Support Office;
- Undertakes to enhance coordination with the Peacebuilding Commission and looks forward to the 2010 review of the Commission and the recommendations on how its role can continue to be enhanced;
- Welcomes the adoption by the Security Council Working Group on Peacekeeping Operations of its programme of work, and commends, in particular, its decision to address key lessons learned from past and current missions about the successful implementation of transition strategies, with a view to improving Council practice;
- Recalls the necessity to take into account the protection of civilians in situations of armed conflict, as and when mandated, throughout the life cycle of United Nations peacekeeping and other relevant missions, in line with Council resolution 1894(2009).

The Council commits to regularly monitoring progress and achievement of the different stages of a given peacekeeping operation. The Council stresses the importance of maintaining an efficient reporting and information collection system.

The Council reaffirms its belief that United Nations peacekeeping is a unique global partnership that draws together the contributions and commitment of the entire United Nations system. The Council is committed to strengthening this partnership and acknowledges the key role of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations of the General Assembly and the Fifth Committee of the Assembly in that regard. The Council recognizes the need for continuous review of the military planning, police, judicial, rule of law and institution-building capabilities of the Secretariat to ensure their effective utilization and coordination.

The Council recognizes the contribution of regional and subregional organizations to transition. The Council calls upon all Member States and subregional, regional and international partners to promote coherence and coordination of their peacebuilding plans and programmes with those of the United Nations peacekeeping operation and the wider United Nations presence on the ground.

The Council undertakes to provide the political support necessary to ensure the effective implementation of peace processes in order to promote the success of United Nations peacekeeping operations.

The Council stresses the importance of considering early peacebuilding in its own deliberations and of ensuring coherence between peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding to achieve effective transition strategies. The Council looks forward to discussing further the implementation of this integrated approach and requests the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts in this regard.

The Council remains committed to improving further the overall effectiveness of United Nations peacekeeping, including through the recognition and enhancement of linkages with wider peacebuilding efforts, and will conduct a further review of progress in this regard in late 2010.

Security Council consideration (August). On 6 August [S/PV.6370], the Council held a debate on peacekeeping operations, where Alain Le Roy, the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, reminded the Council that as at 31 July, almost 120,000 peacekeepers had been deployed, among them 84,000 military, 13,000 police officers, and 22,000 civilians. There were nearly 100,000 people in uniform, in addition to 22,000 civilians. There had been a drawdown of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad and the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), but they were still at a significant level. The Organization had moved from a period of surge to a period of consolidation. It was at a plateau in consolidation because there was no new peacekeeping operation on the way. The consolidation phase would be used to improve efficiency in areas such as planning, oversight, drafting strategies for protection of civilians and robust peacekeeping—in brief, the reform agenda. The Force Commanders of the United Nations Mission in Liberia, MONUSCO, the United Nations Mission in the Sudan, the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, and the Head of Mission and Chief of Staff of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization also addressed the meeting.

Communications. On 23 February [A/64/721], Australia and Uruguay transmitted to the General Assembly a summary of the workshop on the protection of civilians in peacekeeping operations (New York, 19 January) co-hosted by the two countries.

On 4 June [A/64/811-S/2010/307], Indonesia and Slovakia transmitted to the Secretary-General the outcome of the International Workshop on the Role of the United Nations in Multidimensional Peacekeeping Operations and Post-Conflict Peacebuilding: Towards an ASEAN Perspective (Jakarta, Indonesia, 29–30 March), co-chaired by the two countries.

On 22 July [A/64/871-S/2010/397], Portugal transmitted to the Secretary-General the summary and main conclusions of the seminar, “United Nations peacekeeping and peacebuilding: enhancing interaction between the Security Council, the Secretariat, troop- and police-contributing countries and host countries” (Portugal, 8–10 July).

On 16 August [A/64/907], Brazil transmitted to the General Assembly the concept note and summary of the seminar, “A new horizon for UN peacekeeping: perspectives from the South” (Rio de Janeiro, 16–18 June).

General aspects of UN peacekeeping

Strengthening operational capacity

The Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, at its 2010 substantive session [A/64/19], stated that a sound interaction and better understanding must be maintained among the Security Council, the Secretariat and the troop-contributing countries in order to devise clear, unambiguous and achievable mandates and to mobilize the necessary resources and information capacity to achieve the mandates. The Special Committee welcomed practical steps taken by the Security Council and its Working Group on Peacekeeping Operations to deepen engagement with troop- and police-contributing countries in the early phase of mandate drafting and throughout mission deployment. The Special Committee took note of the work of the Secretariat on developing a comprehensive capability-driven approach to improve overall performance in the field. It encouraged the Secretariat to continue its work in that regard, in cooperation with troop- and police-contributing countries, and to report back to the Committee.

Strategies for complex peacekeeping operations

The Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations [A/64/19] took note of the DPKO/Department of Field Support (DFS) non-paper entitled “A New Partnership Agenda: Charting the New Horizon for United Nations Peacekeeping” [YUN 2009, p. 74] and encouraged the Secretariat to further engage with Member States, particularly troop- and police-contributing countries, on matters relating to peacekeeping operations. The Special Committee addressed issues relating to peacebuilding and the Peacebuilding Commission; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration; security sector reform; the rule of law; gender and peacekeeping; children and peacekeeping; and HIV/AIDS and other health-related issues.

The Special Committee welcomed the implementation of quick-impact projects by peacekeeping operations, which made an important contribution to the implementation of mandates by addressing the immediate needs of local populations and building support for peacekeeping missions, their mandates and peace processes. It stressed the importance of implementing other mandated tasks such as support to the restoration and extension of State authority, support to political processes and protection of civilians under imminent threat of violence.

Safety and security

The Special Committee [A/64/19] condemned the killing of UN peacekeeping personnel and all acts of violence against such personnel, which constituted a major challenge to UN field operations. The Special Committee urged States to become parties to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel [YUN 1994, p. 1288] and its Optional Protocol [YUN 2005, p. 1420]. The Special Committee took note of the progress made in developing the Joint Operations Centres and Joint Mission Analysis Centres in DPKO-led field missions, and underlined the importance of efforts to make them fully effective. The Special Committee noted with concern that some deployed troop formations were being stretched to cover geographic areas that exceeded their capacities. Such practices not only threatened the safety and security of those troops, but also adversely affected their performance, discipline, command and control, and capacity to implement the mandate.

Conduct and discipline

The Special Committee [A/64/19] reaffirmed the need to ensure that all peacekeeping personnel functioned in a manner that preserved the image, credibility, impartiality and integrity of the United Nations.

It emphasized that misconduct was unacceptable and had a detrimental effect on the fulfilment of mandates, in particular with respect to the relations between UN peacekeeping personnel and the population of host countries. The Special Committee emphasized that the same standards of conduct must be applied to all categories of UN peacekeeping personnel. Violations of those standards would result in appropriate action within the authority of the Secretary-General, while criminal and disciplinary responsibility in respect of members of national contingents would depend on the national law of the Member State concerned. It reiterated that troop-contributing countries bore the primary responsibility for maintaining discipline among their contingents.

Sexual exploitation and abuse in UN peacekeeping operations

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/306 [YUN 2003, p. 1237], the Secretary-General in February submitted a report [A/64/669] on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, presenting data on allegations of such incidents in the UN system during 2009. There were 112 allegations of abuse involving DPKO and DFS personnel, marking an increase from 83 in 2008. Of that number, 51 were considered “egregious” forms of sexual exploitation and abuse, namely sexual exploitation and abuse of minors, including rape. A total of 66 allegations involved non-consensual sex. The most notable increase occurred in the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC), for which the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) reported 59 allegations in 2009 compared with 40 in 2008. In the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) and the United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS), there was also an increase of reported allegations, while incidents reported in the United Nations Operation in Côte d’Ivoire (UNOCI) decreased in 2009 compared with 2008. The United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB) and the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) reported two allegations each in 2009, and the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) reported three allegations in 2009 compared with none in 2008. On the other hand, the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) and the United Nations Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) did not report any incidents, compared with one and two, respectively, in 2008.

Investigations involving 39 UN peacekeeping personnel had been completed as at 31 December 2009. Of those involving military personnel, 8 cases had been substantiated; among civilian personnel, 8 cases; and among police and corrections personnel, 5 cases.

The Secretary-General also reported on measures to address the problem, including the activities of the Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse and the DFS Conduct and Discipline Unit and Teams.

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. The Special Committee [A/64/19] underlined the gravity of all acts of sexual and gender-based violence, including sexual exploitation and abuse, and stressed the importance of addressing the needs of victims. It underlined the importance of continued and strengthened efforts to implement the policy of zero tolerance of sexual exploitation and abuse in UN peacekeeping operations. Stressing the importance of eliminating all forms of misconduct, the Special Committee remained concerned about new cases of misconduct reported, including sexual exploitation and abuse, and about the number of outstanding allegations awaiting investigation, and encouraged efforts to address the backlog. The Special Committee recalled the adoption of General Assembly resolution 62/214 [YUN 2007, p. 1519], containing the United Nations Comprehensive Strategy on Assistance and Support to Victims of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by United Nations Staff and Related Personnel. In that regard, the Special Committee welcomed the report of the Secretary-General [YUN 2009, p. 76] and the progress made, and called for the continued implementation of the strategy.

Cooperation with troop-contributing countries

The Special Committee [A/64/19] stressed the need to enhance the relationship between those who planned, mandated and managed UN peacekeeping operations and those who implemented the operations’ mandates, with troop-contributing countries involved early and fully in all aspects and stages of operations. The Special Committee underlined the importance of developing triangular cooperation between troop- and police-contributing countries, the Secretariat and the Security Council. It requested that the Secretariat produce pre-deployment threat assessments and make them available to potential troop-contributing countries, and encouraged reconnaissance visits of potential troop- and police-contributing countries to new missions. The Special Committee believed that pre-deployment visits for military contributions and formed police units were an important step in the process of force generation. The Special Committee recommended that guidelines for such visits be improved and measures taken to ensure that they were adequately performed.

Cooperation with regional organizations

The Special Committee [A/64/19] reaffirmed the important contribution that regional arrangements and agencies could make to peacekeeping, in accordance with Chapter VIII of the UN Charter. It welcomed positive developments in the field of cooperation with regional arrangements or agencies and encouraged the Secretariat to strengthen those linkages, such as the one with the AU. The Special Committee requested the Secretariat to identify the most important lessons learned from the cooperation between the United Nations and regional arrangements, including the AU and the EU, in peacekeeping issues and to include them in its reports and recommendations.

Women in peacekeeping

With respect to gender and peacekeeping, the Special Committee [A/64/19] emphasized the importance of full and effective implementation of Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 1113], 1820(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 1265], 1888(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 1137] and 1889(2009) [ibid., p. 1141] on women and peace and security, and of all General Assembly resolutions on the elimination of all forms of violence against women.

The Special Committee acknowledged the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, and stressed the importance of their equal participation and full involvement in all peace and security efforts. It reiterated its concern at the low proportion of women among UN peacekeeping staff at Headquarters and in the field, and encouraged DPKO and Member States to increase the participation of women in all aspects and at all levels of UN peacekeeping operations, and to implement and promote gender perspectives in peacekeeping activities.

On 27 April, by presidential statement S/PRST/2010/8 on women and peace and security (see p. 1160), the Council welcomed the appointment of Margot Wallström (Sweden) as the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict and reiterated its support of her mandate.

On 26 October, by presidential statement S/PRST/2010/22 on women and peace and security (see p. 1161), the Council reiterated its condemnation of all violations of international law committed against women and girls in situations of armed conflict and post-conflict situations, including rape, other forms of sexual and gender-based violence and killing and maiming.

On 16 December [S/PV.6453], by resolution 1960(2010) (see p. 1164), the Council called on parties to armed conflict to commit to combating sexual violence.

Security Council Working Group on Peacekeeping Operations

On 9 August, the Chairman of the Security Council Working Group on Peacekeeping Operations submitted to the Council a report [S/2010/424] covering its work since the beginning of the year. Meeting four times on 26 March, 10 May, 24 May and 2 June, the Working Group discussed civilian and military capacity gaps, and coordination and partnership for capacity development. The report summarized discussions, with the participation of 30 countries and organizations, including troop- and police-contributing countries, the Bureau of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations, regional organizations and other stakeholders.

On 29 December, the Chairman of the Working Group submitted to the Council a report [S/2010/696] on the Working Group's activities in 2009 and 2010, including its meetings of 22 October, 3 November and 10 December, during which the Working Group addressed civilian and military capacity gaps and mandated peacebuilding tasks.

Oversight activities

Oros reported in February [A/64/326 (Part II)] on its peacekeeping oversight activities in 2009. The Office issued 214 oversight reports related to peace operations, which accounted for 46 per cent of all Oros recommendations for the year. They underscored the need for the United Nations to develop a formal internal control framework to ensure that risks were managed consistently and systematically through focused control processes. In 2009, the Office issued 92 audits covering various focus areas—including financial management, human resources management, strategic management and governance, safety and security, information technology, logistics, procurement and contracts, programmes and projects, and properties and facilities. Audit reports issued in 2009 contained 909 recommendations, including 328 recommendations aimed at strengthening internal controls to mitigate identified high risks. Of all recommendations issued, 98 per cent were accepted, and as at 31 December 2009, 40 per cent of the recommendations addressing high risks had been implemented.

During 2009, 104 investigation reports related to peacekeeping operations were issued to programme managers. The Oros Investigations Division began implementing its investigation learning programme, designed to raise awareness and know-how of UN personnel involved with investigations and to hone the skills of the Division's personnel. Two of the seven modules that had been developed—on investigating sexual harassment and on investigating sexual exploitation and abuse—were presented at Headquarters and in the field.

Comprehensive review of peacekeeping

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 63/280 [YUN 2009, p. 79], the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and its Working Group continued their comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects.

The Special Committee held its 2010 substantive session from 22 February to 19 March [A/64/19]. It discussed guiding principles, definitions and implementation of mandates, restructuring of peacekeeping, safety and security, conduct and discipline, strengthening operational capacity, strategies for complex peacekeeping operations, cooperation with troop-contributing countries, cooperation with regional arrangements, enhancement of African peacekeeping capabilities, best practices, training, personnel and financial matters, among other issues.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 May [meeting 89], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/64/407/Add.1], adopted resolution 64/266 without vote [agenda item 33].

Comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2006(XIX) of 18 February 1965 and all other relevant resolutions,

Recalling in particular its resolution 63/280 of 8 May 2009,

Affirming that the efforts of the United Nations in the peaceful settlement of disputes, including through its peacekeeping operations, are indispensable,

Convinced of the need for the United Nations to continue to improve its capabilities in the field of peacekeeping and to enhance the effective and efficient deployment of its peacekeeping operations,

Considering the contribution that all States Members of the United Nations make to peacekeeping,

Noting the widespread interest in contributing to the work of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations expressed by Member States, in particular troop-contributing countries,

Bearing in mind the continuous necessity of preserving the efficiency and strengthening the effectiveness of the work of the Special Committee,

1. Welcomes the report of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations;

2. Endorses the proposals, recommendations and conclusions of the Special Committee, contained in paragraphs 15 to 228 of its report;

3. Urges Member States, the Secretariat and relevant organs of the United Nations to take all steps necessary to implement the proposals, recommendations and conclusions of the Special Committee;

4. Reiterates that those Member States that become personnel contributors to the United Nations peacekeeping operations in years to come or participate in the future in the Special Committee for three consecutive years as observers shall, upon request in writing to the Chairman of the Special Committee, become members at the following session of the Special Committee;

5. Decides that the Special Committee, in accordance with its mandate, shall continue its efforts for a comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects and shall review the implementation of its previous proposals and consider any new proposals so as to enhance the capacity of the United Nations to fulfil its responsibilities in this field;

6. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects".

On 10 December, the Assembly, by decision 65/520, took note of the report of the Fourth Committee on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations [A/65/424]. On 24 December, the Assembly, by decision 65/544, decided that the item "Comprehensive review of the whole question of peacekeeping operations in all their aspects" would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Aviation safety

Pursuant to requests by the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations in 2009 and 2010, the Secretary-General in May [A/64/768] updated Member States on the status and developments in the area of aviation safety in UN peacekeeping, including administrative and safety arrangements related to the management and use of military utility helicopters in peacekeeping missions. The report reflected the measures undertaken by the UN Secretariat to ensure effective implementation of the existing frameworks in the field in order to achieve operational responsiveness and flexibility. The administrative and safety frameworks that underpinned the management and use of military aircraft were both comprehensive and robust. Problems with the execution of relevant policies and procedures concerning the use of military utility helicopters remained the exception rather than the rule, and the United Nations was committed to ensuring that all relevant frameworks were implemented effectively.

Operations in 2010

As at 31 December, there were 15 peacekeeping missions in operation—7 in Africa, 1 in the Americas, 2 in Asia, 2 in Europe and the Mediterranean and 3 in the Middle East.

Africa

In Africa, the Security Council extended the mandates of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) until 30 April 2011; the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) until 30 September 2011; the United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS) until 30 April 2011; and the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) until 31 July 2011. The Council renewed the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) three times—until 31 May 2010, until 30 June 2010 and until 30 June 2011. It extended the mandate of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC) until 30 June 2010 and decided that—in view of the new phase that had been reached in the country—it should henceforward bear the title of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO) and be deployed until 30 June 2011. The United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) completed its mandate on 31 December 2010, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1923(2010) and at the request of the Chadian Government, which pledged full responsibility for protecting civilians on its territory.

Americas

In the Americas, the Security Council extended the mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH) until 15 October 2011.

Asia

In Asia, the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP), established in 1949, continued to monitor the ceasefire in Jammu and Kashmir. The Security Council extended the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT) until 26 February 2011. It extended the authorization of the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Afghanistan until 13 October 2011.

Europe and the Mediterranean

The Council extended the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) twice—to 15 December 2010 and to 15 June 2011. The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) remained in place. On 18 November, the Council authorized the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union to establish, for a further 12-month period, a multinational stabilization force (EUFOR) in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Middle East

Three long-standing operations continued in the Middle East. The United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO) continued to monitor ceasefires, supervise armistice agreements and assist other peacekeeping operations in the region. The Security Council extended the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) to 31 December 2010 and to 30 June 2011, and that of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) to 31 August 2011.

Financial and administrative aspects of peacekeeping operations

The General Assembly considered a number of issues related to financial and administrative aspects of UN peacekeeping operations, including the financial performance of UN peacekeeping operations, the support account for peacekeeping operations, funds for closed missions, financial reports and audited financial statements, management and financing of the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, restructuring, UN police capacities, personnel matters, criminal accountability of UN staff and experts on mission, welfare and recreational needs of peacekeeping staff, death and disability, and training.

Financing

Expenditures for UN peacekeeping operations from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010 [A/65/5 (Vol. II)] rose by 7 per cent, from $7,120.6 million in the previous fiscal year to $7,616.1 million. Total assessments rose by 12.8 per cent, from $7,060.5 million to $7,963.2 million. The increase was mainly due to UNAMID, MINURCAT, MONUC, MINUSTAH and support for AMISOM, which was partially offset by decreases in UNMIK, UNIFIL, UNMIL, and UNOMIG. Unpaid assessments pertaining to active peacekeeping missions decreased by 4.4 per cent, from $954.0 million to $912.2 million. Unpaid assessments for closed missions decreased marginally, from $556.1 million to $543.2 million. Therefore, the overall level of unpaid assessments decreased from $1,510.1 million to $1,455.4 million.

Available cash for active peacekeeping missions as at 30 June totalled $1,803.9 million, while liabilities reached $2,134.6 million. For closed missions, available cash totalled $423.7 million, while liabilities were $185.2 million. Closed missions with cash surpluses remained the only available lending source for active missions. During the reporting period, the United Nations Peace Forces provided loans of $30.0 million to MINURSO ($12.0 million), UNOMIG ($3.0 million) and UNMIT ($15.0 million). Total loans outstanding amounted to $22.8 million.

Notes of Secretary-General. In January [A/C.5/64/15], the Secretary-General, further to the information provided in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 83] on approved resources for peacekeeping operations from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, including requirements for the United Nations Logistics Base (UNLB) at Brindisi, Italy, and the support account for peacekeeping operations, provided information on further financing actions taken by the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fourth session in respect of UNOMIG, support for AMISOM and the support account for peacekeeping operations, for a total of $7,869,219,100.

In April [A/C.5/64/17], in accordance with General Assembly resolution 49/233 A [YUN 1994, p. 1338], the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee information on the proposed budgetary requirements of each peacekeeping operation, including budget levels for UNLB and the support account for peacekeeping operations, for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, by category, with the exception of MINURCAT and MINUSTAH, with the aggregate total resource requirements amounting to $6,987,237,100.

In June [A/C.5/64/18], the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee a note reflecting the resources to be approved by the Assembly in respect of each peacekeeping mission, including the prorated shares of the support account for peacekeeping operations and UNLB.

In July [A/C.5/64/19], the Secretary-General submitted information on approved resources for peacekeeping operations for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, including requirements for UNLB and the support account for peacekeeping operations, amounting to $7,264,350,500.

Financial performance

In February [A/64/643], the Secretary-General submitted an overview report on the financing of UN peacekeeping operations: budget performance for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 and the budget for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011. During the former period, total expenditure amounted to $7,098.1 million, against an approved budget of $7,302.2 million, exclusive of voluntary contributions in kind. The budget for peacekeeping operations for the latter period was estimated at $8,361.9 million. In March [A/64/702], the Secretary-General provided additional information in response to the recommendations of the Board of Auditors contained in its report [A/64/5 (Vol. II)] on UN peacekeeping operations for the period ended 30 June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 82].

In May [A/64/753], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) noted the continuous increase and strengthening of staffing and non-staffing resources as a result of successive reforms as well as on a regular annual basis. The Committee said that resource levels and management structures should be kept under review with a view to reassigning, redeploying and reducing resources in order to streamline the backstopping of peacekeeping operations.

Peacekeeping support account

The Secretary-General's performance report on the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/611 & Add.1] reported expenditures for that period amounting to $271,963,600 against approved resources of $282,401,900, resulting in unutilized resources totalling $10,438,300. That unutilized balance was attributable to under-expenditure in respect of post and non-post resources, in particular under official travel and other supplies, services and equipment, offset by additional requirements under the general temporary assistance category of expenditures. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly apply the unencumbered balance of $1,959,200 to support account requirements for the period from July 2010 through June 2011; and apply the remaining unencumbered balance of $7,094,800, comprising interest income ($2,383,000), other miscellaneous income ($1,379,400) and cancellations of prior-period obligations ($3,332,400), to the support account requirements for the period from July 2010 to June 2011.

In March [A/64/697 & Add.1,2], the Secretary-General submitted the budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, amounting to $313,891,800. It provided for 1,314 posts, comprising 1,245 continuing posts and 73 new posts.

Pursuant to resolutions 62/250 [YUN 2008, p. 87], 62/265 [YUN 2008, p. 546] and 63/280 [YUN 2009, p. 79], the Secretary-General reported [A/64/572 & Corr.1] on the implementation of the strengthening of the DPKO Office of Military Affairs and its impact on the organization and capacities of the Office. The strengthened Office was capable of providing increased strategic direction, oversight and situational awareness; had developed a limited mission start-up, surge and crisis response capability; and had the full functionality to facilitate the cessation of Strategic Military Cell operations by the target date of 30 June 2010. Notwithstanding those improvements, the Office had yet to develop its ability to enhance strategic military expertise in DPKO through better continuity and staff support. Justification for the continuation of the resources approved by resolution 62/250 and any required adjustments would be reflected in the budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

The Independent Audit Advisory Committee in February submitted its comments [A/64/652] on the proposed budget for OIOS under the support account for peacekeeping operations for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

In May [A/64/753], ACABQ provided its observations and recommendations on the Secretary-General's performance report on the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 (see above) and the proposed budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 (see p. 88). Its recommendations involved reductions totalling $4,528,100 gross ($4,190,700 net), as detailed in the report. Accordingly, it recommended that the Assembly approve a total amount of $366,396,700 gross ($336,923,500 net) for the support account for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, which included $309,363,700 for the staffing and non-staffing resources for the support account and $57,033,000 for enterprise resource planning. ACABQ also recommended approval of 41 of the 73 additional posts proposed by the Secretary-General in his March report on the support account budget.

With regard to a proposal in the Secretary-General's February report on the performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 (see p. 88), the Advisory Committee recommended that the Assembly apply the total amount of $9,054,000, comprising the unencumbered balance of $1,959,200 in respect of the financial period from July 2008 through June 2009, and the total amount of $7,094,800, comprising interest income ($2,383,000), other income ($1,379,400) and cancellation of prior-period obligations ($3,332,400), to the support account requirements for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

ACABQ recommended that the excess of the authorized level of the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 in the amount of $4,303,500 be applied to the support account requirements for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

Regarding the Office of Military Affairs, ACABQ recommended approval of three of the General Service (Other level) posts out of the four proposed for the Office. It requested the Secretary-General to provide further analysis and justification for the proposal to reclassify to civilian posts three seconded officer posts at the P-4 level.

General Assembly consideration. On 24 June, the Assembly had before it the Secretary-General's reports on the performance of the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/611 & Add.1] and on the budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/697 & Add.1,2]; the Secretary-General's report on the comprehensive analysis of the DPKO Office of Military Affairs [A/64/572 & Corr.1]; and the report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee on the proposed OIOS budget under the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/652], as well as the related ACABQ report [A/64/753].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/820], adopted resolution 64/271 without vote [agenda item 146].

Support account for peacekeeping operations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/258 of 3 May 1991, 47/218 A of 23 December 1992, 48/226 A of 23 December 1993, 55/238 of 23 December 2000, 56/241 of 24 December 2001, 56/293 of 27 June 2002, 57/318 of 18 June 2003, 58/298 of 18 June 2004, 59/301 of 22 June 2005, 60/268 of 30 June 2006, 61/245 and 61/246 of 22 December 2006, 61/256 of 15 March 2007, 61/279 of 29 June 2007, 62/250 of 20 June 2008 and 63/287 of 30 June 2009, its decisions 48/489 of 8 July 1994, 49/469 of 23 December 1994 and 50/473 of 23 December 1995 and its other relevant resolutions,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the performance of the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 and on the budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, the report of the Secretary-General on the comprehensive analysis of the Office of Military Affairs in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee on the proposed budget of the Office of Internal Oversight Services under the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recognizing the importance of the United Nations being able to respond and deploy rapidly to a peacekeeping operation upon adoption of a relevant resolution of the Security Council, within thirty days for traditional peacekeeping operations and ninety days for complex peacekeeping operations,

Recognizing also the need for adequate support during all phases of peacekeeping operations, including the liquidation and termination phases,

Mindful that the level of the support account should broadly correspond to the mandate, number, size and complexity of peacekeeping missions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the budget for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and the report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee on the proposed budget of the Office of Internal Oversight Services under the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

2. Reaffirms its role in carrying out a thorough analysis and approval of human and financial resources and policies with a view to ensuring the full, effective and efficient implementation of all mandated programmes and activities and the implementation of policies in this regard;

3. Also reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibility for administrative and budgetary matters;

4. Further reaffirms rule 153 of its rules of procedure;

5. Reaffirms that the support account funds shall be used for the sole purpose of financing human resources and non-human resource requirements for backstopping and supporting peacekeeping operations at Headquarters, and that any changes in this limitation require the prior approval of the General Assembly;

6. Also reaffirms the need for adequate funding for the backstopping of peacekeeping operations, as well as the need for full justification for that funding in support account budget submissions;

7. Emphasizes the importance of interaction and coordination with troop-contributing countries;

8. Recalls section I, paragraph 6, of resolution 55/238, paragraph 11 of resolution 56/241, paragraph 19 of resolution 61/279 and paragraph 22 of resolution 62/250, and requests the Secretary-General to make further concrete efforts to ensure proper representation of troop-contributing countries in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support of the Secretariat, taking into account their contribution to United Nations peacekeeping;

9. Reaffirms the need for effective and efficient administration and financial management of peacekeeping operations, and urges the Secretary-General to continue to identify measures to increase the productivity and efficiency of the support account;

10. Notes that the overall benefits of the restructuring of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support remain to be fully assessed, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue to make every effort to enhance the capacity of the Organization to manage and sustain peacekeeping operations;

11. Recognizes the significant role of the Police Division of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations in contributing to peacekeeping operations, including their peacebuilding efforts, and the increase in the policing dimension in a number of operations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to include an assessment of the level of the post of Police Adviser in the context of his report on the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2011 to 30 June 2012;

13. Emphasizes that support functions should be scalable to the size and scope of peacekeeping operations;

14. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to review the level of the support account on a regular basis, taking into consideration the number, size and complexity of peacekeeping operations;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, and other relevant resolutions;

16. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

17. Recalls its request to the Secretary-General in section III, paragraph 3, of its resolution 61/275 of 29 June 2007;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to fill all vacancies in an expeditious manner;

19. Decides to maintain, for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, the funding mechanism for the support account used in the current period, from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, as approved in paragraph 3 of its resolution 50/221 B of 7 June 1996;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

20. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the performance of the budget of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

21. Approves the support account requirements in the amount of 356,033,000 United States dollars for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of the amount of 57,033,000 dollars for the enterprise resource planning project previously approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 64/243 of 24 December 2009, including 1,241 continuing posts and 21 new temporary posts listed in annex I to the present resolution, and 134 continuing positions and 29 new general temporary assistance positions listed in annex II, as well as their related post and non-post requirements;

Financing of the budget estimates

22. Decides that the requirements for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 shall be financed as follows:

(a) The unencumbered balance in the total amount of 1,959,200 dollars in respect of the financial period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009, to be applied to the resources required for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(b) The total amount of 7,094,800 dollars, comprising interest income of 2,383,000 dollars, other miscellaneous income of 1,379,400 dollars and cancellation of prior-period obligations of 3,332,400 dollars, to be applied to the resources required for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(c) The amount of 4,303,500 dollars representing the excess of the authorized level of the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, to be applied to the resources required for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(d) The balance of 342,675,500 dollars to be prorated among the budgets of the active peacekeeping operations for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(e) The net estimated staff assessment income of 29,007,800 dollars, comprising the amount of 29,322,700 dollars for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and the decrease of 314,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, to be set off against the balance referred to in subparagraph (d) above, to be prorated among the budgets of the individual active peacekeeping operations.

Funds for closed missions

A report of the Secretary-General [A/64/605] provided information on the updated financial position of 22 closed peacekeeping missions as at 30 June 2009. The net cash surplus in the accounts of 17 closed missions available for credit to Member States as at that date amounted to $213,843,000. That amount did not include loans totalling $28,816,000 owed by two closed missions—the United Nations Support Mission in Haiti/United Nations Transition Mission in Haiti/United Nations Civilian Police Mission in Haiti ($7,366,000) and the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic ($3,450,000)—and by two active peacekeeping missions—MINURSO ($16,000,000) and UNOMIG ($2,000,000)—which remained unpaid. Five of the 22 closed missions reflected cash deficits totalling $86,648,000, owing to outstanding payments of assessed contributions. The Secretary-General proposed that two thirds of the adjusted net available cash balance as at 30 June 2009, in the amount of $291,900, be returned to the Government of Kuwait. The Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly approve retention of the cash balance of $213,551,100 available in 17 closed missions, in the light of the experience as regarded cash requirements of the Organization during the 2008/2009 and 2009/2010 financial periods.

ACABQ in February provided its comments [A/64/659 & Corr.1] on the Secretary-General's report. With respect to the disposition of the $213,551,100, it cited financial regulation 5.3 of the United Nations Financial Regulations and Rules, which provided that appropriations should remain available for 12 months following the end of the financial period to which they related, to the extent that they were required to discharge obligations in respect of goods supplied and services rendered in the financial period, and to liquidate any other outstanding legal obligation. The regulation also stated that the balance of the appropriations should be surrendered. ACABQ reiterated its view that it was for the General Assembly to decide on the disposition of such balances—a point stressed by the Chair of the Advisory Committee in her briefing of the Fifth Committee on 3 May [A/C.5/64/SR.28].

On 24 June, the General Assembly deferred consideration of both reports until its sixty-fifth session (decision 64/548 B).

Also on 24 June, by decision 64/558, the Assembly decided to return two thirds of the credits available in the account of the United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission to the Government of Kuwait in the amount of $291,900. It also decided to continue to consider the updated financial position of closed peacekeeping missions during its sixty-fifth (2010) session.

Accounts and auditing

At its resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session, the General Assembly considered the financial report and audited financial statements for UN peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/5 (Vol. II)]; the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning UN peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2009 [A/64/702]; the ACABQ report on the Board of Auditors report on the accounts of the UN peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2009 [A/64/708]; and the oral statement by the Chair of the Advisory Committee [A/C.5/64/SR.28].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/547/Add.1], adopted resolution 64/268 without vote [agenda item 129].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 63/246 B of 30 June 2009 and 64/227 of 22 December 2009,

Having considered the financial report and audited financial statements for the twelve-month period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 and the report of the Board of Auditors on United Nations peacekeeping operations, the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2009, the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the report of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2009, and the oral statement by the Chair of the Advisory Committee,

1. Accepts the audited financial statements of the United Nations peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

2. Takes note of the observations and endorses the recommendations contained in the report of the Board of Auditors;

3. Recalls its resolutions 48/216 A to D of 23 December 1993, and emphasizes the importance of coordination among the Board of Auditors, the Secretary-General and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in reviewing the timelines of the issuance of respective reports related to the agenda item on financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board, to ensure proper consideration by the Advisory Committee and the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General, the Advisory Committee and, through the Advisory Committee, the Board, to include the result of the coordination in their respective reports submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

4. Takes note of the observations and endorses the recommendations, excluding paragraph 31, contained in the report of the Advisory Committee and in the oral statement by the Chair of the Advisory Committee;

5. Commends the Board of Auditors for the quality of its report and the streamlined format thereof;

6. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations for the financial period ended 30 June 2009;

7. Notes with concern the significant number of reiterated recommendations from previous years in the report of the Board of Auditors, and in this context emphasizes the need to strengthen administrative and institutional measures to address the root causes of recurring issues and to minimize the ageing of the Board's previous recommendations;

8. Also notes with concern the recurrence of problems previously identified by the Board of Auditors in regard to the management of expendable and non-expendable property;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee in a prompt and timely manner, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to strengthen internal controls in the management of expendable and non-expendable property, strategic deployment stocks and other assets to ensure adequate safeguards that would prevent waste and financial loss to the Organization;

11. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to indicate an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the priorities for their implementation, including the office holders to be held accountable and the measures taken in that regard;

12. Recalls section D of its resolution 64/259 of 29 March 2010, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that managers are effectively held accountable for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors through the identification of priorities, clear time frames and an assessment of actions taken in that regard, in the context of the assessment of managers' performance mechanisms, and to report thereon in the context of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, in the next report on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors concerning United Nations peacekeeping operations, a full explanation for the delays in the implementation of all outstanding recommendations of the Board, the root causes of the recurring issues and the measures to be taken;

14. Recognizes the value of the observations and recommendations with regard to the efficiency of the administration and management of United Nations peacekeeping operations, including the financial procedures, the accounting systems and the internal financial controls, without compromising the quality of the financial audit, and supports the continuation of these efforts.

Management of peacekeeping assets

UN Logistics Base

The General Assembly, at its resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session, considered the performance report on the budget of the United Nations Logistics Base (UNLB) at Brindisi, Italy, for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/575]. Expenditure totalled $44,336,700 gross ($40,933,400 net) against an appropriation of $45,769,000 gross ($42,295,600 net), resulting in an unencumbered balance of $1,432,300.

The value of strategic deployment stock activities for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 amounted to $131.9 million and included the $81.2 million rolled over from the prior-period fund balance and $50.7 million corresponding to the shipment of strategic deployment stocks at replacement values to peacekeeping and special political missions. The amount of $70.2 million was rolled over into the 2009/2010 fund balance. The Secretary-General requested that the Assembly decide on the treatment of the unencumbered balance of $1,432,300 with respect to the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009; and on the treatment of other income for the period ended 30 June 2009 amounting to $3,412,000 from interest income ($2,905,300), other/miscellaneous income ($241,200) and cancellation of prior-period obligations ($265,500).

The Assembly also considered the proposed UNLB budget for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/698], amounting to $72,017,800 and providing for 127 international staff and 279 national staff.

In May [A/64/660/Add.12], ACABQ evaluated the Secretary-General's proposed budget and recommended a reduction of $3,847,200 in the proposed UNLB budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and that the Assembly appropriate $68,170,600.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/820], adopted resolution 64/270 without vote [agenda item 146].

Financing of the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy

The General Assembly,

Recalling section XIV of its resolution 49/233 A of 23 December 1994 and its resolution 62/231 of 22 December 2007,

Recalling also its decision 50/500 of 17 September 1996 on the financing of the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/286 of 30 June 2009,

Recalling further its resolution 56/292 of 27 June 2002 concerning the establishment of the strategic deployment stocks and its subsequent resolutions on the status of the implementation of the strategic deployment stocks, the latest of which was resolution 63/286,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Logistics Base and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reiterating the importance of establishing an accurate inventory of assets,

1. Notes with appreciation the facilities provided by the Government of Italy to the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, and by the Government of Spain to the secondary active telecommunications facility at Valencia, Spain;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

3. Takes note of paragraph 22 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and approves the amalgamation of four Tenant Units, namely, the Regional Aviation Safety Office, the Strategic Air Operations Centre, the Geographic Information System Centre and the Engineering Standards and Design Centre, as proposed by the Secretary-General;

4. Also takes note of paragraphs 24 and 51 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to establish the Justice and Corrections Standing Capacity, consisting of five international posts (one P-5, two P-4, two P-3) and one national General Service post;

5. Further takes note of paragraph 27 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to relocate the Field Central Review Board, consisting of three international posts (one P-4 and two P-3) and two national General Service posts, to the United Nations Logistics Base;

6. Recalls paragraph 50 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to approve fourteen new posts for the Standing Police Capacity, comprising one post at the P-5 level, three posts at the P-4 level, eight posts at the P-3 level and two posts at the Field Service level;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the management of the strategic deployment stocks in order to ensure that the United Nations Logistics Base issues items on a first-in, first-out basis to avoid possible deterioration and obsolescence of the stocks;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

9. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

10. Approves the cost estimates for the United Nations Logistics Base amounting to 68,170,600 United States dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

Financing of the budget estimates

11. Decides that the requirements for the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 shall be financed as follows:

(a) The unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 4,844,300 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 to be applied against the resources required for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(b) The balance of 63,326,300 dollars to be prorated among the budgets of the active peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

(c) The estimated staff assessment income of 5,066,400 dollars, comprising the amount of 5,136,500 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and the decrease of 70,100 dollars in respect of the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009, to be offset against the balance referred to in subparagraph (b) above, to be prorated among the budgets of the individual active peacekeeping operations;

12. Also decides to consider at its sixty-fifth session the question of the financing of the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy.

Restructuring issues

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. The Special Committee, at its 2010 session [A/64/19], stressed the need for greater involvement of troop- and police-contributing countries in early planning and monitoring of the missions in which they were deployed. It noted the increase in complex peacekeeping operations, and that the Security Council had mandated peacekeeping operations that included activities beyond the traditional tasks of monitoring and reporting. It therefore stressed the need for DPKO and DFS to be efficiently structured, adequately staffed and effectively coordinated.

The Special Committee reiterated the importance of preserving unity of command in missions at all levels, as well as coherence in policy and strategy and clear command structures—in the field and up to and including at Headquarters. It welcomed the initiatives outlined in the Secretary-General's report on strengthening the capacity of the United Nations to manage and sustain peacekeeping operations [YUN 2009, p. 93].

Global field support strategy. In January [A/64/633], the Secretary-General submitted a report on the global field support strategy, whose core objectives were to expedite and improve support for peacekeeping, including critical early peacebuilding; expedite and improve support for peacemaking, electoral assistance, mediation support and conflict prevention; strengthen resource stewardship and accountability while achieving greater efficiencies and economies of scale; and improve the safety and living conditions of staff.

ACABQ in April submitted its comments [A/64/660] on the report.

In February and March, the Secretary-General promulgated two bulletins [ST/SGB/2010/1 & 2] establishing the functions and organizational structure of DPKO and DFS, respectively.

General Assembly consideration. In June, the Assembly considered previous reports of the Secretary-General on the overview of the financing of the UN peacekeeping operations [YUN 2008, p. 86 & YUN 2009, p. 83]; on national professional officers [YUN 2008, p. 1626]; on the welfare and recreation needs of all categories of personnel and detailed implications [YUN 2009, p. 97]; on the progress of training in peacekeeping [ibid., p. 98]; on the comprehensive review of the compensation of death and disability benefits to military contingents, formed police units, military observers and civilian police officers [ibid., p. 101]; on the status of cases for death and disability for formed police units, military contingents, civilian police officers and military observers processed and currently in process, and comprehensive review of the administrative and payment arrangement for such cases [YUN 2008, p. 101]; on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse [YUN 2009, p. 76]; on the comprehensive report of conduct and discipline, including full justification of all posts [YUN 2008, p. 77] and on peacekeeping best practices [YUN 2007, p. 87]; on the report on the activities of OIOS in 2007 [YUN 2008, p. 81], as well as the note by the Secretary-General thereon [ibid., p. 82]; on the OIOS report on peacekeeping operations [YUN 2009, p. 78] and on the related ACABQ reports [YUN 2008, p. 87, YUN 2009, p. 83].

The Assembly also considered the Secretary-General's current reports on the overview of the financing of the UN peacekeeping operations (see p. 88), on the global field support strategy (see p. 97) and on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse (see p. 82); and the OIOS report on peacekeeping operations (see p. 83) and the related ACABQ report (see p. 1486).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/820], adopted resolution 64/269 without vote [agenda item 146].

Cross-cutting issues

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/233 A of 23 December 1994, 49/233 B of 31 March 1995, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 57/290 B of 18 June 2003, 58/315 of 1 July 2004, 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006 and 61/276 and 61/279 of 29 June 2007,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the overview of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations, on national professional officers, on the welfare and recreation needs of all categories of personnel and detailed implications, on the progress of training in peacekeeping, on the comprehensive review of the compensation of death and disability benefits to military contingents, formed police units, military observers and civilian police officers, on the status of cases for death and disability for formed police units, military contingents, civilian police officers and military observers processed and currently in process, and comprehensive review of the administrative and payment arrangement for such cases, on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, on the comprehensive report of conduct and discipline including full justification of all posts and on peacekeeping best practices, the report on the activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2007, as well as the note by the Secretary-General thereon, the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on peacekeeping operations and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Having also considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the overview of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations, on the global field support strategy and on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on peacekeeping operations, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee,

General

1. Reaffirms its resolutions 57/290 B, 59/296, 60/266 and 61/276, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of their relevant provisions;

2. Appreciates the efforts of all peacekeeping personnel in the field and at Headquarters;

3. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the overview of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations, the global field support strategy and special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

4. Also takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on peacekeeping operations;

5. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

I

Budget presentation and financial management

1. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

2. Takes note of paragraph 3 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and stresses that the General Assembly has the sole authority to approve the implementation of recommendations of the Advisory Committee pertaining to peacekeeping;

3. Reaffirms paragraphs 21 to 25 of its resolution 64/259 of 29 March 2010;

4. Reiterates that the delegation of authority on the part of the Secretary-General should be in order to facilitate the better management of the Organization, but stresses that the overall responsibility for management of the Organization rests with the Secretary-General as the Chief Administrative Officer;

5. Affirms the need for the Secretary-General to ensure that the delegation of authority to the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support and field missions is in strict compliance with relevant resolutions and decisions, as well as relevant rules and procedures of the General Assembly on this matter;

6. Stresses that heads of departments report to and are accountable to the Secretary-General;

7. Reiterates the importance of strengthened accountability in the Organization and of ensuring greater accountability of the Secretary-General to Member States, inter alia, for the effective and efficient implementation of legislative mandates and the use of human and financial resources;

8. Takes note of paragraphs 12 and 14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and emphasizes that all field missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates and that the transition of peacekeeping operations to peacebuilding may entail a change in resource requirements;

9. Welcomes the improvements that have been made in the timeliness and quality of budget proposals for peacekeeping operations, and encourages the Secretary-General to further intensify his efforts to that end through enhanced coordination and cooperation among missions, the Department of Field Support, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, the Department of Management and the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat;

10. Reaffirms that budget submissions should reflect management improvements and efficiency gains to be achieved and should present future strategies in that regard;

11. Stresses the importance of further steps by the Secretary-General towards improving budget presentations and making more accurate forecasts;

12. Appreciates the improved presentation by the Secretary-General of efficiency gains in peacekeeping budgets;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to achieve economies of scale within and between field missions without undermining their operational requirements and the implementation of their respective mandates and to report thereon in the context of the overview report;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fifth session on measures to address the impact of exchange rate fluctuations in the presentation of peacekeeping budgets and the management of peacekeeping accounts;

15. Notes with concern the significant amount of prior-period obligations cancelled by several missions, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General improve control over obligations;

II

Human resources

1. Reaffirms section VII of its resolution 61/276, and its resolution 63/250 of 24 December 2008;
2. Decides to revert to the establishment of minimum welfare and recreation standards, as described in paragraphs 62 to 82 of the report of the Secretary-General, at the second part of its resumed sixty-fifth session;
3. Also decides to increase the level of compensation for death for all categories of uniformed personnel to 70,000 United States dollars;
4. Expresses deep concern about delays in the settlement of claims in respect of death and disability, and requests the Secretary-General to take urgent measures to eliminate the existing backlog of death and disability claims pending for more than three months and to report on the progress made to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixty-fifth session;
5. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to settle death and disability claims as soon as possible, but not later than three months from the date of submission of a claim;
6. Reaffirms its resolution 52/177 of 18 December 1997, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, accordingly, all uniformed personnel deployed in peacekeeping operations shall continue to be eligible for death and disability compensation during the entire period of their deployment;

III

Operational requirements

1. Notes that fuel is a major item of expenditure and that its management is vulnerable to serious risk of fraud and abuse;
2. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for field missions;
3. Notes the increase in aircraft rental costs, particularly for rotary wing aircraft, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to achieve economies of scale and efficiencies in air operations through better planning and optimal use of available resources without undermining safety and operational requirements and rotation and troop deployment cycles;
4. Underlines the need for the United Nations to improve management of its ground transportation in order to achieve maximum operational efficiency, and urges the Secretary-General to accelerate his efforts in this regard;
5. Recalls paragraph 72 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to provide detailed information on the measures undertaken to mitigate the environmental impact of peacekeeping missions in the context of his next overview report;
6. Reaffirms the provisions of section XVIII of its resolution 61/276;
7. Stresses the need for expedited and flexible procedures for the implementation of quick-impact projects with a view to ensuring the fulfilment of the mandate established in section XVIII of resolution 61/276;

IV

Conduct and discipline

1. Recognizes the shared responsibility, within their respective competencies, of United Nations organizations and agencies and troop-contributing countries to ensure that all personnel are held accountable for sexual exploitation and related offences committed while serving in humanitarian and peacekeeping operations;
2. Underlines the great importance it attaches to the elimination of misconduct, including sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, calls for full implementation of the United Nations zero-tolerance policy, stresses the importance of the measures put in place in this regard, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen efforts for the prevention, prompt investigation, enforcement of disciplinary action and assistance to victims of sexual exploitation and abuse;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to prevent unsubstantiated allegations of misconduct from damaging the credibility of any United Nations peacekeeping operation and to ensure that appropriate steps are taken to maintain and restore the image and credibility of any peacekeeping mission, troop-contributing country or United Nations peacekeeping personnel in cases where allegations of misconduct are ultimately legally unproven;
4. Strongly urges Member States to take all appropriate measures to ensure that crimes by United Nations officials and experts on mission do not go unpunished and that the perpetrators of such crimes are brought to justice;

V

Other

Notes with concern the status of liabilities and reimbursements to troop-contributing and police-contributing countries for their troops, formed police units, contingent-owned equipment and self-sustainment, emphasizes the importance of the full settlement of those liabilities, and in this regard urges all Member States to pay their assessed contributions on time, in full and without conditions;

VI

Global field support strategy

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

1. Recognizes the challenges faced by the Organization in providing logistical, administrative and information and communications technology support for peacekeeping operations, and expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the Secretary-General to present an integrated approach to enable more timely mission start-up and deployment and to improve quality, efficiency and economy of scale in the delivery of services to field missions;
2. Also recognizes the need for timely mission start-up and deployment and to improve the quality and effectiveness of service delivery to field missions;
3. Notes with interest the overall concept of the global field support strategy, which outlines a broad and useful framework for improving the efficiency and effectiveness of service delivery to field missions and the better use of resources, including through the provision of common services;

4. Underlines the central role of Headquarters in strategic policymaking and oversight of relevant rules, regulations and procedures while seeking efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery of support to field missions;

5. Emphasizes the importance of preserving unity of command in missions at all levels as well as coherence in policy and strategy and clear command structures in the field, up to and including at Headquarters;

6. Also emphasizes the need for the Secretary-General to closely consult with Member States, in particular troop-contributing countries, in the implementation of the global field support strategy in the light of the decisions taken in the present resolution;

7. Further emphasizes that the implementation of the global field support strategy will improve the operational effectiveness of field missions;

8. Decides that, if a decision of the Security Council relating to the start-up phase or expansion phase of peacekeeping operations results in the need for expenditure, the Secretary-General is authorized, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to enter into commitments up to 100 million dollars from the available balance of the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund and that the cumulative total of outstanding commitment authority in respect of the start-up or expansion phase of peacekeeping operations should not exceed the total level of the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund at any one time, and accordingly decides to amend the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations by substituting the words "the balance of the Peacekeeping Reserve Fund, and not to exceed 100 million United States dollars" for the words "50 million United States dollars" in financial regulation 4.6 and by substituting the words "100 million dollars" for the words "50 million dollars" in financial regulation 4.8;

9. Also decides that, if a decision of the Security Council relating to the start-up phase or expansion phase of peacekeeping operations results in the need for expenditure, the Secretary-General is authorized, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee, to enter into commitments up to 50 million dollars of the available balance of the stores available from the Organization's strategic deployment stocks and draw upon these, with the drawings from the stocks to be replenished when the initial appropriation is received;

10. Affirms the authority of the Fifth Committee to fully review the administrative structures, the staffing levels, including the number and level of posts established through the exercise of commitment authority, at the time of the presentation of the budget, with a view to making adjustments as necessary;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals for a standardized funding model for the first year of peacekeeping operations for consideration by the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixty-fifth session, on the understanding that the model should not in any way derogate from the legislative role of the Assembly in the consideration and approval of budgets;

12. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General that global service packages will be configured and managed from the Global Service Centre at Brindisi and that regional service centres could in turn develop region-specific service packages;

13. Recalls its resolution 64/266 of 21 May 2010 and paragraph 101 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General, in close consultation with troop-contributing countries, to further develop pre-defined modules and service packages to improve the quality and expedite the delivery of services to field missions, including civilian response capabilities;

14. Recognizes that delivering modularized service packages at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi is aimed at enhancing the operational effectiveness of field missions, and stresses the importance of proceeding in this regard;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to further develop specific proposals in consultation with Member States, in particular troop-contributing countries, on functions and resources to be transferred to the Global Service Centre, in the context of the budget of the United Nations Logistics Base, for the consideration of the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session, addressing the issues raised in paragraphs 108 to 110 of the report of the Advisory Committee, without prejudice to a decision of the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

16. Stresses that functions primarily involving interactions with Member States, particularly troop-contributing countries, will continue to be located at Headquarters;

17. Reaffirms its resolutions 60/121 A of 8 December 2005, 61/281 of 29 June 2007, 62/256 of 20 June 2008 and 63/291 of 30 June 2009, and decides to establish a regional service centre at the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, with the functions proposed by the Secretary-General in his report;

18. Recalls paragraphs 119 and 120 of the report of the Advisory Committee and paragraph 79 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the attainment of these projected benefits and to further identify subsequent annual benefits of the Regional Service Centre at Entebbe;

19. Notes that the concentration of missions in Central and Eastern Africa provides an opportunity to optimize the use of air assets through, inter alia, the establishment of a transportation and movements integrated control centre responsible for the planning and movement of personnel and cargo, and requests the Secretary-General to further develop and operationalize the concept in close consultation with Member States, in particular troop-contributing countries;

20. Recalls paragraphs 55 and 142 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and stresses that efforts to explore possibilities for economies and efficiencies in air operations should not undermine safety and operational requirements and rotation and troop deployment cycles;

21. Stresses the accountability and ultimate responsibility of Headquarters for the acquisition of air services and the provision of safety standards, bearing in mind current delegations of authority for procurement, without prejudice to any future decision that the General Assembly may take on this issue;

22. Also stresses that the establishment of a regional service centre must respect the principle of separate financial arrangements for missions and that its resources and the volume of its activities are scalable, reflecting the start-up, expansion, drawdown or closure of the field missions that it serves;

23. Requests the Secretary-General, when developing budget proposals for the missions to be served by a regional service centre, to reflect the posts, positions and related costs of a regional service centre in the respective budget proposals, including the results-based budgeting framework;

24. Stresses that the staffing of the global and regional service centres will be achieved mainly through redeployments from the Department of Field Support at Headquarters and from field missions;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to present more than one option for any future proposed regional service centre for the consideration and approval of the General Assembly;

26. Decides that the Regional Service Centre at Entebbe will be a family duty station, effective 1 July 2011, contingent on and without prejudice to any future decision taken by the General Assembly on the designation of duty stations as well as the consideration of criteria, including financial and administrative, for designating duty stations as family or non-family;

27. Requests the Secretary-General to provide an update on the implementation of the integrated human resources management framework to the General Assembly during its consideration of human resources management issues at its sixty-fifth session;

28. Also requests the Secretary-General, in consistency with the objectives of the global field support strategy, to take into account the risks involved in using single source or multifunctional contracts in developing further proposals related to logistics modules;

29. Recalls paragraph 159 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to submit an annual progress report on the implementation of the global field support strategy;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with conducting an audit of the implementation of the global field support strategy and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixty-sixth session.

Global field support strategy. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 64/269 (see p. 97), the Secretary-General in December submitted a progress report [A/65/643] on the global field support strategy, developed as a five-year process to transform the delivery of support services to UN field missions. The strategy aimed at improving the quality and effectiveness of service delivery in an integrated, accountable and transparent manner so that resources were used efficiently and effectively. The report reviewed the activities undertaken and results achieved during the first five months of the strategy: financial framework; predefined modules and service packages; service centres; and human resources framework. Given the early stage of implementation, a full picture was not yet possible. Nonetheless, in the short time since the adoption of resolution 64/269 on 24 June, considerable progress had been made: the first service package, a module for a 200-person camp, was being defined in consultation with Member States and field missions; five functions had been identified for consideration by Member States to be transferred to the Global Service Centre at Brindisi; a regional service centre had been established in Entebbe, Uganda; the Global Field Support Strategy Steering Committee was fully functional; four functions were in full operation and delivering qualitative and quantitative benefits, involving posts transferred from regional missions; and the human resources framework was advancing in close coordination with the Office of Human Resources Management.

Results and impact of restructuring. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 63/287 [YUN 2009, p. 84], the Secretary-General in December reported [A/65/624 & Corr.1] on the results and impact of the restructuring and reforms of DPKO and DFS. The report also identified challenges, gaps and minor structural adjustments to consolidate the gains made. Feedback from Member States, the results of a 2010 survey of field missions and performance metrics, demonstrated that since approval of the restructuring in 2006, observable improvements had been achieved in the capacity of the Secretariat to mount, manage and sustain peacekeeping and other field operations. Perhaps most significantly, the creation of DFS had positioned mission support as a strategic enabler in the delivery of political, peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding mandates. The restructuring had also resulted in the evolution of two distinct business models: a strategic Headquarters model that delivered integrated strategic and operational guidance to field operations; and a service provider model that offered expertise in key areas of mandated activities. The two business models had produced successes through unity of command, integrated management structures, and shared policy development and evaluation and training resources.

Integrated operational teams. As requested by the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations [YUN 2009, p. 93], the Secretary-General in December reported [A/65/669] on the implementation of the integrated operational teams—the principal mechanism between DPKO and DFS to ensure services delivery. The report addressed the rationale for establishing the teams and their roles, functions and composition, and outlined measures taken to facilitate their implementation and related challenges. The teams were responsible for providing integrated operational and political guidance and support to field missions on day-to-day issues that cut across areas of expertise and for coordinating the Secretary-General's mission-specific reporting obligations to the Security Council. Each team included political, military, police and support specialists, drawing on expertise from other areas as required. The teams' success had been attributed in large measure to the ability of DPKO and DFS to flexibly assign specialist officers across the teams to field missions or to projects in specialist areas to meet the constantly changing scenarios that peacekeeping operations presented. The regular convening of the integrated mission task forces by team leaders had provided a forum for the review of mission-specific issues to ensure harmonized direction and support to peacekeeping operations.

UN police capacities

Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations consideration. At its 2010 session [A/64/19], the Special Committee noted with appreciation the review of the DPKO Police Division carried out since its previous report. The Committee noted the sustained increase of the police dimension in a number of missions and stressed the importance of maintaining an appropriate support capacity at Headquarters to ensure an adequate level of oversight and guidance to the field. It acknowledged the gaps in the capacities of the Police Division and stressed the importance of addressing them. The Special Committee took note of the approval of the revised policy on formed police units in UN peacekeeping operations and encouraged the Secretariat to implement the policy. It also recognized the growing need to build institutional police capacity in post-conflict environments, and welcomed the ongoing work by Member States, Interpol and the Secretariat.

Personnel matters

The Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations [A/64/19] recognized the efforts made by DPKO and DFS with regard to balanced recruiting of staff. It urged the Secretary-General to ensure a fair representation of troop-contributing countries when selecting personnel for such staff positions, and requested him to ensure proper representation of troop-contributing countries in DPKO and DFS. The Special Committee expressed concern at the low proportion of women among UN peacekeeping staff, in particular women from developing countries, especially at the senior levels. It stressed that, in the recruitment process, women from certain countries, in particular developing countries, should be accorded equal opportunities, in conformity with relevant resolutions. The Special Committee reiterated its request to the Secretary-General to ensure equitable representation of Member States at the senior and policymaking levels of the Secretariat, especially those with inadequate representation.

Concerned about the high number of vacancies in peacekeeping missions, the Special Committee reiterated its request that the Secretariat accelerate the recruitment and approval process of personnel, including senior mission leadership. It reiterated its request to the Secretary-General to swiftly implement the decisions on contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service [YUN 2008, p. 1622] as a means of dealing with the high vacancy issue. It also requested that he continue to ensure greater use of national staff in peacekeeping operations. The Special Committee underlined the importance of effective interaction between Headquarters and the field to ensure efficient communications and the safety of all peacekeeping personnel.

The Special Committee acknowledged that the interaction of UN military, police and civilian personnel with the local population was necessary for the efficiency and success of peacekeeping operations, and that language skills should constitute an important element of the selection and training processes. It therefore urged DPKO and DFS to make further efforts to recruit staff and experts on mission with language skills that were relevant to the mission area where they were to be deployed. Good command of the official language in the country should be taken into account.

Criminal accountability of UN staff and experts on mission

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/110 [YUN 2009, p. 95], the Secretary-General in July submitted a report [A/65/185] on the criminal accountability of UN officials and experts on mission that provided information from Governments on the extent to which their laws established jurisdiction over serious crimes committed by their nationals while serving as UN officials or experts on mission, as well as information on cooperation among States and with the United Nations in the exchange of information and the facilitation of investigations and prosecution. As at 1 July, replies had been received from 18 States. The report also detailed recent Secretariat activities, including bringing credible allegations to the attention of the concerned State, UN support to Member States in the development of their domestic laws, and provision of training on UN standards of conduct before deployment and during a mission.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 6 December [meeting 57], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/65/464], adopted resolution 65/20 without vote [agenda item 76].

Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/281 of 29 March 2005, in which it endorsed the recommendation of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations that the Secretary-General make available to the United Nations membership a comprehensive report on the issue of sexual exploitation and abuse in United Nations peacekeeping operations,

Recalling also that the Secretary-General, on 24 March 2005, transmitted to the President of the General Assembly a report of his Adviser concerning sexual exploitation and abuse by United Nations peacekeeping personnel,

Recalling further its resolution 59/300 of 22 June 2005, in which it endorsed the recommendation of the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations that a group of legal experts be established to provide advice on the best way to proceed so as to ensure that the original intent of the Charter of the United Nations can be achieved, namely that United Nations staff and experts on mission would never be effectively exempt from the consequences of criminal acts committed at their duty station, nor unjustly penalized without due process,

Recognizing the valuable contribution of United Nations officials and experts on mission towards the fulfilment of the principles and purposes of the Charter,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international law,

Reaffirming also that the present resolution is without prejudice to the privileges and immunities of United Nations officials and experts on mission and the United Nations under international law,

Reaffirming further the obligation of United Nations officials and experts on mission to respect the national laws of the host State, as well as the right of the host State to exercise, where applicable, its criminal jurisdiction, in accordance with the relevant rules of international law and agreements governing operations of United Nations missions,

Deeply concerned by reports of criminal conduct, and conscious that such conduct, if not investigated and, as appropriate, prosecuted, would create the negative impression that United Nations officials and experts on mission operate with impunity,

Reaffirming the need to ensure that all United Nations officials and experts on mission function in a manner that preserves the image, credibility, impartiality and integrity of the United Nations,

Emphasizing that crimes committed by such persons are unacceptable and have a detrimental effect on the fulfilment of the mandate of the United Nations, in particular with respect to the relations between the United Nations and the local population in the host country,

Conscious of the importance of protecting the rights of victims of criminal conduct, as well as of ensuring adequate protection for witnesses, and recalling the adoption of its resolution 62/214 of 21 December 2007 on the United Nations Comprehensive Strategy on Assistance and Support to Victims of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by United Nations Staff and Related Personnel,

Emphasizing the need to enhance international cooperation to ensure the criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission,

Recalling its resolution 61/29 of 4 December 2006, by which it established the Ad Hoc Committee on criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission,

Having considered at its previous sessions the report of the Group of Legal Experts established by the Secretary-General pursuant to its resolution 59/300 and the reports of the Ad Hoc Committee, as well as the note by the Secretariat and the reports of the Secretary-General on criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission,

Recalling its resolutions 62/63 of 6 December 2007, 63/119 of 11 December 2008 and 64/110 of 16 December 2009,

Recalling also its decision that, bearing in mind its resolutions 62/63 and 63/119, the consideration of the report of the Group of Legal Experts, in particular its legal aspects, taking into account the views of Member States and the information contained in the note by the Secretariat, shall be continued during its sixty-seventh session in the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee,

Convinced of the continuing need for the United Nations and its Member States to urgently take strong and effective steps to ensure the criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission in the interest of justice,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Strongly urges States to take all appropriate measures to ensure that crimes by United Nations officials and experts on mission do not go unpunished and that the perpetrators of such crimes are brought to justice, without prejudice to the privileges and immunities of such persons and the United Nations under international law, and in accordance with international human rights standards, including due process;

3. Strongly urges all States to consider establishing to the extent that they have not yet done so jurisdiction, particularly over crimes of a serious nature, as known in their existing domestic criminal laws, committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission, at least where the conduct as defined in the law of the State establishing jurisdiction also constitutes a crime under the laws of the host State;

4. Encourages all States to cooperate with each other and with the United Nations in the exchange of information and in facilitating the conduct of investigations and, as appropriate, the prosecution of United Nations officials and experts on mission who are alleged to have committed crimes of a serious nature, in accordance with their domestic laws and applicable United Nations rules and regulations, fully respecting due process rights, as well as to consider strengthening the capacities of their national authorities to investigate and prosecute such crimes;

5. Also encourages all States:

- (a) To afford each other assistance in connection with criminal investigations or criminal or extradition proceedings in respect of crimes of a serious nature committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission, including assistance in obtaining evidence at their disposal, in accordance with their domestic law or any treaties or other arrangements on extradition and mutual legal assistance that may exist between them;

- (b) In accordance with their domestic law, to explore ways and means of facilitating the possible use of information and material obtained from the United Nations for purposes of criminal proceedings initiated in their territory for the prosecution of crimes of a serious nature committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission, bearing in mind due process considerations;

(c) In accordance with their domestic law, to provide effective protection for victims of, witnesses to, and others who provide information in relation to, crimes of a serious nature alleged to have been committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission and to facilitate access by victims to victim assistance programmes, without prejudice to the rights of the alleged offender, including those relating to due process;

(d) In accordance with their domestic law, to explore ways and means of responding adequately to requests by host States for support and assistance in order to enhance their capacity to conduct effective investigations in respect of crimes of a serious nature alleged to have been committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission;

6. Requests the Secretariat to continue to ensure that requests to Member States seeking personnel to serve as experts on mission make States aware of the expectation that persons who serve in that capacity should meet high standards in their conduct and behaviour and be aware that certain conduct may amount to a crime for which they may be held accountable;

7. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to take such other practical measures as are within his authority to strengthen existing training on United Nations standards of conduct, including through predeployment and in-mission induction training for United Nations officials and experts on mission;

8. Reiterates its decision that, bearing in mind its resolutions 62/63 and 63/119, the consideration of the report of the Group of Legal Experts, in particular its legal aspects, taking into account the views of Member States and the information contained in the note by the Secretariat, shall be continued during its sixty-seventh session in the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to bring credible allegations that reveal that a crime may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission to the attention of the States against whose nationals such allegations are made and to request from those States an indication of the status of their efforts to investigate and, as appropriate, prosecute crimes of a serious nature, as well as the types of appropriate assistance that States may wish to receive from the Secretariat for the purposes of such investigations and prosecutions;

10. Urges States to provide to the Secretary-General at the appropriate time information on their handling of the credible allegations brought to their attention by the Secretary-General in accordance with paragraph 9 above;

11. Requests the United Nations, when its investigations into allegations suggest that crimes of a serious nature may have been committed by United Nations officials or experts on mission, to consider any appropriate measures that may facilitate the possible use of information and material for purposes of criminal proceedings initiated by States, bearing in mind due process considerations;

12. Encourages the United Nations, when allegations against United Nations officials or experts on mission are determined by a United Nations administrative investigation to be unfounded, to take appropriate measures, in the interests of the Organization, to restore the credibility and the reputation of such officials and experts on mission;

13. Urges the United Nations to continue cooperating with States exercising jurisdiction in order to provide them, within the framework of the relevant rules of international law and agreements governing activities of the United Nations, with information and material for purposes of criminal proceedings initiated by States;

14. Emphasizes that the United Nations, in accordance with the applicable rules of the Organization, should take no action that would retaliate against or intimidate United Nations officials and experts on mission who report allegations concerning crimes of a serious nature committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission;

15. Takes note with appreciation of the information provided by Governments in response to its resolutions 62/63, 63/119 and 64/110, and urges Governments to continue taking the measures necessary for the implementation of those resolutions, including their provisions addressing the establishment of jurisdiction, particularly over crimes of a serious nature, as known in their existing domestic criminal laws, committed by their nationals while serving as United Nations officials or experts on mission, as well as cooperation among States;

16. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session on the implementation of the present resolution, in particular with respect to paragraphs 3, 5 and 9 above, as well as any practical problems in its implementation, on the basis of information received from Governments and the Secretariat;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his report information on the number and types of credible allegations and any actions taken by the United Nations and its Member States regarding crimes of a serious nature committed by United Nations officials and experts on mission;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Criminal accountability of United Nations officials and experts on mission".

Welfare and recreational needs

At its 2010 session [A/64/19], the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations reaffirmed the importance of welfare and recreation for peacekeeping personnel, bearing in mind that welfare and recreation contributed to strengthening morale and discipline. It believed that the provision of facilities related to welfare and recreation should be prioritized during the establishment of peacekeeping missions. In that regard, the Special Committee expressed its concern with deficiencies faced by the majority of missions in the area of welfare and recreation, as stated in the 2009 report of the Secretary-General [YUN 2009, p. 97], and looked forward to the consideration by the Fifth Committee of the report and its recommendations.

Death and disability

The Special Committee [A/64/19] expressed concern that the United Nations death and disability claims process for peacekeeping personnel was overly cumbersome, lengthy and lacking in transparency. It also noted that discrepancies existed between the compensation benefits provided to experts on mission and those provided to members of contingents. The Special Committee in that context recalled section X of General Assembly resolution 61/276 [YUN 2007, p. 81], on death and disability claims, and requested the Secretary-General, in close consultation with troop-contributing countries, to prepare a new proposal to the General Assembly on the review of death and disability benefits.

Training

The Special Committee [A/64/19] reiterated the shared responsibility of Member States and the Secretariat in providing adequately trained personnel with the required professional background, expertise and capabilities according to UN standards. The Special Committee encouraged the Secretariat to facilitate capacity-building efforts through both the application of the “train the trainers” concept and the best use of available resources, including extensive capacity-building programmes led by multilateral and bilateral actors. With regard to the major findings of the strategic training needs assessment [YUN 2009, p. 98], it requested DPKO to identify the critical expertise and training required for peacekeepers and present its findings to the Special Committee by September 2010.

It took note of the ongoing work of the Integrated Training Service concerning the development of a set of minimum training standards and training modules, and welcomed the updating of those training materials with information on the prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse and on HIV/AIDS. The Special Committee requested DPKO to ensure the provision of adequate and updated gender-sensitivity training material to national and regional peacekeeping training centres. The Special Committee noted the sustained increase in the police dimension in a number of missions, and stressed the need to address shortfalls in standing force requirement in the field of police subject to consultations with Member States. The Special Committee welcomed the partnership between the Peace Operations Training Institute and the United Nations-mandated University for Peace, which enabled students to earn an Executive Master of Arts in peace operations through a blending of the Institute’s e-learning and the University’s classroom courses. While recognizing the important role played by non-United Nations partners in the provision of peacekeeping training, the Special Committee underscored the primary role of DPKO’s Division of Policy Evaluation and Training, together with Member States, in developing peacekeeping training standards and advice in the implementation of standards by training partners.

Africa

In 2010, the momentum for restoring durable peace and development in the conflict-torn regions of Africa was bolstered by concerted UN peacekeeping, peacebuilding and conflict prevention, notwithstanding the significant challenges faced. The United Nations increased its support of African peace efforts, particularly by helping develop Africa's institutional capacities to address conflicts and manage peacekeeping operations. To enhance its own efforts to better provide such assistance to Africa, and strengthen its partnership with the African Union (AU), the General Assembly, in June, established the United Nations Office to the African Union by integrating the mandates and functions of the four UN offices operating in Addis Ababa related to peace and security. In July, the Security Council held an open debate on "Optimizing the use of preventive diplomacy tools: prospects and challenges in Africa". It also formalized its consultative meeting with the AU Peace and Security Council to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding, and to find solutions to the challenge of financing AU peace activities. The Council also sent missions to the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) as well as to Uganda and the Sudan to promote peace efforts in those countries. The Office of the Special Adviser on Africa took further steps to strengthen support for Africa's security and development.

At the subregional level, the United Nations continued work with countries in Central Africa and the Great Lakes region to confront threats to peace and security. In March, the Security Council discussed the impact of illicit arms trafficking on peace and security in Central Africa, and called on States in the region to establish mechanisms and regional networks to combat the illicit trafficking in those weapons. In August, the Council welcomed the Secretary-General's intention to establish a UN regional office for Central Africa in Libreville, Gabon, to pursue a common peace consolidation agenda in the subregion. The Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa adopted, in April, the Central African Convention for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Ammunition, and All Parts and Components That Can Be Used for their Manufacture, Repair and Assembly (Kinshasa Convention), and the Implementation Plan in November.

In the DRC, significant progress was made towards implementing the provisions of the 23 March 2009 peace agreements, including planning for legislative and presidential elections. As a result, the United Nations reconfigured the mandate of the United Nations Organization Mission in the DRC, which was replaced by the United Nations Organization Integrated Mission, whose mandate was to operationalize the transition of security responsibilities to the Government and complete its withdrawal by 31 December. That momentum, however, suffered a setback between 30 July and 2 August, with attacks by rebel forces, including the systematic rape of at least 387 people in 13 villages in Walikale territory. In addition, some 923 houses and 42 shops were looted and 116 civilians abducted. In response, the Secretary-General dispatched the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations and his Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict to discuss the challenges faced by UN forces in the protection of civilians in the DRC. The Assistant Secretary-General made recommendations for enhancing that protection.

In Burundi, significant progress was made towards peace and stability. Despite the deep political divide, the country successfully held communal, presidential, legislative, senatorial and collinaire elections between 24 May and 7 September. Incumbent President Pierre Nkurunziza was re-elected with 91 per cent of the vote. In the light of progress made, the Secretary-General recommended that the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB), whose mandate was to expire on 31 December, be succeeded by a scaled-down UN presence, the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB), to support the Government's efforts in consolidating democracy and paving the way for sustainable development.

In the Central African Republic (CAR), concerted efforts continued to implement the recommendations of the 2008 inclusive political dialogue, particularly preparations for holding elections and moving forward the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) process. The elections, scheduled for 16 May, had to be postponed, however, for technical and logistical reasons, thus forcing the National Assembly to amend the Constitution to allow the President and Assembly members to remain in office until elections could be held. The new date for the first round of the presidential and legislative elections was set as 23 January 2011, and a possible second round of presidential and legislative elections on 20 March 2011. Despite delays in the implementation of the DDR programme, progress was made in the development of a national reintegration strategy for former combatants. Meanwhile, the overall security situation in the country remained volatile owing to the ongoing internal rebellion in the north; the activities of road bandits and poachers; the lack of significant progress in DDR; the setbacks in the electoral process; and the presence of foreign rebel elements, including those associated with the Ugandan Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). The United Nations advanced its integration process, as its Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic was established on 1 January.

In the CAR and Chad, the improved security environment led to an agreement between the Secretariat and the Government of Chad according to which, effective 16 May, the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) for the protection of civilians, including for refugees, internally displaced persons (IDPs), returnees and host communities, would cease, and the Government of Chad would assume that responsibility and facilitate the delivery of humanitarian aid and the free movement of humanitarian personnel. Under a revised mandate, MINURCAT would continue to perform the tasks relating to the rule of law, human rights and civil affairs, and mine action assistance, and support the Government's efforts to achieve self-sustainability of the Détachement intégré de sécurité (DIS), established specifically to protect refugees, IDPs and vulnerable civilians, as a professional enforcement entity. A joint Chad/UN working group would develop a plan for the progressive handover to the Government of the administrative, financial and logistical support to DIS. MINURCAT left Chad on 15 December. Meanwhile, relations between the Governments of Chad and the Sudan improved significantly, with the signing of an agreement on 15 January to normalize their bilateral relations. They deployed a joint border force of 3,000 troops. In north-eastern CAR, the Secretary-General proposed that MINURCAT be authorized with a troop strength of 300 to secure the airport in Birao and provide limited extraction operations for humanitarian workers.

The Security Council sent a mission to Uganda to reiterate the Council's support to the improvement of relations among the countries of the region, encourage them to strengthen cooperation, and emphasize support for action against armed groups, particularly LRA.

West Africa showed renewed signs of progress in 2010 in the prevention and resolution of violent conflict and in peacebuilding processes leading to political stability. Despite occasional setbacks in some countries in the region and political fragility, the general trend by the end of the year was in a positive direction. United Nations involvement in guiding and assisting regional nations through mediation and logistical aid was continual, particularly through the United Nations Office for West Africa (UNOWA). In addition, peacekeeping or peacebuilding missions participated in those efforts in Côte d'Ivoire, Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea-Bissau.

UNOWA endeavoured to work with regional and subregional efforts in support of peace and stability, especially with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) and the AU. In December, the Secretary-General recommended that the mandate of UNOWA be extended for a further period of three years, until the end of 2013. He also proposed that its renewed mandate focus on preventive diplomacy, addressing cross-border and cross-cutting threats to peace and security, promotion of good governance and gender, and partnership with regional organizations. The Security Council agreed with those recommendations.

The peace process in Côte d'Ivoire moved forward in 2010 through efforts to implement the 2007 Ouagadougou Political Agreement and its four supplementary accords, which dealt with identification of voters and election processes, reunification of the army, and restoration of State authority throughout the country. The United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) worked with the Government in providing logistical and technical support in preparing elections, and in assisting with disarmament and demobilization of ex-combatants and restoring State authority. The Security Council, in June, redefined the mandate of UNOCI, outlining the mission's responsibilities in monitoring armed groups, preventing hostilities, monitoring the borders, protecting civilians, monitoring the arms embargo, collecting illegal arms, promoting the peace process through public information, promoting human rights, and supporting humanitarian assistance. In regard to the electoral process, it was mandated to support the organization of free, fair and transparent elections, to monitor pre-election activities, and to contribute to identification of the population. Two rounds of presidential elections were held in late 2010. The first, on 31 October, left no candidate with a majority, and a second round was held on 28 November. The country's Independent Electoral Commission announced that Alassane Ouattara had been elected, defeating Laurent Gbagbo by 6 per cent. Shortly after the announcement of those results on 2 December, forces and militias loyal to Mr. Gbagbo and his political party resorted to violent attacks against communities believed to be strongholds for President Ouattara and against his headquarters in the capital. The uncompleted tasks of disarmament and reintegration of former combatants and reunification of the country contributed to a tense atmosphere as the year closed.

Progress was seen in Liberia, where the Government continued its efforts to improve governance and security, consolidate State authority, manage natural resources, address human rights issues, and build a better economy. Assistance in those efforts was provided by the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) and other international and regional organizations. UNMIL continued to support Liberia in the implementation of the 2003 Agreement on Ceasefire and Cessation of Hostilities. Liberia requested to be added to the agenda of the Peacebuilding Commission and, when accepted, specified rule of law, security sector reform and national reconciliation as priority areas to the Commission. UNMIL completed the third stage of its drawdown in May 2010, reducing its military personnel to 8,102 by year's end. In anticipation of the eventual withdrawal of UNMIL after elections, joint planning for the transition of security responsibilities from UNMIL to national authorities began. The security situation, while stable, was fragile as a result of disputes over land and resources, as well as ethnic and communal tensions.

Sierra Leone continued in 2010 to work towards the goals of peace consolidation and economic recovery, in line with the programme laid out in the President's Agenda for Change and in tandem with the Joint Vision of the United Nations Family for Sierra Leone, setting peacebuilding priorities for 2009–2012. The Government was assisted in its efforts to shift from peacekeeping efforts to focus on peacebuilding and development by the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone. In September, the Security Council lifted the last remaining sanctions against Sierra Leone, affirming that the Government had fully re-established control over its territory and former rebel fighters had been disarmed and demobilized. The Special Court for Sierra Leone drew close to concluding its trials of those bearing the greatest responsibility for serious violations of humanitarian laws committed in the country since 1996. The trial of the former Liberian President, Charles Taylor, which opened in July 2009, remained the only case before the court, and closing arguments were scheduled for February 2011.

Guinea-Bissau encountered a setback on 1 April in its peace process and return to constitutional order, when elements within the armed forces, led by the Deputy Chief of General Staff, detained the Prime Minister and the Chief of General Staff and other senior military officers. They were released nine months later. An unprecedented violation of the UN premises on that date resulted in the extraction of the former Chief of Defence Staff, who had sought asylum at the United Nations Integrated Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNIOGBIS) headquarters. Despite those circumstances, the Mission and other organizations continued to work with the Government towards consolidating peace. The Peacebuilding Commission sent a delegation to Guinea-Bissau that made recommendations on ways the international community could assist the country to achieve stability, protect and provide basic services for its people, and increase economic growth. Drug trafficking remained a concern.

Cameroon and Nigeria continued to cooperate in implementing the 2002 ruling of the International Court of Justice on the land and maritime boundary between the two countries through the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission. The Commission continued its work in determining the joint border, and its field work in demarcating the border. By the end of the year, the two countries agreed on 1,466 kilometres of the total length of an estimated 1,950 kilometre land boundary, not taking into account an additional section of 95 kilometres still being assessed. The Commission also adopted recommendations for the formulation of a "resource clause" on off-shore petroleum fields straddling the maritime boundary, paving the way for cross-boundary cooperation on oil and gas.

The situation in Guinea remained unsettled at the beginning of the year, due to the absence of President Moussa Dadis Camara, who remained in Morocco for medical treatment. Mr. Camara had established a National Council for Democracy and Development (CNDD) that ruled the country with a group of military officers, and in his absence, Vice President Sekouba Konaté served as interim President. In mid-January 2010, Mr. Camara and General Konaté met in Ouagadougou with President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, who acted as mediator in the political discussions on Guinea. A Joint Declaration issued at the end of the meeting set out a list of principles for planning a new government, including a return to civilian rule by elections within six months, and setting up a transitional government. The situation evolved in a generally positive direction following the Declaration. The United Nations joined regional organizations in assisting the transitional government through the process leading to presidential elections—the first democratic election in Guinea's history. The first round of elections was held on 27 June. After several postponements, a required run-off was held on 7 November. Provisional results were released shortly thereafter and were declared by the candidate Cellou Dalein Diallo to be fraudulent. On 3 December, however, the Supreme Court confirmed Alpha Condé as President-elect, and later Mr. Diallo announced he accepted the decision.

The political situation in Mauritania remained tense due to lack of progress in political discussions between the Government installed in 2009 and the opposition. The Special Representative for West Africa travelled to Mauritania to discuss the national dialogue process, insecurity and terrorism in the Sahel, and prospects for regional cooperation on those issues. The talks confirmed that mistrust between the Government and the opposition remained, and that there was no consensus on the terms of reference envisaged for national dialogue.

The opposition insisted on the need to implement the 2009 Dakar Framework Agreement, while the Government wanted no reference to that agreement.

The United Nations continued to work for lasting peace in the Horn of Africa. In the Sudan, the parties to the 2005 Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) made progress on a number of fronts. National elections successfully conducted in April marked a milestone in CPA implementation. Discussions on holding the Southern Sudan and Abyei referendums continued, with the parties showing renewed commitment to negotiating the post-referendum process and structure. While preparations for the referendum in Southern Sudan, scheduled for January 2011, gained momentum with the establishment of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission, arrangements for the Abyei referendum were behind schedule, exacerbating an already tense situation. In September, the Secretary-General appointed a panel to monitor both referendum processes.

The United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS) continued to support the resolution of core CPA issues. In April, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNMIS for another 12 months.

The commitment of the international community to CPA implementation and to a peaceful, comprehensive and inclusive resolution of the situation in Darfur was reaffirmed by a Security Council mission to the region in October. The Governments of the Sudan and Chad improved their relations by signing a protocol on border security, and in February and March, respectively, the Government of the Sudan signed separate agreements with the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM) and the newly formed Liberation and Justice Movement, setting parameters for peace negotiations. Earlier in the year, the elections in April were conducted without any major incidents, but afterwards violence flared up again, making May the deadliest month since the establishment of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID). Tribal conflict, displacements, criminality and human rights violations drove tens of thousands of Darfurians from their homes. In separate attacks in May and June in Darfur, five UNAMID peacekeepers were killed.

In July, the Security Council extended UNAMID's mandate for one year, and later strengthened the arms embargo to ensure that States provided the necessary end-user documentation to prevent breaches of prior resolutions when exporting arms to the Sudan.

With a view to enhancing civil society participation in the peace process, UNAMID and the Government of Qatar jointly organized in Doha in July the second conference of Darfur civil society representatives. In September, the Government of the Sudan endorsed a new political and security strategy for Darfur aimed at facilitating participation and enhancing local ownership of the peace process, to be supplemented by socio-economic development and support for the return of the some 2 million internally displaced persons (IDPs). In December, JEM agreed to resume negotiations with the Government on a ceasefire, while relations between the Government and the Sudan Liberation Army-Minni Minawi deteriorated to the point that Minni Minawi was declared an enemy of the Government.

The situation in Somalia remained volatile, despite progress in implementing the 2008 Djibouti Peace Agreement. In March, the Security Council condemned continuing violations of its arms embargoes on Somalia and Eritrea, and extended for 12 months the mandate of the Group monitoring embargo compliance. Through its newly renamed "Security Council Committee pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009)", the Council oversaw the sanctions regime against both countries.

As the number of piracy attacks off the coast of Somalia continued to rise, together with related levels of violence, the Council intensified its efforts to enhance international and regional cooperation in bringing pirates to justice. The African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) continued to support the transitional federal institutions in their efforts to stabilize the country; facilitate the provision of humanitarian assistance; and create conditions conducive to stabilization, reconstruction and development. In December, the Security Council extended its authorization for AMISOM until 30 September 2011, and approved a troop number of 12,000.

In June, Djibouti and Eritrea decided to resolve, through a negotiated settlement, their border conflict over Ras Doumeira and Doumeira Island, which had erupted in 2008. The administrative liquidation of the United Nations Mission to Ethiopia and Eritrea, which was terminated in 2008, continued. The Eritrea-Ethiopia Claims Commission completed its mandate.

Negotiations towards a lasting political settlement to the question of Western Sahara continued, but the two parties to the dispute concerning the Territory—Morocco and the Frente Polisario para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (Frente Polisario)—remained far apart. The United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) monitored compliance with the 1991 ceasefire between the parties. The Security Council in April extended MINURSO's mandate for another year, until April 2011.

Promotion of peace in Africa

In 2010, the United Nations continued to work towards promoting sustainable peace and development in Africa, mainly by increasing its support of African peace efforts through the development of Africa's institutional capacities to address conflicts and manage peacekeeping operations. To enhance its own efforts to better provide such support and strengthen its partnership with the African Union (AU), the General Assembly, in June, established the United Nations Office to the African Union by integrating the mandates and functions of the four UN offices operating in Addis Ababa related to peace and security. In July, the Security Council held an open debate on "Optimizing the use of preventive diplomacy tools: prospects and challenges in Africa". It also formalized its consultative meeting with the AU Peace and Security Council to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding, and to find solutions to the challenge of financing AU peace activities. The Council also sent missions to the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) as well as to Uganda and the Sudan to promote peace efforts in those countries.

Conflict prevention and resolution

Security Council consideration. On 16 July [S/PV. 6360], the Security Council met to consider "Optimizing the use of preventive diplomacy tools: prospects and challenges in Africa". Nigeria, the Council Presidency, in a concept note [S/2010/371], said that the debate should consider how to achieve agreement on a coherent policy strategy for preventive diplomacy to complement the Organization's peacekeeping model in Africa; strategies for better resourcing preventive diplomacy activities; and how best to mobilize the Ad Hoc Working Group on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa to launch a concrete initiative, in partnership with key regional actors, for achieving optimal use of preventive diplomacy tools in pre-conflict situations. In presidential statement S/PRST/2010/14 (see p. 43) of the same date, Council members underlined the importance of engaging the potential and capacities and capabilities of the UN Secretariat, regional and subregional organizations as well as Governments in preventive diplomacy, and recognized the importance of enhancing efforts to ensure predictable, coherent and timely financial support to optimize the use of preventive diplomacy tools. The Council requested the Secretary-General to submit recommendations on how best to optimize the use of preventive diplomacy tools within the UN system and in cooperation with regional and subregional organizations and actors.

Working Group. The Ad Hoc Working Group on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa, established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 93] to monitor the implementation of Security Council resolutions relating to its role in conflict prevention and resolution in Africa, submitted a December report on its 2010 activities [S/2010/694]. On 18 June, the Group adopted its programme of work. On 20 July, it was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs on the proposed establishment of a United Nations Office for Central Africa (see p. 118). Group members and the Under-Secretary-General exchanged views on streamlining the mandate of the proposed office, within the context of strengthening cooperation between the AU and the United Nations, and complementing the conflict resolution and prevention efforts of the Economic Community of Central African States and the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region, as well as other subregional organizations. On 16 August, the Group held an open interactive panel discussion on the role of conflict early warning mechanisms, especially how they could be optimally utilized, the challenges being faced, and how the United Nations and the international community could help the AU and its subregional organizations in making them function more effectively. The Group also held a panel discussion on 2 December on the strategic partnership between the AU and the United Nations on security sector reform. It was informed that AU member States had provided input at the subregional level to the security sector reform policy framework, which was in the final stages of consideration before being adopted.

On 21 December [S/2010/654], the Security Council agreed that the Group would continue its work until 31 December 2011.

Relationship between the United Nations and regional organizations

Cooperation between the AU and UN system

On 9 July, the Security Council and the AU Peace and Security Council held an informal consultative meeting in New York to review cooperation in conflict prevention and resolution, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, including the maintenance of constitutional order, the promotion of human rights, democracy and the rule of law. In the communiqué transmitted to the Security Council President [S/2010/392], it was indicated that members of both Councils would support national efforts in consolidating democratic governance and combating impunity, provide assistance by way of mediation and other conflict prevention strategies, and implement strategies for lasting regional peace and security. It was agreed that a consultative meeting should be held on a rotational basis annually, no later than the end of June; the agenda, agreed upon in advance, should be focused and allow for follow-up of previously agreed outcome points; the meetings should be substantive; and the host organization would be responsible for preparing and presenting the outcome document.

An addendum to the report [S/2010/392/Add.1] transmitted to the UN Security Council President the communiqué of the 2008 informal consultative meeting [YUN 2008, p. 110].

In his consolidated report on cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations [A/65/382-S/2010/490], the Secretary-General reported that, in 2010, the Department of Political Affairs (DPA) deployed a liaison team with the Southern African Development Community in Gaborone, Botswana, to support conflict prevention and mediation activities, including the establishment and strengthening of the Community's conflict prevention desk and support in electoral assistance. He also reported on cooperation between the United Nations and the AU, especially on the activities of DPA, and the Departments of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) and Field Support (DFS).

United Nations Office to the African Union

The United Nations operated four separate entities in Addis Ababa with separately mandated responsibilities related to peace and security: the United Nations Liaison Office, the African Union Peacekeeping Support Team, the United Nations Planning Team for the African Union Mission in Somalia, and the Joint Support and Coordination Mechanism of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur. In an April report [A/64/762], the Secretary-General proposed the creation of a new office, the United Nations Office to the African Union (UNOAU), through consolidating the operation of the four separate entities. He explained that the proposed Office would enhance the partnership between the two organizations in peace and security, provide UN advice to the AU on both long-term capacity-building and short-term operational support, and streamline the UN presence in Addis Ababa to be more cost-effective and efficient. The Head of UNOAU would be at the Assistant Secretary-General level and report to the Secretary-General through DPA, keeping DPKO and DFS informed of daily administrative and management issues. It would comprise a Political Affairs Unit, which would liaise with and strengthen cooperation between the AU and the United Nations in peace and security, and provide technical advice and support in mediation, good offices and conflict prevention, elections, disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) and public information; an Operational Planning and Advisory Unit to provide technical advice and support in the areas of military and police operations, mine action and security-related issues; and an Administrative Planning and Advisory Unit to support the AU Commission in the development of its institutional and operational capacities.

The budget for UNOAU was estimated at $10,642,000, comprising $8,875,900 to be funded from the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and $1,766,100 to be funded from the 2010–2011 programme budget. It provided for 42 international staff, 22 national staff and one UN Volunteer.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a May report [A/64/792], welcomed the proposal to bring together the various activities to support the AU in peace and security under unified leadership. It recommended approval of the Assistant Secretary-General post for the Head of the new Office. In its view, however, the new Office lacked specificity. ACABQ recommended that a clear timetable and benchmarks to measure progress be developed, and that the Secretary-General report to the Assembly on progress achieved in the context of future budget submissions. ACABQ also considered the request for 32 of the 65 posts proposed for mission support to be disproportionate, and asked the Secretary-General to review those requirements and report to the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session with a streamlined proposal, as well as a progress report addressing the gaps in the current proposal, taking into account the Committee's comments. ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve $7,672,300 for the support account for peacekeeping operations, in addition to the amount to be approved by the Assembly under the proposed support account budgets for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and appropriate $656,600 under the 2010–2011 programme budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/64/835], adopted resolution 64/288 without vote [agenda items 132, 146, 161 & 163].

Financing of the United Nations Office to the African Union

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 63/310 of 14 September 2009 on cooperation between the United Nations and the African Union,

Reaffirming the need to pursue and further strengthen the ongoing measures to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of United Nations and African Union cooperation,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the budget for the United Nations Office to the African Union and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

3. Decides to approve the amount of 10,172,500 United States dollars, comprising 8,875,900 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 under the support account for peacekeeping operations and 1,296,600 dollars under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

Financing of the budget estimates

4. Approves the amount of 7,672,300 dollars for the United Nations Office to the African Union to be funded from the support account for peacekeeping operations, in addition to the amount proposed for the budget for the support account for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

5. Decides to prorate the amount in paragraph 4 above among the budgets of the active peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

6. Also decides to reduce by 3,903,100 dollars the amount proposed for the financing of support to the African Union Mission in Somalia for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

7. Further decides to reduce by 6,872,500 dollars the amount proposed for the budget for the African Union–United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

8. Approves the establishment of two new posts (1 Assistant Secretary-General and 1 P-4) and the abolition of one post at the P-3 level (United Nations Liaison Office) under section 1 (Overall policymaking, direction and coordination) of the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

9. Decides to appropriate a total amount of 187,100 dollars under the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 under section 1 (Overall policymaking, direction and coordination) (156,700 dollars), and under section 36 (Staff assessment) (30,400 dollars), to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1 (Income from staff assessment); the provision would represent a charge against the contingency fund;

10. Also decides to consider at its sixty-fifth session the financing arrangements for the United Nations Office to the African Union, under the item entitled “Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations”, in the context of the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2011 to 30 June 2012.

Appointment. On 13 August [S/2010/434], the Security Council President informed the Secretary-General that Council members took note of his intention, conveyed on 6 August [S/2010/433], to appoint Zachary Muburi-Muita (Kenya) as the Head of UNOAU.

Support for AU peacekeeping operations

Report of Secretary-General. In October [A/65/510-S/2010/514], the Secretary-General submitted a progress report on support to AU peacekeeping operations authorized by the United Nations, as requested by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2009/26 [YUN 2009, p. 109]. The report examined the progress made in strengthening the strategic relationship between the United Nations and the AU, and described the operational relationship between the two organizations, including initiatives to enhance institutional capacity. It also listed challenges in financing AU peace support operations and highlighted initiatives taken by the AU Commission to reform and enhance its financial management and accountability mechanisms, both in general and with respect to peace support operations.

According to the Secretary-General, over the previous year, communication and collaboration between the Security Council and the AU Peace and Security Council had improved, especially through the annual consultative meetings focusing on overall support by the United Nations for the ten-year capacity-building programme [YUN 2006, p. 119] and how best to enhance the predictability, sustainability and flexibility of financing the AU’s peace and security capability. The Secretariat was working closely with UNOAU (see p. 111) to expedite its full operationalization. The effects of the integration would need to be evaluated as the Office evolved, and the Secretariat would continue to explore further areas of adjustment to enhance its effectiveness.

At the strategic level, the Chairperson of the AU Commission, Jean Ping, and the Secretary-General convened the inaugural meeting of a joint task force on peace and security on 25 September, focused on furthering the strategic partnership on peace and security. At its 28 September meeting, the task force discussed strategic issues and country situations that affected the work of both organizations. In addition, as part of the framework for the 2010 Year of Peace and Security programme activities, a high-level retreat on the promotion of peace, security and stability (Cairo, Egypt, 26–28 August), attended by senior UN and AU officials together with partner organizations, discussed cross-cutting issues relevant to conflict prevention and resolution and peacebuilding, including unconstitutional changes of government; election-related violence and disputes; peace, justice and reconciliation; security sector reform; management of natural resources and wealth sharing; and challenges linked to the implementation of peace agreements.

The operational partnership between the two organizations in peace and security was realized through implementation of the framework for the AU ten-year capacity-building programme and support for the African peace and security architecture, as well as short- and medium- to long-term initiatives. The two organizations were also working together through various mechanisms in country-specific contexts. The greatest challenge facing the AU in enhancing its institutional capacity to undertake peacekeeping operations, however, was securing sustainable, predictable and flexible financing. AU peace support operations authorized by the Security Council were funded primarily through voluntary contributions, which did not ensure a sufficient degree of predictability. Furthermore, relying on UN-assessed contributions for those operations was challenging, as it required a case-by-case authorization by the Security Council, after which the General Assembly determined the scope of the support package and level of assessed contributions. As part of its reform and restructuring efforts, the AU agreed with its partners on a joint financing arrangement to help the AU Commission recruit 133 staff to work on implementing the peace and security programme and reduce dependence on ad hoc, short-term recruitment. The AU Commission also undertook to mobilize resources from among its own members through increased assessment. In addition, as part of its 2010 Year of Peace and Security, the AU was seeking ways to creatively mobilize resources from the private sector and through public-private partnerships.

The Secretary-General observed that the extent to which the Secretariat could fully realize a meaningful strategic partnership with the AU Commission in the quest for regional peace and security would rest on clear guidance and direction from UN legislative bodies, and reiterated the need for the Security Council to enunciate its vision of that strategic partnership, without which efforts to work together would continue to be short-term, ad hoc, more complicated and costly. To ensure that substantive issues were addressed in the annual exchanges between the Security Council and the AU Peace and Security Council and ensure a preparatory and follow-up mechanism, the Secretary-General proposed that the Ad Hoc Working Group on Conflict Prevention and Resolution in Africa could serve as an informal secretariat of the joint meetings, and establish a working group of experts to support consideration and discussion of matters of mutual interest on the agendas of both bodies. It was also critical that the efforts of the Secretariat and the AU Commission were complementary, with realistic benchmarks and timelines, and that the AU identified an interim mechanism to manage and sustain peace operations until the African Standby Force was operational. In addition to African efforts to broaden the resource base and encourage additional resource mobilization on the continent, efforts needed to be made to enhance contributions to the African Union Peace Fund and ensure their predictability and sustainability.

The Secretary-General said that he would submit within six months a report that would define the Secretariat's strategic vision for UN-AU cooperation in peace and security and examine the increasing variety of models for peacekeeping in Africa.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 October [meeting 6409], following consultations among Security Council Members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/21 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls its previous relevant resolutions and the statements by its President which underscore the importance of developing effective partnerships between the United Nations and regional organizations, in particular the African Union, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant statutes of the regional organizations.

The Council reiterates its primary responsibility under the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security, and recalls that cooperation with regional and subregional organizations in matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security and consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter can improve collective security.

The Council welcomes the continuing important efforts and enhanced peacekeeping role of the African Union and its subregional organizations, consistent with Council resolutions and decisions, to prevent, mediate and settle conflicts on the African continent, and, taking into account the increasing importance of conflict prevention, notes with appreciation the positive efforts made towards peace and security in Africa.

The Council recognizes that, in deploying peacekeeping operations authorized by the Council, the African Union is contributing towards the maintenance of international peace and security, in a manner consistent with the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Charter.

The Council recalls the statement by its President of 26 October 2009, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit a progress report on United Nations support to the African Union when it undertakes peacekeeping operations authorized by the United Nations, following his report of 18 September 2009, which detailed ways in which effective support could be provided by the United Nations, including an assessment of the recommendations contained in the report of the African Union-United Nations panel on modalities for support to African Union peacekeeping operations.

The Council welcomes the progress report of the Secretary-General on support to African Union peacekeeping operations authorized by the United Nations.

The Council reaffirms the importance of and its commitment to strengthening its partnership with the Peace and Security Council of the African Union, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter, by reviewing the degree of cooperation between them with regard to conflict prevention and resolution, peacekeeping, peacebuilding, including the maintenance of constitutional order, the promotion of human rights, democracy and the rule of law in Africa, as stressed in the communiqués of their members, including that of 9 July 2010.

The Security Council reiterates the need for further enhancement of regular interaction, coordination and consultation between the United Nations and the African Union on matters of mutual interest. The Council welcomes in this regard the inaugural meeting of the United Nations-African Union Joint Task Force on Peace and Security, held in New York on 25 September 2010, and encourages the Task Force to focus on strategic and country-specific issues on the continent of interest to both organizations.

The Council welcomes the establishment, on 1 July 2010, of the United Nations Office to the African Union, which integrates the mandates of the former United Nations Liaison Office to the African Union, the African Union Peacekeeping Support Team, the United Nations Planning Team for the African Union Mission in Somalia, and the support elements of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur Joint Support and Coordination Mechanism, as a concrete step in the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations Secretariat and the African Union Commission.

The Council underscores the importance of expediting the implementation, in close consultation with other international partners, of the 2006 United Nations-African Union Ten-year Capacity-building Programme for the African Union focusing mainly on peace and security, in particular the operationalization of the African Standby Force and the Continental Early Warning System. The Council supports the ongoing efforts to strengthen the African Peace and Security Architecture and reiterates its call for the international community, particularly donors, to fulfil their commitments as endorsed in the 2005 World Summit Outcome.

The Council reiterates that regional organizations have the responsibility to secure human, financial, logistical and other resources for their organizations, including through contributions by their members and support from partners. The Council welcomes the valuable financial support provided by the African Union's partners towards its peacekeeping operations, including through the African Peace Facility, and calls upon all partners to render more support.

The Council reaffirms its resolution 1809(2008), in which it recognizes the need to enhance the predictability, sustainability and flexibility of financing for regional organizations when they undertake peacekeeping under a United Nations mandate.

The Council notes the observation of the Secretary-General in his report that, while the African Union is taking critical measures to enhance its institutional capacity to undertake peacekeeping operations with the support of United Nations and key partners, the issue of securing sustainable, predictable and flexible financing remains a key challenge. The Council expresses its determination to continue working, in accordance with its responsibilities under the Charter, towards a more predictable and sustainable solution to these funding challenges.

The Council notes the continuing efforts of the African Union to enhance its institutional capacity to enable it to effectively plan, manage and deploy peacekeeping operations.

The Council, in this regard, calls upon the African Union to work towards the implementation of a long-term and comprehensive capacity-building strategic framework in consultation with the United Nations and other international partners.

The Council notes the intention of the Secretary-General to submit a report within six months which will, inter alia, define the strategic vision of the Secretariat for United Nations-African Union cooperation in peace and security. The Council looks forward to this report, which should take into account the lessons learned from the various experiences, particularly in the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur and the African Union Mission in Somalia.

African peacekeeping capacities

At its 2010 substantive session (New York, 22 February–19 March) [A/64/19], the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations discussed the enhancement of African peacekeeping capacities. The Committee underlined the need for a strategic and effective relationship between the United Nations and the AU in the context of peacekeeping operations, and re-emphasized the importance of increasing and enhancing AU capacity in conflict prevention, mediation and peacekeeping operations. There was a need for coherent and effective coordination of support provided by multiple stakeholders to the AU in peacekeeping capacity-building. The Committee emphasized the importance of implementing the joint action plan for UN support to the AU in peacekeeping and the AU ten-year capacity-building plan [YUN 2006, p. 340]. The Committee stressed the importance of strengthening the AU Peace and Security Architecture, and recognized the potential contribution of the African Standby Force to peace and security in Africa.

The Committee underlined the need to identify ways to address AU peacekeeping requirements at the continental level, and recommended the enhancement of an effective partnership with the AU to improve the planning, deployment and management of African peacekeeping operations. The Committee recognized the need to enhance the predictability, sustainability and flexibility of financing of peacekeeping operations undertaken under a UN mandate. It reaffirmed the need to strengthen training and logistics in Africa for effective and secure peacekeeping, so as to enhance UN-AU cooperation in peacekeeping and the deployment of UN peacekeeping missions in Africa, thereby supporting AU peacekeeping capacity-building and ensuring cost-effectiveness. The Committee therefore stressed the importance of close coordination between all international partners and donors supporting AU capacity-building, including through enhancing the effectiveness of training centres in Africa.

The Security Council, in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/1 of 13 January (see p. 47), underlined the importance of regional and subregional organizations enhancing their peacekeeping capabilities and the value of international support to their efforts, in particular to the AU, in terms of the 2006 United Nations-African Union Ten-Year Capacity-Building Programme for the African Union.

Office of the Special Adviser on Africa

In 2010, the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa (OSAA), established by General Assembly resolution 57/7 [YUN 2002, p. 910], took further steps to strengthen international support for Africa's development and security through its advocacy and analytical work; assist the Secretary-General in improving coherence and coordination of UN system support to Africa; and facilitate global intergovernmental deliberations on Africa, in particular relating to the New Partnership for Africa's Development [YUN 2001, p. 900].

In connection with the comprehensive review of the recommendations contained in the 1998 report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa [YUN 1998, p. 66], OSAA organized the civil society consultations on the comprehensive review of the recommendations contained in the report (Nairobi, 10–11 June), which brought together 30 participants from all over Africa.

Implementation of Secretary-General's 1998 recommendations on promotion of peace

In 2010, the General Assembly continued its consideration of the implementation of the recommendations contained in the 1998 report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa [YUN 1998, p. 66], as reported on by the Secretary-General [YUN 2009, p. 115].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 February [meeting 70], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/252 [draft: A/64/L.39/Rev.1 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 63 (b)].

Implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling the report of the Open-ended Ad Hoc Working Group on the Causes of Conflict and the Promotion of Durable Peace and Sustainable Development in Africa, its resolution 53/92 of 7 December 1998 and subsequent annual resolutions, including resolutions 60/223 of 23 December 2005, 61/230 of 22 December 2006, 62/275 of 11 September 2008 and 63/304 of 23 July 2009, as well as its resolutions 62/179 of 19 December 2007 and 63/267 of 31 March 2009 on the New Partnership for Africa's Development, and 59/213 of 20 December 2004, 61/296 of 17 September 2007 and 63/310 of 14 September 2009 on cooperation between the United Nations and the African Union,

Recalling also, in this context, Security Council resolutions 1809(2008) of 16 April 2008 on peace and security in Africa, 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 and 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008 on women and peace and security, 1366(2001) of 30 August 2001 on the role of the Council in the prevention of armed conflicts, 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 on children and armed conflict, 1625(2005) of 14 September 2005 on strengthening the effectiveness of the role of the Council in conflict prevention, particularly in Africa, and 1631(2005) of 17 October 2005 on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and subregional organizations in maintaining international peace and security,

Recalling further the 2005 World Summit Outcome, through which world leaders reaffirmed their commitment to addressing the special needs of Africa, and its resolution 60/265 of 30 June 2006,

Recalling the political declaration on Africa's development needs adopted at the high-level meeting on Africa's development needs on 22 September 2008,

1. Takes note of the progress report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations contained in his report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa, and welcomes recent developments in addressing such causes and other efforts in conflict prevention, peacemaking, peacekeeping and post-conflict peacebuilding undertaken by African countries, African regional organizations and the United Nations system;

2. Reaffirms the need to strengthen the synergy between Africa's economic and social development programmes and its peace and security agenda;

3. Also reaffirms its commitment to the full and speedy implementation of the provisions of the political declaration on Africa's development needs;

4. Further reaffirms its request that the Secretary-General submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report in accordance with paragraph 24 of resolution 63/304.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 63/304 [YUN 2009, p. 112], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/65/152-S/2010/526] on implementation of the recommendations contained in his 1998 report on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa [YUN 1998, p. 66]. According to the report, the previous decade had witnessed outstanding improvements in Africa, especially institutional progress. The overall improvement in the security landscape was one of the consequences of the significant progress in governance, democratization and leadership and the holding of reasonably transparent elections. The continent had also experienced significant economic growth and made substantial improvements in social development, although results varied from country to country. The previous decade had also witnessed progress in macroeconomic fiscal policies and structural reforms, including better management of debt and substantial debt relief. The continent continued to face the challenge of creating productive and decent employment and improving the quality of life of its people. The increased appointment of mediators and their effectiveness in emerging or ongoing conflicts had a positive impact on peacemaking, and the establishment of the Panel of the Wise responded to the call in the 1998 report for the appointment of special mediators and pre-empted the possible proliferation of mediators with overlapping mandates. At the regional level, the regional economic communities had evolved their own early warning and conflict prevention systems.

Since 1998, the exponential increase in peacekeeping operations was a testament to the commitment of the General Assembly and the Security Council to addressing the consequences of armed conflict in Africa and their preparedness to authorize the necessary resources, and reflected the increasing commitment of African institutions to exercise their influence, such as the engagement of ECOWAS in conflict resolution in West Africa and the AU in Darfur, and of individual countries as well, as illustrated by the engagement of Ethiopia, Mozambique and South Africa in Burundi. International support for the development of the African Peace and Security Architecture, and the African Standby Force in particular, was essential if Africa was to have the capacity to respond to the continent's security challenges. UN agencies continued to promote peacebuilding, with initiatives aimed at strengthening policy coherence, including the integrated mission planning process, the peacebuilding contact group, and the peace and security cluster of the regional coordination mechanism to support the AU in the reconstruction and development of post-conflict countries.

The Secretary-General said that whereas the impact of violent conflicts and poverty in Africa should not be underestimated, it was necessary to engage with the continent in a new way that recognized the rapid changes it was undergoing. The United Nations needed to acknowledge its limitations, assess its comparative advantages and establish appropriate partnerships to enhance the capacity of regional organizations as leading actors in peace, relief and development. It was time to revisit the effectiveness of its strategies, assess the impact of current policies, map out the actors and institutions critical to mobilizing resources to meet the remaining challenges, and take advantage of new opportunities. The Secretary-General undertook to engage the UN system, through the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force on Africa, to reflect on approaches to many of the issues raised in the report and to further consult with relevant partners.

Security Council missions to Africa

In 2010, the Security Council authorized two missions to Africa: one to the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) (13–16 May), and the other to Uganda and the Sudan (4–10 October).

The Mission to the DRC, led by Gérard Araud (France), had as its central objective to discuss the mandate and configuration of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the future of the UN presence in the country. On 19 May [S/PV.6317], the Council considered the mission's report [S/2010/288] (see p. 123).

The mission to Uganda and the Sudan, led by Ruhakana Rugunda (Uganda), Mark Lyall Grant (United Kingdom) and Susan Rice (United States), aimed to support Uganda's contribution to the African Union Mission in Somalia; express its encouragement regarding the improvement of relations among countries of the region and increased regional cooperation in addressing the security challenges posed by the Lord's Resistance Army; and discuss the status of implementation of Sudan's Comprehensive Peace Agreement [YUN 2005, p. 301]. On 14 October [S/PV.6397], the Council considered the mission's report [S/2011/7] (see p. 247).

Central Africa and Great Lakes region

Great Lakes region

International Conference on Great Lakes Region

The International Conference on the Great Lakes Region convened a mini-summit on 1 February, on the sidelines of the African Union (AU) summit in Addis Ababa, during which the Secretary-General's Special Envoy for the Great Lakes Region, former President Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria, and his co-facilitator, former President Benjamin Mkapa of the United Republic of Tanzania, presented their final report on the progress and remaining challenges with regard to the implementation of the 23 March Agreements [YUN 2009, p. 120], and the security and humanitarian situation in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC).

The Conference also organized a special summit meeting on the illegal exploitation of natural resources on 15 December, in Lusaka, Zambia. The Conference adopted the Lusaka Declaration, in which Central African leaders expressed concern about the negative impact of the illegal exploitation of natural resources, depriving states of resources needed to fight poverty and aggravating environmental degradation; committed themselves to fighting it through national, regional and international legal means; and approved six tools to curb it: a regional certification mechanism, harmonization of national legislation, a regional database on mineral flows, formalization of the artisanal mining sector, promotion of the extractive industry transparency initiative, and a whistle-blowing mechanism.

Illicit arms trafficking

On 19 March [S/PV.6288], the Security Council met to discuss the impact of illicit arms trafficking on peace and security in the Central African region. In a concept paper [S/2010/143] submitted by Gabon, it was indicated that the direct threat of the use of light weapons was forcing millions of persons to flee their homes, resulting in a growing number of refugees and displaced persons in Angola, Gabon, Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Chad and Uganda, and was encouraging the recruitment of child soldiers and sexual violence against women and girls. As part of the measures to limit the impact, Central African countries had decided to elaborate a binding legal instrument, which was to be considered at the thirtieth meeting of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in April (see p. 118). It was hoped that the Council would monitor developments in the illicit trade in arms in the subregion and discuss innovative measures for combating and eradicating the phenomenon.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Also on 19 March [meeting 6288], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/6 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reaffirms the statements by its President of 24 September 1999, 31 August 2001, 31 October 2002 and 29 June 2007, and its resolution 1209(1998) of 19 November 1998, welcomes all initiatives taken by Member States following the adoption by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects and takes note of the process towards an arms trade treaty.

The Council is gravely concerned about the illicit manufacture, transfer and circulation of small arms and light weapons and their excessive accumulation and uncontrolled spread in many regions of the world, particularly in the subregion of Central Africa, which have a wide range of humanitarian and socio-economic consequences, in particular for the security of civilians, by fuelling armed conflict, which in turn exacerbates the risks of gender-based violence and recruitment of child soldiers and poses a serious threat to peace, reconciliation, safety, security, stability and sustainable development at the local, national, regional and international levels.

The Council, while acknowledging the right of all States to manufacture, import, export, transfer and retain conventional arms for self-defence and security needs consistent with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, underlines the vital importance of effective regulations and controls of the transparent trade in small arms and light weapons in order to prevent their illegal diversion and re-export.

The Council reiterates that Member States should comply with existing arms embargoes and export bans and take the steps necessary to effectively implement these measures imposed by the Council in its relevant resolutions.

The Council is alarmed that illicit transfers of small arms and light weapons in contravention of arms embargoes and export bans to or by criminal organizations or other irresponsible actors, including those suspected of engaging in terrorist acts, are linked with illicit trafficking in drugs, illegal exploitation of natural resources and illicit trade in such resources. The Council encourages all Member States that have not yet done so to accede to, ratify and implement the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto, including the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition.

The Council welcomes the various initiatives that are currently under way within the subregion, notes the efforts to establish a subregional register of small arms and encourages the Central African countries to take the measures necessary to build up the capacity of the Economic Community of Central African States through the establishment of a subregional register of arms dealers as well as the elaboration of a subregional legally binding instrument on the control of small arms and light weapons, their ammunition and all equipment that might serve for their manufacture.

The Council reaffirms the importance of addressing illicit arms trafficking, in particular of small arms and light weapons, through an approach of common and shared responsibility, and encourages the States of the subregion to fully implement relevant measures adopted at the national, subregional, regional and international levels and to consider appropriate steps in this regard.

The Council calls upon the States of the subregion to strengthen efforts to establish mechanisms and regional networks among their relevant authorities for information-sharing to combat the illicit circulation of and trafficking in small arms and light weapons. The Council also stresses the need for the States of the subregion to strengthen their cooperation, including through regional and subregional organizations, in particular the African Union, in order to identify and take appropriate measures against individuals and entities that engage in illegal trafficking in small arms and light weapons in the Central African subregion.

The Council emphasizes the need for national authorities in the subregion to fully participate in the practical implementation of the Programme of Action adopted on 20 July 2001 by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, and the International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons adopted on 8 December 2005 and encourages Central African countries to regularly submit national reports to the Secretary-General, in accordance with the above-mentioned instruments.

The Council encourages the Economic Community of Central African States to assist Central African countries in ensuring the effective implementation of arms embargoes imposed by the Council and, in this context, to establish measures such as inquiries into illicit arms trafficking routes, follow-up of possible violations and co-operation in border monitoring, in consultation with the countries concerned. In this regard, the Council encourages the committees in charge of monitoring arms embargoes in Central African countries and neighbouring countries, consistent with their mandates, to continue to include in their annual reports a substantive section on the implementation of arms embargoes and on possible violations of the measures reported to the committees, with recommendations, as appropriate, for strengthening the effectiveness of arms embargoes. This information could also be shared with the International Weapons and Explosives Tracking System of the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL).

The Council encourages the committees in charge of monitoring arms embargoes in Central African countries and neighbouring countries, consistent with their mandates, to establish channels of communication with the Economic Community of Central African States and its member States, and with the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa.

The Council supports the action of the United Nations missions present in the subregion, consistent with their mandates, to assist disarmament processes within the framework of disarmament, demobilization and re-integration programmes, and calls upon international partners to assist the Central African countries to build and strengthen their capacities to set up and implement measures relating to the prevention of the illicit proliferation of small arms and light weapons, and the security and management of stockpiles of arms, especially small arms and light weapons.

The Council recognizes the importance of the forthcoming Fourth Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, to be held in June 2010, and encourages Member States, including those in the subregion of Central Africa, to fully cooperate with the Chair to ensure a successful outcome of the meeting.

The Council encourages Member States to undertake vigorous actions aimed at restricting the supply of small arms and light weapons and ammunition to areas of instability in Central Africa.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to take into account in his biennial report, as a follow-up, the content of the present statement.

UN Office for Central Africa

Note of Security Council President. On 30 August [S/2010/457], the Security Council President informed the Secretary-General that Council members welcomed his intention to establish a UN Regional Office for Central Africa, in Libreville, Gabon [YUN 2009, p. 117], for a period of two years, with a review of its mandate after 18 months. They would welcome regular information about the activities of the Office, its impact on the ground, and an initial report six months after it became fully operational.

Report of Secretary-General. In an October report on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council [A/65/328/Add.3], the Secretary-General stated that the Regional Office for Central Africa would facilitate the development of a holistic approach to peace and security challenges and support regional efforts to address cross-cutting issues of concern, and strengthen the peace and security mechanisms of the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) and other subregional organizations in order to foster subregional cooperation and integration. A regional presence afforded the opportunity to design and implement a UN regional integrated approach to peace and security in partnership with other humanitarian and development bodies. The proposed office would also support the vision of the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region to help transform the area into one with sustainable peace and security, enhance the coherence of the work of the UN presence in the subregion, and work with regional countries to address problems of impunity and human rights abuses.

The Office would reach out to UN agencies, funds and programmes on the ground in the pursuit of a common peace consolidation agenda. Administrative, financial and logistical support would be co-ordinated by the Department of Field Support. The Office was expected to start up after 1 January 2011, and would be headed by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General. Resource requirements were estimated at $3,505,200 net ($3,760,300 gross).

ACABQ, in December [A/65/602], stated that the structure of the Office needed to be streamlined to make it more cost effective, and recommended a number of staff and operational adjustments and that the overall proposed requirement be reduced to reflect those adjustments.

The Assembly, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1433), endorsed ACABQ's recommendations.

Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions

At its thirtieth meeting (Kinshasa, DRC, 26–30 April) [A/65/517-S/2010/534], the Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa adopted the “Central African Convention for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Ammunition, and All Parts and Components

That Can Be Used for their Manufacture, Repair and Assembly” (Kinshasa Convention).

The Secretary-General provided a summary [A/65/176] of the outcome of the Committee’s twenty-ninth [YUN 2009, p. 567] and thirtieth meetings to the General Assembly’s sixty-fifth (2010) session.

At its thirty-first meeting (Brazzaville, Congo, 15–19 November) [A/65/717-S/2011/53], the Standing Advisory Committee adopted the Implementation Plan for the Kinshasa Convention, and recommended that the ECCAS Secretary-General develop a sub-regional programme of priority activities as soon as the Convention entered into force.

The Assembly, in resolution 65/84 (see below), welcomed the adoption of the Convention and called for support for its implementation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/65/411], adopted resolution 65/84 without vote [agenda item 98 (f)].

Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 64/61 of 2 December 2009,

Recalling also the guidelines for general and complete disarmament adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Bearing in mind the establishment by the Secretary-General on 28 May 1992 of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the purpose of which is to encourage arms limitation, disarmament, non-proliferation and development in the subregion,

Reaffirming that the purpose of the Standing Advisory Committee is to conduct reconstruction and confidence-building activities in Central Africa among its member States, including through confidence-building and arms limitation measures,

Convinced that the resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken on the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability and to international peace and security,

Convinced that development can be achieved only in a climate of peace, security and mutual confidence both within and among States,

Recalling the Brazzaville Declaration on Cooperation for Peace and Security in Central Africa, the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa and the Yaoundé Declaration on Peace, Security and Stability in Central Africa, Bearing in mind resolutions 1196(1998) and 1197(1998), adopted by the Security Council on 16 and 18 September 1998 respectively, following its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacity for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa, and welcoming the close cooperation established between the United Nations and the Economic Community of Central African States for that purpose,

1. Reaffirms its support for efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and sub-regional levels in order to ease tensions and conflicts in Central Africa and to further sustainable peace, stability and development in the subregion;

2. Reaffirms the importance of disarmament and arms limitation programmes in Central Africa carried out by the States of the subregion with the support of the United Nations, the African Union and other international partners;

3. Welcomes the adoption by the States members of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa on 30 April 2010 of the Central African Convention for the Control of Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Ammunition and All Parts and Components That Can Be Used for Their Manufacture, Repair and Assembly, called the Kinshasa Convention, and encourages interested countries to provide financial support for its implementation;

4. Also welcomes the holding in Kinshasa on 24 and 25 April 2010 of the subregional meeting on small arms and light weapons;

5. Further welcomes the active participation of several ministers of States members of the Standing Advisory Committee at the Fourth Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 14 to 18 June 2010;

6. Encourages the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee to carry out the programmes of activities adopted at their ministerial meetings;

7. Also encourages the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee to continue their efforts to render the early-warning mechanism for Central Africa fully operational as an instrument for analysing and monitoring the political situation in the subregion within the framework of the prevention of crises and armed conflicts, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the assistance necessary for its smooth functioning;

8. Appeals to the international community to support the efforts undertaken by the States concerned to implement disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes;

9. Also appeals to the international community to support the efforts undertaken by the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee under the plan for implementation of the Kinshasa Convention;

10. Requests the Secretary-General and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to assist the countries of Central Africa in tackling the problems of refugees and displaced persons in their territories;

11. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to provide their full assistance for the proper functioning of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa;

12. Reminds the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee of the commitments they undertook at the adoption of the Declaration on the Trust Fund of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa (Libreville Declaration) on 8 May 2009, and invites those States members of the Committee that have not already done so to contribute to the Trust Fund;

13. Urges other Member States and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to support the activities of the Standing Advisory Committee effectively through voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund;

14. Expresses its satisfaction to the Secretary-General for his support for the revitalization of the activities of the Standing Advisory Committee, and requests him to continue to provide the assistance needed to ensure the success of its regular biannual meetings;

15. Also expresses its satisfaction to the Secretary-General for his support for the establishment of a United Nations regional office for Central Africa, and welcomes its endorsement by the Security Council;

16. Urges the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, to include a gender component in the various meetings of the Committee relating to disarmament and international security;

17. Calls upon the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled "Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa".

Democratic Republic of the Congo

In 2010, as the DRC celebrated its fiftieth anniversary of independence, the situation was mixed. While significant progress had been achieved in the implementation of the 23 March Agreements and preparations made for presidential and local elections in 2011, the country continued to face serious difficulties posed by the interrelated challenges of providing security for the population and eliminating the threat of armed groups, fighting impunity and establishing conditions and infrastructure for sustainable development. As the DRC entered a new phase of its transition towards peace consolidation, early in the year, the Secretary-General sent a technical assessment mission to determine the size and scope of the continued UN role in the country. The mission identified certain critical tasks to be completed before the forces of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC) could draw down without triggering a relapse into instability and made proposals for MONUC's phased withdrawal. Based on the technical mission's assessment and recommendations, the Security Council also sent a mission to the DRC to discuss the mandate and configuration of MONUC and the future of the UN presence there. As a result of the missions' recommendations, the Council, in May, decided to reconfigure MONUC, to be known, from 1 July, as the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), and to authorize the withdrawal of 2,000 military personnel.

Between 30 July and 2 August, however, attacks by the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda (FDLR) and Mayi-Mayi Checka elements, including the systematic rape of at least 387 people in 13 villages in Walikale territory, cast a shadow over the prospects for peace over the country. The Council, on 17 September, condemned the attacks and urged the Government to ensure a swift and fair prosecution of perpetrators. The Secretary-General dispatched the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations and his Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict to discuss the challenges faced by UN forces in the protection of civilians in the DRC. The Assistant Secretary-General made a number of recommendations for enhancing that protection. MONUSCO also launched in September Operation Shop Window to put pressure on the armed groups and to support the Government in capturing the perpetrators. Several alleged leaders of the mass rapes were arrested. The Special Representative visited the country again in October, and highlighted the nexus between the illicit exploitation of natural resources by armed elements and patterns of sexual violence. She also brought to the Council's attention reports of rapes, killings and looting by the Forces armées de la République démocratique du Congo (FARDC) soldiers and called for an investigation.

In December, the General Assembly approved the financing for MONUSCO.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (March). In a March report on MONUC [S/2010/164], submitted in response to Security Council resolution 1906(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 126], the Secretary-General said that, despite important gains made in 2009 in addressing the presence of foreign and Congolese armed groups in the eastern DRC, those groups remained a source of insecurity and general instability in the Kivus and parts of Orientale Province. FDLR continued reprisal attacks against civilians, and elements of the national security institutions continued to be responsible for serious human rights violations. A new operation entitled “Amani Leo” was launched against FDLR to consolidate military gains and restore State authority in areas freed from armed groups. In the Uélé districts in Orientale Province, attacks by the Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA) against civilians continued, and military operations targeting that group made little progress. In Equateur Province, preparations for the local and general elections continued to face delays. In terms of implementation of the 23 March Agreements [YUN 2009, p. 120], while there was some progress, the overall implementation remained slow. Three former armed groups, namely the Congrès national pour la défense du peuple (CNDP), the Patriotes résistants congolais (PARECO) and the Mouvement d’union pour le développement national, completed their transformation into political parties. The legal and administrative procedures for the transformation of four other armed groups were being finalized. The provisions of the Agreements relating to the passage of an amnesty law, release of prisoners, and support to the CNDP war wounded were implemented.

The signature, on 17 February, of a Tripartite Agreement between the DRC, Rwanda and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) outlining the legal and operational framework for the voluntary repatriation of refugees from both countries was an important step forward. Steps were also taken to operationalize local reconciliation committees, whose terms of reference and organizational structures were being finalized. Implementation of several key provisions of the 23 March Agreements, however, remained pending. CNDP and former armed groups were concerned that the Government did not respect the spirit and letter of the Agreements regarding their political integration when they were not included in the Cabinet reshuffle announced by the Government on 19 February. In addition, CNDP elements established and maintained new parallel administrations and tax collection posts in parts of North Kivu. Furthermore, little progress was made to integrate the armed groups into the proximity police force in the Kivus.

The draft Integrated Strategic Framework, initiated in 2009 [ibid., p. 126] by MONUC and the UN country team, identified four key strategic goals: addressing ongoing conflicts, stabilizing the conflict-affected areas, consolidating peace across the DRC and making development viable. The Secretary-General’s Special Representative for the DRC, Alan Doss, briefed DRC authorities and international partners on the Framework’s objectives on 2 February, and troop- and police-contributing countries on 16 February. Nationwide, the country continued to face significant challenges to the consolidation of peace resulting from the weak capacities of State institutions, particularly with respect to the rule of law and security situations, slow socio-economic recovery, corruption and impunity. Opposition parties were concerned about the shrinking political space, continuing human rights violations and impunity. The limited progress in building a professional and integrated Congolese army and security services hindered the consolidation of peace. Moreover, preparations for local and general elections scheduled for 2011 were encountering delays.

Technical assessment mission

To carry out the remaining tasks set out in paragraph 2 of Security Council resolution 1906(2009), namely, to further develop the benchmarks and determine the modalities of a reconfiguration of MONUC’s mandate, in particular the tasks to be accomplished before MONUC could envisage drawing down without triggering a relapse into instability, the Secretary-General dispatched a multidisciplinary technical assessment mission to the DRC from 22 February to 5 March.

The assessment mission identified several critical tasks to be accomplished by MONUC, the UN country team, the Government and bilateral partners. To protect civilians, the first task should be to neutralize the threat posed by FDLR, LRA and residual Congolese armed groups. The mission recommended the completion of the disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement or reintegration of foreign armed groups operating in the DRC, focusing on the voluntary repatriation of FDLR combatants and dependents, and establishing a regional cross-border approach for LRA; the completion of the DDR of all pending caseloads of Congolese combatants throughout the country, as well as support to the national reintegration process for former combatants; and the conclusion of the joint FARDC-MONUC military operations in the Kivus and Orientale Province when the Government and MONUC determined that the residual threat had been reduced to a level where it could be contained independently by the national rule-of-law and security institutions. The reduction of the threat would be measured by a significant decrease in violence and attacks against civilians, as well as human rights abuses, specifically a significant decrease in levels of sexual and gender-based violence, the end of recruitment and use of children in the armed groups and the absence of new displacements.

As MONUC drew down from the conflict-affected provinces, the Government would have to ensure that adequate measures were taken to prevent any security hiatus that could put at risk the civilian population. The second critical task should therefore be to build a professional FARDC core force of up to 20 battalions, complemented by a similar core police capacity, which could progressively assume law-and-order enforcement responsibilities in full respect for international human rights law. Such capacities should progressively assume the security role currently filled by MONUC.

The third critical task was to establish effective State authority in the areas freed from armed groups to allow the sustainable return and reintegration of refugees and internally displaced persons (IDPs). The capacity of the DRC public administration, policing, judicial and correctional systems needed to be developed to a sustainable level to allow the independent monitoring of human rights, contribute to ending impunity and allow the establishment of an effective prison system fully respecting international standards.

The other critical tasks identified by the technical assessment mission were full implementation of the 23 March Agreements; addressing the illegal exploitation of natural resources; establishing effective community-based mechanisms for resolving land-related and other intercommunal disputes associated with returns of IDPs and refugees, including a transitional justice process; completing the voluntary repatriation of the Congolese refugees from neighbouring countries; and the conduct, by the Congolese authorities, of credible and peaceful national elections in 2011.

The United Nations should remain ready to continue to support Congolese electoral authorities in the voter registration process and for local elections and consider a request by the Congolese electoral authorities for logistical support for national elections.

MONUC drawdown and reconfiguration. Taking into account the remaining security challenges in the conflict-affected provinces of the Kivus and Orientale, and the relative stability that had been sustained in the rest of the country, the technical assessment mission came to the conclusion that the continued significant presence of the MONUC force was essential in those provinces, and that the other eight provinces offered an opportunity to independently maintain law and order, protect civilians, and sustain effective security arrangements without a MONUC military presence. On that basis, the mission conducted a troop-to-task analysis and prepared a draft drawdown plan, which envisaged the withdrawal of MONUC over a three-year period if the security situation continued to improve and there was steady progress towards the accomplishment of the critical tasks identified by the mission. Under the plan, MONUC would have no direct military role outside of the three conflict-affected provinces in the east, and Kinshasa.

In the first phase of the drawdown, which could start immediately, MONUC could withdraw from Bas-Congo, Kinshasa (Province), Equateur and Bandundu, but maintain a small military unit in Kinshasa to protect UN personnel and facilities. The Mission's reserve force based in the east would protect UN personnel and assets and, if requested, support FARDC and the National Police in provinces beyond the Kivus and Orientale. Stage two of the drawdown could start in the second half of 2010, and involve the complete withdrawal of MONUC forces from Kasai Oriental, Kasai Occidental and Katanga. Stage three would involve a steady reduction of troops from Maniema, Orientale, and North and South Kivu Provinces, as the ongoing military operations were successfully concluded, effective State authority was established in areas freed from the armed groups, and the build-up of an army core force progressed. Stage four could bring MONUC force levels down to some 5,000 troops when a DRC core force became operational. The full withdrawal could be completed once the Government and the United Nations agreed that the conditions for complete withdrawal, without risking renewed instability, were in place. The mandate should reflect the new realities on the ground, and build the capacity of national security and rule-of-law institutions to a sustainable level. It should also reflect the need to prioritize the protection of civilians; recognize the different needs of the different regions of the country; give national institutions the space to operate independently where they could; allow MONUC to focus on critical tasks with a clear strategic objective and exit strategy, while paying attention to peacebuilding needs; and set the ground for the progressive transition to a UN presence that focused more on peacebuilding and development as local conditions allowed.

MONUC would consist of a military support component headed by the Force Commander, a rule-of-law and protection component headed by a Deputy Special Representative, and a stabilization and peace consolidation component headed by a Deputy Special Representative. The military support component would be deployed in North and South Kivu, Orientale and Maniema Provinces to protect civilians and facilitate humanitarian access, help create a secure environment for the return of IDPs and refugees, and support FARDC operations. The Force headquarters and a small military presence would remain in Kinshasa. The two civilian components (rule of law and protection, and stabilization and peace consolidation) would maintain a presence throughout the country.

On 3 March, those proposals were presented to the Government, which indicated that the MONUC drawdown should be completed by 30 August 2011. A joint coordination mechanism would be established as part of the semi-annual review process, the first of which would take place in September. MONUC and the Government identified urgent tasks to be accomplished, including the successful completion of military operations against FDLR and LRA, as well as residual Congolese armed groups in the Kivus and Orientale province; deployment of trained and equipped FARDC battalions to take over the MONUC security role; and establishment of State authority. The Government said that the training and equipping of FARDC would continue through bilateral arrangements, but asked MONUC to train and equip 20 police battalions.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Mission's mandate be extended for a further 12 months, and that the Security Council authorize the immediate implementation of the first phase of the draw-down through the withdrawal of up to 2,000 troops by 30 June, and endorse the modalities and timelines for successive drawdown phases within the framework of the periodic joint reviews. The Government should agree on specific benchmarks for measuring progress towards accomplishing the agreed urgent tasks and define the specific end state under which it would declare that threats from FDLR, LRA and Congolese armed forces had been sufficiently reduced. Concerning the Government's request for training 20 national police battalions, the Secretary-General recommended that MONUC contribute to the training and development of three battalions in the next mandate period, and develop, with the Ministry of Defence, a package for training and equipping the three military police battalions. MONUC would establish UN prosecution support cells, including an advisory and training capacity, to assist FARDC military justice authorities to combat grave human rights violations.

Security Council consideration. On 13 April [S/PV.6297], the Security Council met to consider the Secretary-General's report, during which it was briefed by the Secretary-General's Special Representative and head of MONUC. The Council took no action on the report at that meeting.

Security Council mission

Having agreed to send a mission to the DRC from 13 to 16 May, the Security Council, in letters of the President of 14 April and 4 May [S/2010/187 & Add.1] conveying its intention to the Secretary-General, said that the mission's central objective was to discuss the MONUC mandate and configuration and the future of the UN presence in the DRC.

On 19 May [S/PV.6317], the Council was briefed by Gérard Araud (France), leader of the mission to the DRC. He said that although the situation in the DRC had evolved over the past 10 years and progress had been made, it remained fragile, and the humanitarian and human rights situations were worrisome. Any change in the UN presence in the country would have to be undertaken cautiously on the basis of the situation on the ground so as to avoid creating new instability. Security sector reform was a key challenge. The lack of an effective republican army was, according to President Joseph Kabila, the greatest failure of the international community and his own Government. The Congolese authorities confirmed their desire to professionalize the army through bilateral cooperation, while calling for MONUC support in training the police force and strengthening the judicial system. MONUC was also expected to provide logistical support for the elections scheduled for the coming months.

The mission conveyed to the Congolese authorities that MONUC would not remain in the DRC indefinitely, and while the Council needed to aim for a transition that would restore Congolese sovereignty over the entire country, it would have to be prepared in cooperation with the Congolese authorities through dialogue and a common analysis of the situation. The Council was ready to support the Congolese authorities in security sector reform and implementation of the zero-tolerance policy against impunity. The mission issued a separate report on the discussions held with the Congolese authorities [S/2010/288].

The Council considered the Secretary-General's report on MONUC again on 28 May [S/PV.6324], and adopted resolution 1925(2010) (see below), which, inter alia, changed MONUC to the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 May [meeting 6324] the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1925(2010). The draft [S/2010/256] was submitted by France, Gabon, Uganda, and the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Reaffirming its commitment to the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Acknowledging the progress made in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, considering the challenges that it has had to overcome during the past fifteen years,

Stressing the primary responsibility of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo for ensuring security in its territory and protecting its civilians with respect for the rule of law, human rights and international humanitarian law, stressing the urgency of implementing comprehensive security sector reform and of achieving, as appropriate, the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of Congolese armed groups and the disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration of foreign armed groups for the long-term stabilization of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, considering the need to create the security conditions for ensuring sustainable economic development, and stressing the importance of the contribution made by international partners in these fields,

Stressing also the significant security challenges in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in particular in the

Kivu and Orientale Province, posed by the continued presence of armed groups, the ongoing need to establish effective State authority, the possible resurgence of conflicts as internally displaced persons and refugees return and the continued illegal exploitation of natural resources, and determined to avoid a security vacuum that could trigger renewed instability in the country,

Encouraging the countries of the Great Lakes region to maintain a high level of commitment to jointly promote peace and stability in the region, including through existing regional mechanisms, and to intensify their efforts on regional economic development,

Stressing that the Goma and Nairobi processes as well as the agreements of 23 March 2009 have contributed to stabilizing the situation in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and urging all parties to fully abide by those agreements,

Recognizing the importance of supporting peacebuilding efforts in order to consolidate and achieve further progress in the stabilization of the country, and stressing the need for sustained international support to ensure early recovery activities and lay the foundations for sustainable development,

Emphasizing that the linkage between the illicit exploitation of and trade in natural resources and the proliferation of and trafficking in arms is among the major factors fueling and exacerbating conflicts in the Great Lakes region, urging all States, particularly those in the region, to implement fully the measures set out in its resolution 1896(2009) of 30 November 2009, reiterating its determination to continue to closely monitor the implementation of and compliance with the measures set out in resolution 1896(2009), and urging all States to take legal action, where appropriate, in accordance with those measures, against the leaders of the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda residing in their countries,

Supporting the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to finalize the electoral calendar for local, general and presidential elections within the constitutional framework, with a view to consolidating democracy and promoting the rule of law,

Remaining greatly concerned by the humanitarian and human rights situation in areas affected by armed conflicts, condemning, in particular, the targeted attacks against the civilian population, widespread sexual violence, the recruitment and use of child soldiers and extrajudicial executions, and stressing the urgent need for the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in cooperation with the United Nations and other relevant actors, to end violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, fight impunity and bring the perpetrators to justice and provide medical, humanitarian and other assistance to victims,

Welcoming the commitments made by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to hold accountable those responsible for atrocities in the country, noting the cooperation of the Government with the International Criminal Court, and stressing the importance of actively seeking to hold accountable those responsible for war crimes and crimes against humanity in the country and of regional cooperation to this end,

Recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 and 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolution 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and its resolution 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict, and recalling the conclusions of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict pertaining to parties to the armed conflict in the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Condemning all attacks against United Nations peacekeepers and humanitarian personnel, regardless of the perpetrators, and emphasizing that those responsible for such attacks must be brought to justice,

Commending the valuable contribution that the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo has made to the recovery of the Democratic Republic of the Congo from conflict and to the improvement of the country's peace and security,

Emphasizing the importance of the continued support of the United Nations and the international community for the long-term security and development of the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 30 March 2010, and sharing the view that the Democratic Republic of the Congo is now entering a new phase of its transition towards peace consolidation and that a strong partnership between the United Nations and the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to face these challenges is needed,

Aware of the persistent challenges to the stability of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and determining that the situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo until 30 June 2010, and also decides that, in view of the new phase that has been reached in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the United Nations mission in that country shall, as from 1 July 2010, bear the title of United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

2. Decides also that the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo shall be deployed until 30 June 2011, and authorizes that the Mission shall comprise, in addition to the appropriate civilian, judiciary and correction components, a maximum of 19,815 military personnel, 760 military observers, 391 police personnel and 1,050 personnel of formed police units;

3. Authorizes the withdrawal of up to 2,000 United Nations military personnel by 30 June 2010 from areas where the security situation permits;

4. Authorizes the Mission, while concentrating its military forces in the east of the country, to keep a reserve force capable of redeploying rapidly elsewhere in the country;

5. Emphasizes that the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo bears primary responsibility for security, peacebuilding and development in the country, and encourages the Government to remain fully committed to protecting the population through the establishment of professional and sustainable security forces, to promote non-military solutions as an integral part of the overall solution for reducing the threat posed by Congolese and foreign armed groups and to restore full State authority in the areas freed from armed groups;

6. Decides that future reconfigurations of the Mission should be determined on the basis of the evolution of the situation on the ground and on the achievement of the following objectives to be pursued by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the United Nations mission:

- (i) The completion of the ongoing military operations in the Kivus and Orientale Province, resulting in minimizing the threat of armed groups and restoring stability in sensitive areas;
- (ii) An improved capacity of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to effectively protect the population through the establishment of sustainable security forces with a view to progressively taking over the security role of the Mission;
- (iii) The consolidation of State authority throughout the territory, through the deployment of Congolese civil administration, in particular the police, territorial administration and rule of law institutions in areas freed from armed groups;

7. Encourages enhanced dialogue and partnership between the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the United Nations mission in the country, decides to keep under continuous review the strength of the Mission on the basis of assessments by the Secretary-General and by the Government as provided to the Secretary-General on progress towards the implementation of the objectives presented in paragraph 6 above, and to that end requests the Secretary-General to report on those assessments regularly to the Security Council, through the reports mentioned in paragraph 20 below, to enable the Council to make informed decisions and seize opportunities for reconfiguration;

8. Commends the improvements in the relations between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the neighbouring countries since 2009, calls upon all countries, in particular those in the region, to join their efforts to ensure sustainable peace consolidation in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, notably with regard to paragraph 6 (i) above and the fight against the illegal exploitation of natural resources, and urges the Governments of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Rwanda to continue to work together and to agree on a clear set of end-state objectives on the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda, within the framework of a multidimensional approach;

9. Calls upon the United Nations system, along with international partners, to focus its efforts on helping the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to consolidate the conditions to ensure effective protection of civilians and sustainable development in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, requests the Secretary-General to continue to coordinate all the activities of the United Nations system in the country through continued cooperation between the Mission and the United Nations country team under the authority of his Special Representative for the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and encourages the international and donor community to support the activities of the country team;

10. Encourages the United Nations country team, along with international partners, to support the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on peace consolidation and development activities in order to provide long-term stability in the country;

11. Emphasizes that the protection of civilians must be given priority in decisions about the use of available capacity and resources, and authorizes the Mission to use all necessary means, within the limits of its capacity and in the areas where its units are deployed, to carry out its protection mandate as set out in paragraphs 12 (a) to (k) and (t) below;

12. Decides that the Mission shall have the following mandate in this order of priority:

Protection of civilians

(a) To ensure the effective protection of civilians, including humanitarian personnel and human rights defenders, under imminent threat of physical violence, in particular violence emanating from any of the parties engaged in the conflict;

(b) To ensure the protection of United Nations personnel, facilities, installations and equipment;

(c) To support the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to ensure the protection of civilians from violations of international humanitarian law and human rights abuses, including all forms of sexual and gender-based violence, to promote and protect human rights and to fight impunity, including through the implementation of the Government's "zero-tolerance policy" with respect to discipline and human rights and humanitarian law violations committed by elements of the security forces, in particular the newly integrated elements;

(d) To support national and international efforts to bring perpetrators to justice, including by establishing prosecution support cells to assist the military justice authorities of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in prosecuting persons arrested by the Armed Forces;

(e) To work closely with the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to ensure the implementation of its commitments to address serious violations against children, in particular the finalization of the action plan to release children present in the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and to prevent further recruitment, with the support of the monitoring and reporting mechanism;

(f) To implement the United Nations system-wide protection strategy in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, operationalizing it with the Mission's protection strategy built on best practices, and extend useful protection measures, such as the joint protection teams, community liaison interpreters, joint investigation teams, surveillance centres and women's protection advisers;

(g) To support the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, along with international partners and neighbouring countries, to create an environment conducive to the voluntary, safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons and refugees, or voluntary local integration or resettlement;

(h) To support the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to bring the ongoing military operations against the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda, the Lord's Resistance Army and other armed groups to completion, in compliance with international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law and the need to protect civilians, including through the support of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in jointly planned operations, as set out in paragraphs 21 to 23 and 32 of resolution 1906(2009) of 23 December 2009;

(i) To support, including through its political mediation efforts, the completion of activities of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of Congolese armed groups or their effective integration in the army, which would remain subject to prior adequate training and equipment;

(j) To support activities of disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration of members of foreign armed groups, including the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda and the Lord's Resistance Army, and support strategies towards a sustainable solution of the issue of the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda, including repatriation, reinsertion or resettlement in other areas, or judicial prosecution as appropriate, with the help of all countries, especially those in the region;

(k) To coordinate strategies with other United Nations missions in the region for enhanced information-sharing in the light of the attacks by the Lord's Resistance Army and, at the request of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, may provide logistical support for regional military operations conducted against the Lord's Resistance Army in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in compliance with international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law and the need to protect civilians;

Stabilization and peace consolidation

(l) Taking fully into account the leading role of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, to support, in close cooperation with other international partners, the efforts of the Congolese authorities to strengthen and reform security and judicial institutions;

(m) In line with the relevant legislation on the reform of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the army reform plan presented in January 2010, to assist the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, along with international and bilateral partners, in strengthening its military capacity, including military justice and military police, in particular by harmonizing efforts and facilitating exchanges of information and lessons learned and, as the Government requests it, assist in the training of the Armed Forces and military police battalions, support military justice institutions and mobilize donors to provide equipment and other required resources;

(n) To support the reform of the police led by the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, including by providing training to battalions of the Congolese National Police and mobilizing donors to provide basic supplies, recalling the urgent need for the Congolese authorities to adopt the appropriate legal framework;

(o) To develop and implement, in close consultation with the Congolese authorities and in accordance with the Congolese strategy for justice reform, a multi-year joint United Nations justice support programme in order to develop the criminal justice chain, the police, the judiciary and prisons in conflict-affected areas and a strategic programmatic support at the central level in Kinshasa;

(p) To support, in close cooperation with other international partners, the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to consolidate State authority in the territory freed from armed groups through the deployment of trained Congolese National Police, and to develop rule of law institutions and territorial administration, with respect to the Government's Stabilization and Reconstruction Plan and the International Security and Stabilization Support Strategy;

(q) To provide technical and logistical support for the organization of national and local elections, upon explicit request from the Congolese authorities and within the limits of its capacities and resources;

(r) With respect to the urgent need to fight illegal exploitation of and trade in natural resources in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, to support the efforts of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and enhance its capabilities, along with international partners and neighbouring countries, to prevent the provision of support to armed groups, in particular support derived from illicit economic activities and illicit trade in natural resources, and consolidate and assess, jointly with the Government, the pilot project of bringing together all State services in five trading counters in North and South Kivu in order to improve the traceability of mineral products;

(s) To assist the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in enhancing its demining capacity;

(t) To monitor the implementation of the measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1896(2009), in cooperation, as appropriate, with the Governments concerned and with the Group of Experts on the Democratic Republic of the Congo established pursuant to resolution 1533(2004) of 12 March 2004, seize or collect any arms or related materiel whose presence in the Democratic Republic of the Congo violates the measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1896(2009) and dispose of them as appropriate, and provide assistance to the competent customs authorities of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in implementing the provisions of paragraph 9 of resolution 1896(2009);

13. Urges the international community and donors to support the Mission in the disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration activities referred to in paragraph 12 (j) above, and calls upon the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and neighbouring States to remain engaged in the process;

14. Calls upon the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to build on its cooperation with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Children and Armed Conflict and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to take the measures necessary to ensure full compliance of the Mission with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to keep the Council informed if cases of such conduct occur;

16. Encourages the Mission to ensure regular interaction with the civilian population to raise awareness and understanding about its mandate and activities;

17. Calls upon the Mission to collect information on potential threats against the civilian population as well as reliable information on violations of international humanitarian and human rights law, and to bring them to the attention of the authorities as appropriate;

18. Demands that all armed groups, in particular the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda and the Lord's Resistance Army, immediately cease all forms of violence and human rights abuse against the civilian population in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in particular gender-based violence, including rape and other forms of sexual abuse;

19. Commends the contribution of troop- and police-contributing countries and donors to the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and calls upon Member States to pledge and provide the remaining force enablers required for the mission;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report by 11 October 2010, 21 January 2011 and 13 May 2011 on the progress on the ground, in particular in the light of the assessment discussions with the Congolese authorities mentioned in paragraph 7 above, and on the implementation of the present resolution with a view to progressively adapting the United Nations presence in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and recalling the statement by its President of 5 August 2009, requests the Secretary-General to provide in those reports an indication of progress towards achieving a coordinated United Nations approach in-country, and, in particular, on critical gaps to achieving peacebuilding objectives alongside the mission;

21. Demands that all parties cooperate fully with the operations of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and that they ensure the security of, as well as unhindered and immediate access for, United Nations and associated personnel in carrying out their mandate, throughout the territory of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and requests the Secretary-General to report without delay any failure to comply with these demands;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to elaborate the concept of operations and rules of engagement of the Mission in line with the provisions of the present resolution and to report on this to the Council and troop-contributing countries;

23. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Security Council statement. In an 18 August press statement [SC/10010], the Security Council President said that Council members condemned the attacks on MONUSCO peacekeepers in Kirumba, resulting in the deaths of three Indian soldiers and leaving at least six others wounded. They encouraged the Government to ensure that the perpetrators were swiftly brought to justice, reiterated their full support for MONUSCO, and demanded that all parties cooperate with its operations.

Sexual violence

Security Council statement. In a 26 August press statement [SC/10016-AFR/2030], Security Council members expressed outrage at the recent case of mass rape in eastern DRC, allegedly perpetrated by FDLR and Mayi-Mayi elements; demanded that all parties to armed conflict immediately cease all forms of sexual violence and human rights abuses; and called upon the Government to swiftly investigate those attacks and ensure that the perpetrators were brought to justice. Council members welcomed the Secretary-General's decision to dispatch the Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations to the DRC to ascertain the facts and circumstances surrounding the incident and assess what more could be done to ensure more effective protection of civilians. They also welcomed his instruction to his Special Representative on Sexual Violence in Conflict to coordinate the UN response and follow-up.

Security Council consideration. On 7 September [S/PV.6378], the Security Council met to discuss the situation concerning the DRC. Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations Atul Khare said that from 28 August to 2 September he visited Goma, Walikale, Lubonga and Luvingi, where the systematic rapes had occurred, and Kirumba, where three Indian peacekeepers had been killed on 18 August (see above). He reported that FDLR forces had a strong and active presence in the Kibua area. On 25 July, FARDC units were redeployed to Walikale. On 30 July, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) area office received unconfirmed information about possible attacks by FDLR in Mpofi. An unconfirmed case of rape in Mpofi was also reported on 30 July. Following further reported attacks on 31 July, and subsequent patrols on 2 August in Kibua, however, no reports of rape were made to MONUC peacekeepers. The first report of 15 rape victims seeking attention at the International Medical Corps-supported health centre was received on 5 August; by 13 August, the number had increased to 68. MONUSCO deployed a joint protection team on the Mpofi-Kibua axis, and a human rights investigation team from 25 August to 2 September to interview victims and witnesses.

Some 242 persons, including 28 minors, were systematically raped in 13 villages between 30 July and 2 August. The inhabitants of Luvingi, which recorded 103 rapes, the largest number, reported that the perpetrators arrived in their village on 30 July. The Mayi-Mayi Cheka leader, the so-called "Colonel" Mayele, and "Colonel" Sarafim of FDLR, claimed that they had come to protect Luvingi, to participate in the reintegration process, and only wanted to rest in the village. Many villagers ran away on seeing the FDLR, but returned when they were led to understand that the FDLR had decided to integrate with FARDC—a trap that became evident only later. Rape victims sought medical attention only after they were certain that the perpetrators had left the area, because severe punishments were inflicted on people who tried to escape. While the State, its army and police force were primarily responsible for protecting civilians, the United Nations had also failed, as its actions had not been adequate.

The Assistant Secretary-General said that in North Kivu, the Walikale-to-Pinga road was an important trans-shipment route for minerals and other natural resources. The armed groups often wore clothes identical to FARDC uniforms, making it difficult for the villagers as well as UN peacekeepers to distinguish them. According to the Assistant Secretary-General, improving relations with the community and providing better and institutionalized information-gathering mechanisms were essential. It had been decided that more evening patrols should be undertaken, and more random and spot-check patrols. MONUSCO was considering ways to improve radio communications, and efforts were under way to install a high-frequency repeater in Luvungi. The Assistant Secretary-General recommended that the Council encourage such high-frequency installations in the remaining 27 company operating bases, and consider the imposition of targeted sanctions on leaders of the group, including those outside the country, if a chain of command was proven.

The Assistant Secretary-General also reported on incidents of rape in other areas, such as in Uvira and other regions of North and South Kivu, including Mubi, Shabunda and Mwenga. In Shabunda, at least 130 cases of rape were reportedly committed between 1 and 20 August. As that region was not connected by road, MONUSCO evacuated the more serious cases by helicopter and deployed protection cluster teams, led by UNHCR, using its air assets. He stated that the recent spike in violence had demonstrated the need for a cautious approach regarding the next steps in the configuration of the Mission.

Margot Wallström, Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, said that many survivors were permanently traumatized, unable to return to the fields to earn an income, resulting in increased poverty, isolation and despair. Women lived in fear of men carrying guns, often clad in uniform. They could not distinguish protector from tormentor. Humanitarian actors were struggling to provide essential services to the survivors, but many of them had not come forward to receive medical treatment because of fear. Rape was increasingly selected as the weapon of choice in the eastern DRC, with numbers reaching endemic proportions. It was essential to be more keenly attuned to indicators, including the movements of armed groups, their proximity to civilian centres, patterns of looting and pillage, their actions to block off access to certain areas, and the concerns of local women about the security situation. The UN response should be examined, including that of its peacekeepers on the ground. To perform more effectively, peacekeepers should receive training, knowledge and tools. In that regard, the Special Representative's Office would help launch, in June, a new tool entitled, "Addressing conflict-related sexual violence—An analytical inventory of peacekeeping practice", which would provide a knowledge base to help peacekeepers translate their obligations to preventing sexual violence into action and give examples of early warning systems, patrols tailored to women's mobility patterns, community liaison techniques and other tactics that illustrated a gradual shift from best intentions to best practice. The Organization should also examine the nexus between the illicit exploitation of natural resources, the continuing operations of illegal armed groups and the high levels of violence against civilians. The Government should address impunity and strengthen the rule of law, particularly in the context of sexual violence. The Special Representative reiterated the offer to deploy a team of experts on the rule of law, to support the Government in that regard. The Council should also take action, beginning with the commanders of the armed groups responsible for the atrocities, and use other measures at its disposal, including blacklisting individuals and entities, as well as imposing sanctions and other targeted measures. The Special Representative indicated her intention to return to the DRC by the end of September to engage all stakeholders and to listen to the survivors.

On 17 September [meeting 6387], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/17 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council reiterates its strong condemnation of the mass rapes which occurred in the east of the Democratic Republic of the Congo in late July and August 2010, and, reaffirming its resolutions 1820(2008), 1882(2009), 1888(2009), 1894(2009) and 1925(2010) and recalling its statements to the press of 26 August and 8 and 9 September 2010, the Council urges the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to ensure a swift and fair prosecution of the perpetrators of these terrible crimes and to inform the Council on measures taken to this end. The Council expresses its readiness to consider all appropriate actions, including targeted measures against the perpetrators.

The Council stresses the primary responsibility of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo for ensuring security in its territory and protecting its civilians with respect for the rule of law, human rights and international humanitarian law.

The Council calls upon the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to condemn these atrocities and to provide effective assistance to the victims of sexual abuse and to support efforts undertaken by all relevant stakeholders, including civil society, to protect and assist the victims and to prevent further violence.

The Council reiterates its urgent call to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in cooperation with the United Nations and other relevant actors, to put an end to impunity; in particular, those bearing responsibility for gross human rights violations must be held to account. The Council is determined to support the Congolese authorities in addressing the root causes of the above incidents.

The Council stresses that the fight against impunity is an integral part of the urgently needed reform of the security sector. It encourages the Congolese authorities to pursue their efforts, with the support of relevant multilateral and bilateral donors and the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, within its current mandate, to strengthen the country's military capacity, to reinforce the training and equipment of the Congolese National Police and to enhance the capacities of the justice and corrections systems.

The Council takes note with interest of the recommendations made by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat to enhance efforts to protect and defend civilians and improve the Mission's impact in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

The Council underlines the need for the Mission to improve relations with communities, including through better information-gathering mechanisms and communication tools. In that regard, the Council urges the Mission to pursue efforts to enhance its regular interaction with the civilian population to strengthen confidence and raise awareness and understanding about its mandate and activities. It draws attention to the importance of increased community liaison, increased patrolling and appropriate communications equipment in areas where these are needed.

The Council supports the launch by the Mission and the United Nations country team of a sensitization campaign, including through Radio Okapi, to encourage victims of sexual violence to report it and to seek treatment and legal assistance.

The Council reaffirms its resolve to eliminate all forms of violence against women and children during and after armed conflict. It supports the work of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict, and encourages her to regularly interact with the Sexual Violence Unit of the Mission to coordinate United Nations response and monitor the implementation of the Comprehensive Strategy on Combating Sexual Violence in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The Council looks forward to her trip to the country later in September and requests a briefing upon her return.

The Council requests a briefing by the Secretary-General on the strategy of the Mission for the protection of civilians and the overall challenges that the Mission faces in implementing this strategy. The Council continues to support a comprehensive approach to the protection of civilians and to ensuring peace and security in the region, in particular efforts to accelerate effective disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of Congolese armed groups and disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration of foreign armed groups, to fight against the illegal exploitation of natural resources and to establish effective State authority and strengthen the rule of law in conflict-affected areas.

Report of Special Representative. On 14 October [S/PV.6400], the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on Sexual Violence in Conflict reported to the Security Council on her second visit to the DRC (28 September–6 October). She said that Callixte

Mbarushimana, Executive Secretary of FDLR, one of the rebel groups implicated in the atrocities, had been arrested in Paris under an International Criminal Court warrant, as well as Ignace Murwanashyaka and Straton Musoni, who had been detained by Germany on war crimes charges. That was in addition to Lieutenant "Colonel" Sadoke Kokunda Mayele of the Mayi-Mayi Cheka rebel group, who had been handed over by the group to national authorities. Further information was available on the ringleaders in Kibua-Mpofi, and more arrests were to follow. The Special Representative urged the Government to ensure an exemplary process of justice in the Mayele case and a timely and comprehensive investigation into the mass rapes. The Special Representative urged the Council to escalate the focus on crimes of sexual violence in the work of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1533(2004) concerning the DRC, which should consider including "Colonel" Serafim of the FDLR in its sanctions list. The Special Representative was also concerned about the ongoing FARDC military operations in Walikale territory and the implications for the protection of civilians. Although the troops were deployed to implement the President's moratorium on mining in the area and to reassert Government control, MONUSCO had provided information that rapes, killings and looting had been perpetrated by FARDC soldiers. The possibility that the same communities brutalized in July and August by FDLR and Mayi-Mayi elements were also suffering at the hands of FARDC troops was unacceptable. She called on the Government to investigate such allegations swiftly and hold any perpetrators accountable. It should deploy the national police to Walikale to ensure security of an investigation team and a deeper police presence in high-risk zones. UN peacekeepers should continue to monitor and report on rapes and other exactions and share that information with relevant MONUSCO civilian sections. As the mass rapes in Wakikale demonstrated the nexus between the illicit exploitation of natural resources by armed elements and patterns of sexual violence, the mass rapes in that area should be investigated from the angle of the competition over mining interests as one of the root causes of the conflict and sexual violence. European countries and other Member States should enact legislation requiring companies to disclose whether their products contained minerals sourced from the DRC. The Council should also ensure that MONUSCO's protection mandate was backed by adequate financial resources and other critical assets.

Further developments

Report of Secretary-General (October). In an October report [S/2010/512], the Secretary-General said that he had attended the celebration of the DRC's fiftieth anniversary of independence. Most of the country remained relatively stable; however, violence by armed groups and military operations by FARDC against those groups continued, notably in the provinces of North and South Kivu and Orientale. Serious human rights violations by the armed groups and national security elements also continued. In North and South Kivu, military pressure continued to contribute to FDLR desertions and voluntary participation in the MONUSCO disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration process. FARDC continued to face difficulties in holding ground, however, and several areas in Masisi, Rutshuru, Walikale, Shabunda and Mwenga were reoccupied by FDLR. Following the attacks by Mayi-Mayi Cheka elements in Walikale territory between 30 July and 2 August, MONUSCO launched, on 1 September, Operation Shop Window, aimed at putting pressure on the armed groups, improving protection of local populations, preventing the armed groups from pursuing their operations and supporting Government efforts to capture the perpetrators of the attack. The operation, completed on 18 September, led to the surrender of 27 Mayi-Mayi elements and the arrest of three others and one FDLR soldier. On 5 October, "Lieutenant Colonel" Mayele, who was alleged to have coordinated the attacks in Walikale territory, was arrested.

MONUSCO made protecting civilians its priority. It increased the staffing of the Joint Protection Teams in eastern DRC; began the establishment of provincial-level senior management groups for protection in North and South Kivu, with the aim of enhancing early-warning capabilities and monitoring the recommendations of the Joint Protection Teams; and supported the establishment of early warning centres in remote areas. Following the attacks in Walikale, it also installed additional high-frequency transmitters in the Luvungi area and was exploring ways of improving radio communications and the use of phones in areas where civilian protection was a concern. The Mission was also developing a database to compile information on reported acts of sexual violence, and continued to support the United Nations Population Fund to improve programme effectiveness indicators and data collection on sexual violence.

In other developments, on 9 August, the Independent Electoral Commission published a new electoral calendar in which the first-round presidential election was set for 27 November 2011. A second round, if required, would be held together with the provincial legislative elections on 26 February 2012. Senatorial and gubernatorial elections would be held in 2012 and local elections in 2013. A UN electoral needs assessment mission, which visited the country from 26 July to 10 August, recommended that MONUSCO and the international community increase financial and logistical support to the electoral process, and that lead responsibility be transferred from MONUSCO to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

MONUSCO continued its reconfiguration. In accordance with resolution 1925(2010) (see p. 123), it completed the withdrawal of 1,494 troops. In June, a joint MONUSCO-Government working-level national team was established in Kinshasa and agreed on terms of reference and a methodology for the joint assessment process. In July and August, the team visited 55 locations throughout eastern DRC. MONUSCO and the UN country team began development of a peace consolidation programme to support implementation of the structural reforms needed to give the Congolese State the capacity to project its authority nationwide, to strengthen the capacity of communities to respond to adverse shocks, and provide economic opportunities to unemployed young people and other high-risk groups, as well as deliver tangible peace dividends in the western provinces.

The Secretary-General observed that the continuing challenges indicated need for a fundamental review of the roles played by MONUSCO, the UN country team and other international partners. The joint assessments carried out by MONUSCO and the Government were a starting point and should be complemented by serious reflection and consultation among the Government, the United Nations, regional and international partners and Congolese civil society.

Security Council consideration. The Council met on 15 October [S/PV.6403] to consider the Secretary-General's report on MONUSCO. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General and head of MONUSCO told the Council that the best data available suggested that over 15,000 rapes had been committed in the eastern part of the DRC in 2009. Armed groups operated in many widely dispersed areas and it was not possible for MONUSCO to ensure full protection for all civilians. To approach that goal would require vastly greater force levels and resources. Government security forces had the primary responsibility to ensure security for all people of the Congo. The fundamental threat posed by the armed groups required a broader strategy, which had to include military pressure and address a daunting array of issues, such as better operational collaboration, lack of support to holding battalions to prevent the return of negative forces to cleared areas, and security sector reform, including training and operation of the military and civilian justice system.

Communication. On 26 October [S/2010/555], the DRC transmitted to the Council President a communiqué relating the attack by Mayi-Mayi elements on 23 October on a MONUSCO base in Rwindi, North Kivu. Eight of the assailants were killed and two others wounded. FARDC forces helped track down and capture a number of individuals who were in custody.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/20], the Secretary-General reported that MONUSCO continued to enhance security in communities affected by mass rapes and looting perpetrated between 30 July and 2 August, during the ongoing judicial investigations and in order to prevent reprisal attacks. It took additional measures to enhance the protection of civilians and support Congolese judicial efforts to hold perpetrators to account in connection with the Kibua-Mpofi attacks. In South Kivu, between 18 and 30 November, MONUSCO conducted Operation Protection Shield in the Baraka-Fizi-Minembwe area, in response to increased activity by FDLR and other armed groups, to deter activity by such groups and enhance the protection of local populations. The Mission also supported FARDC operations against FDLR in the Hauts Plateaux of Uvira, South Kivu, as well as in Mwenga, Walungu and Kalehe territories.

There were also unauthorized movements and desertions of former CNDP elements integrated into FARDC. On 29 October, in an apparent show of discontent, some 100 integrated former CNDP elements gathered near Kavumu airport, 40 kilometres from Bukavu in South Kivu. In consultation with FARDC, MONUSCO deployed a quick-reaction force to secure the airport. In a separate development, a number of integrated former CNDP elements boycotted the distribution of FARDC identification cards and uniforms in parts of North Kivu, protesting a lack of clarity about their military ranks. On 30 October, against that backdrop and in the face of continued expressions of dissatisfaction by signatory armed groups regarding the perceived failure of the Government to make progress on the implementation of the 23 March 2009 agreements, President Kabila signed a decree extending the Government's stabilization and reconstruction plan to June 2011, and reactivating the Comité national de suivi overseeing implementation of the agreements. On 23 November, the rapporteur général of the Comité met in Goma with representatives of armed group signatories, as well as with civil society and MONUSCO, to prepare for its relaunching.

In December, the political wings of CNDP and a faction of the Patriotes résistants congolais (PARECO) signed agreements to join the ruling political coalition, the Alliance pour la majorité présidentielle (AMP). In Orientale province, LRA attacks, involving looting and the abduction of civilians, continued. On 30 November, MONUSCO launched Operation Rudia Umbrella in Duru, Bangadi, Ngilima and Niangara in Haut Uélé to deter further LRA action, and establish several temporary forward bases from which to conduct extensive day and night patrols.

In political developments, from 10 to 14 December, the Union pour la démocratie et le progrès social organized its first pre-election congress in Kinshasa and endorsed the candidacy of its Chair, Étienne Tshisekedi, for the presidential elections. In addition, on 14 December, the former Speaker of the National Assembly, Vital Kamerhe, announced his resignation from parliament and his intention to run for the presidency under a new opposition political party, the Union pour la nation congolaise (UNC). Since the promulgation on 28 July of the law establishing the Independent National Electoral Commission, no agreement had been reached by the National Assembly regarding the proposed list of nominees for the Board of the Commission. The announced review of the electoral law by parliament had not taken place, and the delimitation of electoral constituencies had not been completed. On 20 November, the Independent Electoral Commission launched the voter registration process in Maniema province.

On 12 November, the trial in the case of the killing, on 2 June, of human rights activist Floribert Chebeya Bahizire of the Congolese non-governmental organization Voix des Sans Voix and the disappearance of his driver, Fidèle Bazana Edadi, began before a military court in Kinshasa. Five of the eight accused national police officers appeared at the trial's first hearing. As the whereabouts of the three others were unknown, they were to be tried in absentia. Between 16 and 21 October, following preliminary findings published on 24 September, the United Nations Joint Human Rights Office further investigated the Kibua-Mpofi attacks of 30 July to 2 August. The investigations determined that at least 387 people, including 300 women, 23 men, 55 girls and 9 boys, had been raped by FDLR and Mayi-Mayi Cheka elements, as well as elements of a group formed the year before by an ex-CNDP officer and FARDC deserter, "Colonel" Emmanuel Nsengiyumva. Between 30 September and 10 October, a high-level panel convened by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights visited the DRC to address the issue of reparations for victims of sexual violence. In mid-December, the panel submitted to the Government its report, aimed at complementing efforts to promote justice by providing assistance and support to victims, and to advance a national strategy on sexual violence with regard to reparations.

Since October, some 940 individuals, including 290 Rwandan and 315 Congolese FDLR combatants, including 17 "officers", had participated in the disarmament, demobilization, repatriation, resettlement and reintegration programme. Since the beginning of the year, 1,881 FDLR combatants had been demobilized, slightly fewer than the 1,997 demobilized in 2009. The demobilized "officers" had increased in number from 45 to 65, including higher-ranking commanders up to the level of "Colonel". A total of 2,323 individuals, including dependents, were repatriated to neighbouring countries, most of them to Rwanda. On 5 October, MONUSCO launched preparations for a 45-day refresher basic training course for 500 national police personnel at the Munigi training centre in North Kivu. Intensive training continued for some 500 newly integrated police personnel at the Kapalata training centre. On 30 November, the DRC authorities launched a process to assess the strength and the capabilities of the police with the support of the Mission's police component. The Mission also worked with the European Union Police Mission in Kinshasa and other partners to establish an implementation body for the reform of the police, developed by the steering committee for police reform. On 7 October, the Military Prosecutor requested assistance in investigating the Kibua-Mpofi attacks. Consequently, from 14 to 17 October, MONUSCO, UNDP and other partners conducted training for 24 Congolese magistrates and police officers. FARDC investigators were deployed to Walikale with the support of MONUSCO, UNDP and other partners to collect witness and victim testimonies from 28 October to 29 November. In South Kivu, on 16 December, the Military Prosecutor requested assistance in investigating alleged attacks by FARDC elements in Shabunda and Uvira.

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the General Assembly decided that the item on armed aggression against the DRC would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Arms embargo

The Security Council Committee on the DRC, established pursuant to resolution 1533(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 137] to review and monitor the arms embargo on armed groups imposed by resolution 1493(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 130], reported [S/2011/18] on its activities in 2010, during which it received 50 notifications and held three informal consultations. In August, the Committee promulgated its guidelines establishing its rules of internal procedures and specifying information Member States should provide in order to fulfil the notification requirement regarding the provision of military equipment or military cooperation to the DRC. It updated its list of individuals and entities subject to the measures imposed by paragraphs 13 and 15 of resolution 1595(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 553], as renewed by paragraph 3 of resolution 1896(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 132]. In December, the Committee added four individuals to the list of individuals and entities subject to the travel ban and assets freeze. The Committee received nine reports pursuant to resolution 1896(2009), by which the Council called on Member States to report on actions taken to implement the measures imposed in that resolution.

Group of Experts

The Group of Experts on the DRC, established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1533(2004) to gather and analyse information on flows of arms and related materiel, as well as on networks operating in violation of the measures imposed by paragraph 20 of resolution 1493(2003), submitted during the year an interim report [S/2010/252] and a final report [S/2010/596]. On 12 February [S/2010/93], Rwanda conveyed to the Council President additional information on members of FDLR and the Rally for Unity and Democracy and other individuals referred to in the Group's final 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 132].

As requested by resolution 1896(2009), the Secretary-General, on 25 February [S/2010/99], appointed three experts to constitute the Group for a period ending on 30 November 2010; two additional experts on 22 April [S/2010/207]; and one expert on 25 June [S/2010/337] to replace a member who had resigned, as well as a new Coordinator of the Group.

Reports of Group of Experts. As requested by Council resolution 1896(2009), the Security Council Committee on the DRC submitted, in May [S/2010/252], the interim report of the Working Group, which confirmed its previous findings that rapid integration of armed groups into FARDC had introduced significant numbers of children into Government forces and that no important progress had been made to disarm and demobilize children. The Group also understood that no significant progress was made by the military justice authorities in prosecuting the cases concerning allegations of human rights abuses brought against five FARDC officers in 2009. The Group was investigating reports of arms and military equipment transfers or supplies to armed groups operating in eastern DRC. It conducted a case study of evidence showing that, from March 2009 to February 2010, several "UN certificates" were forged to facilitate the sale of Congolese gold to buyers located in regional States. The matter was referred to the UN Office of Internal Oversight Services, but preliminary investigation by the Group of Experts confirmed that all the documents in question were false. The Group also reviewed material on due diligence and natural resources, and was developing recommendations on guidelines for the exercise of due diligence by importers, processing industries and consumers of mineral products regarding the purchase, sourcing, acquisition and processing of mineral products from the DRC. While the focus was largely on the trade in cassiterite and tantalum, it was expected to expand to other minerals, including gold.

In its final report submitted in November [S/2010/596], the Group of Experts stated that the involvement of criminal networks within FARDC in the illegal exploitation of natural resources had created a conflict of interest with the army's constitutional security mandate, leading to pervasive insubordination, competing chains of command, failure to actively pursue armed groups, amounting in certain cases to collusion, and neglect of civilian protection. Criminal involvement ranged from illegal taxation, protection rackets and indirect commercial control to more direct coercive control. Taken together, the consequences of that involvement by networks within FARDC were an important cause of insecurity and conflict in the eastern part of the country. Congolese armed groups, including the Forces patriotiques pour la libération du Congo, Mayi-Mayi Sheka and Alliance des patriots pour un Congo libre et souverain, continued to form coalitions among themselves and with foreign armed groups to attack FARDC and pillage mining sites and local populations. Some armed groups, such as Mayi-Mayi Cheka, were generated by criminal networks within FARDC that competed for control over mineral-rich areas. In addition, armed groups continued to tap into popular unease with the current status quo in the Kivus, including fear of unmanaged refugee returns, land grabs, politico-military marginalization and resentment caused by ongoing insecurity. Although armed groups had been forced to concede most of the main mining sites in the Kivus, they controlled smaller mines in more remote areas and increasingly relied on intermediaries and predatory attacks to profit from the mineral trade. Units of the former CNDP in FARDC had gained military control over most of the strategic areas rich in natural resources in the Kivus, presenting a challenge to their integration into FARDC.

The report also examined challenges to the transparency and traceability of mineral supply chains from eastern DRC, as well as an industry-led initiative for addressing the involvement of armed actors. After consultations, particularly with the Congolese Government, the Group presented two options for due diligence guidelines. The first provided guidance to importers, processors and consumers of minerals from eastern DRC on how to mitigate the risk of providing direct or indirect support to illegal armed groups and/or to individuals and entities that were subject to targeted sanctions. The second option provided guidance for mitigating the additional risks of providing direct or indirect support to criminal networks and perpetrators of serious human rights abuses within FARDC. Both options employed the same five-step risk-based due diligence approach developed by the Group and other stakeholders through a working group hosted by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development to develop due diligence guidance for responsible supply chains of minerals from conflict-affected and high-risk areas.

The Group recommended that the Council endorse its recommendations on guidelines for due diligence to mitigate the risk of further exacerbating the conflict in eastern DRC; call upon Member States, in particular the DRC, neighbouring countries and countries whose companies were active in the DRC mining sector to incorporate the guidelines into national legislation, and on MONUSCO to pay attention to the risks of working with commanders known to be involved in the illegal exploitation of natural resources and to strengthen the Mission's information gathering around mining sites and important minerals trading centres; and mandate MONUSCO to strengthen its support of the DRC's justice system by including specific training of prosecutors in the investigation of economic crimes and provide the Mission with the capacity to support investigations by the Military Prosecutor's Office of economic crimes committed by FARDC personnel. The DRC Government should establish and support a mobile investigative economic crimes unit within the Military Prosecutor's Office; review and reinforce national legislation addressing the involvement of the military in economic activities, such as mining; ensure that Staff Headquarters imposed disciplinary sanctions on those implicated in land conflicts and the illegal exploitation of natural resources; identify, suspend and prosecute FARDC commanders using children as escorts or obstructing efforts to separate children from their ranks; conduct an independent evaluation and audit of the Coalition des patriotes résistants congolais (PARECO) programme, including weapons collected and their identifying marks, and give renewed consideration to the resettlement of foreign combatants to third countries; and cooperate with the United Nations and donors in the harmonization and coherence of security sector reform efforts.

In response to the reports, the Council extended the arms embargo and related sanctions until 30 November 2011 (see p. 134).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 November [meeting 6432], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1952(2010). The draft [S/2010/597] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 1807(2008) of 31 March 2008, 1857(2008) of 22 December 2008 and 1896(2009) of 30 November 2009, and the statements by its President concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Reaffirming its commitment to the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of the Democratic Republic of the Congo as well as all States in the region,

Taking note of the interim report and the final report of the Group of Experts on the Democratic Republic of the Congo ("the Group of Experts") established pursuant to resolution 1771(2007) of 10 August 2007, whose mandate was extended pursuant to resolutions 1807(2008), 1857(2008) and 1896(2009), and of the recommendations contained therein, and welcoming the collaboration between the Group of Experts and the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, as well as other Governments in the region and other international forums,

Reiterating its serious concern regarding the presence of armed groups and militias in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, including the provinces of North and South Kivu and Orientale Province, which perpetuates a climate of insecurity in the whole region,

Demanding that all armed groups, in particular the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda and the Lord's Resistance Army, immediately lay down their arms and cease their attacks against the civilian population, and demanding also that all the parties to the agreements of 23 March 2009 implement their commitments effectively and in good faith,

Reiterating its concern about the support received by illegal armed groups operating in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo from regional and international networks,

Condemning the continuing illicit flow of weapons within and into the Democratic Republic of the Congo in violation of resolutions 1533(2004) of 12 March 2004, 1807(2008), 1857(2008) and 1896(2009), declaring its determination to continue to monitor closely the implementation of the arms embargo and other measures set out in its resolutions concerning the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and stressing the obligation of all States to abide by the notification requirements set out in paragraph 5 of resolution 1807(2008),

Recalling the linkage between the illegal exploitation of natural resources, illicit trade in such resources and the proliferation of and trafficking in arms as one of the major factors fuelling and exacerbating conflicts in the Great Lakes region of Africa,

Noting with great concern the persistence of human rights and humanitarian law violations against civilians in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, including the killing and displacement of significant numbers of civilians, the recruitment and use of child soldiers and widespread sexual violence, stressing that the perpetrators must be brought to justice, reiterating its firm condemnation of all violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in the country, and recalling all its relevant resolutions on women and peace and security, on children and armed conflict and on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Stressing the primary responsibility of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo for ensuring security in its territory and protecting its civilians with respect for the rule of law, human rights and international humanitarian law,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the countries of the Great Lakes region to jointly promote peace and stability in the region, in particular in the context of the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region, and reiterating the importance of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and all Governments, particularly those in the region, taking effective steps to ensure that there is no support, in and from their territories, for the armed groups in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo,

Supporting the commitment of the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to rid the trade in natural resources of criminal networks, and welcoming the enhanced collaboration between the Government and the Group of Experts in this area,

Determining that the situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to renew until 30 November 2011 the measures on arms imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1807(2008), and reaffirms the provisions of paragraphs 2, 3 and 5 of that resolution;

2. Decides also to renew, for the period specified in paragraph 1 above, the measures on transport imposed by paragraphs 6 and 8 of resolution 1807(2008), and reaffirms the provisions of paragraph 7 of that resolution;

3. Decides further to renew, for the period specified in paragraph 1 above, the financial and travel measures imposed by paragraphs 9 and 11 of resolution 1807(2008), and reaffirms the provisions of paragraphs 10 and 12 of that resolution regarding the individuals and entities referred to in paragraph 4 of resolution 1857(2008);

4. Calls upon all States to implement fully the measures specified in the present resolution and to cooperate fully with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1533(2004) in carrying out its mandate;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to extend, for a period expiring on 30 November 2011, the mandate of the Group of Experts established pursuant to resolution 1533(2004) and renewed by subsequent resolutions, with the addition of a sixth expert on natural resources issues, and requests the Group of Experts to fulfil its mandate as set out in paragraph 18 of resolution 1807(2008) and expanded by paragraphs 9 and 10 of resolution 1857(2008), and to report to the Council in writing, through the Committee, by 18 May 2011 and again before 17 October 2011;

6. Requests the Group of Experts to focus its activities in areas affected by the presence of illegal armed groups, including North and South Kivu and Orientale Province, as well as on regional and international networks providing support to illegal armed groups, criminal networks and perpetrators of serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights abuses, including those within the national armed forces, operating in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and requests further that the Group of Experts evaluate the impact of the due diligence guidelines referred to in paragraph 7 of the present resolution and continue its collaboration with other forums;

7. Supports taking forward the recommendations of the Group of Experts on guidelines for due diligence for importers, processing industries and consumers of Congolese mineral products, as set out in paragraphs 356 to 369 of section IX of the final report of the Group of Experts, to mitigate the risk of further exacerbating the conflict in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo by providing direct or indirect support to:

—Illegal armed groups in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

- Those found to have violated the asset freeze and travel ban on sanctioned individuals and entities, as renewed by paragraph 3 above;
- Criminal networks and perpetrators of serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights abuses, including those within the national armed forces;

8. Calls upon all States to take appropriate steps to raise awareness of the due diligence guidelines referred to above, and to urge importers, processing industries and consumers of Congolese mineral products to exercise due diligence by applying the aforementioned guidelines, or equivalent guidelines, containing the following steps as described in the final report of the Group of Experts: strengthening company management systems, identifying and assessing supply chain risks, designing and implementing strategies to respond to identified risks, conducting independent audits, and publicly disclosing supply chain due diligence and findings;

9. Decides that the Committee, in determining whether to designate an individual or entity supporting the illegal armed groups in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo through illicit trade in natural resources, pursuant to paragraph 4 (g) of resolution 1857(2008), should consider, among other things, whether the individual or entity has exercised due diligence consistent with the steps set out in paragraph 8 above;

10. Calls upon all States, especially those in the region, to take effective steps to ensure that there is no support, in and from their territories, for the illegal armed groups in the eastern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, welcoming the positive international developments in regard to addressing the risks posed by armed group leaders in the diasporas, and calls upon all States to take action, where appropriate, against leaders of the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda and other illegal armed groups residing in their countries;

11. Encourages the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to continue to take appropriate measures to address the threat of criminal networks within the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo involved in illegal economic activities, such as mining, undermining their capacity to protect civilians in the eastern part of the country;

12. Calls upon the Congolese authorities to continue their fight against impunity, especially against all perpetrators of human rights and international humanitarian law violations, including sexual violence, including those committed by any illegal armed groups or elements of the Armed Forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

13. Encourages the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to continue to share all relevant information with the Group of Experts, especially information on the recruitment and use of children and on the targeting of women and children in situations of armed conflict;

14. Reiterates its recommendation to the Government of the Democratic Republic of the Congo to promote stockpile security, accountability and management of arms and ammunition as an urgent priority, with the assistance of international partners as necessary, and to implement a national weapons marking programme in line with the standards established by the Nairobi Protocol for the Prevention, Control and Reduction of Small Arms and Light Weapons in the Great Lakes Region and the Horn of Africa and the Regional Centre on Small Arms;

15. Urges the international community to consider providing increased technical or other assistance to reinforce the Congolese justice institutions and support to strengthen the institutional capacity of the mining, law enforcement and border control agencies and institutions of the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

16. Urges the Mission to continue supporting the efforts of the Congolese authorities to strengthen their justice system, to consolidate the trading counters in North and South Kivu and to monitor the measures imposed by paragraph 1 above, as mandated in paragraphs 12 (o), (r) and (t) of resolution 1925(2010) of 28 May 2010;

17. Encourages enhanced cooperation between all States, particularly those in the region, the Mission and the Group of Experts, and encourages further all parties and all States to ensure cooperation with the Group of Experts by individuals and entities within their jurisdiction or under their control;

18. Reiterates its demand, expressed in paragraph 21 of resolution 1807(2008) and reaffirmed in paragraph 14 of resolution 1857(2008) and paragraph 13 of resolution 1896(2009), that all parties and all States, particularly those in the region, cooperate fully with the work of the Group of Experts and that they ensure the safety of its members and unhindered and immediate access, in particular to persons, documents and sites that the Group of Experts deems relevant to the execution of its mandate;

19. Recommends that all States, particularly those in the region, regularly publish full import and export statistics for natural resources, including gold, cassiterite, coltan, wolframite, timber and charcoal and enhance information-sharing and joint action at the regional level to investigate and combat regional criminal networks and armed groups involved in the illegal exploitation of natural resources;

20. Calls upon all States, particularly those in the region and those in which individuals and entities designated pursuant to paragraph 3 of the present resolution are based, to regularly report to the Committee on the actions they have taken to implement the measures imposed by paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 above and recommended in paragraph 8 above;

21. Encourages all States to submit to the Committee, for inclusion on its list of designees, individuals or entities that meet the criteria set out in paragraph 4 of resolution 1857(2008), as well as any entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by the submitted individuals or entities or individuals or entities acting on behalf of or at the direction of the submitted entities;

22. Decides that, when appropriate and no later than 30 November 2011, it shall review the measures set forth in the present resolution, with a view to adjusting them, as appropriate, in the light of the security situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, in particular progress in security sector reform, including the integration of the armed forces and the reform of the national police, and in disarming, demobilizing, repatriating, resettling and reintegrating, as appropriate, Congolese and foreign armed groups;

23. Decides also to remain actively seized of the matter.

Children and armed conflict

Report of Secretary-General. In July, as requested by resolution 1882(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 739], the Secretary-General submitted a report on children and armed conflict in the DRC [S/2010/369], covering developments from October 2008 to December 2009. Compared with the previous reporting period, there was a general increase in the number of grave violations committed against children by all parties to the conflict. FARDC military operations had a heavy toll on civilians, both in terms of reprisal attacks by armed groups and of FARDC misconduct. Newly integrated FARDC units were reportedly responsible for a significant number of violations, in particular the recruitment and use of children, including for military purposes, forced labour and sexual violence. In total, 1,593 cases of child recruitment (1,519 boys and 74 girls) were documented during the reporting period, including 1,235 in 2009. Out of that number, 42 per cent were allegedly carried out by FARDC, 26 per cent by various Mayi-Mayi groups, 16 per cent by PARECO, 10 per cent by the different FDLR factions and 6 per cent by CNDP. As a result of the ad hoc and spontaneous nature of the integration process, the monitoring and documentation of cases had been significantly impeded. Follow-up visits with children formerly associated with armed forces and groups after family reunifications indicated that children previously released were even more vulnerable and faced a constant threat of re-recruitment. Children released during the reporting period declared they had been used as combatants, escorts, cooks and porters. The children, mainly girls, also reported that they had been sexually abused. Despite the significant number of children released during that process, there was evidence that hundreds of children associated with armed groups were also integrated into FARDC unnoticed or were hidden by their commanders, especially in North Kivu. An increase in the number of killings and maimings of children was registered, mainly in zones of active military operations.

A total of 54 killings and 22 cases of maiming were documented during the reporting period. The victims (47 boys and 29 girls) came from all age groups. Oriental Province accounted for the highest number of incidents (33 in Haut Uélé and 4 in Ituri district), followed by 28 incidents in North Kivu, 8 in South Kivu and 3 in Katanga. Widespread sexual violence remained a concern countrywide, in particular in provinces affected by armed conflict. The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) reported 4,572 cases of sexual violence committed against children in the Kivus and Oriental Province. Girls remained the main victims of sexual violence. During the reporting period, the MONUC Child Protection Section undertook judicial follow-up in 126 cases of sexual violence against children.

Progress was made on legislation regarding children. On 10 January 2009, the Government promulgated a new law on the protection of children, whereby the recruitment and the use of children under the age of 18 by armed groups, armed forces and the police were penalized with prison terms of between 10 and 20 years. Twelve out of 14 decrees needed to be adopted for the new law to be fully applicable. Rampant impunity for violations perpetrated against children, however, remained worrisome. Despite the existing legal provisions, no systematic mechanism for investigating, convicting or sanctioning those responsible for grave violations against children was in place. The few perpetrators that were prosecuted and convicted often had their sentences overturned in appeal procedures or did not serve their sentences, owing to the weaknesses of the penitentiary system. Escapes of convicted perpetrators from prisons were frequent.

The Secretary-General urged the Government to meet its commitments to prepare and implement the action plan to end the recruitment and use of children by FARDC, including newly integrated elements. The action plan should include the immediate release of all children in FARDC ranks, access to all military sites and regroupement centres for verification by child protection actors and prevention and accountability measures against responsible individuals. He also urged non-State armed groups that had not been integrated into FARDC to stop the recruitment and use of children and to enter into dialogue with the United Nations to prepare and implement action plans to cease those violations and to release all children within their ranks. The Secretary-General encouraged the Government to put an end to impunity and to ensure that all individuals responsible for grave violations against children were held accountable, including the adoption of the remaining decrees for the implementation of the national law on the protection of children, the adoption of the law for the reform of the national police, and the reinforcement of the capacities of the military judicial system to investigate and prosecute all perpetrators of child rights violations, including high-level commanders. The Government should ensure that the amnesty law adopted in May 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 121] was strictly interpreted, so that the perpetrators of war crimes and crimes against humanity did not benefit from amnesty. It should also withdraw all perpetrators of child rights violations, irrespective of rank, from the military chain of command and hold them accountable for their crimes. FARDC should devise standard operating procedures to ensure that children were protected in the course of military operations, as well as for the treatment of captured child soldiers and for promptly handing them over to child protection partners for appropriate care.

Working Group. At its twenty-sixth meeting [S/AC.51/2011/1], on 8 September, the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict examined the report of the Secretary-General and expressed concern about the worsening situation of children in the context of the ongoing conflict in the DRC. The Group agreed on the need for a strengthened coordinated regional strategy to address the impact of the LRA on children in the region, and emphasized the importance of holding perpetrators of sexual violence accountable. The Group addressed recommendations to the Government and the Secretary-General.

MONUC

The United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC), established by Security Council resolution 1279(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 92], continued to discharge its functions as enhanced by Council resolutions 1565(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 129], 1756(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 119], and 1856(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 130].

In resolution 1925(2010) of 28 May (see p. 123), the Council extended the Mission's mandate until 30 June 2011.

Financing

The General Assembly had before it the performance report on the MONUC budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/583], which showed expenditures of $1,139,358,900 against an apportionment of $1,163,677,200, leaving an unencumbered balance of $24,318,300. The Assembly also had before it the proposed budget [A/64/670] for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 amounting to $1,444,094,400, including voluntary contributions in kind in the amount of $4 million. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [A/64/660/Add.8] recommended that the Assembly appropriate $1,410,350,200 for the Mission.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/824], adopted resolution 64/275 without vote [agenda item 150].

Financing of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 1258(1999) of 6 August 1999 and 1279(1999) of 30 November 1999 regarding, respectively, the deployment to the region of the Democratic Republic of the Congo of military liaison personnel and the establishment of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1925(2010) of 28 May 2010, by which the Council decided to extend the deployment of the Mission until 30 June 2010, decided that, as of 1 July 2010, the Mission would be known as the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo and that the Stabilization Mission would be deployed until 30 June 2011, and authorized the continuation until that date of up to 19,815 military personnel, 760 military observers, 391 police personnel and 1,050 personnel of formed police units,

Recalling also its resolution 54/260 A of 7 April 2000 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/291 of 30 June 2009,

Recalling further its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 155.1 million United States dollars, representing some 2 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-nine Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern about the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern about the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Acknowledges with appreciation that the use of the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, has been cost-effective and has resulted in savings for the United Nations, and welcomes the expansion of the logistics hub to provide logistical support to peacekeeping operations in the region and to contribute further to their enhanced efficiency and responsiveness, taking into account the ongoing efforts in this regard;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

15. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

16. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo the amount of 1,447,734,900 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 1,365,000,000 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 70,069,600 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 12,665,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

17. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 682,500,000 dollars for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 at a monthly rate of 113,750,000 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

18. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 15,228,050 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010;

19. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 70,069,600 dollars for the support account and the amount of 12,665,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248;

20. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 6,814,900 dollars, for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, comprising the prorated share of 5,801,600 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 1,013,300 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

21. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 51,863,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in its resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in its resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

22. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 51,863,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 21 above;

23. Also decides that the decrease of 16,300 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be set off against the credits from the amount of 51,863,000 dollars referred to in paragraphs 21 and 22 above;

24. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

25. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

26. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

27. Requests the Secretary-General, at the earliest opportunity, to submit the revised budget for the Mission to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fifth session;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo".

On 24 December, the Assembly, by decision 65/544, decided that the item on the financing of MONUC would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

MONUSCO

By resolution 1925(2010) of 28 May (see p. 123), the Security Council decided that from 1 July 2010, MONUC would bear the title of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO), comprising a maximum of 19,815 military personnel, 760 military observers, 391 police personnel and 1,050 police; and authorized the withdrawal of up to 2,000 UN military personnel from areas where the security situation permitted. In addition to its other mandated activities, MONUSCO would support the reform of the Congolese National Police by providing training and technical and logistical support for the organization of national and local elections; and develop and implement a multi-year UN justice support programme for developing the criminal justice chain, the police, the judiciary and prisons in conflict-affected areas and strategic and programmatic support at the central level in Kinshasa, and support national and international efforts to bring perpetrators to justice.

The Mission was headed by Roger A. Meece (United States), the Special Representative of the Secretary-General in the DRC, who on 1 July replaced Alan Doss (United Kingdom) [S/2010/303; S/2010/304]. Lieutenant General Chander Prakash (India) was appointed Force Commander in July, to replace Lieutenant General Babacar Gaye (Senegal) [S/2010/367; S/2010/368].

Financing

On 24 June [A/65/141], the Secretary-General requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session an item on the financing of MONUSCO. In an October report [A/65/512] on financing arrangements for MONUSCO for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, he proposed that the amount of $1,365,000,000 appropriated by the Assembly for MONUC for the same period be maintained for the maintenance of MONUSCO, taking into account that the authorized deployment and mandated activities remained largely unchanged from those of MONUC; only one quarter of the financial period had elapsed in the implementation of the approved budget; and MONUSCO's additional mandated tasks (see above) were estimated to result in a decrease of $27,000 gross, compared to the approved budget. The Secretary-General asked the Assembly to approve the establishment of 39 temporary positions, to be funded under general temporary assistance, to support the voter registration process and justice-related programmes. The Assembly was also requested to assess the amount of $682,500,000 for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, representing the balance between the appropriation of $1,365,000,000 for the same period and the amount of $682,500,000 already assessed for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 under resolution 64/275 (see p. 137).

In December [A/65/598], ACABQ recommended approval of the 39 temporary positions, and the assessment of $652,500,000 for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, which was in addition to the $682,500,000 already assessed under resolution 64/275 for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/654], adopted resolution 65/255 without vote [agenda items 147 & 148].

Financing of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo

The General Assembly,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 1258(1999) of 6 August 1999 and 1279(1999) of 30 November 1999 regarding, respectively, the deployment to the region of the Democratic Republic of the Congo of military liaison personnel and the establishment of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council decided to extend the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1925(2010) of 28 May 2010, by which the Council decided to extend the mandate until 30 June 2010 and that, as of 1 July 2010, the Mission would bear the title of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; also decided that the Stabilization Mission would be deployed until 30 June 2011; and authorized the continuation until that date of up to 19,815 military personnel, 760 military observers, 391 police personnel and 1,050 personnel of formed police units,

Recalling also its resolution 54/260 A of 7 April 2000 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 64/275 of 24 June 2010,

Recalling further its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo as at 3 December 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 266.4 million United States dollars, representing some 3 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only fifty Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Takes note of paragraph 16 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

11. Decides to approve the establishment of 39 temporary positions, including 23 United Nations Volunteer positions, to be funded under general temporary assistance, to support the voter registration process in connection with the preparation for the conduct of elections and to support justice-related programmes, and in addition to the civilian staffing establishment approved for the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo for the period 2010/11 under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 64/275;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financing arrangements for the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

15. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

Financing of the appropriation

16. Decides, taking into account the amount of 682,500,000 dollars already apportioned for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 under the terms of resolution 64/275, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 682,500,000 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2011, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

17. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 15,345,950 dollars, representing the estimated additional staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

18. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

19. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

20. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

21. Decides to keep under review during its sixty-fifth session the items entitled "Financing of the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo" and "Financing of the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo".

On the same date, the Assembly, by decision 65/544, decided that the item on the financing of MONUSCO would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Burundi

The situation in Burundi in 2010 was characterized by significant progress as the country moved away from a violent past. Despite the deep divide among political actors, the country held five consecutive elections (communal, presidential, legislative, senatorial and collinaire) between 24 May and 7 September. Incumbent President Pierre Nkurunziza was re-elected with 91 per cent of the vote. He nominated a new Government with 21 ministers, reflecting the composition of the National Assembly. In the light of the progress made and following discussions with the Government, the Secretary-General recommended that the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi (BINUB), whose mandate was to expire on 31 December, be succeeded by a scaled-down UN presence to support the Government's efforts in consolidating democracy and paving the way for sustainable development. The establishment of the new UN presence, the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB), was approved by the Security Council in December for an initial period of one year, effective 1 January 2011. Karin Landgren (Sweden) was appointed Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BNUB.

Political and security developments

On 10 May [S/PV.6309], the Security Council met to discuss the situation in Burundi. Charles Petrie, Executive Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BINUB, briefed the Council on preparations for elections. He said that the electoral calendar had been established in December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 142]. In the event that a second round of presidential elections were necessary, it would be held on 26 July. The issuance of some 900,000 free identity cards and the authorized use of other documentation paved the way for voter registration, which took place from 21 January to 8 February. Some 3,541,596 voters were registered and the preliminary voters list published. So far, 24 political parties had submitted the names of their candidates for the communal elections, 12 of which had registered in 50 per cent of the communes, while five had registered in all 129 communes. Fifteen parties had designated presidential candidates, and there were two independent candidates. The National Independent Electoral Commission planned to establish 7,000 polling stations countrywide. The code of conduct established for political parties, the media and the administration had been signed by almost all concerned, except the Front pour la démocratie au Burundi and the Conseil national pour la défense de la démocratie-Nyangoma. The technical commission to coordinate all dimensions of the election was working on an integrated security plan. On 4 May, President Pierre Nkurunziza issued a decree setting the duration of the campaign from 5 to 18 May. At the President's request, a number of international partners had committed to deploying long-term electoral observers. International experts supported by the United Nations also provided technical assistance.

The elections were taking place against the backdrop of the violence and human suffering that had affected the country. Challenges ahead related particularly to the tightness of the electoral calendar and the management of possible tensions during and after the elections. The United Nations had established a task force to closely monitor and react to contingency needs for logistical or other support to the National Independent Electoral Commission.

The Executive Representative observed that the elections represented two decades of hard work in the cause of peace in Burundi, and the preparations for them were grounds for cautious optimism. Beyond the elections, the country would continue to face socio-economic, political and security challenges. Continued close engagement by the international community would remain crucial to ensuring that the country continued on its path of economic recovery and sustainable development.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his seventh report on BINUB [S/2010/608], the Secretary-General said that communal elections were held on 24 May. Twenty-four political parties participated, only five of which had registered candidates in all 129 communes. At the national level, the Conseil national pour la défense de la démocratie-Forces pour la défense de la démocratie (CNDD-FDD) obtained 64 per cent of the votes; the Forces nationales de libération (FNL) 14 per cent; the Union pour le progrès national (UPRONA) 6 per cent; Sahwanya-Front pour la démocratie au Burundi (Sahwanya-FRODEBU) 5 per cent; the Mouvement pour la solidarité et la démocratie (MSD) 4 per cent; and the Union pour la paix et le développement-Zigamibanga (UPD-Zigamibanga) 2 per cent. The other 18 political parties and independent candidates shared less than 4 per cent of the remaining votes. A group of 12 opposition political parties, including FNL, Sahwanya-FRODEBU, CNDD, MSD and UPD, rejected the election results, alleging massive fraud and irregularities, questioned the neutrality of the Independent National Electoral Commission, and called for the re-holding of the communal polls. National and international observers, however, declared that the elections were conducted in conformity with international norms, and that any irregularities observed during the polls were not significant enough to bring into question the credibility of the results.

On 1 June, FNL, Sahwanya-FRODEBU, CNDD, MSD and UPD-Zigamibanga withdrew their respective candidates from the presidential election, followed, on 4 June, by UPRONA. On 7 June, the 12 parties, in a formal coalition, known as the Alliance démocratique pour le changement-Ikibiri (ADC-Ikibiri), urged their elected councillors not to take up their seats in communal councils, and accused the international community of bias towards CNDD-FDD, owing to its recognition of the results of the communal election.

During his visit to Burundi on 9 June, the Secretary-General warned against any recourse to violence in the resolution of political disputes and encouraged all parties to pursue dialogue. He appealed to those parties challenging the results of the communal elections to channel their claims through national legal mechanisms and remedies.

Following rumours of the imminent arrest of FNL President Agathon Rwasa on 16 June, some 200 FNL youth gathered around his residence in Bujumbura, leading to clashes between his supporters and the national police. On 23 June, Mr. Rwasa disappeared from his residence, and his whereabouts remained unknown. In correspondence addressed to the media, Mr. Rwasa alleged that his decision to flee had been triggered by threats by State officials to incriminate him. Other prominent opposition leaders also fled the country, allegedly for fear of political persecution, including Pascaline Kampayano of UPD-Zigamibanga, CNDD President Leonard Nyangoma; the President of the Alliance démocratique pour le renouveau (ADR), Alice Nzomukunda; and MSD President Alexis Sinduhije.

Presidential elections were held on 28 June, despite the continuing boycott by ADC-Ikibiri. The sole candidate, the incumbent President, was re-elected with 91 per cent of the votes. The Independent National Electoral Commission announced a turnout of 76 per cent, compared with 91 per cent in the communal elections. International observers commended the Commission for the management of the presidential elections, but deplored the political background against which they were held, including the boycott by the opposition, the prohibition of any political campaign against the single candidate, and several acts of violence before and after the campaign, as well as numerous cases of arrest of members of opposition political parties.

Elections for the National Assembly were held on 23 July. ADC-Ikibiri continued its boycott, in spite of attempts by the international community and the Independent National Electoral Commission to encourage its participation. Participants in the elections included CNDD-FDD, UPRONA, FRODEBU-Nyakuri and a coalition of 10 parties called the Coalition pour des élections libres, apaisées et transparentes (CELAT). CNDD-FDD secured 81 seats, UPRONA 17 seats and FRODEBU-Nyakuri 5 seats. International observers described the polls as peaceful and well organized, although they deplored the arrest of several opposition party members and the reluctance of the Independent National Electoral Commission to adopt measures to enhance the transparency of the electoral process.

On 28 July, the Independent National Electoral Commission proceeded with the indirect elections for the Senate by communal councillors. ADC-Ikibiri members, however, refused to take up their seats in the communal councils. CNDD-FDD and UPRONA were the only parties that took part, and CNDD-FDD won 32 of the 34 seats, further increasing its majority in all elected State institutions. On 29 July, President Nkurunziza confirmed the appointments of the communal administrators of 105 communes who had been elected by their bureaux, out of a total of 129 communes nationwide. The elections of administrators in communes won by opposition parties were hampered by the ADC-Ikibiri boycott of the communal councils.

The electoral cycle concluded in September with the collinaire elections, which observers deemed peaceful and well organized. The elections resulted in institutions that continued to respect the balance, enshrined in the Constitution, between the ethnic groups as envisaged for both the National Assembly and the Senate. On 1 August, some former and recently expelled FNL members organized an extraordinary meeting to replace the executive organ of the party, most notably its President, Agathon Rwasa, on the grounds of dereliction with respect to his post.

Subsequently, the Minister of the Interior endorsed the outcome of the meeting.

On 26 August, President Nkurunziza was inaugurated for a second term. In his inaugural speech, he announced the priorities of his new Government, including fighting corruption, promoting security and fostering national reconciliation, including through transitional justice and the accommodation of all political parties. The following day, he nominated a new Government that reflected the composition of the National Assembly, comprising 21 ministers: 14 from CNDD-FDD, 3 from UPRONA, 1 from FRODEBU-Nyakuri and 3 from civil society.

Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs B. Lynn Pascoe visited Burundi on 3 September. During his meeting with President Nkurunziza, he encouraged inclusiveness and continued political space for opposition parties not represented in the National Assembly in order to foster national reconciliation.

Steady progress was recorded in the reintegration of ex-combatants. In May, under the World Bank-supported Emergency Demobilization and Transitional Reintegration Project, the Government paid the final instalment of reintegration assistance to 6,504 demobilized FNL and FNL dissident combatants in their respective communities. Under the community recovery programme, co-funded by the Peacebuilding Fund and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), approximately 3,781 former “adults associated with FNL combatants” were employed in labour-intensive infrastructural projects in Cibitoke, Bubanza and Bujumbura Rural provinces.

Over the previous year, there had been a significant increase in human rights violations. Throughout the electoral period, in particular, BINUB observed severe restrictions on the freedom of expression and association, as well as violations of the right to liberty and security of persons. In the aftermath of the elections, incarceration of members of opposition parties continued, as well as an increase in the repression of journalists. The consolidation of the rule of law faced numerous challenges, and the independence of the judiciary remained of particular concern. The recruitment of judges and prosecutors lacked transparency, as the Ministry of Justice continued to make appointments without consulting the High Judicial Council; however, efforts to establish a professional training centre for the judiciary were a welcome development. The performance of the judicial system was hampered by delays in adjudicating cases and the absence of bailiffs, which, in turn, resulted in the non-enforcement of court decisions and bottlenecks in the system. National consultations on the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms were completed nationwide in December 2009. Consultations with the diaspora were held in February and March 2010, in Belgium and the United Republic of Tanzania, with the support of the Peacebuilding Fund. The report of the consultations was completed on 20 April and submitted to the President.

Transition from BINUB to BNUB. In keeping with the Security Council’s request in resolution 1902(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 140], the Secretary-General recommended changes to the direction and composition of the UN presence in Burundi. He had dispatched a multi-disciplinary strategic assessment mission and a technical design mission to Burundi in August and October, respectively. On the basis of the findings of those missions, following consultations with the Government, BINUB, the UN country team and the regional and wider international community, the Secretary-General proposed that BINUB be succeeded in January 2011 by the United Nations Office in Burundi (BNUB).

Over the next five years, the three strategic priorities for the UN system in Burundi would be: completing the process of recovery and stimulating equitable growth; establishing and reinforcing accountable, effective and responsive institutions; and establishing and reinforcing effective mechanisms for dialogue, reconciliation and transitional justice. To meet those priorities and complement the UN country team’s work, BNUB should assist the Government by providing analysis and advice for the establishment and functioning of key institutions in conformity with international standards and principles; monitoring key democracy and governance indicators; providing political advice to UN country team programming, as well as other key regional, international and multilateral partners, in particular in peacebuilding and governance; providing analysis, advice and assistance concerning the establishment and strengthening of key human rights and justice institutions and oversight mechanisms; monitoring of and reporting on the human rights situation and strengthening national civil society; advocating for the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms in accordance with international standards, and providing operational support to the functioning of such bodies; advising on security sector and rule-of-law issues; advising on and monitoring the reform of the legal frameworks for increased independence of the justice sector and performance of its oversight role; supporting Burundi as the 2011 Chair of the East African Community, and advising on regional integration issues; facilitating and promoting dialogue between national actors and supporting mechanisms for broad-based participation in political life; and assisting in the coordination of international partners and the mobilization of resources for Burundi, and helping to promote growth.

BNUB would be headed by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General, who would be assisted by a Deputy Special Representative/Resident Coordinator/Resident Representative/Humanitarian Coordinator. The office would comprise a political governance section and an integrated human rights and justice section. BNUB's overall size would be smaller than that of BINUB, in accordance with the Government's request. Sufficient expertise and capacity, however, should be retained to help manage its downsizing and eventual liquidation. To avoid a repeat of the tension created among national staff with respect to the scaling down from the former United Nations Operation in Burundi (ONUB) to BINUB—who continued to demand reparations for various reasons, including wrongful dismissal, and to stage demonstrations, destroy UN property and threaten to kidnap UN staff—the Secretary-General urged the Government to work closely with the United Nations to assist BINUB national staff in their transition to either the public or the private sector. He recommended that BINUB, whose mandate would expire on 31 December, be succeeded by a scaled-down UN presence to support the Government's efforts in consolidating democracy and paving the way for sustainable development, and that the Council approve the establishment of BNUB for an initial period of one year, effective 1 January 2011.

Security Council consideration. On 9 December [S/PV.6439], the Security Council met to consider the Secretary-General's report on BINUB. The Council was briefed by Charles Petrie, the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BINUB, and Paul Seger, Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission. The Council President invited Council members to informal consultations to continue their discussion on the subject.

The Council considered the Secretary-General's report on BINUB again on 16 December [S/PV.6451] and adopted resolution 1959(2010) establishing BNUB (see below).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 6451] the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1959(2010). The draft [S/2020/640] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions and the statements by its President on Burundi, in particular resolutions 1719(2006) of 25 October 2006, 1791(2007) of 19 December 2007, 1858(2008) of 22 December 2008 and 1902(2009) of 17 December 2009,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Burundi,

Taking note with appreciation of the successful holding of five consecutive elections between May and September 2010, which, despite divisions between political actors, did not lead to large-scale violence and constitute an important milestone in the consolidation of peace and democracy as well as sustainable development in Burundi,

Encouraging the efforts of the Government of Burundi to create a space for all political parties and to continue improving dialogue between all actors, including civil society,

Commending the valuable contribution that the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi has made to the recovery of Burundi from conflict and to the peace, security and development of the country,

Welcoming the progress that Burundi has made towards peace, stability and development, and emphasizing the need for the United Nations system and the international community, including the international financial institutions and Burundi's development partners, to maintain their support for peace consolidation and long-term development in Burundi,

Supporting the renewed commitment of Burundi to "zero tolerance" for corruption,

Welcoming the continued engagement of the Peacebuilding Commission in Burundi and the recent visit of the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Commission, taking note of the January 2010 review of progress in the implementation of the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in Burundi and of the briefing by the Chair of the Burundi configuration of the Commission on 9 December 2010, and acknowledging the contribution that the Peacebuilding Fund has made to peacebuilding in Burundi,

Supporting the commitment of Burundi to regional integration, notably in the Economic Community of the Great Lakes Countries and the East African Community, and its efforts to ensure the success of its chairing of the East African Community in 2011,

Recognizing the importance of transitional justice in promoting lasting reconciliation among all the people of Burundi, and noting with appreciation the completion of the national consultations on the establishment of the transitional justice mechanisms, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1606(2005) of 20 June 2005 as well as the Arusha Agreement of 2000,

Noting with great concern the reports of continuing human rights violations, in particular extrajudicial killings and torture, and restrictions on civil liberties, including restrictions on the freedom of expression, association and assembly of opposition parties and civil society organizations,

Encouraging the Government of Burundi to protect civil liberties and to fight impunity, particularly by ensuring that those responsible for incidents of torture, extrajudicial killings and mistreatment of detainees are brought to justice,

Recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict,

Having considered the seventh report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Office in Burundi, as recommended in his report, as a significantly scaled-down United Nations presence, for an initial period of twelve months beginning on 1 January 2011, with the key tasks as specified in paragraph 3 below, to support the progress achieved in recent years by all national stakeholders in consolidating peace, democracy and development in Burundi;

2. Welcomes the recommendation of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Office in Burundi should be headed by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General, assisted by a Deputy Special Representative who would serve as United Nations Resident Coordinator and Humanitarian Coordinator, as well as Resident Representative of the United Nations Development Programme, and recognizes the need for appropriate expertise and adequate material resources, in order that the Office can effectively and efficiently implement its mandate;

3. Requests that the United Nations Office in Burundi focus on and support the Government of Burundi in the following areas:

(a) Strengthening the independence, capacities and legal frameworks of key national institutions, in particular judicial and parliamentary institutions, in line with international standards and principles;

(b) Promoting and facilitating dialogue between national actors and supporting mechanisms for broad-based participation in political life, including for the implementation of development strategies and programmes in Burundi;

(c) Supporting efforts to fight impunity, particularly through the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms to strengthen national unity and promote justice and reconciliation within Burundi's society, and providing operational support to the functioning of these bodies;

(d) Promoting and protecting human rights, including strengthening national capacities in that area, as well as national civil society;

(e) Ensuring that all strategies and policies with respect to public finance and the economic sector, in particular the next poverty reduction strategy paper, have a focus on peacebuilding and equitable growth, addressing specifically the needs of the most vulnerable populations, and advocating for resource mobilization for Burundi;

(f) Providing support to Burundi as Chair of the East African Community in 2011 as well as providing advice, as requested, on regional integration issues;

4. Underscores the need for a smooth transition from the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi to the United Nations Office in Burundi;

5. Underlines the importance of establishing a fully integrated office with effective coordination of strategies and programmes among the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in Burundi, and emphasizes the need for the United Nations system to support and cooperate fully with the United Nations Office in Burundi;

6. Recognizes the primary responsibility of the Government of Burundi for peacebuilding, security and long-term development in the country, and encourages the Government to pursue its efforts regarding peace consolidation challenges, in particular democratic governance, the fight against corruption, security sector reform, justice and the protection of human rights, with a special focus on the rights of women and children as well as marginalized and vulnerable minorities;

7. Encourages the Government of Burundi, with the support of the United Nations Office in Burundi and other international partners, to redouble its efforts to pursue structural reforms aimed at improving political, economic and administrative governance and tackling corruption, with a view to setting up strong drivers for sustained and equitable social and economic growth;

8. Underscores the importance of security sector reform, and urges all international partners, together with the United Nations Office in Burundi, to continue supporting the efforts of the Government of Burundi to professionalize and enhance the capacity of the national security services and the police, in particular in the fields of training on human rights and sexual and gender-based violence, and with a view to consolidating security sector governance;

9. Commends the Government of Burundi for the completion of the reintegration of the last groups of children formerly associated with armed groups and of ex-combatants, encourages the Government to ensure that these results are sustainable, encourages the Peacebuilding Commission to consider what specific actions it could undertake to bolster its support to the sustainable reintegration of war-affected populations and other vulnerable groups, and supports the efforts of the Government in the voluntary civilian disarmament campaign and the launch of the Burundian National Police arms marking and registration process;

10. Encourages the Government of Burundi, the Peacebuilding Commission and Burundi's national and international partners to honour the commitments they have made under the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in Burundi, requests the Commission, with support from the United Nations Office in Burundi, to continue to assist the Government in laying the foundations for sustainable peace and security, reintegration and long-term development in Burundi, including ensuring that progress is made in the implementation of the rule of law and that peacebuilding objectives are fully taken into account in the future strategic planning processes, in particular the poverty reduction strategy paper, and requests the Commission to provide advice to the Security Council on these issues;

11. Urges the Government of Burundi to investigate reports of human rights violations, to take the steps necessary to prevent further violations and to ensure that those responsible for such violations are brought to justice;

12. Calls upon the Government of Burundi to pursue its efforts to ensure the promotion and protection of human rights and to swiftly establish the National Independent Human Rights Commission, in conformity with the Paris Principles outlined in the annex to General Assembly resolution 48/134 of 20 December 1993, and further encourages the Government to continue its fight against impunity and to take the measures necessary to ensure that its citizens fully enjoy their civil, political, social, economic and cultural rights as enshrined in the Constitution of Burundi and provided for in international human rights instruments, including those ratified by Burundi;

13. Welcomes the completion of the national consultations on the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms, commends the Government of Burundi for publishing the report on those consultations, and encourages the Government, with the support of international partners and the United Nations Office in Burundi as appropriate, to establish the proposed mechanisms;

14. Also welcomes the recent tripartite agreement between Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees as well as the progress towards achieving dignified durable solutions for refugees living in the United Republic of Tanzania, and encourages a sustained effort to find solutions with regard to the residual Burundi refugee caseload, in compliance with relevant international law;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council informed every six months on the implementation of the mandate of the United Nations Office in Burundi and the present resolution, with a briefing by 31 May 2011 and a report by 30 November 2011, and calls upon the Secretary-General to develop a set of benchmarks for the future evolution of the Office into a United Nations country team presence and to report regularly on their progress to the Council;

16. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/751], the Secretary-General indicated that on 7 December, the Tripartite Committee submitted the national consultations report to President Nkurunziza, thus concluding the consultative exercise on the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms.

Peacebuilding Commission

Review of Strategic Framework. In March, the Peacebuilding Commission considered the fourth progress report [PBC/4/BDI/1] on the implementation of the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in Burundi [YUN 2007, p. 52]. The report reviewed progress and trends in good governance, the 2006 Ceasefire Agreement between the Government and the Forces nationales de liberation (FNL) [YUN 2006, p. 153], the security sector, justice and the rule of law, socio-economic issues, regional integration, and aid coordination. The report showed that the Government and its partners had made efforts to improve governance and fight corruption. The Ombudsman institution was established and financing allocated for its functioning. The disarmament of civilians had been expedited following the enactment of the small arms and light weapons act, and the demobilization process for former FNL combatants and dissidents and the reinsertion of its associated adults and children had been completed. Efforts to strengthen the capacity of judges and the police to implement the new provisions introduced into the Penal Code were ongoing; however, implementation needed to await the promulgation of the code of criminal procedure. The bill on the establishment of the national independent human rights commission was before Parliament. The national strategy for sustainable integration had been prepared. The report contained recommendations under each area reviewed.

In its conclusion on the fourth biannual review of the Strategic Framework [PBC/4/BDI/3], the Commission welcomed the progress made in preparation for the elections and the efforts of the Government to improve governance and the fight against corruption. It recognized the challenges identified in the report and stressed the need for further engagement by all actors to support national efforts in addressing them. It endorsed the Government's recommendations contained in the report, including ensuring an environment conducive to the holding of free, fair and peaceful elections and respecting the results by all; encouraging political parties, the media and youth groups to respect the Codes of Conduct that they had signed; establishing a realistic action plan to reinforce anti-corruption mechanisms and institutions and providing the judicial system with the means to prosecute offences linked to corruption; starting implementation of the national action plan for the reform of the defence and security system; professionalizing the defence and security forces; increasing efforts to disarm the civilian population and control arms held by security and defence forces in order to strengthen security; finalizing the proposed law establishing the National Independent Human Rights Commission; and correcting and promulgating the Penal Code.

On 16 December, the Security Council, in resolution 1959(2010) (see p. 144), took note of the fourth review of progress in the implementation of the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in Burundi.

Children and armed conflict

Communication. On 26 January [S/2010/45], the Security Council President transmitted to the Secretary-General an 11 January letter from the Chairman of the Council's Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, as a follow-up to the Working Group's 2009 recommendations to the Council [YUN 2009, p. 144]. The Chairman commended the efforts of the Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict, BINUB, and the United Nations Children's Fund, in coordination with the Government, in contributing to the protection of children and engagement with FNL and its alleged dissidents to put an end to child recruitment and facilitate the release of affected children. The Chairman urged the Secretary-General to support and integrate child protection in Burundi's disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) process and to call upon the international community to continue allocating funds for capacity-building and DDR for children.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his April report on children and armed conflict [A/64/742-S/2010/181], indicated that the United Nations had verified that all children associated with FNL were released through a formal DDR process in June 2009, and reunified with their families. It had also been confirmed that FNL had ceased recruitment, and no new reported cases of recruitment or use of children by the group had been recorded. On that basis, FNL would be removed from the lists annexed to his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 144] on parties that recruit or use children. The country task force would continue to monitor compliance by FNL and its alleged dissident groups to ensure that efforts were made to prevent the recruitment or re-recruitment of children. Sexual violence against children, however, continued to be of concern. An increase was noted in the number of rape cases committed by civilians, while cases committed by members of security and defence forces had decreased. BINUB had received reports about members of the youth wing of the ruling CNDD-FDD party, the Imbonerakure, being involved in community patrols, guarding premises and accompanying public and police officials during arrest procedures, allegedly sanctioned by the authorities.

The Secretary-General noted that the revised penal code prohibited the enlistment of children into the national defence forces, laid down 18 years as the minimum age for conscription, raised the age of criminal responsibility to 15 years, provided alternatives to imprisonment, and strengthened sentences against perpetrators of violations against children, in particular sexual violence.

The Security Council, in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/10 of 16 June (see p. 756), welcomed the progress made in preventing and responding to violations and abuses committed against children, and reiterated its call on parties to armed conflict listed in the annexes of the Secretary-General's report on children and armed conflict that had not already done so to prepare and implement action plans to halt the recruitment and use of children, patterns of killing and maiming of children and/or rape, and other sexual violence against children, in violation of applicable international law, in situations of armed conflict.

BINUB

BINUB, established by Security Council resolution 1719(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 153], continued to support the Government in its efforts towards achieving long-term peace and stability and coordinating the work of UN agencies in the country. Its main focus in 2010 was on providing logistical support to the Independent Electoral Commission during the electoral process. Headquartered in the capital, Bujumbura, BINUB was headed by the Secretary-General's Executive Representative for Burundi, Charles Petrie (United Kingdom), who was appointed on 23 March [S/2010/156, S/2010/157] to replace Youssef Mahmoud (Tunisia).

Financing

In October [A/65/328/Add.3], the Secretary-General proposed, in the context of estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, resource requirements for BINUB for 2011 in the amount of $39,933,600 net ($43,602,600 gross). The net unencumbered balance for 2010 was projected to be $325,600. In a later October report [A/65/328], those requirements were adjusted to $39,608,000 net ($39,933,600 gross).

ACABQ, in its December report [A/65/602], recommended approval of the requested staffing changes for BINUB for 2011. Pending the outcome of discussions in the Security Council on the UN follow-on presence to succeed BINUB, the Committee recommended that the Assembly appropriate 50 per cent of the resource requirements for 2011, and that the Secretary-General submit a revised proposal for the Assembly's consideration no later than at its first resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

The Fifth Committee [A/65/602/Add.1] recommended an amount of $14,641,200 for BINUB in the 2010–2011 proposed programme budget.

The Assembly, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1433), endorsed ACABQ's conclusions and recommendations and requested the Secretary-General to submit resource requirements for 2011 for BINUB or its successor for consideration at the first part of its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session. It noted that the interim funding provided for BINUB should not affect the contractual conditions of the staff.

The Assembly, in resolution 65/260 A–C (see p. 1425) of the same date, approved the amount of $14,641,200 for BINUB in the 2010–2011 programme budget.

BNUB, established by Security Council resolution 1959(2010) of 16 December (see p. 144) for an initial period of 12 months, effective 1 January 2011, was mandated to support the Government in strengthening the independence, capacities and legal frameworks of key national institutions; promoting and facilitating dialogue between national actors and supporting mechanisms for broad-based participation in political life; fighting impunity, particularly through the establishment of transitional justice mechanisms, and providing operational support to the functioning of those bodies; promoting and protecting human rights; and ensuring that all finance and economic sector strategies and policies focused on peacebuilding and equitable growth, addressing the needs of the most vulnerable, and advocating for resource mobilization for Burundi.

The Office was to be headed by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General. On 22 December [S/2010/677], the Secretary-General appointed Karin Landgren (Sweden) as the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of BNUB. The Council noted the Secretary-General's intention on 30 December [S/2010/678].

ONUB

ONUB, established in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 145], concluded its mandate on 31 December 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 157] and was replaced by BINUB on 1 January 2007.

Financing

The Secretary-General, in his final performance report on ONUB [A/64/610], indicated that income totalled $836,902,000, and expenditure for the period from 21 April 2004 to 30 June 2009 amounted to $722,037,000, which was partially offset by $35,607,000 in cancellation of prior-period obligations, resulting in net expenditure of $686,430,000. The unencumbered balance amounted to $150,472,000, while credits returned to Member States stood at $140,854,000. As at 30 June 2009, the fund balance was $9,618,000 and the cash balance $8,389,000.

ACABQ, in its February report [A/64/650], recommended that the available cash balance be credited to Member States in a manner to be decided by the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/821], adopted resolution 64/272 without vote [agenda item 147].

Financing of the United Nations Operation in Burundi

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the final performance of the United Nations Operation in Burundi and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Operation in Burundi as at 30 April 2010, including the credits in the amount of 26.3 million United States dollars;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

3. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the final performance of the Operation;

4. Decides that Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Operation shall be credited with their respective share of the net cash available in the Special Account for the United Nations Operation in Burundi in the amount of 9,523,300 dollars as at 30 April 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2007, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

5. Encourages Member States that are owed credits referred to in paragraph 4 above to apply those credits to any accounts where they have outstanding assessed contributions;

6. Urges all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions in full;

7. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Operation, their respective share of the net cash available in the Special Account for the Operation in the amount of 9,523,300 dollars as at 30 April 2010 shall be set off against their outstanding obligations, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 4 above;

8. Also decides that updated information on the financial position of the Operation shall be included in the report on the updated position of closed peacekeeping missions, to be considered by the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session under the item entitled "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations";

9. Further decides to delete from its agenda the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Operation in Burundi".

Central African Republic

In 2010, the Central African Republic (CAR) made concerted efforts to implement the recommendations of the 2008 inclusive political dialogue [YUN 2008, p. 157], particularly the preparations for holding elections and steps to move forward the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) process. The elections, scheduled for 16 May, however, had to be postponed owing to technical and logistical difficulties. The National Assembly therefore amended the Constitution to allow the President and Assembly members to remain in office until elections could be held. Subsequently, the President, by decree, set 23 January 2011 as the new date for the first round of the presidential and legislative elections. The Independent Electoral Commission agreed on a revised electoral timetable, establishing dates for voter registration, the nomination of candidates and a possible second round of presidential and legislative elections on 20 March 2011.

Despite delays in the implementation of the DDR programme, progress was made in the development of a national reintegration strategy for former combatants. The Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Steering Committee approved the establishment of the Working Group on Reintegration to facilitate the development of a national strategy for the reintegration of former combatants. Meanwhile, the overall security situation in the country remained volatile owing to the ongoing internal rebellion in the north, the activities of road bandits and poachers, the lack of significant progress in DDR, setbacks in the electoral process and the presence of foreign rebel elements, including those associated with the Ugandan Lord's Resistance Army (LRA).

The United Nations advanced its integration process, with the establishment on 1 January of the Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic (BINUCA). The Policy and Coordination Group drafted an integrated strategic framework, which projected a shared vision of UN strategic objectives in support of the country's progress towards peace consolidation. It defined agreed results to be achieved by BINUCA and the UN country team. The Secretary-General recommended that the Office's mandate be extended until 31 December 2011.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (June). In his June report on the situation in the CAR and on the activities of BINUCA [S/2010/295], the Secretary-General indicated that efforts continued to implement the recommendations of the December 2008 inclusive political dialogue [YUN 2008, p. 157], particularly those relating to the DDR programme and preparations for presidential and legislative elections. The Dialogue Follow-up Committee, established in January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 148], in its assessment report published in January 2010, noted that only 44 of the 116 recommendations adopted by the inclusive political dialogue had been fully implemented, representing an execution rate of 37.93 per cent. The highest rate of implementation was related to recommendations dealing with socio-economic issues, while those pertaining to security and armed groups registered the lowest implementation rates. The Dialogue Follow-up Committee dispatched three sensitization missions to various parts of the country, including localities affected by rebellions in the south-east, north-west and north-east, from 30 March to 14 April, which focused on the establishment of local electoral committees, local DDR committees and the security situation in the electoral constituencies. In a 21 April report to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, the Committee noted that, owing to a lack of resources, the local electoral committees were not fully operational. The report also highlighted the weakness of the local DDR committees, the delay in the regrouping of the former combatants and restrictions of the free movement of persons in rebel-controlled areas, particularly in the north-western prefectures of Ouham and Ouham-Pendé, which prevented the Committee's team from visiting the towns of Paoua and Ndélé. On 20 April, President François Bozizé issued a decree relieving the Minister of Communication, Cyriaque Gonda, and the Minister of Territorial Administration and Decentralization, Elio Ouéfio, who was also the Minister in charge of elections, of their functions. With regard to the latter, the opposition had made repeated calls for his resignation or replacement on the grounds that his role as Secretary-General of the ruling Kwa na Kwa party was incompatible with that of Minister in charge of elections.

In the preparations for elections, on 14 January, an opposition alliance, the Collectif des forces du changement (CFC)—comprising the main opposition coalitions, the Union des forces vives de la nation (UFVN) and the “other parties” and the politico-military group Armée populaire pour la restauration de la démocratie (APRD)—suspended its participation in the Independent Electoral Commission, thereby paralyzing the electoral process for about two months. That action was prompted by what the opposition characterized as the Commission's lack of impartiality, flaws in the establishment of local electoral committees and the lack of credibility of the electoral list. The opposition also demanded the resignation of the Commission President and the replacement of some of the opposition's representatives on the Commission. In a bid to find a solution to the deepening crisis of confidence, President Bozizé, on 30 January, convened a meeting of national stakeholders and international partners to discuss the opposition's grievances, and mandated the National Mediator, Paulin Pomodimo, former Archbishop of Bangui, to undertake mediation efforts to help resolve the crisis. Those efforts culminated in the signing, on 13 February, of a memorandum of understanding by the Government and the entities that participated in the 2008 inclusive political dialogue, which allowed the opposition to replace some of its representatives in the Commission. It also provided for a review of the composition of the local electoral committees, including those in overseas diplomatic and consular missions; an audit of the Commission's finances; the strengthening of the Commission's capacity, with the support of international partners and available national expertise; and the review and updating of the electoral code of conduct. Subsequently, President Bozizé issued a decree on 24 February allowing the opposition to replace its representatives in the Independent Electoral Commission. By further decrees issued on 1 and 2 March, respectively, he set 25 April as the date for the first round of parliamentary and presidential elections, and demarcated the constituencies for the legislative elections. The opposition claimed that the setting of 25 April as the date for the polls was based on a unilateral recommendation of the Independent Electoral Commission President and formulated before the new opposition members were sworn in. The opposition also raised questions relating to the state of preparedness of the Independent Electoral Commission, security challenges arising from the DDR process, and the issue of internally displaced populations and refugees, which in its view made it premature to hold elections on that date. The opposition emphasized that progress on DDR, particularly the completion of the disarmament and demobilization of former combatants, was a prerequisite for a reliable voter registration process and for the free movement of political actors in the run-up to any elections.

On 24 March, the Independent Electoral Commission, in a progress report on its activities to the fourth meeting of the Steering Committee on Elections, concluded that it would be technically impossible for the Commission to comply with the initial schedule. The report was generally welcomed by the main international partners. On 30 March, President Bozizé issued a decree fixing the new date of 16 May for legislative and presidential elections. On 5 April, however, the opposition CFC announced that it would not field candidates because conditions did not exist for transparent, credible and consensual elections. To help resolve the disagreements between the opposition and the Independent Electoral Commission, the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, former President Pierre Buyoya of Burundi, arrived in Bangui on 13 April for consultations with national authorities, political parties, civil society and international partners. At the same time, representatives of the international community, along with the Special Representative of the UN Secretary-General, also pursued their facilitation role.

At the eighth meeting of the Steering Committee on Elections on 22 April, the Independent Electoral Commission President acknowledged that, owing to technical and logistical difficulties, the elections could not take place on 16 May, and disclosed that it would formulate a revised electoral schedule. On 29 April, a meeting of national stakeholders and international partners to discuss the crisis in the electoral process, convened by President Bozizé, concluded that the elections should be postponed to allow sufficient time for the preparation and conduct of credible polls. That decision was unanimously welcomed by all national stakeholders, including the opposition. A bill was subsequently tabled in the National Assembly to amend the Constitution so as to allow the President and Assembly members to remain in office beyond the constitutional time frame until elections could be held. The bill was challenged by the opposition and some sections of civil society, who insisted that the issue should be addressed through a political consensus among national stakeholders. The Special Representative held extensive consultations with national stakeholders and international partners, including opposition leaders, civil society representatives and regional and international actors, to support the organization of peaceful, credible and transparent elections.

The second phase of the DDR sensitization campaign, launched on 5 February, was aborted shortly thereafter owing to disagreements between the main rebel movement, APRD, and the Government over the modalities for the payment of daily food allowances. To resolve the impasse, the Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Steering Committee delinked the sensitization campaign from the establishment of local DDR committees and the payment of food stipends. In that context, the establishment of local committees and the payment of food allowances were successfully conducted in the north-western and north-central regions from 1 to 9 March. The sensitization campaign in the north-east was carried out from 14 to 25 May.

The overall security situation in the country remained volatile owing to the ongoing rebellion in the north of the country, the activities of road bandits and poachers, the lack of significant progress in the implementation of DDR, the setbacks in the electoral process and the presence of foreign rebel elements, including those associated with LRA and the Front populaire pour le redressement (FPR) of the Chadian rebel leader General Baba Laddé. Humanitarian operations of UN agencies and NGOs were also hampered by the deterioration in the security situation in certain areas. In Bangui and surrounding areas, the security situation remained calm but tense in the run-up to the elections. Elsewhere, hectic and inconclusive efforts by the Government to negotiate with armed groups that were not part of the Libreville peace process increased tensions in the Vakaga and Bamingui-Bangoran prefectures. On 2 April, the Convention des patriots pour la justice et la paix (CPJP) launched a brutal attack against the town of Ndélé, which was defended by a contingent of the Central African Armed Forces, but failed to take control of it. In the Vakaga prefecture, ethnic tensions linked to access to local resources, including taxes levied on imports from the Sudan, remained high. Several incursions of various armed groups originating from Chad or the Sudan were reported. The north-eastern area of the CAR was increasingly used by those groups as a temporary safe haven. In the south-east, the deployment, since December 2009, of the Ugandan People's Defence Force (UPDF) in pursuit of LRA elements had restored some measure of security in the town of Obo. Persistent attacks by LRA operating in small groups in rural areas, however, had forced villagers to seek refuge near UPDF bases, leaving the villages empty between Mboki and the border with the Sudan. At least 12 attacks were launched against civilians in various localities between February and April, reportedly resulting in 23 deaths and more than 60 abductions. On 21 March, LRA reportedly attacked Agoumar, where the bodies of 14 villagers killed with axes and machetes were later discovered. The security situation remained particularly tense in the north of Kobo (Ouham prefecture). In April, the country's army, the Forces armées centrafricaines (FACA), reinforced its presence in the area and retook control of the road to Chad. In addition to the December 2009 disappearance of the leader of the former rebel movement Mouvement national du salut de la patrie (MNSP), Hassan Ousman [YUN 2009, p. 151], in January 2010, the former minister and leader of the rebel movement CRJP, Charles Massi, disappeared under unclear circumstances.

The Secretary-General, noting the decision to postpone the elections and the constitutional amendments enabling the President and the National Assembly to remain in office after the expiration of their mandates, urged all stakeholders to show a high level of responsibility and respect for the constitutional order and to agree on a consensual approach to move the electoral process forward. He emphasized the need for the Independent Electoral Commission to formulate, as soon as possible, a clear and realistic calendar for the conduct of elections, expressed concern about the disappearance of political leaders, and called upon the CAR authorities to clarify those occurrences and to be committed to ensuring the safety of the politico-military leaders who had joined the peace process and were currently residing in Bangui.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council considered the Secretary-General's report on 28 June [S/PV.6345] and was briefed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Sahle-Work Zewde, who said that the overall political, security and socio-economic situations in the CAR remained precarious and fraught with challenges. She emphasized that the international community should remain committed to providing political and financial support to address the pressing challenges, especially to complete the electoral and DDR processes.

By a press statement [SC/9963] of the same day, the Council called upon the Government and all national stakeholders to move forward the preparation and conduct of free, fair, transparent and credible elections; expressed concern with the slow pace of DDR implementation; and called on the Government and all armed movements to take the necessary measures for a transparent and accountable completion of DDR. The Council also condemned attacks by LRA in the country.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his November report on the situation in the CAR and on BINUCA activities [S/2010/584], the Secretary-General stated that, on 30 July, President Bozizé, by decree, had set 23 January 2011 as the date for the first round of the presidential and legislative elections. President Bozizé explained, on 2 August, that the postponement of the elections was necessary to make adequate preparations and overcome logistical constraints during the rainy season, when many parts of the country were inaccessible. On 10 August, the Independent Electoral Commission, supported by all political factions, civil society and the six entities of the inclusive political dialogue, agreed on a revised electoral timetable, which established dates for voter registration, the nomination of candidates and a possible second round of presidential and legislative elections on 20 March 2011. The timetable was further amended on 18 August at a meeting of the Elections Steering Committee. Voter registration started throughout the country on 22 September, and was completed on 21 October, with an estimated 70 to 75 per cent of the voting population registered. On 19 October, President Bozizé, meeting with national and international stakeholders to discuss progress and challenges with regard to the electoral process, expressed concern over possible delays in the preparation for the elections by the Independent Electoral Commission, and proposed switching from a computerized to a manual electoral roll and shortening the period for the nomination of candidates. He also discussed the redrawing of the boundaries of electoral constituencies for the legislative elections. On 27 October, presidential decrees were issued further amending the boundaries of those constituencies. The new period for the registration of candidates was adjusted from 28 October to 8 November, instead of 8 November to 8 December. On 21 and 26 October, the opposition coalition CFC rejected the decisions of the President of the Independent Electoral Commission, including the use of a manual electoral roll, called for his resignation for alleged mismanagement of public funds, and requested the publication of the Commission's audit report. The coalition also threatened to withdraw from the Independent Electoral Commission if its demands were not met. The Secretary-General's Special Representative consulted with all national stakeholders and international partners to bridge positions and build consensus. Six candidates, including President Bozizé, former President Ange-Félix Patassé, and Jean-Jacques Demafoth, leader of APRD, registered for the presidential elections.

During the reporting period, the Follow-up Committee on the recommendations of the inclusive political dialogue continued to meet and report on political, governance, security and socio-economic issues. At sessions held on 27 July, and 27 and 28 September, the Committee reviewed the progress made in the implementation of the recommendations of the inclusive political dialogue. On 29 September, the Committee reported that, of 116 recommendations adopted by the inclusive political dialogue, 43 had been fully implemented and 15 partially implemented. The bulk of the unimplemented or partially implemented recommendations related to the Government's obligations in the security sector. From 30 August to 4 September, the Committee deployed rapporteurs to 12 of the country's 16 regions, who highlighted in their reports the absence of State institutions in many areas outside the capital and apathy towards the upcoming elections. The missions uncovered a pattern of corruption by State institutions, which was a major obstacle to the promotion of socio-economic development.

On 24 June, the Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Steering Committee agreed to begin the verification of the lists of combatants of the politico-military movements committed to the recommendations of the inclusive political dialogue. It deployed two missions to the north-west and north-east, where most of the combatants to be verified were located. The verification process in the north-west began on 9 August, with the active commitment of the leaders of APRD and the Union des forces républicaines (UFR). Three groups of military observers, and one integrated police unit of the Mission for the Consolidation of Peace in the Central African Republic (MICOPAX), the subregional peacekeeping force, deployed in the Nana Gribizi, Ouham and Ouham-Pendé regions, completed that phase of the verification process on 16 September. The military observers visited APRD and UFR camps and verified 5,992 out of the 6,047 names submitted by the two groups. The military observers were not able to visit the camps or verify the lists of combatants submitted by the Front démocratique du peuple centrafricain (FDPC), whose future participation in the process was not clear. The verification mission to the Vakaga and Haute Kotto regions could not take place for political and logistical reasons. The Government, for its part, had yet to develop a reintegration strategy for former combatants, which was a critical component for the success of the DDR process.

The security situation remained volatile in parts of the country. While Bangui and the south-west were mostly calm, in the north and east of the country, there was some violence. Local community self-defence groups, together with rebel movements, notably the Union des forces démocratiques pour le rassemblement (UFDR) and APRD, were de facto providing security in large areas of the country where the poorly equipped FACA was not deployed or had little presence. The security situation remained tense around the northern town of Kabo in the Ouham region where FDPC was active. On 13 and 14 October, the AU hosted a conference in Bangui to address the threat posed by LRA to the CAR and neighbouring countries. The meeting resulted in a series of humanitarian, development and security-related recommendations, including the formation of a joint operations centre and a joint brigade, and increased cooperation on border patrols. BINUCA organized, on the margins of the meeting, a meeting of UN missions in the region to facilitate better information-sharing and coordination of political initiatives on the LRA threat to regional stability.

The United Nations had advanced its integration process since BINUCA was established on 1 January. The Policy and Coordination Group completed the drafting of an integrated strategic framework, which projected a shared vision of UN strategic objectives in support of the country's progress towards peace consolidation: security sector reform, including DDR; good governance and rule of law; support to the restoration of State authority throughout the national territory; and improvement of basic services and community-based recovery. The integrated strategic framework defined agreed results to be achieved by BINUCA and the UN country team in 2011, with timelines and responsibilities for the delivery of agreed tasks critical to consolidating peace, including agreed mechanisms for monitoring and evaluation. The Secretary-General recommended that BINUCA's mandate be extended until 31 December 2011.

Security Council consideration. On 8 December [S/PV.6438], the Secretary-General's Special Representative and Head of BINUCA, Sahle-Work Zewde, and the Chair of the CAR configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission, Jan Grauls, briefed the Security Council on the situation in the country. Ms. Zewde, updating the information provided in the Secretary-General's report, said that on 15 November President Bozizé had convened a meeting of national stakeholders and international partners to resolve the issue related to the amendment of the dates for the nomination of candidates. As a result of that meeting, the deadlock was broken and two more opposition candidates were able to submit their candidatures. The opposition parties submitted their nominations for the 105 seats in the National Assembly. On 5 December, the Independent Electoral Commission published the names of 833 candidates standing for seats in the National Assembly. BINUCA and the International Organization of la Francophonie helped to revise the code of conduct for the elections to be signed by the candidates and relevant institutions and distributed prior to the start of the electoral campaign. On 20 November, a new Minister for Territorial Administration and Decentralization in charge of electoral matters was appointed.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 December [meeting 6444], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/26 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council supports the ongoing efforts aimed at national reconciliation in the Central African Republic and welcomes the progress achieved so far. It calls upon the politico-military groups that have not joined the political peace process to do so.

The Council calls upon the Government of the Central African Republic and all national stakeholders to continue their efforts to move forward expeditiously with the preparation and conduct of free, fair, transparent and credible elections. In this regard, the Council takes note of the presidential decree of 30 July 2010 that has set 23 January 2011 as the date for the first round of the presidential and legislative elections, and of the peaceful completion of the registration process. The Council calls for the Independent Electoral Commission to continue its efforts to meet the timetable agreed by all stakeholders and to address outstanding technical and logistical challenges promptly, transparently and in a consensual manner, with the support of the international community. It urges all national stakeholders to uphold the independence of the Commission and to respect the result of the polls.

The Council acknowledges the progress made so far in the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process. It calls upon all politico-military groups to take the measures necessary for a transparent and accountable completion of disarmament and demobilization without delay. It also calls upon the Government of the Central African Republic to expedite the elaboration and implementation of a national reintegration strategy for former combatants and notes that transparent funding and coordination of reintegration programmes are critical to the long-term success of the programme. It encourages the international community, including the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic, to provide timely and adequate support to the process.

The Council renews its call to the Government of the Central African Republic to revive the efforts to reform security sector institutions, which is a crucial element of the peacebuilding process in the Central African Republic, and for addressing widespread impunity, promoting the rule of law and increasing respect for human rights.

The Council remains seriously concerned by the security situation in the Central African Republic. The Council condemns all attacks by local and foreign armed groups that threaten the population as well as the peace and stability of the Central African Republic and the subregion, including the attacks on Birao carried out by the Convention des patriotes pour la justice et la paix on 19 July and 24 November 2010.

The Council commends States in the region for their increased cooperation, welcomes efforts they have made to address the threat posed by the Lord's Resistance

Army and notes in this regard the recommendations that resulted from the conference hosted by the African Union in Bangui on 13 and 14 October 2010, which include the formation of a joint operations centre, a joint brigade and increased cooperation on border patrols. It calls for the countries of the region and the relevant United Nations missions to continue to enhance coordination and information-sharing regarding the threat posed by the Lord's Resistance Army.

Noting the primary responsibility of the Government of the Central African Republic to promote security and for protecting its civilians with respect for the rule of law, human rights and international humanitarian law, the Council stresses the importance of bilateral partners' work enhancing the capacity of the Central African Armed Forces and stresses that such assistance should be in support of the wider security sector reform process. The Council also encourages further cooperation between the Governments of the Central African Republic, Chad and the Sudan in order to secure their common borders. The Council recognizes the contribution of the Mission for the Consolidation of Peace in the Central African Republic in support of durable peace and security in the Central African Republic and calls upon regional and subregional organizations to consider, upon request of the Government of the Central African Republic, further actions to support security in the Central African Republic, such as reinforcing the Mission.

The Council welcomes the ongoing support to the peacebuilding process in the Central African Republic provided by the international community. It welcomes, in particular, the important work of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Central African Republic, Ms. Sahle-Work Zewde, and the efforts of the Peacebuilding Commission in advising and advocating for coordinated international support to address core peacebuilding priorities, including elections and disarmament, demobilization and reintegration. The Council further welcomes the finalization of the Integrated Strategic Framework for the coordination of peacebuilding efforts in the Central African Republic.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 19 November 2010 on the Central African Republic and the recommendations contained therein, and welcomes the extension of the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic for a period of one year, until 31 December 2011, operating in accordance with its mandate as set out in the statement by its President of 7 April 2009, taking into consideration the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad from the north-east of the Central African Republic.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/311], the Secretary-General stated that the 15 November decision to use a paper-based voter list instead of the computerized list had important implications, the most significant of which was the inability of the Independent Electoral Commission to post and revise the list ahead of election day. On 21 November, Jean Wilybiro Sacko, the Ambassador of the CAR to France and President of the Commission in 2005, returned to Bangui to take up the post of Minister for Territorial Administration and Decentralization. On 29 December, CRC, the coalition of opposition parties, called for the elections to be postponed, arguing that arrangements would not be in place in time for the 23 January 2011 elections.

The Follow-up Committee on the recommendations arising from the inclusive political dialogue met for the last time (22–25 November) to review progress made in the implementation of the recommendations. The Committee noted that little progress had been made since its last meeting on 29 September. Of the 116 recommendations, approximately 45 per cent had been implemented. It had been agreed that the Committee's mandate would expire after the elections, and the Committee would cease to function.

Despite delays in the implementation of the DDR programme, progress was made in the development of a national reintegration strategy for former combatants. On 10 December, the Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Steering Committee approved the establishment of the Working Group on Reintegration to facilitate the development of a national strategy for the reintegration of former combatants.

The military and security situation remained precarious. On 24 November, CPJP, supported by Chadian rebels, attacked and seized the town of Birao, the capital of the north-eastern Vakaga region, just a few days after the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) (see p. 169), causing the temporary displacement of 8,000 people. On 30 November, elements of the Chadian armed forces entered the country to support FACA operations and expelled CPJP from Birao. The Chadian forces stayed to secure the area around Birao.

Peacebuilding Commission

The Peacebuilding Commission reviewed progress in the implementation of the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in the Central African Republic adopted in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 152], particularly in the priority areas of DDR in the context of security reform, and the preparatory phase of the general elections. The Chair maintained pressure on all stakeholders to ensure that a transparent and accountable funding mechanism would be devised for all funds made available for DDR.

In governance and the rule of law, while some progress was made in key areas, notably in preparations for the general elections, much remained to be done. The Commission advocated the early revision and adoption of the electoral code and pledged to mobilize financial and technical support for the organization of the elections. An electoral assessment mission, led by the Department of Political Affairs, identified with national counterparts areas where international support would be needed. Considerable efforts were made by Commission members to strengthen the country's institutional and control frameworks through the provision of technical assistance and capacity-building measures. The Commission continued to advocate, with limited success, for funding for the development hubs projects. It would also continue to advocate with the Government and international partners for a co-ordinated approach to the development hubs strategy, which should be expanded to the parts of the country previously affected by conflict.

Concerning the implementation of commitments by the Government, the Commission reported that in the area of security sector reform and DDR, 11 of the 29 activities identified had been fully implemented, 11 were being implemented and seven had not been implemented. Progress was made in institutional reform, human and institutional capacity-building, human rights and the creation of an environment conducive to peace and the restoration of trust and confidence between people and the defence and security forces. Particular progress was made in DDR. Some activities were not implemented because they depended on the completion of other activities or owing to a lack of funds. Of the 44 activities in the three priority areas of action relating to governance and the rule of law, nine had been fully implemented, 28 were being implemented and seven remained to be implemented. Progress was made in a number of sectors, including implementing the recommendations of the inclusive political process; institutional and human capacity-building; establishing oversight over the institutions of the Republic; taking ownership of human rights and rights of the child; and fostering an enabling environment for business, peace and restoring trust. As to the development hubs, the 15 activities identified in the three priority actions were being implemented. Significant progress had still not been seen because of the novelty of the concept in the CAR. It was only after the investment phase of all the plans of action of the development hubs had been completed that progress achieved as a result of the strategic planning for the development hubs carried out by UN-Habitat could be measured.

In terms of good governance and the rule of law, the activity implemented related to participation of the Association of Women Lawyers and the Central African Republic Inter-NGO Council (CIONGCA) in the revision of the electoral code.

In a 27 January statement [PBC/4/CAF/4], the Chair of the CAR configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission expressed the Commission's concern about the slow progress in the launching of the DDR process, and in the preparations for the 2010 elections. The CAR configuration renewed its call to bilateral and multi-lateral partners to assist the country in implementing those priorities. It welcomed the signature of the DDR programme document and called upon all stakeholders to ensure that the disarmament and demobilization stages were initiated immediately, with the firm intention of completing them before the elections, and to enhance the overall coordination of the programme. The delay in the deployment of military observers of the Economic Community of Central African States and the remaining ethnic tensions in the north and north-east of the country required urgent attention from the Government in order not to hamper the DDR process. Transparent funding, the coordination of reintegration programmes and a stronger link to the wider security sector reform strategy were crucial to the sustainability of DDR. Regarding the preparations for the elections, the configuration called upon all stakeholders to enable the Independent Electoral Commission to start its work in earnest and in full independence. The configuration remained fully committed to assisting the CAR in its peacebuilding efforts, and intended to launch a new phase of the peacebuilding process in the second half of 2010 by organizing a donor conference in New York to mobilize resources for other peacebuilding priorities. It welcomed the announcement by the Secretary-General of a second envelope of the Peacebuilding Fund for the Central African Republic, in the amount of $20 million, which would help to alleviate the peacebuilding needs in the country.

In its conclusions and recommendations, the Peacebuilding Commission noted the continued need for international financial assistance to implement medium- to long-term activities. It stressed the importance of considering DDR as an integral part of security sector reform. The Commission welcomed the progress realized by the Central African executive and legislative branches in creating the institutional conditions for organizing credible and transparent presidential and legislative elections. It made a number of recommendations to the Government, international partners and civil society.

In its draft report on its fourth session [PBC/4/OC/L.1], the Peacebuilding Commission indicated that, on 20 September, in the margins of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals (see p. 813), the CAR configuration facilitated the holding of a high-level event to address peacebuilding and reconstruction challenges in the CAR. During the reporting period, the configuration and its Chair facilitated coordination among the partners of the CAR. An extensive mapping of resource flows was carried out and updated, covering the priority areas of the Strategic Framework with a view to minimizing duplication and overlap in the activities of the country's partners. The Chair of the configuration visited the country from 9 to 12 June. The configuration continued to follow closely the developments in the country, with a particular focus on the peacebuilding priorities identified in the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding. Of particular concern were the slow pace of DDR implementation and the fact that the preparations for the presidential and legislative elections were marred by numerous challenges and delays. Looking ahead, the key peacebuilding challenges would be in the areas of security sector reform, including the wrapping up of the DDR programme and the implementation of a reintegration strategy; good governance, with the successful holding of legislative and presidential elections; and the launching of the development hubs project, which would, it was hoped, have a positive impact on the living conditions of local populations.

In terms of resource mobilization, as a result of regular exchanges by the Commission Chair, a groundbreaking agreement between the World Bank and the CAR configuration was reached to strengthen cooperation. The first expression of that partnership was the announcement on 20 September of an additional contribution of $20 million by the International Development Association. The Secretary-General had also approved in February an additional allocation of $20 million for the Peacebuilding Fund. The Commission responded to the Government's call to the international community to bridge the funding gap in the electoral budget, estimated at $7.5 million.

Children and armed conflict

In April [A/64/742-S/2010/181], the Secretary-General, in his report on children and armed conflict, provided information on grave violations committed against children in the CAR as well as in Chad. He indicated that child recruitment continued to be a concern, with mobilization of a large number of children into the ranks of self-defence militias throughout the country, in particular in Nana-Mambéré, Ouham-Pendé and Ouham prefectures. It was estimated that children constituted one third of the self-defence militias. There were concerns that those militias were supported by the Government and were being used as auxiliaries by FACA. The United Nations observed an increased and open presence of armed children linked to those militias along main roads in Bocaranga and Bouar/Niem. UFDR and CPJP, which had split from UFDR, were also recruiting and using children in the frontlines in the Vakaga area of north-eastern CAR. Between 200 and 300 children remained in APRD, FDPC and the Mouvement des libérateurs centrafricains pour la justice (MLCJ). Furthermore, approximately 100 children were estimated to be associated with Chadian zaraguinas in the Nana-Gribizi and eastern Ouham areas. The situation in the south-eastern region was alarming, following repeated incursions and the LRA presence in Obo, Bambouti, Zemio, Djema and Mboki villages, in Haut-Mbomou prefecture. LRA continued to abduct and forcibly recruit children and use them as combatants, spies, sex-slaves and porters. Incidence of rape and sexual violence against children by armed elements was of grave concern. The United Nations confirmed 108 cases of sexual violence against children in the north-west in the reporting period, with rebel groups and armed bandits (coupeurs de routes) among the perpetrators.

Despite the absence of a formal action plan, a contingency plan to assist the release of children was developed by the United Nations and child protection partners following the commitment by APRD to demobilize all children in its ranks. As part of the implementation of the plan, APRD identified several cantonment sites for children and provided preliminary lists of children associated with the group for verification.

Recruitment and use of children, in particular in eastern Chad, by the national army as well as different armed groups, had continued in 2009.

Report of Working Group. On 30 July [S/2010/410], the Chair of the Working Group of the Security Council on Children and Armed Conflict submitted a report on the Group's activities. The Working Group learned that APRD, which was committed to releasing all children within its ranks, had released 418 children between April and July 2009, who were reunited with their families. Some 183 verified cases of sexual violence against women and children, among more than 1,000 reported, had been perpetrated, mainly by armed groups.

BINUCA

The United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic (BINUCA), set up in accordance with Security Council presidential statement S/PRST/2009/5 [YUN 2009, p. 146], became operational on 1 January. It had as its mandate to assist in implementing the outcomes of the December 2008 inclusive political dialogue [YUN 2008, p. 157]. BINUCA was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Sahle-Work Zewde (Ethiopia).

Financing

In October [A/65/328 & Add.3], the Secretary-General submitted resource requirements for BINUCA for 2011 in the amount of $19,793,600 ($18,566,900

net), in the context of his overall financing proposals for special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council. ACABQ, in its December report [A/65/602] thereon, recommended that the overall requirement for BINUCA for 2011 be reduced to reflect its recommendations.

The General Assembly, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1429) of 24 December, endorsed the ACABQ recommendations.

Central African Republic and Chad

In the Central African Republic (CAR) and Chad, the improved security environment led to an agreement for the cessation of the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT) for the protection of civilians, effective 16 May, and the handover of those responsibilities to the Government of Chad, which would also facilitate the delivery of humanitarian aid and the free movement of humanitarian personnel. Accordingly, the MINURCAT mandate was revised to allow it to continue to perform the tasks related to the rule of law, human rights and civil affairs, and mine action assistance, and to support the Government's efforts to achieve self-sustainability of the local force for protecting the refugee camps as a professional enforcement entity. MINURCAT left Chad on 15 December. In north-eastern CAR, the Secretary-General proposed that MINURCAT be authorized under a Chapter VI mandate, with a troop strength of 300, to secure the airport in Birao and provide limited extraction operations for humanitarian workers.

Political and security developments

MINURCAT future. On 15 January, as the Secretary-General subsequently reported [S/2010/217], the Government of Chad requested that the United Nations commence negotiations to determine the modalities for the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT), effective 15 March. In discussions with Secretariat representatives, the Chadians expressed dissatisfaction with the slow deployment of the MINURCAT force. With the improved security environment, Chadian security forces would be able to provide the necessary security and protection for vulnerable groups and humanitarian workers. Moreover, it was asserted that most of the acts of banditry and criminality were attended to by the Détachement intégré de sécurité (DIS), the special Chadian police for maintaining law and order in refugee camps and among displaced civilians within a 10-mile radius of the camps in eastern Chad, in coordination with other national security forces. The Government was also frustrated over the slow implementation of infrastructure projects that had been part of the MINURCAT mandate. Consequently, the Secretary-General dispatched to Chad three successive Secretariat missions between 26 January and 23 April.

The first, led by the Secretary General's former Military Adviser, Major-General (retired) Patrick Cammaert, sought to engage the authorities on possible options regarding the future of MINURCAT and how best to address the perceived shortcomings of the military component, including measures to make it more effective. In their engagements, representatives reaffirmed the Government's commitment to ensuring the security of civilians and humanitarian workers and reiterated their request that the MINURCAT military component withdraw. The second mission, undertaken at the request of the Security Council, was led by Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations Alain Le Roy to explore the ways forward. Those discussions culminated with President Déby's consent to a proposal for a two-month technical extension of the MINURCAT mandate to allow for further discussions on the modalities for the gradual withdrawal of its military force and the continuation of its civilian component. With regard to the latter, Government representatives indicated that consideration could be given to a limited UN military presence, whose task would be to guard the UN camps from which the MINURCAT civilian component would operate.

On 3 March [S/2010/115], Chad informed the Council President that it had reconsidered its decision requesting the withdrawal of MINURCAT, and agreed to a technical extension of the Mission's mandate for two months, beginning 16 March. The Government expressed its availability for consultations with the Secretary-General to plan the future of MINURCAT, in particular the military component, while maintaining the civilian component as needed.

On 11 March [S/2010/129], the Secretary-General, in a letter to the Council President, noted that the MINURCAT mandate was due to expire on 15 March, and given the ongoing discussions on its future, recommended that the Council consider a two-month technical rollover of its mandate.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 March [meeting 6283], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1913(2010). The draft [S/2010/130] was submitted by Austria.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions and the statements by its President concerning Chad, the Central African Republic and the subregion, including resolutions 1769(2007) of 31 July 2007, 1778(2007) of 25 September 2007, 1834(2008) of 24 September 2008 and 1861(2009) of 14 January 2009,

Considering the note verbale of the Government of Chad of 19 January 2010, its letter dated 3 March 2010 and the letter of the Secretary-General dated 11 March 2010, indicating that discussions on the future of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad are still ongoing,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

1. Decides to extend until 15 May 2010 the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad as set out in resolution 1861(2009);

2. Decides also to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In his April report on MINURCAT [S/2010/217], submitted in response to Security Council resolution 1913(2010) (see above), the Secretary-General informed the Council that the third Secretariat mission, led by Youssef Mahmoud (Tunisia), acting Special Representative for MINURCAT, arrived in Chad on 23 March. Consultations with his Chadian counterparts culminated in a 23 April agreement by which, effective 16 May, the Mission's current mandate for the protection of civilians would cease and the Government of Chad would ensure the security and protection of the civilian population in eastern Chad, including refugees, internally displaced persons (IDPs), returnees and host communities; facilitate the delivery of humanitarian aid and the free movement of humanitarian personnel; ensure the security and freedom of movement of MINURCAT staff and UN associated personnel; work towards the voluntary return and resettlement of IDPs and the demilitarization of refugee and IDP camps; and improve the capacity of Chadian authorities in eastern Chad. Progress against those benchmarks would be assessed in July and October by a joint Chad/UN working group. Chad and MINURCAT would also establish a forum to foster dialogue and collaboration in order to reach common understanding of shared roles and responsibilities. To carry out its security tasks related to the protection of refugees, IDPs and humanitarian workers, the strength of the DIS force would be increased from 850 to up to 1,000 elements.

The Secretary-General proposed a revised mandate for MINURCAT, by which it would continue to perform the tasks outlined in Council resolution 1861(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 154] in areas of rule of law, human rights and civil affairs, and mine action assistance, and would continue to train, mentor and support the Government's efforts to achieve self-sustainability for DIS as a professional enforcement entity. A joint Chad/UN working group would review the tasks for strengthening DIS capacity to provide security, and develop a plan for the progressive handover to the Government of the administrative, financial and logistical support to DIS. It would also review the training of DIS personnel and its judicial police in investigative techniques and electronic tracking systems, as well as radio, security escorts and international humanitarian law; the selection and training of 10 additional DIS trainers; training in the provision of area security, and in the maintenance of the DIS vehicle fleet, and driving skills; the recruitment of 50 drivers and 25 car mechanics; deployment to new areas; the DIS organizational structure and coordination mechanisms with other local security forces, including setting up operation centres in governorates, prefectures and sous-prefectures; and progress in DIS-related infrastructure projects. During the first six months of the transition phase, MINURCAT police would be co-located with DIS depending on the security situation and the requirements of an enhanced UN security phase IV regime. MINURCAT would maintain its current police strength (226–300), and would support the rehabilitation of the DIS Police School and dormitories in N'Djamena, construction of six police stations and 13 DIS posts in eastern Chad, and the digging of wells and installation of pumps in each of the 19 DIS locations in eastern Chad.

In the light of Chad's decision to assume full responsibility for the security and the protection of the civilian population, MINURCAT would facilitate the transition to host country security mechanisms. The military component would provide security for MINURCAT personnel, facilities, installations and equipment; maintain situational awareness; and provide escort for UN military personnel, extraction support for UN and humanitarian personnel in extremis, and medical evacuation support for UN personnel. It would reduce its area of responsibility by excluding the current Sector North and the Salamat prefecture, but would undertake medical evacuation throughout the entire Mission area of responsibility. The force would operate under Chapter VI of the UN charter and modify its rules of engagement accordingly. It would be deployed in Farchana and Goz Beida, and maintain forward headquarters and a logistics base in Abéché and a small rear headquarters in N'Djamena. Effective 16 May, the military component would be reduced from its current 3,300 strength in Chad to 1,400 troops and 500 support elements. Some 1,400 troops would be withdrawn by 15 July, and the remaining 1,900 troops would commence final withdrawal on 15 October.

In north-eastern CAR, the Secretary-General proposed that MINURCAT be authorized with a troop strength of 300 to secure the airport in Birao and provide limited extraction operations for humanitarian workers. MINURCAT would cease its operations in north-eastern CAR and start withdrawing as the main force commenced withdrawal from Chad in October.

Additional infrastructure work would be undertaken to support Chad in fulfilling its protection mandate and mitigating any possible negative impact on the infrastructure and economy in eastern Chad. In addition, Chad requested that MINURCAT honour its commitment to build an apron and terminal at the N'Djamena airport. The Government of Chad and MINURCAT would meet in October to jointly review progress on infrastructure work. The Mission would liaise with the Government and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) to relocate refugee camps in close proximity to the border, and provide logistical assistance to UNHCR for that purpose.

The Secretary-General said that the new mandate, with its phased approach, would allow MINURCAT to transition from a Chapter VII to a Chapter VI mandate; allow for the enhanced UN staff security regime to be in place before MINURCAT troops commenced final withdrawal in October; permit humanitarian actors to gradually adjust their deployment and modus operandi; and allow UN entities in Chad to organize themselves differently and integrate their activities to enhance their sustainability and impact. He recommended that the Council approve a revised mandate for MINURCAT for one year.

In other developments, the Secretary-General reported that relations between the Governments of Chad and the Sudan improved significantly, with the signing of an agreement in N'Djamena on 15 January to normalize bilateral relations. The two countries agreed, among other things, to deny rebel groups the use of their territories and to work towards their disarmament; and they deployed a joint border force of 3,000 troops to deny the cross-border movement of armed elements and stem their criminal activities. The force operated under a joint command in El Geneina, in Darfur, the Sudan, and Abéché, in eastern Chad. The visit of Chadian President Idriss Déby Itno to Khartoum, the Sudan, from 8 to 9 February, was a major step in strengthening bilateral relations between the two countries. The visit was followed by the appointment, on 15 February, of a Chadian Ambassador to Khartoum. On 10 April, the border between the two countries reopened for the first time since 2003 at three points, and cross-border trade resumed.

During the period under review, progress was made in implementing the 13 August N'Djamena Agreement [YUN 2007, p. 152] between the Government of Chad and political opposition. On 7 January, the Independent National Electoral Commission published an electoral timetable providing for voter registration between 21 March and 9 May; parliamentary and local elections on 28 November and 12 December, respectively; and the first and second rounds of presidential elections on 23 April and 12 June 2011. In the MINURCAT area of operations in north-eastern CAR, the security situation remained unstable.

By 15 March, all MINURCAT operational bases were established and, on average, 75 per cent of infantry troops were deployed to all sectors. As at 22 April, MINURCAT total force strength stood at 3,442 and was expected to reach 4,850, or 93 per cent of authorized strength, by 15 May.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 May [meeting 6312], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1922(2010). The draft [S/2010/237] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions and the statements by its President concerning Chad, the Central African Republic and the subregion, including resolutions 1769(2007) of 31 July 2007, 1778(2007) of 25 September 2007, 1834(2008) of 24 September 2008, 1861(2009) of 14 January 2009 and 1913(2010) of 12 March 2010,

Considering the need to examine thoroughly the recommendations for a revised mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad included in the report of the Secretary-General of 29 April 2010,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

1. Decides to extend until 26 May 2010 the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad as set out in resolution 1861(2009) and extended by resolution 1913(2010);

2. Decides also to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication. On 21 May [S/2010/250], Chad transmitted to the Council President a memorandum on the future of MINURCAT, which echoed the proposals set out in the Secretary-General's April report for a revised mandate for MINURCAT. It also referred to the 15 January Agreement on the normalization of relations between Chad and the Sudan (see p. 158), which led to the deployment of a 3,000-strong joint Chad-Sudan force along the common border, thereby enabling Chad to assume full responsibility for the security and protection of civilians, particularly refugees and IDPs. In that regard, DIS, responsible for security in and around refugee camps and IDP sites, would have a broader scope for action, in addition to providing escort details for humanitarian workers, in cooperation with security forces in the region. The security belt in eastern Chad would consist of three levels: sovereignty forces (the Chadian national army) based in garrison towns along the border, and the joint Chadian-Sudanese force based in 10 locations on either side of the border and its headquarters in Eldjineina (the Sudan), which would be relocated to Abéché; the forces of the Gendarmerie Territoriale and the Garde nationale et nomade du Tchad (GNNT) located in villages on the side of the border between the DIS area of operations and the garrison towns, and a joint mobile disarmament force providing security to other security forces; and the DIS line of surveillance within and around the refugee camps and towns monitored in conjunction with local security forces.

Chad was in a position to exercise its sovereign responsibility to provide full security for persons and goods throughout its territory. It intended to maintain the structure of DIS, while expanding its size and providing it with more resources, even after the withdrawal of MINURCAT, until such time as the Darfur crisis was settled and the refugees returned to their homeland.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 May [meeting 6321], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1923(2010). The draft [S/2010/251] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions and the statements by its President concerning Chad, the Central African Republic and the subregion, including resolutions 1769(2007) of 31 July 2007, 1778(2007) of 25 September 2007, 1834(2008) of 24 September 2008, 1861(2009) of 14 January 2009, 1913(2010) of 12 March 2010 and 1922(2010) of 12 May 2010,

Reaffirming its commitment to the sovereignty, unity, territorial integrity and political independence of Chad and the Central African Republic, and to the cause of peace in the region,

Reiterating its concern at the humanitarian and security repercussions in eastern Chad and the north-eastern Central African Republic of the ongoing violence in Darfur,

Concerned at armed activities and banditry in eastern Chad, the north-eastern Central African Republic and western Sudan, which threaten the security of the civilian population, the conduct of humanitarian operations in those areas and the stability of those countries, and which result in serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law,

Welcoming the signing on 15 January 2010 by the Governments of Chad and the Sudan of an agreement to normalize their bilateral relations, as well as the deployment by the Governments of Chad and the Sudan of a joint force under a joint command along their common border with a view to denying the cross-border movement of armed elements and stemming their criminal activities,

Stressing that a proper settlement of the Darfur issue, including through the Doha peace process, the full implementation of the Sirte and Libreville agreements and the efforts at national political dialogue in Chad and the Central African Republic, will contribute to long-term peace and stability in the region and to the voluntary, secure and sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons,

Stressing also the importance of achieving dignified durable solutions for refugees and internally displaced persons, notably voluntary, safe, orderly return and sustainable reintegration,

Reiterating its full support for the efforts of the Secretary-General, the African Union and other international and regional actors to find solutions to the armed conflicts in the region,

Reaffirming its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolution 1502(2003)

of 26 August 2003 on the protection of humanitarian and United Nations personnel and its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Reaffirming also its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict, taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict in Chad and in the Central African Republic and the recommendations contained therein, and recalling the conclusions adopted by the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict on children and armed conflict in Chad and in the Central African Republic, as approved by the Council,

Stressing that the Governments of Chad and the Central African Republic bear primary responsibility for ensuring the security of civilians in their territories, with respect for the rule of law, international law, human rights and international humanitarian law,

Bearing in mind the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol thereto, of 31 January 1967, along with the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 10 September 1969, as well as the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa of 23 October 2009,

Emphasizing the need to respect international refugee law, preserve the civilian and humanitarian nature of refugee camps and internally displaced persons sites and prevent any recruitment of individuals, including women and children, which might be carried out in or around camps and sites by armed groups,

Commending the creation by the Government of Chad, with the logistical, administrative and technical support of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad, of the Détachement intégré de sécurité to contribute to the security of refugees and humanitarian workers in key towns, refugee camps and internally displaced persons sites, and noting that the Détachement intégré de sécurité provides community policing in these sites and escorts for United Nations personnel and humanitarian workers,

Recognizing the responsibility of the Chadian National Army for border security and external threats and of the Gendarmerie and the Nomad National Guard for area security in eastern Chad,

Taking note of the fact that the Government of Chad informed the Secretary-General, through a note verbale dated 15 January 2010, that it wished the Mission to withdraw from Chad as of 15 March 2010, and of the letter dated 3 March 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Chad to the United Nations informing the President of the Security Council of his Government's reconsideration of its earlier request, as well as the consultations conducted between 15 January and 23 April 2010 between the Government of Chad and the Secretariat,

Emphasizing the need for the orderly reduction of the military component of the Mission and the continuation of the consolidation of the Détachement intégré de sécurité, of judicial and penal systems, of human rights protection and of local conflict resolution mechanisms while laying the foundation for their sustainability following the termination of the mandate of the Mission,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General of 29 April 2010 and the recommendations contained therein for the modalities of the future presence of the Mission,

Determining that the situation in the region of the border between the Sudan, Chad and the Central African Republic constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad until 31 December 2010;

2. Takes note of the commitment of the Government of Chad, as recalled in the letter dated 21 May 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Chad to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council, to assume full responsibility for the security and protection of the civilian population in eastern Chad, including refugees, internally displaced persons, returnees and host communities, with a particular focus on women and children, and United Nations and humanitarian personnel and assets, in accordance with its obligations under international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, and underscores that in so doing, the Government commits itself to carrying out the following tasks:

- (i) To ensure the security and protection of civilians in danger, particularly refugees and internally displaced persons;
- (ii) To facilitate the delivery of humanitarian aid and the free movement of humanitarian personnel by improving security in eastern Chad;
- (iii) To ensure the security and freedom of movement of Mission staff and United Nations and associated personnel;

3. Notes that, in this context, the Government of Chad commits itself to working towards the achievement of the following benchmarks related to the protection of civilians and humanitarian workers, in accordance with international humanitarian law, as outlined in resolution 1861(2009):

- (i) Voluntary return and resettlement in secure and sustainable conditions of internally displaced persons;
- (ii) Demilitarization of refugee and internally displaced persons camps as evidenced by a decrease in arms, violence and human rights abuses;
- (iii) Improvement in the capacity of Chadian authorities in eastern Chad, including national law enforcement agencies, the judiciary and the prison system, to provide the necessary security for refugees, internally displaced persons, civilians and humanitarian workers with respect for international human rights standards;

4. Requests the Government of Chad and the Secretary-General to establish a joint Government of Chad/United Nations High-level Working Group to assess on a monthly basis the situation on the ground with respect to the protection of civilians, the measures adopted by the Government to implement the tasks set out in paragraph 2 above and to progress towards meeting the benchmarks set out in paragraph 3 above, and the capacity of the Détachement intégré de sécurité to provide security inside and around refugee camps and internally displaced persons sites, security escorts and area security, in coordination with the Gendarmerie and the Nomad National Guard;

5. Acknowledges the commitment of the Government of Chad to submit to the Council by 31 July 2010 the plan that it is preparing to ensure the sustainment of the Détachement intégré de sécurité, post-Mission, working, as necessary, through the joint High-level Working Group;

6. Decides that the military component of the Mission shall be reduced to 2,200 military personnel (1,900 in Chad and 300 in the Central African Republic) and 25 military liaison officers, and further decides that the Mission shall include a maximum of 300 police officers and an appropriate number of civilian personnel;

7. Calls upon the Secretary-General to implement the initial withdrawal of the exceeding number of troops by 15 July 2010 and the final withdrawal of the remaining troops beginning on 15 October 2010, and further calls upon the Secretary-General to complete the withdrawal of all uniformed and civilian Mission components, other than those required for the liquidation of the Mission, by 31 December 2010;

8. Decides that the Mission shall have the following mandate in eastern Chad and the north-eastern Central African Republic, in liaison with the United Nations country team and, as appropriate, in liaison with the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic and without prejudice to the mandate of the Office:

- (i) To select, mentor, monitor, train, advise and facilitate support to elements of the Chadian Détachement intégré de sécurité;
- (ii) To liaise with the Government of Chad and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in support of their efforts to relocate refugee camps which are in close proximity to the border, and to provide to the Office of the High Commissioner, on availability and on a cost-reimbursable basis, logistical assistance for that purpose;
- (iii) To liaise with the national army, the gendarmerie and police forces, the Nomad National Guard, the judicial authorities and prison officials in Chad and the Central African Republic, the Government of the Sudan, the United Nations Mission in the Sudan, the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in the Central African Republic, the multinational force of the Economic Community of Central African States in the Central African Republic and the Community of Sahel-Saharan States to exchange information on banditry, criminality and emerging threats to humanitarian activities in the region;
- (iv) To support the initiatives of national and local authorities in Chad to resolve local tensions and promote local reconciliation efforts, in order to enhance the environment for the return of internally displaced persons;
- (v) To contribute to the monitoring and to the promotion and protection of human rights in Chad, with particular attention to sexual and gender-based violence, and to recommend action to the competent authorities, with a view to fighting impunity;

(vi) To support, within its capabilities, efforts aimed at strengthening the capacity of the Government of Chad and civil society through training in international human rights standards, and efforts to put an end to the recruitment and use of children by armed groups;

(vii) To assist the Government of Chad in the promotion of the rule of law, including through support for an independent judiciary and a strengthened legal system, in close coordination with United Nations agencies;

9. Decides also that, until the start of the final withdrawal of its military personnel on 15 October 2010, the Mission shall be authorized to fulfil the following functions within its capabilities and its area of operations in eastern Chad, in liaison with the Government of Chad:

- (i) To provide security for United Nations personnel, facilities, installations and equipment and associated personnel;
- (ii) To maintain situational awareness in the vicinity of Mission locations;
- (iii) To provide escorts for United Nations military personnel carrying out enabling support functions;
- (iv) To execute operations of a limited character in order to extract United Nations personnel and humanitarian workers in danger;
- (v) To provide medical evacuation support for United Nations personnel;

10. Decides further that, without prejudice to paragraph 2 above, the Mission, acting within its means and capabilities and, where possible, in consultation with the Government of Chad, shall be authorized to respond to imminent threats of violence to civilians in its immediate vicinity;

11. Decides that, until the start of the final withdrawal of its military personnel on 15 October 2010, the Mission shall be authorized to fulfil the following functions within its capabilities and its area of operations in the north-eastern Central African Republic through its military presence in Birao and in liaison with the Government of the Central African Republic:

- (i) To contribute to the creation of a more secure environment;
- (ii) To execute operations of a limited character in order to extract United Nations personnel and humanitarian workers in danger;
- (iii) To protect United Nations personnel, facilities, installations and equipment and to ensure the security and freedom of movement of its staff and United Nations and associated personnel;

12. Notes that the Mission will continue to support the Détachement intégré de sécurité, in accordance with paragraphs 64 to 66 of the report of the Secretary-General, and the commitment by the Government of Chad to take full ownership of the Détachement intégré de sécurité;

13. Welcomes the intention of the Government of Chad and the United Nations to establish a forum to foster dialogue and collaboration with a view to reaching a common understanding of roles and responsibilities on issues relating to the protection of civilians, humanitarian access, and safety and security arrangements of humanitarian actors and in order to impact positively on humanitarian and early recovery initiatives;

14. Takes note of the letter dated 21 May 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Chad to the United Nations, which recalls the commitment of Chad to sustain the Détachement intégré de sécurité, and in this context requests the Mission to initiate the construction of the infrastructure referred to in paragraphs 71 and 79 of the report of the Secretary-General, with the expectation that the plan referred in paragraph 5 above will provide adequate assurances that the investments being made in the Détachement intégré de sécurité will be sustained post-Mission;

15. Requests the Secretary-General and the Governments of Chad and the Central African Republic to cooperate closely throughout the period of deployment of the Mission, and requests the Government of Chad to fully respect all provisions of the agreement on the status of the Mission of 21 March 2008 and the amendment thereto, of 15 October 2009, and, in particular, to ensure the full freedom of movement of the Mission, its members and its contractors as well as of their vehicles and aircraft, and to grant exemptions from all taxes, fees, charges and other duties as provided for under the agreement and the amendment, for the whole duration of the mandate of the Mission but also until its liquidation and the final departure of all its military and civilian personnel from Chad;

16. Urges all Member States, particularly the States bordering Chad and the Central African Republic, to facilitate during the above-mentioned period the withdrawal from Chad and the Central African Republic, without obstacles or delay, of all personnel, equipment, provisions, supplies and other goods, including vehicles, aircraft and spare parts, of the Mission;

17. Underscores the importance of the military concept of operations and rules of engagement being updated and fully in line with the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to report on them to the Council and troop-contributing countries;

18. Encourages the donor community to sustain its efforts to address the humanitarian, reconstruction and development needs of Chad and the Central African Republic;

19. Encourages the respective Governments of the Sudan, Chad and the Central African Republic to ensure that their territories are not used to undermine the sovereignty of others, and to cooperate with a view to putting an end to the activities of armed groups in the region;

20. Welcomes the N'Djamena agreement of 15 January 2010 on the normalization of relations between the Sudan and Chad and previous related agreements and encourages active cooperation for their continued implementation, encourages the Government of Chad to continue talks with the armed groups, demands that armed groups cease violence immediately, and urges all parties in Chad and the Central African Republic, respectively, to respect and implement the Sirte agreement of 25 October 2007 and the comprehensive peace agreement signed at Libreville on 21 June 2008;

21. Encourages the authorities and political stakeholders in Chad and the Central African Republic to continue to pursue their efforts at national dialogue, with respect for their constitutional frameworks and especially:

- (i) Emphasizes the importance of the political agreement for the reinforcement of the democratic process in Chad signed at N'Djamena on 13 August 2007, encourages the parties to continue with its implementation, and welcomes the electoral timetable published by the Independent National Electoral Commission;

- (ii) Calls upon the Government and all political stakeholders of the Central African Republic to further implement the outcome of the inclusive political dialogue of December 2008, including by successfully completing the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process, and stresses the need for a clear electoral timetable;

22. Reaffirms the obligation of all parties to implement fully the rules and principles of international humanitarian law, particularly those regarding the protection of humanitarian personnel, and furthermore requests all the parties involved to provide humanitarian personnel with immediate, free and unimpeded access to all persons in need of assistance, in accordance with applicable international law;

23. Encourages the Mission and the United Nations country team to continue to assist the Government of Chad to prevent the recruitment of refugees and children by armed groups and to maintain the civilian nature of refugee camps and internally displaced persons sites, in coordination with the Détachement intégré de sécurité and the humanitarian community;

24. Takes note of the measures already undertaken by the authorities of Chad to put an end to the recruitment and use of children by armed groups, encourages them to pursue their cooperation with United Nations bodies in this regard, particularly the United Nations Children's Fund, and calls upon all the parties involved to ensure that children are protected;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed, and requests him to provide reports by 31 July, 15 October and 15 December 2010 on the security and humanitarian situation, including movements of refugees and internally displaced persons in eastern Chad and the north-eastern Central African Republic, on the progress in the implementation of the relevant agreements, on the progress towards the fulfilment by the Government of Chad of the tasks and benchmarks set out in paragraphs 2 and 3 above, including on the measures adopted in response to possible shortcomings identified by the joint High-level Working Group referred to in paragraph 4 above, and on the implementation of the mandate of the Mission, and stresses that it will monitor closely the relevance of the mandate of the Mission and review it if necessary;

26. Also requests the Secretary-General in his July report to provide an assessment on international and regional options for the Central African Republic, based on his evaluation of the consequences of the departure of the Mission;

27. Further requests the Secretary-General to provide an assessment in his December report on lessons learned in the context of the Mission;

28. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication. On 8 July [S/2010/375], Chad transmitted to the Council President information on a number of incidents illustrating that the Chadian authorities were carrying out their mission to protect civilians in eastern Chad, in accordance with resolution 1923(2010) (see p. 159). Following those incidents, a meeting between non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and the Government on secuity issues for humanitarian workers decided that all encampments of NGOs should be surrounded with barbed wire and equipped with two-way radios for direct coordination with DIS and the UN security system liaison, and all suspicious persons working for NGOs should be brought to the attention of the State security services.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In a July report on MINURCAT [S/2010/409], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that the security situation in eastern Chad continued to be unpredictable, largely owing to criminal activities and banditry, including carjacking and armed robbery. In June, humanitarian workers were targeted in a spate of incidents, resulting in one NGO withdrawing its international staff, and three others partially suspending their operations. On 28 April, Chad reported that its forces had engaged with rebels of FPRN, a Chad-based armed opposition group in the area of Tissi and Timassi (Dar Sila region), just north of the junction of the borders of Chad, the Sudan and the CAR, killing more than 100 of them and capturing more than 80, and that its own forces had suffered nine fatalities. FPRN disputed those figures, but MINURCAT was unable to verify the situation on the ground. The general security environment in the MINURCAT area of operations in the north-eastern CAR remained volatile, mainly owing to ethnic conflict and the presence of militias. Four international NGOs were still operating in the area, mainly out of Birao. On 19 July, FACA successfully repulsed an attack on its camp in Birao. The attackers were allegedly dissidents of MLCJ, aggrieved that they had not been provided with food allowances, to which they felt entitled under the Government's DDR programme.

Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1923(2010), on 27 May MINURCAT ceased all military "area security" patrols and escorts and confined its activities to the mandate outlined in paragraphs 9 and 10 of that resolution. At the same time, the Government of Chad, with UN support, strengthened its protection activities and capacity. It also organized the first humanitarian dialogue forum in Abéché on 1 July, with UN assistance, which brought together Chadian central and local authorities, including high-level security officials, as well as international humanitarian actors, MINURCAT and the local media. The aim of the forum, which was to be replicated in each of the eastern regions, was to foster a shared understanding of the concept and practice of the protection of civilians, and the respective roles and responsibilities of the Government and its international humanitarian partners. During the reporting period, MINURCAT completed the installation of free emergency call centres at the Koukou Angarana and Goz Amer police posts (Dar Sila region), completing operational centres in all 19 DIS locations, except for Bahaï and the Oure Cassoni refugee camp.

In June, DIS, with MINURCAT support, collaborated with a telephone services provider to launch a campaign to raise public awareness of the free emergency call centres and to encourage the public to report security incidents. DIS reported that, from April to June, it had conducted 3,900 patrols in and around refugee camps, as well as in key towns from which humanitarian actors operated, a 25 per cent increase compared with the previous report. It registered 342 complaints, of which 128 were related to sexual and gender-based violence, including 10 complaints of rape, and 25 cases of armed robbery. There were four reported incidents of infiltration of armed individuals into refugee camps. DIS arrested 118 individuals suspected of involvement in crimes, of whom 58 were referred to the judicial authorities and the others released. Refugee leaders continued to report that DIS patrols had contributed to a sense of security in the camps and facilitated freedom of movement. The Government of Chad, with support from the United Nations Children's Fund, organized a subregional conference on ending the recruitment and use of children by armed forces and groups (N'Djamena, 7–9 June), which endorsed the N'Djamena Declaration, through which the Government committed itself to putting an end to the recruitment and use of children by armed groups and forces. Participants also agreed to establish a follow-up mechanism to assess progress made by the States that signed the Declaration with regard to fighting child recruitment.

To raise the awareness of the general population and humanitarian workers in eastern Chad of the Government's efforts to increase security, UN and Government representatives jointly visited Abéché (Ouaddai region), Goz Beida (Dar Sila region) and Iriba (Wadi Fira region) on 7 and 8 June to convey the Government's full commitment to the protection of civilians, including humanitarian workers. In that context, on 12 June, the Government issued instruction to all the security forces not to seek money in exchange for conducting humanitarian escorts. On 1 July, it launched a new entity for the coordination of security patrols and escorts for humanitarian workers, the Bureau de sécurisation et des mouvements (BSM), which superseded the former Bureau de la protection et des escortes run by MINURCAT. BSM was to be established in 13 key locations in eastern and southern Chad and would meet weekly to share information on and analyse the security situation, approve requests by humanitarian actors for DIS escorts and decide how to respond to emergency situations.

On 1 June, in accordance with resolution 1923(2010), the Government established a Joint Government of Chad/UN High-level Working Group to assess the situation on the ground with respect to the protection of civilians and the implementation of measures adopted by the Government towards implementing the tasks set out in paragraph 4 of that resolution. The High-level Working Group met twice since it was established. On 10 June, the High-level Working Group established a Joint Technical Working Group to prepare a plan for the consolidation, restructuring and sustainability of DIS, including enhancing its professional standards. The plan also provided for the rehabilitation, or construction, by MINURCAT of DIS infrastructure and the drilling of wells.

Implementation of the MINURCAT drawdown plans commenced. Its regional offices at Bahaï and Guéréda were closed by 21 July and at Koukou Angarana on 30 July, following the withdrawal of the force from those locations. The withdrawal of the balance of the force from eastern Chad and the north-eastern CAR would commence on 15 October. Liquidation planning was nearing finalization and implementation would commence on 1 January 2011. Notwithstanding the many challenges, every effort was being made to ensure that the full withdrawal was completed by 31 December 2010, with only personnel essential for the Mission's liquidation remaining thereafter. MINURCAT continued to support DIS, especially in completing the construction of infrastructure. In late June, the Mission signed contracts with local companies for the construction of hard-walled compounds for DIS in 19 locations in eastern Chad.

Evaluating the consequences of the Mission's withdrawal from the CAR, the Secretary-General said that the overall security situation in the north-east continued to suffer from inter-ethnic conflict, banditry and cross-border criminal activity. Armed groups were present in or around the area of MINURCAT responsibility and remained a security threat to the population and FACA. The assessed threat emanating from the CAR to the security of neighbouring States was limited to cross-border banditry. While such cross-border incursions remained a possibility, the risk was assessed as low. Nevertheless, the threat to civilians, IDPs, refugees and humanitarian workers in the area remained high. While the MINURCAT force in Birao had served as a deterrent, lack of sustained progress in combating security threats was mainly due to the absence of State authority, a weak FACA presence and capability, and lack of progress in the implementation of peace agreements between the Government and Central African rebel groups. FACA suffered from severe operational and logistic limitations, including lack of access to aircraft, preventing the rapid deployment of adequate reinforcements. It would take time for the Government to build up those capabilities, and there was concern that the withdrawal of the MINURCAT contingent could embolden armed groups in the area and result in a rise in criminality and lawlessness, thus degrading the overall humanitarian and security situation. Addressing those challenges would require political will, meaningful advances in national reconciliation and support from international partners so that the Government could extend State authority to the region, particularly through strengthening FACA, the police and the rule of law. Until the mechanisms were put in place to assist the national authorities to provide security in the Vakaga préfecture, it was important that the causes and consequences of insecurity not be allowed to go unchecked. In that context, the Security Council might wish to consider two options with regard to the north-eastern CAR. The first option would be a UN peacekeeping force to deter insecurity in the area and to provide, in extremis, security and extraction for humanitarian actors, with a minimum force strength of 300 personnel, equivalent to that currently deployed by MINURCAT and to remain in theatre until the Government had developed adequate capacity to assume a deterrent role. Generating and deploying such a force would require a minimum of six months. The second option would focus on strengthening, in the medium to long term, efforts to build State capacities for ensuring security and the rule of law, coupled with immediate measures to strengthen FACA capabilities. International assistance could be provided for the training and equipping of FACA and the Central African police force in the context of the longer-term security sector reform and DDR efforts. That could be complemented by a CAR/Chad joint border patrol force, and implementation of the bilateral agreements for joint border patrols between the Sudan and the CAR. Such assistance could be provided on a bilateral or multilateral basis, including through the AU or the Economic Community of Central African States, with the support of donors.

The Secretary-General said he was encouraged by the efforts of the Government of Chad to assume its responsibilities for the protection of civilians, notwithstanding the complexities of the task and the vastness and harshness of the territory where the refugees and IDPs resided. He regretted the latest upsurge of criminal activity that prompted some humanitarian workers to downsize or suspend their operations, but welcomed action by the authorities to arrest and reverse the escalation. DIS had made advances in protecting refugee camps and securing their surroundings, and MINURCAT would spare no effort to help the Government consolidate DIS and support it to gradually take over full responsibility for that force. With regard to the CAR, the situation demanded continued attention, given the current regional context. He supported the second option outlined in his report as the most appropriate approach for dealing with the situation there, and encouraged the Government of the CAR, together with peacebuilding, development and other multilateral and bilateral actors, to develop that proposal.

Communications. On 7 September [S/2010/470], Chad, in accordance with Council resolution 1923(2010), submitted a sustainment plan for DIS. The plan, which further developed the one submitted on 12 May, entailed the deployment along the country's south-eastern border of a DIS team to Haraze to enhance security for the 6,227 Central African refugees in that area. To provide security in and around refugee camps and IDP sites, the Government took measures to organize and secure the areas and assigned vehicles to Goré and Maro for escorting humanitarian workers, while awaiting the deployment of DIS elements. Some 150 gendarmes and police officers were placed at the disposal of MINURCAT for pre-selection and training towards the target of 1,000 elements. The Government proposed recruiting and training 400 secondary school graduates to strengthen the DIS force and facilitate the delivery of humanitarian aid and the free movement of humanitarian personnel by helping to improve security in the areas of operation. Coordination of security activities was monitored by the Office of Security and Movements, whose mission was to assess the security of humanitarian workers and goods within the security zone, and to decide on modalities for movement and security of personnel and installations as dictated by the security situation.

On 12 October [S/2010/530], the CAR transmitted to the Security Council President a statement of its short- and medium-term requirements in the light of the impending withdrawal of MINURCAT.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In his October report on MINURCAT [S/2010/529], the Secretary-General stated that the number of reported incidents relating to the safety and security of UN and humanitarian personnel had decreased significantly. The decrease was attributed, among other factors, to the unusually heavy rainy season, which limited overland movement; greater vigilance by the Chadian authorities and security forces; and improved relations between Chad and the Sudan, particularly the activities of the Chadian-Sudanese Joint Border Monitoring Force. During the reporting period, more than 300 members of Chadian armed opposition groups returned from the Sudan to Chad. On 17 September, the Joint Border Monitoring Force safely recovered in West Darfur an expatriate commercial contractor kidnapped 10 days earlier in eastern Chad. Six suspects were arrested. On 20 September, the Sudanese Ambassador to Chad announced that the two countries had agreed to increase the strength of the Joint Border Monitoring Force from 3,000 to 4,000 troops. On 7 September, the Joint Government of Chad/United Nations High-level Working Group held its third meeting. During the meeting, the UNHCR representative reported that some 48,000 IDPs had returned to their villages of origin. The Coordination nationale d'appui au déploiement de la force internationale à l'est du Tchad (CONAFIT) reported that, in anticipation of further returns, the Government had deployed gendarmes to the areas of return to provide security and restore public services. Both Government and UN representatives highlighted the importance of ensuring the voluntary nature of returns and the necessity of addressing basic needs to ensure the returns were sustainable.

MINURCAT continued to consolidate DIS, particularly by increasing its administrative and operational autonomy. With the closure in July of the Mission's offices in Bahaï and Guéréda, full-time monitoring and support of those DIS posts ceased. Security functions continued to be carried out by DIS. The selection of 200 new DIS recruits was under way, and CONAFIT provided MINURCAT with a list of 293 candidates, including 47 women. Training of the new recruits was to be completed in the coming months, bringing DIS strength up to approximately 1,000 officers. MINURCAT conducted training sessions for 22 senior DIS officers on monitoring and mentoring, performance evaluation, investigation, and community policing techniques and practices. Several workshops were conducted to enhance the planning and instructional techniques of DIS trainers. On 24 August, the Mission completed the training of an additional 19 DIS trainers, bringing the total number to 30. Since the mandated reduction and reconfiguration of the MINURCAT force was achieved in July, the force's strength had stabilized at 2,159 personnel. In accordance with the drawdown plan, the camps at Bahaï and Guéréda were closed on 31 July, and a residual military presence maintained in Iriba (Sector North) and Koukou-Angarana (Sector South) to protect the remaining UN assets and personnel.

In the CAR, on 5 September, an unidentified armed group attacked the village of Ouanda Djalle (Vakaga), 150 kilometres south of Birao. The group looted premises and reportedly abducted some 44 villagers, fatally shooting two of them. They returned later the same day and burned 74 houses, rendering some 2,000 people homeless. On 11 September, an unidentified armed group clashed with UFDR at Penbele. Further attacks were reported on 27 and 30 September on the villages of Koumbal and Tiroungoulo, respectively, about 110 and 117 kilometres south of Birao. All the attacks allegedly involved LRA elements. MINURCAT was denied access to the sites of the attacks by local leaders. In anticipation of the Mission's withdrawal, the Government expressed concern about the security situation in the Vakaga and the Haute-Kotto prefectures in the north-east of the country. As the 120 Government troops in Birao were lightly armed, had poor land mobility, no air capacity and received minimal logistical and financial support, the Government intended to deploy a battalion-sized unit there. The Secretary-General indicated that, with the commencement of the withdrawal of MINURCAT from Birao on 21 October, the national forces of the CAR might not immediately be in a position to deploy and sustain additional troops. He had therefore deployed a team to review the security environment and threat assessment.

The Secretary-General observed that in the remaining months of the MINURCAT mandate, considerable effort would be expended to consolidate the initiatives of the past three years. The exercise by the Government of Chad of its sovereign protection responsibility was vital. While the DIS force remained in a formative stage, it had demonstrated that it could make a difference to the security of the vulnerable populations in the east. The future development of DIS would depend on sustained attention, including in the areas of training, oversight and resources. Of the two options presented to prepare for the Mission's withdrawal, the Government had since stated its preference for the receipt of direct bilateral support to build up the capacity of its security forces, and had accordingly approached a number of potential partner countries. The Secretary-General urged Member States to respond favourably to the Government's request for assistance to ensure that there was no gap between the departure of MINURCAT and the further deployment of trained and equipped national forces to the Vakaga region.

Communication. In a further revision of the DIS sustainment plan, conveyed to the Security Council President on 15 October [S/2010/536], Chad indicated its intention to establish a DIS Support Office to provide the assistance needed to consolidate and strengthen its achievements, with a view to promoting its sustainment. The office would focus on the financial and material management of funds and resources, including the physical plant and staff capacity-building, by providing continuing and specialized training in human rights, international humanitarian law, the rights of refugees and displaced persons, communications, computer technology, research techniques, reading of topographical maps and use of GPS technology, human resources management and evaluation, community policing and ethics. The DIS Support Office would be composed of a Human Resources Unit, a Trust Fund, a Physical Plant and Security Unit, a Transport Unit, and a Transmission and Communications Unit, which would allow for internal communication among the various services, external communication between DIS and humanitarian workers, and external communication between DIS and the country's defence and security forces. The Office could be attached to a UN agency in Chad and would work in cooperation with that agency and with CONAFIT.

Report of Secretary-General (December). In his December report on MINURCAT [S/2010/611], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that, while the general security situation in Chad remained calm, the humanitarian needs in the eastern part of the country were immense, where some 70 humanitarian organizations continued to provide assistance to some 255,000 refugees, more than 137,500 IDPs and about 43,000 returnees, as well as a host population of 150,000. The destruction of more than 104,000 hectares of crops during the rainy season rendered the population vulnerable in southern, central and eastern Chad. Across the Sahelian belt, an estimated 1.6 million people faced food insecurity and malnutrition. Humanitarian actors and MINURCAT mobilized resources to help the Government alleviate the situation. UNHCR released emergency stocks of non-food items at refugee sites and surrounding villages affected by the floods. MINURCAT logistical support facilitated the delivery of around 10 tons of humanitarian aid to IDPs in Loboutique (Dar Sila). Similar assistance was provided to humanitarian assessment missions deployed to Mongororo, Kerfi, Am Timan, Tiero and Marena.

In terms of the revised national DIS sustainment plan (see above), the Government was committed to funding all DIS personnel, estimated at approximately $7 million, or 33 per cent of the budget, but was seeking $14 million in donor assistance to support logistical requirements and the national facilitation structure. It had requested UN assistance for mobilizing and managing donor funds, as well as additional technical assistance to DIS and its support structure, including the recruitment of expert advisers in police oversight and logistics. To maximize DIS sustainability, MINURCAT transferred the bulk of its DIS mentoring, administration and logistical support programmes to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and UNHCR. The Government indicated that CONAFIT, established as the Mission's primary national interlocutor, would cease its functions once the Mission withdrew from Chad on 31 December. A new structure, the Coordination nationale pour le soutien aux humanitaires et au DIS, would be established to interact with humanitarian partners and other key actors. The mandate of and arrangements for the new body, and the modalities of its work, were being finalized. In the east, coordination with humanitarian actors on security issues, joint analysis and escorts were provided by the Government's recently established Bureaux de sécurisation et des mouvements.

The Secretary-General requested the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to conduct a threat assessment in the north-east of the CAR, the findings of which were shared with the Council in closed consultations on 20 October. The major source of insecurity was banditry and transient arms sellers. The most urgent threat, however, stemmed from armed internal political opposition groups. In anticipation of the MINURCAT withdrawal, the Government made it clear that it was not in favour of an international force. It intended to reinforce its own military in the northeast, but the national forces lacked basic equipment and training. The Government made approaches to possible bilateral partners to provide capacity-building support to its national forces. MINURCAT completed its withdrawal from Birao on 15 November, when it transferred its two campsites to the Government. The Government reportedly reinforced its national forces garrisoned in Birao to approximately 150 troops; however, those were withdrawn following a 24 November attack by opposition groups.

MINURCAT, on the closure of its camps in its forward bases in eastern Chad and in the north-eastern part of the CAR, transferred to the Governments of the two countries camp infrastructure, as well as some assets to contribute to the continuation of activities related to the protection of civilians and humanitarian actors. Following the closure of the camps in Goz Beida and Farchana on 27 and 30 November, respectively, the Mission consolidated its presence in N'Djamena and Abéché to prepare for liquidation. The Mission's drawdown of civilian staff progressed on schedule, and planning was well advanced for the mission liquidation period. Regarding the Council-mandated construction of DIS stations, including the drilling of wells and work on the police academy, progress was reviewed at the fourth meeting of the Government of Chad/United Nations High-level Working Group convened in N'Djamena on 10 November. The first phase of construction at the police academy in N'Djamena was complete, but the second phase had not been initiated because of lack of funding. The construction of six police stations and 11 police posts was projected to be completed in early 2011. Construction of the DIS posts in the Touloum and Iridimi refugee camps was projected to be finished by the end of April 2011. The drilling of wells in Abéché commenced. All work was to be completed before the end of April 2011, and a further inspection was scheduled for early December of that year.

In accordance with resolution 1923(2010), MINURCAT initiated exchanges with the Government, the UN country team, and other key actors to identify means to continue the Mission's activities related to the protection of civilians and early recovery, as well as their sustainability in the areas of justice and prisons, sexual and gender-based violence, child protection, human rights monitoring, and mine action. In addition, local reconciliation initiatives were carried out in eastern Chad. Discussions focused on the workplans of the individual MINURCAT civilian units with a view to identifying activities that could be completed by 31 December 2010 and those that needed to continue, guided by the priorities set out in the Government's Programme global de relance à l'est du Tchad.

An assessment of lessons learned in the context of MINURCAT showed that, even when freely given, the consent of a host Government should be nurtured to ensure sustainability. Consent was reversible, especially when the conditions in the country and/or the subregion changed significantly. The weight of regional considerations in host Government consent should not be underestimated, nor should the consistency of the support of key Member States that helped to secure the host Government's initial consent. Sustained consent by and effective cooperation with a host Government remained essential for a mission to attain its objectives. The manner in which it was secured and maintained should not serve to erode the Organization's principles. The lessons to be drawn were that a shared and practical understanding of the protection of civilians should be developed and the contributions of key partners identified in an integrated strategy that was clearly elaborated during the predeployment planning phase. Once a mission was deployed, such a strategy should be routinely reviewed with the host Government and the UN country team to take into account local developments without jeopardizing organizational values and norms. In the case of MINURCAT, the absence of a communications strategy impaired the Mission's ability to narrow the gap between expectations and reality. Such a strategy should be developed at the initial stage of a mission's deployment.

Notwithstanding those comments, there was near unanimity among the interviewees that, in contrast with the tenuous consent by the Government for the military component, authorities accepted the civilian component of the Mission, and the extension of its mandate. The MINURCAT force and DIS had managed to provide a measure of security for refugees, IDPs and humanitarian actors. Local populations and beneficiaries of humanitarian aid generally expressed a positive view of DIS.

The Secretary-General observed that MINURCAT had been a unique UN peacekeeping operation in that it was devoted solely to the protection of civilians. He hoped that the lessons outlined in his report would assist the Council when considering the evolution of peacekeeping as a whole and contemplating mandates for peacekeeping operations providing for the protection of civilians.

Security Council consideration. The Security Council met on 14 December [S/PV.6449] to consider the Secretary-General's report on MINURCAT and the situation in Chad and the CAR, during which it was briefed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. It resumed consideration of the report on 20 December [S/PV.6460], following which the Council President adopted statement S/PRST/2010/29 (see p. 168), noting the expiration of the MINURCAT mandate on 31 December and the recommendations contained in the Secretary-General's report.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 6460], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/29 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council takes note of the report of the Secretary-General of 1 December 2010 on the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad, the lessons learned and the recommendations contained therein, and expresses its intention to take them into account within the framework of its ongoing work to enhance the overall effectiveness of United Nations peacekeeping.

In the context of the expiration of the mandate of the Mission on 31 December 2010, the Council commends the Mission for its contribution to providing, without prejudice to the primary responsibility of the Government of Chad, security for refugees, internally displaced persons and humanitarian actors in eastern Chad and for its efforts to enhance the capacity of the Chadian Détachement intégré de sécurité. The Council notes the importance of action by the Government of Chad, supported as appropriate by the United Nations country team, on justice, including the prison sector, sexual and gender-based violence, child protection, human rights, local reconciliation and mine action, following the withdrawal of the Mission.

The Council recalls the commitment of the Government of Chad, outlined in the letter dated 7 September 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Chad to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Council, to assume full responsibility for the security and the protection of the civilian population in eastern Chad, including refugees, internally displaced persons, returnees and host communities, with a particular focus on women and children, and United Nations and humanitarian personnel and assets, in accordance with its obligations under international humanitarian, human rights and refugee law.

The Council encourages the finalization of the establishment of the Coordination nationale pour le soutien aux humanitaires et au Détachement intégré de sécurité to allow efficient interaction of the Government of Chad with humanitarian partners and other key actors. It welcomes the establishment of the Bureaux de sécurisation et des mouvements in eastern Chad for local coordination with humanitarian actors on security issues, joint analysis and escorts.

The Council acknowledges the critical role that the Détachement intégré de sécurité will have to perform in the foreseeable future for the protection of civilians. It takes note of the revised national plan for the sustainment of the Détachement intégré de sécurité. The Council welcomes the commitment of the Government of Chad to assure the future sustainability of the Détachement intégré de sécurité and the funding it has pledged. It welcomes the work of the United Nations Development Programme and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees with the relevant national Chadian authorities to establish a mechanism for the mobilization and management of donor support for the Détachement intégré de sécurité after 1 January 2011.

It especially welcomes the establishment of a new 'basket fund' in support of the Détachement intégré de sécurité administered by the United Nations Development Programme. The Council calls upon Member States to ensure that the necessary donor funds are made available to meet the budgetary requirements of the Détachement intégré de sécurité. The Council urges the Government of Chad to assume full responsibility for the sustainment of the Détachement intégré de sécurité as soon as possible.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to report by the conclusion of the liquidation phase of the Mission on 30 April 2011 on the progress made in eastern Chad on the protection of civilians, especially women and children, including (i) the status of refugees and internally displaced persons and durable solutions to their displacement, (ii) unimpeded, safe and timely humanitarian access, including the movement and security of humanitarian personnel and the delivery of humanitarian aid, (iii) the measures taken to respond to violations of humanitarian, human rights and refugee law, and (iv) the overall security situation as it affects the humanitarian situation.

The Council has taken note of the complete withdrawal of the Mission from the Central African Republic on 15 November 2010. It remains seriously concerned by the challenges facing the security forces of the Government of the Central African Republic in Birao and stresses the importance of bilateral partners' work to enhance the capacity of the Central African Republic armed forces in support of the wider security sector reform process. The Council also remains seriously concerned by the security situation in the Central African Republic. It condemns all attacks by local and foreign armed groups, including the Lord's Resistance Army, that threaten the population as well as peace and stability in the Central African Republic and the subregion. The Council encourages further cooperation between the Governments of the Central African Republic, Chad and the Sudan in order to secure their common borders. The Council recognizes the contribution of the Mission for the Consolidation of Peace in the Central African Republic in support of durable peace and security in the Central African Republic and calls upon regional and subregional organizations to consider, upon request of the Government of the Central African Republic, further actions to support security in the Central African Republic, such as reinforcing the Mission for the Consolidation of Peace in the Central African Republic.

The Council commends the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Central African Republic and Chad, Mr. Youssef Mahmoud, for his leadership and the personnel of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad for their dedication, as well as the commitment of troop-contributing countries to the Mission. It encourages the Government of Chad to continue to extend its full support for the orderly withdrawal from the country of all remaining Mission staff and assets until the end of the liquidation phase.

Year-end developments. In a later report [S/2011/278], the Secretary-General confirmed that MINURCAT left Chad on 31 December. In December, MINURCAT and the UN country team finalized the programme for the consolidation of achievements in eastern Chad, which was approved by the Government. The programme would ensure an orderly transfer of the activities of the Mission's civilian components to relevant UN entities. The transition programme was fully aligned with Chad's comprehensive recovery programme. The fifth and final meeting of the humanitarian forum, established pursuant to resolution 1923(2010) to facilitate dialogue between the Government of Chad and international partners, was held on 15 December. The meeting summarized the outcome of the four previous forums, which discussed, respectively, the protection of civilians, humanitarian access, durable solutions for IDPs and early recovery. The forums helped foster a common understanding by all stakeholders of the humanitarian and protection challenges. A quarterly follow-up mechanism was put in place to ensure the review of the recommendations and actions proposed by the forums. On 21 October, the Policy Committee, chaired by the Secretary-General, had requested that the UN country team develop a comprehensive strategy for the protection of civilians in eastern Chad. The need for such a strategy was also one of the conclusions reached by the humanitarian forums. On 29 December, the Coordination nationale de soutien aux humanitaires et au Détachement intégré de sécurité (CONSAHDIS) was established as the main interface for the Government with international humanitarian actors.

On 10 December, MINURCAT and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights published a report on the human rights situation in Chad, covering the period from April 2008 to November 2010. The report stated that the absence or weak presence of state institutions in most parts of the country had created an environment conducive to human rights violations. The deployment of judicial institutions at the local level had slowed down owing to logistical and security constraints, and insufficient funding of social services limited the enjoyment of constitutional rights. In addition, cultural practices and barriers and other social stereotypes were preventing women from taking an active part in social and political life.

MINURCAT

The mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad (MINURCAT), established by Security Council resolution 1778(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 153] to create the security conditions for the return of refugees and displaced persons, and favourable conditions for reconstruction and development, and expanded by resolution 1861(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 154] to include security and protection of civilians, as well as humanitarian workers, was extended three times during the year: to 15 May, 26 May and 31 December. The military component was reduced to 2,200 military personnel, 25 military liaison officers and 300 police officers, who were all withdrawn by 31 December. Its mandate was also revised to support activities related to its withdrawal and handover of responsibilities to the Government of Chad, including the training of the Chadian security forces and the protection of humanitarian and UN staff and facilities.

On 3 June, Youssef Mahmoud (Tunisia) was appointed Special Representative of the Secretary-General for MINURCAT, to succeed Victor da Silva Angelo (Portugal) [S/2010/292; S/2010/293].

Financing

In May [A/64/783], the Secretary-General requested commitment authority in the amount of $246,598,800 gross ($242,949,500 net) for the maintenance of MINURCAT for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010, pending submission to the General Assembly of the Mission's full 2010/2011 budget.

ACABQ, in comments and recommendations contained in its May report [A/64/660/Add.15] on the performance report for MINURCAT for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 163] and the May note by the Secretary-General requesting commitment authority for MINURCAT (see above), recommended that the Assembly appropriate $139,671,300 for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 already authorized and assessed, in addition to the $301,124,200 already appropriated, and that the unencumbered balance of $16,722,500, as well as other income adjustments in the amount of $14,548,400 for the period ended 30 June 2009, be credited to Member States.

Pending a decision by the Security Council on the MINURCAT mandate, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve $184,949,000 gross ($182,212,000 net) for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 15 November 2010. It further recommended that the Secretary-General be requested to submit, at the main part of the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2010) session, the full budget for MINURCAT.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/834], adopted resolution 64/286 without vote [agenda item 162].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad, the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the Mission and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1778(2007) of 25 September 2007, by which the Council established in Chad and the Central African Republic a multidimensional presence, including a United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1923(2010) of 25 May 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 31 December 2010, decided to reduce the military component of the Mission to 2,200 military personnel and called upon the Secretary-General to complete withdrawal of all uniformed and civilian components, other than those required for the Mission's liquidation, by 31 December 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 62/233 A of 22 December 2007 on the financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/274 B of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad as at 30 April 2009, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 48.8 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-five Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of the facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Acknowledges with appreciation that the use of the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, has been cost-effective and has resulted in savings for the United Nations, and welcomes the expansion of the logistics hub to provide logistical support to peacekeeping operations in the region and to contribute further to their enhanced efficiency and responsiveness, taking into account the ongoing efforts in this regard;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Takes note of paragraph 24 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

13. Reaffirms section XX of resolution 61/276, and encourages the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad and other United Nations missions in the region to continue, where possible, the efforts to achieve greater synergies, while bearing in mind that individual missions are responsible for the preparation and implementation of their own budgets and for controlling their own assets and logistical operations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

17. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Estimates for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010

18. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 in a total amount not exceeding 215 million dollars for the operation of the Mission;

Financing of the commitment authority

19. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 184,949,000 dollars for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

20. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,737,000 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010;

Estimates for the support account for peacekeeping operations and the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

21. Further decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad the amount of 13,030,800 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, comprising 11,036,000 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 1,994,800 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

22. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 13,030,800 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248;

23. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 22 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,073,400 dollars, comprising the prorated share of 913,800 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 159,600 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

24. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 31,270,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

25. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 31,270,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 24 above;

26. Also decides that the decrease of 31,000 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be set off against the credits from the amount of 31,270,900 dollars referred to in paragraphs 24 and 25 above;

27. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

29. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

30. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad".

In October [A/65/487], the Secretary-General submitted the budget for MINURCAT for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 in the amount of $239,096,600 gross, comprising $205,748,500 for the maintenance of the Mission and $33,348,100 for its liquidation. The proposed budget provided for the average monthly deployment of 23 military observers, 1,909 military contingent personnel, 117 UN police officers, 356 international staff, 546 national staff, 119 UN Volunteers, 18 Government-provided personnel and 2 temporary positions for the period from 1 July 2010 to 31 December; and the average monthly deployment of 118 international staff, 153 national staff and 32 UN Volunteers for the liquidation period, from 1 January 2011 to 30 April 2011.

In October [A/65/549], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly appropriate $239,096,600 for the maintenance and liquidation of the Mission from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011. ACABQ was of the opinion that assessment was not required beyond the $184,949,000 already assessed for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010, as the cash available to the Mission should be sufficient to meet envisaged requirements. It recommended that final requirements be reported in the context of the performance report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/653], adopted resolution 65/254 A without vote [agenda item 144].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1778(2007) of 25 September 2007, by which the Council had established in Chad and the Central African Republic a multidimensional presence, including a United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1923(2010) of 25 May 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 31 December 2010, decided to reduce the military component of the Mission to 2,200 military personnel and called upon the Secretary-General to complete withdrawal of all uniformed and civilian components, other than those required for the Mission's liquidation, by 31 December 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 62/233 A of 22 December 2007 on the financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 64/286 of 24 June 2010,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad as at 1 November 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 91.5 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-seven Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Reaffirms section XX of its resolution 61/276 of 29 June 2007, and encourages the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad and other United Nations missions in the region to continue, where possible, the efforts to achieve greater synergies, while bearing in mind that individual missions are responsible for the preparation and implementation of their own budgets and for controlling their own assets and logistical operations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

12. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad the amount of 239,096,600 dollars for the financial period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 205,748,500 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 and 33,348,100 dollars for the administrative liquidation of the Mission for the period from 1 January to 30 April 2011, taking into account the amount of 215 million dollars previously authorized for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 under the terms of General Assembly resolution 64/286;

Financing of the appropriation

13. Also decides, taking into account the amount of 184,949,000 dollars already apportioned among Member States under the terms of General Assembly resolution 64/286, to defer its decision on additional apportionment for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 until its consideration of the final requirements for the Mission, to be submitted in the context of the performance report for the same period;

14. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

15. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

16. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

17. Decides to keep under review during its sixty-fifth session the item entitled “Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad”.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of MINURCAT would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session (decision 65/544).

Uganda

The Security Council sent a mission to Uganda and the Sudan, led by Ambassadors Mark Lyall Grant (United Kingdom), Ruhakana Rugunda (Uganda) and Susan Rice (United States), from 4 to 10 October [S/2010/509]. In Uganda, the mission was to reiterate the Council’s support to the improvement of relations among the countries of the region and encourage them to strengthen cooperation; emphasize support for action against armed groups, particularly the Lord’s Resistance Army (LRA); and reiterate support for the Djibouti Peace Process.

Security Council consideration. On 14 October [S/PV.6397], the Council was briefed by Ambassador Rugunda on the Uganda phase of the mission. In that country, the mission visited the Entebbe Support Base, which was the distribution and storage centre for the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO) operations in the eastern part of the DRC. The Director of Mission Support informed the mission that the Base also provided support to other UN missions in the region, in a framework that consolidated resources so as to achieve improvements and efficiencies at the regional level. The mission also met with Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni and other senior Government officials. President Museveni stressed the importance of strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and the African Union and sub-regional organizations in the maintenance of peace and security. On the LRA, he expressed satisfaction at the level of cooperation among countries of the region in addressing the menace it represented, and was confident that the LRA was not a long-term problem, since countries of the region were working together to solve it. He called again on the international community, and the United Nations in particular, to support regional efforts to end the LRA menace. On the Entebbe Support Base, President Museveni assured the Council of Uganda’s readiness to continue hosting and supporting UN missions in the region. A full report on the visit was later issued [S/2011/7].

Children and armed conflict

In his April report on children and armed conflict [A/64/742-S/2010/181], the Secretary-General indicated that in December 2009, the Ugandan People’s Defence Forces (UPDF), with the cooperation of the armed forces of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (FARDC) and south Sudan (SPLA), launched joint military offensives into north-east DRC and southern Sudan territories in pursuit of LRA rebel groups, which had carried out violent reprisal attacks against civilians that led to the death and disappearance of hundreds of children and triggered significant population displacements. During such offensives, UPDF had come into contact with children who were either in the frontlines, associated with the LRA or being held captive. The child protection concerns included timeliness of the release of such children to child protection agencies, their cross-border repatriation, their use for intelligence purposes by UPDF and the lack of immediate access to psychosocial support and services for those severely traumatized. The United Nations had stressed to the Government of Uganda the need to establish protocols between UPDF and child protection actors, and between other concerned Government forces that would ensure timely access to UPDF military barracks for the identification and release of children to the United Nations and its partners. The cross-border repatriation of children associated with the LRA had become a major component of the humanitarian response for the protection of children and women in LRA-affected areas, and had benefited from cooperation between Uganda, south Sudan, the Central African Republic and the Democratic Republic of the Congo. That cooperation needed to be reinforced and systematized. During the reporting period, 71 children and young mothers formerly associated with LRA were received in reception centres in northern Uganda as part of the repatriation and reinsertion process for LRA-affected children.

Rwanda

On 7 April, the United Nations held its sixteenth commemoration of the 1994 genocide in Rwanda [YUN 1994, p. 283], during which over 800,000 innocent persons lost their lives, at Headquarters in New York. In his message in observance of that event, the Secretary-General said that the United Nations was committed to securing justice for the victims of genocide and to preventing future atrocities. It was working to enhance cooperation with the International Conference on the Great Lakes Region, particularly in implementing critical aspects relating to peace and security. The Office of the Secretary-General’s Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide and Mass Atrocities was also working to see that those horrible crimes never happened again.

For the sixteenth commemoration, the Department of Public Information organized, in cooperation with the Permanent Mission of Rwanda to the United Nations, several events on 7 and 8 April.

West Africa

Regional issues

Political and security developments

The Secretary-General, as requested by the Security Council in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 168], continued to report every six months on the fulfilment of the mandate of the United Nations Office for West Africa (UNOWA). The reports focused on country-specific political developments in the subregion (notably Benin, Guinea, Mauritania, Niger, Togo), and on developments, trends and UNOWA activities in cross-border and cross-cutting issues, in particular: economic, social and humanitarian issues; human rights and gender issues; drug trafficking and cross-border organized crime; security sector reform; elections and stability; and cooperation with institutions and other regional and subregional partners. The reports also described developments in the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission (see p. 231). Details of developments in Guinea (see p. 233) and Mauritania (see p. 237) are covered below.

Report of Secretary-General (June). In his report covering 1 January to 30 June [S/2010/324], the Secretary-General stated that a number of West African countries continued to be affected by political crises resulting from flawed or contested electoral processes, unconstitutional changes of government or other threats to constitutional legality and governance. In collaboration with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) and the African Union (AU), UNOWA remained engaged in Guinea and the Niger to promote a return to constitutional order. It also worked with the UN country team and the ECOWAS Mediator in Togo, President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, to ensure that the presidential election of 4 March was held as scheduled in a peaceful manner. During the reporting period, Burkina Faso, Côte d'Ivoire and Guinea organized presidential elections, while the Niger held a referendum on its new Constitution.

In early 2010, the Niger witnessed a reversal of its democratic achievements since 1999. Efforts by President Tandja to amend the Constitution and organize a referendum had been rejected, and an inter-Nigerian dialogue, initiated in December 2009 by ECOWAS, broke down. On 18 February, President Tandja was removed in a military coup. The Conseil suprême pour la restauration de la démocratie (CSR SD) took control of the country with the objectives of restoring democratic rule and reconciling the people of the Niger. The international community became involved in the situation beginning 18 February, with the United Nations and UNOWA leading efforts to return the country to constitutional legality. On 21 February, the Special Representative of the Secretary General, Said Djinnit, undertook a mission to Niamey with the President of the ECOWAS Commission and the AU Commissioner for Peace and Security to encourage CSRSD to work towards a quick transition to hold elections. The Special Representative advised the new authorities to acknowledge the food crisis and to cooperate with the international community in addressing the situation. He also suggested that CSRSD formalize its commitment not to stand for election, as that would strengthen the basis for international cooperation; and on 12 March, CSRSD signed a decree confirming that point. All transitional institutions were then established, in particular those tasked with formulating plans for the transition period, reviewing the Constitution and investigating human rights abuses. On 15 April, the Special Representative returned to Niamey to assess progress. CSRSD confirmed a one-year transition plan culminating in the election and installation of a President by 1 March 2011. The sequence of events would be: a referendum, local elections, legislative elections and the presidential election. The Niger remained confronted with serious socio-economic and humanitarian challenges, as well as the food crisis, which the leadership acknowledged.

Presidential elections in Togo were held on 4 March amid growing tension between the ruling party and the opposition. The incumbent President, Faure Gnassingbé, was declared the winner, despite the protests of the opposition. The United Nations and other organizations monitored the political and security situation and the preparations for the election.

Tension was observed in Benin, as the country prepared for general elections scheduled for March 2011. Controversy arose over the use of voter lists and voter registration.

In general, the Secretary-General noted progress in some West African countries in consolidating peace, democratic governance and human rights, although those efforts were undermined by continued governance challenges. He called on those countries to give priority to creating an enabling environment for economic activities and poverty alleviation, enhancing institutional reforms, and attaining development goals. In particular, he urged States to provide humanitarian support to the Sahel region in light of the food crisis and leaders of West Africa to combat cross-border criminal activities and terrorist threats, especially in the Sahel Band. UNOWA would need to strengthen its technical and strategic police advisory capacity in order to support the ECOWAS Regional Plan of Action, and the Secretary-General recommended that the strengthening be reflected in the next UNOWA mandate.

Communication. By a letter of 4 March [S/2010/117], the AU Permanent Observer Mission forwarded a communiqué on the situation in the Niger issued by the AU Peace and Security Council at its 19 February meeting (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia). The Council condemned the seizure of power by force that took place in the Niger on 18 February. The Council welcomed the mission to Niamey that the AU Commissioner for Peace and Security intended to undertake together with the President of the ECOWAS Commission and the Special Representative of the UN Secretary-General for West Africa.

Report of Secretary-General (December). In a December report [S/2010/614] covering the second half of 2010, the Secretary-General said that the progress made in the region addressing internal and external destabilizing factors needed to be consolidated to make a real impact on the lives of the people in the subregion. Internal challenges included those related to governance and the rule of law, transparency and accountability, flawed elections, security sector reform, gender equity, human rights and impunity. External factors included terrorist activities and transnational organized crime, notably drug trafficking. Political instability related to the transition from military rule or civil tensions to more democratic regimes and constitutional order was experienced in Guinea and the Niger, and post-election tensions were witnessed in Mauritania and Togo, all of which concerned UNOWA during the reporting period.

During the second half of 2010, consultations held among national stakeholders in the Niger, including the ruling CSRD, the Government, the Independent National Electoral Commission and the Constitutional Court, resulted in a consensual electoral timetable for the transition. On 1 October, the Head of State, Lieutenant-General Salou Djibo signed a decree on the referendum on the new Constitution. The referendum took place on 31 October, and a new Constitution was adopted by 90.19 per cent of votes with a turnout of 52.65 per cent. Presidential and parliamentary elections were scheduled for January 2011. Throughout the reporting period, the Special Representative, in cooperation with ECOWAS and the AU, engaged with national stakeholders to ensure a return to constitutional order. In October, Lieutenant-General Djibo restructured positions in CSRD amid allegations of a planned coup, and four army officers were arrested. As a result of those developments, the Special Representative and the President of the ECOWAS Commission undertook a joint mission to Niamey on 15 October to seek clarification and to reiterate the international community's support for the transition programme.

UNOWA continued to be engaged with developments in Togo, where two trends dominated the situation during the reporting period: rapprochement between the Government and the main opposition, the Union des forces pour le changement (UFC), as manifested by the inclusion of UFC members in an enlarged Government formed in May; and an internal leadership struggle within UFC following the formation of the new Government. Opposition parties under the umbrella coalition Front républicain pour l'alternance et le changement (FRAC) continued to protest against the re-election of President Faure Gnassingbé. Meanwhile, the activities of the Truth, Justice and Reconciliation Commission, established by the Ouagadougou Global Political Agreement of 2006 to probe into political violence in Togo between 1958 and 2005, resumed after having been suspended because of the presidential election.

The Secretary-General welcomed the progress of the previous three years in the prevention and resolution of violent conflict in West Africa; however, he noted that the significant gains in West Africa remained fragile and needed to be strengthened. Insufficient democratic control over the armed forces, poor discipline within defence and security institutions and tense civil-military relations were destabilizing factors across the region. He recognized the contributions made by subregional organizations such as ECOWAS and the Mano River Union (MRU) in implementing institutional reforms and in strengthening capacity for conflict prevention and management. With the support of UNOWA, ECOWAS had established a Standby Force and had developed an early warning capacity. At the same time, structural and institutional weaknesses continued to hamper the ability of States to ensure respect for the rule of law, boost economic growth, address deeply rooted inequalities, fight corruption, reduce youth unemployment, deliver public goods and services and ensure adequate distribution of political power. Food insecurity, especially in the Niger and the broader Sahel region, remained a major humanitarian concern, and progress was needed in improving human rights records, mainstreaming gender in conflict prevention and management processes, and combating terrorism, drug trafficking and human trafficking.

Noting the increased number of requests for UNOWA support for preventive diplomacy and addressing cross-cutting root causes of conflict, the Secretary-General recommended that the mandate of the Office be renewed for three years, from 1 January 2011 to 31 December 2013, subject to reporting every six months. It would focus on four strategic directions: preventive diplomacy, by enhancing subregional capacities for mediation, conflict prevention and peacebuilding; addressing cross-border and cross-cutting threats to peace and security; promotion of good governance and gender equality; and partnership with regional organizations.

UNOWA

During the year, UNOWA activities focused on the Office's cooperation and work with UN and regional entities; supporting good governance, the rule of law, and security sector reform; preventing and combating drug trafficking and organized crime; promoting human rights and gender equality; and assisting the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission (see p. 231).

The Office, headed by the Secretary-General's Special Representative for West Africa, Said Djinnit (Algeria), continued to promote information-sharing and interlinkages among UN entities operating in West Africa on cross-border and regional threats to peace and security. The sixth meeting of Dakar, Senegal-based UN regional offices and other entities was organized by UNOWA on 21 January to discuss political developments in the subregion and to coordinate efforts of the UN system in fighting drug trafficking and organized crime as well as food insecurity, human trafficking, terrorism, and climate change. The eighteenth high-level meeting of Heads of UN peace missions in West Africa, organized by UNOWA in Dakar on 25 February, reviewed recent political and pre-election developments in Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, the Niger, Sierra Leone and Togo. The participating entities agreed to work together in support of national efforts for peaceful elections and security reform.

UNOWA was also developing an initiative to strengthen the links between political, socioeconomic and humanitarian interventions in the Sahel region. In regard to the Sahel region, the Office organized a meeting with the resident coordinators from Burkina Faso, Mali, Mauritania and the Niger and regional directors of UN entities on 12 April, and agreed on conducting analyses on cross-cutting issues in the Sahel, such as food security; organizing, in cooperation with ECOWAS, a regional forum for consultation; and advocating for a Security Council visit to West Africa to show support for peace efforts in the subregion. Food security in the Sahel was the focus of a meeting on 22 March of Heads of UN regional agencies, convened by UNOWA. UNOWA worked with the Department of Political Affairs to promote the UN Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy in the Sahel-Sahara region.

UNOWA continued to monitor the human rights situation in the subregion with emphasis on countries involved in electoral processes. With the Office of the UN High Commission for Human Rights, it completed a study on trafficking in persons in West Africa, producing guidelines to promote domestic legislation in compliance with international human rights norms and standards. The Office initiated a study on dimensions of climate change, especially its impact on peace and security in West Africa. At an ECOWAS/UNOWA meeting on 14 October in Abuja, the organizations agreed to further mobilize the West African leadership on the importance of addressing drug trafficking and strengthening their cooperation. The Special Representative convened the nineteenth high-level meeting of Heads of UN peace missions in West Africa, held in Dakar on 29 September with heads of missions in Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia and Sierra Leone attending. On 7 September, UNOWA convened a meeting of UN regional directors in Dakar, during which the Special Representative updated them on peacemaking efforts emanating from UN headquarters.

Independent review. On 10 December [S/2010/693], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Security Council the independent study on UNOWA conducted by the Center on International Cooperation of New York University, which the Council, in its consultations on UNOWA on 12 January and 13 July, had requested. The study reviewed UNOWA activities and performance in the implementation of its mandate, and assessed the appropriateness of the mandate in light of the evolving subregional peace and security landscape as well as UNOWA capacity. It made proposals for a future mandate, in particular that the Office focus on good offices with a strategic analysis component capable of framing and informing diplomacy by the Special Representative. It also recommended that a greater proportion of its budget be dedicated to meetings, research and reports, taking advantage of the ability of UNOWA to convene a wide range of stakeholders for political consultations. Substantive staff could be reduced to four or five trained in political reporting and strategic analysis. The report also noted that the strategic context in West Africa had changed. From 2000 to 2002, the subregion had been destabilized by interlinked wars, but recently the primary challenge had been a series of coups and unconstitutional changes of government. ECOWAS had evolved to address the security environment, prioritizing conflict prevention and resolution and responding to unconstitutional changes of government. The role of UNOWA involved supporting and backstopping ECOWAS.

Extension and revision of mandate. In a 14 December letter [S/2010/660] to the Security Council, the Secretary-General referred to his December report (see p. 175) and recommendation contained therein that the UNOWA mandate be extended for three years, to 31 December 2013. The letter contained three objectives to be implemented in collaboration with ECOWAS, MRU and other regional partners: monitoring political developments in West Africa, carrying out good offices roles and other Secretary-General's assignments and enhancing conflict prevention and mediation; enhancing capacities to address cross-border and cross-cutting threats to peace and security; and promoting good governance and respect for the rule of law, human rights and mainstreaming of gender in conflict prevention and conflict management. Responding by a letter of 20 December [S/2010/661], the Council concurred with the recommendation and took note of his intention to revise UNOWA's functions and activities.

Financing

In a report issued in October [A/65/328/Add.3 & Corr.1] providing estimated requirements for 11 special political missions grouped under thematic cluster III (UN offices, peacebuilding support offices, integrated offices and commissions), the Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for UNOWA in the net amount of $7,715,300 for 2011. ACABQ in December recommended reducing that amount by $96,000 [A/65/602].

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1433), the General Assembly endorsed the recommendations of ACABQ and approved the budget for the 29 special political missions, including UNOWA, under section 3, Political affairs, of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011.

Côte d'Ivoire

In 2010, the United Nations, in cooperation with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), the African Union (AU) and the international community, continued to support Government efforts to move the peace process forward in Côte d'Ivoire through implementation of the 2007 Ouagadougou Political Agreement and its four supplementary accords [YUN 2007, pp. 174 & 184]. Those agreements addressed issues that arose from the crisis in the country and dealt with the identification and election processes, the reunification of the army and the restoration of State authority throughout the country. The United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) worked with the Government in providing logistical and technical support in preparing elections and in assisting with disarmament and demobilization of ex-combatants and restoring State authority.

In January, the Security Council decided to renew the mandate of UNOCI until 31 May, in particular to support the organization of free, fair, open and transparent elections, and to expand the size of military personnel of the peacekeeping force from 7,450 to 7,950 during the election period. An outbreak of violence in January resulted in another postponement of elections, this time to 31 October for the first round of presidential elections. The Secretary-General sent an inter-departmental technical assessment mission to Côte d'Ivoire that reported to the Security Council in June on the political situation and the preparations for elections. The Council, in a June resolution, defined the mandate of UNOCI for the last six months of 2010, outlining the mission's responsibilities in the areas of monitoring armed groups; preventing hostile action; monitoring the borders; protecting civilians under threat of physical violence; monitoring the arms embargo; collecting arms brought into the country illegally; promoting the peace process through public information; promoting human rights; and supporting humanitarian assistance. In regard to the electoral process, it was mandated to support the organization of open, free, fair and transparent elections through, among other means, assistance to the Independent Electoral Commission; to monitor the implementation of the Code of Good Conduct for elections; and to contribute to the process of identification of the population. The Mission was also called on to contribute to the disarmament, demobilization, storage of weapons and reintegration of former combatants of the two parties and members of militias.

The Ivorian parties reached agreement in September on the final electoral roll, and two rounds of presidential elections were held in late 2010. The first, on 31 October, among a number of candidates, left no candidate with a majority, and consequently a second round was held on 28 November. The tabulation of votes for both rounds was overseen and certified by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, who confirmed the results announced by the country's Independent Electoral Commission. At the conclusion of the voting, the Commission announced that Alassane Outtara had been elected by 54.1 per cent of the vote, to candidate Laurent Gbagbo's 45.9 per cent. The President of the Constitutional Council, however, declared the proclamation as null and void, due to the Commission's having passed the legal limit of three days for pronouncing itself on the provisional results. The United Nations and the AU joined other regional organizations in expressing support for the results certified by the Special Representative. Shortly after the announcement on 2 December of the provisional results of the run-off election, forces and militias loyal to Mr. Gbagbo and his political party resorted to violent attacks against communities believed to be strongholds for President Ouattara and against his headquarters in the capital. The year ended in uncertainty and unrest, with those forces also taking action to block UNOCI's operations and movements.

Political and security developments

The Secretary-General, in his January report to the Security Council on UNOCI [S/2010/15], described the situation at the end of 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 183] as mainly stable. Progress had been made in identification of voters and other election-related tasks provided for in the Ouagadougou Agreement, while progress in implementing the fourth supplementary agreement on disarmament and reunification of the country was negligible.

In a letter of 15 January [S/2010/42] to the Security Council, the Secretary-General referred to his 29 December 2009 letter [YUN 2009, p. 188] transmitting the proposal by Côte d'Ivoire and Burkina Faso that a battalion of 500 personnel, including one helicopter and crew, be deployed from Burkina Faso to Côte d'Ivoire as part of UNOCI in order to reinforce security arrangements for the Ivorian presidential election. A previous plan to redeploy troops from the United Nations mission in Liberia (UNML) was no longer feasible, and Côte d'Ivoire was no longer able to provide adequate troops for security at election time; therefore, the need for additional forces in Côte d'Ivoire was urgent. In light of the situation, the Secretary-General recommended that the Council approve the proposal by President Laurent Gbagbo of Côte d'Ivoire and President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso to deploy a battalion from Burkina Faso for three months beginning one month before the presidential election. The cost, as estimated by the Secretariat, would be $5,000,000. A redeployment would require the consent of the Council to temporarily increase the authorized troop ceiling from 7,450 to 7,950 personnel.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 January [meeting 6267], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1911(2010). The draft [S/2010/41] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 1880(2009) of 30 July 2009 and 1893(2009) of 29 October 2009, and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, and resolution 1885(2009) of 15 September 2009 on the situation in Liberia,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling the importance of the principles of good-neighbourliness, non-interference and regional cooperation,

Recalling that it endorsed the agreement signed by President Laurent Gbagbo and Mr. Guillaume Soro in Ouagadougou on 4 March 2007 ("the Ouagadougou Political Agreement"), and that it welcomed the four subsequent supplementary agreements,

Recalling again, in particular, that in its resolution 1721(2006) of 1 November 2006, it notably endorsed the decision of the Peace and Security Council of the African Union on the mandate of the Head of State, and recalling further that in the statement by its President of 28 March 2007, it endorsed the Ouagadougou Political Agreement, including chapter V thereof on the institutional framework for implementation, and that the Agreement provided for a period of ten months for the holding of the presidential elections,

Expressing again its appreciation to President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso ("the Facilitator") for his continued efforts to support the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular through the follow-up mechanisms of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement, commending and encouraging the continued efforts of the African Union and the Economic Community of West African States to promote peace and stability in Côte d'Ivoire, and reiterating its full support for them,

Stressing the need for the Security Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments,

Reiterating its strong condemnation of any attempt to destabilize the peace process by force, and expressing its intention to examine without delay the situation after any such attempt, on the basis of a report of the Secretary-General,

Having taken note of the letters dated 29 December 2009 and 15 January 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council and of the proposal of the Presidents of Côte d'Ivoire and Burkina Faso to deploy some troops from Burkina Faso as part of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire for three months,

Having taken note also of the report of the Secretary-General of 7 January 2010,

Noting again with concern, in spite of the sustained improvement in the overall human rights situation, the persistence of reported human rights and humanitarian law violations against civilians in different parts of the country, including numerous acts of sexual violence, stressing that the perpetrators must be brought to justice, reiterating its firm condemnation of all violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict and its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Determining that the situation in Côte d'Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

Supporting the Ouagadougou political process and a credible electoral process

1. Recalls that in the statement by its President of 8 December 2009, it took note of the postponement of the first round of the presidential elections to the end of February or the beginning of March 2010;

2. Welcomes the progress made towards the establishment of the final voters list, including the publication of the provisional voters list certified by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Côte d'Ivoire;

3. Reiterates its determination to bring its full support to a credible electoral process in Côte d'Ivoire, and reiterates further that the publication of a final voters list certified by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General is crucial for the holding of open, free, fair and transparent elections;

4. Urges the relevant Ivorian stakeholders to ensure the publication of the final voters list, to announce the official date of the first round of the presidential elections and to meet their commitments in full;

5. Reiterates further that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General shall certify that all stages of the electoral process provide all the necessary guarantees for the holding of open, free, fair and transparent presidential and legislative elections in accordance with international standards, and reaffirms its full support for the Special Representative in his certification role;

6. Stresses that it will base its assessment of the electoral process on the certification that will be prepared by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General consistent with the five-criteria framework referred to in the report of the Secretary-General of 15 April 2008 and after inclusive contacts with all stakeholders in Côte d'Ivoire, including civil society;

7. Stresses also the importance of an inclusive participation of Ivorian civil society in the electoral process, and of ensuring equal protection of and respect for the human rights of every Ivorian as they relate to the electoral system, in particular respect for freedom of opinion and expression, and removing obstacles and challenges to the participation and full involvement of women in public life;

8. Again urges the political parties to comply fully with the Code of Good Conduct for Elections which they signed under the auspices of the Secretary-General, and, in particular, urges the Ivorian authorities to allow equitable access to public media;

9. Expresses its concern at the delays encountered in the deployment of the mixed units of the Integrated Command Centre responsible for securing the elections, and urges the Ivorian parties to enhance their efforts in this regard;

10. Urges the Government of Côte d'Ivoire to provide the operators involved in the electoral process with the necessary support, and encourages the international community to continue their support to the electoral process, including, with the agreement of the Ivorian authorities, by providing electoral observation capacity and related technical assistance;

11. Recalls that it is fully prepared to impose targeted measures pursuant to paragraph 20 of resolution 1893(2009), including against persons who are determined to be a threat to the peace and national reconciliation process in Côte d'Ivoire, and recalls further that, pursuant to paragraph 6 of the above-mentioned resolution, any threat to the electoral process in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular any attack on or obstruction of the action of the Independent Electoral Commission in charge of the organization of the elections or the action of the operators mentioned in paragraphs 1.3.3 and 2.1.1 of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement shall constitute a threat to the peace and national reconciliation process for the purposes of paragraphs 9 and 11 of resolution 1572(2004) of 15 November 2004;

12. Urges the Ivorian parties to make further concrete progress, before and after the elections, to advance the reunification and disarmament processes;

13. Reaffirms paragraphs 14 to 17 of resolution 1880(2009), calls upon all Ivorian parties, with the continued support of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, to ensure the protection of civilians, including women and children, to fully implement the recommendations of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict on children and armed conflict in Côte d'Ivoire, including to adopt a national action plan to address sexual violence, and to ensure that the rule of law is strengthened and that all reported abuses are investigated and those responsible brought to justice, and calls, in particular, upon all parties to take appropriate measures to refrain from, prevent and protect civilians from all forms of sexual violence;

Renewing the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire

14. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, as determined in resolution 1739(2007) of 10 January 2007, until 31 May 2010, in particular to support the organization in Côte d'Ivoire of open, free, fair and transparent elections;

15. Requests the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, within its existing resources and mandate, to continue to bring its full support to the parties in the implementation of the remaining tasks under the Ouagadougou Political Agreement and its supplementary agreements, in particular those that are essential to the holding of open, free, fair and transparent presidential elections, to provide technical and logistical support to the Independent Electoral Commission for the preparation and holding of the elections in a secure environment, to continue to support the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programme and the disarmament and dismantling of militias and to continue to contribute to the promotion and protection of human rights, including the protection of women and children, pursuant to paragraph 26 of resolution 1880(2009);

16. Expresses its intention, in principle, to raise for a limited period of time the current level of 7,450 authorized military personnel, as needed and up to no more than 7,950 personnel, when the final voters list is made public, and to this end requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council informed of his technical analysis;

17. Stresses, in this regard, that it will hold the Ivorian parties fully accountable for respecting the electoral timeline;

18. Requests the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to continue to assist the Facilitator and his Special Representative in Abidjan in the conduct of the facilitation, including by helping the Facilitator, as appropriate and upon his request, to carry out his arbitration role according to the provisions of paragraph 8.1 of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement and paragraphs 8 and 9 of the third supplementary agreement;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the measures necessary to ensure full compliance in the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to keep the Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including predeployment awareness training, and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

20. Decides to extend until 31 May 2010 the authorization that it provided to the French forces in order to support the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, within the limits of their deployment and their capabilities;

21. Expresses its intention to review in full by 31 May 2010, with a view to possible significant modifications, the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, the authorization provided to the French forces supporting it, the level of troops of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the benchmarks referred to in annex I to the report of the Secretary-General of 7 January 2010, in the light of the elections and the implementation of the key steps of the peace process;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to provide an update to the Council by mid-March 2010 and a full report by the end of April 2010, including detailed recommendations and options for the future of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire as well as revised benchmarks based on the results of a technical assessment mission;

23. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Inter-Ivorian dialogue

In February, the Facilitator of the inter-Ivorian direct dialogue, President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, issued two press releases on his recent consultations with the various Ivorian parties on difficulties in implementing the electoral process. The first release, sent to the Security Council by a 19 February letter [S/2010/100], mentioned difficulties due to the internal cross-checking of 429,000 disputed cases by the Independent Electoral Commission. It was noted that progress had been made in the electoral process, particularly with the production of a provisional electoral list of 5,300,000 persons who were successfully cross-checked by the appropriate national bodies. Ivorian politicians had expressed concerns regarding the latest developments in the crisis recovery process, and expressed desire to preserve the gains achieved and to pursue implementation of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement. The Facilitator urged Mr. Gbagbo to relaunch the electoral process so that it could reach a successful conclusion.

The Facilitator, in a second press release forwarded to the Security Council on 23 February [S/2010/104], said that he had visited Côte d'Ivoire to discuss means of resolving the current crisis there. At meetings with officials, he had discussed the Independent Electoral Commission (CEI), the relaunching of the electoral process in order to draw up a new electoral timetable and manage the litigation on the provisional electoral list, and the establishment of a new government. On the question of CEI, the Facilitator and the Ivorian stakeholders agreed that the CEI structure would be maintained in accordance with the Pretoria Agreement [YUN 2005, p. 232]; the Chairman and Vice-Chairmen of CEI would be replaced by the political groups that nominated them; and the CEI Bureau would be elected by 25 February. With respect to relaunching the political process, the Facilitator and the Ivorian stakeholders recommended extension of the administrative and judicial litigation on the provisional electoral list for a period of 21 days from 1 to 21 March; production of the final electoral list as of 22 March; adherence to the modus operandi with respect to the administrative and judicial litigation on the provisional electoral list; review of the courts of judicial litigation that did not adhere to the modus operandi (written claims to CEI local offices); and preparation of a new electoral timetable with a view to holding the first round of the presidential election in late April or early May.

The Facilitator and the Ivorian stakeholders agreed that a government would be established on 23 February comprising representatives of all the parties that were signatories of the Linas-Marcoussis Agreement [YUN 2003, p. 166]—a plan for dividing power among political factions and establishing peace. They called for an end to demonstrations leading to the loss of human lives and destruction of property, and asked that measures be taken to restore dialogue and understanding. The Facilitator called on Ivorian politicians to increase efforts to safeguard the Ouagadougou Political Agreement in order to consolidate peace, reconciliation and national unity in Côte d'Ivoire.

Security Council statement (March). On 17 March [SC/9882], the Security Council expressed its concern at the continuing delays in the electoral process since January, and urged the Ivorian stakeholders to revive that process and to remain within the framework of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement and of the previous peace agreements endorsed by the Council.

Technical assessment mission. The Secretary-General, in response to Security Council resolution 1911(2010) (see p. 178), informed the Council by a letter of 26 April [S/2010/220] that an interdepartmental technical assessment mission travelled to Côte d'Ivoire from 12 to 23 April, and that the Secretariat was preparing a report on its work, which would be included in his forthcoming report on UNOCI. As the UNOCI mandate was due to expire at the end of May, he suggested that the Council authorize a technical rollover of the mandate for one month, until 30 June, to allow the inclusion of the technical mission's findings and his recommendations in his report.

On 29 April [S/2010/221], the Council requested the Secretary-General to report on UNOCI by 21 May, based on the results of the technical mission.

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his May report on UNOCI [S/2010/245], reviewed developments since his January report and made recommendations on benchmarks mentioned therein, based on the findings of the technical assessment mission. By the end of 2009, the voter registration and identification operations had yielded a provisional electoral list of some 5.3 million persons confirmed by the technical operators (the so-called “white list”) and some 1.03 million persons who remained to be confirmed (the “grey list”). On the basis of that work, the Cadre permanent de concertation, composed of the main Ivorian political leaders—the President, Laurent Gbagbo; the Prime Minister, Guillaume Soro; the former President, Henry Konan Bedié, leader of the Parti démocratique de Côte d’Ivoire; and the former Prime Minister, Alassane Ouattara, leader of the Rassemblement des républicains—had welcomed the provisional voters list and endorsed a new electoral timetable providing for the completion of the final list in January and the presidential election by early March.

Reports in January about a separate parallel list of some 429,000 individuals, produced by the President of the CEI, Robert Beugré Mambéré, outside of the established procedure, however, brought the electoral process to a halt as the ruling Front populaire ivoirien (FPI) maintained that the President of the Commission had committed fraud, and it called for Mr. Mambéré’s resignation. The Facilitator consulted with the parties involved, but the President of the Commission declined his advice to resign, prompting President Gbagbo to dissolve the Commission and the Government. The President requested the Prime Minister to form a new Government, stating that this would allow the country to move forward with elections. The new Government and Commission were installed in late February. Meanwhile, political tension rose amid reports that the ruling party had requested courts in central Côte d’Ivoire to purge ineligible individuals from the provisional electoral list, triggering violent protests and at least eight deaths. In reaction, President Gbagbo and the ruling party claimed that the security situation in the north would not allow fair elections there, and therefore called for disarmament and reunification of the country before elections, as provided for in the fourth supplementary agreement to the Ouagadougou Agreement (Ouagadougou IV) [YUN 2008, p. 189]. The opposition parties accused the President of using the Agreement as a pretext for delaying the elections indefinitely.

At that point, the election process stalled due to differences on how to address fraud and resume the appeals process on the provisional voters list. Senior FPI members disseminated criticism of the Prime Minister and the Forces nouvelles Ministers for perpetuating the division of the country so as to continue to benefit from both the Government and a parallel economy in the north. On 10 April, the President and the Prime Minister agreed that the latter would continue to consult all stakeholders to resolve the impasse over the voters list.

As for the findings of the technical mission (see p. 180), it had visited the country at a time when questions were being raised regarding the continuing relevance of the Ouagadougou agreements, the commitment of the signatories to the agreements and their confidence in the Facilitator, given the abrupt interruption of the electoral process and the media reports claiming that the President of Senegal, Abdoulaye Wade, was going to visit Côte d’Ivoire to engage in mediation. Those reports were refuted by President Wade.

At the time of the mission, attention was focused on Ouagadougou IV, which clarified the modalities and timeline for conducting before elections the cantonment and storage of weapons of former combatants of the ex-belligerent forces; the dismantling of the militias; the relaunch of the process to reunify the Ivorian defence and security forces and the Forces nouvelles; and the redeployment of State administration throughout the country, including the corps préfectoral, the judiciary and the fiscal and customs administrations. The implementation process of the Ouagadougou Agreement, originally envisaged for completion by January 2008, had been delayed by numerous factors, including underestimation of the time required to implement some tasks; lack of capacity of the national implementing institutions; logistical and other resource constraints; and differences among the parties on the practical modalities for certain tasks, such as the identification operations. The lack of political will also contributed significantly to the delays. Nevertheless, all stakeholders recognized that the agreements had achieved more progress than preceding peace agreements. Following violent incidents in February 2010, President Gbagbo and the ruling party insisted on disarmament and the reunification of the country before elections, consisting of the restoration of State authority with centralization of the treasury, disarmament and integration of Forces nouvelles in the military, gendarmerie and police, and reintegration and dismantling of militias.

The mission found three main issues that needed to be resolved to move the electoral process forward: the question of fraud in the voters list; the modalities for processing the lists of some 5.3 million persons confirmed by the technical operators (the so-called “white list”) and some 1.03 million persons who remained to be confirmed (the “grey list”) to produce the final voters list; and completion of the remaining technical processes. The President maintained there was massive fraud in the preparation of the provisional voters list, in particular that the list had been manipulated by the former President of the IEC, and that nationals of neighbouring countries had registered in attempts to become Ivorian citizens. The opposition political parties, on the other hand, insisted that the list had not been manipulated, and that the provisional list had not been compromised by the preparation of the parallel list of 429,000 individuals.

The Facilitator stressed that resolving the issues surrounding the electoral list was critical for progress in all other aspects of the peace process. He believed that nearly all the tasks related to the provisional voters list had been completed, and that while the “white list” was the outcome of a broadly accepted operation, it was essential to restore the confidence of the parties in the list. The Facilitator advised that all stakeholders should support the ongoing efforts by the Prime Minister to conduct additional technical verification of the list in order to restore the confidence of all parties. The UNOCI Electoral Assistance Division and Certification Cell were participating with the consultations as observers while providing technical assistance to the new Electoral Commission. On 2 May, the Prime Minister and the President of the Commission issued a joint statement setting out a new calendar for processing the provisional electoral list, first dealing with the appeals process for those on the “grey list” and secondly with the appeals process for those on the “white list”. Operations on the “grey list” began in late May.

Progress in the restoration of State authority had been limited, the technical mission reported. Despite the lifting of the zone of confidence which had divided the country and prevented the free movement of people and goods between the north and the south, Côte d’Ivoire remained a divided country, with the Forces nouvelles maintaining a parallel administration, economy, treasury, judicial system and security structures in the north. In that area, the Forces nouvelles maintained control of the local government and customs and revenue. Many courts in the north and the west were non-operational. President Gbagbo and the ruling party insisted that the Forces nouvelles dismantle the parallel economy, treasury, administration and security structures, and allow the redeployed State institutions to carry out their functions. They also pointed out that Côte d’Ivoire’s resources continued to be siphoned off illegally to neighbouring countries. Those issues were raised by the technical assessment mission with the Prime Minister and the Forces nouvelles. The Prime Minister announced further steps towards the reunification of the treasury and demobilization of combatants, while the Forces nouvelles informed the mission that discussions were ongoing on arrangements for dismantling the parallel economy and treasury. The opposition parties expressed the view that claims of the absence of State authority and recurring insecurity in the north were grossly overstated.

The Secretary-General suggested that the perennial delays in the peace process, in particular the uncertainty of the timeframe for elections and the situation on the ground, called for a further review of the role of UNOCI, adjusted most recently in Security Council resolution 1911(2010). All interlocutors of the technical mission advised that it would be premature to withdraw UNOCI as long as there were still two armed forces and the country remained divided administratively and economically. They stressed that the United Nations should help implement the disarmament processes in keeping with Ouagadougou IV; restore State authority and reunify the economy; prepare a final voters list; and hold elections. The technical assessment mission concluded that the tasks set out for UNOCI in resolutions 1880(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 177] and 1911(2010) remained essential; however, other factors pertaining to the security situation and the peace process should be considered when renewing the mandate.

Attempts to merge some of the Ivorian defence forces and the Forces nouvelles into the Integrated Command Centre (ICC) remained limited, with only 1,053 out of the stipulated 8,000 having been assigned to the Centre’s mixed gendarmerie brigades and police units. Under the Ouagadougou Agreement, the Centre was responsible for supervising the disarmament and demobilization and cantonment of Forces nouvelles combatants and disarmament of the militias. UNOCI, the French Licorne force, the national defence and security forces and the Forces nouvelles jointly developed a security plan for the elections, which included the ICC and would be reviewed pending the Security Council’s decision on the future role of UNOCI before, during and after elections.

As mandated, UNOCI provided technical and logistical assistance to the CEI and other national institutions responsible for identification and electoral processes. Specifically, it provided transportation for electoral materials and registration officials, refurbished identification and voter registration centres, and trained judges and registration agents. All stakeholders requested that UNOCI continue to provide support. UNOCI assisted in the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) of former combatants by constructing cantonment and DDR sites; providing planning assistance to the ICC and the National Programme for Reinsertion and Community Rehabilitation; and securing weapons and ammunition collected. The Forces nouvelles leadership requested financial and training assistance for the 5,000 former combatants earmarked to join the new army. The role of UNOCI in supporting the restoration of State authority had so far focused on monitoring and supporting the redeployment of civil servants, including the judiciary, to the north. UNOCI also strengthened the conflict management and conflict resolution capacities of local authorities.

The Secretary-General recommended maintaining UNOCI with the current total overall strength of its military and police components at 8,650 personnel until the end of 2010. For the seven months until then, the Ivorian parties could resolve their differences with the assistance of the Facilitator, demonstrate their commitment to the peace process, and implement the remaining tasks under the Ouagadougou Agreement, in particular those related to elections, disarmament, and reunification of the country. He also recommended that the UNOCI mandate be adjusted to allow it to adapt to the new realities by focusing on helping the parties to implement the remaining tasks, namely, disarmament and reunification of the country, and elections. The provisional list of voters was the outcome of a credible process, and efforts should be made to restore confidence in the list. The Secretary-General recommended that UNOCI continue to provide technical and logistical support to enable the CEI to complete the remaining tasks: relaunching the interrupted appeals process; distributing the provisional and final voters lists; sensitizing the media; distributing identity cards and voters cards; and distributing electoral materials, including ballot papers. He called on UNOCI to advise the national partners in charge of DDR and dismantling of militias, to contribute to the refurbishment of the barracks of the four cantonment sites and support the cantonment process; to participate in arranging secure storage of weapons; and to provide microprojects for demobilized combatants.

In keeping with Ouagadougou IV, the Secretary-General recommended that UNOCI contribute to training the 5,000 Forces nouvelles personnel who were to be cantoned to prepare for their integration into the national army, including sensitization on human rights and international humanitarian law. Security sector reform was essential for the long-term sustainability of the security architecture in the country, and the United Nations would support that process, in coordination with the AU and ECOWAS. He recommended that UNOCI and the UN system play a more active role in support of the restoration of State authority, particularly administration and the rule of law. The UN system should also assist in supporting customs, public finance experts and administrative capacities of the regional presences of ministries where needed. With respect to the Integrated Command Centre, he recommended that UNOCI provide it with technical advice and logistical support and that the Government support the Centre with appropriate financing, logistics, communications and non-lethal crowd control equipment. An exemption to the arms embargo (see p. 195) should be considered in order to allow the Government to import riot control gear.

While UNOCI troop strength would remain the same, the reconfiguration of the Operation would change by increasing troop concentrations in identified high-risk areas and increasing the number of policemen while reducing the military. Under that plan, the current combined total authorized strength would be maintained at 8,650 personnel, with a military strength of 7,392, consisting of 7,200 troops and 192 military observers; a police strength of 1,250, consisting of 450 police officers and six formed police units for a total of 800 officers; and eight seconded customs officers. The Secretary-General warned that unrest before, during and after the elections remained a real threat, and he called for a strengthened force around election time.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 May, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1924(2010). The draft [S/2010/253] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 1893(2009) of 29 October 2009 and 1911(2010) of 28 January 2010, and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, and resolution 1885(2009) of 15 September 2009 on the situation in Liberia,

Considering the need to examine thoroughly the recommendations for a revised mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire included in the report of the Secretary-General of 20 May 2010,

Determining that the situation in Côte d'Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to extend until 30 June 2010 the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire as determined in resolution 1739(2007) of 10 January 2007;

2. Decides also to extend until 30 June 2010 the authorization that the Security Council provided to the French forces in order to support the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, within the limits of their deployment and their capabilities;

3. Decides further to remain actively seized of the matter.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 June, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1933(2010). The draft [S/2010/338] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 1893(2009) of 29 October 2009, 1911(2010) of 28 January 2010 and 1924(2010) of 27 May 2010, and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, and resolution 1885(2009) of 15 September 2009 on the situation in Liberia,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling the importance of the principles of good-neighbourliness, non-interference and regional cooperation,

Recalling that it endorsed the agreement signed by President Laurent Gbagbo and Mr. Guillaume Soro in Ouagadougou on 4 March 2007 ("the Ouagadougou Political Agreement"), and that it welcomed the four subsequent supplementary agreements,

Recalling again that in its resolution 1721(2006) of 1 November 2006, it notably endorsed the decision of the Peace and Security Council of the African Union on the mandate of the Head of State, and recalling further that in the statement by its President of 28 March 2007, it endorsed the Ouagadougou Political Agreement, including chapter V thereof on the institutional framework for implementation, and that the Agreement provided for a period of ten months for the holding of the presidential elections,

Expressing again its appreciation to President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso (“the Facilitator”) for his critical role and his continued efforts to support the peace process in Côte d’Ivoire, in particular through the follow-up mechanisms of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement, commending and encouraging the continued efforts of the African Union and the Economic Community of West African States to promote peace and stability in Côte d’Ivoire, and reiterating its full support for them,

Stressing the need for the Security Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments, the substantial engagement in which is more likely to lead to a sustainable peace when the parties to a conflict abide by their commitments and obligations, welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep all peacekeeping operations under close review, and noting the importance of contingency planning,

Reiterating its strong condemnation of any attempt to destabilize the peace process, in particular by force, and expressing its intention to examine without delay the situation should any such attempt take place,

Having taken note of the report of the Secretary-General of 20 May 2010,

Noting again with concern, in spite of the sustained efforts to improve the overall human rights situation, the persistence of reported human rights and humanitarian law violations against civilians in different parts of the country, including numerous acts of sexual violence met with impunity, stressing that the perpetrators must be brought to justice, reiterating its firm condemnation of all violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in Côte d’Ivoire, and recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict and its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Determining that the situation in Côte d’Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

Supporting the Ouagadougou political process and a credible electoral process

1. Recalls that the last presidential elections in Côte d’Ivoire were held on 22 October 2000 and expresses its deep concern at the continuing delays in the electoral process and the absence of a time frame for the holding of open, free, fair and transparent elections in Côte d’Ivoire, and stresses that the events of February 2010 showed how fragile and unstable the situation remains;

2. Urges the relevant Ivorian stakeholders to ensure the publication of the final voters list without further delay, on the basis of the provisional list published in November 2009 and certified by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Côte d’Ivoire, to announce the official date of the first round of the presidential elections and to meet their commitments in full, stresses that it will hold the Ivorian parties fully accountable, and notes the joint statement issued on 2 May 2010 by the Prime Minister and the President of the Independent Electoral Commission and the work undertaken on a part of the provisional voters list;

3. Reiterates its determination to bring its full support to a credible electoral process in Côte d’Ivoire, and stresses that the publication of a final voters list certified by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General is crucial for the holding of open, free, fair and transparent elections as well as for the completion of the disarmament and reunification processes, as highlighted by the Secretary-General in his report of 20 May 2010;

4. Reiterates that the Special Representative of the Secretary-General shall certify that all stages of the electoral process provide all the necessary guarantees for the holding of open, free, fair and transparent presidential and legislative elections in accordance with international standards, and reaffirms its full support to the Special Representative in his certification role;

5. Stresses that it will base its assessment of the electoral process on the certification that will be prepared by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General consistent with the five-criteria framework referred to in the report of the Secretary-General of 15 April 2008 and after inclusive contacts with all stakeholders in Côte d’Ivoire, including civil society;

6. Reiterates the importance of the inclusive participation of Ivorian civil society in the electoral process and of ensuring equal protection of and respect for the human rights of every Ivorian as they relate to the electoral system, in particular respect for freedom of opinion and expression, and removing obstacles and challenges to the participation and full involvement of women in public life;

7. Again urges the political parties to comply fully with the Code of Good Conduct for Elections which they signed under the auspices of the Secretary-General, recalls the importance for the public throughout the country to have access to pluralistic and diverse information through the media, urges all relevant Ivorian stakeholders to allow equitable and broader access to the media, and, in particular, urges the Ivorian authorities to allow equitable access to State media;

8. Expresses its concern at the delays encountered in deploying and operationalizing the mixed units of the Integrated Command Centre responsible for securing the elections, and urges the Ivorian parties to take concrete steps in this regard;

9. Urges the Government of Côte d’Ivoire to provide the operators involved in the electoral process with the necessary support, and encourages the international community to continue its support to the electoral process, including, with the agreement of the Ivorian authorities, by providing electoral observation capacity and related technical assistance;

10. Urges every Ivorian to refrain from any call for hatred, intolerance and violence, notes with interest that in his report of 20 May 2010 the Secretary-General encouraged the Security Council to impose targeted sanctions against media actors who fan political tension and incite violence, and reiterates that it is fully prepared to impose targeted measures pursuant to paragraphs 6 and 20 of resolution 1893(2009), including against persons who are determined to be a threat to the peace and national reconciliation process in Côte d'Ivoire or to be publicly inciting hatred and violence;

11. Again urges the Ivorian parties, with the support of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, as applicable, to make further concrete progress, before and after the elections, to advance the reunification and disarmament processes, including by covering the expenses required for these processes as set out in the framework of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement;

12. Stresses that the identification process is key to the long-term stability of Côte d'Ivoire, and again calls upon the Ivorian parties to continue the identification operations, including after the elections;

13. Condemns the persistence of reported human rights violations, in particular sexual violence, and calls upon all Ivorian parties, with the continued support of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, to ensure the protection of civilians, especially women, children and displaced persons, to fully implement the recommendations of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict on children and armed conflict in Côte d'Ivoire, notably to adopt and implement a national action plan to address sexual violence, and to ensure that rule of law is strengthened and that all reported abuses are investigated and those responsible for such violations brought to justice, calls upon all parties to take appropriate measures to refrain from, prevent and protect civilians from all forms of sexual violence, and reaffirms paragraphs 14 to 17 of its resolution 1880(2009) of 30 July 2009;

14. Urges the signatories to the Ouagadougou Political Agreement to work towards a sustainable solution for the voluntary return, reinstallation, reintegration and security of displaced persons, including by addressing land tenure issues, with the support of the United Nations system, and to fulfil in this regard their commitments in accordance with the Agreement and their obligations under international law;

15. Requests the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, when implementing paragraph 16 below, to prioritize the consolidation of the stability of the country, including as determined in paragraph 16 (b) below, and the establishment of the final voters list, which is crucial for the peace process as a whole;

Mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire

16. Decides that, in order to support the parties in implementing the Ouagadougou Political Agreement more effectively, the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire shall have the following mandate from the date of adoption of the present resolution until 31 December 2010:

Contributing to the consolidation of the stability of the country

(a) Monitoring the armed groups

- To observe and monitor the implementation of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement of 4 March 2007 as far as the armed groups are concerned, to prevent, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment, any hostile action, including against civilians, and to investigate and report on any act of violence committed by the Ivorian parties to the Agreement;
- To support the Integrated Command Centre through continued technical advice, training and logistical support and to participate in the patrols of the Centre's mixed units in sensitive areas;
- To liaise with the National Armed Forces of Côte d'Ivoire and the military elements of the Forces nouvelles, in coordination with the French forces, in order to promote mutual trust among all the Ivorian forces involved and to ease tensions;
- To assist the Government of Côte d'Ivoire in monitoring the borders, with particular attention to any cross-border movement of combatants or transfer of arms and to the situation of Liberian refugees, in close coordination with the United Nations Mission in Liberia;
- To support, in coordination with the Ivorian authorities, the provision of security for members of the Government of Côte d'Ivoire and key political stakeholders, in view of the preparation and holding of the elections;

(b) Protection of civilians

- To protect, without prejudice to the primary responsibility of the Ivorian authorities, civilians under imminent threat of physical violence, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment, including in high risk areas identified by the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire on the basis of the comprehensive protection of civilians strategy and the threat assessment referred to in the report of the Secretary-General of 20 May 2010;
- To work closely with humanitarian agencies, particularly in relation to areas of tension and areas of return of displaced persons, and to exchange information on possible outbreaks of violence and other threats against civilians in order to respond thereto in a timely and appropriate manner;

(c) Monitoring of the arms embargo

- To monitor the implementation of the measures imposed by paragraph 7 of resolution 1572(2004) of 15 November 2004, in cooperation with the Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire established pursuant to resolution 1584(2005) of 1 February 2005, including by inspecting, as they deem it necessary and when appropriate without notice, all weapons, ammunition and related materiel regardless of location, consistent with resolution 1893(2009);
- To collect, as appropriate, arms and any related materiel brought into Côte d'Ivoire in violation of the measures imposed by paragraph 7 of resolution 1572(2004) and to dispose of such arms and related materiel as appropriate;

(d) Public information

- To promote the peace process arising from the Ouagadougou Political Agreement throughout the territory of Côte d'Ivoire through the public information capacity of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular its radio broadcasting capability through ONUCI FM;
- To encourage the Ivorian mass media and the main political actors to fully implement the Code of Good Conduct for Elections that the Ivorian parties have signed under the auspices of the Secretary-General as well as to sign and adhere to the Code of Good Conduct for the Media;
- To monitor any public incidents of incitement to hatred, intolerance and violence, to bring to the attention of the Security Council all individuals identified as instigators of political violence, and to keep the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004) regularly informed of developments in this regard;

(e) Assistance in the field of human rights

- To contribute to the promotion and protection of human rights in Côte d'Ivoire, with special attention to violations committed against children and women and to all forms of sexual violence, to monitor, help to investigate and report on human rights and humanitarian law violations with a view to ending impunity, including as called for in resolutions 1612(2005) and 1882(2009), to support the efforts all parties should make pursuant to paragraph 13 above, to bring to the attention of the Council all individuals identified as perpetrators of serious human rights violations and to keep the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004) regularly informed of developments in this regard;

(f) Support for humanitarian assistance

- To facilitate the free flow of people, goods and humanitarian assistance, inter alia, by contributing to enhancing security and taking into account the special needs of vulnerable groups, especially women, children, elderly persons, persons with disabilities and displaced persons;

Contributing to the electoral process and to the identification of the population

(g) Support for the organization of open, free, fair and transparent elections

- To provide, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment, technical and logistical support to the Independent Electoral Commission which is responsible for the preparation and holding of the elections, including to enable the Commission to continue the appeals process, to distribute the provisional and the final voters lists, to sensitize the media, to distribute identity cards and voters cards and to distribute and secure sensitive electoral material, notably ballot papers;
- To work with all relevant actors in implementing the agreed security plan for the elections, and, in particular, to contribute to securing the high-risk areas where voting is to take place;

- To ensure the coordination of the work of international observers and to contribute to their security, within its capabilities and areas of deployment;
- To provide to the Special Representative of the Secretary-General the assistance necessary to fulfil his role of certification of the electoral process consistent with paragraph 4 above;
- To monitor the implementation of the Code of Good Conduct for Elections and the efforts of the Ivorian authorities in guaranteeing equitable access to public media, in particular in the electoral context, and to keep the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004) regularly informed of the situation;
- To regularly inform the Council of any threat to the electoral process, as defined in paragraph 11 of resolution 1911(2010), and to bring to its attention all individuals identified as responsible for such a threat;

(h) Operations of identification of the population

- To contribute, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment, to the support provided by the United Nations country team and other relevant actors to the process of identification of the population;

Contributing to the other remaining tasks of the peace process

(i) Disarmament, demobilization, storage of weapons and reintegration of former combatants of the two parties and members of militias

- To support the Integrated Command Centre in conducting the processes of:
 - Disarmament and secure storage of weapons of former combatants of the two parties;
 - Demobilization of the former combatants of the Forces nouvelles;
 - Disarmament, storage of weapons and dismantling of militias;
- To assist the Ivorian authorities in particular in moving forward with the implementation of planned training of the former combatants of the Forces nouvelles selected to join the ranks of the future national army who are to be cantoned in Bouaké, Korhogo, Man and Séguéla, including in the area of human rights and international humanitarian law;
- To contribute to the reintegration of former combatants and members of militias and to encourage donors to continue to support initiatives in this regard;

(j) Support to redeployment of Ivorian State administration and justice throughout the country

- To support, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment, enhancing the security conditions to enable the Government of Côte d'Ivoire and United Nations agencies to identify and implement peacebuilding priorities throughout the country;
- To assist the Government of Côte d'Ivoire, in conjunction with relevant regional organizations, in re-establishing the authority of the judiciary and the rule of law throughout Côte d'Ivoire;

(k) Reform of the security sector

- To advise the Government of Côte d'Ivoire, as appropriate, on security sector reform and the organization of the future national army, including on establishing an effective vetting mechanism, in accordance with international standards;
- To contribute, as appropriate, to the development by the Ivorian authorities of the capacities of the police and gendarmerie, in particular through crowd control training, and to restoring their presence throughout Côte d'Ivoire;

Other tasks

(l) Facilitation

- To coordinate with the Facilitator and his Special Representative in Abidjan, to assist them in the conduct of the facilitation, as needed and as appropriate and within available means, including by providing logistical support to the office of the Special Representative;

(m) Protection of United Nations personnel

- To protect United Nations personnel, installations and equipment and to ensure the security and freedom of movement of United Nations personnel;

17. Authorizes the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to use all necessary means to carry out its mandate, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment;

18. Calls upon all parties to cooperate fully in the operations of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the French forces which supporting it, in particular by guaranteeing their safety, security and freedom of movement, with unhindered and immediate access, as well as those of associated personnel, throughout the territory of Côte d'Ivoire, to enable them to fully carry out their mandates;

19. Decides that the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire shall comprise a maximum of 7,392 authorized military personnel, maintaining the current combined total authorized strength at 8,650 personnel, including a maximum of 7,200 troops and staff officers and 192 military observers, and a maximum of 1,250 police personnel and 8 seconded customs officers;

20. Expresses its intention to consider raising for a limited period of time, prior to and after the elections, the level of authorized military and police personnel up to a total of no more than 500 additional personnel, and requests the Secretary-General in this regard to continue to update the Council on his technical analysis in a timely manner for its consideration;

21. Welcomes the intention expressed by the Secretary-General in paragraphs 97 and 99 of his report of 20 May 2010 to reconfigure the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to increase its presence in the identified high-risk areas and to strengthen the capabilities of its force reserve;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to include in his reports relevant information on progress on the promotion and protection of human rights and international humanitarian law as well as on the strengthening of the rule of law, including on ending impunity in Côte d'Ivoire, with special attention to violence committed against children and women, and on progress on gender mainstreaming throughout the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and all other aspects relating to the situation of women and girls, especially in relation to the need to protect them from sexual and gender-based violence, and consistent with resolutions 1325(2000), 1612(2005), 1820(2008), 1882(2009), 1888(2009) and 1889(2009);

23. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the measures necessary to ensure full compliance in the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to keep the Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including predeployment awareness training, and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

24. Decides to extend until 31 December 2010 the authorization that the Council provided to the French forces in order to support the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, within the limits of their deployment and their capabilities;

25. Underscores the importance that the military and police concepts of operations and the rules of engagement be brought fully in line with the provisions of the present resolution, in particular paragraphs 15 to 19 above, and requests the Secretary-General to report on them to the Council and to troop- and police-contributing countries;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor progress on the achievement of the existing benchmarks and to prepare a new set of benchmarks for a possible drawdown of the force, taking fully into account the necessary consolidation of the stability of the country;

27. Underscores the importance that the Ivorian security forces, in order to use only appropriate and proportionate force while maintaining public order, be equipped with appropriate crowd control equipment, consistent with the arms embargo imposed by paragraph 7 of resolution 1572(2004) and the exemption procedure set out in paragraphs 8 (b) and (e) of resolution 1572(2004);

28. Requests the Secretary-General to inform the Council of the publication of the final voters list and to provide to it a midterm report, no later than 22 October 2010, and a full report, no later than 30 November 2010, on the situation on the ground, on the implementation of the present resolution and on the revised benchmarks referred to in paragraph 26 above, which should include possible adjustments to the structure and strength of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, and also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council recommendations in this regard, as appropriate;

29. Expresses its intention to review the mandate, structure and strength of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, the authorization provided to the French forces supporting it and the benchmarks referred to in paragraph 26 above by 31 December 2010, and to consider all options, including those listed in the report of the Secretary-General of 20 May 2010, in the light of the consolidation of the stability of the situation, the implementation of the key steps of the peace process, the status of the elections and the political will demonstrated by the Ivorian parties;

30. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Electoral preparations

The electoral process in Côte d'Ivoire gained new momentum in late 2010, culminating with presidential elections at the end of the year. In preparation for elections, the Secretary-General, by a letter of 14 September [S/2010/485], referred to Security Council resolution 1933(2010), in which the Council expressed the possibility of raising the troop level of UNOCI for a limited time during the election period from 8,650 to 9,150 uniformed personnel. He remarked that on 6 September, the Ivorian parties announced that they had reached agreement on the final voters list. The presidential decree concerning the national identity cards and final voters list was signed by President Gbagbo three days later. Presidential elections were scheduled for 31 October, to be followed by legislative elections 45 days after the announcement of the results of the presidential elections.

The Secretary-General reiterated that responsibility for providing security for the elections rested in the first instance with the Ivorian Integrated Command Centre, with support from UNOCI and the French Licorne force. The Ivorian security forces, however, were not yet able to deploy the full complement of 8,000 personnel as mixed units in the Integrated Command Centre, and lacked the capacity and means to provide a secure environment for the elections. Therefore, additional UNOCI troops were required. Burkina Faso had already offered up to 500 troops to form part of UNOCI during the election period, and the Secretariat had explored the possibility of augmenting existing military units and formed police units, and identified willing troop- and police-contributing countries. A total of 300 troops and 100 formed police unit personnel would be deployed as soon as possible for up to six months. The Secretary-General urged the Security Council to approve that proposal, which would cost $11.3 million. Although at that time only 400 of the 500 personnel indicated in resolution 1933(2010) would be deployed, the full authorized strength was a contingency measure. In addition, the Secretariat was exploring the possibility of deploying an aviation unit for up to three months.

The Security Council responded on 17 September [S/2010/486], taking note of the information provided by the Secretary-General, and approving his proposed course of action.

Voters list. On 23 September [S/2010/493], the Secretary-General forwarded to the Security Council a statement by his Special Representative for Côte d'Ivoire, Choi Young-Jin, certifying that the final voters list was agreed upon by the Ivorian parties on 6 September. The Council had mandated in resolution 1765(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 180] that the Special Representative certify that all stages of the electoral process provide guarantees for holding open, free, fair and transparent elections. The Special Representative reviewed the progress and process of the election preparations. He had developed benchmarks for assessing whether conditions were conducive to fair elections. Over a period of five years, the certification of the final voters list had focused on six steps: the mobile courts operation, the reconstitution of the civil status registers, the identification of the population, the voter registration process, the establishment of the provisional voters list and the appeals process. At the conclusion of each step, the Special Representative had “implicitly” certified each step through a press conference in which he made a positive evaluation of the work. In his view, the most important was the certification of the provisional voters list in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 183], establishing the “white list” of 5,277,392 traced people, and the “grey list” of 1,033,985 yet-to-be-traced people. At the current juncture, the certification of the final voters list focused on the appeals process. That process was measured against two yardsticks: peace and inclusiveness.

While the process had been mainly peaceful overall, the inclusiveness issue encountered significant challenges. The need for verification of the voters list was prompted by claims of the fraudulent preparation of a parallel list of 429,000 persons by the former president of the CEI in January. The dissolution of the IEC and the Government ensued on 12 February, and with the Facilitator's assistance, the new IEC was established two weeks later and the new Government took office on 4 March. On 14 April, the Prime Minister and the CEI President agreed to deal with the “grey list” of 1,033,985 persons in a separate manner; three months later a new provisional voters list of 5,776,784 persons was established by the validation of 434,000 persons whose names were merged into the “white list”. At the end of a long procedure, the Ivorian protagonists agreed on the results of the verification operation and of the appeals process with minimal modification of the provisional list, thus enabling the establishment of the final voters list by the IEC. After the completion of the appeals process, a presidential decree of 9 September authorized the distribution of national identity cards to 5,750,720 people on the final voters list, which was subsequently endorsed by the Standing Consultative framework of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement. The Special Representative stated that the list was solid, balanced, credible and certifiable. He concluded that the successful establishment of the final voters list by consensual decision-making yielded a crucial additional result—the identification of the population of Côte d'Ivoire.

The Secretary-General, in a statement issued by his Spokesman and attached to his letter, noted the certification of the list and congratulated the Ivorian political leaders and the Facilitator on the achievement. He expressed the hope that that step would lead to presidential and parliamentary elections, and reiterated the willingness of the United Nations to assist.

Report of Secretary-General (October). The Secretary-General, in his October report [S/2010/537], also described the process of establishing the final voters list, as requested by the Security Council in resolution 1933(2010). The establishment of the list, he said, was a major breakthrough in the Ivorian peace process.

Following discussions by the Council of Ministers and based on a proposal by the CEI, Prime Minister Soro announced on 5 August that the first round of presidential elections would be held on 31 October 2010, and a presidential decree to that effect was issued the same day. A timeline was also issued for publication of the final voters list, distribution of voters cards, and a possible second round of presidential elections. On 28 September, the Special Representative briefed the Security Council on progress made in the electoral process. Following the establishment of the final voters list and its certification, the IEC, together with UNOCI, developed a plan to address the remaining tasks leading to elections: distribution of 11,658,719 identity and voters cards; establishment of 10,179 polling sites and 20,073 polling stations; identification, recruitment and training of 66,000 polling staff; coordination of electoral observers; transportation of electoral material; establishment of a results tally centre; and providing security for elections.

The limited capacity of the Integrated Command Centre (ICC), which was responsible for providing security during elections, remained a concern. The Ivorian security forces remained unable to deploy the full complement of the agreed 8,000 personnel as mixed units of ICC, as well as to provide a secure environment for elections. According to the Secretary-General, it would be necessary to rely on all available forces in Côte d'Ivoire to provide the required security, and UNOCI would continue to assist the Ivorian authorities in maintaining a secure environment for the completion of the peace process.

The Secretary-General expressed concern about reports that militia groups were threatening to disrupt the electoral process and affirmed that UNOCI would work to put in place the necessary arrangements. He agreed with the Permanent Consultative Framework that further efforts were needed to address outstanding tasks with regard to the reunification of the country, an ongoing process to be addressed by the new Government.

Permanent Consultative Framework. The Permanent Consultative Framework of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement met on 21 September in Ouagadougou under the auspices of President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, Facilitator of the Direct Inter-Ivorian Dialogue. In a final communiqué forwarded to the Security Council by Burkina Faso on 22 September [S/2010/494], the Framework members (President Gbagbo; Prime Minister Soro; Henri Konan Bédié, President of the Parti démocratique de Côte d'Ivoire-rassemblement démocratique africain; and Alassane Dramane Ouattara, President of the Rassemblement des républicains) welcomed the significant progress made in the electoral process, and took note of the scheduling of the first round of the presidential election; adoption of the timetable for the key stages of the electoral process; and validation of the final electoral list and the authorization of national identity cards to the registered voters. The members appealed to all relevant stakeholders to ensure that the key stages of the electoral process were completed on time. They recommended that, following the presidential election, the status of the approximately 55,000 applicants who were removed from the final electoral list following verification of the provisional list should be examined by an ad hoc technical committee at the same time as all cases of duplication and other types of errors. In order to ensure that the presidential election was conducted as scheduled on 31 October, the members called on the political parties and candidates to comply with the Code of Good Conduct signed on 24 April 2008, and to conduct a peaceful election campaign. They emphasized the need for the CEI to ensure that all candidates had fair and equal access to the State media. Regarding reunification of Côte d'Ivoire, they welcomed the fact that the cantonment exercise of 5,000 Forces armées des Forces nouvelles, begun on 15 June 2010, was going smoothly.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 September [meeting 6393], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1942(2010). The draft [S/2010/499] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolution 1933(2010) of 30 June 2010 concerning Côte d'Ivoire, and, in accordance with paragraph 20 thereof, recalling its intention to consider raising for a limited period of time, prior to and after the elections, the level of authorized military and police personnel up to a total of no more than 500 additional personnel,

Recalling also the letter dated 14 September 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, in which the Secretary-General recommended a temporary increase of the authorized military and police personnel of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire from 8,650 to 9,150,

Recalling further the letter dated 17 September 2010 from the President of the Security Council to the Secretary-General, in which the Council approved the course of action outlined in the above letter from the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the establishment of the final voters list, which was agreed upon by the Ivorian parties on 6 September 2010, and taking note also of the certification of this voters list by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Côte d'Ivoire on 24 September 2010 in Abidjan, as mentioned in the letter dated 23 September 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to authorize, as recommended by the Secretary-General in his letter dated 14 September 2010 to the President of the Security Council, a temporary increase of the authorized military and police personnel of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire from 8,650 to 9,150;

2. Authorizes the immediate deployment of those additional capacities for a period of up to six months;

3. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Presidential elections

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his November report on UNOCI [S/2010/600], the Secretary-General stated that, as a result of the establishment of the final voters list, the first round of presidential elections in Côte d'Ivoire was held on 31 October following a generally peaceful electoral campaign period. The polling operation marked a historic day for the country. During the weeks prior to the first round, political parties and most candidates conducted meetings and pre-campaign activities in a relatively peaceful manner throughout the country.

The overall security situation remained stable but still fragile, given the ongoing electoral process and the unresolved aspects of the peace process, including disarmament and reintegration of former combatants and reunification of the country. Militia groups were more active preceding the elections, and they threatened to obstruct the electoral process if the Government failed to pay the demobilization allowances envisaged in Ouagadougou IV. Threats were made by an ex-militia group against UNOCI personnel, and some attempts were made to disrupt political rallies.

While electoral preparations remained on track following the establishment of the final voters list, controversy arose over polling procedures and distribution of electoral material. Ten days prior to the election, the CEI decided to tabulate the results manually rather than electronically, following claims by some Commission members that the private company contracted to carry out the electronic operation was too close to the ruling FPI party; however, Prime Minister Soro declared that the results would be transmitted both physically and electronically. The Commission was generally successful in overcoming logistical challenges in the weeks prior to election day, with the support of UNOCI and the UN country team. Distribution of 5,725,720 voter cards and 5,932,999 national identity cards was achieved, with few exceptions, in time for voting. The two-week campaign period was launched on 15 October, and the three main candidates (President Laurent Gbagbo of la Majorité Présidentielle alliance (LMP), former President Henri Konan Bédié of the Parti démocratique de Côte d'Ivoire (PDCI), and former Prime Minister Alassane Ouattara of the Rassemblement des républicains (RDR) party) campaigned throughout the country, while the other 11 candidates mostly remained in their respective strongholds. In general, the campaign was conducted in a peaceful and free atmosphere. Candidates' access to State media significantly improved during the official campaign period.

On 31 October, the first round of presidential elections was held, and 83.7 per cent of eligible persons voted. The polls were observed by national officials and 423 international observers. Observer missions were sent by the AU, ECOWAS, the West African Economic and Monetary Union, the European Union (EU), the International Organization of la Francophonie, the Carter Center, the African Caribbean and Pacific Group of States, and the diplomatic missions of Japan and the United States. A total of 6,600 members of the ICC (out of the 8,000 envisaged by Ouagadougou IV) were deployed in 21 mixed units in the central, western and northern parts of the country. Ballot counting began immediately after some 20,000 polling stations closed and materials were sent to the tabulation centre in Abidjan. Difficulties and a few irregularities were encountered but none had a significant impact on the outcome. The Secretary-General, in a statement on 1 November, commended the Ivorian people for their conduct and called on the parties and candidates to accept the certified results.

The first partial results were published by the CEI on 2 November. The next day, the party of Mr. Bébié alleged irregularities in the tallying process and it called on the Commission to halt the announcement of results and requested a recount.

On 4 November, the Commission announced the provisional results of the presidential elections. President Gbagbo obtained 38.04 per cent, Mr. Ouattara 32.07 per cent, and Mr. Bébié 25.24 per cent. The other 11 candidates obtained a combined total of some 4 per cent. Following the announcement, some demonstrations occurred and some parties claimed irregularities had taken place. Two days later, the Constitutional Council proclaimed the final results of the first round of the presidential elections, validating the provisional results and necessitating a second round with Mr. Gbagbo and Mr. Ouattara on the ballot. The second round was scheduled for 28 November. The Secretary-General's Special Representative, who had followed the process closely, certified the results of the first round on 12 November, in accordance with criteria outlined in 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 179] and declared them peaceful, democratic and conducted in a transparent process.

The Secretary-General urged Ivorians to respect the outcome of the elections and to enter the next phase in a spirit of reconciliation. The electoral cycle would be completed with the conduct of parliamentary elections. UNOCI would continue to provide support for the preparations for those elections expected to take place in early 2011. The peace process would still be incomplete without additional steps after elections, and a remaining aspect was the reunification-related tasks set out in Ouagadougou IV. The Secretariat and UNOCI would consult the new Government regarding implementation of the remaining steps of the peace process and prepare the requested new set of benchmarks for the drawdown of UNOCI, as well as proposals for the UN post-election presence in Côte d'Ivoire. The Secretary-General recommended the extension of the UNOCI mandate at its authorized strength for four months, until 30 April 2011, on the understanding that an extension would be proposed on the basis of an assessment of the evolving security situation in addition to peace prospects.

In a 22 November letter [S/2010/601], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that the deployment of the additional 500 troops to UNOCI authorized by resolution 1942(2010) was completed on 18 October. In light of the impending second round of presidential elections and legislative elections, he believed it prudent to develop a contingency plan for a possible temporary transfer of troops and airplanes from the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL) to UNOCI should the situation require it. He sought the Council's advance approval of that arrangement.

Further developments

In a later report [S/2011/211] on UNOCI, the Secretary-General covered the results of the second round of the presidential election on 28 November, which was a vote between the two leading candidates from the first round, Mr. Gbagbo and Mr. Ouattara. Distribution of electoral materials and the retrieval of tally sheets in a timely manner remained logistical problems. Security arrangements included the deployment of 11,390 Ivorian forces (police and military) augmented by UNOCI forces and the French Licorne force. More than 300 international observers were deployed to observe the election. The one-week official campaign period for the second round was conducted from 20 to 26 November in an atmosphere of virulent verbal attacks by both sides. As President, Mr. Gbagbo imposed a curfew on 27 November, ostensibly to deter violence during elections, but his opposition saw it as a means to scare voters away from voting. The polling was conducted as scheduled on 28 November.

Three hours after the polls closed, Minister for Internal Affairs Désiré Togro denounced on State television what he described as violence committed by the Forces nouvelles against supporters of Mr. Gbagbo in the central, northern and western regions of the country, and other officials levelled charges of irregularities; meanwhile, the spokesperson for RHDP denounced what he called a "series of manipulations" by Mr. Gbagbo to confiscate power. On 30 November, the spokesperson for the CEI, Bamba Yacouba, was physically prevented from announcing the partial results of the election by Commissioners representing Mr. Gbagbo's party.

On 2 December, the CEI Chair, Youssouf Bakayoko, announced the provisional results of the second round: Mr. Ouattara had garnered 54.1 per cent of the votes and Mr. Gbagbo had received 45.9 per cent. Voter turnout was 81 per cent. Later that day, the President of the Constitutional Council, Paul Yao N'Dré, declared the announcement to be null and void on the grounds that the Commission had missed the deadline for announcing the provisional results. The next day, the President of the Constitutional Council proclaimed the final results of the presidential elections, with Mr. Gbagbo receiving 51.45 per cent and Mr. Ouattara 48.55 per cent, and a voter turnout of 71.28 per cent. Alleging irregularities, including the use of violence, which had prevented people from voting, and the absence of signatures of LMP representatives on the tally sheets, the Constitutional Council cancelled the election results received from seven departments in the north of the country, all of which had voted overwhelmingly for Mr. Ouattara.

The Special Representative, following the announcement of the Constitutional Council, explicitly certified on 3 December the outcome of the second round as announced by the CEI, based on the same criteria as applied in the first round and using the same three established methods. The Special Representative pointed out that the results announced by the President of the Constitutional Council had not been based on facts. He had taken into consideration the complaints and had examined the signatures on tally sheets to determine whether fraud had occurred. The few irregularities found would not alter the outcome. Despite a few incidents, some of them violent in the west and north, the elections were conducted in a generally free and fair atmosphere. The Secretary-General endorsed the certification by the Special Representative and the international observers recognized the outcome.

On 4 December, Mr. Gbagbo took an oath of office before the Constitutional Council in Abidjan. Meanwhile, Mr. Ouattara, in a letter dated 3 December to the Constitutional Council, explained that, owing to the prevailing circumstances, he was unable to take the oath before the Council and therefore he was taking it in writing. Prime Minister Soro, reappointed by President Ouattara, formed a new 13-member cabinet. On 7 December, Mr. Gbagbo also appointed a new "government" of 37 members.

The ECOWAS heads of state, at an extraordinary session held in Abuja on 7 December, endorsed the outcome announced by the CEI and recognized

Mr. Ouattara as President-elect. The meeting called on Mr. Gbagbo to yield power without delay and suspended Côte d'Ivoire from the Community until the democratically elected President assumed power. On 8 December, the UN Security Council welcomed the ECOWAS decision and called on all Ivorian stakeholders to respect the outcome of the election, and the AU Peace and Security Council took similar action. The EU announced on 13 December that it would adopt targeted restrictive measures against those who were "jeopardizing the proper outcome of the electoral process". In late December, the EU and the United States imposed visa bans on dozens of individuals, including Mr. Gbagbo and his wife.

Communication. By a letter of 9 December [S/2010/697] to the Security Council, the AU released a communiqué issued by its Peace and Security Council on Côte d'Ivoire, in which it endorsed the decision of the ECOWAS Heads of State meeting on 7 December recognizing the results proclaimed by the CEI, as certified by the Special Representative, and Mr. Ouattara as the President-elect of Côte d'Ivoire. The AU decided to suspend the participation of Côte d'Ivoire in all AU activities, and urged Mr. Gbagbo to respect the results of the election.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 November [meeting 6431], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1951(2010). The draft [S/2010/602] was submitted by France and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire and in the subregion,

Taking note of the letter dated 22 November 2010 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council concerning the planned run-off elections scheduled to take place in Côte d'Ivoire on 28 November 2010,

Recalling the inter-mission cooperation arrangements provided for in paragraphs 4 to 6 of its resolution 1609(2005) of 24 June 2005,

Mindful of the need to support the ability of the United Nations Mission in Liberia to carry out its mandate,

Determining that the situation in Côte d'Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to authorize the Secretary-General to temporarily redeploy from the United Nations Mission in Liberia to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire for a period of no more than four weeks a maximum of 3 infantry companies and 1 aviation unit comprising 2 military utility helicopters;

2. Decides also to remain actively seized of the matter.

Year-end developments. As the Secretary-General also later reported, shortly after the announcement on 2 December of the provisional results of the run-off election for president, the regular security forces loyal to Mr. Gbagbo, and groups and militias associated with his political party, resorted to violent attacks against communities believed to be strongholds for President Ouattara, especially in several neighbourhoods of Abidjan. Forces loyal to Mr. Gbagbo erected roadblocks and deployed heavy weapons in positions around the Golf Hotel where President Ouattara, the President of the IEC and many leaders of RHDP, including Mr. Bédié, had taken refuge as the violence began to escalate. On 2 December, elements of the gendarmerie attacked the Abidjan headquarters of Mr. Ouattara's party, leaving eight persons dead and more than 20 wounded.

Tensions rose in Abidjan following statements by the commanders of the Republican Guard and the Forces de défense et de sécurité (FDS), calling on their troops to defend Côte d'Ivoire against "foreigners" who, they said, were taking over. On 13 December, a stand-off took place at a checkpoint between FDS forces loyal to Mr. Gbagbo and the Forces nouvelles. The situation was defused by the Special Representative's intervention and the deployment of UNOCI troops between the main checkpoint and the Golf Hotel. When threats continued and the situation remained tense, UNOCI progressively reinforced its deployment around the hotel. Restriction on the movement of people and goods around the hotel continued.

In other areas, thousands of supporters of Mr. Ouattara travelled from the north of the country towards Abidjan, but were stopped in Tiébissou, where FDS had reinforced its positions with troops and heavy combat equipment, and used tear gas and live ammunition to disperse the marchers. In Yamoussoukro, forces loyal to Mr. Gbagbo sealed off neighbourhoods considered to be strongholds for Mr. Ouattara and used excessive force to prevent residents from joining the march. At least 20 people were killed and more wounded during the ensuing incidents. In a statement issued on 17 December, the Security Council condemned the violence, warning that the perpetrators would be held accountable for attacks against civilians and urging restraint.

Following the elections, attacks against UN personnel and obstruction of UNOCI increased. On 17 December, Mr. Gbagbo's "minister for foreign affairs" called for the immediate departure of UNOCI and alleged that the mission was no longer impartial. Mr. Gbagbo's "government" began taking measures to strangle UNOCI operations, including by denying the mission access to vital supplies. It denied customs clearance for supplies at the port, cut off fuel supplies and prevented UN personnel from entering the Golf Hotel when they attempted to deliver supplies for mission personnel there. The denial of landing rights to chartered aircraft disrupted rotations of troops and police through Abidjan.

By resolution 1962(2010) of 20 December (see below), the Security Council renewed the mandate of UNOCI, as set out in resolution 1933(2010), until 30 June 2011; urged all the Ivorian parties and stakeholders to respect the will of the people and the outcome of the election in view of the recognition by ECOWAS and the AU of Alassane Dramane Ouattara as the newly elected President of Côte d'Ivoire; decided to maintain the authorized combined military and police strength of UNOCI at 8,650 and extended until 31 March 2011 the temporary deployment of up to 500 additional personnel; and extended authorization by up to four additional weeks of the temporary redeployment from UNMIL to UNOCI of a maximum of three infantry companies and one aviation unit, and affirmed its intention to authorize redeployment of further troops, as needed, between UNMIL and UNOCI on a temporary basis. The Council further extended until 30 June 2011 its authorization provided to the French Forces to support UNOCI. The Council also requested UNOCI to support, in coordination with the Ivorian authorities, the provision of security for the Government and key political stakeholders.

Security Council statement (December). Also on 20 December [SC/10135], the Security Council expressed its concern about the continued violence in Côte d'Ivoire, including armed attacks against UNOCI and multiple civilian fatalities, and urged all Ivorians to exercise maximum restraint, remain calm, resist provocative actions, refrain from violence and work together to restore sustainable peace.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 6458], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1962(2010). The draft [S/2010/644] was submitted by Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, France, Gabon, Germany, Nigeria, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 1893(2009) of 29 October 2009, 1911(2010) of 28 January 2010, 1924(2010) of 27 May 2010, 1933(2010) of 30 June 2010, 1942(2010) of 29 September 2010, 1946(2010) of 15 October 2010 and 1951(2010) of 24 November 2010, and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, and its resolution 1938(2010) of 15 September 2010 on the situation in Liberia,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling the importance of the principles of good-neighbourliness, non-interference and regional co-operation,

Congratulating the Ivorian people for the holding of the two rounds of the presidential election on 31 October and 28 November 2010 with a massive and peaceful participation,

Condemning in the strongest possible terms the attempts to usurp the will of the people and undermine the integrity of the electoral process and any progress in the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire,

Expressing grave concern at the risk of escalation of violence, recalling that the Ivorian leaders bear primary responsibility for ensuring peace and protecting the civilian population in Côte d'Ivoire, and demanding that all stakeholders and parties to conflict act with maximum restraint to prevent a recurrence of violence and ensure the protection of civilians,

Welcoming the decisions taken at the Extraordinary Session of the Authority of Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of West African States on Côte d'Ivoire, held in Abuja on 7 December 2010, and the decisions of the two hundred and fifty-second meeting of the Peace and Security Council of the African Union, held in Addis Ababa on 9 December 2010,

Taking note of the decision of the Economic Community of West African States, taken on 7 December 2010, to apply the provisions of article 45 of the Economic Community of West African States Protocol on Democracy and Good Governance relating to the imposition of sanctions on Côte d'Ivoire, including the suspension from all decision-making bodies of the Economic Community until further notice,

Taking note also of the communiqué of the Chairperson of the African Union of 6 December 2010 and the decision of the Peace and Security Council of the African Union, taken on 9 December 2010, to suspend the participation of Côte d'Ivoire in all African Union activities, until the democratically elected President effectively assumes State power,

Recalling that it endorsed the agreement signed at Ouagadougou on 4 March 2007 ("the Ouagadougou Political Agreement"), and that it welcomed the four subsequent supplementary agreements,

Paying tribute to President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso ("the Facilitator") for his critical role to support the peace process and the holding and completion of the presidential election,

Commending the constructive role of the Secretary-General in Côte d'Ivoire, and reaffirming its full support for his Special Representative for Côte d'Ivoire in carrying out his mandate,

Commending also the continuing efforts of the African Union and the Economic Community of West African States to promote peace and stability in Côte d'Ivoire, and reiterating its full support for them,

Stressing the need for the Security Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments, the substantial engagement in which is more likely to lead to a sustainable peace when the parties to a conflict abide by their commitments and obligations, welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep all peacekeeping operations under close review, and noting the importance of contingency planning,

Expressing its appreciation to troop- and police-contributing countries for their ongoing support to the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire,

Mindful of the inter-mission cooperation arrangements between the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the United Nations Mission in Liberia and the need to support the ability of the United Nations Mission in Liberia to carry out its mandate,

Reiterating its strong condemnation of any attempt to destabilize the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular by force, and expressing its intention to address without delay the situation should any such attempt take place,

Having taken note of the report of the Secretary-General of 23 November 2010,

Recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict and its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Determining that the situation in Côte d'Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Urges all the Ivorian parties and stakeholders to respect the will of the people and the outcome of the election in view of the recognition by the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union of Mr. Alassane Dramane Ouattara as President-elect of Côte d'Ivoire and representative of the freely expressed voice of the Ivorian people as proclaimed by the Independent Electoral Commission;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, including through his Special Representative for Côte d'Ivoire, to facilitate, as appropriate, political dialogue between the Ivorian stakeholders in order to ensure peace in Côte d'Ivoire and respecting the outcome of the presidential election as recognized by the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union;

3. Decides to renew the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, as set out in resolution 1933(2010), until 30 June 2011;

4. Decides also that the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire shall maintain its total authorized strength at 8,650 personnel, including a maximum of 7,200 troops and staff officers and 192 military observers, and a maximum of 1,250 police personnel and 8 seconded customs officers, as authorized by resolution 1933(2010), until 30 June 2011;

5. Decides further to authorize the Secretary-General, further to resolution 1942(2010), to extend until 31 March 2011 the temporary deployment of up to 500 additional personnel;

6. Decides to authorize the Secretary-General, further to resolution 1951(2010), to extend by up to four additional weeks the temporary redeployment from the United Nations Mission in Liberia to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire of a maximum of 3 infantry companies and 1 aviation unit comprising 2 military utility helicopters;

7. Affirms its intention to consider authorizing the Secretary-General to redeploy further troops, as may be needed, between the United Nations Mission in Liberia and the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire on a temporary basis, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 1609(2005) of 24 June 2005, and calls upon troop-contributing countries to support the efforts of the Secretary-General in this regard;

8. Stresses the importance of continued support by the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to the Ivorian peace process in accordance with its mandate, especially the completion of the unfinished tasks, including the legislative elections, the reunification of the country, the restoration of State authority throughout the country, the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of ex-combatants, the dismantling of militias, the strengthening of rule of law institutions, the reform of the security sector and the promotion and protection of human rights, with particular attention to the situation of children and women;

9. Condemns the persistence of reported human rights and humanitarian law violations against civilians in different parts of the country, including numerous acts of sexual violence met with impunity, calls upon all Ivorian parties, with the continued support of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, to ensure the protection of civilians, especially women, children and displaced persons, stresses that the perpetrators must be brought to justice, calls upon all parties to take appropriate measures to refrain from, prevent and protect civilians from all forms of sexual violence, and reaffirms paragraphs 14 to 17 of its resolution 1880(2009) of 30 July 2009;

10. Urges all parties to cooperate fully with the operations of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the French forces supporting it, in particular by ensuring their safety, security and freedom of movement, with unhindered and immediate access throughout the territory of Côte d'Ivoire, including the administrative and State bodies, to enable them to fully carry out their mandates;

11. Requests the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to support, in coordination with the Ivorian authorities, the provision of security for the Government of Côte d'Ivoire and key political stakeholders;

12. Urges all the relevant Ivorian stakeholders to restore without delay the broadcasting of all non-governmental media in Côte d'Ivoire, and further urges them to allow equitable and broader access to media and, in particular, to State media and to refrain from using it to incite the population to hatred, intolerance and violence;

13. Stresses the importance for the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to continue to observe and monitor the continued compliance by the parties with the comprehensive ceasefire agreement of 3 May 2003 in order to prevent a resumption of hostilities;

14. Recalls its authorization given to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to use all necessary means to carry out its mandate, within its capabilities and its areas of deployment;

15. Reiterates the importance for the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to implement its protection of civilians mandate, particularly in the light of the current risks for human rights and civilians in the country;

16. Reaffirms its readiness to impose measures, including targeted sanctions, against persons who, among other things, threaten the peace process and national reconciliation, including by seeking to undermine the outcome of the electoral process, obstruct the work of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and other international actors and commit serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law, as set out in resolution 1946(2010);

17. Decides to extend until 30 June 2011 the authorization that the Security Council provided to the French forces in order to support the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, within the limits of their deployment and their capabilities;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to provide to the Council a midterm report, no later than 31 March 2011, on the situation on the ground, to include an assessment of the need to extend the temporary personnel deployments authorized by resolution 1942(2010) and a full report, no later than 31 May 2011, on the situation on the ground and the implementation of the present resolution;

19. Also requests the Secretary-General to deploy a technical assessment mission to Côte d'Ivoire, following legislative elections due to take place in early 2011, that will focus on the evolving security situation, as well as the prospects of consolidating the stability of the country following the completion of the electoral cycle, and further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Council recommendations on possible adjustments in the structure and strength of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, as appropriate, in the final report referred to in paragraph 18 above;

20. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Sanctions

The Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 187] concerning Côte d'Ivoire continued to monitor implementation of the arms embargo, travel restrictions and assets freeze on designated individuals and entities, and the ban on the import of all rough diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire. Those sanctions were renewed by resolutions 1643(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 251], 1782(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 188], 1842(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 194] and 1893(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 186].

The Sanctions Committee, in its report on 2010 activities [S/2010/687], said that during the year, the Committee considered a total of seven media and arms embargo monitoring reports, which were prepared by UNOCI in accordance with Security Council resolutions. The Committee also considered four quarterly UNOCI human rights reports. It noted that the Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire observed that possible violations of the sanctions regime continued to occur in both the north and the south of the country. Inspections to military sites continued to be unsuccessful, particularly to those controlled by the Republican Guard. The Group also noted that consistent revenues derived from natural resources remained unaccounted for, with the risk of being utilized for the illicit purchase of weapons and materiel in violation of the embargo. On the embargo on diamonds, the Group stressed that rough stones continued to leave the territory of Côte d'Ivoire to reach the international diamond market through neighbouring countries.

The Committee remarked that the primary responsibility for implementation of the sanctions rested with Member States. For its part, the Committee benefited from the information provided by the Group of Experts, UNOCI and other sources.

Report of Group of Experts. In accordance with resolution 1893(2009), the Group of Experts monitoring the implementation of the sanctions concerning Côte d'Ivoire, in a midterm report issued in April [S/2010/179], reviewed cooperation with stakeholders, monitoring of the embargo, violations of the arms embargo, financing of arms purchases, the diamond embargo, the status of aviation used for military purposes, customs control, and sanctions against individuals. The Group had sought, without much success, responses from both the Government and the Forces nouvelles to questions about sources of arms supplies and requests for inspection of military sites and weapons. The Group expressed that it was concerned by the unwillingness of certain Member States to cooperate with its requests for information. It intended, in its final report, to compile a list of all entities, including Member States, international organizations and private companies, which had not responded in an adequate and timely manner to its requests for information. The Group continued investigations into suspected shipments of arms and ammunition into the north and south of the country, some of which appeared to be relatively large. With regard to financing, the Group noted that, while the Government and Forces nouvelles might portray themselves as taking steps towards reunification of the country, in reality, economic interests within each party impeded accomplishing that purpose. The Group continued to investigate industries in the country, including gas and petroleum, mining (gold, manganese, nickel and copper), and agriculture (in particular, cocoa). Ongoing diamond mining in northern Côte d'Ivoire provided the impetus for exports of Ivorian rough diamonds in violation of the sanctions regime, and neighbouring States, specifically Burkina Faso, Guinea, Liberia and Mali, were either unable or unwilling to monitor and enforce the embargo. The Group asserted that the majority of Member States were not taking the necessary measures to curtail the diamond trade.

Among its recommendations, in addition to those it made in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 186], the Group recommended that UNOCI no longer provide 48-hour notification of weapon inspections and that Burkina Faso investigate arms transfers from its territory to northern Côte d'Ivoire. It called on the Government of Côte d'Ivoire to facilitate the Group's investigations into the finances of the oil, gas and mining sectors by granting access to documents. The Government and the Forces nouvelles were urged to keep records of diamond production in the Séguela and Tortiya, and to record diamond sale details. Mali and Burkina Faso were urged to monitor their borders closely for the possible transit of Ivorian diamonds through their customs territories. The Group recommended that UNOCI regularly monitor any activity around unmanned aerial vehicles, and that it monitor all civil aircraft stationed there and report immediately any use of a military nature. The Group urged neighbouring countries, in particular Burkina Faso, to enact customs controls on all transit shipments destined for, or leaving, the territory of Côte d'Ivoire. It suggested that UNOCI conduct inspections of goods on the basis of a risk assessment methodology, and it proposed that UNOCI reinforce its embargo cell with additional customs experts.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 October [meeting 6402], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1946(2010). The draft [S/2010/525] was submitted by France.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President relating to the situation in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular resolutions 1880(2009) of 30 July 2009, 1893(2009) of 29 October 2009, 1911(2010) of 28 January 2010 and 1933(2010) of 30 June 2010,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling the importance of the principles of good-neighbourliness, non-interference and regional cooperation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General of 20 May 2010 and of the reports of the Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire transmitted on 7 October 2009 and 9 April 2010,

Emphasizing the continued contribution to Côte d'Ivoire's stability, in particular in the context of the planned presidential elections, of the measures imposed by resolutions 1572(2004) of 15 November 2004 and 1643(2005) of 15 December 2005, and stressing that these measures aim at supporting the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire,

Welcoming the conclusions of the most recent meeting of the Permanent Consultative Framework, held in Ouagadougou on 21 September 2010 under the aegis of the Facilitator, President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, welcoming also the establishment and the certification of the voters list, taking note of the commitments of the Ivorian stakeholders to hold the first round of the presidential elections on 31 October 2010, and urging them to ensure that elections take place as scheduled and to complete this electoral process in open, free, fair and transparent conditions, within the time frame fixed by the Independent Electoral Commission,

Noting with concern, in spite of the sustained improvement in the overall human rights situation, the persistence of reported human rights and humanitarian law violations against civilians in different parts of the country, including acts of sexual violence, stressing that the perpetrators must be brought to justice, reiterating its firm condemnation of all violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in Côte d'Ivoire, and recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict and its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Determining that the situation in Côte d'Ivoire continues to pose a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to renew until 30 April 2011 the measures on arms and the financial and travel measures imposed by paragraphs 7 to 12 of resolution 1572(2004) and the measures preventing the importation by any State of all rough diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire imposed by paragraph 6 of resolution 1643(2005);

2. Decides also to review the measures renewed in paragraph 1 above in the light of the progress achieved in the electoral process and in the implementation of the key steps of the peace process, as referred to in resolution 1933(2010), by the end of the period mentioned in paragraph 1 above, and decides further to carry out during the period mentioned in paragraph 1 above a review of the measures renewed in paragraph 1 above no later than three months after the holding of open, free, fair and transparent presidential elections in accordance with international standards, with a view to possibly modifying, lifting or maintaining the sanctions regime, in accordance with progress in the peace process;

3. Calls upon the Ivorian parties to the Ouagadougou Political Agreement and all States, in particular those in the subregion, to fully implement the measures renewed in paragraph 1 above, including, as appropriate, by making the necessary rules and regulations, calls upon the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire to bring its full support, within its capacities and its mandate, and calls upon the French forces to support the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire in this regard, within the limits of their deployment and their capabilities;

4. Demands that the Ivorian parties to the Ouagadougou Political Agreement, in particular the Ivorian authorities, provide unhindered access, particularly to the Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire first established pursuant to paragraph 7 of resolution 1584(2005) of 1 February 2005, to equipment, sites and installations referred to in paragraph 2 (a) of resolution 1584(2005) and to all weapons, ammunition and related materiel, regardless of location, when appropriate without notice and including those under the control of Republican Guard units, and demands further that they provide access under the same conditions to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire in order to enable it to carry out its mandate and to the French forces supporting it, as set out in resolutions 1739(2007) of 10 January 2007, 1880(2009) and 1933(2010);

5. Decides, in line with paragraph 27 of resolution 1933(2010) and in addition to the provisions of paragraph 8 of resolution 1572(2004), that the arms embargo shall not apply to the supplies of non-lethal equipment intended solely to enable the Ivorian security forces to use only appropriate and proportionate force while maintaining public order, as approved in advance by the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1572(2004);

6. Underlines that it is fully prepared to impose targeted measures against persons to be designated by the Committee in accordance with paragraphs 9, 11 and 14 of resolution 1572(2004) who are determined to be, among other things:

(a) A threat to the peace and national reconciliation process in Côte d'Ivoire, in particular by blocking the implementation of the peace process, as referred to in the Ouagadougou Political Agreement;

(b) Attacking or obstructing the action of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, the French forces supporting it, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Côte d'Ivoire, the Facilitator, or his Special Representative in Côte d'Ivoire;

(c) Responsible for obstacles to the freedom of movement of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the French forces supporting it;

(d) Responsible for serious violations of human rights and international humanitarian law committed in Côte d'Ivoire;

(e) Publicly inciting hatred and violence;

(f) Acting in violation of the measures imposed by paragraph 7 of resolution 1572(2004);

7. Notes with concern the media monitoring reports of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the media outlets referenced therein for inciting violence and a resumption of internal conflict, and stresses that it remains ready to impose sanctions against those who obstruct the electoral process, specifically the action of the Independent Electoral Commission and all other operators involved, and the proclamation and certification of the results of the presidential and parliamentary elections;

8. Requests all States concerned, in particular those in the subregion, to cooperate fully with the Committee, and authorizes the Committee to request whatever further information it may consider necessary;

9. Decides to extend the mandate of the Group of Experts, as set out in paragraph 7 of resolution 1727(2006) of 15 December 2006, until 30 April 2011, and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary administrative measures;

10. Decides also that the report referred to in paragraph 7 (e) of resolution 1727(2006) may include, as appropriate, any information and recommendations relevant to the possible additional designation by the Committee of the individuals and entities described in paragraphs 9 and 11 of resolution 1572(2004), and further recalls the report of the Informal Working Group of the Security Council on General Issues of Sanctions on best practices and methods, including paragraphs 21, 22 and 23 thereof, which discuss possible steps for clarifying methodological standards for monitoring mechanisms;

11. Requests the Group of Experts to submit a report as well as recommendations to the Council, through the Committee, fifteen days before the end of its mandated period, on the implementation of the measures imposed by paragraphs 7, 9 and 11 of resolution 1572(2004) and paragraph 6 of resolution 1643(2005);

12. Requests the Secretary-General to communicate, as appropriate, to the Council, through the Committee, information gathered by the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and, where possible, reviewed by the Group of Experts, concerning the supply of arms and related materiel to Côte d'Ivoire;

13. Requests the Government of France to communicate, as appropriate, to the Council, through the Committee, information gathered by the French forces and, where possible, reviewed by the Group of Experts, concerning the supply of arms and related materiel to Côte d'Ivoire;

14. Requests the Kimberley Process to communicate, as appropriate, to the Council, through the Committee, information which, where possible, has been reviewed by the Group of Experts, concerning the production and illicit export of diamonds from Côte d'Ivoire, and further decides to renew the exemptions set out in paragraphs 16 and 17 of resolution 1893(2009) with regard to the securing of samples of rough diamonds for scientific research purposes coordinated by the Kimberley Process;

15. Urges all States, relevant United Nations bodies and other organizations and interested parties to cooperate fully with the Committee, the Group of Experts, the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the French forces, in particular by supplying any information at their disposal on possible violations of the measures imposed by paragraphs 7, 9 and 11 of resolution 1572(2004) and paragraph 6 of resolution 1643(2005) and reiterated in paragraph 1 above; and further requests the Group of Experts to coordinate its activities, as appropriate, with all actors involved to promote the political process in Côte d'Ivoire;

16. Urges, in this context, that all Ivorian parties and all States, particularly those in the region, ensure:

- The safety of the members of the Group of Experts;
- Unhindered access by the Group of Experts, in particular to persons, documents and sites, in order for the Group of Experts to execute its mandate;

17. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Children and armed conflict

The Secretary-General, in his April report on children and armed conflict [A/64/742-S/2010/181], stated that UNOCI child protection officers continued to monitor compliance by Forces de défense et de sécurité des Forces nouvelles (FDS-FN) and militia groups with their respective action plan commitments on recruitment and use of child soldiers by conducting regular verification visits to checkpoints, areas around camps or military sites, police stations and customs posts. Both the leadership of FDS-FN and militia groups agreed to an "open door" policy with UNOCI, whereby any allegations of the use of child soldiers could be immediately investigated with their full cooperation and with unrestricted access. During the reporting period, there was no substantiated evidence of child-soldier use by those parties. The prevalence of rape and other forms of sexual violence against children remained the most urgent concern in Côte d'Ivoire, with no substantial improvement compared to the previous reporting period. The situation was more serious in the northern parts of the country controlled by FDS-FN, and was aggravated by the continued impunity of perpetrators. There was a similar concern in the western parts of the country under the control of pro-Government militias.

UNOCI

The United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI) was established in 2004 by Security Council resolution 1528(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 173] to replace the United Nations Mission in Côte d'Ivoire and ECOWAS forces. Its mandate was to monitor the ceasefire and the movement of armed groups; assist in disarmament, demobilization, reintegration, repatriation and resettlement; protect UN personnel and civilians; support implementation of the peace process; and provide assistance in the monitoring of human rights, public information and law and order. The UNOCI mandate was revised in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 170] to include supporting the work of the Integrated Command Centre, monitoring the cessation of hostilities and movement of armed groups, and providing other security-related assistance. UNOCI was supported by the French Licorne forces. Headquartered in Abidjan, UNOCI was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Choi Young-Jin (Republic of Korea).

The Council, by resolution 1911(2010) (see p. 178) of 28 January, renewed the mandate of UNOCI until the end of May, at which time it adopted resolution 1924(2010) (see p. 183) extending the mandate briefly, until 30 June. By resolution 1933(2010) (ibid.) of 30 June, the Council renewed the mandate until the end of the year and expanded its functions. By resolution 1962(2010) of 20 December, the Security Council renewed the mandate of UNOCI, as set out in resolution 1933(2010), until 30 June 2011.

Financing

In June 2010, the General Assembly considered the Secretary-General's performance report on the budget of UNOCI for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/584 & Corr.1], the proposed budget for UNOCI from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/673] and the related report by ACABQ [A/64/660/Add.7]. The performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 showed actual expenditures at $475,373,300 against an appropriation of $475,402,600. The proposed UNOCI budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 amounted to $492,535,700, which provided for the deployment of 7,250 military contingent personnel, 200 military observers, 450 UN police officers, 750 formed police unit personnel, 451 international staff, 829 national staff, 176 UN Volunteers and eight Government-provided personnel, including 14 international temporary positions and 10 national temporary personnel. ACABQ recommended that the budget for that period be reduced to $491,578,200. The General Assembly took action on the recommendations in resolution 64/273 (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/822], adopted resolution 64/273 without vote [agenda item 148].

Financing of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1528(2004) of 27 February 2004, by which the Council established the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire for an initial period of twelve months as from 4 April 2004, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Operation, the latest of which was resolution 1924(2010) of 27 May 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Operation until 30 June 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 58/310 of 18 June 2004 on the financing of the Operation and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/289 of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Operation with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 36.1 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Operation in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Operation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to give consideration to making the fullest possible use of the facilities at the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Decides to establish five additional National Officer posts and six additional national General Service posts in the Medical Services Section;

13. Emphasizes the continuing efforts of the Facilitator of the Ouagadougou Political Agreement and his Special Representative in supporting the peace process in Côte d'Ivoire;

14. Notes the financial situation of the "Programme de sortie de crise" of the United Nations Development Programme in support of the Facilitator and his representative, and in this regard urges Member States to provide the "Programme de sortie de crise" with voluntary contributions;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Operation is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

17. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Operation against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Operation;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

18. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Operation for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

19. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire the amount of 514,490,400 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of the amount of 485,078,200 dollars for the maintenance of the Operation, 24,909,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 4,502,500 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

20. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 514,490,400 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, at a monthly rate of 42,874,200 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Operation;

21. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 13,222,800 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 10,800,200 dollars approved for the Operation, the prorated share of 2,062,400 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 360,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

22. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Operation, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 7,016,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

23. Also decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Operation, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 7,016,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 22 above;

24. Further decides that the increase of 47,900 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 7,016,700 dollars referred to in paragraphs 22 and 23 above;

25. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

26. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Operation under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

27. Invites voluntary contributions to the Operation in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire".

Liberia

The Government of Liberia continued its efforts in 2010 to improve governance and security, consolidate State authority, manage natural resources, address human rights issues, and build a better economy. Assistance in those efforts was provided by the United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL), along with other international and regional organizations. Preparations for the presidential and legislative elections to be held in 2011 with UNMIL assistance intensified during the year. Seven candidates, including President Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, declared their intention to contest the presidential election, and political parties began preparations for the elections.

UNMIL continued to support Liberia in the implementation of the 2003 Agreement on Ceasefire and Cessation of Hostilities [YUN 2003, p. 189] and the peace process. As part of the process, Liberia gave special attention in 2010 to reform of rule-of-law institutions and the security sector, in particular the Liberian National Police and the Armed Forces of Liberia, both of which needed assistance for upgrading training and management capabilities. Liberia requested to be added to the agenda of the Peacebuilding Commission, and hosted a visit from the Commission. On its acceptance, the Government specified rule of law, security sector reform and national reconciliation as priority areas to the Commission.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1885(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 197], UNMIL completed the third stage of its drawdown in May 2010, reducing the total military personnel by 2,209. From a maximum troop strength of 15,250 in 2006, the total UNMIL troop count, following drawdowns in 2008, 2009 and 2010, reached the authorized strength of 8,102. In anticipation of the eventual withdrawal of UNMIL after elections, joint planning for the transition of security responsibilities from UNMIL to national authorities began. The security situation, while stable, was fragile as a result of disputes over land and resources, as well as ethnic and communal tensions. Other factors included high unemployment and enduring ethno-religious divides.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (February). The Secretary-General, in his twentieth progress report on UNMIL, issued in February [S/2010/88], said that the debate surrounding the recommendations contained in the report of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, issued in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 195], continued to play a major role in Liberian political dynamics as the country endeavoured to find a route to reconciliation. The Commission's final report, issued in December 2009, expanded upon the recommendations for the "Palava Hut" mechanism: a traditional conflict resolution mechanism presided by a committee of members of integrity in the community to be set up in every district, where perpetrators could publicly request forgiveness. The Commission recommended that an appearance before such a committee could lead to a reduction or waiver of an individual's public sanction. The Commission also recommended that the powers of the Independent National Commission on Human Rights be expanded to include prosecution of human rights violations before a court.

President Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf welcomed the final report and affirmed that efforts were under way to implement it in a way that would balance the need for national reconciliation, peace and justice. The public debate focused on whether the leaders of the warring factions and others found to be responsible for atrocities should be prosecuted. There was also debate on whether individuals who had reportedly supported factions should be banned from holding public office for 30 years, as recommended by the Commission. Liberian society remained divided on the main issues.

In view of the upcoming national elections scheduled for 2011, UNMIL, the UN country team, the National Electoral Commission and other stakeholders developed a multisector electoral assistance project, including the provision of logistical support, coordination of international electoral assistance and facilitation of a climate conducive to peaceful elections. The project focused on strengthening the National Electoral Commission's capacity, since Liberians would be in charge of the 2011 elections, with international assistance. Election-related amendments to the Constitution, which would facilitate the 2011 elections, however, had not been adopted. On 20 January 2010, the Senate finally concurred with the House and passed the Threshold Bill, which defined the threshold for the delineation of electoral constituencies.

The overall security situation in Liberia remained generally stable but fragile. Armed robbery, rape and mob violence were the most commonly reported security incidents. The lack of public confidence in the justice system continued to fuel incidents of mob violence. Tensions between the Armed Forces of Liberia and other security agencies continued.

The situation along Liberia's borders remained calm, but concerns arose following the attempted assassination on 3 December 2009 of the Guinean military leader. UNMIL continued to monitor the border closely and participated in joint operations with Liberian, Guinean and Sierra Leonean security agencies, as well as with the United Nations Mission in Côte d'Ivoire (UNOCI). Porous borders and the limited capacity of law enforcement agencies exposed Liberia's vulnerability to drug trafficking, which threatened stability in the region.

The two battalions of the Armed Forces of Liberia completed a training programme by the United States Army in late 2009, marking the conclusion of the initial training phase of the new army. The next phase provided for intensive mentoring under the Liberia defence sector reform programme, supported by 61 United States serving military personnel, who arrived in Liberia in January 2010. On 1 January 2010, the Government of Liberia assumed responsibilities for the development of the new army. Weapons and ammunition, however, remained under United States control. UNMIL initiated joint training with the Armed Forces of Liberia for specialized units such as engineering, military police, and signal and headquarters staff personnel. Development of the coast guard had begun, with financial and training support from the United States. It was assessed that the Armed Forces of Liberia would not be independently operational before 2010, given that the officer corps needed additional experience. The Liberian National Police established an operational planning team that would work with UNMIL police and the National Electoral Commission to prepare for the 2011 elections.

As at 1 February 2010, the military strength of UNMIL stood at 9,360 personnel, including 9,150 troops, 126 military observers and 84 staff officers. In accordance with Security Council resolution 1885(2009), the mission was conducting the third stage of its drawdown and would reduce its size to 7,952 military personnel by 31 May. The police strength stood at 1,351 personnel as at 1 February.

The Secretary-General said that although Liberia continued to make progress towards consolidating peace and stability, significant challenges remained in the development of the country's security and rule-of-law institutions on which the UNMIL exit strategy was hinged. With the release of the final edited version of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission report [YUN 2009, p. 194], the time had come for Liberia to define the way forward. The Mission continued to monitor progress towards accomplishing its consolidation, drawdown and withdrawal benchmarks, in particular the core benchmarks related to preparations for the 2011 elections and capacity-building in Liberia's security sector. Those benchmarks were reflected in the UN Development Assistance Framework, which served as the integrated strategic framework of the United Nations for Liberia.

Report of Secretary-General (August). In his twenty-first report on UNMIL, issued in August [S/2010/429], the Secretary-General noted that preparations for the presidential and legislative elections to be held in 2011 had intensified over the previous six months. Civil society and other stakeholders had stepped up pressure on the legislature and the President to resolve the impasse on the Threshold Bill, which concerned constituency reapportionment. Earlier versions had been vetoed twice by the President for constitutional and financial reasons. On 22 July, the legislature passed the Bill, and it was signed by the President on 2 August. The compromise Bill maintained the 64 electoral districts from the 2005 elections while allocating nine new seats to the more populated counties.

The House, on 13 July, adopted a resolution amending four constitutional provisions, including reducing the residency requirement to five years for presidential and vice-presidential candidates. Constitutional amendments required ratification by two thirds of voters in a national referendum held at least one year after adoption by the legislature. Delayed agreement on the resolution, according to the National Elections Commission, limited the feasibility of holding a referendum on the proposed amendments before the 2011 elections.

At the time of the report, seven candidates, including President Johnson-Sirleaf, had declared their intention to contest the presidential election, and political parties had started preparations for the 2011 elections.

In accordance with the 2005 Act establishing the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the President reported in March on progress in implementation of the Commission's recommendations, but there had been little change.

The overall security situation in Liberia was generally stable, but fragile. Ethnic and communal tensions, disputes over access to land and resources, and a lack of confidence in the criminal justice system continued to affect security. Minor incidents often escalated, as exemplified by widespread violence in Lofa County in February between the predominantly Christian Lorma and Muslim Mandingo communities that was triggered by allegations of a ritual killing. Four people were killed, 18 wounded, and numerous churches, mosques and homes were destroyed. The intervention of UNMIL and Liberian National Police was required to restore order.

UNMIL continued to monitor the transitional and electoral process in Guinea closely. Regular joint border patrols involving UNMIL and Guinean and Liberian security forces confirmed that the situation along Liberia's borders with Guinea remained calm, apart from a minor boundary dispute between Liberian and Guinean authorities in Lofa County. The presence of Liberian ex-combatants and refugees in western Côte d'Ivoire remained a concern for the mission. UNMIL, UNOCI and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) conducted a joint field mission to western Côte d'Ivoire in June, which found that the estimated 1,500 to 2,000 Liberian combatants associated with Ivorian militias did not pose an immediate threat to Liberia. Owing to porous borders, weak security institutions and inadequate legislation, Liberia remained vulnerable to other security threats, including drug and human trafficking.

Development of a national security strategy and architecture remained a concern for the Government, with training and capacity-building under way across security agencies. After much delay, the Government forwarded the draft Liberia Security Reform and Intelligence Bill to the legislature in June as a step towards creating a security architecture. Nevertheless, the proposed 2010–2011 national budget did not allocate sufficient resources for key security agencies. The Armed Forces of Liberia assumed budgetary and functional responsibility for training troops following the completion of the United States-sponsored training programme in late 2009. Progress was made in the development of the Liberia National Police. The UNMIL police component assisted in developing a database to record and track cases of police misconduct. The Emergency Response Unit expanded to 344 officers, whose duties included responding to violent operations and threats to law and order. The Unit continued to face challenges in its command structure, owing to vacant supervisory posts and a lack of incentives to serve due to budgetary constraints, as well as insufficient vehicles and other equipment. Priority was given to training and equipping the Police Support Unit, which was deemed critical to security for the 2011 elections and for upcoming transition planning.

The Secretary-General said that it was crucial that the development of the security sector become a priority for the Government so that those institutions could become independently operational. Strategic planning for the rule-of-law sector was important for both the Ministry of Justice and the judiciary, but implementation was long overdue. He urged the Government to promptly nominate Commissioners for the Independent National Commission on Human Rights, and for the legislature to confirm them to make the Commission operational as soon as possible. That would enable follow-up to the implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and ensure that Liberia had a publicly accessible human rights institution.

With assistance from its international partners, the Government had initiated planning for the eventual handover of security responsibilities from UNMIL to national authorities. It was important that the planning be informed by a comprehensive situational assessment, including an institutional and legislative gap analysis, so that critical remaining needs in the security sector could be addressed. The success of the transition would require the full support and engagement of all stakeholders in the process, including Liberia's national authorities, and the Secretary-General urged the international community to increase support for the country's security sector to ensure that remaining gaps were addressed.

UNMIL deployment and planning. In accordance with Security Council resolution 1885(2009), UNMIL completed the third stage of its drawdown between October 2009 and May 2010, reducing the total military personnel by 2,209. From a maximum troop strength of 15,250 in 2006, the total UNMIL troop count, following drawdowns in September 2008, March 2009 and May 2010, reached the authorized strength of 8,102, including 150 troops deployed at the Special Court for Sierra Leone in Freetown. The Secretary-General reiterated the recommendation made in his 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 192] that the 7,952 troops in Liberia be maintained until after the 2011 elections. The timelines for further reduction of the military component would be determined on the findings of a technical assessment mission after elections that would focus on preparations for the handover of security responsibilities from UNMIL to national authorities.

UNMIL maintained its force headquarters in Monrovia, and had operating forces deployed to two sectors, each with three infantry battalions. Forty-four troop-contributing countries were represented in the force. As at 30 July, the UNMIL police strength stood at 1,347 personnel of an authorized ceiling of 1,375.

In anticipation of the eventual withdrawal of UNMIL after elections, joint planning for the transition of security responsibilities from UNMIL to national authorities was begun. On 15 July, the National Security Council, chaired by the President, formally initiated the transition planning process, forming a joint transition planning working group of Government and UN representatives.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 15 September [meeting 6383], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1938(2010). The draft [S/2010/475] was submitted by the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Liberia and the subregion, in particular resolutions 1509(2003) of 19 September 2003, 1626(2005) of 19 September 2005, 1836(2008) of 29 September 2008 and 1885(2009) of 15 September 2009,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 11 August 2010, and taking note of the recommendations contained therein,

Welcoming also the efforts of the Government of Liberia to further national reconciliation and economic recovery and to combat corruption and promote efficiency and good governance, in particular steps taken with regard to strengthening Government control over natural resources and to address the important issue of land reform,

Taking note of the final report and recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which is an important opportunity for the people of Liberia to move the national reconciliation agenda forward and engage in a constructive national dialogue on the root causes of the Liberian conflict,

Recognizing that lasting stability in Liberia and the sub-region will require well-functioning and sustainable government institutions, including security and rule of law sectors,

Recalling the benchmarks for the drawdown phase of the United Nations Mission in Liberia, including core benchmarks on the Liberia National Police and the national security strategy, welcoming the progress achieved, and noting with concern those areas where progress is still slow,

Taking note of the recommendation of the Secretary-General to deploy a technical assessment mission to Liberia after the elections that will focus on ongoing preparations for the handover of security responsibilities from the Mission to the national authorities and recommending timelines for the further reduction of the military component of the Mission,

Welcoming the request of the Government of Liberia for Peacebuilding Commission engagement on security sector reform, the rule of law and national reconciliation,

Recognizing the significant challenges that remain across all sectors, including continuing problems with violent crime,

Welcoming the efforts of the Secretary-General to keep all peacekeeping operations, including the Mission, under close review, and reiterating the need for the Security Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments,

Expressing its appreciation for the continuing support of the international community, the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union,

Noting with concern the threats to subregional stability, including to Liberia, in particular those posed by drug trafficking, organized crime and illicit arms,

Commending the work of the Mission, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Liberia, for its continuing and significant contribution to maintaining peace and stability in Liberia, and noting with satisfaction the close cooperation between the Mission and the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire, as well as the neighbouring Governments, in coordinating security activities in the border areas in the subregion,

Noting that the Mission has completed the third stage of its drawdown as recommended by the Secretary-General in his special report of 10 June 2009, and welcoming the fact that the planning process to transfer security responsibilities from the Mission to national authorities has been initiated,

Noting with concern the delays in the preparation for the October 2011 general presidential and legislative elections, and stressing that the responsibility for the preparation and conduct of the elections rests with the Liberian authorities, with the support of the international community,

Recalling its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, condemning the continuing sexual violence, welcoming the continuing efforts of the Mission and the Government of Liberia to promote and protect the rights of civilians, in particular women and children, recognizing the challenges that remain in addressing the serious issues of gender-based violence and sexual exploitation and abuse, and calling upon Member States to increase support to the Government in its efforts,

Welcoming the efforts to establish the Independent National Commission on Human Rights, and noting the role that a fully functioning Commission could play as a key publicly accessible human rights institution and as a mechanism to monitor and follow up on the implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission,

Reiterating the continuing need for support by the Mission for the security of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, subject to periodic review as the work of the Court progresses,

Determining that the situation in Liberia continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that the mandate of the United Nations Mission in Liberia shall be extended until 30 September 2011;

2. Authorizes the Mission to assist the Government of Liberia, as requested, with the 2011 general presidential and legislative elections by providing logistical support, particularly to facilitate access to remote areas, coordinating international electoral assistance and supporting Liberian institutions and political parties in creating an atmosphere conducive to the conduct of peaceful elections;

3. Calls upon the Liberian authorities to ensure that any outstanding issues regarding the electoral framework are finalized to facilitate adequate preparations for the elections;

4. Endorses the recommendation of the Secretary-General that the conduct of free, fair and peaceful elections be a core benchmark for the future drawdown of the Mission;

5. Encourages the Mission and the Government of Liberia to continue to make progress in the transition planning process, especially towards conducting a comprehensive situational assessment and identifying critical gaps that need to be filled in order to facilitate a successful transition, and requests that the Secretary-General draw up, in coordination with the Government, a joint transition plan on the transfer of responsibility for internal security from the Mission to the appropriate national authorities and brief regularly on its progress and, if applicable, its implementation;

6. Reaffirms its intention to authorize the Secretary-General to redeploy troops, as may be needed, between the Mission and the United Nations Operation in Côte d'Ivoire on a temporary basis, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 1609(2005) of 24 June 2005, and calls upon troop-contributing countries to support the efforts of the Secretary-General in this regard;

7. Emphasizes the need for coherence between, and integration of, peacekeeping, peacebuilding and development to achieve an effective response to post-conflict situations, requests that the Secretary-General coordinate and collaborate with the Peacebuilding Commission, and encourages the Commission, following close consultation with the Government of Liberia, to report on the findings of its recent mission and its recommendations on how it can best accelerate progress first and foremost on security sector reform, the rule of law and national reconciliation;

8. Underscores the importance of the military concept of operations and rules of engagement being regularly updated and fully in line with the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to report on them to the Security Council and troop-contributing countries;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to monitor progress on core benchmarks, in particular on preparations for the 2011 elections, and on building the capability of the Liberia National Police, in that regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the police component of the Mission has the required specialized expertise, including civilian expertise, in accordance with its mandate, and further requests a revision of current benchmarks to include transition benchmarks, and requests the Secretary-General to report regularly on that progress to the Council;

10. Calls upon the Government of Liberia, in coordination with the Mission, the United Nations country team and international partners to redouble efforts to develop national security and rule of law institutions that are fully and independently operational, and to this end encourages coordinated progress on the implementation of all security and justice development plans;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council regularly informed of the situation on the ground as Liberia enters this next critical phase and to provide by 15 February 2011 a midterm report and by 15 August 2011 a report on the issues addressed in paragraphs 2, 5 and 9 above;

12. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Year-end developments. The Secretary-General later reported [S/2011/72] that at the end of the year, political developments in Liberia were dominated by preparations for the 2011 elections. In August 2010, the legislature adopted a joint resolution proposing amendments to the election-related provisions of the 1986 Constitution. Those amendments included changing the requirement of the electoral system from an absolute to a simple majority for all elections except for president and vice-president; moving election day from October to November; and revising the residency clause for presidential and vice-presidential candidates from 10 to five consecutive years immediately prior to elections. The required referendum on the amendments was scheduled for 23 August 2011.

Political parties positioned themselves for the elections. The Unity Party finalized its merger with the Liberia Action Party and the Liberia Unification Party, and officially nominated President Johnson-Sirleaf as its candidate. The National Elections Commission certified three new political parties, bringing to 20 the number of certified parties.

Limited progress was made in the implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. In her second quarterly progress report to the legislature on implementation of the recommendations, submitted in August, Ms. Johnson-Sirleaf proposed tasks for various bodies but offered few specifics on implementation. After much delay, the Senate confirmed the nominees for the Independent National Commission on Human Rights in September. In addition to its human rights mandate, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission Act gave the Independent National Commission on Human Rights a key role in following up the implementation of the recommendations.

The security situation, while stable, was fragile as a result of disputes over access to land and resources, as well as ethnic and communal tensions. Other factors included high unemployment and enduring ethno-religious divides, particularly in Lofa County, where violence broke out between two communities in Zorzor in December. An increasing number of incidents involved firearms. The President signed an executive order on 26 October banning the use of firearms by private citizens, excluding hunting guns. Mob violence continued to be a problem with four incidents occurring in September and October against police officers, and an attempt in December to burn down a police depot, halted by UNMIL.

The completion of the political transition in Guinea significantly lessened tensions along Liberia's border with Guinea. The Government of Liberia and UNMIL continued to conduct joint border operations with the Governments of Guinea and Sierra Leone. Developments related to the presidential election in Côte d'Ivoire posed a serious threat to the security of the subregion, particularly Liberia. Liberia received most of the Ivorian refugees, who had been absorbed peacefully. Amid reports that Liberians had been recruited to fight in Côte d'Ivoire, President Johnson-Sirleaf made two public statements in December warning citizens not to participate in the crisis. An estimated 2,000 Liberian former fighters associated with Ivorian militias remained in western Côte d'Ivoire after the Liberian conflict.

There was some progress in implementing security sector reform, in particular the drafting by security agencies of strategic plans. More resources, however, were needed to ensure completion of the national security sector reform strategy in such areas as infrastructure, logistics and mobility. The Government and UNMIL were developing a joint justice and security programme in order to address rule-of-law issues comprehensively.

The Armed Forces of Liberia, with the support of 50 United States mentors, continued to build a professional force. The Army worked towards improving operational relationships with the Liberia National Police and implementing an annual training plan. UNMIL provided the new Army with training in preventive medicine, radio operations, unexploded ordnance identification and reporting, civil-military cooperation and other areas. The new Army was officially scheduled to become fully operational by mid-2012, but financial and other constraints remained to be resolved. The development of the Liberia National Police continued, with emphasis on training and equipping the armed Police Support Unit. Deployment of the Unit throughout the country was critical for establishing conditions for elections and for the eventual assumption by Liberia of UNMIL security responsibilities.

Preparations for elections in 2011 continued in late 2010. The National Elections Commission established 1,780 voter registration centres, trained staff, distributed materials, and conducted civic education in collaboration with civil society organizations. The Liberia National Police prepared security plans for voter registration that would begin in early 2011, and worked with the Commission to define security requirements for the entire electoral period, including manpower, mobility and deployment.

Planning for the eventual transition of the peace-keeping operation was undertaken in September by the joint transition working group, comprised of Government and UN representatives. It prepared a draft comprehensive situational and threat assessment, outlining the security environment and an initial review of basic capability gaps. The assessment was considered by the transition core group and the National Security Council in December.

Sanctions

The Security Council received in 2010 three reports on implementation of sanctions imposed on Liberia, pursuant to Council resolutions 1521(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 208], 1792(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 206] and 1903(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 201]. Those resolutions banned arms and related materiel, as well as the export of certain natural resources and international travel by designated individuals, and froze the assets of designated individuals. The designated individuals constituted a threat to the peace in Liberia and the subregion. Financial sanctions were also imposed on former Liberian President Charles Taylor, his family and senior officials of the former Taylor regime by resolution 1532(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 204]. The Council terminated sanctions on timber in 2006 by resolution 1689(2006) [YUN 2006, p. 226] and on diamonds in 2007 by resolution 1753(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 202].

By resolution 1903(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 201], it redefined the arms embargo by directing States to take the measures necessary to prevent the supply, sale or transfer from their territories or by their nationals, or using their vessels or aircraft, of arms and related materiel to non-governmental entities and individuals in Liberia.

Appointments. On 8 February [S/2010/79], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council, as requested in resolution 1903(2009), that he had appointed three experts to the Panel of Experts in the areas of finance, arms and natural resources.

Implementation

Report of Panel of Experts (June). In June, the Chairman of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1521(2003) concerning Liberia transmitted to the Council a report [S/2010/319] of the Panel of Experts reviewing the export of diamonds, forestry and other natural resources management, the ban on travel of designated individuals, the freezing of assets of certain individuals, and the arms embargo.

Liberia, as a participant in the Kimberley Process since 2007, required certificates for diamond shipment, controls for importing and exporting rough diamonds, and recording and reporting statistics. During 2009, the Government of Liberia issued 67 Kimberley Process certificates, authorizing the export of over 27,700 carats of rough diamonds valued at almost $9.13 million. The Government earned over $273,769 in royalties from those exports. Both the Expert Panel and the Kimberley Process recommended the establishment of full State control, improved collaboration, law enforcement training and insistence on application of the law. The Presidential Task Force on Diamonds had reconvened on 10 December 2009 after 14 months and approved a plan to transition to a Precious Minerals and Kimberley Process Oversight Committee. Liberia had submitted its annual report to the Kimberly Process. The Panel had not yet assessed whether Liberia had addressed compliance issues regarding data-sharing requirements. The General Auditing Commission of Liberia released an audit in February 2010 that found problems with the functioning of regional diamond offices, and other issues such as variances in declared revenues and audited payments of mineral licensing fees.

The Panel conducted investigations with regard to its mandated task of assessing the contribution of forestry and other natural resources to peace, security and development in Liberia within the context of the country's evolving legal framework, through such means as reviewing legislation; developing a methodological framework for assessment; and collection of data on the forestry, mining, oil and gas, and agriculture sectors. Unregulated natural resource extraction activities, including pit-sawing and mining, continued in many areas of the country. The Panel witnessed unlicensed gold mining activity in south-eastern Liberia during its trip in March 2010. Re-establishing full control in rural, natural resource-rich areas remained a challenge for the Government. The Lands Commission office in Monrovia, formally opened on 11 March, was set up to propose, advocate and coordinate reforms of land policy, laws and programmes.

The Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1521(2003) concerning Liberia had de-listed one individual—Ali Kleilat—since its previous report in December 2009. At the time of the Panel's June 2010 report, there were 45 individuals on the travel ban list and 22 on the assets freeze list, as well as 30 entities on the assets freeze list. The Panel had reported earlier that Charles "Chuckie" Taylor, Jr., the son of the former President, had been sentenced in January 2009 to 97 years in prison. On 5 February 2010, the United States federal court, in a civil case against Mr. Taylor, Jr., awarded a total of $22.4 million in damages to five torture victims for atrocities they endured at his hands and by forces under his command. The Panel collected identifying information on three designated individuals: Slobodan Tesic, Orhan Dragas and Aleksic Jovan, all residing in Serbia. The Panel found no evidence of violations of the travel ban for the reporting period. It continued to investigate past violations and alleged violations of exemptions/waivers granted by the sanctions Committee.

The Panel focused its attention on seeking to evaluate whether the Government of Liberia had moved forward on implementation of the assets freeze. There was currently no additional evidence that the Government had implemented the assets freeze or had any intention of enforcing it. The Panel approached the Financial Action Task Force, an international supervisory body, to obtain its support in encouraging a more proactive approach to compliance with the assets freeze.

The arms embargo in 2010 applied only to exports to non-State actors and individuals in Liberia, as a result of the Security Council having lifted the embargo on arms and ammunition exports to the Government in resolution 1903(2009). States were required, however, to notify the Committee of any shipment of arms to the Government, or any provision of military assistance, advice or training. During the reporting period, the Panel found no evidence of unauthorized shipments of arms or ammunition or unauthorized provision of assistance, advice of training related to military activities, but there were reports of cross-border movements of single-barrel guns and ammunition between Guinea, Côte d'Ivoire and Liberia. On 25 February, the United Kingdom notified the Committee of its intention to provide various weapons to the Armed Forces of Liberia as part of a United States training programme. That advance notice, required under resolution 1903(2009), did not mention the proposed date of delivery. China, France, Nigeria, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, the United Kingdom and the United States were conducting different types of training activities for the Liberian National Police and the Armed Forces inside and outside Liberia.

The Panel recommended that the Kimberley Process reconsider the wording of a decision for sharing information with UN panels/groups of experts to ensure that their mandates were not affected by delays or the unwillingness of some participants to share necessary information. It recommended that the Security Council renew the UNMIL mandate to provide assistance to Liberia in re-establishing proper administration of its natural resources and authority in mining and forestry areas. In order to improve communication about waivers and de-listing of individuals, the Panel proposed that UNMIL communicate directly with Liberian ministries. The Panel called on the Government to implement the assets freeze in Liberia. It urged Member States to forward the required information to the Panel as expeditiously as possible. It recommended that UNMIL support the creation of an explosive ordnance disposal specialized unit as part of the Liberian police and gradually hand over that activity to Liberia.

Report of Panel of Experts (December). On 15 December, the Sanctions Committee Chairman transmitted the report of the Panel of Experts [S/2010/609] to the Security Council.

Concerning diamonds, the Panel reported that Liberia authorized the export of 11,951 carats of rough diamonds valued at $11.9 million during the first nine months of 2010. The Government earned $356,000 in royalties from those exports. The Panel found that progress had been made by Liberia on data maintenance and sharing, especially with regard to reporting of export statistics, and also for imports of diamonds, although its records did not completely reconcile with importing countries. Liberia reported 40 certificates in the first half of 2010, while importing participants reported only 33 certificates from Liberia. According to the Kimberley Process, the annual report of Liberia to the Process needed to be strengthened so that it presented a more detailed description of its import and export processes and its internal controls system. Liberia expressed concern that it was not receiving import confirmation from many participants. Both the Panel and the Kimberley Process stressed the need for strengthening the rule of law, including full State control, law enforcement training and insistence on application of the law. The Panel noted reports that large numbers of Ivorian rough diamonds were passed into the Liberian diamond trading system. Given the possibility of infiltration of Ivorian diamonds into Liberia for export, the Panel encouraged the Kimberley Process and Liberia to develop a production footprint and an export footprint for Liberian diamonds.

The Government had enacted laws that sought to improve natural resource governance and management through more open and competitive bidding for concessions, transparency requirements for resource payments, and improved benefit-sharing. While Liberia had made a number of advances in terms of legal requirements, significant challenges hindered the potential for the country's natural resources to contribute to peace, security and development in the long term. Documented problems included non-payment of fees related to some concessions; cases of non-competitive allocation of large concessions; corruption; and lack of consultation with county authorities, district authorities and affected communities. In addition, government capacity to monitor commercial concessions was extremely limited in relation to the scope of agreements being allocated and information was often difficult to obtain.

As at the end of October, five companies were exporting timber from Liberia. Since 2005, the Government had allocated 12 offshore oil exploration areas to seven companies. Bids were closed in March for five more exploration blocks. In terms of agriculture, the Government had renegotiated or allocated almost a million hectares, according to the Panel's data, for concessions that included rubber and palm oil plantations and a rice farm. Two concessions were approved in 2010. There were complaints and concerns with concession allocation, in particular complaints that Liberian officials failed to follow competitive bidding procedures, as well as with corruption. The Panel recommended that the Security Council continue to task UNMIL to assist the Government of Liberia in establishing its authority over its natural resources and that its focus involve continued assessment of hotspots and potential problem areas, especially given the potential for links between high-value resources, drugs and weapons both in Liberia and the region. The Panel recommended that Liberia and the Peacebuilding Commission identify natural resource governance as a focus area for funding, and that the Government request assistance from the UN-EU initiative for natural resource management with regard to identifying potential support and funding opportunities to assist with improving natural resource governance.

Violations of the arms embargo were documented during the reporting period. Locally manufactured guns and pistols, apparently made in Guinea, were found in border areas and proliferation was becoming a major concern. The absence of a harmonized regional legal and regulatory framework was also problematic, but a process was begun to revise the Liberian law on firearms. An effort to stem the proliferation was made by the entry into force in November 2009 of the ECOwas Convention on Small Arms and Light Weapons, their Ammunition and Other Related Material. No progress was made in building Liberian capacities for marking and the disposal of weapons and ammunitions. UNMIL needed to revisit its firearms inspection procedures, especially with regard to the arms and ammunitions imported for training the Armed Forces of Liberia. There were no established procedures for tracking such weapons once they were imported. The Panel called for the establishment of a Liberian ammunitions and weapons collection and disposal unit to enable Liberia to gradually take over that responsibility of public safety. In accordance with Security Council resolution 1903(2009), two States (United Kingdom, United States) notified the Security Council Committee of weapons they were exporting to Liberia for training and equipping the Armed Forces of Liberia.

As at 1 November 2010, 33,074 small arms and light weapons had been collected in Liberia, including 30,175 weapons recovered as part of the formal disarmament process that ended on 31 October 2004 and 2,899 weapons collected since then. It was estimated that approximately 11,000 weapons were still unaccounted for in Liberia. UNMIL continued to carry out operations of weapons and ammunition collections all over Liberian territory.

The impact of the modification of the arms embargo by resolution 1903(2009) was not significant as at 1 November. The Panel recommended that any further change to the arms embargo should not be considered before a strong law and regulation framework was in place in Liberia. That framework should be compliant with the ECOWAS Convention. In addition, a national authority should be designated to maintain a national registry of weapons and to control weapons in the possession of the national defence forces and police. The Panel recommended that the Security Council bring to the attention of Guinea the presence and movement of small arms into Liberia and remind it of its obligations under resolutions 1521(2003) and 1903(2009).

The Panel had no further information on alleged travel of designated individuals. The Panel had requested information from Liberia's Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization records on the travel of Cyril Allen, Edwin Snowe and other designated individuals. The information was not forthcoming prior to the submission of the report.

At meetings with officials in Liberia, the Panel became aware of a lack of knowledge and intention to freeze assets previously identified by the Panel. The Panel looked for a different direction to resolve the problem, specifically by approaching the Financial Action Task Force, an international financial system, to require Liberia to develop compliance provisions for asset freezing.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 17 December [meeting 6454], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1961(2010). The draft [S/2010/643] was submitted by the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President on the situation in Liberia and West Africa,

Welcoming the sustained progress made by the Government of Liberia since January 2006 in rebuilding Liberia for the benefit of all Liberians, with the support of the international community,

Recalling its decision not to renew the measures in paragraph 10 of resolution 1521(2003) of 22 December 2003 regarding round logs and timber products originating in Liberia, and stressing that Liberia's progress in the timber sector must continue with the effective implementation and enforcement of the National Forestry Reform Law signed into law on 5 October 2006 and other new legislation related to revenue transparency (the Liberia Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative Act) and resolution of land and tenure rights (the Community Rights Law with respect to Forest Lands and the Lands Commission Act),

Recalling also its decision to terminate the measures in paragraph 6 of resolution 1521(2003) regarding diamonds, welcoming the Government of Liberia's participation and leadership at the regional and international levels in the Kimberley Process, and encouraging the Government to redouble its commitment and efforts to ensure the effectiveness of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme,

Stressing the continuing importance of the United Nations Mission in Liberia in improving security throughout Liberia and helping the Government of Liberia to establish its authority throughout the country, particularly in the regions producing diamonds, timber and other natural resources, and border areas,

Taking note of the final report of the Panel of Experts on Liberia including on the issues of diamonds, timber, targeted sanctions, and arms and security, submitted pursuant to paragraph 9 (f) of resolution 1903(2009) of 17 December 2009,

Having reviewed the measures imposed by paragraphs 2 and 4 of resolution 1521(2003) and paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004) of 12 March 2004 and the progress made towards meeting the conditions set out in paragraph 5 of resolution 1521(2003), noting the cooperation of the Government of Liberia with the Mission in weapons marking, and concluding that insufficient progress has been made towards that end,

Underlining its determination to support the Government of Liberia in its efforts to meet the conditions of resolution 1521(2003), welcoming the engagement of the Peacebuilding Commission, and encouraging all stakeholders, including donors, to support the Government in its efforts,

Acknowledging the implementation of the guidelines of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat on cooperation and information-sharing between the United Nations peacekeeping missions and the Security Council sanctions committees' expert panels,

Determining that, despite significant progress having been made in Liberia, the situation there continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to renew the measures on travel imposed by paragraph 4 of resolution 1521(2003) for a period of twelve months from the date of adoption of the present resolution;

2. Recalls that the measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004) remain in force, notes with serious concern the lack of progress with regard to the implementation of the financial measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004), and demands that the Government of Liberia make all necessary efforts to fulfil its obligations;

3. Decides to renew for a period of twelve months from the date of adoption of the present resolution the measures on arms, previously imposed by paragraph 2 of resolution 1521(2003) and modified by paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1683(2006) of 13 June 2006, by paragraph 1 (b) of resolution 1731(2006) of 20 December 2006 and by paragraphs 3 to 6 of resolution 1903(2009);

4. Reconfirms its intention to review the measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004) at least once a year, and directs the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1521(2003), in coordination with the Government of Liberia and relevant designating States and with the assistance of the Panel of Experts on Liberia, to update, as necessary, the publicly available reasons for listing for entries on the travel ban and assets freeze lists as well as the Committee's guidelines;

5. Decides to review any of the above measures at the request of the Government of Liberia, once the Government reports to the Council that the conditions set out in resolution 1521(2003) for terminating the measures have been met and provides the Council with information to justify its assessment;

6. Decides also to extend the mandate of the Panel of Experts appointed pursuant to paragraph 9 of resolution 1903(2009) for a further period, until 16 December 2011, to undertake the following tasks:

(a) To conduct two follow-up assessment missions to Liberia and neighbouring States, in order to investigate and compile a midterm report and a final report on the implementation, and any violations, of the measures on arms as amended by resolution 1903(2009), including any information relevant to the designation by the Committee of the individuals described in paragraph 4 (a) of resolution 1521(2003) and paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004), and including the various sources of financing, such as from natural resources, for the illicit trade in arms;

(b) To assess the impact and effectiveness of the measures imposed by paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004), including, in particular, with respect to the assets of former President Charles Taylor;

(c) To identify and make recommendations regarding areas where the capacity of Liberia and the States in the region can be strengthened to facilitate the implementation of the measures imposed by paragraph 4 of resolution 1521(2003) and paragraph 1 of resolution 1532(2004);

(d) Within the context of Liberia's evolving legal framework, to assess the extent to which forests and other natural resources are contributing to peace, security and development rather than to instability and to what extent relevant legislation (the National Forestry Reform Law, the Lands Commission Act, the Community Rights Law with respect to Forest Lands and the Liberia Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative Act) and other reform efforts are contributing to this transition, and to provide recommendations, if appropriate, on how such natural resources could better contribute to the country's progress towards sustainable peace and stability;

(e) To assess the compliance of the Government of Liberia with the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme and to coordinate with the Kimberley Process in assessing compliance;

(f) To provide a midterm report to the Council, through the Committee, by 1 June 2011 and a final report to the Council, through the Committee, by 1 December 2011 on all the issues listed in the present paragraph, and to provide informal updates to the Committee, as appropriate, before those dates, especially on progress in the forest sector since the lifting of the measures imposed by paragraph 10 of resolution 1521(2003) in June 2006, and in the diamond sector since the lifting of the measures imposed by paragraph 6 of resolution 1521(2003) in April 2007;

(g) To cooperate actively with other relevant panels of experts, in particular the Group of Experts on Côte d'Ivoire re-established by paragraph 9 of resolution 1946(2010) of 15 October 2010 and the Group of Experts on the Democratic Republic of the Congo re-established by paragraph 5 of resolution 1952(2010) of 29 November 2010 with respect to natural resources;

(h) To cooperate actively with the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme;

(i) To assist the Committee in updating the publicly available reasons for listing for entries on the travel ban and assets freeze lists;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to reappoint the Panel of Experts and to make the necessary financial and security arrangements to support the work of the Panel;

8. Calls upon all States and the Government of Liberia to cooperate fully with the Panel of Experts in all aspects of its mandate;

9. Recalls that responsibility for controlling the circulation of small arms within the territory of Liberia and between Liberia and neighbouring States rests with the relevant governmental authorities in accordance with the Economic Community of West African States Convention on Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Ammunition and Other Related Materials, of 2006;

10. Reiterates the importance of the Mission's continuing assistance to the Government of Liberia, the Committee and the Panel of Experts, within its capabilities and areas of deployment and, without prejudice to its mandate, continuing to carry out its tasks set forth in previous resolutions, including resolution 1683(2006);

11. Urges the Government of Liberia to implement the recommendations of the 2009 Kimberley Process review team to strengthen internal controls over diamond mining and exports;

12. Encourages the Kimberley Process to continue to cooperate with the Panel of Experts and to report on developments regarding implementation by Liberia of the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme;

13. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Security Council Committee. According to its December report [S/2010/689] on its 2010 activities, the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1521(2003) concerning Liberia considered three requests for travel-ban waivers, of which two were granted. It received and approved two notifications of the use of funds exempted from measures to prevent former Liberian President Charles Taylor, his immediate family members and senior officials of the former Taylor regime from using misappropriated funds to interfere in the restoration of peace in Liberia. The Committee also received and approved one notification in accordance with an exemption on the grounds that funds were needed for ordinary expenses. The Committee received four notifications about shipment of arms and related materiel to the Government of Liberia, or any advice or training related to the Government's military activities. The Committee also received two notifications in accordance with the exemption from the arms ban for supplies of non-lethal military equipment intended solely for humanitarian or protective use and related assistance and training. During the year, the Committee received five reports from UNMIL on the results of the Mission's inspections of inventories of weapons and ammunition used by the Liberian military, to ensure that all such weapons and ammunition were accounted for.

The Committee received de-listing requests with regard to four individuals on its travel-ban list (and assets-freeze list, where applicable). The Committee did not accede to two of the four de-listing requests, and the other two requests remained under consideration at the end of the year.

On 30 March, the Committee adopted revised guidelines for the conduct of its work to take account of relevant provisions of resolution 1903(2009).

Peacebuilding Commission

Communications. In a letter of 19 July [A/64/870-S/2010/389] to the Chairperson of the Peacebuilding Commission, the President of the Security Council, referring to Liberia's request of 27 May, transmitted by the Secretary-General to the Council on 14 June, that the Secretary-General place Liberia on the agenda of the Peacebuilding Commission, said that the Council supported the request and invited the Peacebuilding Commission to provide advice on the situation in Liberia. The Council sought the Commission's advice on the requirements to help accelerate progress in meeting key benchmarks, such as those set out by UNMIL, in the areas of rule of law, security sector reform and national reconciliation.

The Chair of the Commission, in a letter to the Council dated 21 September [A/65/387-S/2010/390], stated that the Commission, having received the Council's letter, had dispatched an exploratory mission to Liberia from 16 to 27 August. Subsequently the Commission's Organizational Committee agreed to place Liberia on the Commission's agenda.

The Commission established a country configuration for Liberia, and elected Prince Zeid Ra'ad Zeid Al-Hussein, the Permanent Representative of Jordan, as its Chair. The Liberia configuration would develop an instrument of engagement to help focus the Commission's advice on the peacebuilding priorities identified by the Government.

Activities. Following its visit to Liberia, the Commission issued the statement of mutual commitment on peacebuilding in Liberia [PBC/4/LBR/2], which focused on the three priorities for action identified by Liberia and endorsed by the Security Council. Periodic reviews of the engagement based on targets would be carried out every nine months to monitor progress and amend the statement as needed.

Under the priority of strengthening the rule of law, a legislative review was envisaged, as were increased access to the justice system through expanded public defender offices, legal aid centres and prosecution services, and enhanced capacity of the judiciary through training at all levels and a case management and tracking system. Regarding the priority of security sector reform, with the anticipated drawdown of UNMIL, Liberian security forces needed to be equipped and capable, and activities were needed in the areas of legislative action, enhanced capacity, oversight mechanism, regional collaboration and promotion of human rights. As for the third priority, promoting national reconciliation, land rights and tenure required attention. In view of the complexity of the issue, expertise from the international community should be enlisted to identify the best way forward, drawing on lessons learned in other countries emerging from conflict.

Among the Government's commitments were to prioritize the political will to facilitate the work of the Law Reform Commission and the Land Commission; increase budgetary allocations for the justice sector and reduce pretrial detention; strengthen human resource management of judicial staff with training and understanding of the law in the counties; engage in public outreach and inform citizens of their rights in the legal system; create a case management and tracking system; establish oversight mechanisms for the justice system; pass and implement the National Security Reform and Intelligence Act; increase funding for the security institutions; establish and maintain five regional hubs; reform the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and continue reform of the Liberia National Police; establish oversight mechanisms for national security institutions; continue engagement in ECOWAS regional initiatives; hold dialogue over national reconciliation, including the Truth and Reconciliation Commission report and land issues; and generate political will for the Independent National Commission for Human Rights.

The Peacebuilding Commission's commitments included to mobilize resources for the identified peacebuilding priorities; broaden the donor base; take steps to advocate within the international community for the peacebuilding process; work with regional actors, particularly ECOWAS and the Makona River Initiative, to build peace in Liberia and the subregion; advise Liberia on lessons learned, particularly on land tenure and rights, harmonization of traditional and statutory legal systems, and from experience in other situations; contribute to discussions on Liberia, in particular in the Security Council, by advising on the three peacebuilding priorities; collaborate with UNMIL and the UN country team on peacebuilding activities; encourage coordination of UN and other actors with respect to national strategies; and monitor implementation of the priority plan, seeking to ensure that the priorities in the statement were addressed.

The Peacebuilding Commission, in a review of its work from 1 July 2009 to 31 December [A/65/701-S/2011/41], said that its engagement with Liberia was marked by innovative features, central to those being the statement of mutual commitment. On 15 November, the Chair presided over a meeting of the Commission. The President of Liberia participated from Monrovia and reaffirmed her Government's obligations under the statement of mutual commitment. The first project was approved—an allocation of $3 million to support the establishment of the first of five regional hubs that will extend security and justice services throughout the country.

On 10 December, the Chair met with the Security Council for an informal exchange of views on the findings of his visit to Liberia. The dialogue focused on the Chair's principal impressions and on how the Commission could play an effective and complementary role in peace consolidation in Liberia, including by assisting UNMIL in meeting the benchmarks required for its withdrawal.

UNMIL

The United Nations Mission in Liberia (UNMIL), established by Security Council resolution 1509(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 194], was mandated to support the implementation of the 2003 Agreement on Ceasefire and Cessation of Hostilities [ibid., p. 189] and the peace process; protect UN staff, facilities and civilians; support humanitarian and human rights activities; and assist in national security reform, including national police training and the formation of a new, restructured military. By resolution 1638(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 267], the Council enhanced the mandate to include the apprehension and detention of former President Taylor in the event of his return to Liberia, as well as his transfer to the Special Court for Sierra Leone. By resolution 1750(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 194], the Council included in the Mission's mandate the provision of administrative and related support and security, on a cost-reimbursable basis, for activities conducted in Liberia by the Special Court for Sierra Leone with the consent of the Government. By resolution 1885(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 197], the Council approved the Secretary-General's recommendation to implement the third stage of the drawdown of UNMIL, leaving the military strength at 8,202 personnel, of whom 250 would be based at the Special Court for Sierra Leone, and keeping the police component at the authorized strength of 1,375 officers.

When run-off elections were scheduled for 28 November in Côte d'Ivoire, the Council, by resolution 1951(2010) (see p. 192), authorized the Secretary-General to temporarily redeploy from UNMIL to UNOCI for no more than four weeks a maximum of three infantry companies and an aviation unit of two military utility helicopters. Following the two rounds of elections and amid ensuing increased tension in Côte d'Ivoire, the Council, by resolution 1962(2010) (see p. 193) of 20 December, authorized the Secretary-General to extend by up to four additional weeks the temporary redeployment. The Council affirmed in the resolution its intention to consider authorizing the Secretary-General to redeploy further troops between UNMIL and UNOCI on a temporary basis, and called on troop-contributing countries to support the Secretary-General's efforts in that regard.

Appointment. In an exchange of letters with the Security Council President on 11 and 13 October [S/2010/523, S/2010/524], the Secretary-General appointed Major General Muhammad Khalid (Pakistan) as Force Commander of UNMIL, to replace Lieutenant General Sikander Afzal (Pakistan), whose tour of duty ended on 28 November.

Financing

In June, the General Assembly considered the performance report on the UNMIL budget for 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/601], showing a total expenditure of $593,521,700 against an appropriation of $603,760,800, and the proposed budget for 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/647] in the amount of $536,049,600, together with the related ACABQ report [A/64/660/Add.9] and the OIOS report on the programme evaluation of UNMIL performance and achievement of results [A/64/712]. The proposed budget provided for the deployment of 8,202 military personnel, including 133 military observers, 498 UN police officers, 845 formed police unit personnel, 543 international and 1,041 national staff, inclusive of 59 National Officers, as well as 2 international and 1 national General Service general temporary assistance positions, 237 United Nations Volunteers and 32 Government-provided personnel. ACABQ made suggestions for savings and recommended approving the proposed budget for 2010–2011 in the amount of $529,760,000. OIOS evaluated the Mission's accomplishments and made 12 recommendations to help improve its performance and promote the achievement of results.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/828], adopted resolution 64/280 without vote [agenda item 157].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in Liberia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in Liberia, the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the programme evaluation of the performance and the achievement of results by the Mission,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1497(2003) of 1 August 2003, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support the transitional government and to assist in the implementation of a comprehensive peace agreement in Liberia,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1509(2003) of 19 September 2003, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Mission in Liberia for a period of twelve months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1885(2009) of 15 September 2009, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 30 September 2010,

Recalling further its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Recalling its resolution 58/261 A of 23 December 2003 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/296 of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in Liberia as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 41.6 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-nine Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to give consideration to making the fullest possible use of facilities at the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

15. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the recommendations contained therein;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

16. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

17. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in Liberia the amount of 555,770,200 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 524 million dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 26,906,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 4,863,500 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

18. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 138,942,550 dollars for the period from 1 July to 30 September 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

19. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 3,855,525 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 3,201,300 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 556,950 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 97,275 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

20. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 416,827,650 dollars for the period from 1 October 2010 to 30 June 2011, at a monthly rate of 46,314,183 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249 and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

21. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 11,566,575 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 9,603,900 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 1,670,850 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 291,825 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

22. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 23,809,500 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

23. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 23,809,500 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 22 above;

24. Also decides that the decrease of 172,400 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be set off against the credits from the amount of 23,809,500 dollars referred to in paragraphs 22 and 23 above;

25. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

26. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

27. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

28. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in Liberia".

Sierra Leone

Ten years after the end of the civil war, the Government of Sierra Leone continued in 2010 to work towards peace consolidation and economic recovery, in line with the programme laid out in President Ernest Bai Koroma's Agenda for Change. The Government was assisted in its efforts to shift from peacekeeping efforts to focus on peacebuilding and development by the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone (UNIPSIL), established in 2008 as the successor to the peacekeeping mission in the country. In September, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNIPSIL for one year, with a view to providing continued peacebuilding assistance to the Government, including preparations for presidential, legislative and local council elections in 2012. It was also mandated to carry out other tasks such as promoting dialogue among political parties and all stakeholders; tackling youth unemployment; providing assistance in promoting good governance, the rule of law and human rights; combating illicit drug trafficking and organized crime; combating corruption; and strengthening national capacity in law enforcement and the justice system.

In September, the Security Council lifted the last remaining sanctions against Sierra Leone, affirming that the Government had fully re-established control over its territory, and former rebel fighters had been disarmed and demobilized under the auspices of the national army.

The Special Court for Sierra Leone drew close to concluding its trials of those bearing the greatest responsibility for serious violations of international and national humanitarian laws committed in the country since 1996. The trial of the former Liberian President, Charles Taylor, which opened in July 2009, remained the only case before the Court, which concluded the evidentiary phase of the case in November 2010. Closing arguments were scheduled for February 2011.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (March). The Secretary-General, in his March report on UNIPSIL [S/2010/135], covered developments in Sierra Leone over the previous six months. The implementation of the joint communiqué signed on 2 April 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 208] by the major opposition party, the Sierra Leone People's Party (SLPP), and the ruling All People's Congress (APC) continued, and the Peacebuilding Fund provided related financial support. The Independent Review Panel, appointed by President Koroma in 2009 as stipulated in the joint communiqué to inquire into the causes of the political violence in March 2009, began its proceedings in February 2010. Nonetheless, the relationship between the ruling party and the major opposition party was characterized by deep mistrust and mutual suspicion. While there had been an improvement in the overall political situation, difficulties remained in fostering a culture of political tolerance.

In December 2009 and January 2010, the National Electoral Commission and the Ministry of Internal Affairs jointly organized paramount chieftaincy elections in several chiefdoms in the country, with the financial assistance from several donors under the management of UNDP. The National Human Rights Commission strengthened its outreach programme and its reporting on the human rights situation in the country. The Government made a commitment to cover the operational costs of the Commission in 2010, and UNIPSIL mobilized international donor support to help implement the Commission's strategic plan. Progress was made in the implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, in particular through the reparations programme. With support from the Peacebuilding Fund, micro-grants were provided to more than 13,000 eligible victims of the civil war to enable them to set up small-scale businesses. In addition, 7,000 child victims, mainly war orphans and children born as a result of sexual violence, received financial support to pay fees and buy learning materials.

Implementation of the Joint Vision of the United Nations Family for Sierra Leone, a strategic framework adopted in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 207] that outlined common priority areas and joint operational and logistical arrangements, was progressing. UN agencies worked in an integrated manner to identify programme deliverables for each of the 21 programmes of the Joint Vision to ensure that agencies did not duplicate efforts. Cost sharing agreements between UNIPSIL and UN agencies were concluded. A new field office to serve the UN family in Bo became operational.

The Secretary-General welcomed the recognition by President Koroma of the challenge corruption posed and the swift action taken by the Anti-Corruption Commission to combat the problem, urged further efforts to ensure that corruption did not weaken progress, and called for joint action by all national stakeholders to deal with the matter. Noting the shortfall in anticipated donor funding required for the implementation of the Government's Agenda for Change, which identified priorities for development, the Secretary-General appealed to Sierra Leone's international development partners to assist Sierra Leone in implementing its Agenda for Change, including in developing infrastructure and increasing agricultural productivity. While encouraged by improvements in the political climate since the signing of the joint communiqué, the Secretary-General said the challenge of fostering political tolerance and promoting non-violence remained.

Report of Secretary-General (September). In his September report on UNIPSIL [S/2010/471], the Secretary-General said three significant developments had occurred since his previous report. First, the country had entered a pre-election mode, with the Government and the main political parties gearing their actions towards the 2012 elections. Second, the Government had accelerated initiatives to conclude important mining agreements, through which Sierra Leone could become a major exporter of mineral resources. Third, presidential elections in neighbouring Guinea (see p. 235) could add a new democracy within the Mano River Basin with the first democratically elected government in that country.

The Secretary-General visited Sierra Leone on 14 and 15 June, during which time he joined President Koroma in launching the Sierra Leone Broadcasting Corporation (SLBC) as an independent national broadcaster. In meetings with the President and ministers, discussions focused on efforts by the Government to implement its Agenda for Change and achieve the Millennium Development Goals.

Implementation of the 2009 joint communiqué continued. The Independent Review Panel established by that document to investigate the causes of the political violence in March 2009 submitted its report to President Koroma on 29 July. The Panel was supported by the Peacebuilding Fund. Other stipulations in the joint communiqué, including the strengthening of the country's democratic institutions, continued to be implemented. Repairs to the SLPP headquarters, damaged during the March 2009 disturbances, were completed. The All Political Parties Youth Association, which comprised the youth wings of the four main political parties, was activated. The Association helped to promote political tolerance in several by-elections and was expected to play a similar role in the 2012 elections. The women's wings of three main parties held meetings to develop gender policies and action plans. Notwithstanding the progress made in implementing the joint communiqué, the relationship between APC and SLPP remained strained.

On 28 May, the Government announced plans to hold an inquest into the executions on 29 December 1992 of a former Inspector-General of police and 27 others. The executions were carried out during the administration of the National Provisional Ruling Council (NPRC), a military regime that overthrew the APC Government in April 1992. The plans raised questions because an inquest could involve some leading members of opposition party SLPP, who held positions in the NPRC administration. The Government emphasized that the inquest would be conducted to establish facts about the executions and to bring closure to the affected families, while SLPP objected and noted that it violated the amnesty granted under the 1999 Lomé Peace Agreement. Some civil society organizations and the National Human Rights Commission also expressed concerns that an inquest could lead to demands for inquiries into similar executions carried out by previous administrations. Furthermore, the planned inquest generated ethnically motivated and inflammatory attacks in the local media. Following consultations with international partners and others, the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of UNIPSIL relayed to the Government their concerns that an inquest might impede efforts towards political reconciliation and national cohesion. Since then, the Government had not disclosed whether it would proceed with the inquest.

In December 2009, the Minister of Finance and Economic Development had requested technical and financial assistance from the United Nations for elections to be held in 2010, including presidential, parliamentary and local council elections. In response, an electoral needs assessment mission visited Sierra Leone in February 2010. Following consultations with key stakeholders, the mission recommended providing technical and financial assistance to the Government for the 2012 elections. It observed that the potential for violence was high; accordingly UNIPSIL undertook a conflict and risk mapping exercise with proposed interventions for mitigation. Following the mission's report, UNDP prepared a draft document outlining support to the National Electoral Commission, the Political Parties Registration Commission, the police and the judiciary. Discussions were commenced with international partners on assistance required for the 2012 elections.

The Yenga boundary dispute [YUN 2004, p. 217] between Sierra Leone and Guinea remained unresolved. On 26 March, the armed forces protested by letter to the Guinean Chief of Defence Staff regarding an incursion by Guinea soldiers into Sierra Leonean territory. Nevertheless, the relationship between the two countries remained cordial and high-level visits between senior Government officials continued.

UN Radio transferred its assets, including eight radio transmission sites and three broadcast studios, to the Sierra Leone Broadcasting Corporation, launched on 15 June as an independent national broadcaster. Grants for operational and technical costs were made by the UN Peacebuilding Fund and the trust fund.

The Secretary-General observed that considerable progress had been made in Sierra Leone in consolidating peacebuilding and achieving national reconciliation; however, efforts were needed to ensure that the gains were not reversed. Endemic unemployment among young people was a challenge to the stability of the country. Sustaining efforts at combating corruption was also crucial. Recently concluded mining agreements gave Sierra Leone hope for financial self-sufficiency in the coming years. The challenge of securing funding had made the implementation of President Koroma's Agenda for Change extremely difficult. In need of support was the multi-donor trust fund for implementation of the Joint Vision strategy, which was aligned with the Agenda for Change. The absence of funds for those efforts had affected the Government's plans to promote more robust political and socio-economic development initiatives. The Secretary-General urged the Peacebuilding Commission to take the lead in helping to mobilize the necessary resources. While commending President Koroma and his Government in promoting the rights of women and girls, the Secretary-General warned that resources would be required to strengthen support offices located in police stations around the country and related institutions to enable them to address sexual and gender-based violence.

Looking forward to the 2012 elections, which would represent an important milestone in consolidating democracy in Sierra Leone, the Secretary-General called on the political parties to continue to engage in dialogue and resolve their differences in the spirit of the joint communiqué of 2 April 2009. He urged the political parties to adhere to the code of conduct of the Political Parties Registration Commission and work closely with the National Electoral Commission on arrangements for the 2012 elections. In his view, the Government's announcement to hold an inquest into the 1992 executions could have a negative impact on the peace consolidation process. In view of the need for continued assistance to Sierra Leone in the areas of consolidating peace, providing support for the 2012 elections, supporting national reconciliation, advancing good governance, combating corruption as well as drug trafficking and transnational organized crime, addressing youth unemployment and mobilizing donor support, the Secretary-General recommended that the mandate of UNIPSIL be renewed for an additional year.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 September [meeting 6392], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1941(2010). The draft [S/2010/496] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Sierra Leone, in particular resolution 1886(2009) of 15 September 2009,

Welcoming the visit by the Secretary-General to Sierra Leone, and commending the valuable contribution that the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone has made to peacebuilding efforts and to the peace, security and development of the country,

Welcoming also the report of the Secretary-General of 17 September 2010 and his recommendation that the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone be extended for a period of one year, with a view to providing continued peacebuilding assistance to the Government of Sierra Leone, including preparations for the elections in 2012,

Mindful of the United Nations efforts in assisting the Government of Sierra Leone to address the capacity challenges of the national electoral institutions, and noting the potential for an increase in tensions during the preparation for and the period leading up to the 2012 elections in Sierra Leone, due to political, security, socio-economic and humanitarian challenges,

Calling upon the Government of Sierra Leone and the international community to focus on fostering an environment that is conducive to the holding of free and fair elections by strengthening institutions that administer and oversee the electoral process and, in so doing, to contribute to the institutional development and continued stability of the country,

Emphasizing the importance of the continued integrated support of the United Nations system and the international community for the long-term peace, security and development of Sierra Leone, particularly through strengthening of the capacity of the Government of Sierra Leone,

Welcoming the steady progress that the Government of Sierra Leone has made in implementing the Agenda for Change, as indicated in the joint progress report undertaken by the Government in close collaboration with its international partners and civil society, noting the challenges that remain to be addressed in the Government's national peacebuilding strategy and the efforts being made to address them, and calling upon all international partners to align their assistance with the priorities outlined in the joint progress report,

Acknowledging the role that the Peacebuilding Commission plays in support of the peacebuilding efforts in Sierra Leone, welcoming the review of the outcome of the High-level Special Session of the Peacebuilding Commission on Sierra Leone, of 28 September 2010, and noting the contribution that the Peacebuilding Fund has made to peacebuilding in Sierra Leone,

Welcoming the ongoing implementation of the joint communiqué of 2 April 2009 by the political parties and their contributions towards a sustained cessation of the political violence in Sierra Leone, and calling upon all political parties to continue to adhere to its provisions and ensure its full implementation,

Commending the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone and the United Nations country team's continuing efforts to work together to achieve the integration of the political, development and humanitarian mandates of the mission set forth in the United Nations Joint Vision, encouraging all United Nations entities in Sierra Leone to continue the implementation of the Joint Vision, and calling upon Sierra Leone's bilateral and multilateral partners to provide the necessary resources to implement the Joint Vision,

Reiterating its appreciation for the work of the Special Court for Sierra Leone, stressing the importance of the trial of former President of Liberia Charles Taylor by the Court, welcoming the completion of all the other cases, as well as effective outreach on the trials at the local level, reiterating its expectation that the Court will finish its work as soon as possible, and calling upon Member States to contribute generously to the Court and the proposed Residual Special Court,

Reaffirming its resolution 1940(2010) of 29 September 2010 lifting all remaining sanctions in relation to Sierra Leone, and recalling that the responsibility for controlling the circulation of small arms within the territory of Sierra Leone and between Sierra Leone and neighbouring States rests with the relevant governmental authorities in accordance with the Economic Community of West African States Convention on Small Arms and Light Weapons, Their Ammunition and Other Related Materials, of 2006,

Welcoming the role played by the Economic Community of West African States, and encouraging the States members of the Mano River Union and other regional organizations to continue their dialogue aimed at consolidating regional peace and security,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone, as set out in Security Council resolutions 1829(2008) of 4 August 2008 and 1886(2009), until 15 September 2011;

2. Emphasizes the importance of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone achieving, jointly with the United Nations country team, the objectives outlined in the United Nations Joint Vision within their respective mandates, including focusing on:

- (i) Providing support to the Government of Sierra Leone for the preparation of the 2012 elections as requested;
- (ii) Providing assistance to conflict prevention and mitigation efforts, and promoting dialogue among political parties, the Government and all relevant stakeholders;
- (iii) Assisting the Government and national institutions in tackling youth unemployment, including by supporting training, education and skills provision;
- (iv) Providing assistance to the Government in promoting good governance, the rule of law and human rights, including institutional reform; combating illicit drug trafficking and organized crime; combating corruption; providing support to the National Human Rights Commission; and assisting in strengthening national capacity-building in the areas of law enforcement, forensics, border management, money-laundering and the strengthening of criminal justice institutions;

3. Calls upon the Government of Sierra Leone, with the support of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone and all other stakeholders in the country, to increase their efforts to take measures to combat corruption, improve accountability and promote the development of the private sector in order to generate wealth and employment opportunities;

4. Also calls upon the Government of Sierra Leone, with the support of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone, development partners and other stakeholders, to continue good governance reform by supporting the Anti-Corruption Commission to increase the transparency and management of Sierra Leone's natural and mineral resources for the benefit of all Sierra Leoneans and mitigating the risk of resource-based conflict; to intensify efforts against illicit drug trafficking through the strengthening of the Transnational Organized Crime Unit; and to promote human rights, including through the implementation of the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission;

5. Encourages the Executive Representative of the Secretary-General for Sierra Leone to continue with the progress already made to enhance the integration and effectiveness of United Nations efforts on the ground, in support of the implementation of the Joint Vision for Sierra Leone and the recovery and development priorities of the Government and people of Sierra Leone;

6. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to report on progress achieved towards meeting the benchmarks, including in supporting the capacity of key national institutions to be able to adequately address the causes of conflict and manage political disputes by themselves, for the transition of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone into a United Nations country team as agreed upon by the Government of Sierra Leone and the United Nations in the Joint Vision for Sierra Leone, and the particular challenges involved in preparing for the 2012 elections;

7. Emphasizes that the Government of Sierra Leone bears the primary responsibility for peacebuilding, security and long-term development in the country, and encourages the Government to continue its implementation of the Agenda for Change, and international partners to continue to provide support to the Government;

8. Encourages the Peacebuilding Commission to provide support to the Government of Sierra Leone in preparation for the 2012 elections as requested, including the potential to mobilize support from international partners, that is required for the implementation of the Government's Agenda for Change and the United Nations Joint Vision strategy and in that regard to advise and keep the Security Council updated, including on progress made in meeting core peacebuilding objectives, as necessary;

9. Urges the Government of Sierra Leone to accelerate the promotion of national unity and reconciliation;

10. Commends the Government of Sierra Leone for recognizing the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, as referred to in resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 and 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, by establishing national strategies, underscores the importance that the Government continue its efforts in addressing sexual and gender-based violence, and encourages the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone to work with the Government in this area;

11. Requests that the Secretary-General keep the Council informed every six months of progress made in the implementation of the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone and the present resolution;

12. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Year-end developments. The Secretary-General later reported [S/2011/119] that as part of preparations for the 2012 presidential, parliamentary and local council elections in Sierra Leone, agreement was reached in late 2010 between the electoral management bodies, the Government, its donor partners and the United Nations, on the cost and related arrangements. As a step to enhance national unity, President Koroma on 4 December appointed new ministers, which diversified representation within his administration. The main risks to peace consolidation continued to be youth unemployment, corruption and illicit drug trafficking and organized crime.

Implementation of some aspects of the joint communiqué continued. At a national delegates' conference on 3 December in Makeni in the northern region, the youth wings of SLPP, APC, the National Democratic Alliance (NDA) and the People's Movement for Democratic Change (PMDC), with support from UNIPSIL and the UN Peacebuilding Fund, established the All Political Parties Youth Association, with the goal of preventing political violence among youths and fostering greater cooperation among youths with diverse political backgrounds. As part of efforts to enhance the political participation of women as called for in the joint communiqué, UNIPSIL facilitated dialogue sessions in those four parties. The Sierra Leone Broadcasting Corporation made progress in providing unbiased coverage and fair access to all political parties, including granting air time to SLPP presidential candidates.

UNIPSIL and UNDP provided technical and capacity support to the Corporation, and the UN "Providing as one" fund gave $792,000 for its activities.

Progress was made in finalizing the UN electoral support programme to be managed by UNDP, with contributions from the United Kingdom, Ireland and Japan, and the European Commission and the United Nations. The programme was aimed at supporting the National Electoral Commission, improving voter registration, electoral administration, legal reform and electoral dispute resolution.

To further consolidate the peace process, support was provided to democratic institutions, including the National Electoral Commission, the Political Parties Registration Commission and the Independent Media Commission. In December, UNIPSIL trained 80 members of the Transnational Organized Crime Unit of the security agencies on issues related to human rights and human trafficking.

Work continued on implementing the recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission. On 12 and 13 October, the Human Rights Commission of Sierra Leone, in collaboration with UNIPSIL, organized the second conference on the status of implementation. The conference noted some progress and underscored the need to implement the remaining recommendations, such as the separation of the offices of the Attorney-General and the Minister of Justice, the decriminalization of libel, a constitutional review, the abolition of the death penalty and the repeal of discriminatory provisions against women.

Efforts were also made to implement the United Nations Joint Vision for Sierra Leone. On 28 and 29 October, the Executive Representative led the annual retreat of the UN country team in Sierra Leone, during which the UN country team renewed its support to implementation of the Government's Agenda for Change, and reiterated its commitment to promote the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness. The team pledged to work together in an integrated manner to assist the country in conducting peaceful, credible and transparent elections.

Peacebuilding Commission

The Peacebuilding Commission, in a report for its fourth session [A/65/701-S/2011/41] reviewing its work from 1 July 2009 to 31 December 2010, said that during that period it had worked towards good governance and the rule of law, the employment of youth and combating drug trafficking, with gender and regional perspectives as cross-cutting issues. In those areas, the Commission provided political accompaniment, helped to bring partners together and worked to mobilize resources, while opting for a lighter form of engagement.

The configuration decided to focus its engagement on support for national actors to help them prepare the country for free and fair elections in 2012. In response to the Commission's encouragement, the Government and its partners unveiled a three-year joint response to youth employment in Sierra Leone (2010–2012) that would result in the employment of 106,000 young people on a sustainable basis. The joint response was announced at an informal meeting of the Sierra Leone configuration on 26 March. Austria, a member of the configuration, in collaboration with the Peacebuilding Support Office, organized a regional seminar on strategies and lessons learned on sustainable reintegration and job creation in West Africa, held in Freetown on 2 and 3 December, which reviewed the experience of four countries.

In March, a high-level delegation of the Commission visited Sierra Leone and met with Government and relevant stakeholders, highlighting the importance of the Commission's remaining actively engaged, in particular in view of the 2012 elections. During a visit to Sierra Leone from 29 November to 3 December, the Chair, Ambassador John McNee (Canada), emphasized to the three main political parties and governmental commissions the need to strengthen political dialogue. He also underscored that lessons learned in other countries about mineral wealth might be useful in helping Sierra Leone take advantage of its natural resources transparently, peacefully and inclusively.

Several traditional and non-traditional donors provided aid through the Peacebuilding Fund amounting to $37 million for Sierra Leone. The Commission recognized that to implement the UN Joint Vision a total requirement of $345 million would be needed, of which $229 million had been secured or committed. As a result, the configuration, at its meeting on 28 September, agreed to produce a resource mobilization strategy to guide its work.

High-level Special Session. The Peacebuilding Commission's High-level Special Session on Sierra Leone, at its fourth session on 28 September [PBC/4/SLE/3], welcomed the progress report on the Agenda for Change issued by the Government, UNIPSIL, the UN country team, international partners and civil society. The Commission welcomed the steady progress made, among other steps, towards peace consolidation and economic development by Sierra Leone, in particular efforts by the major political parties to implement agreements in the 2 April 2009 joint communiqué, the conclusion of the independent inquiry into the events of March 2009, and the Government's commitment to restructure the Political Parties Registration Commission in order to enable it to play a greater role in promoting mediation among the parties and in regulating their conduct. The Commission commended the UN family, under the leadership of the Executive Representative, for aligning international assistance with the Agenda for Change.

The Peacebuilding Commission reiterated its decision to focus on good governance and the rule of law, drug trafficking and youth employment, as well as its decision to advocate for greater subregional cooperation and the promotion of gender equality and human rights. The Commission requested the Government to provide an annual progress report on the implementation of the Agenda for Change no later than September 2011, to be preceded by a brief update six months prior, and welcomed the recommendation to develop a results framework for the Agenda. Among its recommendations, the Commission called on the Government to engage all relevant national stakeholders to build national unity through open dialogue; fight corruption, maintaining a zero-tolerance approach; strengthen the role of Parliament and the administration of justice; implement the remaining recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission; improve youth employment by matching skills training with market demand; and decentralize power to local authorities so that services could be provided throughout Sierra Leone. Political parties were called on to further implement the joint communiqué and engage in multi-party dialogue.

The Commission recommended that international partners provide assistance in line with the Agenda for Change through, among other mechanisms, the multi-donor trust fund for financing peace consolidation and economic development; assist in preparations for the 2012 elections; support institutionalization and decentralization of the Anti-Corruption Commission; support subregional cooperation in combating drug trafficking, especially through ECOWAS and the Mano River Union; support the new youth employment strategy, the establishment of the National Youth Commission and youth employment and empowerment programmes; and assist the Government in implementing the remaining recommendations of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.

Participation in configuration. On 8 April [PBC/4/OC/5], the Chairperson of the Peacebuilding Commission responded to a request from the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) to participate in the work of the Sierra Leone configuration. The members of the Organizational Committee had no objection; accordingly, INTERPOL was invited to participate in all future meetings of the configuration.

Sanctions

The Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1132(1997) [YUN 1997, p. 135] concerning Sierra Leone submitted a report [S/2010/659] on its activities from 1 January to 29 September 2010, when the Committee was dissolved by the Security Council in resolution 1940(2010) (see below). The Committee monitored and implemented the 1998 embargo on the sale or supply of arms to non-governmental forces in Sierra Leone and the travel ban on leading members of the former military junta in Sierra Leone and of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF), imposed by resolution 1171(1998) [YUN 1998, p. 169].

Although the Committee held no formal meetings or informal consultations during the reporting period, it carried out its work through written procedures. The Committee received three notifications during the reporting period of exports of arms and related materiel to Sierra Leone pursuant to resolution 1171(1998). On 14 June, the Netherlands notified the Committee of the temporary transfer of Issa H. Sesay from Kigali to The Hague to appear as a witness in the trial of Charles Taylor before the Special Court for Sierra Leone. Mr. Sesay was convicted by the Special Court for Sierra Leone on 25 February 2009 and was serving his prison sentence in Rwanda. He was subject to the travel ban imposed by resolution 1171(1998), and his travel to The Hague took place as an exemption to the ban provided for by resolution 1793(2007). In a letter dated 31 August, the Netherlands notified the Committee that Mr. Sesay, who had appeared as a witness before the Special Court for Sierra Leone in The Hague, was due to return to Kigali on 2 September to serve the remainder of his prison sentence.

During the reporting period, no violations or alleged violations of the sanctions regime were brought to the attention of the Committee.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 September [meeting 6392], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1940(2010). The draft [S/2010/495] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on Sierra Leone, in particular resolutions 1132(1997) of 8 October 1997 and 1171(1998) of 5 June 1998,

Recalling also its readiness to terminate the measures once the control of the Government of Sierra Leone has been fully re-established over all its territory, and when all non-governmental forces have been disarmed and demobilized,

Reaffirming its commitment to support the recovery of Sierra Leone from conflict and to the peace, security and development of the country,

Commending the continuing role of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone in this regard,

Welcoming the letter dated 9 September 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Sierra Leone to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council, updating the Council on the situation in Sierra Leone and requesting that the measures in place be lifted,

Commending the work of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to paragraph 10 of resolution 1132(1997) concerning Sierra Leone,

Taking note of the 2009 report of the Committee and, in particular, the observations of the Chair contained in paragraph 17 thereof,

Urging all States to cooperate with and render assistance to the Special Court for Sierra Leone, or any institution to which the Court has transferred his case, to bring Mr. Johnny Paul Koroma to justice if he is found to be alive, and calling upon him to surrender,

Calling upon all States to cooperate with the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) in apprehending and transferring Mr. Koroma, if he is found to be alive,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to terminate, with immediate effect, the measures set forth in paragraphs 2, 4 and 5 of resolution 1171(1998);

2. Decides also to dissolve the Security Council Committee established pursuant to paragraph 10 of resolution 1132(1997) with immediate effect.

UNIPSIL

The United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Sierra Leone (UNIPSIL) was established on 1 October 2008 by Security Council resolution 1829(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 215] as the successor mission to the United Nations Integrated Office in Sierra Leone (UNIOSIL), with a mandate focused on strengthening governmental capacities. Its mandate included assisting the Government in providing political support to national and local efforts for identifying and resolving tensions and threats of conflict; monitoring and promoting human rights, democratic institutions and the rule of law; consolidating good governance reforms, with a focus on anti-corruption efforts; strengthening the Parliament and key governance institutions and coordinating strategy among UN agencies in Sierra Leone. In resolution 1886(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 210], the Security Council emphasized the importance of UNIPSIL in supporting the Government in constitutional reform; building police capacity; tackling corruption, illicit drug trafficking and organized crime; addressing youth unemployment; supporting preparations for the 2012 elections; and assisting the work of the Peacebuilding Commission. The Council, in resolution 1941(2010) (see p. 215) of 29 September 2010, reiterated the importance of the Office's focus on those objectives as outlined in the UN Joint Vision, in particular support for the Government for preparations for elections, and extended the mandate of UNIPSIL until 15 September 2011.

Financing

In an October report [A/65/328/Add.3 & Corr.1] providing budgets for 2011 in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council grouped under thematic cluster III (UN offices, integrated offices and commissions), the Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for UNIPSIL in the amount of $16,629,600, which ACABQ recommended to the General Assembly for approval [A/65/602].

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1433), the Assembly endorsed the recommendations of ACABQ and approved the budgets of 11 special political missions, including the UNIPSIL budget, under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for 2010–2011 biennium.

Special Court for Sierra Leone

The Special Court for Sierra Leone, jointly established by the Government of Sierra Leone and the United Nations in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 164] pursuant to Security Council resolution 1315(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 205], continued in 2010 to try those bearing the greatest responsibility for violations of international humanitarian and Sierra Leonean laws committed in Sierra Leone since November 1996. By 2010, the Court had tried and convicted eight persons. One person indicted by the Court remained at large, Johnny Paul Koroma.

The trial of Prosecutor v. Charles Ghankay Taylor, the former President of Liberia, continued at The Hague as the sole case before the Court. A June completion strategy was based on the expectation that evidentiary proceedings in the trial would conclude in October and closing arguments would be made in December [A/66/563]. Unforeseen developments in the judicial proceedings, however, resulted in a shift in the timeframe, as the number of witnesses, including rebuttal witnesses, lengthened the expected trial proceedings, as did examination and cross-examination of defence witnesses. The Court concluded its evidentiary proceedings on 12 November, marking the first shift in the projected milestones, and the Chamber ordered that closing arguments take place in February 2011.

The Secretary-General, in a 9 July letter to the Security Council [S/2010/384], said that the current projection for completion of the Taylor trial was June 2011, and an appeal, if any, would be around February 2012. Upon completion of its judicial activities, the Court would be closed. Some essential tasks would remain after closure—the trial of the fugitive or referring his case to a national jurisdiction; maintaining, preserving and managing archives; providing for witness and victim protection and support; responding to requests for access to evidence by national prosecution authorities; supervising the enforcement of sentences of convicted persons; reviewing convictions and acquittals; conducting contempt of court proceedings; providing defence counsel and legal aid; responding to requests from national authorities with respect to claims for compensation; and preventing double jeopardy. Those tasks would have to be done by a small and cost-effective international residual mechanism established by the United Nations and Sierra Leone, and funded from voluntary contributions. The Secretary-General intended to negotiate and conclude with Sierra Leone an agreement on a mechanism with its statute, and he sought the Security Council's agreement before proceeding.

On 15 July [S/2010/385], the Council members took note of his intention and agreed to the proposed manner of proceeding.

In August 2010, the Agreement between the United Nations and the Government of Sierra Leone on the Establishment of a Residual Special Court for Sierra Leone was finalized. The Statute of the Residual Special Court enumerated the residual functions after the cases would be closed. It guaranteed continuity of the Court's jurisdiction, rights and obligations. In coordination with the Management Committee, the Office of Legal Affairs and other relevant stakeholders, the Court's Registry would manage the legal, budgetary and logistical tasks in setting up the Residual Special Court.

The International Criminal Court (icc) [A/65/313] provided courtroom services, facilities, and detention services and other assistance to the Special Court for Sierra Leone in its trial of Charles Taylor in The Hague for the first few months of 2010. In view of its increased trial activity, icc reached agreement with the Special Court that from 13 May, the Special Court would cease to use the icc courtroom facilities and would instead use the facilities of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon. In December, the original Court records were transferred to the Netherlands to be housed in the Dutch national archives. A public copy remained in Sierra Leone. In light of the staff downsizing and transfer of materials, the Mongolian Guard Force was withdrawn.

Financing

The Secretary-General, in a letter of 6 October [S/2010/560], brought to the attention of the Security Council the current situation—that the Special Court for Sierra Leone would run out of funding by the end of that month and that voluntary contributions necessary for the Court to complete its work could not be found. Under article 6 of the Agreement between the United Nations and the Government of Sierra Leone on the Establishment of a Special Court for Sierra Leone, should voluntary contributions be insufficient for the Court to implement its mandate, the Secretary-General and the Security Council should explore alternate means of financing. The Secretary-General, pointing out that immediate steps were needed, proposed to the Council that the costs be provided by assessment. Because the Court was conducting its final case, which was projected to be completed, along with any appeal, by early 2012, a collapse at that stage would raise substantial issues for the international community. The shortfall for the period from November 2010 until the closure of the Court in early 2012 was estimated at $18.4 million.

In a letter of 29 October [S/2010/561], the Council President, having consulted with the members, said they had no objection to the proposal. It was not expected that there would be additional subventions for the Court. In addition, it was understood that the UN Secretariat, the Management Committee and the Registrar and other officials of the Court would intensify their efforts to fund the activities of the Court through voluntary contributions.

The Secretary-General submitted a November report [A/65/570] to the General Assembly, setting out the overall level of resources required for the completion of the Court's activities for the period from 1 November 2010 to 29 February 2012. The approval of a subvention of up to $17,916,560 was sought from the Assembly, of which $4,502,355 covered a shortfall of requirements owing to the unpaid pledge of $1,233,045, and $3,269,310 for projected expenditures from 1 November to 31 December 2010. The estimated requirements for 2011 were $12,290,500. It was anticipated that a pledge of $1,233,045 would be received in 2011; therefore, the net requirement would amount to $11,057,455. An amount of $2,356,750 would be required from 1 January to 29 February 2012 to allow the Court to finish its work by that time. Those amounts were intended to supplement voluntary contributions that were expected to be received by the Court, but had not materialized. Any voluntary funds received would reduce the amounts sought from the Assembly accordingly.

ACABQ reviewed the Secretary-General's request for a subvention to the Court in a December report [A/65/603]. Noting that the Court was completing its workload, ACABQ encouraged the Court to keep a documentary record of best practices and lessons learned, including those relating to the downsizing and liquidation processes, so that other international tribunals could benefit from its experiences. The Committee was informed that after the Secretary-General's report was issued, the Court received pledges totalling $5,088,405, putting the Court in a position to continue operating without a subvention until 31 December 2010. Subsequently, the request was revised for a subvention amounting to $12,239,344. In view of the importance of the Court's activities, ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve that amount for 1 January 2011 to 29 February 2012 to supplement the voluntary financial resources. The amount of $9,882,594 would be applied to 2011 and $2,356,750 for 1 January to 29 February 2012. It recommended that the Assembly note that an additional subvention of the 2012 amount would be included as a first charge against the provision for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the proposed programme budget for the 2012–2013 biennium. ACABQ stressed that the recommendation was made on the understanding that any regular budget funds appropriated for the Special Court would be refunded when the Court was liquidated, should sufficient voluntary contributions be received; that it was not expected that there would be additional subventions for the Court; and that the United Nations Secretariat, the Management Committee, the Registrar and other Court officials would intensify their efforts to fund the Court's activities through voluntary contributions.

The General Assembly, in section XII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1433), endorsed the conclusions and recommendations contained in the ACABQ report. Noting the funding amounts mentioned in the report, the Assembly authorized the Secretary-General, as an exceptional measure, to enter into commitments in an amount not to exceed the recommended amount for 2011, on the understanding that any additional funds from the regular budget would be refunded to the United Nations when the Court was liquidated, and that senior officials of the Court would intensify their efforts to seek funds through voluntary contributions.

Guinea-Bissau

On 1 January 2010, the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNIOGBIS) was established as the successor to the United Nations Peacebuilding Support Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNOGBIS). With a greatly reduced staff, the new Office was mandated to strengthen national capacities to maintain constitutional order, public security and the rule of law; support law enforcement and criminal justice systems; support political dialogue and national reconciliation; provide strategic and technical support to the Government in security sector reform; and assist in national efforts to combat drug trafficking and organized crime.

Progress towards those goals was ongoing until 1 April, when certain elements within the armed forces, led by the Deputy Chief of General Staff, detained the Prime Minister and the Chief of General Staff and other senior military officers. The action constituted a major setback to the process of consolidating stability and implementing key reforms. The unprecedented violation of the UN premises on that date resulted in the extraction of the former Chief of Defence Staff, who had sought asylum at the UNIOGBIS headquarters.

Despite those circumstances, the Mission, other UN bodies and international and regional organizations continued to work with the Government of Guinea-Bissau towards consolidating peace in a number of issues.

On 22 December, the Government released the officials detained on 1 April.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (February). The Secretary-General, in his February report on developments in Guinea-Bissau and on the activities of UNIOGBIS [S/2010/106], said that the situation in early 2010 remained relatively calm. He commended the Government for fighting corruption, drug trafficking and organized crime, and welcomed progress made in the security sector, public administration and fiscal reforms. The Secretary-General's Special Representative for UNIOGBIS, Joseph Mutaboba, held consultations with national authorities in regard to former Navy Chief of Staff, Rear Admiral Bubo Na Tchuto, who on 28 December 2009 had returned clandestinely from the Gambia, having been in exile since fleeing Guinea-Bissau following accusations of involvement in a coup attempt in August 2008. On returning to Guinea-Bissau, he sought protection at UN premises, and said he wanted to face justice to clear his name. The Government indicated that it lacked the capacity to try him, preferring to return him to the Gambia. On 8 January 2010, an agreement was signed between the United Nations and the national authorities. While both parties recognized their obligations under international law, consultations would continue between the Government delegation and Bubo Na Tchuto for his voluntary departure from the UN compound.

Progress was made to improve security sector reform. The Ministries of Interior and Defence reached a compromise on the creation of a 1,700-strong new entity with military status and police functions called the "Guarda Nacional". UNIOGBIS provided assistance to the Government with planning, evaluation, review and implementation of a holistic security sector reform programme.

Efforts to combat drug trafficking and organized crime continued. Representatives of UNOWA, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), the UN Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and INTERPOL conducted an assessment in Guinea-Bissau from 1 to 15 February. That mission was initiated as part of the 2008–2011 ECOWAS regional action plan to fight drug trafficking, organized crime and drug abuse. The team undertook an evaluation of national capabilities, legal frameworks and explored the possibility of creating a transnational crime unit in Guinea-Bissau.

International financial institutions continued their engagement with the Government. On 26 January, it was announced that IMF had reached a preliminary agreement on a medium-term economic programme under the IMF Extended Credit Facility. The target for 2010 was for Guinea-Bissau to reach the completion point under the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, which would lead to debt relief of $700 million. An African Development Bank mission visited Guinea-Bissau from 24 to 28 January to consult with authorities, including on the Bank's portfolio and budget support programme to the country.

A UN strategic planning retreat was held in Bissau from 3 to 5 February to revise the current UN Development Assistance Framework, prepare the new integrated strategic framework and agree on its implementation and coordination structures. The retreat brought together the senior leadership of UNIOGBIS, the UN country team and representatives of the Government and international partners, reviewed progress in implementing the UN development assistance Framework, and agreed on the following four priority objectives for implementation by the UN system in Guinea-Bissau for 2010: promotion of the rule of law and security sector reform; governance, democracy and political dialogue; economic revitalization and poverty alleviation; and the provision of basic social services and the protection of the vulnerable. Specific outputs and indicators to measure progress were drawn up under each priority area.

The Secretary-General commented that he was encouraged by President Sanha's and the Government's efforts to consolidate peace and promote stability in Guinea-Bissau. Security sector reform remained the centrepiece of priority stabilization goals, and the national authorities were taking measures to pave the way for creating the legal framework for reforms.

Report of Secretary-General (June). According to the Secretary-General in his June report on Guinea-Bissau and UNIOGBIS [S/2010/335], political tension began to resurface in the run-up to the second ordinary session of the National Assembly, which took place from 18 February to 18 March. The opposition Social Renewal Party (PRS) launched a campaign accusing Prime Minister Carlos Gomes Júnior of bad governance and blaming him for insecurity in the country. The opposition lobbied for the dismissal of the Prime Minister and tried to exploit dissensions within the ruling African Party for the Independence of Guinea and Cape Verde (PAIGC). President Sanha called on the leadership of the ruling party and the opposition to avoid creating a new climate of political instability and to focus on development of the country instead.

The impasse in the negotiations over the modalities for the voluntary departure of Rear Admiral Bubo Na Tchuto from UN premises also had a negative impact on the political situation. Despite the 8 January agreement between the Government and the United Nations, subsequent discussions to facilitate his voluntary departure remained inconclusive. The divergence of views between President Sanha and Prime Minister Gomes Júnior on the case had a negative impact on the political environment.

Meanwhile, dissensions also resurfaced within the leadership of the armed forces, between the Chief of General Staff, Vice Admiral José Zamora Induta, and his Deputy, Major General António N'djai. The Chief of General Staff rotated several military officers loyal to his Deputy, who protested to the President and Prime Minister.

Action by armed forces

On 1 April, troops acting under the orders of the Deputy Chief of General Staff took control of the armed forces headquarters and detained the Chief of General Staff, as well as the head of the military intelligence service, Colonel Samba Djaló. Prime Minister Gomes Júnior was also briefly detained by the military, but was released later following the intervention of President Sanha. On the same day, five armed military elements, under the orders of the Deputy Chief of General Staff, forced their way into UN premises in Bissau, demanding the immediate release of Rear Admiral Bubo Na Tchuto, who subsequently left the premises after signing a statement that he was leaving voluntarily and peacefully.

In an unprecedented show of public rejection of the military action, on the same day large crowds gathered outside the office of the Prime Minister to express support for the civilian authorities and denounce the breach of constitutional order by the armed forces. Despite threats by the Deputy Chief of General Staff to use force against civilians, the crowds dispersed only after the Prime Minister was released and appealed to them to return to their homes.

The international community and national stakeholders reacted strongly to the unlawful action by the military. On 1 April, the Secretary-General issued a statement calling on the military and political leadership to resolve differences by peaceful means and maintain constitutional order, as well as ensure respect for the rule of law. The Special Representative denounced the violation of UN premises and sought clarifications by the civilian and military leadership on the arrest of the Prime Minister and detention of officers.

Security Council statement. On the same day [SC/9900], the Security Council stated its concern over the military incidents in Guinea-Bissau and urged all parties to avoid acts of violence, uphold constitutional order and respect the rule of law.

As the Secretary-General further reported, during the night of 1 April, the Deputy Chief of General Staff conveyed his apologies to the Special Representative for the violation of UN premises by elements of the armed forces. He also apologized in public to the Prime Minister and for the behaviour of the armed forces. The army leadership reiterated their subordination to the Government and State institutions.

In a nationwide address on 10 April, the President condemned the events of 1 April, noting that they had taken place when Guinea-Bissau was beginning to achieve political stability and economic growth. He underscored the need to reform the defence and security sectors to create a professional and functional armed forces that would be subordinate to civilian authorities. The President and Prime Minister subsequently initiated regular consultations, including on how to end the impasse on leadership of the military. In parallel, the President continued consultations with a wide segment of the military, as well as with leaders of political parties and civil society organizations. In addition, he convened a series of meetings in early May with the Ministers of Defence and Finance to discuss measures to improve the working and living conditions of members of the armed forces.

The ECOWAS Chiefs of Staff dispatched to Bissau a high-level delegation from 4 to 8 May and met with key national and international stakeholders, except the Prime Minister, who was away from the country. The delegation urged the leadership of the armed forces to refrain from any actions that could undermine constitutional order and to demonstrate commitment to undertake reforms in the defence and security sectors. The EU called on the President and Prime Minister to facilitate the immediate and unconditional release of the detained Chief of General Staff, pending a judicial process. They called for disciplinary measures against those responsible for the 1 April breach of constitutional order, and also called for credible appointment of the leadership of the armed forces. For his part, the Special Representative expressed the following concerns: no political gains should be expected from the 1 April action; national authorities should show commitment to advancing reforms, including in the security sector; the President and the Prime Minister must appoint credible leaders of the armed forces; and the security and the right to a fair and legal procedure of those arrested on 1 April should be respected. Following a meeting on 26 April, the Peacebuilding Commission sent a letter to Guinea-Bissau expressing concern over the recent events and requested that the national authorities provide assurances of their commitment to sustain the progress that had been made.

The Permanent Commission of the National Assembly commissioned an investigation into the events of 1 April, but on 17 May the Speaker of the National Assembly ruled that the report was extempore and left it to the judiciary to establish the facts and determine responsibilities. On 8 April, the United States Treasury Department decided to designate the current Chief of Staff of the Air Force, Lieutenant General Ibraima Papa Camará, and Rear Admiral Bubo Na Tchuto as drug kingpins.

In May, the National Assembly approved a package of legislation related to security sector reform, including amendments on the basic organic law on the armed forces, and laws on the National Guard, the Public Order Police and the State Security Information Services. UNIOGBIS initiated a programme to support the Ministry of the Interior in developing and implementing a vetting process for the Public Order Police. UNDP developed a project in support of rule-of-law programmes over two years, with a budget of $5 million, which would facilitate access to justice and provide an interface between formal and traditional justice mechanisms. The UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs sent a mission to Guinea-Bissau from 5 to 9 April, in the framework of a joint project with the Office for Disarmament Affairs, to support the Government in the fight against the illicit proliferation of small arms. UNODC continued to provide logistical support to the Judiciary Police and the national INTERPOL office, and it undertook an assessment of the penitentiary system to develop a strategy for prison reform, with the support of UNIOGBIS. The Peacebuilding Fund continued to support four projects, namely the refurbishment of military barracks, support to vocation training programmes, youth employment and the rehabilitation of prisons. Other support from the United Nations through a number of its bodies, especially UNIOGBIS, was provided in the areas of education, professional training, human rights, the rule of law and gender issues.

During the period under review, UNIOGBIS and the UN country team made progress towards integration, and finalized a UN framework for peace and development in Guinea-Bissau. The framework brought together the political, development and human rights work of the UN system and prioritized actions in four areas: governance, democracy and political dialogue; economic revitalization; security sector reform and rule of law; and social services and protection of vulnerable groups. The framework included a detailed matrix of priority actions and indicators for measuring progress and ensuring accountability.

The Secretary-General described the actions of 1 April as a major setback to the process of consolidating stability following the restoration of constitutional order in Guinea-Bissau after the assassinations and elections of 2009 [YUN 2009, pp. 216 & 221]. The unprecedented violation of UN premises was unacceptable and condemnable. He urged the national authorities to comply with their obligation to protect UN installations, personnel and assets. The Secretary-General called on the armed forces to demonstrate their resolve to remain subordinate to the civilian leadership, who enjoyed legitimacy as a result of fair elections. In addition to warning about the effects of the military actions on 1 April, the Secretary-General observed that the growing influence of transnational crime, including drug trafficking, in some sections of the military and the State apparatus, and in the economy, threatened to further compromise the fragility of the State. He was concerned over reports linking drug trafficking with the events of 1 April. Security sector reform was a sine qua non condition for stabilization. Unless strong action was taken against organized crime and drug trafficking, however, efforts to restructure the defence sector would be undermined. The scourge of drug trafficking, which affected the entire subregion, needed to be addressed by national, bilateral and multilateral partners through coordinated and robust strategies in support of the 2008–2011 ECOWAS regional action plan to fight illicit drug trafficking, organized crime and drug abuse.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 6364], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/15 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls its previous statements and resolutions on Guinea-Bissau and further recalls the events of 1 April 2010. The Council notes the efforts of the Government of Guinea-Bissau towards achieving stability in the country, but expresses concern at the current security situation and threats to constitutional order. The Council stresses the critical importance of the President, Government, political leaders, armed forces and people of Guinea-Bissau meeting their responsibilities to work towards national reconciliation, maintaining stability and constitutional order, fighting impunity and respecting the rule of law.

The Council calls upon the Government of Guinea-Bissau to release immediately all those detained during the events of 1 April 2010 or prosecute them with full respect for due process.

The Council stresses that genuine security sector reform requires the creation of effective professional and accountable security forces and respect for the rule of law. The Council therefore calls upon the Government of Guinea-Bissau to create the conditions for reform of the security services, calls upon the security forces, in particular the military, to fulfil their commitment to abide by civilian control and calls upon both to implement current programmes for security sector reform on schedule.

The Council expresses serious concern about the continued growth in drug trafficking, as well as organized crime, which threatens peace and security in Guinea-Bissau and in the subregion. The Council calls upon the authorities of Guinea-Bissau to create the environment necessary to ensure that actions to tackle drug trafficking and organized crime, including actions supported by the international community, are effective.

The Council also recognizes the shared responsibility of States where drugs are produced and consumed, as well as transit States, to take measures to hold accountable those who engage in, or otherwise facilitate, drug trafficking through Guinea-Bissau. In this regard, the Council welcomes the commitment of the Economic Community of West African States with the European Union, the United Nations and other partners for the immediate implementation of the Economic Community of West African States plan of action against drug trafficking and organized crime in West Africa, including options for targeted sanctions against those individuals identified as members or supporters of the drug trafficking network. The Council agrees to keep the situation under active review and to consider appropriate action.

The Council welcomes the final communiqué of the 38th ordinary session of the Authority of Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of West African States expressing the need to promptly establish a mechanism for ensuring the safety of State civilian institutions in Guinea-Bissau. The Council invites the Government of Guinea-Bissau and the international community to cooperate fully with the Economic Community of West African States to that effect.

The Council welcomes the continued engagement of the Peacebuilding Commission and also calls for the swift implementation of the United Nations Framework for Peace and Development in Guinea-Bissau. The Council further welcomes the role of the efforts of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau to coordinate actions by partners, in particular the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the European Union and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, for their assistance in the area of security sector reform.

The Council acknowledges the plans of the National Assembly to convene a national conference on the theme 'Conflicts in Guinea-Bissau: causes, prevention, resolution and consequences', scheduled for January 2011 and underscores the need to conduct a genuine and inclusive political dialogue aimed at ensuring effective functioning of State institutions and national reconciliation. The Council welcomes, in that regard, efforts made by regional leaders, in particular President Pedro Pires of Cape Verde, to engage in a constructive dialogue with the leadership of Guinea-Bissau.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to brief the Council, as appropriate, on progress made in addressing these issues as well as on what further action may be required to support continued implementation.

Further developments

Report of Secretary-General (October). In his October report on Guinea-Bissau and UNIOGBIS activities [S/2010/550], the Secretary-General said that the reporting period was dominated by the efforts by Guinea-Bissau authorities to sustain international support for the country following the events of 1 April, as well as to resolve contentious issues, including the leadership of the armed forces and national strategies to stabilize the country.

On 24 June, the Council of Ministers endorsed a proposal by the Minister of Defence for the nomination of Major General António Indjai as the new Chief of General Staff and forwarded it to President Sanha. The next day, the President signed a decree dismissing Vice Admiral José Zamora Induta as Chief of General Staff and appointing Major General Indjai, promoting him to Lieutenant General. Two days later, the ruling PAIGC praised the efforts of the President and the Prime Minister to find a solution to the crisis affecting the country since 1 April. The opposition party PRS also welcomed the appointment, while civil society organizations voiced concern over what they saw as a pattern of impunity in the armed forces.

The international partners of Guinea-Bissau, including the AU, ECOWAS, the EU and the United States, criticized the appointment of Lieutenant General Indjai because of his leading role in the 1 April events. They expressed concern over the detention since 1 April of the former Chief of General Staff. ECOWAS postponed a meeting of the Chiefs of Defence Staff of the subregion, scheduled for 28 and 29 June in Bissau, and on 29 June, the United States announced the suspension of its support for the security sector reform process in the country. The EU called for a review of its engagement with Guinea-Bissau. At their summit in Cape Verde on 2 and 3 July, ECOWAS Heads of State urged President Sanha to create an environment conducive to the resumption of collaboration with international partners in support of defence and security sector reforms. On 14 July, the President stressed that his priority was to re-engage with his country's partners in support of the reform programmes in Guinea-Bissau. He travelled to Angola from 22 to 24 July to attend the summit of CPLP. The Luanda Declaration adopted at the end of the summit reiterated CPLP concerns over the evolving situation in Guinea-Bissau and stressed that military insubordination was the major obstacle to the reform of the defence and security sectors, as well as a contributing factor in the resurgence of drug trafficking. It requested a firm commitment from the national authorities to work towards improved security and political stability.

On the margins of the AU summit, held in Kampala from 19 to 27 July, President José Eduardo dos Santos of Angola, in his capacity as CPLP Chairman, stated that he would not exclude the possibility of deployment of an international mission in Guinea-Bissau to support the country's stabilization, if it were requested by the national authorities. Meanwhile, the Chairperson of the AU Commission, Jean Ping, appointed Sebastião Isata of Angola as his Special Envoy for Guinea-Bissau.

At a meeting on 5 August, CPLP and ECOWAS agreed to set up a joint task force to coordinate their actions to establish conditions for implementing the reform of the defence and security sectors. A joint delegation visited Bissau from 9 to 12 August for consultations with national authorities on prospects for enhancing stability in Guinea-Bissau. The ECOWAS Committee of the Chiefs of Defence Staff and their Angolan counterpart met in Bissau on 11 and 12 August. In their final report, they concluded that the non-implementation of key security sector reform was at the core of instability in the country. They proposed a road map envisaging the deployment of units to enhance the security of State institutions, the demobilization and reinsertion of selected members of the armed forces, and mobilization of funds for implementation and fast-tracking of the restructuring process of the armed forces and the establishment of a protection mechanism for key national figures. An extraordinary summit of ECOWAS, held in Abuja on 17 September, took note of the road map and requested President Sanha to specify the assistance required by Guinea-Bissau to protect its institutions and to help accelerate the security sector reform programme.

The International Contact Group on Guinea-Bissau, meeting on 24 September in New York, stressed the responsibility of Guinea-Bissau for maintaining stability and constitutional order, fighting impunity, respecting the rule of law and promoting national reconciliation. It welcomed the emerging partnership between ECOWAS and CPLP in support of the Government's efforts to stabilize the country and called for greater commitment in combating drug trafficking.

At the national level, the main opposition parties, notably PRS and the Republican Party for Independence and Development (PRID), rejected the concept of a stabilization mission, while civil society organizations expressed support for such a mission. The Chief of General Staff stated that, while the armed forces disagreed in principle with the deployment of an international stabilization mission, they would abide by the decision of the civilian authorities. PAIGC issued a statement endorsing the principle of a stabilization mission and requesting the Government to engage in consultations with international partners, in particular the AU, CPLP, ECOWAS, and the United Nations, to agree on a definitive proposal concerning the mandate, composition, duration and objectives of the mission. On 20 August, the Government, at a Council of Ministers meeting, accepted the principle of the proposed stabilization mission. It stressed that the deployment should first be endorsed by all State institutions concerned and the United Nations. It called for immediate negotiations with international partners on the modalities and mandate of such a stabilization mission and the road map proposed by ECOWAS.

In the aftermath of the 1 April military events and the appointment of the new Chief of General Staff, the EU Council, citing political instability and lack of respect for the rule of law in the country, announced on 2 August the closure on 30 September of its security sector reform mission in Guinea-Bissau. UNIOGBIS continued to work closely with key stakeholders to enhance coordination of assistance provided by international partners in support of the defence and security sector reform process. The Minister of Defence of Guinea-Bissau requested UNIOGBIS assistance in developing a proposal to set up an electronic platform for all security sector reform projects, creating a collective data system for stakeholders in the security sector reform process. A UN Secretariat project to provide assistance to the Government for reducing illicit small arms, initiated in 2005 and concluded in July 2010, contributed to the establishment and capacity-building of a national commission on small arms; however, the political and security situation in the country impeded full implementation of the project. The Government requested UNIOGBIS to provide assistance for improving the country's weapons and ammunition stockpile infrastructure, as well as capacity-building on weapons and ammunition stockpile management.

In the justice sector, UNDP provided technical advice for elaborating a national police for the justice sector, organic laws for judicial training centres and training regulations. It supported the formulation of the National Assembly's strategic development plan, especially on parliamentary oversight of security sector reform. UNDP and the EU financed research on the traditional justice mechanisms and customary law of six ethnic groups. UNIOGBIS made progress in implementing its mandated tasks, despite staffing challenges facing its police component. The Office continued to provide assistance for the vetting and certification process for the Public Order Police, for which a strategy paper was finalized in August and approved officially on 21 September. It was intended to help tackle impunity and increase accountability. Portugal and Brazil provided training for police personnel.

UNODC, UNIOGBIS and other international partners continued to assist Guinea-Bissau in the fight against drug trafficking, in the framework of the West Africa Coast Initiative and the ECOWAS regional action plan to address the growing problem of drug trafficking, organized crime and drug abuse in West Africa. In particular, they assessed the country's policing and internal security capabilities and identified priority needs for preventing and countering crime.

The Secretary-General was encouraged by the outcome of the meetings held by the AU, CPLP, ECOWAS, and the International Contact Group on Guinea-Bissau, as well as the emerging partnership between CPLP and ECOWAS for the stabilization of Guinea-Bissau. He remained concerned, however, about the persistence of impunity, as well as unwarranted delays in providing due legal process, as exemplified by the continued detention, without charge, of the former Chief of General Staff, Vice Admiral Zamora Induta and others. He urged Guinea-Bissau to continue to demonstrate commitment to tackling drug trafficking and organized crime, as well as threats to the stability of the country and the subregion.

Recalling that the mandate of UNIOGBIS would expire at the end of the year, the Secretary-General said that, in view of the leadership that the Mission was called upon to play in implementing security sector reform and the need for continued UN support for peacebuilding processes, he recommended that the Mission's mandate be extended for another year.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 6428], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1949(2010). The draft [S/2010/591] was submitted by Nigeria.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Guinea-Bissau, in particular resolution 1876(2009) of 26 June 2009,

Expressing its deep concern at the continuing instability in Guinea-Bissau, in particular the lack of civilian oversight and control of the armed forces and the continued detentions without due process of law that followed the events of 1 April 2010,

Stressing the fact that such developments demonstrate the fragility of the political situation and jeopardize the efforts to consolidate peace and stability as well as the rule of law in Guinea-Bissau,

Noting with deep concern the threats to national and sub-regional security and stability posed by the growth in drug trafficking and organized crime in Guinea-Bissau,

Recognizing the need to tackle the problem of drug trafficking in the countries of origin, transit and final destination through an approach of common and shared responsibility,

Reaffirming that the Government of Guinea-Bissau and all stakeholders must remain committed to national reconciliation through genuine and inclusive political dialogue, respect for constitutional order, security sector reform, the promotion of the rule of law and human rights, and the fight against impunity and illicit drug trafficking,

Stressing the importance of security sector reform, and reiterating the continued support of the United Nations and the international community for the long-term security and development of Guinea-Bissau, particularly in the fields of security sector reform, justice, and building the capacity of the Government to tackle illicit drug trafficking,

Reiterating the importance of regional and subregional cooperation in addressing the challenges faced by Guinea-Bissau, and in this regard welcoming the appointment by the Chairperson of the African Union Commission of a Special Representative for Guinea-Bissau as well as the establishment and operationalization of the African Union Liaison Office in the country,

Welcoming the efforts of the Economic Community of West African States and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries to support the reform of the defence and security sector in Guinea-Bissau, and encouraging the international community to remain engaged in addressing key challenges in the country,

Encouraging relevant stakeholders to remain engaged in addressing key governance and peacebuilding challenges in the country,

Welcoming the letter dated 20 September 2010 from President Malam Bacai Sanha to the Economic Community of West African States requesting support and assistance in the implementation of security sector reform in Guinea-Bissau,

Emphasizing that the Government of Guinea-Bissau bears the primary responsibility for security, the protection of its civilian population, peacebuilding and long-term development in the country,

Recalling its appreciation for the work of the Peacebuilding Commission and the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau in coordinating the assistance provided by the United Nations and international partners to Guinea-Bissau,

Reaffirming its full commitment to the consolidation of peace and stability in Guinea-Bissau,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau as established in paragraph 3 of resolution 1876(2009), until 31 December 2011;

2. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General of 25 October 2010 on Guinea-Bissau and of the recommendations contained therein, and welcomes the activities of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to develop a strategic workplan with appropriate benchmarks to measure and track progress on the implementation of the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau;

4. Urges the Government and all political stakeholders in Guinea-Bissau to work together to consolidate peace and stability in the country and to intensify efforts for genuine and inclusive political dialogue and national reconciliation, and requests the Secretary-General, including through his Special Representative for Guinea-Bissau, to support such efforts;

5. Urges members of the armed forces of Guinea-Bissau, in particular its leaders, to respect constitutional order, civilian rule and oversight, as well as the rule of law and human rights, to refrain from any interference in political issues, to guarantee the security of the national institutions, as well as the population in general, and to fully participate in the reform of the defence and security sector;

6. Urges Guinea-Bissau's political leaders to refrain from involving the military and the judiciary in politics, and calls upon them to use legal and peaceful means to resolve differences;

7. Calls upon the Government of Guinea-Bissau to conclude the investigations into the political assassinations of March and June 2009 and ensure that the results of the investigations and the work of the national commission of inquiry are credible, transparent and consistent with internationally agreed standards and to ensure the prosecution of those responsible for criminal acts so that they are held accountable;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to assist in the conclusion of these investigations and overall efforts to end impunity and promote the rule of law and constitutional order in Guinea-Bissau;

9. Calls upon the Government of Guinea-Bissau to ensure the prosecution, with full respect for due process, of those responsible for criminal acts, such as political assassinations and drug trafficking, and calls upon the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the European Union, the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and bilateral partners to support these efforts;

10. Reiterates its call upon the authorities of Guinea-Bissau to release immediately all those detained during the events of 1 April 2010 or prosecute them with full respect for due process and to set free those under incarceration who were recently acquitted;

11. Welcomes the partnership between the Economic Community of West African States and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, and looks forward to the final endorsement by the Economic Community of West African States of the road map developed by the Chiefs of Defence Staff to, inter alia, provide training and protection to Guinea-Bissau State institutions within the framework of security sector reform and as part of the stabilization of the country's political and security environment, and requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative, to present to the Security Council comprehensive information detailing the proposed modalities, timing and resources relating to the implementation of the Economic Community of West African States road map;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to engage with the Economic Community of West African States and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries with a view to undertaking a joint assessment of the requirements to support the rapid implementation of the road map once endorsed by the Economic Community of West African States, including how the necessary resources can best be mobilized, in coordination with relevant partners, including the States members of the African Union, the European Union, the Economic Community of West African States and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative, to extend political support for the implementation of the road map;

14. Urges the Government of Guinea-Bissau to continue to tackle corruption, including by implementing the United Nations Convention against Corruption, and to create an environment conducive to the implementation of the West Africa Coast Initiative in Guinea-Bissau, and urges relevant national entities to establish a Transnational Crime Unit in Guinea-Bissau through adequate mechanisms;

15. Urges the international community, including the Peacebuilding Commission and regional organizations such as the African Union, the European Union, the Economic Community of West African States and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, as well as bilateral partners as appropriate, to increase their political and financial support to the West Africa Coast Initiative to fight transnational organized crime and drug trafficking, which threaten peace and security in Guinea-Bissau and in the subregion; welcomes in this regard the commitment of the Economic Community of West African States with the United Nations, the European Union and other partners for the immediate implementation of the Economic Community of West African States plan of action against drug trafficking and organized crime in West Africa, including options for targeted sanctions against those individuals identified as members or supporters of the drug trafficking network, and agrees to keep the situation under active review and to consider appropriate action;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative, to continue to support national efforts to effectively coordinate international assistance for credible security sector reform under the principle of full civilian control of the military and on the basis of a comprehensive threat assessment, taking into account the work already undertaken by the European Union and other international actors in this area;

17. Requests the Peacebuilding Commission to continue to support the implementation of Guinea-Bissau's peacebuilding priorities as well as to continue to provide advice to the Council on how to remove critical obstacles to peacebuilding in Guinea-Bissau, in particular security sector reform and drug trafficking, and to keep the Council updated on progress it has made in helping to address these;

18. Encourages the Special Representative to continue to pursue efforts to enhance the integration and effectiveness of the United Nations on the ground in support of the stabilization, peace and development priorities of the Government and people of Guinea-Bissau;

19. Emphasizes the important role of women in the prevention and resolution of conflicts and in peacebuilding, as recognized in resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009, underlines that a gender perspective should be taken into account in implementing all aspects of the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau, and encourages the Office to work with national authorities in this regard, and relevant stakeholders to improve women's participation in peacebuilding;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report on progress made in implementing the present resolution and the mandate of the United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau as outlined in resolution 1876(2009), every four months, including in his first report details of progress made in undertaking the joint assessment referred to in paragraph 12 above and the implementation of the road map, once endorsed by the Economic Community of West African States;

21. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Year-end developments. In late 2010, the political leadership of Guinea-Bissau and major Government institutions made significant efforts to improve the political and security environment, as well as the country's relationship with regional and international partners, according to the Secretary-General in a later report [S/2011/73]. The Special Representative continued his efforts to promote dialogue between the President and the Prime Minister.

On 22 December, the former Chief of General Staff, Vice-Admiral Zamora Induta, and the former head of military intelligence, Colonel Samba Djaló, were released from the custody of the armed forces. The officers had been detained in connection with the events of 1 April (see p. 223). Four other officers were released, having spent 19 months in detention in connection with the assassination of former Chief of General Staff Tagme Na Waie in March 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 216].

The ECOWAS Chiefs of Defence Staff, the CPLP defence and security chiefs and CPLP representatives held an extraordinary session on 22 and 23 November in Abuja to discuss the road map developed by the two organizations in support of security sector reform in Guinea-Bissau. The participants recommended the swift mobilization of $95 million to implement a programme of reforms as part of the plan, which included the rehabilitation of two military barracks and the deployment of police training units, 100 security and close protection personnel and 3 formed police units. The twenty-eighth meeting of the ECOWAS Mediation and Security Council, in Abuja on 24 November, discussed the recommendations and the road map and called for the map's adoption and resource mobilization for its implementation. On 23 December, the AU Peace and Security Council welcomed the commitment of the Guinea-Bissau authorities to reform the defence and security sectors on the basis of the recommendations.

From October to December, UNIOGBIS and the Ministry of Defence organized awareness-raising seminars on the rule of law, human rights, gender, democracy and military justice to enhance the capacity of military officers in the process of consolidating peace and the rule of law; they also recommended the adoption of a code of conduct to prevent impunity and renew public trust in the armed forces. UNIOGBIS and UNDP continued to provide support to the National Security Sector Reform Steering Committee.

Several training courses designed by the standing police capacity were held in November and December as part of the training programme for the personnel of the future model police station in Bissau, which was under construction. The courses covered human rights and gender perspectives, criminal investigation and leadership, and focused on governance and human resources management. UNIOGBIS security sector reform advisers joined various official bodies to provide on-the-job training, mentoring, coaching and capacity-building in logistical and administrative areas. The Mission established a protection and facilitation programme for witnesses and victims—a crucial element in addressing drug trafficking; organized crime; political, sexual and gender-based violence; and other serious crimes. UNIOGBIS and the Portuguese Embassy organized a training seminar for 100 senior law enforcement officers on crime reporting and criminal investigation, in Bissau, from 2 to 6 December.

UNODC and UNIOGBIS provided assistance to national authorities as part of the West Africa Coast Initiative in support of the 2008–2011 ECOWAS regional action plan to address the growing problem of illicit drug trafficking, organized crime and drug abuse in West Africa. On 3 December, a memorandum of understanding for the establishment of a transnational crime unit to combat organized crime and drug trafficking in the country was signed by the Justice, Interior and Finance Ministers.

Peacebuilding Commission

Mission. A delegation of the Guinea-Bissau configuration of the Peacebuilding Commission visited Bissau from 18 to 20 January and issued a report on 9 February [PBC/4/GNB/4]. The purpose of the mission was to assess jointly with stakeholders progress made in implementing the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding [YUN 2009, p. 225], confirm priorities identified for the near future based on conclusions in the Framework, and exchange views on areas of support by the Peacebuilding Fund in its second allocation to the country. Interlocutors informed the mission that progress had been made in consolidating peace, and they pointed to the fact that the Government had normalized the payment of civil servants and had approved the 2010 budget on time (for the first time in recent history).

In discussions on priorities, all stakeholders stressed the importance of reconciliation that was inclusive of all sectors of society. Regarding security sector reform, the Government said that all relevant legislation had already been adopted by the Council of Ministers, although most of it was pending legislative approval. A critical measure yet to be addressed concerned reintegration processes for the military to be demobilized; another urgent issue was a pension fund for the military. The Government was considering a similar fund for the security forces.

Interlocutors emphasized the need to create an enabling environment for the private sector in order to jump-start the economy by such action as reducing the time necessary for opening new businesses. There was a demand for microcredit schemes, especially on the part of women and youth. Infrastructure bottlenecks needed to be addressed, particularly in the energy sector. The World Bank assisted the Government in providing generators. While work continued on the Gambia River Basin Development Organization hydroelectric project, the Government planned to develop alternative sources of energy. Among social issues, the Government highlighted challenges in education: more than half of the population was illiterate and current resources were insufficient to cover teachers' salaries. The need for investments in sanitation was emphasized, and the issue of child trafficking to neighbouring countries was stressed. Despite the declining trend in drug seizures in Guinea-Bissau, interlocutors pointed to the changing nature of drug trafficking in the region. Drugs were being processed in clandestine laboratories in the country, and local consumption had reportedly increased.

The exchanges with the Government and other stakeholders revealed that the priorities in the Strategic Framework (see below) remained valid. The launching of the pension fund for the military was seen as a matter of utmost priority.

Peacebuilding Strategic Framework. The Peacebuilding Commission, on 9 February, issued conclusions and recommendations of its first review [PBC/4/GNB/3] of the Strategic Framework for Peacebuilding in Guinea-Bissau. Noting the recent positive steps taken by the Government, the Commission made recommendations to the Government as well as to itself on future directions. It called on the Government to implement security sector and defence strategy as a matter of priority, in particular by expediting the creation of a pension fund and disarmament, demobilization and reintegration schemes; address cross-border security threats by cooperating with neighbouring countries and regional actors such as the AU and ECOWAS; continue efforts towards reforming the justice sector; expedite investigations into the 2009 political assassinations; consolidate progress in public finances; create an enabling environment for increased private investment; address bottlenecks in infrastructure, in particular in the energy sector; address the socioeconomic challenges before the country, especially the concerns of youth, women and other vulnerable groups; finalize a study on a public pension fund; create a data centre for the management of public sector information; enhance dialogue and reconciliation among political parties and national stakeholders; and integrate a gender perspective in peacebuilding efforts.

The Peacebuilding Commission was urged to enhance coordination among partners in security sector reform; prioritize supporting the Government in fighting drug trafficking and organized crime, including through the West Africa Coast Initiative; support the Government in justice sector reform and strengthening judicial mechanisms and institutions; assist the Government in consolidating progress in public reform; support an inclusive national dialogue among political parties and stakeholders; and support the Government in integrating a gender dimension in all peacebuilding efforts.

Report of Peacebuilding Commission. The Peacebuilding Commission, reporting on its fourth session and its work in late 2009 and in 2010 [A/65/701-S/2011/41], reviewed the work of its Guinea-Bissau configuration. In 2010, visits were made to the country by the Chair (17–20 January), a Commission delegation (15–21 January) and meetings of the configuration (8 February, 26 April, 16 July, 5 and 22 November).

The configuration devoted several sessions to a discussion on the implications of the events of 1 April for the Commission's engagement with the country. On 5 May, the Chair, in a letter to the Foreign Minister of Guinea-Bissau, expressed deep concern at the events and called for the authorities to ensure that the aftermath of the events was addressed in a manner consistent with constitutional norms and the rule of law. In reply, the Minister underlined the commitment of the Government to the peacebuilding process and urged the Commission to continue to support peacebuilding priorities, in particular security sector reform and the establishment of a pension fund for the military. At a meeting in New York with the configuration, the Minister indicated that Guinea-Bissau could not tackle the problems of security sector reform and drug trafficking by itself. Members of the configuration stressed the need for civilian control of the armed forces. Members also indicated that the type and level of the Commission's engagement should be calibrated to the political situation.

The Commission had planned a high-level meeting for June to mobilize resources for the launch of a military pension fund, but the events of 1 April caused a change in plans. The Commission, however, continued to advocate for increased resources to meet the priority needs for peacebuilding. The Chair wrote a letter dated 1 December to members of the configuration requesting them to support, at IMF and the World Bank, the decision to declare that Guinea-Bissau had attained the completion point of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Debt Initiative, in line with the recommendation of those institutions. That decision was taken by the IMF and the World Bank Executive Boards on 13 and 16 December, respectively.

During the reporting period (1 July 2009–31 December 2010), the Peacebuilding Fund made an initial $6 million allocation of funds to support projects in three priority areas: the rehabilitation of selected prisons; the rehabilitation of military barracks; and youth professional training and employment. The Fund supported a $1.5 million project aimed at empowering young people through special vocational training and a microcredit scheme. Since December 2008, a total of 145 young people had been trained in civil construction, trade, electricity, auto repair, sewing, refrigeration and air conditioning. Twenty-one business plans were prepared by young beneficiaries selected for a microfinance scheme.

Participation in configuration. Through an exchange of letters on 21 June and 2 July [PBC/4/OC/7], the Chairperson of the Peacebuilding Commission informed Equatorial Guinea that it was invited to participate in meetings of the Guinea-Bissau configuration.

UNIOGBIS

The United Nations Integrated Peacebuilding Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNIOGBIS) was established on 1 January 2010 as the successor to the United Nations Peacebuilding Support Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNOGBIS) by Security Council resolution 1876(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 219]. The original Office had been established in 1999 by a decision of the Secretary-General and supported by Security Council resolution 1233(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 140], and its mandate was revised in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 229] and 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 230]. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of UNIOGBIS was Joseph Mutaboba (Rwanda).

With a reduced staff, the new Office was assigned the following key tasks: strengthening national capacities to maintain constitutional order, public security and the rule of law; assisting the Peacebuilding Commission in addressing critical peacebuilding needs in the country; supporting law enforcement and criminal justice systems; supporting inclusive political dialogue and national reconciliation; providing strategic and technical support to the Government in security sector reform; assisting national efforts to combat drug trafficking, organized crime and human trafficking; supporting efforts to reduce small arms proliferation; promoting human rights; mainstreaming a gender perspective in peacebuilding; and enhancing cooperation with regional organizations and international assistance.

Financing

In an October report [A/65/328/Add.3] dealing with estimated requirements for 2011 for special political missions grouped under thematic cluster III (UN offices, peacebuilding support offices, integrated offices and commissions), the Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for UNIOGBIS in the amount of $18,440,100 for 2011, which ACABQ recommended for approval [A/65/602].

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1433), the General Assembly endorsed the recommendations of ACABQ and approved the budgets for 29 special political missions, including the UNIOGBIS budget, under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for 2011.

Cameroon–Nigeria

Cameroon and Nigeria continued to cooperate in implementing the 2002 ruling of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) [YUN 2002, p. 1265] on the land and maritime boundary between the two countries through the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission. The United Nations Office for West Africa provided support to the Commission's fieldwork in the demarcation of the border by constructing and emplacing cement pillars. By the end of the year, the two countries agreed on 1,466 kilometres of the total length of an estimated 1,950 kilometre land boundary, not taking into account an additional section of 95 kilometres currently being assessed. Some 175 kilometres of boundary were permanently marked by pillars. Progress had slowed due to the geographical terrain becoming more difficult to access and irregular meetings of the parties.

The Follow-up Committee on the situation in the Bakassi Peninsula held meetings in Geneva in July and in October. The parties considered and endorsed the reports to the Peninsula by the joint Observers group in April and October.

Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission

The Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission—the body established by the Secretary-General in 2002 at the request of the Presidents of Cameroon and Nigeria to facilitate the implementation of the ICJ ruling on their border dispute [YUN 2003, p. 8]—was responsible for the demarcation of the land and maritime boundaries between the two countries; the withdrawal of civil administration, military and police forces and a transfer of authority in relevant areas along the boundary; the demilitarization of the Bakassi peninsula; the protection of the rights of the affected populations; the development of projects to promote joint economic ventures and cross-border cooperation; and the reactivation of the five-member Lake Chad Basin Commission (Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Niger, Nigeria), created in 1964 for the regulation and planning of the uses of the Lake and other natural resources of the conventional basin. In 2007, all four sections of the ICJ ruling had been resolved to the satisfaction of the two parties: the withdrawal and transfer of authority in the Lake Chad area in 2003; the withdrawal and transfer of authority along the land border in 2004; the agreement on the modalities of withdrawal and transfer of authority in the Bakassi peninsula in 2006; and the agreement on the delineation of the maritime boundary in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 232]. In 2008, the transfer of authority from Nigeria to Cameroon was finalized [YUN 2008, p. 231], and in 2009 the emplacement of the boundary demarcation pillars was begun [YUN 2009, p. 226].

The Mixed Commission in 2010 continued its work on the delimitation and demarcation process. Construction of permanent cement pillars also continued in 2010.

At its twenty-sixth session held in Abuja on 23 and 24 September, the Mixed Commission reviewed the progress in the demarcation process. The process, at that time, had resulted in the onsite installation of 388 boundary pillars constructed with the support of Trust Fund resources. The parties, however, had expressed concern over the cost of the pillar emplacement work coordinated by the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS). The United Nations was preparing an updated estimate of the total cost to be reviewed at its next session in January 2011. The Mixed Commission also adopted recommendations for the formulation of a "resource clause" on off-shore petroleum fields straddling the maritime boundary, paving the way for cross-boundary cooperation on oil and gas.

Regarding the Bakassi peninsula, the thirteenth and fourteenth meetings of the Follow-up Committee were held in Geneva on 5 and 6 July and 28 and 29 October, respectively. The parties endorsed the reports of the visits to the peninsula by the joint Observers Group from 5 to 7 April and 18 to 20 October. The Committee underscored the atmosphere of peace prevailing in the peninsula among the communities, as well as between the inhabitants and the security and defence forces in their respective areas.

As part of the efforts to promote confidence-building measures among the affected populations in the Bakassi peninsula and the Lake Chad area, the Secretary-General's Special Representative convened a meeting in Dakar with the UN Resident Coordinators in Cameroon and Nigeria, on 6 November, which resulted in organizing a meeting between the two UN country teams, scheduled for 7 December in Abuja.

Activities. By mid-2010, Cameroon and Nigeria had agreed on a total distance of 1,463 kilometres of their joint border, which was estimated to be 1,950 kilometres, according to the Secretary-General in his June report on UNOWA [S/2010/324]. Pillar emplacement activities, under the management of UNOPS, continued in the first half of the year, with some 175 kilometres of boundary permanently demarcated. Remaining work would depend on ensuring funding from extrabudgetary sources for the remaining demarcation contracts. The commitment of Cameroon and Nigeria to maintain good neighbourly relations was reinforced by the attendance of President Goodluck Jonathan of Nigeria at the National Day celebration of Cameroon on 20 May. On 27 May, President Paul Biya of Cameroon sent his Minister-Delegate for Justice to Nigeria to discuss matters of common interest, including all pending issues related to withdrawal and transfer of authority in the Bakassi Peninsula.

At that time, the Secretary-General noted the progress achieved so far by the two countries in the demarcation process and commended the two Presidents for their efforts aimed at building good neighbourly relations. He asserted that the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission and the Follow-up Committee would continue to play an active role in support of the process with a view to overcoming the remaining challenges and paving the way for the conclusion of the unprecedented example of peaceful conflict resolution and peacebuilding.

By a letter of 7 December [S/2010/637], the Secretary-General updated the Security Council on the progress made by the Cameroon-Nigeria Mixed Commission over the year. Progress continued to be made in demarcation of the land boundary; the two countries agreed on 1,466 kilometres, not taking into account an additional section of 95 kilometres currently being assessed. Progress had slowed due to the geographical terrain becoming more difficult to access and irregular meetings of the parties. The rate of implementation of demarcation contracts funded through extrabudgetary resources increased through 2010. UNOPS continued demarcation activities, but faced constraints, including incomplete provision of technical specifications for pillar locations and security incidents involving border communities.

The Follow-up Committee, in addition to its meetings in Geneva, sent observer visits to the Bakassi Peninsula. The Committee noted the efforts undertaken to sensitize the populations on fishing rules and regulations as well as on wood exploitation and security, along with the readiness of the Cameroonian authorities to undertake investigations into any alleged incidents brought to their attention.

Although it was difficult to predict an exact date for the completion of the Mixed Commission's work, the Secretary-General expected demarcation activities to be completed by 2015. The feasibility of completion by that date would depend on the ability of the parties to reach agreement on all areas under discussion and the availability of the required additional extrabudgetary funding. He recalled that from 2004 to 2010, the Mixed Commission had been funded through the UN regular budget, with support provided in kind for the substantive and technical work in addition to the logistical support provided by Cameroon and Nigeria and voluntary contributions from a number of countries. Given the cost-effectiveness of the mission and the important tasks remaining to help advance the peaceful implementation of the ICJ ruling, the Secretary-General requested resources from the regular budget for the Commission's work in 2011.

On 10 December [S/2010/638], the Security Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention to continue support to the Mixed Commission and urged the members of the Mixed Commission to work with international donors to seek further voluntary contributions.

Financing

In an October report [A/65/328/Add.3] dealing with estimated requirements for 2011 for special political missions grouped under thematic cluster III (UN offices, peacebuilding support offices, integrated offices and commissions), the Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for the Mixed Commission in the amount of $8,714,200 for 2011, which ACABQ recommended for approval [A/65/602].

On 24 December, in section XIII of resolution 65/259 (see p. 1433), the General Assembly endorsed the recommendations of ACABQ and approved the budgets for 29 special political missions, including the Mixed Commission's budget, under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for 2011.

Guinea

At the beginning of the year, President Moussa Dadis Camara of Guinea remained in Morocco where he was receiving medical treatment, having been wounded in an assassination attempt on 3 December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 231]. Mr. Camara had established a National Council for Democracy and Development (CNDD), which ruled the country with a group of military officers, and in his absence, Vice President Sékouba Konaté served as interim President.

In mid-January, Mr. Camara and General Konaté met in Ouagadougou with President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, who acted as mediator in the political discussions on Guinea. He led the talks on finding a way to achieve a timely and peaceful restoration of the normal constitutional order through a civilian-led transition. In the Joint Declaration issued at the end of the meeting, the CNDD leaders set out a list of principles for planning a new government. They agreed to a return to civilian rule in Guinea by elections within six months, and that the current leaders of a transitional government would not be eligible to run for office. On 21 January, Jean-Marie Doré was appointed Prime Minister of the transitional Government and a unity Government was designated on 15 February. Those moves were welcomed by the Security Council, which called on the international community to support the Guinean authorities in regard to comprehensive security and justice sectors reform.

The Secretary-General described the situation in Guinea as having evolved positively following the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration of 15 January, which provided for General Konaté to serve as interim head of State during a six-month transition. The United Nations, in particular UNOWA and the Secretary-

General's Special Representative, joined regional organizations including the AU and ECOWAS, and other organizations and individual countries, in guiding and assisting the transitional government through the process leading to presidential elections. The organizations and interested countries acted together as the International Contact Group for Guinea and issued a communiqué on the situation.

Presidential elections were scheduled for June and July—the first democratic multiparty election in the history of the country. The first round of elections was held on 27 June and a run-off was required. After several postponements amid allegations that the Independent National Electoral Commission had acted unfairly, the run-off election was held on 7 November. Provisional results were released shortly thereafter and were declared by the candidate Cellou Dalein Diallo to be fraudulent. Violent protests broke out followed by the use of military forces to dispel the crowds, leaving ten people dead and many more injured. On 3 December, the Supreme Court confirmed Alpha Condé as President-elect, and later Mr. Diallo announced that he accepted the decision.

Political and security developments

Ouagadougou Joint Declaration. President Moussa Dadis Camara of Guinea, Acting President (Vice President) Sékouba Konaté of Guinea and President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso, in his role as Mediator in the crisis in Guinea, issued a joint declaration on 15 January, which they transmitted to the Security Council three days later [S/2010/34]. Expressing their resolve to promote reconciliation among Guineans and to establish the democratic rule of law in the country, the signatories, having held consultations on 13 and 14 January, listed measures they agreed on with a view to a peaceful transition in Guinea: respect for public freedoms, including freedom of the press and opinion; security of individuals and property; reorganization and reform of the defence and security forces; establishment of a National Transitional Council, a deliberative political body presided over by a religious figure and composed of 101 members; appointment of a Prime Minister and Chairman of the Council of Ministers from within Guinea's Forum des Forces Vives (the opposition to CNDD); formation of a Government of National Unity; revision of the electoral rolls; organization of presidential elections within six months; proscribing members of the transitional government and active defence and security force personnel from being candidates in the presidential elections; use of civilian and military observers from ECOWAS; and establishment of an entity for monitoring, assessment and support. The signatories called for the international community to lend support for implementing the measures.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 February [meeting 6272], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/3 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the recent positive developments in Guinea, while remaining concerned about the situation. It reaffirms the statement by its President of 28 October 2009. It looks forward to the timely restoration of the normal constitutional order in a peaceful manner through a civilian-led transition.

The Council reiterates its support for the efforts of the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union. It commends President Blaise Compaoré of Burkina Faso for his mediation efforts and welcomes the communiqués issued on 26 January 2010 by the International Contact Group on Guinea and on 3 February 2010 by the African Union summit.

The Council welcomes the Joint Declaration of Ouagadougou of 15 January 2010, which, consistent with the proposals made on 6 January 2010 by the interim President, General Sékouba Konaté, provides, in particular, for the establishment of a National Unity Government led by a civilian Prime Minister designated by the opposition, the holding of elections within six months, the commitment that the Head of State of the transition, the members of the Conseil National pour la démocratie et le développement, the Prime Minister, the members of the National Unity Government and the defence and security forces in active service will not stand in the forthcoming presidential elections.

The Council welcomes further the appointment on 21 January 2010 of Mr. Jean-Marie Doré as Prime Minister and the designation of a National Unity Government on 15 February 2010. It calls upon all Guinean stakeholders to implement the Joint Declaration of Ouagadougou in full and to engage actively in the transition towards the restoration of the normal constitutional order through the holding of elections within six months. It calls upon the international community to bring its support to the Guinean authorities led by interim President Sékouba Konaté and Prime Minister Jean-Marie Doré, including with regard to comprehensive security and justice sector reform, upon request from the Guinean authorities.

The Council recalls that it strongly condemned the violence committed on 28 September 2009 and its aftermath. It urges the national authorities to prevent any further violence and to uphold the rule of law, including the promotion and protection of and respect for human rights and due process, and stresses their obligations towards the victims and witnesses. It emphasizes the responsibility of States to comply with their relevant obligations to end impunity.

The Council commends the work of the International Commission of Inquiry established by the Secretary-General and supported by the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union to investigate the facts and circumstances of the events of 28 September 2009 in Guinea, consistent with its mandate. It takes note positively of the submission by the Commission of its report.

The Council notes that the International Contact Group on Guinea has invited relevant international stakeholders, including the Economic Community of West African States, the African Union and the Mediator, to consider deploying, as soon as possible and in consultation with the Guinean authorities, a possible joint civil-military mission in Guinea with a view to discussing modalities for defence and security sector reform and contributing to security conditions for the electoral process. It encourages them to plan for such a possible mission.

The Council reiterates the call made in its resolution 1888(2009) to increase the representation of women in mediation processes and decision-making processes with regard to conflict resolution and peacebuilding.

The Council expresses its intention to remain seized of the situation and to react, as appropriate, to any threat or action against the transition. It requests the Secretary-General to continue to update it, as appropriate, on the situation on the ground, the potential implications for the subregion, the fight against impunity, the efforts of the Economic Community of West African States and the African Union and the actions of the United Nations Secretariat.

International Contact Group. Guinea, in a 25 February letter to the Security Council [S/2010/121], transmitted the final communiqué of the eleventh meeting of the International Contact Group on Guinea, held in Conakry, Guinea on 22 February. The Group, established in 2009 at the consultative meeting on the situation in Guinea [YUN 2009, p. 228], was composed of the United Nations, the AU, ECOWAS and a number of other regional organizations and several countries. Following presentations by the Transitional Prime Minister, the Chairperson of the National Transitional Council, the spokesperson of Forces vives, and various other leaders of the transition Government, the Group assessed the evolution of the political and security situation in Guinea since its tenth meeting, held in Addis Ababa on 26 January. The Group welcomed the formation of the board of the National Transitional Council, and the designation of the President and Vice-Presidents of the National Transitional Council, as well as the finalization of the electoral budget, and the proposal of an electoral calendar by the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC).

The Group congratulated all stakeholders in the Guinea transition for their commitment to the process and encouraged them to ensure a transition culminating in credible presidential and legislative elections. It commended President Compaoré for his work as ECOWAS Facilitator towards a successful transition, and welcomed the fact that the parties to the transition agreed to comply with all provisions of the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration as the guiding instrument for the transition. The Group urged stakeholders to proceed with designating the members of the National Transitional Council and provide it with a budget as early as possible.

The Group noted the work by INEC on holding elections, particularly the completion of voter registration. It urged all stakeholders to use that data for finalizing the voters register for the presidential elections proposed for 27 June. It encouraged the stakeholders to adopt a timetable consistent with the one agreed in the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration and urged the authorities to carry out reforms of the constitution and electoral code before the presidential elections. The Group commended the commencement of assistance for defence and security sector reform by the ECOWAS-AU-UN mission led by General Lamine Cissé. The Group urged ECOWAS, the AU, the United Nations, the EU and others to agree on the modalities for civil-military assistance as a contribution to securing the electoral process, and it invited the authorities to request as soon as possible deployment of international election observer missions. In seeking international support for economic recovery, the Group identified the demilitarization of the Territorial Administration and the reform of the justice sector as priority tasks. In light of the progress already achieved towards restoring constitutional order, it invited those organizations that had imposed sanctions on certain Guineans, including those relating to the September 2009 events [YUN 2009, p. 229], to reconsider their stand. The Group appreciated the commitment of the Head of the Transition, General Konaté, to conduct the transition within the time frame agreed in the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration.

Reports of Secretary-General (June, December).

The Secretary-General, in his June and December reports on UNOWA [S/2010/324, S/2010/614], described the situation in Guinea as having evolved positively following the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration of 15 January, which provided for General Konaté to serve as interim head of State during a six-month transition to elections. All the transitional institutions, including the Government of National Unity headed by a Prime Minister and tasked with preparing the presidential elections, and the National Transitional Council, charged with revising the Constitution and the electoral code, were established by 15 March. General Konaté issued a decree on 6 May confirming 27 June for the first round of presidential elections, as proposed by INEC. He also declared that Guineans in the diaspora should participate in the elections. The revised Constitution and the new electoral code were promulgated by decree in May, thus completing the legal framework for the election. On 24 May, INEC published the list of eligible candidates. Twenty-four of 42 candidates were declared fit to contest the presidential elections. On 18 May, a special force comprising 16,000 national police and gendarmerie members was created by decree to provide security during the elections.

The thirty-seventh ordinary session of the ECOWAS Authority of Heads of State and Government and the International Contact Group on Guinea, which held four meetings during the first half of 2010, encouraged Guinean stakeholders to continue with the transition and called for international assistance to stabilize the situation. They urged Guineans to ensure that those responsible for the massacre of 28 September 2009 were held accountable. They called for a review of regional (ECOWAS and AU) and international sanctions. ECOWAS directed its Commission's President to revise its list targeting only those found to have been directly involved in the massacre, or impeding the implementation of the Ouagadougou Declaration. At all meetings of the International Contact Group on Guinea, the Secretary-General's Special Representative called for increased engagement of the international community, particularly during the transition, to ensure that tensions did not disrupt the process of returning to constitutional order.

On 16 January, the Special Representative and his counterparts from ECOWAS and the AU undertook a mission to Ouagadougou, during which they persuaded the former President, Captain Dadis Camara, not to return to Guinea, thus allowing for a smooth implementation of the Ouagadougou Joint Declaration. Nevertheless, by the time the International Contact Group met in early April, tension had developed between the Prime Minister and the President of the National Transitional Council over the adoption of the Constitution and the date of the presidential election. To address those difficulties, the Special Representative visited Conakry on 22 April for discussions with the Prime Minister and the President of the Council, and initiated a joint ECOWAS-AU-UN mission to Conakry on 29 and 30 April in an effort to preempt obstacles to the presidential election. Further discussions in early May led to the National Transitional Council adopting the draft Constitution by consensus. The new Constitution and the electoral law were promulgated by decree and signed into law on 7 and 24 May, respectively.

The Government of Guinea convened on 24 and 25 May a workshop on security during elections with the support of UNOWA and UNDP. The meeting discussed Guinea's national plan to provide security during the presidential election and concluded with practical recommendations. On 9 April, the Special Representative met with women leaders of civil society organizations in Guinea and from the Mano River Union region to encourage them to play a positive role in support of the transition and in promoting violence-free elections.

Guinea held a democratic multiparty presidential election on 27 June, for the first time in the history of the country. The Secretary-General reported that the conduct of the poll was peaceful and credible. Out of 24 candidates who contested the election, two leading candidates emerged: Cellou Dalein Diallo of the Union des Forces Démocratiques de Guinée (UFDG), and Alpha Condé of the Rassemblement du Peuple de Guinée (RPG), claiming 43.69 per cent and 18.25 per cent of the vote, respectively. The run-off, scheduled to take place on 18 July, was repeatedly postponed due to lack of consensus among the major stakeholders, especially between the two leading candidates, on the timing and modalities for conducting the second round and on technical and logistical constraints. During the period of the election, the United Nations deployed high-level electoral and mediation advisers in Guinea to provide support to regional mediation efforts in collaboration with the UN Resident Coordinator. An ECOWAS-AU-UN mission visited Guinea from 19 to 20 August and reviewed progress towards holding the run-off, which was rescheduled for 19 September, as well as difficulties encountered during the first round.

The two candidates for the run-off signed a memorandum of understanding on 3 September in Ouagadougou under the aegis of President Compaoré of Burkina Faso, the ECOWAS Mediator in Guinea, in which they undertook to work for free, transparent and democratic elections, and to preserve social cohesion and national unity. On 2 and 3 September, the International Contact Group for Guinea reviewed with national stakeholders progress and challenges in the run-off preparatory process, including the issue of cooperation between INEC and Ministry of Territorial Administration and Political Affairs. On 4 September, an AU-ECOWAS-UN delegation briefed President Compaoré in Ouagadougou on developments in Guinea and on the conclusions of the meeting of the International Contact Group for Guinea, stressing the crucial role that the ECOWAS Mediator could play in ensuring a credible and peaceful transition in Guinea.

Security Council statement. On 17 September [SC/10035], the Security Council expressed its concern at clashes that occurred on 11 and 12 September in Guinea, regretted the postponement of the second round of the presidential elections, and urged the Independent National Electoral Commission to set a new date and organize it as soon as possible.

As the Secretary-General further reported, the ECOWAS extraordinary summit on Guinea, held in Abuja on 17 September and attended by the Special Representative, issued a communiqué calling for setting, without further delay, a date for the run-off of the presidential election. It called on the two candidates to abide by the memorandum of understanding they had signed on 3 September. Disagreements over the credibility and leadership of INEC and increased tensions led to another ECOWAS-AU-UN mission to Conakry, facilitated by UNOWA, from 18 to 20 September, to help guide the transition process. The delegation secured a commitment from the two candidates that they would show restraint and call for calm among their supporters, as well as a pledge to establish regular channels of communication with one another. The interim President, General Konaté, insisted that the candidates and INEC agree on a run-off date.

Following consultations among the Secretary-General, the Mediator for Guinea, the ECOWAS-AU-UN mission members, the ECOWAS Chair and others on moving the process forward, General Konaté announced on 2 October the establishment of a follow-up commission to support INEC in organizing the election. On 5 October, he issued a decree fixing 24 October as the new date for the run-off, but that date could not be met owing to a number of issues, including divergent views on INEC leadership. As the differences persisted, General Konaté appointed the adviser to INEC of the Organization of la Francophonie, retired General Siaka Toumani Sangaré of Mali, as the new Chair of INEC. The appointment was welcomed by the two candidates.

The Special Representative travelled to Conakry on 13 October to discuss the potential for election-related violence with stakeholders, including the interim President and Prime Minister. His interlocutors affirmed the determination of the Government to maintain law and order during and after the election.

Having consulted all stakeholders, the new INEC Chair proposed 31 October as the date for the run-off. Upon consideration, General Konaté set 7 November as the date, and the voting took place as scheduled. During the ballot counting, Mr. Diallo's camp began challenging the credibility of the process, alleging fraud in some constituencies. Although the election was held in an orderly manner, tensions remained high over the release of provisional results by INEC, which were contested by Mr. Diallo. The release of provisional results was followed by days of protests, mainly by supporters of Mr. Diallo, resulting in a number of deaths, injuries and the destruction of property, amid allegations of the excessive use of force by members of the armed forces. Calm returned after the Government declared a state of emergency on 17 November.

The Special Representative returned to Conakry from 11 to 16 November to help manage post-election tensions. He remained in touch with all stakeholders, especially the two candidates, and urged them to preserve peace, accept the results and resort to legal means for their claims. With other members of the International Contact Group, he met Mr. Diallo to express concerns about Mr. Diallo's statement that he would not accept the provisional results until his claims were processed by INEC. The INEC Chair assured Mr. Diallo that all claims had already been examined and that the results correctly reflected the votes cast.

On 16 November, INEC announced the full provisional results: Alpha Condé won with 52.52 per cent of the votes against 47.48 per cent for Cellou Dalein Diallo. UFDG, led by Mr. Diallo, rejected the results and announced it would challenge the results at the Supreme Court. The Special Representative met with Mr. Diallo and urged him to appeal to his supporters to exercise restraint. The Special Representative also met with the interim President and expressed concern over reported use of excessive force by the security forces during street protests. For his part, the interim President requested the Special Representative to assist in promoting dialogue between the two candidates to ensure they would not renege on earlier commitments that the winner would work towards forming a government of national unity. On 3 December, the Supreme Court of Guinea declared Mr. Condé the winner of the presidential election. At the invitation of Mr. Diallo, the AU-UN delegation attended a public gathering, during which Mr. Diallo declared that he accepted the Supreme Court ruling.

Mauritania

In 2010, the United Nations Office for West Africa (UNOWA) continued to follow the political situation in Mauritania, as efforts continued to be made by national stakeholders to achieve a consensus on the conditions and modalities for national dialogue and reconciliation after the election and installation of President Mohamed Ould Abdel Aziz in 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 232]. As the Secretary-General noted in his December report on UNOWA activities [S/2010/614], a series of meetings in June and July between President Ould Abdel Aziz and opposition figures raised expectations for a productive dialogue. Concrete outcomes from that initiative, however, did not materialize.

During a national address on 4 August, the President asserted that his administration had taken up both issues of good governance and socio-economic challenges, and that there was no political crisis in the country that would justify a dialogue with the opposition. Two days later, the Coordination of Democratic Opposition (COD) accused the Government of undermining the Dakar Framework Agreement, signed on 4 June 2009 by the three main political groups in Mauritania [YUN 2009, p. 232]. Opposition leaders accused the President of reneging on his previous commitments to national political dialogue.

The Secretary-General's Special Representative for West Africa travelled to Nouakchott on 1 September to meet with national stakeholders to discuss the national dialogue process, insecurity and terrorism in the Sahel, and prospects for regional cooperation on those issues. The talks confirmed that mistrust between the Government and the opposition remained, and that there was no consensus on the terms of reference envisaged for national dialogue. The opposition insisted on the need to implement the Dakar Agreement, while the Government wanted no reference to that agreement.

Horn of Africa

Sudan

In 2010 in the Sudan, the parties to the 2005 Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) made progress on a number of fronts. National elections successfully conducted in April marked a milestone in CPA implementation. Discussions on holding the Southern Sudan and Abyei referendums continued, with the parties showing renewed commitment to negotiating the post-referendum process and structure. While preparations for the referendum in Southern Sudan, scheduled for 9 January 2011, gained momentum with the establishment of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission, arrangements for the Abyei referendum were behind schedule, exacerbating an already tense situation. Registration for the Southern Sudan Referendum commenced in November, and by the end of December, more than 3.8 million voters had registered. In September, the Secretary-General appointed a panel to monitor the referendum processes in Southern Sudan and Abyei.

The United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS) continued to support the resolution of core CPA issues. In April, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNMIS for another 12 months.

The commitment of the international community to CPA implementation and to a peaceful, comprehensive and inclusive resolution of the situation in Darfur was reaffirmed by a Security Council mission to the region in October. Earlier in the year, there were some indicators of progress in Darfur, as the Governments of the Sudan and Chad took an important step forward to improve their relations by signing a protocol on border security, and in February and March, respectively, the Government of the Sudan signed separate agreements with the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM) and the newly formed Liberation and Justice Movement (LJM), setting parameters for peace negotiations. The elections in April were conducted without any major incidents, but afterwards violence flared up again, making May the deadliest month since the establishment of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID). Tribal conflict, displacements, criminality and human rights violations drove tens of thousands of Darfurians from their homes.

With a view to enhance civil society participation in the peace process, UNAMID and the Government of Qatar jointly organized in Doha in July the second conference of Darfur civil society representatives. In September, the Government of the Sudan endorsed a new political and security strategy for Darfur aimed at facilitating participation and enhancing local ownership of the peace process, to be supplemented by socio-economic development and support for the return of the some 2 million internally displaced persons (IDPs). In December, JEM agreed to resume negotiations with the Government on a ceasefire, while relations between the Government and the Sudan Liberation Army-Minni Minawi (SLA-MM) deteriorated to the point that Minni Minawi was declared an enemy of the Government.

In July, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNAMID for one year, and later strengthened the arms embargo to ensure that States provided the necessary end-user documentation to prevent breaches of prior resolutions when exporting arms to the Sudan.

Political and security developments

The parties to the 2005 Comprehensive Peace Agreement (CPA) [YUN 2005, p. 301] made progress on a number of fronts, including resolution of the long-standing dispute over the results of the 2008 census [YUN 2008, p. 239] and advances in the north-south border demarcation. Discussions around arrangements for the holding of the Southern Sudan and Abyei referendums continued, with the parties showing renewed commitment to negotiating issues related to the post-referendum process and structure.

Communications. On 5 February [S/2010/73], the Sudan informed the President of the Security Council that it wished to have retained on the list of matters of which the Council was seized the "Letter dated 20 February 1958 from the Representative of the Sudan addressed to the Secretary-General" [YUN 1958, p. 541], listed in the Secretary-General's summary statement of 21 January [S/2010/10] as item 59. On 9 March [S/2010/146], the Sudan transmitted a 3 March resolution by the Council of the League of Arab States (LAS) expressing strong support for peace, unity, territorial integrity and development in the Sudan.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In an April report [S/2010/168] submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 1590(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], the Secretary-General provided an assessment of the overall situation in the Sudan since his January report [YUN 2009, p. 241], as well as an update on the activities of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS) through 20 March. The report covered key aspects of

CPA implementation, including preparations for the forthcoming national elections, scheduled for 11 to 13 April, and the referendums, scheduled for 9 January 2011, as well as issues related to Abyei, Southern Kordofan, wealth-sharing, border demarcation and other peace agreements in the Sudan.

According to the Secretary-General, preparations for the national elections (see p. 240) dominated the political scene. While the parties to the CPA made important progress in implementing the Agreement, particularly in regard to the elections, much remained to be done to prepare for the referendums.

On 10 February 2010, Government of Southern Sudan President Salva Kiir established the Southern Sudan 2011 Taskforce, chaired by the Government of Southern Sudan Vice-President Riek Machar, which would act as a planning team for referendum and post-referendum arrangements. On 20 February, the Presidency of the Government of National Unity issued a resolution urging the parties to the CPA to assure the Sudanese people that the parties would reach agreement on the post-referendum arrangements, preferably before the conduct of the referendum, and to mobilize support from and agree on a well-defined role of the international community. The parties to the Agreement had not, however, agreed on a structure, mechanism or timetable. The National Congress Party (NCP) announced in mid-March that the parties had agreed on a structure for the post-referendum negotiations. Regarding UNMIS support for the referendums, an assessment mission led by the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) was deployed to the Sudan from 18 to 30 March to evaluate the Mission needs. Progress on technical preparations for the referendums was hampered by delays in the appointment of posts in the Southern Sudan and Abyei Referendum Commissions.

Insecurity prevented progress on the physical demarcation of the Abyei boundary in accordance with the Permanent Court of Arbitration award of 22 July 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 238]. Humanitarian operations in the northern portions of the Abyei Area were significantly impeded, after the Abyei Security Management Team declared the Misseriya-dominated villages of Dumboloya, Um Khaer and Shegei to be restricted areas for UN and NGO civilian movements and operations, following a complaint from Misseriya leadership to the Abyei Area Joint Military Committee regarding UNMIS use of armoured personnel carriers. Misseriya elements continued to deny UNMIS Joint Monitoring Teams access to some locations.

Popular consultations in Southern Kordofan, to be conducted by the elected State Legislature, were seriously behind the schedule set out in the CPA; with the delay in elections in Southern Kordofan, there was a pressing need to find ways of moving that work forward.

The issue of border demarcation was accorded special attention by the parties during the reporting period. In February, the Technical ad hoc Border Committee expanded the number of contested areas from three to five, adding Kaka Town (along the border of northern Upper Nile State) and the area on either side of the Bahr al-Arab/Kiir River (on the border between Southern Darfur and Northern Bahr El Ghazal). Also in February, the President instructed the Border Committee to commence demarcation from the border with Ethiopia to the meeting point of the Blue Nile and Sennar States. UNMIS continued to provide technical support to the Border Committee.

In Eastern Sudan, the political and security situation remained calm, but minimal progress was made in implementing the outstanding benchmarks of the 2006 Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement [YUN 2006, p. 264], including the reintegration of ex-combatants under the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) programme; funding to the Eastern Sudan Recovery and Development Fund; and representation of Eastern Sudanese in the national civil service. Differences were widening among the Agreement signatories in the run-up to the elections as they competed as distinct political parties, and there had been several complaints of harassment and intimidation.

As to the Darfur peace process, the Government of the Sudan and the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM) on 23 February finalized and signed a framework agreement, which was facilitated under the sponsorship of the President of Chad, Idris Déby, and which committed the two parties to an immediate ceasefire, release of prisoners and negotiation of a final agreement by 15 March. Despite lack of progress in the negotiations, the ceasefire between JEM and the Government was respected. Following the announcement of the creation of the Liberation and Justice Movement (LJM) by the Sudan Liberation Movement (SLM)-Revolutionary Forces and three movements from the Road Map Group in Doha, Qatar, on 23 February, the Government of the Sudan and LJM signed framework and ceasefire agreements on 18 March, committing themselves to negotiating a final accord by 31 March. Building on the momentum of the November 2009 Darfur civil society conference in Doha [YUN 2009, p. 160], the Darfur Mediation, in collaboration with UNAMID, launched a series of civil society consultations aimed at bringing together the views and interests of Darfur's diverse communities and providing popular support for the peace process (see p. 238).

The security environment in the UNMIS area of operations remained relatively stable, although significant security incidents occurred in Southern Sudan.

Tensions in Abyei escalated steadily during the reporting period. The failure to hold a community conference on migration arrangements, and the insistence of the Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) that the Misseriya relinquish their personal firearms before entering the south, impeded the Misseriya's southward migration, trapping them in the northern portion of the Abyei Area, which placed greater strain on the area's water and pasture resources. With UNMIS and United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) guidance and support, a framework agreement was reached on 4 March between the Misseriya and local authorities on facilitating the annual migration into Abiemnon County and into Unity State in general. UNMIS monitored the Government of Southern Sudan-led forced civilian disarmament process in Jonglei, Warrap and Lakes States.

UNMIS facilitated a 10-State Governors' conference in Kadugli, a three-State conference in Bentiu and a Warrap-Unity Governors' conference, as well as Nuba-Misseriya, Nuer-Misseriya and Dinka-Malual-Rezeigat inter-communal conferences. It also worked closely with authorities and communal leaders in Jonglei State to prevent the mobilization of armed Dinka Bor youth and facilitated Government of Southern Sudan efforts to de-escalate conflicts in Warrap and Jonglei States. UNMIS and UNDP continued to facilitate round-table meetings of the Southern Sudan political parties as part of a wider conflict mitigation strategy.

As at 26 January, the Sudanese Armed Forces (SAF) had redeployed 100 per cent from Southern Sudan, while SPLA had redeployed from Northern Sudan approximately 35 per cent of its stated strength of 59,168, up from approximately 33 per cent during the previous reporting period. UNMIS, however, experienced restrictions on its freedom of movement, including denials and refusals by national monitors to participate in the monitoring and verification of redeployment.

The re-verification exercise, previously scheduled for completion by 15 November 2009, was still ongoing. SAF Major General Yahya transferred command of the Joint Integration Unit (JIU) to his former deputy, SPLA Major General Marial, on 27 January, in accordance with the regular rotation of JIU leadership.

The Government of Southern Sudan took encouraging steps to reorganize, reform and restructure the Southern Sudan Police Service, including through the passage of a new Police Act, the appointment of a new Inspector General of Police, and the recruitment of 6,000 high school graduates to replace elderly and infirm personnel. The UNMIS police component focused on training local police on elections security, conducting 322 training sessions for 22,800 local officers. UNMIS also compiled the official Election Security Handbook.

The Government of Sudan's DDR programme progressed, but the gap between demobilization and reintegration continued to widen, in part because of inadequate funds for the latter. Since the launch of the DDR programme in February 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 242], as at 16 March 2010 approximately 21,037 former combatants and members of special needs groups had been demobilized and received reinsertion packages, comprising around 33 per cent of the caseload for phase one of the programme. In Southern Kordofan State, demobilization continued in Kadugli after the successful completion of the demobilization of former SPLA combatants in Julud. In Southern Sudan, demobilization in Rumbek (Lakes State) was suspended as of mid-December 2009, owing to a shortage in food support provided by the World Food Programme (WFP).

The major shortcomings of the DDR programme concerning registration and verification procedures of the demobilization process, as identified by an independent assessment initiated by UNMIS [YUN 2009, p. 242], had been largely addressed through the newly established DDR High-Level Committee, which signed on 3 March standard operating procedures to govern candidate eligibility verification, as well as the identification and verification of Women Associated with Armed Forces and Groups in Southern Sudan.

As part of ongoing efforts to deliver life-saving assistance to the victims of inter-communal violence, 26 major emergency operations were under way in nine southern States. Coordinated by the Government of Southern Sudan and the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), and with support from UNMIS humanitarian sections, those operations involved all UN humanitarian agencies and nearly 100 NGOs, with assistance delivered to at least 1.5 million people. Reaching populations in need was particularly difficult during the first months of the year since several of the most affected areas had almost no UN or NGO presence, due to insecurity, poor roads and lack of government capacity.

Security Council statement (February). On 25 February [SC/9869], the Security Council welcomed the Framework Agreement for the Resolution of the Conflict in Darfur signed by the Government of Sudan and JEM on 23 February in Doha, and called on the parties to move to quickly implement the Agreement in full, as an important step towards peace in Darfur. It further called on all other parties in Darfur to join the Doha peace process and the Agreement.

Communication. On 13 April [S/2010/192], the Sudan transmitted an updated progress report on CPA implementation as of 30 October 2009.

Elections

The successful conduct of the national elections marked a milestone in the implementation of the CPA and provided for the expansion of the political space available for democratic change. The elections were generally peaceful, albeit with some significant exceptions. There were a number of reports of harassment, intimidation, arbitrary arrests and detention of voters, political party agents and supporters, and of National Elections Commission (NEC) officials.

Reports of Secretary-General (April). In a 5 April report [S/2010/168] on UNMIS, the Secretary-General noted that on 21 February, the NCP and SPLM members of the Presidency of the Government of National Unity had reached agreement resolving a number of outstanding election-related disputes, particularly related to the 2008 census [YUN 2008, p. 239]. The agreement provided that SPLM would drop its objections to the national census results, in return for allocation of an additional 40 seats in the National Assembly, which were to be filled by appointment of the Presidency with the National Assembly's endorsement on a proportional representation basis after the elections. It was also agreed by the Presidency of the Government of National Unity that State-level elections in Southern Kordofan would be postponed to allow for a new census and the reallocation of State constituencies, while the State would receive an additional four seats in the National Assembly. Under that agreement, Abyei would receive an additional two seats in the Assembly, and NEC would appoint a committee to oversee elections for the Abyei Administration.

The agreement to allocate extra seats to the South, Abyei and Southern Kordofan would allow SPLM to retain its veto power in the National Assembly regarding any constitutional amendment. Reflecting that agreement, on 11 March NEC issued a resolution stating that State-level elections in Southern Kordofan would be postponed for 60 days. Several opposition parties denounced the proposed measures as unconstitutional because they were not approved by the National Assembly and failed to address perceived census irregularities in other parts of the country. Thus far, NEC had not taken a decision on the agreement of the Government of National Unity on the additional seats. NEC also decided to postpone elections for the State Legislative Assembly in Gezira State, following the 27 December 2009 decision of the Supreme Court regarding constituency delimitation. The delay would allow Gezira State to redraw constituencies and increase Assembly seats from 48 to 84, in accordance with the decision. In Southern Sudan, more than 300 SPLM members had registered to run as independent candidates, asserting that the SPLM internal candidate selection procedures ignored the party's rank-and-file. Although SPLM Secretary General Pagan Amum acknowledged "irregularities" and "shortcomings" in the selection process, on 18 February the SPLM political bureau took a decision to disown all party members running as independent candidates. A small number of NCP-affiliated politicians also declared independent candidacies after failing to secure party nominations.

UNMIS was using its good offices to work with all concerned in assisting to establish an environment where the elections were acceptable to the people of the Sudan. The African Union (AU) High-Level Implementation Panel for the Sudan, led by the former President of South Africa, Thabo Mbeki, also continued its efforts towards creating an enabling environment. During a meeting organized by the Panel in Juba on 2 to 3 March, 15 southern political parties, including SPLM and SPLM-Democratic Change, led by Lam Akol, signed a code of conduct and a declaration of commitments agreement. NCP and some northern parties signed the same agreements on 8 and 9 March in Khartoum, bringing the total number of signatories to 26 political parties.

On 27 April [S/2010/168/Add.1], pursuant to Security Council resolution 1590(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], the Secretary-General reported on the elections in the Sudan, which served as an important benchmark in the implementation of the CPA. He noted that the voting period was relatively peaceful, with isolated incidents of violence and reports of harassment and intimidation in some locations. In the immediate post-election period, there had been some disputes over election results, especially in Southern Sudan, and early results strongly in favour of the SPLM in the south and the NCP in the north.

There were delays in the printing of ballot papers and in preparing the final voter roll and list of polling stations, the Secretary-General acknowledged. Nonetheless, polling materials arrived at almost all polling stations in time for the start of polling on 11 April. Due to security-related incidents, polling was interrupted in some locations, mainly in Southern Sudan, but also in Western Darfur. In Southern Sudan, there were widespread reports of interference in the electoral process, particularly in Northern Bahr El Ghazal and Unity States.

Following the end of polling on 15 April, the first announcements of results by NEC were made on 16 April, and results from geographical constituencies began to be announced on 19 April. On 20 April, the winning candidate for the office of Governor of Khartoum, from NCP, was announced, followed by an announcement on 21 April of NCP victories for the office of Governor in River Nile and Northern States. On 22 April, the winning SPLM candidate of Blue Nile State and the winning NCP candidates for Governor in Red Sea, White Nile, Sinnar, Gezira and Gadaref States were announced, and on 26 April, NEC announced that incumbent Omar Al-Bashir had won the national presidential election, while incumbent Salva Kiir Mayardit won the Presidency of the Government of Southern Sudan.

UNMIS continued to advise and assist NEC and the State High Committees. It also worked with NEC in developing plans for the elections to be rerun within 60 days, and for the elections in Southern Kordofan (Governor and State Assembly) and Gezira (State Assembly) that had been postponed until later in the year. UNMIS encouraged NEC to deal with challenges and appeals to the process in a serious and transparent manner.

While the election process had thus far proceeded without any major violence, the Secretary-General observed, there were incidents in some areas in Southern Sudan, particularly where intercommunal conflict had occurred in the past, or where close races took place between independent candidates and incumbents. Tensions and localized violence had been most prevalent in the southern States, where the SPLM-nominated Governors faced considerable competition by independent candidates.

Although ensuring security during the elections and post-election periods remained the prime responsibility of the Government of the Sudan, UNMIS increased confidence-building and conflict management efforts, as well as contingency planning regarding potential humanitarian needs. Those activities included a strengthened field presence of all UNMIS components, increased early warning activities, monitoring of potential conflict areas, and human rights reporting. UNMIS also engaged in dialogue with the Sudanese authorities as well as other political actors to ensure awareness of potential conflict issues and to promote solutions; in that regard, the Mission worked closely with humanitarian agencies, which undertook substantial emergency preparedness. During the movement of elections material, including its retrieval after polling, UNMIS provided military second-line transport support, in addition to protecting UN personnel and assets.

The United Nations continued to encourage both NCP and SPLM to continue recognizing their common need for cooperation and a mutual desire to maintain the CPA partnership as the Sudan moved towards the referendums. The Secretary-General called on both parties to quickly form a government that could address the challenges facing the Sudan. He also encouraged SPLM to form an inclusive government in Juba and actively pursue reconciliation measures. He called on both parties to further open the political space for the opposition parties and civil society groups, in order to ensure that the elections process was not another step in their marginalization. The goals of peace and security in the Sudan would require that the international community work closely with the Sudanese towards an inclusive, transformative final year of CPA implementation.

Communication. On 19 April [S/2010/201], the Sudan transmitted a communiqué issued by the Chairperson of the AU Commission, commending the people of the Sudan and the Sudanese political parties for peacefully conducting multiparty general elections from 11 to 15 April, and commending NEC's efforts.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 April [meeting 6304], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1919(2010). The draft [S/2010/215] was submitted by the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in the Sudan,

Reaffirming its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, in which it reaffirms, inter alia, the relevant provisions of the 2005 World Summit Outcome, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict, its resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003 on the protection of humanitarian and United Nations personnel and its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General of 5 April 2010 on the United Nations Mission in the Sudan, recalling the report of the Secretary-General of 10 February 2009 on children and armed conflict in the Sudan, including his recommendations, and the report of the Secretary-General of 29 August 2007 on children and armed conflict in the Sudan, and recalling the conclusions on children and armed conflict in the Sudan endorsed by the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict,

Reaffirming its commitment to the sovereignty, unity, independence and territorial integrity of the Sudan and to the cause of peace, stability and security throughout the region,

Stressing the importance of the full implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement of 9 January 2005, including, in particular, the importance of pursuing further efforts to make unity attractive and respecting the right to self-determination of the people of Southern Sudan, to be exercised through a referendum to determine their future status,

Emphasizing the need for the United Nations and the international community to support the consolidation of mutual trust between the two parties,

Taking note of the nationwide elections conducted in April 2010, as elections are a component of the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, and commending the people in the Sudan who are working toward democracy,

Recognizing that, regardless of the results of the referendum, both parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement will need to continue to discuss critical issues in a peaceful and constructive manner and that the United Nations, the African Union and other regional organizations can play an important role in supporting and promoting this dialogue,

Commending the work of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan and the continuing commitment of troop- and police-contributing countries in support of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the Mission,

Commending also the work of the African Union in the Sudan, in particular the African Union High-Level Implementation Panel for the Sudan and the role that it has played in focusing attention on the interrelatedness of conflicts in the Sudan and assisting the Sudanese parties to comprehensively address these issues, along with the Intergovernmental Authority on Development and other regional actors,

Commending further the continuing work of the Assessment and Evaluation Commission,

Condemning all acts and forms of violence perpetrated by any party that prevent or hinder peace and stability in the Sudan and the region, deploring their effects on the civilian population, in particular on women and children, and calling for compliance by all parties with their obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law,

Stressing the ongoing importance of providing humanitarian and development assistance to the civilian populations throughout the Sudan, encouraging comprehensive preparedness efforts by the United Nations in view of the upcoming referendum, including the need for increased humanitarian and development assistance in the south for the remainder of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement implementation period as well as post-Agreement and the need for continued cooperation among the parties to the Agreement, the United Nations and humanitarian organizations, and urging donors to support the implementation of the Agreement and to honour all pledges of financial and material support,

Acknowledging that the Comprehensive Peace Agreement has reached a critical stage, and stressing the need to complete all remaining implementation tasks under the Agreement,

Welcoming the increased and continuing cooperation among the United Nations Mission in the Sudan and all other United Nations missions in the region, and stressing the importance of continued sharing of information among them to help to counter regional threats, such as the activities of militias and armed groups, including but not limited to such groups as the Lord's Resistance Army,

Determining that the situation in the Sudan continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan until 30 April 2011, with the intention to renew it for further periods as may be required;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue reporting to the Security Council every three months on the implementation of the mandate of the Mission, progress in the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and respect for the ceasefire;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide in his quarterly reports information, including (1) a detailed plan of measures that the Mission is taking to support the referendum and popular consultation processes, consistent with paragraph 7 below, including lessons learned from the 2010 elections, (2) the status of United Nations engagement with the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and progress by the parties concerning the critical tasks that will need to be accomplished post-referendum and, as appropriate, information on (3) planning by the Mission in consultation with the parties concerning the United Nations presence in the Sudan post-interim period;

4. Deplores the persistent localized conflict and violence and its effect on civilians, especially within Southern Sudan, and underscores the importance of the Mission making full use of its authority and capabilities, as stated in paragraph 16 of resolution 1590(2005) of 24 March 2005, to take the action necessary to provide improved security to the civilian population, humanitarian and development actors and United Nations personnel under imminent threat of violence, and stresses that this mandate includes the protection of refugees, displaced persons, returnees and other civilians with regard to the activities of militias and armed groups, including but not limited to such groups as the Lord's Resistance Army, as recognized in resolution 1663(2006) of 24 March 2006;

5. Reiterates its call upon the Mission to coordinate strategies with other United Nations missions in the region for information on the protection of civilians in the light of the attacks by the Lord's Resistance Army, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his quarterly reports on the Mission information on cooperation between United Nations missions in dealing with the threats of the Lord's Resistance Army;

6. Calls upon the Mission to implement a Mission-wide civilian protection strategy, comprehensively throughout the Mission area, including the implementation of tribal conflict resolution mechanisms, and urges the Mission to enhance its presence in areas at high risk of localized conflict, including by conducting frequent patrols;

7. Recalls the provision in the Comprehensive Peace Agreement for referendums, as well as the responsibility of the parties to pursue efforts to make unity attractive, reaffirms the support of the Mission for these activities, requests that the Mission be prepared to play a lead role in international efforts to provide assistance, as requested, to support preparations for the referendums in 2011, including in consultation with those Member States able and willing to provide support, and an advisory role related to security arrangements for the referendums, and urges the international community to provide technical and material assistance, including observation capacity for the referendums, as requested by the relevant Sudanese authorities to support the referendums and popular consultations;

8. Stresses the importance of full and expeditious implementation of all elements of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, the agreements on Darfur and the Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement of 14 October 2006, and calls upon all parties to respect and abide by their commitments to these agreements without delay;

9. Requests the Mission, within its current mandate and capabilities, to continue to assist the parties, as requested, in the implementation of all elements of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, including creation of, and appointments to, the referendum and popular consultation commissions, implementation of the decision of the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague regarding Abyei, north-south border demarcation, wealth-sharing, security arrangements, and resolution of conflict in Southern Kordofan and Blue Nile states;

10. Welcomes continuing military capability reviews conducted on the deployment of the Mission, stresses the importance of appropriate and flexible deployment of the Mission in order to deter and prevent violence in areas where civilians are under threat of violence, and requests regular reviews of the deployment of the Mission to ensure that the Mission is best placed to support the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and protect civilians under imminent threat of violence;

11. Also welcomes the sustained commitment of the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement to work together, urges their continued cooperation in carrying out their responsibilities in further implementing the Agreement, and calls upon the parties to the Agreement to cooperate fully with all the United Nations operations in the implementation of their mandates;

12. Reiterates its concern over the restrictions and impediments placed on Mission personnel and materiel and the adverse impact that such restrictions and impediments have on the ability of the Mission to perform its mandate effectively, and in that regard calls for all parties to cooperate by providing full and unrestricted access to the Mission in monitoring and verification within its area of responsibility, with special emphasis on monitoring of the Abyei region, and urges the Mission, consistent with its mandate and within its means and capabilities, to consult with the parties and to deploy sufficient personnel to the Abyei region to improve conflict prevention efforts and security for the civilian population;

13. Expresses its concern for the health and welfare of the civilian populations in the Sudan, calls upon the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the communiqué signed by the United Nations and the Government of National Unity in Khartoum on 28 March 2007 to support and protect all humanitarian personnel and facilitate all humanitarian operations in the Sudan, and urges the Government of the Sudan to continue working with the United Nations to ensure the continuity of humanitarian assistance throughout the Sudan;

14. Notes that conflict in one area of the Sudan affects conflict in other areas of the country, and therefore urges the Mission, consistent with its current mandate, to cooperate closely with all United Nations entities operating in the region, including the African Union-United Nations Joint Mediation Support Team and other stakeholders, so that the implementation of the mandates of those bodies supports the overall objective of peace in the Sudan and the region;

15. Recognizes the detrimental impact of the proliferation of arms, in particular small arms, on the security of civilians by fuelling armed conflict, encourages the Mission to continue its efforts in providing assistance to the Government of Southern Sudan with regard to the civilian disarmament process, in particular by strengthening the capacity of local authorities to deter inter-communal conflicts and by monitoring forced civilian disarmament initiatives in an effort to avert disarmament operations that could exacerbate insecurity in Southern Sudan;

16. Requests the Mission, acting within its current mandate and within its current means and capabilities, to continue to provide technical and logistical support to the Ad Hoc Technical Border Committee, as requested, to help the parties to urgently conclude the process of demarcation of the north/south border of 1956, in accordance with the Comprehensive Peace Agreement;

17. Encourages the Mission, consistent with its mandate, and within authorized levels of civilian police, to continue efforts to assist the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement in promoting the rule of law, restructuring the police and corrections services throughout the Sudan, particularly in the south, owing to the lack of development of the police services, and assisting in the training of civilian police and corrections officers;

18. Also encourages the Mission to work closely with the Sudanese Armed Forces and the Sudan People's Liberation Army to reinvigorate the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process and to assist in voluntary disarmament and weapons collection and destruction efforts in implementation of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process under the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, to ensure the timely provision of sustainable reintegration programmes, which will help to promote continued and enhanced funding support from donors for the reintegration phase, and to coordinate with local authorities and with the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes initiatives that strengthen disarmament, demobilization and reintegration with the creation of economic opportunities for reintegrated individuals, further urges donors to respond to calls for assistance to the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process, in particular the reintegration phase, calls upon donors to honour all obligations and pledges of assistance, and takes note in this context of the need to also assist the victims in conflict-affected communities;

19. Welcomes the adoption by the Sudan People's Liberation Army of an action plan to release all children still associated with its forces by the end of 2010, and in order to achieve this goal, calls for timely implementation of this action plan, requests the Mission, consistent with its mandate and in coordination with the relevant parties and with particular emphasis on the protection, release and reintegration with their families of children recruited to and participating with armed forces and armed groups, to increase its support for the National Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Coordination Council and the Northern and Southern Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Commissions and to monitor the reintegration process;

20. Also welcomes the continuing organized return of internally displaced persons and refugees to the Three Areas and Southern Sudan, and requests the Mission, within its current mandate, capabilities and areas of deployment, to coordinate with United Nations and other partners to facilitate sustainable returns, including by helping to establish and maintain the necessary security conditions;

21. Stresses the critical role of the Assessment and Evaluation Commission in overseeing and monitoring the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, and urges all parties to cooperate fully with the Commission and to implement its recommendations;

22. Also stresses the importance of achievable and realistic targets against which the progress of the Mission can be measured, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to report on and assess the progress in meeting benchmarks in each quarterly report, as well as any consequent recommendations regarding the configuration of the Mission;

23. Encourages the periodical update and review of the concept of operations and rules of engagement of the Mission, fully in line with the provisions of the mandate of the Mission under relevant Council resolutions, and requests the Secretary-General to report on progress against the concept and rules to the Council and troop-contributing countries in each quarterly report, and to provide to the Council in the same report specific updates on the security situation in the area of responsibility of the Mission;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to continue the measures necessary to ensure full compliance by the Mission with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to keep the Council fully informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including predeployment awareness training, and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

25. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Further developments

Report of Secretary-General (July). In July [S/2010/388], the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1590(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], provided an assessment of the situation in the Sudan since his 5 April report, as well as an update on UNMIS activities until 30 June. In accordance with the Council's request, the report also included updates on support for the referendum and popular consultation process, UN engagement with the parties on critical post-referendum tasks and planning for a UN presence in the Sudan after the end of the six-year interim period in July 2011.

Following national and state-level elections in April, Omar Al-Bashir was elected President of the Republic, with 68 per cent of the vote. Despite his withdrawal, Yassir Arman, the presidential candidate of SPLM, won 21.6 per cent of the ballot. On 29 May, Salva Kiir Mayardit and Ali Osman Mohamed Taha were sworn in as First Vice-President and Vice-President, respectively. In the new national Government sworn in on 16 June, NCP was allocated 24 ministerial positions, including that of Minister of Foreign Affairs. SPLM was allocated eight positions, including the newly established post of Oil Minister, while three positions went to Northern opposition parties.

In Southern Sudan, Salva Kiir was elected President of the Government of Southern Sudan, with 92.99 per cent of the vote, and on 14 June, Riek Machar was sworn in as Vice-President. On 21 June, President Kiir issued a decree appointing his new Government, in which SPLM held 27, NCP two and Southern political parties three ministerial posts.

NCP secured a 72 per cent-majority in the National Assembly by winning 319 seats. The SPLM share of the vote was 22 per cent, with 99 seats. Further representation in the National Assembly included the Popular Congress Party (PCP), the Democratic Unionist Party, the Federal Umma Party, the National Umma Party, the Umma Reform and Development Party, SPLM-Democratic Change (SPLM-DC), the Democratic Unionist Party-Original and the Muslim Brotherhood. Three seats were won by independent candidates. In the Southern Sudan Legislative Assembly, SPLM won 159 seats, which amounted to 93.52 per cent of the total, while SPLM-DC won three seats and seven seats went to independent candidates.

On 29 May, the Presidency formally requested the National Assembly to make appropriate legislative amendments in connection with the allocation of additional seats, in conformity with the 21 February agreement between the parties. The allocation of 40 seats for Southern Sudan, four for Southern Kordofan State and two for Abyei was pending further agreement on the modalities for the allocation.

At the gubernatorial level, NCP candidates won the elections in all but one of the Northern states; only the incumbent SPLM Governor, Malik Agar, retained his seat. Similarly, SPLM candidates won the gubernatorial elections in nine of the 10 Southern states. The Western Equatoria governorship went to Bangasi Joseph Bakosoro, an independent candidate, formerly of SPLM.

Elections were not held in April for 18 national and 26 State Assembly constituencies in 10 Northern and four Southern states for various reasons, including ballot-printing errors, candidate deaths and legal challenges. NEC conducted elections for 31 of those constituencies in June, postponing polling for the remaining constituencies until after the rainy season. As in the April elections, UNMIS, in cooperation with UNDP, provided extensive logistical support to the Commission and the State High Committees in the procurement, distribution and retrieval of polling materials, the repacking of sensitive materials, air transport to and from inaccessible locations, and the storage of election materials. UNAMID provided important logistical support for UNMIS electoral operations.

NEC was seeking UNMIS, UNDP and other donor support for the postponed elections in Gezira and Southern Kordofan States. The new census exercise in Southern Kordofan started on 15 June, with UNMIS providing transport of staff and material. On 4 and 5 May, UNMIS, UNDP and the International Foundation for Electoral Systems held a lessons-learned workshop to assess international assistance for the electoral process.

A high-level meeting on 7 May emphasized the importance of a strategic partnership between the United Nations and the AU at a critical time of CPA implementation. At a consultative meeting on 8 May (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia), representatives of the AU, the United Nations, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD), the League of Arab States (LAS), the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC), the European Union (EU), permanent members of the Security Council and the Assessment and Evaluation Commission, as well as Finland, Italy, Japan, Norway, Qatar and Sweden, decided to establish a consultative forum co-chaired by the AU and the United Nations, which would serve as a mechanism to harmonize international efforts in support of implementing the CPA, post-referendum arrangements and the search for a political solution to the Darfur conflict. The forum was to meet every two months, with the first meeting having been held in Khartoum on 17 July.

In anticipation of the needs related to the referendum process, UNMIS strengthened its Strategic Planning Cell and, jointly with the UN country team, established an integrated mission planning team in Khartoum. The Secretary-General's Special Representative established five strategic objectives for the United Nations in the pre-referendum phase: organization of credible referendums in Southern Sudan and Abyei; organization of productive popular consultations in Southern Kordofan and Blue Nile States; negotiation of post-referendum transitional arrangements and their peaceful implementation; maintenance of a secure environment and protection of civilians in the Mission area; and development of governance and rule-of-law capacities in Southern Sudan. UNMIS and the UN country team also had drawn up an integrated action plan to coordinate UN activities in respect of those goals. The national Government and the Government of Southern Sudan had both indicated a desire for expanded UN involvement in the conduct of the referendums, beyond the role played during the elections; UNMIS stood ready to provide increased technical and logistical assistance within its mandate and capacity and was assessing available infrastructure and resource and logistics requirements. Planning for the UN role in the post-referendum phase would be developed over the coming months.

On 24 June (Addis Ababa), the parties to the CPA signed a procedural framework agreement governing formal talks on post-referendum arrangements. The negotiations were to be bilateral, with an AU facilitator supported by the United Nations, IGAD and IGAD Partners Forum to assist when needed. The parties also agreed on a joint Sudanese secretariat, with administrative support from the Assessment and Evaluation Commission.

Within the framework of the Darfur peace process, talks resumed on 6 June between LJM and the Government of the Sudan. The two parties agreed on a work programme and formed six committees to negotiate on the following areas: power-sharing and the administrative status of Darfur; wealth-sharing, including land rights; compensation for and the return of internally displaced persons (IDPs) and refugees; security arrangements; justice and reconciliation; and agreement on the resolution of disputes.

JEM and the Government failed to agree on a ceasefire implementation protocol or final agreement by the 15 March deadline, owing largely to disputes over the participation of other movements in the peace talks and the insistence by JEM that all of its prisoners held in Khartoum be released by the Government. In May, JEM announced that it had frozen its participation in the negotiations in Doha, Qatar, and shortly thereafter, it withdrew its delegation from the talks.

On 12 July, Pre-Trial Chamber I of the International Criminal Court (ICC) issued a second warrant of arrest against President Al-Bashir, considering that there were reasonable grounds to believe him responsible for three counts of genocide committed against the Fur, Masalit and Zaghawa ethnic groups in Darfur.

The Secretary-General congratulated the parties on the establishment of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission and urged them to recognize that the pending issues had to be addressed immediately in order for the referendum to be conducted within the CPA time frame. The parties' ongoing difficulties in addressing critical outstanding issues, including the establishment of the Abyei Referendum Commission, border demarcation and the resolution of voter eligibility questions in Abyei, were likely to further impede timely preparation. International monitoring, stipulated in the CPA as necessary, would be critical for the credibility and acceptance of the referendum outcomes and for subsequent peace. Further capacity-building of police and rule-of-law institutions in Southern Sudan would be critical for maintaining a peaceful environment during the referendums.

The Secretary-General considered the popular consultations process a unique opportunity for a nuanced and detailed review of CPA implementation. He warned that the risk associated with the demobilization of increasing numbers of former combatants without suitable reintegration programmes in place was a serious security concern. He encouraged all parties to continue their efforts to ensure both integrity and progress of the DDR programme. The Secretary-

General urged donors to ensure that the much-needed humanitarian assistance was not curtailed by underfunding, and to safeguard the continuation of live-saving pipelines. He also encouraged them to strengthen longer-term recovery activities in parallel with immediate relief efforts to ensure stability and sustainable development, in particular in the South.

Appointments. By a letter of 17 September [S/2010/491], the Secretary-General transmitted a letter of 17 July from the CPA signatories requesting UN assistance in the referendum process, by providing funding, technical expertise, and logistical assistance, as well as the main monitoring mission. The Secretary-General informed the Security Council that he had decided to establish a three-member panel to monitor and assess the referendum processes for Southern Sudan and the Abyei Area, including the political and security situation on the ground. The panel would also engage the parties to take corrective measures and would issue public statements on the referendums. It would be distinct from UNMIS and would report to the Secretary-General through the UN Department of Political Affairs. Benjamin Mkapa, former President of Tanzania, had been appointed to head the panel, whose other members would be António Monteiro, former Minister of Foreign Affairs of Portugal, and Bhojraj Pokharel, former Chair of the Elections Commission of Nepal. By a response of 21 September [S/2010/492], the Security Council took note of his intention.

High-level meeting. On 24 September, on the margins of the UN General Assembly, the Secretary-General hosted a high-level meeting on the Sudan to discuss CPA-related key issues, the Darfur peace process, capacity development in Southern Sudan and the Eastern Sudan peace process. The meeting was attended by 12 Heads of State, including President Obama of the United States. Sudanese Vice-President Taha and First Vice-President Kiir participated as well. The meeting adopted a final communiqué [SG/2165-AFR/2043] in which the Sudanese parties re-committed themselves to overcoming all challenges necessary to hold the 9 January 2011 referendums. The communiqué also highlighted the strong international support for CPA processes and the need for the parties to resolve key post-referendum arrangements. The participants expressed support for the Darfur peace process, while taking note with concern of the serious security situation in Darfur.

Security Council mission

On 4 October 2010 [S/2010/509], the President of the Security Council informed the Secretary-General that the Council had agreed to send a mission to Uganda and the Sudan from 4 to 10 October, led by Ambassador Ruhakana Rugunda of Uganda

(Uganda), United Kingdom Ambassador Mark Lyall Grant (El Fasher) and United States Ambassador Susan Rice (Juba). Ambassadors Rice and Grant would co-lead the mission visit to Khartoum. The mission's terms of reference were annexed to the Council President's letter.

In its report [S/2011/7], the Security Council mission noted that it had visited the Sudan in order to reaffirm the commitment of the international community to and its support for full and timely CPA implementation and to encourage a peaceful, comprehensive and inclusive resolution of the situation in Darfur. The Council urged cooperation between NCP and SPLM on the referendums and in resolving outstanding issues related to the CPA, including the successful completion of border demarcation and negotiations on post-referendum arrangements. The Council also emphasized the importance of the partnership between the United Nations and the AU in support of the Sudanese peace process.

The Council visit was also undertaken to reiterate its support for UNMIS and UNAMID, as well as the work of the AU-UN Joint Chief Mediator, and to assess the assistance provided by UNMIS and UNAMID within their current mandates and capabilities. In that context, the Council underlined its concern for the security of humanitarian aid workers and reiterated the vital importance of allowing their full, safe and unhindered freedom of movement and access.

The mission reported [S/2011/7] that in Uganda, it had met with President Yoweri Kaguta Museveni to discuss, among other issues, CPA implementation, including the holding of the 9 January 2011 referendums in Southern Sudan and Abyei. It also encouraged the improvement of relations among the countries of the region and increased regional cooperation in addressing the security challenges posed by the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA).

In Juba, the mission met with First Vice-President Salva Kiir and other members of the Government of Southern Sudan, as well as with the Southern Sudan Referendum Bureau and with civil society leaders. The mission informed First Vice-President Kiir that the international community was united in supporting the full and timely implementation of the CPA, as reiterated in the communiqué adopted after the 24 September high-level meeting (see p. 246). The mission underscored the responsibility of the relevant Sudanese authorities to ensure the safety of peacekeeping and humanitarian personnel. In turn, members of the Government of Southern Sudan offered their reassurance that UN personnel would be protected and that the referendum would be conducted in a free and fair environment to ensure that the people of Southern Sudan could express their views, whether in favour of unity or of secession. The First

Vice-President requested the Council members to strengthen the UNMIS mandate, especially with regard to the protection of civilians. He assured the Council that his Government would not resort to a unilateral declaration of independence, but added that, if NCP refused to cooperate, the internationally monitored referendum could take place without the participation of Northern Sudan.

The mission met with the Southern Sudan Referendum Bureau in Juba and was briefed on the status of referendum preparations, and also met with civil society leaders and visited a police training facility in Rajaf, Central Equatoria State.

In Darfur, the mission met with humanitarian agencies' representatives and with a delegation of IDPs. The Council members expressed deep concern about the upsurge of violence, the number of civilian casualties and victims of sexual and gender-based violence, the recruitment of children by armed groups, the flow of illegal arms into Darfur and the continued restriction of humanitarian access. They also underlined their concern for the security of civilians, humanitarian aid workers and peacekeepers. The mission expressed concern about the upsurge of violence—which, according to UN statistics, had increased by 240 per cent over the previous year—and the lack of security for peacekeepers and aid workers. The mission reiterated its support for the peace process, urged rebel groups to join the process without further delay and called on all parties to make progress towards the immediate cessation of hostilities and a negotiated settlement.

In Khartoum, the mission met with, among others, the Governor and other officials of Blue Nile and Southern Kordofan States, the Chair of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission, Foreign Minister Ali Karti and other members of the Government of National Unity including Vice-President Taha, as well as representatives of Southern Sudanese residing in Northern Sudan. The Council reiterated its support for the popular consultations as an integral part of the CPA and underscored the importance of inclusive, timely and credible consultations processes in Blue Nile and Southern Kordofan States. The Chair of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission, Muhammad Ibrahim Khalil, informed the mission of various challenges related to meeting the 9 January 2011 deadline. Council members noted that sufficient time should be allocated for voter registration in order to ensure the credibility of the referendum. The Chair emphasized that the timeline for registration and post-registration would have to be condensed in order to abide by the timetable indicated in the Referendum Act and still meet the 9 January 2011 deadline; he also stated that if the date remained 9 January 2011, there might not be enough time for voters to register and challenge the voter registry list, which could put the credibility of the process at risk. The mission recalled that both parties had recommitted themselves to holding a referendum on time and urged the Chair to seek flexibility in the timetable of the Referendum Act.

Referring to the 24 September communiqué (see p. 246) and the mission's terms of reference, Council members reiterated their support for full and timely CPA implementation, emphasized that the parties must exercise flexibility in ensuring that the referendums took place on time, and called on the Government to provide all necessary resources for the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission. They expressed deep concern about the delay in establishing the Abyei Commission and called on the parties to resolve outstanding issues. The mission emphasized that it would be essential to address key post-referendum issues, including citizenship, oil and border management. The delegation also raised the issue of humanitarian access in Darfur and called on the Government and all relevant parties to ensure freedom of movement for aid workers and peacekeepers. Council members also met with representatives of Southern Sudanese residing in Northern Sudan.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In a report of 14 October [S/2010/528], submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 1510(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], the Secretary-General provided an assessment of the overall situation in the Sudan since his July report, as well as an update on the activities of UNMIS through 30 September.

The Secretary-General noted that while the Sudan's political focus had shifted largely to the upcoming referendums, disagreement between the CPA parties continued to delay technical preparations for the referendum process. Following the establishment of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission on 28 June, a dispute arose between the parties over who should be appointed to serve as its Secretary-General, which prevented the Commission from commencing operations for most of the reporting period.

On 9 August, the members of the Juba-based Southern Sudan Referendum Bureau were sworn in, followed by the swearing in of the members of the Southern State High Committee on 23 August. On 29 August, the Presidency agreed to a joint proposal by UNMIS and the AU High-Level Implementation Panel to vest the Commission's executive, administrative and operational functions in four separate posts (Secretary-General and deputy, Chief Referendum Operations Officer and deputy), two of those posts to be filled by a Northerner and two by Southerners. On 14 September, Mohamed Osman al-Noujoumi was appointed by the Presidency to serve as the Commission's Secretary-General. The United Nations was in the process of deploying an additional 596 security, logistics and technical personnel to UNMIS to assist in providing technical and logistical support to the Referendum Commissions and their subcommittees, including at the county level; close to 60 per cent had already been deployed. The UNMIS/UNDP integrated referendum support team had prepared operational plans, voter registration manuals and internal regulations for consideration by the Commission.

On 28 September, the Chairperson of the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission stated that voter registration for the referendum was likely to begin in the second half of November. No progress had been made, however, by the CPA parties on referendum preparations in Abyei since the adoption of the Abyei Referendum Act in December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 242]. Although the parties continued to voice their public commitment to the 2009 decision of the Permanent Court of Arbitration [ibid., p. 238] and the Abyei Protocol [YUN 2004, p. 254], including the referendum timetable, they had not been able to agree on a chairperson for the Abyei Referendum Commission. Any further delay in establishing the Commission would jeopardize the holding of the Abyei referendum within the established timeline. UNMIS, together with the AU High-Level Implementation Panel and other international partners, would continue to assist the parties in breaking the deadlock.

On 21 September, in response to a request from the CPA parties, the Secretary-General announced the establishment of a three-member panel to monitor the referendums.

Based on the 23 June memorandum of understanding signed at Mekelle, Ethiopia at the facilitation of the AU High-Level Implementation Panel, the CPA parties officially launched negotiations on post-referendum arrangements on 10 July. Although the parties had made progress in defining procedural issues related to the conduct of the negotiations, they had made little progress in reaching agreement on key substantive issues. On 19 July, with the support of the Panel and UNMIS, the parties convened a workshop to mark the beginning of the substantive phase of the negotiations, during which they agreed on an initial schedule and procedural details for four working groups on wealth-sharing, citizenship, security and international legal instruments. The working groups, which so far consisted of CPA parties, met on 9 and 10 August and continued to meet sporadically after that. The parties also agreed to establish a joint secretariat for the negotiations.

The situation in Abyei remained tense. An attack on Tagalei, north of Abyei town, on 5 July, by unidentified armed elements left seven civilians and one policeman dead and contributed to a general feeling of insecurity. Lack of progress on referendum preparations, Misseriya frustrations over fears of their inability to migrate to the south and rumours of Misseriya plans to organize large-scale settlements in the northern parts of the Abyei Area further polarized the Misseriya and Ngok Dinka ethnic groups and hardened their positions on key issues. The Misseriya paramount chief and other tribal leaders in Muglad, who had initially focused attention on voter eligibility, began to reject the referendum entirely and consolidated their opposition to the 2009 decision of the Permanent Court of Arbitration [YUN 2009, p. 238] on Abyei's borders.

In accordance with the SPLM/NCP agreement to postpone elections in Southern Kordofan until a new census was done, NEC conducted a new state-wide census exercise between 15 and 29 June with UNMIS support. National and state governments provided significant support in mobilizing census staff and both CPA parties expressed satisfaction with the process. The census results had not yet been released, but voter registration was scheduled for November and polling for February 2011.

In Eastern Sudan, the political and security situation remained stable, although the Eastern Sudanese parties continued to accuse the Government of failing to meet its obligations under the 2006 Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement [YUN 2006, p. 264] regarding eastern representation in the civil service.

The Joint AU-UN Chief Mediator for Darfur continued to pursue his three-strand strategy to ensure civil society involvement in the peace process; facilitate the negotiation of a peace agreement between the belligerent parties through an inclusive process; and encourage the improvement of regional relations between Chad, the Sudan and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. From 12 to 15 July, the AU-UN Joint Mediation, UNAMID and the Government of Qatar organized a second Darfur civil society conference in Doha, which was attended by a wide cross section of Darfurian society. In the first half of July, the Government of Sudan and LJM continued negotiations on power-sharing and the administrative status of Darfur; wealth-sharing including land rights; compensation and IDP and refugee return; security arrangements; justice and reconciliation; and resolution of disputes. From the end of July, the Joint Mediation worked to consolidate the work of the joint LJM-Government of the Sudan committees to develop a draft agreement, also taking into account previously concluded peace agreements; the framework agreements reached in Doha (see p. 258); the actions taken by the parties to implement the framework agreements; the recommendations of the two civil society conferences held in Doha in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 259] and in July 2010 (see above); and the Sudan People's Initiative [YUN 2008, pp. 242 & 257]. To make the process inclusive, the Joint Mediation continued to pursue efforts to persuade SLM, led by Abdel Wa-hid al-Nur (SLM-AW), and JEM, led by Khalil Ibrahim, to rejoin the talks.

The security situation in Southern Sudan remained of concern, as violent challenges to the election results by former SPLA and SPLM affiliates continued. In what appeared to be a concerted effort to promote stability in advance of the referendum, governors in Upper Nile, Jonglei, Lakes and Northern Bahr El Ghazal States convened inter-tribal peace conferences to mediate local disputes; UNMIS was working closely with UN agencies and Sudanese authorities to support those efforts and had consulted newly elected State governors and County commissioners to further develop its conflict management and mitigation strategy. In collaboration with UNDP and the International Organization for Migration, UNMIS continued to facilitate and support political party round tables in all 10 southern States with a view to providing a platform for inter-party dialogue that would contribute to reducing tensions and creating a conducive atmosphere for peaceful political processes, particularly the referendum.

SAF had redeployed all their forces from Southern Sudan, while SPLA redeployment remained at 34.8 per cent of a stated strength of 59,168.

The AU and the United Nations convened the first meeting of the Sudan Consultative Forum (Khartoum, 17 July), bringing together IGAD, LAS, OIC, the EU, the neighbouring States and other bilateral partners. The Forum stressed the need for cooperation between NCP and SPLM and for international support to the referendum processes. The Secretary-General stated that the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission had to move quickly if it were to fulfil its mandate in the time remaining; any further delays would have a major impact on the technical and logistical realities of preparing for and conducting the referendum on time. A fully operational Commission was essential for effective and timely assistance by the international community. He expressed deep concern about the situation in Abyei. Preparations for the Abyei referendum were even further behind schedule, and the continued lack of progress was exacerbating an already tense and volatile situation on the ground. The disputes holding up the preparations could be effectively addressed only through a comprehensive package including wealth-sharing, access to water and grazing land, residence and property ownership, and border demarcation. He called on the CPA parties to make immediate progress on those interrelated issues, recognize the need to establish the Abyei Referendum Commission, address the concerns of the local communities, and uphold their obligations under the Agreement to conduct a timely and credible referendum.

The Secretary-General commended the parties on launching their negotiations on post-referendum arrangements, and the AU High-Level Implementation Panel for its leadership in supporting and facilitating the process. He was concerned, however, about continued delays in border demarcation. The CPA parties had a great deal of work to do not only on demarcating the border, but also in addressing the concerns of border communities and determining how they would manage the border regions.

Despite recent progress, the Secretary-General said, logistical, political and security constraints would render the planned demobilization and reintegration of 180,000 ex-combatants by the end of the CPA period extremely difficult. Overall relief efforts also remained seriously hampered by continued funding shortfalls and a shortage of humanitarian partners to deliver supplies across six emergency pipelines: food, nutrition, non-food items and emergency shelter, emergency medical kits, seeds and tools, and water and sanitation. An increase in donor assistance was required in order to guard against a serious deterioration in humanitarian conditions during the referendum period and beyond.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 November [meeting 6425], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/24 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council emphasizes that the situation in the Sudan represents one of the most urgent challenges facing the Council.

The Council reaffirms its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, peace and stability of the Sudan and to a peaceful and prosperous future for all Sudanese people, and underlines its support for the full and timely implementation by the Sudanese parties of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, including the holding of the referendums on the self-determination of the people of Southern Sudan and on the status of Abyei and of the popular consultations in Southern Kordofan and Blue Nile, and for a peaceful, comprehensive and inclusive resolution of the situation in Darfur.

The Council recalls that the Sudanese parties have full responsibility for the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, reaffirms its support for and encourages their further efforts to that end and welcomes the leadership of the African Union and the support provided by the African Union High-level Implementation Panel on the Sudan, under the leadership of President Thabo Mbeki, and by the Intergovernmental Authority on Development. The Council recognizes the commitment of the parties to the implementation of the Agreement, remains actively seized of the matter and expresses its readiness to act as necessary in support of full implementation of the Agreement by the parties. The Council underlines the importance of close coordination between international actors involved in assisting the Sudanese peace processes.

The Council urges the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, while working to make unity attractive and recognizing the right to self-determination of the people of Southern Sudan, to take urgent action to implement their commitment, reaffirmed at the high-level meeting on the Sudan, held in New York on 24 September 2010, to ensure peaceful, credible, timely and free referendums that reflect the will of the people of Southern Sudan and Abyei, as provided for in the Agreement. In this regard, the Council welcomes the start of registration for the Southern Sudan referendum on 15 November 2010 and encourages further efforts to ensure that the referendums are held on 9 January 2011 in accordance with the Agreement and as scheduled in the timeline published for the Southern Sudan referendum by the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission. The Council is concerned by the continued delays in releasing to the Commission the full funding needed for preparations to continue to move forward. The Council calls upon the parties and all Member States to respect the outcome of credible referendums, held in accordance with the Agreement, that reflect the will of the people of Southern Sudan and Abyei. It requests all parties to refrain from unilateral action and to implement the Agreement.

The Council underlines the importance of the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement making rapid progress on a way forward for Abyei's referendum, on outstanding Agreement issues and on resolving critical post-referendum issues in a peaceful, mutually beneficial manner, including the border, security, citizenship, debts, assets, currency and natural resources. In this context, the Council welcomes progress in the negotiations, led by President Mbeki, towards a 'Framework for Resolving Outstanding Issues Relating to the Implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement and the Future Relations of North and South Sudan', on which agreement was reached on 13 November 2010. The Council urges the parties to resume negotiations on Abyei expeditiously and to reach agreement on all outstanding issues without further delay.

The Council underlines the need for the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement to promote calm, including by providing immediate and ongoing reassurance to people of all nationalities in the Sudan, including Southerners in the North and Northerners in the South, that their rights, safety and property will be respected whatever the outcome of the referendums. The Council calls for an immediate end to statements threatening the security of vulnerable populations. The Council also emphasizes that the protection of civilians is primarily the responsibility of the Sudanese authorities. The Council urges the parties to work actively with local leaders to mitigate tensions in Abyei and other border areas.

The Council reaffirms its support for the United Nations Mission in the Sudan and reiterates its call for all parties to cooperate fully with the Mission in the discharge of its mandate in this crucial period, in particular by ensuring full, unhindered access and freedom of movement for Mission personnel and equipment, and for the delivery of materials for the referendums. The Council welcomes and encourages the work of the United Nations in contingency planning around the referendums and calls upon Member States to support the efforts of the Mission.

The Council reaffirms its support for the Secretary-General's Panel on the Referenda in the Sudan, led by President Benjamin Mkapa. The Council underlines the importance of close coordination between the Panel and all domestic and international observation missions.

The Council underlines that, whatever the outcome of the referendums, continued cooperation between the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement will remain essential for managing the transition process, implementing the post-referendum arrangements and maintaining peace and prosperity, and stresses the mutual benefits of partnership in this regard. The Council encourages the international community to support these efforts. The Council urges the parties to the Agreement to respect their obligations.

The Council reaffirms its support for the African Union-United Nations-led peace process for Darfur, hosted by Qatar, the work of the African Union-United Nations Joint Chief Mediator for Darfur, Mr. Djibril Bassolé, and the principles guiding the negotiations. The Council strongly urges all rebel movements to join the peace process without further delay or preconditions, and all parties immediately to cease hostilities and engage constructively in negotiations with a view to finding a lasting peace in Darfur. The Council expresses concern about attacks on civilians by militias and calls for all support to such groups to cease. The Council expresses its willingness to consider measures against any party whose actions undermine peace in Darfur.

The Council expresses deep concern about the increase in violence and insecurity in Darfur, including ceasefire violations, attacks by rebel groups, aerial bombardment by the Government of the Sudan, increased inter-tribal fighting, and attacks on humanitarian personnel and peacekeepers, which have restricted humanitarian access to conflict areas where vulnerable populations reside. In this context, the Council calls upon all parties to protect civilians and maintain full, safe and unhindered access for humanitarian workers to the population in need of assistance. The Council notes the need to support efforts to halt arms flows into Darfur in contravention of the arms embargo strengthened by resolution 1945(2010). The Council recalls the importance it attaches to an end to impunity, and to justice for crimes committed in Darfur.

The Council reaffirms its support for the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur and reiterates its call upon the Government of the Sudan and all relevant parties to cooperate fully with the Operation in discharging its mandate and to provide full unhindered access and freedom of movement, as well as its call for an end to impunity for those who attack peacekeepers and humanitarian workers.

The Council welcomes improved relations between the Sudan and Chad and encourages them to cooperate further in order to contribute to peace and stability in Darfur and the wider region.

The Council encourages full implementation of the Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement, including the provisions regarding rehabilitation, recovery and development, and welcomes the initiative of the Government of Kuwait to hold a conference on investment and development in Eastern Sudan in December 2010.

The Council calls for respect for international law, international human rights law and international humanitarian law; the protection of freedom of expression; humanitarian access across the Sudan, including in the border areas; and an end to all harassment of civil society. The Council underlines the importance of increased participation of women in the Sudanese peace processes.

The Council notes the considerable humanitarian, early recovery and peacebuilding needs of the Sudan and encourages the Sudanese authorities and international donors to fulfil their pledges to address them.

The Council underlines that full and timely implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement is essential to peace and stability in the Sudan and the region and to future cooperation between the Sudan and the international community, and recognizes that enduring cooperation between the parties will be essential for the benefit of all Sudanese people. The Council affirms that the core objective of the international community and all stakeholders in the Sudan is the peaceful coexistence of the people of the Sudan, democratic governance, the rule of law, accountability, equality, respect, human rights, justice and economic development, in particular the establishment of the conditions for conflict-affected communities to build strong, sustainable livelihoods.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 6452], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2010/28 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the reaffirmations by the Sudanese parties of their commitment to full and timely implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, and reaffirms its strong support for the efforts of the parties in this regard. The Council welcomes the conclusion of a peaceful registration process for the Southern Sudan referendum in the Sudan, and encourages the parties to continue this forward momentum towards peaceful and credible referendums on 9 January 2011 that reflect the will of the people. The Council strongly urges the parties to the Agreement to promptly fulfil their remaining commitments to finance the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission and the Southern Sudan Referendum Bureau.

The Council reaffirms its support for the Secretary-General's Panel on the Referenda in the Sudan led by President Benjamin Mkapa, and welcomes its work, including its statement of 9 December 2010 noting that the registration process provides the basis for a credible referendum. The Council extends its appreciation for the efforts of international and domestic observers.

The Council notes with deep concern the absence of an agreement on Abyei. The Council strongly urges the parties to calm rising tensions in Abyei, to urgently reach agreement on Abyei and other outstanding Comprehensive Peace Agreement issues, and to resolve critical post-referendum issues, including the border, security, citizenship, debts, assets, currency and natural resources.

The Council welcomes the work of the African Union High-level Implementation Panel on the Sudan led by the former President of South Africa, Mr. Thabo Mbeki, and its continuing efforts in this regard.

The Council reiterates its call for all parties to cooperate fully with the United Nations Mission in the Sudan in the discharge of its mandate, specifically with respect to the protection of civilians and to granting unhindered access and freedom of movement.

The Council reiterates the urgent need for the parties to provide immediate and ongoing reassurance to people of all nationalities in the Sudan, so that their rights, safety and property will be respected whatever the outcome of the referendums, and the urgent need to focus on the security and protection of minorities, including Southerners in the North and Northerners in the South. The Council urges the parties to ensure that citizenship and residency arrangements are in accordance with applicable international obligations and refrain from arbitrarily depriving an individual of citizenship. The Council urges the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement to respect their obligations.

The Council stresses the importance of inclusive, timely and credible popular consultations processes in Blue Nile and Southern Kordofan States, in accordance with the Comprehensive Peace Agreement. The Council also stresses the need for Southern Kordofan state-level elections to be held in accordance with the timeline established by the National Elections Commission.

The Council underlines that, whatever the outcome of the referendums, continued cooperation between the parties to the Comprehensive Peace Agreement will remain essential. The Council stresses the importance of the parties abiding by the commitments recorded in the statement by the African Union High-level Implementation Panel of 15 November 2010, including to find peaceful solutions to all outstanding matters, to never to resort to war again, and that neither party should take any action, or support any group, that would undermine the security of the other. The Council is deeply concerned about the recent military incidents in the Kiir River Valley and the subsequent displacement of civilians, and urges all parties to exercise restraint, avoiding escalation.

The Council reaffirms its support for the African Union-United Nations-led peace process for Darfur, hosted by the Government of Qatar. The Council strongly urges all rebel movements to join the peace process without further delay or preconditions. The Council reiterates the importance of increased participation of women in the Sudanese peace processes. The Council reiterates its deep concern about the increase in violence and insecurity in Darfur, including recently in Khor Abeche, such as ceasefire violations, attacks by rebel groups, increased inter-tribal fighting, attacks on humanitarian personnel and peacekeepers and aerial bombardment by the Government of the Sudan. The Council recalls the importance it attaches to an end to impunity, and to justice for crimes committed in Darfur. The Council reiterates its willingness to consider measures against any party whose actions undermine peace in the Sudan.

Report of Secretary-General (December). On 31 December [S/2010/681], pursuant to Security Council resolution 1590(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], the Secretary-General provided an assessment of the overall situation in the Sudan since his October report, as well as an update on UNMIS activities up to 30 December.

Considerable progress had been made in preparations for the Southern Sudan referendum scheduled for 9 January 2011, with voter registration having been concluded. Both parties to the CPA continued to reaffirm publicly their commitment to the holding of the referendum, the implementation of outstanding CPA provisions and the resolution of the situation in Abyei through dialogue. In conformity with the pledge, the parties sought to manage security incidents through the ceasefire mechanisms, including the Ceasefire Joint Military Committee and the Joint Defence Board, which was tasked by the Presidency to investigate claims of troop build-up along the border.

On 15 November, the Southern Sudan Referendum Commission launched the voter registration exercise throughout the Sudan and in eight other countries. Registration proceeded largely without major incidents. Owing in part to the low turnout in Northern Sudan, the Commission extended the registration period by seven days, until 8 December, without changing the date of the referendum. Turnout in Southern Sudan remained high during the referendum period. The UN Integrated Referendum and Electoral Division worked closely with the Commission, providing technical and logistical support.

As at 28 December, 3.7 million voters had registered in Southern Sudan, with 98 per cent of registration centres having reported; in addition, 116,311 voters had registered in Northern Sudan and 60,243 voters had registered abroad.

The panel appointed by the Secretary-General to monitor the referendum visited the Sudan three times during the reporting period (10–15 October, 13–22 November, 18–22 December). While it concluded that the process was generally transparent and free from organized fraud, there were some reports and accusations of voter intimidation.

Little progress had been made on establishing the Abyei Referendum Commission. The AU High-Level Implementation Panel continued to facilitate the discussion on Abyei at the level of the Presidency, but so far the talks remained inconclusive.

In support of security arrangements for the referendum, UNMIS was co-chairing the High Referendum Security Committee and providing assistance to its secretariat.

At the conclusion of United States-mediated talks on Abyei (Addis Ababa, 4–13 October), the CPA parties agreed to convene a second round of talks, facilitated by the AU High-level Implementation Panel, to discuss all outstanding issues and post-referendum arrangements. UNMIS worked closely with the Panel and other stakeholders to support the mediation efforts. During talks facilitated by the Panel (7–13 November), the parties reaffirmed their commitment to work for the successful conduct of the Southern Sudan referendum and pledged to respect its outcome, but failed to reach agreement on Abyei or on citizenship.

The situation in Abyei remained volatile, with rising tensions between the Ngok Dinka residents and the Misseriya nomads. UNMIS and UN agencies made efforts to mitigate tensions, with UNMIS reinforcing its military presence on the ground and intensifying its monitoring and verification activities with a view to preventing any escalation of violence and any violation of the ceasefire agreement.

A number of high-level meetings on the Sudan were convened during the reporting period and attended by the parties: the AU hosted the Sudan Consultative Forum (Addis Ababa, 6 November), and IGAD held the sixteenth Extraordinary Summit of IGAD Heads of State and Government on the Sudan (23 November). Sudanese Government representatives, international and national academics and other experts attended a symposium jointly convened by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and UNMIS (Khartoum, 6–7 November), concerning the technical and legal aspects of post-referendum citizenship.

In Eastern Sudan, the political and security situation remained stable. The signatories to the Eastern Sudan Peace Agreement [YUN 2006, p. 264] remained fully engaged with the Government of the Sudan in preparing for the Eastern Sudan donor conference hosted by Kuwait (1–2 December) and attended by 42 countries and nearly 200 funds, organizations and companies, which collectively pledged $3.55 billion to fund 177 development projects.

With regard to the Darfur peace process (see p. 258), the negotiating committees of the Government of the Sudan and LJM concluded work early in November on power- and wealth-sharing, land rights, compensation, returns of IDPs and refugees, security arrangements, accountability and reconciliation. Since then, the AU-UN Joint Mediation team worked with the parties individually, encouraging both to develop compromising positions that addressed the interests of all parties and stakeholders. The team was currently consulting with all parties, as well as regional and international partners. The AU-UN Joint Chief Mediator for Darfur continued to encourage SLM-AW and JEM to support and participate in the peace process.

While the security environment in Southern Sudan had shown significant improvement, the situation remained potentially volatile. Attacks by LRA in Southern Sudan appeared to be declining, with no evidence of a permanent LRA presence there.

Despite significant progress, the reintegration component of the DDR programme was still lagging behind due to a shortfall in funds pledged by donors. An independent review of the national DDR programme was conducted at the request of UNDP, in consultation with UNMIS, major donors and the Northern and Southern Sudan Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Commissions. Preliminary findings and recommendations were presented to the United Nations, donors and the Commissions in Khartoum on 15 December.

UNDP continued to deliver critical technical guidance and capacity support to the Southern Kordofan government's designated peacebuilding body, the Reconciliation and Peaceful Coexistence Mechanism. The UN joint programme on conflict prevention and peacebuilding completed its assessment phase, identifying locations and conflicts for initial interventions in Southern Kordofan and Warrap States.

The Secretary-General observed that the determination of the parties to the CPA to sustain peace, stability and coexistence would be the deciding factor in setting that course. He noted with satisfaction the efforts of his panel on the referendum and called on the parties to continue supporting its work and making the best possible use of its assistance. He considered recent progress in negotiations on post-referendum arrangements a welcome development, and commended the mediation role of the AU High-level Implementation Panel, as well as the efforts of the United Nations, UNMIS and other international partners in support of the process.

The continuing stalemate over Abyei and the Abyei referendum, however, was a cause for alarm. Although some progress appeared to have been made in the discussion facilitated by the AU High-level Implementation Panel, an agreement was not yet in sight, and tensions were building up on the ground. The Secretary-General urged all partners to intensify their efforts and provide support to all Sudanese in order to ensure the successful holding of the referendum and respect the choice made by the people by endorsing and implementing its outcome.

Children and armed conflict

Communication. On 26 January [S/2010/46], the President of the Security Council forwarded to the Secretary-General a letter of 11 January from the Chairman of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, established by Security Council resolution 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863], based on the Working Group's conclusions adopted on 18 December 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 246]. As a follow-up to the Group's conclusions, the Chairman was entrusted to welcome the Secretary-General's recommendation to UNAMID, UNMIS and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) (UN Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting) to facilitate the preparation and implementation of action plans, including by entering into dialogue with all parties to the conflict, in accordance with Council resolutions 1539(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 787], 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863] and 1882(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 739], and follow up and report on that aspect, as well as on specific commitments to address other grave violations and abuses; invite the Secretary-General to continue strengthening the Task Force on Monitoring and Reporting and to liaise with national institutions, NGOs and civil society networks to ensure effective collaboration of child protection activities; invite the Secretary-General to facilitate, given the regional dimensions of the crisis involving the Central African Republic, Chad and the Sudan, and other grave implications for children, better information exchange and closer cooperation between respective UN country teams and peacekeeping missions on child protection issues; invite the Secretary-General to promote dialogue among relevant stakeholders' organizations aiming at enhancing child protection and prevention of child recruitment in the region, including cross-border issues; and request the Secretary-General to ask his Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict, based on her follow-up visit to the Sudan in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 246], to assess the situation for children, facilitate dialogue with the parties to the conflict, continue holding consultations with the Government during report preparations, and assess progress in the implementation of the Working Group's recommendations.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In an April report [A/64/742-S/2010/181] on children and armed conflict, the Secretary-General reviewed developments in the Sudan. Although there had been no reports of active child recruitment by SPLA, the demobilization of children from the group remained a concern. Some children who had previously been demobilized by the South Sudan Disarmament Demobilization and Reintegration Commission had voluntarily rejoined SPLA in order to carry out military and domestic chores for the army. While SPLA had made efforts to remove children from payrolls, some children interviewed stated they were still receiving salaries to support their families. Children also remained or returned to military barracks as they had access to food, shelter and even some schooling provided by SPLA. SPLA expressed concern regarding the inadequate provision of reintegration services for the released children, and it had little choice but to provide such services to the children itself. The lack of provision of such services by the United Nations was due to the lack of capacity and resources, among other constraints. That had made it increasingly difficult for the United Nations to continue advocating for the release and integration of children.

In Darfur, the association of children with the Sudan Armed Forces, Government forces such as the Central Reserve Police and Border Intelligence Forces, and pro-Government militias remained a concern, although the numbers had decreased; the Government had no policy to recruit children, and directives had been issued in that regard.

LRA's sporadic attacks and incursions into villages and abductions continued to be a threat to children in southern Sudan, in particular in Western Equatoria state. As a result of such attacks, 177 Sudanese children had been abducted, 18 had been killed and 19 had been injured in 2009. The number of children who escaped or were rescued from LRA increased in 2009 as a result of joint military operations by the Uganda People's Defence Force, the Forces armées de la République démocratique du Congo (FARDC) and SPLA. From January to November 2009, 192 LRA-affected children, including 154 Sudanese, 35 Congolese and three Ugandans, had been rescued.

Child abduction also continued in the context of conflict between and within tribal communities in Jonglei state. Official figures provided by the Jonglei state Government indicated a total of 227 children who had been abducted both by the Murle and the Lou Nuer groups in Pibor county from November 2008 to November 2009.

The Secretary-General anticipated that recent developments deriving from the Doha peace dialogue and normalization of relations between the Sudan and Chad might have positive implications for children.

UNMIS

The United Nations Mission in the Sudan (UNMIS), established by Security Council resolution 1590(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 304], continued to support implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement signed by the Government of the Sudan and the Sudan People's Liberation Movement/Army; facilitate and coordinate the voluntary return of refugees and IDPs, and humanitarian assistance; assist with demining; and protect and promote human rights. On 29 April, by resolution 1919 (2010) (see p. 242), the Security Council extended the mandate of UNMIS until 30 April 2011.

As at 30 December, 9,745 of the authorized 10,000 military personnel were deployed, including 466 military observers, 198 staff officers and 9,081 troops. Freedom of movement continued to be a challenge for UNMIS operations. While the United Nations was working on options for possibly augmenting UN troops in the Sudan to prevent any deterioration of the security situation after the referendum, UNMIS had increased its presence in hot spots using its existing force, redeploying company-size additional troops to Abyei, Southern Kordofan and a new team site near the border between Upper Nile and White Nile States.

The UNMIS police component comprised 662 advisers, of an authorized strength of 715. As at the end of 2010, UNMIS police had trained 25,840 Southern Sudan Police Service personnel, including 2,254 female officers, in referendum security duties. The Mission continued to co-chair the meetings of the High Referendum Security Committee in Southern Sudan and was embedded in the State referendum security committees. In addition, UNMIS police supported the development of a three-year strategic plan for the Service, which had been recently approved by the Minister of the Interior.

Appointments. By a 29 January letter [S/2010/57], the Secretary-General informed the President of the Security Council of his intention to appoint Haile Menkerios of South Africa as his Special Representative for the Sudan with effect from 1 March. He would succeed Ashraf Jehangir Qazi of Pakistan, who had served in that position since 4 September 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 244]. On 31 January [S/2010/58], the President responded that the Council had taken note of the Secretary-General's intention.

On 8 June [S/2010/305], the Secretary-General informed the Council President of his intention to appoint Major General Moses Bisong Obi of Nigeria as Force Commander of UNMIS, to replace Lieutenant General Paban Jung Thapa of Nepal. In his response of 9 June [S/2010/306], the President stated that the Council took note of that intention.

Financing

Budget performance for the period
1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

In a performance report on the budget of UNMIS for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/566], the Secretary-General requested that the General Assembly decide on the treatment of the unencumbered balance of $10,788,300, representing the difference between the assessed amount totalling $871,276,400 and expenditure of $860,488,100, and that it decide on the treatment of other income/adjustments for the period ended 30 June 2009 amounting to $37,698,800, from interest income ($8,590,500), other/miscellaneous income ($10,129,800), prior-period adjustments ($4,900) and cancellations of prior-period adjustments ($18,983,400).

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a 19 March 2010 report [A/64/660/Add.3], recommended that the unencumbered balance and other income be credited to Member States in a manner to be determined by the Assembly.

In resolution 64/283 of 24 June, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Budget for the period 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

In a 22 January report [A/64/632], the Secretary-General submitted budget estimates for UNMIS for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, totalling $977,309,700. He recommended that the General Assembly appropriate that amount and assess it at a monthly rate of $81,442,475, should the Security Council decide to continue the Mission's mandate.

In a 19 March report [A/64/660/Add.3], ACABQ recommended appropriations of $938,345,400 for the 12-month period, reflecting an overall reduction of $35 million under operational costs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/831], adopted resolution 64/283 without vote [agenda item 159].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1590(2005) of 24 March 2005, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission in the Sudan for an initial period of six months as from 24 March 2005, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1919(2010) of 29 April 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 30 April 2011,

Recalling also its resolution 59/292 of 21 April 2005 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/273 B of 30 June 2009,

Recalling further its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Trust Fund in Support of the Peace Process in the Sudan,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in the Sudan as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 52.7 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-seven Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Acknowledges with appreciation that the use of the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, has been cost-effective and has resulted in savings for the United Nations, and welcomes the expansion of the logistics hub to provide logistical support to peacekeeping operations in the region and to contribute further to their enhanced efficiency and responsiveness, taking into account the ongoing efforts in this regard;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Reaffirms section XX of resolution 61/276, and encourages the Secretary-General, where feasible, to enhance regional and inter-mission cooperation with a view to achieving greater synergies in the use of the resources of the Organization and the implementation of mandates of the missions, while bearing in mind that individual missions are responsible for the preparation and implementation of their own budgets and for controlling their own assets and logistical operations;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future budget submissions contain sufficient information, explanation and justification of the proposed resource requirements relating to operational costs in order to allow Member States to take well-informed decisions;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

15. Further requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

16. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

17. Notes that resource requirements related to support by the Mission for the referendums in Southern Sudan and Abyei have yet to be determined and that no provision for them has been included in the budget for 2010/11, and decides to revert to this issue, as required, during the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly to allocate the necessary resources;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

18. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

19. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in the Sudan the amount of 994,880,200 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 938,000,000 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 48,172,800 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 8,707,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

20. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 829,066,833 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 April 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

21. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 25,009,250 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 21,104,917 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 3,323,750 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 580,583 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

22. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 165,813,367 dollars for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2011, at a monthly rate of 82,906,683 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2011, as set out in its resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

23. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 22 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 5,001,850 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 4,220,983 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 664,750 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 116,117 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

24. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 48,487,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

25. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 48,487,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 24 above;

26. Also decides that the increase of 2,243,700 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 48,487,100 dollars referred to in paragraphs 24 and 25 above;

27. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

29. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

30. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan".

Additional appropriations

In a 14 October report [A/65/509], the Secretary-General requested additional appropriations in the amount of $85.7 million for UNMIS support of the preparations of the self-determination referendums in Southern Sudan and the Abyei Area. He noted that the Security Council, by resolution 1919(2010) of 29 April (see p. 242), had emphasized the Mission's lead role in supporting those preparations, and that the General Assembly, in resolution 64/283 (see p. 255), had decided to revert to the issue of resource requirements for referendum-support to allocate the necessary resources.

ACABQ, on 12 November [A/65/571], recommended that the General Assembly appropriate the requested $85,705,600 for the support of the referendums, in addition to the $938,000,000 already appropriated for maintaining the Mission. The Committee also recommended an assessment of $71,421,334 for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 April 2011, and an amount of $14,284,266 at a monthly rate of $7,142,133, should the Security Council decide to continue the Mission mandate beyond the latter date.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/656], adopted resolution 65/257 A without vote [agenda item 157].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Mission in the Sudan for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1919(2010) of 29 April 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 30 April 2011,

Recalling also its resolution 64/283 of 24 June 2010 on the financing of the Mission,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

Financing arrangements for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

2. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in the Sudan the amount of 70,026,300 United States dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, in addition to the amount of 938 million dollars already appropriated for the maintenance of the Mission for the same period under the terms of its resolution 64/283;

Financing of the appropriation

3. Also decides, taking into account the amount of 829,066,833 dollars already apportioned under the terms of its resolution 64/283 for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 April 2011, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 58,355,250 dollars for the same period, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in its resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

4. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member

States, as provided for in paragraph 3 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 826,500 dollars, representing the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 April 2011;

5. Decides to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 11,671,050 dollars at a monthly rate of 5,835,525 dollars for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2011, as set out in its resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

6. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 165,300 dollars, representing the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2011;

7. Further decides to keep under review during its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan".

Darfur

The situation in Darfur during 2010 remained a concern, as progress was followed by renewed conflict. On 15 January, the Governments of the Sudan and Chad took an important step forward to improve their relations by signing a protocol on border security. The Joint Border Force, established in February, was having a positive impact in terms of security and opening cross-border trade and movement. In May, however, with the elections over, violence flared up again between government forces and JEM troops, in flagrant breach of their commitments to cease hostilities, causing May to be the deadliest month since the establishment of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 251]. In addition, tribal conflict, displacements, criminality and violations of human rights continued to cause suffering throughout the year.

Following the signing of a Framework Agreement to Resolve the Conflict in Darfur between the Government of the Sudan and JEM on 23 February, and of the Framework and Ceasefire Agreements between the Government and the Liberation and Justice Movement (LJM)—a newly created alliance of smaller Darfuri rebel groups—on 18 March, further negotiations were suspended early in April as the Government withdrew its delegation for the electoral period. From early April until early June, the AU-UN Joint Mediation, led by Joint Chief Mediator Djibril Bassolé, conducted a series of workshops aimed at enabling the armed movements to strengthen their cohesion, capacity and readiness to engage in direct negotiations with the Government.

The new UNAMID Joint Special Representative Ibrahim Gambari (Nigeria) arrived in the Mission area to assume his duties on 22 January. On 30 July, by resolution 1935(2010) (see p. 262), the Security Council extended the mandate of UNAMID for a further 12 months, until 31 July 2011.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (January).

Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1881(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 255], the Secretary-General reported on 29 January [S/2010/50] on progress made towards implementing the mandate of UNAMID, as well as on the political process, the security and humanitarian situation, and compliance by all parties with their international obligations. In accordance with the Council's request, the report, which covered the period from 1 November 2009 to 31 January 2010, included an assessment of the Mission's progress made against benchmarks contained in his November 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 158].

The Secretary-General noted that UNAMID had made significant progress towards full deployment and was now focused on its critical tasks of protecting civilians and facilitating humanitarian delivery. Serious challenges remained, however, including military confrontations between the Government of the Sudan and other armed elements, attacks on UNAMID and humanitarian convoys, and armed attempts to prevent UNAMID from patrolling. The most serious impediment to sustainable peace continued to be the failure of some parties to engage in the peace process in a meaningful way.

Communications. On 17 February [S/2010/87], the Sudan transmitted the El Fasher Declaration, issued by the Arab League Council at its extraordinary session held at El Fasher, capital of Northern Darfur State, on 14 February. The meeting demonstrated the improvement in both security and humanitarian fields towards lasting and durable peace, the Sudan noted.

By separate letters of 24 February, Qatar [S/2010/118] and the Sudan [S/2010/98] transmitted the Framework Agreement between the Government of the Sudan and JEM, signed in Doha, Qatar, on 23 February, which, according to the Sudan, constituted a breakthrough towards lasting peace and stability in Darfur.

By separate letters of 18 March [S/2010/152] and 23 March [S/2010/151], respectively, Qatar and the Sudan transmitted a Framework Agreement to Resolve the Conflict in Darfur and the Ceasefire Agreement, signed by the Government of the Sudan and JEM (Doha, 18 March).

On 13 April [S/2010/186], the Sudan transmitted a statement issued by Ahmed Bin Abdullah

Al-Mahmoud, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of Qatar, and Djibril Bassolé, AU-UN Joint Chief Mediator, in Doha, Qatar, on 7 April, confirming the continuation of the negotiations on Darfur after the ongoing elections in the Sudan and calling on all parties to participate.

Report of Secretary-General (April). On 28 April [S/2010/213], pursuant to Security Council resolution 1881(2009), the Secretary-General reported on progress made in implementing the mandate of UNAMID across Darfur, as well as on the political process, the security and humanitarian situation and the compliance by all parties with their obligations. The report, which covered the period from 1 February to 30 April 2010, also assessed progress against benchmarks presented to the Council in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 259].

The Secretary-General noted several positive developments in the Darfur peace process, with the signing of a Framework Agreement between the Government of the Sudan and JEM, which included the declaration of an immediate ceasefire, a commitment to release prisoners of war and the undertaking to negotiate a final peace agreement by 15 March, and following which the Government immediately released 57 JEM prisoners of war. Although the parties failed to agree on a ceasefire implementation protocol or a final agreement by the 15 March deadline, the ceasefire had largely been respected.

In the negotiations, significant steps were taken towards the unification of armed movements. On 23 February, the creation of the Liberation and Justice Movement (LJM) was announced, merging members of the SLM-Revolutionary Forces (Tripoli Group) and part of the Road Map Group (Addis Ababa Group) into a single new movement under the leadership of Eltigani Seisi Mohamed Ateem. The Government of the Sudan and LJM immediately engaged in negotiations and on 18 March signed the Framework Agreement to Resolve the Conflict in Darfur. The joint AU-UN Mediation planned to manage the negotiations with JEM and LJM in parallel in the first stage, and then to merge two sets of negotiations with a view to concluding a final settlement. In April, the Mediation, supported by UNAMID, conducted a series of capacity-building workshops for the armed movements in order to strengthen their cohesion, as well as their capacity and readiness to engage in direct negotiations with the Government. The Mediation, in collaboration with UNAMID, also launched civil society consultations aimed at building on the conclusions of the first Darfur civil society conference (Doha, 18 November 2009) [YUN 2009, p. 259].

The Joint Special Representative undertook consultations with the parties to the conflict and a broad range of stakeholders, including Member States as well as regional and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). He met with Abdul Wahid, leader of the eponymous SLA faction, to urge him to permit access to areas under his movement's control, facilitate participation in the civil society consultations and assist UNAMID in retrieving equipment lost in an ambush on 5 March, as well as join the peace process.

Electoral campaigning gradually intensified after a slow start in February. The NCP campaign was the most visible throughout the region. PCP, SPLM and independents also campaigned vigorously, but other parties claimed that the ongoing imposition of the 1997 State of Emergency Law restricted active campaigning. On 31 March, SPLM announced that it was withdrawing the candidacy of Yasir Arman from the race for the presidency and that it would not contest elections in Darfur, stating that the electoral environment was not conducive to free and fair elections. The Communist Party of the Sudan, the National Umma Party and the Umma Reform and Renewal Party also withdrew their candidates from all levels of the elections. Opposition parties claimed that they were not satisfied with the response of the Government of the Sudan to their demands for reform of the electoral environment and postponement of the elections. Nevertheless, since the official deadline for the withdrawal of candidates had passed, the names of those who had announced their withdrawal remained on the ballots, and any votes cast for them would be counted by NEC.

With the exception of the Jebel Marra and Jebel Moon areas, voting took place in Darfur from 11 to 15 April, after NEC had extended the polling from three to five days nationwide. Voting occurred in IDP camps where polling centres had been established, although IDPs in other camps, including Zalingei, did not participate. There were some reports of delays and logistical challenges, combined with a high security presence. There were also reports, denied by the National Intelligence and Security Service, of the arrest and harassment of opposition candidates or their supporters by Service officials.

Despite the 23 February ceasefire between the Government and JEM, JEM commanders in Jebel Moon, Western Darfur, informed UNAMID that they would not allow electoral activities to take place in areas under their control and warned it against moving within those areas during the polls or helping the Government to deliver electoral materials. NEC confirmed that 14 out of the 23 polling stations in Serba (Kulbus), Western Darfur, were closed on the first day of polling.

UNAMID supported UNMIS and NEC in preparation for the elections. UNAMID police provided training on elections security management, including crowd control, and a "training the trainers" course to 9,151 government police officers across Darfur. The United Nations also made available aviation and movement support for the elections.

During the reporting period, UNAMID was the target of a number of deliberate attacks. On 16 February, seven personnel of the Pakistani formed police unit were injured—three of them critically—during an attack on its patrol to the El Sereif IDP camp, 7 km west of Nyala.

Restrictions on the freedom of movement of UNAMID continued to hamper the Mission's activities. Approximately half of those restrictions were related to Government of the Sudan officials, while other incidents involved JEM and the Minni Minnawi, Abdul Shafi and Abdul Wahid factions of SLA, as well as Chadian armed opposition groups. Carjacking also continued to pose a threat, with 10 vehicles seized from UN staff and NGOs during the reporting period.

The Secretary-General noted the positive developments during the reporting period, including progress in the Doha negotiations, improvement in the relations between Chad and the Sudan (see p. 275), and an election process largely without violence, although substantial segments of the population, including those in rebel-held areas and many IDP camps were not included in the voter registration exercise, as a result of insecurity, boycotts and alleged flaws in the process. The increasing deployment and operational capabilities of UNAMID, especially in remote areas, had helped improve the safety and security of the Darfuran population, including through expanded patrolling, community policing and improved collaboration with Sudanese authorities. Nonetheless, there remained serious challenges to the achievement of lasting peace, including ongoing reports of violence in many areas of Darfur, the lack of participation of key stakeholders in the political process and the failure of the electoral process to include large groups of Darfurians.

Continued denial of access by various parties—particularly in areas where clashes had occurred, such as Jebel Marra—significantly constrained UNAMID's ability to implement its mandate to protect civilians in imminent danger. Deliberate attacks and the threatening posture of some commanders on the ground often impeded UNAMID patrols to vulnerable areas, particularly those under the control of non-signatories to the 2006 Darfur Peace Agreement [YUN 2006, p. 274]. The Secretary-General strongly condemned the abductions of four UNAMID police advisors on 11 April and urged all parties to ensure the safety and security of all UN and associated personnel.

The continued refusal by Abdul Wahid to join the Darfur process and negotiate with the Government of the Sudan, coupled with his movement's refusal to allow UNAMID and humanitarian agencies access to areas under its control, impeded the peace process.

The Secretary-General called once again on Abdul Wahid to engage in negotiations and facilitate the international community's efforts to end the suffering of the Darfuran populations, and welcomed the latest efforts of both the Joint Chief Mediator and the Joint Special Representative in trying to convince Abdul Wahid to join the peace process in the interest of his people.

The Secretary-General also welcomed the steps taken by the Governments of the Sudan and Chad to restore diplomatic relations and the deployment of the Joint Border Monitoring Force, which would bring significant improvement in the security situation in the west and north-west of Darfur. He urged the Government of the Sudan, in collaboration with the Chadian authorities, to address the insecurity created by the redeployment of Chadian armed opposition groups away from the border area.

Encouraged by the progress towards full UNAMID deployment, the Secretary-General nevertheless noted that continuing shortfalls in terms of self-sustainment of military and formed police units remained a challenge to the Mission's operational capability. He welcomed the agreements by SLA-Free Will, JEM-Peace Wing and SLA-Abu Gasim to enter into action plans to cease recruitment of and release to the United Nations all children associated with their groups. He called on other armed groups and government forces to engage with UNAMID in its efforts to develop time-bound action plans in line with Security Council resolutions 1539(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 787] and 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863].

Security Council statement (May). On 7 May [SC/9920], the Security Council condemned in the strongest terms attacks on UNAMID peacekeepers in Darfur on that day, which resulted in the deaths of two Egyptian soldiers and left another three seriously wounded. The Council expressed its condolences to the families of those killed in the attacks, as well as to the Government of Egypt, and encouraged the Government of the Sudan to ensure that all the perpetrators were swiftly brought to justice.

Communication. On 17 May [S/2010/243], Qatar transmitted a statement issued on 16 May by the Joint Mediation on the conflict in Darfur indicating that before the end of May, the Mediation would present a plan for the peace process which included the resumption in Doha of direct negotiations between the parties to the conflict and the participation of civil society in the peace process.

Security Council statement (June). On 22 June [SC/9958], the Security Council condemned the attacks on UNAMID peacekeepers in Darfur on 21 June that resulted in the deaths of three Rwandan soldiers and left another seriously wounded. The Council expressed its condolences to the families of those killed in the attacks, as well as to the Government of Rwanda. It encouraged the Government of Sudan to ensure that all the perpetrators were swiftly brought to justice, and stressed that there had to be an end to impunity for those that attacked peacekeepers.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In a 14 July report [S/2010/382], the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1881(2009), gave an overview of developments and activities in Darfur from 1 May to 30 June, and provided an evaluation of the overall trends with respect to the situation during the past year.

The Secretary-General reported that on 20 May, NEC had announced the parliamentary results of the general elections. Of the 67 per cent of eligible voters in Darfur who had registered in December 2009, slightly less than half actually voted. Participation by IDPs was limited and security issues limited voting possibilities in areas controlled by non-signatory armed movements. In the National Assembly, NCP won 73 of 86 seats allocated to Darfur. Of the remaining 13 seats, three remained vacant as polling was postponed for security reasons. Independent candidates won two seats, while the opposition PCR, the Umma Federal Party and the Democratic Unionist Party won four, three and one, respectively. With 86 seats, representatives of Darfur constituted 19 per cent of the National Assembly.

On 14 June, President Al-Bashir appointed nine Darfurians to his Cabinet, five as ministers and four as State ministers. Two Darfurians were given key portfolios as Ministers of Justice and of Finance and National Economy. The President began the appointment of his presidential advisers on 24 June by issuing a decree appointing Nafie Ali Nafie and Musa Mohamed Ahmed as his assistants, however, the position of Senior Assistant to the President, established by the Darfur Peace Agreement and held by Minni Minnawi until the elections, had not been filled as at 30 June. Negotiations appeared to be ongoing with regard to his possible re-appointment as Senior Assistant and Chairman of the Transitional Darfur Regional Authority.

Neither the Sudan Liberation Movement of Minni Minnawi, nor the signatories to the 2006 Declaration of Commitment to the Darfur Peace Agreement, with the exception of SLM-Peace Wing, had succeeded in transforming themselves into political parties, owing to their failure to demobilize.

Since the signing of the Framework Agreement of 23 February (see p. 240), JEM and the Government had made no further progress towards a ceasefire implementation protocol or a final agreement. On the ground, armed conflict continued between JEM and Government of the Sudan troops, in flagrant violation of the cessation of hostilities contained in the Framework Agreement.

Significant challenges remained in facilitating an inclusive and comprehensive settlement to the Darfur conflict. The Joint Mediation would continue to support direct talks between LJM and the Government of the Sudan and to bring civil society, IDPs and refugee representatives into the discussions. In coordination with UNAMID leadership and regional and other actors, the Joint Mediation would also continue to engage JEM and SLA-Abdul Wahid (SLA-AW) with a view to bringing them into the talks. The Joint Mediation would also work to promote the consolidation of improved Chad-Sudan relations (see p. 275).

UNAMID supported the Joint Mediation, in particular with regard to the participation of civil society in the peace process. On 8 June, the Joint Special Representative and the Joint Chief Mediator held a meeting with 80 civil society members in Nyala, Southern Darfur. UNAMID was also providing expertise on ceasefire and other implementation mechanisms to the Joint Mediation in Doha.

The security situation in Darfur remained volatile, with sporadic fighting, crime, kidnappings, and attacks on UN peacekeepers—five peacekeepers were killed in separate attacks in May and June (see p. 260)—as well as civilian personnel. During the months prior, the situation had deteriorated significantly, in particular with the outbreak of clashes between JEM and government troops, and between SLA-AW and government troops, as well as tribal clashes in the Zalingei corridor in Western Darfur. More than 400 conflict-related fatalities were recorded in May, making it the deadliest month since UNAMID took over from the African Union Mission in the Sudan on 31 December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 259]. The fighting, including bombardment by SAF, caused insecurity, displacement and the loss of livelihoods among the civilian population.

The Government and armed movements denied UNAMID access to the areas affected by the fighting and to the civilians caught up in the violence. On 30 and 31 May, the Government imposed restrictions on UN rotary-wing flights into areas of Southern and Northern Darfur, which were lifted on 14 June; however, restrictions on such flights between El Fasher and Nyala remained in force, with implications for UNAMID military operations. Moreover, some UNAMID fixed-wing flights in Southern Darfur were cancelled by the Government, causing disruption to UNAMID civilian operations. The security situation for UNAMID personnel continued to be precarious, due to carjacking, kidnappings and abductions, and other incidents of banditry and crime.

In response to attacks on UNAMID personnel during May and June, the Joint Special Representative met with government officials in Khartoum to request a thorough and timely investigation and prosecution and punishment of the perpetrators, and to request that the Government promptly address the issues of restrictions on the movement of AU-UN and humanitarian personnel and on the use of UNAMID assets, including the use of tactical helicopters during emergency situations.

A quarter of Darfur's total population, some 2 million people, were currently displaced and continued to rely on aid agencies for their survival. Concerns surrounding the security situation and humanitarian access in Southern Darfur intensified in recent weeks, following abductions of three international humanitarian staff on 18 May and 22 June.

The conflict in Darfur remained among the most complex facing the international community, the Secretary-General observed. He welcomed the commitment of the Government of the Sudan and LJM to negotiate a comprehensive agreement with the participation of civil society, but was concerned that the withdrawal of JEM from the peace talks in Doha undermined the goal of an inclusive and rapid agreement, without which there was a risk of increasing instability in the Sudan. He urged the Government and JEM to cease immediately their military confrontation and commit to peace talks under the Joint Chief Mediator. He also called on SLA-AW to rejoin the talks. UNAMID would continue to support the Joint Chief Mediator and work to ensure that the content of the Doha negotiations was transparent to the people of Darfur and that the peace process had their support. UNAMID had an important role to play in providing a secure environment conducive to voluntary returns and supporting the UN country team's efforts to stimulate livelihood opportunities.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 July [meeting 6366], the Council adopted resolution 1935(2010) unanimously. The draft [S/2010/402] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in the Sudan,

Reaffirming also its strong commitment to the sovereignty, unity, independence and territorial integrity of the Sudan and its determination to work with the Government of the Sudan, in full respect of its sovereignty, to assist in tackling the various challenges in the Sudan,

Recalling its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, in which it reaffirms, inter alia, the relevant provisions of the 2005 World Summit Outcome, its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict, its resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003 on the protection of humanitarian and United Nations personnel and its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 and associated resolutions on women and peace and security,

Bearing in mind the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees of 28 July 1951 and the Protocol thereto, of 31 January 1967, along with the Organization of African Unity Convention governing the specific aspects of refugee problems in Africa of 10 September 1969, as well as the African Union Convention for the Protection and Assistance of Internally Displaced Persons in Africa of 23 October 2009,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General of 10 February 2009 on children and armed conflict in the Sudan, including his recommendations, and recalling the conclusions on children and armed conflict in the Sudan endorsed by the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict,

Expressing its strong commitment and determination to promote and support the Darfur political process and the efforts of the Joint African Union-United Nations Chief Mediator for Darfur, welcoming his commitment to progress and the negotiations between the Government of the Sudan and the Liberation and Justice Movement on an agreement under the auspices of the Joint Chief Mediator, and deploring the fact that some groups continue to refuse to join the political process,

Underlining, without prejudice to the primary responsibility of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security, the importance of the partnership between the United Nations and the African Union, consistent with Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations, with regard to the maintenance of peace and security in Africa, particularly in the Sudan,

Welcoming the important role of the African Union in the Sudan, in particular the efforts of the African Union High-Level Implementation Panel for the Sudan, working in cooperation with the Joint Chief Mediator and the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to promote peace, reconciliation and accountability in Darfur, including through the early convening of a Darfur-Darfur conference, with a view to encouraging early progress in the African Union-United Nations-led peace process,

Welcoming also the report of the Secretary-General of 14 July 2010 on the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur,

Stressing the need for the Council to pursue a rigorous, strategic approach to peacekeeping deployments with a view to enhancing the effectiveness of peacekeeping missions, and underlining in this regard the importance of addressing the requirement for the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to be able to deter threats to the implementation of its mandate and the safety and security of its peacekeeping personnel in accordance with the Charter,

Expressing deep concern at the deterioration in the security situation in Darfur, including ceasefire violations, attacks by rebel groups, aerial bombardment by the Government of the Sudan, increased inter-tribal fighting, and attacks on humanitarian personnel and peacekeepers, which have restricted humanitarian access to conflict areas where vulnerable civilian populations reside, as stated in the report of the Secretary-General of 14 July 2010, and calling upon all parties to cease hostilities and urgently facilitate humanitarian access,

Reiterating its condemnation of all violations of human rights and international humanitarian law in Darfur, calling upon all parties to comply with their obligations under international humanitarian and human rights law, emphasizing the need to bring to justice the perpetrators of such crimes, and urging the Government of the Sudan to comply with its obligations in this respect,

Reaffirming its concern over the negative effect of the ongoing violence in Darfur on the stability of the Sudan as a whole as well as the region, welcoming improved relations between the Sudan and Chad following the signing on 15 January 2010 by the Government of the Sudan and the Government of Chad of an agreement to normalize their bilateral relations as well as the deployment of a joint force under a joint command along the border, and encouraging the Sudan and Chad to continue to implement this agreement and to cooperate in order to achieve peace and stability in Darfur and the wider region,

Determining that the situation in the Sudan constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur as set out in resolution 1769(2007) of 31 July 2007 for a further twelve months, until 31 July 2011;

2. Underlines the need for the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to make full use of its mandate and capabilities, giving priority in decisions about the use of available capacity and resources to (a) the protection of civilians across Darfur, and (b) ensuring safe, timely and unhindered humanitarian access, and the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and humanitarian activities;

3. Reaffirms the importance of promoting the African Union-United Nations-led political process for Darfur and, in this regard, underlines the need for the systematic and sustained engagement of all Darfuri stakeholders, including newly elected officials, civil society, including women and women-led organizations, community groups and tribal leaders, in order to create an environment conducive to peace and security through constructive and open dialogue, welcomes the priority given to the continuing efforts of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to promote such engagement in support of and to complement the work of the Joint African Union-United Nations Chief Mediator for Darfur, Mr. Djibril Yipéné Bassolé, and the African Union-United Nations-led political process for Darfur, and welcomes the work of the African Union High-Level Implementation Panel for the Sudan in this regard;

4. Requests the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, in consultation with the United Nations country team, to develop a comprehensive strategy for the achievement of the objectives set out in paragraph 2 above, and requests the Operation to maximize the use of its capabilities in Darfur in the implementation of that strategy;

5. Commends the contribution of troop- and police-contributing countries and donors to the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, notes that the Operation is nearing full deployment, underlines the need for capable units able to carry out the Operation's mandated tasks, in this regard requests the continuing assistance of donors to troop- and police-contributing countries in ensuring that units are suitably trained and equipped to conduct and sustain themselves on operations, and calls upon Member States to pledge and contribute the remaining military utility helicopters, aerial reconnaissance and other force enablers required;

6. Strongly condemns all attacks on the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, underlines that any attack on or threat to the Operation is unacceptable, demands that there be no recurrence of such attacks, stresses the need to enhance the safety and security of Operation personnel, as well as the need to put an end to impunity for those who attack peacekeepers, and in this regard urges the Government of the Sudan to do its utmost to bring the perpetrators of any such crimes to justice;

7. Commends the credible work of the Tripartite Mechanism but expresses deep concern at continuing restrictions placed upon the movement and operations of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, calls upon all parties in Darfur to remove all obstacles to the full and proper discharge by the Operation of its mandate, including by ensuring its security and freedom of movement, and in this regard urges the Government of the Sudan to comply with the status-of-forces agreement fully and without delay, particularly regarding flight and equipment clearances, and the removal of all obstacles to the use of aerial assets of the Operation in order to, inter alia, respond to armed threats and emergency medical evacuations as appropriate;

8. Stresses the importance of achievable and realistic targets against which the progress of United Nations peacekeeping operations can be measured, requests the Secretary-General to continue reporting to the Security Council every ninety days on progress made towards implementing across Darfur the mandate of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, including on progress towards and obstacles to the implementation of the strategy referred to in paragraph 4 above, also including an assessment of progress against the benchmarks set out in annex II to the report of the Secretary-General of 16 November 2009 as well as on progress in the political process, the security and humanitarian situation, including in the internally displaced persons sites and refugee camps, and early recovery and compliance by all parties with their international obligations;

9. Demands that all parties to the conflict in Darfur immediately end violence and attacks on civilians, peacekeepers and humanitarian personnel, and comply with their obligations under human rights and international humanitarian law, affirms in this context the strong opposition of the Council to serious violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law, calls for an immediate cessation of hostilities and for all parties to commit themselves to a sustained and permanent ceasefire, requests the Secretary-General to consult with relevant parties with a view to developing a more effective ceasefire monitoring mechanism, and underlines the need for the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to report on major instances of violence which undermines the full and constructive efforts of the parties towards peace;

10. Expresses its serious concern at the deterioration of the humanitarian situation, the continued threats to humanitarian organizations and the restricted humanitarian access in Darfur, calls for the full implementation of the communiqué between the Government of the Sudan and the United Nations on the facilitation of humanitarian activities in Darfur, and demands that the Government of the Sudan, all militias, armed groups and all other stakeholders ensure the full, safe and unhindered access of humanitarian organizations and relief personnel and the delivery of humanitarian assistance to populations in need;

11. Reiterates that there can be no military solution to the conflict in Darfur and that an inclusive political settlement and the successful deployment of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur are essential to re-establishing peace, and reaffirms its full support for the work of the Joint Chief Mediator, Mr. Djibril Yipéné Bassolé, and the African Union-United Nations-led political process for Darfur;

12. Demands that all parties to the conflict, including all rebel groups, immediately engage fully and constructively in the peace process without preconditions, including by entering into talks under the mediation of Mr. Bassolé with a view to completing an inclusive and comprehensive agreement, underlines the importance of completing such an agreement in order to bring a stable and durable peace to the region, welcomes the work of Qatar in this regard and the support of other countries in the region, and calls upon the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to continue to support the Joint Chief Mediator and the African Union-United Nations Joint Mediation Support Team;

13. Notes that conflict in one area of the Sudan affects other areas of the Sudan and the wider region, and urges the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to coordinate closely with other United Nations missions in the region, including the United Nations Mission in the Sudan and the United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad;

14. Requests the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, consistent with its current capabilities and mandate, to assist and complement the efforts of the United Nations Mission in the Sudan, as appropriate, in preparing for the referendums in Southern Sudan and Abyei, including by coordinating closely with the Mission in sharing analysis of risks in the border areas, particularly regarding threats to civilians;

15. Stresses the importance of achieving dignified and durable solutions for refugees and internally displaced persons and of ensuring their full participation in the planning and management of these solutions, and demands that all parties to the conflict in Darfur create the conditions conducive to allowing the voluntary, safe, dignified and sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons or their local integration;

16. Notes that security will greatly facilitate early recovery initiatives and a return to normalcy in Darfur, stresses the importance of early recovery efforts in Darfur and in this respect encourages the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, within its current mandate, to facilitate the work of the United Nations country team and expert agencies on early recovery and reconstruction in Darfur, inter alia, through the provision of area security, and calls upon the Government of the Sudan to continue its efforts to resolve the root causes of the Darfur crisis and to increase investment in early recovery activity;

17. Expresses deep concern over the persistent localized conflicts and violence and their effect on civilians, and the proliferation of arms, in particular small arms, and in this regard requests the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to continue to support local conflict resolution mechanisms and to monitor whether any arms or related material are present in Darfur, in accordance with its mandate as set out in paragraph 9 of resolution 1769(2007);

18. Demands that the parties to the conflict immediately take appropriate measures to protect civilians, including women and children, from all forms of sexual violence, in line with resolution 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, requests the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur to report on the implementation of its comprehensive strategy for providing protection to women and children from sexual violence and gender-based violence, as well as to assess progress towards the elimination of sexual and gender-based violence, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the relevant provisions of resolutions 1325(2000), 1820(2008), 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 are implemented by the Operation and to include information on this in his reporting to the Council;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure (a) continued monitoring and reporting of the situation of children, as part of the reports referred to in paragraph 8 above, and (b) continued dialogue with the parties to the conflict towards the preparation of time-bound action plans to end the recruitment and use of child soldiers and other violations of international humanitarian law and human rights law against children;

20. Also requests the Secretary-General periodically to review and update the concept of operations and rules of engagement of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur in line with its mandate under relevant Council resolutions and to report on this, as part of the reports referred to in paragraph 8 above, to the Council and troop-contributing countries;

21. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (October). On 18 October [S/2010/543], pursuant to Security Council resolution 1935(2010) (see p. 262), the Secretary-General reported on progress made towards implementing UNAMID's mandate across Darfur and provided an assessment of progress made against benchmarks set out in his November 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 259], as well as the state of the political process; the security and humanitarian situation, including in camps for IDPs and refugees; and progress towards early recovery. He noted that further to the Council's request in resolution 1935(2010), UNAMID continued to support the Doha peace process, in addition to its primary mandate of protecting civilians. A separate and focused strategy for protecting civilians, requested by the same resolution, was currently being developed.

During the reporting period, the AU-UN Joint Chief Mediator for Darfur continued to pursue a multi-strand strategy designed to ensure that civil society was adequately involved in the peace process, to facilitate the negotiation of a peace agreement between the belligerent parties, and to encourage the improvement of regional relations between the Sudan, Chad and Libya.

In the first half of July, the Government of the Sudan and LJM continued negotiations under the auspices of the Joint Chief Mediator. On 17 July, the Joint Chief Mediation convened a meeting to assess the work of six negotiating committees formed to undertake more detailed work in the areas of power-sharing and the administrative status of Darfur; wealth-sharing, including land rights; compensation and the return of IDPs and refugees; security arrangements; justice and reconciliation; and agreement and resolution of disputes. At the end of July, while the parties took a pause in negotiations during the month of Ramadan, the Joint Mediation consolidated the work of the committees and incorporated it in a draft text that included the points of argument between the Government and LJM. Once an initial draft was completed, the Joint Mediation would consult with the parties, as well as regional and international partners, with a view to developing a plan for peace acceptable to the parties and the people of Darfur. In an effort to make the peace process more inclusive, the Joint Mediation continued its efforts to persuade the leaders of SLA-AW and JEM to rejoin the talks.

With a view to enhancing civil society participation in the peace process, UNAMID and the Government of Qatar jointly organized a conference of Darfur civil society representatives (Doha, 12–15 July), as a follow-up to the first such conference in Doha in November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 259]. A total of 315 participants, selected by the communities themselves and representing various constituencies across Darfur, participated in the conference, which concluded with a declaration and communiqué endorsing the first Doha civil society forum in November 2009 [ibid.] and called for urgent measures to improve the security and well-being of IDPs and other communities in advance of a peace agreement, and made recommendations for security arrangements, land issues, power-sharing, justice, reconciliation and development issues to be included as part of any final agreement. The conference was also attended by IDPs and Darfuri refugees from camps in Chad. As part of efforts to enhance popular understanding of and support for the peace process, the Joint Mediation, in partnership with UNAMID, undertook activities designed to increase awareness of civil society's proposals and their potential role in the peace process, such as follow-up meetings, radio and sensitization programmes.

While representing a positive step in the peace process, the second Doha conference was followed by violence and unrest between IDPs in favour of attending the conference and those opposed to it. Clashes occurred in Kalma and Hamadiya camps, leading to deaths and injuries. More clashes resulted in at least 35 fatalities and the displacement of some 25,000 IDPs from Kalma camp to Nyala and surrounding villages; several thousand sought refuge at the UNAMID community policing centre located next to Kalma camp, among them five camp leaders and a woman, who sought protection from opposing factions and mistreatment by the Government. Following those events, an ad hoc committee of UNAMID and government officials was established to resolve the situation of the five IDP leaders wanted by the authorities, as well as issues such as weapons proliferation and armed elements in the camps.

The security situation in Darfur remained fragile and unpredictable, with intermittent fighting between SAF and the armed opposition forces, inter-tribal clashes, tension in some IDP camps, armed attacks on and abduction of humanitarian and UNAMID personnel, and criminality. Nevertheless, there had been some improvements, particularly with regard to the safety and security of UN personnel; carjacking and abductions had decreased due to measures put in place by UNAMID. There was also a reduction in armed confrontations between parties to the conflict. Tribal clashes were the leading cause of fatalities in August, claiming 157 lives. Of those, clashes between the Misseriya and Rezeigat over land and access to migration routes were most significant. Inter-tribal clashes continued to flare up in other areas over water resources and cattle thefts.

Criminals targeting UNAMID and humanitarian personnel continued to be a concern. Despite several démarches by UNAMID leadership with the highest level of Government, the issue of impunity remained unaddressed. Except in the case of the killing of three Rwandan peacekeepers in Nertiti near Zalingei, Western Darfur, on 21 June, which had gone to trial, no one had yet been held accountable or brought to justice for those incidents.

UNAMID continued its efforts to remove the threat of unexploded ordnance throughout Darfur through clearance activities, risk education, surveys and emergency assessments of recently contaminated areas and demolition of identified unexploded ordnance.

Assessing progress against the benchmarks set out in his November 2009 report, the Secretary-General noted that the achievement of a comprehensive political solution was limited by, among other things, weak support for the Darfur Peace Agreement and a failure by the parties to enter into any subsequent agreements. UNAMID had been working effectively on the implementation of conflict resolution mechanisms for local communities and continued to provide substantive support to the Doha process and the Joint Mediation.

There was a lack of significant progress with regard to UNAMID contributing to the restoration of a stable and secure environment throughout Darfur. UNAMID had faced significant difficulties, including restrictions on movement, in addition to continued impunity. UNAMID military and police patrols, as well as the community policing volunteer initiative, however, had helped lower the overall crime rate and promote a stable environment across Darfur.

Modest progress had been made against the benchmark relating to the rule of law, governance and human rights, and the provision of assistance for the effective and efficient functioning of state institutions. UNAMID child protection officers were working with armed opposition movements and the Government of the Sudan to stop the recruitment of child soldiers, and its Prison Advisory Unit had succeeded in gaining greater access to and improving conditions in some prisons. The Mission was providing training on human rights norms to corrections officials.

Incidents of conflict, more stringent security management measures implemented by humanitarian organizations in response to attacks and abductions, and access restrictions prevented much progress being made against the fourth benchmark, which referred to stabilizing the humanitarian situation and facilitating humanitarian access to populations in need of assistance. UNAMID was in ongoing dialogue with the Government of the Sudan to lift restrictions on movement and access.

Military engagements, which tended to be less frequent and less destructive than those during the previous reporting period, involved intermittent clashes between the Government and JEM forces in Southern Darfur, and clashes between Government and SLA-AW in Jebel Marra, which destabilized those areas, caused new displacements and hindered the delivery of humanitarian aid. There were also more inter-communal clashes between the Misseriya and Rezeigat in the vicinity of Kass in August, despite a local peace agreement signed by both groups. The prevalence of small arms, competition over recently vacated land, obstruction of traditional migration routes, tensions at water points, weakened traditional conflict resolution mechanisms, and ethno-political rivalry kept the chances of such clashes alive. Unless the Government disarmed militias, enhanced law and order by addressing impunity, invested in development, and resolved competing land claims, such fighting was likely to continue and could even become the primary source of insecurity and instability in Darfur.

The Secretary-General was encouraged by the progress made by the Joint Chief Mediator, the Joint Mediation Team and UNAMID towards facilitating an agreement between the Government and LJM, and urged the parties to work diligently towards producing a peace agreement that addressed the root cause of the conflict and contributed to stability in Darfur.

The Secretary-General welcomed the holding of a second meeting of civil society representatives, which served to broaden and increase the inclusiveness of the peace process, and he urged the Government and armed movements to allow UNAMID personnel freedom of movement and to extend those entitlements to humanitarian personnel. Attacks and abductions of UN and humanitarian personnel were reprehensible and constituted war crimes. He called on the Government to pursue vigorously and prosecute those responsible for those attacks.

Year-end developments. In a later report on UNAMID [S/2011/22], submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 1935(2010) (see p. 262), the Secretary-General assessed the progress against the benchmarks of his November 2009 report and provided updates on the political, security and humanitarian situation in Darfur and the UNAMID strategy for the protection of civilians. He noted that progress had been achieved in the Doha peace negotiations. The Mediation worked with the parties on steps needed to bring together the different arms of the negotiations and finalize the Doha process. The Joint Chief Mediator continued to encourage the major armed movements, including JEM and SLM-AW, to support and take part in the peace process. On 16 December, the JEM delegation agreed to resume negotiations with the Government on a ceasefire agreement. The decision of JEM to rejoin the negotiations followed extensive consultations with the Mediation, with the support of the United States Special Envoy, Major General (retired) Scott Graton, in Doha.

The Joint Chief Mediator and the Minister of State for Foreign Affairs of Qatar, Ahmed bin Abdullah Al-Mahmoud, visited Darfur from 28 November to 2 December to promote the provisional outcomes of the Doha negotiations and to discuss with stakeholders outstanding issues. The delegation consulted government representatives, leaders of the Sudan's political parties, IDPs, nomadic community leaders and civil society representatives. While progress towards agreement reached in Doha regarding compensation, wealth-sharing, land issues and property restitution was welcomed, it was stressed that any agreement should be comprehensive of all issues.

At a 16 December meeting with the Joint Special Representative, the Chairman of the AU High-level Implementation Panel, and Presidential Adviser Ghazi Salaheddin, it was agreed that a joint UNAMID-Government of the Sudan technical task force would be established to monitor the conditions for an enabling environment and to develop modalities for implementing the Darfur-based political process.

In order to improve intercommunal relations, on 10 October traditional leaders from the two largest tribes in Southern Darfur, the Southern Rizeigat and the Fur, signed a charter for peaceful coexistence, agreeing to reject violence and embrace dialogue as a form of resolving disputes, respect each other's history and heritage and establish a consultative Shura (council) to resolve disagreements. On 22 November, the Habaniya and Feltata tribes in Southern Darfur, which had been sporadically engaged in hostilities in the early 1990s, signed a peaceful coexistence agreement that distributed administrative control of disputed areas in Buram and Tulus localities evenly between them and described mutually agreeable migration routes in those areas. In addition, the Government agreed to pay, on both tribes' behalf, 80 per cent of the diya (compensation money) owed by each tribe.

On the other hand, relations between the Government and SLA-MM, the signatories of the 2006 Darfur Peace Agreement [YUN 2006, p. 274], deteriorated markedly. On 30 October, SLA-MM and SAF signed an agreement in El Fasher, according to which they would implement a modified version of the security arrangements contained in the Darfur Peace Agreement. The central component of the agreement involved the integration of SLA-MM forces into SAF. On 21 November, six days after his forces were to present themselves for integration, however, Minni Minnawi issued a communiqué stating that he refused to disarm his forces on the grounds that the Government had attempted the disarmament in a manner inconsistent with the Darfur Peace Agreement. On 3 December, a SAF military spokesperson issued a statement declaring Minni Minnawi an enemy of the Government; the next day, fighting between SAF and SLA-MM took place at Um Kunya, 35 kilometres south of Nyala. On 8 December, President Bashir issued a decree declaring that the Wali of Western Darfur had replaced Minni Minnawi as the new Chair of the Transitional Darfur Regional Authority, the body established to implement certain provisions of the Darfur Peace Agreement.

Until mid-December, when fighting forced nearly 40,000 persons to flee their homes, the humanitarian situation remained relatively stable, but humanitarian efforts remained impeded by insecurity and access restrictions.

Activities of ICC Prosecutor

Twice during the year, in June and December, the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court (icc), Luis Moreno-Ocampo, reported to the Council on the activities undertaken by his Office with regard to Darfur.

Communication. By a letter of 28 May [S/2010/265], the Secretary-General forwarded a communication of 27 May from the Registrar of the icc transmitting a 26 May Decision by Pre-Trial Chamber I of the Court (see p. 1317), by which the Security Council was informed about the lack of cooperation by the Sudan in relation to the arrest warrants issued by the Chamber against Ahmad Harun, former Minister of the State for the Interior, and militia/Janjaweed leader Ali Kushayb.

Briefings by ICC Prosecutor (June, December).

In his eleventh biannual report to the Security Council on 11 June [S/PV.6336], the ICC Prosecutor briefed the Council on the activities of his Office since his December 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 262]. He provided a summary of the cases investigated since the Security Council, by resolution 1593(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 324], had referred the situation to the ICC. Three investigations had been conducted on the Darfur situation. In the first case, a consistent pattern of attacks against the civilian population in Darfur during 2003–2005 was investigated, which forced the displacement of a million civilians to a hostile environment. Evidence revealed the roles of the then Minister of State for the Interior, Ahmad Harun, as coordinator of the Government of the Sudan forces, and of Ali Kushayb, Janjaweed militia leader. In April 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 260], Pre-Trial Chamber I issued arrest warrants against both individuals for war crimes and crimes against humanity.

In the second case, the continuous involvement of the entire Sudanese State apparatus in the attacks on the villages and a different pattern of crimes against displaced persons were investigated; those attacks were calculated to drive entire groups to inhospitable areas, where they died immediately, or into camps, where they died slowly. On 4 March 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 261], Pre-Trial Chamber I issued an arrest warrant against President Al-Bashir for crimes against humanity, including the crimes of extermination and rape. The judges found that the obstructions of humanitarian assistance in Darfur was more than a bureaucratic problem, but constituted the crime of extermination. After forcing civilians out of their homes, Sudanese forces would deny any meaningful assistance to those who reached the camps for IDPs, forcing the United Nations and others to set up the largest humanitarian operation in the world, and yet obstructing their life-saving efforts every step of the way. The crime of extermination consisted of intentionally inflicting conditions of life—inter alia, the deprivation of access to food and medicine—calculated to bring about the destruction of part of a population.

In the third case, the ICC prosecuted the three commanders of the rebel groups that attacked peacekeepers in Haskanita in September 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 255], causing the deaths of 12 AU peacekeepers and leaving thousands of people without protection. The Judges had found that the attack constituted a crime under the ICC Statute, but found the evidence insufficient to establish the criminal responsibility of rebel commander Abu Garda. The Prosecutor's Office would present additional evidence and it was anticipated that a new confirmation hearing would be held in the near future. The above were the persons identified as most responsible for the most serious crimes committed in Darfur over the previous six years.

The Prosecutor noted that the Sudan had, in the past, cooperated with the ICC, including for the execution of arrest warrants. In October 2005, the Sudan had signed an agreement with the Prosecutor's Office to implement the arrest warrants against Joseph Kony and four leaders of LRA [YUN 2005, p. 1403], which was critical to removing the LRA leaders from their safe haven in the Sudan. In the Darfur case, cooperation had been forthcoming for two years, and in June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 260], the Government of the Sudan had accepted the notification of the arrest warrants against Ahmad Harun and Ali Kushayb; since then, however, there had been a public and consistent refusal to cooperate with the Court and to comply with resolution 1593(2005). Therefore, the Pre-Trial Chamber in May 2010 issued its decision informing the Security Council about the lack of cooperation by the Sudan. In the decision, the Chamber considered that the Court had taken all possible measures to ensure the Sudan's cooperation and stressed that its obligation to cooperate stemmed directly from the Charter of the United Nations and resolution 1593(2005). The Chamber concluded that the Sudan failed to comply with its cooperation obligations in relation to enforcing the two arrest warrants against Ahmad Harun and Ali Kushayb.

While cooperation from the Sudan was lacking, it was forthcoming from all other actors, the Prosecutor noted. No other UN Member State and no other party to the conflict had refused to cooperate; to the contrary, many States, including non-States parties to the Rome Statute, had taken steps within their power to encourage cooperation by the Sudan and to isolate and ultimately facilitate the surrender of the individuals sought by the Court. They had maintained and expressed public and diplomatic support for the Court and severed all non-essential contacts with those subject to ICC warrants.

Non-States parties had also asserted that those subject to an arrest warrant would need to face justice, and the Secretary-General had repeatedly reiterated the need to comply with resolution 1593(2005) and to respect the ICC decisions. In a statement of 23 March, former South African President Thabo Mbeki, as Head of the AU High-Level Implementation Panel, had explained that there was a perfect understanding between the Panel and the Court; while the ICC arrest warrants were a matter of fact and could be reviewed only by the ICC judges, the rest of the crimes committed in Darfur should be addressed by the Sudan domestically, and the AU Panel had formulated recommendations in that regard.

Attacks against civilians not participating in the conflict continued, the Prosecutor noted. In February, immediately after the signing of a peace agreement and a public commitment to peace, 100,000 civilians were forcibly displaced by SAF in Jebel Marra. The modus operandi was the same as the one used by Ahmad Harun from 2003 to 2005: air bombardments followed by attacks by SAF integrating with militia/Janjaweed. The crime of extermination against the millions displaced into camps continued to be committed. Acts aimed at inflicting inhumane conditions of life continued, as did gender crimes, as confirmed by the UN independent expert on the situation of human rights in the Sudan (see p. 769).

The Prosecutor urged the Council to ensure that the arrest of Ahmad Harun, currently Governor of Southern Kordofan, and Ali Kushayb, a tribal leader who still exercised power in his own area in Southern Sudan, be a request that the United Nations insisted on, as a critical condition for securing peace and stability in Darfur.

In his twelfth briefing on 9 December [S/PV.6440], the ICC Prosecutor updated the Security Council on the Pre-Trial Chamber I Decision of 12 July [ICC-02/05-01/09] to issue a second arrest warrant for President Al-Bashir on three charges of genocide, including genocide by killing, in accordance with article 6 (a) of the Rome Statute; genocide by causing serious bodily or mental harm, through rapes and the sowing of fear among people in villages and people in camps for displaced persons, in accordance with article 6 (b); and genocide by deliberately inflicting, on the Fur, Masalit and Zaghawa groups, conditions of life to bring about the groups' physical destruction, in accordance with article 6 (c).

The Prosecutor confirmed that the Government of the Sudan was not cooperating with the Court and was conducting no national proceedings against those responsible for the crimes. Since 2005, Sudanese authorities had consistently promised to do justice, create special courts and prosecutors, while consistently and deliberately protecting those who had committed those crimes. President Al-Bashir, who by the Pre-Trial Chamber had been found to have issued the criminal orders to attack civilians and destroy their communities, did not want to investigate those who had been following his orders.

The situation in Darfur was not just a humanitarian crisis, but a systematic attack against the civilian population and an ongoing genocide. In the previous six months alone, hundreds of civilians had been killed and thousands forcibly displaced, and more than 2.5 million were suffering a subtle form of genocide: by rape and fear.

In relation to the 2007 Haskanita attack [YUN 2007, p. 255], the confirmation hearing at the seat of the Court on 8 December had been unique in that the rebel commanders accepted that there was sufficient evidence to confirm the charges and go to trial. Those two commanders had led more than 1,000 troops in carrying out a violent attack on the AU Mission in the Sudan (AMIS) base in Haskanita, killing 12 peacekeepers and injuring eight others. They also destroyed the camp and looted vehicles, fuel and money. The attack had resulted in war crimes charges against them for violence, murder and attempted murder of AMIS personnel and violation of article 8, intentionally directing attacks against personnel in a peacekeeping mission, and pillaging. The Prosecutor's Office expected the charges against the rebel commanders to be confirmed and the trial to begin in 2011.

Quoting a report of the AU High-level Implementation Panel on Darfur, which had found major obstacles to peace and justice in Darfur, namely, the absence of political will; denial of what had happened and was happening; obscuring of the truth; war, fear and insecurity; poor policing and enforcement of law and order; and impunity for crimes committed, the ICC Prosecutor said that the above was confirmed when the Special Prosecutor for Darfur, Nimr Mohamed, who had announced his intention to begin investigating the 2 September attack on Tabra, which had resulted in dozens of people being reportedly killed, was replaced two weeks later by Abdel Daiem Zumrawi, Under-Secretary in the Ministry of Justice; since then, no progress had been reported on the Tabra investigation or any other. Until the orders to SAF to commit crimes in Darfur ceased, there was no possibility of justice. Referring to presidential statement S/PRST/2010/24 of 16 November (see p. 250), by which the Security Council recalled the importance it attached to an end to impunity and to justice for crimes committed in Darfur, Mr. Moreno-Ocampo said the legal work was done, but the crimes were ongoing. President Al-Bashir and his supporters were making enormous efforts to cover up the crimes and divert attention by announcing new strategies and new efforts for justice.

States parties were fulfilling their duties and legal obligations, but were additionally adopting policies to sever any contact with individuals sought by the Court and ensuring respect for the legal limits. Regional organizations, such as LAS and the AU, were crucial to ensuring justice, stopping the crimes, alleviating the humanitarian situation and providing stability to the Sudan; a proper dialogue with them was crucial to achieving those goals. Finally, the implementation of ICC decisions and the execution of the arrest warrants were in the hands of the Security Council.

Communication. By a letter of 15 December [S/2010/642], the Sudan presented a report on the work of the office of the Prosecutor General entrusted with addressing the crimes in Darfur, and the work of the different relevant investigative commissions associated with the Prosecutor's office. The Sudan emphasized that on 17 October, the Minister of Justice had appointed Abdel Daiem Zumrawi to replace the previous Special Prosecutor to investigate crimes committed in Darfur since 2003. The office of the new Special Prosecutor put in place a work plan that stressed the need to investigate all cases as quickly as possible. The investigative commission decided to give priority to investigating the 2 September events in the Tabra market. The Commission had visited the site of the incident, as well as Tawila and El Fasher, to interview witnesses, including the medical examiner, the head of the El Fasher Police Department and civilian leaders. During the course of the investigation, witnesses provided the names of more than eight subjects; after collecting and analyzing the evidence, the Public Prosecutor's office took steps to arrest them.

Sanctions

The Security Council, by resolution 1556(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 240], imposed an arms embargo on all non-governmental entities and individuals, including the Janjaweed operating in Darfur, in reaction to the ongoing human rights abuses and deteriorating humanitarian situation in the region. By resolution 1591(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 319], the Council imposed a travel ban and assets freeze, and established a Committee to oversee implementation of the sanctions against individuals to be designated by the Committee. The Secretary-General was requested to appoint a Panel of Experts for six months to assist the work of the Council and the Committee. The Panel, established in June 2005 [ibid., p. 322], was mandated to assist the Committee in monitoring implementation of the arms embargo and sanctions; make recommendations to the Committee on possible Council actions; and provide information on individuals who impeded the peace process, committed violations of international law, or were responsible for offensive military overflight. By resolution 1945(2010) (see p. 270), the Council strengthened the enforcement of the arms embargo by clarifying the exceptions to that measure and by making the sale of arms and related materiel to the Sudan not prohibited by the embargo contingent upon the necessary end-user documentation.

Communications. From March through June, several States submitted to the Security Council Committee their reports on the implementation of sanctions imposed by resolutions 1556(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 240] and 1591(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 319], among them Andorra [S/AC.47/2010/4], Australia

[S/AC.47/2010/5], Austria [S/AC.47/2010/12], Belarus [S/AC.47/2010/2], Brazil [S/AC.47/2010/3], Burundi [S/AC.47/2010/9], Canada [S/AC.47/2010/6], Denmark [S/AC.47/2010/10], France [S/AC.47/2010/8], Germany [S/AC.47/2010/11], Oman [S/AC.47/2010/7] and the United States [S/AC.47/2010/1].

Appointment. On 15 March [S/2010/140], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that, in accordance with resolution 1891(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 263], he had appointed a fifth person to serve on the Panel of Experts until 15 October.

Extension of Panel of Experts. In October, the Security Council extended the mandate of the Panel until 19 October 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 October [meeting 6401], the Security Council adopted resolution 1945(2010) by vote (14-0-1). The draft [S/2010/520] was submitted by the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the Sudan,

Reaffirming its commitment to the cause of peace throughout the Sudan, to the sovereignty, independence, unity and territorial integrity of the Sudan, to the full and timely implementation of the final phase of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement, including efforts to make unity attractive and a referendum to determine the future status of the people of Southern Sudan in exercise of their right to self-determination, and recalling the importance of the principles of good-neighbourliness, non-interference and cooperation in the relations among States in the region,

Welcoming the communiqué issued after the high-level meeting on the Sudan, held in New York on 24 September 2010,

Reiterating its full support for efforts to reach a comprehensive and inclusive solution to the conflict in Darfur, and bearing in mind the Darfur Peace Agreement and the need for the completion of the political process and an end to the violence and abuses in Darfur,

Reiterating the need for a lasting political solution and sustained security in Darfur, and urging all parties that continue to abstain from the peace process to join the Doha negotiations without preconditions or further delays and all parties to engage fully and constructively in the process and cooperate with the African Union-United Nations Joint Chief Mediator for Darfur, Mr. Djibril Bassolé,

Welcoming the agreement of 15 January 2010 between the Governments of Chad and the Sudan to normalize their relations, and strongly encouraging Chad and the Sudan to continue to implement this agreement and to refrain from supporting rebel forces and all other armed groups,

Noting with deep concern the increase in violence, and rising inter-tribal fighting, as well as ongoing sexual and gender-based violence and impunity, reiterating its deep concern about attacks on humanitarian personnel and peacekeepers, and the security of civilians, and calling upon all parties in Darfur to cease offensive actions immediately and to refrain from further violent attacks causing a consequent poor humanitarian aid situation and restricted humanitarian access to populations in need,

Demanding that the parties to the conflict exercise restraint and cease military action of all kinds, including aerial bombardments,

Demanding also an immediate and complete cessation by all parties to armed conflict of all acts of sexual violence against civilians, in line with resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009, the recruitment and use of children, in line with resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009, and indiscriminate attacks on civilians, in line with resolution 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009,

Commending the efforts of, and reiterating its full support for, the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur, the African Union-United Nations Joint Chief Mediator for Darfur, the United Nations Secretary-General, the League of Arab States, the African Union High-level Implementation Panel on the Sudan and the leaders of the region to promote peace and stability in Darfur, and expressing its strong support for the political process under the African Union-United Nations-led mediation,

Welcoming the enhanced cooperation and information-sharing between the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur and the Panel of Experts on the Sudan facilitated by the guidelines of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat and the decision of the Operation to establish a focal point to facilitate information-sharing with the Panel of Experts regarding the arms embargo,

Recalling the midterm report of 2 July 2010 of the Panel of Experts appointed by the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraph 3 (b) of resolution 1591(2005) of 29 March 2005, whose mandate was extended by subsequent resolutions, taking note of the final report of the Panel of Experts, and expressing its intention to study, through the Security Council Committee established pursuant to paragraph 3 (a) of resolution 1591(2005) (hereinafter “the Committee”), the recommendations of the Panel of Experts and to consider appropriate next steps,

While noting some positive developments, expressing concern over the obstacles that have been imposed on the work of the Panel of Experts during the course of its last mandate, including obstacles to freedom of movement,

Emphasizing the need to respect the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations concerning privileges and immunities and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, as applicable to United Nations operations and persons engaged in such operations,

Determining that the situation in the Sudan continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Decides to extend until 19 October 2011 the mandate of the Panel of Experts on the Sudan originally appointed pursuant to resolution 1591(2005), previously extended by resolutions 1651(2005) of 21 December 2005, 1665(2006) of 29 March 2006, 1713(2006) of 29 September 2006, 1779(2007) of 28 September 2007, 1841(2008) of 15 October 2008 and 1891(2009) of 13 October 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary administrative measures as expeditiously as possible;

2. Recalls the report of the Informal Working Group on General Issues of Sanctions on best practices and methods, including paragraphs 21, 22 and 23 thereof, which discuss possible steps for clarifying methodological standards for monitoring mechanisms, including the Panel of Experts;

3. Requests the Panel of Experts to provide, no later than 31 March 2011, a midterm briefing on its work and, no later than ninety days after the adoption of the present resolution, an interim report to the Committee and a final report to the Security Council, no later than thirty days prior to the termination of its mandate, with its findings and recommendations;

4. Also requests the Panel of Experts to coordinate its activities, as appropriate, with the operations of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur and with international efforts to promote the political process in Darfur, and to assess in its interim and final reports progress towards reducing violations by all parties of the measures imposed by paragraphs 7 and 8 of resolution 1556(2004) of 30 July 2004 and paragraph 7 of resolution 1591(2005) and progress towards removing impediments to the political process, threats to stability in Darfur and the region, violations of international humanitarian or human rights law or other atrocities, including sexual and gender-based violence, and other violations of the above-mentioned resolutions;

5. Urges all States, relevant United Nations bodies, the African Union and other interested parties to cooperate fully with the Committee and the Panel of Experts, in particular by supplying any information at their disposal on implementation of the measures imposed by resolutions 1556(2004) and 1591(2005);

6. Urges all States, in particular those in the region, to report to the Committee on the actions they have taken to implement the measures imposed by resolutions 1556(2004) and 1591(2005), including the imposition of targeted measures;

7. Reminds all States, particularly States in the region, of the obligations contained in resolutions 1556(2004) and 1591(2005), in particular those obligations relating to arms and related materiel;

8. Reiterates paragraph 7 of resolution 1591(2005), which provides for exceptions to the measures imposed by paragraphs 7 and 8 of resolution 1556(2004) for:

(a) Supplies and related technical assistance listed in paragraph 9 of resolution 1556(2004);

(b) Assistance and supplies provided in support of implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement; or

(c) Movements of military equipment and supplies into the Darfur region that are approved in advance by the Committee upon a request by the Government of the Sudan;

9. Decides that all States, including the Sudan, when relying on the exception contained in paragraph 7 of resolution 1591(2005), shall notify the Committee in advance of providing assistance and supplies into the Darfur region in support of the implementation of the Comprehensive Peace Agreement in the states of Northern Darfur, Southern Darfur and Western Darfur;

10. Decides also that all States shall ensure that any sale or supply of arms and related materiel to the Sudan not prohibited by resolutions 1556(2004) and 1591(2005) are made conditional upon the necessary end-user documentation so that States may ascertain that any such sale or supply is conducted consistent with the measures imposed by those resolutions;

11. Expresses its intention, following the midterm report, to review the state of implementation, including obstacles to full and effective implementation of the measures imposed in resolution 1591(2005), with a view to ensuring full compliance;

12. Reaffirms the mandate of the Committee to encourage dialogue with interested Member States, in particular those in the region, including by inviting representatives of such States to meet with the Committee to discuss implementation of the measures, and further encourages the Committee to continue its dialogue with the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur;

13. Welcomes the work of the Committee, which has drawn on the reports of the Panel of Experts and taken advantage of the work done in other forums, to draw attention to the responsibilities of private sector actors in conflict-affected areas;

14. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

VOTE ON RESOLUTION 1945(2010):

In favour: Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, France, Gabon, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, Nigeria, Russian Federation, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States.

Against: None.

Abstaining: China.

By presidential statement S/PRST/2010/24 of 16 November (see p. 250), the Security Council expressed its willingness to consider measures against any party whose actions undermined peace in Darfur. That was reiterated in presidential statement S/PRST/2010/28 of 16 December (see p. 251).

Communication. By a note verbale of 30 November [S/AC.47/2010/13], Andorra submitted a report on its implementation of Security Council resolution 1945(2010).

Report of Sanctions Committee. On 30 December [S/2010/679], the Sanctions Committee, established pursuant to resolution 1591(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 319] and chaired by Thomas Mayr-Harting of Austria, with Bosnia and Herzegovina and Mexico as Vice-Chairmen, reported on its activities during the year. The report was submitted in accordance with a 29 March 1995 note of the Security Council President [YUN 1995, p. 410]. During 2010, the Committee Chairman delivered to the Council four reports on the Committee's activities, each covering a 90-day period, on 4 March, 10 June, 17 September and 16 December.

In 2010, the Committee held eight informal consultations. On 12 January, it met the new Panel of Experts appointed pursuant to resolution 1891(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 263] and discussed the Panel's reporting timelines. On 29 March, the Committee heard a presentation by the Panel of its interim report; in addition to presenting its preliminary findings, the Panel reported on the level of cooperation extended to it by the Governments of Chad and the Sudan. It also requested the Committee's guidance on the scope of the arms embargo.

In continuation of its dialogue with UNAMID, the Committee met on 24 May with the AU-UN Joint Special Representative for Darfur. Subsequently, in resolution 1945(2010) (see p. 270), the Council welcomed the enhanced information-sharing between UNAMID and the Panel of Experts facilitated by DPKO guidelines and the UNAMID decision to establish a focal point to facilitate information-sharing with the Panel regarding the arms embargo. At the 24 May meeting, the Chair also briefed the Committee on his bilateral meeting with the Permanent Representative of the Sudan, held to follow up on requests for information in the four areas set out in the Panel's 2009 final report [YUN 2009, p. 264], on the Government of Sudan's movements of troops and military material into and out of Darfur; the identity and size of Darfurian tribes that had to be disarmed, and to what degree they were disarmed and reintegrated into the population of Darfur; achievements in or possible requirements for enhancing the protection of all Darfurians within the territory under the control of the Government of the Sudan; and achievements or possible requirements for the better prevention of gender-based violence.

In informal consultations on 7 June, the Committee heard a briefing by the Executive Director of the Global Compact, Georg Kell, which was organized as a follow-up to the recommendation in the 2009 Panel of Experts report that pertained to enhancing due diligence for corporations whose products and services potentially affected the conflict in Darfur. Mr. Kell clarified that the Global Compact network for the Sudan focused on community investment, access to water and the environment, and had limited linkage to Darfur.

By a letter of 28 June to the Permanent Representative of the Sudan, the Chairman sought further details and clarification on various aspects of the implementation of the arms embargo by the Sudan, but no response was received.

On 7 July, the Committee heard a midterm briefing by the Panel, which was accompanied by a written report. The Panel also highlighted problems of access in Darfur. The Panel had received authorization from the Government of the Sudan to visit four of six locations of interests, but had not been able to actually visit them owing to security considerations and logistical requirements of both the Government of the Sudan and UNAMID.

On 20 October, the Committee met to discuss in depth the recommendations in the Panel's final report. The Committee agreed to dispatch a note verbale to all Member States and a letter to the Permanent Representative of the Sudan, drawing their attention to paragraphs 9 and 10 of resolution 1945(2010). The two texts were approved on 29 November and subsequently dispatched. The Committee agreed that responsibility for attacks on UNAMID met the criteria for designating individuals as subject to the targeted sanctions. The Committee also agreed that, on a future date, it would invite the Joint AU-UN Chief Mediator for Darfur for a dedicated briefing on individuals who were impeding the peace process.

On 24 November and in follow-up to the 7 June briefing by the Executive Director of the Global Compact, the Committee heard a briefing by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises, John Ruggie, who informed the Committee that he did not have a country-specific mandate. He spoke in general about the draft guiding principles for the implementation of the "protect, respect and remedy" framework for better managing business and human rights challenges, which the Human Rights Council had asked him to produce [YUN 2008, p. 830].

In conducting its work, the Committee continued to apply the guidelines adopted on 23 March 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 296] and amended on 27 December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 262], which, among other purposes, served to facilitate the implementation of the travel ban and assets freeze imposed by resolution 1591(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 319]. No requests were received by the Committee either to remove the names of individuals on the consolidated list of persons subject to the travel ban and assets freeze or to make exemptions to the targeted sanctions.

The Committee stated that the Panel of Experts, in its final 2010 report, described continued violations of the arms embargo and of international humanitarian law and human rights by various belligerents in Darfur. Sexual and gender-based violence remained widespread. The Panel reported offensive military overflights and bombardments in Darfur, and observed that no concrete action had been taken by the Government of the Sudan to implement the targeted travel and financial sanctions. The Panel's final 2010 report, prepared pursuant to Security Council resolution 1891(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 263], was forthcoming pending adoption by the Council, the Committee said.

UNAMID

The African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID) was established in 2007 by Security Council resolution 1769(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 251] as the first AU-UN hybrid operation. It incorporated the AU Mission in the Sudan (AMIS), which had been deployed in Darfur since 2004. The core mandate of UNAMID was to protect civilians, while other tasks included contributing to security for humanitarian assistance, monitoring the implementation of agreements, assisting the political process, promoting human rights and the rule of law, and monitoring the situation along the Sudan's border with Chad and the Central African Republic.

By resolution 1935(2010) of 30 July (see p. 262), the Security Council extended the UNAMID mandate for another 12 months.

As at 28 December, UNAMID military personnel stood at 17,468, out of a total authorized strength of 19,555, and UNAMID police numbered 4,979. The civilian component stood at 4,298 at 30 November.

Financing

In a performance report on the budget of UNAMID for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/579], the Secretary-General requested that the General Assembly note the shortfall of $191,569,200 for maintaining the Operation during the above period, representing the difference between an expenditure of $1,491,279,200 and an assessment of $1,299,710,000; decide to apply the other income/adjustments for the period ended 30 June 2009, amounting to $130,922,300 from interest income, other/miscellaneous income and cancellation of prior-period obligations, against the shortfall in assessment; and note that the additional assessment of $60,646,900, representing the difference between the shortfall in assessment amounting to $191,569,200 and the other income/adjustments of $130,922,300 with respect to the above period, be apportioned in accordance with Assembly resolution 63/258 A [YUN 2008, p. 266].

In a 31 March corrigendum [A/64/579/Corr.1], the Secretary-General presented revised appropriations and requested the Assembly to reduce the appropriation of $1,499,710,000 approved for the maintenance of UNAMID from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 under the terms of its resolution 62/232 B [YUN 2008, p. 265] by the amount of $8,430,800, to $1,491,279,200, equal to expenditures incurred by the Operation during the same period; to apply the other income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in the total amount of $130,922,300 from interest income, other/miscellaneous income and cancellation of prior-period obligations, against the shortfall in assessment for the same period; and to assess the amount of $60,646,900, representing the difference between the shortfall in assessment ($191,569,200) and the other income for the period ended 30 June 2009.

Earlier, in a 26 February report [A/64/685] on the proposed UNAMID budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, the Secretary-General recommended that the General Assembly take the following action: appropriation of $1,899,367,200 for maintaining UNAMID from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011; assessment of $158,280,600 for the period from 1 to 31 July; and assessment of $1,741,056,600 at a monthly rate of $158,280,600, should the Security Council decide to continue the mandate of the Operation.

ACABQ, in a 30 April report [A/64/660/Add.13], recommended that the Assembly take note of the shortfall in the assessment of $191,569,200 for maintaining UNAMID from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009; decide to apply the other income/adjustments for the period ended 30 June 2009, amounting to $130,922,300, against the shortfall; and decide on the additional assessment of $60,646,900. ACABQ, also recommended that, should the Security Council extend UNAMID's mandate beyond 31 July 2010, the Assembly appropriate $1,839,146,300 for its maintenance from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/833], adopted resolution 64/285 without vote [agenda item 161].

Financing of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1769(2007) of 31 July 2007, by which the Council established the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur for an initial period of twelve months as from 31 July 2007, and its subsequent resolutions, the latest of which was resolution 1881(2009) of 30 July 2009, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Operation until 31 July 2010,

Recalling also its resolution 62/232 A of 22 December 2007 on the financing of the Operation and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/258 B of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in its resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Operation with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Noting the hybrid nature of the Operation, and in that regard stressing the importance of ensuring full coordination of efforts between the African Union and the United Nations at the strategic level, unity of command at the operational level and clear delegation of authority and accountability lines,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 139.6 million United States dollars, representing some 3 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Operation in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Operation;

9. Acknowledges with appreciation that the use of the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, has been cost-effective and has resulted in savings for the United Nations, and welcomes the expansion of the logistics hub to provide logistical support to peacekeeping operations in the region and to contribute further to their enhanced efficiency and responsiveness, taking into account the ongoing efforts in this regard;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

11. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to take steps to ensure that all personnel adhere fully to the security procedures in place;

13. Reaffirms section XX of resolution 61/276, and encourages the Secretary-General, where feasible, to enhance regional and inter-mission cooperation with a view to achieving greater synergies in the use of the resources of the Organization and the implementation of the mandates of the missions, while bearing in mind that individual missions are responsible for the preparation and implementation of their own budgets and for controlling their own assets and logistical operations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Operation is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that future budget submissions contain sufficient information, explanation and justification of the proposed resource requirements relating to operational costs in order to allow Member States to take well-informed decisions;

17. Requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Operation against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Operation;

18. Stresses the importance of strengthened accountability in the Organization and of ensuring greater accountability of the Secretary-General to Member States, inter alia, for the effective and efficient implementation of legislative mandates on procurement and the related use of financial and human resources, as well as the provision of necessary information on procurement-related matters to enable Member States to make well-informed decisions;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all procurement projects for the Organization are in full compliance with relevant resolutions;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

20. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Operation for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

21. Decides to reduce the appropriation of 1,499,710,000 dollars approved for the maintenance of the Operation for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 under the terms of its resolution 62/232 B of 20 June 2008 by the amount of 8,430,800 dollars, to 1,491,279,200 dollars, equal to expenditures incurred by the Operation during the same period;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

22. Also decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur the amount of 1,917,751,000 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 1,808,127,500 dollars for the maintenance of the Operation, 92,842,200 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 16,781,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

23. Further decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 159,812,584 dollars for the period from 1 to 31 July 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

24. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 23 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 3,416,825 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,664,350 dollars approved for the Operation, the prorated share of 640,600 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 111,875 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

25. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 1,757,938,416 dollars for the period from 1 August 2010 to 30 June 2011, at a monthly rate of 159,812,584 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Operation;

26. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 25 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 37,585,075 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 29,307,850 dollars approved for the Operation, the prorated share of 7,046,600 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 1,230,625 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

27. Decides to set off the other income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in the total amount of 130,922,300 dollars, against the shortfall in apportionment of 191,569,200 dollars for the same period;

28. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 60,646,900 dollars, representing the difference between the shortfall in apportionment of 191,569,200 dollars and the other income of 130,922,300 dollars, for the period ended 30 June 2009;

29. Further decides that the increase of 2,850,100 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be set off against the apportionment of 60,646,900 dollars referred to in paragraph 28 above;

30. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

31. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Operation under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

32. Invites voluntary contributions to the Operation in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

33. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur".

Chad-Sudan

In 2010, relations between Chad and the Sudan improved significantly, following the signature on 15 January by both Governments of an agreement to normalize their bilateral relations. They agreed, inter alia, to deny rebel groups the use of their territories and to work towards their disarmament. Following that agreement, a 3,000-strong joint border force was established in February and deployed in April, with a view to denying the cross-border movement of armed elements and stemming their criminal activities. The Joint Border Monitoring Force was having a positive impact in terms of security and opening cross-border trade and movement.

The visit of President Idriss Déby Itno to Khartoum from 8 to 9 February—the first such visit since 2004 and the first meeting between the two Heads of State since March 2008—was a major step in strengthening bilateral relations. The visit was followed by the appointment on 15 February of a Chadian Ambassador to Khartoum. On 10 April, the border between the two countries reopened for the first time since 2003 at three points, and cross-border trade resumed.

In accordance with the 15 January agreement, Chad and the Sudan facilitated talks with their respective rebel groups. The Framework Agreement to Resolve the Conflict in Darfur (see p. 240), signed by the Government of the Sudan and JEM in Doha, was negotiated on 20 February in N'Djamena, under the auspices of the Chadian President, who also facilitated talks with JEM in N'Djamena in March. From 1 to 4 April, a Chadian delegation met with representatives of the Union des forces de la résistance and the Résistance nationale armée in Khartoum, with the facilitation of the Government of the Sudan. Although the meeting was inconclusive, the Government and the armed opposition groups indicated that they remained committed to dialogue.

The Security Council, in resolution 1923(2010) of 25 May (see p. 159), welcomed the N'Djamena agreement and previous related agreements, encouraged the Government of Chad to continue talks with the armed groups, and demanded that those groups cease violence immediately. Noting that Chad had committed itself to assume full responsibility for the security of the civilian population in the eastern part of the country, the Council requested the Government and the Secretary-General to establish a joint high-level working group to make monthly assessments of the situation on the ground with respect to the protection of civilians. Determining that the situation in the border region between the Sudan, Chad and the Central African Republic still constituted a threat to international peace and security, the Council encouraged the respective Governments to ensure that their territories were not used to undermine the sovereignty of others, and to cooperate in ending the activities of armed groups, while implementing previous agreements.

After a period of improvement in the security situation in eastern Chad, several incidents of carjacking, abductions and attacks on humanitarian workers took place from May through July. In advance of the community of Sahel-Saharan States summit held in N'Djamena from 18 to 23 July, which President Bashir attended, the Sudan expelled leaders of Chadian armed opposition groups.

The improved relations between Chad and the Sudan eventually led to a progressively enhanced security situation in eastern Chad, which enabled the Chadian Government to assume full responsibility for ensuring the security and protection of refugees there, the majority comprising some 255,000 Sudanese.

Somalia

The situation in Somalia remained volatile throughout the year, in spite of some progress in implementing the 2008 Djibouti Peace Agreement [YUN 2008, p. 281]. The Security Council welcomed the appointment of a new Cabinet of the Transitional Federal Government and its efforts to rebuild and rehabilitate Somali institutions and infrastructure and become more representative and functional. The Council monitored the arms embargo on Somalia and intensified its efforts to enhance international and regional cooperation in bringing pirates in the sea off the coast of Somalia to justice. Progress was made towards full deployment and strengthening of the African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM). In December, the Security Council authorized the deployment of AMISOM until September 2011 and raised its troop level to 12,000. The United Nations Political Office for Somalia (UNPOS) assisted the Secretary-General in advancing peace and reconciliation in the country, and coordinating efforts to combat piracy off its coast.

Political and security developments

Security Council consideration. On 14 January [S/PV.6259], the Security Council considered a report of the Secretary-General of 8 January [YUN 2009, p. 284] covering developments in Somalia during the latter half of 2009.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 January 2010 [meeting 6266], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1910(2010). The draft [S/2010/49] was submitted by France, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Somalia,

Recalling also its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006, 1738(2006) of 23 December 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security, and resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict,

Reaffirming its respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence and unity of Somalia,

Reiterating its commitment to a comprehensive and lasting settlement of the situation in Somalia,

Reiterating its full support for the Djibouti peace process, which provides the framework for reaching a lasting political solution in Somalia, expressing its support for the Transitional Federal Charter, recognizing the need to promote reconciliation and dialogue among the Somali population, and stressing the importance of broad-based and representative institutions reached through a political process ultimately inclusive of all,

Commending the contribution of the African Union Mission in Somalia to lasting peace and stability in Somalia, expressing its appreciation for the continued commitment of troops and equipment to the Mission by the Governments of Uganda and Burundi, and condemning any hostilities towards the Mission and the Transitional Federal Government,

Commending also the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Somalia, Mr. Ahmedou Ould-Abdallah, and reaffirming its strong support for his efforts,

Welcoming the communiqué issued by the Peace and Security Council of the African Union at its two hundred and fourteenth meeting, held on 8 January 2010, in which it renewed the mandate of the Mission for an additional period of twelve months,

Reaffirming the importance of the re-establishment, training, equipping and retention of Somali security forces, which is vital for the long-term stability of Somalia, and emphasizing the importance of coordinated, timely and sustained support from the international community,

Strongly encouraging the prompt disbursement of funds pledged in support of the Somali security institutions and the Mission at the international conference on Somalia, held in Brussels on 23 April 2009, and recognizing the importance of timely and predictable funding for the Transitional Federal Government and the Mission,

Reiterating its serious concern at the continued fighting in Somalia, and reaffirming its support for the Transitional Federal Government,

Condemning the terrorist attacks on the Transitional Federal Government, the Mission and the civilian population by armed groups and foreign fighters who undermine peace and stability in Somalia, particularly Al-Shabaab, and stressing the terrorist threat that Somali armed groups, in particular Al-Shabaab, constitute for Somalia and for the international community,

Emphasizing the importance of effective public information and communications operations to support the Transitional Federal Government and the Mission and consolidate the political process, and expressing its serious concern at the continuing attacks against journalists,

Reiterating its serious concern at the worsening humanitarian situation in Somalia, strongly condemning the targeting and obstruction of the delivery of humanitarian aid by armed groups in Somalia, which has prevented the delivery of such aid in some areas, deploring the repeated attacks on humanitarian personnel, expressing its condemnation in the strongest terms of all acts of violence or abuses committed against civilians and humanitarian personnel, in violation of international humanitarian law and human rights law, and reaffirming the importance of the fight against impunity,

Expressing its concern at the significant decline in humanitarian funding for Somalia, and calling upon all Member States to contribute to current and future consolidated humanitarian appeals,

Condemning all and any violations of human rights and international humanitarian and human rights law, stressing the responsibility of all parties in Somalia to respect fully their obligations in this regard and to take appropriate measures to protect civilians, including women and children, and recalling the conclusions of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict pertaining to parties to the armed conflict in Somalia,

Recalling its resolution 1897(2009) of 30 November 2009, recognizing that the ongoing instability in Somalia contributes to the problem of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, stressing the need for a comprehensive response by the international community to tackle piracy and its underlying causes, including through the training of the Somali coastguard, and welcoming the efforts of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, States and international and regional organizations,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 31 December 2009, and the recommendations contained therein for continued action on the political, security and recovery tracks by the Transitional Federal Government, with the support of the international community,

Determining that the situation in Somalia constitutes a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to authorize the States members of the African Union to maintain until 31 January 2011 the African Union Mission in Somalia, which shall be authorized to take all measures necessary to carry out its existing mandate, as set out in paragraph 9 of resolution 1772(2007) of 20 August 2007;

2. Requests the African Union to maintain the deployment in Somalia of the Mission and to increase its force strength with a view to achieving its originally mandated strength of 8,000 troops, thereby enhancing its ability to carry out its mandate in full;

3. Requests the Mission to continue to assist the Transitional Federal Government in the development of the Somali Police Force and the National Security Force, and to assist the integration of Somali units trained by other Member States or organizations inside and outside Somalia;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide a logistical support package for the Mission, called for in resolution 1863(2009) of 16 January 2009, comprising equipment and services, including public information support, but not including the transfer of funds, as described in the letter dated 30 January 2009 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, until 31 January 2011, ensuring the accountability and transparency of expenditure of United Nations funds;

5. Encourages Member States to support the Mission and the Somali security sector institutions through the provision of appropriate and necessary equipment;

6. Requests the Mission to ensure that all equipment and services provided under the support package are used in a transparent and effective manner for their designated purposes, and further requests the African Union to report to the Secretary-General on the usage of such equipment and services in accordance with the memorandum of understanding established between the United Nations and the African Union;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide technical and expert advice to the African Union in the planning and deployment of the Mission through the existing United Nations planning team in Addis Ababa;

8. Urges Member States and regional and international organizations to contribute generously and promptly to the United Nations trust fund for the Mission, or to make direct bilateral donations in support of the Mission, and encourages donors to work closely with the United Nations and the African Union in order to ensure that the appropriate funds and equipment are promptly provided, particularly in relation to the salaries of Mission soldiers and the costs of contingent-owned equipment;

9. Recalls its statement of intent regarding the establishment of a United Nations peacekeeping operation, as expressed in resolution 1863(2009), and notes that any decision to deploy such an operation would take into account, inter alia, the conditions set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 April 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to take the steps identified in paragraphs 82 to 86 of that report, subject to the conditions set out in the report;

10. Emphasizes that Somalia's long-term security rests with the effective development by the Transitional Federal Government of the National Security Force and the Somali Police Force, within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement and in line with a national security strategy;

11. Urges Member States and regional and international organizations to contribute generously and promptly to the United Nations trust fund for the Somali security institutions, and to offer assistance to the Somali security forces, including through training and equipment in co-ordination with the Mission, consistent with paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007);

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the Transitional Federal Government in developing the transitional security institutions, including the Somali Police Force and the National Security Force, and to continue to support the Transitional Federal Government in developing a national security strategy which reflects respect for the rule of law and the protection of human rights, including plans for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, justice and corrections capacities, as well as the legal and policy framework for the operation of its security forces, including governance, vetting and oversight mechanisms;

13. Reaffirms that the measures imposed by paragraph 5 of resolution 733(1992) of 23 January 1992 and further elaborated upon in paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1425(2002) of 22 July 2002 shall not apply to supplies and technical assistance provided in accordance with paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007) to the Transitional Federal Government for the purposes of the development of its security sector institutions, consistent with the Djibouti peace process and subject to the notification procedure set out in paragraph 12 of resolution 1772(2007);

14. Reiterates its call upon all Somali parties to support the Djibouti Agreement, and calls for the end of all hostilities, acts of armed confrontation and efforts to undermine the Transitional Federal Government;

15. Welcomes the efforts of the Transitional Federal Government on reconciliation, urges the Transitional Federal Government to continue and strengthen these efforts within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement with all groups willing to cooperate and ready to renounce violence, and requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative for Somalia, to continue to work with the international community to facilitate reconciliation;

16. Calls for the immediate cessation of all acts of violence or abuses committed against civilians and humanitarian personnel in violation of international humanitarian law and human rights law;

17. Calls upon all parties and armed groups to take appropriate steps to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and supplies, and demands that all parties ensure full, safe and unhindered access for the timely delivery of humanitarian aid to persons in need of assistance across the country;

18. Requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative and the United Nations Political Office for Somalia, to redouble efforts to coordinate effectively and develop an integrated approach to all activities of the United Nations system in Somalia, to provide good offices and political support for the efforts to establish lasting peace and stability in Somalia, and to mobilize resources and support from the international community for both the immediate recovery and the long-term economic development of Somalia, taking into account the recommendations contained in his report of 31 December 2009;

19. Calls upon the Transitional Federal Government to take every appropriate measure to improve security conditions in Somalia, and requests the Secretary-General to expedite the proposed deployment of elements of the United Nations Political Office for Somalia and other United Nations offices and agencies, including the United Nations Support Office for the African Union Mission in Somalia, to Mogadishu, consistent with security conditions, as outlined in his report of 16 April 2009;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report on all aspects of the present resolution every four months, commencing 1 January 2010, and expresses its intention to review the situation, as part of his reporting obligations, as specified in the statement by the President of the Security Council of 31 October 2001 and Council resolution 1872(2009) of 26 May 2009;

21. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication. On 4 February [S/2010/69], Eritrea transmitted to the Security Council President a press statement of 3 February, stating that a recent communiqué on Somalia and Eritrea issued by IGAD was devoid of any legality. Eritrea had suspended its membership in the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) in early 2007 in the wake of Ethiopia's invasion of Somalia and the failure of IGAD to condemn acts of aggression against a fellow member State. Any decision of the four IGAD members (Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Uganda) in respect of Somalia did not have any validity.

Report of Secretary-General (May). Pursuant to the statement by the Security Council President of 31 October 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 210] and Council resolution 1910(2010) (see p. 276), the Secretary-General on 11 May [S/2010/234] reported on all aspects of that resolution and major developments since his last report [YUN 2009, p. 284]. He also assessed the political, security, human rights and humanitarian situation, as well as progress made in implementing the UN strategy for Somalia, and covered the counter-piracy activities of the United Nations and the international community.

The Transitional Federal Government and the Transitional Federal Parliament continued to operate from Mogadishu, the Secretary-General said. The Transitional Federal Government was attempting to rebuild and rehabilitate the Somali institutions and infrastructure and pursued efforts to become more representative, credible, accountable and functional by preparing and passing a budget for 2010, enhancing financial accountability, collecting revenues from Mogadishu seaport and airport, and operating Radio Mogadishu. On 29 January, on the occasion of the first anniversary of his swearing-in, President Sheikh Sharif Sheikh Ahmed stated that the Government would focus on ensuring the people's access to essential services and on rehabilitating the infrastructure. He appealed to the international community to focus efforts not only on political, security and humanitarian assistance, but also on economic development, especially job creation and the promotion of trade and business. On 28 February, the first anniversary of the formation of the Cabinet, Prime Minister Omar Abdirashid Ali Sharmarke urged the international community to make Somalia a priority on the global political, economic and security agenda.

In line with its objective of forming an inclusive administration, the Transitional Federal Government continued to reach out to Somalis outside the peace process. The signing on 15 March, at AU headquarters, of a cooperation agreement between the Transitional Federal Government and Ahlu Sunna Wal Jama'a (ASWJ) constituted a significant breakthrough. The accord, which followed an initial declaration signed on 21 June 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 280] under the auspices of the United Nations Political Office for Somalia (UNPOS), stipulated the following arrangements: a merging of Transitional Federal Government and ASWJ forces, with the latter bringing its troops under the control and command of the Government; the allocation to ASWJ of ministerial posts and senior positions in the civil and foreign services; the integration of local administrations already established by the Government; the formation of an advisory council of religious leaders as a counterweight to Al-Shabaab's radical doctrine; and the establishment of a body to monitor implementation of the agreement, comprising UNPOS, the AU and IGAD.

In his continuing efforts to engage with regional organizations and the wider international community, President Sharif attended the fourteenth ordinary session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union (Addis Ababa, 1–2 February), during which the AU appealed for more support to the Transitional Federal Government and AMISOM.

In Somaliland the focus remained on the presidential elections, to be held in June. Since its re-establishment in October 2009, the National Electoral Commission (NEC) of Somaliland had been working on the preparations, including the introduction of an amended electoral law.

The overall security situation in Somalia remained highly volatile and unpredictable. Armed group elements continued to launch stand-off attacks against the Transitional Federal Government and AMISOM forces in Mogadishu, where armed clashes, roadside bombs and individual killings perpetuated a particularly hostile environment. On 27 April, AMISOM troops foiled an attempted suicide attack on their base in Mogadishu. Continued fighting between Al-Shabaab and Hizbul Islam in Lower Juba and Lower Shabelle, and between Al-Shabaab and ASWJ in the central region had not relented. Direct threats to UN operations continued in most of Southern and Central Somalia, especially in Al-Shabaab-controlled areas, including threats of improvised explosive device (IED) attacks, raids, ambushes, targeted assassinations and abductions. National UN staff faced direct threats from armed group elements in southern and central Somalia, and the presence of international staff in those regions was now restricted. UN compounds in Wajid, Baidos and Beletweyne had been taken over or looted by Al-Shabaab, prompting the United Nations Mine Actions Service (UNMAS) to suspend mine action operations in all Al-Shabaab-controlled areas in December 2009. Insecurity still limited the ability of UN agencies, funds and programmes to pursue humanitarian efforts in southern and central Somalia. On 28 February, Al-Shabaab called for the termination of all WFP operations in Somalia, and on 1 March and 7 April, respectively, it occupied WFP compounds in Buale and Wajid.

In Puntland, the security situation remained unpredictable, with continuing violent incidents, including armed clashes, assassinations and frequent explosive devices attacks. Following several attacks since November 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 288], in which members of Parliament, a chief justice, security personnel and civilians were killed, the Puntland administration established a committee to assess security and coordinate responses. Since November, Puntland police had arrested suspects in the spate of killings and attempted killings of prominent figures; three of the suspects had been reportedly sentenced to death. Puntland authorities forcibly evicted IDPs, reportedly based on concerns that IDP camps had been infiltrated by radical elements.

A major challenge for the Transitional Federal Government had been how to deal with defectors from the extremist groups, whose needs might not be addressed through ongoing disarmament and demobilization activities. The Government had thus far set up an interim inter-ministerial committee to address the matter.

The increased fighting in Southern and Central Somalia had devastating consequences for civilians, with over 110,000 displaced during the first three months of 2010, bringing the total of IDPs as a consequence of the conflict to 1.4 million. In Mogadishu, civilians were increasingly caught in crossfire, mortar attacks and artillery shelling between insurgents and government forces. In March, the Mayor of Mogadishu issued a statement urging civilians to flee the city as a precautionary measure.

Civilians in southern and central Somalia continued to be threatened and abused by armed groups, through stoning, amputations, floggings and other corporal punishments, practices that contravened international and humanitarian law.

The United Nations pursued its mandated activities through the three-phased approach endorsed by the Security Council in its resolutions 1863(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 271], 1872(2009) [ibid., p. 277], and 1910(2010) (see p. 276). With regard to strengthening the political process, the Secretary-General's Special Representative and UNPOS senior management visited Mogadishu and collaborated closely with the Transitional Federal Government to advance the peace process. They also visited Puntland and Somaliland to engage with the authorities. The Somaliland authorities had set up a ministerial task force to collaborate with UNPOS on security, human rights, piracy and civil affairs.

The Secretary-General observed that the Transitional Federal Government had been making strong efforts to improve security and stability, despite mulmultiple challenges. It had begun to raise domestic revenues to fund some of its initiatives, signalling that it intended to become gradually more self-reliant. Recent progress in key areas had rendered the Government more confident and established it as a serious representative of the interests of the Somalis and a viable partner of the international community.

The Secretary-General urged Member States to undertake measures to implement the sanctions regime, including resolution 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299], which imposed targeted sanctions on those jeopardizing the peace process. Ongoing obstruction and intimidation by insurgent elements had hindered the delivery of humanitarian assistance, the Secretary-General said, reminding all parties that they were obligated by international law to allow such assistance to those in need. He acknowledged the critical efforts of the AU, especially through AMISOM, and of IGAD to stabilize Somalia, and welcomed their enhanced collaboration with the United Nations, paying special tribute to AMISOM troops, who continued to operate in a difficult and dangerous environment. He reiterated his call on the international community to support the AU, AMISOM and IGAD in discharging their mandates. He urged the Transitional Federal Government to intensify its efforts, especially in the areas of political reconciliation and outreach, security, stability and services delivery.

Communications. On 27 May [S/2010/272], Turkey transmitted the Istanbul Declaration issued by the Istanbul Conference on Somalia (21–23 May) (see below), organized by Turkey in cooperation with the United Nations and the Transitional Federal Government. By a letter of 7 July [S/2010/361], Ethiopia, as chair of IGAD, transmitted the communiqué of the fifteenth Extraordinary Summit Meeting (Addis Ababa, 5 July), on the political and security situation in Somalia.

Security Council statement (August). On 31 August [SC/10019], the Security Council condemned the attack on the Presidential Palace in Mogadishu on 30 August that resulted in the death of four AMISOM peacekeepers, and expressed its condolences to the families of those killed in the attack, to the Government of Uganda and to the AU.

Report of Secretary-General (September). On 9 September, the Secretary-General presented a report [S/2010/447] on major developments in Somalia during the previous four months, assessing the political, security, human rights and humanitarian situation, as well as progress made in implementing the UN strategy on Somalia. The report also covered the operational activities of the United Nations and the international community, as well as developments in counter-piracy.

As a result of internal disputes between the Parliament and the Cabinet, President Sharif dissolved the Cabinet on 16 May. The Speaker of Parliament resigned on 17 May and was later replaced by the former Finance Minister, Sharif Hassan. The President later rescinded his decisions and reinstated the Prime Minister and his Government on 20 May. On 3 July, Prime Minister Omar Abdirashid Ali Sharmarke announced a newly reshuffled Cabinet of 39 members, including five from ASWJ and new members from the Somali diaspora.

Despite those political complications and the difficult security environment, the United Nations, the AU, IGAD and the international community continued efforts to promote peace and security in Somalia. The Secretary-General's Special Representative continued working with all parties to ease the political tensions and implement the internationally endorsed strategy for Somalia. As part of his efforts to move the political process in Somalia forward and sustain international attention to the political, security, humanitarian assistance and development needs of Somalia, the Secretary-General and Turkey jointly convened the Istanbul Conference (21–23 May). The Istanbul Declaration adopted at the Conference reflected a consensus within the international community on the need for more effective action by the Transitional Federal Government, encouragement for groups outside the 2008 Djibouti Agreement [YUN 2008, p. 281] to join the peace process, and the necessity of building Somalia's security forces and strengthening the capacity of AMISOM to secure key strategic areas in Mogadishu. The Declaration encouraged the Somali private sector to play a positive role in the peace process. As a follow-up, UNPOS co-chaired on 8 June a meeting with the Islamic Development Bank and Turkey, at which a task force was established to undertake recovery activities in the areas of basic services, livelihoods, infrastructure and energy.

In response to increased insurgent activities against the Transitional Federal Government, the IGAD Assembly of Heads of State and Government, at its fifteenth extraordinary session (Addis Ababa, 5 July), noted with concern the deteriorating security situation in Somalia and decided to deploy 2,000 additional peacekeepers under AMISOM. It further agreed to work with all concerned parties, including AMISOM and the Security Council, to increase AMISOM troop levels for deployment throughout Somalia.

Further indications of the regional impact of the instability in Somalia were the suicide attacks on 11 July, targeting an Ethiopian restaurant and a sports club in Kampala, Uganda, during the Fédération Internationale de Football Association World Cup final, during which over 70 people were killed and many more injured. The Kampala attacks, later claimed by Al-Shabaab, revealed for the first time Al-Shabaab's ability to plan and execute terrorist attacks outside Somalia's borders against countries and entities that threatened its insurgency and radical ideology. The attacks demonstrated that Al-Shabaab remained a serious security threat for Somalia, the subregion and the wider international community.

Shortly after the IGAD summit, the AU Assembly held its fifteenth ordinary session in Kampala (25–27 July). On the sidelines of the AU summit, the United States Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Ambassador Johnnie Carson, facilitated a mini-summit on Somalia on 26 July, attended by the Presidents of Djibouti, Kenya, Somalia, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania; the Prime Minister of Ethiopia; the Chairperson of the AU Commission; the Deputy Secretary-General; and other UN representatives. The participants discussed ways to support the implementation of the IGAD proposals, particularly to increase support to AMISOM and the Transitional Federal Government. In that connection, the United States offered to facilitate deployment of an additional 2,000 troops under AMISOM.

During the reporting period, volatility and insecurity increased in Mogadishu. AMISOM and the Transitional Federal Government frequently engaged the insurgents, in response to increased mortar fire and direct attacks against Villa Somalia and the seaport. AMISOM military operations to secure positions in key districts in Mogadishu led to fierce battles, including fighting on 4 July between Al-Shabaab and Government/AMISOM forces in the Abdiiaz district, as well as an attack on Al-Shabaab in Bondere on 22 July. There was a sharp decline in the number of Government and AMISOM casualties, most likely as a result of improved security measures and counter-IED procedures. The frequency of attacks with IEDs had, however, led to an increase in civilian casualties.

Beyond Mogadishu, sporadic clashes between Al-Shabaab and ASWJ continued in the central regions, albeit with no significant changes in control of territory. Al-Shabaab continued to control the town of Kismaayo and its seaport, while its positions in the Juba Valley and along the Kenyan border continued to be attacked sporadically by local clan militia associated with the Transitional Federal Government and by the rival Ras Kamboni group. The security situation in Puntland had generally become more volatile, but the situation in Somaliland remained stable during the reporting period.

With regard to the implementation of resolution 1910(2010) (see p. 276) and the establishment of a UN "light footprint" in Mogadishu, the United Nations continued to maintain a substantive presence in parts of Somalia, as well as a robust intermittent presence throughout the country. The Secretary-General's Special Representative and other senior UN officials had made frequent visits to Mogadishu and were in the process of establishing a more sustainable political presence to maintain close contact with the Transitional Federal Government and other key Somali actors. Missions outside Mogadishu Airport remained highly risky and dependent on transport and protection by AMISOM, whose mandated tasks and priorities bound most of its capacity and limited the support it could provide UN operations.

In order to maximize the impact of UN activities and in line with the Secretary-General's policy on integration of operations, the UN Headquarters Integrated Task Force on Somalia undertook a mission (31 May–11 June) to review the UN strategy for Somalia and proposals for better coordination of efforts.

UNPOS continued to work closely with the Transitional Federal Government to advance the peace process, through consultations with President Sharif and other Somali officials. UNPOS also intensified its engagement with the Somaliland and Puntland authorities, undertook several visits to both regions, and established a range of contacts on the ground. Following a formal request from the Transitional Federal Government, a UN needs assessment mission examined the conditions for conducting an internationally supervised constitutional referendum and elections.

Under the co-chairmanship of the Transitional Federal Government Prime Minister and the Secretary-General's Special Representative, the Joint Security Committee met in Nairobi (7–8 August), focusing on achieving progress in supporting the Somali security forces and police and the security ministries. The Committee also reaffirmed its commitment to protecting civilians and emphasized the need to avoid civilian casualties. It welcomed AMISOM's renewed commitment to mentor Transitional Federal Government forces and its efforts to establish a safe zone in Mogadishu. The Committee recommended that the international community gradually move its efforts back to Mogadishu.

UNPOS assisted the Transitional Federal Government in the development of its armed forces, and the United Nations continued to help it develop a professional and accountable police force, while also supporting police services in Somaliland and Puntland. The initial target of 10,000 Transitional Federal Government police officers, set in the Djibouti Peace Agreement, was lowered to 7,000, a reduction endorsed by the Committee on 8 August. By mid-July, 4,511 Somali police officers had been trained under the umbrella of the international community.

In order to support the Transitional Federal Government in addressing some of its most daunting challenges, notably extending its authority and combating extremism, the Secretary-General appealed to the international community to provide military and financial support and other resources to it. As Somalia's transition period approached its end, the transitional agenda remained largely unfulfilled. Unity within the transitional federal institutions remained critical for confidence-building among Somalis and the international community. The Secretary-General noted significant progress made in preparing the draft constitution, and encouraged the transitional federal institutions to initiate an inclusive consultative process to complete that critical task. He appealed for reinforced international support for training, equipping and sustaining the Somali police and security forces. He acknowledged the critical role of the AU and IGAD in supporting the peace process, but remained deeply concerned about the devastating impact of the conflict on the civilian population and the lack of respect for human rights and humanitarian law. Finally, the Secretary-General reiterated his commitment to ensuring maximum coordination of UN efforts in Somalia and stated his intention to take steps towards establishing an integrated UN presence.

Communications. By a letter of 17 September [S/2010/488], Eritrea refuted allegations made by Ethiopia and Kenya during the Security Council meeting on 16 September that Eritrea was providing support to Al-Shabaab. On 18 October [S/2010/539], Uganda transmitted a communiqué containing a decision on Somalia, taken by the AU Peace and Security Council at its 15 October meeting.

Security Council consideration. On 21 October [S/PV.6407], the Security Council met to consider the situation in Somalia. Speaking before the Council, the Secretary-General said the situation remained fragile, but there were glimmers of hope as the Transitional Federal Government remained committed to peace and reconciliation. The President had appointed a new Prime Minister and the Secretary-General urged Parliament to endorse him so as to allow the new Government to come into place without delay. The Government was also developing its security sector institutions and was carrying out an offensive against the insurgents, having taken over some main cities previously occupied by them. In addition, the resumption of broadcasting by Radio Mogadishu and the rehabilitation of some key buildings demonstrated the Government's resolve to meet the people's aspirations for peace and security, in partnership with the international community.

At the same time, the Secretary-General stated, the obstacles were well known. Two million people, including 1.4 million IDPs, needed emergency aid. Continuing insecurity and conflict in parts of the country were attracting foreign extremist elements, which posed a threat not only to Somalia, but to the region, the continent and beyond. The international community had to act now if it was to make a difference.

The Secretary-General encouraged the Council to take the bold and courageous decisions necessary to enhance the capacity of AMISOM to deliver more effectively its mandate. His Special Representative was working closely with the AU and IGAD to ensure coherence between their military strategy and the international community's political objectives, as outlined in the 2008 Djibouti Agreement.

Security Council statement (October). On 21 October [SC/10065], the Security Council expressed its concern at the continued instability in Somalia and the deteriorating humanitarian situation. It reaffirmed its support for the Djibouti Agreement and peace process as the basis for the resolution of the conflict in Somalia, and reiterated its support to the Transitional Federal Government in its efforts to achieve peace, security and reconciliation. The Council called on the Transitional Federal Government to ensure cohesion, remain united and redouble its efforts on reconciliation and the completion of the remaining transitional tasks, in particular the constitution-making process.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 6461], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1964(2010). The draft [S/2010/649] was submitted by France, Gabon, Japan, Mexico, Nigeria, Turkey, Uganda, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Somalia,

Recalling also all its previous resolutions on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, on women and peace and security and on children and armed conflict,

Reaffirming its respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence and unity of Somalia,

Reiterating its commitment to a comprehensive and lasting settlement of the situation in Somalia,

Reiterating its full support for the Djibouti peace process, which provides the framework for reaching a lasting political solution in Somalia, expressing its support for the Transitional Federal Charter, recognizing the need to promote reconciliation and dialogue among the Somali population, and stressing the importance of broad-based and representative institutions reached through a political process ultimately inclusive of all,

Reaffirming its support for the Transitional Federal Government in its role as part of the Djibouti peace process, stressing the primary responsibility of the transitional federal institutions to work in a cohesive and united manner in order to complete the remaining transitional tasks, in particular the constitution-making process and the delivery of basic services to the population, and encouraging them to intensify their efforts in this regard,

Recognizing that peace and stability in Somalia depend on reconciliation and effective governance across the whole of Somalia, and encouraging all Somali parties willing to renounce violence to work together to build peace and stability,

Commending the contribution of the African Union Mission in Somalia to lasting peace and stability in Somalia, expressing its appreciation for the continued commitment of troops and equipment to the Mission by the Governments of Uganda and Burundi, and condemning any hostilities towards the Mission and the Transitional Federal Government,

Commending also the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Somalia, Mr. Augustine P. Mahiga, and reaffirming its strong support for his efforts,

Noting the decisions on Somalia adopted by the African Union summit held in Kampala from 19 to 27 July 2010, and the recommendations on Somalia of the ministerial meeting of the Peace and Security Council of the African Union, held in Addis Ababa on 15 October 2010, and welcoming the appointment of former President Jerry Rawlings as the African Union High Representative for Somalia,

Reaffirming the importance of the re-establishment, training, equipping and retention of Somali security forces, which is vital for the long-term stability of Somalia, expressing its support for the ongoing European Union training mission in Uganda, and emphasizing the importance of coordinated, timely and sustained support from the international community,

Commending Member States and organizations which have made contributions to support the Mission and the Transitional Federal Government, encouraging the international community to mobilize additional funding to support the Mission and the Transitional Federal Government as appropriate, and recognizing the importance of timely and predictable funding for the Transitional Federal Government and the Mission,

Encouraging the international community to support further stabilization efforts in support of areas of relative stability throughout Somalia,

Reiterating its serious concern at the continued fighting in Somalia and its impact on the civilian population, condemning all attacks, including terrorist attacks on the Transitional Federal Government, the Mission and the civilian population by armed opposition groups and foreign fighters, particularly Al-Shabaab, and stressing the terrorist threat that Somali armed opposition groups and foreign fighters, particularly Al-Shabaab, constitute for Somalia and for the international community,

Emphasizing the importance of effective public information and communications operations to support the Transitional Federal Government and the Mission and consolidate the political process, and expressing its serious concern at the continued attacks against journalists,

Reiterating its serious concern at the worsening humanitarian situation in Somalia, strongly condemning the targeting and obstruction of the delivery of humanitarian aid by armed groups in Somalia, which has prevented the delivery of such aid in some areas, and deploring the repeated attacks on humanitarian personnel,

Expressing its condemnation in the strongest terms of all acts of violence, abuses and human rights violations committed against civilians, including women and children, and humanitarian personnel, in violation of international humanitarian law and human rights law, stressing the responsibility of all parties in Somalia to comply fully with their obligations in this regard, and reaffirming the importance of the fight against impunity,

Expressing its concern at the significant decline in humanitarian funding for Somalia, and calling upon all Member States to contribute to current and future consolidated humanitarian appeals,

Recalling its resolution 1950(2010) of 23 November 2010, recognizing that the ongoing instability in Somalia contributes to the problem of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, stressing the need for a comprehensive response to tackle piracy and its underlying causes by the international community, and welcoming the efforts of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, States and international and regional organizations,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 9 September 2010 and the recommendations contained therein for continued action on the political, security and recovery tracks by the Transitional Federal Government, with the support of the international community,

Determining that the situation in Somalia constitutes a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to authorize the States members of the African Union to maintain the deployment until 30 September 2011 of the African Union Mission in Somalia, which shall be authorized to take all measures necessary to carry out its existing mandate, as set out in paragraph 9 of resolution 1772(2007) of 20 August 2007;

2. Requests the African Union to maintain the deployment of the Mission in Somalia and to increase its force strength from the current mandated strength of 8,000 troops to 12,000 troops, thereby enhancing its ability to carry out its mandate;

3. Notes the recommendations on Somalia made by the Peace and Security Council of the African Union on 15 October 2010, and underlines its intention to keep the situation on the ground under review and to take into account, in its future decisions on the Mission, progress in meeting the following objectives:

(a) Significant progress by the Transitional Federal Government on the remaining transitional tasks, in particular the constitution-making process and the delivery of basic services to the population;

(b) Adoption of a National Security and Stabilization Plan and the effective development by the Transitional Federal Government of the National Security Force and the Somali Police Force, with reinforced chains of command, within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement and in line with that Plan;

(c) The continuation and strengthening of reconciliation and political outreach efforts by the Transitional Federal Government, within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement, with all groups willing to cooperate and ready to renounce violence;

(d) With the support of the Mission, the consolidation of security and stability in Somalia by the Transitional Federal Government on the basis of clear military objectives integrated into a political strategy;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative for Somalia, to continue to extend his good offices to facilitate reconciliation among all Somalis and the peace process in general, with the support of the international community;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide technical and expert advice to the African Union in the planning and deployment of the Mission, through the United Nations Office to the African Union, including the revised concept of operations for future activities of the Mission;

6. Requests the Mission to continue to assist the Transitional Federal Government in the development of the Somali Police Force and the National Security Force, and to assist the integration of Somali units trained by other Member States or organizations inside and outside Somalia;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide a logistical support package for the Mission, called for in resolution 1863(2009) of 16 January 2009, for a maximum of 12,000 Mission troops, comprising equipment and services, including public information support, but not including the transfer of funds, as described in the letter dated 30 January 2009 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, until 30 September 2011, ensuring the accountability and transparency of expenditure of United Nations funds as set out in paragraph 6 of resolution 1910(2010) of 28 January 2010;

8. Encourages Member States to support the Mission and the Somali security sector institutions through the provision of appropriate and necessary equipment and technical assistance;

9. Reiterates its call to Member States and regional and international organizations to contribute generously and promptly to the United Nations trust fund for the Mission without caveats, or to make direct bilateral donations in support of the Mission, and encourages donors to work closely with the United Nations and the African Union in order to ensure that the appropriate funds and equipment are promptly provided, particularly in relation to the salaries of Mission soldiers, self-sustainment and the costs of contingent-owned equipment, in particular lethal equipment;

10. Recalls its statement of intent regarding the establishment of a United Nations peacekeeping operation, as expressed in resolution 1863(2009), and notes that any decision to deploy such an operation would take into account, inter alia, the conditions set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 April 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to take the steps identified in paragraphs 82 to 86 of that report, subject to the conditions set out in the report;

11. Emphasizes that, in order to ensure Somalia's long-term security, effective development of Somali security forces is needed, and reiterates its call to Member States and regional and international organizations to contribute generously and promptly to the United Nations trust fund for the Somali security institutions and to offer assistance to the Somali security forces, including through training and equipment in coordination with the Mission, consistent with paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007);

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the Transitional Federal Government in developing the transitional security institutions, including the Somali Police Force and the National Security Force, and to continue to support the Transitional Federal Government in developing a national security strategy which reflects respect for the rule of law and the protection of human rights, including plans for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, justice and corrections capacities, as well as the legal and policy framework for the operation of its security forces, including governance, vetting and oversight mechanisms;

13. Reaffirms that the measures imposed by paragraph 5 of resolution 733(1992) of 23 January 1992 and further elaborated upon in paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1425(2002) of 22 July 2002 shall not apply to supplies and technical assistance provided in accordance with paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007) to the Transitional Federal Government for the purposes of the development of its security sector institutions, consistent with the Djibouti peace process and subject to the notification procedure set out in paragraph 12 of resolution 1772(2007);

14. Reiterates its call upon all Somali parties to support the Djibouti Agreement, and calls for the end of all hostilities, acts of armed confrontation and efforts to undermine the Transitional Federal Government;

15. Calls for the immediate cessation of all acts of violence or abuses committed against civilians, including women and children, and humanitarian personnel in violation of international humanitarian law and human rights law, and stresses the responsibility of all parties and armed groups in Somalia to comply with their obligations to protect the civilian population from the effects of hostilities, in particular by avoiding any indiscriminate or excessive use of force;

16. Calls upon all parties to end grave violations committed against children in Somalia, welcomes the commitment by the Transitional Federal Government to appoint a focal point to address the issue of the recruitment of child soldiers, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure continued monitoring and reporting of the situation of children in Somalia, to continue a dialogue with the Transitional Federal Government towards the preparation of a time-limited action plan to end the recruitment and use of child soldiers and to strengthen the child protection component of the United Nations Political Office for Somalia;

17. Calls upon all parties and armed groups to take appropriate steps to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and supplies, and demands that all parties ensure full, safe and unhindered access for the timely delivery of humanitarian aid to persons in need of assistance across the country;

18. Requests the Secretary-General, through his Special Representative for Somalia and the United Nations Political Office for Somalia, to redouble efforts to coordinate effectively and develop an integrated approach to all activities of the United Nations system in Somalia, to provide good offices and political support for the efforts to establish lasting peace and stability in Somalia, and to mobilize resources and support from the international community for both the immediate recovery and the long-term economic development of Somalia, taking into account the recommendations contained in his report of 31 December 2009;

19. Welcomes the steps taken by the United Nations Political Office for Somalia and other United Nations offices and agencies, including the United Nations Support Office for the African Union Mission in Somalia, to increase the United Nations presence in Somalia, and encourages further United Nations deployments to Somalia, in particular Mogadishu, consistent with the security conditions, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General of 9 September 2010;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to report on all aspects of the present resolution every four months, commencing 1 January 2011, and expresses its intention to review the situation, as part of his reporting obligations, as specified in the statement by its President of 31 October 2001 and its resolutions 1863(2009), 1872(2009) of 26 May 2009 and 1910(2010);

21. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (December). On 30 December [S/2010/675], the Secretary-General, pursuant to presidential statement S/PRST/2001/30 [YUN 2001, p. 210] and resolution 1872(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 277], and as specified in resolution 1910(2010) (see p. 276), submitted a report providing an update on major developments since his 9 September report and assessing the political, security, human rights and humanitarian situation as well as progress in implementing the UN strategy for Somalia. The report also covered the operational activities of the United Nations and the international community, as well as developments in counter-piracy.

Serious differences prevailed between President Sharif and former Prime Minister Sharmarke over the management of the transition in general and the performance of the Cabinet and the constitution-making process in particular. As a result, the Prime Minister resigned on 21 September. On 14 October, President Sharif announced the appointment of Mohamed Abdullahi Mohamed as the new Prime Minister. A dispute ensued between the President and the Speaker of Parliament, Hassan Sharif, about the mode of endorsement of the Prime Minister-designate. While the President favoured an open vote, the Speaker insisted on a secret ballot, on the basis of different interpretations of Parliament's rules of procedure.

The Secretary-General's Special Representative travelled to Mogadishu on several occasions to try and diffuse those tensions. He also delivered a unified message from the United Nations, the AU, IGAD and the international community, urging the Somali leaders to resolve their differences to allow the formation of a government. Following the mediation by the Special Representative and regional partners, Parliament confirmed Mohamed Abdullahi Mohamed as the Prime Minister on 31 October through an open vote. In a follow-up visit to Mogadishu on 6 November, the Special Representative met with the President, the Speaker and the new Prime Minister to discuss the formation of a new government, the implementation of the remaining transitional tasks, and the development of a clear political road map, in particular with respect to reconciliation and outreach initiatives and the completion of an inclusive constitution-making process.

On 12 November, Prime Minister Abdullahi Mohamed proposed a cabinet of 18 Ministers, including a female Minister, drawn mainly from the diaspora. The Cabinet was endorsed by Parliament on 27 November. The Prime Minister stated that he would focus, as a matter of priority, on the constitution-making process and reaching out to the armed opposition groups through dialogue. In response to a request by the International Contact Group on Somalia, the Prime Minister subsequently issued a draft political road map outlining his Government's vision for managing the transitional period set to end in August 2011, which included the establishment of oversight and accountability mechanisms for the Transitional Federal Government, an audit of the Somali civil service, establishment of a committee of highly respected Somalis to advise on the post-transitional political dispensation as part of the constitutional process, and strengthening of security institutions. The Special Representative and UN country team were consulted on the road map on 7 December.

On 26 September, ASWJ announced the collapse of talks with the Transitional Federal Government and its decision not to participate in the new government. President Sharif stated that his Government would honour the agreement with ASWJ and called on the latter to do the same. Despite some internal differences in respect of the implementation of the agreement, ASWJ did not withdraw from the Government, with two of its members appointed in the new Cabinet.

The security situation in Southern and Central Somalia remained fragile and unpredictable, leading to a cessation of most humanitarian activities in Southern Somalia, while in Mogadishu, humanitarian operations were limited to crucial life-saving activities. On 10 September, AMISOM troops foiled an attempted suicide attack on their base at the international airport in Mogadishu. In central Somalia, the Transitional Federal Government relied on its alliance with ASWJ for control of the Hiraan, Galguduud and Mudug regions. From mid-October, fighting between pro-Transitional Federal Government militias and Al-Shabaab over Bula Hawa—a strategic town near the Kenyan and Ethiopian borders—threatened to spill over into Kenya, while considerably disrupting living conditions, especially for the population on the Somali side.

On 23 September, on the margins of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General convened a mini-summit on Somalia to galvanize international support and mobilize resources for the Transitional Federal Government and AMISOM. President Sharif outlined the major security challenges his Government was facing and presented a list of activities his Government planned to undertake, which included enacting a constitution and promoting national unity. He called for greater humanitarian assistance and support to address piracy.

The International Contact Group on Somalia held its eighteenth meeting in Madrid on 27 and 28 September, co-chaired by the Secretary-General's Special Representative together with Norway and the United States. The meeting called on the Transitional Federal Government to develop a road map, within 60 days, outlining the management of the remaining transitional period; on the transitional federal institutions to intensify efforts to complete the transitional tasks before 20 August 2011; and on the Transitional Federal Government to increase its outreach and reconciliation towards groups and entities that remained outside the Djibouti peace process.

The United Nations continued to support Somalia's efforts to draft a new constitution. Given the fast-approaching end of the transitional period, the Special Representative, UNPOS and the UN country team were engaged in facilitating genuine and wide-ranging consultations in order to bring the constitution-making process to conclusion.

In accordance with resolution 1910(2010), the United Nations continued to expand its footprint in Mogadishu, with 61 missions conducted by international staff from the UN Support Office for AMISOM (UNSOA), UNPOS, UNMAS, OCHA, WFP, WHO, UNICEF, UNDP and the Department of Safety and Security. The average UN presence in Somaliland was 50 international and 400 national staff.

The Integrated Task Force review in June expressed the view that the UN incremental approach to the possible transition from AMISOM to a UN peacekeeping operation remained valid. The review recommended an adjustment to the benchmarks outlined in the Secretary-General's March 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 176]. The revised benchmarks were: completion of the training and equipping of a cohesive Somali security force with clear and effective command and control, capable of initially stabilizing Mogadishu; the stabilization of Mogadishu by Transitional Federal Government forces; successful building of alliances by the Transitional Federal Government with potential clan, religious and militia allies in Mogadishu and the regions to which a potential peacekeeping operation would be deployed, to establish the foundation and political context for supporting the extension of the authority and control of the Transitional Federal Government beyond Mogadishu; consent of the major actors in Mogadishu and in the respective regions of Southern and Central Somalia to the deployment of a UN peacekeeping operation; attainment of AMISOM full strength before re-hatting; and availability of adequate troops and military capabilities from troop-contributing countries.

The Secretary-General urged the transitional federal institutions to focus on completing the constitution-drafting process in an inclusive manner and meeting the targets for the political transition scheduled to end in August 2011; and Member States to continue cooperating with the United Nations, IGAD and other regional organizations in implementing Security Council resolution 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299], which imposed sanctions on those who undermined peace efforts. He appealed to the international community to provide urgent military, financial, logistical and other support to the Transitional Federal Government, as well as to IGAD and the AU in their efforts to address the situation in Somalia, while recognizing the important role that the AU, IGAD and AMISOM continued to play in finding a lasting solution to the crisis in Somalia. He welcomed the Security Council's decision in resolution 1964(2010) of 22 December (see p. 282) to increase the AMISOM troop level to 12,000 and acknowledged the AU call to the Security Council to reaffirm its commitment to deploy a UN peacekeeping operation through the re-hatting of AMISOM and to establish a timeline for that deployment.

Piracy

Throughout the year, the Security Council monitored the issue of piracy off the coast of Somalia and intensified efforts to enhance international and regional cooperation in bringing pirates to justice.

The number of piracy attacks off the coast of Somalia, which had steadily increased since the overthrow of the Government of Siad Barre on 31 January 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 427], continued to rise further in 2010, as did the level of violence employed by the pirates. Somali pirates expanded their operations well into the Indian Ocean to more than 1,000 nautical miles off the Somali coast, which brought a much greater maritime area under threat. The pirates operated from around 70 camps on beaches on the approximately 1,800 mile-long Somali coast. Their methods had become increasingly sophisticated, indicating greater planning, financing and organization.

In January, the Somalia Counter-Piracy Technical Coordination Mechanism in Kampala, also referred to as the Kampala process, was established. In a communiqué of its fifth plenary meeting (New York, 28 January), the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia welcomed the agreement that led to the creation of the mechanism. The Contact Group had been established in January 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 286] pursuant to Security Council resolution 1851(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 292] to facilitate the discussion and co-ordination of action among States and organizations to suppress piracy off the coast of Somalia; as at June 2010, the Group counted 53 members, including Member States and international organizations. The Kampala process comprised technical representatives from the Transitional Federal Government and the regions of Puntland and Somaliland, as well as representatives of relevant UN offices, and was intended to improve the flow of information between the Somali central and regional authorities and their cooperation with the international community on counter-piracy initiatives. It sought to establish a consolidated approach among the authorities through the sharing of information and coordination activities in the areas of legislative reviews, prisons, fisheries and maritime safety and security.

The Contact Group had established four working groups. Working Group 1, chaired by the United Kingdom with the support of the International Maritime Organization (IMO), continued to promote effective military coordination among the various naval forces combating piracy off the coast of Somalia; it also facilitated further regional capability development and discussed the possibility of increased land-based options in the region. Working Group 2, convened by Denmark, with the support of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC), focused on the legal aspects and had developed a legal “toolbox” of resources and precedents available to Member States, and was also reviewing progress made in establishing relevant national legislation, in prosecuting suspected pirates and in looking at options relating to the transfer of convicted and sentenced pirates as well as the protection of human rights. Working Group 3, convened by the United States with the support of IMO, reviewed progress made in gathering and disseminating lessons learned and in implementing internationally recognized best-management practices on board vessels operating off the coast of Somalia, and had developed labour-related guidance in support of crew training and post-event activities. Working Group 4, convened by Egypt, had agreed that UNPOS should facilitate the implementation of a communications strategy, whose main goals included deterring Somali participation in piracy, encouraging international support for international counter-piracy operations, promoting the involvement of more stakeholders, and informing the international maritime community about potential risks. The United Nations participated actively in the Contact Group, attended its biannual meetings, supported its four working groups through technical expertise and facilitated dialogue among its members.

The International Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia was established on 27 January through endorsement by the Contact Group and the UN Controller. The overall purpose of the Fund was to support the implementation of Member States’ initiatives regarding piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia. It also provided a means to States and the shipping industry to make contributions. As at 11 October, the Fund had received $2,930,758; as at 22 November, it had supported seven projects in the areas of prosecution and communication, in the amount of $2.4 million.

During the year, the UN Integrated Task Force for Somalia established a sub-working group on piracy chaired by the Department of Political Affairs (DPA) and comprising 16 entities, including IMO, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL), UNODC and the Monitoring Group on Somalia. Its main purpose was to share information, exchange ideas and ensure collaboration and coordination.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 April [meeting 6301], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1918(2010). The draft [S/2010/206] was submitted by the Russian Federation.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions concerning the situation in Somalia, especially resolutions 1814(2008) of 15 May 2008, 1816(2008) of 2 June 2008, 1838(2008) of 7 October 2008, 1844(2008) of 20 November 2008, 1846(2008) of 2 December 2008, 1851(2008) of 16 December 2008 and 1897(2009) of 30 November 2009,

Continuing to be gravely concerned by the threat that piracy and armed robbery at sea against vessels pose to the situation in Somalia and other States in the region, as well as to international navigation and the safety of commercial maritime routes,

Reaffirming that international law, as reflected in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 (“the Convention”), in particular articles 100, 101 and 105 thereof, sets out the legal framework applicable to combating piracy and armed robbery at sea, as well as other ocean activities,

Reaffirming also that the authorizations renewed in resolution 1897(2009) apply only with respect to the situation in Somalia and shall not affect the rights, obligations or responsibilities of Member States under international law, including any rights or obligations under the Convention, with respect to any other situation, and underscoring, in particular, that resolution 1897(2009) shall not be considered as establishing customary international law,

Stressing the need to address the problems caused by the limited capacity of the judicial system of Somalia and other States in the region to effectively prosecute suspected pirates,

Noting with appreciation the assistance being provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other international organizations and donors, in coordination with the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, to enhance the capacity of the judicial and the corrections systems in Somalia, Kenya, Seychelles and other States in the region to prosecute suspected, and imprison convicted, pirates consistent with applicable international human rights law,

Commending the role of the European Union operation Atalanta, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization operations Allied Protector and Ocean Shield, the Combined Maritime Forces' Combined Task Force 151 and other States acting in a national capacity in cooperation with the Transitional Federal Government and each other, in suppressing piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including by bringing persons suspected of piracy to justice,

Commending also the efforts of Kenya to date to prosecute suspected pirates in its national courts and imprison convicted persons, and encouraging Kenya to continue these efforts, while acknowledging the difficulties that Kenya encounters in this regard,

Commending further the efforts to date of other States to prosecute suspected pirates in their national courts,

Acknowledging the decision of Seychelles to engage in the prosecution of suspected pirates, and welcoming in particular its decision on 6 February 2010 to consider hosting a regional prosecution centre,

Commending the decision of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to create the international trust fund supporting initiatives of the Contact Group, administered by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, to defray the expenses associated with the prosecution of suspected pirates and to support other counter-piracy initiatives, welcoming the contributions of participating States, and encouraging other potential donors to contribute to the fund,

Welcoming the adoption of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia regional capability needs assessment report, and urging States and international organizations to provide the fullest possible support to enable early implementation of the recommendations contained therein,

Commending those States that have amended their domestic law in order to criminalize piracy and facilitate the prosecution of suspected pirates in their national courts, consistent with applicable international law, including human rights law, and stressing the need for States to continue their efforts in this regard,

Noting with concern, at the same time, that the domestic law of a number of States lacks provisions criminalizing piracy and/or procedural provisions for effective criminal prosecution of suspected pirates,

Acknowledging the ongoing efforts within the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to explore possible mechanisms to more effectively prosecute persons suspected of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia,

Emphasizing that peace and stability within Somalia, the strengthening of State institutions, economic and social development and respect for human rights and the rule of law are necessary to create the conditions for a durable eradication of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and further emphasizing that Somalia's long-term security rests with the effective development by the Transitional Federal Government of the National Security Force and the Somali Police Force, within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement and in line with a national security strategy,

Concerned over cases in which persons suspected of piracy are released without facing justice, and determined to create conditions to ensure that pirates are held accountable,

1. Affirms that the failure to prosecute persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia undermines anti-piracy efforts of the international community;

2. Calls upon all States, including States in the region, to criminalize piracy under their domestic law and to favourably consider the prosecution of suspected, and imprisonment of convicted, pirates apprehended off the coast of Somalia, consistent with applicable international human rights law;

3. Welcomes, in this context, the progress being made to implement the International Maritime Organization Code of Conduct concerning the Repression of Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in the Western Indian Ocean and the Gulf of Aden (Djibouti Code of Conduct), and calls upon participants to implement the Code fully as soon as possible;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the Security Council within three months a report on possible options to further the aim of prosecuting and imprisoning persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including, in particular, options for creating special domestic chambers, possibly with international components, a regional tribunal or an international tribunal and corresponding imprisonment arrangements, taking into account the work of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, the existing practice in establishing international and mixed tribunals, and the time and the resources necessary to achieve and sustain substantive results;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (July). Pursuant to resolution 1918(2010), the Secretary-General on 26 July presented a report [S/2010/394] on possible options to further the aim of prosecuting and imprisoning persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including, in particular, options for creating special domestic chambers possibly with international components, a regional or international tribunal and corresponding imprisonment arrangements, taking into account the work of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, the existing practice in establishing international and mixed tribunals, and the time and resources necessary to achieve and sustain substantive results. The Secretary-General also described the nature and extent of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia and its causes. He further set out the applicable law and described the current UN approach to assisting States to prosecute and imprison persons for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea within their national jurisdictions.

The Secretary-General discussed seven options for the Council to consider: enhancement of UN assistance to build capacity of regional States to prosecute and imprison persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia; establishment of a Somali court sitting in the territory of a third State in the region, either with or without UN participation; establishment of a special chamber within the national jurisdiction of a State or States in the region, without UN participation; establishment of a special chamber within the national jurisdiction of a State or States in the region, with UN participation; establishment of a regional tribunal on the basis of a multilateral agreement among regional States, with UN participation; establishment of an international tribunal on the basis of an agreement between States in the region and the United Nations; and establishment of an international tribunal by Security Council resolution under Chapter VII of the UN Charter. The first option was ongoing and had achieved some success, the Secretary-General reported.

While the number of attacks remained high, increased naval patrols off the Horn of Africa and in the Gulf of Aden effectively reduced their success rate: in 2010, the figure was likely to be below 20 per cent. Nevertheless, as at 10 May, some 450 mariners were being held hostage on vessels captured by pirates off the coast of Somalia. The involvement of naval vessels from over 30 States represented one of the largest peace-time naval operations ever. In order to be effective, naval operations apprehending suspects should result in prosecutions; the risk otherwise was that suspects were released at sea, or repatriated, and returned to commit further acts of piracy or armed robbery at sea.

Whichever option the Security Council might favour, assisting Somalia and its regions in developing the capacity to prosecute and imprison according to international standards would be essential in sustaining results in the fight against impunity of those responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 25 August [meeting 6374], following consultations among Security Council members the President made statement S/PRST/2010/16 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council continues to be gravely concerned by the threat that piracy and armed robbery at sea against vessels pose to the situation in Somalia and other States in the region, as well as to international navigation and the safety of commercial maritime routes.

The Council strongly believes that persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including those who incite or intentionally facilitate such acts, should be brought to justice, and considers in this regard that the effective prosecution of suspected pirates and their supporters may deter future pirate attacks. The Council therefore deems it of utmost importance to find long-term solutions to the problem of prosecuting suspected, and imprisoning convicted, pirates which achieve and sustain substantive results with a view to contributing to the reinforcement of the rule of law in Somalia, and recalls in this regard that peace and stability within Somalia, the strengthening of State institutions, economic and social development and respect for human rights and the rule of law are necessary to create the conditions for a durable eradication of piracy and armed robbery at sea off its coast.

The Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General, as requested in its resolution 1918(2010), on possible options to further the aim of prosecuting and imprisoning persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including, in particular, options for creating special domestic chambers, possibly with international components, a regional tribunal or an international tribunal and corresponding imprisonment arrangements, taking into account the work of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, the existing practice in establishing international and mixed tribunals, and the time and resources necessary to achieve and sustain substantive results. The Council notes that the report identifies the challenges faced in tackling this problem, in particular the limited judicial capacity of States in the region, prison capacity and repatriation arrangements for suspects prosecuted by foreign courts, and believes that it provides a solid base for future work in order to enhance international, regional and national cooperation in bringing pirates to justice.

The Council commends the ongoing efforts of States, including States in the region, in particular Kenya and Seychelles, to prosecute suspected pirates in their national courts, stressing the need for all States to continue these efforts, including by criminalizing piracy under their domestic law.

The Council stresses the need for States and international organizations to continue addressing the problem of the limited capacity of the judicial and corrections systems of Somalia and other States in the region to effectively prosecute and detain, pending trial, suspected, and imprison convicted, pirates. In this regard the Council appreciates the assistance being provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and other international organizations and donors, in coordination with the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, to enhance the capacity of the judicial and corrections systems in Somalia, Kenya, Seychelles and other States in the region to prosecute suspected, and imprison convicted, pirates consistent with applicable international human rights law. The Council also reaffirms that international law, as reflected in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982, in particular articles 100, 101 and 105 thereof, sets out the legal framework applicable to combating piracy and armed robbery at sea, as well as other ocean activities.

The Council emphasizes the need for regular review of progress achieved in the prosecution and imprisonment of persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, including those who incite or intentionally facilitate such acts, with a view to considering possible further steps to ensure that such persons are held accountable. The Council encourages the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to continue discussion in this regard, taking into account the advantages and disadvantages of the various options described in the report of the Secretary-General.

The Council welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to appoint a Special Adviser on Legal Issues related to Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, bearing in mind the importance of the coordination of efforts by the Secretariat, including the Special Adviser, with the ongoing work of all relevant international actors.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to include in his report to the Council pursuant to paragraph 17 of its resolution 1897(2009) any new information and observations, taking into account the work of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, on possible ways to advance the ongoing cooperation, including with States in the region, in prosecuting and imprisoning persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia.

The Council expresses its intention to remain seized of the matter.

Appointment. The Secretary-General, by a letter of 25 August [S/2010/451], informed the Security Council President that he had requested Jack Lang (France) to serve as Special Adviser on legal issues related to piracy off the coast of Somalia. He was asking Mr. Lang, who would coordinate closely with the Office of Legal Affairs (OLA) and DPA, to identify any additional steps that could be taken to achieve and sustain substantive results in prosecuting piracy. The President replied on 26 August [S/2010/452] that the Council members took note of his intention.

Report of Secretary-General (October). The Secretary-General reported on 27 October [S/2010/556] on the implementation of resolution 1897(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 289] and on the situation with respect to piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia. The report updated the assessment in his November 2009 report [ibid., p. 288], and was based on information provided by 20 Member States, three regional organizations and four shipping and related organizations. Consultations had also been undertaken within the UN system, as well as with INTERPOL and the Somalia-Eritrea Monitoring Group (see p. 305).

The report examined the political, legal and operational activities undertaken by Member States, regional organizations, the United Nations and UN partners in the fight against piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia. It concluded with observations on the impact of the strengthened international naval presence in the region, which had made progress in containing the threat of piracy. It suggested that much more needed to be done, notably to address the root causes of the problem by restoring stability and the rule of law in Somalia. Counter-piracy efforts needed to be part of the overall strategy of the Djibouti Peace Agreement [YUN 2008, p. 281] and contribute to a long-term solution for the country.

Reports by IMO indicated that the level of violence employed by pirates had increased, as had the effectiveness of disruption operations. The military presence in the internally recommended transit corridor in the Gulf of Aden had helped reduce the number of attacks and actual hijackings, but pirates were still able to operate there, moving into and out of the Bab-el-Mandeb and the southern end of the Red Sea during the monsoon period, and venturing as far out as Maldives during favourable weather. Tightened surveillance and control in the Gulf of Aden had forced Somali pirates to expand their operations well into the Indian Ocean to more than 1,000 nautical miles off the Somali coast. That eastward and southward shift in piracy had brought a much greater maritime area under threat.

During the reporting period, pirate capacities had increased with the development of pirate action groups, consisting of a large "mother boat" and two or three attack skiffs towed behind, enabling pirates to carry out attacks far off the coast (up to 1,300 nautical miles) against ever-larger freighters. There was evidence to suggest that some of those committing piracy were also engaged in other criminal activities such as smuggling contraband and trafficking in persons.

On 14 May, the General Assembly held an informal meeting on international maritime piracy. The Assembly President concluded that the problem of piracy, if not addressed urgently and effectively, would spiral out of control and lead to further global consequences. The meeting called for stronger and better coordinated strategies to address the complex root causes of piracy, as part of a comprehensive approach.

IMO had established a project implementation unit to help coordinate and manage capacity-building activities to facilitate implementation of the Djibouti Code of Conduct. The activities were funded by the IMO Djibouti Code Trust Fund, which held $13.8 million as at 11 October. Projects were currently focusing on the development of three regional counter-piracy information-sharing centres in Dar es Salaam, United Republic of Tanzania; Mombasa, Kenya; and Sana'a, Yemen; as well as a regional training facility in Djibouti. In addition, IMO provided regional training on mechanisms for maritime law enforcement, communications and other issues of concerns, and assisted Member States in bringing national anti-piracy legislation into line with the Djibouti Code of Conduct.

The three multinational maritime coalition forces contributing to the fight against piracy off the coast of Somalia maintained their critical presence in the region. The European Union Naval Force (EU NAVFOR) Operation Atalanta, the North Atlantic Treaty Operation (NATO) Ocean Shield, and the Combined Maritime Forces' Combined Taskforce 151 continued to patrol the Gulf of Aden and the waters off the coast of Somalia, providing escorts for commercial vessels and those commissioned by the United Nations to deliver logistical support to AMISOM and humanitarian assistance to Somalia. In addition, several Member States had independently deployed naval military assets in the region as part of the international counter-piracy efforts, some of which were coordinated with the multinational coalitions.

Prosecutions of acts of piracy had been conducted in 10 States, although there had been incidents in which suspected pirates had been released without having been brought to justice. OLA, IMO and UNODC continued to cooperate in compiling national legislation on piracy, to be made publicly available, as a resource for States.

In May, the IMO Maritime Safety Committee approved a mechanism to provide long-range identification and tracking of ships to warships operating in the Gulf of Aden and the Western Indian Ocean, thus significantly enhancing their awareness of the location of merchant shipping. The IMO Council in June decided that the theme for World Maritime Day 2011 should be "Piracy: orchestrating the response", to help raise awareness and galvanize action towards implementing effective counter-piracy measures.

The Secretary-General observed that Member States had invested substantial efforts and resources in containing the threat of piracy and armed robbery off the coast of Somalia, including by deploying patrolling naval ships and military aircraft. Also, more had been done to self-protect ships transiting the area. A number of cooperation mechanisms had been created, which had led to an increased level of shared awareness and cooperation among international navies and military assets. While the effectiveness of naval disruption operations had increased and more pirates had been arrested and prosecuted, it had not stopped piracy. The trend of increased levels of violence employed by the pirates as well as their expanding reach was disconcerting.

The Secretary-General welcomed the significant steps taken to prosecute suspected pirates and imprison convicted offenders. He thanked the countries that currently shouldered that burden, in particular Kenya and Seychelles, and welcomed the intention of Mauritius also to become a regional prosecution centre. A number of Member States provided resources for those activities, including through the Trust Fund, but much more needed to be done, including improving the collection of evidence and other investigative elements, building capacity and finding long-term solutions.

The Secretary-General called on Member States, international organizations and NGOs to coordinate their efforts with those of IMO and the signatory States to the Djibouti Code of Conduct, UNODC and the Contact Group.

Maritime security for Somalia needed complementary action inshore, in the zone between coast and international waters, in addition to the counter-piracy activities in the high seas. With regard to the security sector, vital work was under way by the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to develop regional and Somali capacity on land and inshore waters. That had to be linked to institution-building for the security sector, as set out in the Somali security assessment. Work was needed to bring together the efforts of the Contact Group, UNODC and those charged under the Djibouti Peace Agreement with security sector reform. It was vital that the Transitional Federal Government take steps to promote maritime security and the development of alternative livelihoods in the maritime environment. That should be coordinated with the security sector reform programme and other economic rehabilitation efforts. The Secretary-General had instructed his Special Representative to explore those issues further with the Transitional Federal Government and other actors.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 6429], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1950(2010) without vote. The draft [S/2010/592] was submitted by Austria, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Brazil, Canada, China, Denmark, France, Gabon, Germany, Greece, Japan, Lebanon, Mexico, Nigeria, Norway, the Russian Federation, Somalia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions concerning the situation in Somalia, especially resolutions 1814(2008) of 15 May 2008, 1816(2008) of 2 June 2008, 1838(2008) of 7 October 2008, 1844(2008) of 20 November 2008, 1846(2008) of 2 December 2008, 1851(2008) of 16 December 2008, 1897(2009) of 30 November 2009 and 1918(2010) of 27 April 2010, as well as the statement by its President of 25 August 2010,

Continuing to be gravely concerned by the ongoing threat that piracy and armed robbery at sea against vessels pose to the prompt, safe and effective delivery of humanitarian aid to Somalia and the region, to the safety of seafarers and other persons, to international navigation and the safety of commercial maritime routes and to other vulnerable ships, including fishing activities in conformity with international law, and also gravely concerned by the extended range of the piracy threat into the western Indian Ocean and the increase in pirate capacities,

Expressing its concern about the reported involvement of children in piracy off the coast of Somalia,

Recognizing that the ongoing instability in Somalia contributes to the problem of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and stressing the need for a comprehensive response to tackle piracy and its underlying causes by the international community,

Reaffirming its respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence and unity of Somalia, including Somalia's rights with respect to offshore natural resources, including fisheries, in accordance with international law, and stressing the importance of preventing, in accordance with international law, illegal fishing and illegal dumping, including of toxic substances,

Further reaffirming that international law, as reflected in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982, sets out the legal framework applicable to combating piracy and armed robbery at sea, as well as other ocean activities,

Again taking into account the crisis situation in Somalia and the limited capacity of the Transitional Federal Government to interdict or, upon interdiction, to prosecute pirates or to patrol or secure the waters off the coast of Somalia, including the international sea lanes and Somalia's territorial waters,

Noting the several requests of the Transitional Federal Government for international assistance to counter piracy off the coast of Somalia, including the letter dated 20 October 2010 from the Permanent Representative of Somalia to the United Nations expressing the appreciation of the Transitional Federal Government to the Security Council for its assistance, expressing the willingness of the Transitional Federal Government to consider working with other States and regional organizations to combat piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and requesting that the provisions of resolution 1897(2009) be renewed for an additional twelve months,

Commending the efforts of the European Union operation Atalanta, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization operations Allied Protector and Ocean Shield, the Combined Maritime Forces' Combined Task Force 151 and other States acting in a national capacity in cooperation with the Transitional Federal Government and each other to suppress piracy and to protect vulnerable ships transiting through the waters off the coast of Somalia, and welcoming the efforts of individual countries, including China, India, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Japan, Malaysia, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia and Yemen, which have deployed ships and/or aircraft in the region, as stated in the report of the Secretary-General,

Welcoming the capacity-building efforts made by the International Maritime Organization Djibouti Code Trust Fund (a multi-donor trust fund initiated by Japan) and the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, and recognizing the need for all engaged international and regional organizations to cooperate fully,

Noting with concern that the continuing limited capacity and domestic legislation to facilitate the custody and prosecution of suspected pirates after their capture has hindered more robust international action against the pirates off the coast of Somalia, and in some cases has led to pirates being released without facing justice, regardless of whether there is sufficient evidence to support prosecution, and reiterating that, consistent with the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea concerning the repression of piracy, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation of 10 March 1988 provides for parties to create criminal offences, establish jurisdiction and accept delivery of persons responsible for or suspected of seizing or exercising control over a ship by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation,

Underlining the importance of continuing to enhance the collection, preservation and transmission to competent authorities of evidence of acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and welcoming the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization, the International Criminal Police Organization (INTERPOL) and industry groups to develop guidance to seafarers on the preservation of crime scenes following acts of piracy, and noting the importance for the successful prosecution of acts of piracy of enabling seafarers to give evidence in criminal proceedings,

Commending the efforts of Kenya and Seychelles to prosecute suspected pirates in their national courts, welcoming the engagement of Mauritius, and noting with appreciation the assistance being provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia and other international organizations and donors, in coordination with the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, to support Kenya, Seychelles, Somalia and other States in the region, including Yemen, to take steps to prosecute, or incarcerate in a third State after prosecution elsewhere, captured pirates consistent with applicable international human rights law, and emphasizing the need for States and international organizations to further enhance international efforts in this regard,

Welcoming the readiness of the national and regional administrations of Somalia to cooperate with each other and with States that have prosecuted suspected pirates with a view to enabling convicted pirates to be repatriated back to Somalia under suitable prisoner transfer arrangements, consistent with applicable international law, including international human rights law,

Welcoming also the report of the Secretary-General, as requested in resolution 1918(2010), and the ongoing efforts within the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia and the United Nations Secretariat to explore possible additional mechanisms to effectively prosecute persons suspected of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia,

Stressing the need for States to consider possible methods to assist the seafarers who are victims of pirates, and welcoming in this regard the ongoing work within the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia and the International Maritime Organization on developing guidelines for the care of seafarers and other persons who have been subjected to acts of piracy,

Noting with appreciation the ongoing efforts of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and the United Nations Development Programme to support efforts to enhance the capacity of the corrections system in Somalia, including regional authorities, notably with the support of the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, to incarcerate convicted pirates consistent with applicable international human rights law,

Bearing in mind the Code of Conduct concerning the Repression of Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in the Western Indian Ocean and the Gulf of Aden (Djibouti Code of Conduct), and recognizing the efforts of signatory

States to develop the appropriate regulatory and legislative frameworks to combat piracy, enhance their capacity to patrol the waters of the region, interdict suspect vessels and prosecute suspected pirates,

Emphasizing that peace and stability within Somalia, the strengthening of State institutions, economic and social development and respect for human rights and the rule of law are necessary to create the conditions for a durable eradication of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and further emphasizing that Somalia's long-term security rests with the effective development by the Transitional Federal Government of the National Security Force and the Somali Police Force, within the framework of the Djibouti Agreement and in line with a national security strategy,

Determining that the incidents of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia exacerbate the situation in Somalia, which continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Reiterates that it condemns and deplores all acts of piracy and armed robbery against vessels in the waters off the coast of Somalia;

2. Recognizes that the ongoing instability in Somalia is one of the underlying causes of the problem of piracy and contributes to the problem of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, and stresses the need for a comprehensive response to tackle piracy and its underlying causes by the international community;

3. Notes again with concern the findings contained in the report of the Monitoring Group on Somalia of 20 November 2008 that escalating ransom payments and the lack of enforcement of the arms embargo established by resolution 733(1992) of 23 January 1992 are fuelling the growth of piracy off the coast of Somalia, and calls upon all States to fully cooperate with the Monitoring Group on Somalia and Eritrea, including on information-sharing regarding possible arms embargo violations;

4. Renews its call upon States and regional organizations that have the capacity to do so to take part in the fight against piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, in particular, consistent with the present resolution and international law, by deploying naval vessels, arms and military aircraft and through seizures and disposition of boats, vessels, arms and other related equipment used in the commission of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, or for which there are reasonable grounds for suspecting such use;

5. Commends the work of the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to facilitate coordination in order to deter acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, flag States and the Transitional Federal Government, and urges States and international organizations to continue to support these efforts;

6. Acknowledges Somalia's rights with respect to off-shore natural resources, including fisheries, in accordance with international law, recalls the importance of preventing, in accordance with international law, illegal fishing and illegal dumping, including of toxic substances, calls upon States and interested organizations, including the International Maritime Organization, to provide technical assistance to Somalia, including regional authorities, and nearby coastal States upon their request, to enhance their capacity to ensure coastal and maritime security, including combating piracy and armed robbery at sea off the Somali and nearby coastlines, and stresses the importance of co-ordination in this regard through the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia;

7. Encourages Member States to continue to cooperate with the Transitional Federal Government in the fight against piracy and armed robbery at sea, notes the primary role of the Transitional Federal Government in the fight against piracy and armed robbery at sea, and decides to renew, for a further period of twelve months from the date of the present resolution, the authorizations as set out in paragraph 10 of resolution 1846(2008) and paragraph 6 of resolution 1851(2008), as renewed by resolution 1897(2009), granted to States and regional organizations cooperating with the Transitional Federal Government in the fight against piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, for which advance notification has been provided by the Transitional Federal Government to the Secretary-General;

8. Affirms that the authorizations renewed in the present resolution apply only with respect to the situation in Somalia and shall not affect the rights, obligations or responsibilities of Member States under international law, including any rights or obligations under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, with respect to any other situation, and underscores, in particular, that the present resolution shall not be considered as establishing customary international law; and affirms further that such authorizations have been renewed only following the receipt of the letter dated 20 October 2010 conveying the consent of the Transitional Federal Government;

9. Also affirms that the measures imposed by paragraph 5 of resolution 733(1992) and further elaborated upon in paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1425(2002) of 22 July 2002 do not apply to weapons and military equipment destined for the sole use of Member States and regional organizations taking measures in accordance with paragraph 7 above or to supplies of technical assistance to Somalia solely for the purposes set out in paragraph 6 above, which have been exempted from those measures in accordance with the procedure set out in paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007) of 20 August 2007;

10. Requests that cooperating States take appropriate steps to ensure that the activities they undertake pursuant to the authorizations in paragraph 7 above do not have the practical effect of denying or impairing the right of innocent passage to the ships of any third State;

11. Calls upon Member States to assist Somalia, at the request of the Transitional Federal Government and with notification to the Secretary-General, to strengthen capacity in Somalia, including regional authorities, to bring to justice those who are using Somali territory to plan, facilitate or undertake criminal acts of piracy and armed robbery at sea, and stresses that any measures undertaken pursuant to the present paragraph shall be consistent with applicable international human rights law;

12. Calls upon all States, and in particular flag, port and coastal States, States of the nationality of victims and perpetrators of piracy and armed robbery and other States with relevant jurisdiction under international law and national legislation, to cooperate in determining jurisdiction and in the investigation and prosecution of all persons responsible for acts of piracy and armed robbery off the coast of Somalia, including anyone who incites or facilitates an act of piracy, consistent with applicable international law, including international human rights law, to ensure that all pirates handed over to judicial authorities are subject to a judicial process, and to render assistance by, among other actions, providing disposition and logistics assistance with respect to persons under their jurisdiction and control, such as victims and witnesses and persons detained as a result of operations conducted under the present resolution;

13. Also calls upon all States to criminalize piracy under their domestic law and to favourably consider the prosecution of suspected, and imprisonment of convicted, pirates apprehended off the coast of Somalia, consistent with applicable international law, including international human rights law;

14. Reaffirms its interest in the continued consideration of all seven options for prosecuting suspected pirates described in the report of the Secretary-General, which provide for different levels of international participation, taking into account further new information and observations from the Secretary-General based on the consultations being conducted by his Special Adviser on Legal Issues related to Piracy off the Coast of Somalia, with a view to taking further steps to ensure that pirates are held accountable, emphasizing the need for strengthened cooperation of States and regional and international organizations in achieving this goal, and encourages the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to continue its discussions in this regard;

15. Urges all States to take appropriate actions under their existing domestic law to prevent the illicit financing of acts of piracy and the laundering of its proceeds;

16. Urges States, in cooperation with INTERPOL and the European Police Office (Europol), to further investigate international criminal networks involved in piracy off the coast of Somalia, including those responsible for illicit financing and facilitation;

17. Stresses, in this context, the need to support the investigation and prosecution of those who illicitly finance, plan, organize or unlawfully profit from pirate attacks off the coast of Somalia;

18. Commends the establishment of the Trust Fund to Support Initiatives of States Countering Piracy off the Coast of Somalia and the International Maritime Organization Djibouti Code Trust Fund (a multi-donor trust fund initiated by Japan), and urges both State and non-State actors affected by piracy, most notably the international shipping community, to contribute to them;

19. Urges States parties to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation to fully implement their relevant obligations under these Conventions and customary international law and to cooperate with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the International Maritime Organization, other States and other international organizations to build judicial capacity for the successful prosecution of persons suspected of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia;

20. Welcomes the revisions by the International Maritime Organization to its recommendations and guidance on preventing and suppressing piracy and armed robbery against ships, underlines the importance of the implementation of such recommendations and guidance by all stakeholders, including the shipping industry, urges States, in collaboration with the shipping and insurance industries, and the International Maritime Organization, to continue to develop and implement avoidance, evasion and defensive best practices and advisories to take when under attack or when sailing in the waters off the coast of Somalia, and further urges States to make their citizens and vessels available for forensic investigation, as appropriate, at the first port of call immediately following an act or attempted act of piracy or armed robbery at sea or release from captivity;

21. Requests States and regional organizations cooperating with the Transitional Federal Government to inform the Security Council and the Secretary-General in nine months of the progress of actions undertaken in the exercise of the authorizations provided in paragraph 7 above, and further requests all States contributing through the Contact Group on Piracy off the Coast of Somalia to the fight against piracy off the coast of Somalia, including Somalia and other States in the region, to report by the same deadline on their efforts to establish jurisdiction and cooperation in the investigation and prosecution of piracy;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council within eleven months of the adoption of the present resolution on the implementation of the present resolution and on the situation with respect to piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia;

23. Expresses its intention to review the situation and to consider, as appropriate, renewing the authorizations provided in paragraph 7 above for additional periods upon the request of the Transitional Federal Government;

24. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Children and armed conflict

Report of Secretary-General. On 9 November, the Secretary-General, in accordance with resolutions 1612(2005) [YUN 2005, p. 863] and 1882(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 739], presented to the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict his third report on the situation of children and armed conflict in Somalia [S/2010/577], covering the period from 31 May 2008 to 31 March 2010, along with some significant recent developments from May to July.

The report stressed that the level and scale of violations against children in Somalia had been increasing over the previous two years, particularly with regard to the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict, the killing and maiming of children, and the denial of humanitarian access to children. The report cited a number of parties to the conflict responsible for recruiting and using children and committing other grave violations against children, such as the Transitional Federal Government, the government-allied ASWJ, Hizbul Islam and Al-Shabaab.

The vast majority of grave child rights violations by parties to the armed conflict occurred in central and southern Somalia. Some of the reported violations resulted from inter-clan fighting, while the majority resulted from armed conflict. Children in IDP settlements were particularly vulnerable; those areas were not only the de facto battleground between the parties, but the people in them were also exposed to higher levels of violent crime, owing to the breakdown of the rule of law and a lack of traditional forms of protection.

Evidence gathered during the reporting period suggested a considerable increase in the scale of recruitment and use of children by all parties. Al-Shabaab undertook the most systematic and widespread recruitment and the use of children in the conflict. While very active in the central and southern region, Al-Shabaab was also reportedly recruiting children in Puntland and Somaliland, and training them in Bay, Bakool, Galgaduud, Hiraan, Mogadishu and Raas Kaambooni. Hizbul Islam reportedly had 30 people dedicated to recruiting children, and the group was estimated to have about 500 active children in its ranks, as at 31 March. Aswj reportedly recruited children by the hundreds. The Transitional Federal Government reportedly recruited children between the ages of 14 and 18. On 15 June, President Ahmed said in a public statement that the Somali Government had not and would not knowingly recruit underage youth for the national security forces. He requested the Army Chief to conduct an investigation into the issue and report back to him in four weeks, and instructed the army to demobilize any underage recruits without delay.

Particularly children living in IDP settlements in urban centres such as Mogadishu, Galgaduud and Kismayo were victims of armed conflict. Explosive remnants of war, landmines, unexploded ordnances and other such devices still were a persistent danger to children, and the extreme applications of sharia law by Al-Shabaab also involved some children.

Recruitment of children into the pirate groups that operated off the Puntland coast continued to be documented.

The Protection Monitoring Network continued to coordinate joint advocacy and response for the protection of civilians, with a special focus on women, children, IDPs and other vulnerable groups, taking forward dialogue and advocacy with local government, traditional leaders and the Transitional Federal Government. UNICEF continued to support Somali NGOs that were conducting advocacy sessions with parliamentarians and other office-bearers, focusing on the illegality under international law of using children in conflict, as well as other child protection issues. Regionally based networks of local child protection NGOs in all zones of Somalia carried out joint advocacy and referral for individual children. UNICEF supported an ongoing child protection community mobilization programme, with a strong focus on prevention of violence, abuse and exploitation. In central and southern Somalia, mobilization concentrated on emergency issues such as sexual violence, child recruitment and mine risk education.

The Secretary-General reiterated his earlier recommendations contained in two earlier reports, of 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 144] and 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 294], and urged the immediate implementation of all subsequent conclusions of the Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict in Somalia. He urged Al-Shabaab, Hizbul Islam, clan militias, aswj and all other armed groups to cease immediately and without precondition the recruitment and use of children and release them. All parties were required to enter into dialogue with the United Nations and prepare time-bound action plans in line with Security Council resolutions 1539(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 787], 1612(2005) and 1882(2009). He strongly urged the Transitional Federal Government to stop all recruitment of children, and called on it to seek actively to identify and release unconditionally all children associated with its armed forces and those of its allies, and engage in dialogue with the United Nations towards the preparation and implementation of action plans.

The Secretary-General encouraged the Transitional Federal Government and other authorities in Somalia to redress the prevailing culture of impunity, to investigate all incidents of grave child rights violations and to ensure that individuals responsible for those violations were held accountable. He urged the Government of Kenya to investigate the alleged recruitment of Somali children from refugee camps in Kenya and to implement safeguards to ensure increased security and protection of the civilian populations in and around refugee camps.

The Security Council was encouraged, in the upcoming renewal of the mandate of UNPOS and/or in any future peacekeeping operation in Somalia, to provide for a strengthened child protection capacity, including the deployment of child protection advisers. The AU was strongly encouraged to include in the AMISOM mandate specific provisions for the protection of children and civilians, including child protection advisers and mechanisms for monitoring and reporting grave violations against children, and accompanied by support, capacity and oversight, including training on international humanitarian law, human rights law and international child protection standards.

The Secretary-General's Special Representative for Children and Armed Conflict was requested to undertake a mission to Somalia in the near future to assess at first hand the situation of children and the implementation of the recommendations in his reports and those of the Security Council Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict.

Working Group. At its 28th meeting [S/AC.51/2011/2], on 22 December, the Working Group on Children and Armed conflict examined the report of the Secretary-General and expressed concern about violations and abuses committed against children in Somalia, in particular the recruitment and use of children by all parties to the conflict, the sexual violence perpetrated against children, the killing and maiming of children, the attacks on schools and hospitals, and the denial of humanitarian access to children. The Group also expressed concern about the rise in maritime piracy and the use of children in piracy. The Group addressed recommendations to the Transitional Federal Government, the Government of Kenya and the Secretary-General.

Sanctions

By resolution 733(1992) [YUN 1992, p. 199], the Security Council imposed a general and complete arms embargo on Somalia, and by resolution 751(1992) [ibid., p. 202], it established a Committee to oversee the embargo. Subsequently, the Council outlined certain exemptions to the embargo and further elaborated the scope of the measures, in resolution 1916(2010) (see p. 298). By that same resolution, the Council decided that, for a period of 12 months, the obligations imposed on Member States in resolution 1844(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 297] should not apply to the payment of funds, other financial assets or economic resources necessary to ensure the timely delivery of urgently needed humanitarian assistance in Somalia. Also by resolution 1916(2010), the Council requested the Humanitarian Aid Coordinator for Somalia to report every 120 days on any impediments to the delivery of humanitarian assistance. The Council extended for another 12 months the mandate of the Monitoring Group, which had been established in January 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 263] pursuant to resolution 1519(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 254]; added three experts, increasing the Group's size to eight; and specified the expanded mandate to encompass new measures against Eritrea (see p. 298). The Monitoring Group monitored violations imposed by the Security Council in its resolutions 733(1992), 1844(2008) and 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299], which imposed targeted sanctions on individuals and entities, including arms embargo, travel ban and assets freeze.

Communications. By communications to the Chairman of the Security Council Committee, pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea, Andorra [S/AC.29/2010/4], Lebanon [S/AC.29/2010/3 & Add.1], Panama [S/AC.29/2010/2] and Thailand [S/AC.29/2010/1] submitted reports on measures taken in response to resolution 1844(2008).

Report of Monitoring Group. On 14 March [S/2010/91], the Chairman of the Security Council Committee, pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea, presented to the Council the report of the Monitoring Group on Somalia. The Group noted violations of the general and complete arms embargo, as Somalia continued to receive inflows of arms and ammunition. In general, arms imports were of low volume and consisted principally of ammunition, small arms and light weapons, although heavier, crew-served infantry weapons also continued to arrive, including some relatively sophisticated anti-aircraft and anti-tank weapons.

The Monitoring Group distinguished between two categories of arms embargo violations, namely, technical and substantive. Technical violations involved support for the Somali security sector institutions, which were eligible for exemptions under paragraph 11 (b) of resolution 1772(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 276], but for which no exemption had been requested in advance and on a case-by-case basis from the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 751(1992). Substantive violations involved contraventions of the embargo, which would under no circumstances be eligible for exemption. Arms and ammunition provided with authorization by the Committee, or in technical violation of resolution 1772(2007), represented a growing proportion of arms flow to Somalia. As noted in the Group's December 2008 report [YUN 2008, p. 300], much of that assistance ended up in the hands of armed opposition groups or on the open market.

Non-State and intergovernmental actors, namely, regional and international organizations, aid agencies and private sector security companies, fell beyond the scope of the Monitoring Group's mandate. The absence of any provision for them to obtain exemptions under resolution 1772(2007) created ambiguities with respect to their compliance with the arms embargo. In the past, the Monitoring Group had approached the problem by encouraging international organizations to notify the Committee of their intentions, and for private sector actors to obtain the sponsorship of their host Governments vis-à-vis the Committee. As the number of non-State actors involved in Somalia increased, there was a need to clarify and formalize those arrangements.

Yemen remained Somalia's principal commercial market for weapons, and Ethiopia was the principal State supplier of arms, ammunition and training. Eritrea's role had diminished relative to previous years, as its Government placed greater emphasis on political and financial support for armed opposition groups.

Uganda and the United States also provided significant military assistance to the Transitional Federal Government.

Regarding threats to peace and security, the Monitoring Group recommended that the Committee designate individuals and entities proposed by the Group of Member States for targeted measures under resolution 1844(2008) and/or resolution 1907(2009); that Eritrea cease any subsidies to members of the Alliance for the Re-Liberation of Somalia-Asmara and any other armed opposition groups currently based in Asmara, cancel and/or revoke any Eritrean passports issued to members of those groups and permit international inspection of any facilities alleged to be employed for training armed groups from Somalia and the region; and that EU Governments investigate incidents of immigration fraud, take measures to better coordinate consular functions among their embassies in East Africa, and place a ban on Somalia ministers, members of parliament and officials who made fraudulent travel requests.

Concerning violations of the arms embargo, the Group recommended that the Committee review the exemption regime, taking into account the Group's observations, specifically: provisions regarding exemptions should be clarified with respect to the responsibilities of international, regional and sub-regional organizations; private security companies operating in Somalia should be required to request exemptions for their operations from their host Government or the Government that contracted their services; and the Committee should request Member States to bring to the attention of defence and security companies registered in their territories the existence of an arms embargo on Somalia and relevant Security Council resolutions.

The Group also recommended that the Committee exercise greater diligence in enforcing compliance with the exemption regime, specifically by reminding States cited by the Group for substantive or technical embargo violations—namely, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Kenya, the Sudan and the United Arab Emirates—of their responsibilities under relevant resolutions and bringing to their attention the possible consequences of non-compliance. The Council was urged to request AMISOM to inspect inventories of weapons and ammunition obtained in accordance with resolution 1772(2007), paragraphs 11 (b) and 12, in order to ensure that all such weapons and ammunition were accounted for, and to share such information regularly with the Monitoring Group.

It was also noted that the Committee should remind Member States of their obligations under the International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, adopted by the General Assembly in its decision 60/519 of 8 December 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 621].

The Working Group recommended that the Council require States and international organizations that came into possession of weapons, ammunition or military material either on Somalia territory or destined for Somalia or originated there to record the identifying characteristics of those items and report them to the Group; and that the Council authorize international naval forces in the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean, including the United States-led Coalition Maritime Force, the EU NAVFOR Operation Atalanta and the NATO maritime force, to seize any weapons encountered in the course of their operations and actively interdict arms trafficking. It also recommended that the Committee act on its decision to send a mission to the Horn of Africa, led by the Chair, to raise awareness among Member States, international and regional organizations and the private sector with respect to the provisions of resolutions 1844(2008) and 1907(2009), specifically the expanded mandate of the Working Group.

Regarding piracy off the coast of Somalia, the Working Group recommended that the Council request international naval forces in the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean to transmit to the Group any information in relation to seizures of weapons and pirate paraphernalia. It also recommended that the Council call on the Puntland authorities to demonstrate their sincerity in combating piracy by apprehending and surrendering for prosecution in foreign countries known pirate leaders, their supporters and financiers; to consider possible targeted measures against leaders who aided or abetted acts of piracy or benefited from the proceeds; and to prohibit security sector support to the Puntland authorities unless and until there was measurable improvement, and that the Council encourage Member States to provide capacity-building, training and other support to the Transitional Federal Government and Somaliland coastguard forces, as well as other branches of the security services engaged in fighting piracy. It was noted that all Member States engaged in counter-piracy operations should consider deploying on vessels trained military forensic teams or coastguard policemen to improve the collection, registration and preservation of evidence.

With respect to the obstruction of humanitarian assistance, the Working Group recommended that the Council urge the Secretary-General to initiate a genuinely independent investigation of the WFP Somalia country office, including contracting procedures and practices; that WFP revise its internal procedures regarding the issuance of contracts and to ensure meaningful oversight and transparency; that the UN country team empower the new position of Risk Management Officer to conduct rigorous due diligence with regard to the awarding of major contracts; that the country team, UNSOA and UNPOS, with the Monitoring Group, develop a means of information-sharing on the Somalia business community contracted by the United Nations; that the country team, in consultation with the United Nations Support for AMISOM, UNPOS and the Monitoring Group, establish a database of businessmen, their associates and subcontractors involved in supporting or financing armed groups, or who had engaged in corrupt practices in the context of UN contracting; and that the UN Department of Safety and Security, in collaboration with the country team, establish a database of individuals identified as perpetrators or facilitators of kidnapping of aid workers, for the purposes of blacklisting or taking further action.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 March [meeting 6289], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1916(2010). The draft [S/2010/145] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions and the statements by its President concerning the situation in Somalia and concerning Eritrea, in particular resolution 733(1992) of 23 January 1992, which established an embargo on all deliveries of weapons and military equipment to Somalia (hereinafter referred to as “the Somalia arms embargo”), and resolutions 1519(2003) of 16 December 2003, 1558(2004) of 17 August 2004, 1587(2005) of 15 March 2005, 1630(2005) of 14 October 2005, 1676(2006) of 10 May 2006, 1724(2006) of 29 November 2006, 1744(2007) of 20 February 2007, 1766(2007) of 23 July 2007, 1772(2007) of 20 August 2007, 1801(2008) of 20 February 2008, 1811(2008) of 29 April 2008, 1844(2008) of 20 November 2008, 1853(2008) of 19 December 2008, 1862(2009) of 14 January 2009 and 1907(2009) of 23 December 2009,

Recalling that, as set out in its resolutions 1744(2007) and 1772(2007), the arms embargo on Somalia does not apply to (a) weapons and military equipment, technical training and assistance intended solely for the support of or use by the African Union Mission in Somalia, and (b) supplies and technical assistance by States intended solely for the purpose of helping to develop security sector institutions, consistent with the political process set out in those resolutions and in the absence of a negative decision by the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 751(1992), the mandate of which was expanded pursuant to resolution 1907(2009) (hereinafter referred to as “the Committee”), within five working days of receiving an advance notification of such supplies or assistance on a case-by-case basis,

Reaffirming its respect for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, political independence and unity of Somalia, Djibouti and Eritrea respectively,

Reaffirming that the Djibouti peace agreement and the peace process represent the basis for a resolution of the conflict in Somalia, reiterating its commitment to a comprehensive and lasting settlement of the situation in Somalia based on the Transitional Federal Charter, and reiterating the urgent need for all Somali leaders to take tangible steps to continue political dialogue,

Commending the work of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Somalia, Mr. Ahmedou Ould-Abdallah, and reaffirming its strong support for his efforts,

Taking note of the report of the Monitoring Group on Somalia, submitted on 10 March 2010 pursuant to paragraph 3 (j) of resolution 1853(2008) and the observations and recommendations contained therein,

Expressing concern at acts of intimidation against the Monitoring Group and interference with the work of the Monitoring Group,

Condemning flows of weapons and ammunition supplies to and through Somalia and Eritrea in violation of the Somalia arms embargo and the Eritrea arms embargo established pursuant to resolution 1907(2009) (hereinafter referred to as “the Eritrea arms embargo”) as a serious threat to peace and stability in the region,

Calling upon all Member States, in particular those in the region, to refrain from any action in contravention of the Somalia and Eritrea arms embargoes and to take all necessary steps to hold violators accountable,

Affirming the importance of enhancing the monitoring of the Somalia and Eritrea arms embargoes through persistent and vigilant investigation into the violations, bearing in mind that strict enforcement of the arms embargoes will improve the overall security situation in the region,

Determining that the situation in Somalia, Eritrea’s actions undermining peace and reconciliation in Somalia, as well as the dispute between Djibouti and Eritrea continue to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Stresses the obligation of all States to comply fully with the measures imposed by resolution 733(1992), as elaborated upon and amended in subsequent relevant resolutions, as well as resolutions 1844(2008) and 1907(2009);

2. Reiterates its intention to consider specific action to improve implementation of and compliance with measures imposed by resolutions 733(1992), 1844(2008) and 1907(2009);

3. Decides that paragraphs 11 (b) and 12 of resolution 1772(2007) also apply to supplies and technical assistance by international, regional and subregional organizations;

4. Underscores the importance of humanitarian aid operations, condemns politicization, misuse and misappropriation of humanitarian assistance by armed groups, and calls upon Member States and the United Nations to take all feasible steps to mitigate the aforementioned practices in Somalia;

5. Decides that, for a period of twelve months from the date of the present resolution, and without prejudice to humanitarian assistance programmes conducted elsewhere, the obligations imposed on Member States in paragraph 3 of resolution 1844(2008) shall not apply to the payment of funds, other financial assets or economic resources necessary to ensure the timely delivery of urgently needed humanitarian assistance in Somalia, by the United Nations, its specialized agencies or programmes, humanitarian organizations having observer status with the General Assembly that provide humanitarian assistance, or their implementing partners, and decides to review the effects of the present paragraph every one hundred and twenty days based on all available information, including the report of the United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator for Somalia submitted under paragraph 11 below;

6. Decides also to extend the mandate of the Monitoring Group on Somalia referred to in paragraph 3 of resolution 1558(2004), and requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary administrative measures as expeditiously as possible to re-establish the Monitoring Group for a period of twelve months, drawing, as appropriate, on the expertise of the members of the Monitoring Group established pursuant to resolution 1853(2008), and consistent with resolution 1907(2009), with the addition of three experts, in order to fulfil its expanded mandate, this mandate being as follows:

(a) To continue the tasks outlined in paragraphs 3 (a) to (c) of resolution 1587(2005) and paragraphs 23 (a) to (c) of resolution 1844(2008);

(b) To carry out additionally the tasks outlined in paragraphs 19 (a) to (d) of resolution 1907(2009);

(c) To investigate, in coordination with relevant international agencies, all activities, including in the financial, maritime and other sectors, which generate revenues used to commit violations of the Somalia and Eritrea arms embargoes;

(d) To investigate any means of transport, routes, sea-ports, airports and other facilities used in connection with violations of the Somalia and Eritrea arms embargoes;

(e) To continue refining and updating information on the draft list of those individuals and entities that engage in acts described in paragraphs 8 (a) to (c) of resolution 1844(2008), inside and outside Somalia, and their active supporters, for possible future measures by the Security Council, and to present such information to the Committee as and when the Committee deems appropriate;

(f) To compile a draft list of those individuals and entities that engage in acts described in paragraphs 15 (a) to (e) of resolution 1907(2009), inside and outside Eritrea, and their active supporters, for possible future measures by the Council, and to present such information to the Committee as and when the Committee deems appropriate;

(g) To continue making recommendations based on its investigations, on the previous reports of the Panel of Experts appointed pursuant to resolutions 1425(2002) of 22 July 2002 and 1474(2003) of 8 April 2003, and on the previous reports of the Monitoring Group appointed pursuant to resolutions 1519(2003), 1558(2004), 1587(2005), 1630(2005), 1676(2006), 1724(2006), 1766(2007), 1811(2008) and 1853(2008);

(h) To work closely with the Committee on specific recommendations for additional measures to improve overall compliance with the Somalia and Eritrea arms embargoes, as well as the measures imposed in paragraphs 1, 3 and 7 of resolution 1844(2008) and paragraphs 5, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13 of resolution 1907(2009) concerning Eritrea;

(i) To assist in identifying areas where the capacities of States in the region can be strengthened to facilitate the implementation of the arms embargoes, as well as the measures imposed in paragraphs 1, 3 and 7 of resolution 1844(2008) and paragraphs 5, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13 of resolution 1907(2009) concerning Eritrea;

(j) To provide to the Council, through the Committee, a midterm briefing within six months of its establishment, and to submit progress reports to the Committee on a monthly basis;

(k) To submit, for consideration by the Council, through the Committee, a final report covering all the tasks set out above, no later than fifteen days prior to the termination of the mandate of the Monitoring Group;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary financial arrangements to support the work of the Monitoring Group;

8. Reaffirms paragraphs 4, 5, 7, 8 and 10 of resolution 1519(2003);

9. Requests the Committee, in accordance with its mandate and in consultation with the Monitoring Group and other relevant United Nations entities, to consider the recommendations contained in the reports of the Monitoring Group of 5 April and 16 October 2006, 17 July 2007, 24 April and 20 November 2008 and 10 March 2010 and recommend to the Council ways to improve implementation of and compliance with the arms embargoes as well as implementation of the measures imposed in paragraphs 1, 3 and 7 of resolution 1844(2008) and paragraphs 5, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13 of resolution 1907(2009) concerning Eritrea, in response to continuing violations;

10. Requests that all States, including Eritrea, other States in the region and the Transitional Federal Government ensure cooperation with the Monitoring Group by individuals and entities within their jurisdiction or under their control;

11. Requests the United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator for Somalia to report to the Council every one hundred and twenty days on the implementation of paragraphs 4 and 5 above and on any impediments to the delivery of humanitarian assistance in Somalia, and requests relevant United Nations agencies and humanitarian organizations having observer status in the General Assembly that provide humanitarian assistance to assist the Coordinator in the preparation of such report by providing information relevant to paragraphs 4 and 5 above;

12. Urges that all parties and all States, particularly those in the region, including international, regional and subregional organizations, cooperate fully with the work of the Monitoring Group and ensure the safety of its members, and unhindered access, in particular to persons, documents and sites that the Monitoring Group deems relevant to the execution of its mandate;

13. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Appointment. By a letter of 1 July [S/2010/357], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that, in accordance with resolution 1916(2010) (see p. 298), he had appointed the following experts as members of the Monitoring Group: for Somalia, Jörg Roofthoof (Belgium) as transport/maritime expert, Babatunde Abayomi Taiwo (Nigeria) as arms expert, and Carolina Reyes (Colombia) as humanitarian expert; for Eritrea, Ghassan Schbley (United States) as finance expert, and Jan Hendrik van Zyl (South Africa) as transport and aviation expert. The Secretary-General also designated regional expert Matt Bryden (Canada) to serve as the Coordinator of the Monitoring Group on Somalia and Eritrea. The Secretary-General said he would appoint in due course a finance expert for the Somalia component of the Monitoring Group and an arms expert for the Eritrea component.

Security Council Committee. On 31 December [S/2010/688], the Chairman of the Security Council Committee, pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea, transmitted the Committee's report covering its activities from 1 January until the end of the year. The report was presented in accordance with a note by the Security Council President of 29 March 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 342]. For 2010, the Bureau of the Committee consisted of Claude Heller (Mexico) as Chairman, with Lebanon and Nigeria providing the Vice-Chairs.

By resolution 1844(2008), the Council had reaffirmed the general and complete arms embargo, and by resolution 1853(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 301], it extended the mandate of the Monitoring Group investigating the implementation and violations of the embargo for a 12-month period, with the addition of a fifth expert, and delineated the expanded mandate of the Group.

By resolution 1907(2009), the Council imposed a ban on the sale or supply to and from Eritrea of arms and related materiel, technical assistance and training. The Council also imposed an assets freeze, a travel ban and a targeted arms embargo on individuals and entities, including but not limited to the Eritrean political and military leadership, designated by the Committee as violating the arms embargo; providing support from Eritrea to armed opposition groups which aimed to destabilize the region; obstructing the implementation of resolution 1862(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 298] concerning Djibouti; harbouring, financing, facilitating, supporting, organizing, training, or inciting individuals or groups to perpetrate violence or terrorist acts against other States or their citizens in the region; or obstructing the investigations or work of the Monitoring Group. The Council further expanded the Group's mandate re-established by resolution 1853(2008) to monitor and report on the implementation of the measures imposed by resolution 1907(2009), and expanded the mandate of the Committee under that resolution. In accordance with its expanded mandate, the Committee decided on 26 February to change its name to "Security Council Committee pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea".

During 2010, the Committee met five times in informal consultations (10, 24 and 30 March, 12 August and 22 November). In informal consultations on 10 March, the Committee was briefed by the Monitoring Group on its final report and discussed its observations and recommendations. During informal consultations on 24 March, the Committee was briefed by the Minister for Environment of the Transitional Federal Government and the Deputy Executive Director for External Relations of WFP in connection with the findings in the Monitoring Group's report.

During consultations on 16 March, the Committee Chairman briefed the Security Council on the Committee's activities during the previous 120 days, and on 12 April, the Committee decided to list eight individuals and one entity pursuant to paragraph 8 of resolution 1844(2008); the list was dispatched to Member States on 21 April. On 24 September, the Committee decided to update the list of individuals and entities subject to the measures imposed by paragraphs 1, 3 and 7 of resolution 1844(2008).

The Committee Chairman visited the region from 15 to 27 April, as recommended by the Monitoring Group on Somalia in its report (see p. 305). He was accompanied by representatives from Turkey and the United States. The purpose of the visit was to raise awareness and enhance implementation of the sanctions regimes on Somalia and Eritrea, specifically the arms embargo and the exemption procedures, as well as provisions in resolutions 1844(2008) and 1907(2009), and to encourage cooperation with the Committee and the Monitoring Group. The delegation visited Eritrea, Kenya and Yemen. In Kenya, the delegation also met with representatives of the Transitional Federal Government of Somalia.

On 20 July, the Committee Chairman briefed the Security Council during consultations on the Committee's activities during the past 120 days, focusing mainly on the visit to the region in April.

On 29 November, the Committee Chairman briefed the Council on the Committee's activities during the previous 120 days, pursuant to paragraph 11 (g) of resolution 1844(2008), providing an account of the Committee's consideration of those reports. He also updated Council members on the work of the Monitoring Group on Somalia and Eritrea since it commenced its work on 1 August.

During the reporting period, the Committee approved nine requests for exemptions from the arms embargo for non-lethal military equipment pursuant to paragraph 3 of resolution 1356(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 212] and five requests for exemptions from the arms embargo pursuant to paragraph 11 (b) of resolution 1772(2007). The Committee also approved one notification in accordance with paragraph 4 (a) of resolution 1844(2008).

Appended to the Committee's report was a list of 10 Member States who had reported during the year on steps they had taken with a view to implementing effectively the measures imposed under resolution 1844(2008). During the reporting period, the Committee also received 32 reports from Member States on the steps they had taken to implement measures imposed by resolution 1907(2009).

Financing

In view of the expanded mandate of the Monitoring Group, the Secretary-General, in a report of 29 January [A/64/349/Add.6], submitted revised estimates for the Group and two other special missions. Estimated additional requirements for the Monitoring Group in 2010 amounted to $769,000 net ($770,100 gross). ACABQ, in a 12 February report [A/64/7/Add.21], recommended acceptance of those additional requirements, on top of the $1,555,200 appropriated by the General Assembly in resolution 64/245 [YUN 2009, p. 1406]. The Assembly, in section IV of resolution 64/260 of 29 March (see p. 1438), endorsed the Advisory Committee's recommendation.

United Nations Political Office for Somalia

Established in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 400], the United Nations Political Office for Somalia (UNPOS) assisted the Secretary-General to advance the cause of peace and reconciliation through its contacts with Somali and regional leaders, civil society organizations, and States and organizations concerned with the Somali crisis. UNPOS was also closely monitoring the situation in the country and encouraged the Government and other parties to engage in an inclusive dialogue. UNPOS activities included political, disarmament, reintegration, economic stabilization and human rights activities, and preparation for its relocation to Somalia. In addition, UNPOS was responsible for coordinating on the ground UN and international efforts to combat piracy off the Somali coast. It was a member of the anti-piracy coordination centre in Nairobi, a platform for interaction between UN Headquarters and UN agencies on the ground.

Appointment. By a letter of 7 June [S/2010/31], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Augustine Mahiga (Tanzania) as his Special Representative for Somalia and Head of UNPOS, with effect from 1 July 2010, to succeed Ahmedou Ould-Abdallah (Mauritania), who had served as Special Representative since September 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 281]. The Council, on 9 June [S/2010/302], took note of the Secretary-General's intention.

Financing

In an 11 October report [A/65/328/Add.3], the Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for UNPOS in the amount of $16,345,000 net ($17,803,800 gross) for 2011, $422,700 less than 2010, reflecting lower requirements under operational costs.

ACABQ, in a report of 8 December [A/65/602], recommended that a vacancy factor of 25 per cent be applied to the estimated 2011 requirements and further recommended a reduction of $800,000 under operational costs, with 2011 requirements to be adjusted accordingly.

The General Assembly, by section XIII of resolution 65/259 of 24 December (see p. 1433), endorsed the recommendations of the Advisory Committee.

African Union Mission in Somalia

The African Union Mission in Somalia (AMISOM) was authorized in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 268] by the AU Peace and Security Council to support the transitional federal institutions in their efforts to stabilize the country, facilitate the provision of humanitarian assistance, and create conditions conducive to stabilization, reconstruction and development. By resolution 1744(2007) [ibid., p. 269], the Security Council approved the Mission's mandate, which was renewed every six months. The Council, by resolution 1910(2010) of 28 January (see p. 276), requested the AU member States to maintain and enhance AMISOM until 31 January 2011.

During the year, progress was made towards the full deployment and strengthening of AMISOM. By resolution 1910(2010), the Council also requested the Secretary-General to continue providing a logistical support package for AMISOM until 31 January 2011. The resolution further highlighted the need for donors to work closely with the United Nations and the AU to ensure adequate funding, particularly to pay salaries to AMISOM troops and to reimburse contingent-owned equipment. The lack of sustainable funding for future requirements was a major concern, that could adversely affect AMISOM operational capability.

Starting on 1 July, the mandate and functions of the UN planning team in Addis Ababa were transferred to the newly established UN Office to the AU (UNOAU) (see p. 111). That team helped formulate the first AMISOM mission implementation plan, update strategic directives for AMISOM and develop the AMISOM police concept of operations.

The Integrated Task Force review in June expressed the view that the UN incremental approach to the possible transition from AMISOM to a UN peacekeeping operation remained valid. The review recommended an adjustment to the benchmarks outlined by the Secretary-General in a March 2009 report [YUN 2009, p. 275].

Following the deployment of a fifth battalion from Uganda and a fourth battalion from Burundi, AMISOM reached its Security Council-mandated strength of 8,000 troops. Meanwhile, AMISOM police strength stood at 40 officers. On 15 October, the AU Peace and Security Council endorsed the new AMISOM force strength of 20,000 troops, with requisite air and maritime capabilities, in two phases: initially, inserting an additional 4,000 troops in Mogadishu; and secondly, deploying an additional 8,000 troops in order to expand gradually to other areas of Somalia, in particular those areas controlled by groups allied with the Transitional Federal Government. The Council also endorsed an enhanced civilian component and a police component of 1,680 personnel. It called on the UN Security Council to endorse the revised concept of operations and newly authorized strength of AMISOM; authorize an enhanced support package for AMISOM; impose a naval blockade and no-fly zone over Somalia; approach the issue of piracy in a holistic manner; and reaffirm its commitment to deploy a UN peacekeeping operation through the re-hatting of AMISOM with a timeline for deployment.

Noting the AU Peace and Security Council's recommendations, the UN Security Council in resolution 1964(2010) of 22 December (see p. 282) authorized the deployment of AMISOM until September 2011, and requested an increase in its force strength from 8,000 to 12,000 troops.

Through engagement with AMISOM troop-contributing countries, including pre-deployment inspections visits, the United Nations was supporting AU efforts to prevent and minimize civilian casualties during operations on the ground. UNSOA continued to deliver a logistical support package to AMISOM and to improve the living conditions of AMISOM troops in Nairobi and bases in Somalia. It also provided a sea movement-based supply chain to deliver required supplies and equipment to AMISOM and medical evacuation flights for injured AMISOM personnel. UNSOA also implemented a comprehensive communication campaign aimed at improving public and media perception of AMISOM and the transitional federal institution. The AU/UN-supported Radio Bar-Kulan, configured as an independent radio station on the basis of a public service broadcasting model, commenced broadcasting across Somalia in March. The newly established UNOAU assisted the AU Commission in planning and managing AMISOM operations.

Financing

In a report of 29 January [A/64/644], the Secretary-General submitted a budget for the financing of support to AMISOM for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, in the amount of $205,221,300. ACABQ, in April [A/64/754], recommended a reduction of $22,716,530 to the proposed budget, resulting in appropriations amounting to $182,504,770.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/553/Add.1], adopted resolution 64/287 without vote [agenda item 163].

Financing of support to the African Union Mission in Somalia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of support of the African Union Mission in Somalia and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1863(2009) of 16 January 2009, by which the Council expressed its intent to establish a United Nations peacekeeping operation in Somalia as a follow-on force to the African Union Mission in Somalia, subject to its further decision by 1 June 2009, and requested the Secretary-General, in order for the forces of the Mission to be incorporated into a United Nations peacekeeping operation, to provide a United Nations logistical support package to the Mission, including equipment and services,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1910(2010) of 28 January 2010, by which the Council requested the Secretary-General to continue to provide a logistical support package to the Mission until 31 January 2011,

Recalling further its resolution 64/107 of 10 December 2009 on the financing of support to the African Union Mission in Somalia,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the United Nations Trust Fund established to support the Mission,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to make the full-est possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the logistical support package;

2. Acknowledges with appreciation that the use of the logistics hub at Entebbe, Uganda, has been cost-effective and has resulted in savings for the United Nations, and welcomes the expansion of the logistics hub to provide logistical support to peacekeeping operations in the region and to contribute further to their enhanced efficiency and responsiveness, taking into account the ongoing efforts in this regard;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to ensure effectiveness, efficiency and transparency with regard to the use of United Nations resources, bearing in mind the specific nature of the support package;

5. Takes note of paragraph 27 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

Budget estimates for the period
from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

6. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the support provided to the African Union Mission in Somalia the amount of 184,866,900 United States dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of the amount of 174,318,200 dollars for the maintenance of the entity, 8,933,900 dollars for the support account for peace-keeping operations and 1,614,800 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation for the period
from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

7. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 107,839,025 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 31 January 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

8. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 7 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,188,376 dollars, representing the staff assessment income of 1,681,517 dollars approved for the entity, the prorated share of 431,492 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 75,367 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

9. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 77,027,875 dollars for the period from 1 February to 30 June 2011 at a monthly rate of 15,405,575 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated by the General Assembly in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate;

10. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 9 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,563,124 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,201,083 dollars approved for the entity, the prorated share of 308,208 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 53,833 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

11. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the entity, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 7 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 11,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended

30 June 2008, in accordance with the levels updated by the General Assembly in resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2008 as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

12. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the entity, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 11,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2008, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 11 above;

13. Invites voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund established to support the African Union Mission in Somalia;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the activities arising from Security Council resolution 1863(2009)".

Djibouti-Eritrea

In 2010, the border dispute between Djibouti and Eritrea on Ras Doumeira and Doumeira Island continued. The dispute had erupted in March 2008, following Eritrea's deployment of troops and military equipment to the two localities adjoining the de facto Djibouti-Eritrea border [YUN 2008, p. 315]. In December 2009, the Security Council, by resolution 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299], imposed targeted sanctions on Eritrea for its failure to comply with resolution 1862(2009) [ibid., p. 298] on the border dispute between both countries, and for its destabilizing role in the Somalia conflict. The resolution imposed an arms embargo on Eritrea, as well as a travel ban and an assets freeze on individuals within the Eritrean political and military leadership who violated the arms embargo, provided support to armed opposition groups destabilizing the region or obstructed the implementation of resolution 1862(2009). The resolution followed a request by IGAD and the AU for the Council to take such action. The Council also expanded the mandate of the Somalia Monitoring Group to include monitoring and reporting on the implementation of sanctions on Eritrea. Member States were requested to report to the Council within 120 days on steps taken to implement measures in the resolution.

On 6 June, under the auspices of Qatar, Djibouti and Eritrea decided to resolve, through a negotiated settlement, their border conflict. The agreement mandated Qatar to establish a mechanism that would facilitate the demarcation by an international company of the border between both countries.

Communication. In a letter dated 28 January 2010 [S/2010/59], Eritrea informed the Security Council of a number of its concerns about resolution 1907(2009) and outlined its position on Somalia, the border dispute with Djibouti and the border impasse with Ethiopia (see p. 306). An independent body should examine all allegations levelled against the Government and the Government should be provided the opportunity to defend itself against those allegations.

Security Council consideration. On 19 May [S/PV.6316], during its consideration of peace and security in Africa, the Security Council heard a statement by Ismaïl Omar Guelleh, President of Djibouti, who accused Eritrea of having dragged Djibouti into the conflict in the Horn of Africa. While Djibouti had heeded the Council's call in June 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 316] for an immediate cessation of hostilities and withdrawal of forces to the status quo ante, Eritrea's response had been to deny the very existence of a military confrontation, reject any withdrawal and condemn the Council's swift action of 12 June 2008 [ibid.]. Eritrea's incursion remained Djibouti's greatest security concern; for almost a year, Eritrea had conducted a systematic campaign to destabilize Djibouti by training infiltrators who sabotaged infrastructure and targeted national events in rural and urban areas in order to cause fears and friction.

Communications. By a letter of 28 May [S/2010/262], Eritrea categorically rejected Djibouti's allegations, stating that armed opposition there had existed since its emergence as a nation in 1977 and had no connection with the current tension between the two countries. Eritrea also reiterated its commitment to ongoing diplomatic efforts to find a negotiated settlement to the border dispute.

On 7 June [A/64/806-S/2010/291], Qatar transmitted an agreement between Djibouti and Eritrea signed on 6 June concerning the peaceful settlement of the border dispute between the two countries. Under the agreement, Qatar was charged to exert efforts as a mediator, with a view to finding a peaceful solution.

Security Council statement (June). On 11 June [SC/9951], the Security Council welcomed the signing of the agreement and the issuance of the implementation document by which the leaders of Djibouti and Eritrea entrusted the Emir of the State of Qatar to undertake the mediation efforts.

Report of Secretary-General. In June [S/2010/327], the Secretary-General presented a report pursuant to resolution 1907(2009), by which the Security Council imposed targeted sanctions on Eritrea for its failure to comply with resolution 1862(2009) and expanded the mandate of the Somalia Monitoring Group to include monitoring and reporting on the implementation of sanctions imposed on Eritrea. A note verbale was subsequently transmitted to Eritrea, outlining the provisions of the resolution and requesting information by 7 June on their fulfilment. On 9 June, Eritrea responded with a report on its compliance with resolution 1907(2009), referring to the agreement reached between Eritrea and Djibouti on the border dispute and Qatar's mediation role.

Eritrea denied that a border dispute existed with Djibouti and that in March 2008 [YUN 2008, p. 315] it had deployed troops and military equipment to Ras Doumeira and Doumeira Island, or that a military confrontation took place in June of that year. It claimed, rather, that Ethiopia had deployed in February 2008, with Djibouti's consent, long-range artillery weapons on the strategic highpoint of Mount Musa Ali where the borders of Eritrea, Ethiopia and Djibouti met; and that the Djibouti army subsequently launched a surprise attack on Eritrean units along the shared border. Eritrea rejected the visit of the UN fact-finding mission on the basis that the Security Council had issued a statement condemning Eritrea without ascertaining the facts on the ground in an impartial manner.

The Secretary-General also received a letter from the Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Qatar transmitting a copy of the agreement signed by Eritrea and Djibouti, aimed at resolving the border conflict. The agreement entrusted Qatar with mediating and establishing a mechanism for the peaceful resolution of the border dispute and the eventual normalization of relations between the two countries. On the same day, the Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation of Djibouti, in a statement to the press, confirmed the withdrawal of Eritrean troops from Djiboutian territory, as a result of the Qatari mediation effort and the deployment of a Qatari observation force to monitor the border area between the two countries until a final agreement was reached.

In furtherance of the Secretary-General's good offices, DPA held several meetings with the Permanent Representative of Eritrea to the United Nations in New York, with the aim of maintaining a dialogue and advancing Eritrea's broader engagement with the international community, including identifying concrete steps that Eritrea could take as a demonstration of goodwill, such as: allowing a UN fact-finding mission to the Eritrea-Djibouti border; pursuing dialogue with Djibouti; engaging senior officials of the Somali Government with the aim of formally recognizing the Transitional Federal Government; and re-engagement with the AU and IGAD. The Permanent Representative indicated that some of those steps were already being taken.

Despite Eritrea's long-standing positions on Somalia and Djibouti, the Secretary-General noted, it had recently taken a number of encouraging steps towards constructive engagement with its neighbours and the wider international community. That included its reception of the Sanctions Committee in Asmara, its participation in the Istanbul Conference (see p. 280), and its engagement in regional mediation efforts led by Qatar in its border dispute with Djibouti. The Secretary-General welcomed Eritrea's endorsement of the Istanbul Declaration on Somalia, which, he said, reflected a notable departure from its previous policy of contesting the legality and legitimacy of the Transitional Federal Government and calling for the expulsion of AMISOM. He also noted that the ability of the United Nations to verify Eritrea's compliance with resolution 1907(2009) was very limited. He hoped that the new Monitoring Group on Somalia and Eritrea would provide for independent monitoring and reporting, and welcomed recent reports that indicated steps Eritrea was taking to restore its representation at AU headquarters in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; he encouraged Eritrea to make a similar effort in re-establishing its IGAD membership. Its enhanced engagement with regional organizations and international partners would be an important contribution to strengthening peace and stability in the Horn of Africa. While recent developments represented a move in the right direction, he urged Eritrea to do more to provide evidence of its compliance with resolution 1907(2009).

Communication. By a letter of 30 June [S/2010/350], Eritrea charged that the Secretary-General's report was not free of inaccuracies and repeated erroneous and unfounded allegations against it, including the accusations that it had invaded Djibouti territory. Recent developments showed that there was no longer any pretext to keep the sanctions in place. The agreement signed by Djibouti and Eritrea, with the facilitation of Qatar, was a welcome development. The time had come for the Security Council to take tangible measures to compel Ethiopia to withdraw from sovereign Eritrean territories it was occupying in flagrant violation of the UN Charter and international law; and for the Security Council to lift the sanctions that it had unjustifiably imposed on Eritrea.

Sanctions

On 23 December 2009, the Security Council, by resolution 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299], imposed a ban on the sale or supply to and from Eritrea of arms and related materiel, technical assistance and training. By the same resolution, it imposed an assets freeze, a travel ban and a targeted arms embargo on individuals and entities, including, but not limited to, the Eritrean political and military leadership designated by the Security Council Committee as violating the arms embargo; providing support to armed opposition groups which aimed to destabilize the region; obstructing the implementation of resolution 1862(2009) [ibid., p. 298] on Djibouti; harbouring, financing, facilitating, supporting, organizing, training, or inciting individuals or groups to acts of violence or terrorist acts against other States or their citizens in the region; or obstructing the investigations or the work of the Monitoring Group. The Council further expanded the mandate of the Monitoring Group re-established by resolution 1853(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 301], to monitor and report on the implementation of the measures imposed by resolution 1907(2009). To reflect its expanded mandate, the Security Council Committee to oversee sanctions on Somalia on 26 February changed its name to "Security Council Committee pursuant to resolutions 751(1992) and 1907(2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea" (see p. 300).

By resolution 1916(2010) (see p. 298), the Security Council, condemning the flow of weapons and ammunition supplies to and through Somalia and Eritrea, and determining that Eritrea's actions undermined peace and reconciliation in Somalia, and that the dispute between Djibouti and Eritrea continued to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region, extended the Monitoring Group's mandate to investigate, inter alia, all activities, including in the financial, maritime and other sectors, which generated revenues used to commit violations of the arms embargo, and to investigate any means of transport, routes, seaports, airports and other facilities used in connections with the arms embargo violations. The Council requested that all States, including Eritrea, ensure cooperation with the Monitoring Group.

Monitoring Group. In its February report [S/2010/91] to the Security Council, the Monitoring Group on Somalia (see p. 296) found that, between March 2009 and March 2010, Eritrea had continued to support armed opposition groups in Somalia politically, financially, diplomatically and, allegedly, militarily, in violation of resolution 1844(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 297]; however, the Group noted that by late 2009, Eritrea's support had either decreased or become less visible, possibly in response to international pressure.

Communications. By a letter of 28 January [S/2010/59] to the Security Council, Eritrea stated that the allegation that it supplied arms had to be ascertained by an independent party in an open forum and validated by incontrovertible evidence, rather than being determined in a closed meeting. On 1 March [S/2010/116], Eritrea transmitted to the Security Council the copy of a letter to the Secretary-General and a petition with 118,000 signatures from the E-SMART Campaign (Eritrean Sanctions Must Be Annulled Today), a project of the Organization of Eritrean Americans, in response to resolution 1907(2009). In a letter [S/2010/225] to the Chairman of the Sanctions Committee detailing the Government's position on resolution 1907(2009), the Djibouti-Eritrea border conflict, the situation in Somalia and the Ethiopia-Eritrea impasse, Eritrea maintained that the sanctions were based on unfounded allegations and their imposition was in essence a political act, promoted by the United States and aimed at punishing Eritrea, inter alia, for publicly criticizing United States foreign policy in the Horn of Africa.

Eritrea–Ethiopia

Following the termination of its mandate on 31 July 2008, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1827(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 310], the United Nations Mission to Ethiopia and Eritrea (UNMEE) continued its administrative liquidation. The Mission had been mandated to help the Security Council achieve the overall objective of a peaceful settlement of the dispute between Ethiopia and Eritrea.

The final report of the Eritrea-Ethiopia Claims Commission was presented to the Security Council in January 2010.

Claims Commission. On 18 January [S/2010/38], the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council the final report of the Eritrea-Ethiopia Claims Commission, established by the Algiers Agreement between both countries on 12 December 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 180] to decide, though binding arbitration, all claims for loss, damage or injury by one Government against the other. During its tenure, the Commission had rendered 15 partial and final awards on the liability aspects of the parties' claims between 2003 and 2005. On 17 August 2009, the Commission issued final awards on damages on the claims of both parties. It awarded Eritrea in support of its own claims the total monetary compensation of $161,455,000, and an additional $2,065,865 in respect of claims presented on behalf of individual Eritrean claimants. Ethiopia was awarded a total monetary compensation of $174,036,520.

The Commission noted in its final awards that the armed conflict between the two parties had caused serious injury and damage to the people and infrastructure of their countries. While the compensation awarded to each party was substantial, the Commission recognized that it was probably much less than each party believed to be its due, and probably did not reflect the totality of damages that either party had suffered in violation of international law. In considering the claims, the Commission took note that the two countries were among the poorest in the world, and that large damages awards might exceed their capacity to pay or result in serious injury to its population if such damages were paid. The Commission, however, concluded that it did not need to decide the question of possible capping of the awards.

With the issuance of those final awards, the Commission had completed its mandate. The Commission reiterated its confidence that the parties would ensure that any compensation they might receive in respect of their claims would be used to provide relief to their civilian populations injured in the war. It had sought to resolve many difficult issues between the parties fairly and in accordance with international law, and hoped that those efforts would contribute to the eventual establishment of a durable and mutually beneficial peace between them.

Communication. By a letter of 28 January [S/2010/59], Eritrea, stating that Security Council resolution 1907(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 299]—which imposed sanctions against it—was not based on fact and law, urged the Council to redress the injustices perpetrated against Eritrea and to seek a reversal and repeal of the resolution.

UNMEE

The mandate of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea (UNMEE), established by the Security Council in resolutions 1312(2000) [YUN 2000, p. 174] and 1320(2000) [ibid., p. 176], was terminated by Council resolution 1827(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 310] effective 31 July 2008. On 1 August 2008, UNMEE began its administrative liquidation, including the disposition of its assets. The financing of UNMEE was considered by the General Assembly in June at its resumed sixty-fourth (2010) session.

Report of Secretary-General. In a performance report [A/64/586] on the UNMEE budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009, the Secretary-General stated that UNMEE had contributed to an effective and efficient administrative liquidation. Total expenditure for the financial period, covering the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 to 31 July 2008 and its liquidation for the period from 1 August 2008 to 10 March 2009, amounted to $31,005,000, which was $6,011,400 less than the financial resources of $37,016,400 appropriated by the General Assembly in resolution 63/257 A [YUN 2008, p. 314]. During the reporting period, assets of the Mission were donated to Ethiopia (an inventory value of $1,398,500, with a corresponding residual value of $421,800) and the AU in support of AMISOM (an inventory value of $6,911,400, with a corresponding residual value of $1,967,900); both actions were endorsed by Assembly decision 63/554 [YUN 2009, p. 303]. The assets identified for donation to the Eritrean Government, with an inventory value of $6,082,100 and a corresponding residual value of $2,299,300, could not be donated as Eritrea, in a note verbale of 25 February 2009, had informed the UN Secretariat that the donation of UNMEE assets was not accepted by the communities concerned [ibid.]. ACABQ was subsequently informed that since UNMEE had already finalized the field liquidation process, terminated the service contracts and repatriated its staff, the Mission would not be in a position to recover the remaining assets, which accordingly were abandoned in situ.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly decide on the treatment of the unencumbered balance of $6,398,283 against the amount of $37,403,283 assessed on Member States for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009, and decide on the treatment of other income for the period ended 30 June 2009, amounting to $3,350,200 from interest income ($318,300), other/miscellaneous income ($1,168,800) and cancellation of prior-period obligations ($1,875,400), offset by prior-period adjustments ($12,300).

On 24 March [A/64/586/Corr.1], the Secretary-General recommended in connection with the financing of UNMEE to return credits to Member States in the amount of $9,353,300, representing the net cash available in the special account of the Mission from the balance of credits in the amount of $14,736,400 due to Member States in respect of the 2007/2008 financial period; to take note of the amount of $5,383,100, representing the remaining balance of credits due to Member States from the 2007/08 period, and the amount of $9,361,600 representing credits due to Member States from the 2007/08 financial period; and to defer until its sixty-fifth session a decision on the treatment of the total amount of $14,744,700, comprising the amounts of $5,383,100 and $9,361,600 in credits due to Member States.

ACABQ report. In a 9 February report [A/64/660/Add.1], ACABQ expressed no objection to the Secretary-General's proposed course of action, having been informed that in recommending that course of action, he bore in mind resolution 63/257 B [YUN 2009, p. 303], by which the General Assembly decided that Member States that had fulfilled their financial obligations to UNMEE would be credited with their respective share of the net cash available in the Special Account for the Mission as at 30 April 2009. The Advisory Committee also noted that in respect of death and disability compensation, as at 31 January a total $589,000 had been paid for 46 claims and one claim was pending; unliquidated obligations amounted to $121,000. The Committee expected that the outstanding claim would be settled expeditiously.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/826], the General Assembly adopted resolution 64/277 without vote [agenda item 153].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1312(2000) of 31 July 2000, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the last of which was resolution 1798(2008) of 30 January 2008, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 31 July 2008,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1827(2008) of 30 July 2008, by which the Council terminated the mandate of the Mission effective 31 July 2008,

Recalling further its resolution 55/237 of 23 December 2000 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/257 B of 30 June 2009,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 7.6 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only seventy-six Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

5. Also takes note of the unencumbered balance and other income in the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea in the amount of 9,361,600 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009;

6. Decides that Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission shall be credited with their respective share of the net cash available in the Special Account for the Mission in the amount of 16,495,400 dollars as at 30 April 2010 from the balance of credits in the amount of 14,736,400 dollars due to Member States in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2008 and the balance of credits in the amount of 1,759,000 dollars due to Member States in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

7. Encourages Member States that are owed credits referred to in paragraph 6 above to apply those credits to any accounts where they have outstanding assessed contributions;

8. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the net cash available in the Special Account for the Mission in the amount of 16,495,400 dollars as at 30 April 2010 from the balance of credits in the amount of 14,736,400 dollars due to Member States in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2008 and the balance of credits in the amount of 1,759,000 dollars due to Member States in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 6 above;

9. Also decides to defer until its sixty-fifth session a decision on the treatment of the amount of 7,602,600 dollars, representing the remaining balance of credits due to Member States for the period ended 30 June 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to report to it at the second part of its resumed sixty-fifth session on the updated financial position of the Mission;

10. Further decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea".

Report of Secretary-General (December). In a December report [A/65/678], the Secretary-General provided details on the final disposition of UNMEE assets, with a total inventory value of $57,034,100, which were disposed of as at 7 December, in accordance with UN financial regulation 5.14. Those assets were grouped into the following categories: accommodation equipment, communications equipment, data-processing equipment, generators, marine equipment, medical equipment, miscellaneous equipment, observation equipment, office equipment, petrol tanks plus metering equipment, prefabricated buildings, refrigeration equipment, vehicular equipment, water and septic tanks, and water purification equipment.

As a result of the adjustment of the UNMEE assets disposition plan and according to the inventory report of 7 December, 799 assets with a total inventory value of $1,466,200 and a corresponding residual value of $462,900 were donated to the Government of Ethiopia during the 2008/09 financial period, and 1,480 assets with an inventory value of $6,144,000 and a corresponding residual value of $1,643,000 were donated to the AU. The variation in inventory value of $699,700 (less than 9 per cent) between the planned and actual donation of assets to Ethiopia and the AU resulted from the changes in value that arose in the process of finalizing and updating the inventory. The assets identified for donation to the Government of Eritrea with an inventory value of $6,082,100 and corresponding residual value of $2,299,300 could not be donated and were included in the category of written-off/lost assets.

Assets identified as meeting the requirements of UN peacekeeping operations or UN activities funded from assessed contributions, with an inventory value of $17,458,700, or 30.6 per cent of total assets value, had been transferred to other UN missions and the UN Logistics Base at Brindisi for temporary storage pending future use.

Assets disposed of locally with an inventory value of $9,239,000, representing 16.2 per cent of the total inventory value, comprised assets donated to the Ethiopian Government and the AU, with an inventory value of $7,610,200 and a corresponding residual value of $2,105,900, as well as assets sold to a UN agency and to private companies and individuals on the basis of competitive bidding, with an inventory value of $1,628,800 and residual value of $719,000. The amount of $644,500, representing the proceeds of the sale, was credited as miscellaneous income to the UNMEE special account.

Assets totalling $30,336,400, or 53.2 per cent of the total assets inventory value, and a corresponding residual value of $7,951,500, had been written off mainly as a result of accidents; damage caused by natural elements; obsolescence; normal wear and tear; the assets not being accepted by the Eritrean Government as donation; and uneconomical prospects for repair and loss.

North Africa

Western Sahara

In 2010, negotiations towards a lasting political solution to the question of Western Sahara continued. Although the two parties to the dispute concerning the Territory—Morocco and the Frente Polisario Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (Frente Polisario)—held talks with the Secretary-General's Personal Envoy for Western Sahara, they remained far apart on ways to achieve a solution. While Morocco remained committed to its autonomy proposal as presented in the negotiations under UN auspices, Frente Polisario reiterated its position that the Saharan people should decide their future by means of a free referendum.

The United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO), established by Security Council resolution 690(1991) [YUN 1991, p. 794], continued to monitor compliance with the 1991 formal ceasefire [ibid., p. 796] between the parties. Military Agreement No. 1, which MINURSO signed separately with the parties [YUN 1998, p. 194], remained the basic instrument governing the ceasefire monitoring of the five parts into which, for operational purposes, the disputed territory of Western Sahara was divided.

The Security Council in April extended the mandate of MINURSO for another 12 months.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (April). In April, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1871(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 305], the Secretary-General submitted a report on developments in Western Sahara since his April 2009 report [ibid.].

The Territory remained largely calm. The Secretary-General's Personal Envoy for Western Sahara, Christopher Ross, consulted regularly with the parties. The Personal Envoy held a second informal meeting (Westchester County, New York, 10–11 February), at which both parties complained of human rights violations. Frente Polisario called for UN monitoring while Morocco stated its opposition and asserted that, by refraining from exercising their responsibility with respect to the refugees on Algerian territory, Algeria and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) were not fulfilling their international obligations. Each party represented its April 2007 proposal [YUN 2007, p. 295], but neither accepted the other's proposal as the sole basis of future negotiations. The fundamental, and to date non-negotiable, difference between the two parties lay in the issue of self-determination. Frente Polisario, with Algeria's support, insisted on a referendum with multiple options, including independence, while Morocco insisted on a negotiated autonomy regime and a referendum of confirmation with one option.

The Personal Envoy visited the region in March to solicit the parties' ideas on how to move beyond the impasse, bearing in mind that neither party was prepared to accept the proposal of the other as written and that no mechanism existed to oblige the parties to agree to either proposal for resolving the dispute.

The widespread presence of landmines and explosive remnants of war throughout Western Sahara, including in areas where MINURSO military observers and logistical vehicles operated on a daily basis, continued to be a cause for serious concern. The MINURSO Mine Action Coordination Centre continued its efforts to develop and increase collaboration with the parties in accordance with military agreements Nos. 2 and 3 [YUN 1999, p. 180], committing both parties to cooperating with MINURSO in the exchange of mine-related information, marking of mined areas and destruction of mines and unexploded ordnance. Coordinated efforts aimed at eradicating the threat of landmines and explosive remnants of war had become more effective, owing to the establishment of a substantial database that more accurately reflected the currently known contamination of Western Sahara.

Exchanges of family visits continued, thanks to efforts of UNHCR and MINURSO and generally good cooperation by the parties. In order to shorten the waiting period for persons registered for family visits, and in line with Security Council resolutions 1813(2008) [YUN 2008, p. 321] and 1871(2009), UNHCR was continuing its efforts to implement the road option as an expansion of the family visits. C also continued to provide free telephone services for refugees in the camps to contact family members in the Territory.

For the implementation of the confidence-building measures programme, MINURSO continued to provide, on a reimbursable basis, logistical, security and administrative support to UNHCR, including aircraft and ground transportation. The UN police was a key component of the assistance provided by MINURSO in the context of confidence-building measures.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council reiterate its call to Morocco and Frente Polisario to negotiate in good faith and without any precondition, under the auspices of the Personal Envoy, and to show the political will required to enter into substantive discussions and ensure the success of the negotiations, where possible, by drawing on and developing the contents of their two proposals.

The Secretary-General remained concerned about the continuing violations of military agreement No. 1 [YUN 1998, p. 194] by the parties, and he called on the parties to adhere fully to the provisions of the military agreements and to extend their full cooperation to MINURSO.

The human dimension of the conflict, including the plight of the Western Saharan refugees, was a growing concern. The Secretary-General urged the parties to confirm their agreement to the expansion of the family visit programme and to accelerate their consultations with UNHCR on its implementation, and urged them to continue working with UNHCR and MINURSO, as well as with his Personal Envoy, to explore other confidence-building measures and contacts. In order to ensure optimal use of UN resources and facilitate support for the confidence-building measures programme, the Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council formally recognize and increase MINURSO's role and responsibilities to use its resources to support confidence-building activities. He also urged the donor community to make increased funding available for the maintenance and expansion of those activities and urged that appropriate attention be paid to conducting a census of refugees and implementing a programme of individual interviews.

Additional resources for the UN mine action effort in Western Sahara would be required. In that regard, MINURSO had made provision in its 2010/11 budget (see p. 313). The Secretary-General called on donor countries to support the parties' efforts in order to take advantage of the progress and investments made to date.

Given the circumstances on the ground and in the light of the Personal Envoy's continuing efforts, the Secretary-General believed that the presence of MINURSO remained indispensable for the maintenance of the ceasefire in Western Sahara. He recommended that the Security Council extend the mandate of MINURSO for another year, until 30 April 2011.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 April [meeting 6305], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1920(2010). The draft [S/2010/216, as orally amended] was submitted by France, the Russian Federation, Spain, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling and reaffirming all its previous resolutions on Western Sahara,

Reaffirming its strong support for the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy for Western Sahara to implement resolutions 1754(2007) of 30 April 2007, 1783(2007) of 31 October 2007, 1813(2008) of 30 April 2008 and 1871(2009) of 30 April 2009,

Reaffirming its commitment to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara in the context of arrangements consistent with the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and noting the role and responsibilities of the parties in this respect,

Reiterating its call upon the parties and States of the region to cooperate more fully with the United Nations and with each other to end the current impasse and to achieve progress towards a political solution,

Taking note of the proposal presented by Morocco to the Secretary-General on 11 April 2007 and welcoming serious and credible Moroccan efforts to move the process forward towards resolution, and taking note also of the proposal presented by the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to the Secretary-General on 10 April 2007,

Inviting, in this context, the parties to demonstrate further political will towards a solution,

Taking note of the four rounds of negotiations held under the auspices of the Secretary-General and the two rounds of informal talks held in Dürnstein, Austria, and in Westchester County, United States of America, and welcoming the progress made by the parties to enter into direct negotiations,

Stressing the importance of making progress on the human dimension of the conflict as a means to promote transparency and mutual confidence through constructive dialogue and humanitarian confidence-building measures, and noting the need for all parties to adhere to their obligations, taking into account the roles and responsibilities of the United Nations system and the relevant paragraphs of the report of the Secretary-General of 6 April 2010,

Welcoming, in this context, the agreement of the parties, expressed in the communiqué of the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General of 18 March 2008, looking forward to the inauguration of family visits by land and the resumption of the existing programme by air, and encouraging the parties to cooperate with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in implementing their agreement,

Welcoming also the commitment of the parties to continue the process of negotiations through the United Nations-sponsored talks,

Recognizing that the consolidation of the status quo is not acceptable in the long term, and noting further that progress in the negotiations is essential in order to improve the quality of life of the people of Western Sahara in all its aspects,

Affirming its support for the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General, Mr. Christopher Ross, and his work in facilitating negotiations between the parties, and also welcoming his recent visit to the region and ongoing consultations with the parties and neighbouring States,

Welcoming the appointment of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Western Sahara and Head of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara, Mr. Hany Abdel-Aziz, Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 6 April 2010,

1. Reaffirms the need for full respect of the military agreements reached with the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara with regard to the ceasefire, and calls upon the parties to adhere fully to those agreements;

2. Welcomes the commitment of the parties to continue the process of holding small, informal talks in preparation for a fifth round of negotiations, and recalls its endorsement of the recommendation in the report of the Secretary-General of 14 April 2008 that realism and a spirit of compromise by the parties are essential to achieve progress in negotiations;

3. Calls upon the parties to continue to show political will and work in an atmosphere propitious for dialogue in order to enter into a more intensive and substantive phase of negotiations, thus ensuring the implementation of resolutions 1754(2007), 1783(2007), 1813(2008) and 1871(2009), and the success of negotiations, and affirms its strong support for the commitment of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy towards a solution to the question of Western Sahara in this context;

4. Also calls upon the parties to continue negotiations under the auspices of the Secretary-General without preconditions and in good faith, taking into account the efforts made since 2006 and subsequent developments, with a view to achieving a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara in the context of arrangements consistent with the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and notes the role and responsibilities of the parties in this respect;

5. Invites Member States to lend appropriate assistance to these talks;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council informed on a regular basis of the status and progress of these negotiations under his auspices, and express its intention to meet to receive and discuss his report;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide a report on the situation in Western Sahara well before the end of the mandate period;

8. Urges Member States to provide voluntary contributions to fund confidence-building measures that allow for increased contact between separated family members, especially family visits, as well as other confidence-building measures that may be agreed upon between the parties;

9. Decides to extend the existing mandate of the Mission until 30 April 2011;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the measures necessary to ensure full compliance in the Mission with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to keep the Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including predeployment awareness training, and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

11. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (August). On 17 August, the Secretary-General, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 64/101 [YUN 2009, p. 307], presented a report on the situation concerning Western Sahara from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010 [A/65/306], which also covered the activities of his Personal Envoy to promote negotiations on the Territory. He reported that as a follow-up to the February informal meeting with the parties, his Personal Envoy had undertaken a visit to the region from 17 to 25 March, during which he was received by the King of Morocco and the Heads of State of Mauritania and Algeria, as well as the Secretary-General of Frente Polisario. The Personal Envoy's discussions in the region confirmed that the negotiations were still at an impasse, and he requested both parties and the neighbouring States to engage in a period of reflection to develop ideas for moving the process forward. He also visited Paris (25–26 March) for meetings with the Government of France on those issues.

From 21 June to 1 July, the Personal Envoy visited the capitals of three members of the Group of Friends of Western Sahara (London, Paris, Madrid) to consult on the best means to advance the negotiations towards a mutually acceptable settlement and to solicit their concrete advice and renewed support. On 16 July, he consulted with senior officials in Washington, D.C., and would visit Moscow at a later date. The Personal Envoy had found unanimous agreement on the need to intensify work on confidence-building measures, including the resumption of family visits by air, the early inauguration of family visits by road, and rapid consideration of other confidence-building measures proposed by UNHCR.

Further developments

In a later report [S/2011/249], the Secretary-General noted significant socio-political and security developments within the Territory. The situation, reinforced by the recent series of popular uprisings in the wider Middle East and North Africa region, which called for increased political and economic rights, had given rise in Western Sahara to new challenges to stability and security, with the potential to alter the conflict's status quo.

At the beginning of October, a group of Saharan protesters set up an encampment at Gdim Izik, some 15 kilometres south-east of Laayoune, with the intention of making socio-economic demands on the Moroccan authorities. The camp gradually expanded to an estimated 6,610 tents, and the number of protesters, which varied over time, was believed to have reached over 15,000. MINURSO was not able to monitor the situation due to Moroccan authorities impeding its access. Attempted military patrols and visits by UN security and police were prevented or stopped on several occasions. Moroccan authorities in Laayoune and at the Permanent Mission of Morocco to the United Nations protested against MINURSO attempts to approach the camp, advising that it should not interact directly with the camp population on what was described as a purely internal and social matter. In response to the Mission's continuing efforts, the Moroccan authorities on 4 November eventually allowed one international security officer into the camp. Those restrictions on movement violated the 1999 status-of-mission agreement between the United Nations and Morocco [YUN 1999, p. 179] and interfered with the Mission's ability to fulfil its mandate. In addition, the interception of MINURSO military patrols constituted a violation of Military Agreement No. 1 [YUN 1998, p. 194].

With a heavy Moroccan security presence and the continued influx of new protesters, the political and security atmosphere gradually deteriorated, particularly after Moroccan forces shot dead a 14-year-old Saharan boy at the camp's entrance on 24 October in unclear circumstances.

On 8 November, despite previous démarches by the Secretary-General's Personal Envoy and his Special Representative for Western Sahara towards their Moroccan interlocutors in attempts to discourage any forceful action against the protesters, Moroccan auxiliary forces and police forcefully dispersed the protesters and destroyed the camp using tear gas, water cannons, batons and loudspeakers; there was no evidence that live ammunition or other lethal means were used. Violence immediately erupted in the city of Laayoune, with groups of Saharans taking to the streets to protest against the raid, amid rumours of a high death toll, throwing improvised explosives and stones and attacking public and private buildings. Later that day, groups of Moroccans attacked Saharan civilian homes and their residents.

The unrest resulted in significant casualties and property damage, although the United Nations could not verify either party's account of the casualties.

MINURSO visited the camp site on 10 November, but was not able to obtain a clear picture of the exact number of protesters, the condition in the camp before it was dismantled, or the number of casualties.

Following those events, the general situation in the Territory remained tense, particularly between the Saharan population and Moroccan forces.

On 27 November, the lower house of the Moroccan Parliament established a Parliamentary Commission of Inquiry to investigate the establishment and dismantling of the camp, the events in Laayoune and the implications of those events.

On 29 November, following the violence in Laayoune, the Governor of Laayoune, Mohamed Helmous, was replaced with Khalil Dkhil, the first Saharan to hold the post. Morocco also replaced the head of its gendarmerie in Laayoune and conducted a parliamentary inquiry into the Laayoune events.

The Secretary-General said that a third round of informal consultations between the parties was to have taken place early in August; however, the sudden death in July of Mahrouf Ali Beiba, the head of the Frente Polisario delegation, made it impossible to maintain that schedule. The parties concurred that it was best to wait to meet again until after Ramadan (11 August–10 September) and for the high-level meetings and general debate of the General Assembly to take place. In mid-September, UNHCR and the Personal Envoy again pressed for the resumption of family visits by air; however, a dispute over proper notification to the parties and other issues prevented a resumption. From 12 to 14 September, the Personal Envoy consulted with senior officials in Moscow.

The Personal Envoy undertook a fourth visit to the region (17–26 October) to prepare the way for a third round of informal talks by holding discussions with the parties and neighbouring States. As on his previous visit, he met with the Heads of State of Algeria, Mauritania and Morocco, the Secretary-General of Frente Polisario and other senior officials.

The third round of informal talks was held in Long Island, New York (7–10 November). The opening session, scheduled for the morning of 8 November, coincided with Moroccan action to dismantle the Saharan protest encampment outside Laayoune and subsequent confrontations within the city. The ensuing tensions threatened to derail the talks, inasmuch as the Frente Polisario delegation questioned the motives and timing of the Moroccan action and the utility of proceeding with the talks as violence escalated. Throughout the round, Frente Polisario and Morocco accused each other repeatedly of escalating tensions and engaging in human rights violations in Western Sahara and in the refugee camps in the Tindouf area.

At the end of the first session, the parties agreed to incorporate into future rounds the approach suggested by the Personal Envoy, namely to deconstruct their April 2007 proposals [YUN 2007, p. 296], find subjects to be discussed as building blocks towards the consideration of core issues, and foster the gradual emergency of trust and confidence. For the session on confidence-building measures, the Personal Envoy obtained the active participation of the delegations of Algeria and Morocco in the discussions for the first time, thus furthering their contribution to the overall negotiating process.

The fourth round of informal talks was held at the same venue as the third (16–18 December). The proposals of the parties of April 2007 were again presented, and each party continued to reject the proposal of the other as the sole basis for future negotiations. The atmosphere was once more affected by the aftermath of the Laayoune events. At the end of the round, the Personal Envoy called on the parties to create a new dynamic in 2011 and to avoid actions that undermined the creation of the atmosphere of trust needed for progress to be made.

During the year, UNHCR, WFP and WHO, in conjunction with the European Commission Humanitarian Office, the Spanish Agency for International Development Cooperation and several international and local NGOs, continued to provide assistance and protection to Western Saharan refugees in the camps near Tindouf.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/65/430], adopted resolution 65/112 without vote [agenda item 59].

Question of Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Having considered in depth the question of Western Sahara,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recognizing that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the people concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and other resolutions of the Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/101 of 10 December 2009,

Recalling also all resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council on the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling further Security Council resolutions 658(1990) of 27 June 1990, 690(1991) of 29 April 1991, 1359(2001) of 29 June 2001, 1429(2002) of 30 July 2002, 1495(2003) of 31 July 2003, 1541(2004) of 29 April 2004, 1570(2004) of 28 October 2004, 1598(2005) of 28 April 2005, 1634(2005) of 28 October 2005, 1675(2006) of 28 April 2006 and 1720(2006) of 31 October 2006, Underlining the adoption of Security Council resolutions 1754(2007) on 30 April 2007, 1783(2007) on 31 October 2007, 1813(2008) on 30 April 2008, 1871(2009) on 30 April 2009 and 1920(2010) on 30 April 2010,

Expressing its satisfaction that the parties met on 18 and 19 June 2007, on 10 and 11 August 2007, from 7 to 9 January 2008 and from 16 to 18 March 2008 under the auspices of the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General and in the presence of the neighbouring countries and that they have agreed to continue the negotiations,

Also expressing its satisfaction at the holding of two informal meetings convened by the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General on 9 and 10 August 2009 in Dürnstein, Austria, and on 10 and 11 February 2010 in Westchester County, United States of America, to prepare for the fifth round of negotiations,

Calling upon all the parties and the States of the region to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy and with each other,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the United Nations towards the people of Western Sahara,

Welcoming, in this regard, the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy in search of a mutually acceptable political solution to the dispute, which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara,

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples for 2010,

Having also examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Supports the process of negotiations initiated by Security Council resolution 1754(2007) and further sustained by Council resolutions 1783(2007), 1813(2008), 1871(2009) and 1920(2010) with a view to achieving a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, and commends the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy in this respect;

3. Welcomes the commitment of the parties to continue to show political will and work in an atmosphere propitious for dialogue, in order to enter into a more intensive phase of negotiations, in good faith and without preconditions, taking note of efforts and developments since 2006, thus ensuring implementation of Security Council resolutions 1754(2007), 1783(2007), 1813(2008), 1871(2009) and 1920(2010) and the success of negotiations;

4. Also welcomes the ongoing negotiations between the parties held on 18 and 19 June 2007, on 10 and 11 August 2007, from 7 to 9 January 2008 and from 16 to 18 March 2008 in the presence of the neighbouring countries and under the auspices of the United Nations;

5. Calls upon the parties to cooperate with the International Committee of the Red Cross, and calls upon them to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian law;

6. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

7. Invites the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

MINURSO

The United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO), established by Security Council resolution 690(1991) [YUN 1991, p. 794], was mandated to help the Council achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution that would provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara. The Council, by resolution 1920(2010) (see p. 310), extended the Mission's mandate for another 12 months, until 30 April 2011.

MINURSO continued to monitor compliance with the formal ceasefire between Frente Polisario and Morocco. Military Agreement No. 1, which MINURSO had signed separately with the parties [YUN 1998, p. 194], remained the basic legal instrument governing the ceasefire monitoring of the disputed Territory of Western Sahara. The Mission's military observers carried out monitoring through a combination of ground and air patrols and observation posts, and through inspections of larger-than-company-size military units. Bilateral Military Agreements Nos. 2 and 3 [YUN 1999, p. 180], committing both parties to cooperating with MINURSO in the exchange of mine-related information, marking of mined areas and destruction of mines and unexploded ordnance, remained in force.

MINURSO was headed by Hany Abdel-Aziz (Egypt), Special Representative for Western Sahara, who had been appointed in October 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 209].

Financing

A performance report by the Secretary-General on the MINURSO budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/602] showed expenditures of $45,068,800 gross, against appropriations of $45,600,800 approved by the General Assembly in resolution 62/268 [YUN 2008, p. 324], leaving an unencumbered balance of $540,000. The report also showed other income amounting to $1,098,500 from interest income, other/miscellaneous income and cancellation of prior-period obligations, offset by prior-period adjustments.

On 27 January, the Secretary-General submitted the MINURSO budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 [A/64/636], requesting appropriations of $58,230,900, exclusive of budgeted voluntary contributions in kind in the amount of $2,908,000.

In a 19 March report [A/64/660/Add.2], ACABQ recommended that in connection with the financing of MINURSO from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009, the unencumbered balance of $540,000, as well as other income in the amount of $1,098,500, be credited to Member States. With regard to the 2010–2011 budget, the Advisory Committee recommended appropriations of $58,100,400, should the Council decide to extend the Mission's mandate beyond 30 April 2010.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/832], adopted resolution 64/284 without vote [agenda item 160].

Financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 690(1991) of 29 April 1991, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1920(2010) of 30 April 2010, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 30 April 2011,

Recalling also its resolution 45/266 of 17 May 1991 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/300 of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara as at 30 April 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 44.5 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only ninety-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

13. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

14. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara the amount of 60,605,300 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of 57,130,500 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 2,942,900 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 531,900 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

15. Also decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 50,504,420 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 April 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

16. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,245,170 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,006,750 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 203,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 35,420 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

17. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 10,100,880 dollars for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2011, at a monthly rate of 5,050,442 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

18. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 17 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 449,030 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 401,350 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 40,600 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 7,080 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

19. Further decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 1,638,500 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

20. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 1,638,500 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 19 above;

21. Also decides that the increase of 46,300 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 1,638,500 dollars referred to in paragraphs 19 and 20 above;

22. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

23. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

24. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

25. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara".

Madagascar

Communications. On 4 March [S/2010/117], the AU Permanent Observer Mission forwarded to the Security Council a report of the Chairperson of the Commission on the situation in Madagascar since the eruption of the political crisis there in March 2009 [YUN 2009, p. 310], and the related communiqué issued by the AU Peace and Security Council at its 19 February meeting (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia), as well as a communiqué on the situation in the Niger issued at the same meeting.

On 19 March [S/2010/149], the AU Permanent Observer transmitted a copy of the communiqué on sanctions against Madagascar, adopted by the AU Peace and Security Council at its 17 March meeting (Addis Ababa).

By letters of 12 and 17 August [A/65/502, A/65/503], Madagascar transmitted to the General Assembly the political agreements signed by different political parties (Antananarivo, 9 and 13 August, respectively) to resolve the crisis and permit the holding of free, credible, transparent and democratic elections.

Mauritius–United Kingdom

Communications. By a 1 March letter to the Human Rights Council [A/HRC/13/G/14], Mauritius reiterated that the Chagos Archipelago, including Diego Garcia, was part of the territory of Mauritius. The Archipelago had been illegally excised by the United Kingdom from the territory of Mauritius prior to its independence, Mauritius charged, in total disregard of General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49] and 2066(XX) [YUN 1965, p. 587]. Mauritius had never relinquished its sovereignty over the Archipelago, and since the illegal excision it had consistently and persistently pressed the United Kingdom, in both bilateral and multilateral forums, for the Archipelago's early and unconditional return.

Mauritius did not recognize the so-called “British Indian Ocean Territory” or any “British Overseas Territory in the Indian Ocean” or “UK Overseas Territory of Diego Garcia” in so far as those terms purported to describe or refer to the Chagos Archipelago. Mauritius deplored the fact that it was still not in a position to exercise effective control over the Archipelago as a result of the illegal excision of its territory.

Mauritius also viewed with the utmost concern the use of its territory for activities that might be in breach of the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights [YUN 1966, p. 406] and other international human rights treaties, such as the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 812]. In February 2008, Mauritius had expressed to the United Kingdom and the United States its grave concern about the use of its territory for activities that blatantly contravened basic human rights principles.

On 11 March [A/HRC/13/G/17], the United Kingdom replied that it had no doubt about its sovereignty over the British Indian Ocean Territory, which was ceded to Britain in 1814 and had been a British dependency ever since. As the United Kingdom had reiterated in many occasions, it had undertaken to cede the Territory to Mauritius when it was no longer required for defence purposes.

Speaking before the General Assembly on 28 September [A/65/PV.21], Mauritius said it was deeply concerned that on 1 April the United Kingdom had decided to declare unilaterally a maritime protected area around the Chagos Archipelago, allegedly to protect the marine environment. Mauritius had decided not to recognize the existence of the so-called maritime protected area, and urged the United Kingdom once again to return the Archipelago to Mauritius unconditionally and without delay. Mauritius had drawn the Assembly’s attention every year to the fact that it had sovereignty over the Chagos Archipelago, including Diego Garcia, and had raised the issue of its sovereignty over the Archipelago with successive British Governments. Although bilateral talks were initiated in January 2009, the issue had yet to be addressed.

Americas

During 2010, the United Nations continued to advance the cause of lasting peace, human rights, good governance and the rule of law in the Americas, as well as to respond to natural disasters and humanitarian emergencies that also affected political stability.

The 12 January earthquake in Haiti took an estimated 222,750 lives and destroyed 105,000 homes. The Head of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), his deputy and 100 other UN personnel were killed. The United Nations response to the earthquake was one of the largest ever mounted. The Security Council increased the overall force level of MINUSTAH to support the immediate recovery, reconstruction and stability efforts. Nearly 1.5 million people were sheltered and regularly provided with food, clean water and medical care. In October, ten months after the earthquake, a cholera outbreak was confirmed in Haiti. The epidemic quickly spread throughout the country, killing more than 2,000 people in less than two months. The suggestion that UN peacekeepers based in the central town of Mirebalais might have brought the disease to Haiti caused violent protests in several cities. In those circumstances, elections were held on 28 November to choose a new president and a 99-member Parliament, and to renew the mandate of one-third of the Senate. Widespread allegations of vote rigging emerged shortly after the Provisional Electoral Council announced that one of the presidential front-runners, Michel Martelly, had failed by a thin margin to secure sufficient votes to run in the second round. Protesters in the capital and other cities subsequently demanded a cancellation of the election results. The Security Council called on all political actors to work through the electoral process to ensure that the will of the people was reflected in the outcome.

The International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala continued to implement its mandate. In December, the Secretary-General provided the General Assembly with an update on the activities of the Commission, and the role of the United Nations in implementing its mandate.

In October, Costa Rica complained about dredging operations carried out by Nicaragua in the San Juan River, which represented a violation of territorial sovereignty and caused environmental damage on Costa Rican soil. Nicaragua rejected Costa Rica's claims, stating that the clean-up of the river had been carried out in Nicaraguan territory. In November, Costa Rica instituted proceedings against Nicaragua before the International Court of Justice.

As in previous years, the General Assembly called on States to refrain from promulgating laws and measures such as the ongoing embargo against Cuba by the United States.

Central America

In 2010, Central America further consolidated peace and built democratic and equitable societies on the foundation developed in years of successful UN peacemaking efforts. The United Nations continued to assist the region through development programming, the good offices of the Secretary-General and other means.

Communication. On 8 March [A/64/720], Mexico transmitted to the General Assembly the Latin American and Caribbean Unity Summit Declaration and the Cancún Declaration, adopted during the first Latin American and Caribbean Unity Summit (Mayan Riviera, Mexico, 22–23 February).

On 27 July [A/65/179], Honduras informed the Secretary-General of actions taken by the President of Honduras, Porfirio Lobo Sosa, to promote the unity and reconciliation of that country, with a view to strengthening democracy.

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the item on the situation in Central America: progress in fashioning a region of peace, freedom, democracy and development would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Guatemala

International Commission against Impunity

In 2010, the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala (CICIG), established in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 308] with the concurrent entry into force of the 2006 agreement between the country and the United Nations [YUN 2006, p. 870], continued to implement its mandate. Under the terms of the agreement, which set up the Commission as an independent, non-UN organ, the main CICIG objective was to assist, strengthen and support State institutions responsible for investigating and prosecuting crimes allegedly committed by illegal security forces and clandestine security organizations, and other criminal conduct related to those entities.

Communications. On 8 March [A/64/718], Mexico transmitted to the General Assembly the Special Declaration on Guatemala, adopted at the first Latin American and Caribbean Unity Summit (Mayan Riviera, 22–23 February). In the Declaration, the Heads of State and Government of Latin America and the Caribbean thanked the President of Guatemala, Álvaro Colom, for the information he provided on the results of the investigation of the Rosenberg affair (see below) conducted by CICIG, which absolved the President, his wife and his private secretary of the charges made against them.

On 5 November [A/65/582], Guatemala requested the Assembly President to include in the agenda of the Assembly's sixty-fifth (2011) session the item on the situation in Central America. The Assembly included the item on 24 December (see p. 317).

CICIG activities. On 10 December [A/65/618], the Secretary-General updated the Assembly on the work of CICIG. The Commission was beginning its fourth year of operations, and many of its investigations had reached the trial stage. It was investigating 27 cases, and in 29 others had provided technical and investigative support to the Special Prosecutor's Unit—its main counterpart in the Public Prosecutor's Office. The most notable cases included those against former President Alfonso Portillo for illicit enrichment; the investigation into alleged extrajudicial executions committed at the Pavón penitentiary; and the investigation into the murder of attorney Rodrigo Rosenberg in 2009. In the Rosenberg case, in which CICIG acted as a complementary prosecutor, convictions were secured for the crimes of murder, illicit association and illegal possession of firearms.

CICIG promoted legal reforms to strengthen the fight against impunity. One of its proposals contributed to the approval of a 2009 decree reforming the Law on Criminal Jurisdiction in High-Risk Proceedings. In 2010, Congress approved a decree reforming the Code of Criminal Procedure. Many of its proposed legal reforms, however, had not seen substantial progress in Congress. CICIG also prepared thematic reports on issues ranging from illegal adoptions to firearms and munitions.

A number of CICIG investigations had touched upon powerful interests, including within Guatemalan institutions of justice. In that context, CICIG had not been exempt from criticism and had also faced a worrisome security environment. CICIG required strong international backing as it sought to finalize investigations, transfer knowledge and practice to Guatemalan institutions and promote the adoption of a legal framework that enabled a more effective fight against impunity.

Following the resignation of Commissioner Carlos Castresana (Spain) on 7 June, the Secretary-General, on 2 July, appointed Francisco Dall'Anese Ruiz (Costa Rica), the former Attorney-General of Costa Rica, to head the Commission.

In a 6 October letter to the Secretary-General, President Colom, noting that the period remaining in the Commission's mandate was insufficient to achieve the objectives laid out in the 2006 agreement between the United Nations and Guatemala [YUN 2006, p. 870], requested an extension of its mandate until 3 September 2013. The Secretary-General expressed support for such an extension.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/181 [draft: A/65/L.51 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 42].

International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions on the situation in Central America, and particularly resolution 64/7 of 28 October 2009 regarding the activities of the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala, created as a result of the Agreement between the United Nations and the State of Guatemala, which entered into force on 4 September 2007,

Bearing in mind that the Commission has carried out its activities through voluntary contributions of Member States and other donors from the international community and that the Government of Guatemala has provided additional budgetary allotments to State institutions to support their work in collaboration with the Commission,

Recalling that in paragraph 6 of resolution 64/7 the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General to periodically keep the Assembly apprised of the work of the Commission,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the letter dated 10 December 2010 from the Secretary-General regarding the new developments related to the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala, particularly the change in its leadership as well as the request of the Government of Guatemala to extend its mandate for an additional two years until 3 September 2013;

2. Calls upon the Government of Guatemala to continue providing all the support necessary to consolidate the achievements and overcome the challenges facing the work of the Commission as well as to redouble its efforts to strengthen the institutions that buttress the rule of law and the defence of human rights in Guatemala;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States and other donors that have supported the Commission, through voluntary contributions, financial and in kind, and urges them to continue their support;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to periodically keep the General Assembly apprised of the work of the Commission and the implementation of the present resolution.

Nicaragua–Costa Rica

On 28 October [A/65/547], Nicaragua transmitted to the Secretary-General its 26 October reply to a 21 October letter of protest from Costa Rica regarding Nicaragua's dredging operations in the San Juan River. Nicaragua rejected the claims made by Costa Rica, since the clean-up of the river had been carried out in Nicaraguan territory. It protested against the repeated violations of its territory by Costa Rican troops; rejected the incursion into its territory by two armed judicial police officers, who were detained by border patrols and returned to Costa Rica; and proposed that the Binational Commission resume action to increase the number of boundary markers, on the basis of the rights set out in the Jerez-Cañas Boundary Treaty and subsequent Cleveland and Alexander arbitral awards.

On 3 November [A/65/558], Costa Rica transmitted two notes it had sent to Nicaragua on 1 November concerning violations of its territory by Nicaragua in the area of Finca Aragón, Isla Calero, Province of Limón. Costa Rica stated that its flag was removed and replaced by a Nicaraguan flag, and Nicaraguan army personnel had established themselves in that area. Nicaragua's dredging operations in the San Juan River violated Costa Rica's territorial sovereignty and caused environmental damage on Costa Rican soil. The matter of the dredging should be included on the agenda of the next binational meeting. The dredging operations should be suspended and Nicaraguan forces should withdraw from Costa Rican territory.

On 5 November [A/65/561], Costa Rica transmitted a 3 November statement by the President of Costa Rica, Laura Chinchilla Miranda, as well as an account of recent events. According to media reports, Nicaragua wanted to divert to the San Juan River (Nicaraguan waters but authorized for Costa Rican use for civilian purposes) 1,700 cubic metres per second of the flow of the Colorado river, which was entirely Costa Rican. In October, Edén Pastora Gómez, the overseer of the dredging, and Nicaraguan soldiers, on the pretext of dredging work, entered Finca Aragón, in Costa Rican territory. On 21 October, Costa Rica sent law enforcement personnel to the area to evaluate the situation. On 22 October, Costa Rican officials found that an area of about 2,500 square metres of Costa Rican territory had been covered with sediment from dredging. There were signs that Nicaragua was trying to make the San Juan River flow directly into the Los Portillos Lake through an artificial canal, which would result in the removal of the north-west sector of Portillo Island—Costa Rican territory.

On 16 November [A/65/579], Nicaragua transmitted to the Secretary-General the Declaration by the Branches of Government of the Republic of Nicaragua regarding the supposed border dispute with Costa Rica. It stated that following the 2009 Judgment by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) concerning the border between the two countries [YUN 2009, p. 1271], no border dispute existed with Costa Rica. In the face of an Organization of American States (OAS) Permanent Council meeting on 12 November, Nicaragua withdrew from any OAS activity relating to the supposed border dispute, since OAS was a political body, not a court or tribunal, and had no authority to hear any such dispute. Nicaragua would continue to exercise its rights in its national territory, and in the present case the Nicaraguan army had exercised its rights within its territory and at no time had invaded foreign territory. Nicaragua reiterated its right to continue the cleaning and dredging of the San Juan River, as well as its willingness to engage in negotiation to settle the dispute.

On 18 November, Costa Rica instituted proceedings before ICJ against Nicaragua (see p. 1285).

On 22 December [A/65/670], Nicaragua said that, on 21 December, vessels of the Nicaraguan navy detected two Costa Rican vessels entering Nicaraguan waters. On the same day, a Costa Rican Cessna aircraft violated Nicaraguan air space. On 23 December [A/65/673], Nicaragua reaffirmed the violations and rejected Costa Rica's attempt to justify them by alleging a military occupation of Costa Rican territory.

Nicaragua–Honduras

On 26 March [A/64/733], Honduras transmitted to the Secretary-General a letter dated 24 March from Honduras to Nicaragua concerning an incident involving the Honduran vessel Jeimi. Honduras stated that on 20 March, while that vessel was fishing in Honduran waters, the Nicaraguan navy fired several shots at it and a Nicaraguan patrol boat rammed it, killing one fisherman and shipwrecking the other. Honduras requested, through the Secretary-General, a thorough investigation by the Nicaraguan authorities and punishment of those responsible.

On 26 April [A/64/766], Honduras complained about the arbitrary seizure by the Nicaraguan navy on 22 April of the Colombian-flagged vessel Laura Any, which was in the waters of the exclusive economic zone under Honduran jurisdiction. That violation of international law was aimed at demonstrating an artificial and purely formal exercise of control in the area of Serranía, challenging Honduran jurisdiction in the maritime zone in which the seizure took place.

Haiti

In January 2010, Haiti suffered a devastating earthquake that claimed the lives of more than 200,000 victims, including 102 United Nations personnel.

The United Nations response to the earthquake was one of the largest ever mounted. The Security Council twice authorized increasing the force level of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH) to support the immediate recovery, reconstruction and stability efforts. In October, the Council renewed the mandate of MINUSTAH for a further year. Haitian presidential and legislative elections, after being postponed, were held in November. Following a cholera outbreak in October, the United Nations and international partners mounted a response. In December, the Secretary-General announced the creation of an independent panel to investigate the cholera epidemic.

12 January earthquake

On 12 January, Haiti was hit by a 7.0 magnitude earthquake, particularly affecting the capital, Port-au-Prince; Petit Goâve, Grand Goâve and Léogâne; the town of Jacmel; and the town of Miragoâne. According to the Government, 222,750 people (2 per cent of the population) were killed, many thousands were injured or permanently disabled, and 1.5 million were left homeless. The earthquake caused damage and losses estimated at $7.8 billion—slightly more than the country's gross domestic product for 2009. The Secretary-General reported on the earthquake and the United Nations response to the disaster in April [S/2010/200 & Corr.1] and August [A/65/335].

Some 1.17 million persons were internally displaced in the Port-au-Prince area alone. Hundreds of thousands more fled the capital for the rural areas and provincial capitals, placing great stress on local communities and host families. State capacity was seriously affected. Two senators and up to one third of the country's 60,000 civil servants were killed. Many government buildings were destroyed or badly damaged.

The United Nations itself was also affected. The Hotel Christopher, headquarters of MINUSTAH, collapsed, and nearby offices and facilities were severely damaged. A total of 102 United Nations staff lost their lives, including the Secretary-General's Special Representative, Hédi Annabi; the Deputy Special Representative, Luiz Carlos da Costa; the Acting Police Commissioner, Douglas Coates; the Director of Political Affairs, Gerard Le Chevallier; and the Head of the Elections Unit, Marc Plum. The United Nations suffered its greatest single loss of life in its history.

The immediate response was led by the Haitian population. Local communities provided support to the injured and conducted countless rescue efforts, saving thousands of lives. At the same time, the Government and the international community mobilized their response. Within hours of the earthquake, the United Nations and a number of Member States launched emergency relief operations. Specialized military and civilian units undertook search-and-rescue operations, and established field hospitals. The units also supported life-saving assistance efforts and the restoration of key infrastructure. Despite its own losses, MINUSTAH acted as a crucial first responder, opening the major arterial road from the Port-au-Prince airport to the town centre, re-establishing communications and opening its medical facilities to victims.

On 13 January, the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) deployed a disaster assessment and coordination team to identify priority needs. On the same day, the Secretary-General ordered $10 million to be released from the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF) to kick-start the Organization's response. On 14 January, the Secretary-General sent the Assistant Secretary-General for the Office of Operations in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations, Edmond Mulet, to Haiti as his Acting Special Representative.

The United States and Canada began to deploy disaster assistance troops to the most affected areas within 72 hours of the earthquake, and built up to a presence of 18,500 and 2,000 troops, respectively, by the end of January.

In the days following the earthquake, hundreds of bilateral aid agencies, non-governmental organizations and individuals sent emergency assistance. Calls for financial assistance received an overwhelming response. As at 15 April, CERF had allocated $36 million towards the response; the Emergency Relief Response Fund for Haiti, supported by OCHA, had received $83 million; and a revised flash appeal had received $747 million.

The Secretary-General, along with the United Nations Emergency Relief Coordinator, John Holmes, and other senior officials, visited Haiti's disaster-affected areas on 17 January, meeting with Haitian President René Préval, other government officials and representatives from MINUSTAH.

The Secretary-General proposed a surge effort by MINUSTAH to provide additional technical, operational and logistical support in order to support the Government in meeting its responsibilities, and called on the Security Council to support his proposal.

Security Council press statements. In a 13 January press statement [SC/9842], the Security Council conveyed its sympathy and solidarity to all those affected by the earthquake, and expressed its support for the Government and the people of Haiti, and for international efforts to assist Haiti. It expressed its gratitude for the work of MINUSTAH and expressed concern for the situation of its staff and troops, as well as for that of the staff of other UN and international organizations. The Council urged the international community to continue to assist in search-and-rescue operations.

In an 18 January press statement [SC/9846], the Council extended its condolences to the families of Special Representative Annabi, Principal Deputy Special Representative da Costa, Acting United Nations Police Commissioner Coates, and all other members of MINUSTAH and other UN and international organizations who had given their lives. It expressed its support for the Secretary-General's proposal to increase the overall level of MINUSTAH to support the recovery and stability efforts.

Communication. On 18 January [S/2010/27], Mexico transmitted to the Security Council a working document regarding the situation in Haiti.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 January [meeting 6261], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1908(2010). The draft [S/2010/29] was submitted by 21 Member States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on Haiti, in particular resolutions 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004, 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, 1608(2005) of 22 June 2005, 1658(2006) of 14 February 2006, 1702(2006) of 15 August 2006, 1743(2007) of 15 February 2007, 1780(2007) of 15 October 2007, 1840(2008) of 14 October 2008 and 1892(2009) of 13 October 2009,

Expressing its deepest sympathy and solidarity to all those affected by the devastating earthquake of 12 January 2010 in Haiti, and to their families,

Further expressing its deepest gratitude for the work of the staff and troops of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, as well as for the work of the staff of other United Nations and international organizations in Haiti,

Recognizing the dire circumstances and the urgent need for a response,

Welcoming the efforts of Member States to support the Government and people of Haiti and the Mission,

1. Endorses the recommendation made by the Secretary-General to increase the overall force levels of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti to support the immediate recovery, reconstruction and stability efforts;

2. Decides, therefore, that the Mission shall consist of a military component of up to 8,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 3,711 police and that it will keep the new levels of troops and police in the Mission under review, as necessary;

3. Decides also to remain seized of the matter.

General Assembly action. In resolution 64/250 of 22 January (see p. 931), the General Assembly appealed to Member States, UN system bodies, international financial institutions and development agencies to provide support for Haiti's relief, recovery, rehabilitation, reconstruction and development efforts.

Political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (April). The Secretary-General reported in April [S/2010/200 & Corr.1] that the 12 January earthquake interrupted relatively smooth progress towards legislative, presidential and municipal elections scheduled for 2010. Two new parties had emerged: Inité (Unity), President Préval's platform, and Alternative Patriotique pour le Progrès, a coalition that included the Fusion des Sociaux-Démocrates, the Organisation du Peuple en Lutte and Konfederasyon Inité Demokratik. The coalition was considered the principal opposition party. On 27 January, President Préval announced the postponement of the legislative elections scheduled for February.

On 31 March, the Government's Action Plan for National Recovery and Development was presented to an international donor conference at UN Headquarters in New York. Donors pledged more than $9 billion, of which $5 billion was pledged for the 2010–2011 period. Implementation would be guided by the principles adopted at the Ministerial Preparatory Conference on Haiti (Montreal, Canada, 25 January). Despite criticism by the opposition of the Government's handling of the earthquake response, wide consultations by MINUSTAH with political and civil society actors indicated a broad acceptance of the need for political and social stability to allow for reconstruction and to ensure a democratic transfer of power. On 15 April, the Senate adopted the law on the state of emergency, as approved by the Chamber of Deputies on 5 April. The law extended the state of emergency for an 18-month period, and created the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission, giving the executive branch significant powers to implement the reconstruction plan presented at the 31 March donor conference.

The security environment remained generally calm. Initial fears of large-scale looting and violence in the aftermath of the earthquake did not materialize. Nevertheless, a number of crime-related incidents affected the humanitarian effort.

Despite its losses, MINUSTAH made extraordinary efforts to restore its capacity and acted decisively to respond to post-earthquake needs. In the immediate aftermath of the earthquake, MINUSTAH provided vital logistical and administrative support for rescue and relief operations. It conducted search-and-rescue efforts at the former MINUSTAH headquarters and the Montana Hotel, provided security support for humanitarian operations, performed initial damage assessments and cleared critical roads in the Port-au-Prince area. The MINUSTAH Logistics Base in Port-au-Prince, which suffered relatively little damage, became the centre of operations for most UN actors, and provided space and basic facilities to many non-UN humanitarian responders. Given the scale of losses of the national police, MINUSTAH focused on supporting the capacity of the police to maintain security and public order. Increased patrols and security at key locations, including banks and warehouses, helped to create confidence, deter looting and foster re-establishment of economic activity. As settlements for displaced persons expanded, the focus of police activity shifted to protection in those locations, especially for the most vulnerable. Noting the vulnerability of displaced women and girls, and the loss of many prominent gender activists and senior cadres of the Ministry in Charge of Women and Women's Rights, MINUSTAH provided technical support for integrating gender concerns into post-disaster activities.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council authorize an expansion of the MINUSTAH police component to help the Haitian National Police establish a sustainable and visible police presence, including to protect camps for internally displaced persons (IDPs) and maintain an environment conducive to free and fair elections; and maintain capable special national police units to detain dangerous escapees and confront the risk of gang violence. To that end, he recommended an increase of 680 police personnel, representing 200 UN police and three self-sustaining formed police units, in addition to the force levels authorized by the Council in its resolution 1908(2010).

Security Council consideration (April). Addressing the Council on 28 April [S/PV.6303], the Secretary-General's Special Representative and head of MINUSTAH, Mr. Mulet, reported that the MINUSTAH troops and police provided security throughout the country and logistical support for the distribution of assistance to over 1 million individuals. The provision of temporary shelter and sanitation facilities were the main priorities. Haiti's return to stability depended on adherence to the political and electoral timetable to enable a constitutional handover of power in February 2011. The challenge for the United Nations was to help create an environment in which the outpouring of international goodwill and generosity could be translated into much-needed practical support.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 4 June [meeting 6330], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1927(2010). The draft [S/2010/277] was submitted by Argentina, Austria, Brazil, Canada, Chile, France, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Spain, the United States and Uruguay.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on Haiti, in particular resolutions 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004, 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, 1608(2005) of 22 June 2005, 1658(2006) of 14 February 2006, 1702(2006) of 15 August 2006, 1743(2007) of 15 February 2007, 1780(2007)

of 15 October 2007, 1840(2008) of 14 October 2008, 1892(2009) of 13 October 2009 and 1908(2010) of 19 January 2010,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Haiti,

Recognizing the significant devastation that has been suffered by the Government and people of Haiti, expressing concern regarding the new challenges and threats as a result of the earthquake of 12 January 2010, and stressing the need for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti to continue to focus its work on ensuring Haiti's security and stability as currently mandated by the Security Council,

Sharing the Secretary-General's assessment of the impact of the earthquake, which has not destroyed the gains towards stabilization made in the past few years but has created new obstacles as well as new opportunities,

Recognizing the need for expanded assistance by the international community to the Government of Haiti in order to allow State institutions to continue operations, provide basic services and build State capacity, and acknowledging the valuable supporting role that the Mission can play in this regard,

Welcoming the establishment of priorities by the Government of Haiti in its Action Plan for National Recovery and Development of Haiti presented at the International Donors' Conference on 31 March 2010, and encouraging the international community to align its activities with the Action Plan,

Welcoming also the significant contributions of the international community, particularly at the International Donors' Conference on the theme "Towards a New Future for Haiti", held in New York on 31 March 2010, and urging donors to fulfil their pledges in a timely manner,

Commending the extraordinary efforts undertaken by the United Nations to respond to the earthquake, recognizing the critical role of the Mission in ensuring stability and security in Haiti, and also recognizing the complementary roles that the Mission and the United Nations country team have fulfilled to date in assisting Haiti in its recovery efforts, and reaffirming the authority of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Haiti in the co-ordination and conduct of all activities of United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in Haiti,

Stressing the leading role of the Government of Haiti in its post-disaster recovery and reconstruction process, and underlining the necessity for increased coordination and complementary efforts among all United Nations actors and other relevant stakeholders in assisting the Government in this regard,

Reaffirming the need for the Haitian authorities to continue their efforts to promote and protect human rights, including by strengthening national human rights institutions, as well as putting an end to impunity and ensuring the rule of law and security,

Stressing the importance of holding municipal, legislative and presidential elections in a timely manner, welcoming the intention of the Haitian authorities to do so, and encouraging all political parties and relevant stakeholders to work together towards this end and to promote the participation of women in the electoral process,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 22 April 2010, and the recommendations contained therein,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, as described in section I of paragraph 7 of resolution 1542(2004),

1. Authorizes the deployment of a further 680 police in addition to the police strength authorized by resolution 1908(2010), as a temporary surge capacity with clearly defined objectives and a particular focus on building the capacity of the Haitian National Police;

2. Decides, therefore, that the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti shall consist of a military component of up to 8,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 4,391 police and that it will keep the new levels of troops and police in the Mission under close and regular review, including through the electoral period and subsequent constitutional transfer of power, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his upcoming report to the Security Council an assessment of the implementation of resolution 1908(2010) and the present resolution;

3. Reiterates that the ownership and primary responsibility for stabilization and development lies with the Government and people of Haiti, and recognizes the supporting role of the Mission in this regard;

4. Recognizes the need for the Mission to assist the Government of Haiti in providing adequate protection of the population, with particular attention to the needs of internally displaced persons and other vulnerable groups, especially women and children, including through additional joint community policing in the camps, along with strengthened mechanisms to address sexual and gender-based violence; and to tackle the risk of a resurgence in gang violence, organized crime and trafficking in children;

5. Requests the Mission to continue, within its current mandate, its collaboration with the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat and the United Nations country team in supporting the humanitarian and recovery efforts, and further encourages all actors to continue to engage in joint planning and coordination at the national and local levels;

6. Underscores the importance of the planning documents for the military and police components, such as the concept of operations and rules of engagement, being regularly updated, as appropriate, and in line with the provisions of all its relevant resolutions, and requests the Secretary-General to report on them to the Council and troop- and police-contributing countries;

7. Encourages the Mission to provide logistical support and technical expertise, within available means, to assist the Government of Haiti, as requested, to continue operations to build the capacity of its rule of law institutions at the national and local levels, and to speed up the implementation of the Government's resettlement strategy for displaced persons, in the knowledge that such measures are temporary and will be phased out as Haitian national capacity grows;

8. Requests the Mission to continue its support to the Government of Haiti and to the Provisional Electoral Council, as requested, in the preparation and conduct of Haiti's elections, and to coordinate international electoral assistance to Haiti in cooperation with other international stakeholders, including the Organization of American States;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Ad Hoc Advisory Group. The Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti, mandated by Economic and Social Council decision 2004/322 [YUN 2004, p. 939] to follow and advise on the long-term development of the country, submitted a July report [E/2010/102 & Corr.1] based principally on the findings of the Group's visit to Haiti (16–19 June) (see p. 916).

By resolution 2010/28 of 23 July (see p. 917), the Economic and Social Council extended the Advisory Group's mandate until the Council's substantive session in 2012, with the purpose of following and providing advice on Haiti's long-term development strategy for socio-economic recovery and reconstruction.

Report of Secretary-General (September). The Secretary-General reported in September [S/2010/446] that despite a fragile political environment, progress was made towards holding elections. At the request of President Préval, the Secretary-General in April dispatched to Haiti an electoral feasibility mission, which concluded that presidential, legislative and municipal elections were technically possible before the end of 2010. On 24 June, the Government issued decrees giving the Provisional Electoral Council a mandate to conduct presidential elections, and establishing 28 November as the date of presidential and legislative elections.

On 16 April, the Government issued a decree extending by 18 months the state of emergency declared on 16 January and renewed on 31 January. The Senate adopted an amendment to the electoral law on 8 May, as previously approved by the Chamber of Deputies, allowing the President to remain in power until 14 May 2011, should presidential elections not be held in November. On 10 May, the mandates of all the members of the Chamber of Deputies and one third of the Senate expired, leaving only 19 senators to exercise legislative functions. Draft legislation referred to the Senate by the Chamber of Deputies for approval, prior to its dissolution, remained pending because of political deadlock between opposition senators and those of the Initié party, triggered by the controversial amendment to the state of emergency law approved by the Senate on 10 May. The amendment paved the way for the establishment of the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission and provided exceptional powers to the executive branch, including requisitioning of land and property. MINUSTAH, through the good offices of the Special Representative, conducted consultations with a wide range of actors to address concerns and build trust in the political process.

Security in the camps for IDPs—in particular the vulnerability of women and children and the extent of sexual and gender-based violence—was of concern, especially in camps adjacent to traditional slum areas such as Cité Soleil and Martissant.

The Government estimated the number of IDPs at 1.3 million, spread across some 1,300 spontaneous settlement sites in Port-au-Prince, Jacmel, Léogâne and in Artibonite Department. Of the more than 600,000 people believed to have left Port-au-Prince in the wake of the earthquake, the majority were thought to have returned. The Ministry of Public Works, with international support, assessed the structural damage of some 230,000 buildings, including over 150,000 residences. Of those, 50.2 per cent were deemed to be structurally sound, some 27.3 per cent were assessed to need some repair, and 22.4 per cent were recommended for demolition.

More than six months after the earthquake, the immediate humanitarian needs of the displaced population in Port-au-Prince and the regions had largely been addressed. Some 4.3 million people received food aid and more than 1.5 million received emergency shelter. More than 90 per cent of IDPs in the capital had access to health clinics, and 2.1 million people received non-food items, including hygiene kits. A total of 11,000 latrines were installed, sufficiently serving the majority of the displaced. Water supply continued to reach 1.2 million people and the nutrition situation remained under the emergency threshold.

As at July, 80 per cent of primary schools in Port-au-Prince had reopened, compared with 72 per cent in Léogâne and 100 per cent in Petit-Goâve and Grand-Goâve, as well as Jacmel. The Secretary-General's Special Envoy for Haiti, former United States President William J. Clinton, and the Deputy Special Envoy, Paul Farmer, identified and sought to address gaps in the UN response to the earthquake. Those efforts included coordination work in the management of debris, the construction of hurricane and transitional shelters, strengthening protection of women and children against violence, and initiatives in the education, energy and health sectors. The Interim Haiti Recovery Commission was created by presidential decree on 21 April to coordinate and oversee recovery and reconstruction efforts under the co-chairmanship of the Prime Minister, Jean-Max Bellerive, and former President Clinton. Its role was to provide coordination and strategic direction by linking the work of line ministries and the Ministry of Planning.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1927(2010), and at the request of President Préval, MINUSTAH was providing technical, security and logistical support to the Government and the Provisional Electoral Council in the preparation of presidential and legislative elections, and had begun to coordinate international electoral assistance, in cooperation with OAS and the Caribbean Community (CARICOM). The MINUSTAH military component delivered critical support to relief and recovery efforts and refocused its work on three priority areas: ensuring a secure and stable environment, particularly through the protection of internally displaced persons and host communities; preparing for natural disaster response; and providing support to the elections. A total of 1,723 military personnel, of the additional 2,000 authorized by the Security Council in resolution 1908(2010), had deployed as at 17 August. As at 15 August, 1,181 individual police officers and 1,838 formed police unit personnel were deployed, for a total strength of 3,019. The surge permitted the police component to expand its tasks, with particular focus on protecting displaced people and vulnerable groups, and building the capacity of the national police.

MINUSTAH continued its support to the Ministry of the Interior and State institutions at the subnational level through its regional offices. In particular, it helped the Ministry of the Interior prepare the 140 municipal budgets for the new fiscal year, and jointly identified capacity-strengthening requirements to support the decentralization process. MINUSTAH supported the Government in addressing child protection issues and continued to train police officers on the protection of and response to vulnerable and displaced children.

Security Council consideration (September).

Addressing the Council on 13 September [S/PV.6382], Special Representative Mulet said that the security situation in Haiti remained calm, but fragile, and the Government faced long- and short-term challenges, such as organizing elections, maintaining order in the camps set up for displaced persons, dealing with reconstruction and relocating some 1.3 million displaced persons. Haiti had to continue to rely on the support of the international community. At the same time, the Government had developed its own capacity with respect to the coordination of humanitarian and recovery activities.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 14 October [meeting 6399], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1944(2010). The draft [S/2010/519] was submitted by Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Ecuador, France, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Spain, the United States and Uruguay.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on Haiti, in particular resolutions 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004, 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, 1608(2005) of 22 June 2005, 1658(2006) of 14 February 2006, 1702(2006) of 15 August 2006, 1743(2007) of 15 February 2007, 1780(2007) of 15 October 2007, 1840(2008) of 14 October 2008, 1892(2009) of 13 October 2009, 1908(2010) of 19 January 2010 and 1927(2010) of 4 June 2010,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Haiti,

Recognizing the significant devastation that has been suffered by the Government and people of Haiti, expressing its concern regarding the new challenges and threats as a result of the earthquake of 12 January 2010, sharing the Secretary-General's assessment that the earthquake has not destroyed the gains towards stabilization made in the past few years but has created new obstacles as well as new opportunities, and stressing the need for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti to continue to focus its work on ensuring Haiti's security and stability as currently mandated by the Security Council, including in the context of the upcoming presidential and legislative elections,

Calling upon the Government of Haiti and all the other relevant Haitian actors to ensure the holding of credible and legitimate presidential and legislative elections, due to be held on 28 November 2010, which will further consolidate democracy, allow for the completion of constitutional reform and contribute to the reconstruction process, and emphasizing the need to continue to promote the participation of women in the electoral process,

Emphasizing that progress in the recovery and reconstruction of Haiti is crucial to achieving lasting stability, and reiterating the need for security to be accompanied by social and economic development,

Stressing the leading role of the Government of Haiti in its post-disaster recovery and reconstruction process and underlining the necessity for increased coordination and complementary efforts among all United Nations actors and other relevant stakeholders in assisting the Government in this regard, and welcoming the establishment of the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission and the Haiti Reconstruction Fund, which play a central role in the medium- and long-term reconstruction efforts in Haiti,

Welcoming the creation of the ad hoc Presidential Commission on Resettlement established to coordinate all stakeholders involved in the relocation and resettlement of internally displaced persons,

Calling upon donors to fulfil without delay the pledges made at the International Donors' Conference entitled "Towards a New Future for Haiti", held in New York on 31 March 2010, with a view to promptly producing tangible and visible reconstruction dividends,

Emphasizing the role of regional organizations in the ongoing process of stabilization and reconstruction of Haiti, and calling upon the Mission to continue to work closely with regional and subregional organizations, international financial institutions and other stakeholders, in particular the Organization of American States and the Caribbean Community,

Acknowledging the continued support of the Organization of American States to modernize the Haitian voter registry, and stressing the importance of updating the voter list following the devastation caused by the earthquake of 12 January 2010,

Recognizing the interconnected nature of the challenges in Haiti, reaffirming that sustainable progress on security, the rule of law and institutional reform, national reconciliation and development is mutually reinforcing, and welcoming the continuing efforts of the Government of Haiti and the international community to address these challenges,

Expressing its concern over the rise in the number of weapons in circulation, the increase in drug trafficking and the security situation in camps for internally displaced persons, and further expressing its concern over sexual and gender-based crimes in Haiti,

Recognizing that strengthening national human rights institutions and respect for human rights, due process, combating criminality and sexual and gender-based violence, and putting an end to impunity are essential to ensuring the rule of law and security in Haiti,

Commending the extraordinary efforts undertaken by the United Nations to respond to the earthquake, recognizing the critical role of the Mission in ensuring stability and security in Haiti and also recognizing the complementary roles that the Mission and the United Nations country team have fulfilled to date in assisting Haiti in its recovery efforts, and reaffirming the authority of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Haiti in the co-ordination and conduct of all activities of United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in Haiti,

Commending the Mission for continuing to assist the Government of Haiti to ensure a secure and stable environment, expressing its gratitude to the personnel of the Mission and to their countries, and paying tribute to those injured or killed in the line of duty,

Calling upon the Government of Haiti, in coordination with the international community, to continue to advance security sector reform, in particular as called for in the Haitian National Police Reform Plan adopted by the Government,

Underlining the need to further strengthen the Haitian judicial and correctional systems, in accordance with the national justice reform plan, including judicial institution modernization and improvement in the access to justice, including through the establishment of new legal aid offices,

Welcoming the efforts of the former President of the United States of America, Mr. William J. Clinton, as the United Nations Special Envoy for Haiti, to enhance the United Nations response to the earthquake, in both humanitarian and development operations as well as tracking aid pledges and disbursement of funds, liaising with the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission and the international financial institutions, working to ensure coherence across United Nations operations in Haiti, and contributing to better coordination among non-governmental organizations, in line with Haitian priorities,

Stressing the importance of a strong coordination among the Office of the Special Envoy and other United Nations entities and Member States, and stressing the need for co-ordination among all international actors on the ground,

Underlining the need for the implementation of highly effective and visible labour-intensive projects that help to create jobs and deliver basic social services,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 1 September 2010,

Determining that the situation in Haiti continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region, despite the progress achieved thus far,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, as described in section I of paragraph 7 of resolution 1542(2004),

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, as contained in resolutions 1542(2004), 1608(2005), 1702(2006), 1743(2007), 1780(2007), 1840(2008), 1892(2009), 1908(2010) and 1927(2010), until 15 October 2011, with the intention of further renewal;

2. Also decides to maintain the current Mission overall force levels, which consist of a military component of up to 8,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 4,391 police, and calls upon the Secretary-General to conduct a comprehensive assessment of the security environment following the elections and transfer of power to a new Government in 2011, as contained in paragraph 56 of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Recognizes the ownership and primary responsibility of the Government and the people of Haiti over all aspects of the country's stabilization, welcomes the steps taken by the Mission to provide logistical and technical expertise, within available means, to assist the Government of Haiti, as requested, to continue operations to build the capacity of its rule of law institutions at the national and local levels and to speed up the implementation of the Government's resettlement strategy for displaced persons, in the knowledge that such measures are temporary and will be phased out as Haitian capacity grows, and calls upon the Mission to proceed swiftly with activities in this regard as recommended by the Secretary-General;

4. Also recognizes that the successful holding of free, fair, inclusive and transparent presidential and legislative elections in accordance with the constitutional timetable is a key condition for the consolidation of a stable political environment in which recovery and reconstruction efforts can progress, reaffirms its call upon the Mission to support the political process under way in Haiti, including through the good offices of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Haiti, and encourages the Mission to continue its support to the Government of Haiti and to the Provisional Electoral Council in the preparation and conduct of Haiti's presidential and legislative elections and to coordinate international electoral assistance to Haiti in cooperation with other international stakeholders, including the Organization of American States and the Caribbean Community;

5. Calls upon all donors and international and non-governmental organizations to coordinate their efforts and to work closely with the Interim Haiti Recovery Commission in order to strengthen the capacity of the Government of Haiti to fulfil the Action Plan for National Recovery and Development of Haiti;

6. Welcomes ongoing efforts by the Mission to increase coordination with the Haitian National Police and to expand its assistance to border management efforts in order to deter illicit activities, and calls upon Haiti's international and regional partners to intensify their assistance to the Government of Haiti in this regard, as requested;

7. Requests the United Nations country team, and calls upon all actors, to complement security and development operations undertaken by the Government of Haiti with the support of the Mission with activities aimed at effectively improving the living conditions of the concerned populations, in particular women and children;

8. Requests the Mission to continue to implement quick-impact projects that further enhance the trust of the Haitian population towards the Mission;

9. Encourages the Haitian authorities to take full advantage of that support, notably in enhancing Haitian National Police capacity, modernizing key legislation and in the implementation of the national justice reform plan, to take the necessary steps, including nominations, that will allow superior judicial institutions to function adequately, and to address the issue of prolonged pretrial detentions and prison overcrowding, with special regard to children;

10. Calls upon the Government of Haiti, with the support of the Mission, to develop the next iteration of the Haitian National Police reform plan to ensure continuity upon the expiration of the current plan and the strategic plan of the National Prison Administration and encourages their implementation, and requests the Mission to continue to support vetting, mentoring and training of the police and corrections personnel and strengthening the institutional and operational capacities of the correctional services;

11. Welcomes the resumption of training of recruits for the Haitian National Police, and stresses the importance of maintaining and increasing the support of the international community for capacity-building of the National Police;

12. Encourages the Mission to continue assisting the Government of Haiti in providing adequate protection to the civilian population, with particular attention to the needs of internally displaced persons and other vulnerable groups, especially women and children, including through joint community policing in the camps, along with strengthened mechanisms to address sexual and gender-based violence;

13. Also encourages the Mission to assist the Government of Haiti in tackling the risk of a resurgence in gang violence, organized crime, drug trafficking and trafficking in children;

14. Strongly condemns the grave violations against children affected by armed violence, as well as widespread rape and other sexual abuse of women and girls, and calls upon the Government of Haiti, with the support of the Mission and the United Nations country team, to continue to promote and protect the rights of women and children as set out in Security Council resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the measures necessary to ensure full compliance of all Mission personnel with the United Nations zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse, and to keep the Council informed, and urges troop- and police-contributing countries to ensure that acts involving their personnel are properly investigated and punished;

16. Reaffirms the human rights mandate of the Mission, calls upon the Haitian authorities to continue their efforts to promote and protect human rights, and calls upon the Mission to continue to provide human rights training to the Haitian National Police and other relevant institutions, including the correctional services;

17. Welcomes the important work done by the Mission in support of urgent needs in Haiti, encourages the Mission, within its mandate, to continue to make full use of existing means and capabilities, including its engineers, with a view to further enhancing stability in the country, and requests the Mission to develop its longer-term planning with a view to encouraging a Haitian-led effort to further enhance stability in the country;

18. Requests the Mission to continue to pursue its expanded community violence reduction approach, adapting the programme to the changing requirements of the post-earthquake Haitian context with a particular focus on the displaced and those living in violence-affected neighbourhoods;

19. Also requests the Mission to continue to support the Haitian authorities in their efforts to control the flow of small arms, including labour-intensive projects, the development of a weapons registry, the revision of current laws on importation and possession of arms, reform of the weapons permit system and the development and implementation of a national community policing doctrine;

20. Underscores the importance of planning documents for the military and police components, such as the concept of operations and rules of engagement, being regularly updated, as appropriate, and in line with the provisions of all its relevant resolutions, and requests the Secretary-General to report on them to the Council and troop- and police-contributing countries;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council on the implementation of the mandate of the Mission, semi-annually and no later than forty-five days prior to its expiration;

22. Also requests the Secretary-General to include in his reports a comprehensive assessment of threats to security in Haiti and give particular attention to the protective environment for all, in particular women and children, and progress in the sustainable resettlement of displaced persons, and to propose, as appropriate, options to reconfigure the composition of the Mission;

23. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Year-end developments

In a later report [S/2011/183], the Secretary-General said that a first round of presidential and legislative elections was held on 28 November. The elections were marred by intimidation, fraud and, following the preliminary announcement of the results on 7 December, violence and civil unrest in some parts of the country, including Port-au-Prince.

During the period leading up to election day, there were continued reports of intimidation by, and violence between, rival campaign supporters of all candidates—although the majority of the supporters were linked to Inité, the party in power. The use of State funds to promote the campaign of Inité's presidential candidate, Jude Célestin, was reported.

On election day, 14 of the presidential candidates jointly declared the elections invalid five hours prior to the closing of the polls because of alleged rigging committed by the Government and Inité-aligned officials. On 7 December, amid allegations of electoral fraud and calls for cancellation, as well as demonstrations by supporters of various candidates, the Provisional Electoral Council announced the preliminary results of the first round of the presidential race, placing Mirlande Manigat (Rassemblement des dé- mocrates nationaux progressistes) and Mr. Célestin in first and second place, respectively. On the same day, Ms. Manigat and Michel Martelly (Repons Peyizan) retracted their call for the annulment of the elections. Many of the major cities, including Port-au-Prince, experienced civil unrest, with demonstrations against the electoral authorities, as well as against the Government of President Préval and the candidacy of Mr. Célestin. Mr. Martelly and his supporters employed aggressive rhetoric against the alleged fraud. Violence and intimidation continued for three days, during which commercial and administrative activities in much of the country were halted. Between 7 and 10 December, mobs effectively closed down several towns across the country. At least four Haitians were killed and another 20 injured.

During that tense period, MINUSTAH troops guarded Government installations and Mission premises and personnel. The Special Representative engaged in intensive talks with President Préval, political, business and civil society leaders, and members of the international community to find a solution to the political impasse; address widespread criticism of the Government's handling of the elections and the subsequent crisis; and call for calm in a highly volatile political environment.

On 14 December, President Préval requested OAS to send a team of technical experts, under the authority of the head of the OAS-CARICOM joint electoral observation mission, which had the lead responsibility for electoral observation, to assist in the electoral verification process and the process of legal challenges to the preliminary results. Following that request, the Provisional Electoral Council on 19 December announced a delay in the final publication of the results of the elections, which had been due to be announced the following day. The OAS mission began its work on 31 December.

Security Council press statement. By a press statement of 10 December [SC/10110], Security Council members expressed their concern at incidents of violence that followed the announcement of preliminary election results; called upon candidates, their supporters, political parties and other political actors to remain calm, refrain from violence and resolve any electoral disputes through legal mechanisms; underscored their concern about allegations of fraud; and called on all political forces to ensure that the will of the people was reflected in the outcome of the election.

Cholera outbreak. The Secretary-General also reported that an outbreak of cholera occurred in October. The number of cases grew quickly due to unprotected water sources, poor sanitation and hygiene practices, floods, and population mobility. The epidemic spread to all of the country's ten departments, killing more than 2,000 people in less than two months. The authorities, the United Nations and international partners mounted a rapid response, which helped to limit the number of deaths. MINUSTAH contributed to cholera mitigation efforts through the installation of 4,000 water dialysis filters in exposed communities in the Artibonite valley, Saint-Marc, Mirebalais, Cap-Haïtien, Gonaïves, Jacmel and Port-au-Prince. The filters provided daily drinking water to more than 1 million people. As part of the international response to the epidemic, MINUSTAH provided engineering support for the establishment of cholera treatment centres. It also participated in a massive distribution of family hygiene kits, water purification tablets and oral rehydration salts.

Violent public demonstrations in the North and Centre Departments took place in November, due, in part, to the perception that MINUSTAH might have been responsible for the outbreak of cholera. Armed groups damaged or destroyed UN vehicles and premises in Cap-Haïtien and Hinche. The public perception that MINUSTAH peacekeepers deployed in the Centre Department had possibly introduced cholera negatively affected the image of the Mission. MINUSTAH reviewed the sanitation practices in all of its facilities and began internal investigations.

General Assembly action. On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the item on the situation of democracy and human rights in Haiti would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

MINUSTAH

In 2010, the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), established by Security Council resolution 1542(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 294], maintained its focus on ensuring a secure and stable environment, supporting the electoral process and reform of rule-of-law structures, strengthening State institutions, providing humanitarian and development assistance, and protecting and promoting human rights. MINUSTAH was based in Port-au-Prince. Its Head, the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Haiti, Hédi Annabi (Tunisia), was killed in the 12 January earthquake. He was succeeded by Edmond Mulet (Guatemala). By resolution 1944(2010), the Council extended the MINUSTAH mandate to 15 October 2011.

Appointments. On 8 March [S/2010/131], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Major General Luiz Guilherme Paul Cruz (Brazil) to the post of MINUSTAH Force Commander, replacing Major General Floriano Peixoto (Brazil), who would complete his tour of duty on 9 April. The Council took note of that intention on 10 March [S/2010/132].

On 26 March [S/2010/160], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Mr. Mulet as his Special Representative and Head of MINUSTAH. The Council took note of that intention on 29 March [S/2010/161].

Activities

During 2010, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on MINUSTAH activities and developments in Haiti for the periods from 1 September 2009 to 15 April 2010 [S/2010/200 & Corr.1] and from 16 April to 31 August [S/2010/446]. A later report [S/2011/183] covered activities for the remainder of the year. In addition to political and security aspects (see above), the reports summarized MINUSTAH activities dealing with humanitarian and recovery efforts; preparation for elections; protection of vulnerable groups; community violence reduction; support to State institutions; justice; corrections; human rights; gender issues; child protection; HIV/AIDS; public information; the conduct and discipline of UN personnel; and mission support.

Financing

In March [A/64/728], the Secretary-General reported that the operational requirements of MINUSTAH had increased following the earthquake, resulting in net additional requirements of $120,641,800 for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010. In April, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) [A/64/660/Add.10] recommended that the General Assembly authorize those requirements, in addition to the amount of $611,751,200 already appropriated for the same period for the maintenance of MINUSTAH under Assembly resolution 63/294 [YUN 2009, p. 327].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 May [meeting 86], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/64/774], adopted resolution 64/264 without vote [agenda item 155].

Financing arrangements for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010

The General Assembly,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support the continuation of a peaceful and constitutional political process and the maintenance of a secure and stable environment in Haiti,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for an initial period of six months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1892(2009) of 13 October 2009, by which the Council decided that the Mission would consist of a military component of up to 6,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 2,211 police and extended the mandate of the Mission until 15 October 2010,

Recalling further Security Council resolution 1908(2010) of 19 January 2010, by which the Council endorsed the increase in the overall force levels of the Mission to support the immediate recovery, reconstruction and stability efforts and decided that the Mission would consist of a military component of up to 8,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 3,711 police,

Recalling its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 58/311 of 18 June 2004 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 63/294 of 30 June 2009,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006 and 61/276 of 29 June 2007, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti as at 31 March 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 105.2 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolutions 59/296, 60/266 and 61/276;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financing arrangements for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010

14. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010 in a total amount not exceeding 120,641,800 dollars for the operation of the Mission;

Financing of the commitment authority

15. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 120,641,800 dollars for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009 and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

16. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

17. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

18. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

19. Decides to keep under review during its sixty-fourth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti".

The performance report on the MINUSTAH budget for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/554] showed expenditures of $574,401,700 against a total appropriation of $574,916,500, leaving an unencumbered balance of $514,800 and other income and adjustments in the amount of $8,524,000. ACABQ [A/64/660/Add.16] recommended that the unencumbered balance as well as other income and adjustments be credited to Member States.

In April [A/64/764] the Secretary-General submitted a request for commitment authority in the amount of $380,402,700 for the financing of MINUSTAH for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010. ACABQ [A/64/660/Add.16] recommended that the Assembly authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments not exceeding an amount of $375,000,000.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 June [meeting 101], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/774/Add.1], adopted resolution 64/278 without vote [agenda item 155].

Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the Mission and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support continuation of a peaceful and constitutional political process and the maintenance of a secure and stable environment in Haiti,

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

11. Takes note of paragraph 15 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and decides to revert to the issue of reclassification of existing posts in the context of the proposed budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

12. Also takes note of paragraphs 21 and 24 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

15. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009

16. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009;

Estimates for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010

17. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 in a total amount not exceeding 380 million dollars for the operation of the Mission;

Financing of the commitment authority

18. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 221,666,700 dollars for the period from 1 July to 15 October 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

19. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 4,794,900 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the period from 1 July to 15 October 2010;

20. Further decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 158,333,300 dollars for the period from 16 October to 31 December 2010, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010, as set out in resolution 64/248, subject to a decision by the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

21. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 20 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 3,425,000 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the period from 16 October to 31 December 2010;

Estimates for the support account for peacekeeping operations and the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

22. Also decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti the amount of 23,041,700 dollars for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, comprising 19,514,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 3,527,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

23. Further decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 23,041,700 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in resolution 64/249, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in resolution 64/248;

24. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 23 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,898,000 dollars, comprising the prorated share of 1,615,800 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 282,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

25. Also decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 9,038,800 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 61/243 of 22 December 2006, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2009, as set out in Assembly resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006;

26. Further decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 9,038,800 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 25 above;

27. Decides that the increase in the estimated staff assessment income of 167,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2009 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 9,038,800 dollars referred to in paragraphs 25 and 26 above;

28. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

29. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

30. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

31. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti".

In October [A/65/535], the Secretary-General submitted the MINUSTAH budget for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, which amounted to $865,313,200 and provided for the deployment of 8,940 military personnel, 1,451 UN police officers, 2,940 formed police personnel, 731 international staff, 1,478 national staff and 227 UN Volunteers, including temporary positions. In November [A/65/586], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly appropriate an amount of $853,827,400, inclusive of the amount of $380 million previously authorized and in addition to the amount of $23,041,700 appropriated under resolution 64/278.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/65/655], adopted resolution 65/256 A without vote [agenda item 153].

Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support continuation of a peaceful and constitutional political process and the maintenance of a secure and stable environment in Haiti,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for an initial period of six months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1944(2010) of 14 October 2010, by which the Council decided to extend the mandate of the Mission until 15 October 2011 and to maintain the current overall force level, which comprises a military component of up to 8,940 troops of all ranks and a police component of up to 4,391 police,

Recalling further its resolution 58/315 of 1 July 2004,

Recalling its resolution 58/311 of 18 June 2004 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 64/278 of 24 June 2010,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the financial resources necessary to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolutions 59/296 of 22 June 2005, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and 64/269 of 24 June 2010, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti as at 30 November 2010, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 213.0 million United States dollars, representing some 8 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only fourteen Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that proposed peacekeeping budgets are based on the relevant legislative mandates;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Stresses the importance of hiring Haitian nationals against national posts in the Mission, taking into account the need to promote national capacity-building and in order to bring to the Mission experience and knowledge of the local culture, language, traditions and institutions, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to ensure accurate and timely posting of vacancy announcements for national staff on the Mission website;

11. Expresses deep concern over the continuing high vacancy rate in the Mission, especially in the National temporary positions, and its negative impact on the work of the Mission;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to speed up the recruitment process in order to fill vacancies in an expeditious and efficient manner, in particular in National temporary positions;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Mission increases procurement opportunities for local vendors;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure the efficient, expeditious and full implementation of the total amount allocated to quick-impact projects for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, in submitting his next budget proposal for the Mission, to fully review current needs assessment on the ground regarding quick-impact projects, taking into account the related guidelines of the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat on quick-impact projects;

16. Also requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the coordination among the Mission, the United Nations country team and other United Nations entities, including in addressing the root causes of unexpected emergencies, such as the situation resulting from the cholera outbreak;

17. Notes that no provision for resources has been included in the budget for 2010/11 to cover expenses relating to the support provided by the Mission to ensure the welfare and well-being of personnel of the Mission in the context of the cholera outbreak, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen efforts in this regard;

18. Recognizes the important role of the expanded community violence reduction approach in the post-earthquake context, in particular in assisting the displaced people and those living in violence-affected neighbourhoods;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to make use of the resources available for provision of logistical and technical expertise to assist the Government of Haiti, as mandated by Security Council resolutions 1927(2010) of 4 June 2010 and 1944(2010) of 14 October 2010, to proceed swiftly with activities in this regard;

20. Decides to allocate the amount of 1,563,905 dollars for the provision of support to the Office of the United Nations Special Envoy for Haiti;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of resolutions 59/296, 60/266, 61/276 and 64/269;

22. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

23. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011

24. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti the amount of 853,827,400 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, inclusive of the amount of 380 million dollars previously authorized for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010, and in addition to the total amount of 23,041,700 dollars previously appropriated for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011 under the terms of General Assembly resolution 64/278;

Financing of the appropriation

25. Also decides, taking into account the amount of 380 million dollars already apportioned for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2010 under the terms of its resolution 64/278, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 473,827,400 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 64/249 of 24 December 2009, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2010 and 2011, as set out in Assembly resolution 64/248 of 24 December 2009;

26. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 25 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 9,094,700 dollars, representing the estimated additional staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2010 to 30 June 2011;

27. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel participating in the Mission under the auspices of the United Nations, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

29. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

30. Decides to keep under review during its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti".

On 24 December, by decision 65/544, the Assembly decided that the item on the financing of MINUSTAH would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-fifth (2011) session.

Other issues

Colombia

Children and armed conflict. The Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict reported in September [S/AC.51/2010/3] that at its twenty-second meeting on 12 October 2009, it examined the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict in Colombia [YUN 2009, p. 329]; the Vice President of Colombia participated in the subsequent discussion. The Working Group agreed to address a public statement to the parties to armed conflict in Colombia that had been listed in the annexes to the Secretary-General's annual report on children and armed conflict [A/64/742-S/2010/181], urging them to ensure that children were not used in any military operation or any other violent action; end immediately rape and other sexual violence and killing and maiming of children; stop the use of anti-personnel mines and remove unexploded ordnance; release all abducted children, facilitate their return to their families and communities, and end and prevent abduction; cease attacks or threats of attacks against schools and educational facilities and respect the civilian status of schools; and ensure unhindered and safe access for the provision of humanitarian assistance and child protection. The Group recommended that the Security Council President transmit letters to the Government of Colombia and to the Secretary-General, and agreed to send a letter to donors.

Cuba–United States

In response to General Assembly resolution 64/6 [YUN 2009, p. 330], the Secretary-General in August [A/65/83 & Add.1] submitted information received as at 9 July 2010 from 134 States, the European Union and 26 UN bodies and specialized agencies on the implementation of the resolution, by which the Assembly had called on States to refrain from the unilateral application of economic and trade measures against other States, and urged them to repeal or invalidate such measures.

Communications. Cuba and Mexico, by letters of 25 February [A/64/688] and 8 March [A/64/719], respectively, transmitted the Declaration on the Need to End the United States Economic, Trade and Financial Embargo against Cuba, adopted at the first Latin American and Caribbean Unity Summit (Mayan Riviera, Mexico, 22–23 February).

On 21 October [A/65/550], Cuba transmitted the Final Declaration of the Seventh Forum of Cuban Civil Society against the Embargo, adopted in Havana on 20 October.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 26 October [meeting 36], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/6 [draft: A/65/L.3] by recorded vote (187-2-3) [agenda item 41].

Necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States of America against Cuba

The General Assembly,

Determined to encourage strict compliance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming, among other principles, the sovereign equality of States, non-intervention and non-interference in their internal affairs and freedom of international trade and navigation, which are also enshrined in many international legal instruments,

Recalling the statements of the Heads of State or Government at the Ibero-American Summits concerning the need to eliminate the unilateral application of economic and trade measures by one State against another that affect the free flow of international trade,

Concerned about the continued promulgation and application by Member States of laws and regulations, such as that promulgated on 12 March 1996 known as “the Helms-Burton Act”, the extraterritorial effects of which affect the sovereignty of other States, the legitimate interests of entities or persons under their jurisdiction and the freedom of trade and navigation,

Taking note of declarations and resolutions of different intergovernmental forums, bodies and Governments that express the rejection by the international community and public opinion of the promulgation and application of measures of the kind referred to above,

Recalling its resolutions 47/19 of 24 November 1992, 48/16 of 3 November 1993, 49/9 of 26 October 1994, 50/10 of 2 November 1995, 51/17 of 12 November 1996, 52/10 of 5 November 1997, 53/4 of 14 October 1998, 54/21 of 9 November 1999, 55/20 of 9 November 2000, 56/9 of 27 November 2001, 57/11 of 12 November 2002, 58/7 of 4 November 2003, 59/11 of 28 October 2004, 60/12 of 8 November 2005, 61/11 of 8 November 2006, 62/3 of 30 October 2007, 63/7 of 29 October 2008 and 64/6 of 28 October 2009,

Concerned that, since the adoption of its resolutions 47/19, 48/16, 49/9, 50/10, 51/17, 52/10, 53/4, 54/21, 55/20, 56/9, 57/11, 58/7, 59/11, 60/12, 61/11, 62/3, 63/7 and 64/6, further measures of that nature aimed at strengthening and extending the economic, commercial and financial embargo against Cuba continue to be promulgated and applied, and concerned also about the adverse effects of such measures on the Cuban people and on Cuban nationals living in other countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 64/6;

2. Reiterates its call upon all States to refrain from promulgating and applying laws and measures of the kind referred to in the preamble to the present resolution, in conformity with their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations and international law, which, inter alia, reaffirm the freedom of trade and navigation;

3. Once again urges States that have and continue to apply such laws and measures to take the necessary steps to repeal or invalidate them as soon as possible in accordance with their legal regime;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the appropriate organs and agencies of the United Nations system, to prepare a report on the implementation of the present resolution in the light of the purposes and principles of the Charter and international law and to submit it to the General Assembly at its sixty-sixth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States of America against Cuba”.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 65/6:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cam-

Cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations

Caribbean Community

The Secretary-General, in response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], submitted, in his August report [A/65/382-S/2010/490] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, a summary of United Nations/Caribbean Community (CARICOM) collaborative activities. The United Nations Development Programme Regional Centre in Panama was working with the CARICOM secretariat to develop capacity in results-based management and aid effectiveness. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS supported the CARICOM-based Pan Caribbean Partnership against HIV/AIDS, and was a key technical partner in developing the biannual plans for the implementation of the Caribbean Regional Strategic Framework on HIV/AIDS. The United Nations Children's Fund supported the organization of a summit of CARICOM Heads of Government on Youth and Development (Paramaribo, Suriname, 29–30 January), and worked with the CARICOM Subregional Task Force on Child Protection and Child Rights. A regional programme for food security, prepared by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in collaboration with the CARICOM secretariat, was approved by the CARICOM Council of Ministers responsible for Trade and Economic Development. The CARICOM regional coordinator for Security Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544], relating to weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery, participated in regional workshops organized by the Office for Disarmament Affairs, with a focus on border and export controls.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/242 [draft: A/65/L.54 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 122 (e)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Caribbean Community

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 46/8 of 16 October 1991, 49/141 of 20 December 1994, 51/16 of 11 November 1996, 53/17 of 29 October 1998, 55/17 of 7 November 2000, 57/41 of 21 November 2002, 59/138 of 10 December 2004, 61/50 of 4 December 2006 and 63/34 of 26 November 2008,

Bearing in mind the provisions of Chapter VIII of the Charter of the United Nations on the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action and other activities consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind also, in this regard, the cooperation activities undertaken by the United Nations and the Caribbean Community in fields related to the prevention and eradication of the illicit trade in narcotic drugs, small arms and light weapons, the safety and management of stockpiles and the destruction of surplus weapons and ammunition, the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and the prohibition and restriction of the use of certain conventional weapons,

Recalling the signing on 27 May 1997 by the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Community of a cooperation agreement between the secretariats of the two organizations,

Recalling also the fruitful and action-oriented exchanges that have taken place recently between the two organizations, including contacts between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and Heads of Government of the Caribbean Community, and also between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Community,

Bearing in mind that, in its resolutions 54/225 of 22 December 1999, 55/203 of 20 December 2000, 57/261 of 20 December 2002, 59/230 of 22 December 2004, 61/197 of 20 December 2006 and 63/214 of 19 December 2008, it recognized the importance of adopting an integrated management approach to the Caribbean Sea area in the context of sustainable development, and mindful of the critical importance of the Caribbean Sea to the economic and social development and environmental well-being of the region, including in the areas of tourism, trade, commerce and the marine sector,

Bearing in mind also the support that Caribbean States have received from the United Nations in their efforts to advance the implementation of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States,

Noting the support that the United Nations Environment Programme has been extending for the implementation of the environmental and sustainable development programmes of the Caribbean Community, including its close collaboration with the Sustainable Development Unit of the Caribbean Community Secretariat, and related national and regional institutions,

Expressing appreciation, in this context, for the technical role of the United Nations Environment Programme in building cooperation linkages among the small island developing States of the Caribbean Community, and in facilitating the assessment by them of the implications of their adaptation to climate change, which will guide future United Nations Environment Programme climate change programmes in the region,

Taking note of the outcome document of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on the Millennium Development Goals, in which Heads of State and Government recognized the unique and particular vulnerabilities of small island developing States and reaffirmed their commitment to urgent and concrete action to address those vulnerabilities through the full and effective implementation of the Mauritius Strategy, and taking note also of the outcome document of the High-level Review Meeting on the Implementation of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, held on 24 and 25 September 2010 in New York,

Noting that the Caribbean region is the second most hazard-prone region in the world, with frequent exposure to devastating natural hazards, including earthquakes, floods, hurricanes and volcanic eruptions, and concerned that their increased frequency, intensity and destructive power continue to pose a challenge to the development of the region,

Recalling the devastating earthquake that struck Haiti on 12 January 2010 and the ongoing challenges that the country continues to face given the scale of the disaster, and calling for renewed attention to the critical situation in Haiti as well as the fulfilment of pledges made to assist Haiti in its long-term recovery and sustainable development initiatives,

Noting that in October and November 2010, parts of the Caribbean region, including Haiti, Saint Lucia and Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, were severely affected, in varying degrees of intensity, by Hurricane Tomas which caused significant loss of life and extensive damage to infrastructure, with consequent negative effects on the development efforts of the countries affected,

Noting with appreciation the robust support and encouragement that the United Nations continues to give to the

Pan-Caribbean Partnership against HIV/AIDS, which observed on 1 November 2010 the tenth anniversary of its establishment as a regional response mechanism for reducing the spread and impact of HIV and AIDS through a system of universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support,

Noting with appreciation also the number of consultations and information exchanges that have been taking place between officials of the two organizations aimed at strengthening their bilateral cooperation in such areas as crime, drug abuse control and violence,

Expressing deep concern about the persistent challenges posed by an international environment characterized by, inter alia, crises in food and energy security, the impact of global warming, the loss of biodiversity and a fragile and uneven international financial system, all of which have increased the vulnerabilities and seriously exacerbated the challenges for the development efforts of the countries of the Caribbean Community,

Welcoming the initiative of the States members of the Caribbean Community leading to the adoption of General Assembly resolution 64/265 of 13 May 2010 on the prevention and control of non-communicable diseases, and acknowledging the contribution of the World Health Organization and the Pan-American Health Organization and their continuing support for the process leading up to the convening of the high-level meeting of the General Assembly to be held in New York in September 2011,

Affirming the need to further strengthen the cooperation that already exists between entities of the United Nations system and the Caribbean Community in the areas of economic and social development and of political and humanitarian affairs,

Convinced of the need for the coordinated utilization of available resources to promote the common objectives of the two organizations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, in particular paragraphs 41 to 54 on the Caribbean Community, concerning efforts to strengthen and deepen cooperation;

2. Calls upon the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in association with the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Community, as well as the relevant regional organizations, to continue to assist in furthering the development and maintenance of peace and security within the Caribbean region;

3. Invites the Secretary-General to continue to promote and expand cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and the Caribbean Community so as to increase the capacity of the two organizations to attain their objectives;

4. Calls for, in this context, vastly increased efforts by developed countries to strengthen the multilateral development framework to enable the United Nations development system to respond more effectively to the needs of programme countries, so that they, including the countries of the Caribbean Community, can pursue their development efforts on the basis of secure and predictable funding;

5. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to enhance their cooperation with the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Community with a view to intensifying their consultations and programmes of cooperation with the Caribbean Community and its associated institutions in the attainment of their objectives;

6. Expresses appreciation for the active cooperation being extended by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for the purpose of enhancing the technical performance of the media in the region;

7. Calls upon the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to intensify their assistance to the countries of the Caribbean in addressing the social and economic consequences of the vulnerability of Caribbean economies and the challenges that this poses for achieving the Millennium Development Goals and the goal of sustainable development;

8. Notes the continuing cooperation between the United Nations Development Programme and the Caribbean Community, inter alia in support of implementing the Caribbean Community Single Market and Economy, strengthening democratic institutions and mechanisms for citizen security and strengthening capacities to address issues related to climate change;

9. Also notes the cooperation between the United Nations Industrial Development Organization and the Caribbean Community aimed at the design and implementation of programmes for enhancing the industrial development capacity of the countries of the Caribbean Community and competitiveness in the Caribbean Community Single Market and Economy;

10. Further notes the various cooperation activities between the Caribbean Community and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, including the Regional Food Security Project, designed to increase agricultural output, promote food security, increase income and employment opportunities and enhance the international competitiveness of the agriculture sector and its contribution to the sustainable development of the region;

11. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, as well as Member States, to increase financial and other assistance to the countries of the Caribbean Community to help to implement the priorities of the Caribbean Regional Strategic Framework for HIV/AIDS, which sets out realistic targets for reducing the rate of new infections, raising the quality and coverage of care, treatment and support and building institutional capacity, and to cope with the problems and the burden caused by the HIV/AIDS pandemic;

12. Stresses the urgent need for the reopening of the office of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the region so as to reinforce the efforts of the States of the region in their struggle against the interrelated scourges of drugs, violent crime and the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons;

13. Expresses appreciation for the cooperation received from the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat in the implementation of the annual commemoration of the International Day of Remembrance of the Victims of Slavery and the Transatlantic Slave Trade on 25 March;

14. Requests the Department of Public Information, in cooperation with the countries concerned and relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, to continue to take appropriate steps to enhance public awareness worldwide of the commemorative activities and the permanent memorial initiative, and to continue to facilitate efforts to erect the permanent memorial at United Nations Headquarters;

15. Expresses appreciation for the continuing support and cooperation being received from the Department of Public Information in the preparatory activities for establishing a permanent memorial to the victims of slavery and the transatlantic slave trade, in keeping with General Assembly resolution 62/122 of 17 December 2007 and subsequent resolutions;

16. Stresses the critical importance of implementing the decisions adopted at the High-level Review Meeting on the Implementation of the Mauritius Strategy for the Further Implementation of the Programme of Action for the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, including through the mobilization of financial and technological resources, as well as capacity-building programmes;

17. Calls upon the United Nations, including its specialized agencies, organizations and programmes, to assist in the preparatory process for the high-level meeting on non-communicable diseases and to provide support to Member States, as appropriate, leading up to the meeting;

18. Welcomes the initiatives of Member States in assisting in the cooperation between the United Nations and the Caribbean Community, and encourages their continuing efforts;

19. Also welcomes the convening in 2011 of the sixth general meeting between representatives of the Caribbean Community and its associated institutions on the one hand and of the United Nations system on the other, in order to review and appraise progress in the implementation of the agreed areas and issues and to hold consultations on such additional measures and procedures as may be required to facilitate and strengthen cooperation between the two organizations, including the updating of the Regional Strategic Framework;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-seventh session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Caribbean Community".

Asia and the Pacific

In 2010, the United Nations continued to address political and security challenges in Asia and the Pacific in its efforts to restore peace and stability and to promote economic and social development in the region.

The London Conference in January saw a renewal of the commitment between the Afghan Government and the international community to implement a reform-oriented nation-building agenda, and the Kabul Conference in July resulted in a strategy on the way forward: the Kabul process. On 18 September, despite threats and violence, 4.3 million Afghans voted in elections for the Lower House of the National Assembly, the Wolesi Jirga. The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan continued to foster political dialogue, coordinate international humanitarian and development activities, and assist the Government in institution-building. In March, the Security Council extended the Mission's mandate by another year. The International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), a multinational force led by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, continued to assist the Government in maintaining security. The Council extended the authorization of ISAF until October 2011.

In Iraq, an estimated 12 million voters turned out to cast their ballots for the national parliamentary elections in March. In November, leading political blocs reached an agreement on forming a national partnership Government on the basis of the election results. In December, the Council adopted resolution 1956(2010) extending the arrangements for depositing proceeds from export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas into the Development Fund for Iraq until 30 June 2011; resolution 1957(2010) terminating the measures by which Iraq was requested to destroy all weapons of mass destruction and long-range ballistic missiles, and not to acquire any nuclear weapons; and resolution 1958(2010) terminating the residual activities of the oil-for-food programme. A series of attacks across Iraq in May, including in the relatively calm areas of southern Iraq, killed over 100 people. The United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq continued to advise the Government on developing civil and social services, foster human rights protection and legal reforms, and contribute to the coordination of development and reconstruction. The Council extended the Mission's mandate until July 2011.

The United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste (UNMIT) continued to assist the country in reforming the security sector, strengthening the rule of law, promoting economic and social development and fostering democratic governance. The Secretary-General recommended the phased drawdown of the UNMIT police force, which began in April. In February, the Council extended the Mission's mandate for another year. After the Dili District Court delivered its verdict in the trial of the 11 February 2008 attacks against the President and the Prime Minister, convicting 24 of 28 defendants, President José Ramos-Horta granted commutations of the sentences for 23 of the convicted persons.

During the year, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea continued its nuclear weapons programme. In May, the Panel of Experts established under Council resolution 1874(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 384] submitted its final report. Tensions escalated on the Korean peninsula following a 26 March attack by the DPRK against a Republic of Korea naval ship, the Cheonan, which resulted in the sinking of the vessel and the deaths of 46 Korean servicemen on board.

The peace process in Nepal remained stalled during 2010, with few signs of a consensual way forward. Positive developments included the discharge of disqualified Maoist army personnel, which concluded in February, and the 13 September signing of a four-point agreement between the Government and the political parties to complete the process by 14 January 2011. The United Nations Mission in Nepal (UNMIN) continued to encourage the parties to reach an agreement on integration and rehabilitation and other related commitments. In September, by resolution 1939(2010), the Council extended the Mission's mandate for a four-month period and decided that UNMIN would terminate on 15 January 2011.

The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) reported that Iran had not implemented the Additional Protocol to Iran's Safeguards Agreement or the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the IAEA Board of Governors. The Government had also failed to provide the necessary cooperation to permit the Agency to confirm that all nuclear material in Iran was being used in peaceful activities. In June, by resolution 1929(2010), the Council imposed additional sanctions on Iran.

The three-member UN Commission of Inquiry into the assassination of former Prime Minister of Pakistan Benazir Bhutto submitted its report to the Secretary-General on 30 March. Following an unconstitutional change of power in Kyrgyzstan in April, parliamentary elections were held on 10 October, which were assessed by observers as positive, transparent and well organized. In August, Cambodia and Thailand addressed the issue of border demarcation.

Afghanistan

In 2010, the international community continued to assist the Government of Afghanistan to lay the foundation for peace and stability and the restoration of economic and social development, through support provided by the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA), under the direction of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of Mission, and the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), led by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

The Secretary-General submitted four progress reports to the General Assembly and the Security Council, in March [A/64/705-S/2010/127], June [A/64/872-S/2010/318], September [A/65/552-S/2010/463] and December [A/65/612-S/2010/630], on the situation in Afghanistan and on UNAMA activities, as well as a later report including information relating to 2010 [A/65/783-S/2011/120]. The Security Council carried out a mission to Afghanistan in June.

ISAF activities were reported to the Council by the NATO Secretary-General through the UN Secretary-General [S/2010/353, S/2010/437, S/2010/548, S/2010/657, S/2011/124]. The Council, by resolution 1917(2010) (see p. 340), extended the UNAMA mandate until 23 March 2011, and by resolution 1943(2010) (see p. 358) it extended the ISAF authorization until 13 October 2011.

Political and security developments

New Special Representative. On 26 January [S/2010/47], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President of his intention to appoint Stefan de Mistura (Sweden) as his Special Representative for Afghanistan and Head of UNAMA as at 1 March. The Council took note of that intention on 27 January [S/2010/48].

London Conference. The International Conference on Afghanistan (London, 28 January), co-chaired by Afghanistan, the United Kingdom and the United Nations, saw the renewal of the mutual commitment of Afghanistan and the international community to implement a reform-oriented, nation-building agenda on the basis of President Hamid Karzai's November 2009 inaugural speech. The 78 participating nations and institutions agreed on a new partnership premised on a transition to greater Afghan leadership and responsibility. Participants agreed to develop a plan for a phased, province-by-province transition to Afghan-led security starting by late 2010 or early 2011—provided that necessary conditions were met—and confirmed a significant increase in the number of international forces to support the training of Afghan forces. A consensus regarding an Afghan-led reconciliation and reintegration approach to those anti-Government elements willing to renounce violence and to respect the Afghan Constitution was generated. The Conference also set the agenda for an additional conference to be held in Kabul in the spring of 2010. On 2 February [S/2010/65], the United Kingdom transmitted the communiqué of the London Conference on Afghanistan to the Security Council.

Report of Secretary-General (March). In his March report on the situation in Afghanistan [A/64/705-S/2010/127], the Secretary-General said that key developments during the previous three months included the certification of the provincial council elections [YUN 2009, p. 350], the holding of the London Conference, the evolution of the security situation, and economic development in the country. On the formation of the new Government, President Karzai presented a list of Cabinet nominees to the Wolesi Jirga, the lower house of the parliament, in December 2009 and in January 2010. Following hearings in January, the parliament confirmed 14 candidates. The Independent Election Commission announced 22 May as the date for parliamentary elections, but due to concerns of insufficient time for preparation and needed electoral reforms, President Karzai convened a meeting with international and national stakeholders, and on 24 January, the Commission postponed the elections until 18 September. Another concern was the fact that well-known alleged human rights violators and individuals linked to illegal armed groups were able to stand for election to public office, a factor that had undermined the 2009 election process. In order to create an environment conducive to free and fair parliamentary elections, there was a need to establish a comprehensive vetting plan that would accurately identify and disqualify candidates, as well as a need to implement measures aimed at increased participation of women and minorities and more freedom of expression.

The security situation continued to deteriorate in January 2010, with the number of incidents totalling 40 per cent higher than in January 2009. Contributing factors included an increased number of international military troops and mild weather conditions in several parts of the country. The majority of incidents involved armed clashes and improvised explosive devices (IEDs). During the 20 January 2010 meeting of the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board, the Minister of the Interior presented an Afghan National Police strategy that identified specific threat areas and priorities, and would resolve long-standing differences within the international community over the structure of the Afghan National Police that had stalled police reform and given rise to contradictory approaches on the part of major donors. In that context, it was essential that UNAMA maintain and expand its police advisory presence in all eight regional offices to provide liaison, monitoring and advice on police and security-related issues. With a view to meeting the objective of ensuring that the Afghan National Security Forces assumed full responsibility for security within five years, the Board also agreed to increased growth targets of army and police personnel from approximately 104,300 and 96,800, respectively, to 134,000 and 109,000 by October 2010, and to 171,600 and 134,000 by October 2011. Those targets were endorsed by the London Conference.

In February 2010, the Afghan army and ISAF launched an offensive involving 15,000 troops against a Taliban stronghold in Helmand. The operation focused on Marjah in the centre of a significant opium-growing region and was to be followed by a major governance effort.

Landmines and explosive remnants of war remained a security concern, with more than 2,150 communities directly affected and an average of 42 people killed or injured every month. Mine contamination also prevented livelihood activities by blocking access to agricultural land, water, health and education.

On counter-narcotics efforts, in February, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) issued the Opium Winter Rapid Assessment Survey, which was based on a survey of farmers' intentions at planting time and predicted that opium cultivation levels would be similar to those in 2009. While eight additional provinces could become poppy-free in 2010, and opium cultivation in Afghanistan had declined by 36 per cent over the previous two years, prices for licit crops had begun to fall, raising the possibility that farmers could again turn to opium. In order to consolidate the decline in opium production, increased agricultural assistance and better governance at the subnational level were required. In other counter-narcotics developments, three joint operations among Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan were successfully carried out as part of the triangular initiative of the Rainbow Strategy, which was implemented by UNODC. The three countries also agreed to appoint permanent liaison officers to the joint planning cell in Tehran, Iran, and to establish a border liaison office on each border.

Regarding mission support, the 2010 UNAMA budget provided for an increase in personnel as well as for the opening of four new provincial offices. In provinces where UNAMA had no field offices, the Mission continued to be active through periodic visits. The Secretary-General recommended renewal of the UNAMA mandate for an additional 12 months, with modifications to three of the nine elements of the mandate as set out in resolution 1868(2009) [YUN 2009, p. 335], namely, overall coordination; electoral assistance; and good offices support for Afghan-led reconciliation programmes.

Communication. On 3 February [A/64/654-S/2010/70], Turkey transmitted to the Secretary-General the Istanbul Statement adopted at the end of the Regional Summit on Afghanistan (Istanbul, Turkey, 26 January).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 March [meeting 6290], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1917(2010). The draft [S/2010/147] was submitted by Turkey.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions on Afghanistan, in particular resolution 1868(2009) of 23 March 2009, in which it extended until 23 March 2010 the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan as established by resolution 1662(2006) of 23 March 2006, and resolution 1659(2006) of 15 February 2006, in which it endorsed the Afghanistan Compact, and recalling also the report of the Security Council mission to Afghanistan from 21 to 28 November 2008,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Afghanistan,

Stressing the importance of a comprehensive approach to address the situation in Afghanistan, and recognizing that there is no purely military solution to ensure the stability of Afghanistan,

Reaffirming its continued support for the Government and people of Afghanistan as they rebuild their country, strengthen the foundations of sustainable peace and constitutional democracy and assume their rightful place in the community of nations,

Welcoming the communiqué of the London Conference on Afghanistan, held on 28 January 2010, which set a clear agenda and agreed priorities for the way ahead on Afghanistan, underpinned by a comprehensive strategy to be taken forward by the Government of Afghanistan with the support of the region and the international community and with a central and impartial coordinating role for the United Nations,

Reaffirming in this context its support for the implementation, under the ownership of the Afghan people, of the Afghanistan Compact, the Afghanistan National Development Strategy and the National Drug Control Strategy, and noting that sustained and coordinated efforts by all relevant actors are required to consolidate progress made towards their implementation and to overcome continuing challenges,

Stressing the central and impartial role that the United Nations continues to play in promoting peace and stability in Afghanistan by leading the efforts of the international community, including, jointly with the Government of Afghanistan, the coordination and monitoring of efforts in implementing the Afghanistan Compact through the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board in support of the priorities set up by the Government, and expressing its appreciation and strong support for the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General, his newly appointed Special Representative for Afghanistan and, in particular, the women and men of the Mission, who are serving in difficult conditions to help the people of Afghanistan,

Welcoming the continued commitment of the international community to support the stability and development of Afghanistan, and also welcoming in this regard international and regional initiatives, including commitments made at the regional Summit on Friendship and Cooperation in the “Heart of Asia”, held in Istanbul, Turkey, on 26 January 2010 with the participation of Afghanistan and its neighbours, and the London Conference on Afghanistan, held on 28 January 2010, and looking forward to the Government of Afghanistan’s concrete action plans and targets in anticipation of an international conference in Kabul later in the year,

Recalling the importance of the Kabul Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations of 22 December 2002, the special conference on Afghanistan under the aegis of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, held in Moscow on 27 March 2009, and the Istanbul Statement of 26 January 2010, looking forward to the Fourth Regional Economic Cooperation Conference on Afghanistan, to be held in Turkey, and stressing the crucial importance of advancing regional cooperation as an effective means to promote security, governance and economic and social development in Afghanistan,

Welcoming the efforts of countries that are increasing their civilian and humanitarian efforts to assist the Government and the people of Afghanistan, and encouraging the international community to further enhance its contributions in a coordinated manner with the Afghan authorities and the Mission,

Stressing the need for a transparent, credible and democratic process that preserves stability and security through the election period, and welcoming the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan to ensure the integrity of the 2010 national legislative elections and to prevent irregularities and misconduct,

Recognizing once again the interconnected nature of the challenges in Afghanistan, reaffirming that sustainable progress on security, governance, human rights, the rule of law and development, as well as the cross-cutting issues of anti-corruption, counter-narcotics and transparency, is mutually reinforcing, and welcoming the continuing efforts of the Government of Afghanistan and the international community to address these challenges through a comprehensive approach,

Stressing the importance of a comprehensive approach in addressing the challenges in Afghanistan, noting in this context the synergies in the objectives of the Mission and of the International Security Assistance Force, as also noted in resolution 1890(2009) of 8 October 2009, and stressing the need for strengthened cooperation, coordination and mutual support, taking due account of their respective designated responsibilities,

Stressing also the need to urgently address the humanitarian situation by improving the reach, quality and quantity of humanitarian aid, by ensuring efficient, effective and timely coordination and delivery of humanitarian assistance through enhanced coordination among the United Nations agencies, funds and programmes under the authority of the Special Representative and between the United Nations and other donors, and through the expansion and strengthening of the United Nations humanitarian presence in the provinces, where it is most needed,

Condemning attacks against humanitarian workers, emphasizing that the attacks impede efforts to aid the people of Afghanistan, and underlining the need for all parties to ensure safe and unhindered access for all humanitarian actors, including United Nations staff and associated personnel, and to comply fully with applicable international humanitarian law,

Reiterating its concern about the security situation in Afghanistan, in particular the increased violent and terrorist activities by the Taliban, Al-Qaida, illegal armed groups, criminals and those involved in the narcotics trade, and the increasingly strong links between terrorism activities and illicit drugs, resulting in threats to the local population, including children, national security forces and international military and civilian personnel,

Expressing its serious concern over the harmful consequences of violent and terrorist activities by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist groups on the capacity of the Government of Afghanistan to guarantee the rule of law, to provide security and basic services to the Afghan people and to ensure the improvement and protection of their human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Recognizing the increased threats posed by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist groups as well as the challenges related to the efforts to address such threats,

Recalling its resolutions 1674(2006) of 28 April 2006, 1738(2006) of 23 December 2006 and 1894(2009) of 11 November 2009 on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, expressing its concern at the high number of civilian casualties, the significant majority of which are caused by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist groups, welcoming the progress by Afghan and international forces in reducing civilian casualties, reiterating its call for all feasible steps to be taken to ensure the protection of civilians, and calling for compliance with international humanitarian and human rights law, as applicable,

Expressing its concern at the serious threat that anti-personnel mines, remnants of war and improvised explosive devices may pose to the civilian population, and stressing the need to refrain from the use of weapons and devices prohibited by international law,

Welcoming the achievements of the Government of Afghanistan in banning ammonium nitrate fertilizer, and urging prompt action to implement regulations for the control of all explosive materials and precursor chemicals, thereby reducing the ability of insurgents to use them for improvised explosive devices,

Recalling the declaration addressed to the International Narcotics Control Board by the Government of Afghanistan that there is no legal use for acetic anhydride in Afghanistan for the time being and that producing and exporting countries should abstain from authorizing the export of this substance to Afghanistan without a request from the Government of Afghanistan, and encouraging, pursuant to resolution 1817(2008) of 11 June 2008, Member States to increase their cooperation with the Board, notably by complying fully with the provisions of article 12 of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Expressing its support for the Afghan-Pakistani Peace Jirga process,

Recalling its resolutions 1265(1999) of 17 September 1999, 1296(2000) of 19 April 2000, 1674(2006), 1738(2006) and 1894(2009) on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, its resolutions 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, 1820(2008) of 19 June 2008, 1888(2009) of 30 September 2009 and 1889(2009) of 5 October 2009 on women and peace and security and its resolutions 1612(2005) of 26 July 2005 and 1882(2009) of 4 August 2009 on children and armed conflict, and taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on children and armed conflict in Afghanistan,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 10 March 2010;

2. Expresses its appreciation for the United Nations long-term commitment to work with the Government and people of Afghanistan, and reiterates its full support for the work of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan;

3. Decides to extend until 23 March 2011 the mandate of the Mission, as defined in its resolutions 1662(2006), 1746(2007) of 23 March 2007, 1806(2008) of 20 March 2008 and 1868(2009) and in paragraphs 4 to 6 below;

4. Calls upon the United Nations, with the support of the international community, to support the priorities of the Government of Afghanistan on the issues of security, governance and economic development, and regional co-operation, and to support the full implementation of mutual commitments made on these issues at the London Conference on Afghanistan, as well as on continuing implementation of the National Drug Control Strategy, and requests that the Mission assist the Government in the transition towards Afghan leadership, including by supporting the preparation of the conference to be held in Kabul later in the year;

5. Decides that the Mission and the Special Representative, within their mandate and guided by the principle of reinforcing Afghan ownership and leadership, shall continue to lead the international civilian efforts, in accordance with the communiqué of the London Conference on Afghanistan, and with a particular focus on the priorities laid down below:

(a) Promote, as co-chair of the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board, more coherent support by the international community to the development and governance priorities of the Government of Afghanistan, including through mobilization of resources, coordination of international donors and organizations, and direction of the contributions of United Nations agencies, funds and programmes, in particular for counter-narcotics, reconstruction and development activities; at the same time, support efforts to increase the proportion of development aid delivered through the Government, and support efforts to increase the transparency and effectiveness of the Government's use of such resources;

(b) Strengthen cooperation with the International Security Assistance Force and the Senior Civilian Representative of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at all levels and throughout the country, in accordance with their existing mandates, in order to improve civil-military coordination, to facilitate the timely exchange of information and to ensure coherence between the activities of national and international security forces and of civilian actors in support of an Afghan-led development and stabilization process, including through engagement with provincial reconstruction teams and engagement with non-governmental organizations; and support the process of provincial transition to Afghan-led security responsibility, taking into account the respective mandates of the Mission and the Force;

(c) Provide political outreach as well as good offices to support, if requested by the Government of Afghanistan, the implementation of Afghan-led reconciliation and reintegration programmes, including by proposing and supporting confidence-building measures within the framework of the Afghan Constitution and with full respect for the implementation of measures and application of the procedures introduced by the Security Council in its resolutions 1267(1999) of 15 October 1999, 1822(2008) of 30 June 2008 and 1904(2009) of 17 December 2009, as well as other relevant resolutions of the Council;

(d) Support, at the request of the Afghan authorities, and taking into account progress on commitments on electoral reform agreed at the London Conference, preparations for the upcoming national legislative elections, by providing technical assistance, coordinating other international donors, agencies and organizations providing assistance and channelling existing and additional funds earmarked to support the process; and support, through civil society, the robust participation of the Afghan people in the elections and the electoral reform process;

6. Reaffirms that the Mission and the Special Representative shall continue to lead international civilian efforts in the following priority areas:

(a) Through a strengthened and expanded presence throughout the country, promote at the local level the implementation of the Afghanistan National Development Strategy and the National Drug Control Strategy, and facilitate inclusion in and understanding of the policies of the Government of Afghanistan;

(b) Support and strengthen efforts to improve governance and the rule of law, including transitional justice, and to combat corruption at the local and national levels, and to promote development initiatives at the local level with a view to helping to bring the benefits of peace and deliver services in a timely and sustainable manner;

(c) Play a central coordinating role to facilitate the delivery of humanitarian assistance in accordance with humanitarian principles and with a view to building the capacity of the Government of Afghanistan, including by providing effective support to national and local authorities in assisting and protecting internally displaced persons and to creating conditions conducive to the voluntary, safe, dignified and sustainable return of refugees and internally displaced persons;

(d) Continue, with the support of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, to cooperate with the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission, to cooperate also with relevant international and local non-governmental organizations and the Government of Afghanistan, to monitor the situation of civilians, to coordinate efforts to ensure their protection, to promote accountability, and to assist in the full implementation of the fundamental freedoms and human rights provisions of the Afghan Constitution and international treaties to which Afghanistan is a State party, in particular those regarding the full enjoyment by women of their human rights;

(e) Support regional cooperation to work towards a stable and prosperous Afghanistan;

7. Calls upon all Afghan and international parties to coordinate with the Mission in the implementation of its mandate and in efforts to promote the security and freedom of movement of United Nations and associated personnel throughout the country;

8. Reiterates the need to ensure the security of United Nations staff and its support for the measures already taken by the Secretary-General in this regard, and looks forward to an analysis of the United Nations security requirements in Afghanistan;

9. Stresses the importance of strengthening and expanding the presence of the Mission and United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in the provinces, encourages the Secretary-General to continue his current efforts to take the measures necessary to address the security issues associated with such strengthening and expansion, and strongly supports the authority of the Special Representative in the coordination of all activities of United Nations agencies, funds and programmes in Afghanistan;

10. Underscores the importance of the upcoming national legislative elections for Afghanistan's democratic development, calls for all efforts to be made to ensure the credibility, safety and security of the elections, recognizes the challenges that face the Afghan Independent Election Commission and the Afghan Electoral Complaints Commission, underlines the need for those two bodies to effectively discharge their functions in preparing and monitoring elections, and encourages the Government of Afghanistan to work together with the Mission to ensure that the Independent Election Commission and the Electoral Complaints Commission are strong and independent and provide the proper checks and balances required by the Constitution;

11. Welcomes the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan to work closely with the United Nations to build on the lessons learned from the 2009 elections to deliver improvements to the electoral process in 2010 and beyond, and, taking into account the commitments on electoral reform made at the London Conference, reaffirms the leading role of the Mission in supporting the realization of these commitments at the request of the Government, and requests that the Mission provide technical assistance to the National Assembly and civil society to support constructive electoral reforms; and further calls upon members of the international community to provide assistance, as appropriate;

12. Also welcomes the renewed efforts of the Government of Afghanistan, including through the national Peace

Jirga to be held this year, to promote dialogue with those elements in opposition to the Government who are ready to renounce violence, break ties with Al-Qaida and other terrorist organizations, denounce terrorism and accept the Afghan Constitution, particularly as it relates to gender and human rights issues, and encourages the Government to make use of the good offices of the Mission to support this process, as appropriate, in full respect of the implementation of measures and procedures introduced by the Council in resolutions 1267(1999), 1822(2008) and 1904(2009), as well as other relevant resolutions of the Council;

13. Further welcomes the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan to develop and implement an effective, inclusive, transparent and sustainable national peace and reintegration programme, stresses the role of the Mission in supporting this programme as mandated in the present resolution, and encourages the international community to assist the efforts of the Government in this regard, including through a peace and reintegration trust fund;

14. Welcomes ongoing efforts by the Government of Afghanistan and its neighbouring and regional partners to foster trust and cooperation with each other, as well as recent cooperation initiatives developed by the countries concerned and regional organizations, including the Fourth Trilateral Summit of Afghanistan, Pakistan and Turkey, held in Istanbul on 24 and 25 January 2010, the Istanbul Summit, held on 26 January 2010 with the participation of Afghanistan and its neighbours, and the London Conference, held on 28 January 2010, further welcomes the reaffirmation in the communiqué of the London Conference of the principles set out in the Kabul Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations of 22 December 2002, and stresses the importance of increasing cooperation between Afghanistan and its partners against the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist groups, in promoting peace and prosperity in Afghanistan and in fostering cooperation in the economic and development sectors as a means to achieve the full integration of Afghanistan into regional dynamics and the global economy;

15. Reaffirms the central role played by the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board in coordinating, facilitating and monitoring the implementation of the Afghanistan National Development Strategy, and calls upon all relevant actors to enhance their cooperation with the Board in this regard with a view to further improving its efficiency;

16. Calls upon international donors and organizations and the Government of Afghanistan to adhere to their commitments made at the International Conference in Support of Afghanistan, held in Paris on 12 June 2008, and at the London Conference, held on 28 January 2010, and reiterates the importance of further efforts in improving aid coordination and effectiveness, including by ensuring transparency, combating corruption and enhancing the capacity of the Government to coordinate aid;

17. Calls upon the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, including the International Security Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, in accordance with their respective designated responsibilities as they evolve, to continue to address the threat to the security and stability of Afghanistan posed by the Taliban, Al-Qaida, illegal armed groups, criminals and those involved in the narcotics trade;

18. Condemns in the strongest terms all attacks, including improvised explosive device attacks, suicide attacks and abductions, targeting civilians and Afghan and international forces and their deleterious effect on the stabilization, reconstruction and development efforts in Afghanistan, and condemns further the use by the Taliban and other extremist groups of civilians as human shields;

19. Welcomes the achievements to date in the implementation of the Mine Action Programme for Afghanistan, and encourages the Government of Afghanistan, with the support of the United Nations and all the relevant actors, to continue its efforts towards the removal of anti-personnel landmines, anti-tank landmines and explosive remnants of war in order to reduce the threats posed to human life and peace and security in the country; and expresses the need to provide assistance for the care, rehabilitation and economic and social reintegration of victims, including persons with disabilities;

20. Recognizes the progress made by the International Security Assistance Force and other international forces in minimizing the risk of civilian casualties, as described in the January 2010 report of the Mission on the protection of civilians in armed conflict, and calls upon them to continue to make robust efforts in this regard, notably by the continuous review of tactics and procedures and the conduct of after-action reviews and investigations in cooperation with the Government of Afghanistan in cases where civilian casualties have occurred and when the Government finds these joint investigations appropriate;

21. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring access for relevant organizations, as applicable, to all prisons and places of detention in Afghanistan, and calls for full respect for relevant international law, including humanitarian law and human rights law;

22. Expresses its strong concern about the recruitment and use of children by Taliban forces in Afghanistan as well as the killing and maiming of children as a result of the conflict, reiterates its strong condemnation of the recruitment and use of child soldiers in violation of applicable international law and all other violations and abuses committed against children in situations of armed conflict, in particular attacks against schools and the use of children in suicide attacks, calls for those responsible to be brought to justice, stresses the importance of implementing resolutions 1612(2005) and 1882(2009) in this context, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to strengthen the child protection component of the Mission, in particular through the appointment of child protection advisers;

23. Reiterates the importance of increasing, within a comprehensive framework, the functionality, professionalism and accountability of the Afghan security sector through appropriate vetting procedures, training, mentoring, equipping and empowerment efforts, for both women and men, in order to accelerate progress towards the goal of self-sufficient and ethnically balanced Afghan security forces providing security and ensuring the rule of law throughout the country;

24. Welcomes, in this context, the continued progress in the development of the Afghan National Army and its improved ability to plan and undertake operations, and encourages sustained training efforts, including through the contribution of trainers, resources and operational mentoring and liaison teams through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Training Mission-Afghanistan, and advice in developing a sustainable defence planning process as well as assistance in defence reform initiatives;

25. Takes note of the ongoing efforts of the Afghan authorities to enhance the capabilities of the Afghan National Police, calls for further efforts towards that goal, including through the Focused District Development programme, and stresses the importance, in this context, of international assistance through financial support and the provision of trainers and mentors, including the contribution of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Training Mission-Afghanistan, the European Gendarmerie Force contribution to this mission and the European Union through the European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan;

26. Welcomes the progress in the implementation by the Government of Afghanistan of the programme of disbandment of illegal armed groups, and calls for accelerated efforts for further progress, with support from the international community;

27. Takes note of the recent progress in addressing opium production, remains concerned at the serious harm that opium cultivation, production and trafficking and consumption continue to cause to the security, development and governance of Afghanistan as well as to the region and internationally, calls upon the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, to accelerate the implementation of the National Drug Control Strategy, including through alternative livelihood programmes, and to mainstream counter-narcotics throughout national programmes, and encourages additional international support for the four priorities identified in the Strategy; and commends the support provided by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime to the Triangular Initiative and the Central Asian Regional Information and Coordination Centre within the framework of the Paris Pact initiative and the Rainbow Strategy, as well as the contribution of the Domodedovo Police Academy of the Russian Federation;

28. Calls upon States to strengthen international and regional cooperation to counter the threat to the international community posed by the illicit production, trafficking and consumption of drugs originating in Afghanistan, in accordance with the principle of common and shared responsibility, including by strengthening the law enforcement capacity in drug control and cooperation for the fight against the illicit trafficking in drugs and precursor chemicals and against money-laundering and corruption linked to such trafficking, taking into account the outcome of the Second Ministerial Conference on Drug Trafficking Routes from Afghanistan, organized by the Government of the Russian Federation in cooperation with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and held in Moscow from 26 to 28 June 2006, within the framework of the Paris Pact initiative and its "Paris-Moscow" process, and in this regard calls for full implementation of Council resolution 1817(2008);

29. Calls for the continuation of the Paris Pact initiative in counteracting illicit production, trafficking and consumption of narcotics and the elimination of poppy crops and drug laboratories and stores as well as the interception of drug convoys, underlines the importance of border management cooperation, and welcomes the intensified cooperation of the relevant United Nations institutions with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe in this regard;

30. Reiterates the importance of the full, sequenced, timely and coordinated implementation of the National Justice Programme by all the relevant Afghan institutions and other actors in view of accelerating the establishment of a fair and transparent justice system, eliminating impunity and contributing to the affirmation of the rule of law throughout the country;

31. Stresses, in this context, the importance of further progress in the reconstruction and reform of the prison sector in Afghanistan, in order to improve respect for the rule of law and human rights therein;

32. Notes with strong concern the effects of widespread corruption on security, good governance, counter-narcotics efforts and economic development, and urges the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, to vigorously lead the fight against corruption and to enhance its efforts to establish a more effective, accountable and transparent administration;

33. Encourages all Afghan institutions, including the executive and legislative branches, to work in a spirit of cooperation, calls upon the Government of Afghanistan to pursue continued legislative and public administration reform in order to ensure good governance, with full representation of all Afghan women and men, and accountability at both the national and the subnational levels, and stresses the need for further international efforts to provide technical assistance in this area;

34. Calls for full respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms and international humanitarian law throughout Afghanistan, notes with concern the restrictions on freedom of the media and attacks against journalists, commends the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission for its courageous efforts to monitor respect for human rights in Afghanistan as well as to foster and protect those rights and to promote the emergence of a pluralistic civil society, and stresses the importance of full cooperation with the Commission by all relevant actors; and supports broad engagement across government agencies and civil society for the realization of the mutual commitments made at the London Conference, including the commitment to provide sufficient government financing for the Commission;

35. Recognizes that, despite progress achieved on gender equality, enhanced efforts are necessary to secure the rights of women and girls, strongly condemns continuing forms of discrimination and violence against women and girls, in particular violence aimed at preventing girls from attending school, stresses the importance of implementing resolutions 1325(2000), 1820(2008), 1888(2009) and 1889(2009), supports efforts to accelerate implementation of the National Action Plan for the Women of Afghanistan, welcomes the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan to strengthen the participation of women in all Afghan governance institutions, including elected and appointed bodies and the civil service, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to include in his reports to the Council relevant information on the process of integration of women into the political, economic and social life of Afghanistan;

36. Welcomes the cooperation of the Government of Afghanistan and the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) in the implementation of resolution 1904(2009), including by providing relevant information for updating the Consolidated List and by identifying individuals and entities participating in the financing or support of acts or activities of Al-Qaida and the Taliban using proceeds derived from illicit cultivation and production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs and their precursors, and encourages the continuation of such cooperation;

37. Calls for the strengthening of the process of regional economic cooperation, including measures to facilitate regional trade, to increase foreign investments and to develop infrastructure, noting Afghanistan's historical role as a land bridge in Asia;

38. Recognizes the importance of the voluntary, safe, orderly return and sustainable reintegration of the remaining Afghan refugees for the stability of the country and the region, and calls for continued and enhanced international assistance in this regard;

39. Affirms the importance of the voluntary, safe, orderly return and sustainable reintegration of internally displaced persons;

40. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council every three months on developments in Afghanistan and to include in his next report an evaluation of progress made against the benchmarks for measuring and tracking progress in the implementation of the mandate of the Mission and priorities as set out in the present resolution, and calls upon all actors concerned to cooperate with the Mission in this process;

41. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (June). In a June report [A/64/872-S/2010/318], the Secretary-General said that the Afghan Government had continued efforts towards reintegration and reconciliation, improved security, preparations for the parliamentary elections, and strengthened regional cooperation in accordance with commitments at the London Conference. Preparations for the Kabul Conference (see p. 347) were under way, and a draft peace and reintegration programme had been released in April. The Government hosted the national Consultative Peace Jirga from 2 to 4 June—with the participation of 1,600 delegates from a wide spectrum of Afghan society and Afghan institutions—to define the framework for an intra-Afghan dialogue and to facilitate discussions on the mechanisms for the peace process. Despite rocket fire and thwarted suicide attacks during the opening session, the jirga proceeded undeterred. In a 16-point final communique, the participants endorsed President Karzai's initiative to convene a national dialogue on ways to restore peace; recommended that the Government draw up a multilateral peace programme as a national strategy; and requested that the Government and international forces release Afghans detained on unreliable reports and unproved accusations, remove names of members of the Afghan opposition from the sanctions list established by Security Council resolution 1267(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 265], and guarantee the safety and security of those who joined the peace process.

The overall security situation had not improved since the Secretary-General's March report. Indiscriminate attacks against civilian targets, Government representatives and international military forces continued. The number of security incidents had increased significantly compared to previous years. The military focus remained on the southern region, with operations in central Helmand and Kandahar, with the primary goal of extending the reach of the Government. The rise in the use of improvised explosive devices constituted an alarming trend, with about three suicide attacks occurring per week and the persistent occurrence of complex suicide attacks. Attacks on schools increased steadily in the whole of the country, with peaks in the north, north-east, south and central regions. UNAMA provided feedback and advice on the drafting of the national threat assessment and contributed to the development of the National Police Strategy and National Police Plan of the Ministry of Interior. At the NATO Foreign Ministers' meeting (Tallinn, Estonia, 22–23 April), member countries agreed on a framework to enable a progressive handover of security responsibilities from international military to the Afghan Security Forces. ISAF and NATO were tasked with developing a plan on the way forward. UNAMA would work closely with Afghan and ISAF partners to ensure that non-security aspects of the transition plan were reflected and aligned with Afghan governance and development priorities.

Preparations for the September legislative elections commenced with the 17 April issuance of UNAMA-brokered implementation guidelines. Between 20 April and 6 May, the Independent Electoral Commission conducted candidate registration for the Wolesi Jirga elections without incident, resulting in a preliminary list of 2,635 candidates, of which 400 were women—a number which ensured that women candidates would fill all 68 of their allocated seats. On 29 May, the President approved the appointment of 113 provincial electoral complaints commission commissioners; six were women.

The Special Representative arrived in Kabul on 13 March and engaged the Government in discussions on UNAMA activities. In light of the tasks set out in resolution 1917(2010), four priority areas for Mission support were identified: electoral assistance, reintegration and reconciliation, regional cooperation, and aid coherence. In support of regional processes, on 8 May, the Special Representative launched the Kabul Silk Road initiative, an informal forum for the ambassadors of Afghanistan's neighbours to discuss their shared interest in long-term stability in Afghanistan. Other UNAMA activities included work to finalize an implementation framework for the draft subnational governance policy approved by the cabinet in March; efforts to coordinate donor assistance in the justice sector; and ongoing monitoring of the human rights situation. UNAMA undertook a review of its structure and realigned it to deliver more effectively on identified priorities and to ensure critical programme capacity, while taking measures to minimize the exposure of staff to increased security risks. The review foresaw no significant reduction in the actual number of substantive staff members in Afghanistan.

Security Council mission

By a letter dated 14 June [S/2010/325], the Security Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council had decided to send a mission to Afghanistan from 21 to 24 June and provided the mission's terms of reference. The mission was to be led by Ertuğrul Apakan (Turkey) and would conclude in Istanbul on 24 June, where the Government of Turkey would take over as the host of the informal Council retreat on peacemaking, peacekeeping and peacebuilding.

Report of Security Council mission. The report of the Security Council mission to Afghanistan was issued on 1 November [S/2010/564]. The mission met with, among others, President Karzai and members of his Cabinet, the Foreign Minister, the Speaker of the Wolesi Jirga, the Independent Election Commission Chairman, Electoral Complaints Commissioners, civil society organizations and opposition leaders. It also met with international interlocutors, such as UNAMA senior staff, the UN country team, ISAF, NATO and the European Union (EU), and visited the NATO training mission. The report focused on six key issues: the security situation; ISAF and the Afghan National Security Forces; reconciliation and reintegration; elections; governance, rule of law and human rights; and aid coherence and economic development. The mission noted the considerable building blocks required to empower the Government to lead a comprehensive process of transition to greater security, better provision of services and inclusive dialogue, by setting an Afghan-owned and prioritized agenda. It expressed concern about the significant rise in insecurity, especially the trends by insurgent groups towards complex suicide attacks, the near-doubling in the use of IEDs, indiscriminate attacks on civilians and the high number of targeted political assassinations, all of which threatened to overshadow political advances and were the main obstacle to Afghanistan's stabilization efforts. The increase in violence and terrorist activities by Al-Qaida, the Taliban, illegal armed groups, criminals and those involved in the narcotics trade had resulted in threats to the local population, national security forces and international military and civilian personnel. Concerned by the increasingly high number of civilian casualties, the Council called for measures to ensure their protection.

The mission reiterated the need for a transparent, credible and democratic process that preserved stability and security throughout the electoral period; stressed the importance of a comprehensive approach in addressing the challenges in Afghanistan; noted the synergies in the objectives of the Government, UNAMA and the international community; and reiterated the importance of increasing the functionality, professionalism and accountability of the Afghan security sector through a comprehensive framework of appropriate vetting procedures, training, mentoring, and equipping and empowering of both women and men to accelerate progress towards self-sufficient and ethnically balanced Afghan security forces. Concerned by the effects of corruption, the mission encouraged the Government, with the assistance of the international community, to enhance its efforts to establish a more effective, accountable and transparent administration.

Further developments

Kabul Conference. The Government and the United Nations co-chaired the International Conference on Afghanistan (Kabul, 20 July), with the participation of 76 international delegations, marking the largest international high-level event held in Kabul since the beginning of the Bonn process [YUN 2001, p. 263]. Building on the London Conference in January (see p. 339), the Government presented a comprehensive road map to achieve its objectives, consisting of 23 national priority programmes to advance progress in security, governance, social and economic development, and the rule of law, including reforms to improve public financial management and accountability, and reduce corruption. International participants expressed their willingness to progressively align their development assistance behind the national programmes. The Conference resulted in joint commitments with detailed benchmarks indicating a clear way forward: the Kabul process. Key commitments made by both the Government and the international community included the development of a framework, timelines and benchmarks for the new national priority programmes, progress towards the Afghan lead in security, improvement of governance and tackling of corruption.

In a 23 July press statement [SC/9992], Security Council members welcomed the Kabul Conference communiqué and the commitments made by the Government. In a joint statement adopted during their second quadrilateral meeting on the development of regional cooperation (Sochi, Russian Federation, 18 August), the Presidents of Afghanistan, Pakistan, the Russian Federation and Tajikistan welcomed and supported the launch of the Kabul Process [A/65/371-S/2010/479].

Report of Secretary-General (September). In a 14 September report [A/65/552-S/2010/463], the Secretary-General said that preparations for the parliamentary elections scheduled for 18 September were a major political focus during the period. The Independent Electoral Commission on 12 July announced the final list of candidates for the elections, which reflected the exclusion of 36 candidates on the ground of links to illegal armed groups. Thereafter, the Electoral Complaints Commission excluded additional candidates due to technical irregularities, bringing the number of excluded candidates to 76 as at 5 September; the number of candidates eligible to contest was 2,513, including 397 women. Some 229 of the sitting 249 members of the parliament were seeking re-election. The final list of polling centre locations was published four weeks in advance—an important development that would increase the transparency of the elections. All other technical elements of the preparations proceeded on schedule. The parliamentary elections had taken on increased significance owing to the political impasse between the executive and legislative branches over nominations to the Cabinet, which had existed since January and had left several cabinet seats unfilled. The Wolesi Jirga approved five of seven new Cabinet nominees on 28 June, while five other ministerial posts remained vacant.

The security situation had continued to deteriorate in many parts of the country with the overall number of security incidents increasing by 69 per cent compared with the same months in 2009, along with an 82 per cent rise in incidents using IEDs. One device targeted an UNAMA convoy in Parwan Province, killing three police escorts and a driver. Complex suicide attacks involving multiple bombers doubled from earlier in the year to a rate of four per month and continued to target the guesthouses and offices of international development agencies. The attacks negatively affected the population's confidence in the ability of the Afghan and international security forces to uphold the rule of law and deliver essential social services. The ongoing conflict and insecurity, including attacks against aid workers, limited the presence and activities of aid agencies across the country, impeding the delivery of humanitarian assistance. Insecurity also remained a cause for concern and created challenges in the electoral process. Widespread intimidation of candidates, particularly women, had been reported. As at 30 August, four candidates had been killed, while five agents campaigning for a female candidate were found dead in Herat on 29 August. As fragile security could lead to the occurrence of systematic fraud and irregularities in the elections, measures taken to mitigate those risks included coordinated work between the Independent Electoral Commission and the security institutions to assess the situation and to determine the final list of polling centres and the timing of its distribution. The Commission made the final list public on 18 August, stating that 5,897 of the proposed 6,835 polling centres could be opened (88 per cent).

On 29 June, President Karzai issued a presidential decree launching the peace, reconciliation and reintegration programme. The decree designated the presidential adviser, Massoom Stanekzai, to lead the joint secretariat of the programme and required the creation of a financial oversight committee to support the establishment of a peace and reintegration trust fund. On 27 July, the Government and donors formalized an agreement on the financial mechanisms to create the fund. A 5 June presidential decree establishing a Detention Release Committee to review cases of suspected insurgents detained without evidence or charge was part of the Government's efforts to foster goodwill and trust as it sought to engage the armed opposition in a political process. The High Peace Council, which would guide and support the Government's efforts to build on the outcomes of the Consultative Peace Jirga, was established on 4 September. Another key component of the governance agenda was justice reform. UNAMA engaged Afghan judicial institutions and donors on the preparation of a six-month justice action plan to strengthen judicial institutions, access to justice, linkages between formal and informal systems, and transitional justice. The Mission also supported the nomination and selection of members of the Monitoring and Evaluation Committee of the High Office of Oversight, newly established as part of the Government's anti-corruption strategy.

Elections. The elections for the Lower House of the National Assembly, the Wolesi Jirga, were held as planned on 18 September. After a series of exclusions and disqualifications, 2,506 candidates, including 396 women, contested 249 seats. Despite threats and violence by the Taliban and other illegal armed groups, approximately 4.3 million Afghans, out of an estimated 12 million eligible voters, turned out to vote. Violence in parts of the country suppressed voter participation, but the overall security situation showed no significant deterioration compared with that prevailing during the 2009 presidential election [YUN 2009, p. 341]. After polling was completed, it became clear that there had been widespread fraud and irregularities across the country. The Independent Electoral Commission implemented fraud detection and correction measures, auditing and recounting votes from suspect polling stations and centres, including 6,813 of the 17,744 stations (38.4 per cent) open on polling day. Altogether, 4,271,908 votes cast were deemed valid, while 1,330,782 ballots were invalidated. The announcement of the final certified results was made on 24 November, when the results for 33 provinces and the Kuchi constituency were published. Certification of results for Ghazni Province was delayed on technical grounds until 1 December. The electoral results brought about a significant shift in ethnic representation in the Wolesi Jirga; the number of seats held by Pashtuns was reduced by more than 20. The results caused discontent in various quarters, and unsuccessful candidates organized demonstrations in Baghlan, Badakhshan, Faryab, Herat, Kabul, Khost, Samangan and other parts of the country. The Office of the Attorney-General expressed concern at some of the decisions taken by the electoral institutions and opened a number of investigations. Both electoral institutions emphasized that while criminal cases against individuals could be a part of a transparent process, their decisions on electoral matters were final under law. Canada, the Russian Federation, Turkey, the United States, the EU and UNAMA welcomed the certification of the final results, expressed support for the work of the independent electoral bodies, acknowledged that the process required improvement and called for accountability in proven cases of fraud.

Communication. On 26 October [A/65/554-S/2010/566], the Russian Federation and the United Kingdom transmitted to the Secretary-General a joint press statement on Afghanistan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 4 November [meeting 45], the General Assembly adopted resolution 65/8 [draft: A/65/L.9 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 38].

The situation in Afghanistan

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 64/11 of 9 November 2009 and all its previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also all relevant Security Council resolutions and statements by the President of the Council on the situation in Afghanistan, in particular resolutions 1659(2006) of 15 February 2006, 1817(2008) of 11 June 2008, 1917(2010) of 22 March 2010 and 1943(2010) of 13 October 2010,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Afghanistan, and respecting its multicultural, multi-ethnic and historical heritage,

Recalling the long-term commitment of the international community to Afghanistan previously set out in the Bonn Agreement of 5 December 2001, made at the International Conference on Reconstruction Assistance to Afghanistan, held in Tokyo on 21 and 22 January 2002, and set out in the Afghanistan Compact of 31 January 2006, the Declaration of the International Conference in Support of Afghanistan, held in Paris on 12 June 2008 and the Declaration adopted at the International Conference on Afghanistan, held in The Hague on 31 March 2009,

Recognizing once again the interconnected nature of the challenges in Afghanistan, reaffirming that sustainable progress on security, governance, human rights, the rule of law and development, as well as on the cross-cutting theme of counter-narcotics, is mutually reinforcing, and welcoming the continuing efforts of the Government of Afghanistan and the international community to address these challenges in a coherent manner,

Reiterating the urgent need to tackle the challenges in Afghanistan, in particular the increased violent criminal and terrorist activities by the Taliban, Al-Qaida, illegal armed groups and those involved in the narcotics trade, in particular in the south and east, and the development of Government of Afghanistan institutions, including at the subnational level, the strengthening of the rule of law and democratic processes, the fight against corruption, the acceleration of justice sector reform, the promotion of national reconciliation, without prejudice to the fulfilment of the measures introduced by the Security Council in its resolution 1267(1999) of 15 October 1999 and other relevant resolutions, an Afghan-led transitional justice process, the safe and voluntary return of Afghan refugees and internally displaced persons in an orderly and dignified manner, the promotion and protection of human rights and the advancement of economic and social development,

Condemning in the strongest terms all attacks, including improvised explosive device attacks, suicide attacks and abductions, targeting civilians and Afghan and international forces and their deleterious effect on the stabilization, reconstruction and development efforts in Afghanistan, and condemning further the use by the Taliban, Al-Qaida, and other extremist and criminal groups, of civilians as human shields,

Deeply concerned about the continued increase in violence in Afghanistan, in particular in the south and east, and recognizing the increased threats posed by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist and criminal groups, as well as the challenges related to the efforts to address such threats,

Expressing its serious concern about the high number of civilian casualties, recalling that the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist and criminal groups are responsible for the significant majority of the civilian casualties in Afghanistan, and calling for compliance with international humanitarian and human rights law and for all appropriate measures to be taken to ensure the protection of civilians,

Recognizing additional efforts made by the International Security Assistance Force and other international forces to ensure the protection of the civilian population, and calling upon them to continue to make enhanced efforts in this regard, notably through the continuous review of tactics and procedures and the conduct of after-action reviews and investigations in cooperation with the Government of Afghanistan in cases where civilian casualties have occurred and when the Government finds these joint investigations appropriate,

Noting the importance of the national Government being inclusive and representative of the ethnic diversity of the country and ensuring also the full and equal participation of women,

1. Emphasizes the central and impartial role of the United Nations in promoting peace and stability in Afghanistan, expresses its appreciation and strong support for all efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative in this regard, and stresses the leading role of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan in seeking to further improve the coherence and coordination of international civilian efforts, guided by the principle of reinforcing Afghan ownership and leadership;

2. Welcomes the reports of the Secretary-General and the recommendations contained therein;

3. Also welcomes the renewed commitment by the Government of Afghanistan to the Afghan people and the renewed commitment by the international community to Afghanistan expressed in the communiqués of the London and Kabul Conferences, held on 28 January and 20 July 2010, respectively;

4. Encourages all partners to support constructively the Kabul process, building upon a deep and broad international partnership towards further increased Afghan responsibility and ownership in security, governance and development, aiming at a secure, prosperous and democratic Afghanistan, focusing on strengthening the constitutional checks and balances that guarantee citizen rights and obligations, and implementing structural reform to enable an accountable and effective Government to deliver concrete progress to its people, and recalls in this regard the second inaugural speech made by President Hamid Karzai on 19 November 2009;

5. Reiterates in this regard its appreciation for the Afghanistan National Development Strategy, welcomes the detailed national priority programmes presented at the Kabul Conference, stresses the importance of the complementary implementation and costing plans, and recalls the relevant provisions of the Afghanistan Compact, including the annexes thereto;

6. Welcomes the recent parliamentary election in Afghanistan, run entirely under the responsibility of the Afghan authorities supported by the international community, as a crucial step towards consolidating democracy in Afghanistan, expresses its appreciation for the courage of the Afghan people to actively engage in the electoral process and to participate in the election despite security threats, intimidation and incidents caused by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other illegal armed groups, welcomes the efforts of the relevant Afghan institutions to address alleged irregularities and to ensure a credible, transparent and legitimate process in accordance with Afghan laws and the Constitution, and expresses its appreciation in this regard for the support provided by the international community through the Assistance Mission;

7. Expresses its strong concern about the security situation in Afghanistan, stresses the need to continue to address the threat to the security and stability of Afghanistan caused by increased violent and terrorist activity by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist and criminal groups, including those involved in the narcotics trade, and strongly condemns all acts of violence and intimidation committed in Afghanistan, in particular in the southern and eastern parts, including suicide attacks and improvised explosive device attacks;

8. Expresses deep regret, in this regard, at the resulting loss of life and physical harm inflicted upon Afghan civilians and civilians of other nationalities, including the personnel of Afghan and international agencies and all other humanitarian workers and the diplomatic corps, as well as upon the personnel of the Afghan National Security Forces, the International Security Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, and pays homage to all those who have lost their lives;

9. Stresses the need for the Government of Afghanistan and the international community to continue to work closely together in countering the challenges of terrorist attacks by the Taliban, Al-Qaida and other extremist and criminal groups, which are threatening the democratic process as well as the reconstruction and economic development of Afghanistan, and reiterates in this regard its call for the full implementation of measures and application of procedures introduced in relevant Security Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 1267(1999), 1822(2008) of 30 June 2008 and 1904(2009) of 17 December 2009, and calls upon all Member States to deny those groups any form of sanctuary or financial, material and political support;

10. Notes with concern that the security situation is causing some organizations to cease or curtail their humanitarian and development work in some parts of Afghanistan;

11. Stresses the importance of the provision of sufficient security, and notes that the responsibility for providing security and law and order throughout the country resides with the Government of Afghanistan supported by the international community;

12. Welcomes, in this regard, the presence of the Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, expresses its appreciation for the support they have provided to the Afghan National Army, as well as for the assistance provided to the Afghan National Police by international partners, in particular by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization through its training mission in Afghanistan and by the European Gendarmerie Force contribution to that mission, acknowledges the continued deployment of the European Union Police Mission in Afghanistan as well as other bilateral training programmes, and encourages further coordination where appropriate;

13. Commends the Afghan National Security Forces and their international partners for their efforts to improve security conditions in Afghanistan, and calls upon the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, to continue to address the threat to the security and stability of Afghanistan;

14. Stresses the importance of further extending central government authority, including the presence of Afghan security forces, to all provinces of Afghanistan, and welcomes in this regard the plan of the Government of Afghanistan for a phased transition to full Afghan responsibility for security, based on mutually agreed criteria and conditions, as endorsed at the Kabul Conference;

15. Expresses its support for the objective of the Government of Afghanistan to enable the Afghan National Security Forces to lead and conduct military operations in all provinces by the end of 2014, and calls upon the international community to provide the support necessary to increase security, as well as to provide continued support in training, equipping and providing financing to the Afghan National Security Forces to take on the task of securing their country;

16. Welcomes the commitment of the international partners of Afghanistan to support the Government in creating the conditions necessary to allow for transition and to continue to support the transition process so as to enable it to advance to the point at which the Afghan National Army and the Afghan National Police are fully capable of maintaining internal and external security, public order, law enforcement, the security of the borders of Afghanistan and the preservation of the constitutional rights of Afghan citizens, and calls upon Member States to accelerate their efforts in this regard;

17. Also welcomes the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan, with a view to ensuring stability and providing conditions for the effective rule of law, to continue the implementation of the Afghan National Police Strategy and the National Police Plan underpinning it, to build a strong, professional police force, with a focus on the ongoing institutional and administrative reforms of the Ministry of the Interior, including the implementation of its anti-corruption action plan, and leadership development, as well as to progressively enhance the quality and increase the strength of the Afghan National Security Forces, with the necessary continued financial and technical support by the international community;

18. Calls upon Member States to continue contributing personnel, equipment and other resources to the Assistance Force and to further develop the provincial reconstruction teams in close coordination with the Government of Afghanistan and the Assistance Mission;

19. Notes, in the context of the comprehensive approach, the synergies in the objectives of the Assistance Mission and the Assistance Force;

20. Urges the Afghan authorities, with the support of the international community, to take all possible steps to ensure the safety, security and free movement of all United Nations, development and humanitarian personnel and their safe and unhindered access to all affected populations, and to protect the property of the United Nations and of development or humanitarian organizations, and notes the importance of regulating private security contractors operating in Afghanistan;

21. Also urges the Afghan authorities to make every effort, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 60/123 of 15 December 2005, to bring to justice the perpetrators of attacks;

22. Stresses the importance of advancing the full implementation of the programme of disbandment of illegal armed groups throughout the country, under Afghan ownership, while ensuring coordination and coherence with other relevant efforts, including security sector reform, community development, counter-narcotics, district-level development and Afghan-led initiatives to ensure that entities and individuals do not illegally participate in the political process, in particular in future elections, in accordance with adopted laws and regulations in Afghanistan, and calls for adequate support in order for the Ministry of the Interior to increasingly assume its leading role in implementing the programme of disbandment of illegal armed groups;

23. Expresses its appreciation for the progress achieved by the Government of Afghanistan in the disbandment of illegal armed groups, welcomes the continued commitment of the Government to stand firm in this regard as well as to work actively at the national, provincial and local levels to advance this commitment, stresses the importance of all efforts to create sufficient legal income-earning opportunities, and calls for continued international support for these efforts;

24. Remains deeply concerned about the problem of millions of anti-personnel landmines and explosive remnants of war, which constitute a great danger to the population and a major obstacle to the resumption of economic activities and to recovery and reconstruction efforts;
