On 3 April, by decision 62/547, the Assembly endorsed ACABQ's conclusions and recommendations; decided to set, effective 1 April 2008, the annual net base salary of ICJ members at $158,000, with the corresponding post adjustment per multiplier point equal to 1 per cent of the net base salary, to which would be applied the post adjustment multiplier, as appropriate, taking into account the adjustment mechanism proposed by the Secretary-General; and decided to revert to the issue of the pension scheme during the second part of its resumed sixty-second (2008) session.

In her 30 October address to the Assembly, ICJ President Judge Rosalyn Higgins noted her appreciation of the Assembly's action to meet the concerns expressed by the Court and for having resolved that matter. She added that the principle of equality among judges was central to the Court's function as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations.

Composition of the Court

Election of judges

In a 30 July memorandum [A/63/186-S/2008/502], the Secretary-General notified the General Assembly and the Security Council that the terms of office of five members of the Court would expire on 5 February 2009, and therefore the Assembly and the Council would elect five judges for a term of office of nine years, beginning on 6 February 2009. He provided information on ICJ's composition and described the procedure in the Assembly and the Council for the election of a new member of the Court. By notes of 30 July [A/63/187-S/2008/503] and 31 July [A/63/188-S/2008/504], the Secretary-General submitted, respectively, the list of candidates nominated by national groups and their curricula vitae.

In a 23 September letter [A/63/373-S/2008/619], Spain informed the Secretary-General that the list of candidates nominated by national groups to fill ICJ vacancies did not include the nomination by the Spanish national group of Antônio Augusto Cançado Trindade (Brazil), although it transmitted the nomination to the Secretariat in a timely manner. In notes of 31 October [A/63/187/Add.1-S/2008/503/Add.1] and 3 November [A/63/187/Add.2-S/2008/503/Add.2], the Secretary-General provided information on additional nominations by national groups and on the withdrawal of a candidate.

On 6 November, the Assembly and the Council elected five members of the Court to fill the vacancies occurring on 6 February 2009 (decision 63/406).

Modernization of the Court

In her 30 October address to the General Assembly, the ICJ President stated that the Court would seek funds for the replacement and modernization of the conference systems and audio-visual equipment in its historic courtroom, the Great Hall of Justice. She noted that updating the technology was essential to enhancing communication among the judges and the parties during the oral hearings. The upgrading would also facilitate the immediate sharing of data and documents and the clear display of maps and images relevant to a given case. She said that no modern court could operate without those electronic facilities and that the modernization would enable the Court to achieve greater efficiency.

Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes

In August [A/63/229], the Secretary-General reported on the activities and status of the Trust Fund to Assist States in the Settlement of Disputes through ICJ since the submission of his 2007 report [YUN 2007, p. 1333]. The Fund, established in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 818], provided financial assistance to States for expenses incurred in connection with a dispute submitted to ICJ by way of a special agreement or an application, or the execution of a Judgment of ICJ.

During the period under review (1 July 2007–30 June 2008), the Fund did not receive any applications for financial assistance from States. Five States contributed to the Fund, which as at 30 June had a balance of some $2.6 million.

Noting that in the period under review the amount of financial assistance awarded exceeded the amount of contributions by more than double, and the overall number of contributions remained low, the Secretary-General urged States and other entities to consider making substantial contributions to the Fund and to contribute on a regular basis.

International tribunals and court

In 2008 the international tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, as well as the International Criminal Court (icc), worked towards the completion of their mandates.

The International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (icty) took steps towards implementing its completion strategy, focusing on the most senior-level individuals accused of the most serious crimes. Only five cases remained to be started, four of which involved late arrests. The Tribunal was running seven trials simultaneously in its three courtrooms, involving 27 accused.

The International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 (icttr) remained committed to meeting its completion strategy targets while respecting due process. By the end of the year, it had apprehended and detained 66 persons out of some 81 persons indicted, including the Prime Minister of the Interim Government of Rwanda during the genocide, 11 Ministers of that Government in 1994, senior military officials and members of the clergy. The Tribunal concluded all its multiple-accused cases, with one exception, involving some 14 accused persons. No new arrests could be reported for the 13 fugitives still at large as the end of the Tribunal's mandate drew near.

In July, during its fifth year of functioning, the icc marked the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Rome Statute, which established the Court. It continued its proceedings with respect to situations of concern in four countries. At the end of July, there were seven warrants of arrest outstanding.

International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

In 2008, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (icty), established by Security Council resolution 827(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 440] and based in The Hague, took steps towards implementing its completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275] endorsed by Council resolution 1503(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 1330]. Proceedings before the Tribunal focused on the most senior-level individuals accused of the most serious crimes. The Office of the Prosecutor strengthened its relations with prosecutors and courts in the region through training sessions, conferences and seminars. Meanwhile, the Registry continued negotiations for the relocation of witnesses and enforcement of sentence agreements, concluding three new agreements.

On 1 January, Serge Brammertz (Belgium) began his four-year term as icty Prosecutor, replacing Carla Del Ponte (Switzerland) [YUN 2007, p. 1339]. On 4 November, Judge Patrick Robinson (Jamaica) was elected as the new icty president, with effect from 17 November, when the term of office of Fausto Pocar (Italy) expired.

During the year, the Security Council adopted three resolutions—1800(2008), 1837(2008) and 1849(2008)—on the appointment of judges and extension of their terms (see pp. 1410, 1411 & 1412). In December, acting on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/255 on the financing of the Tribunal (see p. 1414).

The icty President informed the Security Council on 12 December [S/PV.6041] that the Tribunal's achievements, to date, far surpassed those of any other international or hybrid court, both in respect of the number of accused tried and in its contribution to the development of international criminal law. Of the 161 persons indicted by the Tribunal, proceedings had been fully concluded against 116 of them.

Only five cases remained to be started, four of which involved late arrests—those of Zdravko Tolimir, Vlastimir Đorđević, Stojan Župljanin and Radovan Karadžić. The fifth case, that of Jovica Stanišić and Franko Simatović, had been delayed owing to the ill health of one of the accused. The Tribunal was running seven trials simultaneously in its three courtrooms, with its eighth trial, that of Mr. Đorđević, scheduled to begin in January 2009. Those trials involved a total of 27 accused.

The activities of icty were covered in two reports to the Security Council and the General Assembly, for the periods 1 August 2007 to 31 July 2008 [A/63/210-S/2008/515] and 1 August 2008 to 31 July 2009 [A/64/205-S/2009/394]. On 13 October, the Assembly took note of the 2007/2008 report (decision 63/506).

The Chambers

During the reporting period of 1 August 2007 to 31 July 2008 [A/63/210], the Tribunal's three Trial Chambers operated at full capacity, running eight trials simultaneously. The Trial Chambers rendered 213 decisions on pretrial matters in eight cases, heard one case of contempt and rendered five judgements. The Appeals Chamber issued 123 decisions comprising six appeals from judgement, 32 interlocutory appeals, 79 pre-appeal decisions and 6 review, reconsideration or other decisions. ICTY had 30 judges from 27 countries. The Chambers were composed of 14 permanent judges; two permanent judges from the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda serving in the Appeals Chamber; and 14 ad litem (short-term) judges.

New arrests

On 11 June, Stojan Župljanin, charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1992, was arrested by Serbian authorities. He was transferred to The Hague on 21 June 2008. The Office of the Prosecutor filed a motion for joinder (consolidation) of the Župljanin case with the case of Mićo Stanišić, who was facing the same charges.

On 21 July, Radovan Karadžić, a fugitive for over a decade, was arrested by Serbian authorities and transferred to The Hague on 30 July. The Trial Chamber had previously established the existence of a joint criminal enterprise, involving Mr. Karadžić and other Bosnian Serb leaders, intended to "ethnically re-compose the territories targeted by the Bosnian-Serb leadership by drastically reducing the proportion of Bosnian Muslims and Bosnian Croats through expulsion" [YUN 2006, p. 1489].

Serbia's National Security Council, the Action Team in charge of tracking ICTY fugitives, and the Office of the War Crimes Prosecutor had a central role in the arrests. The failure to arrest the remaining two fugitives, Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić, remained a matter of concern to the Tribunal.

Ongoing cases and trials

Radovan Karadžić, former President of Republika Srpska and Supreme Commander of its armed forces, was charged under 11 counts with genocide, crimes against humanity, and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina between 1992 and 1995. Following his arrest and transfer to the Tribunal on 30 July 2008, pleas of not guilty were entered on his behalf to all charges. The pretrial conference was expected to be held in September 2009. Mr. Karadžić was President of the three-member Presidency of the Republika Srpska from its creation on 12 May 1992 until 17 December 1992, and thereafter sole President of Republika Srpska and Supreme Commander of its armed forces. The Serbian authorities announced his arrest on 21 July 2008.

In the case against Ante Gotovina, Ivan Čermak and Mladen Markač, who were charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Croatia in 1995, the trial commenced on 10 March 2008. The indictment against Mr. Gotovina, a former high-ranking Croatian military official, was unsealed in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1199]. After evading arrest for almost four years, Mr. Gotovina was arrested in 2005 in the Canary Islands by the Spanish authorities and transferred to The Hague [YUN 2005, p. 1388]. He was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war, allegedly committed during and after a Croatian offensive in the Krajina region of Croatia in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 580]. On 14 July 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1489], the Trial Chamber decided to join two cases involving Mr. Gotovina and Messrs. Čermak and Markač [YUN 2004, p. 1276] in one indictment and accepted proposed amendments to the indictment. The three were charged with persecutions, deportation, inhumane acts, plunder of public or private property, wanton destruction of cities, towns or villages, murder, and cruel treatment; all allegedly committed against Serbs in 1995, during, and in the aftermath of a Croatian military offensive. At that time, Mr. Gotovina and Mr. Čermak were senior military commanders on the ground, while Mr. Markač was the commander of the Croatian Special Police. On 5 December 2006, the accused made further appearances to enter pleas to the new counts in the joinder (consolidated) indictment. All three pleaded not guilty [YUN 2007, p. 1335].

The trial of Ramush Haradinaj, Idriz Balaj and Lahi Brahimagaj, who were charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Kosovo in 1998, began on 5 March 2008. Judgement was delivered on 3 April. Mr. Brahimagaj was sentenced to six years of imprisonment. The accused Haradinaj and Balaj were acquitted. Mr. Haradinaj and Mr. Brahimagaj, who belonged to the Kosovo Liberation Army, had surrendered to the Tribunal on 9 March 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1388]. Mr. Balaj, who was serving a sentence pursuant to a conviction in 2002, had been transferred to the Tribunal on the same day [YUN 2007, p. 1335].

The trial of Rasim Delić, who was charged with violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina between July 1993 and December 1995, commenced on 9 July 2007, and the evidence closed on 11 June 2008. Judgement was rendered on 15 September, when he was sentenced to three years of imprisonment. Mr. Delić, commander of the main staff of the Army of Bosnia-Herzegovina, was indicted on 15 February 2005 and charged, on the basis of his superior command responsibility, with four counts of violations of the laws or customs of war [YUN 2005, p. 1388].

Milan Martić, a former political leader of Croatian Serbs, was sentenced to 35 years of imprisonment on 12 June 2007 for crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war committed in Croatia between 1991 and 1995. Mr. Martić was found to have participated in a joint criminal enterprise that included former Serbian President Slobodan Milošević, whose aim was to create a unified Serbian State through a systematic campaign of crimes against non-Serbs inhabiting areas in Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina envisaged to become parts of such a State. He was also convicted of ordering rocket attacks on downtown Zagreb on 2 and 3 May 1995 in which seven people died and more than 200 were wounded [YUN 2007, p. 1336]. On 8 October 2008, the Appeals Chamber rendered final judgement on the case, dismissing nine of the 10 grounds of Mr. Martić's appeal and affirming the 35-year sentence of imprisonment handed down at the trial.

Mile Mrkšić, Miroslav Radić and Veselin Šljivančanin were indicted in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1322] for alleged involvement in the execution of some 200 Croats and non-Serbs removed from Vukovar hospital in 1991 [YUN 2006, p. 1490]. On 27 September 2007, the Tribunal sentenced Messrs. Mrkšić and Šljivančanin, former senior officers of the Yugoslav People's Army (JNA), to 20 years' imprisonment and five years' imprisonment, respectively, for their role in the crimes at Ovčara. Mr. Radić, a former JNA captain, was acquitted of all charges [YUN 2007, p. 1336]. Appeals for Messrs. Mrkšić and Šljivančanin were pending.

With regard to the Popović et al. case [YUN 2005, p. 1390], the trial commenced on 14 July 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1488]. The prosecution case closed on 7 February 2008 and the defence case began on 2 June. The indictment jointly charged Vujadin Popović, Ljubiša Beara, Drago Nikolić, Ljubomir Borovčanin and Vinko Pandurević with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, extermination, murder, persecutions, forcible transfer and deportation, committed in 1995. It also charged Radivoje Miletić and Milan Gvero with crimes against humanity and a violation of the laws or customs of war. All the charges related to the mass murder and ethnic cleansing of Bosnian Muslims in Srebrenica after the fall of the former UN safe haven to Bosnian Serb forces in July 1995 [YUN 2007, p. 1336].

The trial of Ljube Boškoski and Johan Tarčulovski, who were charged with violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed against ethnic Albanians in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) in August 2001, commenced on 16 April 2007. Mr. Boškoski was the Minister of Interior of FYROM between May 2001 and November 2002, and Mr. Tarčulovski was a police officer acting as an escort inspector to the President's security unit in 2001 [YUN 2007, p. 1336]. The trial concluded on 8 May 2008, and judgement was delivered on 10 July. Mr. Boškoski was acquitted on all counts and Mr. Tarčulovski was sentenced to 12 years of imprisonment.

The trial of Vojislav Šešelj, who was charged with 14 counts of crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war in Croatia, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Vojvodina (Serbia) from 1991 until 1993 [YUN 2003, p. 1311; YUN 2004, p. 1277], commenced on 27 November 2006 in his absence [YUN 2006, p. 1490]. His trial began anew on 7 November 2007 and the presentation of evidence began on 11 December. Mr. Šešelj was the founder and president of the Serbian Radical Party and was elected as a member of the Assembly of the Republic of Serbia in June 1991. The indictment alleged that he was a leader of a movement whose purpose was the permanent forcible removal of a majority of the non-Serb populations from approximately one third of the territory of Croatia, from large parts of Bosnia and Herzegovina and from parts of Vojvodina, in order to make those areas part of a Serb-dominated state [YUN 2007, p. 1337].

In May 2006, the Trial Chamber charged Jovica Stanišić, former head of the State Security Service (DB) of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Republic of Serbia, and Franko Simatović, Commander of the DB Special Operations Unit, with four counts of crimes against humanity and one count of violation of the laws or customs of war [YUN 2007, p. 1337]. Owing to the health condition of Mr. Stanišić, the Appeals Chamber on 16 May 2008 adjourned the proceedings for a minimum of three months and directed the Trial Chamber to reassess his state of health before deciding when the trial should commence.

In the case against Milan Lukić, the leader of a paramilitary group called the "White Eagles" or "Avengers," and his cousin Sredoje Lukić, the trial commenced on 9 July 2008 and the prosecution completed its case-in-chief on 11 November. Sredoje Lukić's defence case commenced on 1 December and concluded on 2 December. Milan Lukić's defence case commenced on 17 December. The two were charged with murdering approximately 70 Bosnian Muslim women, children and elderly in a house in Višegrad, by forcing the victims into the house, barricading all the exits and throwing in several explosive devices.

They were also charged with beating Bosnian Muslim men who were detained in the detention camp at the Uzamnica military barracks in Višegrad [YUN 2007, p. 1337].

Momčilo Perišić was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia between October 1992 and December 1995. According to the indictment, between August 1993 and November 1995, Mr. Perišić, Chief of the General Staff of the Yugoslav Army, aided and abetted the planning, preparation, or execution of a military campaign of artillery and mortar shelling and sniping onto civilian areas of Sarajevo, killing and wounding thousands of civilians [ibid.]. His trial commenced on 2 October 2008.

Milan Milutinović, Nikola Šainović, Dragoljub Ojdanić, Nebojša Pavković, Vladimir Lazarević and Sreten Lukić [YUN 2006, p. 1487], in the Milutinović et al. case, were charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Kosovo in 1999. Their trial commenced on 10 July 2006. The Chamber recessed on 21 May 2008, and the President reported to the Security Council regarding Serbia's failure to serve a summons on a potential Chamber witness. Following that report, Serbia served a subpoena on the witness, and in July the Chamber heard the witness' testimony. Closing arguments were made from 19 to 27 August.

Vlastimir Đorđević, a former senior Serbian police official, was arrested on 17 June 2007 in Montenegro and transferred to the Tribunal the next day. Indicted in October 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1312], he managed to evade arrest for almost four years. At his initial appearance on 16 July 2007, he pleaded not guilty to all counts. Mr. Đorđević was charged with deportation, inhumane acts (forcible transfer), murder and persecutions in Kosovo. Originally his case was part of the Milutinović et al. case [YUN 2005, p. 1390], but when that case began with Mr. Đorđević still at large, his case was severed from that of the others [YUN 2007, p. 1337]. As at year's end 2008, his case had not yet come to trial.

Jadranko Prlić, Bruno Stojić, Slobodan Praljak, Milivoj Petković, Valentin Ćorić and Berislav Pušić, in the Prlić et al. case, were charged with grave breaches of the 1949 Geneva Conventions, crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed against Serbs and Muslims in the Croatian-held part of Bosnia and Herzegovina between November 1991 and April 1994. [YUN 2006, p. 1487]. Their trial commenced on 26 April 2006. The six surrendered in April 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1276] and pleaded not guilty. The prosecution case ended on 24 January 2008, and the Chamber began hearing defence evidence on 5 May.

On 21 December 2007, Dragomir Milošević, a former Bosnian Serb Army General, who was found guilty of a range of crimes committed against civilians during the final months of the 1992–1995 siege of Sarajevo, was sentenced to 33 years' imprisonment. Mr. Milošević was convicted on five counts of terror, murder and inhumane acts conducted during a campaign of sniping and shelling which resulted in the injury and death of a great number of civilians in the besieged Bosnian capital [YUN 2007, p. 1338]. The case was in the appellate process.

Mičo Stanišić, former Minister of Internal Affairs of Bosnia and Herzegovina in charge of the police of the Republika Srpska, was charged with crimes against humanity and violations of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1992 [ibid.]. On 16 July 2008, the Prosecution filed a motion requesting that the cases of Stanišić and Župljanin be joined. On 23 September, the Trial Chamber granted the motion and ordered the Prosecution to file an amended consolidated indictment. The joinder indictment was filed on 29 September. According to the indictment, Messrs. Stanišić and Župljanin participated in a joint criminal enterprise as co-perpetrators. They were charged with persecutions, extermination, murder, torture, inhumane acts (including forcible transfer) and deportation; and murder, torture, and cruel treatment. Mr. Stanišić was transferred to The Hague on 11 March 2005, Mr. Župljanin on 21 June 2008.

Zdravko Tolimir was charged with genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, crimes against humanity and a violation of the laws or customs of war allegedly committed in Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1995. Mr. Tolimir was Assistant Commander for Intelligence and Security of the Bosnian Serb Army, Main Staff, reporting directly to the Commander of the Main Staff, General Ratko Mladić. He was arrested on 31 May 2007 in Bosnia and Herzegovina and transferred to The Hague on 1 June [YUN 2007, p. 1335]. His trial was expected to commence in December 2009.

On 17 July, the Appeals Chamber rendered a final judgement in the case of Pavle Strugar. Dismissing all grounds of appeal by Mr. Strugar and taking his post-trial health into account as a mitigating circumstance, it entered a new sentence of seven and a half years of imprisonment. Mr. Strugar, a former commander in the Yugoslav People's Army, had been sentenced by the Trial Chamber in 2005 to eight years' imprisonment [YUN 2005, p. 1389] for having failed to prevent attacks against civilians and the destruction of property in Dubrovnik in 1991 [YUN 2003, p. 1314; YUN 2004, p. 1279].

On 22 April, the Appeals Chamber allowed Enver Hadžihasanović's appeal in part and reduced his sentence of five years of imprisonment [YUN 2006, p. 1486] to three years and six months of imprisonment. Amir Kubura's appeal was also allowed in part, and the Appeals Chamber reduced his sentence of two years and six months of imprisonment [ibid.] to two years of imprisonment.

Naser Orić, a former senior commander of Bosnian Muslim forces in and around Srebrenica, was sentenced in 2006 to two years in prison, was credited for time spent in custody since 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 1311] and was released. Both the defence and the prosecution filed notices of appeal [YUN 2006, p. 1489]. On 3 July 2008, the Appeals Chamber reversed his conviction, finding him not guilty.

Judges of the Court

Ad litem judges

In letters forwarded by the Secretary-General to the Security Council on 31 December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1339], 22 January 2008 [S/2008/44] and 8 February 2008 [S/2008/99], the ICTY President, Judge Fausto Pocar, outlined the Tribunal's need for additional ad litem judges, beyond the Tribunal's statutory maximum of 12, and requested that the Council make provisions to meet that need.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 February [meeting 5841], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1800(2008). The draft [S/2008/107] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1581(2005) of 18 January 2005, 1597(2005) of 20 April 2005, 1613(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1629(2005) of 30 September 2005, 1660(2006) of 28 February 2006 and 1668(2006) of 10 April 2006,

Taking note of the letters dated 31 December 2007 and 22 January and 8 February 2008 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council,

Having considered the proposal made by the President of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 (the International Tribunal) that the Secretary-General be authorized, within existing resources, to appoint additional ad litem judges upon request of the President of the International Tribunal, notwithstanding the fact that their number will from time to time temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for under article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of sixteen at any one time, returning to a maximum of twelve by 31 December 2008, to enable the International Tribunal to conduct additional trials once one or more of the permanent judges of the International Tribunal become available,

Recalling that in its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003, it called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010 (the International Tribunal's completion strategy), and that in its resolution 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, it emphasized the importance of fully implementing the International Tribunal's completion strategy,

Convinced of the advisability of allowing the Secretary-General to appoint ad litem judges additional to the twelve ad litem judges authorized by the statute, as a temporary measure to enable the International Tribunal to conduct additional trials as soon as possible in order to meet completion strategy objectives,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides, therefore, that the Secretary-General may appoint, within existing resources, additional ad litem judges upon request of the President of the International Tribunal, in order to conduct additional trials, notwithstanding the fact that the total number of ad litem judges appointed to the Chambers will from time to time temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of sixteen at any one time, returning to a maximum of twelve by 31 December 2008;

2. Decides also to remain seized of the matter.

Appointment of new judge

By a letter of 25 July [S/2008/507], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that Judge Wolfgang Schomburg (Germany) had resigned as a permanent judge of the Tribunal, effective 18 November, and that Germany had presented the candidacy of Christoph Flügge, a person who met the qualifications prescribed for the Tribunal and whom he wished to appoint for the remainder of Judge Schomburg's term. On 30 July [S/2008/508], the Council President supported the Secretary-General's intention. On 17 November [A/63/548], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly President of Judge Flügge's appointment, of which the Assembly took note on 20 November [meeting 56].

Extension of terms of office

On 24 September [A/63/458-S/2008/621], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly and the Security Council two letters from the ICTY President seeking the extension of the terms of office of the permanent and ad litem judges elected to serve with the Tribunal in 2005, whose terms of office would expire on 16 November 2009 and 23 August 2009, respectively. In addition, the President requested an extension of the terms of the remaining ad litem judges who were not currently appointed to serve at the Tribunal due to the need to ensure that the judges could complete the cases to which they were assigned. The statute of the Tribunal did not provide for the extension of the terms of office of the judges. In the absence of such a provision, the approval of the Council, as the parent organ of the Tribunal, and of the Assembly, as the organ that elected its judges, was needed.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 29 September [meeting 5986], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1837(2008). The draft [S/2008/618] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 24 September 2008 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching two letters dated 5 June and 1 September 2008 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 ("the International Tribunal") to the Secretary-General,

Recalling its resolutions 1581(2005) of 18 January 2005, 1597(2005) of 20 April 2005, 1613(2005) of 26 July 2005, 1629(2005) of 30 September 2005, 1660(2006) of 28 February 2006, 1668(2006) of 10 April 2006 and 1800(2008) of 20 February 2008,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which the Council calls upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010,

Expressing its determination to support the efforts made by the International Tribunal towards the completion of its trial work at the earliest date,

Expressing its expectation that the extension of the terms of office of the judges concerned will enhance the effectiveness of trial proceedings and contribute towards the implementation of the completion strategy,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal who are members of the Appeals Chamber until 31 December 2010, or until the completion of the cases before the Appeals Chamber if sooner:

- Mr. Liu Daqun (China)
- Mr. Theodor Meron (United States of America)
- Mr. Fausto Pocar (Italy)
- Mr. Mohamed Shahabuddeen (Guyana)

2. Decides also to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges at the International Tribunal who are members of the Trial Chambers until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned if sooner:

- Mr. Carmel A. Agius (Malta)
- Mr. Jean-Claude Antonetti (France)
- Mr. Iain Bonomy (United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland)

- Mr. Christoph Flügge (Germany)
- Mr. O-gon Kwon (Republic of Korea)
- Mr. Bakone Melema Moloto (South Africa)
- Mr. Alphonsus Martinus Maria Orie (Netherlands)
- Mr. Kevin Horace Parker (Australia)
- Mr. Patrick Lipton Robinson (Jamaica)
- Ms. Christine Van Den Wyngaert (Belgium)

3. Decides further to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges, currently serving at the International Tribunal, until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned if sooner:

- Mr. Ali Nawaz Chowhan (Pakistan)
- Mr. Pedro David (Argentina)
- Ms. Elizabeth Gwaunza (Zimbabwe)
- Mr. Frederik Harhoff (Denmark)
- Ms. Tsvetana Kamenova (Bulgaria)
- Mr. Uldis Kinis (Latvia)
- Ms. Flavia Lattanzi (Italy)
- Mr. Antoine Mindua (Democratic Republic of the Congo)
- Ms. Janet Nosworthy (Jamaica)
- Ms. Michèle Picard (France)
- Mr. Árpád Prandler (Hungary)
- Ms. Kimberly Prost (Canada)
- Mr. Ole Bjørn Støle (Norway)
- Mr. Stefan Trechsel (Switzerland)

4. Decides to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges, who are not currently appointed to serve at the International Tribunal, until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of any cases to which they may be assigned if sooner:

- Mr. Melville Baird (Trinidad and Tobago)
- Mr. Frans Bauduin (Netherlands)
- Sir Burton Hall (Bahamas)
- Mr. Frank Höpfel (Austria)
- Mr. Raimo Lahti (Finland)
- Mr. Jawdat Naboty (Syrian Arab Republic)
- Ms. Chioma Egondu Nwosu-Iheme (Nigeria)
- Ms. Prisca Matimba Nyambe (Zambia)
- Mr. Brynmor Pollard (Guyana)
- Ms. Vonimbolana Rasoazanany (Madagascar)
- Mr. Krister Thelin (Sweden)
- Mr. Klaus Tolksdorf (Germany)
- Tan Sri Dato' Lamin bin Haji Mohd Yunus (Malaysia)

5. Decides also, without prejudice to the provisions of resolution 1800(2008), to amend article 12, paragraphs 1 and 2, of the statute of the International Tribunal and to replace those paragraphs with the provisions set out in the annex to the present resolution;

6. Decides further to remain seized of the matter.

ANNEX

Article 12

Composition of the Chambers

1. The Chambers shall be composed of a maximum of sixteen permanent independent judges, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State, and a maximum at any one time of twelve ad litem independent judges appointed in accordance with article 13 ter, paragraph 2, of the Statute, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State.

2. A maximum at any one time of three permanent judges and nine ad litem judges shall be members of each Trial Chamber. Each Trial Chamber to which ad litem judges are assigned may be divided into sections of three judges each, composed of both permanent and ad litem judges, except in the circumstances specified in paragraph 5 below. A section of a Trial Chamber shall have the same powers and responsibilities as a Trial Chamber under the Statute and shall render judgement in accordance with the same rules.

On 9 October, the General Assembly, by decision 63/402, endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendation on the extension of ICTY judges' terms of office (see p. 1410).

Further authorization to appoint ad litem judges

In a letter [S/2008/767] transmitted by the Secretary-General to the Security Council on 5 December, the ICTY President sought an extension of the terms of Council resolution 1800(2008), so that the Tribunal could be authorized to have more than the statutory maximum of 12 ad litem judges beyond 31 December.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 December [meeting 6040], the Security Council, unanimously adopted resolution 1849(2008). The draft [S/2008/780] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 5 December 2008 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching the letter dated 26 November 2008 from the President of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 to the Secretary-General,

Recalling its resolution 1800(2008) of 20 February 2008, by which it permitted the total number of ad litem judges appointed at any one time to the Chambers of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("the International Tribunal") to be increased to sixteen until 31 December 2008,

Noting that the International Tribunal currently has a total of fourteen ad litem judges assigned to cases, that three of them are assigned to a case where the judgement delivery is expected by 12 February 2009, and that the appointment of a further ad litem judge to another case expected to commence on 15 December 2008 would take the total number of ad litem judges to fifteen until 12 February 2009,

Recalling that in its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003, it called upon the International Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of

2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010, and that in its resolution 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, it emphasized the importance of fully implementing the completion strategy of the International Tribunal,

Convinced of the advisability of extending this exceptional authorization granted to the Secretary-General in resolution 1800(2008) as a temporary measure to enable the International Tribunal to complete trials and conduct additional trials as soon as possible in order to meet its completion strategy,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that the Secretary-General may appoint, within existing resources, additional ad litem judges upon request of the President of the International Tribunal in order to complete existing trials or conduct additional trials, notwithstanding the fact that the total number of ad litem judges appointed to the Chambers will from time to time temporarily exceed the maximum of twelve provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of sixteen at any one time, returning to a maximum of twelve by 28 February 2009,

2. Decides also to remain seized of the matter.

On 24 December, the General Assembly, by decision 63/552, decided that the agenda item on judges of the ICTY would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2008, the Office of the Prosecutor focused on completing trials and appeals in accordance with the Tribunal's completion strategy, as well as on international cooperation and the arrest of fugitives, the transfer of cases and material, and capacity-building. Radovan Karadžić and Stojan Župljanin were arrested, but Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić remained at large. The new Prosecutor, Serge Brammertz, took office on 1 January. Norman Farrell was appointed as Deputy Prosecutor, taking up his duties on 1 July.

Compared with the previous year, the number of trials had increased. By the end of July, the Office was prosecuting 26 persons in seven simultaneous trials, two of which were awaiting judgement. The cases of seven accused were at the pretrial stage, one of which had commenced earlier, but was adjourned because of the health of an accused. One contempt case had been completed, and a further contempt case, involving two accused, was awaiting trial. Two accused remained at large. The Office was also involved in appellate proceedings on the merits in 11 cases.

The Office continued to develop interaction with the States of the former Yugoslavia to encourage cooperation with the Tribunal and support domestic war crimes prosecutions. In terms of cooperation with the Office, Serbia had provided adequate responses to a number of requests for assistance and had facilitated the appearance of certain important witnesses. Continued cooperation in providing documents and access to archives sought by the Office would be paramount during the remaining senior leadership trials, including the Karadžić case. The most critical aspect of Serbia's cooperation remained the apprehension of fugitives Ratko Mladić and Goran Hadžić.

Although Croatia made available certain archival materials, requests for key documents were still pending. The authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina had granted access to Government archives, provided documents requested, and provided adequate responses to requests for assistance and in facilitating the appearance of witnesses before the Tribunal. Nevertheless, the fact that Radovan Stanković had not yet been apprehended remained a concern. The cooperation of the authorities of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia was generally satisfactory. The Office continued to seek cooperation from Montenegro to take the necessary action against the networks supporting fugitives.

The Registry

The Registry continued to provide operational support to the Chambers and the Office of the Prosecutor and to manage the administration of the Tribunal. It also managed the Detention Unit, the Victims and Witnesses Section, the legal aid office, and the interpretation and translation service. The Registry facilitated the implementation of the completion strategy [YUN 2002, p. 1275], and worked closely with the UN Secretariat in New York and with the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda. Its Registry Advisory Section for Legal and Policy Matters diversified its services to include advice on contracts, legal procurement and human resources matters, claims against ICTY, the negotiation of international agreements on privileges and immunities, liaison with the UN Office of Legal Affairs and Member States, and host State relations.

Between August 2007 and July 2008, the Court Management and Support Services Section supported 12 trials involving 35 accused, as well as several contempt and appeals hearings, while the Administrative Support Services Division was responsible for coordinating the preparation of the second performance report for the 2006–2007 biennium. As the departure of key personnel in advance of the completion dates would have a negative impact on the Tribunal's ability to meet its mandate, the Human Resources Section implemented measures to retain staff, including extended training activities, in which some 950 staff took part. Subsequently, the Division coordinated the preparation of the revised estimates for the 2008–2009 biennium and the proposed programme budget for the 2010–2011 biennium.

The Tribunal's Communications Service in December launched a new website to provide greater information about the Tribunal's history, achievements and ongoing work. It included such research tools as the Tribunal's Court Records Database, which provided access to the Tribunal's court records, comprising nearly 160,000 court filings, and was an important vehicle for the transfer of the Tribunal's knowledge and expertise to the region of the former Yugoslavia and beyond. The Tribunal's outreach programme continued to set the standard for international courts, while its media office remained active with such major media events as the transfer of Radovan Karadžić.

2008–2009 biennium

Ad litem judges. A report [A/62/809] issued in April estimated that the requirements for appointing up to four additional ad litem judges at any one time (to a total of 16) and returning to a maximum of 12 by 31 December, as provided for in Security Council resolution 1800(2008) (see p. 1410), would amount to $374,500. Every effort would be made to meet the related costs within the appropriation for the 2008–2009 biennium, with the actual expenditures being reported in the second performance report for 2008–2009.

ACABQ report. In June [A/62/7/Add.38], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) noted that the appointment of additional ad litem judges was a way to reduce the time frame for completing the Tribunal's work. To assess progress made, the Committee requested that information on the appointment of additional ad litem judges be submitted in the first performance report for the 2008–2009 biennium. It also expected that their appointment would be implemented within existing resources, in accordance with resolution 1800(2008). On that basis, the Committee recommended that the General Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

Reports of Secretary-General. In October, the Secretary-General transmitted a report on revised estimates for the 2008–2009 biennium [A/63/513] reflecting additional resource requirements in the amount of $14,979,500, net of staff assessment, over the initial appropriation for 2008–2009 as approved by General Assembly resolution 62/230 [YUN 2006, p. 1341]. The resources related primarily to the revised trial schedule for 2009 as a result of the apprehension of certain high-level accused, and the continuation into 2009 of trials that had been planned for completion by the end of 2008. The Assembly was requested to approve an additional appropriation of $16,043,500 gross ($14,979,500 net) to the ICTY Special Account.

The first performance report of ICTY for the 2008–2009 biennium [A/63/559], submitted in November in response to resolution 62/230, reflected a requirement for additional appropriations of $11.4 million, net of staff assessment, over the initial appropriation for that biennium. The Assembly was requested to approve an additional appropriation of $13,117,900 gross ($11,404,700 net) to the ICTY Special Account.

ACABQ report. In December [A/63/595], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve additional appropriations for the 2008–2009 biennium in the amount of $15,548,100 gross to the ICTY Special Account.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/63/644], adopted resolution 63/255 without vote [agenda item 131].

Financing of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2008–2009, of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, his first performance report on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for the biennium, and his report on the revised estimates arising in respect of Security Council resolution 1800(2008) on the appointment of additional ad litem judges at the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Stressing the need fully to respect and maintain the balance between the principal organs of the United Nations within their respective purviews and mandates in accordance with the Charter,

Reaffirming its authority in the consideration of all budgetary issues, as stipulated in the Charter,

Recalling its resolution 47/235 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 62/230 of 22 December 2007,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2008–2009, of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, his first performance report of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for the biennium, and his report on the revised estimates arising in respect of Security Council resolution 1800(2008) on the appointment of additional ad litem judges at the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Reaffirms, in the context of all Security Council decisions on the International Tribunals, the prerogatives of the General Assembly in the issues related to administrative and budgetary matters;

4. Reiterates that, in accordance with the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, the submission of the budget proposals is a prerogative of the Secretary-General;

5. Invites the Secretary-General to provide all intergovernmental bodies with the required information regarding procedures for administrative and budgetary matters;

6. Requests the President of the General Assembly to bring to the attention of the President of the Security Council the contents of the present resolution;

7. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 of a total amount of 376,232,900 United States dollars gross (342,332,300 dollars net) for the biennium 2008–2009, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

8. Also decides, for 2009, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 101,158,400 dollars gross (91,981,800 dollars net), including 14,333,000 dollars gross (12,930,100 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

9. Further decides, for 2009, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 101,158,400 dollars gross (91,981,800 dollars net), including 14,333,000 dollars gross (12,930,100 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

10. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 8 and 9 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 18,353,200 dollars, including 2,805,800 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia for the biennium 2008–2009.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the financing of ICTY would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

International Tribunal for Rwanda

In 2008, the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR), established by Security Council resolution 955(1994) [YUN 1994, p. 299] and based in Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, delivered four Trial Chamber judgements and two Appeals Chamber judgements. In total, by the end of 2008, it had apprehended and detained 66 persons out of some 81 persons indicted. Those detainees had been apprehended in some 23 countries outside of Rwanda. Arrested persons included the Prime Minister of the Interim Government of Rwanda during the genocide, 11 Ministers of that Government in 1994, senior military officials and members of the clergy.

Addressing the Security Council on 12 December [S/PV.6041], ICTR Prosecutor Hassan Bubacar Jallow said that much progress had been achieved during the year in implementing the Tribunal's completion strategy. A significant development in the trial programme had been the conclusion of all the multiple-accused cases with one exception, involving some 14 accused persons. The Office of the Prosecutor was preparing the cases of all detainees awaiting trial, in order to ensure that their cases would proceed in 2009 in accordance with the trial schedule submitted by the Tribunal President.

Also addressing the Council, ICTR President Judge Dennis Byron said that new cases facing the Tribunal in 2009 would include the trials of three accused arrested in 2007 and 2008, a retrial ordered by the Appeals Chamber, and a contempt of court case. However, the denial of the Prosecutor's requests to refer one case to Norway and four cases to Rwanda for trial put a strain on the Tribunal's capacity, as those referrals had formed an integral part of its completion strategy. The Prosecutor explained that the Appeals Chamber, while acknowledging the independence and impartiality of the Rwandan judiciary, had upheld the rejection of the request by the Trial Chambers essentially out of concern that the work of the defence could be impeded by the possible reluctance of defence witnesses to travel to Rwanda to testify, as well as the potential security risks those witnesses might face. That setback had not closed the door on the referral strategy. The Office of the ICTR Prosecutor, together with the Office of the Prosecutor General in Rwanda, had identified measures that Rwanda could take to meet the concerns of the Chambers. They had agreed that, once those measures were implemented by the Rwandan Government, the ICTR Prosecutor would consider submitting new requests to the judges early in 2009 for the referral of cases to Rwanda.

The ICTR President stated that unfortunately no new arrests could be reported for the 13 fugitives still at large. As the end of the Tribunal's mandate drew near, he reiterated his call upon Member States to co-operate fully with the Tribunal to ensure their arrest and transfer as soon as possible.

The activities of ICTR were covered in two reports to the Security Council and the General Assembly, for the periods of 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2008 [A/63/209-S/2008/514] and 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 [A/64/206-S/2009/396].

On 13 October, the Assembly took note of the 2007/2008 report (decision 63/505).

The Chambers

ICTR Chambers were composed of 16 permanent judges and nine ad litem judges at the end of June. Nine permanent judges sat in the three Trial Chambers, while seven permanent judges sat in the Appeals Chamber. Each Trial Chamber to which ad litem judges were assigned could be divided into sections of three judges each, composed of both permanent and ad litem judges. The Appeals Chamber was common with the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and for each appeal, the Appeals Chamber was composed of five judges.

New arrests

Augustin Ngirabatware, former Minister of Planning, was arrested in Frankfurt, Germany, on 17 September 2007 and was transferred to the UN Detention Facility in Arusha on 8 October 2008. He was charged with genocide, complicity to genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. Callixte Nzabonimana, the former Minister of Youth and Sports, was arrested in Tanzania in February 2008 and transferred to Arusha. He was charged with six counts of genocide, conspiracy to commit genocide, complicity to genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide, as well as crimes against humanity and war crimes. Dominique Ntawukuriryayo, a former sub-prefect in the Butare prefecture, was arrested in France in October 2007 and transferred to Arusha on 5 June 2008. He was charged with three counts of genocide, complicity in genocide and direct and public incitement to commit genocide.

Ongoing trials

In the trial of Tharcisse Renzaho, closing arguments were heard on 14 and 15 February, and judgement was expected in July 2009. Colonel Renzaho, a former prefect of Kigali-ville, was arrested on 29 September 2002 in Kinshasa, Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), and transferred to the Tribunal on the following day [YUN 2002, p. 1285]. In 2005, he pleaded not guilty to six counts of genocide, complicity in genocide, crimes against humanity (murder, rape) and violations of the Geneva Conventions and Additional Protocol II.

In the trial of Emmanuel Rukundo, former military chaplain in the armed forces, closing arguments were heard on 20 February. Mr. Rukundo was charged with three counts of genocide and crimes against humanity [YUN 2006, p. 1497].

Athanase Seromba, a Roman Catholic priest of Nyange Parish in Kivumu commune, was convicted in 2006 of genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity and sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment [YUN 2006, p. 1497]. The Appeals Chamber, on 12 March, quashed the finding that he aided and abetted genocide by certain acts and held that he committed genocide and extermination as a crime against humanity by virtue of his role in the destruction of a church and the consequent death of the approximately 1,500 Tutsi refugees sheltering inside. It also affirmed that he aided and abetted genocide in relation to the killings of two people. Consequently, the Appeals Chamber quashed the sentence imposed by the Trial Chamber and entered a new sentence of life imprisonment.

The trial in the case of Callixte Kalimanzira, the former acting Minister of the Interior [YUN 2005, p. 1397], began on 5 May and concluded on 30 June. He was charged with genocide, complicity in genocide and direct and public incitement to commit genocide. The defence case was expected to be completed in 2008, with judgement to be delivered in the first half of 2009.

The defence case in the trial of Hormisdas Nsenigimana—a former priest and Rector of Christ-Rio college in Nyanza (Butare prefecture) charged with three counts of crimes against humanity, including genocide, murder and extermination—began on 2 June. Following his arrest in Yaoundé, Cameroon, on 21 March 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1285], Mr. Nsenigimana was transferred to the Tribunal on 10 April. He was alleged to have been at the centre of a group of Hutu extremists that planned and carried out targeted attacks in Nyanza in 1994. Moreover, he purportedly participated directly and indirectly in killings. His trial began on 22 June 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1343].

In the trial of Karemera et al.—against Edouard Karemera, Mathieu Ndirumpatse and Joseph Nzirorera—the defence case for Edouard Karemera, former Minister of the Interior, began on 7 April. The trial was stayed from August 2008 to March 2009 due to the ill-health of the second accused, Matthieu Ndirumpatse, former President of the Mouvement républicain national pour la démocratie et le développement, save for the testimony of four witnesses in November 2008.

In the trial of Siméon Nchamihigo, a former Deputy Prosecutor in Cyangugu prefecture [YUN 2006, p. 1497], the parties made closing arguments on 23 January. On 24 September, he was convicted of genocide and extermination, murder and other inhumane acts as crimes against humanity based on his participation in the killing of Tutsi in April 1994 at various places in Cyangugu. Considering in particular his prominent public position as an aggravating circumstance, the Chamber sentenced him to life imprisonment.

The trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Ephrem Setako, former Director of the Judicial Affairs Division of the Ministry of Defence [YUN 2004, p. 1286], began on 25 August.

Augustin Ngirabatware, the former Minister of Planning, made his initial appearance before the Court on 10 October, following his arrest and transfer from Germany; he pleaded not guilty to all counts in the indictment.

In the case of Casimir Bizimungu et al. [YUN 1999, pp. 1222 & 1223]—against former Health Minister Casimir Bizimungu, former Trade and Industry Minister Justin Mugenzi, former Civil Service Minister Prosper Mugiraneza and former Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Minister Jérôme Bicamumpaka—the evidentiary phase of the case had concluded and the Chamber conducted a site visit in Rwanda from 5 to 10 October. The parties filed their closing briefs between 1 October and 21 November, and oral arguments were heard between 1 and 5 December.

The Pauline Nyiramasuhuko et al. (“Butare”) case closed on 2 December and the filing of closing briefs was expected. The case, involving six persons charged with genocide, crimes against humanity and serious violations of the Geneva Conventions, opened in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1208]. The accused were Pauline Nyiramasuhuko, former Rwandan Minister for Family and Women Affairs (the first woman to be indicted by an international criminal tribunal and the only woman to be indicted by the ICTR so far); her son and former leader of the Interahamwe militia, Arsène Shalom Ntahobali; Sylvain Nsabimana, former prefect of Butare; Alphonse Nteziryayo, former Commanding Officer of the Military Police and former prefect of Butare; Joseph Kanyabashi, former Mayor of Ngoma; and Elie Ndayambaje, former Mayor of Muganza. They were accused of committing killings in a calculated, cold-blooded and methodical manner and playing a prominent role in the commission of the crimes in Butare, a religious and academic centre in Rwanda [YUN 2007, p. 1343].

In the trial of Simon Bikindi, composer and singer of popular music [YUN 2002, p. 1285], the Chamber conducted a site visit in Rwanda from 14 to 18 April and the parties presented closing arguments on 26 May. On 2 December, the Chamber convicted Mr. Bikindi of direct and public incitement to commit genocide and sentenced him to 15 years of imprisonment; he was acquitted of conspiracy to commit genocide, genocide, complicity in genocide and crimes against humanity. The Prosecution had charged that Mr. Bikindi participated in the anti-Tutsi campaign in 1994 through his musical compositions and speeches he made at public gatherings, inciting and promoting hatred and violence against Tutsi [YUN 2007, p. 1343].

In the Ndindiliyimana et al. (“Military II”) case [YUN 2006, p. 1497]—against Augustin Ndindiliyimana, former Chief of Staff of the Gendarmerie, Augustin Bizimungu, former Chief of Staff of the Army, François-Xavier Nzuwonemeye, former Commander of the Reconnaissance Battalion, and Innocent Sagahutu, former Second-in-Command of the Reconnaissance Battalion—Mr. Ndindiliyimana commenced his case on 16 January and closed it on 23 June. Mr. Nzuwonemeye commenced his defence on 23 June and completed his case on 8 October. The Chamber commenced hearing the case of the final accused, Mr. Sagahutu, on 20 October. On 4 December, the proceedings were adjourned until 2009.

In the trial of businessman Protais Zigiranyirazo [YUN 2001, p. 1207], the parties delivered closing arguments on 28 and 29 May. On 18 December, he was found guilty of having participated in a joint criminal enterprise with the common purpose of committing genocide and extermination of Tutsi, as well as aiding and abetting genocide, and was sentenced to 20 years’ imprisonment. Mr. Zigiranyirazo had been a member of the Akazu, the inner circle of the late President of Rwanda, Juvénal Habyarimana [YUN 2007, p. 1344].

On 18 December, the Chamber rendered a judgment in the Bagosora et al. (“Military I”) case involving four senior army officers [YUN 2007, p. 1345]. Colonel Théoneste Bagosora, former Director of Cabinet in the Ministry of Defence, Major Aloys Ntabakuze, former Commander of the Para Commando Battalion, and Colonel Anatole Nsengiyumva, former commander of the Gisenyi operational sector, were convicted of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes and sentenced to life imprisonment. The Chamber acquitted General Gratien Kabiligi, head of the operations bureau of the Army General Staff, of all charges and ordered his release.

On 28 May, the Chamber denied the Prosecutor’s request to transfer the case of one detainee, former Interahamwe leader Yusuf Munyakazi [YUN 2004, p. 1286], to Rwanda. The Chamber found that the applicable sentence to the crimes alleged against Mr. Munyakazi, life imprisonment in isolation, precluded the referral of his case. It was also not satisfied that, upon referral, the accused’s rights to an independent tribunal and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses would be guaranteed.

On 17 November, the Chamber denied the Prosecutor’s request to refer the case of Jean-Baptiste Gatete [YUN 2002, p. 1285], a businessman, to Rwanda. The decision, which the Prosecution did not appeal, followed the Chamber’s previous denial of transfer to Rwanda in the case of Gaspard Kanyarukiga in June 2008. That decision, which raised concerns about possible problems in obtaining witnesses and the risk of solitary confinement in Rwanda, was upheld by the Appeals Chamber in October.

On 4 December, the Trial and the Appeals Chambers rejected the requested referral of the case of Ildephonse Hategekimana, commander of the Ngoma Military Camp, to Rwanda for trial.

On 14 January, François Karera, former prefect of Kigali-Rural, filed his notice of appeal against his conviction on 7 December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1344], of genocide and extermination and murder as crimes against humanity, based on his participation in the killing of Tutsi in April and May 1994, for which he was sentenced to life imprisonment. The hearing of the appeal took place on 28 August.

On 13 March, the Appeals Chamber heard an appeal on the conviction of Tharcisse Muvunyi, a Lieutenant-Colonel stationed at the École des sous-officiers in Butare, for genocide, direct and public incitement to commit genocide, and other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity; he had been sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment [YUN 2006, p. 1495]. On 29 August, the Chamber dismissed the Prosecutor's appeal and granted Mr. Muvunyi's appeal in part. It reversed his convictions for genocide and other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity; reversed one conviction for direct and public incitement to commit genocide; quashed a second such conviction along with the sentence; and ordered a retrial of an allegation under one count of the indictment.

Extension of terms of office

The President of ICTR, Judge Dennis Byron, in letters transmitted by the Secretary-General to the General Assembly and the Security Council on 13 June [A/62/896-S/2008/436], sought authorization for extending the terms of office of nine permanent judges and eight ad litem judges (whose terms were to expire on 31 December 2008) to 31 December 2009, or until the completion of the cases to which they were assigned if sooner. He also sought an extension to 31 December 2009 of the terms of the remaining nine ad litem judges who were not yet appointed to serve at the Tribunal.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 18 July [meeting 5937], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1824(2008). The draft [S/2008/467] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 13 June 2008 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching the letter dated 6 June 2008 from the President of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("the Tribunal") to the Secretary-General,

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002, 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002 and 1449(2002) of 13 December 2002,

Recalling in particular its resolutions 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003 and 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, in which it called upon the Tribunal to take all possible measures to complete investigations by the end of 2004, to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and to complete all work in 2010,

Recalling that on 13 June 2006, the Council decided, in its resolution 1684(2006), to extend the term of office of eleven permanent judges of the Tribunal until 31 December 2008, and that on 13 October 2006, the Council decided in its resolution 1717(2006) to extend the term of office of the eighteen ad litem judges of the Tribunal until 31 December 2008,

Noting that two of the permanent judges and one of the ad litem judges currently serving at the Tribunal have indicated their intention to resign in 2008 upon the completion of their respective cases, and that at this stage it is not expected that their replacement will be necessary,

Noting also the progress made by the Tribunal towards the completion of its trial work at the earliest date,

Noting further the projections provided by the Tribunal as to the completion of all the remaining cases at trial stage before the end of December 2009,

Expressing its expectation that the extension of the terms of office of the judges concerned will enhance the effectiveness of trial proceedings and contribute towards ensuring the implementation of the completion strategy,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges of the Tribunal who are members of the Appeals Chamber until 31 December 2010, or until the completion of the cases before the Appeals Chamber if sooner:

—Mr. Mehmet Güney (Turkey)

—Ms. Andrésia Vaz (Senegal)

2. Decides also to extend the term of office of the following permanent judges of the Tribunal who are members of the Trial Chambers until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned if sooner:

—Sir Charles Michael Dennis Byron (Saint Kitts and Nevis)

—Mr. Asoka de Silva (Sri Lanka)

—Mr. Sergei Alekseevich Egorov (Russian Federation)

—Ms. Khalida Rachid Khan (Pakistan)

—Mr. Erik Møse (Norway)

—Ms. Arlette Ramaroson (Madagascar)

—Mr. William Hussein Sekule (United Republic of Tanzania)

3. Decides further to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges, currently serving at the Tribunal, until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of the cases to which they are assigned if sooner:

—Ms. Florence Rita Arrey (Cameroon)

—Ms. Solomy Balungi Bossa (Uganda)

—Ms. Taghreed Hikmat (Jordan)

—Mr. Vagn Joensen (Denmark)

—Mr. Gberdao Gustave Kam (Burkina Faso)

—Mr. Lee Gacuiga Muthoga (Kenya)

—Mr. Seon Ki Park (Republic of Korea)

—Mr. Emile Francis Short (Ghana)

4. Decides to extend the term of office of the following ad litem judges, who have not yet been appointed to serve at the Tribunal, until 31 December 2009, or until the completion of any cases to which they may be assigned if sooner:

- Mr. Aydin Sefa Akay (Turkey)
- Ms. Karin Hökberg (Sweden)
- Ms. Flavia Lattanzi (Italy)
- Mr. Kenneth Machin (United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland)
- Mr. Joseph Edward Chiondo Masanche (United Republic of Tanzania)
- Tan Sri Dato' Hj. Mohd. Azmi Dato' Hj. Kamaruddin (Malaysia)
- Mr. Mparany Mamy Richard Rajohnson (Madagascar)
- Mr. Albertus Henricus Joannes Swart (Netherlands)
- Ms. Aura E. Guerra de Villalaz (Panama)

5. Decides also to amend article 11, paragraphs 1 and 2, of the statute of the Tribunal and to replace those paragraphs with the provisions set out in the annex to the present resolution;

6. Decides further to remain seized of the matter.

ANNEX

Composition of the Chambers

1. The Chambers shall be composed of a maximum of sixteen permanent independent judges, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State, and a maximum at any one time of nine ad litem independent judges appointed in accordance with article 12 ter, paragraph 2, of the present Statute, no two of whom may be nationals of the same State.

2. A maximum at any one time of three permanent judges and six ad litem judges shall be members of each Trial Chamber. Each Trial Chamber to which ad litem judges are assigned may be divided into sections of three judges each, composed of both permanent and ad litem judges. A section of a Trial Chamber shall have the same powers and responsibilities as a Trial Chamber under the present Statute and shall render judgement in accordance with the same rules.

The General Assembly, by decision 62/421 of 28 July, endorsed the recommendation of the Secretary-General (see p. 1418) on the extension of ICTR judges' terms of office and decided that it would take effect as at 1 January 2009.

Letter from ICTR President. In a letter [S/2008/799] transmitted by the Secretary-General to the Security Council on 18 December, the ICTR President requested consideration of three issues: increasing, from 1 January to 31 December 2009, the maximum number of ad litem judges to serve at the Tribunal at any one time from 9 to 12; the possibility for the section of a Trial Chamber to sit in any particular case to be composed of ad litem judges only; and permission for judges whose term was coming to an end to take on another judicial or quasi-judicial position while they finalized the judgement-writing phase of their remaining cases. Those measures would allow the Tribunal to downsize and at the same time complete both ongoing and new trials.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 6052], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1855(2008). The draft [S/2008/798] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, 1165(1998) of 30 April 1998, 1329(2000) of 30 November 2000, 1411(2002) of 17 May 2002 and 1431(2002) of 14 August 2002,

Recalling in particular that in its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003, it called upon the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("the International Tribunal") to take all possible measures to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010, and that in its resolution 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, it emphasized the importance of fully implementing the completion strategy of the International Tribunal,

Taking note of the letter dated 18 December 2008 from the Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council attaching the letter dated 10 December 2008 from the President of the International Tribunal to the Secretary-General, and having considered the proposals made by the President of the International Tribunal,

Noting that two permanent judges currently serving at the International Tribunal will resign by the end of 2008, and that three other permanent judges have indicated their intention to resign upon the completion of their respective cases, and that their replacement will not be necessary if the International Tribunal is authorized to assign more ad litem judges to cases,

Convinced of the advisability of allowing the Secretary-General to appoint ad litem judges additional to the nine ad litem judges authorized by the statute of the International Tribunal, as a temporary measure to enable the International Tribunal to complete trials and conduct additional trials as soon as possible in order to meet its completion strategy,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Decides that the Secretary-General may appoint, within existing resources, additional ad litem judges upon request of the President of the International Tribunal in order to complete existing trials or conduct additional trials, notwithstanding the fact that the total number of ad litem judges appointed to the Chambers will from time to time temporarily exceed the maximum of nine provided for in article 11, paragraph 1, of the statute of the International Tribunal, to a maximum of twelve at any one time, returning to a maximum of nine by 31 December 2009;

2. Decides also to amend article 11, paragraph 2, of the statute of the International Tribunal as set out in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Decides further to remain seized of the matter.

ANNEX

Article 11

Composition of the Chambers

2. Each Trial Chamber may be divided into sections of three judges each. A section of a Trial Chamber shall have the same powers and responsibilities as a Trial Chamber under the present Statute and shall render judgement in accordance with the same rules.

Office of the Prosecutor

The Office of the Prosecutor continued to receive and to respond to requests for mutual legal assistance from national jurisdictions investigating for prosecution or extradition of Rwandan fugitives appearing on the International Criminal Police Organization (ICPO-INTERPOL) wanted list. It also continued the hunt for the remaining 13 fugitives and particularly four high-level accused, including Félicien Kabuga.

There was no indication of any steps taken by the Government of Kenya—other than the earlier seizure of one property—to implement the recommendations of the ICTR-Kenya Police Joint Task Force or the requests of ICTR in respect of the person and property of Félicien Kabuga, accused of committing crimes against humanity and participating in the 1994 genocide, principally through financial support.

In September, the Prosecutor held consultations with the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC) and Government officials in Kinshasa regarding the arrest and transfer to Arusha of some half a dozen indictees who had taken shelter in the DRC. The discussions with the Government had been positive and encouraging. However, conflict in the eastern part of the DRC, where most of the fugitives were located, had set back the tracking and arrest programme.

In November, the Office hosted a conference of all the Prosecutors of the Tribunals, as well as prosecutors from countries involved in the investigation and prosecution of international crimes. The meeting was convened in the context of the increasingly important role of national systems in combating impunity, with a view to sharing information and experiences and creating a forum through which such an exchange could continue beyond the lifetime of the ad hoc tribunals. There was much concern amongst the tribunals and national prosecuting authorities that the latter should continue to have access to the tribunals' information and databases in order to facilitate national investigation and prosecution.

With completion in sight, ICTR continued to lose critical staff at a difficult time. Since January, the Office of the Prosecutor had lost 20 per cent of its staff. The adoption of measures to provide incentives to staff whose services were critical was all the more urgent.

The Registry

The Registry continued to support the judicial process by servicing the Tribunal's other organs and the defence, as well as by seeking support from States, international organizations and other stakeholders in the conduct of proceedings. It maintained high-level diplomatic contacts with States and international organizations, and saw a significant increase in judicial cooperation with Member States. Through formal and informal agreements, it secured their cooperation with the Tribunal in support of the smooth running of trials. Rwanda continued to cooperate with the Tribunal in facilitating the flow of witnesses from Kigali to Arusha and providing documents to trial proceedings. In addition, on 4 March, the Registrar signed an agreement on enforcement of sentences between Rwanda and the United Nations.

Through its Outreach Programme, the Tribunal conducted workshops aimed at strengthening the Rwandan judicial capacity in areas such as international criminal law, advocacy skills, online legal research, rights of the accused and court information management.

Financing*2008–2009 biennium

Reports of Secretary-General. In October [A/63/506], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements of $28,851,100 gross ($26,959,100 net) over the initial appropriation for ICTR for the 2008–2009 biennium, as approved by the General Assembly in resolution 62/229 [YUN 2007, p. 1347]. The increased requirements related primarily to the revision of the trial schedule for 2009 as a result of the apprehension of certain high-level accused, as well as the continuation into 2009 of some of the trials that were originally planned for completion by the end of 2008.

In the first performance report of ICTR for the 2008–2009 biennium [A/63/558], submitted in November pursuant to Assembly resolution 62/229, the Secretary-General requested an additional appropriation in the amount of $7,831,700 gross ($6,948,000 net) over the initial appropriation for the biennium, reflecting changes with respect to exchange rates, inflation and standard salary costs.

ACABQ report. In December [A/63/595], ACABQ, recommended that the Assembly approve additional appropriations for the 2008–2009 biennium in the amount of $30,190,700 gross.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/643], adopted resolution 63/254 without vote [agenda item 130].

Financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2008–2009, of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, and his first performance report on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium 2008–2009,

Having also considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the recommendations contained therein,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 49/251 of 20 July 1995 on the financing of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 62/229 of 22 December 2007,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the budget, for the biennium 2008–2009, of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, and his first performance report on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium 2008–2009;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Decides on a revised appropriation to the Special Account for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994, of a total amount of 305,378,600 United States dollars gross (282,597,100 dollars net) for the biennium 2008–2009, as detailed in the annex to the present resolution;

4. Also decides, for the year 2009, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the scale of assessments applicable to the regular budget of the United Nations for the year, the amount of 84,657,900 dollars gross (78,253,300 dollars net), including 19,011,200 dollars gross (17,565,250 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

5. Further decides, for the year 2009, to apportion among Member States, in accordance with the rates of assessment applicable to peacekeeping operations for the year, the amount of 84,657,900 dollars gross (78,253,300 dollars net), including 19,011,200 dollars gross (17,565,250 dollars net), being the increase in assessments;

6. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraphs 4 and 5 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the amount of 12,809,200 dollars, including 2,891,900 dollars, being the increase in the estimated staff assessment income approved for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium 2008–2009.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the financing of ICTR would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Functioning of the Tribunals

Staff retention

In its resolution 61/274 [YUN 2007, p. 1349], the General Assembly noted that there might be difficulties in retaining and recruiting key staff as the Tribunals completed their mandates, and asked the Secretary-General to report on related cost implications and updated human resources data, including current and projected staff turnover. In response to that resolution, the International Civil Service Committee (ICSC) [A/62/30 & Corr.1] advised that special financial retention incentives for the Tribunals were not considered appropriate, because they were not provided for in the common system and thus would set a precedent, which should be avoided. ICSC also stated that the existing contractual framework should be used to grant contracts that would remove the uncertainty with regard to future employment; that other non-monetary incentives should be made available; and that staff from the Tribunals who were offered appointments in another common system organization should have their reporting date for the new assignment set to coincide with completion of their work with the Tribunal.

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to resolution 61/274, the Secretary-General, on 8 February, submitted a comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain ICTR and ICTY staff [A/62/681]. He recommended that a financial incentive be approved for qualifying staff who remained in their posts until their functions were no longer needed. Considering that the designation of only limited groups of staff as “key” would have a detrimental impact on staff morale, likely resulting in a perception of unequal treatment and a negative impact on staff retention, he recommended that the incentive be applied on as wide a post coverage basis as possible. The financial implications of the incentive would be more than offset by the savings associated with reduced turnover rates, in terms of lower rotation costs and higher productivity and efficiency.

Bearing in mind the views expressed by ACABQ, ICSC and the Assembly, the Secretary-General recommended the introduction of a financial retention incentive scheme. By its terms, staff members would not be considered for an incentive payment unless they had worked for one of the Tribunals for a minimum of five years at the time of their separation. The scheme would target staff having greater seniority and hence the specialized knowledge that the Tribunals wished to retain. The financial implications would amount to $6.9 million for ICTR and $7.2 million for ICTY.

ACABQ report. In March, the Committee noted [A/62/734] that the Tribunals had initiated a number of non-monetary incentives to retain staff until their posts were no longer required—incentives aimed at broadening career options for staff when they left the Tribunals, improving working conditions, and assisting staff in dealing with host country residency and administrative issues. Contracts for all regular posts had been extended until August or October 2009, and the Tribunals were exploring possibilities for the secondment of staff from Member States, the United Nations and other common system organizations on temporary assignment during the final stages of the Tribunals’ operations.

ACABQ recognized the importance of retaining highly skilled and specialized staff in order to complete all trial proceedings and meet the targets set out in the completion strategies of the Tribunals. The Committee was of the view that the Tribunals should employ a variety of tools to retain the services of personnel as long as they were needed. It therefore recommended that the Assembly authorize, on an exceptional basis, the payment of a retention incentive to staff required to remain with the Tribunals until their services and posts were no longer needed, as set out in the drawdown plans of each Tribunal, targeting staff with a minimum of five years of service. The Committee recommended that the incentive be capped at five months’ salary for all staff members, irrespective of the number of years of service at the Tribunals beyond five years. Payment of the retention incentive would become effective with the 2008–2009 biennium, from a date to be fixed by the Assembly.

Responding to the ICSC view that payment of such an incentive would create an inappropriate precedent, ACABQ recommended that, should the Assembly authorize it, the related administrative arrangements should be based only on an ad hoc decision of the Assembly and not on an amendment to the Staff Rules, emphasizing that the exceptional nature of such arrangements for the Tribunals would preclude their application elsewhere in the UN system.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/645], adopted resolution 63/256 without vote [agenda items 130 & 131].

Comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain staff of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the international Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain staff of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

Having also considered the related chapter of the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2007,

Having further considered the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 61/274 of 29 June 2007 on the comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain staff of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain staff of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions contained in the present resolution;

3. Takes note of paragraphs 14 and 15 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

4. Recognizes the critical importance of retaining highly-skilled and specialized staff in order to successfully complete all trial proceedings and to meet the targets set out in the respective completion strategies of the Tribunals in a timely manner;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to use the existing contractual frameworks to offer contracts to staff, in line with dates of planned post reductions in accordance with the relevant prevailing trial schedules, in order to remove uncertainty with regard to future employment with the aim of ensuring that the Tribunals have the necessary capacity to complete their respective mandates effectively, as recommended by the International Civil Service Commission in paragraph 21 (b) of its report.

Implementation of completion strategies

ICTY

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 1292], the ICTY President reported in May [S/2008/326] and November [S/2008/729 & Add.1] on progress made in implementing the ICTY completion strategy. Most of the measures adopted to ensure the timely implementation of that strategy stemmed from a thorough examination of trial and appeal practices carried out by the Working Groups on Speeding up Appeals and Trials. Both Working Groups were reconstituted in April—not only to confirm the success of those measures, but also to examine whether further improvements could be made. By November, both Working Groups had submitted their reports, and fresh recommendations were being implemented.

Out of the 161 accused indicted by the Tribunal, only five remained in the pretrial stage as at late November. With the arrest of Župljanin and Karadžić during the reporting period, only two accused, Mladić and Hadžić, were still at large. Twenty-six accused were being tried and another 10 had appeals pending. All other cases had been completed. It was estimated that all but five of the pending trials would be completed by the end of 2009. The trials of the four most recently accused were estimated to finish during 2010, and the Prlić et al. multi-accused case might also run into 2010. It also appeared likely that a small number of trials would spill over to 2012.

Eight trials had been heard simultaneously, with two separate sittings in each of the Tribunal's three courtrooms. To expedite the conduct of trials, one of the Trial Chambers hearing a multi-accused case held additional hearings during the three-week summer recess, so as to make use of the extended availability of the Tribunal's courtrooms at that time. The Trial Chamber Judges also managed seven cases in the pretrial stage, issuing written and oral decisions on such matters as form of the indictment, challenges to jurisdiction, disclosure of evidence, protective measures for victims and witnesses, provisional release, adjudicated facts, and the admissibility of witness statements.

The Appeals Chamber continued to work at maximum productivity on appeals from both ICTY and ICTR. It delivered judgements on four appeals, leaving only seven appeals pending. As at November, only five accused in four cases were awaiting the start of their trial.

The Office of the Prosecutor continued to work closely with other organs of the Tribunal to expedite proceedings while respecting the rights of the accused. Considerable progress had been made by advancing the multi-leadership cases, narrowing the scope of prosecutions and presenting evidence more efficiently. State cooperation had improved, but there remained a number of outstanding issues, notably concerning the production of documents and the arrest of fugitives—factors which had an important bearing on the dates by which the Tribunal would be able to complete its programme of trials and appeals.

The Prosecutor worked closely with the Offices of the State Prosecutors in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia and the Office of the War Crimes Prosecutor in Serbia. As trial and appeals work progressed, the Office remained committed to strengthening judicial systems in the States of the former Yugoslavia. Cooperation with national prosecution authorities was a cornerstone of its strategy and would remain a priority. Although the Prosecutor's principal obligation was to maintain the quality and progress of prosecution cases before the Tribunal, the Office was managing its resources with a view to the eventual downsizing of its staff and the design of a future residual international mechanism.

ICTR

In response to Security Council resolution 1534(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 1292], the ICTR President submitted reports in May [S/2008/322] and November [S/2008/726] that assessed progress made in implementing the ICTR completion strategy. That strategy called for completing investigations by the end of 2004, all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008, and all of its work in 2010.

Between May and November 2008, one judgement concerning one accused had been delivered. Five cases concerning eight accused were in the judgement drafting phase, with three judgements to be delivered in December. Evidence in two cases concerning five accused had been completed, with closing arguments yet to be heard. Five trials involving 15 accused were ongoing. Six single-accused trials were scheduled to commence within the next months. On 29 August, the Appeals Chamber delivered its judgement in the case of Tharcisse Muvunyi, bringing to 26 the number of persons whose appeals had been completed.

Tools and elements used by the Tribunal to fulfil its completion strategy included use of the judicial calendar to optimize the use of courtrooms and to make the most efficient use of time and resources. For example, between May and November, seven different sections of the Trial Chambers used the Tribunal's four courtrooms in nine different cases. Measures had been developed to improve trial-readiness of cases by pre-prosecution and pre-defence status conferences. In October and November, two external consultants had assisted efforts to improve the management of proceedings. The Tribunal President continued to explore mechanisms to enable the Appeals Chamber to deal with the substantially increased workload expected in 2009 and 2010 in light of the increased number of first-instance judgements to be issued.

The Office of the Prosecutor's tracking team intensified its efforts in locating the 13 remaining fugitives. The Prosecutor intended to request the referral of nine of these cases to national jurisdictions for trial. However, four were earmarked for trial at the Tribunal because of the leadership roles played by the accused—Félicien Kabuga, Protais Mpiranya, Augustin Bizimana and Idelphonse Nizeyimana—during the 1994 genocide. Their possible arrest and transfer to the Tribunal would require a reassessment of the Tribunal's judicial calendar. The Tribunal remained committed to the goal of completing first-instance trials by the end of 2009. Whether that goal could be achieved would depend on the final number of new cases tried before the Tribunal in 2009.

Establishment of ad hoc mechanism

A Working Group on the International Tribunals was established in 2000 on an informal basis to consider matters relating to the United Nations and UN-assisted Tribunals, consisting of legal advisers to permanent missions of States that were members of the Security Council. It was assisted by the Office of Legal Affairs, which acted as the secretariat and provided advice on legal issues.

In a letter of 19 December [S/2008/849], its Chairman informed the Council that the Group made significant progress during the year regarding the establishment of a residual mechanism or mechanisms to carry out certain essential functions of the Tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda following their closure. Working closely with both Tribunals on a draft resolution to be submitted to the Council, early agreement had emerged on a number of issues: fugitives must face trial; impunity was unacceptable; the most senior fugitives, those most responsible, must face international trial by the mechanism(s); transfer to national jurisdictions was an important part of the completion strategies of the Tribunals; continuing witness protection was of critical importance; and the archives of the Tribunals were the property of the United Nations and must be kept under its control.

Although important differences remained with respect to the structure of the residual mechanism(s), the following basic structure had emerged: the residual mechanism(s) would have a trial capacity, based on a roster of judges that could be activated to compose a Trial or Appeals Chamber; the staff of the residual mechanism(s) would be small in number; it would inherit the rights and obligations of the Tribunals and have jurisdiction to try the most senior and most responsible indictees; it would also continue certain essential residual functions of the Tribunals, including the protection of witnesses; the residual mechanism(s) would be established at a date to be determined by a Council resolution, setting out its statutes based on amended statutes of the Tribunals; and the Rules of Procedure and Evidence of the Tribunals would also require amendment, in ways yet to be determined.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 December [meeting 6053], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2008/47 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council recalls its resolution 827(1993) of 25 May 1993, in which it established the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, and its resolution 955(1994) of 8 November 1994, in which it established the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("the Tribunals") and further recalls that in its resolution 1503(2003) of 28 August 2003, it called upon the Tribunals to take all possible measures to complete all trial activities at first instance by the end of 2008 and to complete all work in 2010 (the completion strategies) and that in its resolution 1534(2004) of 26 March 2004, it emphasized the importance of fully implementing the completion strategies.

The Council recalls that the Tribunals were established in particular circumstances of the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda as an ad hoc measure contributing to the restoration and maintenance of peace.

The Council takes note of the presentations made on 12 December 2008 by the Presidents and Prosecutors of the Tribunals to the Council on the implementation of the completion strategies.

Noting with concern that the deadline for the completion of trial activities at first instance has not been met and that the Tribunals have indicated that their work is not likely to end in 2010, the Council emphasizes that trials must be conducted by the Tribunals as quickly and efficiently as possible and expresses its determination to support their efforts toward the completion of their work at the earliest date.

The Council reaffirms the necessity of persons indicted by the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda being brought to justice.

The Council calls upon all States, especially States where fugitives are suspected to be at large, to further intensify cooperation with and render all necessary assistance to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, as appropriate, in particular to achieve the arrest and surrender of all remaining fugitive indictees.

The Council also reaffirms in this context that the referral of cases to competent national jurisdictions is an essential part of the completion strategies and in this regard underlines again the need for the Tribunals to concentrate their work on the prosecution and trial of the most senior leaders suspected of being most responsible for crimes within their jurisdiction, and urges the Tribunals to work with relevant national authorities to secure the transfer of cases which do not involve this level of responsibility for prosecution by competent national jurisdictions.

The Council acknowledges the need to establish an ad hoc mechanism to carry out a number of essential functions of the Tribunals, including the trial of high-level fugitives, after the closure of the Tribunals. In view of the substantially reduced nature of these residual functions, this mechanism should be a small, temporary and efficient structure. Its functions and size will diminish over time. Its expenses will be expenses of the Organization in accordance with Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations.

The Council emphasizes that any such mechanism will derive its authority from a resolution of the Council and from statutes and rules of procedure and evidence based on those existing for the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, modified as appropriate, and that accommodations may be needed to address the differing needs and circumstances of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

The Council expresses its appreciation to its Informal Working Group on International Tribunals for its work to date on the establishment of this mechanism, including through a thorough examination of which functions of the Tribunals are necessary for the administration of justice after their closure. The Council requests the Informal Working Group to continue its efforts in that regard and to concentrate on the main outstanding issues with a view to drafting as soon as possible appropriate instruments necessary for the performance of residual functions of the Tribunals.

In order to facilitate the further work of the Informal Working Group, the Council requests the Secretary-General to present a report within 90 days on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the options for possible locations for the archives of the Tribunals and the seat of the residual mechanism, including the availability of suitable premises for the conduct of judicial proceedings by the residual mechanism, with particular emphasis on locations where the United Nations has an existing presence.

The Council requests the Secretariat to provide the Informal Working Group with all necessary assistance, including interpretation in the six working languages of the Council.

International Criminal Court

In 2008, the International Criminal Court (ICC), established by the Rome Statute [YUN 1998, p. 1209] as a permanent institution with jurisdiction over persons accused of the most serious crimes of international concern (genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes and the crime of aggression), carried out investigations in the Central African Republic, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Darfur (the Sudan) and Uganda.

The activities of ICC were reported to the General Assembly in two annual reports [A/63/323; A/64/356], covering the period from August 2007 through July 2009. As at 31 December, 108 countries had ratified the Rome Statute.

At the end of July, there were seven arrest warrants outstanding. All had been outstanding for over a year; four had been outstanding for over three years. The Court did not have the power to make arrests: that responsibility belonged to States and, by extension, international organizations.

On 13 February, Bruno Cathala, the Court's first Registrar, submitted his resignation to take up a position as President of the Tribunal de grande instance d'Evry (France); on 28 February, the judges of the Court elected Silvana Arbia to succeed him. On 29 July, Judge Navanethem Pillay submitted her resignation, effective 31 August, following approval of her appointment as the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. On 9 September, the judges of the Court elected Didier Daniel Preira as its first Deputy Registrar, for a five-year term beginning on 17 October. On 26 November, the Office of the Prosecutor announced the appointment of Professor Catharine MacKinnon as Special Gender Adviser to the Prosecutor.

The tenth anniversary of the Statute's adoption on 17 July 1998 was marked by States parties to the Statute and by civil society organizations. An observance was held at The Hague on 3 July. The Secretary-General addressed an informal meeting of the Assembly of States Parties on 17 July in New York. Other events included a subregional conference in Benin, attended by the Registrar of the Court, and a celebration in South Africa, attended by Judge Navanethem Pillay on behalf of the Presidency of the Court.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 November [meeting 45], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/21 [draft: A/63/L.19 & Add.1], without vote [agenda item 69].

Report of the International Criminal Court

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 62/12 of 26 November 2007, and all its previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court reaffirms the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reiterating the historic significance of the adoption of the Rome Statute and its tenth anniversary, which was celebrated on 17 July 2008,

Emphasizing that justice, especially transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict societies, is a fundamental building block of sustainable peace,

Convinced that ending impunity is essential if a society in conflict or recovering from conflict is to come to terms with past abuses committed against civilians affected by armed conflict and to prevent future such abuses,

Noting with satisfaction the fact that the International Criminal Court has achieved considerable progress in its analyses, investigations and judicial proceedings in various situations and cases which were referred to it by States parties to the Rome Statute and by the Security Council, in accordance with the Rome Statute,

Recalling that effective and comprehensive cooperation and assistance in all aspects of its mandate by States, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations remains essential for the International Criminal Court to carry out its activities,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretary-General for providing effective and efficient assistance to the International Criminal Court in accordance with the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the International Criminal Court ("Relationship Agreement"),

Acknowledging the Relationship Agreement as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/318 of 13 September 2004, including paragraph 3 of the resolution with respect to the payment in full of expenses accruing to the United Nations as a result of the implementation of the Relationship Agreement, which provides a framework for continued cooperation between the International Criminal Court and the United Nations, which could include the facilitation by the United Nations of the Court's field activities, and encouraging the conclusion of supplementary arrangements and agreements, as necessary,

Welcoming the continuous support given by civil society to the International Criminal Court,

Recognizing the role of the International Criminal Court in a multilateral system that aims to end impunity, establish the rule of law, promote and encourage respect for human rights and achieve sustainable peace, in accordance with international law and the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Expressing its appreciation to the International Criminal Court for providing assistance to the Special Court for Sierra Leone,

1. Welcomes the report of the International Criminal Court for 2007/08;

2. Welcomes the States that have become parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court in the past year, and calls upon all States in all regions of the world that are not yet parties to the Rome Statute to consider ratifying or acceding to it without delay;

3. Welcomes the States parties as well as States not parties to the Rome Statute that have become parties to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the International Criminal Court, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to that Agreement;

4. Calls upon States parties to the Rome Statute that have not yet done so to adopt national legislation to implement obligations emanating from the Statute and to cooperate with the International Criminal Court in the exercise of its functions, and recalls the provision of technical assistance by States parties in this respect;

5. Welcomes the cooperation and assistance provided thus far to the International Criminal Court by States parties as well as States not parties, the United Nations and other international and regional organizations, and calls upon those States that are under an obligation to cooperate to provide such cooperation and assistance in the future, in particular with regard to arrest and surrender, the provision of evidence, the protection and relocation of victims and witnesses and the enforcement of sentences;

6. Emphasizes the importance of cooperation with States that are not parties to the Rome Statute;

7. Invites regional organizations to consider concluding cooperation agreements with the International Criminal Court;

8. Recalls that, by virtue of article 12, paragraph 3, of the Rome Statute, a State which is not a party to the Statute may, by declaration lodged with the Registrar of the International Criminal Court, accept the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court with respect to specific crimes that are mentioned in paragraph 2 of that article;

9. Encourages all States parties to take the interests, needs for assistance and mandate of the International Criminal Court into account when relevant matters are being discussed in the United Nations;

10. Emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of the Relationship Agreement, which forms a framework for close cooperation between the two organizations and for consultation on matters of mutual interest pursuant to the provisions of that Agreement and in conformity with the respective provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Rome Statute, as well as the need for the Secretary-General to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on the expenses incurred and reimbursements received by the United Nations in connection with assistance provided to the International Criminal Court;

11. Notes the fact that the International Criminal Court liaison office to United Nations Headquarters is now fully operational, and encourages the Secretary-General to continue to work closely with that office;

12. Encourages States to contribute to the Trust Fund established for the benefit of victims of crimes within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court and the families of such victims, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to the Trust Fund thus far;

13. Notes the work of the Special Working Group on the Crime of Aggression, which is open to all States on an equal footing, and encourages all States to consider participating actively in the Working Group with a view to elaborating proposals for a provision on the crime of aggression, in accordance with article 123 of the Rome Statute;

14. Also notes that the Review Conference to be held in 2010 may provide an opportunity to address issues, in addition to those relating to the possible definition of the crime of aggression, that have been identified by States, including States that are not parties to the Rome Statute;

15. Takes note of the decision of the Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute at its sixth session, while recalling that, according to article 112, paragraph 6, of the Rome Statute, the Assembly of States Parties shall meet at the seat of the International Criminal Court or at United Nations Headquarters, to hold its seventh session at The Hague, looks forward to the seventh session of the Assembly of States Parties, which is to be held at The Hague from 14 to 22 November 2008, as well as to the resumed seventh session, which is to be held in New York from 19 to 23 January 2009 and from 9 to 13 February 2009, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and facilities in accordance with the Relationship Agreement and resolution 58/318;

16. Encourages the widest possible participation of States in the Assemblies of States Parties, invites States to contribute to the Trust Fund for the participation of the least developed countries, and acknowledges with appreciation contributions made to the Trust Fund thus far;

17. Invites the International Criminal Court to submit, in accordance with article 6 of the Relationship Agreement, a report on its activities for 2008/09, for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session.

Assembly of States Parties

The Assembly of States Parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court adopted two resolutions at its resumed sixth session (New York, 2–6 June) [ICC-ASP/6/20/Add.1] and seven resolutions at its seventh session (The Hague, 14–22 November) [ICC-ASP/7/20].

On 6 June, the Assembly adopted resolutions on funding the disability pension of a former judge of the Court [ICC-ASP/6/Res.7] and on a venue for its next Review Conference [ICC-ASP/6/Res.8].

On 21 November, in its resolution on permanent premises for the Court [ICC-ASP/7/Res.1], the Assembly adopted various measures relating to its financing and construction. By other resolutions adopted on that date, it decided that the Court's Review Conference would be held in Kampala, Uganda, during the first semester of 2010 [ICC-ASP/7/Res.2].

In its resolution on strengthening the Court and the Assembly [ICC-ASP/7/Res.3], it welcomed the entry into force of the Headquarters Agreement between ICC and the host country on 1 March; commended the work of the Court's Liaison Office in New York; stressed the importance of dialogue between the Court and the Bureau of the Assembly; and encouraged States, international and regional organizations and civil society to intensify their support to the Court in its efforts with respect to preserving and providing evidence, sharing information, securing the arrest and surrender to the Court of persons for whom arrest warrants had been issued, and protecting victims and witnesses. It also decided to hold its eighth session from 18 to 26 November 2009 in The Hague.

Also on 21 November, the Assembly adopted resolutions on the role of its Committee of Budget and Finance [ICC-ASP/7/Res.5]; on the languages in which its decisions and other official documents should be published [ICC-ASP/7/Res.6]; and the languages in which the recommendations and other documents of its Committee on Budget and Finance should be published [ICC-ASP/7/Res.7].

As to financing, the Assembly approved the Court's programme budget for 2009 [ICC-ASP/7/Res.4] with appropriations totalling €101,229,900. It resolved that the Working Capital Fund for 2009 would be established in the amount of €7,405,983, and authorized the Registrar to make advances from the Fund.

The Chambers

The judicial activities of the Court were conducted by the Chambers, which consisted of 18 judges, organized in three divisions: the Appeals Division, the Trial Division and the Pre-Trial Division. The Presidency constituted three Pre-Trial Chambers: Pre-Trial Chamber I—the DRC and Darfur (the Sudan); Pre-Trial Chamber II—Uganda; and Pre-Trial Chamber III—Central African Republic.

On 13 June, Trial Chamber I issued a stay of proceedings in the case of Thomas Lubanga Dyilo, alleged leader of the Union des Patriotes Congolais pour la Réconciliation et la Paix and Commander-in-Chief of its military wing, the Forces Patriotiques pour la Libération du Congo. Finding that a fair trial was not possible owing to the prosecution's failure to disclose a significant body of potentially exculpatory evidence to the defence or to make it available to the judges, the Chamber ordered his unconditional release. On 2 July, the prosecution appealed the release. Over a period of five months, the prosecution, having obtained the consent of the relevant information providers, disclosed those materials or made them available to the judges. On 18 November, the Chamber found that the prosecution had met its obligations and that the trial could proceed.

On 29 April, Pre-Trial Chamber I unsealed a warrant of arrest issued on 22 August 2006 against Bosco Ntaganda, alleged Deputy Chief of General Staff for Military Operations of the Forces Patriotiques pour la Libération du Congo. It found that there were reasonable grounds to believe he had committed such war crimes as enlisting and conscripting children under 15 year of age and using them to participate in hostilities. At the end of the year, his arrest warrant remained outstanding.

During the year, Pre-Trial Chamber II continued to monitor the status of execution of the arrest warrants, and to address issues relating to the participation of victims in proceedings.

New arrests, warrants and surrenders

During the year ending 31 July, the Court issued or unsealed four new arrest warrants—three in the situation in the DRC and one in the situation in the Central African Republic. Seven arrest warrants were outstanding: four pertaining to the situation in Uganda, two in Darfur and one in the DRC. All had been outstanding for over a year, and four had been outstanding for over three years.

Mathieu Ngudjolo Chui was surrendered to the Court on 7 February. He and Germain Katanga, who was surrendered to the Court in 2007, were each charged with nine counts of war crimes and four counts of crimes against humanity in the DRC. A hearing was held from 27 June to 16 July, and on 26 September, Pre-Trial Chamber I confirmed seven charges of war crimes and three charges of crimes against humanity. Their joint trial was scheduled to begin in 2009.

In the situation in the Central African Republic, Jean-Pierre Bemba Gombo was arrested in Belgium on 24 May and surrendered to the Court on 3 July. He was suspected of having committed three counts of crimes against humanity and five counts of war crimes.

On 14 July, the Prosecutor submitted an application for a warrant of arrest against Omar Hassan Ahmad Al-Bashir, President of the Sudan, on counts of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. The application was being considered by the judges of Pre-Trial Chamber I.

Office of the Prosecutor

In 2008, the Prosecutor continued to investigate the situations in the Central African Republic, the DRC, Darfur (the Sudan) and Uganda. In the DRC, the Office of the Prosecutor was looking into the numerous reports of crimes committed by a multiplicity of perpetrators and groups in North and South Kivu. In September, the Prosecutor announced the opening of a third case in the DRC, focusing on alleged crimes committed in the Kivu province by perpetrators and groups including the Forces démocratiques de libération du Rwanda, the Congrès national pour la défense du peuple, the regular forces and the Mai-Mai, as well as numerous reports of sexual crimes. Eight missions were conducted inside or outside the DRC to collect information in the context of that new case.

The Office sent an investigation mission to Uganda in May and June to collect additional evidence of supply and support to the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). The Office had also collected a range of information on the crimes allegedly being committed by LRA in the DRC, including abduction of civilians for the purpose of recruitment, forced labour and sexual enslavement. The incidence of alleged crimes rose sharply from September, as LRA, operating increasingly freely across a wide area between Garamba National Park in the DRC and border areas of southern Sudan close to the Central African Republic, put into operation plans to expand their numbers by several hundred through the abduction of civilians, primarily children. The Office received reports of particularly savage attacks taking place in December.

In Darfur, the Office was investigating the mobilization of the State apparatus to plan, commit and cover up crimes against civilians, in particular the Fur, Massaleit and Zaghawa tribes. It was also investigating allegations of rebel crimes, focusing among others on the Haskanita attack against peacekeepers.

In the Central African Republic, the Office continued to gather evidence and establish responsibility for the crimes allegedly committed against the civilian population in 2002/2003, including rape, torture and pillaging. The Office alleged that hundreds of rapes were committed, and that sexual crimes would feature in the case against Mr. Bemba. In parallel, the Office was closely monitoring allegations of crimes committed since the end of 2005 and whether any investigation and prosecution had been conducted. A letter was sent to President François Bozizé to receive information about possible relevant national proceedings.

The Registry

The ICC Registry provided judicial and administrative support to all organs of the Court and carried out its specific responsibilities concerning victims, witnesses, defence and outreach. The Registry sought to develop understanding and awareness of ICC and its activities by strengthening the Court's public information capacity for outreach services in countries where the Court was active. It provided security, administrative and logistical support to the Court's investigations.

Among the Registry's activities, 17 victims participating in the proceedings relating to the DRC were declared indigent and were granted legal aid by the Registrar. Regarding the case against Jean-Pierre Bemba Gombo, relating to rape and sexual crimes committed in the Central African Republic between October 2002 and March 2003, the Registrar travelled there to increase awareness about the Court's activities.

International cooperation

The Rome Statute obliged its States parties to cooperate fully with the Court in its investigations and prosecutions and provided the basis for the cooperation of States, international organizations and civil society with the Court. Cooperation with the United Nations continued to be essential to the Court institutionally and in the different situations and cases. The Court received public and diplomatic support by the United Nations and operational support from UN missions in the field. The first phase of the digitization of the entire legislative history of the Rome process was concluded with cooperation from the Secretariat of the Assembly of States Parties and the UN Office of Legal Affairs.

The Headquarters Agreement between ICC and the host State entered into force on 3 March, providing clarity and certainty on issues that were not adequately covered by the interim arrangements. In executing decisions of the Court, the DRC surrendered two individuals to the Court and Belgium surrendered a third. As at 31 July, the Court had concluded 10 agreements with States on the protection and relocation of witnesses and two ad hoc arrangements. Efforts to finalize a memorandum of understanding between the African Union and the Court continued. On 2 September, the Prosecutor met with the Secretary-General of INTERPOL to pursue a cooperation agreement.

Report of Secretary-General. The General Assembly, in resolution 62/12 [YUN 2007, p. 1351], requested the Secretary-General to inform it on the expenses incurred and reimbursements received by the United Nations for assistance provided to ICC. In October [A/63/471], he informed the Assembly that from October 2004 to August 2008, the United Nations had provided facilities and services in the amount of $989,785, including reimbursements for conference and related services, field security costs, library services and document digitization. In addition, MONUC provided transportation and other services to ICC amounting to $102,253. The Court had regularly reimbursed the United Nations upon receipt of invoices. Two annexes to the report provided information on facilities and services provided to ICC by the United Nations and by MONUC since October 2004.

International legal questions

In 2008, the International Law Commission continued to examine topics relating to the progressive development and codification of international law. It adopted draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers, and provisionally adopted draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties. It adopted draft guidelines on reservations to treaties, and provisionally adopted eight draft articles on invocation of the international responsibility of an international organization. It established a Working Group to consider issues relating to the expulsion of aliens, and held debates on the protection of persons in the event of disasters, issues relating to the immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction, and aspects of the obligation to extradite or prosecute.

The Ad Hoc Committee established by the General Assembly continued to elaborate a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism. In July, the Secretary-General reported on measures taken by States, UN system entities and intergovernmental organizations to implement the 1994 General Assembly Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism. In December, the Assembly condemned all acts, methods and practices of terrorism as criminal and unjustifiable and called on States to adopt further measures to prevent terrorism.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law finalized and approved a draft text, which was adopted in December by the Assembly as the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea. It continued work on public procurement, arbitration and conciliation, insolvency law, and security interests, and considered future work in the areas of electronic commerce and commercial fraud. The Commission also welcomed initiatives undertaken to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the 1958 New York Convention on Foreign Arbitral Awards.

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued to consider, among other items, proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security in order to strengthen the Organization and the implementation of Charter provisions on assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII.

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country addressed a number of issues raised by permanent missions to the United Nations, including transportation and parking matters, the security of missions and their personnel, delays in issuing visas and accelerating immigration and customs procedures.

International Law Commission

The 34-member International Law Commission (ILC) held its sixtieth session in Geneva in two parts (5 May–6 June; 7 July–8 August) [A/63/10]. During the second part, the International Law Seminar held its forty-fourth session, which was attended by 27 participants, mostly from developing countries. They observed ILC meetings, attended specially arranged lectures and participated in working groups on specific topics. The Commission also convened a two-day commemorative meeting on the occasion of its sixtieth anniversary session.

ILC carried out its work with the assistance of various working groups and a Drafting Committee. On the topic of shared natural resources, the Commission considered the fifth report of the Special Rapporteur, containing a set of 20 draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers, together with comments from Governments on the draft articles adopted on first reading, completed the second reading, and adopted a preamble and a set of 19 draft articles, together with commentaries. On the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, ILC had before it the fourth report of the Special Rapporteur dealing with the procedure for the suspension or termination of treaties as a consequence of an armed conflict. It provisionally adopted, on first reading, a set of 18 draft articles and an annex, together with commentaries, and transmitted them to Governments for comments and observations. On reservations to treaties, ILC considered the thirteenth report of the Special Rapporteur dealing with reactions to interpretative declarations, referred 10 draft guidelines to the Drafting Committee on reactions to interpretative declarations, and adopted 23 draft guidelines dealing with formulation and withdrawal of acceptances and objections, as well as the procedure for acceptance of reservations, together with commentaries thereto. The Commission provisionally adopted eight draft articles, together with commentaries, on invocation of the international responsibility of an international organization and took note of seven draft articles provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee on countermeasures.

On the expulsion of aliens, the Commission considered the fourth report of the Special Rapporteur dealing with questions relating to the expulsion of dual or multiple nationals, as well as loss of nationality or denationalization in relation to expulsion, and established a Working Group to consider the issues in the report. ILC held debates based on the preliminary report of the Special Rapporteur on the protection of persons in the event of disasters and on the preliminary report of the Special Rapporteur on the immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction, which considered such issues as the officials and acts to be covered, as well as possible exceptions. With respect to the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare), the Commission held a debate based on the third report of the Special Rapporteur, addressing such issues as the customary nature of the obligation, the relation with universal jurisdiction and international courts, and procedural aspects to be dealt with in future.

ILC established a Planning Group to consider its programme, procedures and working methods, which decided to reconstitute the Working Group on the Long-term programme of Work. The Commission decided that its sixty-first session would be held in Geneva from 4 May to 5 June and 6 July to 7 August 2009.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/63/439], adopted resolution 63/123 without vote [agenda item 75].

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixtieth session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixtieth session,

Emphasizing the importance of furthering the progressive development of international law and its codification as a means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing the desirability of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission for closer examination, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission to enhance further their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Reaffirming the importance to the successful work of the International Law Commission of the information provided by Member States concerning their views and practice,

Recognizing the importance of the work of the special rapporteurs of the International Law Commission,

Recalling the role of Member States in submitting proposals for the consideration of the International Law Commission,

Welcoming the holding of the International Law Seminar, and noting with appreciation the voluntary contributions made to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar,

Acknowledging the importance of facilitating the timely publication of the Yearbook of the International Law Commission and eliminating the backlog,

Stressing the usefulness of focusing and structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention to each of the main topics dealt with in the report and for discussions on specific topics,

Wishing to enhance further, in the context of the revitalization of the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, the interaction between the Sixth Committee as a body of governmental representatives and the Commission as a body of independent legal experts, with a view to improving the dialogue between the two bodies,

Welcoming initiatives to hold interactive debates, panel discussions and question time in the Sixth Committee, as envisaged in resolution 58/316 of 1 July 2004 on further measures for the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixtieth session, and recommends that the Commission continue its work on the topics in its current programme, taking into account the comments and observations of Governments, whether submitted in writing or expressed orally in debates in the Sixth Committee;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at its sixtieth session, in particular for the following accomplishments:

(a) The completion of the second reading of the draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers under the topic "Shared natural resources";

(b) The completion of the first reading of the draft articles on the topic "Effects of armed conflicts on treaties";

3. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their views on the various aspects involved in the topics on the agenda of the Commission, in particular on all the specific issues identified in chapter III of its report, regarding:

(a) Reservations to treaties;

(b) Responsibility of international organizations;

(c) Protection of persons in the event of disasters;

4. Invites Governments, within the context of paragraph 3 above, to provide information to the International Law Commission regarding practice with regard to the topics “Reservations to treaties” and “Protection of persons in the event of disasters”;

5. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance for the International Law Commission of having their comments and observations by 1 January 2010 on the draft articles and commentaries on the topic “Effects of armed conflicts on treaties” adopted on first reading by the Commission at its sixtieth session;

6. Takes note of the decision of the International Law Commission to include the topics “Treaties in time” and “The Most-Favoured-Nation clause” in its programme of work;

7. Invites the International Law Commission to continue taking measures to enhance its efficiency and productivity and to consider making proposals to that end;

8. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue taking cost-saving measures at its future sessions without prejudice to the efficiency of its work;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, in accordance with the established procedures, and bearing in mind its resolution 56/272 of 27 March 2002, a report on the assistance currently provided to special rapporteurs and options regarding additional support of the work of special rapporteurs;

10. Takes note of paragraph 363 of the report of the International Law Commission, and decides that the next session of the Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva from 4 May to 5 June and from 6 July to 7 August 2009;

11. Welcomes the enhanced dialogue between the International Law Commission and the Sixth Committee at the sixty-third session of the General Assembly, stresses the desirability of further enhancing the dialogue between the two bodies, and in this context encourages, inter alia, the continued practice of informal consultations in the form of discussions between the members of the Sixth Committee and the members of the Commission attending the sixty-fourth session of the Assembly;

12. Encourages delegations, during the debate on the report of the International Law Commission, to adhere as far as possible to the structured work programme agreed to by the Sixth Committee and to consider presenting concise and focused statements;

13. Encourages Member States to consider being represented at the level of legal adviser during the first week in which the report of the International Law Commission is discussed in the Sixth Committee (International Law Week) to enable high-level discussions on issues of international law;

14. Requests the International Law Commission to continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, any specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest in providing effective guidance for the Commission in its further work;

15. Takes note of paragraphs 336 to 340 of the report of the International Law Commission and commends the convening of the sixtieth anniversary commemorative meeting in Geneva on 19 and 20 May 2008, and also commends Member States, in association with existing regional organizations, professional associations, academic institutions and members of the Commission, that convened national or regional meetings dedicated to the work of the Commission;

16. Also takes note of paragraphs 355 and 356 of the report of the International Law Commission with regard to cooperation with other bodies, and encourages the Commission to continue the implementation of article 16, paragraph (e), and article 26, paragraphs 1 and 2, of its statute in order to further strengthen cooperation between the Commission and other bodies concerned with international law, having in mind the usefulness of such cooperation;

17. Encourages the International Law Commission to undertake consultations, if it finds it appropriate, with key humanitarian actors, including the United Nations and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, in connection with work on the topic “Protection of persons in the event of disasters”;

18. Notes that the International Law Commission, in accordance with article 26, paragraph 1, of its statute, envisages a meeting during its sixty-first session with legal advisers of international organizations within the United Nations system, in order to hold a discussion on matters of mutual interest;

19. Also notes that consulting with national organizations and individual experts concerned with international law may assist Governments in considering whether to make comments and observations on drafts submitted by the International Law Commission and in formulating their comments and observations;

20. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the indispensable role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat in providing assistance to the International Law Commission, including in the preparation of memorandums and studies on topics on the agenda of the Commission;

21. Approves the conclusions reached by the International Law Commission in paragraph 359 of its report, and reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the documentation and summary records of the Commission;

22. Takes note of paragraph 360 of the report of the International Law Commission and, without prejudice to the importance of ensuring necessary allocations in the regular budget, acknowledges the establishment by the Secretary-General of a trust fund to accept voluntary contributions so as to address the backlog relating to the Yearbook of the International Law Commission, and invites voluntary contributions to that end;

23. Welcomes the continuous efforts of the Codification Division to maintain and improve the website relating to the work of the International Law Commission;

24. Expresses the hope that the International Law Seminar will continue to be held in connection with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants, in particular from developing countries, will be given the opportunity to attend the Seminar, and appeals to States to continue to make urgently needed voluntary contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for the International Law Seminar;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the International Law Seminar with adequate services, including interpretation, as required, and encourages him to continue considering ways to improve the structure and content of the Seminar;

26. Also requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the sixty-third session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate, following established practice;

27. Requests the Secretariat to circulate to States, as soon as possible after the conclusion of the session of the International Law Commission, chapter II of its report containing a summary of the work of that session, chapter III containing the specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission and the draft articles adopted on either first or second reading by the Commission;

28. Encourages the International Law Commission to continue considering ways in which specific issues on which the views of Governments would be of particular interest to the Commission could be framed so as to help Governments to have a better appreciation of the issues on which responses are required;

29. Recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly commence on 26 October 2009.

Shared natural resources

The Commission had before it the fifth report [A/CN.4/591] on shared natural resources by Special Rapporteur Chusei Yamada (Japan), which contained a set of 20 draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers for its consideration on second reading, as well as the comments and observations received from Governments on the draft articles adopted on first reading [A/CN.4/595 & Add.1]. ILC referred those draft articles to its Drafting Committee on 7 and 8 May, while a draft preamble was referred on 21 May. The Committee decided to omit draft article 20, considering it premature to address issues concerning the relationship with other instruments, which were best left to negotiating parties to resolve.

ILC [A/63/10] adopted a preamble and a set of 19 draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers on 4 June and the commentaries to those articles on 4 and 5 August. The Commission recommended that the General Assembly take note of the draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers in a resolution; annex them to the resolution; and consider at a later stage the elaboration of a convention based upon them. It further recommended that States concerned make appropriate bilateral or regional arrangements for the proper management of their transboundary aquifers on the basis of those draft articles.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/439], adopted resolution 63/124 without vote [agenda item 75].

The law of transboundary aquifers

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter IV of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its sixtieth session, which contains the draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers,

Noting that the Commission decided to recommend to the General Assembly (a) to take note of the draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers in a resolution, and to annex the articles to the resolution; (b) to recommend to States concerned to make appropriate bilateral or regional arrangements for the proper management of their transboundary aquifers on the basis of the principles enunciated in the articles; and (c) to also consider, at a later stage, and in view of the importance of the topic, the elaboration of a convention on the basis of the draft articles,

Emphasizing the continuing importance of the codification and progressive development of international law, as referred to in Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting that the subject of the law of transboundary aquifers is of major importance in the relations of States,

Taking note of the comments of Governments and the discussion in the Sixth Committee at the sixty-third session of the General Assembly on this topic,

1. Welcomes the conclusion of the work of the International Law Commission on the law of transboundary aquifers and its adoption of the draft articles and a detailed commentary on the subject;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for its continuing contribution to the codification and progressive development of international law;

3. Also expresses its appreciation to the International Hydrological Programme of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and to other relevant organizations for the valuable scientific and technical assistance rendered to the International Law Commission;

4. Takes note of the draft articles on the law of transboundary aquifers, presented by the Commission, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution, and commends them to the attention of Governments without prejudice to the question of their future adoption or other appropriate action;

5. Encourages the States concerned to make appropriate bilateral or regional arrangements for the proper management of their transboundary aquifers, taking into account the provisions of these draft articles;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session an item entitled "The law of transboundary aquifers" with a view to examining, inter alia, the question of the form that might be given to the draft articles.

ANNEX

The law of transboundary aquifers

Conscious of the importance for humankind of life-supporting groundwater resources in all regions of the world,

Bearing in mind Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1803(XVII) of 14 December 1962 on permanent sovereignty over natural resources,

Reaffirming the principles and recommendations adopted by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development of 1992 in the Rio Declaration on Environment and Development and Agenda 21,

Taking into account increasing demands for freshwater and the need to protect groundwater resources,

Mindful of the particular problems posed by the vulnerability of aquifers to pollution,

Convinced of the need to ensure the development, utilization, conservation, management and protection of groundwater resources in the context of the promotion of the optimal and sustainable development of water resources for present and future generations,

Affirming the importance of international cooperation and good-neighbourliness in this field,

Emphasizing the need to take into account the special situation of developing countries,

Recognizing the necessity to promote international cooperation,

Part one*IntroductionArticle 1Scope*

The present articles apply to:

(a) Utilization of transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems;

(b) Other activities that have or are likely to have an impact upon such aquifers or aquifer systems; and

(c) Measures for the protection, preservation and management of such aquifers or aquifer systems.

Article 2Use of terms

For the purposes of the present articles:

(a) “aquifer” means a permeable water bearing geological formation underlain by a less permeable layer and the water contained in the saturated zone of the formation;

(b) “aquifer system” means a series of two or more aquifers that are hydraulically connected;

(c) “transboundary aquifer” or “transboundary aquifer system” means, respectively, an aquifer or aquifer system, parts of which are situated in different States;

(d) “aquifer State” means a State in whose territory any part of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system is situated;

(e) “utilization of transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems” includes extraction of water, heat and minerals, and storage and disposal of any substance;

(f) “recharging aquifer” means an aquifer that receives a non-negligible amount of contemporary water recharge;

(g) “recharge zone” means the zone which contributes water to an aquifer, consisting of the catchment area of rainfall water and the area where such water flows to an aquifer by run-off on the ground and infiltration through soil;

(h) “discharge zone” means the zone where water originating from an aquifer flows to its outlets, such as a water-course, a lake, an oasis, a wetland or an ocean.

Part two*General principlesArticle 3Sovereignty of aquifer States*

Each aquifer State has sovereignty over the portion of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system located within its territory. It shall exercise its sovereignty in accordance with international law and the present articles.

Article 4Equitable and reasonable utilization

Aquifer States shall utilize transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems according to the principle of equitable and reasonable utilization, as follows:

(a) They shall utilize transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems in a manner that is consistent with the equitable and reasonable accrual of benefits therefrom to the aquifer States concerned;

(b) They shall aim at maximizing the long-term benefits derived from the use of water contained therein;

(c) They shall establish individually or jointly a comprehensive utilization plan, taking into account present and future needs of, and alternative water sources for, the aquifer States; and

(d) They shall not utilize a recharging transboundary aquifer or aquifer system at a level that would prevent continuance of its effective functioning.

Article 5Factors relevant to equitable and reasonable utilization

1. Utilization of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system in an equitable and reasonable manner within the meaning of article 4 requires taking into account all relevant factors, including:

(a) The population dependent on the aquifer or aquifer system in each aquifer State;

(b) The social, economic and other needs, present and future, of the aquifer States concerned;

(c) The natural characteristics of the aquifer or aquifer system;

(d) The contribution to the formation and recharge of the aquifer or aquifer system;

(e) The existing and potential utilization of the aquifer or aquifer system;

(f) The actual and potential effects of the utilization of the aquifer or aquifer system in one aquifer State on other aquifer States concerned;

(g) The availability of alternatives to a particular existing and planned utilization of the aquifer or aquifer system;

(h) The development, protection and conservation of the aquifer or aquifer system and the costs of measures to be taken to that effect;

(i) The role of the aquifer or aquifer system in the related ecosystem.

2. The weight to be given to each factor is to be determined by its importance with regard to a specific transboundary aquifer or aquifer system in comparison with that of other relevant factors. In determining what is equitable and reasonable utilization, all relevant factors are to be considered together and a conclusion reached on the basis of all the factors. However, in weighing different kinds of utilization of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system, special regard shall be given to vital human needs.

Obligation not to cause significant harm

1. Aquifer States shall, in utilizing transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems in their territories, take all appropriate measures to prevent the causing of significant harm to other aquifer States or other States in whose territory a discharge zone is located.

2. Aquifer States shall, in undertaking activities other than utilization of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system that have, or are likely to have, an impact upon that transboundary aquifer or aquifer system, take all appropriate measures to prevent the causing of significant harm through that aquifer or aquifer system to other aquifer States or other States in whose territory a discharge zone is located.

3. Where significant harm nevertheless is caused to another aquifer State or a State in whose territory a discharge zone is located, the aquifer State whose activities cause such harm shall take, in consultation with the affected State, all appropriate response measures to eliminate or mitigate such harm, having due regard for the provisions of articles 4 and 5.

Article 7

General obligation to cooperate

1. Aquifer States shall cooperate on the basis of sovereign equality, territorial integrity, sustainable development, mutual benefit and good faith in order to attain equitable and reasonable utilization and appropriate protection of their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems.

2. For the purpose of paragraph 1, aquifer States should establish joint mechanisms of cooperation.

Article 8

Regular exchange of data and information

1. Pursuant to article 7, aquifer States shall, on a regular basis, exchange readily available data and information on the condition of their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems, in particular of a geological, hydrogeological, hydrological, meteorological and ecological nature and related to the hydrochemistry of the aquifers or aquifer systems, as well as related forecasts.

2. Where knowledge about the nature and extent of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system is inadequate, aquifer States concerned shall employ their best efforts to collect and generate more complete data and information relating to such aquifer or aquifer system, taking into account current practices and standards. They shall take such action individually or jointly and, where appropriate, together with or through international organizations.

3. If an aquifer State is requested by another aquifer State to provide data and information relating to an aquifer or aquifer system that is not readily available, it shall employ its best efforts to comply with the request. The requested State may condition its compliance upon payment by the requesting State of the reasonable costs of collecting and, where appropriate, processing such data or information.

4. Aquifer States shall, where appropriate, employ their best efforts to collect and process data and information in a manner that facilitates their utilization by the other aquifer States to which such data and information are communicated.

Article 9

Bilateral and regional agreements and arrangements

For the purpose of managing a particular transboundary aquifer or aquifer system, aquifer States are encouraged to enter into bilateral or regional agreements or arrangements among themselves. Such agreements or arrangements may be entered into with respect to an entire aquifer or aquifer system or any part thereof or a particular project, programme or utilization except insofar as an agreement or arrangement adversely affects, to a significant extent, the utilization by one or more other aquifer States of the water in that aquifer or aquifer system, without their express consent.

Part three

Protection, preservation and management

Article 10

Protection and preservation of ecosystems

Aquifer States shall take all appropriate measures to protect and preserve ecosystems within, or dependent upon, their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems, including measures to ensure that the quality and quantity of water retained in an aquifer or aquifer system, as well as that released through its discharge zones, are sufficient to protect and preserve such ecosystems.

Recharge and discharge zones

1. Aquifer States shall identify the recharge and discharge zones of transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems that exist within their territory. They shall take appropriate measures to prevent and minimize detrimental impacts on the recharge and discharge processes.

2. All States in whose territory a recharge or discharge zone is located, in whole or in part, and which are not aquifer States with regard to that aquifer or aquifer system, shall cooperate with the aquifer States to protect the aquifer or aquifer system and related ecosystems.

Article 12Prevention, reduction and control of pollution

Aquifer States shall, individually and, where appropriate, jointly, prevent, reduce and control pollution of their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems, including through the recharge process, that may cause significant harm to other aquifer States. Aquifer States shall take a precautionary approach in view of uncertainty about the nature and extent of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system and of its vulnerability to pollution.

Article 13Monitoring

1. Aquifer States shall monitor their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems. They shall, wherever possible, carry out these monitoring activities jointly with other aquifer States concerned and, where appropriate, in collaboration with competent international organizations. Where monitoring activities cannot be carried out jointly, the aquifer States shall exchange the monitored data among themselves.

2. Aquifer States shall use agreed or harmonized standards and methodology for monitoring their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems. They should identify key parameters that they will monitor based on an agreed conceptual model of the aquifers or aquifer systems. These parameters should include parameters on the condition of the aquifer or aquifer system as listed in article 8, paragraph 1, and also on the utilization of the aquifers or aquifer systems.

Article 14Management

Aquifer States shall establish and implement plans for the proper management of their transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems. They shall, at the request of any of them, enter into consultations concerning the management of a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system. A joint management mechanism shall be established, wherever appropriate.

Article 15Planned activities

1. When a State has reasonable grounds for believing that a particular planned activity in its territory may affect a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system and thereby may have a significant adverse effect upon another State, it shall, as far as practicable, assess the possible effects of such activity.

2. Before a State implements or permits the implementation of planned activities which may affect a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system and thereby may have a significant adverse effect upon another State, it shall provide that State with timely notification thereof. Such notification shall be accompanied by available technical data and information, including any environmental impact assessment, in order to enable the notified State to evaluate the possible effects of the planned activities.

3. If the notifying and the notified States disagree on the possible effect of the planned activities, they shall enter into consultations and, if necessary, negotiations with a view to arriving at an equitable resolution of the situation. They may utilize an independent fact-finding body to make an impartial assessment of the effect of the planned activities.

Part four*Miscellaneous provisionsArticle 16Technical cooperation with developing States*

States shall, directly or through competent international organizations, promote scientific, educational, technical, legal and other cooperation with developing States for the protection and management of transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems, including, inter alia:

- (a) Strengthening their capacity-building in scientific, technical and legal fields;
- (b) Facilitating their participation in relevant international programmes;
- (c) Supplying them with necessary equipment and facilities;
- (d) Enhancing their capacity to manufacture such equipment;
- (e) Providing advice on and developing facilities for research, monitoring, educational and other programmes;
- (f) Providing advice on and developing facilities for minimizing the detrimental effects of major activities affecting their transboundary aquifer or aquifer system;
- (g) Providing advice in the preparation of environmental impact assessments;
- (h) Supporting the exchange of technical knowledge and experience among developing States with a view to strengthening cooperation among them in managing the transboundary aquifer or aquifer system.

Article 17Emergency situations

1. For the purpose of the present article, “emergency” means a situation, resulting suddenly from natural causes or from human conduct, that affects a transboundary aquifer or aquifer system and poses an imminent threat of causing serious harm to aquifer States or other States.

2. The State within whose territory the emergency originates shall:

- (a) Without delay and by the most expeditious means available, notify other potentially affected States and competent international organizations of the emergency;
- (b) In cooperation with potentially affected States and, where appropriate, competent international organizations, immediately take all practicable measures necessitated by the circumstances to prevent, mitigate and eliminate any harmful effect of the emergency.

3. Where an emergency poses a threat to vital human needs, aquifer States, notwithstanding articles 4 and 6, may take measures that are strictly necessary to meet such needs.

4. States shall provide scientific, technical, logistical and other cooperation to other States experiencing an emergency. Cooperation may include coordination of international emergency actions and communications, making available emergency response personnel, emergency response equipment and supplies, scientific and technical expertise and humanitarian assistance.

Article 18Protection in time of armed conflict

Transboundary aquifers or aquifer systems and related installations, facilities and other works shall enjoy the protection accorded by the principles and rules of international law applicable in international and non-international armed conflict and shall not be used in violation of those principles and rules.

Article 19Data and information vital to national defence or security

Nothing in the present articles obliges a State to provide data or information vital to its national defence or security. Nevertheless, that State shall cooperate in good faith with other States with a view to providing as much information as possible under the circumstances.

Responsibility of international organizations

ILC considered the sixth report on responsibility of international organizations [A/CN.4/597] by Special Rapporteur Giorgio Gaja (Italy), as well as written comments received from international organizations [A/CN.4/593]. The report contained 12 draft articles corresponding to Part Three of the articles on State responsibility. Draft articles 46 to 51 dealt with invocation of the responsibility of an international organization, while draft articles 52 to 57 addressed the issue of countermeasures.

The Commission [A/63/10] considered the Special Rapporteur's report from 9 to 16 May and established a Working Group to consider the issue of countermeasures, as well as the advisability of including a provision relating to the admissibility of claims. On 4 June, ILC adopted the Drafting Committee's report on draft articles 46 to 53. In August, the Commission took note of draft articles 54 to 60 on countermeasures as provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee and adopted the title of Chapter I of Part Three of the draft articles, "Invocation of the responsibility of an international organization", in addition to the commentaries to draft articles 46 to 53.

Expulsion of aliens

ILC had before it the fourth report on the expulsion of aliens [A/CN.4/594] by Special Rapporteur Maurice Kamto (Cameroon), which analysed the issue of expulsion of dual nationals and the question of deprivation of nationality as a prelude to expulsion. The Commission [A/63/10] considered the report on 30 May and 5 and 6 June. It also established a Working Group to consider the issues raised by the expulsion of persons having dual or multiple nationality and by denationalization in relation to expulsion, which determined that there was no need to have separate draft articles on the matter, as the necessary clarifications would be made in the commentaries. On 14 July, the Working Group concluded that the commentary to the draft articles should: indicate that, for the purposes of the draft articles, the principle of the non-expulsion of nationals applied also to persons who had legally acquired one or several other nationalities, and include wording to make it clear that States should not use denationalization as a means of circumventing their obligations under the principle of the non-expulsion of nationals.

During its discussions, some Commission members were of the view that ILC could not ignore the question of dual or multiple nationality—a phenomenon increasingly common in the modern age. Contrary to the view of the Special Rapporteur, a number of members believed that, with regard to expulsion, international law did not allow a State to consider its nationals having one or several other nationalities as aliens. It was proposed that a draft article be prepared stating that persons having dual or multiple nationality had the same rights as those holding only the nationality of the expelling State. It was also observed that the existence of a receiving State, for example one of the States of nationality of the person expelled, was not a decisive factor in determining the legality of an expulsion.

The Commission approved the Working Group's conclusions on 24 July; requested the Drafting Committee to take them into consideration in its work; and received an oral progress report by the Committee Chairman on 4 August. The draft articles referred to the Committee would remain with it until work on all draft articles was completed.

Extradition

ILC considered the third report by Special Rapporteur Zdzisław Galicki (Poland) on the obligation to extradite or prosecute (aut dedere aut judicare) [A/CN.4/603], as well as comments and information received from Governments [A/CN.4/599]. The report formulated questions addressed both to States and ILC members on the most essential aspects of the topic, to enable the Special Rapporteur to draw final conclusions on the main question of whether the obligation to extradite or prosecute existed under customary international law. It also elaborated on draft articles 1, 2 and 3, regarding, respectively, the scope of application of the draft articles, the use of terms, and the recognition of treaties as a source of the obligation to extradite or prosecute.

The Commission [A/63/10] considered the report in July, and established a Working Group on the topic. The Special Rapporteur suggested that ILC renew its request for Governments to provide their comments and information on the issue and find a compromise solution on how to address the problem of the mutual relationship between the obligation aut dedere aut judicare and the principle of universal jurisdiction. On the “triple alternative”—the surrender of the alleged offender to a competent international criminal tribunal—he stated that total rejection of the question was premature and recommended that consideration be given to recent domestic laws of implementation of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (icc). During the Commission’s discussions, the Special Rapporteur was requested to continue to address general substantive issues and propose articles relating to the obligation to extradite or prosecute, such as the question of its source (customary law, general principle of law), its relationship with universal jurisdiction, crimes that would be subject to the obligation (in particular, serious crimes under international law), and the “triple alternative”. He could then undertake an examination of procedural questions, such as the possible grounds for denying extradition, the guarantees in case of extradition, how to deal with simultaneous requests for extradition, and other pending matters under discussion. The Special Rapporteur’s fourth report would focus on the main substantive issues arising from the topic, such as the sources of the obligation to extradite or prosecute, and its content and scope, making reference to the previous work of the Commission on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind.

Effects of armed conflicts on treaties

ILC considered the fourth report on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties [A/CN.4/589 & Corr.1] by Special Rapporteur Ian Brownlie (United Kingdom), which dealt with the question of the procedure for suspension or termination, with particular reference to article 65 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. The Commission also had before it a note prepared by the Chairperson of the Working Group [A/CN.4/L.721] on draft article 8 and the applicability of articles 42 to 45 of the Convention, as well as a compilation of comments and observations received from international organizations [A/CN.4/592 & Add.1].

On 16 May, the Commission [A/63/10] decided to re-establish the Working Group on the Effects of Armed Conflicts on Treaties, which subsequently considered, with respect to draft article 8, the applicability of the procedure in article 65 of the Vienna Convention for the termination or suspension of treaties, as well as the applicability of articles 42 to 45 of the Convention and, in particular, article 44 on the separability of treaty provisions. It also considered draft article 9, on the resumption of suspended treaties; and draft articles 12, 13 and 14, relating to third States as neutrals, the termination or suspension of treaties by operation of the Vienna Convention, and the competence of parties to negotiate a specific agreement regulating the maintenance in force or revival of treaties, respectively. On 29 May, ILC adopted the Working Group’s report [A/CN.4/L.726].

In July, the Commission considered the reports of the Drafting Committee, and adopted on first reading a set of 18 draft articles on the effects of armed conflicts on treaties, together with an annex. It also adopted, in August, a set of commentaries to those draft articles and transmitted the draft articles to Governments for comments and observations.

Protection of persons in the event of disasters

The Commission had before it a preliminary report on the protection of persons in the event of disasters [A/CN.4/598] by Special Rapporteur Eduardo Valencia-Ospina (Colombia), which aimed to identify the basic assumptions that would inform the work of codification and progressive development of the topic, and presented the evolution of the protection of persons in the event of disasters; references to the sources and international efforts to codify and develop the law on the topic; a broad outline of various aspects of the general scope with a view to identifying the main legal questions to be covered; and a tentative conclusion without prejudice to the outcome of the discussion it aimed to generate in the Commission. It also had before it a Secretariat memorandum [A/CN.4/590 & Add.1–3], which focused primarily on natural disasters.

In July, the Commission [A/63/10] held a debate based on the Special Rapporteur’s preliminary report. Among the many issues discussed were the main legal questions to be covered by the topic, including questions concerning the approach to the topic, as well as its scope in terms of the subject matter, personal scope, space and time. While several members agreed with a rights-based approach in the consideration of the topic as suggested by the Special Rapporteur, other members were of the view that a general understanding of what was meant by a rights-based approach was necessary. According to one perspective, a human rights approach should not only be perceived from the angle of according the protection of the individual, but also take into account community interests, in particular of the vulnerable groups, while bearing in mind the obligations and limitations of States affected by disaster. It was also essential to determine what consequences would flow from a rights-based approach and whether such an approach would require addressing questions on how such rights would be enforced. Several members agreed to exclude armed conflict from the scope of the topic, suggesting that the primary focus should be on natural disasters.

On the future programme of work and final form, some members noted that it would be desirable to decide on the form at an early stage in the consideration of the topic and expressed a preference for a framework convention setting out general principles, which could form a point of reference in the elaboration of special or regional agreements. Others favoured non-binding guidelines or said that it was premature to take a decision on the final form. A suggestion for the Special Rapporteur to provide a provisional plan of future work for discussion by a working group was also considered premature by some members with regard to the establishment of a working group. In his final remarks, the Special Rapporteur said that he was convinced that the Commission would steer the topic towards a successful conclusion, notwithstanding its complexity and challenges. He also noted that it would be the task of the Commission to elaborate draft articles, without prejudice to the final form.

Immunity of State officials

The Commission had before it a preliminary report on the immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction [A/CN.4/601] by Special Rapporteur Roman Anatolevich Kolodkin (Russian Federation), which aimed to describe the history of the consideration by ILC and the Institute of International Law of the question of immunity of State officials from foreign jurisdiction; outline the range of issues proposed for consideration by ILC in the preliminary phase of work on the topic; and provide a rough outline of two types of issues: those to be analysed by the Commission as part of its consideration of the topic, and those to be addressed by the Commission in a possible formulation of any instrument resulting from consideration of the topic—for example, draft guiding principles or draft articles. It also had before it a Secretariat memorandum [A/CN.4/596] on the topic.

In July, the Commission [A/63/10] held a debate based on the Special Rapporteur's preliminary report. Among the many issues discussed were the main legal questions to be considered when defining the scope of the topic, including the officials to be covered, the nature of the acts to be covered, as well as whether there were possible exceptions. There was agreement that the Commission should not consider, within the topic, the questions of immunity before international criminal tribunals and before the courts of the State of nationality of the official. Some members emphasized that the immunities of diplomatic agents, consular officials, members of special missions and representatives of States to international organizations had already been codified and did not need to be addressed in the context of that topic.

In his closing remarks, the Special Rapporteur observed that there was general agreement that the basic source of the immunity of State officials from foreign criminal jurisdiction was to be found in international law, particularly customary international law, and noted that some members had highlighted the importance of national practice and judicial decisions in this regard. As divergent views were expressed on the question of whether ILC should study the issue of jurisdiction, the Special Rapporteur explained his intention to consider analytically the issue in his future work without, however, proposing draft articles on the subject. The debates had also clarified the scope of the topic, with the general perception that the immunities of diplomatic agents, consular officials, members of special missions and representatives of States in and to international organizations were outside of the topic. In light of the different opinions on the issue of recognition, the Special Rapporteur suggested that ILC could examine the possible effects of non-recognition of an entity as a State on whether immunity was granted to its officials. On the scope of the topic with respect to the persons covered, the majority of members favoured consideration of the status of all “State officials” and had supported the use of such term, which was to be defined in the future work of the Commission. As to immunity ratione personae, there was broad agreement that it was enjoyed by Heads of State, Heads of Government and ministers for foreign affairs, yet divergent views had been expressed as to its extension to other high-ranking officials. The Special Rapporteur noted that further consideration should be given, in that regard, inter alia to the ICJ Judgment in the case concerning Certain Questions of Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters (see p. 1397).

International State relations and international law

State succession

The Sixth Committee, on 21 October and 5 and 14 November, considered the item on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States. For its consideration of the item, the Committee had before it a note [A/63/113] by the Secretariat containing the comments of 15 Governments concerning the advisability of elaborating a legal instrument on the question of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 59/34 [YUN 2004, p. 1302]. ILC, at its fifty-first session in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 1230], had adopted draft articles on the item and recommended that they be adopted by the Assembly in the form of a declaration. Subsequently, the Assembly, in resolutions 54/112 [ibid.], 55/153 [YUN 2000, p. 1242] and 59/34, invited Governments to submit comments and observations, with a view to considering the elaboration of such a convention at a future session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/436], adopted resolution 63/118 without vote [agenda item 72].

Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States

The General Assembly,

Having examined the item entitled “Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States”,

Recalling its resolution 54/112 of 9 December 1999, in which it decided to consider at its fifty-fifth session the draft articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States prepared by the International Law Commission,

Recalling also its resolution 55/153 of 12 December 2000, the annex to which contains the articles on nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States,

Recalling further its resolution 59/34 of 2 December 2004,

Taking into consideration the comments and observations of Governments and the discussion held in the Sixth Committee at the fifty-ninth and sixty-third sessions of the General Assembly on the question of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, with a view, in particular, to preventing the occurrence of statelessness as a result of a succession of States, as well as on the advisability of elaborating a legal instrument on this question,

Taking note, in this regard, of the efforts made at the regional level towards the elaboration of a legal instrument on the avoidance of statelessness in relation to State succession,

1. Reiterates its invitation to Governments to take into account, as appropriate, the provisions of the articles contained in the annex to resolution 55/153, in dealing with issues of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States;

2. Encourages States to consider, as appropriate, at the regional or subregional levels, the elaboration of legal instruments regulating questions of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, with a view, in particular, to preventing the occurrence of statelessness as a result of a succession of States;

3. Invites Governments to submit comments concerning the advisability of elaborating a legal instrument on the question of nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States, including the avoidance of statelessness as a result of a succession of States;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-sixth session the item entitled “Nationality of natural persons in relation to the succession of States”, with the aim of examining the subject, including the question of the form that might be given to the draft articles.

Jurisdictional immunities of States and their properties

The General Assembly, by resolution 59/38 [YUN 2004, p. 1304], adopted the Convention on Jurisdictional Immunities of States and Their Property. The Convention was opened for signature from 17 January 2005 until 17 January 2007 at UN Headquarters. As at 31 December 2008, the Convention had 28 signatories and six States parties. The Convention would enter into force when ratified by 30 parties.

International terrorism

Convention on international terrorism

Ad Hoc Committee. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/71 [YUN 2007, p. 1366], the Ad Hoc Committee established by Assembly resolution 51/210 [YUN 1996, p. 1208] held its twelfth session (New York, 25–26 February and 6 March) to continue the elaboration of a draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism within the framework of a working group of the Sixth Committee, including consideration of outstanding issues.

The Ad Hoc Committee held informal consultations and contacts on the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism as well as informal consultations on the question of convening a high-level conference under UN auspices to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations. Delegations stressed the importance of finalizing the draft comprehensive convention and reaffirmed their commitment to the negotiating process and the early adoption of the convention. Discussions on various aspects of the convention focused on the need for the convention to provide for a clear legal definition of terrorism and include provisions relating to military activities not covered by international law. On draft article 18, some delegations stated that the latest draft proposed by the Coordinator could be a sound basis for negotiating and reaching a consensus on the text, while others recalled that they had already accepted the previous draft of the former Coordinator. Meanwhile, some other delegations, while remaining committed to finding a solution to all outstanding issues, reconfirmed their previously preferred position relating to the draft article. On the work format of the Committee, some delegations that viewed the conduct of bilateral consultations as useful reiterated the necessity of conducting negotiations multilaterally in a transparent and representative format. Support was also expressed for the convening of a working group during the Sixth Committee to continue the work of the Ad Hoc Committee with a view to concluding the draft convention.

Egypt, as sponsor delegation, reiterated the importance of convening of a high-level conference [YUN 2006, p. 1515], recalled that the proposal had been endorsed by the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the African Union and the League of Arab States, and stressed that its convening should not be tied to completion of the work on the draft convention. Some delegations reiterated their support for convening the conference, yet emphasized that the question should be considered after the finalization of the draft convention, which should remain the focus of the Committee. The view was also expressed that discussions on both the draft convention and the convening of a high-level conference could continue in parallel.

On 26 February, the Ad Hoc Committee adopted its report [A/63/37], to which were annexed the Chairman's informal summaries on the exchange of views in the plenary meeting and on the results of the informal consultations and contacts in connection with the draft convention, and on the convening of a high-level conference.

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 50/53 [YUN 1995, p. 1330], the Secretary-General, in July [A/63/173], issued his annual report on measures taken by 25 States, five UN system entities and three intergovernmental organizations to implement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, approved by Assembly resolution 49/60 [YUN 1994, p. 1293] and Security Council resolution 1269(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 1240]. It listed 30 international instruments pertaining to terrorism, indicating the status of State participation in each, and provided information on workshops and training courses on combating terrorism by two UN bodies and two international organizations. It also announced the publication of the third edition of International Instruments related to the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism prepared by the UN Office of Legal Affairs in collaboration with the Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). A September addendum to the report [A/63/173/Add.1] summarized information submitted by seven other States and one UN system entity.

On 18 December, the General Assembly, by resolution 63/193 (see p. 1223), approved the provisional agenda for the Twelfth United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice in 2010, which included the item on the "provision of technical assistance to facilitate the ratification and implementation of the international instruments related to the prevention and suppression of terrorism".

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/444], adopted resolution 63/129 without vote [agenda item 99].

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy in all its aspects adopted on 8 September 2006, enhancing the overall framework for the efforts of the international community to effectively counter the scourge of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, and recalling the first biennial review of the Strategy, on 4 and 5 September 2008, and the debates that were held on that occasion,

Recalling the Declaration on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the United Nations,

Recalling also the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Recalling further the 2005 World Summit Outcome, and reaffirming in particular the section on terrorism,

Recalling the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution 49/60 of 9 December 1994, and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, contained in the annex to resolution 51/210 of 17 December 1996,

Recalling also all General Assembly resolutions on measures to eliminate international terrorism, and Security Council resolutions on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts,

Convinced of the importance of the consideration of measures to eliminate international terrorism by the General Assembly as the universal organ having competence to do so,

Deeply disturbed by the persistence of terrorist acts, which have been carried out worldwide,

Reaffirming its strong condemnation of the heinous acts of terrorism that have caused enormous loss of human life, destruction and damage, including those which prompted the adoption of General Assembly resolution 56/1 of 12 September 2001, as well as Security Council resolutions 1368(2001) of 12 September 2001, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 and 1377(2001) of 12 November 2001, and those that have occurred since the adoption of the latter resolution,

Recalling the strong condemnation of the atrocious and deliberate attack against the headquarters of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in Baghdad on 19 August 2003 in General Assembly resolution 57/338 of 15 September 2003 and Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003,

Affirming that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with all their obligations under international law and adopt such measures in accordance with international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Stressing the need to strengthen further international cooperation among States and among international organizations and agencies, regional organizations and arrangements and the United Nations in order to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, in accordance with the principles of the Charter, international law and the relevant international conventions,

Noting the role of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) concerning counter-terrorism in monitoring the implementation of that resolution, including the taking of the necessary financial, legal and technical measures by States and the ratification or acceptance of the relevant international conventions and protocols,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism, and of the proposals of the Secretary-General to enhance the role of the Organization in this respect,

Mindful also of the essential need to strengthen international, regional and subregional cooperation aimed at enhancing the national capacity of States to prevent and suppress effectively international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Reiterating its call upon States to review urgently the scope of the existing international legal provisions on the prevention, repression and elimination of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, with the aim of ensuring that there is a comprehensive legal framework covering all aspects of the matter,

Emphasizing that tolerance and dialogue among civilizations, and enhancing interfaith and intercultural understanding, are among the most important elements in promoting cooperation and success in combating terrorism, and welcoming the various initiatives to this end,

Reaffirming that no terrorist act can be justified in any circumstances,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1624(2005) of 14 September 2005, and bearing in mind that States must ensure that any measure taken to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under international law, in particular international human rights, refugee and humanitarian law,

Taking note of the recent developments and initiatives at the international, regional and subregional levels to prevent and suppress international terrorism, including those of, inter alia, the African Union, the ASEAN Regional Forum, the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the Bali Counter-Terrorism Process, the Central American Integration System, the Collective Security Treaty Organization, the Common Market for Eastern and Southern Africa, the Cooperation Council for the Arab States of the Gulf, the Council of Europe, the East African Community, the Economic Community of West African States, the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership, the European Free Trade Association, the European Union, the Group of Eight, the Intergovernmental Authority on Development, the International Maritime Organization, the International Civil Aviation Organization, the League of Arab States, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the Organization of American States, the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization, the Southern African Development Community and the World Customs Organization,

Noting regional efforts to prevent, combat and eliminate terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, wherever and by whomsoever committed, including through the elaboration of and adherence to regional conventions,

Recalling its decision in resolutions 54/110 of 9 December 1999, 55/158 of 12 December 2000, 56/88 of 12 December 2001, 57/27 of 19 November 2002, 58/81 of 9 December 2003, 59/46 of 2 December 2004, 60/43 of 8 December 2005, 61/40 of 4 December 2006 and 62/71 of 6 December 2007 that the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 should address, and keep on its agenda, the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations,

Recalling also the Final Document of the Fourteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, adopted in Havana on 16 September 2006, which reiterated the collective position of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on terrorism and reaffirmed its previous initiative calling for an international summit conference under the auspices of the United Nations to formulate a joint organized response of the international community to terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, as well as other relevant initiatives,

Aware of its resolutions 57/219 of 18 December 2002, 58/187 of 22 December 2003, 59/191 of 20 December 2004, 60/158 of 16 December 2005, 61/171 of 19 December 2006 and 62/159 of 18 December 2007,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General, the report of the Ad Hoc Committee established by resolution 51/210 and the oral report of the Chairperson on the work of the Working Group established by the Sixth Committee during the sixty-third session of the General Assembly,

1. Strongly condemns all acts, methods and practices of terrorism in all its forms and manifestations as criminal and unjustifiable, wherever and by whomsoever committed;

2. Calls upon all Member States, the United Nations and other appropriate international, regional and subregional organizations to implement the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy, as well as the resolution on the first biennial review of the Strategy, in all its aspects at the international, regional, subregional and national levels without delay, including through mobilizing resources and expertise;

3. Recalls the pivotal role of the General Assembly in following up the implementation and updating of the Strategy, and in this regard also recalls its invitation to the Secretary-General to contribute to the future deliberations of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General when doing so to provide information on relevant activities within the Secretariat to ensure overall coordination and coherence in the counterterrorism efforts of the United Nations system;

4. Reiterates that criminal acts intended or calculated to provoke a state of terror in the general public, a group of persons or particular persons for political purposes are in any circumstances unjustifiable, whatever the considerations of a political, philosophical, ideological, racial, ethnic, religious or other nature that may be invoked to justify them;

5. Reiterates its call upon all States to adopt further measures in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the relevant provisions of international law, including international standards of human rights, to prevent terrorism and to strengthen international cooperation in combating terrorism and, to that end, to consider in particular the implementation of the measures set out in paragraphs 3 (a) to (f) of resolution 51/210;

6. Also reiterates its call upon all States, with the aim of enhancing the efficient implementation of relevant legal instruments, to intensify, as and where appropriate, the exchange of information on facts related to terrorism and, in so doing, to avoid the dissemination of inaccurate or unverified information;

7. Reiterates its call upon States to refrain from financing, encouraging, providing training for or otherwise supporting terrorist activities;

8. Urges States to ensure that their nationals or other persons and entities within their territory that wilfully provide or collect funds for the benefit of persons or entities who commit, or attempt to commit, facilitate or participate in the commission of terrorist acts are punished by penalties consistent with the grave nature of such acts;

9. Reminds States of their obligations under relevant international conventions and protocols and Security Council resolutions, including Security Council resolution 1373(2001), to ensure that perpetrators of terrorist acts are brought to justice;

10. Reaffirms that international cooperation as well as actions by States to combat terrorism should be conducted in conformity with the principles of the Charter, international law and relevant international conventions;

11. Recalls the adoption of the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, the Protocol of 2005 to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol of 2005 to the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, and urges all States to consider, as a matter of priority, becoming parties to these instruments;

12. Urges all States that have not yet done so to consider as a matter of priority, and in accordance with Security Council resolution 1373(2001), and Council resolution 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004, becoming parties to the relevant conventions and protocols as referred to in paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 51/210, as well as the International Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings, the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism, the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, and the Amendment to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, and calls upon all States to enact, as appropriate, the domestic legislation necessary to implement the provisions of those conventions and protocols, to ensure that the jurisdiction of their courts enables them to bring to trial the perpetrators of terrorist acts, and to cooperate with and provide support and assistance to other States and relevant international and regional organizations to that end;

13. Urges States to cooperate with the Secretary-General and with one another, as well as with interested intergovernmental organizations, with a view to ensuring, where appropriate within existing mandates, that technical and other expert advice is provided to those States requiring and requesting assistance in becoming parties to and implementing the conventions and protocols referred to in paragraph 12 above;

14. Notes with appreciation and satisfaction that, consistent with the call contained in paragraphs 11 and 12 of resolution 62/71, a number of States became parties to the relevant conventions and protocols referred to therein, thereby realizing the objective of wider acceptance and implementation of those conventions;

15. Reaffirms the Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism and the Declaration to Supplement the 1994 Declaration on Measures to Eliminate International Terrorism, and calls upon all States to implement them;

16. Calls upon all States to cooperate to prevent and suppress terrorist acts;

17. Urges all States and the Secretary-General, in their efforts to prevent international terrorism, to make the best use of the existing institutions of the United Nations;

18. Requests the Terrorism Prevention Branch of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in Vienna to continue its efforts to enhance, through its mandate, the capabilities of the United Nations in the prevention of terrorism, and recognizes, in the context of the United Nations Global Counter-Terrorism Strategy and Security Council resolution 1373(2001), its role in assisting States in becoming parties to and implementing the relevant international conventions and protocols relating to terrorism, including the most recent among them, and in strengthening international cooperation mechanisms in criminal matters related to terrorism, including through national capacity-building;

19. Welcomes the current efforts by the Secretariat to prepare the third edition of the publication International Instruments related to the Prevention and Suppression of International Terrorism in all official languages;

20. Invites regional intergovernmental organizations to submit to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted at the regional level to eliminate international terrorism, as well as on intergovernmental meetings held by those organizations;

21. Notes the progress attained in the elaboration of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism during the meetings of the Ad Hoc Committee established by General Assembly resolution 51/210 and the Working Group established by the Sixth Committee during the sixty-third session of the General Assembly, and welcomes continuing efforts to that end;

22. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall, on an expedited basis, continue to elaborate the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism, and shall continue to discuss the item included in its agenda by General Assembly resolution 54/110 concerning the question of convening a high-level conference under the auspices of the United Nations;

23. Also decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall meet from 29 June to 2 July 2009 in order to fulfil the mandate referred to in paragraph 22 above;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work;

25. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-third session in the event of the completion of the draft comprehensive convention on international terrorism;

26. Also requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on progress made in the implementation of its mandate;

27. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on measures to eliminate international terrorism would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Additional Protocols I and II to the 1949 Geneva Conventions

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/30 [YUN 2006, p. 1519], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/63/118 & Corr.1] on the status of the two 1977 Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts [YUN 1977, p. 706], as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law with respect to, among other things, its dissemination and implementation at the national level, based on information received from 19 States and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC). Annexed to the report was a list of 167 States parties to one or both of the Protocols as at 11 July 2008. A subsequent addendum [A/63/118/Add.1] summarizes additional information received from 12 States and ICRC.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/440] adopted resolution 63/125, without vote [agenda item 76].

Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/44 of 8 December 1977, 34/51 of 23 November 1979, 37/116 of 16 December 1982, 39/77 of 13 December 1984, 41/72 of 3 December 1986, 43/161 of 9 December 1988, 45/38 of 28 November 1990, 47/30 of 25 November 1992, 49/48 of 9 December 1994, 51/155 of 16 December 1996, 53/96 of 8 December 1998, 55/148 of 12 December 2000, 57/14 of 19 November 2002, 59/36 of 2 December 2004 and 61/30 of 4 December 2006,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Thanking Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross for their contribution to the report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming the continuing value of established humanitarian rules relating to armed conflicts and the need to respect and ensure respect for those rules in all circumstances within the scope of the relevant international instruments, pending the earliest possible termination of such conflicts,

Stressing the possibility of making use of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in relation to an armed conflict, pursuant to article 90 of Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 1949,

Stressing also the possibility for the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission to facilitate, through its good offices, the restoration of an attitude of respect for the Geneva Conventions and Protocol I,

Stressing further the need to consolidate the existing body of international humanitarian law through its universal acceptance and the need for wide dissemination and full implementation of such law at the national level, and expressing concern about all violations of the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols,

Noting with satisfaction the increasing number of national commissions and other bodies involved in advising authorities at the national level on the implementation, dissemination and development of international humanitarian law,

Noting with appreciation the meetings of representatives of those bodies organized by the International Committee of the Red Cross to facilitate the sharing of concrete experience and the exchange of views on their roles and on the challenges they face,

Mindful of the role of the International Committee of the Red Cross in offering protection to the victims of armed conflicts,

Noting with appreciation the continuing efforts of the International Committee of the Red Cross to promote and disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Conventions and the Additional Protocols,

Recalling the undertakings at the Thirtieth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, held in Geneva from 26 to 30 November 2007, which reaffirmed the need to reinforce the implementation of and respect for international humanitarian law,

Noting the serious concern expressed by States regarding the humanitarian impact caused by cluster munitions, and taking note of the adoption of the Convention on Cluster Munitions in Dublin on 30 May 2008 and the ongoing negotiation of a proposal on this subject within the context of the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects,

Noting also the entry into force, on 14 January 2007, of the Protocol additional to the Geneva Conventions of 12

August 1949, and relating to the Adoption of an Additional Distinctive Emblem (Protocol III) of 8 December 2005,

Welcoming the significant debate generated by the publication in 2005 of the study by the International Committee of the Red Cross on Customary International Humanitarian Law and current initiatives by the Committee to update volume II of the study, on practice, as well as the growing number of translations into other languages of parts of the study, and looking forward to further constructive discussion on the subject,

Calling upon Member States to disseminate knowledge of international humanitarian law as widely as possible, and calling upon all parties to armed conflict to apply international humanitarian law,

Noting the special responsibilities of national Red Cross and Red Crescent societies, as auxiliaries to the public authorities of their respective States in the humanitarian field, to cooperate with and assist their Governments in the promotion, dissemination and implementation of international humanitarian law,

Acknowledging the fact that the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, which entered into force on 1 July 2002, includes the most serious crimes of international concern under international humanitarian law, and that the Statute, while recalling that it is the duty of every State to exercise its criminal jurisdiction over those responsible for such crimes, shows the determination of the international community to put an end to impunity for the perpetrators of such crimes and thus to contribute to their prevention,

Acknowledging also the usefulness of discussing in the General Assembly the status of instruments of international humanitarian law relevant to the protection of victims of armed conflicts,

1. Welcomes the universal acceptance of the Geneva Conventions of 1949, and notes the trend towards a similarly wide acceptance of the two Additional Protocols of 1977;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Geneva Conventions that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Additional Protocols at the earliest possible date;

3. Calls upon all States that are already parties to Protocol I, or those States not parties, on becoming parties to Protocol I, to make the declaration provided for under article 90 of that Protocol and to consider making use, where appropriate, of the services of the International Humanitarian Fact-Finding Commission in accordance with the provisions of article 90 of Protocol I;

4. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and the two Protocols thereto, and to other relevant treaties on international humanitarian law relating to the protection of victims of armed conflict;

5. Calls upon all States parties to the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions to ensure their wide dissemination and full implementation;

6. Notes with appreciation the adoption by the Thirtieth International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent of resolution 3, on the reaffirmation and implementation of international humanitarian law, entitled "Preserving human life and dignity in armed conflict", which, inter alia, reiterates the obligation of States to take national measures to implement international humanitarian law, including training of the armed forces and making this law known among the general public, as well as the adoption of legislation to punish war crimes in accordance with their international obligations;

7. Affirms the necessity of making the implementation of international humanitarian law more effective;

8. Welcomes the advisory service activities of the International Committee of the Red Cross in supporting efforts made by Member States to take legislative and administrative action to implement international humanitarian law and in promoting the exchange of information on those efforts between Governments;

9. Also welcomes the increasing number of national commissions or committees for the implementation of international humanitarian law and for promoting the incorporation of treaties on international humanitarian law into national law and disseminating the rules of international humanitarian law;

10. Calls upon States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on the status of the Additional Protocols relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts, as well as on measures taken to strengthen the existing body of international humanitarian law, inter alia, with respect to its dissemination and full implementation at the national level, based on information received from Member States and the International Committee of the Red Cross;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled "Status of the Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions of 1949 and relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts".

Montreux Document. In a 2 October letter [A/63/467-S/2008/636] to the Secretary-General, Switzerland transmitted the "Montreux Document", a text containing rules and good practices relating to private military and security companies operating in armed conflict, as a result of an international process launched in 2006 by the Swiss Government and ICRC. On 17 September, 17 participating States came to an understanding on the Document, which included references to the Geneva Conventions and aimed to promote respect for international humanitarian and human rights law. States were invited to consider adopting its measures and communicate their support for the Document to the Swiss Department of Foreign Affairs.

Privileges and immunities

In accordance with articles 35 and 36 of the 1947 Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies of the United Nations, adopted by General Assembly resolution 179(II) [YUN 1947-48, p. 190], in a March note [E/2008/8], the Secretary-

General transmitted the request of the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) that the Economic and Social Council take note of resolution 545(XVII) of the UNWTO General Assembly accepting that the Convention be applied to itself and recommend the revised draft annex outlining the privileges and immunities of UNWTO for final approval by the Organization.

On 29 April, the Council took note of UNWTO General Assembly resolution 545(XVII) and recommended the revised draft annex to UNWTO for final approval (decision 2008/210).

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

As at 31 December, the States parties to the following conventions relating to the protection of diplomatic and consular relations numbered: 186 States parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations [YUN 1961, p. 512], 51 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 516] and 66 parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.].

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations [YUN 1963, p. 510] had 172 parties, the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality [ibid., p. 512] had 39, and the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes [ibid.] had 48.

Parties to the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents [YUN 1973, p. 775] numbered 171.

Report of Secretary-General. In a July report [A/63/121], with a later addendum [A/63/121/Add.1 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General summarized information received from 29 Member States and the Holy See, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/31 [YUN 2006, p. 1521], on instances of serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/441], adopted resolution 63/126 without vote [agenda item 77].

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,
Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Conscious of the need to develop and strengthen friendly relations and cooperation among States,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Alarmed by the recent acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which have endangered or taken innocent lives and seriously impeded the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing sympathy for the victims of such illegal acts,

Concerned at the failure to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Recalling that, without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, it is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State,

Recalling also that diplomatic and consular premises must not be used in any manner incompatible with the functions of diplomatic and consular missions,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate measures as required by international law, including measures of a preventive nature, and to bring offenders to justice,

Welcoming measures already taken by States to this end in conformity with their international obligations,

Convinced that the role of the United Nations, which includes the reporting procedures established pursuant to General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in subsequent Assembly resolutions, is important in promoting efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives of international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts can never be justified;

3. Urges States to strictly observe, implement and enforce the applicable principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations, including during a period of armed conflict, and, in particular, to ensure, in conformity with their international obligations, the protection, security and safety of the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above officially present in territories under their jurisdiction, including practical measures to prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials;

4. Also urges States to take all appropriate measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against the missions, representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, including during a period of armed conflict, and to ensure, with the participation of the United Nations where appropriate, that such acts are fully investigated with a view to bringing offenders to justice;

5. Recommends that States cooperate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives and with regard to the exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

6. Urges States to take all appropriate measures, in accordance with international law, at the national and international levels, to prevent any abuse of diplomatic or consular privileges and immunities, in particular serious abuses, including those involving acts of violence;

7. Recommends that States cooperate closely with the State in whose territory abuses of diplomatic and consular privileges and immunities may have occurred, including by exchanging information and providing assistance to its juridical authorities in order to bring offenders to justice;

8. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

9. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of their international obligations concerning the protection of the missions or the security of the representatives and officials mentioned in paragraph 2 above, to make use of the means available for peaceful settlement of disputes, including the good offices of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General, when he deems it appropriate, to offer his good offices to the States directly concerned;

10. Requests:

(a) All States to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

(b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent possible, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and to report on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

(c) The States so reporting to consider using or taking into account the guidelines prepared by the Secretary-General;

11. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To send, without delay, a circular note to all States reminding them of the request contained in paragraph 10 above;

(b) To circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 10 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

(c) To draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 10 above, when a serious violation has been reported pursuant to subparagraph 10 (a) above;

(d) To address reminders to States where such violations have occurred if reports pursuant to subparagraph 10 (a) above or follow-up reports pursuant to subparagraph

10 (b) above have not been made within a reasonable period of time;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite States, in the circular note referred to in paragraph 11 (a) above, to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed or already taken to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives as well as missions and representatives with diplomatic status to international intergovernmental organizations;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report containing:

(a) Information on the state of ratification of, and accessions to, the instruments referred to in paragraph 8 above;

(b) A summary of the reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 10 and 12 above;

14. Invites the Secretary-General to include in his report to the General Assembly any views he may wish to express on the matters referred to in paragraph 13 above;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the item entitled “Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives”.

Treaties and agreements

Reservations to treaties

At its sixtieth session [A/63/10], ILC considered the thirteenth report of Special Rapporteur Alain Pellet (France) on reactions to interpretative declarations [A/CN.4/600], a note relating to draft guideline 2.1.9 on the statement of reasons of reservations [A/CN.4/586], and the draft guidelines contained in the Special Rapporteur’s eleventh [YUN 2006, p. 1523] and twelfth [YUN 2007, p. 1371] reports. The Commission adopted 23 draft guidelines dealing with formulation and withdrawal of acceptances and objections, as well as the procedure for acceptance of reservations, together with commentaries, and referred 10 draft guidelines on reactions to interpretative declarations to its Drafting Committee.

The Commission provisionally adopted draft guidelines 2.1.6 (Procedure for communication of reservations), 2.1.9 (Statement of reasons for reservations), 2.6.6 (Joint formulation), 2.6.7 (Written form), 2.6.8 (Expression of intention to preclude the entry into force of the treaty), 2.6.9 (Procedure for the formulation of objections), 2.6.10 (Statement of reasons), 2.6.13 (Time period for formulating an objection), 2.6.14 (Conditional objections), 2.6.15 (Late objections), 2.7.1 (Withdrawal of objections to reservations), 2.7.2 (Form of withdrawal), 2.7.3 (Formulation and communication of the withdrawal of objections to reservations), 2.7.4 (Effect on reservation of withdrawal of an objection), 2.7.5 (Effective date of withdrawal of an objection), 2.7.6 (Cases in which an objecting State or international organization may unilaterally set the effective date of withdrawal of an objection to a reservation), 2.7.7 (Partial withdrawal of an objection), 2.7.8 (Effect of a partial withdrawal of an objection), 2.7.9 (Widening of the scope of an objection to a reservation), 2.6.5 (Author of an objection), 2.6.11 (Non-requirement of confirmation of an objection made prior to formal confirmation of a reservation), 2.6.12 (Requirement of confirmation of an objection made prior to the expression of consent to be bound by a treaty) and 2.8 (Forms of acceptance of reservations).

In July, the Commission took note of draft guidelines 2.8.1 to 2.8.12 as provisionally adopted by the Drafting Committee.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations [YUN 1986, p. 1006], which had not yet entered into force, had 40 parties as at 31 December 2008.

UN registration and publication of treaties

During 2008, 1,233 treaties were received and 1,058 subsequent actions were registered or filed and recorded with the Secretariat. In addition, 1,096 treaty actions (signatures, ratifications, acceptances, approvals, accessions and other formalities) were received in the UN Treaty Section for deposit with the Secretary-General in his capacity as depositary of multilateral treaties. Twelve issues of the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements were published.

Thirty-three volumes of the United Nations Treaty Series (UNTS) were published, incorporating the texts of treaties registered or filed and recorded and related subsequent actions in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. The United Nations Treaty Collection (UNTC) on the Internet, which contained published UNTS volumes up to 2005, the League of Nations Treaty Series, the Treaty Handbook, Multilateral Treaties Deposited with the Secretary-General, the Summary of Practice of the Secretary-General as Depositary of Multilateral Treaties, the Treaty Event Booklets, information on capacity-building trainings and a range of materials on treaty law and practice, generated over 200,000 page views and had over 1,400 subscribers to its automated treaty information services.

The UN Treaty Section completed a major upgrade to its Treaty Information and Publishing System, with a fully operational redesigned treaty registration and publishing platform for UNTS and related publications being made fully operational. On 8 September, the Treaty Section launched its new and enhanced website <http://treaties.un.org>, featuring online automated subscription services, varied search and retrieval options, daily updates posted for all major databases, in particular for the multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General, and other improvements.

The “2008 Treaty Event: Towards Universal Participation and Implementation—Dignity and Justice for All of Us” (New York, 23–26 and 29 September and 1 October) resulted in 84 treaty actions undertaken by 44 States with respect to 37 treaties deposited with the Secretary-General. Those treaties related to human rights; the environment, sustainable development, water, sanitation and the polar regions; disarmament and penal matters; privileges and immunities and the safety of UN and associated personnel; and transit customs and trade agreements of concern to landlocked and transit developing countries.

Advice and capacity-building in treaty law and practice

Advice and assistance on treaty law and practice were provided to Member States, specialized agencies, regional commissions, other UN bodies and other entities. Two seminars on treaty law and practice were conducted at UN Headquarters for legal advisors from Member States and other officials. Two regional capacity-building workshops on treaty law and practice and the implementation of treaty obligations were also held: one in Bangkok, Thailand, attended by 43 participants from landlocked developing countries, transit developing countries, UN system entities, and relevant international and regional organizations; and the other in Accra, Ghana, attended by 36 participants from 14 countries. A presentation on treaty law and practice was also given at the UN Conference Centre in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

Multilateral treaties

The UN Treaty Series and the regularly updated status of multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General were available on the Internet at the UN Treaty Collection website.

New multilateral treaties concluded under UN auspices

The following new treaties, concluded under UN auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 2008:

Additional Protocol to the Convention on the Contract for the International Carriage of Goods by Road (CMR) concerning the Electronic Consignment Note, adopted in Geneva on 20 February

Convention on Cluster Munitions, adopted in Dublin on 30 May

Protocol to the Statutes of the International Centre for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology on the Seat of the Centre, adopted in Trieste, Italy, on 24 October 2007 and received on 29 May 2008

Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, adopted in New York on 10 December

United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea, adopted in New York on 11 December

Annex XVIII (World Tourism Organization) to the Convention on Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies, 1947, adopted in Jeju, Republic of Korea, on 30 July

Multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General

At the end of 2008, the Secretary-General performed depositary functions for 544 multilateral treaties.

The following multilateral treaties deposited with the Secretary-General came into force in 2008:

Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, adopted on 13 December 2006

Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, adopted on 13 December 2006

European Agreement concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Inland Waterways (ADN), adopted on 26 May 2000

Protocol to the Statutes of the International Centre for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology on the Seat of the Centre, adopted on 24 October 2007

Other international legal questions

Rule of law at the national and international levels

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/39 [YUN 2006, p. 1525], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [A/63/64] on the rule of law at the national and international levels, containing an inventory of UN rule-of-law activities, based on information provided by 40 UN entities. Those activities were first divided into two main categories, depending on whether they were intended to promote the rule of law at the international or national level, and further divided into subcategories based on the particular aspect of the rule of law they were intended to promote in response to the specific needs of Member States.

There was a separate entry for each activity or series of related activities performed by a UN entity. Under each entry, the inventory provided the title and brief description of the activity and also indicated the field of law concerned, such as administration of justice, crime prevention and criminal justice, human rights law, international terrorism; the beneficiaries of the activity (government officials, judges, parliamentarians, non-governmental institutions, the general public); and, if appropriate, the specific circumstances under which the activity was performed, such as in a conflict or post-conflict situation. Entries also included, when available, information on the mandate providing the legal basis or authorization for the activity concerned; the person or entity authorized to initiate or request performance of the activity; the entities involved in its implementation and/or monitoring and those with which the entity performing the activity cooperated for that purpose; and financing of the activity.

In an August report [A/63/226], submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 62/70 [YUN 2007, p. 1373], the Secretary-General highlighted ways and means to strengthen and coordinate UN rule-of-law activities, which focused on areas such as enhancing and harmonizing UN engagement; ensuring strategic coordination and coherence in UN collective efforts; measuring the effectiveness and evaluating the impact of UN rule-of-law assistance; and establishing meaningful partnerships. He also made a series of recommendations to States and other rule-of-law stakeholders on working as one rule-of-law community.

Rule of Law Unit. In a July report [A/63/154], pursuant to resolution 62/70 [YUN 2007, p. 1373], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimates to the 2008–2009 programme budget related to the Rule of Law Unit [YUN 2006, p. 47], which described the establishment of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General; the rationale for the Unit; its functions; and the staffing and other resource requirements. Estimated additional resources totalled $953,800. In December, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions recommended that the staff required for 2009 continue to be provided through secondment (preferably of existing personnel) and that any additional staff required could be requested in the 2010–2011 proposed programme budget [A/63/594].

On 24 December, by section II of resolution 63/263 (see p. 1547), the Assembly established four professional posts for the Rule of Law Unit, effective 1 January 2009; requested that the Unit Director continue to be provided, for 2009, through secondment; and decided to revert to the issue in the context of the 2010–2011 proposed programme budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/443], adopted resolution 63/128 without vote [agenda item 79].

The rule of law at the national and international levels

Recalling its resolution 62/70 of 6 December 2007,

Reaffirming its commitment to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and international law, which are indispensable foundations of a more peaceful, prosperous and just world, and reiterating its determination to foster strict respect for them and to establish a just and lasting peace all over the world,

Reaffirming also that human rights, the rule of law and democracy are interlinked and mutually reinforcing and that they belong to the universal and indivisible core values and principles of the United Nations,

Reaffirming further the need for universal adherence to and implementation of the rule of law at both the national and international levels and its solemn commitment to an international order based on the rule of law and international law, which, together with the principles of justice, is essential for peaceful coexistence and cooperation among States,

Convinced that the advancement of the rule of law at the national and international levels is essential for the realization of sustained economic growth, sustainable development, the eradication of poverty and hunger and the protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and acknowledging that collective security depends on effective cooperation, in accordance with the Charter and international law, against transnational threats,

Reaffirming the duty of all States to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force in any manner inconsistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations and to settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered, in accordance with Chapter VI of the Charter, and calling upon States that have not yet done so to consider accepting the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice in accordance with its Statute,

Convinced that the promotion of and respect for the rule of law at the national and international levels, as well as justice and good governance, should guide the activities of the United Nations and of its Member States,

Recalling paragraph 134 (e) of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

1. Notes with appreciation the inventory of current rule of law activities of the United Nations submitted by the Secretary-General and the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening and coordinating United Nations rule of law activities;

2. Reaffirms the role of the General Assembly in encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification, and reaffirms further that States shall abide by all their obligations under international law;

3. Stresses the importance of adherence to the rule of law at the national level, and the need to strengthen support to Member States, upon their request, in the domestic implementation of their respective international obligations through enhanced technical assistance and capacity-building, based on greater coordination and coherence within the United Nations system and among donors, and calls for greater evaluation of the effectiveness of such activities;

4. Calls upon the United Nations system to systematically address, as appropriate, aspects of the rule of law in relevant activities, recognizing the importance of the rule of law to virtually all areas of United Nations engagement;

5. Expresses full support for the overall coordination and coherence role of the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group within the United Nations system within existing mandates, supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, under the leadership of the Deputy Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to submit an annual report on United Nations rule of law activities, in particular the work of the Group and the Unit, with special regard to the improvement of the coordination, coherence and effectiveness of rule of law activities, taking note of the elements set out in paragraphs 77 and 78 of the report of the Secretary-General;

6. Encourages the Secretary-General and the United Nations system to accord high priority to rule of law activities;

7. Invites the International Court of Justice, the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and the International Law Commission to continue to comment, in their respective reports to the General Assembly, on their current roles in promoting the rule of law;

8. Invites the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group and the Rule of Law Unit to interact with Member States, in particular in informal briefings;

9. Stresses the need to consider without delay the report of the Secretary-General on the resource requirements of the Unit, and urges the Secretary-General and Member States to continue to support the functioning of the Unit during the interim phase;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the item entitled "The rule of law at the national and international levels", and invites Member States to focus their comments in future Sixth Committee debates on the sub-topics "Promoting the rule of law at the international level" (sixty-fourth session), "Laws and practices of Member States in implementing international law" (sixty-fifth session), and "Rule of law and transitional justice in conflict and post-conflict situations" (sixty-sixth session), without prejudice to the consideration of the item as a whole.

International economic law

In 2008, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

International trade law

At its forty-first session (New York, 16 June–3 July), UNCITRAL finalized and approved the draft Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea and submitted the text to the General Assembly for adoption as the basis of a UN Convention. It continued work on public procurement, arbitration and conciliation, electronic commerce, insolvency law, commercial fraud and security interests. It also monitored implementation of the 1958 New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards (the New York Convention) [YUN 1958, p. 390], the work on the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), and training and technical assistance activities.

The report of the session [A/63/17 & Corr.1] described actions taken on those topics (for details, see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/438], adopted resolution 63/120 without vote [agenda item 74].

Reports of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its resumed fortieth and its forty-first sessions

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming its belief that the progressive modernization and harmonization of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would contribute significantly to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity, common interest and respect for the rule of law, to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to peace, stability and the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the reports of the Commission on the work of its resumed fortieth and its forty-first sessions,

Reiterating its concern that activities undertaken by other bodies in the field of international trade law without adequate coordination with the Commission might lead to undesirable duplication of efforts and would not be in keeping with the aim of promoting efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law,

Reaffirming the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field, in particular to avoid duplication of efforts, including among organizations formulating rules of international trade, and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law, and to continue, through its secretariat, to maintain close cooperation with other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the reports of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its resumed fortieth and its forty-first sessions;

2. Commends the Commission for the completion and adoption of the Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions;

3. Also commends the Commission for the completion and approval of the draft Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea;

4. Welcomes the progress made by the Commission in its work on a revision of its Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Construction and Services, on the preparation of a draft legislative guide on the treatment of enterprise groups in insolvency, on the compilation of practical experience with negotiating and using cross-border insolvency agreements to facilitate cross-border insolvency proceedings and on the preparation of an annex to its Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions dealing with security rights in intellectual property, and endorses the decision of the Commission to undertake further work in the area of electronic commerce and commercial fraud;

5. Also welcomes the progress made by the Commission in its work on a revision of its Arbitration Rules, and encourages the Commission to complete this work as soon as possible so that the revised Rules may be considered by the Commission at its forty-second session, in 2009;

6. Endorses the efforts and initiatives of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, aimed at increasing coordination of and cooperation on legal activities of international and regional organizations active in the field of international trade law, as well as promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels in this field, and in this regard appeals to relevant international and regional organizations to coordinate their legal activities with those of the Commission, to avoid duplication of efforts and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the modernization and harmonization of international trade law;

7. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with technical assistance and cooperation in the field of international trade law reform and development, and in this connection:

(a) Welcomes the initiatives of the Commission towards expanding, through its secretariat, its technical assistance and cooperation programme and, in that respect, encourages the Secretary-General to seek partnerships with State and non-State actors to increase awareness about the work of the Commission and facilitate the effective implementation of legal standards resulting from its work;

(b) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for carrying out technical assistance and cooperation activities, including at the country, subregional and regional levels, and for providing assistance with legislative drafting in the field of international trade law, and draws the attention of the Secretary-General to the limited resources that are made available in this field;

(c) Expresses its appreciation to the Governments whose contributions enabled the technical assistance and cooperation activities to take place, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law Trust Fund for Symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in carrying out technical assistance activities, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Reiterates its appeal to the United Nations Development Programme and other bodies responsible for development assistance, such as the World Bank and regional development banks, as well as to Governments in their bilateral aid programmes, to support the technical assistance programme of the Commission and to cooperate and coordinate their activities with those of the Commission, in the light of the relevance and importance of the work and programmes of the Commission for promotion of the rule of law at the national and international levels and for the implementation of the United Nations development agenda, including the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals;

8. Expresses its appreciation to the Government whose contribution to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General, enabled renewal of the provision of that assistance, and appeals to Governments, the relevant bodies of the United Nations system, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund in order to increase expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and its working groups, necessary to build local expertise and capacities in the field of international trade law in those countries to facilitate the development of international trade and the promotion of foreign investment;

9. Decides, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups, to continue, in the competent Main Committee during the sixty-third session of the General Assembly, its consideration of granting travel assistance to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, at their request and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

10. Welcomes, in the light of the recent increase in membership of the Commission and the number of topics being dealt with by the Commission, the comprehensive review undertaken by the Commission of its working methods, which was started at its last session, with the aim of continuing consideration of the matter during its next sessions and with a view to ensuring the high quality of the work of the Commission and international acceptability of its instruments, and in this regard recalls its previous resolutions related to this matter;

11. Also welcomes the discussion by the Commission of its role in promoting the rule of law at the national and international levels, in particular the conviction of the Commission that the implementation and effective use of modern private law standards on international trade are essential for advancing good governance, sustained economic development and the eradication of poverty and hunger and that promotion of the rule of law in commercial relations should be an integral part of the broader agenda of the United Nations to promote the rule of law at the national and international levels, including through the Rule of Law Coordination and Resource Group, supported by the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, and the fact that the Commission is looking forward to being part of strengthened and coordinated activities of the Organization and sees its role in particular as providing assistance to States that seek to promote the rule of law in the area of international and domestic trade and investment;

12. Further welcomes the consideration by the Commission of the proposed strategic framework for the period 2010–2011 and its review of the proposed biennial programme plan for the progressive harmonization, modernization and unification of the law of international trade (subprogramme 5), and takes note that, while the Commission noted with satisfaction that the objectives and expected accomplishments of the Secretariat and the overall strategy for subprogramme 5 were in line with its general policy, the Commission also expressed concern that the resources allotted to the Secretariat under subprogramme 5 were insufficient for it to meet, in particular, the increased demand for technical assistance from developing countries and countries with economies in transition to meet their urgent need for law reform in the field of commercial law, and urged the Secretary-General to take steps to ensure that the comparatively small amount of additional resources necessary to meet a demand so crucial to development are made available promptly;

13. Recalls its resolutions on partnerships between the United Nations and non-State actors, in particular the private sector, and its resolutions in which it encouraged the Commission to further explore different approaches to the use of partnerships with non-State actors in the implementation of its mandate, in particular in the area of technical assistance, in accordance with the applicable principles and guidelines and in cooperation and coordination with other relevant offices of the Secretariat, including the Global Compact Office;

14. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General, in conformity with the General Assembly resolutions on documentation-related matters, which, in particular, emphasize that any reduction in the length of documents should not adversely affect either the quality of the presentation or the substance of the documents, to bear in mind the particular characteristics of the mandate and work of the Commission in implementing page limits with respect to the documentation of the Commission;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to continue providing summary records of the meetings of the Commission relating to the formulation of normative texts;

16. Recalls its resolution approving the establishment of the Yearbook of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, with the aim of making the work of the Commission more widely known and readily available, expresses its concern regarding the timeliness of the publication of the Yearbook, and requests the Secretary-General to explore options to facilitate the timely publication of the Yearbook;

17. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law, and to this end urges States that have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to those conventions;

18. Welcomes the preparation of digests of case law relating to the texts of the Commission, such as a digest of case law relating to the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods and a digest of case law relating to the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, with the aim of assisting in the dissemination of information on those texts and promoting their use, enactment and uniform interpretation;

19. Takes note with appreciation of conferences celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards done in New York on 10 June 1958 ("the New York Convention"), the progress made in the ongoing project of the Commission on monitoring the implementation of the New York Convention, the decision of the Commission to develop a guide to enactment of the New York Convention to promote a uniform interpretation and application of the Convention and its decision that, resources permitting, the activities of the secretariat in the context of its technical assistance programme could usefully include dissemination of information on the judicial interpretation of the New York Convention, to complement other activities in support of the Convention;

20. Recalls its resolutions affirming the importance of high-quality, user-friendly and cost-effective United Nations websites and the need for their multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment, commends the website of the Commission in the six official languages of the United Nations, and welcomes the continuous efforts of the Commission to maintain and improve its website in accordance with the applicable guidelines;

21. Expresses its appreciation to Jernej Sekolec, Secretary of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law since 2001, who retired on 31 July 2008, for his outstanding and devoted contribution to the process of unification and harmonization of international trade law in general and to the Commission in particular.

Procurement

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] took note of the reports of Working Group I (Procurement) on its twelfth (Vienna, 3–7 September 2007) [A/CN.9/640] and thirteenth (New York, 7–11 April 2008) [A/CN.9/648] sessions relating to the revision of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Procurement of Goods, Constructions and Services, in response to the Commission's 2004 request [YUN 2004, p. 1356]. At those sessions, the Working Group adopted the timeline for its deliberations, considered the issue of framework agreements, and decided that the issue of suppliers' lists would not be addressed in the Model Law, for reasons that would be set out in the Guide to Enactment. UNCITRAL also approved a fourteenth session of the Working Group, which was held in Vienna from 8 to 12 September.

Commending the Working Group for the progress made, UNCITRAL invited the Group to proceed expeditiously with the completion of the project, with a view to permitting the finalization and adoption of the revised Model Law, together with its Guide to Enactment, within a reasonable time.

International commercial arbitration

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] considered the reports of Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) on its forty-seventh (Vienna, 10–14 September 2007) [A/CN.9/641] and forty-eighth (New York, 4–8 February 2008) [A/CN.9/646] sessions relating to revision of the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules and commended the Group on progress made. It also approved a forty-ninth session of the Working Group, which was held in Vienna from 15 to 19 September.

The Commission noted that the Working Group had decided to proceed with its work on the revision of the Rules in their generic form and to seek guidance from UNCITRAL on whether the Group should consider in further depth the specificity of treaty-based arbitration, and agreed that it was not desirable to include specific provisions on such arbitration in the Rules. UNCITRAL also agreed that the topic of transparency in treaty-based investor-State arbitration should be dealt with as a matter of priority immediately after revision of the Rules, yet should not delay revision of the Rules in their generic form, which UNCITRAL hoped the Group would complete so their final review and adoption would take place at the Commission's 2009 session. To facilitate consideration of the topic of transparency at a future session, the Commission requested the Secretariat to undertake preliminary research and compile information on current practices. It urged States to contribute broad information on their practices with respect to transparency in investor-State arbitration.

Implementation of the 1958 New York Convention

Under the ongoing project approved by UNCITRAL in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 1364], aimed at monitoring the legislative implementation of the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards [YUN 1958, p. 390], UNCITRAL, at its forty-first session [A/63/17 & Corr.1], considered a written report covering implementation of the Convention by States, its interpretation and application, and the requirements and procedures established by States for enforcing an award, based on replies sent by 108 States parties to the Convention [A/CN.9/656 & Add.1]. UNCITRAL noted that the report's recommendations and conclusions highlighted areas where additional work might be needed to enhance uniform interpretation and effective implementation of the Convention.

The Commission agreed that work should be undertaken to eliminate or limit the effect of legal disharmony with respect to the application of national rules of procedure to matters on which the Convention was silent, which had given rise to diverging solutions to the many different procedural requirements that governed the recognition and enforcement of awards under the Convention. The Commission envisaged that the outcome of the project should consist in the development of a guide to enactment of the Convention. It requested that the Secretariat study the feasibility of such a guide and publish on the UNCITRAL website the information collected during the project implementation, in the language in which it was received. The Commission also urged States to provide the Secretariat with accurate information to ensure that the data published on the website remained up to date.

In other developments, on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the Convention, the Commission was informed that a one-day conference, organized jointly by the United Nations and the International Bar Association, was held in New York on 1 February 2008, with more than 600 people from 50 countries participating in the event. A conference celebrating the anniversary had also been organized (Vienna, 13–14 March) under the auspices of UNCITRAL and the International Arbitral Centre of the Austrian Federal Economic Chamber.

Transport Law

UNCITRAL [A/63/17 & Corr.1] considered the reports of Working Group III (Transport Law) on its twentieth (Vienna, 15–25 October 2007) [A/CN.9/642] and twenty-first (New York, 14–25 January 2008) [A/CN.9/645] sessions, with the latter report containing in an annex the text of the draft Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea, approved by the Working Group. The Commission also had before it a compilation of comments submitted by Governments and intergovernmental organizations regarding the draft Convention as approved by the Working Group [A/CN.9/658 & Add.1–14]. The Commission approved the draft Convention and on 3 July decided to submit the draft Convention, as set forth in annex I of the report, to the General Assembly for adoption.

On 11 December, by resolution 63/122, the Assembly adopted the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea, authorized a ceremony for the opening for signature to be held on 23 September 2009 in Rotterdam, the Netherlands and recommended that the rules embodied in the Convention be known as “the Rotterdam Rules”.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/438], adopted resolution 63/122 without vote [agenda item 74].

United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it established the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Concerned that the current legal regime governing the international carriage of goods by sea lacks uniformity and fails to adequately take into account modern transport practices, including containerization, door-to-door transport contracts and the use of electronic transport documents,

Noting that the development of international trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit is an important element in promoting friendly relations among States,

Convinced that the adoption of uniform rules to modernize and harmonize the rules that govern the international carriage of goods involving a sea leg would enhance legal certainty, improve efficiency and commercial predictability in the international carriage of goods and reduce legal obstacles to the flow of international trade among all States,

Believing that the adoption of uniform rules to govern international contracts of carriage wholly or partly by sea will promote legal certainty, improve the efficiency of international carriage of goods and facilitate new access opportunities for previously remote parties and markets, thus playing a fundamental role in promoting trade and economic development, both domestically and internationally,

Noting that shippers and carriers do not have the benefit of a binding and balanced universal regime to support the operation of contracts of carriage involving various modes of transport,

Recalling that, at its thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth sessions, in 2001 and 2002, the Commission decided to prepare an international legislative instrument governing door-to-door transport operations that involve a sea leg,

Recognizing that all States and interested international organizations were invited to participate in the preparation of the draft Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea and in the forty-first session of the Commission, either as members or as observers, with a full opportunity to speak and make proposals,

Noting with satisfaction that the text of the draft Convention was circulated for comment to all States Members of the United Nations and intergovernmental organizations invited to attend the meetings of the Commission as observers, and that the comments received were before the Commission at its forty-first session,

Taking note with satisfaction of the decision of the Commission at its forty-first session to submit the draft Convention to the General Assembly for its consideration,

Taking note of the draft Convention approved by the Commission,

Expressing its appreciation to the Government of the Netherlands for its offer to host a signing ceremony for the Convention in Rotterdam,

1. Commends the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for preparing the draft Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea;

2. Adopts the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea, contained in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Authorizes a ceremony for the opening for signature to be held on 23 September 2009 in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, and recommends that the rules embodied in the Convention be known as “the Rotterdam Rules”;

4. Calls upon all Governments to consider becoming party to the Convention.

ANNEX

United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Carriage of Goods Wholly or Partly by Sea

The States Parties to this Convention,

Reaffirming their belief that international trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit is an important element in promoting friendly relations among States,

Convinced that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, significantly contributes to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest, and to the well-being of all peoples,

Recognizing the significant contribution of the International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules of Law relating to Bills of Lading, signed in Brussels on 25 August 1924, and its Protocols, and of the United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea, signed in Hamburg on 31 March 1978, to the harmonization of the law governing the carriage of goods by sea,

Mindful of the technological and commercial developments that have taken place since the adoption of those conventions and of the need to consolidate and modernize them,

Noting that shippers and carriers do not have the benefit of a binding universal regime to support the operation of contracts of maritime carriage involving other modes of transport,

Believing that the adoption of uniform rules to govern international contracts of carriage wholly or partly by sea will promote legal certainty, improve the efficiency of international carriage of goods and facilitate new access opportunities for previously remote parties and markets, thus playing a fundamental role in promoting trade and economic development, both domestically and internationally,

Chapter 1

General provisions

Article 1

Definitions

For the purposes of this Convention:

1. “Contract of carriage” means a contract in which a carrier, against the payment of freight, undertakes to carry goods from one place to another. The contract shall provide for carriage by sea and may provide for carriage by other modes of transport in addition to the sea carriage.

2. “Volume contract” means a contract of carriage that provides for the carriage of a specified quantity of goods in a series of shipments during an agreed period of time. The specification of the quantity may include a minimum, a maximum or a certain range.

3. “Liner transportation” means a transportation service that is offered to the public through publication or similar means and includes transportation by ships operating on a regular schedule between specified ports in accordance with publicly available timetables of sailing dates.

4. “Non-liner transportation” means any transportation that is not liner transportation.

5. “Carrier” means a person that enters into a contract of carriage with a shipper.

6. (a) “Performing party” means a person other than the carrier that performs or undertakes to perform any of the carrier’s obligations under a contract of carriage with respect to the receipt, loading, handling, stowage, carriage, care, unloading or delivery of the goods, to the extent that such person acts, either directly or indirectly, at the carrier’s request or under the carrier’s supervision or control.

(b) “Performing party” does not include any person that is retained, directly or indirectly, by a shipper, by a documentary shipper, by the controlling party or by the consignee instead of by the carrier.

7. “Maritime performing party” means a performing party to the extent that it performs or undertakes to perform any of the carrier’s obligations during the period between the arrival of the goods at the port of loading of a ship and their departure from the port of discharge of a ship. An inland carrier is a maritime performing party only if it performs or undertakes to perform its services exclusively within a port area.

8. “Shipper” means a person that enters into a contract of carriage with a carrier.

9. “Documentary shipper” means a person, other than the shipper, that accepts to be named as “shipper” in the transport document or electronic transport record.

10. “Holder” means:

(a) A person that is in possession of a negotiable transport document; and (i) if the document is an order document, is identified in it as the shipper or the consignee, or is the person to which the document is duly endorsed; or (ii) if the document is a blank endorsed order document or bearer document, is the bearer thereof; or

(b) The person to which a negotiable electronic transport record has been issued or transferred in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1.

11. “Consignee” means a person entitled to delivery of the goods under a contract of carriage or a transport document or electronic transport record.

12. “Right of control” of the goods means the right under the contract of carriage to give the carrier instructions in respect of the goods in accordance with chapter 10.

13. “Controlling party” means the person that pursuant to article 51 is entitled to exercise the right of control.

14. “Transport document” means a document issued under a contract of carriage by the carrier that:

(a) Evidences the carrier’s or a performing party’s receipt of goods under a contract of carriage; and

(b) Evidences or contains a contract of carriage.

15. “Negotiable transport document” means a transport document that indicates, by wording such as “to order” or “negotiable” or other appropriate wording recognized as having the same effect by the law applicable to the document, that the goods have been consigned to the order of the shipper, to the order of the consignee, or to bearer, and is not explicitly stated as being “non-negotiable” or “not negotiable”.

16. “Non-negotiable transport document” means a transport document that is not a negotiable transport document.

17. “Electronic communication” means information generated, sent, received or stored by electronic, optical, digital or similar means with the result that the information communicated is accessible so as to be usable for subsequent reference.

18. “Electronic transport record” means information in one or more messages issued by electronic communication under a contract of carriage by a carrier, including information logically associated with the electronic transport record by attachments or otherwise linked to the electronic transport record contemporaneously with or subsequent to its issue by the carrier, so as to become part of the electronic transport record, that:

(a) Evidences the carrier’s or a performing party’s receipt of goods under a contract of carriage; and

(b) Evidences or contains a contract of carriage.

19. “Negotiable electronic transport record” means an electronic transport record:

(a) That indicates, by wording such as “to order”, or “negotiable”, or other appropriate wording recognized as having the same effect by the law applicable to the record, that the goods have been consigned to the order of the shipper or to the order of the consignee, and is not explicitly stated as being “non-negotiable” or “not negotiable”; and

(b) The use of which meets the requirements of article 9, paragraph 1.

20. “Non-negotiable electronic transport record” means an electronic transport record that is not a negotiable electronic transport record.

21. The “issuance” of a negotiable electronic transport record means the issuance of the record in accordance with procedures that ensure that the record is subject to exclusive control from its creation until it ceases to have any effect or validity.

22. The “transfer” of a negotiable electronic transport record means the transfer of exclusive control over the record.

23. “Contract particulars” means any information relating to the contract of carriage or to the goods (including terms, notations, signatures and endorsements) that is in a transport document or an electronic transport record.

24. “Goods” means the wares, merchandise, and articles of every kind whatsoever that a carrier undertakes to carry under a contract of carriage and includes the packing and any equipment and container not supplied by or on behalf of the carrier.

25. “Ship” means any vessel used to carry goods by sea.

26. “Container” means any type of container, transportable tank or flat, swapbody, or any similar unit load used to consolidate goods, and any equipment ancillary to such unit load.

27. “Vehicle” means a road or railroad cargo vehicle.

28. “Freight” means the remuneration payable to the carrier for the carriage of goods under a contract of carriage.

29. “Domicile” means (a) a place where a company or other legal person or association of natural or legal persons has its (i) statutory seat or place of incorporation or central registered office, whichever is applicable, (ii) central administration or (iii) principal place of business, and (b) the habitual residence of a natural person.

30. “Competent court” means a court in a Contracting State that, according to the rules on the internal allocation of jurisdiction among the courts of that State, may exercise jurisdiction over the dispute.

Interpretation of this Convention

In the interpretation of this Convention, regard is to be had to its international character and to the need to promote uniformity in its application and the observance of good faith in international trade.

Form requirements

The notices, confirmation, consent, agreement, declaration and other communications referred to in articles 19, paragraph 2; 23, paragraphs 1 to 4; 36, subparagraphs 1 (b), (c) and (d); 40, subparagraph 4 (b); 44; 48, paragraph 3; 51, subparagraph 1 (b); 59, paragraph 1; 63; 66; 67, paragraph 2; 75, paragraph 4; and 80, paragraphs 2 and 5, shall be in writing. Electronic communications may be used for these purposes, provided that the use of such means is with the consent of the person by which it is communicated and of the person to which it is communicated.

Article 4Applicability of defences and limits of liability

1. Any provision of this Convention that may provide a defence for, or limit the liability of, the carrier applies in any judicial or arbitral proceeding, whether founded in contract, in tort, or otherwise, that is instituted in respect of loss of, damage to, or delay in delivery of goods covered by a contract of carriage or for the breach of any other obligation under this Convention against:

- (a) The carrier or a maritime performing party;
- (b) The master, crew or any other person that performs services on board the ship; or
- (c) Employees of the carrier or a maritime performing party.

2. Any provision of this Convention that may provide a defence for the shipper or the documentary shipper applies in any judicial or arbitral proceeding, whether founded in contract, in tort, or otherwise, that is instituted against the shipper, the documentary shipper, or their subcontractors, agents or employees.

Chapter 2*Scope of applicationArticle 5General scope of application*

1. Subject to article 6, this Convention applies to contracts of carriage in which the place of receipt and the place of delivery are in different States, and the port of loading of a sea carriage and the port of discharge of the same sea carriage are in different States, if, according to the contract of carriage, any one of the following places is located in a Contracting State:

- (a) The place of receipt;
- (b) The port of loading;
- (c) The place of delivery; or
- (d) The port of discharge.

2. This Convention applies without regard to the nationality of the vessel, the carrier, the performing parties, the shipper, the consignee, or any other interested parties.

Article 6Specific exclusions

1. This Convention does not apply to the following contracts in liner transportation:

- (a) Charter parties; and
- (b) Other contracts for the use of a ship or of any space thereon.

2. This Convention does not apply to contracts of carriage in non-liner transportation except when:

- (a) There is no charter party or other contract between the parties for the use of a ship or of any space thereon; and
- (b) A transport document or an electronic transport record is issued.

Article 7Application to certain parties

Notwithstanding article 6, this Convention applies as between the carrier and the consignee, controlling party or holder that is not an original party to the charter party or other contract of carriage excluded from the application of this Convention. However, this Convention does not apply as between the original parties to a contract of carriage excluded pursuant to article 6.

Chapter 3*Electronic transport recordsArticle 8Use and effect of electronic transport records*

Subject to the requirements set out in this Convention:

(a) Anything that is to be in or on a transport document under this Convention may be recorded in an electronic transport record, provided the issuance and subsequent use of an electronic transport record is with the consent of the carrier and the shipper; and

(b) The issuance, exclusive control, or transfer of an electronic transport record has the same effect as the issuance, possession, or transfer of a transport document.

Article 9Procedures for use of negotiable electronic transport records

1. The use of a negotiable electronic transport record shall be subject to procedures that provide for:

(a) The method for the issuance and the transfer of that record to an intended holder;

(b) An assurance that the negotiable electronic transport record retains its integrity;

(c) The manner in which the holder is able to demonstrate that it is the holder; and

(d) The manner of providing confirmation that delivery to the holder has been effected, or that, pursuant to articles 10, paragraph 2, or 47, subparagraphs 1 (a)(ii) and (c), the electronic transport record has ceased to have any effect or validity.

2. The procedures in paragraph 1 of this article shall be referred to in the contract particulars and be readily ascertainable.

Article 10Replacement of negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record

1. If a negotiable transport document has been issued and the carrier and the holder agree to replace that document by a negotiable electronic transport record:

(a) The holder shall surrender the negotiable transport document, or all of them if more than one has been issued, to the carrier;

(b) The carrier shall issue to the holder a negotiable electronic transport record that includes a statement that it replaces the negotiable transport document; and

(c) The negotiable transport document ceases thereafter to have any effect or validity.

2. If a negotiable electronic transport record has been issued and the carrier and the holder agree to replace that electronic transport record by a negotiable transport document:

(a) The carrier shall issue to the holder, in place of the electronic transport record, a negotiable transport document that includes a statement that it replaces the negotiable electronic transport record; and

(b) The electronic transport record ceases thereafter to have any effect or validity.

Chapter 4

Obligations of the carrier

Article 11

Carriage and delivery of the goods

The carrier shall, subject to this Convention and in accordance with the terms of the contract of carriage, carry the goods to the place of destination and deliver them to the consignee.

Article 12

Period of responsibility of the carrier

1. The period of responsibility of the carrier for the goods under this Convention begins when the carrier or a performing party receives the goods for carriage and ends when the goods are delivered.

2. (a) If the law or regulations of the place of receipt require the goods to be handed over to an authority or other third party from which the carrier may collect them, the period of responsibility of the carrier begins when the carrier collects the goods from the authority or other third party.

(b) If the law or regulations of the place of delivery require the carrier to hand over the goods to an authority or other third party from which the consignee may collect them, the period of responsibility of the carrier ends when the carrier hands the goods over to the authority or other third party.

3. For the purpose of determining the carrier's period of responsibility, the parties may agree on the time and location of receipt and delivery of the goods, but a provision in a contract of carriage is void to the extent that it provides that:

(a) The time of receipt of the goods is subsequent to the beginning of their initial loading under the contract of carriage; or

(b) The time of delivery of the goods is prior to the completion of their final unloading under the contract of carriage.

Article 13

Specific obligations

1. The carrier shall during the period of its responsibility as defined in article 12, and subject to article 26, properly and carefully receive, load, handle, stow, carry, keep, care for, unload and deliver the goods.

2. Notwithstanding paragraph 1 of this article, and without prejudice to the other provisions in chapter 4 and to chapters 5 to 7, the carrier and the shipper may agree that the loading, handling, stowing or unloading of the goods is to be performed by the shipper, the documentary shipper or the consignee. Such an agreement shall be referred to in the contract particulars.

Article 14

Specific obligations applicable to the voyage by sea

The carrier is bound before, at the beginning of, and during the voyage by sea to exercise due diligence to:

- (a) Make and keep the ship seaworthy;
- (b) Properly crew, equip and supply the ship and keep the ship so crewed, equipped and supplied throughout the voyage; and

- (c) Make and keep the holds and all other parts of the ship in which the goods are carried, and any containers supplied by the carrier in or upon which the goods are carried, fit and safe for their reception, carriage and preservation.

Article 15

Goods that may become a danger

Notwithstanding articles 11 and 13, the carrier or a performing party may decline to receive or to load, and may take such other measures as are reasonable, including unloading, destroying, or rendering goods harmless, if the goods are, or reasonably appear likely to become during the carrier's period of responsibility, an actual danger to persons, property or the environment.

Article 16

Sacrifice of the goods during the voyage by sea

Notwithstanding articles 11, 13, and 14, the carrier or a performing party may sacrifice goods at sea when the sacrifice is reasonably made for the common safety or for the purpose of preserving from peril human life or other property involved in the common adventure.

Chapter 5

Liability of the carrier for loss, damage or delay

Article 17

Basis of liability

1. The carrier is liable for loss of or damage to the goods, as well as for delay in delivery, if the claimant proves that the loss, damage, or delay, or the event or circumstance that caused or contributed to it took place during the period of the carrier's responsibility as defined in chapter 4.

2. The carrier is relieved of all or part of its liability pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article if it proves that the cause or one of the causes of the loss, damage, or delay is not attributable to its fault or to the fault of any person referred to in article 18.

3. The carrier is also relieved of all or part of its liability pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article if, alternatively to proving the absence of fault as provided in paragraph 2 of this article, it proves that one or more of the following events or circumstances caused or contributed to the loss, damage, or delay:

- (a) Act of God;
- (b) Perils, dangers, and accidents of the sea or other navigable waters;
- (c) War, hostilities, armed conflict, piracy, terrorism, riots, and civil commotions;
- (d) Quarantine restrictions; interference by or impediments created by governments, public authorities, rulers, or people including detention, arrest, or seizure not attributable to the carrier or any person referred to in article 18;
- (e) Strikes, lockouts, stoppages, or restraints of labour;
- (f) Fire on the ship;
- (g) Latent defects not discoverable by due diligence;
- (h) Act or omission of the shipper, the documentary shipper, the controlling party, or any other person for whose acts the shipper or the documentary shipper is liable pursuant to article 33 or 34;

(i) Loading, handling, stowing, or unloading of the goods performed pursuant to an agreement in accordance with article 13, paragraph 2, unless the carrier or a performing party performs such activity on behalf of the shipper, the documentary shipper or the consignee;

(j) Wastage in bulk or weight or any other loss or damage arising from inherent defect, quality, or vice of the goods;

(k) Insufficiency or defective condition of packing or marking not performed by or on behalf of the carrier;

(l) Saving or attempting to save life at sea;

(m) Reasonable measures to save or attempt to save property at sea;

(n) Reasonable measures to avoid or attempt to avoid damage to the environment; or

(o) Acts of the carrier in pursuance of the powers conferred by articles 15 and 16.

4. Notwithstanding paragraph 3 of this article, the carrier is liable for all or part of the loss, damage, or delay:

(a) If the claimant proves that the fault of the carrier or of a person referred to in article 18 caused or contributed to the event or circumstance on which the carrier relies; or

(b) If the claimant proves that an event or circumstance not listed in paragraph 3 of this article contributed to the loss, damage, or delay, and the carrier cannot prove that this event or circumstance is not attributable to its fault or to the fault of any person referred to in article 18.

5. The carrier is also liable, notwithstanding paragraph 3 of this article, for all or part of the loss, damage, or delay if:

(a) The claimant proves that the loss, damage, or delay was or was probably caused by or contributed to by (i) the unseaworthiness of the ship; (ii) the improper crewing, equipping, and supplying of the ship; or (iii) the fact that the holds or other parts of the ship in which the goods are carried, or any containers supplied by the carrier in or upon which the goods are carried, were not fit and safe for reception, carriage, and preservation of the goods; and

(b) The carrier is unable to prove either that: (i) none of the events or circumstances referred to in subparagraph 5 (a) of this article caused the loss, damage, or delay; or (ii) it complied with its obligation to exercise due diligence pursuant to article 14.

6. When the carrier is relieved of part of its liability pursuant to this article, the carrier is liable only for that part of the loss, damage or delay that is attributable to the event or circumstance for which it is liable pursuant to this article.

Article 18

Liability of the carrier for other persons

The carrier is liable for the breach of its obligations under this Convention caused by the acts or omissions of:

(a) Any performing party;

(b) The master or crew of the ship;

(c) Employees of the carrier or a performing party; or

(d) Any other person that performs or undertakes to perform any of the carrier's obligations under the contract of carriage, to the extent that the person acts, either directly or indirectly, at the carrier's request or under the carrier's supervision or control.

Article 19

Liability of maritime performing parties

1. A maritime performing party is subject to the obligations and liabilities imposed on the carrier under this Convention and is entitled to the carrier's defences and limits of liability as provided for in this Convention if:

(a) The maritime performing party received the goods for carriage in a Contracting State, or delivered them in a Contracting State, or performed its activities with respect to the goods in a port in a Contracting State; and

(b) The occurrence that caused the loss, damage or delay took place: (i) during the period between the arrival of the goods at the port of loading of the ship and their departure from the port of discharge from the ship; (ii) while the maritime performing party had custody of the goods; or (iii) at any other time to the extent that it was participating in the performance of any of the activities contemplated by the contract of carriage.

2. If the carrier agrees to assume obligations other than those imposed on the carrier under this Convention, or agrees that the limits of its liability are higher than the limits specified under this Convention, a maritime performing party is not bound by this agreement unless it expressly agrees to accept such obligations or such higher limits.

3. A maritime performing party is liable for the breach of its obligations under this Convention caused by the acts or omissions of any person to which it has entrusted the performance of any of the carrier's obligations under the contract of carriage under the conditions set out in paragraph 1 of this article.

4. Nothing in this Convention imposes liability on the master or crew of the ship or on an employee of the carrier or of a maritime performing party.

Joint and several liability

1. If the carrier and one or more maritime performing parties are liable for the loss of, damage to, or delay in delivery of the goods, their liability is joint and several but only up to the limits provided for under this Convention.

2. Without prejudice to article 61, the aggregate liability of all such persons shall not exceed the overall limits of liability under this Convention.

Article 21

Delay

Delay in delivery occurs when the goods are not delivered at the place of destination provided for in the contract of carriage within the time agreed.

Article 22

Calculation of compensation

1. Subject to article 59, the compensation payable by the carrier for loss of or damage to the goods is calculated by reference to the value of such goods at the place and time of delivery established in accordance with article 43.

2. The value of the goods is fixed according to the commodity exchange price or, if there is no such price, according to their market price or, if there is no commodity exchange price or market price, by reference to the normal value of the goods of the same kind and quality at the place of delivery.

3. In case of loss of or damage to the goods, the carrier is not liable for payment of any compensation beyond what is provided for in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article except when the carrier and the shipper have agreed to calculate compensation in a different manner within the limits of chapter 16.

Notice in case of loss, damage or delay

1. The carrier is presumed, in absence of proof to the contrary, to have delivered the goods according to their description in the contract particulars unless notice of loss of or damage to the goods, indicating the general nature of such loss or damage, was given to the carrier or the performing party that delivered the goods before or at the time of the delivery, or, if the loss or damage is not apparent, within seven working days at the place of delivery after the delivery of the goods.

2. Failure to provide the notice referred to in this article to the carrier or the performing party shall not affect the right to claim compensation for loss of or damage to the goods under this Convention, nor shall it affect the allocation of the burden of proof set out in article 17.

3. The notice referred to in this article is not required in respect of loss or damage that is ascertained in a joint inspection of the goods by the person to which they have been delivered and the carrier or the maritime performing party against which liability is being asserted.

4. No compensation in respect of delay is payable unless notice of loss due to delay was given to the carrier within twenty-one consecutive days of delivery of the goods.

5. When the notice referred to in this article is given to the performing party that delivered the goods, it has the same effect as if that notice was given to the carrier, and notice given to the carrier has the same effect as a notice given to a maritime performing party.

6. In the case of any actual or apprehended loss or damage, the parties to the dispute shall give all reasonable facilities to each other for inspecting and tallying the goods and shall provide access to records and documents relevant to the carriage of the goods.

Chapter 6

Additional provisions relating to particular stages of carriage

Article 24

Deviation

When pursuant to applicable law a deviation constitutes a breach of the carrier's obligations, such deviation of itself shall not deprive the carrier or a maritime performing party of any defence or limitation of this Convention, except to the extent provided in article 61.

Article 25

Deck cargo on ships

1. Goods may be carried on the deck of a ship only if:

- (a) Such carriage is required by law;
- (b) They are carried in or on containers or vehicles that are fit for deck carriage, and the decks are specially fitted to carry such containers or vehicles; or

(c) The carriage on deck is in accordance with the contract of carriage, or the customs, usages or practices of the trade in question.

2. The provisions of this Convention relating to the liability of the carrier apply to the loss of, damage to or delay in the delivery of goods carried on deck pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article, but the carrier is not liable for loss of or damage to such goods, or delay in their delivery, caused by the special risks involved in their carriage on deck when the goods are carried in accordance with subparagraphs 1 (a) or (c) of this article.

3. If the goods have been carried on deck in cases other than those permitted pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article, the carrier is liable for loss of or damage to the goods or delay in their delivery that is exclusively caused by their carriage on deck, and is not entitled to the defences provided for in article 17.

4. The carrier is not entitled to invoke subparagraph 1 (c) of this article against a third party that has acquired a negotiable transport document or a negotiable electronic transport record in good faith, unless the contract particulars state that the goods may be carried on deck.

5. If the carrier and shipper expressly agreed that the goods would be carried under deck, the carrier is not entitled to the benefit of the limitation of liability for any loss of, damage to or delay in the delivery of the goods to the extent that such loss, damage, or delay resulted from their carriage on deck.

Article 26

Carriage preceding or subsequent to sea carriage

When loss of or damage to goods, or an event or circumstance causing a delay in their delivery, occurs during the carrier's period of responsibility but solely before their loading onto the ship or solely after their discharge from the ship, the provisions of this Convention do not prevail over those provisions of another international instrument that, at the time of such loss, damage or event or circumstance causing delay:

(a) Pursuant to the provisions of such international instrument would have applied to all or any of the carrier's activities if the shipper had made a separate and direct contract with the carrier in respect of the particular stage of carriage where the loss of, or damage to goods, or an event or circumstance causing delay in their delivery occurred;

(b) Specifically provide for the carrier's liability, limitation of liability, or time for suit; and

(c) Cannot be departed from by contract either at all or to the detriment of the shipper under that instrument.

Chapter 7

Obligations of the shipper to the carrier

Article 27

Delivery for carriage

1. Unless otherwise agreed in the contract of carriage, the shipper shall deliver the goods ready for carriage. In any event, the shipper shall deliver the goods in such condition that they will withstand the intended carriage, including their loading, handling, stowing, lashing and securing, and unloading, and that they will not cause harm to persons or property.

2. The shipper shall properly and carefully perform any obligation assumed under an agreement made pursuant to article 13, paragraph 2.

3. When a container is packed or a vehicle is loaded by the shipper, the shipper shall properly and carefully stow, lash and secure the contents in or on the container or vehicle, and in such a way that they will not cause harm to persons or property.

Article 28

Cooperation of the shipper and the carrier in providing information and instructions

The carrier and the shipper shall respond to requests from each other to provide information and instructions required for the proper handling and carriage of the goods if the information is in the requested party's possession or the instructions are within the requested party's reasonable ability to provide and they are not otherwise reasonably available to the requesting party.

Article 29

Shipper's obligation to provide information, instructions and documents

1. The shipper shall provide to the carrier in a timely manner such information, instructions and documents relating to the goods that are not otherwise reasonably available to the carrier, and that are reasonably necessary:

(a) For the proper handling and carriage of the goods, including precautions to be taken by the carrier or a performing party; and

(b) For the carrier to comply with law, regulations or other requirements of public authorities in connection with the intended carriage, provided that the carrier notifies the shipper in a timely manner of the information, instructions and documents it requires.

2. Nothing in this article affects any specific obligation to provide certain information, instructions and documents related to the goods pursuant to law, regulations or other requirements of public authorities in connection with the intended carriage.

Article 30

Basis of shipper's liability to the carrier

1. The shipper is liable for loss or damage sustained by the carrier if the carrier proves that such loss or damage was caused by a breach of the shipper's obligations under this Convention.

2. Except in respect of loss or damage caused by a breach by the shipper of its obligations pursuant to articles 31, paragraph 2, and 32, the shipper is relieved of all or part of its liability if the cause or one of the causes of the loss or damage is not attributable to its fault or to the fault of any person referred to in article 34.

3. When the shipper is relieved of part of its liability pursuant to this article, the shipper is liable only for that part of the loss or damage that is attributable to its fault or to the fault of any person referred to in article 34.

Article 31

Information for compilation of contract particulars

1. The shipper shall provide to the carrier, in a timely manner, accurate information required for the compilation of the contract particulars and the issuance of the transport documents or electronic transport records, including the particulars referred to in article 36, paragraph 1; the name of the party to be identified as the shipper in the contract particulars; the name of the consignee, if any; and the name of the person to whose order the transport document or electronic transport record is to be issued, if any.

2. The shipper is deemed to have guaranteed the accuracy at the time of receipt by the carrier of the information that is provided according to paragraph 1 of this article. The shipper shall indemnify the carrier against loss or damage resulting from the inaccuracy of such information.

Article 32

Special rules on dangerous goods

When goods by their nature or character are, or reasonably appear likely to become, a danger to persons, property or the environment:

(a) The shipper shall inform the carrier of the dangerous nature or character of the goods in a timely manner before they are delivered to the carrier or a performing party. If the shipper fails to do so and the carrier or performing party does not otherwise have knowledge of their dangerous nature or character, the shipper is liable to the carrier for loss or damage resulting from such failure to inform; and

(b) The shipper shall mark or label dangerous goods in accordance with any law, regulations or other requirements of public authorities that apply during any stage of the intended carriage of the goods. If the shipper fails to do so, it is liable to the carrier for loss or damage resulting from such failure.

Article 33

Assumption of shipper's rights and obligations by the documentary shipper

1. A documentary shipper is subject to the obligations and liabilities imposed on the shipper pursuant to this chapter and pursuant to article 55, and is entitled to the shipper's rights and defences provided by this chapter and by chapter 13.

2. Paragraph 1 of this article does not affect the obligations, liabilities, rights or defences of the shipper.

Article 34

Liability of the shipper for other persons

The shipper is liable for the breach of its obligations under this Convention caused by the acts or omissions of any person, including employees, agents and subcontractors, to which it has entrusted the performance of any of its obligations, but the shipper is not liable for acts or omissions of the carrier or a performing party acting on behalf of the carrier, to which the shipper has entrusted the performance of its obligations.

Chapter 8

Transport documents and electronic transport records

Article 35

Issuance of the transport document or the electronic transport record

Unless the shipper and the carrier have agreed not to use a transport document or an electronic transport record, or it is the custom, usage or practice of the trade not to use one, upon delivery of the goods for carriage to the carrier or performing party, the shipper or, if the shipper consents, the documentary shipper, is entitled to obtain from the carrier, at the shipper's option:

(a) A non-negotiable transport document or, subject to article 8, subparagraph (a), a non-negotiable electronic transport record; or

(b) An appropriate negotiable transport document or, subject to article 8, subparagraph (a), a negotiable electronic transport record, unless the shipper and the carrier have agreed not to use a negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record, or it is the custom, usage or practice of the trade not to use one.

Contract particulars

1. The contract particulars in the transport document or electronic transport record referred to in article 35 shall include the following information, as furnished by the shipper:

(a) A description of the goods as appropriate for the transport;

(b) The leading marks necessary for identification of the goods;

(c) The number of packages or pieces, or the quantity of goods; and

(d) The weight of the goods, if furnished by the shipper.

2. The contract particulars in the transport document or electronic transport record referred to in article 35 shall also include:

(a) A statement of the apparent order and condition of the goods at the time the carrier or a performing party receives them for carriage;

(b) The name and address of the carrier;

(c) The date on which the carrier or a performing party received the goods, or on which the goods were loaded on board the ship, or on which the transport document or electronic transport record was issued; and

(d) If the transport document is negotiable, the number of originals of the negotiable transport document, when more than one original is issued.

3. The contract particulars in the transport document or electronic transport record referred to in article 35 shall further include:

(a) The name and address of the consignee, if named by the shipper;

(b) The name of a ship, if specified in the contract of carriage;

(c) The place of receipt and, if known to the carrier, the place of delivery; and

(d) The port of loading and the port of discharge, if specified in the contract of carriage.

4. For the purposes of this article, the phrase "apparent order and condition of the goods" in subparagraph 2 (a) of this article refers to the order and condition of the goods based on:

(a) A reasonable external inspection of the goods as packaged at the time the shipper delivers them to the carrier or a performing party; and

(b) Any additional inspection that the carrier or a performing party actually performs before issuing the transport document or electronic transport record.

Article 37

Identity of the carrier

1. If a carrier is identified by name in the contract particulars, any other information in the transport document or electronic transport record relating to the identity of the carrier shall have no effect to the extent that it is inconsistent with that identification.

2. If no person is identified in the contract particulars as the carrier as required pursuant to article 36, subparagraph 2 (b), but the contract particulars indicate that the goods have been loaded on board a named ship, the registered owner of that ship is presumed to be the carrier, unless it proves that the ship was under a bareboat charter at the time of the carriage and it identifies this bareboat charterer and indicates its address, in which case this bareboat charterer is presumed to be the carrier. Alternatively, the registered owner may rebut the presumption of being the carrier by identifying the carrier and indicating its address. The bareboat charterer may rebut any presumption of being the carrier in the same manner.

3. Nothing in this article prevents the claimant from proving that any person other than a person identified in the contract particulars or pursuant to paragraph 2 of this article is the carrier.

Signature

1. A transport document shall be signed by the carrier or a person acting on its behalf.

2. An electronic transport record shall include the electronic signature of the carrier or a person acting on its behalf. Such electronic signature shall identify the signatory in relation to the electronic transport record and indicate the carrier's authorization of the electronic transport record.

Article 39

Deficiencies in the contract particulars

1. The absence or inaccuracy of one or more of the contract particulars referred to in article 36, paragraphs 1, 2 or 3, does not of itself affect the legal character or validity of the transport document or of the electronic transport record.

2. If the contract particulars include the date but fail to indicate its significance, the date is deemed to be:

(a) The date on which all of the goods indicated in the transport document or electronic transport record were loaded on board the ship, if the contract particulars indicate that the goods have been loaded on board a ship; or

(b) The date on which the carrier or a performing party received the goods, if the contract particulars do not indicate that the goods have been loaded on board a ship.

3. If the contract particulars fail to state the apparent order and condition of the goods at the time the carrier or a performing party receives them, the contract particulars are deemed to have stated that the goods were in apparent good order and condition at the time the carrier or a performing party received them.

Article 40Qualifying the information relating to the goods in the contract particulars

1. The carrier shall qualify the information referred to in article 36, paragraph 1, to indicate that the carrier does not assume responsibility for the accuracy of the information furnished by the shipper if:

(a) The carrier has actual knowledge that any material statement in the transport document or electronic transport record is false or misleading; or

(b) The carrier has reasonable grounds to believe that a material statement in the transport document or electronic transport record is false or misleading.

2. Without prejudice to paragraph 1 of this article, the carrier may qualify the information referred to in article 36, paragraph 1, in the circumstances and in the manner set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of this article to indicate that the carrier does not assume responsibility for the accuracy of the information furnished by the shipper.

3. When the goods are not delivered for carriage to the carrier or a performing party in a closed container or vehicle, or when they are delivered in a closed container or vehicle and the carrier or a performing party actually inspects them, the carrier may qualify the information referred to in article 36, paragraph 1, if:

(a) The carrier had no physically practicable or commercially reasonable means of checking the information furnished by the shipper, in which case it may indicate which information it was unable to check; or

(b) The carrier has reasonable grounds to believe the information furnished by the shipper to be inaccurate, in which case it may include a clause providing what it reasonably considers accurate information.

4. When the goods are delivered for carriage to the carrier or a performing party in a closed container or vehicle, the carrier may qualify the information referred to in:

(a) Article 36, subparagraphs 1 (a), (b), or (c), if:

(i) The goods inside the container or vehicle have not actually been inspected by the carrier or a performing party; and

(ii) Neither the carrier nor a performing party otherwise has actual knowledge of its contents before issuing the transport document or the electronic transport record; and

(b) Article 36, subparagraph 1 (d), if:

(i) Neither the carrier nor a performing party weighed the container or vehicle, and the shipper and the carrier had not agreed prior to the shipment that the container or vehicle would be weighed and the weight would be included in the contract particulars; or

(ii) There was no physically practicable or commercially reasonable means of checking the weight of the container or vehicle.

Except to the extent that the contract particulars have been qualified in the circumstances and in the manner set out in article 40:

(a) A transport document or an electronic transport record is prima facie evidence of the carrier's receipt of the goods as stated in the contract particulars;

(b) Proof to the contrary by the carrier in respect of any contract particulars shall not be admissible, when such contract particulars are included in:

(i) A negotiable transport document or a negotiable electronic transport record that is transferred to a third party acting in good faith; or

(ii) A non-negotiable transport document that indicates that it must be surrendered in order to obtain delivery of the goods and is transferred to the consignee acting in good faith;

(c) Proof to the contrary by the carrier shall not be admissible against a consignee that in good faith has acted in reliance on any of the following contract particulars included in a non-negotiable transport document or a non-negotiable electronic transport record:

(i) The contract particulars referred to in article 36, paragraph 1, when such contract particulars are furnished by the carrier;

(ii) The number, type and identifying numbers of the containers, but not the identifying numbers of the container seals; and

(iii) The contract particulars referred to in article 36, paragraph 2.

Article 42"Freight prepaid"

If the contract particulars contain the statement "freight prepaid" or a statement of a similar nature, the carrier cannot assert against the holder or the consignee the fact that the freight has not been paid. This article does not apply if the holder or the consignee is also the shipper.

Chapter 9*Delivery of the goodsArticle 43Obligation to accept delivery*

When the goods have arrived at their destination, the consignee that demands delivery of the goods under the contract of carriage shall accept delivery of the goods at the time or within the time period and at the location agreed in the contract of carriage or, failing such agreement, at the time and location at which, having regard to the terms of the contract, the customs, usages or practices of the trade and the circumstances of the carriage, delivery could reasonably be expected.

Article 44Obligation to acknowledge receipt

On request of the carrier or the performing party that delivers the goods, the consignee shall acknowledge receipt of the goods from the carrier or the performing party in the manner that is customary at the place of delivery. The carrier may refuse delivery if the consignee refuses to acknowledge such receipt.

Article 45Delivery when no negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record is issued

When neither a negotiable transport document nor a negotiable electronic transport record has been issued:

(a) The carrier shall deliver the goods to the consignee at the time and location referred to in article 43. The carrier may refuse delivery if the person claiming to be the consignee does not properly identify itself as the consignee on the request of the carrier;

(b) If the name and address of the consignee are not referred to in the contract particulars, the controlling party shall prior to or upon the arrival of the goods at the place of destination advise the carrier of such name and address;

(c) Without prejudice to article 48, paragraph 1, if the goods are not deliverable because (i) the consignee, after having received a notice of arrival, does not, at the time or within the time period referred to in article 43, claim delivery of the goods from the carrier after their arrival at the place of destination, (ii) the carrier refuses delivery because the person claiming to be the consignee does not properly identify itself as the consignee, or (iii) the carrier is, after reasonable effort, unable to locate the consignee in order to request delivery instructions, the carrier may so advise the controlling party and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods. If, after reasonable effort, the carrier is unable to locate the controlling party, the carrier may so advise the shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods. If, after reasonable effort, the carrier is unable to locate the shipper, the carrier may so advise the documentary shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods;

(d) The carrier that delivers the goods upon instruction of the controlling party, the shipper or the documentary shipper pursuant to subparagraph (c) of this article is discharged from its obligations to deliver the goods under the contract of carriage.

Article 46

Delivery when a non-negotiable transport document that requires surrender is issued

When a non-negotiable transport document has been issued that indicates that it shall be surrendered in order to obtain delivery of the goods:

(a) The carrier shall deliver the goods at the time and location referred to in article 43 to the consignee upon the consignee properly identifying itself on the request of the carrier and surrender of the non-negotiable document. The carrier may refuse delivery if the person claiming to be the consignee fails to properly identify itself on the request of the carrier, and shall refuse delivery if the non-negotiable document is not surrendered. If more than one original of the non-negotiable document has been issued, the surrender of one original will suffice and the other originals cease to have any effect or validity;

(b) Without prejudice to article 48, paragraph 1, if the goods are not deliverable because (i) the consignee, after having received a notice of arrival, does not, at the time or within the time period referred to in article 43, claim delivery of the goods from the carrier after their arrival at the place of destination, (ii) the carrier refuses delivery because the person claiming to be the consignee does not properly identify itself as the consignee or does not surrender the document, or (iii) the carrier is, after reasonable effort, unable to locate the consignee in order to request delivery instructions, the carrier may so advise the shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods. If, after reasonable effort, the carrier is unable to locate the shipper, the carrier may so advise the documentary shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods;

(c) The carrier that delivers the goods upon instruction of the shipper or the documentary shipper pursuant to subparagraph (b) of this article is discharged from its obligation to deliver the goods under the contract of carriage, irrespective of whether the non-negotiable transport document has been surrendered to it.

Article 47

Delivery when a negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record is issued

1. When a negotiable transport document or a negotiable electronic transport record has been issued:

(a) The holder of the negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record is entitled to claim delivery of the goods from the carrier after they have arrived at the place of destination, in which event the carrier shall deliver the goods at the time and location referred to in article 43 to the holder:

- (i) Upon surrender of the negotiable transport document and, if the holder is one of the persons referred to in article 1, subparagraph 10 (a)(i), upon the holder properly identifying itself; or
- (ii) Upon demonstration by the holder, in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1, that it is the holder of the negotiable electronic transport record;

(b) The carrier shall refuse delivery if the requirements of subparagraph (a)(i) or (a)(ii) of this paragraph are not met;

(c) If more than one original of the negotiable transport document has been issued, and the number of originals is stated in that document, the surrender of one original will suffice and the other originals cease to have any effect or validity. When a negotiable electronic transport record has been used, such electronic transport record ceases to have any effect or validity upon delivery to the holder in accordance with the procedures required by article 9, paragraph 1.

2. Without prejudice to article 48, paragraph 1, if the negotiable transport document or the negotiable electronic transport record expressly states that the goods may be delivered without the surrender of the transport document or the electronic transport record, the following rules apply:

(a) If the goods are not deliverable because (i) the holder, after having received a notice of arrival, does not, at the time or within the time period referred to in article 43, claim delivery of the goods from the carrier after their arrival at the place of destination, (ii) the carrier refuses delivery because the person claiming to be a holder does not properly identify itself as one of the persons referred to in article 1, subparagraph 10 (a)(i), or (iii) the carrier is, after reasonable effort, unable to locate the holder in order to request delivery instructions, the carrier may so advise the shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods. If, after reasonable effort, the carrier is unable to locate the shipper, the carrier may so advise the documentary shipper and request instructions in respect of the delivery of the goods;

(b) The carrier that delivers the goods upon instruction of the shipper or the documentary shipper in accordance with subparagraph 2 (a) of this article is discharged from its obligation to deliver the goods under the contract of carriage to the holder, irrespective of whether the negotiable transport document has been surrendered to it, or the person claiming delivery under a negotiable electronic transport record has demonstrated, in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1, that it is the holder;

(c) The person giving instructions under subparagraph 2 (a) of this article shall indemnify the carrier against loss arising from its being held liable to the holder under subparagraph 2 (e) of this article. The carrier may refuse to follow those instructions if the person fails to provide adequate security as the carrier may reasonably request;

(d) A person that becomes a holder of the negotiable transport document or the negotiable electronic transport record after the carrier has delivered the goods pursuant to subparagraph 2 (b) of this article, but pursuant to contractual or other arrangements made before such delivery acquires rights against the carrier under the contract of carriage, other than the right to claim delivery of the goods;

(e) Notwithstanding subparagraphs 2 (b) and 2 (d) of this article, a holder that becomes a holder after such delivery, and that did not have and could not reasonably have had knowledge of such delivery at the time it became a holder, acquires the rights incorporated in the negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record. When the contract particulars state the expected time of arrival of the goods, or indicate how to obtain information as to whether the goods have been delivered, it is presumed that the holder at the time that it became a holder had or could reasonably have had knowledge of the delivery of the goods.

Article 48

Goods remaining undelivered

1. For the purposes of this article, goods shall be deemed to have remained undelivered only if, after their arrival at the place of destination:

(a) The consignee does not accept delivery of the goods pursuant to this chapter at the time and location referred to in article 43;

(b) The controlling party, the holder, the shipper or the documentary shipper cannot be found or does not give the carrier adequate instructions pursuant to articles 45, 46 and 47;

(c) The carrier is entitled or required to refuse delivery pursuant to articles 44, 45, 46 and 47;

(d) The carrier is not allowed to deliver the goods to the consignee pursuant to the law or regulations of the place at which delivery is requested; or

(e) The goods are otherwise undeliverable by the carrier.

2. Without prejudice to any other rights that the carrier may have against the shipper, controlling party or consignee, if the goods have remained undelivered, the carrier may, at the risk and expense of the person entitled to the goods, take such action in respect of the goods as circumstances may reasonably require, including:

(a) To store the goods at any suitable place;

(b) To unpack the goods if they are packed in containers or vehicles, or to act otherwise in respect of the goods, including by moving them; and

(c) To cause the goods to be sold or destroyed in accordance with the practices or pursuant to the law or regulations of the place where the goods are located at the time.

3. The carrier may exercise the rights under paragraph 2 of this article only after it has given reasonable notice of the intended action under paragraph 2 of this article to the person stated in the contract particulars as the person, if any, to be notified of the arrival of the goods at the place of destination, and to one of the following persons in the order indicated, if known to the carrier: the consignee, the controlling party or the shipper.

4. If the goods are sold pursuant to subparagraph 2 (c) of this article, the carrier shall hold the proceeds of the sale for the benefit of the person entitled to the goods, subject to the deduction of any costs incurred by the carrier and any other amounts that are due to the carrier in connection with the carriage of those goods.

5. The carrier shall not be liable for loss of or damage to goods that occurs during the time that they remain undelivered pursuant to this article unless the claimant proves that such loss or damage resulted from the failure by the carrier to take steps that would have been reasonable in the circumstances to preserve the goods and that the carrier knew or ought to have known that the loss or damage to the goods would result from its failure to take such steps.

Article 49

Retention of goods

Nothing in this Convention affects a right of the carrier or a performing party that may exist pursuant to the contract of carriage or the applicable law to retain the goods to secure the payment of sums due.

Chapter 10

Rights of the controlling party

Article 50

Exercise and extent of right of control

1. The right of control may be exercised only by the controlling party and is limited to:

(a) The right to give or modify instructions in respect of the goods that do not constitute a variation of the contract of carriage;

(b) The right to obtain delivery of the goods at a scheduled port of call or, in respect of inland carriage, any place en route; and

(c) The right to replace the consignee by any other person including the controlling party.

2. The right of control exists during the entire period of responsibility of the carrier, as provided in article 12, and ceases when that period expires.

Article 51

Identity of the controlling party and transfer of the right of control

1. Except in the cases referred to in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this article:

(a) The shipper is the controlling party unless the shipper, when the contract of carriage is concluded, designates the consignee, the documentary shipper or another person as the controlling party;

(b) The controlling party is entitled to transfer the right of control to another person. The transfer becomes effective with respect to the carrier upon its notification of the transfer by the transferor, and the transferee becomes the controlling party; and

(c) The controlling party shall properly identify itself when it exercises the right of control.

2. When a non-negotiable transport document has been issued that indicates that it shall be surrendered in order to obtain delivery of the goods:

(a) The shipper is the controlling party and may transfer the right of control to the consignee named in the transport document by transferring the document to that person without endorsement. If more than one original of the document was issued, all originals shall be transferred in order to effect a transfer of the right of control; and

(b) In order to exercise its right of control, the controlling party shall produce the document and properly identify itself. If more than one original of the document was issued, all originals shall be produced, failing which the right of control cannot be exercised.

3. When a negotiable transport document is issued:

(a) The holder or, if more than one original of the negotiable transport document is issued, the holder of all originals is the controlling party;

(b) The holder may transfer the right of control by transferring the negotiable transport document to another person in accordance with article 57. If more than one original of that document was issued, all originals shall be transferred to that person in order to effect a transfer of the right of control; and

(c) In order to exercise the right of control, the holder shall produce the negotiable transport document to the carrier, and if the holder is one of the persons referred to in article 1, subparagraph 10 (a)(i), the holder shall properly identify itself. If more than one original of the document was issued, all originals shall be produced, failing which the right of control cannot be exercised.

4. When a negotiable electronic transport record is issued:

(a) The holder is the controlling party;

(b) The holder may transfer the right of control to another person by transferring the negotiable electronic transport record in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1; and

(c) In order to exercise the right of control, the holder shall demonstrate, in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1, that it is the holder.

Article 52

Carrier's execution of instructions

1. Subject to paragraphs 2 and 3 of this article, the carrier shall execute the instructions referred to in article 50 if:

(a) The person giving such instructions is entitled to exercise the right of control;

(b) The instructions can reasonably be executed according to their terms at the moment that they reach the carrier; and

(c) The instructions will not interfere with the normal operations of the carrier, including its delivery practices.

2. In any event, the controlling party shall reimburse the carrier for any reasonable additional expense that the carrier may incur and shall indemnify the carrier against loss or damage that the carrier may suffer as a result of diligently executing any instruction pursuant to this article, including compensation that the carrier may become liable to pay for loss of or damage to other goods being carried.

3. The carrier is entitled to obtain security from the controlling party for the amount of additional expense, loss or damage that the carrier reasonably expects will arise in connection with the execution of an instruction pursuant to this article. The carrier may refuse to carry out the instructions if no such security is provided.

4. The carrier's liability for loss of or damage to the goods or for delay in delivery resulting from its failure to comply with the instructions of the controlling party in breach of its obligation pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article shall be subject to articles 17 to 23, and the amount of the compensation payable by the carrier shall be subject to articles 59 to 61.

Article 53

Deemed delivery

Goods that are delivered pursuant to an instruction in accordance with article 52, paragraph 1, are deemed to be delivered at the place of destination, and the provisions of chapter 9 relating to such delivery apply to such goods.

Article 54

Variations to the contract of carriage

1. The controlling party is the only person that may agree with the carrier to variations to the contract of carriage other than those referred to in article 50, subparagraphs 1 (b) and (c).

2. Variations to the contract of carriage, including those referred to in article 50, subparagraphs 1 (b) and (c), shall be stated in a negotiable transport document or in a non-negotiable transport document that requires surrender, or incorporated in a negotiable electronic transport record, or, upon the request of the controlling party, shall be stated in a non-negotiable transport document or incorporated in a non-negotiable electronic transport record. If so stated or incorporated, such variations shall be signed in accordance with article 38.

Providing additional information, instructions or documents to carrier

1. The controlling party, on request of the carrier or a performing party, shall provide in a timely manner information, instructions or documents relating to the goods not yet provided by the shipper and not otherwise reasonably available to the carrier that the carrier may reasonably need to perform its obligations under the contract of carriage.

2. If the carrier, after reasonable effort, is unable to locate the controlling party or the controlling party is unable to provide adequate information, instructions or documents to the carrier, the shipper shall provide them. If the carrier, after reasonable effort, is unable to locate the shipper, the documentary shipper shall provide such information, instructions or documents.

Article 56Variation by agreement

The parties to the contract of carriage may vary the effect of articles 50, subparagraphs 1 (b) and (c), 50, paragraph 2, and 52. The parties may also restrict or exclude the transferability of the right of control referred to in article 51, subparagraph 1 (b).

Chapter 11

Transfer of rights

Article 57When a negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record is issued

1. When a negotiable transport document is issued, the holder may transfer the rights incorporated in the document by transferring it to another person:

- (a) Duly endorsed either to such other person or in blank, if an order document; or
- (b) Without endorsement, if: (i) a bearer document or a blank endorsed document; or (ii) a document made out to the order of a named person and the transfer is between the first holder and the named person.

2. When a negotiable electronic transport record is issued, its holder may transfer the rights incorporated in it, whether it be made out to order or to the order of a named person, by transferring the electronic transport record in accordance with the procedures referred to in article 9, paragraph 1.

Article 58Liability of holder

1. Without prejudice to article 55, a holder that is not the shipper and that does not exercise any right under the contract of carriage does not assume any liability under the contract of carriage solely by reason of being a holder.

2. A holder that is not the shipper and that exercises any right under the contract of carriage assumes any liabilities imposed on it under the contract of carriage to the extent that such liabilities are incorporated in or ascertainable from the negotiable transport document or the negotiable electronic transport record.

3. For the purposes of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article, a holder that is not the shipper does not exercise any right under the contract of carriage solely because:

- (a) It agrees with the carrier, pursuant to article 10, to replace a negotiable transport document by a negotiable electronic transport record or to replace a negotiable electronic transport record by a negotiable transport document; or
- (b) It transfers its rights pursuant to article 57.

Chapter 12

Limits of liability

Article 59Limits of liability

1. Subject to articles 60 and 61, paragraph 1, the carrier's liability for breaches of its obligations under this Convention is limited to 875 units of account per package or other shipping unit, or 3 units of account per kilogram of the gross weight of the goods that are the subject of the claim or dispute, whichever amount is the higher, except when the value of the goods has been declared by the shipper and included in the contract particulars, or when a higher amount than the amount of limitation of liability set out in this article has been agreed upon between the carrier and the shipper.

2. When goods are carried in or on a container, pallet or similar article of transport used to consolidate goods, or in or on a vehicle, the packages or shipping units enumerated in the contract particulars as packed in or on such article of transport or vehicle are deemed packages or shipping units. If not so enumerated, the goods in or on such article of transport or vehicle are deemed one shipping unit.

3. The unit of account referred to in this article is the Special Drawing Right as defined by the International Monetary Fund. The amounts referred to in this article are to be converted into the national currency of a State according to the value of such currency at the date of judgement or award or the date agreed upon by the parties. The value of a national currency, in terms of the Special Drawing Right, of a Contracting State that is a member of the International Monetary Fund is to be calculated in accordance with the method of valuation applied by the International Monetary Fund in effect at the date in question for its operations and transactions. The value of a national currency, in terms of the Special Drawing Right, of a Contracting State that is not a member of the International Monetary Fund is to be calculated in a manner to be determined by that State.

Article 60Limits of liability for loss caused by delay

Subject to article 61, paragraph 2, compensation for loss of or damage to the goods due to delay shall be calculated in accordance with article 22 and liability for economic loss due to delay is limited to an amount equivalent to two and one-half times the freight payable on the goods delayed. The total amount payable pursuant to this article and article 59, paragraph 1, may not exceed the limit that would be established pursuant to article 59, paragraph 1, in respect of the total loss of the goods concerned.

Article 61Loss of the benefit of limitation of liability

1. Neither the carrier nor any of the persons referred to in article 18 is entitled to the benefit of the limitation of liability as provided in article 59, or as provided in the contract of carriage, if the claimant proves that the loss resulting from the breach of the carrier's obligation under this Convention was attributable to a personal act or omission of the person claiming a right to limit done with the intent to cause such loss or recklessly and with knowledge that such loss would probably result.

2. Neither the carrier nor any of the persons mentioned in article 18 is entitled to the benefit of the limitation of liability as provided in article 60 if the claimant proves that the delay in delivery resulted from a personal act or omission of the person claiming a right to limit done with the intent to cause the loss due to delay or recklessly and with knowledge that such loss would probably result.

Time for suit

Article 62

Period of time for suit

1. No judicial or arbitral proceedings in respect of claims or disputes arising from a breach of an obligation under this Convention may be instituted after the expiration of a period of two years.

2. The period referred to in paragraph 1 of this article commences on the day on which the carrier has delivered the goods or, in cases in which no goods have been delivered or only part of the goods have been delivered, on the last day on which the goods should have been delivered. The day on which the period commences is not included in the period.

3. Notwithstanding the expiration of the period set out in paragraph 1 of this article, one party may rely on its claim as a defence or for the purpose of set-off against a claim asserted by the other party.

Article 63

Extension of time for suit

The period provided in article 62 shall not be subject to suspension or interruption, but the person against which a claim is made may at any time during the running of the period extend that period by a declaration to the claimant. This period may be further extended by another declaration or declarations.

Article 64

Action for indemnity

An action for indemnity by a person held liable may be instituted after the expiration of the period provided in article 62 if the indemnity action is instituted within the later of:

- (a) The time allowed by the applicable law in the jurisdiction where proceedings are instituted; or
- (b) Ninety days commencing from the day when the person instituting the action for indemnity has either settled the claim or been served with process in the action against itself, whichever is earlier.

Article 65

Actions against the person identified as the carrier

An action against the bareboat charterer or the person identified as the carrier pursuant to article 37, paragraph 2, may be instituted after the expiration of the period provided in article 62 if the action is instituted within the later of:

- (a) The time allowed by the applicable law in the jurisdiction where proceedings are instituted; or
- (b) Ninety days commencing from the day when the carrier has been identified, or the registered owner or bareboat charterer has rebutted the presumption that it is the carrier, pursuant to article 37, paragraph 2.

Chapter 14

Jurisdiction

Article 66

Actions against the carrier

Unless the contract of carriage contains an exclusive choice of court agreement that complies with article 67 or

72, the plaintiff has the right to institute judicial proceedings under this Convention against the carrier:

- (a) In a competent court within the jurisdiction of which is situated one of the following places:
  - (i) The domicile of the carrier;
  - (ii) The place of receipt agreed in the contract of carriage;
  - (iii) The place of delivery agreed in the contract of carriage; or
  - (iv) The port where the goods are initially loaded on a ship or the port where the goods are finally discharged from a ship; or
- (b) In a competent court or courts designated by an agreement between the shipper and the carrier for the purpose of deciding claims against the carrier that may arise under this Convention.

Article 67

Choice of court agreements

1. The jurisdiction of a court chosen in accordance with article 66, subparagraph (b), is exclusive for disputes between the parties to the contract only if the parties so agree and the agreement conferring jurisdiction:

(a) Is contained in a volume contract that clearly states the names and addresses of the parties and either (i) is individually negotiated or (ii) contains a prominent statement that there is an exclusive choice of court agreement and specifies the sections of the volume contract containing that agreement; and

(b) Clearly designates the courts of one Contracting State or one or more specific courts of one Contracting State.

2. A person that is not a party to the volume contract is bound by an exclusive choice of court agreement concluded in accordance with paragraph 1 of this article only if:

- (a) The court is in one of the places designated in article 66, subparagraph (a);
- (b) That agreement is contained in the transport document or electronic transport record;
- (c) That person is given timely and adequate notice of the court where the action shall be brought and that the jurisdiction of that court is exclusive; and
- (d) The law of the court seized recognizes that that person may be bound by the exclusive choice of court agreement.

Article 68

Actions against the maritime performing party

The plaintiff has the right to institute judicial proceedings under this Convention against the maritime performing party in a competent court within the jurisdiction of which is situated one of the following places:

- (a) The domicile of the maritime performing party; or
- (b) The port where the goods are received by the maritime performing party, the port where the goods are delivered by the maritime performing party or the port in which the maritime performing party performs its activities with respect to the goods.

Article 69

No additional bases of jurisdiction

Subject to articles 71 and 72, no judicial proceedings under this Convention against the carrier or a maritime performing party may be instituted in a court not designated pursuant to article 66 or 68.

Article 70

Arrest and provisional or protective measures

Nothing in this Convention affects jurisdiction with regard to provisional or protective measures, including arrest. A court in a State in which a provisional or protective measure was taken does not have jurisdiction to determine the case upon its merits unless:

- (a) The requirements of this chapter are fulfilled; or
- (b) An international convention that applies in that State so provides.

Article 71

Consolidation and removal of actions

1. Except when there is an exclusive choice of court agreement that is binding pursuant to article 67 or 72, if a single action is brought against both the carrier and the maritime performing party arising out of a single occurrence, the action may be instituted only in a court designated pursuant to both article 66 and article 68. If there is no such court, such action may be instituted in a court designated pursuant to article 68, subparagraph (b), if there is such a court.

2. Except when there is an exclusive choice of court agreement that is binding pursuant to article 67 or 72, a carrier or a maritime performing party that institutes an action seeking a declaration of non-liability or any other action that would deprive a person of its right to select the forum pursuant to article 66 or 68 shall, at the request of the defendant, withdraw that action once the defendant has chosen a court designated pursuant to article 66 or 68, whichever is applicable, where the action may be recommenced.

Article 72

Agreement after a dispute has arisen and jurisdiction when the defendant has entered an appearance

1. After a dispute has arisen, the parties to the dispute may agree to resolve it in any competent court.

2. A competent court before which a defendant appears, without contesting jurisdiction in accordance with the rules of that court, has jurisdiction.

Article 73

Recognition and enforcement

1. A decision made in one Contracting State by a court having jurisdiction under this Convention shall be recognized and enforced in another Contracting State in accordance with the law of such latter Contracting State when both States have made a declaration in accordance with article 74.

2. A court may refuse recognition and enforcement based on the grounds for the refusal of recognition and enforcement available pursuant to its law.

3. This chapter shall not affect the application of the rules of a regional economic integration organization that is a party to this Convention, as concerns the recognition or enforcement of judgements as between member States of the regional economic integration organization, whether adopted before or after this Convention.

Article 74

Application of chapter 14

The provisions of this chapter shall bind only Contracting States that declare in accordance with article 91 that they will be bound by them.

Chapter 15

Arbitration

Article 75

Arbitration agreements

1. Subject to this chapter, parties may agree that any dispute that may arise relating to the carriage of goods under this Convention shall be referred to arbitration.

2. The arbitration proceedings shall, at the option of the person asserting a claim against the carrier, take place at:

- (a) Any place designated for that purpose in the arbitration agreement; or
- (b) Any other place situated in a State where any of the following places is located:
  - (i) The domicile of the carrier;
  - (ii) The place of receipt agreed in the contract of carriage;
  - (iii) The place of delivery agreed in the contract of carriage; or
  - (iv) The port where the goods are initially loaded on a ship or the port where the goods are finally discharged from a ship.

3. The designation of the place of arbitration in the agreement is binding for disputes between the parties to the agreement if the agreement is contained in a volume contract that clearly states the names and addresses of the parties and either:

- (a) Is individually negotiated; or
- (b) Contains a prominent statement that there is an arbitration agreement and specifies the sections of the volume contract containing the arbitration agreement.

4. When an arbitration agreement has been concluded in accordance with paragraph 3 of this article, a person that is not a party to the volume contract is bound by the designation of the place of arbitration in that agreement only if:

- (a) The place of arbitration designated in the agreement is situated in one of the places referred to in subparagraph 2 (b) of this article;
- (b) The agreement is contained in the transport document or electronic transport record;
- (c) The person to be bound is given timely and adequate notice of the place of arbitration; and
- (d) Applicable law permits that person to be bound by the arbitration agreement.

5. The provisions of paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 4 of this article are deemed to be part of every arbitration clause or agreement, and any term of such clause or agreement to the extent that it is inconsistent therewith is void.

Article 76

Arbitration agreement in non-liner transportation

1. Nothing in this Convention affects the enforceability of an arbitration agreement in a contract of carriage in non-liner transportation to which this Convention or the provisions of this Convention apply by reason of:

- (a) The application of article 7; or
- (b) The parties' voluntary incorporation of this Convention in a contract of carriage that would not otherwise be subject to this Convention.

2. Notwithstanding paragraph 1 of this article, an arbitration agreement in a transport document or electronic transport record to which this Convention applies by reason of the application of article 7 is subject to this chapter unless such a transport document or electronic transport record:

- (a) Identifies the parties to and the date of the charter party or other contract excluded from the application of this Convention by reason of the application of article 6; and
- (b) Incorporates by specific reference the clause in the charter party or other contract that contains the terms of the arbitration agreement.

Article 77

Agreement to arbitrate after a dispute has arisen

Notwithstanding the provisions of this chapter and chapter 14, after a dispute has arisen the parties to the dispute may agree to resolve it by arbitration in any place.

Article 78

Application of chapter 15

The provisions of this chapter shall bind only Contracting States that declare in accordance with article 91 that they will be bound by them.

Chapter 16

Validity of contractual terms

Article 79

General provisions

1. Unless otherwise provided in this Convention, any term in a contract of carriage is void to the extent that it:

- (a) Directly or indirectly excludes or limits the obligations of the carrier or a maritime performing party under this Convention;
- (b) Directly or indirectly excludes or limits the liability of the carrier or a maritime performing party for breach of an obligation under this Convention; or
- (c) Assigns a benefit of insurance of the goods in favour of the carrier or a person referred to in article 18.

2. Unless otherwise provided in this Convention, any term in a contract of carriage is void to the extent that it:

- (a) Directly or indirectly excludes, limits or increases the obligations under this Convention of the shipper, consignee, controlling party, holder or documentary shipper; or
- (b) Directly or indirectly excludes, limits or increases the liability of the shipper, consignee, controlling party, holder or documentary shipper for breach of any of its obligations under this Convention.

Article 80

Special rules for volume contracts

1. Notwithstanding article 79, as between the carrier and the shipper, a volume contract to which this Convention applies may provide for greater or lesser rights, obligations and liabilities than those imposed by this Convention.

2. A derogation pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article is binding only when:

- (a) The volume contract contains a prominent statement that it derogates from this Convention;
- (b) The volume contract is (i) individually negotiated or (ii) prominently specifies the sections of the volume contract containing the derogations;
- (c) The shipper is given an opportunity and notice of the opportunity to conclude a contract of carriage on terms and conditions that comply with this Convention without any derogation under this article; and
- (d) The derogation is neither (i) incorporated by reference from another document nor (ii) included in a contract of adhesion that is not subject to negotiation.

3. A carrier's public schedule of prices and services, transport document, electronic transport record or similar document is not a volume contract pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article, but a volume contract may incorporate such documents by reference as terms of the contract.

4. Paragraph 1 of this article does not apply to rights and obligations provided in articles 14, subparagraphs (a) and (b), 29 and 32 or to liability arising from the breach thereof, nor does it apply to any liability arising from an act or omission referred to in article 61.

5. The terms of the volume contract that derogate from this Convention, if the volume contract satisfies the requirements of paragraph 2 of this article, apply between the carrier and any person other than the shipper provided that:

- (a) Such person received information that prominently states that the volume contract derogates from this Convention and gave its express consent to be bound by such derogations; and
- (b) Such consent is not solely set forth in a carrier's public schedule of prices and services, transport document or electronic transport record.

6. The party claiming the benefit of the derogation bears the burden of proof that the conditions for derogation have been fulfilled.

Article 81

Special rules for live animals and certain other goods

Notwithstanding article 79 and without prejudice to article 80, the contract of carriage may exclude or limit the obligations or the liability of both the carrier and a maritime performing party if:

- (a) The goods are live animals, but any such exclusion or limitation will not be effective if the claimant proves that the loss of or damage to the goods, or delay in delivery, resulted from an act or omission of the carrier or of a person referred to in article 18, done with the intent to cause such loss of or damage to the goods or such loss due to delay or done recklessly and with knowledge that such loss or damage or such loss due to delay would probably result; or
- (b) The character or condition of the goods or the circumstances and terms and conditions under which the carriage is to be performed are such as reasonably to justify a special agreement, provided that such contract of carriage is not related to ordinary commercial shipments made in the ordinary course of trade and that no negotiable transport document or negotiable electronic transport record is issued for the carriage of the goods.

Chapter 17*Matters not governed by this conventionArticle 82International conventions governing the carriage of goods by other modes of transport*

Nothing in this Convention affects the application of any of the following international conventions in force at the time this Convention enters into force, including any future amendment to such conventions, that regulate the liability of the carrier for loss of or damage to the goods:

(a) Any convention governing the carriage of goods by air to the extent that such convention according to its provisions applies to any part of the contract of carriage;

(b) Any convention governing the carriage of goods by road to the extent that such convention according to its provisions applies to the carriage of goods that remain loaded on a road cargo vehicle carried on board a ship;

(c) Any convention governing the carriage of goods by rail to the extent that such convention according to its provisions applies to carriage of goods by sea as a supplement to the carriage by rail; or

(d) Any convention governing the carriage of goods by inland waterways to the extent that such convention according to its provisions applies to a carriage of goods without trans-shipment both by inland waterways and sea.

Article 83Global limitation of liability

Nothing in this Convention affects the application of any international convention or national law regulating the global limitation of liability of vessel owners.

Article 84General average

Nothing in this Convention affects the application of terms in the contract of carriage or provisions of national law regarding the adjustment of general average.

Article 85Passengers and luggage

This Convention does not apply to a contract of carriage for passengers and their luggage.

Article 86Damage caused by nuclear incident

No liability arises under this Convention for damage caused by a nuclear incident if the operator of a nuclear installation is liable for such damage:

(a) Under the Paris Convention on Third Party Liability in the Field of Nuclear Energy of 29 July 1960 as amended by the Additional Protocol of 28 January 1964 and by the Protocols of 16 November 1982 and 12 February 2004, the Vienna Convention on Civil Liability for Nuclear Damage of 21 May 1963 as amended by the Joint Protocol Relating to the Application of the Vienna Convention and the Paris Convention of 21 September 1988 and as amended by the Protocol to Amend the 1963 Vienna Convention on Civil Liability for Nuclear Damage of 12 September 1997, or the Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage of 12 September 1997, including any amendment to these conventions and any future convention in respect of the liability of the operator of a nuclear installation for damage caused by a nuclear incident; or

(b) Under national law applicable to the liability for such damage, provided that such law is in all respects as favourable to persons that may suffer damage as either the Paris or Vienna Conventions or the Convention on Supplementary Compensation for Nuclear Damage.

Chapter 18*Final clausesArticle 87Depositary*

The Secretary-General of the United Nations is hereby designated as the depositary of this Convention.

Article 88Signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession

1. This Convention is open for signature by all States at Rotterdam, the Netherlands, on 23 September 2009, and thereafter at the Headquarters of the United Nations in New York.

2. This Convention is subject to ratification, acceptance or approval by the signatory States.

3. This Convention is open for accession by all States that are not signatory States as from the date it is open for signature.

4. Instruments of ratification, acceptance, approval and accession are to be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Article 89Denunciation of other conventions

1. A State that ratifies, accepts, approves or accedes to this Convention and is a party to the International Convention for the Unification of certain Rules of Law relating to Bills of Lading signed at Brussels on 25 August 1924, to the Protocol to amend the International Convention for the Unification of certain Rules of Law relating to Bills of Lading, signed at Brussels on 23 February 1968, or to the Protocol to amend the International Convention for the Unification of certain Rules of Law relating to Bills of Lading as Modified by the Amending Protocol of 23 February 1968, signed at Brussels on 21 December 1979, shall at the same time denounce that Convention and the protocol or protocols thereto to which it is a party by notifying the Government of Belgium to that effect, with a declaration that the denunciation is to take effect as from the date when this Convention enters into force in respect of that State.

2. A State that ratifies, accepts, approves or accedes to this Convention and is a party to the United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea concluded at Hamburg on 31 March 1978 shall at the same time denounce that Convention by notifying the Secretary-General of the United Nations to that effect, with a declaration that the denunciation is to take effect as from the date when this Convention enters into force in respect of that State.

3. For the purposes of this article, ratifications, acceptances, approvals and accessions in respect of this Convention by States parties to the instruments listed in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article that are notified to the depository after this Convention has entered into force are not effective until such denunciations as may be required on the part of those States in respect of these instruments have become effective. The depository of this Convention shall consult with the Government of Belgium, as the depository of the instruments referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, so as to ensure necessary coordination in this respect.

Reservations

No reservation is permitted to this Convention.

Article 91

Procedure and effect of declarations

1. The declarations permitted by articles 74 and 78 may be made at any time. The initial declarations permitted by article 92, paragraph 1, and article 93, paragraph 2, shall be made at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession. No other declaration is permitted under this Convention.

2. Declarations made at the time of signature are subject to confirmation upon ratification, acceptance or approval.

3. Declarations and their confirmations are to be in writing and to be formally notified to the depository.

4. A declaration takes effect simultaneously with the entry into force of this Convention in respect of the State concerned. However, a declaration of which the depository receives formal notification after such entry into force takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months after the date of its receipt by the depository.

5. Any State that makes a declaration under this Convention may withdraw it at any time by a formal notification in writing addressed to the depository. The withdrawal of a declaration, or its modification where permitted by this Convention, takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of six months after the date of the receipt of the notification by the depository.

Effect in domestic territorial units

1. If a Contracting State has two or more territorial units in which different systems of law are applicable in relation to the matters dealt with in this Convention, it may, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, declare that this Convention is to extend to all its territorial units or only to one or more of them, and may amend its declaration by submitting another declaration at any time.

2. These declarations are to be notified to the depository and are to state expressly the territorial units to which the Convention extends.

3. When a Contracting State has declared pursuant to this article that this Convention extends to one or more but not all of its territorial units, a place located in a territorial unit to which this Convention does not extend is not considered to be in a Contracting State for the purposes of this Convention.

4. If a Contracting State makes no declaration pursuant to paragraph 1 of this article, the Convention is to extend to all territorial units of that State.

Article 93

Participation by regional economic integration organizations

1. A regional economic integration organization that is constituted by sovereign States and has competence over certain matters governed by this Convention may similarly sign, ratify, accept, approve or accede to this Convention. The regional economic integration organization shall in that case have the rights and obligations of a Contracting State, to the extent that that organization has competence over matters governed by this Convention. When the number of Contracting States is relevant in this Convention, the regional economic integration organization does not count as a Contracting State in addition to its member States which are Contracting States.

2. The regional economic integration organization shall, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, make a declaration to the depository specifying the matters governed by this Convention in respect of which competence has been transferred to that organization by its member States. The regional economic integration organization shall promptly notify the depository of any changes to the distribution of competence, including new transfers of competence, specified in the declaration pursuant to this paragraph.

3. Any reference to a "Contracting State" or "Contracting States" in this Convention applies equally to a regional economic integration organization when the context so requires.

Article 94

Entry into force

1. This Convention enters into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of one year after the date of deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

2. For each State that becomes a Contracting State to this Convention after the date of the deposit of the twentieth instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, this Convention enters into force on the first day of the month following the expiration of one year after the deposit of the appropriate instrument on behalf of that State.

3. Each Contracting State shall apply this Convention to contracts of carriage concluded on or after the date of the entry into force of this Convention in respect of that State.

Article 95

Revision and amendment

1. At the request of not less than one third of the Contracting States to this Convention, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall convene a conference of the Contracting States for revising or amending it.

2. Any instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession deposited after the entry into force of an amendment to this Convention is deemed to apply to the Convention as amended.

Article 96

Denunciation of this Convention

1. A Contracting State may denounce this Convention at any time by means of a notification in writing addressed to the depository.

2. The denunciation takes effect on the first day of the month following the expiration of one year after the notification is received by the depositary. If a longer period is specified in the notification, the denunciation takes effect upon the expiration of such longer period after the notification is received by the depositary.

DONE at New York, this eleventh day of December two thousand and eight, in a single original, of which the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish texts are equally authentic.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the undersigned plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized by their respective Governments, have signed this Convention.

Insolvency law

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] noted the progress of Working Group V (Insolvency Law) regarding consideration of the treatment of corporate groups in insolvency, including post-commencement finance, as reflected in the reports of its thirty-third (Vienna, 5–9 November 2007) [A/CN.9/643] and thirty-fourth (New York, 3–7 March 2008) [A/CN.9/647] sessions. The Commission also considered a Secretariat note on facilitation of cooperation, direct communication and coordination in cross-border insolvency proceedings [A/CN.9/654]. It expressed satisfaction with the progress made on compiling practical experience with negotiating and using cross-border insolvency agreements, and decided that the compilation should be presented as a working paper to the Working Group at its next session for an initial discussion. The Group could then decide to continue discussing the compilation and make its recommendations to the Commission's 2009 session. UNCITRAL also approved a thirty-fifth session of the Working Group, which was held in Vienna from 17 to 21 November.

Electronic commerce

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] had before it a note by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/655] on possible future work in electronic commerce: legal issues arising from implementation and operation of single windows in international trade, which set out policy considerations and legal issues for implementing and operating single windows. Submitting proposals for future work in cooperation with other international organizations, UNCITRAL defined a "single window" as a facility that allowed parties involved in trade and transport to lodge standardized information and documents with a single entry point to fulfil all-important export and transit-related regulatory requirements. If information was electronic, individual data elements would only be submitted once.

UNCITRAL noted that the use of single windows could result in improved efficiency and effectiveness of official controls and reduce costs for Governments and traders. However, it also gave rise to several legal issues, including the legislative authority to operate single windows; identification, authentication and authorization to exchange documents and messages through single windows; data protection; liability of operators of single windows; and legal validity of documents exchanged in electronic form. UNCITRAL agreed it would be worthwhile to study the legal aspects involved in implementing a cross-border single window facility, with a view to formulating a comprehensive international reference document to which legislators, Government policymakers, single window operators and other stakeholders could refer for advice on legal aspects of creating and managing a single window designed to handle cross-border transactions. It also agreed it would be worthwhile to keep under examination legal issues related to electronic equivalents to negotiable documents and other electronic systems for negotiating and transferring of rights in goods, securities and other rights in electronic form.

Commercial fraud

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] considered the comments of States and organizations on indicators of commercial fraud submitted to the Secretariat [A/CN.9/659 & Add.1,2] and the text of the indicators circulated in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1378]. The Commission reiterated its support for the preparation and dissemination of those indicators. On completing work on the indicators of commercial fraud, given the technical nature of the comments received and bearing in mind that such treatment should keep separate any criminal law aspects of commercial fraud, UNCITRAL requested the Secretariat to make such adjustments and additions as were advisable to improve the materials and then publish them as an informational note for educational purposes and fraud prevention.

The Commission was advised that the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) had continued its work in pursuing various aspects of fraud, including work on identity fraud. The UNCITRAL secretariat, which had cooperated with UNODC in order to provide appropriate private sector and commercial expertise, was requested to continue to cooperate with and to assist UNODC in its work with respect to commercial and economic fraud, and report to the Commission on any developments.

Security interests

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] considered the report of Working Group VI (Security Interests) on its thirteenth session (New York, 19–23 May) [A/CN.9/649] and noted the progress made during the initial discussions, which had enabled the Group to request that the Secretariat prepare a first draft of the annex to the UNCITRAL Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions [YUN 2007, p. 1378] dealing with security rights in intellectual property. UNCITRAL also noted that the Working Group was unable to reach agreement as to whether certain matters related to the impact of insolvency on a security right in intellectual property were sufficiently linked with secured transactions law in order to justify their discussion in the annex to the Guide. The Group had decided to revisit those matters at a future meeting and to recommend that Working Group V (Insolvency Law) be requested to consider them. In that connection, the Commission decided that Working Group V should be invited to express any preliminary opinion at its next session and if any remaining issue required joint consideration by the two Working Groups, the UNCITRAL Secretariat should have the discretion to organize a joint discussion of the impact of insolvency on a security right in intellectual property when the two Groups were to meet back to back in the spring of 2009. The Commission also approved a fourteenth session of Working Group VI, which was held in Vienna, from 20 to 24 October.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/438], adopted resolution 63/121 without vote [agenda item 74].

Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the importance to all countries of efficient secured transactions regimes promoting access to secured credit,

Recognizing also that access to secured credit is likely to assist all countries, in particular developing countries and countries with economies in transition, in their economic development and in fighting poverty,

Emphasizing the expectation that modern and harmonized secured transactions regimes which balance the interests of all stakeholders (including grantors of security rights, secured and unsecured creditors, retention-of-title sellers and financial lessors, privileged creditors and the insolvency representative in the grantor's insolvency) will demonstrably facilitate access to secured credit, thereby promoting the movement of goods and services across national borders,

Noting that the development of international trade on the basis of equality and mutual benefit is an important element in promoting friendly relations among States,

Taking into account the need for reform in the field of secured transactions laws at both the national and international levels as demonstrated by the numerous current national law reform efforts and the work of international organizations, such as the Hague Conference on Private

International Law, the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law and the Organization of American States, and of international financial institutions, such as the Asian Development Bank, the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the Inter-American Development Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank,

Expressing its appreciation to intergovernmental and international non-governmental organizations active in the field of secured transactions law reform for their participation in and support for the development of the Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law for the completion and adoption of the Legislative Guide on Secured Transactions;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to disseminate broadly the text of the Legislative Guide, transmitting it to Governments and other interested bodies, such as national and international financial institutions and chambers of commerce;

3. Recommends that all States give favourable consideration to the Legislative Guide when revising or adopting legislation relevant to secured transactions, and invites States that have used the Legislative Guide to advise the Commission accordingly;

4. Recommends also that all States continue to consider becoming party to the United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade, the principles of which are also reflected in the Legislative Guide.

Case law on UNCITRAL texts

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] noted the continuing work under the system established for the collection and dissemination of case law on UNCITRAL texts (CLOUT), consisting of the preparation of case-law abstracts. A total of 72 issues of CLOUT had been prepared for publication dealing with 761 cases.

It was widely agreed that CLOUT continued to be an important aspect of UNCITRAL technical assistance, and its broad dissemination promoted the uniform interpretation and application of UNCITRAL texts. The Commission expressed appreciation to national correspondents and other contributors for their work in developing the CLOUT system. It noted that the digest of case law on the United Nations Sales Convention, published in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1355], had been revised and was being published, that a quarterly bulletin and an information brochure on the CLOUT system had been developed to facilitate dissemination of information on the system, and that the UNCITRAL website had received over one million visits since the Commission's fortieth (2008) session. UNCITRAL also took note of developments related to the UNCITRAL Law Library and UNCITRAL publications, including the Secretariat note containing a bibliography of recent writings concerning UNCITRAL work [A/CN.9/650].

Training and technical assistance

UNCITRAL [A/63/17] had before it a note by the Secretariat [A/CN.9/652] describing technical cooperation and assistance activities undertaken since 2007. UNCITRAL noted that its ability to participate in technical cooperation and assistance activities, in response to specific requests of States, was dependent upon the availability of funds to meet associated costs. Despite efforts by the Secretariat to solicit new donations, funds remaining in the UNCITRAL Trust Fund for Symposia were very limited. Beyond the end of 2008, requests for technical cooperation and assistance involving the expenditure of funds for travel or other associated costs would have to be declined unless new donations to the Trust Fund were received or other alternative sources of funds could be found.

The Commission reiterated its appeal [YUN 2007, p. 1379] to States, international organizations and other entities to contribute to its Trust Fund for Symposia to meet the increasing requests for technical assistance and cooperation activities, and to the trust fund established to provide travel assistance to developing countries that were members of UNCITRAL.

Future work

UNCITRAL considered [A/63/17] a note by the Secretariat describing practices of the Commission as regards decision-making, the status of observers in UNCITRAL and the preparatory work undertaken by the Secretariat, and outlining observations by the Secretariat on working methods [A/CN.9/653]. The note had been circulated for comments on 6 May. The Commission also had before it a note by the Secretariat compiling the comments received prior to the 2008 session [A/CN.9/660 & Add.1–4]. On decision-making, the Commission agreed that consensus should remain the preferred method, yet supported clarifying the manner in which consensus operated in practice. On the role of observers, the Commission agreed that its approach should continue to be based on flexibility and inclusiveness. It also agreed, with regard to working methods, that it was important for the Secretariat to preserve the flexibility necessary to organize its work efficiently, including through recourse to external expertise. On the question of further work, a proposal was made to establish a working group, while there was also support for holding informal consultations instead. It was agreed that a meeting of such an informal group would take place in connection with the next session of the Commission.

UNCITRAL requested the Secretariat to prepare a first draft of a reference document, based on the Secretariat note for use by chairpersons, delegates and observers and the Secretariat; circulate the draft reference document for comments by States and international organizations; and prepare a compilation of those comments for consideration by the Commission at its 2009 session.

UNCITRAL approved the holding of its forty-second session in Vienna from 29 June to 17 July 2009. It was noted that the duration of the session might be modified, should a shorter session become advisable in light of the progress of work in Working Group II (Arbitration and Conciliation) and Working Group V (Insolvency Law).

International organizations and international law

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

Special Committee on United Nations Charter

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/69 [YUN 2007, p. 1381], the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its sixty-third session (New York, 27–29 February, 3–5 and 7 March) [A/63/33], continued to consider proposals relating to: the maintenance of international peace and security; the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; the improvement of the Committee's working methods; and the status of the publications Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council.

With regard to the first item, the Russian Federation introduced the revised working paper entitled, "Basic conditions and standard criteria for the introduction and implementation of sanctions imposed by the United Nations" [A/C.6/62/L.6], which was submitted to the Committee in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1342] and revised in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1445]. Although diverging views were expressed in informal consultations, general support was expressed for continued consideration of the proposal and the Committee decided to continue to consider the working document, which was annexed to the report, with a view to focusing on the outstanding issues.

The Committee also discussed the revised working paper submitted by Belarus and the Russian Federation in 2005 [ibid., p. 1446], which recommended that an advisory opinion be requested from the International Court of Justice (ICJ) as to the legal consequences of the resort to the use of force by States without prior authorization by the Security Council, except in the exercise of the right to self-defence. Some delegations reiterated their support for the proposal, holding that it would strengthen the principle of the non-use of force or threat of force. Concern was expressed over attempts to justify the unilateral use of force without Council authorization under a false pretext of self-defence, which was considered a violation of the Charter. Delegations against the proposal said that the use of force was adequately and clearly addressed in the Charter, and consequently, the proposed Assembly request for an ICJ advisory opinion on the matter could not be supported. Although some held it was time to reconsider or discontinue further discussion on those issues, which had been on the Committee's agenda for many years without any immediate chance of reaching consensus, the Committee decided to keep the proposal on its agenda.

The Committee concluded its consideration of a Russian Federation working paper on fundamentals of the legal basis for UN peacekeeping operations in the context of Chapter VI of the Charter [YUN 1998, p. 1233], which was then removed from its agenda. The Committee also discussed the revised proposal by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on strengthening the UN role in the maintenance of international peace and security [ibid.]; the revised working paper submitted by Libya on the strengthening of certain principles concerning the application of sanctions [YUN 2002, p. 1329]; and the working papers on strengthening the role of the Organization and enhancing its effectiveness, submitted by Cuba at its 1997 and 1998 sessions [YUN 1998, p. 1233].

During the exchange of views on the peaceful settlement of disputes, delegations recalled the obligation of States to settle disputes by peaceful means, as well as the principle of free choice of means. Reference was also made to the important role and record of ICJ in the judicial settlement of disputes.

Delegations commended ongoing Secretariat efforts to reduce the backlog in preparation of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council, including the enhanced cooperation with academic institutions and progress made towards making both publications available on the Internet. The Repertory website continued to be updated regularly and the eleventh supplement to the Repertoire had recently been published. Meanwhile, supplement 12 was being edited with an advance version available in its entirety on the Internet, and progress had been made on supplements 13, 14 and 15, with advance versions of several chapters of those supplements accessible online. The Committee made recommendations for the General Assembly, among other things, to commend the Secretary-General for progress made on both publications and call on him to continue efforts to update the two publications and make them available in all language versions, as well as to reiterate its call for voluntary contributions to the trust funds for updating the Repertoire and eliminating the backlog of the Repertory.

Concerning the identification of new subjects, the Dominican Republic, on behalf of the Rio Group, introduced a proposal entitled "Consideration of the legal aspects of the reform of the United Nations" [A/AC.182/L.126]. Following preliminary discussions, the Committee decided to keep the proposal on its agenda.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/69 [YUN 2007, p. 1381], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/63/98] outlining the progress made in updating the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council. With respect to the Repertory, the Secretary-General concluded that the Assembly might wish to note the progress made in the preparation of Repertory studies and their posting on the Internet in English, French and Spanish; express appreciation for the contribution received to the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog of the Repertory; and consider the recommendations of the Special Committee, including the increased use of the UN internship programme and expanded co-operation with academic institutions for the preparation of the studies and the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis, and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in updating the publication. With regard to the Repertoire, the Secretary-General concluded that the Assembly might wish to note the progress made towards its updating and its posting in electronic form in all language versions on the UN website; call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for updating the Repertoire; and note the support of Germany, Italy and Norway for sponsoring associate experts and encourage other States to consider providing such assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/442], adopted resolution 63/127 without vote [agenda item 78].

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its relevant resolutions adopted at subsequent sessions,

Recalling also its resolution 47/233 of 17 August 1993 on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly,

Recalling further its resolution 47/62 of 11 December 1992 on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and

Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council,

Recalling the elements relevant to the work of the Special Committee contained in its resolution 47/120 B of 20 September 1993,

Recalling also its resolution 51/241 of 31 July 1997 on the strengthening of the United Nations system and its resolution 51/242 of 15 September 1997, entitled "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace", by which it adopted the texts on coordination and the question of sanctions imposed by the United Nations, which are annexed to that resolution,

Concerned about the special economic problems confronting certain States arising from the carrying out of preventive or enforcement measures taken by the Security Council against other States, and taking into account the obligation of Members of the United Nations under Article 49 of the Charter of the United Nations to join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Council,

Recalling the right of third States confronted with special economic problems of that nature to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems, in accordance with Article 50 of the Charter,

Recalling also that the International Court of Justice is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, and reaffirming its authority and independence,

Mindful of the adoption of the revised working papers on the working methods of the Special Committee,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs and the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council,

Taking note also of paragraphs 106 to 110, 176 and 177 of the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Mindful of the decision of the Special Committee in which it expressed its readiness to engage, as appropriate, in the implementation of any decisions that might be taken at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly in September 2005 that concerned the Charter and any amendments thereto,

Recalling the provisions of its resolutions 50/51 of 11 December 1995, 51/208 of 17 December 1996, 52/162 of 15 December 1997, 53/107 of 8 December 1998, 54/107 of 9 December 1999, 55/157 of 12 December 2000, 56/87 of 12 December 2001, 57/25 of 19 November 2002, 58/80 of 9 December 2003 and 59/45 of 2 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 62/69 of 6 December 2007,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of its session held in 2008,

Noting with appreciation the work done by the Special Committee to encourage States to focus on the need to prevent and to settle peacefully their disputes which are likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall hold its next session from 17 to 25 February 2009;

3. Requests the Special Committee, at its session in 2009, in accordance with paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 50/52 of 11 December 1995:

(a) To continue its consideration of all proposals concerning the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations, and, in this context, to consider other proposals relating to the maintenance of international peace and security already submitted or which may be submitted to the Special Committee at its session in 2009;

(b) To continue its consideration, on a priority basis, of the working document submitted by the Russian Federation, entitled "Basic conditions and standard criteria for introduction and implementation of sanctions", with a view to focusing on the outstanding issues;

(c) To continue to consider, on a priority basis and in an appropriate substantive manner and framework, the question of the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter based on all of the related reports of the Secretary-General and the proposals submitted on the question;

(d) To keep on its agenda the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

(e) To consider, as appropriate, any proposal referred to it by the General Assembly in the implementation of the decisions of the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixtieth session of the Assembly in September 2005 that concern the Charter and any amendments thereto;

(f) To continue to consider, on a priority basis, ways and means of improving its working methods and enhancing its efficiency with a view to identifying widely acceptable measures for future implementation;

4. Notes that the Special Committee decided not to keep on its agenda the topic relating to the consideration of the working paper submitted by the Russian Federation, entitled "Fundamentals of the legal basis for United Nations peacekeeping operations in the context of Chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations";

5. Invites the Special Committee at its session in 2009 to continue to identify new subjects for consideration in its future work with a view to contributing to the revitalization of the work of the United Nations;

6. Notes the readiness of the Special Committee to provide, within its mandate, such assistance as may be sought at the request of other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly in relation to any issues before them;

7. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

8. Recognizes the important role of the International Court of Justice, the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, in adjudicating disputes among States and the value of its work, as well as the importance of having recourse to the Court in the peaceful settlement of disputes, takes note, consistent with Article 96 of the Charter, of the Court's advisory jurisdiction that may be requested by the General Assembly, the Security Council or other authorized organs of the United Nations and the specialized agencies, and requests the Secretary-General to distribute, in due course, the advisory opinions requested by the principal organs of the United Nations as official documents of the United Nations;

9. Commends the Secretary-General for the progress made in the preparation of studies of the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, including the increased use of the internship programme of the United Nations and further expanded cooperation with academic institutions for this purpose, as well as the progress made towards updating the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council;

10. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by Member States to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire, as well as the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory;

11. Reiterates its call for voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the updating of the Repertoire, as well as the trust fund for the elimination of the backlog in the Repertory, and the sponsoring, on a voluntary basis, and with no cost to the United Nations, of associate experts to assist in the updating of the two publications;

12. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue his efforts towards updating the two publications and making them available electronically in all their respective language versions;

13. Reiterates the responsibility of the Secretary-General for the quality of the Repertory and the Repertoire and, in particular, with regard to the Repertoire, calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to follow the modalities outlined in paragraphs 102 to 106 of his report of 18 September 1952;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on both the Repertory and the Repertoire to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to brief the Special Committee at its next session on the information referred to in paragraph 11 of his report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations related to assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, under the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization";

17. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

Charter provisions relating to sanctions

Special Committee consideration. During the Special Committee's [A/63/33] consideration of the implementation of the Charter provisions related to assistance to third States affected by sanctions, delegations emphasized that sanctions should be implemented and monitored effectively, in accordance with specific terms and goals, subsequent to an objective assessment of unintended consequences that they could generate. Recognizing that the targeted nature of recently imposed sanctions was minimizing unintended consequences for civilian populations and third States, they commended the progress made by the Security Council, which included new procedures for the listing and delisting of individuals and entities on sanctions lists and the adoption of a focal point. Other delegations held that even targeted sanctions could entail unintended negative effects for third States and, therefore, the Special Committee should remain seized of the matter with the aim of establishing a comprehensive and objective framework that would allow for broad-based adaptation of sanctions and mitigate their adverse effects on third States and civilian populations. Some called for the establishment of a mechanism to assist third States at the time of the introduction of sanctions which would not depend on a specific request from such States. It was also suggested that any reform of the UN Charter should include a mandate for the Economic and Social Council to undertake studies relating to the socio-economic and humanitarian effects of sanctions, prior to their application.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/69 [YUN 2007, p. 1381], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/224] highlighting Secretariat arrangements concerning assistance to third States affected by the application of sanctions; operational changes that had occurred following the shift in focus in the Security Council and its sanctions committees towards targeted sanctions; and recent developments concerning the activities of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council regarding assistance to such States.

Cooperation with Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374] and Security Council resolution 1809(2008) (see p. 109), the Secretary-General in August submitted a consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, providing information on cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization (AALCO). He reported that cooperation between the two organizations had included mutual representation at each other's meetings and the exchange of information and documentation. Consultations were regularly conducted on matters of common interest, including between the UN Legal Counsel and the AALCO Secretary-General. Cooperation in the area of international law included matters relating to the law of the sea, international trade law, international environmental law, criminal law, human rights law, refugee law, humanitarian law, terrorism, human trafficking, and the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The report provided details on AALCO representation at UN meetings and conferences, including two General Assembly sessions and the fifty-ninth session of ILC. AALCO and ICC concluded a memorandum of understanding on 5 February to promote awareness of international criminal law, and the AALCO Centre for Research and Training was engaged in capacity-building by carrying out research projects on international law. AALCO also established regional centres for arbitration in Cairo, Kuala Lumpur, Lagos and Tehran, and agreement was reached with Kenya on a fifth centre in Nairobi.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 November [meeting 37], the General Assembly, adopted resolution 63/10 [draft: A/63/L.7 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (b)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/38 of 18 November 1981, 37/8 of 29 October 1982, 38/37 of 5 December 1983, 39/47 of 10 December 1984, 40/60 of 9 December 1985, 41/5 of 17 October 1986, 43/1 of 17 October 1988, 45/4 of 16 October 1990, 47/6 of 21 October 1992, 49/8 of 25 October 1994, 51/11 of 4 November 1996, 53/14 of 29 October 1998, 55/4 of 25 October 2000, 57/36 of 21 November 2002, 59/3 of 22 October 2004 and 61/5 of 20 October 2006,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Having heard the statement made by the representative of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization on the steps taken by the Consultative Organization to ensure continuing, close and effective cooperation between the two organizations,

Acknowledging in particular the close interaction between the Consultative Organization and the Sixth Committee,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Recognizes the continuing efforts of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization towards strengthening the role and function of the United Nations and its various organs in enhancing the rule of law and wider adherence to related international instruments;

3. Notes with satisfaction the commendable progress achieved towards enhancing cooperation between the United Nations, its agencies, other international organizations and the Consultative Organization;

4. Notes with appreciation the work of the Consultative Organization aimed at strengthening the efforts of the United Nations in respect of issues such as combating corruption, international terrorism and trafficking in women and children, as well as human rights issues;

5. Also notes with appreciation the initiative and efforts the Consultative Organization has undertaken to promote the objectives and principles set out in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, including wider acceptance of treaties deposited with the Secretary-General;

6. Recommends that, with a view to promoting close interaction between the Consultative Organization and the Sixth Committee, the consideration of the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization" should be scheduled to coincide with the deliberations of the Committee on the work of the International Law Commission;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on cooperation between the United Nations and the Consultative Organization;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization".

Host country relations

At five meetings held in New York (22 January, 22 April, 23 July, and 2 and 31 October), the Committee on Relations with the Host Country considered the following aspects of relations between the UN diplomatic community and the United States, the host country: the security of missions and the safety of their personnel; entry visas issued by the host country; acceleration of immigration and customs procedures; and transportation, including the use of motor vehicles, parking and related matters.

The recommendations and conclusions on those items, approved by the Committee at its 31 October meeting, were incorporated in its report [A/63/26]. The Committee expressed appreciation for the host country's efforts to maintain appropriate conditions for delegations and missions accredited to the United Nations and anticipated that all issues raised at its meetings would be duly settled in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law. Noting the importance of the observance of privileges and immunities, the Committee emphasized the need to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise in that regard for the normal functioning of accredited delegations and missions. It urged the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as the training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities. In case of violations, the Committee urged the host country to ensure that such cases were properly investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law. Considering that the security of missions and the safety of their personnel were indispensable for their effective functioning, the Committee appreciated the host country's efforts to that end and anticipated that all measures to prevent any interference with the missions' functioning would continue to be taken.

Noting the problems experienced by some missions in connection with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles, in force since 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 1338], the Committee decided to remain seized of the matter, with a view to continuously ensuring its proper implementation in a manner that was fair, non-discriminatory, effective and therefore consistent with international law.

The Committee requested the host country to continue to bring to the attention of New York City officials reports about other problems experienced by permanent missions or their staff, in order to improve the conditions for their functioning and to promote compliance with international norms concerning diplomatic privileges and immunities. It anticipated that the host country would enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States, pursuant to the Headquarters Agreement, to travel to New York on official UN business, and noted that a number of delegations had requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas since the current time frame posed difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in UN meetings. Concerning travel regulations issued by the host country with regard to personnel of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, the Committee urged the host country to remove the remaining restrictions.

The Committee stressed the importance of permanent missions, their personnel and Secretariat personnel meeting their financial obligations. Finally, the Committee reiterated its appreciation to the representative of the United States Mission in charge of host country affairs and to the Host Country Affairs Section of the United States Mission to the United Nations, as well as to those local entities, in particular the New York City Commission for the United Nations, Consular Corps and Protocol, that contributed to its efforts to help accommodate the needs, interests and requirements of the diplomatic community and to promote mutual understanding between the diplomatic community and the people of the City of New York.

Communications. Letters were submitted to the Committee by Cuba on the delay in processing of a visa application by the host country [A/AC.154/385], and by the United States as host country, transmitting its response to Cuba's letter [A/AC.154/386].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee [A/63/452], adopted resolution 63/130 without vote [agenda item 150].

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and the responsibilities of the host country,

Recalling also that, in accordance with paragraph 7 of General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971, the Committee should consider, and advise the host country on, issues arising in connection with the implementation of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 51 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations and the observance of their privileges and immunities, which is an issue of great importance, are in the interest of the United Nations and all Member States, and requests the host country to continue to solve, through negotiations, problems that might arise and to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions; and urges the host country to continue to take appropriate action, such as training of police, security, customs and border control officers, with a view to maintaining respect for diplomatic privileges and immunities and if violations occur to ensure that such cases are properly investigated and remedied, in accordance with applicable law;

3. Notes the problems experienced by some permanent missions in connection with the implementation of the Parking Programme for Diplomatic Vehicles and shall remain seized of the matter, with a view to continuing to maintain the proper implementation of the Parking Programme in a manner that is fair, non-discriminatory, effective and therefore consistent with international law;

4. Requests the host country to consider removing the remaining travel restrictions imposed by it on staff of certain missions and staff members of the Secretariat of certain nationalities, and, in this regard, notes the positions of affected States as reflected in the report of the Committee, of the Secretary-General and of the host country;

5. Notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will enhance its efforts to ensure the issuance, in a timely manner, of entry visas to representatives of Member States, pursuant to article IV, section 11, of the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations to travel to New York on United Nations business; and notes that the Committee anticipates that the host country will enhance efforts to facilitate participation, including visa issuance, of representatives of Member States in other United Nations meetings as appropriate;

6. Notes also that a number of delegations have requested shortening the time frame applied by the host country for issuance of entry visas to representatives of Member States, since this time frame poses difficulties for the full-fledged participation of Member States in United Nations meetings;

7. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country, and hopes that the issues raised at the meetings of the Committee will continue to be resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

8. Affirms the importance of the Committee being in a position to fulfil its mandate and meet on short notice to deal with urgent and important matters concerning the relations between the United Nations and the host country, and in that connection requests the Secretariat and the Committee on Conferences to accord priority to requests from the Committee on Relations with the Host Country for conference-servicing facilities for meetings of that Committee that must be held while the General Assembly and its Main Committees are meeting, without prejudice to the requirements of those bodies and on an “as available” basis;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

10. Requests the Committee to continue its work in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI);

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the item entitled “Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country”.

Law of the sea

In 2008, the United Nations continued to promote universal acceptance of the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and its two implementing Agreements, on the implementation of Part XI of the Convention and on the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks.

The three institutions created by the Convention—the International Seabed Authority, the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea and the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf—held sessions during the year. In December, the General Assembly designated 8 June as World Oceans Day.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

In 2008, Congo and Liberia ratified or acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), bringing the number of parties to 157. The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 178], entered into force on 16 November 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 1301].

Meeting of States Parties

The eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention (New York, 13–20 June) [SPLOS/184] discussed the 2007 activities of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea [YUN 2007, p. 1400] and took action on a number of Tribunal-related financial and administrative issues, including the appointment of the Tribunal auditor for 2009–2012, and the election of seven members of the Tribunal. Also discussed were the 2007 activities of the International Seabed Authority (see p. 1494), the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf (see p. 1495), the allocation of seats on the Commission and the Tribunal, as well as the Secretary-General's report under article 319 of the Convention (see p. 1496).

Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention

During 2008, the number of parties to the 1994 Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the Convention (governing exploitation of seabed resources beyond national jurisdiction), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 48/263 [YUN 1994, p. 1301], reached 135, with Cape Verde, the Congo, Guyana and Liberia becoming parties. The Agreement, which entered into force on 28 July 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 1215], sought to address certain difficulties with the seabed mining provisions contained in Part XI of the Convention, which had been raised primarily by the industrialized countries. The Agreement was to be interpreted and applied together with the Convention as a single instrument, and, in the event of any inconsistency between the Agreement and Part XI of the Convention, the provisions of the Agreement would prevail. Any ratification of or accession to the Convention after 28 July 1994 represented consent to be bound by the Agreement also. Parties to the Convention prior to the Agreement's adoption had to deposit a separate instrument of ratification of or accession to the Agreement.

Agreement relating to conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks

As at 31 December, the number of parties to the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks [YUN 1995, p. 1334] reached 74, with Hungary, Mozambique, Oman, Palau, Panama, the Republic of Korea and Slovakia becoming parties. Referred to as the Fish Stocks Agreement, it entered into force on 11 December 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1232].

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/177 [YUN 2007, p. 1389], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/63/128] on the status of implementation of the Fish Stocks Agreement. The report contained information on initiatives taken or recommended to improve the conservation and management of fishery and other marine living resources, with a view to achieving sustainable fisheries and protecting vulnerable marine ecosystems and biodiversity.

The report emphasized the importance of the full implementation by States of all international fishery instruments, whether legally binding or voluntary. It also stressed the importance of cooperation among States, directly or through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to address unsustainable fishing practices and promote sustainable fisheries in areas beyond natural jurisdiction, including through implementing their responsibilities as flag States; improving governance of those organizations or arrangements; and cooperating in the establishment of new ones where none existed. A report on the status and activities of the UN Fish Stocks Agreement Assistance Fund was included.

The report dealt with achieving sustainable fisheries, implementation of international instruments for the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of fishery resources, promotion of responsible fisheries in the marine ecosystem, impediments to sustainable fisheries, and international cooperation to promote sustainable fisheries. It underscored the need for increased efforts towards responsible fisheries if the commitments set out in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation to achieve sustainable fisheries by 2015 [YUN 2002, p. 822] were to be met. It stressed that States needed to pursue new initiatives to promote sustainable fisheries that targeted economic incentives behind unsustainable fishing practices.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/112 [draft: A/63/L.43 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 70 (b)].

Sustainable Fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions 46/215 of 20 December 1991, 49/116 of 19 December 1994, and 50/24 and 50/25 of 5 December 1995, as well as its resolutions 56/13 of 28 November 2001, 58/14 of 24 November 2003, 59/25 of 17 November 2004, 60/31 of 29 November 2005, 61/105 of 8 December 2006 and 62/177 of 18 December 2007, and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"), and bearing in mind the relationship between the Convention and the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Agreement"),

Recognizing that, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement sets forth provisions concerning the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, including provisions on compliance and enforcement by the flag State and subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, binding dispute settlement and the rights and obligations of States in authorizing the use of vessels flying their flags for fishing on the high seas, and specific provisions to address the requirements of developing States in relation to the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and the development of fisheries for such stocks,

Welcoming the fact that a growing number of States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, as well as subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, have taken measures, as appropriate, towards the implementation of the provisions of the Agreement,

Welcoming also the recent ratifications of and accessions to the Agreement,

Welcoming further the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and its Committee on Fisheries and the 2005 Rome Declaration on Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, adopted by the Ministerial Meeting on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations on 12 March 2005, which calls for effective implementation of the various instruments already developed to ensure responsible fisheries, and recognizing that the Code of Conduct for Responsible Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ("the Code") and its associated international plans of action set out principles and global standards of behaviour for responsible practices for conservation of fisheries resources and the management and development of fisheries,

Noting with concern that effective management of marine capture fisheries has been made difficult in some areas by unreliable information and data caused by unreported and misreported fish catch and fishing effort and that this lack of accurate data contributes to overfishing in some areas,

Recognizing the significant contribution of sustainable fisheries to food security, income, wealth and poverty alleviation for present and future generations,

Recognizing also the urgent need for action at all levels to ensure the long-term sustainable use and management of fisheries resources through the wide application of the precautionary approach,

Expressing concern over the current and projected adverse effects of climate change on food security and the sustainability of fisheries, and noting in that regard the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the United Nations Environment Programme, including the findings that climate change is likely to have substantial impacts on commercial and artisanal fisheries and food security,

Noting the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Expert Workshop on Climate Change Implications for Fisheries and Aquaculture, in Rome from 7 to 9 April 2008,

Deploping the fact that fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in many parts of the world are overfished or subject to sparsely regulated and heavy fishing efforts, as a result of, inter alia, illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, inadequate flag State control and enforcement, including monitoring, control and surveillance measures, inadequate regulatory measures, harmful fisheries subsidies and overcapacity, and noting the report of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, The State of World Fisheries and Aquaculture 2006,

Noting the joint study by the World Bank and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, The Sunken Billions: The Economic Justification for Fisheries Reform, and taking note of its conclusions, including that sustainable fisheries and reform of the global fisheries sector could generate additional economic growth and alternative livelihoods, and that reforms would need to include a reduction in fishing effort and fishing capacity,

Noting also the limited information available on measures taken by States to implement, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,

Particularly concerned that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing constitutes a serious threat to fish stocks and marine habitats and ecosystems, to the detriment of sustainable fisheries as well as the food security and the economies of many States, particularly developing States,

Concerned that some operators increasingly take advantage of the globalization of fishery markets to trade fishery products stemming from illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and make economic profits from those operations, which constitutes an incentive for them to pursue their activities,

Recognizing that effective deterrence and combating of illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing has significant financial and other resource implications,

Recognizing also that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing may give rise to safety and security concerns for individuals on vessels engaged in such activities,

Welcoming cooperation between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization, in particular in assisting States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities,

Recognizing the duty provided in the Convention, the Agreement to Promote Compliance with International Conservation and Management Measures by Fishing Vessels on the High Seas ("the Compliance Agreement"), the Agreement and the Code for flag States to exercise effective control over fishing vessels flying their flag, and vessels flying their flag which provide support to fishing vessels, to ensure that the activities of such fishing and support vessels do not undermine the effectiveness of conservation and management measures taken in accordance with international law and adopted at the national, subregional, regional or global levels,

Recalling paragraphs 65 and 66 of its resolution 62/177, and noting in this regard the convening by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations of the Expert Consultation on the Development of a Comprehensive Global Record of Fishing Vessels, in Rome from 25 to 28 February 2008, and the findings of the Expert Consultation regarding the development of a comprehensive global record,

Noting the obligation of all States, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, to cooperate in the conservation and management of living marine resources, and recognizing the importance of coordination and cooperation at the global, regional, subregional as well as national levels in the areas, inter alia, of data collection, information-sharing, capacity-building and training for the conservation, management and sustainable development of marine living resources,

Welcoming recent developments regarding recommended best practices for regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that may help to strengthen their governance and promote their improved performance,

Calling attention to the need for States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to continue to develop and implement effective port State measures and schemes to combat overfishing and illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and the critical need for cooperation with developing States to build their capacity in this regard, taking note of the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop a legally binding instrument on minimum standards for port State measures,

Noting that the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, the General Fisheries Commission for the Mediterranean, the North East Atlantic Fisheries Commission and the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization have adopted port State measures, to be applied by their members, which include prohibition of entry and use of port services, including landing and trans-shipment, to vessels identified by those regional fisheries management organizations as engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, and that those measures prevent and deter such activities,

Concerned that marine pollution from all sources, including vessels and, in particular, land-based sources, constitutes a serious threat to human health and safety, endangers fish stocks, marine biodiversity and marine and coastal habitats and has significant costs to local and national economies,

Recognizing that marine debris is a global transboundary pollution problem and that, due to the many different types and sources of marine debris, different approaches to their prevention and removal are necessary,

Noting that the contribution of sustainable aquaculture to global fish supplies continues to respond to opportunities in developing countries to enhance local food security and poverty alleviation and, together with the efforts of other aquaculture producing countries, will make a significant contribution to meeting future demands in fish consumption, bearing in mind article 9 of the Code, and therefore welcoming the adoption in 2007 of the Strategy and Outline Plan for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Aquaculture by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to improve knowledge and understanding of the status and trends of aquaculture,

Calling attention to the circumstances affecting fisheries in many developing States, in particular African States and small island developing States, and recognizing the urgent need for capacity-building, including the transfer of marine technology and in particular fisheries-related technology, to enhance the ability of such States to meet their obligations and exercise their rights under international instruments, in order to realize the benefits from fisheries resources,

Recognizing the need for appropriate measures to minimize by-catch, waste, discards, including high-grading, loss of fishing gear and other factors, which adversely affect fish stocks and may also have undesirable effects on the economies and food security of small island developing States, other developing coastal States, and subsistence fishing communities,

Recognizing also the need to further integrate ecosystem approaches into fisheries conservation and management and, more generally, the importance of applying ecosystem approaches to the management of human activities in the ocean, and noting in this regard the Reykjavik Declaration on Responsible Fisheries in the Marine Ecosystem, the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations related to guidelines for the implementation of the ecosystem approach to fisheries management and the importance of this approach to relevant provisions of the Agreement and the Code, as well as decision VII/11 and other relevant decisions of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity,

Recognizing further the economic and cultural importance of sharks in many countries, the biological importance of sharks in the marine ecosystem as key predatory species, the vulnerability of certain shark species to overexploitation, the fact that some are threatened with extinction, the need for measures to promote the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark populations and fisheries, and the relevance of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 1999, in providing guidance on the development of such measures,

Reaffirming its support for the initiative of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and relevant subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements on the conservation and management of sharks, while noting with concern that basic data on shark stocks and harvests continue to be lacking, that only a small number of countries have implemented the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, and that not all regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements have adopted conservation and management measures for directed shark fisheries,

Expressing concern that the practice of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing remains a threat to marine living resources, and emphasizing that efforts should be made to ensure that the implementation of resolution 46/215 in some parts of the world does not result in the transfer to other parts of the world of drift nets that contravene the resolution,

Expressing concern also over reports of continued losses of seabirds, particularly albatrosses and petrels, as well as other marine species, including sharks, fin-fish species and marine turtles, as a result of incidental mortality in fishing operations, particularly longline fishing, and other activities, while recognizing considerable efforts to reduce by-catch in longline fishing by States and through various regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General, in particular its useful role in gathering and disseminating information on practices relating to the sustainable development of the world's living marine resources,

I

Achieving sustainable fisheries

1. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the marine living resources of the world's oceans and seas and the obligations of States to cooperate to this end, in accordance with international law, as reflected in the relevant provisions of the Convention, in particular the provisions on cooperation set out in Part V and Part VII, section 2, of the Convention, and where applicable, the Agreement;

2. Encourages States to give due priority to the implementation of the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in relation to achieving sustainable fisheries;

3. Urges States, either directly or through appropriate subregional, regional or global organizations or arrangements, to intensify efforts to assess and address, as appropriate, the impacts of global climate change on the sustainability of fish stocks and the habitats that support them;

4. Emphasizes the obligations of flag States to discharge their responsibilities, in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement, to ensure compliance by vessels flying their flag with the conservation and management measures adopted and in force with respect to fisheries resources on the high seas;

5. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention, which sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out, taking into account the relationship between the Convention and the Agreement;

6. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply widely, in accordance with international law and the Code, the precautionary approach and an ecosystem approach to the conservation, management and exploitation of fish stocks, including straddling fish stocks, highly migratory fish stocks and discrete high seas fish stocks, and also calls upon States parties to the Agreement to implement fully the provisions of article 6 of the Agreement as a matter of priority;

7. Encourages States to increase their reliance on scientific advice in developing, adopting and implementing conservation and management measures, and to increase their efforts to promote science for conservation and management measures that apply, in accordance with international law, the precautionary approach and an ecosystem approach to fisheries management, enhancing understanding of ecosystem approaches, in order to ensure the long-term conservation and sustainable use of marine living resources, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the Strategy for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Capture Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations as a framework for the improvement and understanding of fishery status and trends;

8. Calls upon all States, directly or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to apply stock-specific precautionary reference points, as described in Annex II to the Agreement and in the Code, to ensure that populations of harvested stocks, in particular straddling fish stocks, highly migratory fish stocks and discrete high seas fish stocks, and, where necessary, associated or dependent species, are maintained at, or restored to, sustainable levels, and to use these reference points for triggering conservation and management action;

9. Encourages States to apply the precautionary approach and an ecosystem approach in adopting and implementing conservation and management measures addressing, inter alia, by-catch, pollution, overfishing, and protecting habitats of specific concern, taking into account existing guidelines developed by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

10. Also encourages the ongoing development of observer programmes by regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to improve data collection on, inter alia, target and by-catch species, which could also assist monitoring, control and surveillance tools, and encourages States, both individually and collectively, where appropriate, to develop, fully implement, and, where necessary, continue to improve robust observer programmes, taking into account standards for such programmes developed by some regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

11. Calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to collect and, where appropriate, report to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations required catch and effort data, and fishery-related information, in a complete, accurate and timely way, including for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks within and beyond areas under national jurisdiction, discrete high seas fish stocks, and by-catch and discards; and, where they do not exist, to establish processes to strengthen data collection and reporting by members of regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, including through regular reviews of member compliance with such obligations, and, when such obligations are not met, require the member concerned to rectify the problem, including through the preparation of plans of action with timelines;

12. Invites States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to cooperate with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in the implementation and further development of the Fisheries Resources Monitoring System initiative;

13. Reaffirms paragraph 10 of resolution 61/105, and calls upon States, including through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to urgently adopt measures to fully implement the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks for directed and non-directed shark fisheries, based on the best available scientific information, through, inter alia, limits on catch or fishing effort, by requiring that vessels flying their flag collect and regularly report data on shark catches, including species-specific data, discards and landings, undertaking, including through international cooperation, comprehensive stock assessments of sharks, reducing shark by-catch and by-catch mortality, and, where scientific information is uncertain or inadequate, not increasing fishing effort in directed shark fisheries until measures have been established to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of shark stocks and to prevent further declines of vulnerable or threatened shark stocks;

14. Calls upon States to take immediate and concerted action to improve the implementation of and compliance with existing regional fisheries management organization or arrangement and national measures that regulate shark fisheries, in particular those measures which prohibit or restrict fisheries conducted solely for the purpose of harvesting shark fins, and, where necessary, to consider taking other measures, as appropriate, such as requiring that all sharks be landed with each fin naturally attached;

15. Requests the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to prepare a report containing a comprehensive analysis of the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Conservation and Management of Sharks, as well as progress in implementing paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 62/177, for presentation to the Committee on Fisheries at its twenty-eighth session, in 2009;

16. Urges States to eliminate barriers to trade in fish and fisheries products which are not consistent with their rights and obligations under the World Trade Organization agreements, taking into account the importance of the trade in fish and fisheries products, particularly for developing countries;

17. Urges States and relevant international and national organizations to provide for the participation of small-scale fishery stakeholders in related policy development and fisheries management strategies in order to achieve long-term sustainability for such fisheries, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources;

II

Implementation of the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks

18. Calls upon all States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, that have not done so to ratify or accede to the Agreement and in the interim to consider applying it provisionally;

19. Calls upon States parties to the Agreement to harmonize, as a matter of priority, their national legislation with the provisions of the Agreement, and to ensure that the provisions of the Agreement are effectively implemented into regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements of which they are a member;

20. Emphasizes the importance of those provisions of the Agreement relating to bilateral, subregional and regional cooperation in enforcement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

21. Calls upon all States to ensure that their vessels comply with the conservation and management measures that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in accordance with relevant provisions of the Convention and of the Agreement;

22. Urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4, thereof to inform, either directly or through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, all States whose vessels fish on the high seas in the same subregion or region of the form of identification issued by those States parties to officials duly authorized to carry out boarding and inspection functions in accordance with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

23. Also urges States parties to the Agreement, in accordance with article 21, paragraph 4 thereof, to designate an appropriate authority to receive notifications pursuant to article 21 and to give due publicity to such designation through the relevant subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement;

24. Invites regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements which have not yet done so to adopt procedures for high seas boarding and inspection that are consistent with articles 21 and 22 of the Agreement;

25. Calls upon States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with competence over discrete high seas fish stocks, to adopt the necessary measures to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of such stocks in accordance with the Convention and consistent with the Code and the general principles set forth in the Agreement;

26. Invites States to assist developing States in enhancing their participation in regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, including by facilitating access to fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, in accordance with article 25, paragraph 1, of the Agreement, taking into account the need to ensure that such access benefits the developing States concerned and their nationals;

27. Invites States and international financial institutions and organizations of the United Nations system to provide assistance according to Part VII of the Agreement, including, if appropriate, the development of special financial mechanisms or instruments to assist developing States, in particular the least developed among them and small island developing States, to enable them to develop their national capacity to exploit fishery resources, including developing their domestically flagged fishing fleet, value-added processing and the expansion of their economic base in the fishing industry, consistent with the duty to ensure the proper conservation and management of fisheries resources;

28. Encourages States, intergovernmental organizations, international financial institutions, national institutions and non-governmental organizations, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial contributions to the Assistance Fund established under Part VII of the Agreement;

29. Notes with satisfaction that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat have taken measures to publicize the availability of assistance through the Assistance Fund;

30. Encourages accelerated progress by States, individually and, as appropriate, through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review Conference on the Agreement, held in New York from 22 to 26 May 2006, and the identification of emerging priorities;

31. Recalls paragraph 16 of resolution 59/25, and requests the Secretary-General to resume the Review Conference, convened pursuant to article 36 of the Agreement, in New York for one week in the first part of 2010, with a view to assessing the effectiveness of the Agreement in securing the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, and to render the necessary assistance and provide such services as may be required for the resumption of the Review Conference;

32. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the resumed Review Conference an updated comprehensive report, prepared in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to assist the Conference in discharging its mandate under article 36, paragraph 2, of the Agreement;

33. Recalls paragraph 6 of resolution 56/13, and requests the Secretary-General to convene in 2009, in accordance with past practice, an eighth round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement for a duration of at least four days, to consider, inter alia, promoting a wider participation in the Agreement through a continuing dialogue, in particular with developing States, and initial preparatory work for the resumption of the Review Conference, and to make any appropriate recommendations to the General Assembly;

34. Requests the Secretary-General to invite States, and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement, not parties to the Agreement, as well as the United Nations Development Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, the Commission on Sustainable Development, the World Bank, the Global Environment Facility and other relevant international financial institutions, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, other fisheries bodies, other relevant intergovernmental bodies and relevant non-governmental organizations, in accordance with past practice, to attend the eighth round of informal consultations of States parties to the Agreement as observers;

35. Reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations initiate arrangements with States for the collection and dissemination of data on fishing in the high seas by vessels flying their flag at the subregional and regional levels where no such arrangements exist;

36. Also reaffirms its request that the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations revise its global fisheries statistics database to provide information on straddling fish stocks, highly migratory fish stocks and discrete high seas fish stocks on the basis of where the catch is taken;

III

Related fisheries instruments

37. Emphasizes the importance of the effective implementation of the provisions of the Compliance Agreement, and urges continued efforts in this regard;

38. Calls upon all States and other entities referred to in article X, paragraph 1, of the Compliance Agreement that have not yet become parties to that Agreement to do so as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to consider applying it provisionally;

39. Urges States and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to implement and promote the application of the Code within their areas of competence;

40. Urges States to develop and implement, as a matter of priority, national and, as appropriate, regional plans of action to put into effect the international plans of action of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

41. Welcomes the adoption by the Technical Consultation, convened by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, in Rome from 25 to 29 August 2008, of the International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-sea Fisheries in the High Seas, as requested in paragraph 89 of resolution 61/105, which include standards and criteria for use by States and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in identifying vulnerable marine ecosystems in areas beyond national jurisdiction and the impacts of fishing on such ecosystems and in establishing standards for the management of deep sea fisheries in order to facilitate the adoption and the implementation of conservation and management measures pursuant to paragraphs 83 and 86 of resolution 61/105, and calls upon States and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, as appropriate, to implement those Guidelines;

IV

Illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing

42. Emphasizes once again its serious concern that illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing remains one of the greatest threats to marine ecosystems and continues to have serious and major implications for the conservation and management of ocean resources, and renews its call upon States to comply fully with all existing obligations and to combat such fishing and urgently to take all necessary steps to implement the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

43. Urges States to exercise effective control over their nationals, including beneficial owners, and vessels flying their flag, in order to prevent and deter them from engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities or supporting vessels engaging in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, including those vessels listed by regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements as engaged in those activities, and to facilitate mutual assistance to ensure that such actions can be investigated and proper sanctions imposed;

44. Also urges States to take effective measures, at the national, regional and global levels, to deter the activities, including illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, of any vessel which undermines conservation and management measures that have been adopted by subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in accordance with international law;

45. Calls upon States not to permit vessels flying their flag to engage in fishing on the high seas or in areas under the national jurisdiction of other States, unless duly authorized by the authorities of the States concerned and in accordance with the conditions set out in the authorization, and to take specific measures, including deterring the reflagging of vessels by their nationals, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Convention, the Agreement and the Compliance Agreement, to control fishing operations by vessels flying their flag;

46. Recalls its resolution 62/177, in which it invited the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, as requested by the Committee on Fisheries at its twenty-seventh session, to further consider the possibility of convening an expert consultation to develop criteria for assessing the performance of flag States, encourages the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to convene such an expert consultation as early as possible in 2009 and also to consider the possibility of further work on this issue, and calls upon States to support this important initiative, noting the preparatory work conducted by an expert workshop on flag State responsibilities, held in Vancouver, Canada, from 25 to 28 March 2008;

47. Urges States, individually and collectively through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop appropriate processes to assess the performance of States with respect to implementing the obligations regarding fishing vessels flying their flag set out in relevant international instruments;

48. Reaffirms the need to strengthen, where necessary, the international legal framework for intergovernmental cooperation, in particular at the subregional and regional levels, in the management of fish stocks and in combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, in a manner consistent with international law, and for States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to collaborate in efforts to address these types of fishing activities;

49. Encourages regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to further coordinate measures for combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, such as through the development of a common list of vessels identified as engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing or the mutual recognition of the illegal, unreported and unregulated vessel lists established by each organization or arrangement;

50. Reaffirms its call upon States to take all necessary measures consistent with international law, without prejudice to a State's sovereignty over ports in its territory and to reasons of force majeure or distress, including the prohibition of vessels from accessing their ports followed by a report to the flag State concerned, when there is clear evidence that they are or have been engaged in or have supported illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, or when they refuse to give information either on the origin of the catch or on the authorization under which the catch has been made;

51. Urges enhanced action consistent with international law, including cooperation and coordination, to eliminate illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing by vessels flying "flags of convenience", to require that a "genuine link" be established between States and fishing vessels flying their flags, and to clarify the role of the “genuine link” in relation to the duty of States to exercise effective control over such vessels, and calls upon States to implement the 2005 Rome Declaration on Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing as a matter of priority;

52. Recognizes the need for enhanced port State measures to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, and urges States to cooperate, in particular at the regional level and through subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt all necessary port measures, consistent with international law taking into account article 23 of the Agreement, particularly those identified in the Model Scheme on Port State Measures to Combat Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, adopted by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in 2005, and to promote the development and application of minimum standards at the regional level;

53. Welcomes the intergovernmental Technical Consultation, held by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in Rome from 23 to 27 June 2008 to develop a legally binding instrument on minimum standards for port State measures, based on the Model Scheme on Port State Measures to Combat Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing and the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing, and encourages all relevant States to participate in the resumed session of the Technical Consultation, to be held in Rome from 26 to 30 January 2009, with a view to presenting the finalized text of the instrument to the Committee on Fisheries at its twenty-eighth session, in 2009;

54. Encourages strengthened collaboration between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Maritime Organization, taking into account the respective competencies, mandates and experience of the two organizations, to combat illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing, particularly in improving the implementation of flag State responsibilities and port State measures;

55. Encourages States, with respect to vessels flying their flag, and port States, to make every effort to share data on landings and catch quotas, and in this regard encourages regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements to consider developing open databases containing such data for the purpose of enhancing the effectiveness of fisheries management;

56. Calls upon States to take all necessary measures to ensure that vessels flying their flag do not engage in transshipment of fish caught by fishing vessels engaged in illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

57. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to adopt and implement internationally agreed market-related measures in accordance with international law, including principles, rights and obligations established in World Trade Organization agreements, as called for in the International Plan of Action to Prevent, Deter and Eliminate Illegal, Unreported and Unregulated Fishing;

58. Welcomes the adoption of the Technical Guidelines for Responsible Fish Trade by the Sub-Committee on Fish Trade of the Committee on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations at its eleventh session, held in Bremen, Germany, from 2 to 6 June 2008, notes the discussion in the Sub-Committee on Fish Trade regarding emerging market- and trade-related measures, and encourages information-sharing by States and other relevant actors in this regard with appropriate international and regional forums, consistent with the established plan of work of the Committee on Fisheries and given the potential implications of these measures for all States;

59. Notes the concerns about possible connections between international organized crime and illegal fishing in certain regions of the world, and encourages States, including through the appropriate international forums and organizations, to study the causes and methods of and contributing factors to illegal fishing to increase knowledge and understanding of those possible connections, and to make the findings publicly available, bearing in mind the distinct legal regimes and remedies under international law applicable to illegal fishing and international organized crime;

V

Monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement

60. Calls upon States, in accordance with international law, to strengthen implementation of or, where they do not exist, adopt comprehensive monitoring, control and surveillance measures and compliance and enforcement schemes individually and within those regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in which they participate, in order to provide an appropriate framework for promoting compliance with agreed conservation and management measures, and further urges enhanced coordination among all relevant States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in these efforts;

61. Encourages further work by competent international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to develop guidelines on flag State control of fishing vessels;

62. Urges States, individually and through relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to establish mandatory vessel monitoring, control and surveillance systems, in particular to require that vessel monitoring systems be carried by all vessels fishing on the high seas as soon as practicable, and in the case of large-scale fishing vessels no later than December 2008, and to share information on fisheries enforcement matters;

63. Calls upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to strengthen or establish, consistent with national and international law, positive or negative lists of vessels fishing within the areas covered by relevant regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in order to verify compliance with conservation and management measures and identify products from illegal, unreported and unregulated catches, and encourages improved coordination among all parties and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in sharing and using this information, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

64. Requests States and relevant international bodies to develop, in accordance with international law, more effective measures to trace fish and fishery products to enable importing States to identify fish or fishery products caught in a manner that undermines international conservation and management measures agreed in accordance with international law, taking into account the special requirements of developing States and the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement, and at the same time to recognize the importance of market access, in accordance with provisions 11.2.4, 11.2.5 and 11.2.6 of the Code, for fish and fishery products caught in a manner that is in conformity with such international measures;

65. Requests States to take the necessary measures, consistent with international law, to help to prevent fish and fishery products caught in a manner that undermines applicable conservation and management measures adopted in accordance with international law from entering international trade;

66. Encourages States to establish and undertake cooperative surveillance and enforcement activities in accordance with international law to strengthen and enhance efforts to ensure compliance with conservation and management measures, and prevent and deter illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

67. Urges States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to develop and adopt effective monitoring, control and surveillance measures for trans-shipment, as appropriate, in particular at-sea trans-shipment, in order to, inter alia, monitor compliance, collect and verify fisheries data, and to prevent and suppress illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing activities, in accordance with international law; and, in parallel, to encourage and support the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in studying the current practices of trans-shipment as it relates to fishing operations for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks and produce a set of guidelines for this purpose;

68. Expresses its appreciation for financial contributions from States to improve the capacity of the existing voluntary International Monitoring, Control and Surveillance Network for Fisheries-Related Activities, and encourages States to join and actively participate in the Network and to consider supporting, when appropriate, its transformation in accordance with international law into an international unit with dedicated resources to further assist Network members, taking into account the forms of cooperation with developing States as set out in article 25 of the Agreement;

VI

Fishing overcapacity

69. Calls upon States to commit themselves to urgently reducing the capacity of the world's fishing fleets to levels commensurate with the sustainability of fish stocks, through the establishment of target levels and plans or other appropriate mechanisms for ongoing capacity assessment, while avoiding the transfer of fishing capacity to other fisheries or areas in a manner that undermines the sustainable management of fish stocks, including, inter alia, those areas where fish stocks are overexploited or in a depleted condition, and recognizing in this context the legitimate rights of developing States to develop their fisheries for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks consistent with article 25 of the Agreement, article 5 of the Code, and paragraph 10 of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity;

70. Also calls upon States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to ensure that the urgent actions required in the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity are undertaken expeditiously and that its implementation is facilitated without delay;

71. Requests the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to report on the state of progress in the implementation of the International Plan of Action for the Management of Fishing Capacity, as provided for in paragraph 48 of the Plan of Action;

72. Encourages those States which are cooperating to establish subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, taking into account the best scientific information available as well as the precautionary approach, to exercise voluntary restraint of fishing effort levels in those areas that will come under the regulation of the future organizations and arrangements until adequate regional conservation and management measures are adopted and implemented, taking into account the need to ensure the long-term conservation, management and sustainable use of the relevant fish stocks and to prevent significant adverse impacts on vulnerable marine ecosystems;

73. Urges States to eliminate subsidies that contribute to illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing and to overfishing and overcapacity, while completing the efforts undertaken at the World Trade Organization in accordance with the Doha Declaration to clarify and improve its disciplines on fisheries subsidies, taking into account the importance of this sector, including small-scale and artisanal fisheries and aquaculture, to developing countries;

VII

Large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing

74. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to continued compliance with its resolution 46/215 and other subsequent resolutions on large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing, and urges States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to enforce fully the measures recommended in those resolutions in order to eliminate the use of large-scale pelagic drift nets;

VIII

Fisheries by-catch and discards

75. Urges States, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations that have not done so to take action, including with consideration of the interests of developing coastal States and, as appropriate, subsistence fishing communities, to reduce or eliminate by-catch, catch by lost or abandoned gear, fish discards and post-harvest losses, including juvenile fish, consistent with international law and relevant international instruments, including the Code, and in particular to consider measures including, as appropriate, technical measures related to fish size, mesh size or gear, discards, closed seasons and areas and zones reserved for selected fisheries, particularly artisanal fisheries, the establishment of mechanisms for communicating information on areas of high concentration of juvenile fish, taking into account the importance of ensuring the confidentiality of such information, and support for studies and research that will reduce or eliminate by-catch of juvenile fish, and to ensure that these measures are implemented so as to optimize their effectiveness;

76. Encourages States to consider the development of standards for reducing or eliminating discards, such as through the development of an international plan of action, at the twenty-eighth session of the Committee on Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations;

77. Encourages States and entities referred to in the Convention and in article 1, paragraph 2 (b), of the Agreement to give due consideration to participation, as appropriate, in subregional and regional instruments and organizations with mandates to conserve non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations;

78. Encourages States to strengthen, if necessary, the capacity of those subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate to ensure the adequate conservation of non-target species taken incidentally in fishing operations, taking into consideration best practices for non-target species management, and to expedite their ongoing efforts in this regard;

79. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to urgently implement, as appropriate, the measures recommended in the Guidelines to Reduce Sea Turtle Mortality in Fishing Operations and the International Plan of Action for Reducing Incidental Catch of Seabirds in Longline Fisheries of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in order to prevent the decline of sea turtles and seabird populations by minimizing by-catch and increasing post-release survival in their fisheries, including through research and development of gear and bait alternatives, promoting the use of available by-catch mitigation technology, and establishing and strengthening data-collection programmes to obtain standardized information to develop reliable estimates of the by-catch of these species;

Subregional and regional cooperation

80. Urges coastal States and States fishing on the high seas, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and other relevant instruments, to pursue cooperation in relation to straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, either directly or through appropriate subregional or regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, to ensure the effective conservation and management of such stocks;

81. Urges States fishing for straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks on the high seas, and relevant coastal States, where a subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement has the competence to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to give effect to their duty to cooperate by becoming members of such an organization or participants in such an arrangement, or by agreeing to apply the conservation and management measures established by such an organization or arrangement, or to otherwise ensure that no vessel flying their flag is authorized to access the fisheries resources to which regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements or conservation and management measures established by such organizations or arrangements apply;

82. Invites, in this regard, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to ensure that all States having a real interest in the fisheries concerned may become members of such organizations or participants in such arrangements, in accordance with the Convention, the Agreement and the Code;

83. Encourages relevant coastal States and States fishing on the high seas for a straddling fish stock or a highly migratory fish stock, where there is no subregional or regional fisheries management organization or arrangement to establish conservation and management measures for such stocks, to cooperate to establish such an organization or enter into another appropriate arrangement to ensure the conservation and management of such stocks, and to participate in the work of the organization or arrangement;

84. Urges all signatory States and other States whose vessels fish within the area of the Convention on the Conservation and Management of Fishery Resources in the South-East Atlantic Ocean for fishery resources covered by that Convention to become parties to that Convention as a matter of priority and, in the interim, to ensure that vessels flying their flags fully comply with the measures adopted;

85. Encourages signatory States and States having a real interest to become parties to the South Indian Ocean Fisheries Agreement, and urges those States to agree on and implement interim measures, including measures in accordance with resolution 61/105, to ensure the conservation and management of the fisheries resources and their marine ecosystems and habitats in the area to which that Agreement applies until such time as that Agreement enters into force;

86. Takes note of recent efforts at the regional level to promote responsible fishing practices, including combating illegal, unreported and unregulated fishing;

87. Notes with satisfaction the progress of negotiations to establish subregional and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in several fisheries, in particular in the North-West Pacific and the South Pacific, encourages States having a real interest to participate in such negotiations, urges participants to expedite those negotiations and to apply provisions of the Convention and the Agreement to their work, and encourages those participants to implement fully the voluntary interim conservation and management measures adopted in accordance with resolution 61/105;

88. Takes note of the ongoing efforts of the members of the Indian Ocean Tuna Commission to strengthen the functioning of the Commission so that it can more effectively discharge its mandate, and requests the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue to provide members of the Commission with the necessary assistance to this end;

89. Urges further efforts by regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, as a matter of priority, in accordance with international law, to strengthen and modernize their mandates and the measures adopted by such organizations or arrangements, and to implement modern approaches to fisheries management, as reflected in the Agreement and other relevant international instruments, relying on the best scientific information available and application of the precautionary approach and incorporating an ecosystem approach to fisheries management and biodiversity considerations, where these aspects are lacking, to ensure that they effectively contribute to long-term conservation and management and sustainable use of marine living resources;

90. Calls upon regional fisheries management organizations with the competence to conserve and manage highly migratory fish stocks that have not yet adopted effective conservation and management measures in line with the best scientific information available to conserve and manage stocks falling under their mandate to do so urgently;

91. Urges States to strengthen and enhance cooperation among existing and developing regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in which they participate, including increased communication and further coordination of measures, such as through the holding of joint consultations, and to strengthen integration, coordination and cooperation by such regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements with other relevant fisheries organizations, regional seas arrangements and other relevant international organizations;

92. Welcomes the meeting to be held in 2009 of the members, cooperating members and non-members of the five tuna regional fisheries management organizations to review progress and discuss ways to expedite the implementation of, and build upon, the agreed Course of Actions adopted in Kobe, Japan, in January 2007;

93. Urges regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to improve transparency and to ensure that their decision-making processes are fair and transparent, rely on the best scientific information available, incorporate the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, address participatory rights, including through, inter alia, the development of transparent criteria for allocating fishing opportunities which reflects, where appropriate, the relevant provisions of the Agreement, taking due account, inter alia, of the status of the relevant stocks and the respective interests in the fishery;

94. Welcomes the progress made by some regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to initiate performance reviews, and the fact that the Commission for the Conservation of Southern Bluefin Tuna, the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas and the North East Atlantic Fisheries Commission, as well as the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, have completed performance reviews, and urges States, through their participation in regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements that have not done so, to undertake, on an urgent basis, performance reviews of those regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, initiated either by the organization or arrangement itself or with external partners, including in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, using transparent criteria based on the provisions of the Agreement and other relevant instruments, and taking into account the best practices of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements and, as appropriate, any set of criteria developed by States or other regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements, and encourages that such performance reviews include some element of independent evaluation and propose means for improving the functioning of the regional fisheries management organization or arrangement, as appropriate;

95. Encourages regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to make the results of those performance reviews publicly available and to discuss the results jointly;

96. Urges States to cooperate, taking into account those performance reviews, to develop best practice guidelines for regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and to apply, to the extent possible, those guidelines to organizations and arrangements in which they participate;

97. Encourages the development of regional guidelines for States to use in establishing sanctions for non-compliance by vessels flying their flag and by their nationals, to be applied in accordance with national law, that are adequate in severity for effectively securing compliance, deterring further violations and depriving offenders of the benefits deriving from their illegal activities, as well as in evaluating their systems of sanctions to ensure that they are effective in securing compliance and deterring violations;

X

Responsible fisheries in the marine ecosystem

98. Encourages States to apply by 2010 the ecosystem approach, in accordance with paragraph 30 (d) of the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation;

99. Also encourages States, individually or through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant international organizations, to work to ensure that fisheries and other ecosystem data collection is performed in a coordinated and integrated manner, facilitating incorporation into global observation initiatives, where appropriate;

100. Further encourages States to increase scientific research in accordance with international law on the marine ecosystem;

101. Calls upon States, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and other specialized agencies, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, where appropriate, and other appropriate intergovernmental bodies, to cooperate in achieving sustainable aquaculture, including through information exchange, developing equivalent standards on such issues as aquatic animal health and human health and safety concerns, assessing the potential positive and negative impacts of aquaculture, including socio-economics, on the marine and coastal environment, including biodiversity, and adopting relevant methods and techniques to minimize and mitigate adverse effects, and in this regard encourages the implementation of the Strategy and Outline Plan for Improving Information on Status and Trends of Aquaculture of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, as a framework for the improvement and understanding of aquaculture status and trends;

102. Calls upon States to take action immediately, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, and consistent with the precautionary approach and ecosystem approaches, and urges the implementation of the International Guidelines for the Management of Deep-sea Fisheries in the High Seas of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in order to sustainably manage fish stocks and protect vulnerable marine ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals, from destructive fishing practices, recognizing the immense importance and value of deep sea ecosystems and the biodiversity they contain;

103. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to paragraphs 83 to 91 of resolution 61/105 addressing the impacts of bottom fishing on vulnerable marine ecosystems and the urgent actions called for in that resolution;

104. Recalls that nothing in paragraphs 83 to 86 of resolution 61/105 is to prejudice the sovereign rights of coastal States over their continental shelf or the exercise of the jurisdiction of coastal States with regard to that shelf under international law as reflected in the Convention;

105. Welcomes the further progress in regulating bottom fisheries in accordance with resolution 61/105 by the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources, the General Fisheries Commission for the Mediterranean, the North East Atlantic Fisheries Commission, the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization and the South-East Atlantic Fisheries Organization, and by the participants in negotiations to establish subregional and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in the North-West Pacific and the South Pacific, as well as by States in respect of vessels flying their flag conducting bottom fisheries in areas beyond national jurisdiction where there is no regional fisheries management organization or arrangement competent to regulate such fisheries or for which no multilateral interim measures to this end have been adopted;

106. Urges States, including States participating in negotiations to establish new regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements with the competence to regulate bottom fisheries, and regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements with the competence to regulate bottom fisheries, to continue, and expedite where necessary, their efforts to fully and effectively implement measures in accordance with paragraphs 80 and 83 to 87 of resolution 61/105;

107. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on the actions taken by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to give effect to paragraphs 83 to 90 of resolution 61/105, in order to facilitate the further review of progress on actions taken, referred to in paragraph 91 of that resolution, with a view to further recommendations, where necessary;

108. Requests States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements to submit detailed information to the Secretary-General in a timely manner on actions taken pursuant to paragraphs 83 to 90 of resolution 61/105 to facilitate a further review of such actions;

109. Encourages accelerated progress to establish criteria on the objectives and management of marine protected areas for fisheries purposes, and in this regard welcomes the proposed work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to develop technical guidelines in accordance with the Convention and the Code on the design, implementation and testing of marine protected areas for such purposes, and urges coordination and cooperation among all relevant international organizations and bodies;

110. Urges all States to implement the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to accelerate activity to safeguard the marine ecosystem, including fish stocks, against pollution and physical degradation;

111. Reaffirms the importance it attaches to paragraphs 77 to 81 of resolution 60/31 concerning the issue of lost, abandoned, or discarded fishing gear and related marine debris and the adverse impacts such debris and derelict fishing gear have on, inter alia, fish stocks, habitats and other marine species, and urges accelerated progress by States and regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements in implementing those paragraphs of the resolution;

XI

Capacity-building

112. Reiterates the crucial importance of cooperation by States directly or, as appropriate, through the relevant subregional and regional organizations, and by other international organizations, including the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations through its FishCode programme, including through financial and/or technical assistance, in accordance with the Agreement, the Compliance Agreement, the Code and its associated international plans of action, to increase the capacity of developing States to achieve the goals and implement the actions called for in the present resolution;

113. Welcomes the work of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in developing guidance on the strategies and measures required for the creation of an enabling environment for small-scale fisheries, including the development of a code of conduct and guidelines for enhancing the contribution of small-scale fisheries to poverty alleviation and food security that include adequate provisions with regard to financial measures and capacity-building, including transfer of technology, and encourages studies for creating possible alternative livelihoods for coastal communities;

114. Encourages increased capacity-building and technical assistance by States, international financial institutions and relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies for fishers, in particular small-scale fishers, in developing countries, and in particular small island developing States, consistent with environmental sustainability;

115. Encourages the international community to enhance the opportunities for sustainable development in developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, small island developing States and coastal African States, by encouraging greater participation of those States in authorized fisheries activities being undertaken within areas under their national jurisdiction, in accordance with the Convention, by distant-water fishing nations in order to achieve better economic returns for developing countries from their fisheries resources within areas under their national jurisdiction and an enhanced role in regional fisheries management, as well as by enhancing the ability of developing countries to develop their own fisheries, as well as to participate in high seas fisheries, including access to such fisheries, in conformity with international law, in particular the Convention and the Agreement, and taking into account article 5 of the Code;

116. Requests distant-water fishing nations, when negotiating access agreements and arrangements with developing coastal States, to do so on an equitable and sustainable basis, including by giving greater attention to fish processing and fish-processing facilities within the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State to assist the realization of the benefits from the development of fisheries resources, and also the transfer of technology and assistance for monitoring, control and surveillance and compliance and enforcement within areas under the national jurisdiction of the developing coastal State providing fisheries access, taking into account the forms of cooperation set out in article 25 of the Agreement and article 5 of the Code;

117. Encourages States, individually and through regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements, to provide greater assistance and to promote coherence in such assistance for developing States in designing, establishing and implementing relevant agreements, instruments and tools for the conservation and sustainable management of fish stocks, including in designing and strengthening their domestic regulatory fisheries policies and those of regional fisheries management organizations or arrangements in their regions, and the enhancement of research and scientific capabilities through existing funds, such as the Assistance Fund under Part VII of the Agreement, bilateral assistance, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements assistance funds, the FishCode programme, the World Bank's global programme on fisheries and the Global Environment Facility;

118. Calls upon States to promote, through continuing dialogue and the assistance and cooperation provided in accordance with articles 24 to 26 of the Agreement, further ratification of or accession to the Agreement by seeking to address, inter alia, the issue of lack of capacity and resources that might stand in the way of developing States becoming parties;

119. Notes with satisfaction the efforts undertaken by the Secretary-General to gather information on assistance and resources available for developing States to assist them in becoming parties to the Agreement and in implementing the Agreement, and looks forward to the compilation and publication of this information for the use of States;

120. Encourages States, regional fisheries management organizations and arrangements and other relevant bodies to assist developing States in the implementation of the actions called for in paragraphs 83 to 91 of resolution 61/105;

XII

Cooperation within the United Nations system

121. Requests the relevant parts of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and donor agencies to support increased enforcement and compliance capabilities for regional fisheries management organizations and their member States;

122. Invites the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations to continue its cooperative arrangements with United Nations agencies on the implementation of the international plans of action and to report to the Secretary-General, for inclusion in his annual report on sustainable fisheries, on priorities for cooperation and coordination in this work;

XIII

Sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly

123. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of all members of the international community, relevant intergovernmental organizations, the organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, subregional and regional fisheries management organizations and relevant non-governmental organizations, and to invite them to provide the Secretary-General with information relevant to the implementation of the present resolution;

124. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments", taking into account information provided by States, relevant specialized agencies, in particular the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and other appropriate organs, organizations and programmes of the United Nations system, subregional and regional organizations and arrangements for the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks, as well as other relevant intergovernmental bodies and non-governmental organizations, and consisting, inter alia, of elements provided in relevant paragraphs in the present resolution;

125. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session, under the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea", the sub-item entitled "Sustainable fisheries, including through the 1995 Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks, and related instruments".

Institutions created by the Convention

International Seabed Authority

Through the International Seabed Authority, established by UNCLOS and the 1994 Implementation Agreement [YUN 1994, p. 1301], States organized and conducted exploration of the resources of the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction. In 2008, the Authority, which had 157 members as at 31 December, held its fourteenth session (Kingston, Jamaica, 26 May–6 June) [ISBA/14/A/1]. Its subsidiary bodies, namely, the Assembly, the Council, the Legal and Technical Commission and the Finance Committee, also met during the session.

The Assembly considered the annual report of the Authority's Secretary-General [ISBA/14/A/2], which reviewed the Authority's work since the thirteenth session and outlined the future work programme of the secretariat. The Authority continued to develop a geological model of polymetallic nodule deposits in the Clarion-Clipperton fracture zone (East Pacific Ocean), and planned to start work on a geological model of polymetallic nodule deposits in the Central Indian Ocean basin during 2009. The Authority remained the only international body with the responsibility of administering a global commons for the benefit of humankind, and its purpose was to encourage the orderly development of the resources of the deep seabed so that the international community as a whole might benefit from them.

The Authority had made significant progress in implementing the substantive tasks it identified in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1357]. The regulatory framework for prospecting and exploration for polymetallic nodules was completed in 2000 and significant progress was made in elaborating a similar regulatory framework for polymetallic sulphides and cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts. The Authority had also developed preliminary environmental guidelines for mineral exploration in the Area (the seabed and ocean floor and subsoil beyond the limits of national jurisdiction) and completed a resource assessment of the areas reserved for the Authority. One of the milestones for the Authority was to provide formal recognition of the claims of former registered pioneer investors, bringing them within the single regime created by the Convention and the 1994 Agreement.

As the incumbent Secretary-General, Satya N. Nandan, would end his term of office on 31 December, the Council proposed candidate Nii Alotey Odunton (Ghana) for election as Secretary-General. The Assembly elected Mr. Odunton on 5 June [ISBA/14/A/9], for a four-year term beginning on 1 January 2009.

The Legal and Technical Commission reported to the Council on its work during the fourteenth session [ISBA/14/C/8]. It requested the secretariat to prepare a more detailed report and analysis of actual and proposed financial expenditures reported by the eight contractors exploring for polymetallic nodules in the Area. The Commission noted that there was still a lack of raw data being provided by contractors despite repeated requests from both the Commission and the Secretary-General. With regard to the classification into nodule types, the Commission noted that there was no uniformity in classifications used by different contractors and suggested that it might be useful for contractors to collaborate on standardizing such classifications. It took note of the oral report on the progress on the geological model for the Clarion-

Clipperton Zone, and noted that the project was in the completion phase.

The Finance Committee held five meetings during the session [ISBA/14/A/7-ISBA/14/C/6] and recommended the approval of the proposed budget of the International Seabed Authority for the 2009–2010 financial period, amounting to $12,516,500, which the Assembly approved on 5 June.

Joint project. A report of the Secretary-General of the International Seabed Authority [A/AC.276/1] summarized the results of a joint project of the Authority with the J.M. Kaplan Fund to study biodiversity, species range and gene flow in the abyssal Pacific nodule province. The summary was prepared for the benefit of members of the Authority during the fourteenth session.

International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea

The International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea held its twenty-fifth (3–14 March) and twenty-sixth (24 September–7 October) sessions, both in Hamburg, Germany [SPLOS/191].

In the Case concerning the Conservation and Sustainable Exploitation of Swordfish Stocks in the South-Eastern Pacific Ocean (Chile/European Community), by letters dated 20 and 23 October, respectively, the European Community and Chile informed the Registrar that they had agreed on a draft text of a new "Understanding concerning the conservation of swordfish stocks in the South-Eastern Pacific Ocean." The purpose of the "Understanding" was to concur on a bilateral fisheries cooperation framework for swordfish that should enable both parties to agree on discontinuing the proceedings before the Special Chamber. The Special Chamber considered the request of the parties on 10 and 11 December, and on 11 December it extended the time limit for making preliminary objections until 1 January 2010, maintaining the rights of the parties to revive the proceedings at any time.

Devoting a substantial part of its two sessions to the consideration of legal and judicial matters, the Tribunal examined various legal issues of relevance to its jurisdiction, rules and judicial procedures, and exchanged views on recent developments concerning law of the sea issues.

Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf

In 2008, the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf, established in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 1362], held its twenty-first (17 March–18 April) [CLCS/58] and twenty-second (11 August–12 September) [CLCS/60] sessions, both in New York. Among other things, it examined submissions by States regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles.

At the twenty-first session, the Commission adopted recommendations on the limits of the continental shelf in regard to the submission made by Australia in 2004 [YUN 2005, p. 1434] on the proposed outer limits of its continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles. The Commission considered the submission made by New Zealand in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1555]; the joint submission, as well as a presentation, by France, Ireland, Spain and the United Kingdom; and submissions made by France, Mexico, and Norway. On 11 April, the Commission adopted its amended rules of procedure [CLCS/40/Rev.1].

At its twenty-second session, the Commission adopted recommendations on the limits of the continental shelf in regard to the submission made by New Zealand. The Commission continued to consider the joint submission made by France, Ireland, Spain and the United Kingdom, as well as submissions made by France, Mexico and Norway. It also examined submissions made by Barbados and the United Kingdom, but decided against establishing sub-commissions during the session.

Other developments related to the Convention

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/215 [YUN 2007, p. 1402], the Secretary-General submitted a March report, with a later addendum, on oceans and the law of the sea [A/63/63 & Add.1], detailing the status of UNCLOS and its implementing agreements, and reviewing developments regarding maritime space, security and safety, bodies established by UNCLOS, marine science and technology, conservation and management of marine fishery resources, marine biological diversity, and protection of the marine environment. The report also discussed matters relating to climate change, the settlement of disputes, international cooperation and coordination, and capacity-building activities.

Highlighting the importance of the oceans and seas for transportation, livelihood, food and a range of other ecosystem goods and services, the Secretary-General stated that all States shared in the benefits of safer and more secure oceans. The report also addressed major threats and challenges to maritime security and safety. While sustainable development of oceans and seas would ensure long-term human prosperity, the unsustainable use of the oceans, as well as the impact of human-induced climate change, would lead to the altering of oceans and seas, thereby affecting the environment, human well-being and economic development. The oceans played an essential role in the climate system, as ocean-climate coupling regulated and mitigated the exchange of heat, carbon and water within the Earth's systems. He stressed the need for international cooperation to enhance maritime security and safety. The sustainable use of marine resources and rational utilization of the oceans also required sustained international cooperation, including in the area of capacity-building. Priority needed to be given to the management of human activities that had an adverse impact on marine ecosystems, including their cumulative affect. Marine science programmes and technology played a vital role in that regard and required support.

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/222 [YUN 2006, p. 1557], the Secretary-General in September submitted a study [A/63/342] on the available assistance to and measures that could be taken by developing States, in particular the least developed States and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to realize the benefits of sustainable and effective development of marine resources and uses of the oceans within the limits of national jurisdiction. The study, which primarily focused on national measures, presented a list of proposed measures to be adopted by developing States. It also underscored that the benefits from the marine sector were substantially enhanced when bilateral, subregional and regional cooperation arrangements were in place.

Communications. By a February letter to the Secretary-General [A/62/697], Nicaragua highlighted the differences between Nicaragua and Colombia with respect to sovereignty over certain maritime spaces, islands and emerging areas located in the Caribbean Sea. Nicaragua had submitted that dispute to the International Court of Justice (ICJ) in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1195]. ICJ in 2007 had rendered its judgment on the preliminary objections by Colombia [YUN 2007, p. 1330]. In view of the Colombian authorities preventing Nicaraguan vessels from going to the east of the 82nd meridian, and a Colombian war frigate threatening the Nicaraguan fishing vessel "El Lady Dee III" in Nicaraguan waters, Nicaragua noted that the decisions of the ICJ should be treated as final and with utmost respect. Stating that Colombia's actions posed a threat to peace, Nicaragua stated that it would continue to exercise its rights in those maritime spaces for the benefit of its fishermen and other workers.

By a May letter [A/63/79 & Corr.1], the Co-Chairpersons of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, established by General Assembly resolution 59/24 [YUN 2004, p. 1333], reported to the Assembly on its meeting (New York, 28 April–2 May), which recognized the need to ensure that all human activities in areas beyond national jurisdiction were conducted in a sustainable manner, based upon the best available science and the precautionary and ecosystem approaches. A number of proposals at the meeting addressed the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction in the short, medium and longer term.

By a May note addressed to the Secretary-General and the Presidents of the General Assembly and the Security Council [A/62/841-S/2008/310], Canada, Denmark, Greece, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, the Republic of Korea and Spain stressed that piracy and armed robbery against commercial and humanitarian ships in the waters off Somalia posed a threat to the safety of international maritime traffic and international peace and security, and welcomed the ongoing initiative to protect the World Food Programme humanitarian convoys through the waters off Somalia, in effect since 2007. The Transitional Federal Government of Somalia, in a letter of 27 February addressed to the President of the Council, had requested immediate assistance in securing the international and territorial waters off the coast of Somalia for the safe conduct of shipping and navigation. The note stated that the Council initiatives under way to address the threat posed by piracy and armed robbery should be fully supported by Member States.

The International Convention on the Control of Harmful Anti-Fouling Systems on Ships of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) entered into force on 17 September. The treaty, adopted on 5 October 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 1426], banned the use of organotins and other harmful substances in anti-fouling paints used on ships' hulls.

On 2 June, by resolution 1816(2008), the Security Council unanimously condemned acts of piracy and armed robbery off Somalia's coast and authorized for six months "all necessary means" to repress such acts (see p. 286).

Marine environment: Global Marine Assessment

The third meeting [GRAME/GOE/3/2] of the Group of Experts for the start-up phase, "assessment of assessments", of the regular process for the global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, was held at the European Environment Agency headquarters (Copenhagen, 15–17 April). A preparatory meeting (4–5 March) was held at the same venue. The third meeting focused on preparing the first draft of the "assessment of assessments"; it agreed on the outlines for the report and assigned responsibilities to the members of the Group (see also p. 1167).

The fourth meeting [GRAME/GOE/4/1] of the Group of Experts for the "assessment of assessments" start-up phase was held at IMO headquarters (London, 4–6 November). A preparatory meeting (29 September–2 October) was held in Rome. The fourth meeting focused on finalizing the chapters of the report to be sent for government and expert peer-review.

The process was launched by General Assembly resolution 60/30 [YUN 2005, p. 1436], by which the Assembly established an Ad Hoc Steering Group and invited the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to jointly lead the process of, among other things, producing a report for the Assembly on the results of the "assessment of assessments". The initial phase of the process came to be known that way because the Group of Experts, set up in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1557], was asked to examine various existing marine assessments. The start-up phase represented the first step of an international initiative to improve understanding of the oceans and to develop a global mechanism for delivering science-based information to decision-makers and the public.

United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/215 [YUN 2007, p. 1402], the ninth meeting of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea (New York, 23–27 June) [A/63/174 & Corr.1] focused on maritime security and safety. At the meeting, various aspects of maritime security and safety were addressed at the plenary and in five panels. Participants also addressed inter-agency cooperation and coordination and recommended topics for further consideration, including oceans and sustainable development; integration of environmental, social and economic concerns; contribution of oceans to the achievement of internationally agreed sustainable development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals; and cooperation and coordination among flag, coastal and port States.

In a report on the treatment of persons rescued at sea [A/AC.259/17], the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees stressed that human rights and refugee law principles provided an important point of reference in handling rescue at sea situations involving irregular maritime migrants.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/111 [draft: A/63/L.42 & Add.1] by recorded vote (155-1-4) [agenda item 70 (a)].

Oceans and the law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 62/215 of 22 December 2007, and other relevant resolutions concerning the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ("the Convention"),

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General, the joint statement of the Co-Chairpersons of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction ("the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group") and also the reports on the work of the United Nations Open-ended Informal Consultative Process on Oceans and the Law of the Sea ("the Consultative Process") at its ninth meeting and on the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention,

Emphasizing the pre-eminent contribution provided by the Convention to the strengthening of peace, security, cooperation and friendly relations among all nations in conformity with the principles of justice and equal rights and to the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples of the world, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the United Nations as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, as well as to the sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Emphasizing also the universal and unified character of the Convention, and reaffirming that the Convention sets out the legal framework within which all activities in the oceans and seas must be carried out and is of strategic importance as the basis for national, regional and global action and cooperation in the marine sector, and that its integrity needs to be maintained, as recognized also by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development in chapter 17 of Agenda 21,

Recognizing the important contribution of sustainable development and management of the resources and uses of the oceans and seas to the achievement of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Conscious that the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole through an integrated, interdisciplinary and intersectoral approach, and reaffirming the need to improve cooperation and coordination at the national, regional and global levels, in accordance with the Convention, to support and supplement the efforts of each State in promoting the implementation and observance of the Convention, and the integrated management and sustainable development of the oceans and seas,

Reiterating the essential need for cooperation, including through capacity-building and transfer of marine technology, to ensure that all States, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, are able both to implement the Convention and to benefit from the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, as well as to participate fully in global and regional forums and processes dealing with oceans and law of the sea issues,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the ability of competent international organizations to contribute, at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels, through cooperation programmes with Governments, to the development of national capacity in marine science and the sustainable management of the oceans and their resources,

Recalling that marine science is important for eradicating poverty, contributing to food security, conserving the world's marine environment and resources, helping to understand, predict and respond to natural events and promoting the sustainable development of the oceans and seas, by improving knowledge, through sustained research efforts and the evaluation of monitoring results, and applying such knowledge to management and decision-making,

Recalling also its decision, in resolutions 57/141 of 12 December 2002 and 58/240 of 23 December 2003, to establish a regular process under the United Nations for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, both current and foreseeable, building on existing regional assessments, as recommended by the World Summit on Sustainable Development, and noting the need for cooperation among all States to this end,

Reiterating its concern at the adverse impacts on the marine environment and biodiversity, in particular on vulnerable marine ecosystems, including corals, of human activities, such as overutilization of living marine resources, the use of destructive practices, physical impacts by ships, the introduction of invasive alien species and marine pollution from all sources, including from land-based sources and vessels, in particular through the illegal and accidental discharge of oil and other harmful substances, the loss or release of fishing gear and the illegal or accidental release of hazardous waste such as radioactive materials, nuclear waste and dangerous chemicals,

Expressing deep concern over the adverse economic, social and environmental impacts of the physical alteration and destruction of marine habitats that may result from land-based and coastal development activities, in particular those land reclamation activities that are carried out in a manner that has a detrimental impact on the marine environment,

Reiterating its serious concern over the current and projected adverse effects of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity, and emphasizing the urgency of addressing this issue,

Expressing concern that climate change has increased the severity and incidence of coral bleaching throughout tropical seas over the past two decades and has weakened the ability of reefs to withstand ocean acidification, which could have serious and irreversible negative effects on marine organisms, particularly corals, as well as to withstand other pressures, including overfishing and pollution,

Reiterating its deep concern over the vulnerability of the environment and the fragile ecosystems of the polar regions, including the Arctic Ocean and the Arctic ice cap, particularly affected by the projected adverse effects of climate change,

Encouraging States to continue to contribute to the specific efforts deployed within the framework of the International Polar Year with the goal of enhancing the knowledge of the polar regions by strengthening scientific cooperation,

Recognizing that there is a need for a more integrated approach and to further study and promote measures for enhanced cooperation, coordination and collaboration relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biodiversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction,

Recognizing also that the realization of the benefits of the Convention could be enhanced by international cooperation, technical assistance and advanced scientific knowledge, as well as by funding and capacity-building,

Recognizing further that hydrographic surveys and nautical charting are critical to the safety of navigation and life at sea, environmental protection, including the protection of vulnerable marine ecosystems, and the economics of the global shipping industry, and recognizing in this regard that the move towards electronic charting not only provides significantly increased benefits for safe navigation and management of ship movement, but also provides data and information that can be used for sustainable fisheries activities and other sectoral uses of the marine environment, the delimitation of maritime boundaries and environmental protection,

Noting with concern the continuing problem of transnational organized crime committed at sea, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, and threats to maritime safety and security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, smuggling and terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, and noting the deplorable loss of life and adverse impact on international trade, energy security and the global economy resulting from such activities,

Noting the importance of the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and that it is in the broader interest of the international community that coastal States with a continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles submit information on the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles to the Commission on the Limits of the Continental Shelf ("the Commission"), noting also in this regard that several States have already made submissions to the Commission and that the Commission has made recommendations for a number of those States, and welcoming the fact that summaries of recommendations have been made publicly available,

Noting also that some States may face particular challenges in relation to preparing submissions to the Commission,

Noting further that financial and technical assistance may be sought by developing countries for activities in relation to preparing submissions to the Commission, including through the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 of 30 October 2000 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission for developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, and compliance with article 76 of the Convention, as well as other accessible international assistance,

Recognizing the important role for developing countries of the trust funds established by resolution 55/7 for the activities of the Commission, and noting with appreciation the recent contributions made to them,

Reaffirming the importance of the work of the Commission for coastal States and the international community as a whole,

Noting the important role of the Commission in assisting States parties in the implementation of Part VI of the Convention, through the examination of information submitted by coastal States regarding the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, and acknowledging in this regard the anticipated workload of the Commission owing to an increasing number of submissions, placing additional demands on its members and on the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat ("the Division"), and the need to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions under the Convention effectively and maintain its high level of quality and expertise,

Welcoming the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention regarding the workload of the Commission and the ability of States, particularly developing States, to fulfil the requirements of article 4 of annex II to the Convention, as well as the decision contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a),

Recognizing the importance and the contribution of the work over the past nine years of the Consultative Process established by resolution 54/33 of 24 November 1999 and extended by resolutions 57/141 and 60/30 of 29 November 2005 to facilitate the annual review of developments in ocean affairs by the General Assembly,

Noting the responsibilities of the Secretary-General under the Convention and related resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolutions 49/28 of 6 December 1994, 52/26 of 26 November 1997 and 54/33, and in this context the increase in activities of the Division, in particular in view of the growing number of requests to the Division for additional outputs and servicing of meetings, its increasing capacity-building activities, the need for enhanced support and assistance to the Commission and the role of the Division in inter-agency coordination and cooperation,

Emphasizing that underwater archaeological, cultural and historical heritage, including shipwrecks and watercrafts, holds essential information on the history of humankind and that such heritage is a resource that needs to be protected and preserved,

Reaffirming the importance of the work of the International Seabed Authority ("the Authority") in accordance with the Convention and the Agreement relating to the Implementation of Part XI of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 ("the Part XI Agreement"),

Reaffirming also the importance of the work of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea ("the Tribunal") in accordance with the Convention,

I

Implementation of the Convention and related agreements and instruments

1. Reaffirms its annual resolutions on the law of the sea and on oceans and the law of the sea, including resolution 62/215, and other relevant resolutions concerning the Convention;

2. Also reaffirms the unified character of the Convention and the vital importance of preserving its integrity;

3. Calls upon all States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

4. Calls upon States that have not done so, in order to achieve the goal of universal participation, to become parties to the Agreement for the Implementation of the Provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the Conservation and Management of Straddling Fish Stocks and Highly Migratory Fish Stocks ("the Fish Stocks Agreement");

5. Calls upon States to harmonize their national legislation with the provisions of the Convention and, where applicable, relevant agreements and instruments, to ensure the consistent application of those provisions and to ensure also that any declarations or statements that they have made or make when signing, ratifying or acceding to the Convention do not purport to exclude or to modify the legal effect of the provisions of the Convention in their application to the State concerned and to withdraw any such declarations or statements;

6. Calls upon States parties to the Convention to deposit with the Secretary-General charts or lists of geographical coordinates, as provided for in the Convention;

7. Urges all States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in taking measures to protect and preserve objects of an archaeological and historical nature found at sea, in conformity with the Convention, and calls upon States to work together on such diverse challenges and opportunities as the appropriate relationship between salvage law and scientific management and conservation of underwater cultural heritage, increasing technological abilities to discover and reach underwater sites, looting and growing underwater tourism;

8. Notes the forthcoming entry into force of the 2001 Convention on the Protection of the Underwater Cultural Heritage, and notes in particular the rules annexed thereto, which address the relationship between salvage law and scientific principles of management, conservation and protection of underwater cultural heritage among parties, their nationals and vessels flying their flag;

Capacity-building

9. Calls upon donor agencies and international financial institutions to keep their programmes systematically under review to ensure the availability in all States, particularly in developing States, of the economic, legal, navigational, scientific and technical skills necessary for the full implementation of the Convention and the objectives of the present resolution, as well as the sustainable development of the oceans and seas nationally, regionally and globally, and in so doing to bear in mind the interests and needs of landlocked developing States;

10. Encourages intensified efforts to build capacity for developing countries, in particular for the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to improve hydrographic services and the production of nautical charts, including electronic charts, as well as the mobilization of resources and building of capacity with support from international financial institutions and the donor community;

11. Calls upon States and international financial institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and technical partnerships, to continue to strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research by, inter alia, training personnel to develop and enhance relevant expertise, providing the necessary equipment, facilities and vessels and transferring environmentally sound technologies;

12. Also calls upon States and international financial institutions, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and technical partnerships, to strengthen capacity-building activities in developing countries, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, to develop their maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to promote effective compliance with, and implementation and enforcement of, their responsibilities under international law;

13. Recognizes the importance of the work of the International Maritime Law Institute of the International Maritime Organization as a centre of education and training of Government legal advisers, mainly from developing States, notes that the number of its graduates in more than 102 States confirms its effective capacity-building role in the field of international law, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and financial institutions to make voluntary financial contributions to the budget of the Institute;

14. Welcomes ongoing activities for capacity-building so as to address maritime security and safety needs and the protection of the marine environment of developing States, and encourages States and international financial institutions to provide additional funding for capacity-building programmes, including for transfer of technology, including through the International Maritime Organization and other competent international organizations;

15. Recognizes the considerable need to provide sustained capacity-building assistance, including on financial and technical aspects, by relevant international organizations and donors to developing States, with a view to further strengthening their capacity to take effective measures against the multiple facets of international criminal activities at sea, in line with the relevant international instruments, including the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols thereto;

16. Also recognizes the need to build the capacity of developing States to raise awareness of, and support the implementation of, improved waste management practices, noting the particular vulnerability of small island developing States to the impact of marine pollution from land-based sources and marine debris;

17. Further recognizes the importance of assisting developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, in implementing the Convention, and urges States, intergovernmental organizations and agencies, national institutions, non-governmental organizations and international financial institutions, as well as natural and juridical persons, to make voluntary financial or other contributions to the trust funds, as referred to in resolution 57/141, established for this purpose;

18. Encourages States to use the Criteria and Guidelines on the Transfer of Marine Technology adopted by the Assembly of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, and recalls the important role of the secretariat of that Commission in the implementation and promotion of the Criteria and Guidelines;

19. Calls upon States to assist developing States, and especially the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, at the bilateral and, where appropriate, multilateral levels, in the preparation of submissions to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, including the assessment of the nature and extent of the continental shelf of a coastal State through a desktop study, and the delineation of the outer limits of its continental shelf, as well as in the preparation of preliminary information to be submitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

20. Calls upon the Division to continue to disseminate information on relevant procedures related to the trust fund established for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to continue its dialogue with potential beneficiaries with a view to providing financial support to developing countries for activities to facilitate timely submissions to the Commission;

21. Notes with appreciation the successful conduct by the Division, in cooperation with States and relevant international organizations and institutions, of further sub-regional training courses in Trinidad and Tobago from 14 to 18 January 2008 and in Namibia from 15 September to 3 October 2008, the purpose of which was to train technical staff of coastal developing States in the delineation of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and in the preparation of submissions to the Commission, and requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with States and relevant international organizations and institutions, to continue to support training activities to assist developing States in the preparation of their submissions to the Commission;

22. Also notes with appreciation the development by the Division of a training manual on developing and implementing ecosystem approaches to the management of ocean-related activities and the successful delivery, in cooperation with the United Nations Environment Programme under the TRAIN-SEA-COAST Programme, of the first regional training workshop on "Ecosystem approaches to coastal and ocean management: focus on ecosystem-based management in Eastern Africa", in Mombasa, Kenya, from 27 October to 1 November 2008;

23. Further notes with appreciation the regional workshop of the Tribunal, held in Buenos Aires from 26 to 28 May 2008, on the role of the Tribunal in the settlement of disputes relating to the law of the sea;

24. Invites Member States and others in a position to do so to support the capacity-building activities of the Division, including, in particular, the training activities to assist developing States in the preparation of their submissions to the Commission, and invites Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the trust fund established by the Secretary-General for the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat to support the promotion of international law;

25. Recognizes the importance of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, expresses its serious concern regarding the lack of resources, which is preventing the implementation of the twenty-second and future awards, advises the Secretary-General to continue to finance the Fellowship from resources made available through an appropriate Office of Legal Affairs trust fund, and urges Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute to the further development of the Fellowship;

26. Takes note with satisfaction of the ongoing implementation of the United Nations and the Nippon Foundation Fellowship Programme, focusing on human resources development for developing coastal States parties and non-parties to the Convention in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea or related disciplines;

III

Meeting of States Parties

27. Welcomes the report of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention;

28. Requests the Secretary-General to convene the nineteenth Meeting of States Parties in New York, from 22 to 26 June 2009, and to provide the services required;

IV

Peaceful settlement of disputes

29. Notes with satisfaction the continued and significant contribution of the Tribunal to the settlement of disputes by peaceful means in accordance with Part XV of the Convention, and underlines the important role and authority of the Tribunal concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement;

30. Equally pays tribute to the important and long-standing role of the International Court of Justice with regard to the peaceful settlement of disputes concerning the law of the sea;

31. Notes that States parties to an international agreement related to the purposes of the Convention may submit to, inter alia, the Tribunal or the International Court of Justice any dispute concerning the interpretation or application of that agreement submitted in accordance with that agreement, and notes also the possibility, provided for in the statutes of the Tribunal and the Court, to submit disputes to a chamber;

32. Encourages States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to consider making a written declaration choosing from the means set out in article 287 of the Convention for the settlement of disputes concerning the interpretation or application of the Convention and the Part XI Agreement, bearing in mind the comprehensive character of the dispute settlement mechanism provided for in Part XV of the Convention;

V

The Area

33. Notes the progress made by the Authority in its deliberations, encourages the finalization of the regulations for prospecting and exploration for polymetallic sulphides as soon as possible and progress on the regulations for prospecting and exploration for cobalt-rich ferromanganese crusts in the Area, and reiterates the importance of the ongoing elaboration by the Authority, pursuant to article 145 of the Convention, of rules, regulations and procedures to ensure the effective protection of the marine environment, for, inter alia, the protection and conservation of the natural resources of the Area, and for the prevention of damage to the flora and fauna of the marine environment from harmful effects that may arise from activities in the Area;

34. Also notes the importance of the responsibilities entrusted to the Authority by articles 143 and 145 of the Convention, which refer to marine scientific research and protection of the marine environment, respectively;

VI

Effective functioning of the Authority and the Tribunal

35. Appeals to all States parties to the Convention to pay their assessed contributions to the Authority and to the Tribunal in full and on time, and also appeals to States parties in arrears with their contributions to fulfil their obligations without delay;

36. Urges all States parties to the Convention to attend the sessions of the Authority, and calls upon the Authority to continue to pursue all options, including making concrete recommendations on the issue of dates, in order to improve attendance in Kingston and to ensure global participation;

37. Calls upon States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Agreement on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal and to the Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Authority;

38. Emphasizes the importance of the Tribunal's rules and staff regulations promoting the recruitment of a geographically representative staff in the Professional and higher categories, and welcomes the actions taken by the Tribunal in observance of those rules and regulations;

VII

The continental shelf and the work of the Commission

39. Encourages States parties to the Convention to make every effort to submit information to the Commission regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, in conformity with article 76 of the Convention and article 4 of annex II to the Convention, taking into account the decision of the eleventh Meeting of States Parties to the Convention contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a);

40. Recognizes the decision of the eighteenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention that it is understood that the time period referred to in article 4 of annex II to the Convention and the decision contained in SPLOS/72, paragraph (a), may be satisfied by submitting to the Secretary-General preliminary information indicative of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and a description of the status of preparation and intended date of submission in accordance with the requirements of article 76 of the Convention and with the rules of procedure and the Scientific and Technical Guidelines of the Commission;

41. Notes with satisfaction the progress in the work of the Commission, that it is giving current consideration to a number of submissions that have been made regarding the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles and that a number of States have advised of their intention to make submissions in the near future;

42. Takes note of the recommendations made by the Commission on the submissions of a number of States, and welcomes the fact that summaries of recommendations have been made publicly available;

43. Notes that the anticipated heavy workload of the Commission, owing to an increasing number of submissions, places additional demands on its members and the Division, and in that regard emphasizes the need to ensure that the Commission can perform its functions efficiently and effectively and maintain its high level of quality and expertise;

44. Takes note of the decision of the seventeenth Meeting of States Parties to the Convention to continue to address, as a matter of priority, issues related to the workload of the Commission, including funding for its members attending the sessions of the Commission and the meetings of the subcommissions;

45. Calls upon States whose experts are serving on the Commission to do their utmost to ensure the full participation of those experts in the work of the Commission, including the meetings of subcommissions, in accordance with the Convention;

46. Requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures, including in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, to further strengthen the capacity of the Division, serving as the secretariat of the Commission, in order to adequately increase the Division's support and assistance to the Commission and its subcommissions, in their consideration of a growing number of submissions, as required by paragraph 9 of annex III to the rules of procedure of the Commission, and taking into account the need for simultaneous work on several submissions;

47. Urges the Secretary-General to continue to provide all necessary secretariat services to the Commission in accordance with article 2, paragraph 5, of annex II to the Convention;

48. Encourages States to make additional contributions to the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 for the purpose of facilitating the preparation of submissions to the Commission and to the voluntary trust fund also established by that resolution for the purpose of defraying the cost of participation of the members of the Commission from developing States in the meetings of the Commission;

49. Approves the convening by the Secretary-General of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth sessions of the Commission, in New York, from 2 March to 9 April 2009 and from 10 August to 11 September 2009, respectively, on the understanding that the following periods will be used for the technical examination of submissions at the Geographic Information System laboratories and other technical facilities of the Division: 2 to 20 March 2009; 6 to 9 April 2009; 10 to 21 August 2009; and 8 to 11 September 2009;

50. Expresses its firm conviction about the importance of the work of the Commission, carried out in accordance with the Convention, including with respect to the participation of coastal States in relevant proceedings concerning their submissions, and recognizes the continued need for active interaction between coastal States and the Commission;

51. Encourages States to continue exchanging views in order to increase understanding of issues, including expenditures involved, arising from the application of article 76 of the Convention, thus facilitating the preparation of submissions by States, in particular developing States, to the Commission;

52. Requests the Secretary-General, in cooperation with Member States, to continue supporting workshops or symposiums on scientific and technical aspects of the establishment of the outer limits of the continental shelf beyond 200 nautical miles, taking into account the need to strengthen capacity-building for developing countries in preparing their submissions;

VIII

Maritime safety and security and flag State implementation

53. Encourages States to ratify or accede to international agreements addressing the safety and security of navigation, as well as maritime labour, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with the Convention and other relevant international instruments aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements, and emphasizes the need for capacity-building for and assistance to developing States;

54. Recognizes that the legal regimes governing maritime security and maritime safety may have common and mutually reinforcing objectives that may be interrelated and could benefit from synergies, and encourages States to take this into account in their implementation;

55. Emphasizes that security and safety measures should be implemented with minimal negative effects on seafarers and fishers, especially in relation to their working conditions;

56. Invites all States to ratify or accede to the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006, the Work in Fishing Convention, 2007 (No. 188) and the Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention (Revised), 2003 (No. 185) of the International Labour Organization and to effectively implement those Conventions, and emphasizes the need to provide technical cooperation and assistance in that regard;

57. Emphasizes the need for further efforts to promote a culture of safety and security in the shipping industry and to address the shortage of adequately trained personnel, notes the importance of the process in the International Maritime Organization to review the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1973, and urges the establishment of more centres to provide the required education and training;

58. Welcomes ongoing cooperation among the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Maritime Organization and the International Labour Organization relating to the safety of fishers and fishing vessels, underlines the urgent need for continued work in that area, and takes note of discussions in the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations on the merit of an international plan of action in this area;

59. Notes the holding of the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal, and welcomes further cooperation with the International Maritime Organization on regulations on the prevention of pollution from ships;

60. Recalls that all actions taken to combat threats to maritime security must be in accordance with international law, including the principles embodied in the Charter and the Convention;

61. Recognizes the crucial role of international cooperation at the global, regional, subregional and bilateral levels in combating, in accordance with international law, threats to maritime security, including piracy, armed robbery at sea, terrorist acts against shipping, offshore installations and other maritime interests, through bilateral and multilateral instruments and mechanisms aimed at monitoring, preventing and responding to such threats, the enhanced sharing of information among States relevant to the detection, prevention and suppression of such threats, and the prosecution of offenders with due regard to national legislation, and the need for sustained capacity-building to support such objectives;

62. Emphasizes the importance of prompt reporting of incidents to enable accurate information on the scope of the problem of piracy and armed robbery against ships and, in the case of armed robbery against ships, by affected vessels to the coastal State, underlines the importance of effective information-sharing with States potentially affected by incidents of piracy and armed robbery against ships, and takes note of the important role of the International Maritime Organization;

63. Calls upon States to take appropriate steps under their national law to facilitate the apprehension and prosecution of those who are alleged to have committed acts of piracy;

64. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to actively combat piracy and armed robbery at sea by adopting measures, including those relating to assistance with capacity-building through training of seafarers, port staff and enforcement personnel in the prevention, reporting and investigation of incidents, bringing the alleged perpetrators to justice, in accordance with international law, and by adopting national legislation, as well as providing enforcement vessels and equipment and guarding against fraudulent ship registration;

65. Welcomes the significant decrease in the number of attacks by pirates and armed robbers in the Asian region through increased national, bilateral and trilateral initiatives as well as regional cooperative mechanisms, and calls upon other States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level on combating piracy and armed robbery against ships;

66. Expresses serious concern regarding the problem of increased instances of piracy and armed robbery at sea off the coast of Somalia, expresses alarm in particular at the recent hijacking of vessels, supports the recent efforts to address this problem at the global and regional levels, notes the adoption by the Security Council of resolutions 1816(2008) of 2 June 2008 and 1838(2008) of 7 October 2008 and also notes that the authorization in resolution 1816(2008) and the provisions in resolution 1838(2008) apply only to the situation in Somalia and do not affect the rights, obligations or responsibilities of Member States under international law, including any rights or obligations under the Convention, with respect to any other situation, and underscores in particular the fact that they are not to be considered as establishing customary international law;

67. Notes the initiatives of the Secretary-General of the International Maritime Organization, following up on resolution A.1002(25) adopted by the Assembly of the International Maritime Organization on 29 November 2007, to engage the international community in efforts to combat acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships sailing the waters off the coast of Somalia;

68. Urges States to ensure the full implementation of resolution A.1002(25) on acts of piracy and armed robbery against ships in waters off the coast of Somalia;

69. Calls upon States to become parties to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation and the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf, invites States to consider becoming parties to the 2005 Protocols amending those instruments, and urges States parties to take appropriate measures to ensure the effective implementation of those instruments through the adoption of legislation, where appropriate;

70. Also calls upon States to effectively implement the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code and the amendments to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, and to work with the International Maritime Organization to promote safe and secure shipping while ensuring freedom of navigation;

71. Urges all States, in cooperation with the International Maritime Organization, to improve the protection of offshore installations by adopting measures related to the prevention, reporting and investigation of acts of violence against installations, in accordance with international law, and by implementing such measures through national legislation to ensure proper and adequate enforcement;

72. Welcomes the progress in regional cooperation, including the Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur and Singapore Statements on Enhancement of Safety, Security and Environmental Protection in the Straits of Malacca and Singapore, adopted on 8 September 2005, 20 September 2006 and 6 September 2007, respectively, especially the formal establishment of the Cooperative Mechanism on safety of navigation and environmental protection to promote dialogue and facilitate close cooperation between the littoral States, user States, shipping industry and other stakeholders in line with article 43 of the Convention, and in implementing the Marine Electronic Highway Demonstration Project for the Straits of Malacca and Singapore, notes with appreciation the important role of the Information Sharing Centre of the Regional Cooperation Agreement on Combating Piracy and Armed Robbery against Ships in Asia, based in Singapore, and calls upon States to give immediate attention to adopting, concluding and implementing cooperation agreements at the regional level;

73. Recognizes that some transnational organized criminal activities threaten legitimate uses of the oceans and endanger the lives of people at sea;

74. Notes that transnational organized criminal activities are diverse and may be interrelated in some cases and that criminal organizations are adaptive and take advantage of the vulnerabilities of States, in particular coastal and small island developing States in transit areas, and calls upon States and relevant intergovernmental organizations to increase cooperation and coordination at all levels to detect and suppress the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons, in accordance with international law;

75. Recognizes the importance of enhancing international cooperation at all levels to fight transnational organized criminal activities, including illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, within the scope of the United Nations instruments against illicit drug trafficking, as well as the smuggling of migrants and trafficking in persons and criminal activities at sea falling within the scope of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime;

76. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and the Protocol to Prevent, Suppress and Punish Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, and to take appropriate measures to ensure their effective implementation;

77. Calls upon States to ensure freedom of navigation, the safety of navigation and the rights of transit passage, archipelagic sea lanes passage and innocent passage in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention;

78. Welcomes the work of the International Maritime Organization relating to the protection of shipping lanes of strategic importance and significance, and in particular in enhancing safety, security and environmental protection in straits used for international navigation, and calls upon the International Maritime Organization, States bordering straits and user States to continue their cooperation to keep such straits safe, secure and environmentally protected and open to international navigation at all times, consistent with international law, in particular the Convention;

79. Calls upon user States and States bordering straits used for international navigation to continue to cooperate by agreement on matters relating to navigational safety, including safety aids for navigation, and the prevention, reduction and control of pollution from ships, and welcomes developments in this regard;

80. Takes note of the adoption of the Code of International Standards and Recommended Practices for a Safety Investigation into a Marine Casualty or Marine Incident, which will take effect on 1 January 2010 upon the entry into force of the amendments to regulation XI-1/6 of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974;

81. Calls upon States to consider becoming members of the International Hydrographic Organization, and urges all States to work with that Organization to increase the coverage of hydrographic information on a global basis to enhance capacity-building and technical assistance and to promote safe navigation, especially in areas used for international navigation, in ports and where there are vulnerable or protected marine areas;

82. Notes the progress in the implementation of the Action Plan for the Safety of Transport of Radioactive Material, approved by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency in March 2004, and encourages States concerned to continue their efforts in the implementation of all areas of the Action Plan;

83. Also notes that cessation of the transport of radioactive materials through the regions of small island developing States is an ultimate desired goal of small island developing States and some other countries, and recognizes the right of freedom of navigation in accordance with international law; that States should maintain dialogue and consultation, in particular under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the International Maritime Organization, with the aim of improved mutual understanding, confidence-building and enhanced communication in relation to the safe maritime transport of radioactive materials; that States involved in the transport of such materials are urged to continue to engage in dialogue with small island developing States and other States to address their concerns; and that these concerns include the further development and strengthening, within the appropriate forums, of international regulatory regimes to enhance safety, disclosure, liability, security and compensation in relation to such transport;

84. Acknowledges, in the context of paragraph 83 above, the potential environmental and economic impacts of maritime incidents and accidents on coastal States, in particular those related to the transport of radioactive materials, and emphasizes the importance of effective liability regimes in that regard;

85. Encourages States to draw up plans and to establish procedures to implement the Guidelines on Places of Refuge for Ships in Need of Assistance;

86. Invites States to consider becoming parties to the Nairobi International Convention on the Removal of Wrecks, 2007;

87. Requests States to take appropriate measures with regard to ships flying their flag or of their registry to address hazards that may be caused by wrecks and drifting or sunken cargo to navigation or the marine environment;

88. Calls upon States to ensure that masters on ships flying their flag take the steps required by relevant instruments to provide assistance to persons in distress at sea, and urges States to cooperate and to take all necessary measures to ensure the effective implementation of the amendments to the International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue and to the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea relating to the delivery of persons rescued at sea to a place of safety, as well as of the associated Guidelines on the Treatment of Persons Rescued at Sea;

89. Recognizes that all States must fulfil their search and rescue responsibilities and the ongoing need for the International Maritime Organization and other relevant organizations to assist, in particular, developing States both to increase their search and rescue capabilities, including through the establishment of additional rescue coordination centres and regional subcentres, and to take effective action to address, to the extent feasible, the issue of unseaworthy ships and small craft within their national jurisdiction;

90. Welcomes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization in relation to disembarkation of persons rescued at sea, and notes in this regard the need to implement all relevant international instruments;

91. Also welcomes the ongoing cooperation and coordination among members of the inter-agency group on the treatment of persons rescued at sea;

92. Calls upon States to continue to cooperate in developing comprehensive approaches to international migration and development, including through dialogue on all their aspects;

93. Reaffirms that flag, port and coastal States all bear responsibility for ensuring the effective implementation and enforcement of international instruments relating to maritime security and safety, in accordance with international law, in particular the Convention, and that flag States have primary responsibility that requires further strengthening, including through increased transparency of ownership of vessels;

94. Urges flag States without an effective maritime administration and appropriate legal frameworks to establish or enhance the necessary infrastructure, legislative and enforcement capabilities to ensure effective compliance with, and implementation and enforcement of, their responsibilities under international law and, until such action is taken, to consider declining the granting of the right to fly their flag to new vessels, suspending their registry or not opening a registry, and calls upon flag and port States to take all measures consistent with international law necessary to prevent the operation of substandard vessels;

95. Recognizes that international shipping rules and standards adopted by the International Maritime Organization in respect of maritime safety, efficiency of navigation and the prevention and control of marine pollution, complemented by best practices of the shipping industry, have led to a significant reduction in maritime accidents and pollution incidents, and encourages all States to participate in the Voluntary International Maritime Organization Member State Audit Scheme;

96. Also recognizes that maritime safety can also be improved through effective port State control, the strengthening of regional arrangements and increased coordination and cooperation among them, and increased information-sharing, including among safety and security sectors;

97. Encourages flag States to take appropriate measures sufficient to achieve or maintain recognition by intergovernmental arrangements that recognize satisfactory flag State performance, including, as appropriate, satisfactory port State control examination results on a sustained basis, with a view to improving quality shipping and furthering flag State implementation of relevant instruments under the International Maritime Organization as well as relevant goals and objectives of the present resolution;

Marine environment and marine resources

98. Emphasizes once again the importance of the implementation of Part XII of the Convention in order to protect and preserve the marine environment and its living marine resources against pollution and physical degradation, and calls upon all States to cooperate and take measures consistent with the Convention, directly or through competent international organizations, for the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

99. Notes the work of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, including its findings on the acidification of oceans, and in this regard encourages States and competent international organizations and other relevant institutions, individually and in cooperation, to urgently pursue further research on ocean acidification, especially programmes of observation and measurement, noting in particular paragraph 4 of decision IX/20 adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, held in Bonn, Germany, from 19 to 30 May 2008, and to increase national, regional and international efforts to address levels of ocean acidity and the projected negative impact of such acidity on vulnerable marine ecosystems, particularly coral reefs;

100. Encourages States, individually or in collaboration with relevant international organizations and bodies, to enhance their scientific activity to better understand the effects of climate change on the marine environment and marine biodiversity and develop ways and means of adaptation;

101. Also encourages States to ratify or accede to international agreements addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment and its living marine resources against the introduction of harmful aquatic organisms and pathogens and marine pollution from all sources, including the dumping of wastes and other matter, and other forms of physical degradation, as well as agreements that provide for preparedness for, response to and cooperation on pollution incidents and that include provisions on liability and compensation for damage resulting from marine pollution, and to adopt the necessary measures consistent with the Convention aimed at implementing and enforcing the rules contained in those agreements;

102. Further encourages States, directly or through competent international organizations, to consider the further development, as appropriate and consistent with the Convention, of environmental impact assessment processes covering planned activities under their jurisdiction or control that may cause substantial pollution of or significant and harmful changes to the marine environment;

103. Encourages States to become parties to regional seas conventions addressing the protection and preservation of the marine environment;

104. Also encourages States, in accordance with the Convention and other relevant instruments, either bilaterally or regionally, to jointly develop and promote contingency plans for responding to pollution incidents, as well as other incidents that are likely to have significant adverse effects on the marine environment and biodiversity;

105. Welcomes the World Ocean Conference, to be held in Manado, Indonesia, from 11 to 15 May 2009, as an opportunity to enhance understanding of the link between oceans and climate change and the impact of climate change on marine ecosystems and coastal communities, thus promoting the urgency of mainstreaming climate change-sensitive policies and enhancing adaptation capacity at all levels, especially among developing countries and small island developing States;

106. Welcomes the activities of the United Nations Environment Programme relating to marine debris carried out in cooperation with relevant United Nations bodies and organizations, and encourages States to further develop partnerships with industry and civil society to raise awareness of the extent of the impact of marine debris on the health and productivity of the marine environment and consequent economic loss;

107. Urges States to integrate the issue of marine debris into national strategies dealing with waste management in the coastal zone, ports and maritime industries, including recycling, reuse, reduction and disposal, and to encourage the development of appropriate economic incentives to address this issue, including the development of cost recovery systems that provide an incentive to use port reception facilities and discourage ships from discharging marine debris at sea, and encourages States to cooperate regionally and subregionally to develop and implement joint prevention and recovery programmes for marine debris;

108. Encourages States that have not done so to become parties to the Protocol of 1997 (Annex VI-Regulations for the Prevention of Air Pollution from Ships) to the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the Protocol of 1978 relating thereto, and furthermore to ratify or accede to the International Convention for the Control and Management of Ships' Ballast Water and Sediments, 2004, thereby facilitating its early entry into force;

109. Notes the ongoing work of the International Maritime Organization in accordance with its resolution on International Maritime Organization policies and practices related to the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions from ships and the workplan to identify and develop the mechanism or mechanisms needed to achieve the limitation or reduction of greenhouse gas emissions from international shipping, and welcomes ongoing efforts of the Organization in that regard;

110. Urges States to cooperate in correcting the shortfall in port waste reception facilities in accordance with the action plan to address the inadequacy of port waste reception facilities developed by the International Maritime Organization;

111. Recognizes that most of the pollution load of the oceans emanates from land-based activities and affects the most productive areas of the marine environment, and calls upon States as a matter of priority to implement the Global Programme of Action for the Protection of the Marine Environment from Land-based Activities and to take all appropriate measures to fulfil the commitments of the international community embodied in the Beijing Declaration on furthering the implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

112. Expresses its concern regarding the spreading of hypoxic dead zones in oceans as a result of eutrophication fuelled by riverine run-off of fertilizers, sewage outfall and reactive nitrogen resulting from the burning of fossil fuels and resulting in serious consequences for ecosystem functioning, and calls upon States to enhance their efforts to reduce eutrophication and, to this effect, to continue to cooperate within the framework of relevant international organizations, in particular the Global Programme of Action;

113. Calls upon all States to ensure that urban and coastal development projects and related land-reclamation activities are carried out in a responsible manner that protects the marine habitat and environment and mitigates the negative consequences of such activities;

114. Welcomes the continued work of States, the United Nations Environment Programme and regional organizations in the implementation of the Global Programme of Action, and encourages increased emphasis on the link between freshwater, the coastal zone and marine resources in the implementation of international development goals, including those contained in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, and of the time-bound targets in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation"), in particular the target on sanitation, and the Monterrey Consensus of the International Conference on Financing for Development;

115. Also welcomes the resolution of the thirtieth Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter, 1972 ("the London Convention") and the third Meeting of Contracting Parties to the London Protocol, held from 27 to 31 October 2008, on the regulation of ocean fertilization, in which the Contracting Parties agreed, inter alia, that the scope of the London Convention and Protocol includes ocean fertilization activities and that, given the present state of knowledge, ocean fertilization activities other than for legitimate scientific research should not be allowed, and that scientific research proposals should be assessed on a case-by-case basis using an assessment framework to be developed by the scientific groups under the London Convention and Protocol, and also agreed that, to this end, such other activities should be considered as contrary to the aims of the London Convention and Protocol and should not currently qualify for any exemption from the definition of dumping in article III, paragraph 1 (b), of the London Convention and article 1, paragraph 4.2, of the London Protocol;

116. Further welcomes decision IX/16 C adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity, in which the Conference of the Parties, inter alia, bearing in mind the ongoing scientific and legal analysis occurring under the auspices of the London Convention and Protocol, requested parties and urged other Governments, in accordance with the precautionary approach, to ensure that ocean fertilization activities were not carried out until there was an adequate scientific basis on which to justify such activities, including an assessment of associated risks, and that a global, transparent and effective control and regulatory mechanism was in place for those activities, with the exception of small-scale scientific research studies within coastal waters, and stated that such studies should be authorized only if justified by the need to gather specific scientific data, should be subject to a thorough prior assessment of the potential impacts of the research studies on the marine environment, should be strictly controlled and should not be used for generating and selling carbon offsets or for any other commercial purposes;

117. Reaffirms paragraph 119 of resolution 61/222 of 20 December 2006 regarding ecosystem approaches and oceans, including the proposed elements of an ecosystem approach, means to achieve implementation of an ecosystem approach and requirements for improved application of an ecosystem approach, and in this regard:

(a) Notes that continued environmental degradation in many parts of the world and increasing competing demands require an urgent response and the setting of priorities for management actions aimed at conserving ecosystem integrity;

(b) Notes that ecosystem approaches to ocean management should be focused on managing human activities in order to maintain and, where needed, restore ecosystem health to sustain goods and environmental services, provide social and economic benefits for food security, sustain livelihoods in support of international development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and conserve marine biodiversity;

(c) Recalls that States should be guided in the application of ecosystem approaches by a number of existing instruments, in particular the Convention, which sets out the legal framework for all activities in the oceans and seas, and its implementing Agreements, as well as other commitments, such as those contained in the Convention on Biological Diversity and the World Summit on Sustainable Development call for the application of an ecosystem approach by 2010;

(d) Encourages States to cooperate and coordinate their efforts and take, individually or jointly, as appropriate, all measures, in conformity with international law, including the Convention and other applicable instruments, to address impacts on marine ecosystems within and beyond areas of national jurisdiction, taking into account the integrity of the ecosystems concerned;

118. Invites States, in particular those States with advanced technology and marine capabilities, to explore prospects for improving cooperation with, and assistance to, developing States, in particular least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, with a view to better integrating into national policies and programmes sustainable and effective development in the marine sector;

119. Encourages the competent international organizations, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and other funding agencies to consider expanding their programmes within their respective fields of competence for assistance to developing countries and to coordinate their efforts, including in the allocation and application of Global Environment Facility funding;

120. Welcomes the study prepared by the Secretariat pursuant to paragraph 88 of resolution 61/222 and the information provided in relation to the assistance available to and measures that may be taken by developing States, in particular the least developed countries and small island developing States, as well as coastal African States, to realize the benefits of sustainable and effective development of marine resources and uses of the oceans within the limits of national jurisdiction, takes note of the information provided by States and competent international organizations and global and regional funding agencies, and urges them to provide further information for the annual report of the Secretary-General and for incorporation on the website of the Division;

X

Marine biodiversity

121. Reaffirms its role relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, notes the work of States and relevant complementary intergovernmental organizations and bodies on those issues, including the Convention on Biological Diversity and the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and invites them to contribute to its consideration of these issues within the areas of their respective competence;

122. Notes the discussion on the relevant legal regime on marine genetic resources in areas beyond national jurisdiction in accordance with the Convention, and calls upon States to further consider this issue in the context of the mandate of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, with a view to making further progress on this issue;

123. Recognizes the abundance and diversity of marine genetic resources and their value in terms of the benefits, goods and services they can provide;

124. Also recognizes the importance of research on marine genetic resources for the purpose of enhancing the scientific understanding, potential use and application, and enhanced management of marine ecosystems;

125. Encourages States and international organizations, including through bilateral, regional and global cooperation programmes and partnerships, to continue in a sustainable and comprehensive way to support, promote and strengthen capacity-building activities, in particular in developing countries, in the field of marine scientific research, taking into account, in particular, the need to create greater taxonomic capabilities;

126. Welcomes the meeting of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, established by the General Assembly in paragraph 73 of resolution 59/24 of 17 November 2004 to study issues relating to the conservation and sustainable use of marine biological diversity beyond areas of national jurisdiction, convened in accordance with paragraph 91 of resolution 61/222 and paragraph 105 of resolution 62/215, in New York from 28 April to 2 May 2008;

127. Takes note of the joint statement of the Co-Chairpersons of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group, and requests the Secretary-General to convene, in accordance with paragraph 73 of resolution 59/24 and paragraphs 79 and 80 of resolution 60/30, with full conference services, a meeting of the Working Group in 2010 to provide recommendations to the General Assembly;

128. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session to assist the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group in preparing its agenda, in consultation with all relevant international bodies, and to arrange for the provision of support for the performance of its work by the Division;

129. Encourages States to include relevant experts in their delegations attending the meeting of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group;

130. Recognizes the importance of making the outcomes of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Informal Working Group widely available;

131. Notes the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity and the Convention on Biological Diversity elaborated programme of work on marine and coastal biological diversity, as well as the relevant decisions adopted at the ninth meeting of the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity;

132. Reaffirms the need for States, individually or through competent international organizations, to urgently consider ways to integrate and improve, based on the best available scientific information and the precautionary approach and in accordance with the Convention and related agreements and instruments, the management of risks to the marine biodiversity of seamounts, cold water corals, hydrothermal vents and certain other underwater features;

133. Calls upon States and international organizations to urgently take further action to address, in accordance with international law, destructive practices that have adverse impacts on marine biodiversity and ecosystems, including seamounts, hydrothermal vents and cold water corals;

134. Reaffirms the need for States to continue and intensify their efforts, directly and through competent international organizations, to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools for conserving and managing vulnerable marine ecosystems, including the possible establishment of marine protected areas, consistent with international law, as reflected in the Convention, and based on the best scientific information available, and the development of representative networks of any such marine protected areas by 2012;

135. Notes the work of States, relevant intergovernmental organizations and bodies, including the Convention on Biological Diversity, in the assessment of scientific information on, and compilation of ecological criteria for the identification of, marine areas that require protection, in light of the objective of the World Summit on Sustainable Development to develop and facilitate the use of diverse approaches and tools, such as the establishment of marine protected areas consistent with international law as reflected in the Convention and based on scientific information, including representative networks by 2012, and notes with satisfaction that the Conference of the Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity at its ninth meeting adopted scientific criteria for identifying ecologically or biologically significant marine areas in need of protection in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats and the scientific guidance for selecting areas to establish representative networks of marine protected areas, including in open-ocean waters and deep-sea habitats, and took note of the four initial steps to be considered in the development of representative networks of marine protected areas;

136. Acknowledges the Micronesia Challenge, the Eastern Tropical Pacific Seascape project, the Caribbean Challenge and the Coral Triangle Initiative, which in particular seek to create and link domestic marine protected areas to better facilitate ecosystem approaches, and reaffirms the need for further international cooperation in support of such initiatives;

137. Reiterates its support for the International Coral Reef Initiative, takes note of the eleventh International Coral Reef Symposium and the International Coral Reef Initiative General Meeting, held respectively from 7 to 11 July and on 12 and 13 July 2008 in Fort Lauderdale, United States of America, supports the work under the Jakarta Mandate on Marine and Coastal Biological Diversity and the elaborated programme of work on marine and coastal biological diversity related to coral reefs, and notes that the International Coral Reef Initiative is sponsoring the International Year of the Reef 2008;

138. Encourages States and relevant international institutions to improve efforts to address coral bleaching by, inter alia, improving monitoring to predict and identify bleaching events, supporting and strengthening action taken during such events and improving strategies to manage reefs to support their natural resilience and enhance their ability to withstand other pressures, including projected ocean acidification;

139. Encourages States to cooperate, directly or through competent international bodies, in exchanging information in the event of accidents involving vessels on coral reefs and in promoting the development of economic assessment techniques for both restoration and non-use values of coral reef systems;

140. Emphasizes the need to mainstream sustainable coral reef management and integrated watershed management into national development strategies, as well as into the activities of relevant United Nations agencies and programmes, international financial institutions and the donor community;

141. Encourages further studies and consideration of the impacts of ocean noise on marine living resources, and requests the Division to continue to compile the peer-reviewed scientific studies it receives from Member States pursuant to paragraph 107 of resolution 61/222 and, as appropriate, to make them, or references and links to them, available on its website;

XI

Marine science

142. Calls upon States, individually or in collaboration with each other or with relevant international organizations and bodies, to improve understanding and knowledge of the oceans and the deep sea, including, in particular, the extent and vulnerability of deep sea biodiversity and ecosystems, by increasing their marine scientific research activities in accordance with the Convention;

143. Notes the contribution of the Census of Marine Life to marine biodiversity research, and encourages participation in the initiative;

144. Welcomes the adoption by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization of the guidelines for the implementation of resolution XX-6 of the Assembly of the Oceanographic Commission regarding the deployment of profiling floats in the high seas in the framework of the Argo Programme, and encourages the Advisory Body of Experts on the Law of the Sea of the Oceanographic Commission to continue its work on the legal framework, within the context of the Convention, which is applicable to the collection of oceanographic data by other specific means;

145. Notes the preparation by the Division of a revision of Marine Scientific Research: A guide to the implementation of the relevant provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, with the assistance of a group of experts to be convened in early 2009, and encourages States to support this endeavour;

146. Stresses the importance of increasing the scientific understanding of the oceans/atmosphere interface, including through participation in ocean observing programmes and geographic information systems, such as the Global Ocean Observing System, a programme of the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, particularly considering their role in monitoring and forecasting climate change and variability and in the establishment and operation of tsunami warning systems;

147. Takes note with appreciation of the progress made by the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission and Member States towards the establishment of regional and national tsunami warning and mitigation systems, welcomes the continued collaboration of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations in this effort, and encourages Member States to establish and sustain their national warning and mitigation systems, within a global, ocean-related multi-hazard approach, as necessary, to reduce loss of life and damage to national economies and strengthen the resilience of coastal communities to natural disasters;

148. Notes the outcome of the ad hoc intergovernmental and multi-stakeholder meeting on an intergovernmental science-policy platform on biodiversity and ecosystem services, held under the auspices of the United Nations Environment Programme in Putrajaya, Malaysia, from 10 to 12 November 2008;

XII

Regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects

149. Reiterates the need to strengthen the regular scientific assessment of the state of the marine environment in order to enhance the scientific basis for policymaking;

150. Recalls that the Ad Hoc Steering Group was established by resolution 60/30 to oversee the execution of the “assessment of assessments” launched as a preparatory stage towards the establishment of the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects;

151. Notes with appreciation the work carried out so far and progress made in the “assessment of assessments” by the Group of Experts established pursuant to resolution 60/30 and the support of the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission, the lead agencies of the “assessment of assessments”, in providing secretariat services to the Ad Hoc Steering Group and the Group of Experts;

152. Takes note of the report of the third meeting of the Ad Hoc Steering Group for the “assessment of assessments”, held in New York on 19 and 20 June 2008;

153. Also takes note of the “assessment of assessments” progress report, endorsed by the Ad Hoc Steering Group and submitted by the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission to Member States, which provided the basis for an open-ended midterm review of the work and progress made so far in order to give all States Members of the United Nations an opportunity to comment on and contribute to the development of the ongoing work carried out under the “assessment of assessments” in accordance with paragraph 93 (c) of resolution 60/30;

154. Urges Member States and other interested parties to contribute financially to the “assessment of assessments” in order to enable its completion within the specified period, as indicated in the revised budget endorsed by the Ad Hoc Steering Group;

155. Urges all members of the Ad Hoc Steering Group to participate in the review of the completed “assessment of assessments” report and the summary for decision makers at the meeting of the Steering Group in 2009 and to interact, as appropriate, with the Group of Experts in its deliberations, bearing in mind their respective mandates;

156. Recalls that the report on the results of the “assessment of assessments” to be transmitted by the United Nations Environment Programme and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission on behalf of the Ad Hoc Steering Group in accordance with paragraph 94 (d) of resolution 60/30 should be focused on the aims and expected outcomes identified in the conclusions of the second International Workshop on the regular process for global reporting and assessment of the state of the marine environment, including socio-economic aspects, and paragraph 6 of the decision adopted by the Ad Hoc Steering Group at its first meeting in order to facilitate the successful completion of the “assessment of assessments” phase;

157. Decides to establish an ad hoc working group of the whole to recommend a course of action to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session based on the outcomes of the fourth meeting of the Ad Hoc Steering Group, and requests the Secretary-General to convene its informal meeting for one week not later than September 2009;

XIII

Regional cooperation

158. Notes that there have been a number of initiatives at the regional level, in various regions, to further the implementation of the Convention, takes note in that context of the Caribbean-focused Assistance Fund, which is intended to facilitate, mainly through technical assistance, the voluntary undertaking of maritime delimitation negotiations between Caribbean States, takes note once again of the Fund for Peace: Peaceful Settlement of Territorial Disputes, established by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in 2000 as a primary mechanism, given its broader regional scope, for the prevention and resolution of pending territorial, land border and maritime boundary disputes, and calls upon States and others in a position to do so to contribute to these funds;

XIV

Open-ended informal consultative process on oceans and the law of the sea

159. Welcomes the report on the work of the Consultative Process at its ninth meeting, focused on the topic of maritime security and safety;

160. Also welcomes the work of the Consultative Process over the past nine years and the contribution of the Consultative Process to improving coordination and cooperation between States and strengthening the annual debate of the General Assembly on oceans and the law of the sea, further welcomes the attempts to improve and focus the work of the Consultative Process, and decides to continue the Consultative Process for the next two years, in accordance with resolution 54/33, with a further review of its effectiveness and utility by the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

161. Recalls the need to strengthen and improve the efficiency of the Consultative Process, and encourages States, intergovernmental organizations and programmes to provide guidance to the co-chairpersons to this effect, particularly before and during the preparatory meeting for the Consultative Process, and decides in this regard that the eleventh meeting of the Consultative Process shall be based on the decisions taken by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, following the review of the Consultative Process at its tenth meeting;

162. Requests the Secretary-General to convene, in accordance with paragraphs 2 and 3 of resolution 54/33, the tenth meeting of the Consultative Process in New York from 17 to 19 June 2009, to provide it with the necessary facilities for the performance of its work and to arrange for support to be provided by the Division, in cooperation with other relevant parts of the Secretariat, as appropriate;

163. Expresses its serious concern regarding the lack of resources available in the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 for the purpose of assisting developing countries, in particular least developed countries, small island developing States and landlocked developing States, in attending the meetings of the Consultative Process, and urges States to make additional contributions to the trust fund;

164. Decides that those representatives from developing countries who are invited by the co-chairpersons, in consultation with Governments, to make presentations during the meetings of the Consultative Process shall receive priority consideration in the disbursement of funds from the voluntary trust fund established by resolution 55/7 in order to cover the costs of their travel, and shall also be eligible to receive daily subsistence allowance subject to the availability of funds after the travel costs of all other eligible representatives from those countries mentioned in paragraph 163 above have been covered;

165. Also decides that, in its deliberations on the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea, the Consultative Process at its tenth meeting will focus its discussions on the implementation of the outcomes of the Consultative Process, including a review of its achievements and shortcomings in its first nine meetings, and the topic for its eleventh meeting will be decided at the sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly;

XV

Coordination and cooperation

166. Encourages States to work closely with and through international organizations, funds and programmes, as well as the specialized agencies of the United Nations system and relevant international conventions, to identify emerging areas of focus for improved coordination and cooperation and how best to address these issues;

167. Requests the Secretary-General to bring the present resolution to the attention of heads of intergov-environmental organizations, the specialized agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations engaged in activities relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, as well as funding institutions, and underlines the importance of their constructive and timely input for the report of the Secretary-General on oceans and the law of the sea and of their participation in relevant meetings and processes;

168. Welcomes the work done by the secretariats of relevant United Nations specialized agencies, programmes, funds and bodies and the secretariats of related organizations and conventions to enhance inter-agency coordination and cooperation on ocean issues, including through UN-Oceans, the inter-agency coordination mechanism on ocean and coastal issues within the United Nations system;

169. Encourages continued updates to Member States by UN-Oceans regarding its priorities and initiatives, in particular with respect to the proposed participation in UN-Oceans;

XVI

Activities of the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

170. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the annual comprehensive report on oceans and the law of the sea, prepared by the Division, as well as for the other activities of the Division, which reflect the high standard of assistance provided to Member States by the Division;

171. Resolves that, as from 2009, the United Nations will designate 8 June as World Oceans Day;

172. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to carry out the responsibilities and functions entrusted to him in the Convention and by the related resolutions of the General Assembly, including resolutions 49/28 and 52/26, and to ensure the allocation of appropriate resources to the Division for the performance of its activities under the approved budget for the Organization;

XVII

Sixty-fourth session of the General Assembly

173. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report, in its current extensive format and in accordance with established practice, for the consideration of the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, on developments and issues relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea, including the implementation of the present resolution, in accordance with resolutions 49/28, 52/26 and 54/33, and to make the section of the report related to the topic that is the focus of the tenth meeting of the Consultative Process available at least six weeks in advance of the meeting of the Consultative Process;

174. Emphasizes the critical role of the annual comprehensive report of the Secretary-General, which integrates information on developments relating to the implementation of the Convention and the work of the Organization, its specialized agencies and other institutions in the field of ocean affairs and the law of the sea at the global and regional levels, and as a result constitutes the basis for the annual consideration and review of developments relating to ocean affairs and the law of the sea by the General Assembly as the global institution having the competence to undertake such a review;

175. Notes that the report referred to in paragraph 173 above will also be submitted to States parties pursuant to article 319 of the Convention regarding issues of a general nature that have arisen with respect to the Convention;

176. Also notes the desire to further improve the efficiency of, and effective participation of delegations in, the informal consultations concerning the annual General Assembly resolution on oceans and the law of the sea and the resolution on sustainable fisheries, and decides to limit the period of the informal consultations on both resolutions to a maximum of four weeks in total and to ensure that the consultations are scheduled in such a way as to avoid overlap with the period during which the Sixth Committee is meeting and that the Division has sufficient time to produce the report referred to in paragraph 173 above, and invites States to submit text proposals for inclusion in the resolutions to the coordinators of the informal consultations at the earliest possible date;

177. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the item entitled "Oceans and the law of the sea".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 63/111:

In favour: Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Moldova, Monaco, Mongolia, Montenegro, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Colombia, El Salvador, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Venezuela.

Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

During 2008, the Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea of the Office of Legal Affairs continued to fulfil its role as the substantive unit of the UN Secretariat responsible for reviewing and monitoring all developments related to the law of the sea and ocean affairs, as well as for the implementation of UNCLOS and related General Assembly resolutions.

The Division, in cooperation with intergovernmental bodies and host Governments, continued its capacity-building efforts through the organization of training courses. It held a training course in Port of Spain, Trinidad and Tobago, from 14–18 January.

The Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, established in 1981 [YUN 1981, pp. 130 & 139], was not awarded to any candidate in 2008, owing to insufficient funds.

The United Nations-Nippon Foundation of Japan Fellowship Programme awarded 10 fellowships for 2007–2008 and 10 for 2008–2009 to government officials and other mid-level professionals to undertake advanced academic research on ocean affairs and the law of the sea.

PART FIVE

Institutional, administrative and budgetary questions

United Nations restructuring and institutional matters

In 2008, the Secretary-General continued to work with the UN system and Member States to further enhance system-wide coherence in the areas of development, humanitarian assistance and the environment, and to support progress toward reaching internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals. A review of the lessons learned from the first year of experience of the eight “Delivering as one” pilot countries resulted in the issuance of a summary statement on the way forward. Despite remaining challenges, indicators showed that the process had yielded positive results, which was also reflected in the report of the Co-Chairs on system-wide coherence. The Co-Chairs recommended continued consultations in four priority areas: harmonization of business practices, funding, governance, and gender equality and the empowerment of women, which the General Assembly endorsed in September.

The General Assembly’s informal working group on mandate review continued to review mandates older than five years, which included the examination of some 331 mandates of the humanitarian assistance and the Africa development clusters. The Working Group submitted its final report in August. The Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly continued to identify ways to further enhance the Assembly’s role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency. The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council considered ways to advance progress on Council reforms.

The Assembly continued to focus on administrative and institutional matters. One high-level plenary meeting was convened on the midterm review of the Almaty Programme of Action on landlocked developing countries. A commemorative plenary meeting devoted to the sixtieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was also held.

The Security Council held 244 formal meetings to deal with regional conflicts, peacekeeping operations and other issues related to the maintenance of international peace and security.

In addition to its organizational and substantive sessions, the Economic and Social Council held a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the World Trade Organizations and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

Programme of reform

Recommendations of High-level Panel on UN System-wide Coherence

In a letter dated 11 June [A/63/85-E/2008/83], Mozambique transmitted to the Secretary-General the “Maputo Declaration”, the outcome of the seminar it hosted (Maputo, Mozambique, 21–23 May) for the representatives of the eight Governments of the “Delivering as one” pilot countries (Albania, Cape Verde, Mozambique, Pakistan, Rwanda, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay and Viet Nam), together with the representatives of Malawi. Launched in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1417], the Delivering as one pilot initiative resulted from the recommendations on development, humanitarian assistance and the environment contained in the 2006 report of the High-level Panel on United Nations System-wide Coherence [YUN 2006, p. 1584]. The seminar reviewed lessons learned from the first year of experience of the programme pilot countries and participants exchanged views on how to move the process forward and advance the recommendations of General Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877] on the triennial policy review of operational activities for development.

In the summary statement, participants stressed that the pilot countries became pilots with the hope that a more coherent UN system would better support the Governments in achieving internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51]. They indicated that national ownership in their development partnerships with the UN system had been enhanced through the Delivering as one process. They also noted the diversity of their national circumstances and agreed that in their experience in Delivering as one, the “no one size fits all” principle was being upheld. The seminar reaffirmed the gains made by the pilot countries with respect to enhancing Government leadership of UN system operational activities for development. Initial indicators also revealed that the pilot process was yielding positive results in ensuring that the UN development system was a more effective and coherent counterpart of its national partners. Both the Governments and the UN country teams reported that there was increased availability of the UN system's mandates and expertise for meeting national plans and priorities. Major constraints to the implementation and acceleration of Delivering as one included the lack of predictability and timeliness of funding; lack of harmonization and simplification of business practices; generally high transaction costs of the United Nations; poor alignment of UN capacities with the priorities of programme countries; and a low level of use of national operational capacities. The seminar provided recommendations for accelerating implementation of Assembly resolution 62/208 in the areas of national ownership and leadership; alignment of UN capacity to the needs of programme countries; integration of planning and programme instruments; coherence of budgetary and funding processes; leadership and coordination of UN country teams; and joint offices and simplified business practices.

Report of General Assembly Co-Chairs. In a 15 September letter to the Secretary-General [A/63/362], Ireland and the United Republic of Tanzania, in their capacity as the Co-Chairs for the General Assembly consultations on System-wide Coherence, transmitted a 21 July report, which noted that the Delivering as one approach, despite remaining challenges, was making significant progress at the country level—as reported by the developing countries concerned—and that a large number of other developing countries were coming forward to embrace the approach even if there were no plans for formal designation of new pilot countries. It further noted the main reforms instituted by the approach, such as the agreement on “One Programmes” jointly prepared by the individual Governments concerned and the UN country teams, and the establishment of “One Funding” mechanisms and of “One Leader” for the UN family at the country level in the form of the Resident Coordinator, who was authorized to negotiate the One Programme with the host Government and shape the allocation of funding, while being subject to an accountability framework and oversight mechanisms. During the year, the Co-Chairs focused their efforts on four priority areas on system-wide coherence: UN Delivering as one at country level and the related area of harmonization of business practices; funding; governance; and gender equality and the empowerment of women. They recommended that the Assembly select and act upon those priority matters, which needed to be addressed in continuing discussions on system-wide coherence, and set aside other issues raised by the High-level Panel that were being pursued elsewhere. Other areas discussed in the report included the environment, humanitarian assistance and human rights.

The Co-Chairs concluded that the experience of Delivering as one at the country level (half-way through its second year) was positive, even if challenges remained with regard to the “four ones” (one programme, one budgetary framework, one leader and one office). They noted that the large and growing number of developing countries applying the approach and moving towards implementing resolution 62/208 shared that view. Important principles were being observed, including national ownership and leadership and “no one size fits all”. UN country team activities were being aligned to an unprecedented degree with the national development strategies and policies of the developing countries concerned. Moreover, assistance was being delivered with greater effectiveness, savings were being realized and greater reductions in transaction costs were in prospect. The Co-Chairs recommended that the Assembly facilitate a positive political impetus to Delivering as one, thereby encouraging the developing countries which had voluntarily embraced the approach, and enjoin the UN development system to pursue it.

On funding in the context of system-wide coherence, the Co-Chairs observed that there was a need for greater flows of and greater predictability in funding. They commended the development partners which had made concrete contributions to advancing the approach at the country level in response to the strategies, priorities, policies and plans of the developing countries concerned, yet cautioned that support for Delivering as one at the country level must not be at the expense of core funding to agencies through their Headquarters. Overall, there needed to be a significantly improved balance between core and non-core funding. On gender issues, the Co-Chairs recommended that their report be considered together with the institutional options paper subsequently provided by the Deputy Secretary-General to the Assembly in July (see p. 1271).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 September [meeting 122], the General Assembly adopted resolution 62/277 [draft: A/62/L.51] without vote [agenda item 116].

System-wide coherence

The General Assembly,

Recalling the consensus 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Recalling also its consensus resolution 62/208 of 19 December 2007 on the triennial comprehensive policy review,

Commending the pragmatic, transparent, balanced and inclusive approach taken by the Co-Chairs of the consultative follow-up process by the General Assembly on system-wide coherence, the Permanent Representatives of Ireland and the United Republic of Tanzania to the United Nations, to their work on behalf of the Assembly, which built upon the efforts of their distinguished predecessors, the Permanent Representatives of Barbados and Luxembourg to the United Nations, at the sixty-first session of the General Assembly,

Having considered the paper on “Institutional options to strengthen United Nations work on gender equality and the empowerment of women”, which the Deputy Secretary-General provided to the President of the General Assembly on 23 July 2008 in response to a consensus request from Member States,

Looking forward to the independent evaluation foreseen in its resolution 62/208, which will help it to form a comprehensive view of the “Delivering as one” approach to the provision of development assistance through the United Nations system and, in the meantime, acknowledging the interim assessment of progress made and challenges remaining in this regard, as contained in the “Maputo Declaration”, issued in May 2008 by a number of least developed and middle income countries which have voluntarily embraced this approach,

1. Takes note of the report of the High-level Panel on United Nations System-wide Coherence and the report of the Secretary-General containing his comments thereon;

2. Welcomes the report presented by the Co-Chairs of the consultative follow-up process by the General Assembly on system-wide coherence, the Permanent Representatives of Ireland and the United Republic of Tanzania to the United Nations, to the President of the General Assembly on 21 July 2008, the conclusions and recommendations of which are contained in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Decides, accordingly, that the continuing and deepening intergovernmental work of the General Assembly on system-wide coherence will focus exclusively and in an integrated manner on “Delivering as one” at country and regional levels, harmonization of business practices, funding, governance, and gender equality and the empowerment of women;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, drawing on the resources and expertise of the United Nations system and building on the outcome of its triennial comprehensive policy review, to provide to Member States substantive papers on the issues of funding and governance, as those issues arise in the context of system-wide coherence, with a view to facilitating substantive action by the General Assembly during the sixty-third session;

5. Welcomes, in this overall context, the paper on “Institutional options to strengthen United Nations work on gender equality and the empowerment of women”, which the Deputy Secretary-General provided to the President of the General Assembly on 23 July 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to provide a further, detailed modalities paper in respect of the options set out in the Deputy Secretary-General’s paper, covering funding, governance structure, staffing, specific functions, relationship with the Commission on the Status of Women and other relevant bodies and, having regard to the totality of views expressed by Member States in informal plenary consultations on 8 September 2008, focusing in particular on the “composite entity” option with a view to facilitating substantive action by the General Assembly during the sixty-third session;

6. Resolves, at the conclusion of its entire process on system-wide coherence, to review and take stock of all of its prior actions and deliberations in a single resolution or decision.

ANNEX

Conclusions and recommendations of the Co-Chairs of the consultative follow-up process by the General Assembly on system-wide coherence, the Permanent Representatives of Ireland and the United Republic of Tanzania to the United Nations

1. As the Co-Chairs for system-wide coherence at the sixty-second session of the General Assembly we have sought to conduct an open, transparent, balanced and inclusive process of consultations among the entire membership. Our aim has been to present a report that, by and large, will sit well with all parts of the Assembly in that all groupings of States should be able to feel that the report addresses seriously many of their principal priorities and concerns. In this way we have sought to facilitate a balanced and fair compromise outcome to the deliberations of the Assembly during the sixty-second session.

2. The following conclusions and recommendations flow from the present report overall, but are perhaps best seen in tandem with the introductory section. The landmark 2006 report of the High-level Panel on United Nations System-wide Coherence, while a very important contribution to the work of the General Assembly to increase coherence across the United Nations system, did not launch that work. The Millennium Summit and the 2005 World Summit as well as consensus positions of the Assembly, not least the triennial comprehensive policy reviews, constitute much of the bedrock for building further progress in this area.

3. Since the outset of the sixty-second session, the broad membership has signalled that the continuing efforts on system-wide coherence should focus on four priority areas, namely (a) the United Nations delivering as one at the country level with the related aspect of harmonization of business practices; (b) funding; (c) governance; and (d) gender equality and the empowerment of women.

4. The present report should be taken together with the paper on gender (in its institutional dimension) which is being provided by the Secretary-General to Member States in response to their request of 16 June 2008.

5. As for “Delivering as one”, we have sought to provide the Member States with an accurate and up-to-date picture of the process as it is actually developing on the ground in upwards of thirty developing countries and not simply as it is perceived from afar. We have been helped in this by our on-the-ground consultations with Heads of State and Government, Cabinet ministers, parliamentarians, United Nations country teams, development partners and others in some eight developing countries. We have also conferred at length with United Nations agency heads in New York, Geneva, Rome, Paris and Vienna. We have taken careful note of the “Maputo Declaration” issued in May 2008 by pilot and other developing countries, in which they formally request the Assembly to encourage them in the “Delivering as one” approach that they have voluntarily embraced in partnership with the United Nations system.

6. Our conclusion is that the experience of “Delivering as one” to date (that is to say, halfway through its second year) at the country level is clearly and preponderantly positive, even if a number of challenges remain to be fully addressed in regard to each of the “four ones”. We note that this view is shared by the large and growing number of developing countries which are applying the “Delivering as one” approach and proactively moving towards implementing the consensus resolution on the triennial comprehensive policy review. They state that important principles are in fact being observed in practice, including national ownership and leadership and “no one size fits all”. Through the “Delivering as one” approach United Nations country team activities are being aligned to an unprecedented degree with the national development strategies and policies of the developing countries concerned. Assistance is being delivered with greater effectiveness, savings are being realized and greater reductions in transaction costs are clearly in prospect.

7. At the same time the picture that emerges at present is interim in nature since the independent evaluation of “Delivering as one”, as foreseen by the 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review, will come only towards the end of 2009 and, in any event, concrete development outputs arising from a new way of doing business take longer than eighteen months to emerge definitively.

8. It seems to us clear that the Assembly ought to be in a position during the sixty-second session to give a positive political impetus to “Delivering as one”, thereby giving encouragement to those many developing countries which have voluntarily embraced this approach, and to enjoin the United Nations development system to continue to pursue it. Moving forward, it will be essential to safeguard the principles underlying “Delivering as one”, in particular that of enhancing national ownership and leadership in the design and implementation of United Nations development system support programmes at the country level. The international community should by the same token be encouraged to continue to respond positively through additional commitments where the combination of strong national leadership and an empowered United Nations country team, delivering as one, together generate a better-aligned and more effective United Nations programme of support.

9. For the most part, the funds, programmes and specialized agencies of the system, at the leadership level, have gradually become increasingly engaged with and supportive of the “Delivering as one” approach. The atmosphere in which they collaborate within the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination under the chairmanship of the Secretary-General has been transformed for the better as they and their collaborators continue consideration of the implications of the “four ones” (one programme, one budgetary framework and fund, one leader and one office) at the country level. At the same time, it is to be recommended that headquarters levels across the system empower the respective country-level agency representatives with much greater latitude, flexibility and encouragement to advance a more coherent and therefore more effective delivery of United Nations system assistance on the ground in line with the “Delivering as one” approach.

10. In all of this, the particular situations affecting middle-income countries should receive adequate attention.

11. Turning to the issue of funding in the context of system-wide coherence, there clearly need to be greater flows of and greater predictability in funding. In general, overall commitments made solemnly and repeatedly need to be implemented more faithfully. Commendation is due to those development partners which have made concrete contributions to advancing the “Delivering as one” approach at the country level in response to the strategies, priorities, policies and plans of the developing countries concerned. At the same time, support for “Delivering as one” at the country level must not be at the expense of core funding to agencies through their headquarters. Overall, there needs to be a significantly improved balance between core and non-core funding. Funds, programmes and specialized agencies should be invited, if necessary through changes in statute, rules and/or regulations, to give effect to the consensus view in the General Assembly that savings realized at the country level ought to be ploughed back into programmatic development work in the countries where the savings are realized. In this and in other ways, “Delivering as one” must deliver more.

12. As for intergovernmental governance at the central level, we have detected no palpable appetite in the General Assembly for establishing new intergovernmental bodies, including the putative Sustainable Development Board which was recommended by the High-level Panel. At the same time the new realities emerging from a growing number of developing countries applying the “Delivering as one” approach at the country level will need to be accommodated and addressed more effectively by the existing boards and not least by the Economic and Social Council. In the light of the ongoing and emerging nature of the “Delivering as one” approach, it may be necessary to continue and to deepen discussion of these issues during the sixty-third session.

13. If, in that context, the Assembly focuses first on the functions that need to be discharged centrally and intergovernmentally in the “Delivering as one” approach, it will perhaps then be easier to address the question of which institutions, as these continue to adapt, are best placed to discharge the functions in question.

14. We also believe that the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions ought to be consistently encouraged to develop, in a pragmatic manner, a far greater degree of cooperation and collaboration in the context described in the present report. Some progress is already being made. This needs to be developed and enlarged.

15. As for gender equality and the empowerment of women, we recommend that the Assembly be invited to address the matter, including in the light of the Secretary-General’s paper on the institutional dimension, in open, informal plenary consultations at an early opportunity, perhaps early in September. During the sixty-second session the Member States have advanced together, by agreement, in their consideration of the issue of gender equality and women’s empowerment. With assistance from the Secretary-General, they have identified critical gaps in the way the system assists Member States in implementing globally agreed mandates and their own internationally made commitments in this area. With further open and genuine discussion the Assembly may be in a position, before the conclusion of its sixty-second session, to signal in general terms, but nevertheless clearly, which institutional option or combination of options, perhaps with adjustments, it wishes to pursue. Detailed working through of such an agreed approach could then be taken up and completed at the sixty-third session. We have the very strong impression that no Government, whether for substantive or “tactical” reasons, would wish to stand in the way of a consensus to advance the issue of gender equality and the empowerment of women through a measured but significant step forward.

16. We believe that in the light of the present report and the Secretary-General’s options paper on gender equality and the empowerment of women (in its institutional aspect) Member States ought to be equipped for decision-making during the sixty-second session. With these substantive elements in hand, Member States are also better placed to weigh the format of the decision-making of the Assembly.

17. In the first instance, and on the basis of the foregoing report and these conclusions, Member States may, during the sixty-second session, wish to address, perhaps in a package decision, the four core priority areas listed in paragraph 3 above, which they have highlighted throughout.

18. The same decision could signal that henceforth, in the context of intergovernmental discussion on system-wide coherence, the Assembly will focus exclusively on these priority areas and will exclude from this context the issues of environment/environmental governance, humanitarian assistance and human rights, in line with the considerations set out in the present report.

Comprehensive accountability architecture

The General Assembly, in the 2005 World Summit Outcome [YUN 2005, p. 48], had requested the Secretary-General to take a number of actions for strengthening the United Nations in the context of the Secretariat’s management reform, including establishing effective and efficient mechanisms for accountability. In that regard and pursuant to Assembly resolutions 59/272 [ibid., p. 1370] and 61/245 [YUN 2006, p. 1573], the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/62/701 & Corr.1] on the accountability framework, the enterprise risk management and internal control framework, and the results-based management framework, which included measures taken to strengthen accountability in the Secretariat. It proposed a comprehensive accountability architecture that encompassed three key elements of institutional and personal accountability: performance, compliance and integrity that reflected the Organization’s commitment to achieving results while respecting its regulations, rules and ethical standards. The proposed architecture would build on the existing accountability framework, which was the chain of responsibility, authority and accountability that flowed institutionally from the intergovernmental organs to the Secretary-General, and personally to managers and staff. The architecture would include a new dimension for enterprise risk management and internal control, enabling the Secretariat to take a systematic approach to identify, assess, evaluate, prioritize, manage and control risk across the Organization. It would also reflect a fully developed results-based management framework, including improved and more frequent monitoring and evaluation.

The report illustrated synergies among the Secretariat’s accountability framework, the enterprise risk management and internal control framework, and the results-based management framework, and explained how those tools complemented ongoing management reform and would collectively lead to the integrated and comprehensive accountability architecture. Under that architecture, the Assembly could more readily hold the Secretariat accountable for its activities and results, including the management of financial and human resources and programmatic activities. The Organization would focus on results rather than inputs and outputs of efforts and processes, with emphasis on ethical conduct and compliance with regulations and rules. As part of a review of the Secretariat’s accountability framework, a survey was conducted to gauge staff perceptions of accountability. Results of the survey, which were annexed to the report, indicated that 88 per cent of respondents were generally in support of change. The report included proposals on how the Secretariat should respond to the support for change through the comprehensive accountability architecture.

The Secretary-General concluded that the proposed accountability architecture responded to calls for change and answered the concerns of Secretariat staff and Member States. In that regard, managerial tools had been and would continue to be developed to help in the mechanics of assessing risk, monitoring staff and performance, evaluating activities for lessons learned and educating for the achievement of results. He planned to establish a working group of the Management Performance Board [YUN 2005, p. 1468]—the Accountability for Results Working Group—that would be responsible for regularly monitoring and actively guiding senior managers to reach expected results and comprised of three or four members from Secretariat departments or offices. The findings of the Working Group would be reported to the Board with recommendations for concrete action to be taken. On enterprise risk management, the Secretary-General proposed further consultation to incorporate feedback and commentary from the multiple parties that would be involved in the process to implement and maintain the enterprise risk management and internal control framework, including the launch of a pilot project to establish and communicate standards and guidelines for risk management for staff at all levels and to integrate the concepts into areas of highest risk. On results-based management, he proposed to establish a dedicated capacity responsible for advising, supporting and monitoring departments to ensure its complete implementation. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly endorse the proposed comprehensive accountability architecture; the concept of an integrated framework for enterprise risk management and internal control; and the results-based management framework, including the proposal for a dedicated capacity responsible for its implementation.

In a 26 February report [A/62/701/Add.1], the Secretary-General presented the additional resource requirements ($3 million) and organizational changes that would be necessitated if the Assembly endorsed the proposals contained in his report.

ACABQ report. In September [A/63/457], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) noted that the Secretary-General's report did not concretely explain how the proposed accountability frameworks would lead to a strengthened, better managed and more accountable Organization; specific timelines or benchmarks were not consistently provided; and the relationships between the various proposals or their linkage to existing structures were not clearly demonstrated. Other areas of concern included the lack of recourse to the expertise available within the UN system; the overlap of the consultants' findings with a previous report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) (see below); the lack of clarity in the definition of accountability, which was one of the fundamental weaknesses in the Secretary-General's accountability architecture; the need for establishing a concrete set of measures to ensure implementation of recommendations from oversight bodies by senior management; and the lack of specific measures identified for improving personal and institutional accountability. In addition, the report responded only partially to key aspects of what was requested by the Assembly, focusing primarily on only one of the six points set out in the Secretary-General's 2006 governance report [YUN 2006, p. 1572], namely, assessment of current policies with respect to accountability and identification of omissions of weaknesses that needed to be addressed.

While noting the Secretary-General's efforts to address accountability, internal control and management practices, ACABQ recommended that those issues be further discussed with other UN system organizations through the High-level Committee on Management of the Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) and the oversight bodies, and that use should be made of expertise within the UN system. It also recommended that the Assembly endorse the proposals on the concept of an integrated framework for enterprise risk management and internal control, and on the results-based management framework. ACABQ recommended against the proposed establishment of a dedicated capacity for implementation of results-based management, the proposed changes to the organizational structure of the Secretariat and the approval of the resources requested.

On 24 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's reports until its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/550).

Results-based management

In February, the Secretary-General transmitted a note [A/62/704] to the General Assembly containing his comments on the 2006 JIU report on results-based management in the United Nations in the context of the reform process [YUN 2006, p. 1652], which was circulated to the Assembly in March 2007 [A/61/805]. The report, which aimed to assess UN capability to apply that management strategy with a view to highlighting best practices and identifying challenges and constraints for successfully applying a results-based approach, summarized the evolution of results-based management in the United Nations and the status of its implementation, and provided an analysis of that status versus the JIU results-based management benchmarking framework. The report examined 37 benchmarks relating to planning, evaluation and reporting cycles; delegation of authority; accountability; performance management; and contractual arrangements. It resulted in 18 recommendations for consideration by the Assembly and the Secretary-General.

In his note, the Secretary-General indicated that he was committed to the full implementation of a Secretariat-wide results-based management strategy in accordance with Assembly mandates and within the limitations of available resources. He added that the recommendations in the JIU report were taken into consideration for the development of the proposed results-based management framework presented in his report on the subject (see p. 1519), which aimed at improving the governance and oversight of the Organization and the effectiveness and accountability of management.

OIOS report. In its review of results-based management at the United Nations [A/63/268], the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) reported that the introduction of results-based management in the Secretariat had been dealt with as an addition to the myriad rules and procedural requirements that governed inputs, activities, monitoring and reporting. It had not been accompanied by any relaxation of the volume, scope or detail of regulatory frameworks pertaining to financial, programmatic and human resource management. OIOS highlighted the shortcomings of results-based management in its original design, as reflected in Assembly resolution 55/231 [YUN 2000, p. 1295] on results-based budgeting, which was inadequate because it barred the use of indicators of achievement for adjustment of resources and reiterated limitations on the Secretary-General's authority to shift resources between post and non-post budget lines. The Office observed that the introduction of results-based management had brought a superficial orientation to outcomes and that the culture of the Organization remained focused on compliance. Progress in implementing results-based management needed to begin with renewed reform of the budget system. While results-based management had been an administrative chore of little value to accountability and decision-making, OIOS recognized that it would, at some level, remain an aspiration for the Organization and provided six recommendations: establish a policy framework to outline the eventual extent and limitations of results-based management at the UN Secretariat; initiate a review and revision to the rules and regulations pertaining to programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation; consolidate the Secretary-General's reporting obligations to the General Assembly; integrate programmatic results frameworks within the first phase of the Organization's enterprise resource planning strategy; update and revise the range of output categories subject to planning and monitoring; and strengthen the technical and methodological capacities of the Organization.

By decision 63/550 of 24 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the JIU report, the Secretary-General's related comments and the OIOS report until its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Mandate review

In response to a letter prepared by the General Assembly President in November 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1419] setting out the parameters and principles for continuing the mandate review process initiated in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1574], the Co-Chairs of the process developed a methodology for carrying out the work, which was based on the existing nine clusters of mandates and included the review of 279 mandates of the humanitarian assistance cluster and 52 mandates of the Africa development cluster. In a letter dated 8 August 2008, the Assembly President transmitted to Member States the final report of the Co-Chairs, which classified 43 mandates for discontinuation, presented an evaluation of the mandate review process, and made recommendations on options for future work.

On the analysis of the two clusters, 35 of the 279 humanitarian assistance mandates and 8 of the 52 Africa development mandates were classified for discontinuation. The Co-Chairs identified benefits of the review process such as Member States' increased awareness of the range of existing mandates and their sharpened interest in wider mandate and budget cycle issues of implementation and accountability. However, the benefits derived from the process were insufficient to justify the continuation of the review in its current format as it was not possible within the existing UN mandate and budget cycle to identify resources that could be reallocated. The Co-Chairs also reported that the analysis of the two clusters had revealed the extent to which the mandate registry was flawed—it had not been updated or maintained since mid-2006. Since the registry, which listed some 9,046 mandates (5,594 older than five years), would remain an essential source of information and foundation for analysis, the Co-Chairs recommended that the Secretariat be requested to establish a permanent capacity to update and maintain the registry. On future work, the Co-Chairs observed that there was a need to improve the management of mandates, yet noted obstacles to an effective mandate review process, namely the ambiguity over ownership and primary responsibility for mandates among implementing agencies and the disconnect between the mandate cycle and the budget cycle, which meant that resources implications of mandates were not transparent or fully traceable. Other concerns included the lack of clarity around mandate interpretation, accountability and follow-up, both from a Member State perspective and the Secretariat viewpoint. The Co-Chairs recommended that Member States consider making a comprehensive analysis of the mandate cycle.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 September [meeting 122], the General Assembly adopted resolution 62/278 [draft: A/62/L.52] without vote [agenda item 116].

Mandate review

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 163 (b) of the 2005 World Summit Outcome, regarding mandate review,

Welcoming the last review process, initiated in 2007 by the President of the General Assembly at its sixty-second session, in a letter dated 6 November 2007, as well as the previous processes conducted during the sixtieth and sixty-first sessions,

Having considered the final report of the Co-Chairs of the mandate review process during the sixty-second session, dated 8 August 2008,

1. Takes note of the final report of the Co-Chairs of the mandate review process during the sixty-second session, including on the review of the thematic clusters relating to the effective coordination of humanitarian assistance and the development of Africa;

2. Recognizes the usefulness of the existing online mandate registry, and decides to maintain it as an accessible working tool for Member States and to revert to the issue in the context of its consideration of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

3. Notes that one of the important findings of the process is the difficulty of identifying resources associated with one particular mandate, which limited the potential of the review process to fulfil its objective of strengthening and updating the programme of work of the Organization and improving the allocation of resources for the effective implementation of mandates;

4. Calls upon its relevant bodies and subsidiary organs, within their respective mandates and in accordance with the established regulations and rules governing programme planning, to continue improving the implementation of mandates and addressing the continuing validity of legislative decisions and the effective coordination among units of the Secretariat and other structures of the United Nations system.

Strengthening of UN system

In follow-up to General Assembly resolution 60/283 [YUN 2006, p. 1580] on investing in the United Nations for a stronger Organization worldwide, the Secretary General submitted reports on investing in information and communications technology (ICT): information and communications strategy for the United Nations Secretariat [A/62/793 & Corr.1] (see p. 1589), including the related addendum [A/62/793/Add.1] (see p. 1590); and on ICT: enterprise systems for the United Nations Secretariat worldwide [A/62/510/Rev.1]. Also before the Assembly was the report of the activities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee [A/63/328] (see p. 1562).

By resolution 63/261 of 24 December (see p. 49), the Assembly took action on strengthening the Department of Political Affairs. On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on strengthening the UN system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Intergovernmental machinery

Revitalization of General Assembly work

In accordance with resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/62/915] on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly, which outlined the draft programme of work of the plenary and five of the six Main Committees of the Assembly for its sixty-third (2008) session. An addendum to the report [A/62/915/Add.1] contained the status of documentation for that session as at 11 August 2008.

Working Group report. Pursuant to resolution 61/292 [YUN 2007, p. 1421], the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly submitted a September report [A/62/952], which summarized its activities and presented recommendations for further progress. The Working Group held seven meetings during the year and conducted its work programme in three stages: a general discussion and exchange of views on all issues related to revitalization; a general discussion on the status of implementation of relevant Assembly resolutions on revitalization; and a detailed analysis of the status of implementation, based on an inventory/chart of all relevant provisions contained in resolutions on revitalization since the fifty-first session (2000) of the Assembly. The Working Group conducted a cluster-by-cluster examination of the chart as follows: Cluster I (working methods, documentation, agenda), Cluster II (selection of the Secretary-General) and Cluster III (role and authority of the General Assembly), which were subdivided into different thematic areas. The Working Group identified a set of elements that appeared to be common areas requiring additional attention from Member States. It recommended that the process of implementation of relevant provisions on revitalization be continued and carefully monitored and, in that connection, presented practical proposals toward that effort. The Working Group also observed that further consideration was needed on the question of modern technologies, including the Assembly voting system. In that regard, the Secretariat could update previous documents on the subject, or present other proposals corresponding with arrangements made in the context of the capital master plan.

In an addendum to the report [A/62/952/Add.1], the Working Group transmitted to the Assembly three annexes that formed an integral part of its report, including the inventory/chart of Assembly resolutions on revitalization.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 September [meeting 122], the General Assembly adopted resolution 62/276 [A/62/952] without a vote [agenda item 121].

Revitalization of the work of the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions relating to the revitalization of its work, including resolutions 46/77 of 12 December 1991, 47/233 of 17 August 1993, 48/264 of 29 July 1994, 51/241 of 31 July 1997, 52/163 of 15 December 1997, 55/14 of 3 November 2000, 55/285 of 7 September 2001, 56/509 of 8 July 2002, 57/300 of 20 December 2002, 57/301 of 13 March 2003, 58/126 of 19 December 2003, 58/316 of 1 July 2004, 59/313 of 12 September 2005, 60/286 of 8 September 2006 and 61/292 of 2 August 2007,

Stressing the importance of implementing resolutions on the revitalization of its work,

Recognizing the need to further enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the General Assembly,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Ad Hoc Working Group on the Revitalization of the General Assembly established by resolution 61/292;

2. Decides to establish, at its sixty-third session, an ad hoc working group on the revitalization of the General Assembly, open to all Member States:

(a) To identify further ways to enhance the role, authority, effectiveness and efficiency of the Assembly, inter alia, by building on previous resolutions;

(b) To submit a report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-third session.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the revitalization of the work of the General Assembly would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Review of Security Council membership and related matters

The Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council submitted a report of its work during 13 formal meetings held between December 2007 and September 2008 [A/62/47]. At its first and second meetings (14 December 2007), the Chairperson of the Working Group announced the appointment of a task force to interact with Member States, who were invited to identify negotiables that could serve as a basis for intergovernmental negotiations. In April 2008, the Chairperson forwarded to Member States the replies he had received in writing from delegations, as well as from several regional and interest groups. At the third and fourth meetings (10 April), Member States discussed various elements contained in the written contributions and the Chairperson announced that under his leadership, the task force would engage in extensive consultations with Member States to assess the situation and identify options for moving forward with Security Council reform. Following those consultations, on 9 June, the task force submitted a report entitled, "Report of the Vice-Chairpersons to the President of the General Assembly on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council", which was forwarded to Member States. At the Working Group's fifth and sixth meetings (17 June), Member States discussed the report. On 2 September, at its seventh and eighth meetings, the Working Group considered its draft report to the Assembly. The Chairperson invited Member States to put forward amendments and to conduct intensive and constructive consultations in order to reach an agreement on the recommendations. At its ninth to twelfth meetings (10, 12 and 15 September), the Working Group further considered its draft report to the Assembly, which was adopted at the final meeting on 15 September.

By decision 62/557 of 15 September, the Assembly took note of the Working Group's report and decided to continue to address, within the Group, the framework and modalities in order to prepare and facilitate intergovernmental negotiations on the question of equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and other matters related to the Council. It decided to commence such negotiations in an informal Assembly plenary, based on proposals by Member States, during its sixty-third session, no later than 28 February 2009. The Assembly urged the Working Group to exert efforts during that session to achieve general agreement among Member States on all issues relevant to the aforementioned question and other Council-related matters. It requested the Group's Chairperson to present the results of the consultations to an informal Assembly plenary session, no later than 1 February 2009, and requested the Working Group to submit a report to the Assembly before the end of its sixty-third session, including any agreed recommendations.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on equitable representation on and increase in the membership of the Security Council and related matters would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

General Assembly

The General Assembly met throughout 2008; it resumed and concluded its sixty-second session and held the major part of its sixty-third session. The sixty-second session resumed in plenary meetings on 12 and 13 February; 4 and 31 March; 2–4, 18 and 29 April; 15 and 21 May; 4, 6, 10–12 and 20 June; 8, 11, 18, 21, 23 and 28 July; and 4–5, 11 and 15 September. The sixty-third session opened on 16 September and continued until its suspension on 24 December.

The Assembly held a High-level debate on climate change (11–12 February) (see p. 1164); a High-level event on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) (1–2 April); and a High-level debate on management reform (8–9 April). High-level meetings also took place on HIV/AIDS (10–12 June) (see p. 1329); implementation of the new partnership for Africa's development (22 September) (see p. 1009); Africa's development needs (22 September) (ibid.); meeting the MDGs (25 September) (see p. 926); the midterm review of the Almaty Programme of Action on landlocked developing countries (2–3 October) (see p. 949); and a High-level meeting on the culture of peace (12–13 November) (see p. 1217). It also held an interactive panel on the global financial crisis (30 October) (see p. 1068). On 10 December, the General Assembly held a commemorative meeting to mark the sixtieth anniversary of the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (see p. 727).

2008 sessions

By decision 63/501 of 16 September, the General Assembly authorized a number of subsidiary bodies to meet in New York during the main part of its sixty-third session. By decision 63/502 of 19 September, the Assembly adopted a number of provisions concerning the organization of the sixty-third session [A/63/250 & Corr.1].

Credentials

The Credentials Committee, at its meeting on 19 December [A/63/633], had before it a memorandum by the Secretary-General, which indicated that 124 Member States had submitted the formal credentials of their representatives. Information concerning the representatives of 67 other Member States had also been communicated. One Member State (Guinea) had not made any communication to the Secretary-General.

The Committee adopted a resolution accepting the credentials received and recommended a draft resolution to the General Assembly for adoption. On 23 December, the Assembly, by resolution 63/238, approved the Committee's report.

Agenda

During its resumed sixty-second (2008) session, the General Assembly, by decision 62/503 B, decided to include an additional item on the agenda of the session and decided on those items to be considered directly in plenary and those on which consideration would be reopened. The Assembly, by decisions on 3 April (decision 62/545 B), 20 June (decision 62/545 C), and 15 September (decisions 62/554, 62/555 and 62/556), decided on those items to be deferred to its sixty-third (2008) session.

At its sixty-third session, the Assembly, by decision 63/503 of 19 September, adopted, on the recommendation of the General Committee [A/63/250 & Corr.1 & Add.1], the agenda [A/63/251] and the allocation of items [A/63/252], including those to be deferred and included in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth (2009) session. By the same decision, it decided to consider in the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee agenda item 58 on the report of the Human Rights Council. The Assembly also decided to include in the agenda of its sixty-third (2008) session additional items entitled "Judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991", "Recognition of sickle-cell anaemia as a public health priority", "Granting of observer status for the International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea in the General Assembly", and "Follow-up to and implementation of the outcome of the 2002 International Conference on Financing for Development and the preparation of the 2008 Review Conference".

On 2 December (decision 63/520), the Assembly, by a recorded vote of 130 to 3, with 46 abstentions, included in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth (2009) session the item "United Nations conference to identify appropriate ways of eliminating nuclear dangers in the context of nuclear disarmament" (see p. 566). On the same date, by decisions 63/518 and 63/519 respectively, the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth session the items entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament" and "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament".

By its decision 63/552 of 24 December, the Assembly decided to retain 74 items on the agenda of its resumed sixty-third (2009) session. On the same date (decision 63/550), the Assembly deferred until its resumed sixty-third session its consideration of items and related documents concerning the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations; the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009; and the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations.

On 2 December, the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth (2010) session the item entitled "Maintenance of international security—good neighbourliness, stability and development in South-Eastern Europe" (decision 63/517).

Resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly

By decision 63/507 of 27 October, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the agenda item entitled "Implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations" and included it in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fourth (2009) session.

First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth Committees

The General Assembly, on 2 December, approved the proposed programme of work and timetable of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee for the sixty-fourth (2009) session (decision 63/521). On 5 December, the Assembly approved the programme of work and timetable of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee for the sixty-fourth session (decision 63/527). On 11 December, the Assembly noted that the Sixth (Legal) Committee had adopted its provisional programme of work (decision 63/529) for 2009. On 18 and 19 December, the Assembly approved, respectively, the programme of work for the Third Committee (decision 63/537) and the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee (decision 63/545) for the sixty-fourth session.

Security Council

The Security Council held 244 formal meetings in 2008, adopted 65 resolutions and issued 48 presidential statements. It considered 60 agenda items (see APPENDIX IV). The President also made 47 statements to the press on behalf of Council members. Monthly assessments on the work of the Council in 2008 were issued by the successive Council Presidents [S/2008/158, S/2008/499, S/2008/355, S/2008/579, S/2008/572, S/2008/580, S/2008/581, S/2008/596, S/2008/108, S/2008/696, S/2009/96, S/2009/328]. In a 22 September note [A/63/300], the Secretary-General, in accordance with Article 12, paragraph 2 of the Charter of the United Nations, and with the consent of the Security Council, notified the General Assembly of 105 matters relative to the maintenance of peace and security that the Council had discussed since his previous annual notification [YUN 2007, p. 1424]. The Assembly, on 18 November, took note of the Secretary-General's note (decision 63/514). On 20 November, the Assembly took note of the Council's report for the period of 1 August 2007 to 31 July 2008 [A/63/2] (decision 63/515).

Membership

The General Assembly continued to examine the question of expanding the Security Council membership. In that regard, it considered the report of the Open-ended Working Group on the Question of Equitable Representation on and Increase in the Membership of the Security Council and Other Matters related to the Security Council [A/62/47]. The Assembly took action with regard to the report in decision 62/557 of 15 September (see p. 1523).

Working methods

In a 20 June letter [S/2008/418] to the Security Council President, Switzerland on behalf of the S-5 Group (Costa Rica, Jordan, Liechtenstein, Singapore and Switzerland) requested the Council to convene a meeting on improving the working methods of the Council. In a 4 August letter [S/2008/528] to the Secretary-General, Belgium transmitted a concept paper for the open debate of the Council on implementation of the measures set out in the 19 July 2006 note by the Council President [YUN 2007, p. 1424], which aimed to enhance the efficiency and transparency of the Council's work, as well as its interaction and dialogue with non-Council members. The concept paper proposed that the debate could focus on the implementation of concrete measures in three specific and interrelated fields: transparency, interaction with non-Council members and efficiency. It also provided an overview on the implementation status of measures in each of those areas.

The Security Council debate [meeting 5968] was held on 27 August and some 45 speakers participated in the discussion, including the Secretary-General. In closing, the Council President observed that the debate provided an opportunity for all—in particular non-members of the Council—to state their views on the functioning of the Council. He noted that most delegations highlighted the key role of the Council's Informal Working Group on Documentation and Other Procedural Questions and urged the Group to benefit from the debate in order to return to the Council as soon as possible with a specific outcome.

In a 31 December note [S/2008/847], the Security Council President outlined the working methods for matters of which the Security Council was seized (seizure statement). The note contained consolidated and revised provisions of paragraph 49 of the 2006 note by the Council President and of paragraphs 5 to 7 of the 2007 note of the Council President [YUN 2007, p. 1424]. The 2008 note reiterated the desirability, when possible, of the use of descriptive formulations of agenda items at the time of their adoption. At the end of each year, the Council would review the seizure statement to determine if the Council had concluded consideration of any of the listed items or if any items should be deleted from the statement. Items not considered by the Council during the preceding three calendar years would also be deleted. The preliminary annual summary statement issued each January by the Secretary-General would identify those items to be deleted from the list, and the first seizure statement issued in March of each year would reflect the deletion of those items—unless a Member State notified the Council President by the end of February that it requested that an item remain on the seizure statement. The item would then remain on the statement for one year, unless the Council decided otherwise. The deletion of an item did not imply that the item in question could not be taken up by the Council in the future. The first seizure statement of each month would contain a full and updated list of items of which the Council was seized; yet for intervening weeks, a weekly addendum would be issued, listing only those items on which the Council took further action during the previous week, or indicated there was no change during that period.

Economic and Social Council

The Economic and Social Council held its organizational session for 2008 on 14 January and 5 and 8 February; a resumed organizational session on 29 April and 12 and 20 June; a special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions (the World Bank Group and the International Monetary Fund), the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) on 14 April; and a special meeting on the global food crisis from 20 to 22 May, all in New York. It held its substantive session from 30 June to 25 July and its resumed substantive session on 12 September and 19 December, in New York. The work of the Council in 2008 was covered in its report to the General Assembly [A/63/3/Rev.1].

On 14 and 17 January, the Council elected its Bureau (a President and four Vice-Presidents) for 2008 and adopted the agenda of the organizational session [E/2008/2 & Add.1 & Add.1/Corr.1].

On 5 February, the Council decided on the working arrangements for its 2008 substantive session (decision 2008/206) and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for that session (decision 2008/204). On 30 June it adopted the agenda [E/2008/100] and approved the programme of work of that session [E/2008/L.5] (decision 2008/214).

On 8 February, the Council decided that the theme for the 2008 thematic discussion for the high-level segment would be "Promoting an integrated approach to rural development in developing countries for poverty eradication and sustainable development, taking into account current challenges" (decision 2008/208).

The General Assembly, by decision 63/552 of 24 December, decided that the Council's report would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Sessions and segments

During 2008, the Economic and Social Council adopted 38 resolutions and 67 decisions. By decision 2008/206, the Council decided that the high-level segment would be held from 30 June to 3 July; the coordination segment from 7 to 9 July; the operational activities segment from 10 to 14 July; the humanitarian affairs segment from 15 to 17 July; and the general segment from 18 to 24 July. It also decided to conclude its work on 25 July. On 5 February, the Council decided that the special high-level meeting with the Bretton Woods institutions, WTO and UNCTAD would be held in New York on 14 April (decision 2008/203).

2008, 2009, 2010 and 2011 sessions

On 5 February, the Council decided that the work of the operational activities segment of its 2008 substantive session would be devoted to the progress on and implementation of General Assembly resolution 62/208 [YUN 2007, p. 877] on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the UN system (decision 2008/207). On 8 February (decision 2008/209), it decided that the theme for the regional cooperation item would be "The regional dimension of the themes of the high-level segment for 2008". On 29 April (decision 2008/213), the Council decided that the theme for the humanitarian affairs segment would be "Building capabilities and capacities at all levels for timely humanitarian assistance, including disaster risk reduction" and that it would convene two panels, one on "Disaster risk reduction and preparedness: addressing the humanitarian consequences of natural disasters, including the impact of climate change" and the other on "Humanitarian challenges related to global food aid, including enhancing international efforts and cooperation in this field".

On 25 July, by decision 2008/256, the Council took note of the report of the Secretary-General on the role of the Economic and Social Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits (see p. 1527). On the same date, the Council decided that the theme for its 2009 thematic discussion would be "Current global and national trends and their impact on social development, including public health" (decision 2008/257), and adopted the themes for its annual ministerial-level substantive reviews for the 2010 and 2011 sessions, respectively: implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to gender equality and empowerment of women; and implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to education (decision 2008/258).

Work programme

On 5 February, the Council took note of the list of questions for inclusion in its programme of work for 2009 [E/2008/1] (decision 2008/205).

Coordination, monitoring and cooperation

Institutional mechanisms

CEB activities

According to its annual overview report for 2008/09 [E/2009/67], the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) addressed a number of emerging and important programme issues, particularly the global financial and economic crisis, climate change, and the UN development and resident coordinator system. In response to the unfolding global economic crisis, CEB agreed on nine key areas in a joint initiative that encompassed: additional financing for the most vulnerable; food security; trade; a green economy initiative; a global jobs pact; a social protection floor; humanitarian action, security and social stability; technology and innovation; and monitoring and analysis. On climate change, CEB reported that steps were taken to identify focus and cross-cutting areas for coordination and action. CEB was developing a system-wide approach to support the Secretary-General in his efforts to prepare for inter-governmental discussions at the UN Climate Change Conference in Copenhagen, Denmark, in December 2009. The Board also endorsed the management and accountability framework for the UN development and resident coordinator system, including a functional firewall for the resident coordinator system. The agreement established a vision to guide the creation of a more efficient UN development system. Other areas of focus included working together in crisis and post-crisis countries; the need to strengthen the UN security framework to protect staff and allow operations to continue in insecure and unstable environments; and the development of a plan of action for the harmonization of UN system business practices.

CEB held two regular sessions in 2008: the first in Bern, Switzerland (28 April) [CEB/2008/1] and the second in New York (24 October) [CEB/2008/2]. Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows: the High-level Committee on Management (HLCM), fifteenth (Rome, 17–18 March) [CEB/2008/3] and sixteenth (New York, 18–19 September) [CEB/2008/5] sessions; and the High-level Committee on Programmes (HLCP), fifteenth (Rome, 13–14 March) [CEB/2008/4] and sixteenth (Rome, 30 September and 1 October) [CEB/2008/6] sessions.

CEB report

CPC consideration. The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/63/16] considered the CEB annual overview report for 2007/2008 [YUN

2007, p. 1426]. CPC recommended that the Secretary-General ensure that the CEB annual overview report included information on measures taken by the Board to improve its transparency and accountability and that future reports provided specific information on the main difficulties encountered in the implementation of coordination activities in different sectors, as well as on the relevant solutions adopted and the impact of CEB activities on the UN system. The Committee also recommended that the General Assembly request CEB to continue to monitor the effective collaboration of system-wide efforts against hunger and poverty and to report on the progress achieved regarding the difficulties encountered by UN system entities in addressing malnutrition and hunger. Noting the CEB endorsement of the recommendation for an evaluation of the eight “Delivering as one” pilot projects [YUN 2006, p. 1584], the Committee stressed the importance of an independent, objective and impartial evaluation process and that any criteria and methodology to assess the impact of those projects should first be considered and approved by Member States.

On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the CEB annual overview report for 2007/08 (decision 2008/221).

Programme coordination

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) held an organizational meeting on 30 April and its forty-eighth session from 9 June to 3 July, all in New York [A/63/16].

CPC considered questions related to programme performance of the United Nations for the 2006–2007 biennium and the proposed 2010–2011 strategic framework. It considered the in-depth evaluation of political affairs, and two triennial reviews, one on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, and the other on the evaluation of linkages between Headquarters and field activities. In addition, CPC considered the Secretary-General’s report on UN system support for the New Partnership for Africa’s Development (see p. 1012), as well as improving its working methods and procedures.

On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the CPC report (decision 2008/221).

Other coordination matters

Follow-up to international conferences

Report of Secretary-General. In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2007/29 [YUN 2007, p. 1427], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/63/83-E/2008/77] on the Council’s role in the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcomes of and follow-up to major UN conferences and summits, which highlighted the central role of the annual ministerial review as a forum for all stakeholders to assess progress in overall implementation of the internationally agreed development goals. The annual ministerial review, launched in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1427], examined cross-cutting themes common to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and was considered the most effective way for the Council to make progress in the integrated conference follow-up. The report also discussed the progress made on the conference follow-up as it related to the theme of the 2008 annual ministerial review, "Implementing the internationally agreed goals and commitments in regard to sustainable development". In other developments, several procedural improvements in the follow-up of conferences had facilitated progress in advancing an integrated approach in the substantive work of Council machinery; the Council and its subsidiary bodies had increased their interaction; and the functional commissions had completed examining their methods of work.

The Secretary-General proposed the adoption of a multi-year programme of work for the annual ministerial review to facilitate engagement by the Council system. The report also suggested that the Council consider making the report triennial to provide a reasonable time period before the next overall review of the integrated conference follow-up. Other recommendations pertained to promoting policy coherence at the intergovernmental level; reporting on the integrated and coordinated follow-up to conferences; linking normative and operational work; strengthening the relationship with the Bretton Woods institutions and WTO; and creating partnerships and alliances with all stakeholders.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 24 July [meeting 43], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2008/29 [draft: E/2008/L.29] without vote [agenda item 4].

Role of the Economic and Social Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in the light of relevant General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 61/16

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its agreed conclusions 1995/1 of 28 July 1995 and 2002/1 of 26 July 2002 and its relevant resolutions on the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, including its resolutions 2006/44 of 28 July 2006, 2007/8 of 25 July 2007 and 2007/29 of 27 July 2007, its decisions 2006/206 of 10 February 2006 and 2006/274 of 15 December 2006 and General Assembly resolutions 50/227 of 24 May 1996, 52/12 B of 19 December 1997, 57/270 B of 23 June 2003, 60/265 of 30 June 2006 and 61/16 of 20 November 2006,

Recalling also the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits and the review of their implementation in the economic, social and related fields,

Reaffirming the need to fully implement the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and in this regard expressing its determination to enhance the momentum generated by the 2005 World Summit, in particular for strengthening the role of the Economic and Social Council through its new functions,

Recalling that the Council should increase its role in overseeing system-wide coordination and the balanced integration of economic, social and environmental aspects of United Nations policies and programmes aimed at promoting sustainable development, and reaffirming that the Commission on Sustainable Development should continue to be the high-level commission on sustainable development within the United Nations system and to serve as a forum for consideration of issues related to integration of the three dimensions of sustainable development, as called for in Assembly resolution 61/16,

Recognizing the important role of a strengthened Council, in accordance with Assembly resolution 61/16, in promoting integrated and coordinated follow-up to conferences and summits,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the role of the Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of the outcomes of and follow-up to the major United Nations conferences and summits, in the light of Assembly resolutions, including resolution 61/16,

1. Reaffirms the need to continue to strengthen the Economic and Social Council as the central mechanism for system-wide coordination and thus promote the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences in the economic, social and related fields, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and relevant General Assembly resolutions, in particular resolutions 50/227, 57/270 B and 61/16;

2. Welcomes the holding of the first Development Cooperation Forum and the second annual ministerial review as steps forward in the strengthening of the Council;

3. Recognizes the need to further enhance coordination and cooperation between the Council and its functional commissions, the regional commissions and other subsidiary bodies so as to allow the Council to carry out more effectively its crucial role as the central mechanism for system-wide coordination;

4. Encourages the functional commissions to continue to explore ways to engage agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system more systematically in their work within their respective mandates;

5. Invites the organizations of the United Nations system, including the Bretton Woods institutions and the World Trade Organization, to contribute, within their respective mandates, to the work of the Council, as appropriate, including to the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in accordance with relevant Assembly resolutions, including resolution 61/16;

6. Welcomes the strengthened cooperation between the Council and the Bretton Woods institutions, the World Trade Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, and emphasizes that the interaction should be further improved;

7. Stresses that the preparation of the annual ministerial review should be fully supported by the United Nations system, especially the funds, programmes and specialized agencies, in accordance with the respective mandates, as appropriate, in coordination with national Governments;

8. Requests the functional commissions, the regional commissions and other relevant subsidiary bodies of the Council, in accordance with their mandates, as appropriate, to contribute to the annual ministerial review and to the Development Cooperation Forum, in the context of their respective annual work plans, taking into account their specificities;

9. Stresses the important contribution of civil society in the implementation of conference outcomes, and emphasizes that the contribution of non-governmental organizations and the private sector to the work of the Council should be further encouraged and improved, in accordance with the rules and procedures of the Council;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on measures taken to implement the Ministerial Declaration of the high-level segment of the Council for consideration by the Council at the coordination segment of its substantive session of the following year;

11. Decides to review the periodicity of the report of the Secretary-General on the role of the Council in the integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major United Nations conferences and summits, in the light of relevant Assembly resolutions, at its substantive session of 2009, with a view towards further enhancing the effectiveness of the report;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the above-mentioned subject for consideration by the Council at its substantive session of 2009.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on integrated and coordinated implementation of and follow-up to the outcomes of the major UN conferences and summits in the economic, social and related fields would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

UN and other organizations

Cooperation with organizations

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/316 [YUN 2004, p. 1374], the Secretary-General submitted an August consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1] on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations, including the African Union (see p. 108); the Asian-African Legal Consultative Organization (see p. 1478); the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (see p. 1115); the Black Sea Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 1121); the Caribbean Community (see p. 350); the Community of Portuguese-speaking countries (see below); the Council of Europe (see p. 472); the Economic Cooperation Organization (see p. 1116); the Eurasian Economic Community (see p. 1120); the International Organization of la Francophonie (see p. 1534); the Inter-Parliamentary Union (see p. 1536); the League of Arab States (see p. 1531); the Organization of the Islamic Conference (see p. 1532); the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (see p. 609); the Pacific Islands Forum (see p. 1117); the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (see p. 581); and the Southern African Development Community (see p. 328).

On 24 December, by decision 63/552, the Assembly decided that the item on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Community of Portuguese-speaking countries

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/223 [YUN 2006, p. 1598], the Secretary-General reported [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1] on cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries (CPLP). Since 2006, Brazil and the World Food Programme (WFP) had spearheaded efforts to provide capacity development assistance for school feeding programmes in lusophone African countries. Senior officials from the Brazilian Ministry of Education and WFP met several times with high-level government officials in Angola, Cape Verde and Mozambique to identify needs for such technical assistance. The Portuguese Language Unit of Radio and Television Service of the UN Department of Public Information, in a cooperative arrangement with CPLP, continued to broadcast daily news bulletins and weekly magazine programmes reaching a worldwide audience of more than 230 million Portuguese-speaking people, via some 1,500 radio stations.

In a 20 August letter to the Assembly, Portugal, on behalf of the Presidency of CPLP, submitted its report [A/63/343], which discussed progress achieved in the cooperation between CPLP and 9 UN system entities, including the finalization of a protocol between CPLP and the secretariat of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification. In partnership with the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), CPLP deployed efforts to introduce the issue of Guinea-Bissau onto the agenda of the Peacebuilding Commission. Subsequently, CPLP, ECOWAS, Portugal and the United Nations Peacebuilding Support Office in Guinea-Bissau (UNOGBIS) initiated the International Contact Group on Guinea-Bissau to support peacebuilding efforts in the country. CPLP and the International Fund for Agricultural Development signed a cooperation agreement to combat rural poverty in Portuguese-speaking developing countries. CPLP activities also included a March conference on international security challenges and cooperation within the Community, organized by the CPLP executive secretariat in partnership with the Defence Commission of the Portuguese Parliament. On 25 April, CPLP and the Portuguese Unit of UN Radio signed an agreement, which called for the exchange of information on the signatories' activities and news content; and cooperation for the joint production of journalistic initiatives to promote cultural diversity within CPLP member States. The report covered activities conducted within the Community under the theme of the MDGs.

On 20 August, [A/63/344] Portugal submitted to the Assembly the final declaration of the seventh Conference of Heads of State and Government of CPLP (Lisbon, Portugal, 24–25 July).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/143 [draft: A/63/L.41 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (f)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 54/10 of 26 October 1999, by which it granted observer status to the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and considered it mutually advantageous to provide for cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, as well as its resolutions 59/21 of 8 November 2004 and 61/223 of 20 December 2006,

Recalling also the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular of Chapter VIII, that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations, and Security Council resolution 1809(2008) of 16 April 2008 on peace and security in Africa,

Considering that the activities of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries complement and support the work of the United Nations,

Welcoming the celebration by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, for the third consecutive year, of Portuguese Language Day, on 23 June 2008,

1. Notes with appreciation the outcome of the seventh Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, held in Lisbon on 24 and 25 July 2008, which recognizes the economic value of the Portuguese language and the political commitment to promote it in the international and regional organizations and United Nations agencies and programmes;

2. Expresses satisfaction with the strengthening of cooperation between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the specialized agencies and other bodies and programmes of the United Nations, in particular the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Labour Organization and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS;

3. Welcomes the signature of a cooperation agreement between the Executive Secretariat of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the Portuguese Language Unit of the Radio and Television Service of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, in New York on 25 April 2008, regarding the exchange of information and cooperation to organize initiatives to promote cultural diversity within the Portuguese-speaking countries;

4. Also welcomes the signature of a cooperation agreement between the International Fund for Agricultural Development and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries on 8 November 2007, on combating rural poverty in Portuguese-speaking developing countries, as well as the work done by the Executive Secretariat of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries, within the framework of the technical cooperation project signed in May 2008 with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, which aims at the formulation of a South-South and North-South cooperation programme for the implementation of the United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification in Those Countries Experiencing Serious Drought and/or Desertification, Particularly in Africa;

5. Further welcomes the establishment of the partnership between the Community of Portuguese-speaking countries and the International Labour Organization Office in Lisbon, which aims at the creation of an interactive platform for the Governments of the Portuguese-speaking countries to exchange information and experiences within the scope of social protection, decent work, monitoring of labour standards and working conditions, and the fight against child labour;

6. Recognizes the importance of the signature, in Istanbul, Turkey, on 5 November 2008, of a cooperation agreement between the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries and the secretariat of the Convention, with a view to developing joint actions in the fields of combating desertification, land degradation, drought mitigation, water scarcity and poverty;

7. Encourages the Secretary-General and the Executive Secretary of the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries to initiate consultations with a view to considering the establishment of a formal cooperation agreement;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Community of Portuguese-speaking Countries".

League of Arab States

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/14 [YUN 2006, p, 1599], the Secretary-General, in his consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1] issued in August, provided information on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States (LAS).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 November [meeting 42], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/17 [draft: A/63/L.20 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (n)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Recalling article 3 of the Pact of the League of Arab States, which entrusts the Council of the League with the function of determining the means whereby the League will collaborate with the international organizations which may be created in the future to guarantee peace and security and organize economic and social relations,

Noting the desire of both organizations to consolidate, develop and enhance further the ties existing between them in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural, technical and administrative fields,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General entitled "An Agenda for Peace", in particular section VII concerning cooperation with regional arrangements and organizations, and the "Supplement to an Agenda for Peace",

Convinced of the need for more efficient and coordinated utilization of available economic and financial resources in order to promote the common objectives of the two organizations,

Recognizing the need for the further strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations for the realization of the common goals and objectives of the two organizations,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Commends the continued efforts of the League of Arab States to promote multilateral cooperation among Arab States, and requests the United Nations system to continue to lend its support;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the follow-up action taken by him to implement the proposals adopted at the meetings between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, including the sectoral meeting in 2005 on the theme

"Achieving and financing the Millennium Development Goals and sustainable development in the Arab region" and the general meeting on cooperation held in 2006;

4. Requests the Secretariat of the United Nations and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States, within their respective fields of competence, to intensify further their cooperation for the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations, the strengthening of international peace and security, economic and social development, disarmament, decolonization, self-determination and the eradication of all forms of racism and racial discrimination;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in order to enhance their capacity to serve the mutual interests and objectives of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and administrative fields;

6. Calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system:

(a) To continue to cooperate with the Secretary-General and among themselves, as well as with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations, in the follow-up of multilateral proposals aimed at strengthening and expanding cooperation in all fields between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

(b) To strengthen the capacity of the League of Arab States and of its institutions and specialized organizations to benefit from globalization and information technology and to meet the development challenges of the new millennium;

(c) To step up cooperation and coordination with the specialized organizations of the League of Arab States in the organization of seminars and training courses and in the preparation of studies;

(d) To maintain and increase contacts and improve the mechanism of consultation with the counterpart programmes, organizations and agencies concerned regarding projects and programmes in order to facilitate their implementation;

(e) To participate whenever possible with organizations and institutions of the League of Arab States in the execution and implementation of development projects in the Arab region;

(f) To inform the Secretary-General of the progress made in their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations and, in particular, of the follow-up action taken on the multilateral and bilateral proposals adopted at the previous meetings between the two organizations;

7. Also calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations and programmes of the United Nations system to increase their cooperation with the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations in the priority sectors of energy, rural development, desertification and green belts, training and vocational education, technology, environment, information and documentation, trade and finance, water resources, development of the agricultural sector, empowerment of women, transport, communications and information, promotion of the role of the private sector and capacity-building;

8. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States, to encourage periodic consultation between representatives of the Secretariat of the United Nations and of the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States in order to review and strengthen coordination mechanisms with a view to accelerating implementation of, and follow-up action on, the multilateral projects, proposals and recommendations adopted at the meetings between the two organizations;

9. Recommends that the United Nations and all organizations of the United Nations system make the greatest possible use of Arab institutions and technical expertise in projects undertaken in the Arab region;

10. Reaffirms that, in order to enhance cooperation and for the purpose of the review and appraisal of progress, a general meeting between representatives of the United Nations system and the League of Arab States should be held once every two years and that joint inter-agency sectoral meetings should also be convened on a biennial basis to address priority areas of major importance to the development of Arab States, on the basis of agreement between the United Nations system and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations;

11. Also reaffirms the importance of holding the sectoral meeting between the United Nations and the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2009 and also of holding the general meeting on cooperation between representatives of the secretariats of the organizations of the United Nations system and the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States and its specialized organizations during 2010;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the League of Arab States".

Organization of the Islamic Conference

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/49 [YUN 2006, p. 1600], the Secretary-General, in his August consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1], provided information on cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference (oic). The Secretaries-General of both Organizations met regularly, and consultations with the Special Adviser for the International Compact with Iraq and Other Political Issues, in March 2007, and the High-level Coordinator for missing Kuwaitis and third-country citizens and missing Kuwaiti property, in June 2008, further enhanced cooperation. Representatives of the UN system and oic met in Geneva from 8 to 10 July where they reviewed and appraised levels of cooperation in the fields of science and technology; trade and development; implementation of the MDGs; protection of and assistance to refugees; human resource development; food security and agriculture; environment; health and population; arts and crafts; and the promotion of heritage. A workshop on human rights education in the primary and secondary school system—jointly organized by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Islamic Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (ISESCO), a specialized institution of the oic—was held in Yaoundé, Cameroon in May.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 5 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/114 [draft: A/63/L.44 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (r)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/4 of 22 October 1982, 38/4 of 28 October 1983, 39/7 of 8 November 1984, 40/4 of 25 October 1985, 41/3 of 16 October 1986, 42/4 of 15 October 1987, 43/2 of 17 October 1988, 44/8 of 18 October 1989, 45/9 of 25 October 1990, 46/13 of 28 October 1991, 47/18 of 23 November 1992, 48/24 of 24 November 1993, 49/15 of 15 November 1994, 50/17 of 20 November 1995, 51/18 of 14 November 1996, 52/4 of 22 October 1997, 53/16 of 29 October 1998, 54/7 of 25 October 1999, 55/9 of 30 October 2000, 56/47 of 7 December 2001, 57/42 of 21 November 2002, 59/8 of 22 October 2004 and 61/49 of 4 December 2006,

Recalling also its resolution 3369(XXX) of 10 October 1975, by which it decided to invite the Organization of the Islamic Conference to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly and of its subsidiary organs in the capacity of observer,

Welcoming the efforts of the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in strengthening the role of the Organization in conflict prevention, confidence-building, peacekeeping, conflict resolution and post-conflict rehabilitation in member States as well as in conflict situations involving Muslim communities,

Noting the adoption by the third extraordinary session of the Islamic Summit Conference, held in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, on 7 and 8 December 2005, of the Ten-year Programme of Action, and the adoption on 14 March 2008 by the eleventh session of the Islamic Summit Conference, held in Dakar on 13 and 14 March 2008, of the amended Charter of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations,

Taking into account the desire of the two organizations to continue to cooperate closely in the political, economic, social, humanitarian, cultural and scientific fields and in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, the promotion of a culture of peace through dialogue and cooperation, decolonization, fundamental human rights and economic and social development,

Recalling the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations that encourage activities through regional cooperation for the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling also the decision of the Annual Coordination Meeting of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, held in New York on 26 September 2008, to recognize the merit of celebrating the fortieth anniversary of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in 2009 through national and international programmes on different aspects of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, highlighting its activities, evolution and reform through the four decades of its existence,

Noting that the report of the Secretary-General recognizes the strengthening of practical cooperation and the building of complementarity between the United Nations, its funds and programmes and the specialized agencies and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, its subsidiary organs and its specialized and affiliated institutions,

Noting also the encouraging progress made in the ten priority areas of cooperation between the two organizations and their respective agencies and institutions, as well as in the identification of other areas of cooperation between them,

Noting further that the Secretaries-General of the two organizations have met regularly, and consultations involving the Special Adviser for the International Compact with Iraq and Other Political Issues, in March 2007, and the High-level Coordinator for missing Kuwaitis and third-country citizens and missing Kuwaiti property, in June 2008, and the visit of the Executive Director of the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate to the headquarters of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, in March 2008, have enhanced cooperation,

Convinced that the strengthening of cooperation between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its organs and institutions contributes to the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Taking note of the results of the general meeting of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions, held in Geneva from 8 to 10 July 2008, to review and appraise the level of cooperation in the fields of science and technology, trade and development, implementation of the Millennium Development Goals, protection of and assistance to refugees, human rights, human resource development, food security and agriculture, environment, health and population, arts and crafts, and the promotion of heritage, and of the fact that these meetings are now being held every two years, with the next one scheduled for 2010,

Recalling that the Organization of the Islamic Conference remains an important partner of the United Nations in peace, security and the fostering of a culture of peace at the global level, and noting various decisions reached by the two sides, including the agreement to continue cooperation in conflict prevention, peacekeeping and peacebuilding and the agreement to improve the follow-up mechanism,

Taking note of the contribution of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in promoting intercultural dialogue and understanding within the framework of the Alliance of Civilizations and other initiatives in this regard,

Welcoming the close and multifaceted cooperation between the specialized institutions of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference with a view to strengthening the capacities of the two organizations in addressing challenges to development and social progress, including ongoing discussions between the United Nations Children's Fund and the Organization of the Islamic Conference on formalizing their partnership through specific initiatives linked to the Millennium Development Goals, as part of the Organization of the Islamic Conference Ten-year Programme of Action to Meet the Challenges Facing the Muslim Ummah in the Twenty-first Century,

Welcoming also the existing cooperation between the Organization of the Islamic Conference and the Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs of the Secretariat, including dialogue between the two entities on reaching out to non-governmental organizations and other humanitarian actors in member States of the Organization of the Islamic Conference as well as participation in joint activities and events and information-sharing, with a view to furthering proactive engagement and implementing concrete programmes in capacity-building, emergency assistance and strategic partnerships,

Noting the request of the Organization of the Islamic Conference for greater interaction between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference Secretariat extending beyond the current biennial arrangement so as to include a periodic review of cooperation, in light of the expanding areas of cooperation between the two organizations,

Noting with appreciation the determination of the two organizations to strengthen further the existing cooperation by developing specific proposals in the designated priority areas of cooperation, as well as in the political field,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Urges the United Nations system to cooperate with the Organization of the Islamic Conference in areas of mutual interest, as appropriate;

3. Notes with satisfaction the active participation of the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the work of the United Nations towards the realization of the purposes and principles embodied in the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Affirms that the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference share a common goal of promoting and facilitating the Middle East peace process so that it can reach its objective of establishing a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East;

5. Requests the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to cooperate in their common search for solutions to global problems, such as questions relating to international peace and security, disarmament, self-determination, promotion of a culture of peace through dialogue and cooperation, decolonization, human rights and fundamental freedoms, terrorism, capacity-building, health-related issues such as combating pandemic and endemic diseases, emergency relief and rehabilitation and technical cooperation;

6. Requests the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen cooperation in addressing the social and economic issues that affect the efforts of Member States to eradicate poverty and achieve sustainable development and the Millennium Development Goals;

7. Welcomes the efforts of the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference to continue to strengthen cooperation between the two organizations in areas of common concern and to review and explore innovative ways and means of enhancing the mechanisms of such cooperation;

8. Also welcomes the cooperation between the United Nations Development Programme and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its specialized and affiliated institutions in promoting South-South cooperation in areas of common interest;

9. Welcomes with appreciation the continuing cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference in the fields of peacemaking, preventive diplomacy, peacekeeping and peacebuilding, and notes the close cooperation between the two organizations in reconstruction and development in Afghanistan, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Sierra Leone;

10. Welcomes the efforts of the secretariats of the two organizations to strengthen information exchange, coordination and cooperation between them in areas of mutual interest in the political field and to develop practical modalities of such cooperation;

11. Also welcomes the periodic high-level meetings between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, as well as between senior secretariat officials of the two organizations, and encourages their participation in important meetings of the two organizations;

12. Encourages the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to expand their cooperation with the subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, particularly in the domains of science and technology, higher education, health and environment, by negotiating cooperation agreements, and through necessary contacts and meetings of the respective focal points for cooperation in priority areas of interest to the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

13. Urges the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system, especially the lead agencies, to provide increased technical and other forms of assistance to the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions in order to enhance cooperation;

14. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his continued efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system and the Organization of the Islamic Conference and its subsidiary organs and specialized and affiliated institutions to serve the mutual interests of the two organizations in the political, economic, social, cultural, humanitarian and scientific fields;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the state of cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization of the Islamic Conference".

International Organization of la Francophonie

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/7 [YUN 2006, p. 1602], the Secretary-General, in his August consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1], detailed cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie (OIF). Following a March meeting between the Secretaries-General of the United Nations and OIF in New York, both Organizations held a series of working-level consultations in April in Paris. Participants reviewed progress achieved and explored ways to strengthen international partnerships in early warning and conflict prevention. United Nations–OIF cooperation had improved significantly in the area of peacekeeping, particularly in the implementation of Security Council resolution 1778 [YUN 2007, p. 153] on Chad. Cooperation between the organizations also contributed to the signing of a comprehensive peace agreement between the Government of the Central African Republic and two of the country's major political-military groups in June, and the Electoral Assistance Division of the UN Department of Political Affairs (DPA) engaged in consultations with OIF on the modalities of a possible collaboration related to the electoral process in Côte d'Ivoire. In September 2007, OIF and OHCHR signed a joint three-year programme of cooperation, focusing on the implementation of major international human rights instruments, conflict prevention and settlement, the fight against discrimination and the promotion of diversity. OHCHR also organized several workshops and activities with financial support and expertise from OIF. The UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and OIF continued to promote the development and implementation of national sustainable development strategies among French-speaking developing countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 73], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/236 [draft: A/63/L.59 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (k)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 33/18 of 10 November 1978, 50/3 of 16 October 1995, 52/2 of 17 October 1997, 54/25 of 15 November 1999, 56/45 of 7 December 2001, 57/43 of 21 November 2002, 59/22 of 8 November 2004 and 61/7 of 20 October 2006, as well as its decision 53/453 of 18 December 1998,

Recalling also its resolution 61/266 of 16 May 2007 on multilingualism,

Considering that the International Organization of la Francophonie brings together a considerable number of States Members of the United Nations, among which it promotes multilateral cooperation in areas of interest to the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the Articles of the Charter of the United Nations which encourage the promotion of the purposes and principles of the United Nations through regional co-operation,

Bearing in mind also that, according to the Charter of la Francophonie adopted on 23 November 2005 at the Ministerial Conference of la Francophonie, held in Antananarivo, the objectives of the International Organization of la Francophonie are to assist in the establishment and development of democracy, the prevention, management and settlement of conflicts and support for the rule of law and for human rights, the intensification of dialogue between cultures and civilizations, the establishment of closer ties among peoples through mutual knowledge and strengthening of their solidarity through multilateral cooperation activities with a view to promoting the growth of their economies, and the promotion of education and training,

Welcoming the steps taken by the International Organization of la Francophonie to strengthen its ties with the organizations of the United Nations system and with international and regional organizations with a view to attaining its objectives,

Noting with satisfaction the commitment to multilateral cooperation for peace, good governance and the rule of law, economic governance and solidarity, the environment, sustainable development, and climate change, undertaken by Heads of State and Government of countries using French as a common language, at their twelfth summit, held in Quebec City, Canada, from 17 to 19 October 2008, and their determination to work together to bring about, through targeted action, added value in these areas,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 61/7,

Noting with satisfaction the substantial progress achieved in cooperation between the United Nations, the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies and programmes and the International Organization of la Francophonie,

Convinced that strengthening cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie serves the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting the desire of the two organizations to consolidate, develop and strengthen the ties that exist between them in the political, economic, social and cultural fields,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General, and welcomes the increasingly close and productive cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie;

2. Notes with satisfaction that the International Organization of la Francophonie participates actively in the work of the United Nations, to which it makes a valuable contribution;

3. Notes with great satisfaction the initiatives taken by the International Organization of la Francophonie in the areas of conflict prevention, the promotion of peace and support for democracy, the rule of law and human rights, in accordance with the commitments reaffirmed at the Ministerial Conference of la Francophonie on Conflict Prevention and Human Security, held on 13 and 14 May 2006 in Saint Boniface, Canada, and commends it on the genuine contribution it makes, in cooperation with the United Nations, in Haiti, the Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Burundi, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Central African Republic and Chad;

4. Welcomes the initiation of cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie, with the participation of other regional and subregional organizations, as well as non-governmental organizations, in the fields of early warning and conflict prevention, and encourages the pursuit of this initiative with a view to formulating practical recommendations to facilitate the establishment of relevant operational mechanisms, where necessary;

5. Expresses its gratitude to the International Organization of la Francophonie for the steps it has taken in recent years to promote cultural and linguistic diversity and dialogue between cultures and civilizations;

6. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie for their sustained efforts to strengthen cooperation and coordination between the two organizations, thereby serving their mutual interests in the political, economic, social and cultural fields;

7. Welcomes the strengthened cooperation between the International Organization of la Francophonie and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations of the Secretariat with a view to increasing the number of French-speaking personnel in United Nations peacekeeping operations;

8. Also welcomes the fact that the twelfth summit of la Francophonie led to concrete commitments to address the food and energy crisis, to strengthen the capacity of francophone States in the area of peacekeeping, to support efforts by international financial institutions to develop norms and codes that could be readily adopted by member States, and to mobilize all efforts and all the political will of member States to ratify the international instruments relating to the environment, and invites the United Nations to actively collaborate with the International Organization of la Francophonie and its members to meet these commitments;

9. Further welcomes the involvement of the countries that use French as a common language, particularly through the International Organization of la Francophonie, in the preparation for, conduct of and follow-up to international conferences organized under United Nations auspices;

10. Welcomes the high-level meetings held periodically between the United Nations Secretariat and the Secretariat of the International Organization of la Francophonie, and advocates the participation of the secretariats in major meetings of the two organizations;

11. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for including the International Organization of la Francophonie in the periodic meetings he holds with heads of regional organizations, and invites him to continue doing so, taking into account the role played by the International Organization of la Francophonie in conflict prevention and support for democracy and the rule of law;

12. Notes with satisfaction the continued collaboration between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie in the area of electoral monitoring and assistance, and advocates the strengthening of cooperation between the two organizations in that area;

13. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations, acting in cooperation with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, to encourage the holding of periodic meetings between representatives of the United Nations Secretariat and representatives of the Secretariat of the International Organization of la Francophonie in order to promote the exchange of information, coordination of activities and identification of new areas of cooperation;

14. Welcomes the participation of the International Organization of la Francophonie in the Peacebuilding Commission's work on Burundi, Guinea-Bissau and the Central African Republic, and strongly encourages the International Organization of la Francophonie and the Peacebuilding Commission to continue to cooperate actively;

15. Invites the Secretary-General of the United Nations to take the necessary steps, in consultation with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie, to continue to promote cooperation between the two organizations;

16. Invites the specialized agencies and the funds and programmes of the United Nations system, as well as the regional commissions, including the Economic Commission for Africa, to collaborate to this end with the Secretary-General of the International Organization of la Francophonie by identifying new synergies in favour of development, in particular in the areas of poverty elimination, energy, sustainable development, education, training and the development of new information technologies;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session the sub-item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and the International Organization of la Francophonie".

Inter-Parliamentary Union

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/6 [YUN 2006, p. 1604], the Secretary-General, in his August consolidated report [A/63/228-S/2008/531 & Corr.1], detailed the cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU). During the IPU Statutory Assemblies in 2007 and 2008, member Parliaments adopted resolutions on global issues that were also high on the UN agenda, including climate change, poverty eradication, human trafficking and migration, employment, official development assistance, terrorism, and the peaceful coexistence of religions and cultures. IPU established a new plenary Committee on UN Affairs, which met for the first time in October 2007, and would formulate and monitor proposals for developing the IPU–UN relationship and examine major UN issues, such as funding and accountability and reform efforts. IPU was also involved in shaping the agenda of the new Development Cooperation Forum of the Economic and Social Council and participated in the preparatory events for the Forum's 2008 meeting. In November 2007, IPU and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) signed a memorandum of understanding providing a framework for joint activities in areas such as democratic governance, poverty reduction, development cooperation and women's empowerment. IPU established an Advisory Group on HIV/AIDS to enlist the world's legislatures in the fight against the epidemic. In collaboration with UNAIDS and UNDP, it launched a reference handbook for parliamentarians entitled Taking action against HIV.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 November [meeting 53], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/24 [draft: A/63/L.26 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 114 (I)].

Cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 8 August 2008 which attests to the broad and substantive cooperation between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union over the past two years,

Taking note of the resolutions adopted by the Inter-Parliamentary Union and circulated in the General Assembly and the many activities undertaken by the organization in support of the United Nations,

Welcoming the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations as joint United Nations–Inter-Parliamentary Union events during the sessions of the General Assembly, as well as other specialized parliamentary meetings organized by the Inter-Parliamentary Union in cooperation with the United Nations in the context of major United Nations conferences and events,

Taking into consideration the Cooperation Agreement between the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union of 1996, which laid the foundation for cooperation between the two organizations,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, as well as the 2005 World Summit Outcome, in which Heads of State and Government resolved to strengthen further cooperation between the United Nations and national parliaments through their world organization, the Inter-Parliamentary Union, in all fields of the work of the United Nations, including the effective implementation of United Nations reform,

Recalling also its resolution 57/32 of 19 November 2002, in which the Inter-Parliamentary Union was invited to participate in the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer, as well as resolutions 57/47 of 21 November 2002, 59/19 of 8 November 2004 and 61/6 of 20 October 2006,

Welcoming the close cooperation between the Inter-Parliamentary Union and the Peacebuilding Commission in fostering political dialogue and building national capacities for good governance,

Welcoming also the contribution of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in shaping the agenda and work of the new Development Cooperation Forum held by the Economic and Social Council,

Recognizing the importance of the provision of continued parliamentary support to the work of the Human Rights Council,

1. Welcomes the efforts made by the Inter-Parliamentary Union to provide for a greater parliamentary contribution and enhanced support to the United Nations;

2. Encourages the United Nations and the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to cooperate closely in various fields, in particular peace and security, economic and social development, international law, human rights, and democracy and gender issues, bearing in mind the significant benefits of cooperation between the two organizations, to which the report of the Secretary-General attests;

3. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to strengthen further its contribution to the work of the General Assembly, including its revitalization, and in relation to the process of United Nations reform and system-wide coherence;

4. Invites the Peacebuilding Commission to continue to work closely with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in engaging national parliaments in the countries under consideration by the Commission in efforts to promote democratic governance, national dialogue and reconciliation;

5. Encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to continue to work closely with the Development Cooperation Forum and bring a robust parliamentary contribution to the Forum process and the broader development cooperation agenda;

6. Also encourages the Inter-Parliamentary Union to strengthen its contribution to the Human Rights Council, particularly as it relates to the universal periodic review of the fulfilment of human rights obligations and commitments by Member States;

7. Welcomes the growing practice of including legislators as members of national delegations to major United Nations meetings and events, as appropriate, and invites Member States to continue this practice in a more regular and systematic manner;

8. Calls for the further development of the annual parliamentary hearings at the United Nations as a joint United Nations-Inter-Parliamentary Union event and for the circulation of the hearings summary report as a document of the General Assembly;

9. Welcomes the proposal for a regular annual exchange between the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and the senior leadership of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, with a view to building greater coherence in the work of the two organizations and maximizing parliamentary support for the United Nations;

10. Decides, in recognition of the unique role of national parliaments in support of the work of the United Nations, to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-fifth session an item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations, national parliaments and the Inter-Parliamentary Union".

Participation in UN work

Observer status

Agency for International Trade Information and Cooperation

On 17 July [A/63/143], Paraguay requested the inclusion in the provisional agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-third session of an item on observer status for the Agency for International Trade Information and Cooperation (AITIC) in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum stated that the Agency was established in 2004 to facilitate the participation of resource-constrained countries in international trade. AITIC provided its members trade-related technical assistance and capacity-building, as well as free, personalized assistance, tailored to the particular needs for information and analysis concerning trade and development issues. Observer status would boost the Agency's capacity to cooperate with UN agencies involved in poverty reduction.

On 24 December, by decision 63/552, the Assembly decided that the item on "Observer status for AITIC in the General Assembly" would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria

On 15 August [A/63/196], France, on behalf of the European Union, requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-third session of an item on observer status in the Assembly for the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria [YUN 2002, p. 1217]. An explanatory memorandum stated that the Fund was established in 2002 to provide financial support to the global fight against the epidemics of HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria in low- and middle-income countries highly affected by the diseases. Observer status would boost the Fund's capacity to collaborate with other UN agencies involved with global health and development and would allow the Fund to bring to the Assembly's attention the progress recorded by the Fund in contributing to the MDGs.

On 19 September [A/63/PV.2], pursuant to the first report of the General Committee [A/63/250], the Assembly deferred consideration of the question of the inclusion in the agenda of an item on observer status for the Fund.

International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea

In a 6 October letter to the Secretary-General [A/63/234], Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-third session of an item on observer status for the International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea (IFAS) in the Assembly. An explanatory memorandum contained details on the founding of IFAS in 1999, the background on the environmental crisis that had led to the shrinking of the Aral Sea, and the continuing deterioration of the environmental situation, which was affecting the living conditions and health of over 35 million Aral Sea Basin inhabitants, preventing normal economic activities and causing an increase in migratory movements in the region. There was a need for more effective and targeted measures and more specific and direct co-operation between the States of the region and the United Nations and other international organizations and donors through IFAS. Observer status would allow IFAS to initiate various measures designed to improve the environmental, social and economic situation in the Aral Sea Basin.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/133 [A/63/454] without vote [agenda item 156].

Observer status for the International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea,

1. Decides to invite the International Fund for Saving the Aral Sea to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

South Centre

In a 19 June letter to the Secretary-General [A/63/141], Tanzania requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-third session of an item on observer status for the South Centre. An explanatory memorandum stated that the Centre, an intergovernmental organization of developing countries established in 1994, assisted in developing the points of view of the South on major policy issues relating to trade, innovation and access to knowledge, global governance, financing for development, labour and employment, and environment. It also sought to foster improved North-South dialogue and interaction on an equitable basis on key global issues, and responded to requests for policy advice and technical support from developing countries in the context of international negotiations and discussions in various international forums. The Centre considered the United Nations to be one of its major partners and that the work and agenda of the Assembly were of great relevance to the South, and consequently, of prime importance to the Centre.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/131 [A/63/453] without vote [agenda item 151].

Observer status for the South Centre in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the South Centre,

1. Decides to invite the South Centre to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

University for Peace

On 11 September [A/63/231], Costa Rica requested the inclusion in the agenda of the General Assembly's sixty-third session of an item on observer status for the University for Peace. An explanatory memorandum stated that the University, established in 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 1004], was a specialized international institution for post-graduate studies, research, and dissemination of knowledge, aimed at training for peace within the United Nations University (UNU) system. The Charter of the University envisaged the creation of close links between UNU and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in view of its responsibilities in the field of education. Observer status would enable the University to participate in discussions on peacebuilding and peacekeeping issues, which, in turn, would allow it to strengthen the content of its academic and training programmes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 67], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/132 [A/63/455] without vote [agenda item 153].

Observer status for the University for Peace in the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Wishing to promote cooperation between the United Nations and the University for Peace,

1. Decides to invite the University for Peace to participate in the sessions and the work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary action to implement the present resolution.

Non-governmental organizations

Committee on NGOs

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) held its regular 2008 session (21–30 January) [E/2008/32 (Part I)] and its resumed session (29 May–6 June & 25 June) [E/2008/32 (Part II) & Corr.1], both in New York. In January, the Committee considered 145 applications for consultative status with the Economic and Social Council, including applications deferred from its 1999–2007 sessions and five requests for reclassification, of which it recommended two. It recommended 70 applications for consultative status, deferred consideration of 68, took note that three NGOs had withdrawn their applications and closed consideration of two applications. It did not recommend 30 requests deferred from previous sessions. The Committee reviewed 59 quadrennial reports and heard 15 NGO representatives.

The Committee recommended one draft resolution on measures to improve quadrennial reporting procedures and four draft decisions for action by the Council. It reviewed its working methods relating to the implementation of Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31 [YUN 1996, p. 1360], including the process of accreditation of representatives of NGOs, and Council decision 1995/304 [YUN 1995, p. 1445]. The Committee considered the general voluntary trust fund in support of the United Nations Non-Governmental Organizations Informal Regional Network (UN-NGO-IRENE). During the session, no requests for consultative status were received from NGOs pursuant to Council resolution 2006/46 [YUN 2006, p. 1001], and there were no special reports or complaints by Member States before the Committee.

On 25 and 30 January, the Committee considered the application of the American Sports Committee, an application deferred from previous sessions. On 30 January, the Committee recommended that consultative status not be granted to that organization. On 21 July, the Council decided not to grant consultative status to the NGO American Sports Committee (decision 2008/223).

Regarding the application of the Federación Estatal de Lesbianas, Gays, Transexuales y Bisexuales, an application deferred from a previous session, a motion to adjourn the debate until the 2008 resumed session was rejected by a roll-call vote of 8 to 8, with 2 abstentions. Subsequently, the Committee decided by a roll-call vote of 7 to 7, with 4 abstentions, that consultative status not be granted to the organization. Nonetheless, on 22 July the Council rejected the draft decision and granted special consultative status to the NGO Federación Estatal de Lesbianas, Gays, Transexuales y Bisexuales (decision 2008/230).

On 21 July, the Economic and Social Council granted special consultative status to 70 organizations and placed eight others on its roster; reclassified two organizations from the roster to special consultative status; and noted that the Committee had taken note of 53 quadrennial reports, closed consideration of the request for consultative status made by two NGOs, and taken note of the withdrawal by three NGOs of their applications for consultative status (decision 2008/222). Also on the same date, the Council took note of the Committee's report on its 2008 regular session (decision 2008/224).

At its resumed session, in May, the Committee considered 126 applications for consultative status, including applications deferred from its 1999–2008 sessions; recommended 64 applications for consultative status; deferred consideration of 55 applications and closed consideration of two applications. It did not recommend consultative status for one organization, whose application was deferred from previous sessions. It recommended one of three requests for reclassification of consultative status, reviewed 139 quadrennial reports, 13 of which had been deferred from previous sessions, and heard six NGO representatives.

The Committee recommended one draft resolution on strengthening the NGO Section of DESA and five draft decisions for action by the Council. It reviewed its working methods relating to the implementation of Council resolution 1996/31, including the process of accreditation of representatives of NGOs, and Council decision 1995/304. During the session, no requests for consultative status were received from NGOs pursuant to Council resolution 2006/46. With regard to Liberal International, an NGO based in the United Kingdom, which had its consultative status suspended for one year [YUN 2007, p. 1433], the Committee took note and acknowledged that the organization's one year suspension would end on 20 July. It also considered the general voluntary trust fund in support of UN-NGO-IRENE.

On 6 June, the Committee considered the application of the Human Rights Foundation, a United States-based organization. A motion to adjourn debate on the application was rejected by a roll-call vote of 12 to 6, with 1 abstention. Subsequently, by a roll-call vote of 13 to 3, with 2 abstentions, the Committee decided to not grant consultative status to the organization. On 21 July, the Council adopted the draft decision of the Committee and decided not to grant consultative status to the Human Rights Foundation (decision 2008/226).

On 21 July, the Council granted consultative status to 64 organizations and placed 11 others on the roster; reclassified one from the roster to special consultative status; and noted that the Committee had taken note of 126 quadrennial reports, closed consideration of two applications, and taken note of the withdrawal of applications by two organizations (decision 2008/225). On the same date, the Council decided to dispose of the complaint against the NGO World Union for Progressive Judaism (decision 2008/227); decided that the 2009 regular session of the Committee would be held from 19 to 28 January 2009 and the resumed session from 18 to 27 May 2009, and approved the provisional agenda for that session (decision 2008/228). It also deferred until its resumed substantive session consideration of the report of the Committee on its resumed 2008 session (decision 2008/229).

On 19 December, the Council took note of the Committee's report on its resumed 2008 session (decision 2008/261).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 37], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2008/4 [E/2008/32 (Part I) & E/2008/99/Corr.1] without vote [agenda item 12].

Measures to improve the quadrennial reporting procedures

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolution 1996/31 of 25 July 1996 on the consultative relationship between the United Nations and non-governmental organizations,

Reaffirming its resolution 1996/31, in which it established that one of the primary purposes of the consultative arrangement is to secure expert information or advice from organizations whose special competence and/or activities in areas of direct relevance to the aims and purposes of the United Nations qualified them to make a significant contribution to the work of the Economic and Social Council,

Mindful of the importance of an efficient and effective quadrennial reporting and review system to ensure the smooth functioning of a dynamic and productive consultative arrangement as set out in its resolution 1996/31,

Emphasizing that the quadrennial reporting exercise mandated under resolution 1996/31 constitutes the only formal monitoring mechanism established to enable the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations to confirm the continued existence and activity of a non-governmental organization and to determine that the organization conforms at all times to the principles governing the establishment and nature of its consultative relationship,

Recalling, in particular, paragraphs 55, 57 (c) and 61 (c) of its resolution 1996/31, which set out the responsibility of non-governmental organizations in general or special consultative status to submit quadrennial reports and the basis for the suspension or withdrawal of such consultative status for those organizations that fail to make any positive or effective contribution to the work of the United Nations,

Expressing serious concern at the unsatisfactory submission of quadrennial reports,

1. Decides that the procedure for the submission of quadrennial reports for a non-governmental organization in general or special consultative status shall be as follows:

(a) Six months prior to the due date for the report, the Non-Governmental Organizations Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat shall write to the non-governmental organization concerned to remind it of the reporting requirement, the expected date of the submission of the report and the penalties for non-reporting, as stipulated in the present resolution in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1996/31;

(b) One month after the due date for the report, the Non-Governmental Organizations Section shall send a notice to the non-governmental organization concerned reminding it of the reporting requirement and of the penalties for non-reporting, and requesting that the report be submitted by the first day of the following January;

(c) If the outstanding report is not received by the first day of the following January, the Non-Governmental Organizations Section shall send a final letter to the non-governmental organization concerned, requesting that the report be submitted by the first day of the following May and warning that non-receipt of the report by that date shall result in the suspension of consultative status, and shall copy the letter to the permanent mission to the United Nations of the country where the non-governmental organization has its headquarters;

(d) If no report is received by the first day of the following May, the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations shall, at its resumed session, compile a list of all non-governmental organizations with outstanding reports and recommend to the Economic and Social Council the immediate suspension of their consultative status for a period of one year;

(e) Following a decision by the Economic and Social Council to suspend the consultative status of any non-governmental organization with an outstanding report, the Non-Governmental Organizations Section shall write to the non-governmental organization concerned advising it of the suspension, requesting the submission of the outstanding report by the first day of May of the following year and warning that failure to submit the report by such time shall result in the withdrawal of consultative status, and shall copy the letter to the permanent mission to the United Nations of the country where the non-governmental organization has its headquarters;

(f) At its resumed session to be held the following May, the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations shall review the status of reporting of the non-governmental organizations whose consultative status has been suspended and shall recommend to the Economic and Social Council either the reinstatement of consultative status for any non-governmental organization that has hitherto submitted its report or the withdrawal of consultative status for any non-governmental organization with a report still outstanding;

2. Reiterates that, in accordance with paragraph 56 of its resolution 1996/31, in cases where the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations has decided to recommend that the general or special consultative status of a non-governmental organization or its listing on the Roster be suspended or withdrawn, the non-governmental organization concerned shall have an opportunity to present its response for appropriate consideration by the Committee as expeditiously as possible;

3. Also reiterates that, in accordance with paragraph 59 of its resolution 1996/31, a non-governmental organization whose consultative status or whose listing on the Roster is withdrawn may be entitled to reapply for consultative status or for inclusion on the Roster no sooner than three years after the effective date of such withdrawal;

4. Requests the Non-Governmental Organizations Section to ensure that the revised guidelines are clearly posted on the Section's website and included in the initial letter sent to each non-governmental organization that has been granted general or special consultative status.

Strengthening of NGO Section of DESA

On 5 June [E/2008/32 (Part II) & Corr.1], the Committee on NGOs was briefed by the Chief of the NGO Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) on the activities and staffing of the Section. She invited the Committee to consider the Section's staffing problems and growing workload as an opportunity to review, overhaul and modernize the system and the methods used in processing applications and in the quadrennial reports review, and to consider a greater use of new information technology.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 July [meeting 37], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2008/5 [draft: E/2008/L.9], without vote [agenda item 12].

Strengthening of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the provisions of its resolution 1996/31 of 25 July 1996 on the consultative relationship between the Economic and Social Council and non-governmental organizations,

Aware of the evolving relationship between the United Nations and the non-governmental organizations community, reflecting the broader and more substantive involvement of non-governmental organizations with the Economic and Social Council and the United Nations at large,

Mindful of the significantly large increase in the number of non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council that has occurred in recent years, and conscious that the number will continue to increase in the foreseeable future,

Mindful also of the demands that the participation of the expansion of non-governmental organizations places on the workload and resources of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat,

Recalling paragraph 68 of its resolution 1996/31 regarding the requirement for adequate Secretariat support to fulfil the mandate defined for the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations with respect to carrying out the wider range of activities in which the enhanced involvement of non-governmental organizations was envisaged,

Recalling also the regular programme of technical cooperation under section 22 of the programme budget of the United Nations,

Emphasizing the need to ensure that the Non-Governmental Organizations Section is able to operate efficiently in carrying out its mandate at the optimum level of performance,

Emphasizing also the need to strengthen partnership with civil society as emphasized by the Secretary-General within the context of the reform of the United Nations by integrating analytical capacity with technical cooperation activities for greater effectiveness and efficiency,

1. Regrets the weak capacity of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full utilization of the resources allocated to it as well as the filling of all vacant posts and to report on proposals to further strengthen the capacity of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section within the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 and the maintenance of the institutional memory of the Non-Governmental Organizations Section, thereby making full use of lessons learned and best practices within the Section so as to enable it to carry out its responsibilities efficiently and effectively;

2. Recommends that a technical cooperation programme be established for the Non-Governmental Organizations Section aimed at providing advisory services, the conduct of capacity-building workshops designed to launch the United Nations Non-Governmental Organizations Informal Regional Network (UN-NGO-IRENE), at the regional, subregional and national levels, and the development of training materials and the promotion of pilot joint partnership initiatives, projects and programmes involving the United Nations, civil society and Governments worldwide, especially for the countries most in need.

United Nations financing and programming

The financial situation of the United Nations showed some improvement in 2008, although it remained fragile. Cash availability under the regular budget was lower than in 2007 and stood at $19 million by year's end. Assessments stood at $1.8 billion—a decrease of some $174 million—and unpaid assessments totalled $417 million, compared to $428 million in 2007. Cash balances were higher for peacekeeping operations, the international tribunals and the capital master plan, while debt owed to Member States stood at $431 million. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full and on time increased to 146.

In December, the General Assembly adopted revised budget appropriations for the 2008–2009 biennium of $4,865,080,200 representing an increase of $657,471,800 over the revised appropriation of $4,207,608,400 approved in April. It invited the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed 2010–2011 programme budget on the basis of a preliminary estimate of $4,871,048,700.

The Committee on Contributions continued to review the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments of Member States' contributions to the budget and to encourage the payment of arrears through the multi-year payment plan process. The General Assembly continued to review the efficiency of United Nations administrative and financial functioning.

The General Assembly also examined the proposed strategic framework for 2010–2011 and endorsed the proposed biennial programme plan for that period.

Financial situation

Although the overall United Nations financial situation showed some improvement in 2008, it remained fragile. In October [A/63/514], the Secretary-General reported that unpaid assessed contributions were concentrated among a few Member States and that the final outcome for 2008 would largely depend on payments made by those States in the last months of the year. As at 24 October, aggregate assessments were $9.1 billion (compared to $9.2 billion in 2007). That amount included increased assessments of $310 million for the international tribunals, compared to $296 million in 2007. He also said that it might be necessary to borrow $148 million from reserve accounts by the end of December. However, if the aforementioned States paid their 2008 assessments in full, there could be a positive cash balance at year's end.

As at 24 October, unpaid assessments for the regular budget, peacekeeping and the two international tribunals totalled $3.7 billion, which included: $2.9 billion for peacekeeping (compared to $3.5 billion at 31 October 2007); $756 million for the regular budget ($80 million less than in 2007); and $53 million for the international tribunals ($11 million less than in 2007). It was forecast that the Organization would owe Member States $645 million for troop and equipment costs as at 31 December 2008. That amount was significantly lower than the $779 million outstanding at 31 December 2007. Member States that had paid their regular budget assessments in full as at 24 October numbered 133, seven more than at 31 October 2007.

In his end-of-year review of the financial situation [A/63/514/Add.1], the Secretary-General noted that the performance of the four main indicators of the Organization's financial health reflected improvement as compared to 31 December 2007: regular assessments issued during 2008 had decreased by some $174 million; unpaid assessments to the regular budget had also decreased to $417 million from $428 million at 31 December 2007; cash balances were higher for peacekeeping operations, the international tribunals and the capital master plan (CMP), but lower for the regular budget; and the debt owed to Member States was $431 million. Some $19 million in cash was available for the regular budget at year's end.

The position of the international tribunals improved, as amounts outstanding decreased to $26 million, from $34 million in 2007. However, the amounts outstanding for peacekeeping operations increased to $2.9 billion, compared to $2.7 billion in 2007. The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessments in full was 146, six more than in 2007.

On 24 December, the General Assembly decided that the item on improving the financial situation of the United Nations would remain for consideration at its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

UN budget

Budget for 2008–2009

Revised appropriations

In the first performance report on the 2008–2009 programme budget [A/63/573], the Secretary-General identified adjustments to the level of appropriations as a result of variations in the rates of inflation and exchange, adjustments to standard costs, unforeseen and extraordinary items, vacancies, as well as additional mandates approved by the General Assembly and the Security Council.

The adjustments yielded revised requirements of $4,388.4 million, an increase of $180.8 million more than the revised appropriation of $4,207.6 million approved by resolutions 62/237 A and B [YUN 2007, p. 1449] and 62/245 (see p. 1550), and an increase in income by $6.8 million, resulting in a revised income estimate of $526.9 million. Consequently, the revised net requirements for the 2008–2009 biennium amounted to $3,861.5 million, an increase of $174.0 million.

In December [A/63/620], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) recommended that the Assembly approve the revised estimates submitted by the Secretary-General, subject to such adjustments resulting from its consideration of matters currently before it, including the consolidated statement of revised estimates and programme budget implications.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/63/648/Add.4], adopted resolution 63/264 A–C without vote [agenda item 118].

C*FINANCING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE YEAR 2009The General Assembly,*

Resolves that, for the year 2009:

1. Budget appropriations totalling 2,779,400,350 United States dollars and consisting of 2,085,679,850 dollars, being half of the appropriation initially approved for the biennium 2008–2009 in its resolution 62/237 A of 22 December 2007, 36,248,700 dollars, being the additional appropriation approved for the biennium in its resolution 62/245 of 3 April 2008, and 657,471,800 dollars, being the increase approved in resolution A above, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 3.1 and 3.2 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, as follows:

- (a) 14,890,800 dollars, consisting of:
  - (i) 24,840,100 dollars, being half of the estimated income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in its resolution 62/237 B of 22 December 2007;
  - (ii) 9,949,300 dollars, being the decrease in income other than staff assessment income approved for the biennium in resolution B above;
- (b) 2,764,509,550 dollars, being the assessment on Member States in accordance with its resolution 61/237 of 22 December 2006, of which 45 million dollars is subject to assessment in accordance with paragraph 8 of section XII of resolution 63/263 of 24 December 2008;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of 283,193,400 dollars, consisting of:

- (a) 232,890,200 dollars, being half of the estimated staff assessment income approved by the Assembly in its resolution 62/237 B;
- (b) 4,617,100 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in its resolution 62/245;

(c) 45,148,000 dollars, being the estimated increase in income from staff assessment approved by the Assembly in resolution B above;

(d) 538,100 dollars, being the increase in income from staff assessment for the biennium 2006–2007 compared with the revised estimates approved by the Assembly in its resolution 62/235 B of 22 December 2007.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the 2008–2009 programme budget would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Questions relating to the 2008–2009 programme budget

The Fifth Committee considered a number of questions related to the 2008–2009 programme budget, including the revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions by the Economic and Social Council and by the Human Rights Council, estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council, the first performance report on the 2008–2009 programme budget, and the contingency fund.

Other subjects covered included the construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre (see p. 1546) and additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa (ibid.), and the improvement and modernization of conference facilities and construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (ibid.); the construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance related to the provision of an integrated headquarters facility in Baghdad for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (see p. 1548); the establishment of the Rule of Law Unit in the Executive Office of the Secretary-General (see p. 1547); the review of the lump-sum arrangement of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (ibid.); the International Civil Service Commission (ibid.); estimates resulting from the entry into force of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol thereto (ibid.); human resources management (ibid.); and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (see p. 1548).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/648/Add.4], adopted resolution 63/263 without vote [agenda item 118].

Questions relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009

The General Assembly,

I

Construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre and additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, and improvement and modernization of the conference facilities and construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi

Recalling its resolution 56/270 of 27 March 2002, section IV of its resolution 58/272 of 23 December 2003 and sections IX and X of its resolution 62/238 of 22 December 2007,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on improving and modernizing the conference facilities and the construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and on the construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre, and the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to construct, improve and modernize facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the Vienna International Centre to ensure the efficient work of the Organization,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the efforts of the Governments of Ethiopia and Kenya, as host countries, in facilitating the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the improvement and modernization of the conference facilities and the construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and of the efforts of the Government of Austria, as host country, in completing the construction of new conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre, as well as in achieving good progress in the asbestos removal project;

2. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;

3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

4. Underlines the risks inherent in the execution of construction projects, and stresses the importance of adequate planning, coordination and project supervision to avoid going over budget;

5. Expresses concern about the delays and procedural difficulties in the execution of the projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi, which are contributing to project cost escalation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake management reviews of the projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi with a view to expediting implementation, to ensure that a dedicated project management capacity is in place at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi and to report to the General Assembly thereon in the context of his next annual progress reports;

7. Emphasizes the importance of guidance, interaction and coordination between the Secretariat in New York, on the one hand, and the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi, on the other hand, with clear reporting lines;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure full accountability for the delays, lack of responsiveness of management to the needs of the construction projects in Addis Ababa and Nairobi and other factors that have contributed to delays in the implementation of the projects and project cost escalation and to include that information in his next annual progress reports;

9. Stresses the importance of the leadership and guidance of the Secretary-General and senior management as well as a commitment to the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi by all parties concerned during the execution and completion of the projects;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to update the Member States through regular informal briefings on the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to complete the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi as planned, without any further delays or additional requirements from the regular budget, and to ensure that progress is monitored by the Under-Secretary-General for Management, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the construction regulations and rules of the Organization, including the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, are abided by and fully upheld in all phases of the construction projects at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

13. Approves the revised estimated cost of 25,252,200 United States dollars for the construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

14. Also approves the use of interest income of 798,200 dollars as at 31 December 2007, and further approves the use of future interest income generated by accumulated rental income for the construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

15. Further approves the revised estimated cost of 3,479,000 dollars for improving and modernizing the conference facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services with ensuring continuing effective audit coverage as well as regular, thorough management reviews of the construction of additional office facilities at the Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa and the United Nations Office at Nairobi, to be reported on in the annual report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services to the General Assembly;

17. Recalls paragraphs 24, 25, 35 and 44 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to submit, in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, information that outlines clearly the interaction between the Secretariat in New York and other duty stations for construction and long-term renovation projects, and that specifies all aspects of the division of responsibility and accountability;

II

Revised estimates relating to the Rule of Law Unit

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 for the Rule of Law Unit and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Decides to establish one P-5, two P-4 and one P-3 posts for the Rule of Law Unit, effective 1 January 2009;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Director of the Unit continues to be provided, for 2009, through secondment;
5. Decides to revert to this issue in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

III

Administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2008

Recalling its resolution 63/251 of 24 December 2008, entitled “United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission”,

Takes note of the statement submitted by the Secretary-General in accordance with rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly on the administrative and financial implications of the decisions and recommendations contained in the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2008 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

IV

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2008

Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2008, and endorses the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

V

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its seventh, eighth and ninth sessions, proposals to improve the procedure for presenting to the General Assembly the financial requirements arising from the resolutions and decisions of the Council, and a consolidated statement on resolutions and decisions adopted by the Council arising from its continuing review of its subsidiary machinery and related programme budget implications

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

VI

Revised estimates resulting from the entry into force of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol thereto

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

VII

Review of the lump-sum arrangement of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

VIII

Human resources management

Recalling section II of its resolution 63/250 of 24 December 2008,

1. Decides to approve, in connection with the harmonization of contractual arrangements, an additional appropriation in the amount of 13,165,400 dollars under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to include a total amount of 80,900,900 dollars in the respective budgets of the affected peacekeeping missions for the period from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010;

IX

Administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the United Nations
Joint Staff Pension Board

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Requests the Secretary-General to report on any additional requirements arising from the recommendations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

X

Revised estimates under section 32,
Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, relating to the provision of an integrated headquarters facility for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, in Baghdad

Recalling its resolutions 62/237 A and 62/238 of 22 December 2007,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under section 3, Political affairs, and section 32, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, relating to the provision of an integrated headquarters facility for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, in Baghdad, the relevant parts of the report of the Secretary-General on the estimates in respect of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the revised estimates under section 3, Political affairs, and section 32, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, relating to the provision of an integrated headquarters facility for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, in Baghdad;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Welcomes the contribution of the Government of Iraq, and recognizes the importance of the proposal for the construction of a purpose-built integrated headquarters for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq;
4. Approves commitment authority for 2009 for the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq in the amount of 5 million dollars under section 32 of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 to undertake design work in connection with the construction of the United Nations integrated compound in Baghdad;
5. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring that the project is based on accurate assumptions and that its planning phase takes into account the experience of the execution of other construction projects in the United Nations and also of ensuring proper accountability with regard to the implementation of the project;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a new, complete and detailed proposal for the construction of the United Nations integrated compound in Baghdad, under section 32 of the programme budget, for its consideration early in the second part of its resumed sixty-third session, with detailed comprehensive financial requirements and clear timelines for the different phases of its implementation;

XI

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council

Recalling its resolutions 62/237 A and 62/238 of 22 December 2007 and 62/245 of 3 April 2008,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Regrets that the timing of the presentation of the report of the Secretary-General to the Fifth Committee was delayed until the last week of the main part of the sixty-third session of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to present future budget proposals for the special political missions no later than the last week of October;
4. Requests the Secretary-General to revise the narrative and the logical framework of the budget for the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004), taking into account recent developments and the concerns raised by Member States, and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly before the first part of its resumed sixty-third session;
5. Takes note of paragraph 94 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides to establish one Political Affairs Officer position at the P-3 level and five Local level positions;
6. Also takes note of paragraph 158 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides to reclassify the Chief Technical Adviser position from the D-1 to the D-2 level;
7. Decides to establish a position at the P-5 level, instead of one at the P-4 level, in the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on Cyprus;
8. Approves budgets totalling 429,497,600 dollars for the twenty-seven special political missions authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council presented in table 1 of the report of the Secretary-General;
9. Takes note of the estimated unencumbered balance of 15,850,800 dollars;
10. Decides to appropriate, after taking into account the estimated unencumbered balance of 15,850,800 dollars, under the procedures provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, an amount of 413,646,800 dollars under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

11. Also decides to appropriate an amount of 26,432,000 dollars under section 35, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

First performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009

Having considered the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolutions 62/237 A and B of 22 December 2007 and 62/245 of 3 April 2008,

Taking note of the current challenges caused by the global financial crisis,

1. Reaffirms the budgetary process as approved in its resolution 41/213 and reaffirmed in subsequent resolutions;

2. Takes note of the first performance report of the Secretary-General on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, and endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Also takes note of paragraph 5 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and emphasizes that the content of the first performance report should be limited, in principle, to a description of parameter changes endorsed by the General Assembly;

4. Endorses paragraph 11 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to explore the recosting methodologies used by other international organizations with that used by the Secretariat, taking into account the unique nature of the United Nations, and to report thereon to the General Assembly in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

5. Recalls section III, paragraph 6, of its resolution 60/283 of 7 July 2006, and requests the Secretary-General to implement the provisions of that paragraph and to report to the General Assembly thereon in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

6. Approves a net increase of 174 million dollars in the appropriation approved for the biennium 2008–2009 and a net increase of 6.8 million dollars in the estimates of income for the biennium, to be apportioned among expenditure and income sections as indicated in the report of the Secretary-General;

7. Decides to apportion among Member States 129 million dollars for expenses related to the first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

8. Approves up to 45 million dollars for expenses relating to the first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, upon the receipt by the President of the General Assembly of a letter from the Secretary-General, to be apportioned among Member States, as an exception to regulation 3.3 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

9. Stresses, bearing in mind the third preambular paragraph of the present section, that the provisions of paragraph 8 constitute an exceptional measure;

XIII

Contingency fund

Notes that a balance of 5,122,000 dollars remains in the contingency fund.

Contingency fund

The contingency fund, established by General Assembly resolution 41/213 [YUN 1986, p. 1024], accommodated additional expenditures relating to each biennium that derived from legislative mandates not provided for in the proposed programme budget or from revised estimates. Guidelines for its use were annexed to Assembly resolution 42/211 [YUN 1987, p. 1098].

In a 29 December report [A/C.5/63/20] on the contingency fund, the Secretary-General submitted the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates for the fund, which included potential new charges amounting to $7,069,000 and would result in a remaining fund balance of $5,122,000.

Revised estimates in respect of matters of which the Security Council was seized

In February [A/62/512/Add.6], the Secretary-General submitted proposed additional net requirements for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2008 in the amount of $51,850,900 for the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Lord's Resistance Army-affected areas, the United Nations Representative to the International Advisory and Monitoring Board, the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the future status process for Kosovo, the United Nations Mission in Nepal and the United Nations Political Office for Somalia.

In March [A/62/7/Add.37], ACABQ recommended that the General Assembly approve the requested resources subject to its recommendations and noted that part of the additional requirements would be met from the balance of $17,322,800 in the provision for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the 2008–2009 programme budget. By resolution 62/245 of 3 April (see p. 1550), the Assembly approved net requirements of $48,954,400.

In a 27 October report [A/63/346 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted proposed requirements for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2009 for 27 special political missions, which were estimated at $466,844,500 net ($495,435,000 gross).

In December [A/63/593], ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the requested resources subject to the Committee's recommendations.

The Assembly, in section XI of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1548), approved budgets totalling $429,497,600 for the 27 special political missions.

Revised estimates resulting from Human Rights Council action

In a 1 February report [A/62/671], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimated requirements totalling $2,916,000 for the 2008–2009 biennium, resulting from resolutions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its sixth session and fifth special session, both held in 2007. A total of $2,449,300 had been included in the programme budget, and the balance of $466,700 would be accommodated from within existing appropriations. A consolidated statement of requirements arising from the continuing review by the Council of its subsidiary machinery and the potential absorptive capacity of the 2008–2009 programme budget under the amended programme of work would be reported to the Assembly during the biennium.

In February [A/62/7/Add.34], ACABQ noted that although the procedure used to report to the Assembly the requirements arising from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Council represented an effort at transparency on the part of the Secretariat, it nevertheless contributed to a piecemeal approach to budgeting for those requirements. The Committee therefore called for the improvement of the procedure and recommended that the Secretary-General make proposals in that regard, in time for the Committee to consider them in the context of its review of the consolidated statement, which would be submitted to the Assembly in late 2008 or early 2009. ACABQ also recommended that the Assembly note the estimated requirements of $2,916,000, which would be requested by the Secretary-General in the context of a consolidated statement of requirements arising from the continuing review by the Council of its subsidiary machinery.

In a November report [A/63/541], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimated requirements resulting from resolutions adopted by the Council at its seventh and eighth sessions held in 2008, totalling $6,889,800, of which $5,623,400 would be accommodated from within existing appropriations under the 2008–2009 programme budget. The Secretary-

General also intended to submit a consolidated statement of requirements on the remaining balance of $1,266,400.

In a 4 December report [A/63/587], the Secretary-General submitted a consolidated statement of requirements arising from the continuing review by the Council of its subsidiary machinery, for which provisions had not been made in the 2008–2009 programme budgets, in the amount of $1,733,100.

In a 10 December report [A/63/541/Add.1], the Secretary-General submitted revised estimated requirements arising from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its ninth session totalling $2,149,300, of which $1,681,700 had already been included in the programme budget and $467,600 would be accommodated from within existing appropriations. In response to Human Rights Council decision 9/103 (see p. 712), the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that while requirements arising from that decision were estimated at $6,137,700 (gross) or $5,898,300 net of staff assessment, those requirements were presented in the statement of programme budget implications [A/C.3/63/L.77], which was later withdrawn.

In an 18 December report [A/63/629], ACABQ stated that the three aforementioned reports of the Secretary-General did not provide a clear and concise presentation of requirements and their background. In that regard, the Committee called for subsequent annual reports to be more clear. It also recommended that the Assembly approve the additional requirements of $1,733,100, with the understanding that any appropriations which might be necessary would be requested in the context of the consolidated statement of programme budget implications and revised estimates for 2008–2009 relating to the use of the contingency fund.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/62/563/Add.3], adopted resolution 62/245 without vote [agenda item 128].

Special subjects relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009

The General Assembly,

I

Revised estimates resulting from resolutions adopted by the Human Rights Council

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on revised estimates resulting from resolutions adopted by the Human Rights Council at its sixth session and its fifth special session in 2007 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Also takes note of the preliminary estimated requirements of 2,916,000 United States dollars for the biennium 2008–2009;
3. Further takes note that the estimated requirements of 2,449,300 dollars have been included in the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and that the balance of 466,700 dollars is to be considered in the context of a consolidated statement of requirements arising from the continuing review by the Human Rights Council of its subsidiary machinery;
4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals to improve the procedure for presenting the financial requirements arising from resolutions and decisions of the Human Rights Council for consideration at its sixty-third session;

II

Financing of field missions of the Peacebuilding Commission

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing of field missions of the Peacebuilding Commission and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General;
2. Also takes note of the preliminary estimate of 676,300 dollars for field missions of the Peacebuilding Commission under the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;
3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

III

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council: additional requirements for special political missions for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2008

Recalling section V of its resolution 62/238 of 22 December 2007,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;
3. Decides to maintain the staffing for the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Lord's Resistance Army-affected areas at the level currently funded under the provisions of its resolution 62/239 of 22 December 2007 on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the biennium 2008–2009;

4. Also decides to review the staffing and resource allocation for the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for Lord's Resistance Army-affected areas at the main part of its sixty-third session in the context of the 2009 budget proposal for special political missions;

5. Further decides to redeploy twenty-two positions (Local level) from the Electoral Assistance Office of the United Nations Mission in Nepal according to the needs of the Mission;

6. Approves additional budgets for special political missions for 2008 totalling 48,954,400 dollars net (53,571,500 dollars gross);

7. Takes note of the balance of 17,322,800 dollars in the overall provision for special political missions under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

8. Decides to appropriate, under the procedure provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, an additional amount of 31,631,600 dollars under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

9. Also decides to appropriate an amount of 4,617,100 dollars under section 35, Staff assessment, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009.

Revised estimates resulting from Economic and Social Council action

In a September report [A/63/371], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements resulting from resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council at its 2008 substantive sessions, relating to activities of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti and preparations for the high-level segment of the fifty-second session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. Those requirements were estimated at $420,500, which could be absorbed within the resources provided for the 2008–2009 biennium.

In November [A/63/567], ACABQ stated that it had no objection to the Secretary-General's proposed expenditure requirements.

Revised estimates for business continuity management

In September [A/63/359 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted additional requirements to the 2008–2009 programme budget in the amount of $4,692,400, which related to the implementation of business continuity management throughout the UN secretariat, including offices away from Headquarters and regional commissions. It was anticipated that $973,200 would be accommodated from within existing appropriations and that net additional requirements would amount to $3,719,200.

In December [A/63/584], ACABQ recommended that the Secretariat draw upon the experience of other UN entities in formulating its business continuity strategy, and that economies of scale should be possible to achieve, given that business continuity management was a matter of system-wide concern. In addition, the approach set out in the Secretary-General's report required further development and justification, including clarifying the relationship among business continuity management processes, the risk management framework, and proposals on information and communications technology. The Committee also recommended that the Secretary-General submit a fully justified request for post and non-post resources in the context of the proposed programme budget for 2008–2009. It further recommended approval of commitment authority for the net additional resource requirements for the biennium 2008–2009 in the amount of $1,236,700.

Reserve for United Nations Postal Administration

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/238 [YUN 2007, p. 1451], the Secretary-General transmitted an August report [A/63/320] on the contingent liability reserve for the United Nations Postal Administration (UNPA), which provided an update on measures that were taken as an alternative to the establishment of a contingent liability reserve to eliminate risks posed to UNPA by mass mailing. In New York, effective 1 September 2007, UNPA implemented a new stringent policy restricting large consignments of mail, specialized mail services and mass mail, which eliminated bulk mail charges while maintaining mail services for philatelic services as outlined in the UN agreement with the United States Postal Service. Since that date, no bulk mail had been presented to UNPA for posting. The elimination of bulk mail had positive effects on UNPA operations, which reported a net profit of $1.5 million for the 2006–2007 biennium.

With the implementation of the new policy and the related decrease in postal charges and liability, the Secretary-General recommended that a reserve not be established and that the existing practice be continued, which involved drawing from current income to meet any additional postage expenditures incurred from sales recorded in prior periods. He added that once a trend emerged from the implementation of the new policy, allowing the appropriate level of contingent liability to be determined with accuracy, UNPA, in coordination with the Office for Programme Planning, Budget and Accounts, would estimate the new level, which would then be brought to the attention of the Assembly.

In November [A/63/568], ACABQ noted the Secretary-General's recommendation against the establishment of a reserve. It also requested that the next report on the UNPA contingent liability reserve indicate how the value of the UNPA contingent liability for stamps that had not been sold and were to be presented for mailing in the future would be disclosed once International Public Sector Accounting Standards were implemented. The Committee reiterated the merits of creating a reserve for contingent liabilities for postal services for previously issued UNPA stamps and recommended that the feasibility of issuing value-added stamps (the sale of premium stamps at a price above their face value) be explored for the purpose of establishing such a reserve.

Working capital fund

The Working Capital Fund for the 2008–2009 biennium was established at $150 million by the General Assembly in December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1458]. As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations, pending the receipt of assessed contributions, to pay for unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, as well as for miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and advance insurance premiums, and to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits.

In December [ST/ADM/SER.B/761], the Secretariat issued an assessment of Member States' advances to the Fund and contributions to the UN regular budget as at 31 December 2008.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses

Under the terms of General Assembly resolution 62/239 [YUN 2007, p. 1459], the Secretary-General was authorized, with the prior concurrence of ACABQ, to enter into commitments to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to the 2008–2009 biennium, without reverting to the Assembly for approval.

In his first performance report on the 2008–2009 programme budget [A/63/573], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that he had entered into commitments in the amount of $1,359,200, of which $1,159,200 was for activities relating to the maintenance of peace and security and $200,000 was for commitments certified by the President of the International Court of Justice.

Revised estimates in respect of development-related activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/236 [YUN 2007, p. 1441], the Secretary-General transmitted a February report [A/62/708], which provided a comprehensive proposal on improving the delivery of the mandates of the development-related activities of the UN Secretariat, including the Department of Eco-conomic and Social Affairs (DESA), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the regional commissions and the Development Account. The revised estimated requirements resulting from the proposal totalled $25,571,000, and included the establishment of 152 new posts.

In July [A/62/7/Add.40], ACABQ found that the Secretary-General's report was lacking in analysis and in the presentation of detailed information. It recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to provide information on coordination issues in the context of the budget proposals for the 2010–2011 biennium. The Committee also recommended reductions totalling $9,327,700; the approval of total staffing and non-staffing requirements of $16,243,300 for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2009; and the approval of 135 new posts and one position to be funded from general temporary assistance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/648/Add.1], adopted resolution 63/260 without vote [agenda item 118].

Development-related activities

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on improving the effective and efficient delivery of the mandates of development-related activities and revised estimates relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and the Development Account, and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on improving the effective and efficient delivery of the mandates of development-related activities and revised estimates relating to the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and the Development Account;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Acknowledges that peace and security, development and human rights are the pillars of the United Nations system and the foundations for collective security and well-being, and recognizes that development, peace and security and human rights are interlinked and mutually reinforcing;

4. Stresses the importance of a coherent vision of the Secretariat's role in the global development architecture;

5. Encourages the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to enhance the coordination of the United Nations development system with a view to ensuring greater synergies, effectiveness, efficiencies and coherence of efforts in the delivery of its social, economic and development mandates;

6. Decides to establish the posts as contained in the annex to the present resolution;

7. Also decides that the posts for section 17, Economic and social development in Africa, section 18, Economic and social development in Asia and the Pacific, section 19, Economic development in Europe, section 20, Economic and social development in Latin America and the Caribbean, and section 21, Economic and social development in Western Asia, shall be established effective 1 January 2009, and the posts for section 9, Economic and social affairs, section 10, Least developed countries, landlocked developing countries and small island developing States, section 11, United Nations support for the New Partnership for Africa's Development, and section 12, Trade and development, shall be established effective 1 July 2009;

8. Further decides not to abolish the post of the Special Adviser on Africa at the level of Under-Secretary-General;

9. Decides not to approve the non-post resources for travel of staff, consultants and experts and contractual services, excluding the regional commissions;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution within the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2012–2013.

Programme budget outline for 2010–2011

Report of Secretary-General. In December [A/63/600], the Secretary-General presented the proposed programme budget outline for the 2010–2011 biennium, describing the preliminary estimate of resources, priorities, real growth compared with the previous budget, and the size of the contingency fund as a percentage of the overall level of resources. The preliminary estimate for the 2010–2011 biennium, expressed in 2008–2009 prices, amounted to $4,617.9 million.

The preliminary estimate ($3,792.2 million), before the inclusion of special political missions, represented an increase of $20.1 million, or 0.5 per cent, compared with the 2008–2009 biennium. Taking account of the full inclusion of provisions for those missions, the total preliminary estimate of $4,617.9 million represented an increase of $410.3 million, or 9.8 per cent, compared with the 2008–2009 biennium.

Noting that the size of the contingency fund was set at 0.75 per cent of the overall resource level, the Secretary-General recommended that the fund again be set at the same rate, or $34.6 million, for the 2010–2011 biennium.

ACABQ report. In December [A/63/622], ACABQ noted that in order for the budget outline to be a practical tool in the budget preparation process, it must be submitted by the Secretary-General sufficiently early during off-budget years, instead of at the very end of off-budget years, as had been the case for several bienniums. It also drew attention to an additional amount of $44.3 million included in the outline for posts that were already being partially funded in the current biennium. With regard to the provisions for special political missions, the Committee noted that the estimated amount of $825.7 million was included in the budget outline at the level that was equivalent to the revised provision proposed for the biennium 2008–2009. In view of the magnitude of the provision for special political missions and the variability in requirements for those missions, the Committee recommended that the Secretary-General continue to present his overall estimates for the proposed budget outline in such a way as to readily identify those resources attributable to special political missions, and to use the same approach for presenting special political missions in the proposed programme budget.

With regard to the preliminary estimate of $4,617.9 million for the 2010–2011 budget outline and the items still under consideration by the Assembly, the Committee said that the proposed programme budget outline should have presented the fullest possible picture of the Organization's estimates of resources for the 2010–2011 biennium. It noted that the budget outline under consideration fell short of those requirements and was likely to increase to $5,187.1 million if it were to include the estimates of all the items before the Assembly and the foreseeable items in reports yet to be issued. The Committee recommended that the Assembly take into account the updated information contained in the report's annex in its consideration of the proposed 2010–2011 programme budget outline. It also recommended that the level of the contingency fund remain at 0.75 per cent, or $38.9 million.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/649], adopted resolution 63/266 without vote [agenda item 117].

Proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2010–2011

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit in off-budget years an outline of the proposed programme budget for the following biennium,

Reaffirming also section VI of its resolution 45/248 B of 21 December 1990,

Reaffirming further rule 153 of its rules of procedure,

Recalling its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the proposed programme budget outline for the biennium 2010–2011 and the recommendations contained in the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

2. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Reaffirms that the proposed programme budget outline shall contain an indication of the following:

(a) A preliminary estimate of resources needed to accommodate the proposed programme of activities during the biennium;

(b) Priorities, reflecting general trends of a broad sectoral nature;

(c) Real growth, positive or negative, compared with the previous budget;

(d) Size of the contingency fund expressed as a percentage of the overall level of resources;

4. Also reaffirms that the budget outline should provide a greater level of predictability of resources required for the following biennium and promote greater involvement of Member States in the budgetary process, thereby facilitating the broadest possible agreement on the programme budget;

5. Further reaffirms that the budget proposals of the Secretary-General should reflect resource levels commen-surate with mandates for their full, efficient and effective implementation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to include in the proposed budget outline and in the proposed programme budget, provisions for expenditures for special political missions related to peace and security that are expected to be extended or approved in the course of the biennium;

7. Stresses that the budget outline is a preliminary estimate of resources;

8. Invites the Secretary-General to prepare his proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 on the basis of a preliminary estimate of 4,871,048,700 United States dollars at revised 2008–2009 rates;

9. Notes that the preliminary estimates provided by the Secretary-General for the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 do not include provisions for the implementation of those requirements that are under discussion by the General Assembly and that the requirements pertinent to the regular budget should be reflected in the programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, subject to approval by the Assembly and in accordance with its resolutions 41/213 of 19 December 1986 and 42/211 of 21 December 1987;

10. Welcomes the information contained in paragraph 8 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and in the annex thereto;

11. Notes the additional information provided in the annex to the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to provide similar information in an annex to future budget outlines;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the report on special political missions an annex containing an updated estimate of the total budget for special political missions for the biennium 2010–2011 for consideration by the General Assembly at the beginning of its sixty-fourth session based on updated projected needs and without prejudging the decisions of the relevant legislative organs of the United Nations;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to include, in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011, the total amount of resources that he should have at his disposal, from all sources of financing, in order to implement fully all mandated programmes and activities;

14. Emphasizes that the proposed programme budget outline should be submitted sufficiently early in order to be able to serve as a practical tool in the budget preparation process, and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to issue future budget outlines at least thirty days prior to their scheduled introduction, but no later than 15 November of the off-budget year;

15. Decides that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 shall contain provisions for recosting on the basis of the existing methodology;

16. Reaffirms that the budget outline should be submitted in accordance with the priorities set by the General Assembly;

17. Decides that the priorities for the biennium 2010–2011 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

18. Notes that the preliminary indicative estimates contained in the present budget outline do not track precisely the priorities of the General Assembly in certain areas, including in the areas of development;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to reflect the priorities outlined in paragraph 17 above when presenting the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

20. Notes that the budget proposal will reflect the benefit of further reviews of possible obsolete activities, additional cost-effective measures and simplified procedures and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to rigorously pursue this in accordance with regulation 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, and established practices;

21. Decides that the contingency fund shall be set at the level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate, namely, at 36,532,900 dollars, that this amount shall be in addition to the overall level of the preliminary estimate, and that it shall be used in accordance with the procedures for the use and operation of the contingency fund.

Contributions

According to the Secretary-General's report on improving the financial situation of the United Nations [A/63/514/Add.1], unpaid assessed contributions to the UN budget at the end of 2008 totalled $417 million (compared to $428 million in 2007); outstanding peacekeeping arrears totalled $2,900 million (compared to $2,700 million in 2007); and total unpaid assessments to the international tribunals were reduced to $26 million (compared to $34 million in 2007).

The number of Member States paying their regular budget assessment in full increased to 146 (compared to 140 at the end of 2007).

Assessments

The Committee on Contributions, at its sixty-eighth session (New York, 9–27 June) [A/63/11], considered issues related to the payment of assessments, including the methodology for preparing the scale of assessments, multi-year payment plans and the application of Article 19 of the Charter. On its working methods, following the Committee's 2007 agreement to set up a website to assist its intersessional work and to facilitate the dissemination of reports and other publicly available documents [YUN 2007, p. 1459], a public website for the Committee was launched in June 2008. With regard to intersessional work, discussions were ongoing with the Office of Central Support Services for the establishment of a restricted website, to be made accessible to the members of the Committee. The Committee decided to hold its sixty-ninth (2009) session from 1 to 26 June 2009.

The General Assembly took action on the Committee's recommendations in October and December (see below). On 24 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the Committee's report until its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/550).

Application of Article 19

Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions [A/63/11] reviewed requests from seven Member States for exemption under Article 19, whereby a Member would lose its vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears should equal or exceed the amount of contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The Committee duly noted the Members' written and oral representations and evaluated them against their payment records and economic and political circumstances.

Determining that the failure of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan to pay the full minimum amount of their arrears necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 was due to conditions beyond their control, and recalling the Article's provision that a Member might be permitted to vote if the Assembly was satisfied that its failure to pay was due to such conditions, the Committee recommended that they be allowed to vote until the end of the sixty-third session of the Assembly. The Committee urged the Central African Republic, which had made no payments in the previous decade, to make some payments to reduce, or at least to avoid a further increase in, its unpaid assessed contributions and agreed that future considerations of requests for exemption might not be favourable in the light of the country's lack of commitment to addressing its arrears. The Committee noted that unless some minimum payments were made by Sao Tome and Principe, the debt burden would continue to increase, and urged its Government to at least pay amounts equivalent to current annual assessments to demonstrate its commitment to addressing its arrears. It also noted that the continuing payments made by Tajikistan under its multi-year payment plan had significantly exceeded the total payments foreseen in its schedule for the 2000–2008 period.

At the end of the Committee's session on 27 June, seven Member States—Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan—were in arrears in the payment of their assessed contributions under the terms of Article 19, yet had been permitted to vote in the Assembly until the end of the sixty-second session, pursuant to Assembly resolution 62/1 [YUN 2007, p. 1460].

Reports of Secretary-General. During the year, the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on payments made by certain Member States to reduce their level of arrears below that specified in Article 19, so that they could vote in the Assembly. As at 18 January [A/62/657], 15 Member States were below the gross amount assessed for the preceding two full years (2006–2007). By a series of letters from January to May [A/62/657/Add.1–8], that number was reduced to seven and remained at that number through 9 September [A/63/350].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 October [meeting 24], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/472], adopted resolution 63/4 without vote [agenda item 122].

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations: requests under Article 19 of the Charter

The General Assembly,

Having considered chapter V of the report of the Committee on Contributions on its sixty-eighth session,

Reaffirming the obligation of Member States under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly,

1. Reaffirms its role in accordance with the provisions of Article 19 of the Charter of the United Nations and the advisory role of the Committee on Contributions in accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;
2. Also reaffirms its resolution 54/237 C of 23 December 1999;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to bring to the attention of Member States the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C, including through an early announcement in the Journal of the United Nations and through direct communication;
4. Urges all Member States requesting exemption under Article 19 of the Charter to submit as much information as possible in support of their requests and to consider submitting such information in advance of the deadline specified in resolution 54/237 C so as to enable the collation of any additional detailed information that may be necessary;

5. Agrees that the failure of the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan to pay the full minimum amount necessary to avoid the application of Article 19 of the Charter was due to conditions beyond their control;

6. Decides that the Central African Republic, the Comoros, Guinea-Bissau, Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe, Somalia and Tajikistan shall be permitted to vote in the General Assembly until the end of its sixty-third session.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on the scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Multi-year payment plans

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/4 B [YUN 2002, p. 1385] and 61/237 [YUN 2006, p. 1626], the Secretary-General submitted a March report [A/63/68] on multi-year payment plans, which provided information on the payment plans/schedules submitted by Liberia, Sao Tome and Principe and Tajikistan, and on the status of their implementation as at 31 December 2007. Under the plans, each year a Member State would pay for the current year's assessments and a part of its arrears, so as to eliminate the arrears within six years. However, some of the plans had durations of between 8 and 11 years. In 2007, payments for Liberia and Sao Tome and Principe fell short of the amount foreseen in their respective plans for the year, while Tajikistan had significantly exceeded the payments foreseen in its schedule for the period 2000–2007. The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly encourage Member States with significant arrears to consider submitting a multi-year payment plan.

The Committee on Contributions [A/63/11] concluded that the system of multi-year payment plans continued to be a viable means for Member States to reduce their unpaid assessed contributions and demonstrate their commitment to meeting their financial obligations to the United Nations. The Committee also noted that no new multi-year payment plans had been submitted.

On 24 December, the Assembly deferred consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General on multi-year payment plans until its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/550).

Other matters related to payment of assessed contributions

The General Assembly also considered the recommendations of the Committee on Contributions on the methodology for future scales of assessments, as well as the issue of the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia [YUN 2003, p. 1428].

Scale methodology

Committee on Contributions. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 58/1 B [YUN 2003, p. 1424], the Committee on Contributions [A/63/11] continued to review the different elements of the methodology for preparing future scales of assessments, focusing on elements relating to income measure; conversion rates; base period; debt-burden adjustment; low per capita income adjustment; minimum (floor) and maximum (ceiling) assessment rates; annual recalculation; and large scale-to-scale increases in rates of assessment. In the absence of guidance from the Assembly, the Committee reviewed further the methodology utilized in preparing the scale of assessments for the period 2007–2009; an outline of the methodology was annexed to the report.

With regard to income measure, the Committee recommended that the scale of assessments for the next assessment period continue to be based on the most current, comprehensive and comparable gross national income (GNI) data, and encouraged Member States that had not done so to adopt the 1993 System of National Accounts [YUN 1993, p. 1112]. It also reaffirmed its recommendation for the use of conversion rates based on market exchange rates, except where it would cause excessive fluctuations and distortions in the GNI of some Member States, in which case price-adjusted rates of exchange or other appropriate conversion rates should be employed. The Committee decided to consider the questions of the debt-burden adjustment and low per capita income adjustment at its next session and to study annual recalculation at future sessions. It also decided to keep the issue of the base period under review and to consider the feasibility of applying systematic measures of transitional relief for Member States facing large scale-to-scale increases in their assessment rates.

Outstanding assessed contributions

In 2008, the General Assembly considered the Secretary-General's note on outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia [YUN 2003, p. 1428], his letter dated 27 December 2001 to the Assembly President [YUN 2001, p. 1325], the Secretary-General's report on unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia [YUN 2005, p. 1502] and the 2 November 2006 letter from Slovenia [YUN 2006, p. 1630].

On 24 December, by resolution 63/249 (see p. 1559), the Assembly decided that the issue of the unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia was resolved and that the unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia up to 27 April 1992, in the amount of $1,254,230, would be apportioned among the successor States of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/472/Add.1], adopted resolution 63/249 without vote [agenda item 122].

Unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia, the letter dated 27 December 2001 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the General Assembly, the note by the Secretary-General on the outstanding assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia and the letter dated 2 November 2006 from the Permanent Representative of Slovenia to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides that the unpaid assessed contributions to the account of the former Yugoslavia up to 27 April 1992, in the amount of 1,254,230 United States dollars, shall be apportioned among the successor States of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, taking into account the respective dates on which each successor State informed the Secretary-General that it had ceased to exist as part of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and the proportions set forth in article 5(2) of annex C to the Agreement on Succession Issues of 29 June 2001, as well as relevant decisions of the General Assembly concerning the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Operation in the Congo;

2. Also decides that, after taking into account the remaining advance of 26,000 dollars to the Working Capital Fund, the net balance of the unpaid assessed contributions to the account of the former Yugoslavia in the amount of 14,817,896 dollars shall be charged against the respective fund balances;

3. Urges, in this regard, the successor States of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to inform the Secretary-General as soon as possible of their respective shares of the outstanding amounts and credits, in accordance with paragraph 1 above;

4. Decides that the issue of the unpaid assessed contributions to the account of the former Yugoslavia shall be considered to be finally resolved upon receipt by the Secretary-General of the information requested in paragraph 3 above, and that the resolution of the issue of the unpaid assessed contributions of the former Yugoslavia to the United Nations shall be applicable only to that issue, without prejudice to any other related decisions and issues.

Accounts and auditing

The General Assembly, at its resumed sixty-second (2008) session, considered the report of the Board of Auditors on UN peacekeeping operations for the period 1 July 2006 to 30 June 2007 [A/62/5 (Vol. II)], together with the Secretary-General's report on the implementation of the Board's recommendations [A/62/784] and related ACABQ comments and recommendations [A/62/823].

On 20 June, the Assembly, in resolution 62/223 B, endorsed the Board's report (see p. 92).

Board of Auditors report. The Chairman of the Board of Auditors transmitted to the Secretary-General the financial reports and audited financial statements for the biennium ended 31 December 2007 on the United Nations [A/63/5 (Vol. I)] and on the following 14 entities: the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO [A/63/5 (Vol. III) & Corr.1], the United Nations University [A/63/5 (Vol. IV)], the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) [A/63/5/Add.1 & Corr.1], the United Nations Children's Fund [A/63/5/Add.2 & Corr.1], the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East [A/63/5/Add.3], the United Nations Institute for Training and Research [A/63/5/Add.4], the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [A/63/5/Add.5], the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme [A/63/5/Add.6], the United Nations Population Fund [A/63/5/Add.7], the United Nations Human Settlements Programme [A/63/5/Add.8], the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime [A/63/5/Add.9], the United Nations Office for Project Services [A/63/5/Add.10], the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 [A/63/5/Add.11] and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 [A/63/5/Add.12]. The Board submitted its report on the financial statements of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2007, which was incorporated into the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board [A/63/9]. The Board also submitted, through the Secretary-General, its report on the financial statements of the United Nations Compensation Commission for the biennium ended 31 December 2007 [S/2008/509].

Introducing the reports in the Fifth Committee [A/C.5/63/SR.7], the Chairman of the Board noted that for the first time, the Board had conducted all its audits and presented its reports in accordance with the International Standards on Auditing, rather than the Common Auditing Standards of the United Nations Panel of External Auditors which had previously guided its work. It had also introduced a consistent layout to its reports. He also stated that the Board's annual report on the capital master plan [A/63/5 (Vol. V)] and a report on the activities of the Procurement Task Force (see p. 1570) would be introduced to the Committee at a later date.

According to the Chairman, the Board had issued unqualified opinions for seven entities and modified audit reports with various emphases of matter for nine entities, which related to issues including negative reserves and fund balances, unconfirmed inter-fund balances, inadequate accounting for expendable and non-expendable property and inaccurate monitoring of nationally executed expenditure. The Board also noted the efforts of all United Nations Finance and Budget Network entities to adopt the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS), yet was concerned by the delay in the funding of the enterprise resource planning (ERP) system in the UN Secretariat and the consequent risk of delay in IPSAS implementation. In that connection, the Board also raised the question of inconsistencies in the format of the financial statements of the United Nations and its funds and programmes. With regard to action on its recommendations, the Board found that of the 788 recommendations made in previous bienniums, 505 (64 per cent) had been fully implemented, 250 (32 per cent) had been partially implemented, 19 (2 per cent) had not been implemented and 14 (2 per cent) had been overtaken by events.

By a July note [A/63/169], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a concise summary of the principal findings and conclusions contained in the Board's reports. According to the note, 10 of the 16 audited UN organizations had reported cases of fraud and presumptive fraud for the financial period that ended 31 December 2007. The administration had informed the Board that they had taken action against the staff and perpetrators involved, in addition to strengthening controls to prevent recurrences. The Board noted that some country offices had not submitted information on fraud and presumptive fraud to their headquarters, and that the statistics might not be complete in respect of matters still under investigation. Although the ethics office had been established and financial disclosure statements introduced, fraud prevention was still in the process of being enhanced, notably through the strengthening of the investigative function of the Organization.

In August, the Secretary-General submitted reports on implementation of the Board of Auditor's recommendations as contained in its reports on the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2007 [A/63/327], and on UN funds and programmes for the financial period ended 31 December 2007 [A/63/327/Add.1]. The related comments and observations of ACABQ were contained in an October report [A/63/474].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/637], adopted resolution 63/246 A without vote [agenda item 116].

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/222 of 11 April 1996, 51/218 E of 17 June 1997, 52/212 B of 31 March 1998, 53/204 of 18 December 1998, 53/221, section VIII, of 7 April 1999, 54/13 B of 23 December 1999, 55/220 A, B and C of 23 December 2000 and 12 April and 14 June 2001, 57/278 A of 20 December 2002, 60/234 A and B of 23 December 2005 and 30 June 2006, 61/233 A and B of 22 December 2006 and 29 June 2007 and 62/223 A and B of 22 December 2007 and 20 June 2008,

Recalling also all its resolutions related to the languages of the United Nations as well as those on human resources management,

Emphasizing the need to ensure the full implementation of the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations,

Having considered the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors for the period ended 31 December 2007 on the United Nations, the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/WTO, the United Nations University, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the Fund of the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the United Nations Office for Project Services, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994 and the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, the concise summary of principal findings and conclusions contained in the reports prepared by the Board of Auditors, the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2007, on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2007 and on the financial statements of the funds and programmes of the United Nations for the financial period ended 31 December 2007 and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the reports and audit opinions of the Board of Auditors for the above-mentioned organizations;

2. Approves the recommendations and conclusions contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors;

3. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

4. Emphasizes that the Board of Auditors shall be completely independent and solely responsible for the conduct of audit;

5. Decides to consider further the reports of the Board of Auditors on the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia under the respective agenda items relating to the Tribunals;

6. Commends the Board of Auditors for the superior quality of its reports, in particular with respect to its comments on the management of resources and improving the presentation of financial statements;

7. Recalls the statute of the International Civil Service Commission and the central role of the Commission and the General Assembly in the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system;

8. Also recalls its resolution 61/233 B, in which it reiterated that the issue of outstanding assessed contributions is a policy matter of the General Assembly, and urges all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure the payment of their assessed contributions in full and on time;

9. Stresses that the employment of staff shall continue to be carried out in strict accordance with Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations and in line with the relevant provisions of its resolutions;

10. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations for the biennium ended 31 December 2007, on the capital master plan for the year ended 31 December 2007 and on the financial statements of the funds and programmes of the United Nations for the financial period ended 31 December 2007, and also takes note of the improvements made on the implementation rate;

11. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the funds and programmes of the United Nations to ensure full implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors and the related recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in a prompt and timely manner and to hold programme managers accountable for non-implementation of the recommendations;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to provide in his reports on the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations as well as on the financial statements of its funds and programmes a full explanation for the delays in the implementation of the recommendations of the Board, in particular those recommendations not yet fully implemented which are two or more years old;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to indicate in future reports an expected time frame for the implementation of the recommendations of the Board of Auditors, the priorities for their implementation and the office holders to be held accountable.

On the same date, the Assembly deferred consideration of the item on financial reports and audited financial statements and reports of the Board of Auditors to its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Financial management practices

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

In compliance with resolution 60/283 [YUN 2006, p. 1580], the Secretary-General, submitted in April, the first progress report [A/62/806] on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards (IPSAS) by the United Nations. The report provided an update on progress made in the implementation of IPSAS through 31 March 2008. The strategy of the system-wide IPSAS adoption project included a two-level approach and phased implementation. The two-level approach involved providing resources both at the system-wide level and the individual organization level. The implementation strategy targeted UN system organizations that were at a more advanced stage of readiness (early adopters) for implementation in 2008, while the majority of organizations (fast followers) would benefit from the lessons learned and were targeted for IPSAS adoption in 2010 or as soon as possible thereafter. Since the approval of the system-wide adoption of IPSAS, progress had been most evident in the areas of project governance and organization, the development of IPSAS-compliant harmonized accounting principles and guidance, and communication and training. The report provided information on progress achieved in IPSAS adoption at the system-wide level, followed by progress at the United Nations.

On annual auditing, while IPSAS was silent on whether financial statements should be audited, it was recognized that if annual financial statements were to have greater credibility, they should be audited. Further advantages of the annual audit included increased transparency and accountability. As such, audited statements would better reflect the benefits to be gained from IPSAS adoption. After consideration of the issue of an annual audit, the CEB Finance and Budget Network recommended that annual audits be undertaken. However, it also acknowledged that the audit frequency was determined by the governing body of each organization. For the United Nations, the proposed approach on the audit of IPSAS-compliant financial statements of the Organization and the related changes to the Financial Regulations and Rules arising from IPSAS adoption and harmonization with the United Nations Development Group Executive Committee agencies would be submitted to the Assembly at a later date for approval as a whole.

In an October report [A/63/496], ACABQ recognized the considerable task involved in the preparation and implementation of IPSAS, noted the significant efforts under way, and recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

Cost accounting

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/275 [YUN 2004, p. 1401], the Secretary-General submitted a March 2007 report [A/61/826] on the feasibility of the application of cost-accounting principles in the UN Secretariat, which explored ways to apply cost-accounting techniques to the Secretariat, and considered the broader financial management framework with respect to cost-accounting, including mechanisms for regulating cost recovery and the financial frameworks for income received through cost-recovery mechanisms. The Secretary-General recommended that the application of cost-accounting principles across the Secretariat be considered further in the context of the implementation of the new enterprise resource planning (ERP) system (see p. 1591). The Secretary-General further recommended that such cost-accounting principles—if the General Assembly considered it important for the Organization to apply them—should be applied initially to all support services, following an examination of the basis for costing support services and the adoption of a standard approach for such costing. He added that the option of extending cost-accounting and, in particular, time recording to peacekeeping activities and other programme areas, should be examined at a later date following a review of the success of the implementation of cost-accounting systems for support services within the new ERP system.

ACABQ, in a November 2007 report [A/62/537], stated that the Secretary-General had not adequately responded to the Assembly's mandate, as he did not report on progress made in the development of improved tools for identifying the cost of activities or elaborate options concerning cost accounting. The Committee said that better knowledge of the costs of activities would provide a better basis for assessing the efficiency of administrative functions, the cost-effectiveness of work processes and the impact of a new administration systems. ACABQ made recommendations for the Secretary-General to ensure that cost-accounting requirements were incorporated into the review on management-accounting information and to launch the pilot projects suggested in the report of the consultants as a practical step forward, including the project for improving cost reporting on conference services and the project for a time-recording and costing system in the Office of Internal Oversight Services.

On 24 December, the General Assembly endorsed the ACABQ report and requested the Secretary-General to continue to improve the methods for calculating the costs of support services, including through a framework for cost-accounting to standardize current costing practices, and to report to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth (2010) session, including an analysis of other areas within the Organization's support services in which cost-accounting could be applied (resolution 63/262) (see p. 1592).

Review of UN administrative and financial functioning

In 2008, the General Assembly continued its consideration of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations. To that end, the Secretary-General issued reports on the accountability framework, enterprise management and internal control framework and results-based management (see p. 1519); Procurement Task Force activities (see p. 1570); results-based management at the United Nations (see p. 1520); information requested in resolution 62/247 on strengthening investigations (see p. 1577); information-sharing practices between the United Nations and national law enforcement authorities (see p. 1648); and the Independent Audit Advisory Committee (see below).

Administrative and budgetary coordination

CEB report. By a July note [A/63/185], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the United Nations System Chief Executives Board (CEB) for Coordination statistical report on the budgetary and financial situation of UN system organizations, which included information on regular resources, extrabudgetary resources, total expenditure, assessed contributions and working capital funds.

The General Assembly took note of the report on 24 December (decision 63/547). On the same date, the Assembly decided that both the item on the administrative and budgetary coordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency and the item on the review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations, would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Independent Audit Advisory Committee

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/275 [YUN 2007, p. 1471], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/328] on the activities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, established in 2007 to serve in an expert advisory capacity and assist the Assembly in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities. The report covered the period from 1 January to 31 July 2008, in which the Committee held three sessions.

On the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) proposal for a “hub and spoke” structure for its Investigations Division, the Committee determined that it had strong conceptual merit, but nevertheless recommended that the structure be implemented in a phased manner to ensure that the transfer of investigators out of the peacekeeping missions to regional hubs would not leave any operational gaps. Other recommendations for improvements made by the Committee related to the OIOS work-planning process to improve the effectiveness of cooperation between OIOS and other oversight bodies, namely, the Joint Inspection Unit and the Board of Auditors. In regard to the Secretary-General’s report on the accountability framework, the enterprise risk-management and internal control framework and the results-based management framework (see p. 1519), the Committee supported the implementation of an enterprise risk management and internal control framework; recommended the establishment of a Chief Risk Officer position to provide advice and support to senior managers and coordinate risk management strategies at the enterprise level; and suggested that the implementation project be structured in stages. Other issues highlighted included the implications of recognizing end-of-service liabilities on the face of the financial statements, the lack of controls relating to non-expendable property and the challenges and considerations related to implementation of IPSAS. Due to the timing of the sessions, there was no discussion of the Committee’s report by the ACABQ or the Fifth Committee. However, since the recommendations were still relevant for OIOS operations, the Independent Audit Advisory Committee believed that they should remain open for consideration by those two bodies.

On 24 December, the Assembly, in resolution 63/265 (see p. 1574), took note of the recommendations in the report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee and requested the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations.

Programme planning

Strategic framework for 2010–2011

In May, the Secretary-General submitted the proposed strategic framework for 2010–2011 [A/63/6 (Part one)] as a translation of legislative mandates into programmes and subprogrammes, which constituted the principal policy directive of the United Nations and served as the basis for programme planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation. The framework comprised two parts: the plan outline (Part one) and the biennial programme plan (Part two), covering 27 programmes. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/224 [YUN 2007, p. 1464], the format of Part one was improved and reflected the longer-term objectives therein by elaborating on the UN priorities agreed to by Member States. The priorities for the 2010–2011 biennium, proposed for reaffirmation by the Assembly, included: promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development; maintenance of international peace and security; development of Africa; promotion of human rights; coordination of humanitarian assistance; promotion of justice and international law; disarmament; and drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism.

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) [A/63/16], having examined the Secretary-General’s proposed 2010–2011 strategic framework, noted the changes in its format and narrative and recommended that the Assembly approve the priorities for the 2010–2011 biennium contained in the plan outline in Part one and the programme narrative of the 27 programmes in Part two, with certain modifications. It also recommended that the Assembly undertake an additional review of the plan outline (Part one) so that it more accurately reflected the Organization’s longer-term objectives, based on mandates approved by Member States. CPC recommended further that the Assembly allocate, for review and action, programme 19, Human rights, to the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee. The Committee stressed that the provision of UN support to delivering “One United Nations” pilot projects should not prejudice the outcome of the intergovernmental deliberations on the recommendations of the High-level panel on system-wide coherence in the Assembly.

On 2, 5, 11 and 19 December, the General Assembly took note, respectively, of the reports of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/63/446] (decision 63/522), Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/63/449] (decision 63/528), Sixth (Legal) Committee [A/63/450] (decision 63/530) and Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/63/447] (decision 63/546).

On 18 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/63/434], approved programme 19, Human rights (decision 63/538).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/611], adopted resolution 63/247 without vote [agenda item 119].

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 A of 20 December 1983, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 55/234 of 23 December 2000, 56/253 of 24 December 2001, 57/282 of 20 December 2002, 58/268 and 58/269 of 23 December 2003, 59/275 of 23 December 2004, 60/257 of 8 May 2006, 61/235 of 22 December 2006 and 62/224 of 22 December 2007,

Recalling also the terms of reference of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, as outlined in the annex to Economic and Social Council resolution 2008(LX) of 14 May 1976,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its forty-eighth session, the proposed strategic framework for the period 2010–2011: part one: plan outline and part two: biennial programme plan, and the report of the Secretary-General on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2006–2007,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the programme performance of the United Nations for the biennium 2006–2007, contained in chapter II, section A, of its report on the work of its forty-eighth session, and on the proposed biennial programme plan for the period 2010–2011, contained in chapter II, section B;

2. Decides that the priorities for the period 2010–2011 shall be the following:

(a) Promotion of sustained economic growth and sustainable development in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and recent United Nations conferences;

(b) Maintenance of international peace and security;

(c) Development of Africa;

(d) Promotion of human rights;

(e) Effective coordination of humanitarian assistance efforts;

(f) Promotion of justice and international law;

(g) Disarmament;

(h) Drug control, crime prevention and combating international terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

3. Stresses that setting the priorities of the United Nations is the prerogative of the Member States, as reflected in legislative mandates;

4. Also stresses the need for Member States to participate fully in the budget preparation process, from its early stages and throughout the process;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011 on the basis of the above priorities and the biennial programme plan as adopted in the present resolution;

6. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on evaluation, contained in chapter II, section C, of its report; on the annual overview report of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, contained in chapter III, section A; on the New Partnership for Africa's Development, contained in chapter III, section B; and on improving the working methods and procedures of the Committee within the framework of its mandate, contained in chapter IV;

7. Reaffirms the role of the Committee for Programme and Coordination in monitoring and evaluation, and recalls paragraph 11 of its resolution 62/224;

8. Recognizes the importance of continuing to improve the logical framework, and in this regard encourages programme managers to further improve the qualitative aspects of indicators of achievement in order to enable better evaluation of results, bearing in mind the importance of defining the indicators in a way that ensures their clear measurability;

9. Reaffirms the role of the Committee for Programme and Coordination as the main subsidiary organ of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council for planning, programming and coordination, recalls regulation 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, and emphasizes that the Committee for Programme and Coordination should enhance its coordination role in order to increase planning efficiency and effectiveness so as to continue to ensure the timeliness of the implementation of, and prevent duplication and redundancy in, the actions of the Organization;

10. Welcomes the progress made by the Committee for Programme and Coordination in improving its working methods and procedures within the framework of its mandate, as well as the decision of the Committee to remain seized of the matter.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the item on programme planning would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Programme performance

In an April report [A/63/70] on the programme performance of the United Nations for the 2006–2007 biennium, the Secretary-General provided an overview of the key results achieved, information on the delivery of outputs and resource utilization, and a statement of appropriations of the United Nations General Fund for that biennium as at 31 December 2007. Although a major achievement of 2006–2007 was the fact that almost no dissatisfaction was expressed with the conference services provided to inter-governmental bodies, the proportion of documents at all headquarters duty stations issued in all languages in accordance with the six-week rule was not satisfactory. Other areas identified for improvement included programme performance reporting, which needed to become increasingly qualitative, and its use to inform decision-making. Under the 2006–2007 biennium, implementation rates remained high, with 24 budget sections at 90 per cent and above. Similarly, the Secretariat-wide average implementation remained at the rate of 106 per cent, reflecting a greater degree of resourcefulness and ability of programme managers and offices to cope with unforeseen circumstances. During the biennium programme, 4,420 outputs added to the programme of work by intergovernmental bodies or the Secretariat were also implemented. In addition, out of 31,964 total quantifiable outputs, 660 (2 per cent) were postponed and 2,610 (8 per cent) were terminated. With regard to the 527 outputs carried forward for implementation in 2006–2007, some 309 (59 per cent) were implemented, 96 (18 per cent) were postponed and 122 (23 per cent) were terminated. Overall, including technical cooperation outputs, the Organization delivered 44,278 outputs, some of which included capacity-building training for 195,186 government officials and representatives. Implementation utilized a total of 110,393 work months.

The Secretary-General made recommendations for CPC to take note of the report, endorse its methodological conclusions and use the detailed performance information from 2006–2007 in its review of the proposed 2010–2011 strategic framework.

CPC consideration. CPC [A/63/16] indicated that the 2006–2007 programme performance report had not been issued in accordance with the six-week rule, reiterated the need to improve the responsiveness and accountability of procedures within the Secretariat and called for the timely issuance of all relevant documents in accordance with the rule to ensure their proper consideration by the Committee. In other recommendations, the Committee called for programme managers to be held accountable for the achievement of results and documenting progress; implementation of methodological changes to improve the quality of the formulation of expected accomplishments and performance indicators in the 2010–2011 proposed programme budget; modifications to the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation; the provision of comprehensive information on all relevant cross-cutting issues in future programme performance reports; and the provision of detailed information on the outcome of monitoring and evaluation at the departmental and executive levels, including how lessons learned were shared and applied in planning activities.

Evaluation

OIOS reports to CPC. The Secretary-General transmitted to CPC the OIOS evaluation reports on the in-depth evaluation of political affairs [E/AC.51/2008/2]; the triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made at its forty-fifth (2005) session on the United Nations Human Settlements Programme [E/AC.51/2008/3]; and the triennial review of the thematic evaluation of the linkages between Headquarters and field activities: a review of best practices for poverty eradication in the framework of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [E/AC.51/2008/4 & Add.1].

CPC comments and recommendations on those reports were contained in the report on its 2008 session [A/63/16].

By decision 2008/221 of 21 July, the Economic and Social Council took note of the CPC report.

Administrative and staff matters

During 2008, the General Assembly continued to review the administrative functioning of the Organization and matters related to United Nations staff, including new reform proposals.

The Organization strengthened its oversight of UN activities through the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS), particularly the OIOS Procurement Task Force and its Independent Audit Advisory Committee, as well as through the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU). As a result of the work of the Procurement Task Force, established to address fraud and corruption, some 22 vendors were sanctioned by the Administration. Since its formation, the Task Force had completed 222 investigations and identified more than 20 significant fraud and corruption schemes.

The Independent Audit Advisory Committee, established in 2006 to serve in an expert advisory capacity and to assist the General Assembly in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities, became operational on 1 January and issued its first annual report.

In April, the Secretary-General presented his information and communications technology strategy for the UN Secretariat over the next three to five years. In December, the General Assembly established the Office of Information and Communications Technology.

The General Assembly approved the governance framework for the implementation of an enterprise resource planning system for the UN Secretariat and its worldwide offices. The Assembly also adopted resolutions on: the report of OIOS on its activities; strengthening investigations; the report on the work of JIU for 2007 and programme of work for 2008; the pattern of conferences; security, disaster recovery and business continuity; and the need to harmonize and improve UN informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States.

Regarding security issues, the Assembly reaffirmed the importance of a system-wide policy on the safety and security of UN staff and requested the Secretary-General to ensure that UN and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of UN mandated operations were properly informed about, and operated in conformity with, relevant codes of conduct. It also emphasized the need to pay special attention to the safety and security of UN and associated personnel engaged in peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations, and in particular to locally recruited humanitarian personnel.

During the year, the Assembly, through the International Civil Service Commission, continued to review the conditions of service of staff of the UN common system, and adopted the Commission's recommendations relating to the mobility and hardship allowance; post adjustment; education grant; conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories; base/floor salary scale; and methodology and level of children's and secondary dependant's allowance.

The General Assembly approved the Secretary-General's proposals for streamlining UN contractual arrangements and harmonizing conditions of service, effective 1 July 2009. Under the proposed system, a single series of staff rules would provide for one UN staff contract, encompassing three types of appointments: temporary, fixed-term, and continuing.

The Secretary-General also reported on: the conditions of service and compensation of members of the International Court of Justice and judges and ad litem judges of the International Tribunals; safety and security of humanitarian and UN personnel; contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service; civilian career peacekeepers; recruitment and staffing; activities of the Ethics Office; amendments to the Staff Regulations; multilingualism; staff mobility; and staff composition of the Secretariat.

In addition, the Secretary-General reported on: gratis personnel; employment of retirees; consultants and individual contractors; measures to improve the balance in the geographical distribution of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights; reform of human resources management; national competitive recruitment examinations; protection from sexual exploitation and abuse; travel and related matters; and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund.

As part of the implementation of the new system of administration of justice in the Secretariat, the Assembly adopted the statutes of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, to be operational as at 1 July 2009. It also examined and took action on the Secretary-General's reports on the activities of the Office of the Ombudsman; criminal behaviour and disciplinary action; and criminal accountability of UN officials and experts on mission.

Administrative matters

Managerial reform and oversight

Procurement

ACABQ report. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a March comprehensive report on UN procurement activities [A/62/721], considered the Secretary-General's 2007 report on UN procurement and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) on the audit of the application of the best value for money principle relating to UN procurement [YUN 2007, p. 1467].

ACABQ encouraged the Secretary-General to broaden the scope of the annual report on procurement to include more evidence and analysis to facilitate the General Assembly's assessment of the progress being reported and the impact of the activities accomplished. That should include: data and other evidence to substantiate the statements on the progress achieved; information on the mechanisms put into place to monitor progress and ensure that the new procedures were producing the intended effects; information on problems encountered and measures planned to redress them; and fuller explanations of inordinate or repeated delays in the implementation of key reform measures.

On measures for strengthening the internal control mechanism of the procurement function, ACABQ expressed concern about the delay in issuing key guidelines for staff. It reiterated that every effort should be made to resolve outstanding issues, and to issue the ethics guidelines for procurement staff in the UN working languages. It encouraged the Secretary-General to launch the pilot project for the independent bid protest system—a key measure for enhancing transparency in the procurement decision-making process—and to report thereon to the Assembly, including the experience gained, along with proposals for implementing the system across the Secretariat in the next report on procurement activities. The Secretary-General should also accelerate implementation of the simplified vendor registration process across the Secretariat; pursue discussions within the High-level Committee on Management Procurement Network in order to reach an agreement on the proposals regarding suspect vendors and to implement them expeditiously; report on the implementation of measures to increase the delegation of authority in his next report on procurement activities; and specify how managers would be held personally accountable for the application of such procedures, as well as the performance of their duties and ethical conduct.

On the optimization of the acquisition and procurement management processes, ACABQ highlighted the best value for money principle as one of the general principles that should be given due consideration when exercising the UN procurement functions. Since policies and guidelines for the application of that principle in procurement were still evolving, ACABQ recommended that a clear definition of the principle be established, and unambiguous and transparent guidelines for its application in procurement activities be developed to ensure fairness, integrity and transparency, as well as effective international competition and protection of UN interests when awarding contracts. In developing the definition, policy and guidelines related to the best value for money principle, attention should be paid to ensuring that its application enabled the full participation of vendors from all countries, and did not restrict procurement opportunities for developing countries and countries with economies in transition. Regarding the information system challenges faced by the Procurement Division—including the lack of integrated, real-time systems, which hindered the Division's ability to optimize its operations and implement parts of its reform agenda—ACABQ expected that the Chief Information Technology Officer would examine the Division's requirements comprehensively in the forthcoming report on the enterprise resource planning system.

On the strategic management of UN procurement, ACABQ was concerned about the slow rate of progress in exploiting the potential for achieving significant savings and efficiencies and reducing duplication and waste through strengthened inter-agency coordination. It recommended that the Secretary-General intensify efforts to strengthen coordination and cooperation among UN system organizations. The lead agency concept should be explored further, given its potential for achieving economies of scale and eliminating duplication. The Secretary-General should continue discussions within the High-level Committee on Management Procurement Network and report thereon in his next report on procurement activities. With regard to promoting procurement from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, ACABQ, while recognizing the merit of continuing the organization of business seminars in those countries, requested the Secretary-General to pursue efforts to implement the other initiatives outlined in his report and to intensify the exploration of additional innovative approaches.

With the increase in both the value and complexity of procurement in support of peacekeeping operations, ACABQ said that, while the Secretary-General had made proposals for improving the procurement process, no attempt was made to review the policies and procedures for meeting the specific needs of field operations. It recommended that he be requested to address that gap.

On 3 April, by decision 62/545 B, the Assembly deferred until its resumed sixty-second (2008) session consideration of the Secretary-General's comprehensive report on UN procurement activities [YUN 2007, p. 1467], the ACABQ report thereon (see above), the report of OIOS on the audit of the application of the best value for money principle in UN procurement, and the Secretary-General's note transmitting his comments thereon [ibid., pp. 1467 & 1468].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 June [meeting 109], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/62/604/Add.2], adopted resolution 62/269 without vote [agenda item 126].

Procurement reform

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/14 of 29 October 1999, 55/247 of 12 April 2001, 57/279 of 20 December 2002, 58/276 and 58/277 of 23 December 2003, 59/288 of 13 April 2005, 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 60/260 of 8 May 2006, 60/266 of 30 June 2006, 60/283 of 7 July 2006, 61/246 of 22 December 2006 and 61/276 and 61/279 of 29 June 2007,

Reaffirming the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, in particular those regarding the procurement process,

Having considered the comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on United Nations procurement activities, the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the application of the best value for money principle in United Nations procurement and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon,

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Reaffirms the need for the procurement system to be transparent, open, impartial and cost-effective, based on competitive bidding and fully reflecting the international character of the United Nations;

3. Notes the ongoing improvements made by the Secretary-General in procurement reform at Headquarters and in the field missions, including those set out in paragraph 8 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

4. Recalls its resolutions 52/226 A of 31 March 1998, 54/14, 55/247, and 62/232 of 22 December 2007, regarding the need for the Secretary-General to take steps to ensure that specifications are not deliberately tailored to predetermine the choice of supplier and that the principle of separation of responsibilities of the requisitioning and approving officers is maintained;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to implement all of the requests included in its previous procurement reform resolutions, in particular resolution 61/246;

Governance

6. Reiterates its regret for the delay in the response of the Secretary-General to its outstanding requests in its resolutions 59/288, 61/246 and 61/276, and urges him as a matter of priority to submit a report on procurement governance and other issues as requested in resolutions 61/246 and 61/276, with full justification of the reasons for the delay;

Internal controls

7. Notes with concern the possible weaknesses in the internal control environment with regard to procurement activities owing, inter alia, to the splitting of responsibilities between the Department of Management, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support of the Secretariat, and requests the Secretary-General to take concrete steps to avoid any such weaknesses and to report thereon in the context of the report on the governance of United Nations procurement activities;

8. Encourages the Secretary-General to strengthen further the internal control framework within the Procurement Division of the Department of Management by developing a more robust regime for the oversight of vendors, including subcontractors, at the Secretariat, as well as effectively addressing vendor misconduct and suspension;

Accountability

9. Reaffirms paragraph 3 of its resolution 61/246, and in this regard requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure proper accountability and training of all those involved in the procurement process at Headquarters and in the field;

Ethics

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consider a proper mechanism for monitoring compliance of United Nations staff and vendors with ethical behaviour norms;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that ethics guidelines for procurement staff are issued as a matter of priority;

12. Notes that conflict of interest is not officially defined under current United Nations regulations and rules, and reiterates its request contained in its resolutions 52/226 A, 54/14, 60/266, 61/246 and 61/276 that the Secretary-General submit proposals on possible amendments to the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations and the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations to address issues of potential conflict of interest, such as the employment of former United Nations procurement officers by United Nations suppliers and vice versa;

Vendors

13. Endorses paragraph 14 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities, on the implementation of the simplified vendor registration process;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to simplify and streamline the vendor registration process, to share responsibilities among the various United Nations organizations, to take into account the different circumstances and varying levels of Internet access in countries and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities, on the results achieved;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to restore on the website of the Procurement Division without delay information on the Division's focal points providing advice on the vendor registration process in the six official languages of the United Nations and the Division's brochure in the six official languages on a cost-neutral basis;

Independent bid protest system

16. Regrets the lack of information in the report of the Secretary-General in response to paragraph 13 of its resolution 61/246, and in this context requests the Secretary-General to launch the pilot project for the independent bid protest system and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities, on the experience gained, as part of the comprehensive proposal concerning the implementation of the system, which shall be subject to the prior consideration and approval of the Assembly;

Procurement opportunities for vendors from developing countries and countries with economies in transition

17. Reaffirms paragraphs 6 and 20 to 24 of its resolution 61/246;

18. Notes the efforts made by the Secretary-General to promote procurement opportunities for vendors from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, including business seminars, and also notes the increased participation of those countries in United Nations procurement activities, reaching 53 per cent in 2006 as compared to an average of 45 per cent over the preceding four years;

19. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to promote and to conduct business seminars and to follow up on their outcome as a means of sensitizing the business community in developing countries to procurement opportunities in the United Nations;

20. Endorses paragraph 32 of the report of the Advisory Committee, and requests the Secretary-General to continue and intensify the exploration of additional innovative ways to promote procurement from developing countries and countries with economies in transition and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities;

21. Recalls section XIX, paragraph 4, of its resolution 61/276, in which it requested the Secretary-General to identify obstacles preventing the participation of developing countries and countries with economies in transition in United Nations procurement contracts, including through seeking and analysing feedback from vendors who had attended United Nations business seminars in recent years, and requests the Secretary-General to report fully on those obstacles to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities, including on proposals to obviate such obstacles;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to increase the number of business seminars in developing countries and countries with economies in transition in order to increase procurement opportunities in those countries;

23. Stresses the need for business seminars to be more results-oriented and tailored to include adequate information on how to access business opportunities in the field of procurement with the United Nations;

Best value for money

24. Takes note of the recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the recommendations and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities;

25. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 33 of its resolution 61/246, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on clear guidelines for the implementation of the best value for money methodology in United Nations procurement, including all specifics of the weighted evaluation techniques;

Awarding of contracts and competitive bidding process

26. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Office of Internal Oversight Services to include in its annual reports all cases of application of exigency it considered, as well as the high-risk cases referred to the Headquarters Committee on Contracts on which it decided to provide comments;

27. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that the utilization of systems contracts is subject to prior full analysis of all costs, in accordance with current practice;

28. Further requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report on his proposal contained in paragraph 129 of his report relating to bidding by joint ventures, inter alia, on its justification, its legal regulation, the registration of joint ventures in the United Nations vendor roster and safeguards against possible limitations of competition in United Nations procurement for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

29. Decides that contract bundling shall not be used as a tool to restrict international competition in United Nations procurement;

30. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that requirements with regard to goods and services being procured as set forth in the solicitation documents are formulated subject to established limitations on the number of United Nations commodity codes per vendor;

31. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that in scheduling bidders' conferences and defining their venues, visa-processing timelines are taken fully into account and such alternatives as videoconferences are fully explored to avoid any impact of visa-related policies of different countries on the results of United Nations competitive bidding;

Performance and bid bonds

32. Further requests the Secretary-General to further enhance transparency in the procurement decision-making process and, in this regard, to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, in the context of the next comprehensive report on United Nations procurement activities, on clear guidelines and criteria for the request of bid bonds and performance bonds by procurement officers in the United Nations, as well as on exploring alternative means of ensuring the protection of the interests of the Organization throughout the term of the contractual obligation without restricting access to United Nations procurement of small and medium-sized enterprises, including those from developing countries and countries with economies in transition;

Sustainable procurement

33. Recalls paragraphs 137 to 140 of the report of the Secretary-General, and also recalls that the General Assembly has not considered for approval the concept of environmentally friendly and sustainable procurement, and requests the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive report on the content of and criteria for such a concept, including detailed information on its possible impact on the diversification of the origin of vendors and on international competition, including for developing countries and countries with economies in transition, for consideration and decision by the Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

Delegation of authority

34. Reiterates its request in paragraph 20 of its resolution 59/288, and requests the Secretary-General to report on all the issues related to the levels of delegation of procurement authority, including mechanisms used to strengthen effective monitoring, oversight and accountability, in the context of his report on the governance of United Nations procurement activities;

Outsourcing practices

35. Recalls its resolutions 55/232 of 23 December 2000 and 59/289 of 13 April 2005 on outsourcing practices, and stresses that the procurement staff certification programme should be in line with the provisions of those resolutions;

Subcontracting

36. Notes with concern the risks that may be presented by the lack of disclosure regarding the issue of subcontracting;

37. Also notes with concern that subcontractors have not been required to comply with the relevant rules of the Organization, and requests the Secretary-General to address this lacuna in internal control associated with subcontractors as a matter of priority and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

Human resources management

38. Reaffirms sections X and XI of its resolution 61/244 of 22 December 2006;

39. Also reaffirms paragraph 100 of its resolution 52/220 of 22 December 1997 and paragraph 21 of resolution 52/226 A;

Training

40. Stresses the need for all procurement staff to receive the mandatory training in United Nations procurement techniques and ethics, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in this regard;

Enterprise resource planning

41. Requests the Secretary-General to develop requirements for procurement management as a part of the new enterprise resource planning system, taking into account the need to allay concern that the use of different procurement-related information technology support systems in different departments is having a negative impact on the Organization's ability to exercise comprehensive procurement oversight;

42. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the enterprise resource planning requirements related to procurement reflect its decisions on procurement governance and to provide a comprehensive and concrete explanation as to how the new enterprise resource planning system will improve procurement-related internal control and oversight;

Other issues

43. Stresses the importance of efficiency in the acquisition process in the United Nations, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the efficiency of the procurement process;

44. Recalls its request in its resolution 59/288 to review without delay options to better safeguard the independence of the Headquarters Committee on Contracts, and encourages the Secretary-General to develop further measures to mitigate higher exposure to financial risk;

45. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, on matters relating to procurement in the field, the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support follow the principles of objectivity and impartiality in advising the Procurement Division.

Procurement Task Force

Board of Auditors report. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/234 [YUN 2007, p. 1470], the Board of Auditors submitted a July report [A/63/167] on the activities of the Procurement Task Force, established in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1644] to address fraud and corruption in the United Nations, including its peacekeeping missions, for the period from 1 January 2006 to 30 June 2007, which contained an audit of the Task Force's activities, including its compliance with established UN transparency and accountability measures and those of OROS. The Board found that the Task Force had initially focused on the handling of the case of eight officials placed on special leave [YUN 2007, p. 1468]. Its investigations led to three of the officials being cleared of wrongdoing and brought to light one serious case, which resulted in a lengthy prison sentence. As at 15 March 2008, the Task Force had published 25 reports dealing with more than 40 contracts and completed 142 of the 432 cases in its portfolio, with 290 remaining to be examined. Although those efforts did not expose widespread corruption at the United Nations, the Task Force had helped to eliminate undesirable suppliers from the UN list of vendors and its existence might have served as a deterrent. While the actual value of the losses incurred was difficult to calculate, the Administration had identified clear losses of $25 million, of which $20 million related to the same person. Of the 13 cases the Task Force had recommended for legal action, only five had taken place at the time of the audit. The Board was unable to ascertain whether that was due to a difference of opinion between the Administration and the Task Force, or to delays in the launching of such actions. In some instances, the Office of Legal Affairs estimated that the cost of the procedures proposed by the Task Force was in excess of the sums expected to be recovered. While it detected some instances of criminal conduct, the Task Force uncovered many more examples of mismanagement, some of which did not constitute violations of UN regulations. That result, together with the large number of cases, reinforced the need for the Administration to clearly and strictly define the conditions under which an investigation should be launched.

As to compliance of the Task Force investigations with OIOS rules of procedure, in particular those concerning due process, the Board did not uncover any violation of the investigation rules in the cases the Task Force had examined. However, the investigations were hampered by the circumstances under which the Task Force was created and operated, especially the willingness of the Secretariat to adopt emergency measures on the one hand, and the media coverage given to certain cases on the other, which were not conducive to a smooth investigative process for either the investigators or the staff under investigation. Other constraints identified in the report included the rapid turnover of staff; difficulties with access to certain countries; the need to conduct a synthesis of all new Task Force rules; and the need to clarify the boundaries between an investigation, an audit and a disciplinary procedure to staff under investigation.

The Board recommended that the Administration: incorporate into the permanent UN investigations system the skills and competencies of the Task Force, as well as the lessons learned from its operations; review the UN investigative function as a whole; use the investigation procedure cautiously, and only when there were well-founded suspicions that rules had been broken and after all other reasonable actions had been duly envisaged; standardize and consolidate the rules and procedures applicable to all UN investigations under an instruction of the Secretary-General, which should be systematically given to the staff interviewed; and ensure a proper handing over of pending investigations when the Task Force ceased to operate.

Report of Secretary-General. In his August report [A/63/167/Add.1] on the implementation of the Board of Auditor's recommendations (see above), which the Administration endorsed, the Secretary-General provided information on the status of each of the five recommendations, including the Department responsible and target date for its completion. He reported that arrangements were being made to ensure that the institutional knowledge of the Task Force would be transferred to the Investigations Division by the first quarter of 2009; the remaining caseload of the Task Force was properly transferred to the Division; and lessons learned were incorporated into the Division's operations. On the review of the UN investigative function, the Secretary-General indicated his intention to report to the Assembly after conducting a comprehensive review of UN investigations. The Investigations Division and the Task Force had established procedures to evaluate whether the matters brought to the attention of OIOS should be formally investigated. The Division had also established an intake committee to review information reported to or identified by the Division that might lead to an investigation. On the standardization and consolidation of the rules and procedures applicable to all UN investigations, OIOS was in the process of updating its investigation manual, revising and expanding its standard operating procedures and developing a learning programme to build the capacity of managers and staff with a role in the investigation process.

The Secretary-General also provided details of information-sharing practices between the United Nations and national law enforcement authorities, as well as referrals of possible criminal cases related to UN staff, UN officials and experts on mission [A/63/331] (see p. 1648).

OIOS report. In August [A/63/329], OIOS reported on the activities of its Procurement Task Force for the period from 1 July 2007 to 31 July 2008. During that period, the Task Force received 64 procurement-related cases; reported on five significant fraud or corruption schemes in cases with an aggregate contract value in excess of $20 million; and issued 68 recommendations and seven final reports. As a result of the Task Force's work, 22 vendors were sanctioned by the Administration. Consequently, since its formation, the Task Force had completed 222 investigations and identified more than 20 significant fraud and corruption schemes in cases with an aggregate contract value in excess of $630 million.

The Task Force continued to investigate allegations of corruption and fraud in procurement in peacekeeping missions and overseas offices, as well as cases at Headquarters. It identified improprieties, corruption and malfeasance in: the General Assembly–mandated review of the pay and benefits system; a steered contract for air charter services in the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC); a scheme to steer multiple contracts to preferred vendors in offices in the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) in Nairobi, Kenya; the improper use of consultants in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs; and significant cases in UNOPS Afghanistan and the Economic Commission for Africa. The Task Force referred a number of cases to national authorities for criminal prosecution or for consideration of subsequent legal action and, in a number of other cases, recommended that the Organization seek civil recovery of monetary damages.

The Task Force also concentrated on cases involving allegations of vendor misconduct, including corruption in UN contracts, bid rigging, favouritism and collusion, and conducted numerous investigations of vendors. Through its investigations, the Task Force assisted the Vendor Review Committee, the Procurement Division, the Headquarters Committee on Contracts, and the Controller in numerous vendor cases and issues. The majority of the investigations involving staff members and vendors were based in North America and Europe.

OIOS made recommendations and proposed amendments to the system of vendor sanction, rehabilitation and reinstatement. In other developments, the General Conditions of Contract were amended in January to include a revised cooperation provision requiring all vendors to cooperate with the Organization's investigations on UN-related commercial activities and extending beyond the termination of the contract. The Procurement Manual and vendor registration forms were also updated to include the requirement of vendor cooperation with investigations, as well as a requirement that vendors assert, as a condition of registration, that they and their agents would cooperate with investigations.

Despite the progress achieved, the Task Force faced both funding and staffing constraints. Due to the short-term nature of its mandate, the Task Force experienced rapid staff turnover, and late funding decisions for 2008 resulted in the departure of investigators and interference with ongoing operations. Moreover, since it was funded only until 31 December, the Task Force would be unable to complete its caseload and ongoing investigations by year's end; more than 150 cases would remain. The Task Force would be unable to examine cases and allegations in the overseas offices and peacekeeping missions; and several significant matters would remain in those locations, as well as at Headquarters. Meanwhile, additional cases requiring attention would continue to be referred. OIOS intended to transfer the Task Force's remaining caseload to its Investigations Division at the beginning of 2009 and to ensure availability of the required skill and capacity in that Division.

Note of Secretary-General. In a September note [A/63/329/Add.1], the Secretary-General provided his comments and clarifications on the OIOS report on the activities of the Procurement Task Force. He emphasized that the amount of $630 million referred to in the report did not reflect financial losses to the Organization, but the total contract value that had been tainted by corruption or fraud. On the findings of the investigations, although OIOS had completed its investigations and finalized the related report, the final determination of whether any rules had been breached was made by the Secretary-General and his programme managers, followed by internal justice proceedings where applicable. With regard to cases still under review by the Administration, the Secretary-General reiterated that each of the staff members concerned was presumed innocent pending the conclusion of his or her case and that the findings of the Task Force were not a final determination by the Organization.

In his comments on vendor investigations, the Secretary-General summarized measures the Organization had introduced to facilitate cooperation by vendors, including the introduction of new registration criteria to be applied to potential UN vendors; the adoption of the new UN General Conditions for Contract as revised in January; and the application of the UN Supplier Code of Conduct. Of the 68 recommendations issued by the Task Force during the reporting period, 34 remained unaddressed. All Task Force reports and recommendations, including those still unaddressed, were being actively considered and, where accepted by the Secretary-General, appropriate action was being taken. He added that during the first quarter of the year, the Management Committee conducted a review of the implementation of all Task Force recommendations and would conduct another by year's end.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in an October report [A/63/490] on the activities of the Procurement Task Force, welcomed the Board of Auditors report and recommended that the General Assembly endorse the Board's recommendations. ACABQ urged the Secretary-General to pay particular attention to addressing the underlying reasons for the violations uncovered in the Task Force reports and the nature of resulting proceedings, by improving awareness of staff rules and regulations, as well as improving and updating the procurement and investigation manuals. The Secretary-General should draw on the issues raised by the Board and the Task Force's experience to ensure that the Organization had the internal capacity to deal with those matters relating to procedures in the future and avoid the need to resort to ad hoc measures. In other recommendations, the Committee stressed the need to standardize and consolidate the rules of procedure applicable to all UN investigations and to complete the integration of a comprehensive investigation learning programme in the new investigative manual. The Secretary-General's Bulletin would be the appropriate means for conveying those rules of procedure to the staff. ACABQ concurred with the Board that the Administration should become more vigilant to prevent the breaching of confidentiality of its work. ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General proceed with the review of the procedures of other institutions relating to the vendor sanctions regime, with a view to making recommendations on the legislative framework for establishing such a regime.

The Assembly took action on those reports in section II of resolution 63/265 of 24 December (see p. 1575).

Oversight

Internal oversight

OIOS activities. In August, the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services, Inga-Britt Ahlenius, transmitted to the General Assembly the OIOS annual report [A/63/302 (Part I)] covering its activities from 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2008, except for the results of OIOS peacekeeping oversight activities, which would be reported separately. The report covered initiatives aimed at improving OIOS operations and quality of work, including impediments to the Office's activities; oversight findings by risk category; and mandated reporting on oversight activities concerning the United Nations Compensation Commission and the capital master plan. During the reporting period, OIOS issued 305 oversight reports, including 7 reports to the General Assembly, and 28 closure reports. The reports included 1,755 recommendations to improve internal controls, accountability mechanisms and organizational efficiency and effectiveness. Of those recommendations, 804 were classified as critical to the Organization. The financial implications of OIOS recommendations issued during the period amounted to more than $12 million. Those recommendations were aimed at cost savings, overpayment recoveries, efficiency gains and other improvements. The financial implications of similar recommendations that were satisfactorily implemented totalled $4.2 million.

The report highlighted internal initiatives undertaken by OIOS, the most notable of which were the Office's 2008 risk-based work plans for audit, inspections and evaluation assignments. The Under-Secretary-General stressed the need for the Organization to develop a formal internal control framework to ensure that risks were managed consistently and systematically through focused control processes across the Organization. Without a proactive and systematic approach to managing risk as a core part of an internal control framework, the Organization would remain reactive in responding to deficiencies and vulnerable to mismanagement and misuse of resources.

An addendum to the report [A/63/302 (Part I)/Add.1] provided an analysis of the implementation of the recommendations and highlighted those of particular concern.

In a September note [A/63/302 (Part I)/Add.2], the Secretary-General submitted his comments on Part I of the OIOS annual report and the related addendum.

In addition to the above report on its activities, OIOS issued, in 2008, reports on its activities in 2007 [A/62/281(Part II)]; the triennial review of the implementation of the recommendations made by the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its forty-fifth session on the in-depth evaluation of the United Nations Human Settlements Programme [E/AC.51/2008/3]; the triennial review of the thematic evaluation of the linkages between Headquarters and field activities: a review of best practices for poverty eradication in the framework of the United Nations Millennium Declaration [E/AC.51/2008/4 & Add.1]; the in-depth evaluation of political affairs: field special political missions led by the Department of Political Affairs but supported by the Department of Field Support [E/AC.51/2008/2]; the audit of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo mandate implementation [A/62/807]; the audit of the special arrangements governing the recruitment of temporary assistance staff in the language services across the four main duty stations [A/63/94]; the comprehensive audit of the capital master plan [A/63/266]; the activities of the Procurement Task Force for the period 1 July 2007 to 31 July 2008 [A/63/329 & Add.1]; the review of results-based management (RBM) at the UN Secretariat [A/63/268]; the in-depth evaluation of the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) [A/63/221]; and the comprehensive management audit of the Department of Safety and Security [A/63/379].

Independent Audit Advisory Committee. In its first annual report [A/63/328] under its new terms of reference approved by the General Assembly in resolution 61/275 [YUN 2007, p. 1471], the Independent Audit Advisory Committee provided detailed comments on coordination and cooperation among UN oversight bodies, the status of recommendations of those bodies, OIOS 2008 workplans and budget, the risk management and internal control framework, issues and trends in the financial statements and reports of the Board of Auditors, adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards and cooperation and access.

The Committee found the oios proposal for a “hub and spoke” structure for its Investigations Division to have strong conceptual merit, but recommended that it be implemented in a phased manner to ensure that the transfer of investigators out of the peacekeeping missions to regional hubs would not leave any operational gaps.

Other recommendations for improvements made by the Committee related to the oios work-planning process to improve the effectiveness of cooperation between oios and the other oversight bodies, namely, the Joint Inspection Unit and the Board of Auditors.

The Committee commented on the Secretary-General’s report on the accountability framework, the enterprise risk management and internal control framework, and the RBM framework [A/62/701 & Corr.1 & Add.1] (see p. 1519). Overall, the Committee supported the implementation of an enterprise risk management and internal control framework, and recommended the establishment of a Chief Risk Officer position reporting to the Secretary-General or Deputy Secretary-General to provide advice and support to senior managers and coordinate risk management strategies at the enterprise level.

The Committee suggested that the implementation project should be structured in stages and the proposed pilot project planned as the first phase of a multiphase project. It highlighted two issues of significance in the report of the Board of Auditors on the UN financial statements (see p. 1559), namely, the implications of recognizing end-of-service liabilities in the financial statements and the lack of controls relating to non-expendable property. The Committee also drew attention to the challenges and considerations to be taken into account in the implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/658], adopted resolution 63/265 without vote [agenda items 128 and 117].

Report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities

The General Assembly,

I

Activities of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 59/272 of 23 December 2004 and 60/259 of 8 May 2006,

Having considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities and the related note by the Secretary-General, as well as sections III.A to C of the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee,

1. Reaffirms its primary role in the consideration of and action taken on reports submitted to it;

2. Also reaffirms its oversight role and the role of the Fifth Committee in administrative and budgetary matters;

3. Further reaffirms the independence and the separate and distinct roles of the internal and external oversight mechanisms;

4. Notes with appreciation the work of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;

5. Recalls its resolution 61/275 of 29 June 2007, in which it approved the terms of reference of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;

6. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on its activities and the related note by the Secretary-General;

7. Stresses the importance of full implementation of accepted recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that complete information is provided on the implementation of those recommendations and, where applicable, in cases where full implementation has not been achieved, detailed reasons therefor;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions, such as resolutions on peacekeeping operations relating to cross-cutting issues, are brought to the attention of relevant managers, and that the Office of Internal Oversight Services also takes those resolutions into account in the conduct of its activities;

9. Also requests, in this regard, the Secretary-General to ensure that all relevant resolutions pertaining to the work of the Office of Internal Oversight Services are brought to the attention of the relevant managers;

10. Takes note of the recommendations contained in sections III.A to C of the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee in respect of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of those recommendations, taking into account the provisions of its resolutions 48/218 B, 54/244 and 59/272;

11. Encourages United Nations internal and external oversight bodies to enhance the level of their cooperation with one another, such as joint work-planning sessions, without prejudice to the independence of each;

12. Notes paragraph 17 of the annual report of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, and recalls that one of the responsibilities of the Independent Audit Advisory Committee, according to its terms of reference, is to advise the General Assembly on the effectiveness, efficiency and impact of the audit activities and other oversight functions of the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

13. Also notes that the five-year non-renewable term of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services will expire in July 2010, and in this respect urges the Secretary-General to ensure that timely arrangements are made to find a successor in full conformity with the provisions of paragraph 5 (b) of its resolution 48/218 B;

II

Investigations and the Procurement Task Force of the Office of Internal Oversight Services

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 57/282, section IV, of 20 December 2002, 59/272 of 23 December 2004, 59/287 of 13 April 2005, 61/245 of 22 December 2006, 61/275 and 61/279 of 29 June 2007, 62/234 of 22 December 2007 and 62/247 of 3 April 2008,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the information requested in paragraph 17 of its resolution 62/247 and on the information-sharing practices between the United Nations and national law enforcement authorities, as well as referrals of possible criminal cases related to United Nations staff, United Nations officials and experts on mission, and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the activities of the Procurement Task Force for the period from 1 July 2007 to 31 July 2008 and the report of the Board of Auditors on the activities of the Procurement Task Force, the related notes by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments thereon and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the information requested in paragraph 17 of General Assembly resolution 62/247;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the information-sharing practices between the United Nations and national law enforcement authorities, as well as referrals of possible criminal cases related to United Nations staff, United Nations officials and experts on mission;

3. Further takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the activities of the Procurement Task Force for the period from 1 July 2007 to 31 July 2008, and the report of the Board of Auditors on the activities of the Procurement Task Force and the related notes by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments thereon;

4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to provisions of the present resolution;

5. Takes note of the work of the Procurement Task Force;

6. Emphasizes its commitment to preventing and deterring fraud and malfeasance within the Organization, and recognizes that such efforts cannot be sustained in the long term by an ad hoc body;

7. Recalls the ad hoc nature of the Procurement Task Force;

8. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to transfer the remaining caseload of the Procurement Task Force of the Office of Internal Oversight Services to the Investigations Division of the Office at the beginning of 2009;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of Internal Oversight Services has the expertise and capacity within its approved structure to effectively investigate allegations of fraud, corruption and misconduct in procurement;

10. Takes note of paragraph 12 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions with regard to the specific element of human resources;

11. Emphasizes Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations, reiterates section II of its resolution 61/244 of 22 December 2006, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations governing the recruitment of United Nations staff;

12. Reiterates that deliberate management decisions to keep a certain number of posts vacant should not be taken, as such action makes the budget process less transparent and the management of human and financial resources less efficient;

13. Expresses concern over a number of vacancies in the Investigations Division of the Office of Internal Oversight Services since the beginning of 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to fill those vacancies as a matter of priority, in accordance with the existing relevant provisions governing recruitment in the United Nations;

14. Stresses that any changes involving administrative and financial implications shall be subject to the review and approval of the General Assembly in accordance with established procedures, including regulation 2.9 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations;

15. Recognizes that investigations of fraud, corruption and misconduct in procurement are often time-sensitive;

16. Recalls paragraph 18 of its resolution 62/247, in which it requested the Secretary-General to prepare for its consideration and approval, in close cooperation with the Office of Internal Oversight Services, a report providing detailed information on terms of reference with regard to the proposed comprehensive review of investigations in the United Nations before the General Assembly decides on the necessity of such a review, taking into account the role and mandate of the Office of Internal Oversight Services as established in its resolution 48/218 B, the framework for investigation adopted in section IV of its resolution 57/282 and in its resolution 59/287, the reform of the system of administration of justice, the decisions of the Assembly to strengthen the investigation function of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and its decisions on the accountability framework, results-based management, enterprise risk management and the internal control framework;

17. Stresses that the Office of Internal Oversight Services, in the conduct of its investigations, should fully address and respect the due process rights of staff concerned;

18. Notes the work by the Office of Internal Oversight Services to develop a comprehensive investigation manual, revise and expand the key standard operating procedures for investigations and develop a comprehensive investigation learning programme for managers and staff on the investigative process, and stresses the importance of that work being completed and made available to all United Nations personnel as soon as possible;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare as soon as possible standardized and consolidated rules and procedures applicable to all investigations in the United Nations other than the investigations conducted by the Office of Internal Oversight Services, and to ensure that such rules and procedures are made available to all United Nations personnel and to provide information thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, without prejudice to paragraph 18 of its resolution 62/247;

20. Stresses the importance of effective implementation, including referrals to national authorities and recovery actions where appropriate, of the accepted recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, as well as of effective coordination between that Office and other parts of the Secretariat in this regard.

The Assembly, by decision 63/552 of 24 December, decided that the item on the report on the activities of OIOS would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Strengthening investigations

ACABQ report. In a March report [A/62/7/Add.35], ACABQ considered the Secretary-General's 2007 report on strengthening investigations [YUN 2007, p. 1473]. It expressed concern that his comments did not build on the framework for investigations adopted in General Assembly resolutions 57/282 [YUN 2002, p. 1393] and 59/287 [YUN 2005, p. 1474]. It also regretted the lack of information on the entities other than OIOS that carried out investigations and on the number of cases handled. In that connection, it recommended that, before a decision was made on the need for a comprehensive review of investigations, the Secretary-General should provide information on all the entities other than OIOS carrying out inquiries and investigations, including their legislative basis, precise role, the number and types of cases handled, related resources, reporting mechanisms, standards and guidelines involved, training imparted, and information on the implementation of resolution 59/287.

On the OIOS approach for improving the functioning of the Investigations Division, the Committee said that the envisaged restructuring of the Division was not solely within the purview of the Under-Secretary-General for Internal Oversight Services. It noted that the Secretary-General's 2007 report on the restructuring would have been strengthened by a more complete analysis and specific reference to the experience with resident investigators. Therefore, the submission of proposals to the Assembly should be accompanied by such an analysis. Regarding the impact on staff of the team/unit concept and the relocation of investigators, the Committee stated that it would benefit from being addressed in advance and not at the time of implementation. On the question of whether OIOS, on behalf of the United Nations, could become a party to mutual legal assistance instruments in order to expedite investigations, the Committee explained that, as the internal oversight body within the UN Secretariat, OIOS could not become party to international agreements. The Committee also cautioned against any confusion between administrative and judicial investigations. In clarifying roles and responsibilities, the Committee stressed the need to take account of Assembly resolution 61/267 B [YUN 2007, p. 69] and noted the OIOS intention to do so.

In summary, ACABQ held that fuller justification was required for the restructuring of the Investigations Division and recommended that any changes proposed be supported by a detailed analysis. It further recommended that any changes that had administrative and financial implications should be subject to Assembly review and approval.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/62/773], adopted resolution 62/247 without vote [agenda items 126, 128, 136 and 140].

Strengthening investigations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/218 B of 29 July 1994, 54/244 of 23 December 1999, 57/282, section IV, of 20 December 2002, 59/272 of 23 December 2004, 59/287 of 13 April 2005, 61/245 of 22 December 2006, 61/267 B of 24 July 2007, 61/275 and 61/279 of 29 June 2007 and 62/234 of 22 December 2007,

Recalling also paragraph 10 of its resolution 59/287,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on strengthening investigations, the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the activities of the Procurement Task Force for the eighteen-month period ended 30 June 2007, the note by the Secretary-General transmitting his comments thereon and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the related note by the Secretary-General;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Notes in particular the concern of the Advisory Committee stated in paragraph 5 of its report;

4. Stresses that the lack of explicitly written rules and regulations for procedures relating to investigations negatively affects fairness and due process rights;

5. Expresses concern that the current investigations manual of the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat appears to lack useful and practical information for investigators compared with similar manuals used in other international organizations and that it also appears not to contain sufficient working instructions for conducting investigations;

6. Notes with appreciation the efforts being made by the Office of Internal Oversight Services to improve the conduct of its investigations by applying international best practices and ensuring respect for the due process rights of all United Nations staff;

7. Affirms that transparent, predictable, accountable and objective operational strategies and investigation procedures contribute to the effective functioning of the system of administration of justice;

8. Notes with concern that concerns have been raised regarding due process rights in investigations, stresses that the due process rights afforded to staff in investigations carried out by the Office of Internal Oversight Services have to withstand review by the system of administration of justice, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to develop a comprehensive approach to fully undertake the Organization's responsibility in ensuring the due process rights of its staff under investigation;

9. Re-emphasizes the principle of separation, impartiality and fairness on the part of those with responsibility for investigation functions;

10. Stresses that the purpose of the Office of Internal Oversight Services is to assist the Secretary-General in fulfilling his internal oversight responsibilities;

11. Reaffirms that the Office of Internal Oversight Services is the internal body entrusted with investigation in the United Nations;

12. Also reaffirms that trained heads of offices, programme managers and boards of inquiry, as well as the Department of Safety and Security and the Ethics Office, may carry out administrative inquiries and investigations, except in cases of serious misconduct and/or criminal behaviour, in accordance with resolution 59/287;

13. Takes note of the development of a comprehensive training module designed to build the capacity of United Nations staff to support administrative inquiries or investigations, as well as of a special training programme for investigating allegations of sexual harassment, by the Office of Internal Oversight Services;

14. Recalls paragraphs 3, 8 and 10 of its resolution 59/287, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to increase basic investigation training, as appropriate, for the handling of minor forms of misconduct;

15. Reaffirms its decision that in cases of serious misconduct and/or criminal behaviour, investigations should be conducted by professional investigators;

16. Also reaffirms that any changes that have administrative and financial implications will be submitted by the Secretary-General and will be subject to the review and approval of the General Assembly in accordance with established procedures;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, in close cooperation with the Office of Internal Oversight Services, for its consideration at its sixty-third session, a report providing detailed information regarding, inter alia:

(a) The status of implementation of its resolution 59/287;

(b) Updated and detailed information on all the entities other than the Office of Internal Oversight Services carrying out administrative inquiries and investigations, their legislative basis and precise role, the number and types of cases handled, related resources, reporting mechanisms, standards and guidelines involved and training imparted;

(c) The status of work done under general temporary assistance resources equivalent to six positions to establish a training capacity for the Investigations Division to enable programme managers to handle category II cases of misconduct and the assessment of such work and any other related work carried out for the same purpose, as well as the future workplan thereof;

18. Also requests the Secretary-General to prepare for its consideration and approval, in close cooperation with the Office of Internal Oversight Services, a report providing detailed information on terms of reference with regard to the proposed comprehensive review of investigations in the United Nations before the General Assembly decides on the necessity of such a review, taking into account the role and mandate of the Office of Internal Oversight Services as established in its resolution 48/218 B, the framework for investigation adopted in section IV of its resolution 57/282 and in its resolution 59/287, the reform of the system of administration of justice, the decisions of the Assembly to strengthen the investigation function of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and its decisions on the accountability framework, results-based management, enterprise risk management and the internal control framework;

19. Further requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on practices related to the sharing of information between the Organization and law enforcement authorities of Member States as well as to referrals to such authorities of possible criminal cases related to United Nations staff, United Nations officials and experts on mission, taking into account its resolution 62/63 of 6 December 2007 and other relevant legal instruments.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to resolution 62/247 (see above), the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/63/369] containing information on the status of implementation of General Assembly resolution 59/287 [YUN 2005, p. 1474], updated and detailed information on all the entities other than OIOS carrying out administrative inquiries and investigations; and the status of work to establish a training capacity for the Investigations Division to enable programme managers to handle category II cases of possible misconduct (cases investigated by a head of office, the Department of Safety and Security or OHRM).

OIOS was designing an investigation learning programme aimed at equipping programme managers with basic investigations training for handling category II cases, consisting of three modules, which ranged from a basic introductory course on investigations to specialized modules designed to cover sexual harassment, financial misconduct, information technology and advanced interviewing techniques, as well as policy and normative aspects of investigations. The full complement of the programme modules would be developed by the end of the third quarter of 2008, with training of programme managers expected to commence by the end of 2008 or early 2009. At least one module, sexual harassment, would be ready for delivery to programme managers by September 2008. OIOS would also hold workshops to raise awareness in high-risk areas, such as procurement. In addition, OIOS had initiated regular discussions within the UN system to ensure consistency through acceptance of minimum standards for investigation.

ACABQ, in its October report [A/63/492], recommended that the Assembly take note of the information provided in the Secretary-General's report.

External oversight

Joint Inspection Unit

At its resumed sixty-second (2008) session, the General Assembly had before it the annual report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) for 2007 and its programme of work for 2008 [YUN 2007, p. 1474].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/62/536/Add.1], adopted resolution 62/246 without vote [agenda item 134].

Report of the work of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2007 and programme of work for 2008

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the Joint Inspection Unit, in particular resolutions 31/192 of 22 December 1976, 50/233 of 7 June 1996, 54/16 of 29 October 1999, 55/230 of 23 December 2000, 56/245 of 24 December 2001, 57/284 A and B of 20 December 2002, 58/286 of 8 April 2004, 59/267 of 23 December 2004, 60/258 of 8 May 2006, 61/238 of 22 December 2006, 61/260 of 4 April 2007 and 62/226 of 22 December 2007,

Reiterating that the impact of the Unit on the cost-effectiveness of activities within the United Nations system is a shared responsibility of the Member States, the Unit and the secretariats of the participating organizations,

Reaffirming the commitment by the Unit, the legislative organs and the secretariats of the participating organizations to implement a system of follow-up to the recommendations of the Unit, as set out in resolution 54/16,

Reaffirming also the unique role of the Unit as the only system-wide external oversight body,

Having considered the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2007 and programme of work for 2008,

1. Recalls its resolutions 61/260 and 62/226;
2. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit for 2007 and programme of work for 2008;
3. Welcomes the joint presentation of the annual report and the programme of work of the Unit for consideration at the first part of its resumed session;
4. Also welcomes progress in the reform process of the Unit, and encourages further efforts on the part of the participating organizations to consider the recommendations of the Unit;
5. Commends the Unit for its internal reform process aimed at improving its efficiency and effectiveness, and invites the Unit to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-third session on measures the Unit deems necessary to continue to improve its functioning;

6. Requests the Unit, in line with its mandate, to continue to focus its work and reports on system-wide issues of interest and relevance to the participating organizations and the States Members of the United Nations and to provide advice on ways to ensure more efficient and effective use of resources in implementing the mandates of the Organization;

7. Reiterates its request to the executive heads of the participating organizations to fully comply with the statutory procedures for consideration of the reports of the Unit, in particular to submit their comments and to distribute reports in time for their consideration by legislative organs;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to expedite the implementation of the present resolution, including through the expected provision of support to the Unit by the secretariats of the participating organizations for the preparation of its reports, notes and confidential letters, and the consideration of and action on the Unit's recommendations in the light of pertinent resolutions of the General Assembly, and to report to the Assembly on an annual basis on the results achieved;

9. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General and the other executive heads of the participating organizations to fully assist the Unit, with the timely provision of all information requested by it;

10. Reiterates its invitation to the legislative organs of the participating organizations to take concrete action on the recommendations of the Unit;

11. Notes with appreciation the ongoing efforts of the Unit to report on the impact of its recommendations, as illustrated in paragraph 49 of its annual report, and in this context requests the Unit to work in coordination with participating organizations to provide in future annual reports the financial implications that have resulted from its recommendations, wherever possible;

12. Invites the Unit to report in the context of its annual reports on experience in the implementation of the follow-up system by the participating organizations;

13. Notes with appreciation the introduction of a table for system-wide reports entitled "Overview of action to be taken by participating organizations on Joint Inspection Unit recommendations" which identifies those recommendations that are relevant to each organization and which specifies those recommendations that require legislative decisions and those that can be implemented by the executive head of the organization;

14. Notes with concern paragraph 39 of the annual report, in which the Unit describes the difficulty it has had in obtaining from some organizations updated information on the status of its recommendations, and in this regard requests the Unit to study the feasibility of using a web-based system to monitor the status of recommendations and receive updates from individual organizations;

15. Expresses its readiness to apply the follow-up system to review recommendations of the Unit requiring action by the General Assembly;

16. Affirms that oversight is a shared responsibility of Member States, the organizations and the internal and external oversight bodies;

17. Recalls paragraph 9 of its resolution 62/224 of 22 December 2007, and encourages the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Chief Executives Board, to enhance the dialogue of the Board with the Joint Inspection Unit on coordination issues;

18. Welcomes the coordination of the Unit with the Board of Auditors and the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat, and encourages those bodies to continue sharing experiences, knowledge, best practices and lessons learned with other United Nations audit and oversight bodies as well as with the Independent Audit Advisory Committee;

19. Takes note with appreciation of the information contained in paragraph 63 of the annual report, and encourages the Unit to keep the General Assembly informed, if necessary, about any difficulty or delay in obtaining visas for the official travel of the inspectors, as well as members of its secretariat;

20. Requests the Unit to provide at its earliest convenience a detailed explanation of the nature and scope of the investigations the Unit envisions conducting.

JIU activities. In its annual report to the Assembly [A/63/34 & Corr.1], JIU provided an overview of its activities in 2008, during which it issued reports on review of management and administration in the Universal Postal Union [JIU/REP/2008/1]; junior professional officer/associate expert/associate professional officer programmes in UN system organization [JIU/REP/2008/2]; management review of environmental governance within the UN system [JIU/REP/2008/3]; national execution of technical cooperation projects [JIU/REP/2008/4]; information and communications technology hosting services in UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2008/5]; and management of Internet websites in UN system organizations [JIU/REP/2008/6]. It also issued notes on the common services at Nairobi [JIU/NOTE/2008/1]; common services at the locations of UN regional commissions [JIU/NOTE/2008/2]; review of the United Nations Humanitarian Air Service [JIU/NOTE/2008/3]; and corporate consultancies in UN system organizations: overview of the use of corporate consultancy and procurement and contract management issues [JIU/NOTE/2008/4]. In addition, it issued a management letter on the review of management and administration in the World Meteorological Organization (WMO): additional issues [JIU/ML/2008/01], as well as a confidential letter regarding the follow-up on the JIU confidential management letter on the adequacy of internal controls at WMO [JIU/CL/2008/01].

JIU continued to streamline its internal working processes, procedures, tools and human resources. It implemented RBM for planning purposes, revised the strategic framework and prepared a new document outlining its long- and medium-term goals and objectives for 2010–2019. It also developed a comprehensive workplan for 2008 with actions to improve follow-up systems and enhance interaction with participating organizations and oversight and coordinating bodies, in particular with the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB). The job descriptions of Professional and assistant research staff were updated, principles and policies for investigation adopted in line with those adopted by the Conference of International Investigators, and a skill inventory and training needs assessment undertaken in order to design a comprehensive training and learning plan for 2008–2009. In addition, an Information Technology Committee was constituted and its terms of reference approved. The Access database was further improved to track delays in the issuance of comments and in the consideration of and action taken on JIU reports; and the time-tracking system evolved from a reporting tool into an instrument to better monitor and improve report preparation and increase accountability. In addition, JIU initiated a self-evaluation of its functions to assess its independence, credibility and utility in fulfilling its mission statement. During the reporting period, JIU continued working on 23 projects, 11 of which were completed.

JIU continued to enhance its dialogue with participating organizations. The policy and guidelines for interaction with those organizations were revised, and focal-point inspectors, by organization, were designated and given concrete responsibilities. It received information from all but four participating organizations to its request for information on recommendations issued in 2005, 2006 and 2007. JIU embarked on an assessment of the follow-up system, endorsed by the Assembly in resolution 54/16 [YUN 1999, p. 1277], and subsequently by most UN specialized agencies, including best practices and shortcomings, and re-activated efforts to conclude agreements with those organizations with which agreements were pending. The review of the follow-up system would be completed in 2009.

At the end of the year, single-organization reports issued in 2005, 2006 and 2007 showed an acceptance rate of 64 per cent, while 6 per cent of the 205 recommendations issued were rejected and 8 per cent were under consideration; system-wide reports issued in the same time period showed an acceptance rate of 51 per cent, with 4 per cent of the 144 recommendations rejected and 7 per cent under consideration. As to implementation of accepted/approved recommendations in single-organization reports, 33 per cent were implemented and 40 per cent were in progress. In 4 per cent of cases, implementation had not started, and no information was received for the remaining 24 per cent. As to implementation of accepted/approved recommendations in system-wide reports, 43 per cent of recommendations were implemented and 36 per cent were in progress. Implementation had not begun in only 5 per cent of the cases and no information was received for the remaining 17 per cent. The annual report also contained the JIU work programme for 2009.

The Assembly, by decision 63/552 of 24 December, decided that the item on the JIU would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Oil-for-food programme

The oil-for-food programme, established by Security Council resolution 986(1995) [YUN 1995, p. 475] authorizing the sale of Iraqi petroleum and petroleum products as a temporary measure to finance humanitarian assistance, thereby alleviating the adverse consequences of the sanctions regime imposed by the Council, was phased out on 21 November 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 362]. In April 2004, the Secretary-General established the Independent Inquiry Committee (IIC) to investigate the administration and management of the programme, including allegations of fraud and corruption [YUN 2004, p. 364]. IIC, headed by Paul A. Volcker (United States), issued its reports and recommendations in 2005 [YUN 2005, p. 1476]. In December 2005, the Secretary-General decided to maintain the Committee's operation until the end of March 2006 [ibid., p. 436] through a follow-up entity known as the Office of the Independent Inquiry Committee. On 24 March 2006, the Secretary-General extended the Office until 31 December of that year [YUN 2006, p. 409]. From 1 January 2007, the Office was to be administered by the UN Department of Management for a two-year interim period, which could be extended by the Secretary-General. In December 2006 [ibid., p. 1654], the Secretary-General promulgated a procedure for the management of the IIC documents, which, at the conclusion of the interim period, would be transferred under the custody of the UN Archives and Records Management Section.

By decision 62/555 of 15 September, the Assembly deferred consideration of the item entitled "Follow-up to the recommendations on administrative management and internal oversight of the Independent Inquiry Committee into the UN Oil-for-Food Programme" to its sixty-third (2008) session.

On 24 December (decision 63/552), the Assembly decided that the item would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Other administrative matters

Conference management

Committee on Conferences

The Committee on Conferences held an organizational meeting on 7 April and its substantive session from 8 to 12 September [A/63/32]. It examined requests for changes to the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for the 2008–2009 biennium [A/AC.172/2008/2 & Corr.1] and reviewed the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings for 2009 [A/63/119/Add.1], reflecting the changes for the second year of the biennium since the adoption of the biennial calendar. The Committee also considered meetings management and improved utilization of conference-serving resources and facilities; the impact of the capital master plan accelerated strategy IV on meetings held at Headquarters; progress in integrated global management; and matters related to documentation, publication, translation and interpretation. (The Committee's deliberations and recommendations on those matters are detailed in the sections below.)

The Committee recommended that the General Assembly authorize its subsidiary bodies, listed in letters of 8 [A/63/352] and 15 September [A/63/352/Add.1] from the Committee Chairman, to meet in New York during the main part of the Assembly's sixty-third session. It also approved requests for changes to the approved calendar for 2008.

The Assembly, by decision 63/501 of 16 September, authorized those organs to meet as recommended. On 24 December, it decided that the item "Pattern of conferences" would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/638], adopted resolution 63/248 without vote [agenda item 121].

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 40/243 of 18 December 1985, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 43/222 A to E of 21 December 1988, 51/211 A to E of 18 December 1996, 52/214 of 22 December 1997, 53/208 A to E of 18 December 1998, 54/248 of 23 December 1999, 55/222 of 23 December 2000, 56/242 of 24 December 2001, 56/254 D of 27 March 2002, 56/262 of 15 February 2002, 56/287 of 27 June 2002, 57/283 A of 20 December 2002, 57/283 B of 15 April 2003, 58/250 of 23 December 2003, 59/265 of 23 December 2004, 60/236 A of 23 December 2005, 60/236 B of 8 May 2006, 61/236 of 22 December 2006 and 62/225 of 22 December 2007,

Reaffirming its resolution 42/207 C of 11 December 1987, in which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure the equal treatment of the official languages of the United Nations,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2008, the relevant report of the Secretary-General and the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the audit of the existing special arrangements governing the recruitment of temporary assistance staff in the language services across the four main duty stations,

Having also considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Reaffirming the pertinent provisions relating to conference services in its resolutions on multilingualism, in particular resolution 61/266 of 16 May 2007,

I

Calendar of conferences and meetings

1. Welcomes the report of the Committee on Conferences for 2008;

2. Approves the draft revised calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for 2009, as submitted by the Committee on Conferences, taking into account the observations of the Committee and subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments to the calendar of conferences and meetings for 2009 that may become necessary as a result of actions and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its sixty-third session;

4. Notes with satisfaction that the Secretariat has taken into account the arrangements referred to in General Assembly resolutions 53/208 A, 54/248, 55/222, 56/242, 57/283 B, 58/250, 59/265, 60/236 A, 61/236 and 62/225 concerning Orthodox Good Friday and the official holidays of Eid al-Fitr and Eid al-Adha, and requests all intergovernmental bodies to observe those decisions when planning their meetings;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that any modification to the calendar of conferences and meetings is implemented strictly in accordance with the mandate of the Committee on Conferences and other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Notes that accurate, timely and consistent information provided to the Fifth Committee during its informal consultations facilitates the decision-making process in the Committee;

II

A. Utilization of conference-servicing resources

1. Reaffirms the practice that, in the use of conference rooms, priority must be given to the meetings of Member States;

2. Notes that the overall utilization factor at the four main duty stations remained at 83 per cent in 2007, the same as in 2006, which is above the established benchmark of 80 per cent;

3. Welcomes the steps taken by those bodies that have adjusted their programmes of work in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources, and requests the Committee on Conferences to continue consultations with the secretariats and bureaux of bodies that underutilize their conference-servicing resources;

4. Recognizes that late starts and unplanned early endings seriously affect the bodies' utilization factor owing to the amount of time lost, and invites the secretariats and bureaux of bodies to pay adequate attention to avoiding late starts and unplanned early endings;

5. Notes that the percentage of meetings held by the bodies entitled to meet "as required" that were provided with interpretation services in New York in 2007 was 88 per cent, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to report on the provision of conference services to these bodies through the Committee on Conferences;

6. Recognizes the importance of meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States for the smooth functioning of the sessions of intergovernmental bodies, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, as far as possible, all requests for conference services for the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States are met;

7. Acknowledges with appreciation the improvement in the percentage of meetings held by regional and other major groupings of Member States that were provided with interpretation services at the four main duty stations, which increased to 84 per cent in 2007 from 76 per cent in 2006, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to employ innovative means to address the difficulties experienced by Member States owing to the lack of conference services for some meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

8. Once again urges intergovernmental bodies to spare no effort at the planning stage to take into account the meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States, to make provision for such meetings in their programmes of work and to notify conference services, well in advance, of any cancellations so that unutilized conference-servicing resources may, to the extent possible, be re-assigned to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States;

9. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with several General Assembly resolutions, including resolution 61/236, section II.A, paragraph 9, in conformity with the headquarters rule, all meetings of Nairobi-based United Nations bodies were held in Nairobi in 2007, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

10. Notes with appreciation ongoing promotional efforts and initiatives undertaken by the management of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa, which led to a continued upward trend in utilization of the premises in 2007;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore means to increase the utilization of the conference centre of the Economic Commission for Africa, bearing in mind the headquarters minimum operating security standards, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

12. Calls upon the Secretary-General and Member States to adhere to the guidelines and procedures contained in the administrative instruction for the authorization of the use of United Nations premises for meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits;

13. Emphasizes that such meetings, conferences, special events and exhibits must be consistent with the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

14. Regrets the voting incident in the seventh meeting of the Fourth Committee, and requests the Secretary-

General to ensure prompt and effective communication between the Secretariat and members of the General Committee;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the measures taken to avoid the recurrence of the above-mentioned situation in his next annual report on the pattern of conferences;

B. Impact of the capital master plan, strategy IV (phased approach), on meetings held at Headquarters during its implementation

1. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that implementation of the capital master plan, including the temporary relocation of conference-servicing staff to a swing space, will not compromise the quality of conference services provided to Member States in the six official languages and the equal treatment of the language services, which should be provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to receiving the maximum quality of services;

2. Requests all meeting requesters and organizers to liaise closely with the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management of the Secretariat on all matters related to the scheduling of meetings to allow maximum predictability in coordinating activities at Headquarters during the construction period;

3. Requests the Committee on Conferences to keep the matter under constant review, and requests the Secretary-General to report regularly to the Committee on matters pertaining to the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations during the construction period;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate information technology support for conference services, within the existing resources of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, in order to ensure their seamless operation throughout the implementation of the capital master plan;

5. Notes that during the implementation of the capital master plan, a part of the conference-servicing staff and information technology resources of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management will be temporarily relocated to a swing space, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate support, within the existing resources of the Department, to ensure continued maintenance of the information technology facilities of the Department, implementation of the global information technology initiative and delivery of quality conference services;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to consult Member States on initiatives that affect the utilization of conference services and conference facilities;

III

Integrated global management

1. Notes with appreciation the progress achieved in the implementation of the global information technology project, aimed at integrating, across duty stations, information technology into meetings management and documentation-processing systems, and the global approach to harmonizing standards and information technology and sharing good practices and technological achievements among conference services at the four main duty stations;

2. Also notes with appreciation the initiatives undertaken in the context of integrated global management aimed at streamlining procedures, achieving economies of scale and improving the quality of conference services, and in this regard stresses the importance of ensuring equal treatment of conference-servicing staff as well as the principle of equal grade for equal work at the four main duty stations;

3. Emphasizes that the major goals of the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management are to provide high-quality documents in a timely manner in all official languages in accordance with established regulations, as well as high-quality conference services to Member States at all duty stations, and to achieve those aims as efficiently and cost-effectively as possible, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to include in his next report on the pattern of conferences information about the financial savings achieved through implementation of the integrated global management projects;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving maximum quality of services, with full respect for the specificities of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

6. Reiterates the need for the Secretary-General to ensure the compatibility of technologies used in all duty stations and to ensure that they are user-friendly in all official languages;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to complete the task of uploading all important older United Nations documents onto the United Nations website in all six official languages on a priority basis, so that these archives are also available to Member States through that medium;

8. Reiterates that the satisfaction of Member States is a key performance indicator in conference management and conference services;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that measures taken by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, as a key performance indicator of the Department, provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and are in full compliance with relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly, through the Committee on Conferences, on progress made in this regard;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore best practices and techniques in client satisfaction evaluations and to report on a regular basis to the General Assembly on the results achieved;

11. Welcomes the efforts made by the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management to seek the evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to explore innovative ways to systematically capture and analyse feedback from Member States and committee chairpersons and secretaries on the quality of conference services and to report thereon to the General Assembly through the Committee on Conferences;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the General Assembly apprised of progress made in integrated global management;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the administrative policies, practices and procedures of conference services developed on the basis of recommendations of the task forces are in full compliance with relevant General Assembly resolutions;

IV

Documentation and publication-related matters

1. Emphasizes the paramount importance of the equality of the six official languages of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

3. Stresses that matters related to conference management, including documentation, fall within the purview of the Fifth Committee;

4. Reiterates with concern its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the rules concerning the simultaneous distribution of documents in all six official languages are strictly respected as regards both the distribution of printed copies and the posting of parliamentary documentation on the Official Document System and the United Nations website, in keeping with section III, paragraph 5, of its resolution 55/222;

5. Reaffirms its decision in section III, paragraph 9, of its resolution 59/265 that the issuance of documents in all six official languages on planning, budgetary and administrative matters requiring urgent consideration by the General Assembly shall be accorded priority;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to improve the documents planning process to ensure that the Fifth Committee receives, in the six official languages, all documents necessary for its consideration of a particular item, including reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, within the established time limits;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to direct all departments of the Secretariat to include the following elements in their reports:

- (a) Summary of the report;
  - (b) Consolidated conclusions, recommendations and other proposed actions;
  - (c) Relevant background information;
8. Reiterates its request that all documents submitted to legislative organs by the Secretariat and intergovernmental and expert bodies for consideration and action have conclusions and recommendations in bold print;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take steps to improve the quality and accuracy of meeting records in all six official languages through full reliance in the preparation and translation of those records on sound recordings and written texts of statements as they were delivered in the original languages;

10. Expresses its deep concern at the unprecedented, high level of late submission of documentation by author departments, which, in turn, has a negative impact on the functioning of intergovernmental bodies, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session, through the Committee on Conferences, on urgent measures taken to improve overall timely submission, in particular by those submitting entities with submission compliance below 90 per cent for three years in a row;

11. Notes with concern the unprecedented delays in the issuance of documents in 2008, which heavily impacted on the work of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to elaborate more effective accountability measures to ensure that both authors and their senior managers provide for the timely issuance of documents in all six official languages and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to enhance his efforts to address the problem cited in paragraph 10 above, particularly as experienced with documentation considered at the second resumed session of the Fifth Committee during the sixty-second session of the General Assembly, including convening the task force formed to study this matter, to provide an interim report on documentation concerning peacekeeping financing, to report on the results of these consultations and actions taken to solve this problem to the General Assembly, through the Committee on Conferences at its organizational session in 2009, in order for the Fifth Committee to consider the report at its second resumed session, and to provide a comprehensive report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

13. Recognizes the increase in the workload of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the growing volume of reports and other documents before it, decides to authorize the Advisory Committee to meet for two additional weeks in 2009, on an exceptional basis, invites the Advisory Committee to continue considering how to better address its workload, and decides to discuss the number of weeks in a session of the Advisory Committee in the context of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 2010–2011;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the associated expenditures in the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

15. Stresses the importance of the concordance principle in order to ensure equally valid texts of resolutions in all six official languages;

16. Recalls section C, paragraph 12, of its resolution 54/248 and section III, paragraph 13, of its resolution 55/222, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to publish, prior to its sixty-fourth session, an updated version of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations in the six official languages of the Organization;

V

Translation and interpretation-related matters

1. Recalls rule 153 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to redouble his efforts to ensure the highest quality of interpretation and translation services in all six official languages;

3. Reiterates its request that the Secretary-General make sure that the terminology used in the translation and interpretation services reflects the latest linguistic norms and terminology of the official languages in order to ensure the highest quality;

4. Takes note of the recommendations provided by the Office of Internal Oversight Services of the Secretariat in its report, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

5. Reaffirms section IV, paragraph 3, of its resolution 59/265, section IV, paragraph 4, of its resolution 60/236 B, section V, paragraph 3, of its resolution 61/236 and section V, paragraph 3, of its resolution 62/225, and reiterates its request that the Secretary-General, when recruiting temporary assistance in the language services, ensure that all language services are given equal treatment and are provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources, with a view to achieving maximum quality of their services, with full respect for the specificities of each of the six official languages and taking into account their respective workloads;

6. Expresses continued concern at the high vacancy rate in the interpretation and translation services at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, and requests the Secretary-General to address this as a matter of priority through, inter alia, assistance from Member States in advertising and facilitating the conduct of competitive examinations to fill these language vacancies;

7. Notes with appreciation the measures taken by the Secretariat to fill current and future vacancies at the United Nations Office at Nairobi and the information contained in paragraph 107 of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences, and requests the Secretary-General to consider further measures aimed at decreasing the vacancy rates in Nairobi and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

8. Also notes with appreciation the initiative to seek a long-term solution to the high vacancy rates in language services in the United Nations Office at Nairobi by engaging the services of a consultant to explore the possibilities of providing enhanced training programmes to potential professional translators and interpreters on the African continent, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on efforts in this regard;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to examine all aspects concerning recruitment and retention of language staff at the United Nations Office at Nairobi, to make recommendations in this regard and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

10. Recognizes the acute problems faced by the United Nations Office at Geneva in providing conference services as required, as described by the Secretary-General in paragraph 103 of his report on the pattern of conferences, and in this connection requests the Secretary-General to address these problems and to make all efforts to meet requirements in the context of the latest surge of meetings;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to seek a more effective strategy to fill current and future language post vacancies at all duty stations in a timely manner, takes note of paragraph 92 of the report of the Secretary-General on the pattern of conferences, and also requests the Secretary-General to hold the competitive examinations for the recruitment of language staff referred to in that paragraph, as well as other examinations beyond 2009, well in advance so as to fill current and future language post vacancies at all duty stations in a timely manner, and to inform the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session of efforts in this regard;

12. Welcomes the measures taken by the Secretary-General to address more effectively the demographic situation and the issue of succession planning, in particular by resorting to temporary assistance in dealing with acute needs, as well as enhancing internal and external training programmes, developing staff exchange programmes among organizations and participating in outreach to institutions that train language staff for international organizations, and requests him to continue to take such measures;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to continue exploring the possibility of introducing a traineeship programme in order to attract and train young professionals for a career in the language services of the United Nations;

14. Notes with concern the challenges presented by the demographic situation in the language services, as described in paragraphs 91 to 95 of the report of the Secretary-General;

15. Notes that the intention of the General Assembly, in adopting section VI, paragraph 1, of its resolution 57/305 of 15 April 2003, was to increase the availability of retired language staff for employment with the language services, and requests the Secretary-General to clarify and in turn implement the provisions of that paragraph concerning the ceiling on United Nations earnings of United Nations language staff retirees;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to seek evaluation by Member States of the quality of the conference services provided to them, including through the language-specific informational meetings held twice a year, and to ensure that such measures provide equal opportunities to Member States to present their evaluations in the six official languages of the United Nations and are in full compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

17. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the accuracy of translation of documents into the six official languages, giving particular significance to the quality of translation;

18. Further requests the Secretary-General to take the steps necessary to enhance translation quality in all six official languages, in particular for contractual translation, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to provide, at all duty stations, adequate staff at the appropriate level, with a view to ensuring appropriate quality control for external translation, with due consideration of the principle of equal grade for equal work;

20. Takes note of the information on the impact of free-lance recruitment on the quality of interpretation at all duty stations contained in paragraphs 101 to 105 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the issue to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session through the Committee on Conferences;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on the experience, lessons learned and best practices of the main duty stations in performing quality control of contractual translations, including on requirements relating to the number and appropriate level of the staff needed to carry out this function.

Use of conference services

In July [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted a comprehensive report on issues related to the pattern of conferences, including the integrated global management of conference services, evaluation by Member States of the quality of conference services, meetings management, documents management and matters related to translation and interpretation (see sections below).

The report also provided information on the utilization of conference-servicing resources and facilities. The overall utilization factor in 2007 at the four duty stations—Geneva, Nairobi, New York and Vienna—remained at 83 per cent, the same as in 2006.

The Committee on Conferences, in September [A/63/32], noted that the overall utilization factor remained above the established benchmark of 80 per cent. The Chairperson reported on consultations held with five intergovernmental bodies that had underutilized their allocated conference resources, and made suggestions for improvement, including by providing advance notice of cancellations; beginning meetings on time, even without a quorum; scheduling shorter meetings if it was anticipated that less time would be required; using any time remaining at the end of the meeting to discuss additional agenda items; releasing unused interpretation services to meetings of regional and other major groupings of Member States; and reducing the number of meetings initially requested to accurately reflect the actual expected demand for conference services without changing the actual entitlements to such services.

Use of regional conference facilities

Nairobi and Addis Ababa

The United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON) [A/63/119 & Corr.1] confirmed that, in 2007, all the meetings of the Nairobi-based bodies were held in Nairobi. In 2007–2008, the utilization rate at the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, increased to 69.34 per cent, compared with 64.13 per cent in 2006 and 42.23 per cent in 2005. That improvement was to a large extent the result of promotional efforts, partnerships and marketing initiatives. As part of that effort, the Conference Centre management took an active part in selected high-profile international conventions and exhibitions to disseminate information packages and market the Centre so as to attract meeting organizers at the global level. As a result, the ECA Conference Centre was listed as a conference venue in the annual publications and the websites of IMEX (Worldwide Exhibition for Incentive Travel, Meetings and Events) and the International Congress and Convention Association. Those activities were planned and implemented in partnership with the Addis Ababa Tourism Commission, major tour/travel operators, and airlines and hotels with a stake in promoting Addis Ababa as a conference destination. The Conference Centre was also advertised in specialized magazines and the Centre's website was updated and made more attractive.

In September [A/63/32], the Committee on Conferences expressed satisfaction at the significant improvement in the utilization rate at UNON and ECA. It suggested that a more aggressive marketing strategy should be adopted to encourage additional clients to use the Nairobi conference facilities.

Integrated global management

In his July report on the pattern of conferences [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General stated that the integrated global management introduced in 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1658] was not a limited time project, but a continuing collaborative process. Only through co-operation, dialogue and a strong orientation towards action could the dual requisites of increased integration and acknowledgement of the specificities of the various duty stations result in the positive synergy that could yield concrete and visible results.

Part of the integrated global management effort concentrated on the further fine-tuning and implementation of the compendium of administrative policies, practices and procedures adopted by all duty stations in 2006. Progress was achieved in management of lateral transfers of language staff between duty stations, exchanges of staff, the consolidated roster for contractual translation, harmonization of slotting procedures and advance waiver management, as well as workload forecasting and capacity planning. The progress of the integrated global management initiative was under constant review and would be the subject of a more comprehensive evaluation in 2009. In addition, the Working Group on Publishing issued an initial inventory of publishing technologies across the duty stations. A task force was set up to extend workload forecasting and capacity planning systems to such other areas of conference management as text processing and copy preparation. The integrated global management process resulted in enhanced co-operation between the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management (DGACM) and the regional commissions and more intensive exchanges of lessons learned and good practices among the duty stations in all areas of work, allowing the experience gained to be easily and seamlessly transferred from one duty station to another.

The integrated conference management system, a component of the global information technology initiative, was actively pursued. Information technology solutions were being developed to maximize the use of common processes in reporting, meetings management and documentation planning and processing. The development of the integrated conference management system was taking on added significance given the ongoing development of systems for enterprise resource planning, customer relationship management, and enterprise content management, and took into account future interface and data exchange with and among other enterprise systems.

The Committee on Conferences [A/63/32] stated that the purpose of integrated global management was to ensure a balanced division of labour between Headquarters and other duty stations, so as to increase the quality of interpretation and translation in all official languages and at all duty stations. In harmonizing methods of work, care should be taken to respect the unique aspects of each duty station and language group and to observe the principle of equal grade for equal work. All integrated global management initiatives should comply with General Assembly resolutions and other applicable mandates. The Committee expected to receive information on the savings realized from the streamlining and harmonization of processes.

In October [A/63/509], ACABQ noted the progress achieved in the implementation of the integrated global conference management system and DGACM efforts to develop it. The Advisory Committee requested the Secretary-General to include in his next report on the pattern of conferences information about the financial savings achieved through implementation of the integrated global conference management system. It stressed that the efforts to optimize efficiency gains through those initiatives should continue and be fully reported to the Assembly.

Interpretation for regional and other groupings

In July [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported that for the period from 1 January to 31 May 2007, 81 per cent of requests for meetings with interpretation for regional and other major groupings of Member States were granted, compared with 73 per cent in the same period in 2006. The upward trend continued throughout the year, with 87 per cent of requests being granted for the whole of 2007, compared with 79 per cent in 2006. In the first five months of 2008, a further improvement of 90 per cent was made. It was clear that the increased weekly strategic reserve put in place for “as required” bodies [YUN 2006, p. 1659] was having a positive effect on DGACM ability to provide interpretation services to regional and other major groupings. The Secretary-General stressed that a further increase in the strategic reserve remained the only way for the Department to address the problem of providing services to regional and other major groupings of Member States within existing resources.

The Committee on Conferences [A/63/32] noted the Secretariat’s explanation that the recent increase in the percentage of meetings held by such groups with interpretation services was attributable to a combination of effective planning and ongoing consultations with the groups.

Documentation

In his July report [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General reported that, as at 30 June 2008, 71 per cent of documents had been submitted on time, up from 64 per cent in 2007. However, the average delay was 25 days, up from 20 days in 2007. While the past few years had witnessed some improvement in the timely submission and issuance of documents, the overall compliance in New York with the guidelines for submission was only 65 per cent in 2007, and overall compliance with guidelines for issuance only 61 per cent. An increasing number of author departments had formulated internal timelines for the preparation and approval of documents and had been requested by DGACM to provide more realistic slot dates. The Secretary-General reiterated that any further improvement in the timely issuance of documents to intergovernmental organizations depended on author departments improving timely submission. Highlighting the 14 UN entities that achieved 100 per cent of timely submission over the past two years and a number of others that had improved noticeably, the Secretary-General stated that, with proper measures and determination, it was possible to make progress. He outlined measures DGACM had taken and made further suggestions to deal with late submission, late slotting and reslotting, unexpected submissions, and changes in the programmes of work of intergovernmental bodies. The Secretary-General stressed that proactive document management had a ripple and a multiplier effect. Rush processing came at a cost: financially, because of the overtime that might be required; in terms of the quality of processing (translation) and of consideration of reports, owing to the limited time delegates would have to read them; and in terms of the resources spent by the author departments in preparing the reports, not to mention the negative implications for the DGACM processing compliance. The impact was multiplied several times, given the multilingual nature of official documents. Strengthening proactive documents management therefore was not just vital to the timely issuance of documents, but also to the achievement of the other goals of the Secretariat, namely, quality, productivity and cost-effectiveness.

DGACM continued to enhance its publishing services, making clients more aware of the advantages of in-house printing and distribution services, leading to, among other results, the establishment at Headquarters of printing workload standards and the holding of several workshops to educate clients about the services and the processes involved in publishing. DGACM was about to launch a website, and similar efforts were being made at other duty stations to allow clients to learn about its services.

While acknowledging the challenges facing DGACM in documents management, the Committee on Conferences [A/63/32] expressed concern about the persistently late submission, processing and issuance of documents in all six official languages, especially during the second part of the resumed session of the Fifth Committee. There was general agreement on the need to take steps to prevent the recurrence of that situation. The Committee requested more detailed information and statistics on the reasons for author departments' failure to comply with submission deadlines, as well as further clarification of the slotting system and the criteria used to prioritize the various types of document. It suggested that sanctions should be imposed on managers responsible for the late submission of documents.

In October [A/63/509], ACABQ shared the concern of the Committee on Conferences about late submission of documentation by author departments. At the same time, it welcomed the fact that a number of entities had improved their rate of timely submission of documents and encouraged those entities to share best practices with others. It also encouraged the Secretary-General to continue efforts at capacity utilization and sharing, as well as increasing the use of internal printing capacity.

Translation and interpretation

In July [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General highlighted a number of factors that continued to affect the DGACM language service: demographic transition owing to the retirement of language staff; the depletion of language resources; and the imperative to replenish language rosters through more frequent competitive examinations. In attempting to deal with the demographic transition, DGACM developed a programme of outreach to universities and other training institutions for language staff, as well as to professional associations of language specialists, and stepped up training for serving staff to prepare them for increased responsibilities resulting from the retirement of large numbers of language staff. In addition, retired senior language staff were engaged on short-term appointments to assist in the training and monitoring of junior staff and provide substantive language services, so as to avoid any adverse impact of the demographic transition on the quality of services. DGACM also proposed to the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) measures for ensuring a more orderly succession in the language services, including raising, or waiving, the mandatory age of separation for language staff until such time as the staffing situation in the language services stabilized, as well as raising the ceiling on the UN earnings of retirees. Since the capacity of the OHRM Examinations and Tests Section could not cover all the examinations needed by DGACM, the Secretary-General suggested providing additional temporary resources to the Section and the OHRM units responsible for the recruitment of language staff. Otherwise, DGACM might not be able to guarantee the delivery of its mission-critical services to intergovernmental bodies. Special measures were taken to step up quality control checks of contractual translation.

As UNON, the vacancy rate for the interpretation section was 35 per cent, complicated in part by recent developments in Kenya, which led to a great number of language staff seeking opportunities elsewhere. The possibility of retaining and attracting good language staff was complicated by the low level of staff posts and the funding of a number of translator/reviser posts from extrabudgetary resources. In seeking a long-term solution to the problem of high vacancy rates in Nairobi, UNON engaged the services of a consultant to explore the possibilities of providing enhanced training programmes to potential professional translators and interpreters in Africa. In Geneva, the UN Office faced difficulty in freelance recruitment as its recruitment window made it uncompetitive with other international organizations.

In September [A/63/32], the Committee on Conferences reaffirmed its support for efforts to maintain the highest standards of quality in translation and interpretation. It also supported outreach to universities and schools of translation in all regions, especially in Latin America and Arabic-speaking countries. It welcomed efforts to work with the OHRM Examinations and Tests Section to hold more frequent competitive examinations in all official languages to replenish rosters for language posts. The proposal to waive or raise the ceiling on UN earnings for retirees in translation and interpretation as a way to ease the staffing shortage during the demographic transition was a cause for concern as it could potentially set a precedent and be viewed as giving special treatment to certain occupational groups. Furthermore, the demographic transition had long been foreseen, and other methods, such as a more frequent schedule of competitive examinations, should have been taken earlier. Raising the earnings ceiling was seen as a stop-gap measure, while long-term solutions were needed and could be found through outreach and increased contacts with educational institutions.

In October [A/63/509], ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General engage all relevant departments with a view to holding competitive examinations for the recruitment of language staff as much in advance as possible to fill vacancies in the language services. ACABQ stressed the importance of the envisaged revamping of the examination process, as well as the outreach activities, and requested the Secretary-General to keep the Assembly apprised of progress made. With regard to the ceiling on the UN earnings of retired language staff, ACABQ indicated that the General Assembly was very clear that the ceiling was to be set in terms of workdays, not compensation days. Therefore, only those days on which the employee worked should be counted towards the ceiling of 125 days. Accordingly, there was no need to lift the ceiling of 125 days for the hiring of retired language staff. ACABQ also noted with concern that the overall vacancy rate for the interpretation section at UNON was 35 per cent.

OIOS report. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/225 [YUN 2007, p. 1476], OIOS conducted an audit of the special arrangements governing the recruitment of temporary assistance staff in the language services across the four main duty stations [A/63/94], namely, UN Headquarters and the UN Offices at Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi. The audit was to determine whether procedures were in place for identifying the requirements for temporary assistance for meetings in the language services and ensuring the recruitment of the most qualified individuals in an economical, efficient and transparent manner. The audit also sought to determine whether the recruitment of temporary assistance staff was unnecessarily skewed in favour of appointments for local, as opposed to non-local staff of the country where the services were required.

OIOS found that there was no global approach to managing the recruitment of temporary assistance staff in the language services, and no clear criteria, guidelines or standard operating procedures. Owing to that situation, and the consequent lack of transparency and consistency in selecting candidates, OIOS was unable to establish whether the recruitment of temporary assistance staff ensured that all language services were given equal treatment and provided with equally favourable working conditions and resources. The pattern of recruitment of temporary assistance staff for the language services in New York, Geneva and Vienna showed that some of the language services preferred to recruit candidates under local conditions of service, mainly because of concerns of managers of the language services about cost-effectiveness and efficiency. All four duty stations implemented capacity-planning exercises to determine their requirements for temporary assistance staff. However, there was no global planning process in place and the approach used differed from one duty station to another in terms of the frequency of planning, the relevance of the data used in the planning and the evaluation of capacity plans. OIOS recommended that DGACM review and update the agreements with the International Association of Conference Translators and the International Association of Conference Interpreters to ensure their alignment with relevant Assembly resolutions and UN Staff Regulations and Rules; ensure the implementation of standard operating procedures by all duty stations in determining the professional domicile and hence the conditions of service of temporary assistance staff in the language services; establish centrally managed rosters of candidates and related standard operating procedures to be used by all language services across the duty stations; implement centralized guidelines for capacity-planning and evaluation of capacity plans; address the issue of integrating computer-assisted tools to ensure greater interoperability of software used by the language services across the duty stations; and implement mechanisms to ensure that the approved workday limits for retirees were not exceeded. DGACM accepted all of the recommendations and was in the process of implementing them.

Workload standards

The Secretary-General included in his July report [A/63/119 & Corr.1] the performance matrix for 2007, including indicators for all duty stations as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 62/225 [YUN 2007, p. 1476], as part of a comprehensive methodology for performance measurement and management from a full-system perspective. It provided indicators for human resources, finance, meetings management and timeliness of documentation, as well as productivity measures for the language services.

In October [A/63/509], ACABQ, with the understanding that the various measures included in the performance matrix were intended to enable Member States to draw their own conclusions about the full-system benefits of the reforms instituted, recommended that future reports of the Secretary-General contain a better analysis to demonstrate how efficiently and cost-effectively the work of DGACM was conducted, as well as a clear explanation of the units of measure and how they were calculated. It also recommended that DGACM continue to refine the cost estimates shown in the performance matrix, as well as to report on the progress of reform efforts.

Impact of CMP on conference services

In July [A/63/119 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General, reporting on the impact of the implementation of the capital master plan (CMP), (see p. 1597) on meetings held at Headquarters, stated that, since his previous report [YUN 2007, p. 1483], there had been new developments in the plan. The accelerated strategy IV (to supersede strategy IV (phased approach)), would shorten the renovation time by reducing the total number of phases required for the renovation of the Secretariat and conference buildings, and compress the total renovation period of the Headquarters complex from seven to five years, thus reducing the disruption to the operations of the Organization by two years. The Conference and General Assembly buildings would be renovated in two phases as opposed to the three phases previously proposed. The renovation of the Conference building was scheduled for late 2009 to late 2011, and when completed, the temporary North Lawn Conference building would be rearranged for meetings that normally took place in the General Assembly building. The renovation of the latter would start in late 2011 and was expected to be completed in 2013.

While sufficient conference facilities would be available to accommodate all core activities of the intergovernmental bodies normally meeting at Headquarters, facilities to accommodate activities in excess of the core meetings of the Charter organs and their subsidiary bodies, such as parallel meetings, side events and meetings of regional groups, would be limited. The off-site swing spaces for Secretariat staff had been identified and were being designed and fitted out for occupancy. Leases were concluded on a number of buildings. A related issue was the additional staffing needs for information technology support services, which would be expected to ensure that over a dozen mission-critical systems in multiple locations performed as required throughout the renovation process.

In September [A/63/32], the Committee on Conferences stressed that the implementation of the accelerated CMP should not have any negative impact on the quality and availability of conference services, or the equal treatment and working conditions of language services in all six official languages. Concern was expressed regarding the fire doors and barriers which had been installed in the General Assembly building and the Secretariat building without consulting Member States. Concern was also expressed that the "Cool UN" initiative, aimed at contributing to global efforts to combat climate change by reducing the carbon footprint of UN Headquarters, appeared to affect the working conditions not only of the Secretariat, but of Member States as well. In that connection, measures relating to the utilization of conference facilities, regardless of their essence and potential benefits, should be duly discussed and decided upon in the Committee on Conferences and the Fifth Committee.

In October [A/63/509], ACABQ was informed that dependency on temporary assistance to staff of the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) Section posed a risk during the implementation of CMP in relation to the ability of DGACM to provide and maintain high-quality ICT services, especially in the critical area of computer operations support, given the physical separation of the documentation chain, interpretation services, verbatim services and meeting planning and servicing, with the ICT systems for documents and meetings management relocated separately. ACABQ stressed the importance of ensuring that proper support was provided throughout CMP to ensure uninterrupted service and the involvement of the Chief Information Technology Officer to ensure that established information technology standards, policies and procedures were followed.

UN information systems

Information and communications technology

In April [A/62/793 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General, in his report on investing in information and communications technology, submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 60/283 [YUN 2006, p. 1581], presented the ICT strategy for the UN Secretariat over the next three to five years. The strategy encompassed five cross-cutting priority areas: the ICT management structure; strategic programme delivery; service and performance management; global architecture and standards; and financial control and reporting. The ICT strategy would be carried out through three Organization-wide programmes that built on one another: knowledge management; resource management; and infrastructure management. It would be carried out through a management framework comprising management oversight committees, advisory bodies, the Chief Information Technology Officer, the Office of Information and Communications Technology and other Secretariat ICT units.

During the first phase of implementation, the ICT Office would conduct structural reviews of Secretariat-wide ICT units with a view to rationalizing and harmonizing ICT operations and structures and defining coordination and reporting relationships between the Office and other ICT units. During the second phase, the results of the structural reviews would be implemented in all ICT units, and structures within the Office optimized to support more effectively ICT strategic programmes and services.

When fully implemented, the Secretary-General stated, the new ICT strategy would enhance the Secretariat's effectiveness, including improvements in institutional memory, agility, accessibility, transparency and accountability. It would also contribute to organizational efficiency by increasing staff productivity and helping the Secretariat reduce or avoid costs. To ensure its success, conditions had to exist or be provided, including senior management support, budgetary resources for strategic investments, streamlined policies, processes and support structures, and an organizational culture that was supportive of change. The proposed ICT strategy established the core building blocks for creating a strong ICT capable of meeting the operational and strategic needs of the global Secretariat well into the future. The Secretary-General requested the Assembly to endorse the overall approach relating to the strategy.

A September addendum [A/62/793/Add.1] provided additional information on the proposed ICT organizational structure and the reallocation of resources to establish the ICT Office. The Office would be an independent organizational unit reporting directly to the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, but would not be part of the Executive Office. That arrangement provided the necessary authority and visibility needed for the Chief Information Technology Officer to carry out a Secretariat-wide mandate and to address the current fragmentation among ICT programmes and services. The Office would be established by integrating the Information Technology Services Division of the Department of Management and the Information and Communications Technology Division of the Department of Field Support, based on a budget and staff-neutral approach through the redeployment of resources within the approved staff posts and budgets. It would be headed by a small Office of the Chief Information Technology Officer, which would be supported by two organizational units: staff-functions and line-functions. Other offices would include the Strategic Management Service, the Infrastructure Management Service and the Applications Management Division. Set out in the report was the Office's organizational structure.

As the Information Technology Services Division of the Office of Central Support Services would be consolidated under the Office of Information and Communications Technology, there were no changes to the programme aspects of the programme budget for the 2008–2009 biennium. It was proposed that the Office be treated as a separate section of the budget under the 2008–2009 programme budget. Effective 1 January 2009, all regular budget posts and financial resources appropriated for that year for the Information Technology Services Division, all extrabudgetary resources under that Division, as well as a part of the resources approved for the Information and Communications Technology Division of the Department of Field Support under the peacekeeping support account, would be redeployed and consolidated under the Office of Information and Communications Technology. The post of the Chief Information Technology Officer would be similarly redeployed and consolidated. Resources requirements for the 2008–2009 biennium were estimated at $325.5 million.

In October [A/63/487 & Corr. 2], commenting on the Secretary-General's proposal to conduct structural reviews of Secretariat-wide ICT units, ACABQ stated that such an inventory should include not only personnel dedicated to ICT functions, but also part-time staff. The exercise should lead to enhanced efficiency, which should be reported to the Assembly in the proposed 2010–2011 programme budget. ACABQ broadly agreed with the management plan proposed by the Secretary-General. The ICT governance mechanisms should involve staff and managers across all departments and duty stations affected by ICT systems and services provided by the Organization. The Secretary-General should keep the ICT governance structure under review and propose adjustments to make it simpler and operationally effective as a policy-setting and management instrument. The Assembly should be kept informed of changes to the ICT management framework in the context of its consideration of the proposed programme budget. ACABQ pointed out that the implementation of a governance structure and the establishment of the Office of Information and Communications Technology alone would not be sufficient to achieve those goals; it would be necessary to put measures into effect to support coherence and coordination. The Committee believed that there was a need to identify and quantify more precisely the efficiency gains and/or benefits expected from the implementation of the ICT strategy. It recommended that the Secretary-General define specific objectives in that regard, and explain the methodology and benchmarks used to identify and measure those benefits, and report thereon in the proposed 2010–2011 programme budget.

The Advisory Committee recommended that the Assembly endorse the overall approach relating to the comprehensive ICT strategy for the Secretariat, subject to the Committee's comments on the proposals; and note the Secretary-General's intention to proceed with structural reviews and the rationalization and harmonization of all ICT units. The Secretary-General should report to the Assembly on the results of such reviews in the context of the proposed 2010–2011 programme budget and other relevant budget proposals, including the impact on and changes proposed to the approved programme of work, changes in organizational structures and the realignment of resources that would be required.

Information and communication technology security, business continuity and disaster recovery

In response to section XI of General Assembly resolution 59/276 [YUN 2004, p. 1387] and section XV of resolution 60/266 [YUN 2006, p. 92], the Secretary-General submitted a 2007 report on ICT security, disaster recovery and business continuity [A/62/477], which updated his 2007 proposals [YUN 2007, p. 1495] for a global operational framework for ICT infrastructure, as well as for a separate initiative, related to the CMP transition phase in New York, to move the UN Headquarters complex data centre to a site in the new North Lawn facility and to Long Island City [YUN 2007, p.1495]. The total resource requirements under the 2008–2009 proposed programme budget was $47,292,900.

In October [A/63/487], as the proposed Long Island City site was no longer being pursued as a data centre, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit a new proposal for a secondary data centre for UN Headquarters in New York, including a detailed justification of the reasons for the change and information on the costs already incurred in connection with the Long Island City site. With respect to the proposals concerning the global operational framework for ICT infrastructure, ACABQ noted that there had been no Organization-wide approach to disaster recovery and business continuity and stressed the need for a central authority under the Chief Information Technology Officer to set common standards, provide an Organization-wide perspective, optimize use of resources and improve ICT services. Recognizing the risks of relying solely on the communications facilities at the UN Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, as well as the need for further data storage facilities, ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal to host the secondary active communications facility at Valencia, Spain, and that he be authorized to proceed with its implementation.

Enterprise resource planning system

In an April report on enterprise systems for the UN Secretariat worldwide [A/62/510/Rev.1], the Secretary-General proposed an approach for implementing an enterprise resource planning (ERP) system, set out in his previous report on the subject [YUN 2007, p. 1485], and measures for approval by the General Assembly. The implementation plan called for implementation in two waves: Wave 1 (2008–2010) and Wave 2 (2011– 2012). Wave 1 would commence in the third quarter of 2008, following the completion of preparatory activities, and would focus on key management priorities. Based on the current project progress, it would be substantially completed by the end of 2010. Specific timings and technical arrangements for acceptance testing and data conversions would be determined by the integration services once they were engaged. Wave 2 would focus on the implementation of remaining functionalities of the ERP software solution. The implementation plan foresaw the first quarter of 2011 as the earliest start date for Wave 2, with substantial completion by the end of 2012. Each wave would be evaluated and annual progress reports submitted to the Assembly. The functionalities assigned to each wave would be designed and built based on configuring the ERP software solution to meet the Secretariat's requirements.

Design and build activities would be supported by associated business process re-engineering, legacy data preparation, data cleansing and change management, and would be undertaken by experts from Headquarters, offices away from Headquarters, regional commissions and field missions, coordinated by the ERP project team. Configuration would include meeting International Public Sector Accounting Standards process and data requirements. On completion of design and build, ERP functionalities would be deployed globally to all relevant Secretariat locations. The deployment would be supported by data migration, software training and technology hosting activities.

Complementary systems to be implemented included a customer relationship management (CRM) system to deal with processes connected with providing day-to-day services for end users, not dealt with under an ERP system. Its primary objective would be to improve the quality and cost-effectiveness of services provided to end-users. An enterprise content management (ECM) system would be introduced to address information assets of a substantive nature.

The ERP system would be financed from the regular and peacekeeping budgets and extrabudgetary resources. Total requirements for implementing ERP were estimated at $308.8 million ($285.6 million, including a contingency provision of $37.3 million), CRM ($8.2 million) and ECM ($15 million). The amount for the 2008–2009 biennium was estimated at $140.8 million to implement ERP ($119.6 million, including a contingency provision of $37.3 million), CRM ($7.4 million) and ECM ($13.8 million). It was proposed to fund the regular budget portion of the project under section 28A, Office of the Under-Secretary-General for Management, of the 2008–2009 programme budget, with the remaining requirements for 2008–2009 funded from the peacekeeping support account ($89.6 million) and extrabudgetary resources ($27.5 million).

The Assembly was asked to endorse the proposals and approach submitted by the Secretary-General.

In October [A/63/487 & Corr. 2], ACABQ considered that those revisions represented a significant change in the strategy for implementing ERP, and recommended that the Secretary-General submit a revised ERP project implementation plan and updated budget for the Assembly's consideration in the context of its consideration of the proposed 2010–2011 programme budget. In the meantime, the Secretary-General should be provided with sufficient resources to staff the core project team and proceed with the tasks and project activities of the detailed design phase, as well as any other tasks to be performed so as not to further delay the project. Accordingly, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the revised resources for the current biennium in the amount of $37,258,700, comprising $5,588,800 to be funded under the regular budget; $23,100,400 from the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009; and $8,569,800 to be provided from extrabudgetary resources. Remaining requirements would be included in subsequent peacekeeping support account budgets.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/648/Add.3], adopted resolution 63/262 without vote [agenda item 118].

Information and communications technology, enterprise resource planning, and security, disaster recovery and business continuity

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/304 of 15 April 2003, 59/275 of 23 December 2004, 60/283, section II, of 7 July 2006 and 62/250 of 20 June 2008,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Investing in information and communications technology: information and communications strategy for the United Nations Secretariat" and the addendum thereto, the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Information and communications technology: enterprise systems for the United Nations Secretariat worldwide", the report of the Secretary-General on information and communications technology security, disaster recovery and business continuity for the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the first progress report of the Secretary-General on the adoption of International Public Sector Accounting Standards by the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Investing in information and communications technology: status report" and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the note by the Secretary-General on information and communication technology security, business continuity and disaster recovery and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Investing in the United Nations for a stronger Organization worldwide: interim report: investing in information and communications technology" and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, the notes by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on policies of the United Nations system organizations towards the use of open source software in the secretariats and the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon, the notes by the Secretary-General transmitting the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on knowledge management in the United Nations system and the comments of the Secretary-General and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination thereon, and the report of the Secretary-General on the feasibility of the application of cost-accounting principles in the United Nations Secretariat and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Underlining the importance of information and communications technology in meeting the growing demands of the Organization as it becomes increasingly reliant on its information technology and communications infrastructure,

Also underlining the importance of information and communications technology in strengthening oversight and accountability and in increasing the availability of accurate and timely information to support decision-making,

1. Reaffirms that the Fifth Committee is the appropriate Main Committee of the General Assembly entrusted with responsibilities for administrative and budgetary matters;

2. Recalls the role of the Secretary-General as the Chief Administrative Officer of the Organization, in accordance with the provisions of Article 97 of the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Recognizes the need for central authority to set common standards, provide an Organization-wide perspective, optimize use of resources and improve information and communications technology services;

4. Also recognizes the need for an integrated, global information system that makes possible the effective management of human, financial and physical resources and that is based on streamlined business processes and best practices;

5. Further recognizes the need for a global operational framework to enable the United Nations to respond effectively to emergency situations that may impair the operations of critical elements of its information and communications technology infrastructure and facilities;

6. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

I

Information and communications technology strategy and governance

Recognizing the importance of the Secretary-General's knowledge management proposals, particularly in facilitating more informed decision-making and improving the effectiveness of the Organization,

Emphasizing the importance of strong, central leadership for the establishment and implementation of Organization-wide information and communications technology standards and activities in order to ensure efficient utilization of resources, modernization of information systems and improvement in the information and communications technology services available to the United Nations,

1. Recognizes that the successful integration of central information and communications technology functions across the Secretariat is essential to achieving coherence and coordination in the work of the Organization and between the Secretariat and the funds, programmes and specialized agencies;

2. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to establish the Office of Information and Communications Technology in a budget-and-staff-neutral manner;

3. Stresses the need for a simple and operationally effective information and communications technology governance structure with clear lines of authority and accountability;

4. Decides to establish the Office of Information and Communications Technology as an independent organizational unit under a separate budget section, to be headed by the Chief Information Technology Officer at the level of Assistant Secretary-General;

5. Emphasizes that there is no single governance model for information and communications technology that can be assumed to be solely appropriate for the United Nations;

6. Notes the considerable level of expertise in the International Computing Centre, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to utilize the services of the Centre in supporting the information and communications technology activities of the United Nations;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the centralization and integration of the information and communications technology functions in the Office of Information and Communications Technology do not have any negative impact on the support provided to field operations worldwide;

8. Encourages the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to foster deeper coordination and collaboration among United Nations organizations in all matters related to information and communications technology;

9. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with its resolution 58/269 of 23 December 2003, to submit a revised strategic framework to the Committee for Programme and Coordination at its forty-ninth session in the light of the programmatic aspects of the revision arising from the creation of the Office of Information and Communications Technology;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fifth session on his information and communications technology strategy, including on:

(a) Any necessary adjustments to the governance structure to make it simpler and operationally effective as a policy setting and management instrument;

(b) An update on such management and reporting arrangements;

(c) An in-depth assessment of the organizational arrangement, including the possibility of changing the placement of the Office of Information and Communications Technology in the structure of the Organization;

(d) A comprehensive inventory of information and communications technology capacities across the Secretariat, including dedicated and part-time personnel;

(e) More precisely identified and quantified efficiency gains or benefits expected from the implementation of the information and communications technology strategy;

(f) The methodology and benchmarks used to identify and measure those benefits;

(g) The roles and responsibilities of the Office of the Chief Information Technology Officer and the Department of Field Support of the Secretariat regarding information and communications technology activities, including on lines of authority, accountability and the division of labour set out in the new organizational structure;

II

Enterprise resource planning project

1. Recalls section II, paragraph 4, of its resolution 60/283, in which it decided to replace the Integrated Management Information System with a next-generation enterprise resource planning system or other comparable system;

2. Stresses that the implementation of the enterprise resource planning system should aim at consolidating the management of all financial, human and physical resources under a single integrated information system for the entire Organization, including for peacekeeping and field missions;

3. Recognizes the considerable operational and financial risks involved in the implementation of the enterprise resource planning system, and stresses the need for the Secretary-General to ensure full accountability and clear lines of responsibility for the project;

4. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to implement the functionalities of the United Nations enterprise resource planning system in ways that would mitigate organizational and managerial risks;

5. Stresses the need to implement the various functions of the enterprise resource planning system across the global range of United Nations offices in a well-planned, step-by-step manner that ensures adequate preparation and training for each location and that minimizes the burden of change on the Organization and its resources, in order to further mitigate organizational and managerial risks;

6. Notes that the enterprise resource planning system provides for an integrated suite of information technology applications, as outlined by the Secretary-General in paragraph 20 of his report, and requests the Secretary-General to report on those applications to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

7. Approves the proposed governance framework of the enterprise resource planning project;

8. Notes that the enterprise resource planning governance structure proposed by the Secretary-General is distinct from the information and communications technology governance structure;

9. Recognizes that the successful implementation of the enterprise resource planning project requires the full support and commitment of senior management, as well as close and continuous engagement with key stakeholders;

10. Emphasizes that the enterprise resource planning project should be viewed primarily as a business project driven by business process demands and delivered through complex information technology systems requiring a high level of technical expertise;

11. Recalls that the objective of the enterprise resource planning project is to enhance the effective and transparent use of the resources of the Organization and, in that regard, emphasizes the need to identify tangible and measurable efficiency and productivity gains arising from the project;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to limit customization of the enterprise resource planning software to the extent feasible in order to ensure cost-effectiveness as well as flexibility in upgrading to new versions of the software and to report on any necessary customization with full justification of rationale and cost;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General, where customization for a particular function is unavoidable, to consider enhancing existing systems or using specialized software that can integrate with the enterprise resource planning system where it is more cost-effective in the long-term;

14. Stresses that changes to the working practices and business processes of the Secretariat should always be considered before undertaking customization;

15. Expresses its readiness to consider any duly justified proposal aimed at reducing customization, stressing that any proposed changes to the United Nations regulations must have prior approval of the General Assembly;

16. Stresses that, as a later adopter of the enterprise resource planning system, the United Nations can benefit from the lessons learned by other entities of the United Nations system that have implemented such systems;

17. Takes note of the overall resource requirements for the implementation of the enterprise resource planning systems for the United Nations as contained in the relevant report of the Secretary-General;

18. Approves the amount of 20 million United States dollars, comprising 5,110,000 dollars to be funded from the regular budget for the biennium 2008–2009, 7,050,000 dollars from the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 and 7,840,000 dollars from extrabudgetary resources for the biennium 2008–2009 for the implementation of the enterprise resource planning system;

19. Decides to approve the utilization of the amount of 2,346,000 dollars of interest accrued under the Integrated Management Information System Fund available as at 31 December 2007 to offset the regular budget requirements for the enterprise resource planning project approved in paragraph 18 of the present section;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to meet the regular budget share of requirements for the enterprise resource planning system in the amount of 2,764,000 dollars from the overall resources appropriated for the biennium 2008–2009 for the regular budget and to report the related expenditure as necessary in the second performance report for the biennium 2008–2009;

21. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in a total amount not to exceed 7,050,000 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 in respect of the support account share for the enterprise resource planning project;

22. Takes note that an estimated amount of 7,840,000 dollars will be financed from extrabudgetary resources for the biennium 2008–2009;

23. Endorses the cost-sharing arrangement for the financing of the enterprise resource planning project proposed by the Secretary-General in paragraph 79 of his report;

24. Decides not to suspend the provisions for the application of credits under regulations 3.2 (d), 5.3 and 5.4 of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, regarding the use of available balances in the surplus account of the General Fund and the unencumbered balance of active peacekeeping operations;

25. Authorizes the Secretary-General to establish a multi-year special account to record income and expenditures for this project;

26. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the enterprise resource planning governance structure under review and to report to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fourth session on the enterprise resource planning project, including:

(a) An assessment of the organizational arrangements;

(b) A revised enterprise resource planning project implementation and updated budget, taking stock of the design phase, with a full and detailed justification of the resources needed;

(c) An updated business case, including details on tangible and measurable efficiency and productivity gains in the areas of operation and administration to be achieved through the implementation of the enterprise resource planning system, as well as benchmarks for measuring progress and the anticipated return on investment;

(d) Highlighting those modules that are essential for the implementation of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;

(e) An update on the implementation of the customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems, including further resources required, as well as the cost-sharing arrangement for their continued implementation;

(f) Justification of the need, and options for, contingency resources, including a possible budgetary alternative;

(g) Options for a reduced enterprise resource planning package at lower cost;

III

Customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems

1. Recognizes the benefits of the implementation of the customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems, and requests the Secretary-General to continue to implement those applications throughout the Organization, as appropriate;

2. Stresses that the customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems shall be developed and implemented under the authority of the Chief Information Technology Officer in order to ensure a coordinated approach to the development of enterprise systems;

3. Emphasizes the need to ensure complementarity between the customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems with the forthcoming enterprise resource planning system;

4. Decides to approve additional resource requirements for the enterprise content management project in the amount of 2 million dollars, and requests the Secretary-General to meet the requirements from within the overall resources appropriated under the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and to report on the related expenditure, as necessary, in the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium;

5. Notes that implementation of the customer relationship management and enterprise content management systems is already in progress, and that at the time of the inception of those projects, the Secretary-General had not made a full proposal to the General Assembly;

IV

Security, disaster recovery and business continuity

1. Emphasizes the need for appropriate information and communications technology security, disaster recovery and business continuity plans;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to consolidate systems in central data centres in order to strengthen disaster recovery and business continuity and to minimize the size of local primary and secondary data centres;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to prioritize systems in order to minimize the cost of disaster recovery and business continuity;

4. Recalls section XV of its resolution 60/266 of 30 June 2006, and stresses the need to ensure timely and secure communications and information exchange within and between duty stations, as well as to ensure that a robust and fault-tolerant infrastructure is in place to continue or restart operations in the event of a natural or a man-made disaster or disruption;

5. Notes that the Secretariat lacks an Organization-wide approach to disaster recovery and business continuity, thereby exposing the Organization to considerable risks, and, in this regard, welcomes the development of a unified approach to disaster recovery and business continuity activities throughout the Secretariat;

6. Encourages the Secretary-General to take a unified approach to disaster recovery and business continuity, utilizing all available infrastructure, in order to achieve economies of scale and cost efficiencies;

7. Deeply regrets that the Secretary-General entered into a long-term lease for the proposed Long Island City data centre before the viability of the site as a secondary data centre for United Nations Headquarters had been fully established, and urges the Secretary-General to explore alternative uses for the leased space as a matter of urgency;

8. Notes with concern that the delay this caused may lead to further cost escalation, including to the capital master plan, and risk to data;

9. Notes the particular challenge of providing disaster recovery and business continuity to customized departmental information and communications technology systems, and encourages the Secretary-General to pursue an enterprise information and communications technology approach wherever possible;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the United Nations uses enterprise data centres rather than local data centres as far as possible;

11. Decides not to approve the proposal of the Secretary-General for a new secondary data centre at this stage, and requests him to report to the General Assembly at the first part of its resumed sixty-third session on the risk mitigation measures to be taken during the relocation of the primary data centre to the North Lawn;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a unified disaster recovery and business continuity plan, including a permanent solution for Headquarters;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to fully explore the possibilities for consolidating and using the most reliable and cost-effective solution for data storage, business continuity services and hosting of enterprise systems, drawing on the experience of other United Nations entities and global developments in information and communications technology, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at the main part of its sixty-fourth session;

14. Encourages application and data re-engineering where it supports the long-term goal of managing data recovery and business continuity in system-wide enterprise data centres and where, from a long-term perspective, it is more cost-effective than hosting them at a local data centre;

15. Notes with appreciation the commitment of the Government of Spain, and approves the related proposal to host a secondary active telecommunications facility at Valencia, Spain, to support peacekeeping activities;

16. Decides not to proceed at this stage with plans to host computing and data storage equipment relating to Secretariat business continuity operations and enterprise solutions at the secondary active communications facility at Valencia;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to include, in the report requested in paragraph 13 of the present section, plans to reduce the number of local data centres at Headquarters, offices away from Headquarters and peacekeeping missions;

18. Endorses the cost-sharing arrangement proposed by the Secretary-General for the new primary data centre of the United Nations Headquarters;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a proposal on cost-sharing arrangements in the context of the report requested in paragraph 11 of the present section on the new secondary data centre;

20. Takes note of the intention to meet the estimated requirements in the amount of 149,400 dollars for the establishment of the secondary active telecommunications facility at Valencia for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 from within resources approved for the same period for the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy;

21. Approves the amount of 7,145,500 dollars for the establishment of a new primary data centre on the North Lawn at Headquarters, of which 5,716,400 dollars is to be funded from resources appropriated under the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009, and authorizes the Secretary-General to report the related expenditure, as necessary, in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium;

22. Authorizes the Secretary-General to enter into commitments in a total amount not to exceed 1,429,100 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations for the period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009 in respect of support account share for the establishment of a new primary data centre on the North Lawn;

23. Takes note of paragraphs 89 and 96 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and decides to approve the amount of 2.5 million dollars, to be funded from the regular budget for the current biennium, for the provision of disaster recovery and business continuity services to Headquarters, offices away from Headquarters and field missions, and requests the Secretary-General to meet the above requirements from within the overall resources appropriated for the biennium for the regular budget and to report the related expenditures, as necessary, in the second performance report for the biennium;

V

International Public Sector Accounting Standards

1. Takes note of the first progress report of the Secretary-General on the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Recalls that the General Assembly, in its resolution 60/283, approved the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards by the United Nations;

4. Underlines that the adoption of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards will improve governance, accountability and transparency in the United Nations system;

5. Recognizes that the enterprise resource planning system will serve as the backbone for implementation by the United Nations of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards;

6. Encourages the Secretary-General, as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to work within the Board to monitor the application of the International Public Sector Accounting Standards to ensure consistency within the United Nations system as a whole;

VI

Cost accounting

1. Endorses the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

2. Takes note of paragraphs 12, 17 and 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

3. Notes that cost accounting is more suitably applied to the support services of the Organization and may not be suitable for use in the substantive work of the Organization;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to improve the methods for calculating costs of support services, including through a framework for cost accounting in order to standardize current costing practices, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to include, in the report requested in paragraph 4 of the present section, an analysis of other areas within the support services of the Organization in which cost accounting could be applied.

International cooperation in informatics

In response to Economic and Social Council resolution 2007/14 [YUN 2007, p. 1486], the Secretary-General submitted a May report [E/2008/65] on international cooperation in the field of informatics, which addressed cooperation between the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics and the Secretariat; connectivity and access; information technology services; and training, support and awareness. Cooperation between the Working Group and the Secretariat resulted in practical enhancements in technology that facilitated the work of Member States and observers and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) accredited to the United Nations.

The Secretariat and the Working Group continued to share responsibility for creating and maintaining web pages and document updates. With the guidance of the Working Group, the Secretariat expanded efforts to more fully utilize CandiWeb, a website built in support of elections at UN Headquarters. The Secretariat developed websites for all General Assembly Main Committees and maintained wi-fi connectivity and dedicated Internet access points for delegates throughout public areas and conference rooms of the New York campus. It was developing an ICT solution for the Protocol and Liaison Service to facilitate the accreditation of delegates of permanent missions. The Secretariat provided website services for many permanent missions and was involved in moving a number of websites over to a standard web content management system. The system would streamline permanent mission websites and provide an easy-to-use interface for missions to use in updating and maintaining their content while providing enhanced information security. In 2007, more than 270 mission staff participated in the Dag Hammarskjöld Library's training or coaching programmes. The Secretariat identified cost-neutral measures to enable relevant information posted on iSeek—the UN Secretariat intranet—to be made available to Member States. The United Nations Institute for Training and Research offered courses to some 50,000 beneficiaries who participated in its e-learning courses, and enhanced efforts to broaden the use of instructional technology to reach an additional 40,000 beneficiaries from Member States annually.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 July [meeting 38], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2008/6 [draft: E/2008/L.18] without vote [agenda item 7 (c)].

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General on international cooperation in the field of informatics and the initiatives of the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics,

Recognizing the interest of Member States in taking full advantage of information and communications technologies for the acceleration of economic and social development,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the need to harmonize and improve United Nations information systems for optimal utilization and access by all States, with due regard to all the official languages,

Welcoming the intensification of efforts by the Information Technology Services Division of the Department of Management of the Secretariat to provide interconnectivity and unhindered Internet access to all permanent and observer missions at the United Nations,

1. Reiterates once again the high priority that it attaches to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access for States Members of the United Nations and Observers, as well as non-governmental organizations accredited to the United Nations, to the computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations, provided that the unhindered access of non-governmental organizations to such databases, systems and services will not prejudice the access of Member States nor impose an additional financial burden for their use;

2. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to convene the Ad Hoc Open-ended Working Group on Informatics for one more year to enable it to carry out, from within existing resources, the due fulfilment of the provisions of the Council resolutions on this item, to facilitate the successful implementation of the initiatives being taken by the Secretary-General with regard to the use of information technology and to continue the implementation of measures required to achieve its objectives, and, in that regard, requests the Working Group to continue its efforts to act as a bridge between the evolving needs of Member States and the actions of the Secretariat, and also requests the Working Group to consider its future role, status and mandate and develop findings in that regard;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretariat for the continuing cooperation that it is extending to the Working Group in the endeavour to further improve the information technology services available to all permanent and observer missions at the United Nations and, in particular, for upgrading and stabilizing the e-mail services for delegates and for upgrading web-based services, such as the CandiWeb elections and candidatures site, as well as many mission websites implementing the CandiWeb elections and candidatures website, a cooperative effort of the Secretariat and the diplomatic community coordinated by the Working Group;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to extend full cooperation to the Working Group and to give priority to implementing its recommendations and guidance, particularly with regard to the establishment of a Member State web portal to consolidate and simplify the secure access by authorized representatives of Member States to relevant information;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Economic and Social Council at its substantive session of 2009 on action taken in follow-up to the present resolution, including the findings of the Working Group and an assessment of its work and mandate.

UN premises and property

Capital master plan

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 57/292 [YUN 2002, p. 1375], the Secretary-General, in October [A/63/477], submitted his sixth annual progress report on the capital master plan (CMP), which outlined activities undertaken since his previous report [YUN 2007, p. 1486]. The Secretary-General reported that, following the approval of the accelerated strategy by the Assembly in resolution 62/87 [ibid., p. 1488], most testing requirements had been completed. A groundbreaking ceremony was held on 5 May and the construction of the temporary North Lawn Building was initiated. All remaining swing space leases were signed and preparations finalized for the temporary relocation of staff to those spaces in late 2008 and early 2009. In addition, significant progress was achieved in the design of the project, taking into account the changes required by the adoption of the accelerated strategy, the changes agreed upon as a result of the value engineering exercise, the incorporation of substantial greening measures and the incorporation of changes related to blast protection. As at September 2008, the projected cost was estimated at $1,974 million, a decrease of $122.1 million from the projected cost at August 2007. Total appropriations to date were $1,186.8 million, including $992.8 million for the 2008–2009 biennium. Actual expenditure as at 30 September was $239.5 million. Associated costs related to CMP implementation, including staffing and operational costs to support construction activities, would be reported in separate reports (see below). The Assembly was requested to take note of the progress made, and request the Secretary-General to continue to report on the status of the project, the schedule, the projected completion cost, the status of contributions, the working capital reserve, the status of the advisory board and the letter of credit in the next progress report.

Associated costs

Report of Secretary-General (April). In April [A/62/799], the Secretary-General reported on the associated costs, staffing and operational costs related to the CMP, in response to General Assembly resolution 62/87 [YUN 2007, p. 1488]. He stated that many associated costs would be incurred from mid-2008, and delays in CMP could result if the associated activities did not proceed on the same timeline. However, those costs could not be absorbed within the approved CMP budget without exceeding that budget. Associated costs estimated at $193,751,700 were identified for 2008–2013 for departments providing support during construction.

Communication. In a 5 June letter [A/C.5/62/29], the Assembly President informed the Chairman of the Fifth Committee of the Secretary-General's request for the Secretariat to enter into commitments in an amount not exceeding $22.7 million through 31 December, in respect of CMP associated costs ($9.5 million) and the UN enterprise systems ($13.2 million). The Secretary-General recommended that the Assembly take note of those costs, with the understanding that the detailed requirements should be subjected to the fullest scrutiny at its sixty-third (2008) session.

Report of Secretary-General (December). The Secretary-General, in December [A/63/582], updated his April estimated requirements for associated costs, which amounted to $185,997,400 gross ($176,569,000 net), or $7,754,300 gross ($6,569,500 net) less. For the 2008–2009 biennium, those costs amounted to $35,816,700, and $147,806,200 for 2010–2013. The Assembly was requested to approve the proposals.

Review of CMP

Report of Board of Auditors. The June report of the Board of Auditors on CMP for the year ended 31 December 2007 [A/63/5 (Vol. V)] reviewed the financial transactions and programme management for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2007, and the 11 recommendations it had made in its previous report [YUN 2007, p. 1487], five of which had been implemented, while four were under implementation and two had not been implemented. Since the design documents related to the accelerated strategy were not advanced enough, the Board was unable to give a well-informed opinion on the schedule and the global cost estimate for the project.

As at 31 December 2007, total expenditures committed or incurred since the beginning of the project amounted to $115.5 million. For 2007, expenses amounted to $46.4 million, of which $26.8 million and $19.6 million were in respect of disbursements and commitments, respectively, representing an increase of 27 per cent compared to 2006. The most noteworthy change since 2006 was the surge in deferred charges, which increased from $2.8 million to $124.1 million, due to the pre-encumbrance made for the lease of the swing spaces ($89.2 million) and for contractual services, notably those pertaining to the construction manager and the programme manager ($34.8 million).

The increase in the cash balance and deferred charges contributed to the surge in total assets, which amounted to $730.1 million as at 31 December 2007, compared to $202.3 million as at 31 December 2006. Liabilities increased less in absolute terms than the assets (from $39.3 million in 2006 to $198.3 million in 2007), which caused the reserves and fund balances amounting to $532.5 million to rise threefold from the previous financial year.

On internal control and oversight, the Board found that the CMP Office had monitoring tools, but did not have a summary scoreboard to permanently monitor progress made on the project. The Board also noted that the expenditures recorded in the Secretariat's accounting system and the expense forecasts prepared by the CMP Office were presented in different ways. Reconciling those two sources of information proved difficult, which affected the ability to manage the CMP budget.

Report of Secretary-General. In August [A/63/327], the Secretary-General provided additional information on implementation status, in response to the Board of Auditors' recommendations (see above), in accordance with Assembly resolution 48/216 B [YUN 1993, p. 1207]. As at August, three of the five main recommendations were targeted for implementation by the end of 2008 and two by the third quarter of 2009, while seven were in progress. No target date had been set for one recommendation. The report also contained detailed information on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the reports of the Board of Auditors on CMP for prior years.

OIOS report. In August [A/63/266], OIOS submitted a comprehensive audit of CMP, conducted pursuant to Assembly resolution 62/87 [YUN 2007, p. 1488]. The audit focused on the structure of the CMP Office, compliance with UN regulations and rules on procurement and contracting, adherence to the terms of contracts, the internal controls and processes in place to properly manage the project, and other high-risk areas. The audit identified the main risks to CMP as: possible delays resulting from procedural inflexibilities; cost increases due to changes to strategy and scope; and inadequate budgetary provision for associated costs.

While the overall activities of the CMP Office were adequately controlled, OIOS identified some areas in which controls could be improved and made recommendations to strengthen procedures and contribute to efficiencies. The most important of the recommendations related to avoiding delays by streamlining procurement procedures for contractual amendments so as to give the Executive Director the authority to spend up to a pre-approved contingency sum for each guaranteed maximum price contract. Recognizing the need to establish adequate controls for such a procedure, OIOS recommended that a committee be established to carry out an ex post facto review of contractual amendments and change orders over $200,000.

Associated costs (costs not budgeted or managed by the CMP Office) for the period 2008–2013 were estimated at about $194 million. OIOS stressed the need to identify and monitor all associated costs to ensure that adequate funding continued to be available, as well as to determine which of those costs should be attributed to the CMP project, as opposed to those costs which should be funded from regular departmental budgets. Recommendations were made with regard to succession planning, management coordination, delegation of procurement authority, associated costs, performance targets and stakeholder management. The CMP Office accepted the majority of OIOS recommendations.

Additional office/conference facilities

Addis Ababa. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 60/248 [YUN 2005, p. 1495], the Secretary-General submitted, in August [A/63/303], his annual report on construction of additional office facilities at the headquarters of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. ECA continued to negotiate with the local authorities to waive the requirement for the upfront payment of customs duties and related value added tax, to be reimbursed on the processing of applicable customs declarations and clearances. It continued to collaborate with them on the construction of an alternate public access road. Construction documents were received in January and the final tender was issued on 20 May. A bidders' conference was held in Addis Ababa on 6 June. The contract was expected to be awarded in December, with construction work commencing immediately thereafter. Owing to delays in the final negotiations with the international architect in November and December 2007, the issuance of the revised construction documents, the required in-depth coordination of the tender documents and the extension of the bid submission date, the building was expected to be completed in November 2010, with interior set-up approximately six months later.

In October [A/63/465], ACABQ expressed concern that little real progress had been made in the six and a half years since the project was initiated. The project appeared to be not well managed locally or adequately supported by Headquarters. Inadequate technical expertise had resulted in numerous technical design flaws. The Committee was also disappointed by the lack of accountability in overseeing and managing the project. There was a need to improve the entire arrangement to deal comprehensively with leadership, responsibility and accountability issues. ACABQ recommended that the management arrangements for the ECA project be clarified and improved so as to ensure that the new timeline proposed in the Secretary-General's report was implemented without further delay and that the new ECA office building became available for occupancy by mid-2011 as planned. The Secretary-General should address any unresolved issues, including the host country addendum for duty-free and tax-free status and site works, and report on actions taken in his next progress report.

The Assembly, in section I of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1546), expressed concern about the delays and procedural difficulties in the execution of the ECA projects. It requested the Secretary-General to undertake management reviews of the projects to ensure that a dedicated project management capacity was in place; ensure full accountability for all factors that had contributed to delays and cost escalation; update Member States through regular informal briefings on the construction project; complete the construction project as planned, without any further delays or additional requirements from the regular budget; ensure that progress was monitored by the Under-Secretary-General for Management; and report thereon to the Assembly at its sixty-fourth (2009) session.

Nairobi. In accordance with Assembly resolution 58/272 [YUN 2003, p. 1417], the Secretary-General, in April [A/62/794], submitted his annual report on improving and modernizing the conference facilities and construction of additional office facilities at the United Nations Office at Nairobi (UNON). Implementation of the modernization of the conference facilities was initially delayed by design considerations, vacancies in the Office's Facilities Management Service and the full commitment of existing resources to, inter alia, the implementation of projects to strengthen security and safety. However, UNON was taking all necessary measures to ensure that the modernization project for conference rooms 1 to 8 would start at the beginning of July 2008 and be completed by the beginning of February 2009. The project cost was revised to approximately $5,378,000, an increase of $1,899,000 over the original 2003 estimate of $3,479,000 approved by the Assembly.

The project of construction of additional office facilities at UNON moved into the detailed design and construction documentation phases in January, and UNON was expected to proceed to tender for the construction by May. The detailed design and construction documentation phases would be completed by the second quarter of the year, followed by a tender for construction. Construction was expected to begin in September, with a completion date of end-2010 and occupancy in January 2011.

The delays in the design phase, additional requirements relating, inter alia, to ensuring safety and security, and unforeseen construction components that had become necessary, had increased the cost of both projects. The total cost of the conference facilities project would amount to $5,378,000, and $25,252,200 for the additional office facilities project. The Assembly was requested to approve those amounts, the use of interest income of $1,088,000 for both projects and a commitment authority in the amount of $987,000.

In October [A/63/465], ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposals, but noted that the bidding process scheduled for October might affect requirements. It also recommended that updated estimates be submitted and a progress report on the construction project be submitted annually.

The Assembly, in section I of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1546), expressed concern about the delays and procedural difficulties in the execution of the project. It requested the Secretary-General to undertake a management review of the project; ensure full accountability for all factors that had contributed to delays in the implementation of the project and project cost escalation; and report to the Assembly in his next annual progress reports.

Vienna. In accordance with section X of Assembly resolution 62/238 [YUN 2007, p. 1454], the Secretary-General, in August [A/63/303], provided information on progress made in the construction of additional conference facilities at the Vienna International Centre. Completion of construction of the new conference facility (M building) was scheduled for the second half of 2008. The inauguration ceremony for the new building was held on 25 April and was attended by the Secretary-General. The implementation of certain installations included in the original design would take place after the M building was handed over to the organizations based at the Vienna International Centre by the host Government.

The four organizations based at the Vienna International Centre—the United Nations Office at Vienna, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and the Preparatory Commission of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization—would begin using the new M building in September and October. Full use was tentatively planned for 1 January 2009.

The four would collectively contribute €2.5 million for the construction of additional conference facilities. The United Nations share, set at 4 per cent, was included in the 2008–2009 programme budget under section 32, Construction, alteration, improvement and major maintenance. No additional operational and maintenance costs were anticipated while the new facility was used as swing space during the removal of asbestos from and refurbishment of the existing conference building (C building). The asbestos removal work, which began in 2004, would continue during 2008–2009 and beyond. All direct costs related to the asbestos removal were to be borne by Austria. The total project plan was expected to be completed by mid-2011.

In October [A/63/465], ACABQ welcomed the progress made towards the completion of the new conference facilities and the support of the host country for the project, and recommended that the Assembly take note of the Secretary-General's report.

Rental of office space

By decision 63/549 of 24 December, the General Assembly decided to establish, effective 1 January 2009, a rental charge in the amount of $6 dollars per square foot per annum for the office space occupied by the Office of the Group of 77 and China at UN Headquarters, which included the provision of furniture and photocopying machine. It recognized the receivables associated with the rental obligations of the Group of 77 and China for the office space occupied by the Group at UN Headquarters, and decided that, as an exceptional measure, the outstanding receivables as at 31 December 2008 should be written off. It emphasized the need for all UN tenants to pay their rents on time, in full and without conditions; and that in the future, the Secretary-General should handle rental issues with individual tenants in accordance with existing procedures, without recourse to the Assembly.

Integrated headquarters facility for UNAMI

In response to resolution 62/238 [YUN 2007, p. 1451], the Secretary-General submitted, in May [A/62/828], a proposal for the construction of the UN integrated compound in Baghdad, Iraq. The Secretary-General said that following the adoption of Security Council resolution 1770(2007) [YUN 2007, p. 346], the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Iraq (UNAMI) was expanded and consequently would result in the long-term involvement of the Organization in Iraq. UNAMI, through the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq and in consultation with Iraqi Government representatives and United States authorities, had identified Al-Sijud Palace, located in the south-western corner of the international zone, for the development of UNAMI long-term facilities in Baghdad. That property was central to the proposed international district under the future redevelopment plan. The project, with an estimated cost of $98.6 million, was expected to be completed by October 2010. The new integrated compound would facilitate the return of the UN country team for Iraq from Amman, Jordan, and the re-establishment of UN agencies in the country, as well as increase administrative efficiency and promote cohesive and coordinated action. The new compound would have safer and more secure facilities, including the necessary security, logistics and communications infrastructure, which would provide accommodation for all UNAMI personnel and staff of UN agencies, funds and programmes. It would also provide space for the UN Guard Unit and other security personnel, as well as office space for all staff, including civilian personnel, visiting experts and delegations. The Secretary-General requested the General Assembly to approve in principle the proposal for the construction of the integrated headquarters for UNAMI at the Al-Sijud site.

In October [A/63/346/Add.5], the Secretary-General reported that the Government of Iraq was unable to allocate the Al-Sijud site to the United Nations but offered an alternative site adjacent to the original location in the international zone for a period of 25 years. The new site would enjoy the same security arrangements and other benefits of the future diplomatic areas as the Al-Sijud site, and there would be no cost increases. Meanwhile, discussions with the Government regarding the co-funding arrangement for the new UN compound were ongoing. Commitment authority was sought for 2009 to undertake design work, upon the completion of which a more comprehensive proposal would be submitted for the Assembly's consideration.

ACABQ, in a December related report [A/63/601], recommended a commitment authority for 2009 of up to $5 million for the design work, and that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to submit a new, detailed proposal for consideration at its sixty-third (2009) resumed session.

By section X of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1548), the Assembly approved commitment authority for 2009 for UNAMI in the amount of $5 million to undertake design work for the construction of the integrated compound and requested the Secretary-General to submit a new, complete and detailed proposal during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session.

Conditions of service

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), a 15-member body established in 1974 by General Assembly resolution 3357(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 875], continued in 2008 to regulate and coordinate the conditions of service and the salaries and allowances of the UN common system.

ICSC held its sixty-sixth (Addis Ababa, 31 March–1 April) and sixty-seventh (New York, 14–25 July) sessions, at which it considered, in addition to organizational matters, the conditions of service applicable to Professional, General Service and locally recruited categories of staff. The deliberations, recommendations and decisions of ICSC on those matters were detailed in its annual report to the General Assembly [A/63/30] (see sections below on specific issues).

By decision 62/545 B of 3 April, the General Assembly deferred until the second part of its resumed sixty-second (2008) session consideration of the addendum to the ICSC report for 2006 [YUN 2006, p. 1677] and the ICSC report for 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1496]. In a 17 September statement [A/63/360], the Secretary-General estimated the administrative and financial implications of ICSC decisions and recommendations for the 2008–2009 proposed programme budget at $3,614,200, which would be taken into consideration in the first performance report for the 2008–2009 biennium.

On 23 October [A/63/501], ACABQ stated that it had no objection to the Secretary-General's approach.

In section III of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1547), the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's statement and the related ACABQ report.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the United Nations common system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

(The Assembly's action on ICSC recommendations and decisions are contained in resolution 63/251 below.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/640], adopted resolution 63/251 without vote [agenda item 125].

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/198 of 21 December 1989, 51/216 of 18 December 1996, 52/216 of 22 December 1997, 53/209 of 18 December 1998, 55/223 of 23 December 2000, 56/244 of 24 December 2001, 57/285 of 20 December 2002, 58/251 of 23 December 2003, 59/268 of 23 December 2004, 61/239 of 22 December 2006 and 62/227 and 62/238 of 22 December 2007,

Having considered the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2008,

Reaffirming its commitment to a single, unified United Nations common system as the cornerstone for the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

Reaffirming the statute of the Commission and the central role of the Commission and the General Assembly in the regulation and coordination of the conditions of service of the United Nations common system,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the work of the International Civil Service Commission;

2. Takes note of the report of the Commission for the year 2008;

3. Reiterates its invitation to the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to urge the heads of the organizations of the United Nations common system to fully support the work of the Commission, in conformity with its statute, by providing it with relevant information in a timely manner for studies that it conducts under its statutory responsibilities for the common system, as well as by other possible means;

4. Encourages the Commission to continue to coordinate and regulate the conditions of service of staff of the organizations of the common system, bearing in mind the limitations imposed by Member States on their national civil services;

5. Recalls article 28 of the statute of the Commission;

A. Conditions of service for both categories of staff

1. Education grant

1. Approves, with effect from the school year in progress on 1 January 2009, the recommendations of the Commission in paragraph 62 of its report and annex II thereto;

2. Requests the Commission to report on the methodological review of the education grant to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

2. Performance management

1. Reiterates the importance of developing mechanisms for better differentiating levels of performance;

2. Requests the Commission to work closely with organizations to identify workable means of rewarding performance;

3. Welcomes the work of the Commission in benchmarking innovative practices in the area of performance management, and encourages the Commission to keep performance management under review;

4. Requests the Commission to submit an updated performance management framework to the General Assembly;

B. Conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories

1. Evolution of the margin

Recalling section I.B of its resolution 51/216 and the standing mandate from the General Assembly, in which the Commission is requested to continue its review of the relationship between the net remuneration of United Nations staff in the Professional and higher categories in New York and that of the comparator civil service (the United States federal civil service) employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as "the margin"),

1. Notes that the margin between net remuneration of United Nations staff in grades P-1 to D-2 in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service in Washington, D.C., for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2008 is estimated at 114.7 and that the average margin level for the past five years (2004–2008) stands at 112.9;

2. Reaffirms that the range of 110 to 120 for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and officials in comparable positions in the comparator civil service should continue to apply, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable midpoint of 115 over a period of time;

2. Base/floor salary scale

Recalling its resolution 44/198, by which it established a floor net salary level for staff in the Professional and higher categories by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service,

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2009, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 79 of its report, the revised base/floor scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories contained in annex IV to the report;

3. Children's and secondary dependant's allowances

Approves, with effect from 1 January 2009, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 129 of its report, the revised flat-rate allowance and the transitional measure thereto;

4. Mobility/hardship

1. Recognizes the hardship conditions under which staff members are often required to perform their official duties, and the personal disruption that operationally required mobility may impose on staff;

2. Approves, with effect from 1 January 2009, as recommended by the Commission in paragraph 94 of its report, the revised level of the hardship, mobility and non-removal allowances;

3. Welcomes the intent of the Commission to review whether the mobility/hardship continues to fulfil the purposes for which it was established;

4. Encourages the Commission to further refine the mobility/hardship scheme in order to foster, in particular, the achievement of organizational objectives;

5. Requests the Commission to report on the outcome of its planned review of the mobility/hardship scheme to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

5. Gender balance/geographical balance

1. Notes with disappointment the insufficient progress made with regard to the representation of women in the organizations of the United Nations common system, and in particular their significant underrepresentation at senior levels;

2. Notes the decisions of the Commission contained in paragraph 109 of its report;

3. Invites the Commission to continue to monitor future progress in achieving gender balance, including the aspect of regional representation if it deems it appropriate, and to make recommendations on practical steps that should be taken to improve the representation of women in the organizations of the United Nations common system;

C. Conditions of service of staff in the General Service and other locally recruited categories

Review of the methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at headquarters and non-headquarters duty stations

Notes paragraph 148 of the report of the Commission, and requests the Commission to report on the methodological review to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session;

D. Conditions of service in the field

1. Effectiveness and impact of recruitment and retention measures at difficult duty stations

1. Welcomes the decision of the Commission to undertake a global staff survey to complement the findings of its studies;

2. Invites the Commission to conduct similar staff surveys periodically in support of its work, as well as any follow-up surveys;

3. Requests the Commission to continue its consideration of issues related to recruitment and retention and to report thereon as appropriate;

2. Hazard pay for internationally recruited staff

Expresses its appreciation for staff who live and work under hazardous conditions in the service of the United Nations;

E. Strengthening of the international civil service

Reaffirms that the staff is an invaluable asset of the Organization, and commending its contribution to furthering the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

1. Emphasizes that the capacity of the Commission as a source of technical expertise and policy advice should be further strengthened;

2. Stresses that the work of the Commission shall be given the importance and attention it deserves by the governing bodies of the organizations of the common system;

3. Requests the Commission to closely monitor the developments in the organizations of the United Nations common system in order to ensure the effective regulation and coordination of the conditions of service in the common system;

4. Notes the decision of the Commission to keep the Senior Management Network programme under review, and, bearing in mind paragraph 178 of its report, requests the Commission to monitor the envisaged redesigning of the programme and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session.

Functioning of ICSC

Strengthening ICSC

In 2008, the General Assembly requested ICSC to closely monitor the developments in the UN common system organizations to ensure the effective regulation and coordination of the conditions of service in the common system. The Assembly noted the ICSC decision to keep the Senior Management Network programme under review and requested it to monitor the redesigning of the programme and report to the Assembly at its sixty-fourth (2009) session.

Remuneration issues

In keeping with General Assembly resolutions 47/216 [YUN 1992, p. 1055] and 55/223 [YUN 2000, p. 1331], ICSC reviewed the relationship between the net remuneration of UN staff in the Professional and higher categories (grades P-1 to D-2) in New York, and that of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service employees in comparable positions in Washington, D.C. (referred to as the “margin”). In its 2008 report to the Assembly [A/63/30], ICSC reported that the net remuneration margin, for the period from 1 January to 31 December 2008, was estimated at 114.1. It drew the Assembly’s attention to the fact that the average margin level for the past five years (2004–2008) had been below the desirable midpoint of 115, and currently stood at 112.8.

ICSC noted that for 2008, no duty station was expected to have a post adjustment below the new base/floor salary scale. It recommended to the Assembly, with effect from 1 January 2009, that the base/floor salary scale for the Professional and higher categories, as shown in annex IV to its report, be increased by 2.33 per cent through the standard consolidation method of increasing base salary and commensurately reducing post adjustment multiplier points.

Post adjustment

ICSC [A/63/30 & Corr.1] reviewed the operation of the post adjustment system, designed to measure cost-of-living movements through periodic place-to-place surveys at all duty stations. In that regard, it considered the report of the Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions (ACPAQ), which at its thirtieth session (New York, 28 January–4 February) undertook a number of methodological studies pertaining to the 2010 round of place-to-place surveys; reviewed the results of an out-of-area survey, conducted by the Commission secretariat, aimed at a possible revision of the list of countries used in the calculation of the out-of-area index; and conducted an assessment of the extent to which the Internet could be used as a source of price data in cost-of-living surveys.

ICSC endorsed ACPAQ recommendations: to simplify the post adjustment index structure, reducing the number of basic headings from 104 to 84; for the 2010 round of surveys, the secretariat should not use hedonic regression techniques to adjust the prices of electronic and other high-technology products but keep abreast of developments in that area; increase use of the Internet as a source of price data at group I duty stations where local outlets had websites, and request the secretariat to continue its research on use of the Internet as a source of price data; base the proposed methodology for calculating the out-of-area index on a new list of 26 countries using survey weights, as well as the proposed procedure for revising the survey weights and the list of countries over time; revise the template of the biennial report of the data provider's report on its study of the cost-of-living differential between Washington, D.C., and New York, and request ACPAQ to review the structure of the 2008 report at its next session; and expand the list of organic/biological products to be priced in the next round of surveys to include all foods and beverages.

ICSC approved the ACPAQ recommendation to use the cost estimation models developed by the secretariat to estimate the financial implications of possible changes to the education grant. It authorized the secretariat to conduct the proposed housing surveys at headquarters duty stations in 2008, for the purpose of updating rental subsidy thresholds at those duty stations. It also authorized its secretariat to apply the new cost-of-living measurement methodology based on real-time comparisons with New York for the affected products, starting with the 2010 round of cost-of-living surveys.

Other remuneration issues

Conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials

Staff of international tribunals

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/274 [YUN 2007, p. 1349], the Secretary-General submitted, in February [A/62/681]

(see p. 1422), a comprehensive proposal on appropriate incentives to retain staff in the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) and the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY), including cost implications; updated human resources data; draw-down plans for each Tribunal, which would clearly show the anticipated post reductions for each year until the Tribunals completed their mandates; non-monetary incentives and measures; clear justification for the possible payment of a retention incentive; legal aspects related to the implementation of a staff retention scheme; and alternative approaches to the calculation of the amount of a retention incentive.

The Secretary-General recommended that staff members be considered for an incentive payment if they had worked for one of the Tribunals for a minimum of five years at the time of their separation. Although that option restricted the amount of the payments by increasing the qualifying years of service threshold to five years, it had the advantage of targeting those staff that had greater seniority and hence the specialized knowledge that the Tribunals wished to retain. The financial implications of that proposal were $6.9 million and $7.2 million for ICTR and ICTY, respectively.

The Secretary-General recommended that the retention incentive be applicable on an as wide a post coverage basis as possible. The Secretary-General said that the cost/benefit analysis conducted by the Tribunals clearly showed that the financial implications of the retention incentive were more than offset by the savings associated with reduced turnover rates in terms of lower rotation costs and higher productivity and efficiency.

In March [A/62/734] (see p. 1422), ACABQ presented its comments and observations on the Secretary-General's proposals, and recommended that the Assembly authorize, on an exceptional basis, the payment of a retention incentive to staff required to remain with ICTR and ICTY.

By resolution 63/256 of 24 December (see p. 1422), the Assembly endorsed the ACABQ conclusions and recommendations and requested the Secretary-General to use the existing contractual frameworks to offer contracts to staff, in line with dates of planned post reductions in accordance with the relevant prevailing trial schedules, in order to remove uncertainty with regard to future employment, with the aim of ensuring that the Tribunals would have the necessary capacity to complete their respective mandates effectively.

Members of ICSC and Chairman of ACABQ

In accordance with the revised schedule for reviewing the compensation and other conditions of service of the full-time members of ICSC and of the Chairman of ACABQ, approved by the General Assembly in resolution 58/266 [YUN 2003, p. 1435], the Secretary-General submitted a September report [A/63/354], which examined the compensation and conditions of service of the three officials concerned. The report examined their compensation, other conditions of service and post-retirement benefits. The Secretary-General stated that, based on a projected increase in the consumer price index for New York by some 4.7 per cent, compared to November 2007, and on the adjustment procedure in effect, the annual net compensation of the three officials would be increased by 4 per cent beginning on 1 January 2009, from $197,564 to $205,467. No change was proposed with regard to the level of the special allowance payable to the Chairmen of ICSC and ACABQ, established at $10,000, nor the manner of application of the other conditions of service. However, it was noted that ICSC recommendations concerning the education grant were currently before the Assembly (see p. 1607). Based on the estimated movement of 4 per cent in the consumer price index, the pensionable remuneration of the ICSC Chairman and the ACABQ Chairman should be revised to $267,105 and that of the ICSC Vice-Chairman to $252,795.

The financial implications of those proposals would require an additional $33,194 for the 2008–2009 programme budget, to be reported in the second budget performance report for that period at the Assembly's sixty-fourth (2009) session. In accordance with resolution 58/266, the next review would be undertaken when the level of the annual compensation of the two Chairmen fell below the level of the compensation of Assistant Secretaries-General.

Members of ICJ and judges of international tribunals

At its resumed sixty-second session, the General Assembly considered the Secretary-General's 2007 report [YUN 2007, p. 1500] on the conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials, which reviewed the travel and subsistence regulations of the International Court of Justice (ICJ), as well as the remuneration and retirement benefits of ICJ members and of ICTR and ICTY judges and ad litem judges and their financial implications.

Communication. On 28 January [A/62/538/Add.1], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly President a 4 October 2007 request by the ICTY Registrar by which the Tribunal invited the Assembly to take into consideration additional information pertaining to the financial and operational benefits derived from the renewal of the term of office of judges during its consideration of their pensions. According to the Tribunal, the replacement costs for the permanent judges could be estimated at approximately €79,000 per judge. Since its inception, the Tribunal had seen the renewal of 16 permanent judges, rather than their replacement. Significant savings were achieved in the past and could be further realized if judges' terms of office were renewed in the future. The savings associated with reduced levels of rotation of judges—both economic and in terms of efficiency—warranted the implementation of measures aimed at motivating judges to seek further renewal of their terms of office rather than returning to their national jurisdictions.

ACABQ report. In a March report [A/62/7/Add.36], ACABQ noted that having an ad hoc judge appointed to sit in the ICJ case concerning the territorial and maritime dispute between Nicaragua and Colombia, following the adoption of resolution 61/262 [YUN 2007, p. 1499] and who would receive the same emolument as an ad hoc judge appointed prior to the adoption of the resolution, was incompatible with the resolution. Upon enquiry, ACABQ was informed that a similar situation could arise in a limited number of other cases pending before ICJ. Therefore, the Assembly was asked to examine the impact of the resolution's implementation on the position of ad hoc judges sitting in those cases. ACABQ also noted that establishing salaries in a currency other than the United States dollar for ICJ members and judges of the Tribunals would be a departure from current practice, the implications of which the Assembly would need to analyse, irrespective of the seats of the Court and the Tribunals and the currencies used in the countries concerned. It recommended that the Assembly defer consideration of the retirement benefits for ICJ members pending receipt of the pension study.

By decision 62/547 of 3 April, the General Assembly endorsed the ACABQ conclusions and recommendations. It decided to set, effective 1 April 2008, the annual net base salary of ICJ members and judges and ad litem judges of the Tribunals at $158,000, with the corresponding post adjustment per multiplier point equal to 1 per cent of the net base salary, to which the post adjustment multiplier for the Netherlands or the United Republic of Tanzania, as appropriate, would be applied, taking into account the adjustment mechanism proposed by the Secretary-General. It decided to revert to the issue of the pension scheme during the second part of its resumed sixty-second (2008) session.

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 61/262 [YUN 2007, p. 1499], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/62/538/Add.2 & Corr.1] on the conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat officials, which reviewed the current pension scheme, based on the advice of a consulting firm (Mercer Human Resource Consulting) commissioned to study the options for designing pension schemes, including defined-benefit and defined-contribution schemes, taking into account the possibility of calculating pensions on the basis of the number of years served rather than the term of office. The report analysed the findings of the consulting firm.

The Secretary-General reported that the study conducted by the consulting firm corroborated most of the provisions provided for in the current respective pension schemes approved by the Assembly for ICJ members and judges of the Tribunals. He identified some principles to be considered in arriving at a revised system for calculating the pensions for both groups and stated that the system adopted had to ensure that the current level of pension for ICJ sitting members and judges of the Tribunals, and for those judges and their dependants who were currently receiving pensions, was not diminished.

The Secretary-General recommended that the pension scheme for ICJ members should remain a defined-benefit, non-contributory scheme; the retirement benefit should continue to be correlated to salaries and defined as being equal to 55 per cent of the annual net base salary (excluding post adjustment) by reference to nine years of service. The level of pension should be determined by reference to years of service rather than a term of office. An ICJ member who was re-elected should receive one three-hundredth of his or her retirement benefit for each further month of service, up to a maximum pension of three fourths of annual net base salary (excluding post adjustment). An ICTY or ICTR judge re-elected or extended for any subsequent term would receive a retirement benefit for each further month of service, by reference to the proportion of annual pension which the number of months of his or her service bore to 108 months. A judge re-elected should receive one three-hundredth of his or her retirement benefit for each further month of service, up to a maximum pension of three fourths of annual net base salary (excluding post adjustment). The retirement age should remain at 60, and the actuarial reduction factor, at a rate of 0.5 per cent per month, should continue to be applied in the case of early retirement prior to age 60. The level of the retirement benefit should be adjusted on the occasion of increases in the annual net base salary. Pensions in payment should also be adjusted on the occasion of increases in the annual net base salary of ICJ members and Tribunal judges. The programme budget implications were estimated at $8,800 for ICJ, $1,054,200 for ICTY and $476,100 for ICTR for the 2008–2009 biennium.

In a November report [A/63/570], ACABQ recommended approval of most of the Secretary-General's proposals. However, it did not agree that it was necessary to increase the base on which pensions were calculated from 50 to 55 per cent. It therefore recommended that the retirement benefit of ICJ members and Tribunal judges should continue to be based on salaries and should be 50 per cent of the annual net base salary (excluding post adjustment), or $85,040, whichever amount was higher, by reference to nine years of service, and that a re-elected ICJ member would receive one three-hundredth of his or her retirement benefit for each further month of service beyond nine years, up to a maximum pension of two thirds of annual net base salary (excluding post adjustment). With regard to the Tribunals, ACABQ recommended that a judge who had been or would be re-elected would be the recipient of the same pension plan of an ICJ judge if the Assembly approved the Committee's recommendations. As there would be consequential reductions in the financial implications, ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General provide revised estimates for the 2008–2009 programme budget resulting from the changes in the pension scheme for ICJ members, to be reflected in the relevant 2008–2009 performance report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/64/648], adopted resolution 63/259 without vote [agenda item 118].

Conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials: members of the International Court of Justice and judges and ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda

The General Assembly,

Recalling section VIII of its resolution 53/214 of 18 December 1998, its resolutions 55/249 of 12 April 2001, 56/285 of 27 June 2002 and 57/289 of 20 December 2002, section III of its resolution 59/282 of 13 April 2005, paragraph 11 of its resolution 61/262 of 4 April 2007 and its decision 62/547 of 3 April 2008,

Recalling also Article 32 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice, as well as relevant resolutions of the General Assembly that govern the conditions of service and compensation for the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges of the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991 and the International Criminal Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Genocide and Other Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of Rwanda and Rwandan Citizens Responsible for Genocide and Other Such Violations Committed in the Territory of Neighbouring States between 1 January and 31 December 1994,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Reaffirms the principle that the conditions of service and compensation for non-Secretariat United Nations officials shall be separate and distinct from those for officials of the Secretariat;
3. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in its report;
4. Decides that any decisions with regard to the pension scheme shall apply only to the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges and ad litem judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and shall not constitute a precedent for any other category of judges working within the United Nations system and that any decision regarding the service of any other category of judges shall be taken on a case-by-case basis;
5. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary revisions to article 1, paragraph 2, of the Pension Scheme Regulations for the members of the International Court of Justice and for the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, accordingly;
6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly on any additional expenditures resulting from the above decision in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009 and the second performance reports of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda for the biennium;
7. Recalls paragraph 11 of its resolution 61/262, in which it requested the Secretary-General to report on options for designing pension schemes, and notes that the Secretary-General has proposed essentially only one option and that, rather than seek the expertise available within the Organization, he has relied on the services of a consultant;
8. Decides that the emoluments, pensions, and other conditions of service for the members of the International Court of Justice and the judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda shall next be reviewed at its sixty-fifth session, including options for defined benefit and defined contribution pension schemes, and in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, in that review, the expertise available within the United Nations is taken full advantage of;

II

Having considered the letter dated 6 March 2007 from the Secretary-General to the President of the General Assembly,

1. Takes note of the letter dated 6 March 2007 from the Secretary-General to the President of the General Assembly;
2. Notes that the International Criminal Court is not a United Nations entity;
3. Decides to amend article 1, paragraph 7, of the Pension Scheme Regulations for members of the International Court of Justice and article 1, paragraph 5, of the Pension

Scheme Regulations for judges of the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda to include a specific reference to the International Criminal Court so as to ensure that no former judge of any of these Courts receives a pension while also serving as a judge of the International Criminal Court;

4. Notes, in this regard, the issues of fairness and equality of treatment in respect of the above decision;

5. Reaffirms the provisions contained in its resolution 58/318 of 13 September 2004, and emphasizes that the decision contained in paragraph 3 of the present section shall not create a precedent for other organizations outside of the United Nations in respect of the application of pension benefits of judges of the International Court of Justice, the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

Education grant

In July [A/63/30], ICSC informed the General Assembly that it would keep under review the education grant methodology. In the meantime, the current methodology would be maintained; the issue of designated duty stations for the purposes of the education grant would be examined before the next review of the mobility and hardship scheme in 2010; and the issue of representative schools would be examined before the next review of the levels of the education grant in 2010.

ICSC also reviewed the level of the grant, based on a related study by the Human Resources Network, which analysed 13,696 claims for the academic year 2006–2007. ICSC recommended that, as from 1 January 2009, maximum admissible expenses and the maximum education grant for 10 zones (Austria, Belgium, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom, the United States, and the United States dollar area) should be adjusted, as indicated in table 1 of annex II to the ICSC 2008 report. The maximum amount of admissible expenses and the maximum grant should remain at the current level for Denmark, France, Germany, Ireland and Japan. The separate zone of Finland should be discontinued and the education grant for that country included in the United States dollar area outside the United States. Also, a separate maximum admissible expense level equal to that applicable to the United States should be established for the eight English curriculum schools in France. The amount of the special education grant for each disabled child should be equal to 100 per cent of the revised amounts of the maximum allowable expenses for the regular grant, while special measures would be maintained for China, Indonesia and the Russian Federation. Special measures would also be introduced for Bulgaria and Hungary, which would allow organizations to reimburse 75 per cent of actual expenses up to and not exceeding the maximum expenditure level in force for the United States dollar inside the United States. ICSC also recommended that flat rates for boarding, taken into account within the maximum admissible educational expenses, and the additional amounts for reimbursement of boarding costs over and above the maximum grant payable to staff members at designated duty stations, be revised as indicated in table 3 of annex II to the 2008 report.

In September [A/63/360], the Secretary-General estimated the annual financial implications of ICSC recommendations regarding the education grant at $2,850,000 and $514,300 for the 2008–2009 programme budget.

Performance recognition reward

Broad banding/reward for contribution pilot study

In July [A/63/30], ICSC reported that the comprehensive evaluation of the pilot study of broad banding/reward for contribution in five volunteer organizations it had requested in 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1502] concluded that the pilot project had not met ICSC success criteria and had lost direction in all of the pilot organizations. The reasons for lack of progress included an apparent gap between expectations and reality, lack of involvement by all stakeholders, lack of consistency in management focus, competing priorities and lack of promised support. None of the piloting organizations had progressed to the point where performance payments were actually made. In all cases the pilot organizations were still at various stages of developing what ICSC had already defined at the launch of the pilot in 2004 as the absolute prerequisite for introducing performance pay—a credible performance evaluation system that enjoyed the confidence of both staff and management. Above all, the lack of a credible basis for distinguishing among the performances of individuals was the main reason that the project had lost its direction. Other obstacles included lack of sustained support and resources for the pilot; the fact that none of the piloting organizations had reached the level of preparedness for organizational transformation which broad banding/pay-for-performance implied; the lack of sustained commitment on the part of management in all but one of the pilot organizations, due mainly to changes in the management cadre; and the fact that a number of competing performance-improving initiatives were launched simultaneously in the majority of the piloting organizations. ICSC also considered a proposal by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) relating to conditions of service applicable to resident coordinators of the UN system.

ICSC decided to: discontinue the broad-banding/pay-for-performance pilot as it was originally conceived; request its secretariat to issue updated guidelines on the granting of steps based on merit; and provide for consideration at its sixty-seventh session an updated performance management framework, taking into account previous work of ICSC that could serve as a guide to organizations.

In response to that request, a concept paper outlining the approach to be taken in developing the framework was prepared for the Commission's approval and guidance. ICSC decided to keep performance management under continuing review; request its secretariat to upgrade the performance management guidelines set out by ICSC in 1997, with emphasis on the culture and environment and the leadership that should come from the top level of each organization; emphasize the role of the leadership at the top level in sustaining such a culture and environment; and request its secretariat to monitor developments in the organizations in that regard and provide assistance to the organizations.

Review of methodologies for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment

In 2008, on the basis of the 1997 revised methodology for surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment at Headquarters and non-Headquarters duty stations [YUN 1997, p. 1453], ICSC conducted a survey of best prevailing conditions of service for General Service staff in Geneva, with a reference date of March 2007. It also undertook a similar survey for the General Service and other locally recruited categories in Vienna, with a reference date of November 2007. With regard to the Geneva survey, ICSC decided that the percentage resulting from the General Service survey would also be applied to adjust the salary scale of the other locally recruited category at Geneva—the Language Teachers. The salary scales for the General Service and the Language Teachers categories, as well as the revised levels of dependency allowances recommended to the executive heads of the Geneva-based organizations as at the date of its promulgation, were reproduced in annex V to the ICSC report [A/63/30]. The Vienna survey resulted in a new salary scale, reproduced in annex VI to its report, which was recommended to the Vienna-based common system organizations. ICSC also recommended revised rates for dependency allowances. It envisaged that financial implications of the new dependency allowances would amount to $509,990 per annum for the common system.

Dependency allowances

During its biennial review of dependency allowances for the Professional and higher categories [A/63/30], ICSC had before it a secretariat document reviewing the methodology for the children's and secondary dependant's allowances. The document described the evolution and current arrangements of the allowances, identified issues for review by ICSC and made proposals for simplifying and improving the fairness of the system. It also contained proposals for modifying some elements of the scheme with a view to making the system more reflective of national trends in social protection for children. The secretariat also developed a revised local currency denomination to replace the current system should protection against exchange-rate fluctuations be found necessary. It also proposed to establish a uniform percentage relationship between children's and secondary dependant's allowances. ICSC also reviewed the level of those allowances.

Regarding the review of the methodology, ICSC decided to inform the General Assembly that: the children's allowance should be established as a global flat-rate amount calculated as the average of United States dollar amounts of child benefits at the eight headquarters duty stations weighted by the number of staff at those locations; at the time of its implementation, the United States dollar amount of the allowance would be converted to local currency using the official UN exchange rate and would remain unchanged until the next biennial review; the flat amount would be recalculated on the same basis at the time of every subsequent review; the secondary dependant's allowance should be established at 35 per cent of the proposed children's allowance; and, as a transitional measure, where, at the time of implementation, the revised flat-rate allowance was lower than the one in effect, the allowance payable to eligible staff would be equal to the higher rate reduced by 25 per cent of the difference between the two rates; and if, during the next review of the allowance, that rate remained above the newly revised flat rate, a further reduction equal to 50 per cent of the difference would be applied. The transitional measures would come into effect as at 1 January 2009 and would be discontinued as at 1 January 2013.

Regarding the review of the level of the allowance, ICSC recommended that, as at 1 January 2009: the children's allowance be set as a global flat-rate amount of $2,686 per annum and the disabled children's allowance be double that amount i.e., $5,372 per annum; the secondary dependant's allowance be set at $940 per annum; at hard currency locations, the United States dollar amount of the allowance be converted to local currency using the official UN rate of exchange, as at the date of promulgation, and remain unchanged until the next biennial review; and, as a transitional measure, where, at the time of implementation, the revised flat-rate allowance was lower than the one in effect, the allowance payable to eligible staff would be equal to the higher rate reduced by 25 per cent of the difference between the two rates. If that transitional rate were to remain above the one set as at 1 January 2011, a further reduction equal to 50 per cent of the difference between the transitional rates set on 1 January 2009 and the rate of the allowance set for 1 January 2011 would be applied. Such transitional measures would be discontinued as at 1 January 2013. The dependency allowances should be reduced by the amount of any direct payments received by staff from a Government in respect of dependants.

In September [A/63/360], the Secretary-General estimated that the annual financial implications of the ICSC recommendations regarding the introduction of the new scheme would amount to $9 million per annum for common system organizations and $1,122,500 for the 2008–2009 programme budget.

Mobility and hardship allowance

ICSC continued its review of the mobility and hardship scheme approved in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 886] to compensate staff for service at difficult duty stations and to encourage operational mobility. In accordance with ICSC decisions, as approved by the General Assembly in resolution 61/239 [YUN 2006, p. 1677], the amounts payable under the new mobility and hardship scheme that came into effect on 1 January 2007 were to be reviewed every three years. Since the new mobility and hardship scheme was approved late in December 2006, many organizations had reported difficulty in implementing the scheme on 1 January 2007 because of the need to make changes to their payroll systems and to inform staff of the changes. Most organizations were therefore obliged to implement the new scheme retroactively, but all organizations reported that they had implemented the new scheme during 2007.

ICSC recommended a 5 per cent increase for the hardship allowance, the mobility allowance and the non-removal allowance for implementation on 1 January 2009; requested its secretariat to suggest options for alternative adjustment factors or weightings for establishing the level of future amounts, for consideration before the 2010 methodological review; and recommended that, with effect from 1 January 2009, the amounts of the mobility, hardship and non-removal elements continue to be adjusted according to changes in the personal status of the staff member or in the hardship classification of the duty station, as under the previous scheme. It also listed factors to be considered during the 2010 review of the scheme.

In September [A/63/360], the Secretary-General estimated the annual financial implications of ICSC recommendations regarding the mobility and hardship allowance for the 2008–2009 programme budget at $959,400.

Hazard pay

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 61/239 [YUN 2006, p. 1677], ICSC submitted a report by its secretariat which contained a proposal to increase the hazard pay for internationally recruited staff by 5 per cent effective 1 January 2009, from $1,300 to $1,365 per month.

In July [A/63/30], ICSC decided to establish the level of hazard pay for such staff at $1,365 per month as at 1 January 2009. It also requested the Chief Executives Board for Coordination, Human Resources (CEB/HR) Network to submit a report on the results of its review of the harmonization of hazard pay.

In September [A/63/360], the Secretary-General estimated the annual financial implications of the ICSC recommendations regarding hazard pay for the 2008–2009 programme budget at $783,900.

Staff safety and security

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 62/95 [YUN 2007, p. 1504], the Secretary-General, in August [A/63/305 & Corr.1], provided information on threats against the safety and security of humanitarian and UN personnel from 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2008. He noted that staff security remained precarious and personnel continued to be subjected to such threats as crimes, armed conflict, terrorism, harassment, banditry and detention. Abduction and hostage-taking, politically, economically or criminally motivated, remained the most disturbing feature, particularly in conflict and post-conflict areas. Key factors contributing to challenges for UN security worldwide included expanded and sustained operations; rising criminality owing to deteriorating public security and limited capacity of local authority; the spread of terrorist tactics; sharp increases in food and fuel prices leading to violent protests; rising public expectations and local dissatisfaction with UN operations or presence; and the climate of impunity for violent acts against UN and humanitarian personnel. During the reporting period, 25 UN civilian staff members lost their lives, 20 in Africa, one in Asia and the Pacific and four in the Middle East. In addition, 10 UN staff members died in a helicopter crash in Nepal. Locally recruited personnel remained most vulnerable to attacks and accounted for the majority of casualties and arrests, detentions or harassments. Serious violent incidents also continued unabated: overall, there were 490 recorded cases of violent attacks, 546 incidents of harassment and intimidation, 578 robberies, 263 physical assaults, 119 cases of hijacking and 199 reported cases of arrest and detention by State and non-State actors. In addition, there were 84 cases of forced entry and/or occupation of UN offices and 583 residential break-ins. The greatest number of security incidents and threats occurred in Africa and Asia and the Pacific.

In conflict and post-conflict areas, violent acts continued unabated. In the Darfur region of the Sudan, the number of vehicle hijackings involving UN and humanitarian personnel sharply increased to a monthly average of 12 incidents. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, persistent attacks by armed groups targeting humanitarian convoys and personnel led to the suspension of humanitarian activities in certain areas in the east. In Haiti, there were 28 vehicle hijackings and seven kidnappings during the reporting period. In Afghanistan, 21 cases of intimidation and harassment were reported, as UN and humanitarian organizations continued to face direct targeted attacks. In Somalia, the deteriorating security situation led to a growing number of incidents in which perpetrators targeted, killed and abducted humanitarian and UN personnel: 81 incidents were reported, compared to 54 in 2007. The number of UN personnel arrested, under detention or missing, and regarding whom the Organization had been unable to exercise its right to protection, slightly decreased to 19 cases, from 22 the previous year. As at 30 June, 12 UN staff members remained under detention in Israel, 3 in Eritrea and 2 in Somalia.

The Secretary-General described measures taken by the Department of Safety and Security to enhance security consciousness and awareness of security procedures and policies, including comprehensive staff training, critical incident stress management, security information management, threat and risk analyses and crisis management and security mainstreaming.

The Secretary-General said that he would continue to encourage the Organization's efforts in drawing from lessons learned and taking steps to strengthen the UN security management system by improving accountability, leadership and internal management. His priorities would include addressing key policy, operational and strategic weakness, improving the safety and security of locally recruited staff, providing adequate resources, improving the framework for accountability, enhancing cooperation with host Governments and Member States, and restoring public trust in the UN at the global and local levels. As part of the efforts to promote closer cooperation with Member States and host Governments, the Secretary-General said that he would continue to include staff security issues in his regular conversations with senior officials of Member States. He called for the proactive participation and support of all Member States and host Governments, and emphasized the need for Member States to include the security of humanitarian and UN personnel as an integral part of their considerations and deliberations in UN intergovernmental bodies. With regard to the responsibilities and roles of host Governments, he urged Member States to address three topical issues: unlawful arrests, detention and harassment of UN staff; obstruction of freedom of movement of UN and humanitarian workers; and impunity for crimes committed against humanitarian and UN personnel. Moreover, as public attitudes and sentiments had a direct effect on the safety and security of humanitarian and UN personnel, the Secretary-General called on host Government authorities to refrain from public statements that could jeopardize the safety and security of humanitarian workers. Highlighting that locally recruited UN staff members continued to face increased security threats and had become victims of targeted abuse, harassment and unlawful detention in areas where their services were most critical for UN activities, he called for the Organization and the international community to review the policies and arrangements necessary to provide those personnel with adequate safety and security. The Secretary-General remained concerned by the difficulties encountered in some countries over the import of communication equipment and appealed to States that had imposed such restrictions to lift them.

Following the attack on the UN offices in Algiers on 11 December 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 61], the Secretary-General appointed the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of UN Personnel and Premises Worldwide, chaired by Lakhdar Brahimi, which in June 2008 submitted its report, "Towards a Culture of Security and Accountability". In December, the Secretary-General submitted a report [A/63/605] on a strengthened and unified security management system for the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly adopted resolution 63/138 [draft: A/63/L.48 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 65].

Safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 46/182 of 19 December 1991 on strengthening of the coordination of humanitarian emergency assistance of the United Nations,

Recalling all relevant resolutions on safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel, including its resolution 62/95 of 17 December 2007, as well as Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003 and relevant statements by the President of the Council,

Recalling also all Security Council resolutions and presidential statements and reports of the Secretary-General to the Council on the protection of civilians in armed conflict,

Recalling further all relevant provisions of international law, including international humanitarian law and human rights law, as well as all relevant treaties,

Reaffirming the need to promote and ensure respect for the principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming also the principles of neutrality, humanity, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance,

Recalling that primary responsibility under international law for the security and protection of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel lies with the Government hosting a United Nations operation conducted under the Charter of the United Nations or its agreements with relevant organizations,

Expressing its appreciation to those Governments which respect the internationally agreed principles on the protection of humanitarian and United Nations personnel, while expressing concern over the lack of respect for these principles in some areas,

Urging all parties involved in armed conflicts, in compliance with international humanitarian law, in particular their obligations under the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949 and the obligations applicable to them under the Additional Protocols thereto, of 8 June 1977, to ensure the security and protection of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel,

Welcoming the fact that the number of States parties to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which entered into force on 15 January 1999, has continued to rise, the number now having reached eighty-six, mindful of the need to promote universality of the Convention, and recalling with appreciation the adoption of the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, which expands the scope of legal protection under the Convention,

Deeply concerned by the dangers and security risks faced by humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel at the field level, as they operate in increasingly complex contexts, as well as the continuous erosion, in many cases, of respect for the principles and rules of international law, in particular international humanitarian law,

Stressing the importance of fully respecting the obligations relating to the use of vehicles and premises of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel as defined by relevant international instruments, as well as the obligations relating to distinctive emblems recognized in the Geneva Conventions,

Commending the courage and commitment of those who take part in humanitarian operations, often at great personal risk, especially locally recruited staff,

Expressing profound regret at the deaths of and violent acts against international and national humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel involved in the provision of humanitarian assistance, and strongly deplored the rising toll of casualties among such personnel in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations,

Strongly condemning acts of murder and other forms of violence, rape and sexual assault and all forms of violence committed in particular against women and children, and intimidation, armed robbery, abduction, hostage-taking, kidnapping, harassment and illegal arrest and detention to which those participating in humanitarian operations are increasingly exposed, as well as attacks on humanitarian convoys and acts of destruction and looting of property.

Expressing deep concern that the occurrence of attacks and threats against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel is a factor that increasingly restricts the provision of assistance and protection to populations in need,

Noting the establishment by the Secretary-General of the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of United Nations Personnel and Premises Worldwide, and looking forward to the report of the Secretary-General on all its aspects and recommendations, including on accountability, to be submitted for the consideration of the General Assembly at its sixty-third session,

Affirming the need for States to ensure that perpetrators of attacks committed on their territory against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel do not operate with impunity, and that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice as provided for by national laws and obligations under international law,

Recalling the inclusion of attacks intentionally directed against personnel involved in a humanitarian assistance or peacekeeping mission in accordance with the Charter as a war crime in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, and noting the role that the Court can play in appropriate cases in bringing to justice those responsible for serious violations of international humanitarian law,

Reaffirming the need to ensure adequate levels of safety and security for United Nations personnel and associated humanitarian personnel, including locally recruited staff, which constitutes an underlying duty of the Organization, and mindful of the need to promote and enhance the security consciousness within the organizational culture of the United Nations and a culture of accountability at all levels, as well as to continue to promote awareness of and sensitivity to national and local cultures and laws,

Noting the importance of reinforcing the close collaboration between the United Nations and the host country on contingency planning, information exchange and risk assessment in the context of good mutual cooperation on issues relating to the security of United Nations and associated personnel,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Urges all States to make every effort to ensure the full and effective implementation of the relevant principles and rules of international law, including international humanitarian law, human rights law and refugee law related to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations personnel;

3. Strongly urges all States to take the necessary measures to ensure the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel and to respect and ensure respect for the inviolability of United Nations premises, which are essential to the continuation and successful implementation of United Nations operations;

4. Calls upon all Governments and parties in complex humanitarian emergencies, in particular in armed conflicts and in post-conflict situations, in countries in which humanitarian personnel are operating, in conformity with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, to cooperate fully with the United Nations and other humanitarian agencies and organizations and to ensure the safe and unhindered access of humanitarian personnel and delivery of supplies and equipment, in order to allow those personnel to perform efficiently their task of assisting the affected civilian population, including refugees and internally displaced persons;

5. Calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to and to respect fully their obligations under the relevant international instruments;

6. Also calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

7. Further calls upon all States to consider becoming parties to the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel as soon as possible so as to ensure its rapid entry into force, and urges States parties to put in place appropriate national legislation, as necessary, to enable its effective implementation;

8. Calls upon all States, all parties involved in armed conflict and all humanitarian actors to respect the principles of neutrality, humanity, impartiality and independence for the provision of humanitarian assistance;

9. Expresses deep concern that, over the past decade, threats and attacks against the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel have escalated dramatically and that perpetrators of acts of violence seemingly operate with impunity;

10. Strongly condemns all threats and acts of violence against humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, reaffirms the need to hold accountable those responsible for such acts, strongly urges all States to take stronger action to ensure that any such acts committed on their territory are investigated fully and to ensure that the perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice in accordance with national laws and obligations under international law, and urges States to end impunity for such acts;

11. Calls upon all States to comply fully with their obligations under international humanitarian law, including as provided by the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to respect and protect all humanitarian personnel in territories subject to their jurisdiction;

12. Also calls upon all States to provide adequate and prompt information in the event of the arrest or detention of humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel, so as to afford them the necessary medical assistance and to allow independent medical teams to visit and examine the health of those detained, and urges them to take the necessary measures to ensure the speedy release of those who have been arrested or detained in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law;

13. Calls upon all other parties involved in armed conflicts to refrain from abducting humanitarian personnel or United Nations and associated personnel or detaining them in violation of the relevant conventions referred to in the present resolution and applicable international humanitarian law, and speedily to release, without harm or requirement of concession, any abductee or detainee;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure full respect for the human rights, privileges and immunities of United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation, and also requests the Secretary-General to seek the inclusion, in negotiations of headquarters and other mission agreements concerning United Nations and associated personnel, of the applicable conditions contained in the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations, the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the Specialized Agencies and the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel;

15. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to seek the inclusion of, and that host countries include, key provisions of the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel, among others, those regarding the prevention of attacks against members of the operation, the establishment of such attacks as crimes punishable by law and the prosecution or extradition of offenders, in future as well as, if necessary, in existing status-of-forces, status-of-mission, host country and other related agreements negotiated between the United Nations and those countries, mindful of the importance of the timely conclusion of such agreements, and encourages further efforts in this regard;

16. Reaffirms the obligation of all humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel to respect and, where required, observe the national laws of the country in which they are operating, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations;

17. Stresses the importance of ensuring that humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel remain sensitive to national and local customs and traditions in their countries of assignment and communicate clearly their purpose and objectives to local populations;

18. Welcomes ongoing efforts to promote and enhance security consciousness within the organizational culture of the United Nations system, and urges the Secretary-General to continue to intensify such efforts at all levels of leadership and staff, including by reviewing and further improving, in accordance with established procedures, the unified security management system, as well as by disseminating and ensuring the implementation of security procedures and regulations and ensuring accountability at all levels, and in this regard recognizes the important work of the Department of Safety and Security of the Secretariat;

19. Takes note of the report entitled "Towards a Culture of Security and Accountability" of the Independent Panel on Safety and Security of United Nations Personnel and Premises Worldwide, and looks forward to the report of the Secretary-General on measures to follow up on the Panel's recommendations and on the independent process on the issue of accountability, to be submitted for the consideration of the relevant Main Committee of the General Assembly during the sixty-third session;

20. Emphasizes the importance of paying special attention to the safety and security of United Nations and associated personnel engaged in United Nations peacekeeping and peacebuilding operations;

21. Also emphasizes the need to pay particular attention to the safety and security of locally recruited humanitarian personnel, who are particularly vulnerable to attacks and who account for the majority of casualties and cases of harassment and unlawful detention, requests the Secretary-General to keep under review the relevant internal United Nations policy, operational and administrative arrangements that can contribute to providing locally recruited personnel with adequate safety and security, and calls upon humanitarian organizations to ensure that their staff are adequately informed about and trained in their respective organization's relevant security measures, plans and initiatives, which should be in line with applicable national laws and international law;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take the necessary measures to ensure that United Nations and other personnel carrying out activities in fulfilment of the mandate of a United Nations operation are properly informed about and operate in conformity with the minimum operating security standards and relevant codes of conduct and are properly informed about the conditions under which they are called upon to operate and the standards that they are required to meet, including those contained in relevant national laws and international law, and that adequate training in security, human rights law and international humanitarian law is provided so as to enhance their security and effectiveness in accomplishing their functions, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

23. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General and stresses the need to ensure that all United Nations staff members receive adequate security training, including training to enhance cultural awareness, prior to their deployment to the field, as well as the need to attach a high priority to stress management training and related counselling services for United Nations staff throughout the system, and reaffirms the necessity for all other humanitarian organizations to provide their personnel with similar support;

24. Emphasizes the importance of information on the range and scope of security incidents involving humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, including attacks against them, to clarify their operating environment;

25. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General to further enhance the security management system of the United Nations, and in this regard invites the United Nations and, as appropriate, other humanitarian organizations, working closely with host States, to further strengthen the analysis of threats to their safety and security in order to manage security risks by facilitating informed decisions on the maintenance of an effective presence in the field, inter alia, to fulfil their humanitarian mandate;

26. Also welcomes the work of the Secretary-General in enhancing security collaboration with host Governments for the purpose of contributing to staff safety and security, including efforts to support United Nations designated officials with regard to collaboration with host Government authorities;

27. Calls upon all relevant actors to make every effort in their public statements to support a favourable environment for the safety and security of humanitarian personnel;

28. Stresses that the effective functioning at the country level of security operations requires a unified capacity for policy, standards, coordination, communication, compliance and threat and risk assessment, and notes the benefits thereof to United Nations and associated personnel, including those achieved by the Department of Safety and Security since its establishment;

29. Requests the Secretary-General, inter alia, through the Inter-Agency Security Management Network, to continue to promote increased cooperation and collaboration among United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations, including between their headquarters and field offices, in the planning and implementation of measures aimed at improving staff security, training and awareness, and calls upon all relevant United Nations departments, organizations, funds and programmes and affiliated international organizations to support those efforts;

30. Recognizes the steps taken by the Secretary-General thus far, as well as the need for continued efforts to enhance coordination and cooperation, both at the headquarters and the field levels, between the United Nations and other humanitarian and non-governmental organizations on matters relating to the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, with a view to addressing mutual security concerns in the field, taking into account relevant national and local initiatives in this regard, inter alia, those derived from the "Saving Lives Together" framework, encourages collaborative initiatives to address security training needs, invites Member States to consider increasing support to those initiatives, and requests the Secretary-General to report on steps taken in this regard;

31. Underlines the need to allocate adequate and predictable resources to the safety and security of United Nations personnel, including through the consolidated appeals process, and encourages all States to contribute to the Trust Fund for Security of Staff Members of the United Nations System, inter alia, with a view to reinforcing the efforts of the Department of Safety and Security for the safety and security of personnel working in emergency and humanitarian operations;

32. Also underlines the need for better coordination between the United Nations and host Governments, in accordance with the relevant provisions of international law and national laws, on the use and deployment of essential equipment required to provide for the safety and security of United Nations personnel and associated personnel working in the delivery of humanitarian assistance by United Nations organizations;

33. Recalls the essential role of telecommunication resources in facilitating the safety of humanitarian personnel and United Nations and associated personnel, calls upon States to consider acceding to or ratifying the Tampere Convention on the Provision of Telecommunication Resources for Disaster Mitigation and Relief Operations of 18 June 1998, which entered into force on 8 January 2005, and urges them to facilitate and expedite, consistent with their national laws and international obligations applicable to them, the use of communications equipment in such operations, inter alia, by limiting and, whenever possible, expeditiously lifting the restrictions placed on the use of communications equipment by United Nations and associated personnel;

34. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session a comprehensive and updated report on the safety and security of humanitarian personnel and protection of United Nations personnel and on the implementation of the present resolution.

Other staff matters

Managerial efficiency and accountability

Senior Management Network

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/268 [YUN 2004, p. 1408], ICSC, in July [A/63/30], considered the development of a Senior Management Network (SMN) (formerly Senior Management Service), the Organization's instrument for building managerial capacity throughout the common system in order to improve performance. ICSC noted that there had been little progress on SMN development, particularly on its establishment, as it was subject to the provision of funds and resources by Member States. However, the first senior management leadership programme, requested by the United Nations System Staff College and prepared by the Rotterdam School of Management on behalf of a consortium of eight universities/business schools, was attended by 47 participants from 30 organizations. In a comprehensive assessment, a steering group confirmed the need for a cross-agency and system-wide leadership development programme, which should be redesigned to focus on change within the UN system and on its leadership competencies. The United Nations Staff College would redesign the programme, and a steering group would oversee its delivery.

ICSC consideration. ICSC reiterated its view on the importance of a system-wide leadership development programme, and inquired why the pilot programme had been conducted only once rather than being tested on a greater variety of participants. ICSC decided to keep the matter under review, and requested the CEB/HR Network to keep it apprised of developments.

Personnel policies

Human resources management

The General Assembly, at its resumed sixty-second session in 2008, had before it reports of the Secretary-General on the staffing of field missions, including the use of 300- and 100-series appointments [YUN, 2007, p. 1509], on detailed proposals for streamlining UN contractual arrangements [ibid., p. 1508] and on the harmonization of conditions of service [ibid., p. 1510], the addendum to the ICSC report for the year 2006 [ibid., p. 1507] and section II of the report of the ACABQ [ibid., p. 1511].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 3 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/62/772], adopted resolution 62/248 without vote [agenda item 133].

Human resources managementThe General Assembly,*

Recalling its resolutions 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 61/244 of 22 December 2006, section VIII of its resolution 61/276 of 29 June 2007 and section XXI of its resolution 62/238 of 22 December 2007, as well as its other relevant resolutions and decisions,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the staffing of field missions, including the use of 300- and 100-series appointments, on detailed proposals for streamlining United Nations contractual arrangements and on the harmonization of conditions of service, the addendum to the report of the International Civil Service Commission for the year 2006 and section II of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the staffing of field missions, including the use of 300- and 100-series appointments, on detailed proposals for streamlining United Nations contractual arrangements and on the harmonization of conditions of service;

2. Decides to continue consideration of the issue of contractual arrangements and conditions of service, including in United Nations field operations, as a matter of priority at the main part of its sixty-third session, taking into account the conclusions and recommendations contained in section II of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, with a view to the implementation of new arrangements and conditions on 1 July 2009.

By decision 62/545 B of the same date, the Assembly deferred, until its sixty-third (2008) session, consideration of the reports of the Secretary-General, the ACABQ and ICSC.

Reform of human resources management

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691] the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/282] providing an overview of achievements in implementing the human resources management reform programme and planned future activities. The report was based on the areas addressed in the new human resources framework in the Secretary-General's report on "Investing in people" [YUN 2006, p. 1689], including: recruitment and staffing, mobility, career development and support, contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service, and strengthening leadership and management capacity. It discussed human resources planning and monitoring, national competitive examinations, performance management, administration of justice, human resources information technology, strengthening accountability, and UN health-care services. The Secretary-General invited the Assembly to take note of the achievements and the planned activities.

ACABQ report. In a November report [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ stated that the Secretary-General's report did not provide sufficient statistical data to substantiate the progress reported, benchmarks against which progress could be measured, and the financial implications of the proposed initiatives, and did not analyse the interrelationship between the various human resources reform proposals, nor convey a sense of the relative priority accorded to each proposal. It emphasized the importance of a phased approach to implementing reform measures to allow sufficient time for improvements to take effect, as well as the need to prioritize such measures. The Advisory Committee expressed concern about the tendency of the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) to embark on new reform initiatives without first evaluating the effects of those implemented previously.

ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General ensure that future reform proposals were accompanied by a comprehensive results and impact assessment of earlier reforms and existing arrangements, as well as a cost-benefit analysis of new initiatives. ACABQ noted the planned introduction of systematic and strategic workforce planning, particularly given the challenges faced by the Organization as a result of the demographic transition in the Secretariat. It urged the Secretary-General to pursue efforts in that area as a matter of priority.

ACABQ stated that, although departmental human resources planning exercises were currently in their fifth cycle, the Secretary-General's report did not contain an analysis of the results achieved to date. Furthermore, there was no indication of how compliance with the goals and targets set out in the action plans and compacts were measured, nor was there any information on measures to deal with the inability or failure to achieve those goals and targets. It recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to carry out such analyses and to report on the results. OHRM should continue to strengthen its monitoring of delegated authority for human resources management, including compliance with geographic and gender targets and the prompt filling of vacancies. The Secretary-General should develop a comprehensive training strategy applicable to staff serving both at Headquarters and in the field based on sound workforce planning techniques and organizational needs. The impact of such programmes on enhancing staff members' ability to discharge their duties should be evaluated and their efficiency and effectiveness reviewed. The Secretary-General should also provide more detailed information on the proposed programme, including on its objectives and relationship with relevant Assembly resolutions and the Staff Regulations and Rules. ACABQ noted the Secretary-General's intention to develop a system for recognizing the contributions of staff during the 2008–2009 biennium, and recommended that it include incentives such as accelerated promotion as a way to motivate and reward staff for excellent performance, as well as sanctions for underperformance. The Secretary-General should indicate the financial and other administrative implications of the proposals and, in future reports on human resources management, respond more specifically to the provisions of resolution 61/244 and subsequent resolutions.

OIOS in-depth evaluation of the Office of Human Resources Management

In August [A/63/221], the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) submitted a report on the in-depth evaluation of OHRM, in response to the requests of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 61/235 [YUN 2006, p. 1636], and of the Assembly in resolution 62/236 [YUN 2007, p. 1441] that OIOS include in that evaluation a review of the recruitment, promotion and mobility policies of the past five years. The objective of the evaluation was to assess the relevance, efficiency, effectiveness and impact of OHRM activities in relation to its objectives. OIOS focused specifically on recruitment, promotion and mobility data, except for peacekeeping missions.

OIOS found that OHRM faced significant challenges as the central authority responsible for simultaneously performing strategic human resources planning and policy development, delegating human resources authority throughout the Secretariat and directly providing many human resources services. In addition, the human resources challenges faced by both OHRM and the Organization defied simple solutions. In each functional human resources area, there was a different set of multifaceted challenges, including complex interrelationships. The enormity of the Organization's human resources demands had hampered the effective capacity of OHRM to meet them fully. To be more effective and to achieve the desired human resources results, OHRM and the United Nations needed to prioritize and identify which human resources initiatives needed to be emphasized. The current level of resources, lack of prioritization and clear policies had resulted in a work overload for both OHRM staff and others performing human resources management functions. Improvements along those lines were needed to enable the United Nations to recruit, retain and develop a worldwide staff that was capable of meeting the many challenges facing the Organization.

OIOS recommended that OHRM develop an integrated framework and strategy to enhance the staff selection process, provide better support for career development and promote staff mobility. A task force or other appropriate body should be set up to propose improvements to current policies and procedures and to the services offered by OHRM. OIOS also recommended that OHRM strengthen its policy development function and corresponding interpretative guidance function; prioritize the implementation of human resources reform initiatives; clarify and streamline the delegation of authority structure; establish a systematic and comprehensive compendium of responsibilities; and strengthen the monitoring function.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/639], adopted resolution 63/250 without vote [agenda item 123].

Human resources management

The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 8, 97, 100 and 101 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolutions 49/222 A and B of 23 December 1994 and 20 July 1995, 51/226 of 3 April 1997, 52/219 of 22 December 1997, 52/252 of 8 September 1998, 53/221 of 7 April 1999, 55/258 of 14 June 2001, 57/305 of 15 April 2003, 58/296 of 18 June 2004, 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 60/1 of 16 September 2005, 60/260 of 8 May 2006, 61/244 of 22 December 2006, 61/276, section VIII, of 29 June 2007, 62/238, section XXI, of 22 December 2007 and 62/248 of 3 April 2008, as well as its other relevant resolutions and decisions,

Reaffirming that the staff of the United Nations is an invaluable asset of the Organization, and commending its contribution to furthering the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Paying tribute to the memory of all staff members who have lost their lives in the service of the Organization,

Having considered the relevant reports on human resources management submitted to the General Assembly,

Having also considered the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on an in-depth evaluation of the Office of Human Resources Management and the addendum to the report of the International Civil Service Commission for 2006,

Having further considered the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

I

Human resources management reform

1. Emphasizes the fundamental importance of human resources management reform in the United Nations as a contribution to the strengthening of the international civil service, recalls, in this context, the reports of the International Civil Service Commission, and reaffirms its commitment to the implementation of these reforms;

2. Stresses the importance of a meaningful and constructive dialogue between staff and management, in particular on human resources-related issues, and calls upon both parties to intensify efforts to overcome differences and to resume the consultative process;

3. Expresses concern over the fact that staff representatives from New York and Geneva have withdrawn from participation in the Staff-Management Coordination Committee, and reiterates its call to the staff representatives from New York and Geneva and management to intensify efforts to overcome differences and to engage in a consultative process;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to take advantage of the existing mechanisms for conflict resolution and mediation as deemed useful and appropriate in order to facilitate renewed dialogue between staff and management;

5. Recalls section I, paragraphs 1 and 3, of its resolution 61/244, bearing in mind article VIII of the Staff Regulations, and requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session to review the staff-management mechanism for addressing human resources management issues, in consultation with relevant bodies;

6. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on an in-depth evaluation of the Office of Human Resources Management, in particular the recommendations set out in section VI thereof;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account paragraph 22 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to ensure that measures to identify and promote future leaders have clear criteria and mechanisms for selection, and that they are implemented within the framework of the staff selection system, and to provide information on their precise financial implications;

II

Contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service

1. Stresses the need for rationalization of the current United Nations system of contractual arrangements, which lacks transparency and is complex to administer;

2. Approves the new contractual arrangements which would comprise three types of appointments (temporary, fixed-term and continuing), under one set of Staff Rules, effective 1 July 2009, as set out in its resolution 62/248 and subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Requests the Secretary-General not to appoint any staff to continuing contracts before 1 January 2010 pending consideration by the General Assembly of the additional information concerning the implementation of continuing contracts;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fourth session on the following issues with a view to the implementation of a system for the continuing appointment regime by 1 January 2010:

(a) Rigorous and transparent procedures for granting continuing appointments to staff, including the criteria for eligibility, the relationship with disciplinary measures and the central management of conversions;

(b) The role of the performance appraisal system and options for strengthening it to ensure that staff members considered for continuing appointments have demonstrated the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity, taking into account any deliberations of the International Civil Service Commission on this issue;

(c) The financial and management implications of converting appointments from fixed-term to continuing appointments, and the possible establishment of a ceiling on the number of conversions;

(d) Analysis of the implications of the proposed continuing appointments for the system of geographical ranges;

(e) Rigorous and transparent procedures to review the performance of staff and the continuing need for functions when determining the granting and termination of an appointment of a staff member, as well as clear and firm lines of accountability, to fully ensure that the granting and termination of continuing contracts is undertaken in a fair and transparent manner, with full regard to due process and the rights of staff;

(f) Options for ensuring that successful candidates from national competitive examinations and language staff are not disadvantaged by proposed changes;

(g) Analysis of the implications for Junior Professional Officers;

(h) The potential ramifications of the proposed amendment to staff regulation 9.1;

5. Decides to continue to suspend until 30 June 2009 the application of the four-year limit for appointments of limited duration under the 300 series of the Staff Rules in peacekeeping operations;

6. Authorizes the Secretary-General, bearing in mind paragraph 5 of the present section, to reappoint under the 100 series of the Staff Rules those mission staff whose service under 300-series contracts has reached the four-year limit by 30 June 2009, provided that their functions have been reviewed and found necessary and that their performance has been confirmed as fully satisfactory;

7. Decides that temporary appointments are to be used to appoint staff for seasonal or peak workloads and specific short-term requirements for less than one year but could be renewed for up to one additional year when warranted by surge requirements and operational needs related to field operations and special projects with finite mandates;

8. Also decides that staff on temporary contracts would be eligible to receive only the following benefits and allowances: post adjustment; rental subsidy; hazard pay; hardship allowance; the daily subsistence allowance portion of the assignment grant; leave (depending on the length of contract); home leave (per classification of duty station); and limited shipment allowance;

9. Requests, in this regard, the Secretary-General to provide information on the circumstances in which the renewal of a temporary appointment for up to one additional year could be granted;

10. Decides that the field staff serving on 300-series appointments of less than four years who are not performing temporary functions are to be given mission-specific fixed-term contracts until such time as they have gone through a competitive process subject to the review of a central review body;

11. Also decides that staff on 100-, 200- and 300-series contracts serving in locations other than peacekeeping operations and special political missions for a cumulative period of more than one year who are not performing temporary functions are to be given fixed-term contracts until such time as they have gone through a competitive process subject to the review of a central review body;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly for consideration at the first part of its resumed sixty-third session draft regulations by which the streamlined system of contracts could be implemented;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to evaluate the impact of the implementation of the new system of contracts, including its financial implications, and to report to the General Assembly on this matter no earlier than at its sixty-seventh session;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General to discontinue the practice of assigning staff from Headquarters to missions on a travel status basis for a period of more than three months;

15. Recalls section V, paragraph 2, of its resolution 51/226, in which it requested the Secretary-General to make efforts to achieve the level of 70 per cent of permanent appointments in posts subject to geographical distribution;

16. Encourages the Secretary-General, in accordance with legislative mandates, to ensure a judicious mix of career and fixed-term appointments, so as to have an appropriate balance between institutional memory, long-term commitment and independence and the ability to bring in fresh insight and expertise, and to dismiss non-performing staff;

17. Recognizes that an effective and credible performance appraisal system is an important element in the implementation of the new contractual arrangements;

18. Acknowledges the need to centrally manage the conversion from fixed-term to continuing appointments on a competitive and transparent basis;

19. Decides to revert at its sixty-fifth session to the proposal of the Secretary-General to create a cadre of civilian career peacekeepers in the light of the lessons learned from the implementation of the new arrangements for contracts and conditions of service;

20. Stresses that the fair and equitable implementation of new contractual arrangements will be directly linked to the effective functioning of the new system of administration of justice;

21. Decides that there shall be no expectations, legal or otherwise, of renewal or conversion of a fixed-term contract, irrespective of the length of service, and requests the Secretary-General to reflect this provision in the rules and regulations as well as offers and letters of appointment;

22. Also decides that, in the context of the Secretary-General's proposal, "in the interest of the good administration of the Organization" is to be interpreted principally as a change or termination of a mandate;

23. Reaffirms that, while continuing appointments are not implemented, successful candidates from national competitive recruitment examinations and staff from language services after two years of probationary service will continue to be granted open-ended appointments according to the current practice;

24. Decides that the period of service of Junior Professional Officers shall not be taken into account as part of the requisite period of service for a continuing appointment;

25. Notes that the International Civil Service Commission will be reviewing all separation payments, including the possibility of an end-of-service bonus;

26. Decides to designate existing established missions as family missions and existing special missions as non-family missions, effective 1 July 2009;

27. Also decides that all staff appointed or assigned to non-family missions shall be installed in accordance with conditions of the United Nations common system, without the special-operations approach;

28. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to keep the issue of United Nations common system conditions of service in the field under review;

29. Decides to keep the issue of United Nations common system conditions of service in the field under review;

30. Approves the introduction of a rest and recuperation scheme to include travel time, appropriate to the location, but no payment of travel to the staff member, for internationally recruited staff members in United Nations field operations to replace the occasional recuperation break, effective 1 January 2009;

III

Recruitment and staffing

1. Reiterates that the Secretary-General has to ensure that the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity serve as the paramount consideration in the employment of staff, with due regard to the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that measures on meeting organizational mandates, accountability targets and indicators of achievement, including with respect to geographical distribution of staff and gender balance, contained in human resources action plans and recruitment procedures, including selection decisions, shall fully correspond to the provisions contained in Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter as well as in relevant General Assembly mandates;

3. Notes that the upcoming demographic transition of United Nations staff will present organizational challenges in terms of staff continuity and possible loss of institutional knowledge as well as opportunities to rejuvenate the Organization;

4. Emphasizes the need for strategic workforce planning to proactively support the human resources needs of the United Nations, and in this regard urges the Secretary-General to pursue efforts in this area as a matter of priority;

5. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure that outreach activities cover positions both at Headquarters and in the field;

6. Recognizes the importance of speeding up the recruitment and staffing process, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter, which will ensure that staff are diverse, multi-skilled and versatile;

7. Acknowledges the need to simplify the current reference check for speeding up the recruitment process, and requests the Secretary-General to review the procedure and take necessary actions as soon as possible;

8. Decides that, in order to ensure the transparency of the recruitment process, all specific vacancy announcements shall continue to be advertised;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure equal treatment of candidates with equivalent educational backgrounds during the recruitment process, taking fully into account that Member States have different educational systems and that no education system shall be considered the standard to be applied to the Organization;

10. Invites the Secretary-General, when appointing officials at the D-1 and D-2 levels in departments of the Secretariat that provide backstopping and/or policy guidance to field missions, to fully consider the relevant field experience of the candidates, as one of the highly desirable appointment criteria;

11. Underlines that the upgraded electronic staff selection system of the United Nations must be clear, simplified, user-friendly and accessible to potential candidates and that regular monitoring must be in place to ensure transparency and non-discrimination, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

12. Recognizes that pre-screened rosters can considerably expedite the recruitment process in the United Nations;

13. Notes that the existing rosters for Headquarters and established duty stations under the current staff selection system have design flaws and have not been utilized widely to fill vacancies;

14. Acknowledges the necessity of ensuring transparency and accountability with respect to recruitment of general temporary assistance and consultants;

15. Reaffirms section II, paragraph 6, of its resolution 61/244, in which it decided to retain the criterion of geographical status in the staff selection system as one of the key elements to ensure geographical balance at each level for posts subject to geographical distribution;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all anticipated and immediate vacancies are properly advertised and filled quickly, and to report on the success of this endeavour to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

17. Emphasizes the importance of the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies, and requests the Secretary-General and invites staff representatives to engage in a consultative process with a view to resuming the participation of staff representatives in the work of the central review bodies;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to include analysis of the implementation of the human resources action plans in the context of the report on the composition of the Secretariat;

19. Recognizes the added value that a redesign panel could bring to the reform of the recruitment and staffing processes;

20. Decides to revert to the issue of establishing a redesign panel for this purpose at its sixty-fifth session;

IV

National competitive examinations

1. Reaffirms that national competitive examinations are the source of recruitment for P-2 posts subject to geographical distribution in order to reduce non-representation and underrepresentation of Member States in the Secretariat;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly, for consideration at its sixty-fifth session, a feasibility study, building on audit reports, to determine whether the broadening of the scope of the national competitive examination would serve to further strengthen the capacity of the Organization for programme delivery, as recommended by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report;

3. Notes with concern that a large number of candidates who have passed national competitive examinations remain on the roster for years;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the expeditious placement of successful candidates from national competitive examinations;

5. Welcomes the enhanced efforts of the Secretary-General to centrally manage the placement of successful candidates from national competitive examinations, and requests him to intensify these efforts and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the implementation of the recommendations of the Joint Inspection Unit aimed at reducing the length of the national competitive recruitment examination process and improving the national competitive recruitment examination roster management, as well as setting time frames for completion of the process;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, to further cooperate within the framework of the Human Resources Network, making better use of national competitive recruitment examinations and existing rosters, and improving inter-agency mobility;

8. Recognizes the importance of the Secretary-General providing career development opportunities and support, including enhancing mobility for all staff, including those recruited from national competitive examinations;

V

Accountability

1. Recalls its resolution 61/244 and all other relevant resolutions on human resources management, including geographical distribution and gender representation in posts, and stresses the accountability of the Secretary-General for implementation and the concrete results obtained for these important principles and mandates;

2. Emphasizes that robust and proactive monitoring is essential at all levels, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Office of Human Resources Management continues to strengthen its monitoring of delegated authority for human resources management, including compliance with geographical and gender targets and the prompt filling of vacancies;

3. Notes that the senior managers' compacts are meant to improve the management of the Organization, inter alia, by increasing accountability and transparency at the senior level, and in this regard urges the Secretary-General to implement measures that adequately address the performance of senior managers, especially with regard to achieving goals and targets;

VI

Performance appraisal system

1. Emphasizes that a credible, fair and fully functioning performance appraisal system is critical to effective human resources management policies;

2. Expresses concern over the lack of credibility and effectiveness of the current performance appraisal system, and stresses the need for it to accurately reflect the full range of performance, in order to be able to reward staff for excellent performance and impose sanctions for underperformance and to strengthen the link between performance and career progression, in particular for those staff members in managerial positions;

3. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General to begin utilizing 360-degree performance appraisals, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on how this can be further implemented;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to review the current performance appraisal system in consultation with staff through the appropriate channels, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

VII

Mobility

1. Reaffirms section VIII of its resolution 59/266;

2. Stresses that the purpose of enhancing mobility is to improve the effectiveness of the Organization and to foster the skills and capacity of staff;

3. Decides to review the regulations and rules of the Organization relating to the exercise by the Secretary-General of his authority to assign and deploy staff according to the operational needs of the Organization, and requests him to submit proposals in this regard to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

4. Regrets that the Secretary-General's mobility policies failed to achieve their intended purposes;

5. Notes the intention of the Secretary-General as set out in his report to suspend the managed mobility programmes upon completion of the D-1/D-2 exercise, in order for a review to be undertaken, including on the maximum period of occupancy of post and lessons learned, with a view to developing proposals on the mobility policy, taking into account recommendations of the Task Force on Human Resources Management, in consultation with all relevant stakeholders, including staff associations, and requests him to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session in the context of his report on human resources management, with an analysis of cost and benefits, bearing in mind paragraph 46 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals aimed at encouraging voluntary mobility of staff in the context of the review of the mobility policy, without prejudice to the different needs of duty stations and the field;

7. Emphasizes that the scope of the mobility policy should be well defined;

VIII

Career development and support

1. Requests the Secretary-General, in complying with paragraph 17 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to make all possible efforts within existing resources;

2. Reaffirms the importance of defining the target and strategy of training and career development;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to make full use of the grade structure and to submit a concrete proposal to the General Assembly at the sixty-fifth session on how and where P-1 positions might be used more effectively;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals on a strategy to implement an efficient and effective training and professional development programme in the context of the budget submission for the biennium 2010–2011;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure that each vacancy announcement identifies accurately the skills, education and experience required for the position;

6. Recognizes the core role played by programme managers in career development and support, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen the evaluation of their managerial skills and their performance in fostering staff career development;

IX

Measures to improve equitable geographical representation/composition of the Secretariat

1. Recalls its resolution 42/220 A of 21 December 1987, by which it introduced the current system of desirable ranges;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his ongoing efforts to attain equitable geographical distribution in the Secretariat and to ensure as wide a geographical distribution of staff as possible in all departments, offices and levels, including the Director level and higher levels, of the Secretariat;

3. Recalls section X, paragraph 12, of its resolution 61/244, and expresses concern over the increase that has taken place in the number of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States since 2006;

4. Regrets the current insufficient accountability of heads of departments in achieving equitable geographical distribution in the Secretariat;

5. Welcomes the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to improve the situation of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States and of those which might become underrepresented under the system of desirable ranges;

6. Notes the analysis of the level of underrepresentation in the reports of the Secretary-General on the composition of the Secretariat;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to take all necessary measures to ensure, at the senior and policy-making levels of the Secretariat, equitable representation of Member States, especially those with inadequate representation at those levels, and to continue to include relevant information thereon in all future reports on the composition of the Secretariat;

8. Reiterates its requests to the Secretary-General to present proposals to effectively increase the representation of developing countries in the Secretariat, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

9. Welcomes the efforts of the Secretary-General to set specific targets throughout the Organization in order to increase recruitment from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States;

10. Considers that encouragement of recruitment from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States as well as gender balance targets shall not disallow other qualified candidates from competing;

11. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure, through the Management Performance Board, the monitoring of the implementation of human resources action plans, including the principle of equitable geographical distribution in the Secretariat at all levels, as set out in relevant General Assembly resolutions, and the verification of the effective application of measures of transparency and accountability, including in the selection, recruitment and placement processes;

12. Reiterates its request as contained in section X, paragraph 8, of its resolution 61/244;

13. Recalls paragraph 22 of its resolution 62/250 of 20 June 2008, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure the proper representation of troop-contributing countries in the Department of Peacekeeping Operations and the Department of Field Support, of the Secretariat, taking into account their contribution to United Nations peacekeeping;

14. Re-emphasizes that the system of geographical distribution was designed to apply to countries rather than to regions or groups;

15. Recalls its request to the Secretary-General to reduce, to the extent possible, the number of unrepresented and underrepresented Member States in the Secretariat by 30 per cent by 2010, compared to the level in 2006, and requests him to report to the General Assembly thereon, as appropriate, in the context of his report on human resources management;

16. Reaffirms that the system of desirable ranges is the mechanism for recruitment of staff to posts subject to geographical distribution, in accordance with Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter;

17. Recognizes that considerable change has taken place in the composition and the number of staff of the global United Nations Secretariat in the past two decades, recalls the reports of the Secretary-General, and requests him to submit to the General Assembly, at its sixty-fifth session, proposals for a comprehensive review of the system of desirable ranges, with a view to establishing a more effective tool to ensure equitable geographical distribution in relation to the total number of staff of the global United Nations Secretariat;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to gradually incorporate within his report on the composition of the Secretariat the overall number of staff, regardless of sources of funding, on contracts of one year or more;

19. Reiterates its request as contained in section X, paragraph 15, of its resolution 61/244, and recalls section II, paragraph 2, of its resolution 42/220 A;

X

Gender representation

1. Reaffirms the goal of 50/50 gender distribution in all categories of posts within the United Nations system, especially at senior and policymaking levels, with full respect for the principle of equitable geographical distribution, in conformity with Article 101 of the Charter, and regrets that progress towards attaining this goal has been slow;

2. Expresses concern at the continuing low proportion of women in the Secretariat, in particular the low proportion of women from developing countries, especially at the senior levels, and stresses that, in the recruitment process, the continuing lack of representation or underrepresentation of women from certain countries, in particular from developing countries, should be taken into account and that those women should be accorded equal opportunities, in full conformity with relevant resolutions;

3. Notes with concern that, in posts subject to the system of desirable ranges, only 33 women from developing countries were recruited between 1 July 2007 and 30 June 2008 among the 96 women appointed during that period;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to increase his efforts to attain and monitor the goal of gender parity in the Secretariat, in particular at senior levels, and in this context to ensure that women, especially those from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, are appropriately represented within the Secretariat, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

5. Notes the renewed effort the Secretary-General has made towards attaining this goal, particularly the decision to design and implement a forward-looking strategy under the leadership of the Deputy Secretary-General, and encourages him to further strengthen these efforts;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of attaining this goal, to develop and implement recruitment targets, time frames for meeting those targets and accountability measures;

7. Encourages Member States to support the efforts of the Secretary-General by identifying more women candidates and encouraging them to apply for appointment to positions in the Secretariat and by creating awareness among their nationals, in particular women, of vacancies in the Secretariat;

XI

Consultants, individual contractors, gratis personnel and employment of retired staff

1. Requests the Secretary-General to adhere to existing guidelines on the selection and recruitment of consultants and individual contractors;

2. Expresses concern over the increase in the use of consultants, especially in the core activities of the Organization, stresses that the use of consultants should be governed by the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, in particular resolution 53/221, section VIII, and that they should be drawn from the widest possible geographical basis, and requests the Secretary-General to make the greatest possible use of in-house capacity and to report to the Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the measures taken to that effect;

3. Reiterates its concern that the continuous trend of hiring staff retirees for extended periods of time increased in the last biennium;

4. Reiterates that employment of retirees in decision-making positions should occur only in exceptional circumstances;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to include, in future reports on the employment of retirees, analysis on reasons for patterns and trends that emerge from data presented;

XII

Report of the Ethics Office

1. Notes with appreciation the contributions of the Ethics Office to promoting integrity within the Organization;

2. Welcomes the establishment of the United Nations Ethics Committee;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to clarify the roles of the Ethics Office, the Office of the Ombudsman, the Office of Internal Oversight Services and other related offices, and to report the findings, as well as the measures taken to avoid overlapping of mandates, to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to discuss with the executive heads of the specialized agencies, funds and programmes, within the framework of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination, areas of possible cooperation and cost savings on ethics-related matters;

5. Further requests the Secretary-General to include in his report on the activities of the Ethics Office, information on the activities of the Ethics Committee, including a review of any complex ethics issues dealt with by the Committee, if deemed relevant;

XIII

Other matters

1. Notes with concern that many disciplinary cases have not been completed in a reasonable time, and requests the Secretary-General to include in his annual report information on measures taken to increase the number of cases closed;

2. Invites the Sixth Committee to consider the legal aspects of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Implementation of the Regulations Governing the Status, Basic Rights and Duties of Officials other than Secretariat Officials and Experts on Mission" without prejudice to the role of the Fifth Committee as the Main Committee of the General Assembly responsible for administrative and budgetary matters;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the implementation of the human resources management information technology system;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to strengthen programmes to promote health in hardship posts, including through psychological support and disease awareness, with a view to promoting productivity and a better work environment;

5. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on measures to address the imbalance in the geographical distribution of the staff in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights;

6. Also takes note of the amendments to the Staff Rules as contained in the annex to the above-mentioned report.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on human resources management would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Contractual arrangements and harmonization of conditions of service

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 60/1 [YUN 2005, p. 48], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/298], which summarized his proposals for streamlining UN contractual arrangements and harmonizing conditions of service, including for UN field operations [YUN 2007, pp. 103, 1508 & 1510]. Under the proposed system, a single series of staff rules would provide for one UN staff contract, encompassing three types of appointments: a temporary appointment, which would cover up to a maximum period of one year (or up to two years to meet surge needs in the field), for staff appointed to meet seasonal or peak workloads and specific short-term requirements; a fixed-term appointment, which could cover up to a period of five years; and a continuing appointment, which would be open-ended. The Secretary-General added that should the Assembly approve his proposals, permanent appointments would be discontinued as from 1 July 2009. Any change of contractual framework would not, however, affect staff holding permanent appointments or staff who would have acquired rights under existing rules to be considered for permanent appointments by the time the change became effective. The simplified contractual framework would address the issues raised by the Assembly by providing clarity, transparency and fairness for all concerned and help to better attract and retain skilled, experienced and qualified civilian staff for all parts of the Secretariat, including in the field. The new single set of rules would be more user-friendly, facilitate mobility and be more efficient to administer, in particular in the context of the development and implementation of the upcoming enterprise resource planning system.

He recommended that the Assembly approve the new contractual arrangements and conditions of service contained in the report and the amendments to the Staff Regulations contained in a July report [A/63/189]; the establishment of 2,500 civilian career peacekeepers; and the proposals to designate missions as family or non-family in harmony with the practice of UN agencies, funds and programmes, effective 1 July 2009, to introduce the special operations approach in non-family duty stations, effective 1 July 2009 with implementation in April 2010, and to replace the occasional recuperation break with paid rest and recuperation travel, effective 1 July 2009. He also requested that an additional $9,469,000 be appropriated for special political missions for the period from 1 July to 31 December 2009, and that the Assembly note that resource requirements for those missions for future periods beginning 1 January 2010, and for peacekeeping missions for the period beginning 1 July 2009, would be incorporated in the budgets for the respective missions.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ noted that the Secretary-General had merely presented an outline of the procedures as to the cases of staff members eligible for consideration for a continuing appointment, which would be reviewed by an advisory body. Further details, in particular the modalities for determining whether there was a continuing need for an individual staff member's services, should be elaborated and presented to the Assembly, together with information about the composition of the advisory body and its rules of procedure. Given the significant role played by the performance appraisal system in the proposed conversion procedure, ACABQ stated that it was all the more important to strengthen that system. It concurred with the Secretary-General that it was important to avoid creating different categories of staff with different thresholds for consideration for a continuing appointment and recommended that all staff, regardless of the mode of recruitment, be eligible for consideration for a continuing appointment after five years of continuous service on fixed-term appointments.

While reiterating that a prudent approach to conversions would be required, ACABQ recommended against the establishment of a ceiling on the number of yearly conversions to continuing appointments at the current stage. It noted that conversion would, in any case, be an inherently phased process. On the issue of procedures for the termination of continuing contracts, ACABQ noted the Secretary-General's effort to respond to its request in its previous report on human resources management [YUN 2007, p. 1509]. However, the proposed internal procedure for termination continued to lack clarity. As to the issue of an end-of-service grant for staff holding fixed-term appointments, ACABQ recommended deferring a decision until ICSC had concluded its deliberations on the matter. Concerning staff in the Field Service category, ACABQ noted that the impact of the Secretary-General's proposals on that category of staff should have been presented earlier, given that they accounted for a large portion of the international staff population. Furthermore, harmonization should not reduce the overall compensation of staff already serving.

By section VIII of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1547), the General Assembly approved, in connection with the harmonization of contractual arrangements, an additional appropriation of $13,165,400 under the 2008–2009 programme budget, and requested the Secretary-General to include $80,900,900 in the respective budgets of affected peacekeeping missions from 1 July 2009 to 30 June 2010.

Staffing of field missions

By decision 62/549 of 20 June, the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's 2007 report [YUN 2007, p. 1509] on the reappointment of mission staff who had reached the four-year limit under 300-series appointments of limited duration by 31 December 2006 and 30 June 2007, respectively, submitted in response to resolution 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691], decided to continue to suspend the application of the four-year maximum limit for appointments of limited duration until 31 December 2008. It authorized the Secretary-General to reappoint, under the 100-series of the Staff Rules, those mission staff whose service under 300-series contracts reached the four-year limit by 31 December 2008, provided that their functions were reviewed and found necessary and their performance was confirmed as fully satisfactory. It also requested the Secretary-General to continue the practice of using 300-series contracts as the primary instrument for the appointment of new staff.

Mobility

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/208] on the implementation of the mobility policy, which was a follow-up to his 2007 report on the subject [YUN 2007, p. 1514]. The Secretary-General stated that, under the managed re-assignment programme, the percentage of staff who had reached maximum post occupancy was minimal. Owing to the extensive informational campaign undertaken by OHRM, from the inception of the mobility policy in 2002, to raise awareness about the advantages of movement, it was expected that many, if not most, would have already taken steps to move to other positions. According to data derived from human resources action plans, the staff mobility index had increased significantly, from 10.8 per cent in 2002 to 27.6 per cent in 2007. That increase confirmed that greater awareness and a proactive approach, coupled with expanded learning and career development programmes, would lead to increased mobility outside of managed reassignment.

In 2008, a working group comprising staff and management representatives to monitor the implementation of the mobility policy presented its observations and recommendations to the Staff Management Coordination Committee (SMCC). The working group concluded that there was no contention between staff and management on the broad concept of mobility, and that there was general agreement that mobility would strengthen the Organization and the skill sets of staff members. However, there were diverging views on the success of the managed mobility programme, the mechanisms used to implement the programme and the need to treat all categories of staff equally. The working group identified many areas that required clarification and/or review in determining the way forward, including the outcome of the Assembly's deliberations on related human resources matters, such as the harmonization of contracts and conditions of service.

The Secretary-General concluded that the United Nations would continue to refine the mobility policy in the light of experience. As endorsed by SMCC, the managed reassignment programmes would be suspended in their current format after the final exercise was concluded for staff at the D-1 and D-2 levels. A comprehensive review of the mobility policy would be undertaken in consultation with all stakeholders, including staff, managers and Member States. The policy would need to be further refined and take into account recommendations from the Task Force on Human Resources Management. The Secretary-General recommended that the following mobility policy elements be reviewed: functional and occupational mobility for staff at the Professional and higher levels with a view to increasing geographical mobility; enforcement of post occupancy limits; incentives for staff members to move to duty stations with high vacancy rates; ways to address challenges faced by families and non-traditional arrangements; exchange programmes with international organizations outside the UN system; ways to enhance career development of locally recruited staff in lieu of managed reassignment programmes; and mapping of rotational/non-rotational posts. He also recommended instituting a programme to publicly recognize and reward service in the field; incorporating a mobility requirement in new offers of appointment, reappointments and contracts for Professional staff with appointments of one year or longer; undertaking additional efforts to address work and life issues; and establishing occupational networks.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ expressed support for the Secretary-General's intention to suspend the managed reassignment programmes and to undertake a comprehensive review of the mobility policy. It also concurred with the Secretary-General that the recommendations of the Task Force on Human Resources Management be taken into account during the review. It noted, however, that the issue of career development for local staff was an ongoing management function that should not be addressed in the context of mobility. It considered that the possible inclusion of a mobility requirement in new offers of appointment required further discussion in the context of the review of the mobility policy. It requested the Secretary-General, within the framework of the review, to respond fully to the Assembly's requests contained in resolution 61/244 and other resolutions.

Recruitment and staffing

In response to General Assembly resolution 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691], which called upon him to further elaborate the use of pre-screened rosters, the Secretary-General, in an August report [A/63/285], provided information on progress made in advancing the reform proposals on recruitment and staffing presented in his reports "Investing in people" [YUN 2006, p. 1689] and "Human resources management reform: recruitment and staffing" [YUN 2007, p. 1511]. The Secretary-General proposed the introduction of a talent management framework, of which rosters were an important element, as a crucial step in speeding up recruitment and ensuring that the Organization was better equipped to meet current challenges and future staffing needs, while increasing opportunities for career development. The target was to reduce staff recruitment from the current average of 162 days (previously 174) to 100 days. The framework would consist of four elements: workforce planning, which would enable the Organization to undertake proactive efforts to meet its current and future needs; staffing through recruitment and targeted outreach and roster management; performance management; and staff development.

The use of prescreened rosters would ensure that the quality of candidates remained high, and would be used for all types of staff and personnel, including consultants and individual contractors. The roster-based process would be supported by workforce planning, generic vacancy announcements, panels of experts in relevant fields, central review bodies, and centralized background checking and help desk support. Rosters would be managed to ensure that candidates were available and interested in specific vacancies and that there were sufficient numbers of candidates for selection for current and anticipated vacancies. Candidates would remain on the roster for three years, with the possibility of extension for a further two years. At the end of five years, candidates would be removed from the roster. The framework would be implemented through an e-staffing support tool, which would replace the current Galaxy recruitment system. Preparatory work on the roster-based system would commence in early 2009. The rosters would be phased in for certain types of functions, in addition to existing rosters, starting in mid-2009, as a transitional measure before full-scale application by the end of 2009. In that way, the new work processes involved in the application of the roster system could be tested and refined. To handle the anticipated large increase in workload for the clearance of candidates (three times the current volume) and in support provided to users, associated resource requirements would be considered in the context of the 2010–2011 budgetary framework. The Secretary-General requested the Assembly to approve the establishment of a roster-based approach for selection of staff for an initial period of one year, as well as the reduction in the period for the circulation of vacancy announcements from 60 days to 30 days.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ noted the emphasis on outreach and urged the Secretary-General to ensure that outreach activities focused on positions both at Headquarters and in the field. It stressed that the preparation and maintenance of rosters could involve considerable human and financial resources and cautioned that experience had shown that rosters were not a panacea for the difficulties affecting the recruitment and staffing system. It welcomed the reduction in the average time taken to fill vacancies (162 days in 2007, as compared to 174 days previously) and hoped that, once all the elements of the talent management framework were in place, the target of 100 days set by the Secretary-General would be reached.

ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General further clarify the envisaged role of the central review bodies. In its view, the report would have benefited from the inclusion of more detailed information about the composition and functioning of the panels of experts in particular occupational groups, which would determine the suitability of internal and external candidates for the types of occupations and levels for which they had expressed interest. ACABQ shared the concerns expressed by Member States that reducing the period of advertising vacancies from 60 days to a shorter period would be a disadvantage to potential candidates from some States which had limited access to the UN website due to technology gaps, and recommended against reducing the period for advertising individual vacancies from 60 to 30 days.

ACABQ was of the opinion that the proposed roster-based approach had not been sufficiently elaborated and asked the Secretary-General to present more detailed proposals to the Assembly, prepared on the basis of an in-depth evaluation of the current roster system for Headquarters and the field.

National competitive recruitment examination

JIU report. In February [A/62/707], the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) report entitled “Review of the national competitive recruitment examination as a recruitment tool”.

JIU found that since the establishment of the national competitive recruitment examination (NCRE) in 1980 by Assembly resolution 35/210 [YUN 1980, p. 1164] for hiring staff at the P-1 and P-2 levels, it had been used as a recruitment tool by the Secretariat to select highly qualified young professionals at entry level (P-2), through competitive examinations offered to countries that were not represented or adequately represented in the Secretariat. It consisted of a written examination and an interview, and roster management and placement. Successful candidates were put on the roster, and programme managers could select and recruit from the roster for a vacant P-2 post. In general, the examination served well the objectives set by the Assembly and provided the Organization with highly qualified entry-level Professional staff. It was a useful, objective and competitive tool and programme managers were generally satisfied with the performance of staff so recruited. JIU noted that the examination, offered only to nationals from unrepresented or under-represented countries in the Secretariat, served the purpose of improving the geographical composition of the Secretariat and contributed to the equitable geographical representation set by the Assembly. However, since it was only one of the recruitment channels used by the Organization, it alone could not secure the required geographical distribution of staff.

OHRM statistics for 2002 to 2006 showed that the examination did help to improve the gender balance in the composition of the Secretariat. The proportion of female staff among the NCRE-recruited staff was 56.8 per cent. The average cost of putting a successful candidate onto the roster over the past several years varied between $5,700 and $17,400, depending on the number of applicants in a given year. The Inspectors were of the opinion that the system was a cost-effective recruitment tool, compared with the normal fees of specialized headhunting companies, as well as the costs of recruitment in some international organizations outside the United Nations. However, the excessively long duration of the NCRE cycle, two years, with final placement taking a further six months to three years, made the exercise too slow to meet the Organization’s demands and the legitimate expectations of the candidates on the roster. To ensure the stability, consistency, accountability and transparency of the process, administrative regulations governing NCRE were needed. The planning process was unreliable and was not part of the Organization's overall strategic labour force planning. The roster management phase of the process faced problems and operational difficulties, such as the high number of candidates and long waiting period on the roster, the significant level of vacancies in P-2 posts, the lack of online access and search tools in the roster database for use by programme managers, the inadequate update of the roster database, the recruitment freeze from the roster in some months to implement other recruitment exercises, and the lack of effective information technology to support communication between candidates, OHRM and programme managers. Comprehensive operational measures were needed to address those difficulties.

On the strategic level, there was a need for increased "corporate responsibility" at the operational managers and senior management levels, and a long-term strategy for the future operation of NCRE in the overall UN recruitment process. JIU also called for closer cooperation on the competitive examination among UN organizations. Mutual recognition of test results or interactions on a better utilization of rosters could be beneficial for the recruitment process of other UN organizations, and would also improve and facilitate future inter-agency mobility. JIU recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to report to its sixty-third session on the implementation of the recommendations, in particular those aimed at reducing the length of the NCRE process and improving the roster management. He should regulate, through an administrative issuance, the entire NCRE process, including the announcement, convocation and organization, with clear delegation of authority on the different elements in the decision-making and operational processes, and elaborate and implement measures to reduce the length of the process, in particular the examination process, by investing commensurate financial resources, and with the exact dates of the beginning and end of the examination phase made public. The Secretary-General should elaborate and implement an action plan for reorganizing the NCRE roster management system to address the identified weaknesses.

In his comments on the JIU report [A/62/707/Add.1], the Secretary-General concurred with a number of the recommendations, since the Organization was actively addressing them, but said that others would require policy decisions by the Assembly.

Report of Board of Auditors. The United Nations Board of Auditors, in its 2008 report [A/63/5 (Vol. 1)], stated that the theoretical duration of NCRE was 22 months, with the examination itself taking 11 months. That period did not take into account the process of selecting the successful candidates accepted into the pool. That time frame appeared excessive. The real time was actually much longer for certain tests owing to a lack of available examiners. The time could be reduced through continuous needs planning. OHRM could carry out the meetings with the Member States concurrently and reduce the time for marking the written exam and convocations for the oral exams. The current marking times were also excessive. In addition, the Board deemed it necessary for the dates for publishing the results to be posted and respected.

The Board recommended that the Administration ensure that OHRM implemented measures to reduce the actual duration of NCRE.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ agreed with the JIU assessment and drew attention to the Ombudsman's comment that many of the candidates recruited had difficulty moving from the P-2 to the P-3 level. It recommended that the shortcomings identified by the Board of Auditors, JIU and the Ombudsman be addressed, and urged the Secretary-General to accelerate the recruitment of candidates who had passed NCRE. It also recommended that the Assembly consider requesting, for consideration at its sixty-fifth (2010) session, a feasibility study, which would build on reports of oversight bodies, to determine whether broadening the scope of NCRE would serve to further strengthen the Organization's capacity for programme delivery.

National Professional Officers

In March [A/62/762], the Secretary-General submitted a report on National Professional Officers, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 61/276 [YUN 2007, p. 79], which described the experience in the use of those officers in UN peace operations and made recommendations for addressing challenges in attracting, recruiting and retaining them.

In 1980, ICSC decided to permit the use of National Professional Officers for functions in non-headquarters offices which, by their nature, required national knowledge and experience and could not be carried out effectively by international Professionals. ICSC established the criteria for recruiting them, which were adopted by the Assembly in resolution 49/223 [YUN 1994, p. 1374]. The number of such officer posts in UN peace operations had increased by 234 per cent, from 306 in January 2004 to 1,023 as at 31 December 2007. While missions recognized the value of their role in implementing the mission mandate, recruiting them in post-conflict environments within the ICSC framework posed significant challenges. The average vacancy rate for those posts was 38 per cent as at 31 December 2007, compared with an average vacancy rate of 13 per cent for national staff in the General Service category in field missions. Despite intensive recruitment efforts, UN peace operations invariably encountered difficulties in attracting, recruiting and retaining National Professional Officers in post-conflict environments. While missions' recruitment experiences varied in response to the unique conditions prevailing in the mission area, the difficulties could generally be attributed to a lack of required academic qualifications, a lack of professional work experience, inability to verify credentials, competition in the local marketplace for professional skills, limitations on the use of National Professional Officers and a lack of qualified candidates for positions in remote locations. Addressing those challenges required a degree of flexibility in applying recruitment standards, which would enable individual missions to respond to their unique requirements while respecting the integrity of the National Professional Officer programme and the established ICSC criteria.

The Secretary-General sought the Assembly's endorsement for his proposed flexibility measures to address those challenges. Those were: in situations where educational institutions had not been functioning for prolonged periods and difficulty had been encountered in recruiting National Professional Officers owing to a lack of candidates with a first-level university degree, missions should be given the flexibility to address the problem on a temporary basis, taking into account the unique challenges at the duty station; in situations where National Professional Officer candidates were unable to produce a university degree that was reported lost or destroyed during hostilities or where it had not been possible to verify prior professional experience, missions should be given the flexibility to recruit candidates based on the information provided in the personal history profile, while continuing to make their best efforts to obtain verification of academic qualifications and/or prior professional experience; where it was difficult to identify National Professional Officer candidates with the required prior professional experience, missions should be given the flexibility to recruit National Professional Officers who possessed a university degree at the entry level without the requirement for any previous professional experience, on a probationary basis; and National Professional Officers should be employed in UN peace operations in non-field locations, such as the United Nations Logistics Base in Brindisi, Italy, and the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, where the functions required knowledge of the local language or institutions.

Ethics Office

In response to General Assembly resolution 60/254 [YUN 2006, p. 1633], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/301] on the activities of the Ethics Office from 1 August 2007 to 31 July 2008. During that period, the Office continued to develop ethical standards; ensure annual training on ethics issues to enhance awareness of ethics, integrity and accountability, in collaboration with OHRM; provide confidential advice and guidance to individual staff, staff groups and departments and offices; administer the financial disclosure programme in order to maintain and enhance public trust in the integrity of the Organization; and implement procedures and methodology associated with the policy on protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with audits or investigations, in collaboration with OIOS.

The Office responded to 446 staff requests for its services: 77 per cent involved ethics advice; 10 per cent were related to protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct; 6 per cent to standard-setting; 4 per cent to general information; and 3 per cent to training. New York accounted for 58 per cent of the requests; peacekeeping operations and tribunals, 12 per cent; Offices in Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi together, 11 per cent; UN bodies and agencies, 9 per cent; others, 5 per cent; regional commissions, 4 per cent; and Member States, 1 per cent. Requests were received from staff at different levels across the Secretariat, with the Professional levels accounting for 60 per cent, and the General Service and related categories, 11 per cent. Concerning financial disclosure, of the 2,528 staff members required to file a financial disclosure or declaration of interest statement in the filing period from 1 January to 31 December 2006, 2,329 or 92 per cent of staff complied with their obligation. The remaining 8 per cent consisted of 1 per cent who were not required to file as a consequence of retirement or separation from service and 7 per cent (172 staff members) who were referred to OHRM for disciplinary action. The Ethics Office received 45 complaints of retaliation, 18 of which warranted a preliminary review. Of the 27 remaining complaints, 9 were determined to fall outside the scope of the mandate, and 13 were provided with advice and guidance on recourse to more appropriate mechanisms.

The Secretary-General noted the increased demand for the service of the Office and the growing complexity of the requests. The broad diversity of the sources of the requests reaffirmed the Office's relevance and contribution to building a culture of ethics and integrity in the United Nations. A challenge for the Office was increasing the awareness and compliance of staff members with the financial disclosure programme and ensuring that conflicts of interest were prevented and managed at the outset. The programme represented a significant contribution to enhancing accountability efforts and the ethical mindset of the Organization. The Secretary-General concluded that the Ethics Office should continue to be a leading player in advocating adherence to shared organizational values and principles, with the goal of preserving its independence and impartiality and meeting the expectations of the Organization and staff alike. He recommended that the Assembly encourage UN specialized agencies and other entities to participate in the Ethics Committee through a memorandum of understanding or other arrangements.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ noted that the Secretary-General's report did not include a clear description of the Office's work-plan or an assessment of the impact of its activities. Furthermore, the information on the financial disclosure programme was unclear and lacked analysis. Accordingly, ACABQ recommended that in future reports, the Secretary-General should provide clear and precise data by duty station on the number of individuals covered by the programme, those who had complied with their filing obligations, and those who had failed to do so and the reasons for their failure to comply. To avoid confusion among staff members in terms of the appropriate mechanism or office to address their grievances, ACABQ stressed that staff should be provided with information on the role of the Ethics Office, the Office of the Ombudsman, the OHRM Administrative Law Unit, OIOS and other relevant offices and their interrelationship. In the next report on the question, the Secretary-General should further clarify the issue of the overlapping mandates of those offices. ACABQ encouraged the Ethics Office and OHRM to continue to work on integrating ethics training into the curriculum of regular training offered at the Secretariat. Care should be taken, however, to ensure that the Ethics Office did not duplicate the work of other departments and entities and, in particular, that ethics training modules were incorporated into training activities in substantive areas to the extent possible. ACABQ noted that it was within the purview of the Secretary-General to bring issues relating to system-wide coordination to the attention of CEB members. In that connection, the Assembly should request him to discuss with the executive heads of the UN specialized agencies, funds and programmes, within the CEB framework, areas of possible cooperation on ethics-related matters.

Staff composition

In a September annual report on the UN Secretariat's staff composition [A/63/310], the Secretary-General provided information on the demographic characteristics of the staff and on the system of desirable ranges for geographical distribution. The report, covering the period from 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2008, reviewed the global population of Secretariat staff, staff with contracts of one year or more, staff appointed under the 100 series of the Staff Rules with contracts of one year or more and those in posts subject to geographical distribution. The report also included information on all staff with valid contracts irrespective of the funding source, type of engagement, duration of contract, level or duty station, including locally recruited consultants and contractors working in field operations.

The report noted that the global number of Secretariat staff as at 30 June 2008 totalled 39,503, including 2,076 in the Tribunals. Of that number, 29,274 held contracts of one year or more. The increase in the global workforce of 8 per cent (2,924 staff), compared with 30 June 2007, was due mainly to the growth of peacekeeping missions. The number of staff in the Professional and higher categories was 11,142 (28.2 per cent), and 28,361 (71.8 per cent) in the General Service and related categories. Staff in field missions administered by the Department of Field Support (DFS) numbered 21,790 (55.2 per cent of the global Secretariat workforce). Of the global Secretariat staff, 25,928 (65.6 per cent) were men, while women accounted for 13,575 (34.4 per cent). Of the local staff in field missions administered by DFS, 82.9 per cent were men. Nationals of 187 Member States were represented in the Secretariat: 176 States were represented by staff in posts subject to geographical distribution, while 5 had no nationals among staff. In the Secretariat, 16 Member States were unrepresented, two fewer than in June 2007, while 24 were under-represented and 21 over-represented, as against 19 and 22, respectively, the previous year. The remaining 131 States were within range. Appointments to posts subject to geographical distribution totalled 176.

The report also provided information on the demographic profile of Secretariat staff, including the breakdown of staff by department or office, gender, age and length of service, and movements of staff, covering recruitment, promotion, transfer, separation, turnover and forecasts of anticipated retirements between 2008 and 2012. In addition, the report analysed the implementation status of geographical representation of staff at the senior and policymaking levels, the human resources action planning system and the level of under-representation in the composition of the Secretariat.

Measures to improve the balance in the geographical distribution of OHCHR staff

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/236 [YUN 2007, p. 1441], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/63/204] on the measures taken in the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to improve the geographical distribution of staff (see p. 719).

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ suggested that the Secretary-General report on how progress in geographical representation was measured and achieved, including through the use of senior managers' compacts, human resources action plans and outreach activities, and include statistical information on geographical distribution by country in future reports.

Gratis personnel

Responding to General Assembly resolutions 51/243 [YUN 1997, p. 1469] and 57/281 B [YUN 2003, p. 1448], the Secretary-General submitted his biennial report [A/63/310/Add.1] on the use of gratis personnel between 1 January 2006 and 31 December 2007. The number of type I gratis personnel (associate experts, technical cooperation experts and interns) increased from 1,767 in 2006 to 1,952 in 2007. A total of 125 nationalities were represented, compared to 120 in 2006. Women constituted 60 per cent and 64 per cent in 2006 and 2007, respectively, while interns continued to constitute the majority of type I personnel for both years. The number of associate experts increased to 252 in 2007, compared to 233 in 2006, while the number of technical cooperation experts increased from 18 in 2006 to 25 in 2007.

A total of 54 type II gratis personnel (provided by Governments or other entities) representing 10 nationalities were employed in 2007, which was a significant rise from 2006 figures. The average duration of service for type II gratis personnel decreased from 4.3 months per year in 2006 to 3.9 months per year in 2007. Female representation in that category rose from 30 per cent in 2006 to 41 per cent in 2007.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ, noting that the eight separate tables providing data, separately and by year, on nationality, gender, departmental assignment and functions performed by each type of gratis personnel, made it difficult to compare trends for each year of the biennium, reiterated its request that the format of the tables be streamlined so as to consolidate the information for the two years of the biennium into a single table.

Employment of retirees

In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], 59/266 [YUN 2004, p. 1418] and 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/310/Add.2] on the employment of retired staff in the UN Secretariat during the 2006–2007 biennium. Some 979 UN retirees, representing 98 nationalities, were employed, an increase of 99.4 and 32.4 per cent in the number hired and in national representation, respectively. The six departments/offices accounting for most of the retirees engaged (63.2 per cent) included the Department for General Assembly and Conference Management, which hired 24.3 per cent of the total; the United Nations Office at Geneva (12.8 per cent); the Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) (7.4 per cent); the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) (6.9 per cent); field missions administered by the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (6.5 per cent); and the Department of Management (5.4 per cent). Retired staff were used mainly in three groups of functions: language services, particularly revisers and interpreters (32 per cent of all engagements); administrative functions (23.4 per cent); and political, economic, social, environmental, humanitarian, advisory and technical assistance functions (9.4 per cent). Other functions accounted for 35 per cent. The total expenditure on retirees in the 2006–2007 biennium amounted to $50 million, of which language services and administrative functions accounted for $24.3 million and $12.8 million, respectively. The report also provided information regarding the employment of former staff 60 years or older who had opted for a withdrawal settlement and were re-employed for six months or more, those rehired in decision-making positions and for an accrued service period exceeding two years, and staff extensions beyond the mandatory age of separation.

The report concluded that retired staff provided a readily available pool of specialists with in-house expertise to meet organizational needs. Moreover, the expanding and evolving needs of field operations (peacekeeping and humanitarian activities) continued to require the immediate deployment of experienced staff. Additionally, field operations often experienced a high turnover rate (up to 30 per cent per year), and currently some 50 per cent of the staff at missions had two years or less experience in the Organization. In those circumstances, retirees were an available pool from which to draw candidates with the required institutional knowledge, skills and experience, without prejudice to the career development and redeployment opportunities of other staff.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ stated that while the Secretary-General's annual report on the employment of retirees contributed to enhancing the transparency of human resources management practices, the sizeable amount of data contained therein required further analysis. Future reports should focus on identifying the possible reasons for patterns and trends, whether such trends were positive or negative, and possible approaches to remedying negative developments. It expressed concern that the trend of using retirees was becoming more widespread in many departments and offices. Upon enquiry, it was informed that staff members were often extended beyond the mandatory age of separation pending recruitment of a replacement. ACABQ was of the view that the situation could and should be avoided through rigorous succession planning and the issuance of vacancy announcements six months before the anticipated retirement. It pointed out that the employment of retirees in decision-making positions had been strongly discouraged by the Assembly and should be contemplated only in exceptional circumstances. The Secretary-General and ICSC should explore the possibility of changing the mandatory age of separation, taking into account such issues as the rejuvenation of the Secretariat, vacancy rates and the actuarial implications of that course of action for the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund.

Consultants and individual contractors

In response to General Assembly resolutions 57/305 [YUN 2003, p. 1440], 59/266 [YUN 2004, p. 1418] and 61/244 [YUN 2006, p. 1691], the Secretary-General, in August, submitted a biennial report [A/63/310/Add.3] on the use of consultants and individual contractors within the Secretariat and the regional commissions during the 2006–2007 biennium. The report indicated that in 2006, 3,244 consultants and 1,701 individual contractors were engaged for 4,294 and 3,137 contracts, respectively, while in 2007, the number rose to 4,275 consultants and 1,808 individual contractors for 5,713 and 3,101 contracts, respectively. Those figures represented an increase of 108 per cent compared to the numbers registered for the 2004–2005 biennium. The total expenditure for consultants for the 2006–2007 biennium increased by $59.1 million (138.9 per cent) as compared to 2004–2005. For individual contractors, the total expenditure of $13.8 million in 2006 and $16 million in 2007 corresponded to an increase of $19.8 million (197.2 per cent) compared with the previous biennium. The main UN entities hiring consultants and individual contractors included DESA, the Economic Commission for Africa, ECLAC, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development and the United Nations Environment Programme.

The report concluded that among factors which contributed to the use of consultants and individual contractors was a worldwide growth in the demand for conference, interpretation and translation services during peak activity periods which exceeded departmental capacity. Likewise, there was a significant increase in disaster relief operations, as well as in field operations in peacekeeping. For some departments, the increase in the use of consultants and individual contractors was a result of new projects, such as the enterprise resource planning system and the capital master plan. Those projects required considerable business analysis and specific expertise not readily available in the Organization.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], ACABQ regretted that the Secretary-General had not reported on factors contributing to the use of consultants and individual contractors, as requested by the General Assembly in resolution 57/305. Accordingly, it reiterated its request that the data contained in the report be supplemented by an analysis of those factors. Future reports should also contain definitions of the terms “consultant”, “individual contractor” and “institutional contractor” used by the Secretary-General. It also noted the increase in the number of consultants and individual contractors. It stressed that the use of consultants should be governed by the relevant Assembly resolutions. Although it understood that in some instances the skills and expertise for a particular project could not be found within the Secretariat, it was of the view that greater use should be made of in-house capacity in some areas for which consultants were routinely hired. ACABQ further noted that the report provided very little information about institutional contractors and the circumstances in which they were used. In that connection, it reiterated that, in future reports, the Secretary-General should provide that information, including institution, duration and expenditure. The Secretary-General should adhere to existing guidelines on the selection and recruitment of consultants and individual contractors Secretariat-wide, and make every effort to select consultants from the widest possible geographical base.

Common payroll

By decision 63/550 of 24 December, the General Assembly deferred to its resumed sixty-third (2009) session consideration of the Secretary-General's note transmitting the JIU report [YUN 2005, p. 1520] on a common payroll for UN system organizations, as well as the Secretary-General's note [YUN 2006, p. 1701] containing his comments and those of the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB) on the JIU report.

Multilingualism

As requested in General Assembly resolution 61/266 [YUN 2007, p. 1515], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/338] on activities undertaken to promote multilingualism. The review showed that progress had been achieved in the promotion of multilingualism in conference management, internal communications, public information and outreach, as well as in human resources management. The Secretariat continued its commitment to provide the best possible support to Member States, particularly in their deliberative bodies. The principle of equal treatment for the six official languages, as mandated by the Assembly, was respected.

The Secretary-General noted that the launch of the International Year of Languages in 2008 presented an additional opportunity to focus on multilingualism. The extensive programme of activities undertaken to mark the Year [A/63/349] (see p. 1249) was expected to have a lasting effect and would foster the integration of language issues in UN programmes and internationally. The Assembly had also invited the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) to report on the impact of the activities carried out during the Year.

On 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on multilingualism would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Protection from sexual exploitation and abuse

Report of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 57/306 [YUN 2003, p. 1237], the Secretary-General submitted a June report on special measures for protection from sexual exploitation and abuse [A/62/890] that presented data on allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse in the UN system in 2007 and described progress in enforcing UN standards of conduct. Information on allegations was received from all but 4 of the 43 UN entities from which information was sought. Nine entities reported receiving new allegations in 2007, whereas 35 entities received no allegations. The number of new alleged cases totalled 159, compared with 371 in 2006. Thirty-two involved personnel of UN entities other than the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO): the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees reported 19 cases, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East five, the United Nations University five and the United Nations Integrated Office in Burundi two. The majority of the allegations, 127, were from DPKO, with the highest number (59) reported in the United Nations Organization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUC). Reports from other organizations suggested chronic underreporting of allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse, in particular of minors, against UN personnel, as well as personnel of the international aid community. The joint Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse produced several significant outputs, including convening a high-level conference on eliminating sexual exploitation and abuse by UN and NGO personnel; a strategy on assistance to victims; and an awareness-raising video. Five working groups were formed in September 2007 to advance the work of the Task Force in the areas of: support to field-based networks; enforcement; managerial compliance; victim assistance; and implementation guidance for the Secretary-General's bulletin on sexual exploitation and abuse [YUN 2004, p. 107].

The amendments on sexual exploitation and abuse to the model memorandum of understanding between the United Nations and troop-contributing countries, endorsed by the Assembly in resolution 61/267 B [YUN 2007, p. 69], were used by the Department of Field Support (DFS) in negotiations with potential troop-contributing countries for all new military contingents to peace operations. It was envisaged that the revisions to the model memorandum of understanding would be incorporated into existing memorandums.

The Secretary-General concluded that the United Nations continued to make progress in establishing a sustainable framework for addressing the issue. The creation of conduct and discipline teams within DPKO and DFS had led to focused and coordinated responses to prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse and enforcement of the related standards of conduct. The high-level conference on sexual exploitation and abuse [YUN 2007, p. 1518] and the work of the Task Force on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse were important steps towards institutionalizing a comprehensive, Organization-wide implementation of measures to prevent abuse, the enforcement of standards of conduct and strategic collaboration with non-governmental partners. Recently approved policies, such as the revised memorandum of understanding, the strategy on assistance to victims and the Assembly resolution on criminal accountability [YUN 2006, p. 109] were significant milestones in advancing a comprehensive strategy to address the issue, in conjunction with the UN policy of zero tolerance. He noted that the number of allegations reported in 2007 declined, particularly by DPKO and DFS. The increase in the number of cases in entities other than peacekeeping was of concern and would be monitored closely. At the same time, the increase in reporting of allegations could also be attributed to greater awareness by staff and management, as well as within the communities in which the UN operated. The Secretary-General remained committed to changing the organizational culture to deter acts of sexual exploitation and abuse. Member States were urged to continue to assist the Organization and adopt policies to ensure that the zero-tolerance policy was equally applied to all troop contingents.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in November [A/63/526 & Corr.1], noted the substantial decline in the number of allegations, as well as the strengthening of measures for protection from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse, and recommended that the Assembly note the Secretary-General's report.

(For information on protection from sexual exploitation and abuse in UN peace operations, see PART ONE, Chapter I.)

UN International School

In 2008, the United Nations International School, first established on the premises of the United Nations at Lake Success in 1947 [YUN 1947-48, p. 137], celebrated its sixtieth anniversary. The General Assembly, in resolution 63/198 (see below), congratulated the School on its anniversary and urged Member States and others to contribute generously to the School's Capital Development Fund for the renovation programme, with a view to further enhancing international education and promoting multicultural interaction.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December [meeting 71], the General Assembly, [draft: A/63/L.55 & Add.1], adopted resolution 63/198 without vote [agenda item 45].

Supporting the United Nations International School in enhancing international education and promoting multicultural interaction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1102(XI) of 27 February 1957, 1228(XII) of 14 December 1957, 2003(XIX) of 10 February 1965 and 2612(XXIV) of 16 December 1969, relating to the location, construction and funding of the permanent accommodation of the United Nations International School,

Noting that the School, which was first established on the premises of the United Nations at Lake Success in 1947, is now celebrating its sixtieth anniversary,

Noting also, as stated in its by-laws, that the "purposes of the School shall be to establish, operate and maintain, under the auspices of the United Nations, a school to promote and provide an international education conforming to the spirit and principles contained in the Charter of the United Nations for the children of persons officially connected with the United Nations, as well as for the children of other persons desirous of obtaining a similar education for their children and to promote educational activities of international character",

Noting further the role of the School as a factor in the recruitment and retention of international staff of the United Nations,

Recognizing that the School continues to make an indispensable contribution to the United Nations community by providing a suitable international education to successive generations of children from that community and others,

Recognizing also the high academic standards that the School has established as a premier international school recognized for its leadership in multicultural and multilingual education, and that it is a crucible of multi-ethnicity and multiculturalism which promotes the appreciation of diverse cultural capacities,

Noting that the School has embarked on much-needed renovation and improvement of its buildings and grounds that will update the facilities and add to the classroom space, which will greatly improve its educational capacities,

1. Congratulates the United Nations International School on its sixtieth anniversary;

2. Expresses its appreciation for the outstanding achievements of the School and for the valuable contribution it continues to make to the education and development of successive generations of children from the United Nations community;

3. Notes that the School is implementing a renovation programme to update and improve the facilities of the School;

4. Urges Member States and others in a position to do so to contribute generously to the Capital Development Fund of the School for the renovation programme, with a view to further enhancing international education and promoting multicultural interaction;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide to the School such assistance as appropriate in furtherance of its object and purposes.

UN Joint Staff Pension Fund

As at 31 December 2008, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund (UNJSPF) had 112,804 active participants, compared to 106,566 at the end of 2007 [YUN 2007, p. 1521]. The number of periodic payments in awards increased from 58,084 to 59,945: 20,550 retirement benefits; 13,653 early retirement benefits; 6,932 deferred retirement benefits; 9,538 widows' and widowers' benefits; 1,161 disability benefits; 8,072 child benefits; and 39 secondary dependants' benefits. The payroll for benefits in payment for the year ending 31 December 2008 increased by 11.8 per cent over the prior year to $1.6 billion. The total expenditure for benefits, administration and investment costs of $1.9 billion exceeded by $114 million contribution income, which increased from $1.7 billion to $1.8 billion (approximately 5.9 per cent). As at 31 December, the market value of UNJSPF amounted to $31 billion, as against $41.7 billion in 2007, representing a decrease of 25 per cent.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board (UNJSPB), which held its fifty-fifth session (Rome, Italy, 10–18 July) [A/63/9] to consider actuarial matters, including the twenty-ninth actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 2007; the management of the Fund's investments and reports on the investment strategy, policies, practices and performance for the biennium ending on 31 March 2008; the enterprise resource planning project: results of the study on the Integrated Pension Administration System project; overall review of the Fund's staffing and organizational structure: medium-term human resources plan; third management charter of the Fund (2008–2011); study on the impact of currency fluctuations on UNJSPF pension benefits; revised budget estimates for the 2008–2009 biennium; and the Board's 2002 recommendations relating to the benefit provisions of the Fund. The Board examined and noted the financial statements and schedules for the 2006–2007 biennium and considered the report of the Board of Auditors on the accounts and operations of the Fund, and a report from the Audit Committee of the Board.

Administrative and financial matters

UNJSPB, at its fifty-fifth session [A/63/9], recommended that the General Assembly approve the inclusion of contractual settlement provisions in the agreement with the Global Custodian of the Fund. In circumstances where a trade failed to settle owing to delays in transferring funds, the Global Custodian would lend the funds to the Fund at the standard bank interest rate in order to be in a position to effect the trade on the contracted settlement date.

UNJSPB also recommended an appropriation for the 2008–2009 biennium in the amount of $75,899,200 for revised administrative costs, $74,637,500 for revised investment costs and $72,700 for revised Pension Board expenses. The total budget for the biennium would increase by $2,204,000 to $153,199,100, or 1.5 per cent of the initially approved appropriation. Of that amount, $134,351,100 was chargeable to the principal of the Fund and $18,848,000 was the share borne by the United Nations under the cost-sharing arrangement.

The Board recommended approval of an amendment to the Fund's Regulations that would allow for the purchase of additional years of contributory service by part-time staff. The proposed amendment would contain strict limitations and would be monitored in the light of an experience review. The relevant amendment to the Regulations of the Fund was contained in annex XIV.

UNJSPB recommended the admission of the Special Tribunal for Lebanon to membership in the Fund, effective 1 January 2009.

In September [A/63/363], the Secretary-General presented the administrative and financial implications for the UN regular budget for the 2008–2009 biennium arising from the UNJSPF report (see above). In reviewing the revised budget estimates for the 2008–2009 biennium, UNJSPB had noted that no additional resources were requested for posts owing to the offsetting effect of recosting and adjustments related to the actual and projected vacancies for the biennium. In addition, it took note of the downward revision in the overall requirements under rental of premises, which resulted in a reduction of $150,600 in the amount apportioned to the United Nations under the cost-sharing arrangements. In the light of the Board's recommendation that $18,848,000 be the revised United Nations share under the cost-sharing arrangements, and the additional requirements for the administrative costs of the Fund for 2008–2009 as a result of implementation of the post adjustment multiplier for New York and the General Service salary scale effective 1 August, no revisions were being proposed to the United Nations share of $18,998,600 attributable to it. As a result, the current appropriation under section 1, Overall policymaking, direction and coordination, of the 2008–2009 programme budget would be maintained and the actual expenses reported in the context of the second performance report for the biennium.

ACABQ, in a November report [A/63/556], recommended approval of the Board's recommendation on the Fund's total budget for the biennium in the amount of $153.2 million. It encouraged the Fund to consult with the Chief Information Technology Officer on technical requirements of the integrated pension administration system.

In section IX of resolution 63/263 (see p. 1548) of 24 December, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to report on any additional requirements arising from the UNJSPB recommendations in the second performance report for the 2008–2009 biennium.

Pension fund investment

Report of Secretary-General. In September [A/C.5/63/2], the Secretary-General submitted a report on UNJSPF investments and steps and efforts undertaken to increase diversification. The report provided information on the management of the investments of the Fund during the period from 1 April 2006 to 31 March 2008 and on investment returns, diversification of investments and development-related investments. The market value of the Fund's assets increased to $40,588 million as at 31 March 2008, from $33,331 million the previous year, an increase of $7,256 million, or 21.8 per cent. The total investment return was 13.4 per cent for the year to 31 March 2007 and 8.1 per cent for the year to 31 March 2008. After adjustment by the United States consumer price index, those returns represented real rates of return of 10.3 per cent and 4 per cent, respectively. The total annualized rate of return for the biennium was, therefore, 10.7 per cent. After adjustment by the consumer price index, the real annualized rate of return for the biennium was 7.1 per cent. For the year ended 31 March 2008, the Fund outperformed the benchmarks with the return of 8.1 per cent versus the returns of 5.2 and 6.2 per cent of the new 60/31 and old 60/40 benchmarks, respectively. In terms of diversification, the fixed-income portfolio was invested in 16 different currencies; 11 per cent in United States dollars and 89 per cent in non-dollar currencies. In terms of geographical diversification, the portfolio was invested in 34 countries and seven supranational and regional institutions. As to geographical diversification, the proportion of the Fund invested in North America decreased to 36.3 per cent in March 2008, from 44.8 per cent in March 2006. Investments in Europe increased to 36 per cent from 32.4 per cent, while in Asia and the Pacific the proportion of investments increased to 20.4 per cent from 14.1 per cent during the same period. Direct and indirect investments in developing countries amounted to $3.9 billion, a 110 per cent increase from the previous year. Development-related investments accounted for some 12.6 per cent of the Fund's assets at book value.

During the turbulent markets of 2007, active management produced outperformance that added $1.033 billion to the portfolio, in excess of the benchmarks established by the Fund. With declining markets, active management continued through 31 March 2008 to provide outperformance that resulted in smaller losses than would have been experienced had indexation been implemented.

The Secretary-General concluded that the Pension Fund had performed steadily, in excess of its benchmarks. Given the economic strains in the world economy, the goal would be to focus on profitability and capital preservation through strengthened systems.

ACABQ report. ACABQ, in November [A/63/556], having considered the UNJSPB report (see p. 1633), acknowledged the positive developments in the management of the UNJSPF secretariat and recommended Assembly approval of the Board's proposals. It recommended that the Board continue to explore opportunities for investing in developing countries and countries with economies in transition. The Committee did not support the Board's recommendation that the Investment Management Service be given borrowing authority for "contractual" versus "actual" settlement of securities, given the absence of clear and compelling information on the conditions and terms of such authority. It recommended that the Board include such information in its next report to the Assembly. ACABQ shared the Board's concerns over asset allocations, and was of the view that investing in alternative asset classes (including real estate) in the current volatile market should be done cautiously.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/641], adopted resolution 63/252 without vote [agenda item 126].

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 55/224 of 23 December 2000, 57/286 of 20 December 2002, 59/269 of 23 December

2004, 61/240 of 22 December 2006 and 62/241 of 22 December 2007,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 2008 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, including the financial statements of the Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2007, the audit opinion and report of the Board of Auditors thereon, the information provided on the internal audits of the Fund and the observations of the Pension Board, the reports of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund and steps and efforts undertaken to increase the diversification and on the administrative and financial implications arising from the report of the Pension Board and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, and in particular the action taken by the Board as set out in chapter II.B of the report;

2. Notes that the report of the Board of Auditors on the accounts of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund for the biennium ended 31 December 2007 indicated that the financial statements presented fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Fund and that the transactions tested as part of the audit were, in all significant respects, in accordance with the Regulations and Rules of the Fund and legislative authority;

3. Endorses the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

I

Administrative arrangements, revised budget and longer-term objectives of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

4. Takes note of the information set out in paragraphs 180 to 197 of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the revised budget estimates for the biennium 2008–2009;

5. Approves the increase of 2,204,000 United States dollars in total additional resources for the biennium 2008–2009, noting that the revised estimates for the biennium would amount to a total appropriation of 153,199,100 dollars;

II

Benefit provisions

6. Endorses the decision taken by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board in 2007, in which it reaffirmed its earlier decision maintaining that the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund should determine entitlements to pension benefits, in particular under articles 34 and 35 of the Regulations of the Fund, which cover spousal benefits, in accordance with the personal status of a participant as recognized and reported to the Fund by the participant's employing organization, on the understanding that the final verification that the personal status has remained the same will be done by the Fund at the time of granting such pension benefits;

7. Approves the changes in the benefit provisions that would streamline the application of the relevant provisions governing family members or former family members under articles 35 bis, 35 ter and 36, as set out in annex XIV to the report of the Board;

8. Also approves the amendment to article 24 (b) of the Regulations of the Fund, as set out in annex XIV to the report of the Board, which would allow participants who return to active contributory service after a period of disability to count such periods of disability as contributory service without requiring the participant to pay contributions for that period;

9. Further approves the agreement of the Board to clarify that the scope of the revision in 2006 of article 24, concerning the elimination of the limitation on the right to restoration based on years of prior service, did not cover only those participants who had received a withdrawal settlement, but also those who had elected a deferred retirement benefit (full or partial) as long as no periodic benefit payments of their deferred benefit had been made, as set out in paragraphs 329 and 330 of the report of the Board, and as clarified in the technical amendments to the Regulations of the Fund, set out in annex XIV to the report of the Board;

III

Other matters

10. Welcomes the information that all the committees of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund had been presented and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board had approved a declaration of conflict of interest, which referred to the mandate and the focus of each committee and covered the status, conduct and accountability of the members of the Investments Committee, the Committee of Actuaries and the Audit Committee;

11. Decides, upon the affirmative recommendation of the Board, that the Special Tribunal for Lebanon shall be admitted as a new member organization of the Fund, effective 1 January 2009;

12. Emphasizes that the United Nations and other member organizations of the Fund should ensure the timely and accurate processing of documentation, including, inter alia, a certification that all suitable arrangements are in place to ensure that all debts to such organizations are paid in full, as required by the Fund for the payment of benefits;

13. Takes note of the information provided by the Fund on the status of the ongoing implementation of resolution 62/241 regarding the one-time, ex gratia, exceptional payment to retirees residing in Ecuador;

IV

Investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

14. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and steps and efforts undertaken to increase the diversification and the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, as set out in its report;

15. Approves the inclusion of contractual settlement provisions in the agreement with the Global Custodian of the Fund, under the strict terms and conditions and for the purposes recommended by the Representative of the Secretary-General and the Board, and upon legal terms and conditions in such agreement that maximize the protection of the legal interests of the Fund;

16. Welcomes the continued effort of the Secretary-General, as fiduciary for the investment of the assets of the Fund, to diversify its investments between developed markets and emerging markets, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that, under the current volatile market conditions, decisions concerning the investments of the Fund in any country should be implemented very cautiously, fully taking into account the four main criteria for investment, namely, safety, profitability, liquidity and convertibility.

By section IX of resolution 63/263 of 24 December (see p. 1548), the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report and requested him to report on any additional requirements arising from the Board's recommendations in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the 2008–2009 biennium.

On the same date, the Assembly decided that the item on the United Nations pension system would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Travel-related matters

Report of Secretary-General. In November, the Secretary-General submitted his biennial report on standards of accommodation for air travel [A/63/524], listing exceptions to those standards from 1 July 2006 to 30 June 2008 and comparative statistics for the two-year period ended 30 June 2006.

ACABQ report. In its report [A/63/715], ACABQ noted that the purely statistical presentation in the Secretary-General's report was of limited usefulness and recommended that future biennial reports on the issue contain an analysis of the reasons for the increases and/or decreases in the number of exceptions, taking into account such issues as industry trends and security requirements, as well as other matters. ACABQ also recommended that the comprehensive report requested for harmonizing standards of travel, on the basis of a review by CEB and specific proposals, should take into account the recommendations of the OIOS audit review under way. The Secretary-General's report should also contain an update on the status of the CEB review.

Administration of justice

New system of administration of justice

Report of Secretary-General (April). In response to General Assembly resolution 62/228 [YUN 2007, p. 1528], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/62/782] on the administration of justice. The report included additional information on categories of non-staff personnel, and provided further details on the functioning of the formal part of the system, encompassing the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. It also discussed transitional measures, including resource implications, which would be required to shift smoothly from the current internal justice system to the new system, established by Assembly resolution 61/261 [YUN 2007, p. 1525], which was expected to be in place by 1 January 2009.

The Secretary-General concluded that the approval by the Assembly of a new system for the administration of justice in the United Nations was a landmark decision and should not be viewed in isolation, but as an integral part of his quest for greater accountability. The statutes of the Dispute Tribunal and the Appeals Tribunal should be approved by the Assembly at the second part of its resumed sixty-second (2008) session to ensure that judges of both Tribunals could be elected and appointed sufficiently in advance of 1 January 2009. He urged the Assembly to decide on the transitional measures. Owing to the surge in new cases and a large backlog, extraordinary temporary measures would be necessary to ensure that the new system was allowed to function unadulterated by remnants of the old system. Decisions on transitional measures were also required so that arrangements could be made to issue relevant administrative instructions. He requested the Assembly to adopt the statutes of the Tribunals annexed to his report; approve the transitional measures of three ad litem judges, their travel and their related support staff for 2009, and the payment of remuneration to judges for the United Nations Administrative Tribunal for judgements made during the remainder of 2008; and appropriate $1,729,100 under the programme budget for the 2008–2009 biennium.

ACABQ report. In June [A/62/7/Add.39], ACABQ recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposal to transfer all pending cases to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal once the new system was in place; and the strengthening of the Dispute Tribunal through the addition of three ad litem judges for 12 months following the establishment of the Tribunal, with a view to clearing the backlog. While it understood that the Secretary-General's intention was to divide the caseload so that the burden of the backlog would not fall on one body, it recommended that, in allocating additional capacity, he should take into account the anticipated distribution of pending cases. With regard to the payment of an honorarium for judgements of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, the Assembly would have to decide if it wished to approve the payment of an honorarium in the event that the current system continued beyond 1 January 2009. ACABQ recommended appropriation of the resources requested by the Secretary-General for the proposed transitional measures, subject to the adoption by the Assembly of the statutes of the two Tribunals, the election and appointment of the judges and the Assembly's decision concerning the payment of an honorarium to the United Nations Administrative Tribunal judges. Should the introduction of the new system be delayed beyond 1 January 2009, resources required to continue the current system and to clear the backlog should be absorbed from within the provision for the administration of justice for the 2008–2009 biennium.

Communications. In a 29 April letter [A/C.5/62/27] to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly President transmitted a 24 April letter from the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Administration of Justice at the United Nations summarizing the preliminary observations made in the informal consultation on the draft statutes of the Tribunals.

The President of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, in an 18 July letter [A/63/253] to the General Assembly President, expressed concern about the absence of appropriate transitional measures in the draft statutes of the Tribunals. The Assembly was requested to give urgent consideration to transitional matters before it approved the draft statutes.

Report of Secretary-General (August). In response to General Assembly resolution 62/228 (YUN 2007, p. 1528), the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/314] on the administration of justice at the United Nations. The report addressed other requests made by the Assembly, including those concerning the delegation of authority on disciplinary matters; the conditions of service of judges in the new system of internal justice; mechanisms for the formal removal of judges; a staff-funded scheme for legal assistance for staff; and possible uses of ICT in the administration of justice system. He requested the Assembly's approval for the proposed course of action relating to the limited delegation of authority for disciplinary matters, and the proposed revisions to the Staff Regulations related to the introduction of the new system of administration of justice and the conditions of service of judges of the Dispute and Appeals Tribunals judges.

The Secretary-General concluded that the introduction of the new system of administration of justice was an important step in unifying the systems between the Secretariat and the separately administered UN funds and programmes. He stressed the importance of having the statutes of the Tribunals adopted, the judges appointed and amendments to the Staff Regulations approved, and to have a decision by Member States on his proposal for transitional measures as soon as possible, emphasizing that it was critical to put the basic elements of a functioning system in place by 1 January 2009. He called for the Assembly to take note of the proposal to grant limited delegation of authority for disciplinary measures in a phased manner, beginning with a select number of peacekeeping missions, and to approve the proposed conditions of service of the Dispute and Appeals Tribunals judges.

ACABQ report. In November [A/63/545], ACABQ noted that in view of delays, the new system of administration of justice would not be ready for implementation in January 2009. It emphasized that every effort should be made to complete the preparatory work required to implement the new system and recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General to update the timeline for its implementation. The timely appointment of an Executive Director of the Office of Administration of Justice was particularly important for providing the leadership to direct preparatory work. The Secretary-General should monitor and analyse the increasing trend in the number of disciplinary cases and keep the Assembly informed of any exceptional developments. The absence of explanation as to the underlying causes of the higher number of new disciplinary cases, as well as the variations in the time required to complete them, was of particular concern. ACABQ emphasized the need to address the backlog of disciplinary cases as a matter of urgency, using available resources as efficiently as possible. It emphasized the need to draw upon lessons learned and experiences gained in the exercise of delegation of authority and decentralization of activities and structures. It requested the Secretary-General to submit a new proposal to the Assembly, including a variety of options, with full costing. He should also discuss with the funds and programmes cost-sharing arrangements based on headcount, as originally envisaged, and conclude negotiations on that matter expeditiously. It further recommended approval of the Secretary-General's proposals regarding the compensation of judges and that consideration of the proposed revisions to staff regulations 10.1 and 11.1 be deferred.

Communication. In a 27 October letter [A/C.5/63/9] to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly President transmitted a 24 October letter from the Chairman of the Sixth (Legal) Committee drawing attention to specific issues related to the text of the draft statutes, including possible options relating to the draft statute of the Dispute Tribunal.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 24 December [meeting 74], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/63/642], adopted resolution 63/253 without vote [agenda item 129].

Administration of justice at the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 57/307 of 15 April 2003, 59/266 of 23 December 2004, 59/283 of 13 April 2005, 61/261 of 4 April 2007 and 62/228 of 22 December 2007, and its decisions 62/519 of 6 December 2007 and 63/531 of 11 December 2008,

Reaffirming the decision in paragraph 4 of its resolution 61/261 to establish a new, independent, transparent, professionalized, adequately resourced and decentralized system of administration of justice consistent with the relevant rules of international law and the principles of the rule of law and due process to ensure respect for the rights and obligations of staff members and the accountability of managers and staff members alike,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the administration of justice at the United Nations, on the activities of the Office of the Ombudsman and on the administration of justice in the Secretariat, including the outcome of the work of the Joint Appeals Board during 2006 and 2007 and statistics on the disposition of cases and work of the Panel of Counsel, the note by the Secretary-General on the administration of justice, including further information requested by the General Assembly, the letter dated 29 April 2008 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee, the letter dated 27 October 2008 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the administration of justice at the United Nations, on the activities of the Office of the Ombudsman and on the administration of justice in the Secretariat, including the outcome of the work of the Joint Appeals Board during 2006 and 2007 and statistics on the disposition of cases and work of the Panel of Counsel, the note by the Secretary-General on the administration of justice, including further information requested by the General Assembly, the letter dated 29 April 2008 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee, and the letter dated 27 October 2008 from the President of the General Assembly addressed to the Chairman of the Fifth Committee;

2. Reaffirms its resolutions 61/261 and 62/228 on the establishment of the new system of administration of justice;

3. Expresses its appreciation to staff members of the United Nations system who have participated in the system of administration of justice, including the joint disciplinary committees and the joint appeals boards;

4. Also expresses its appreciation to the former and present members and staff of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal for their work;

5. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

I

New system of administration of justice

6. Regrets the delays in the filling of posts established by the General Assembly in its resolution 62/228, and requests the Secretary-General to fill the posts as a matter of priority, in particular the post of the Executive Director of the Office of Administration of Justice;

7. Decides that interns, type II gratis personnel and volunteers (other than United Nations Volunteers) shall have the possibility of requesting an appropriate management evaluation but shall not have access to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal or to the United Nations Appeals Tribunal;

8. Recalls paragraphs 7 and 9 of its resolution 62/228, and its decision 63/531, by which the Ad Hoc Committee on the Administration of Justice at the United Nations would continue its work, and decides to revert to the issue of the scope of the system of administration of justice at its sixty-fifth session, with a view to ensuring that effective remedies are available to all categories of United Nations personnel, with due consideration given to the types of recourse that are the most appropriate to that end;

9. Commends the role that volunteers have traditionally played in representing employees in the dispute resolution process under the existing system;

10. Notes that some current and former United Nations staff have been reluctant to represent their fellow staff members in the dispute resolution process because of the burden that such service would place on them;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to provide incentives to encourage current and former staff to assist staff members in the dispute resolution process;

12. Decides that the role of professional legal staff in the Office of Staff Legal Assistance shall be to assist staff members and their volunteer representatives in processing claims through the formal system of administration of justice;

13. Recalls paragraph 13 of its resolution 62/228, in which it decided to establish the Office of Staff Legal Assistance to succeed the Panel of Counsel, and decides to revert to the mandate and functioning of that Office, including the participation of current and former staff as volunteers, at its sixty-fifth session;

14. Reiterates paragraph 24 of its resolution 61/261, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on proposals for a staff-funded scheme in the Organization that would provide legal assistance and support to staff;

15. Decides to revert to the issue of the possibility of staff associations filing applications before the Dispute Tribunal at its sixty-fifth session;

16. Recalls paragraph 55 of the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to work with staff associations to develop incentives to enable and encourage staff to continue to participate in the work of the Office of Staff Legal Assistance, including by providing volunteer professional legal counsel;

II

Informal system

17. Welcomes the steps taken by the Office of the Ombudsman towards the implementation of the new informal system as set out in resolution 62/228;

18. Reaffirms that the informal resolution of conflict is a crucial element of the system of administration of justice, and emphasizes that all possible use should be made of the informal system in order to avoid unnecessary litigation;

19. Decides that all persons who have access to the Office of the Ombudsman under the current system shall also have access to the new informal system;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to consider and make proposals at its sixty-fifth session for providing incentives for employees seeking dispute resolution to submit disputes to mediation under the auspices of the Office of the Ombudsman;

21. Recalls its request to the Secretary-General, contained in paragraph 67 (a) of its resolution 62/228, to report to it on the revised terms of reference for the Office of the Ombudsman, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the terms of reference and guidelines for the Mediation Division are promulgated as soon as possible;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to take advantage of existing mechanisms for conflict resolution and mediation, as deemed useful and appropriate, in order to facilitate a renewed dialogue between staff and management;

23. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to issue a joint report in 2009 for the entities covered by the integrated Office of the Ombudsman, taking into consideration the different legislative bodies that will receive the report;

24. Notes section V, on systemic issues, of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of the Office of the Ombudsman, and emphasizes that the role of the Ombudsman is to report on broad systemic issues that he or she identifies, as well as issues that are brought to his or her attention, in order to promote greater harmony in the workplace;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on specific measures taken to address systemic issues in the context of human resources management;

III

Formal system

26. Decides to adopt the statutes of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, as set out in annexes I and II to the present resolution;

27. Also decides that the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal shall be operational as of 1 July 2009;

28. Affirms that the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal shall not have any powers beyond those conferred under their respective statutes;

29. Notes article 7, paragraph 1, of the statute of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and article 6, paragraph 1 of the statute of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, requests the Secretary-General to submit, for approval, the rules of procedure of the Tribunals as soon as possible but no later than at its sixty-fourth session, and decides that until then the Tribunals may apply the rules of procedure on a provisional basis;

30. Approves the proposed conditions of service of the judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and United Nations Appeals Tribunal, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General;

31. Decides that the conditions of service referred to in paragraph 30 above shall be treated separately from the conditions of service of other judicial appointments in the United Nations system;

32. Also decides to carry out, at its sixty-fifth session, a review of the statutes of the Tribunals, in the light of experience gained, including on the efficiency of the overall functioning of the Tribunals, in particular regarding the number of judges and the panels of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal;

33. Recalls paragraph 49 of its resolution 62/228, and requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session a new detailed proposal, including a variety of options for delegation of authority for disciplinary measures, with full costing and a cost-benefit analysis, taking into account the recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

34. Also recalls paragraph 23 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to further clarify the role of the Department of Management of the Secretariat in the evaluation process, in order to ensure the appropriate independence of the Management Evaluation Unit, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

IV

Transitional measures

35. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the current formal system of administration of justice continues to function, as appropriate, until the completion of the transition to the new system;

36. Recalls paragraph 57 of its resolution 62/228, and in that context urges the Secretary-General to take the measures necessary to reduce the existing backlog;

37. Notes the refusal of some staff associations to participate in the joint appeals boards and the joint disciplinary committees, and authorizes the Secretary-General to obtain the assistance of other staff associations, including staff associations of the funds and programmes and at the various duty stations, in identifying staff members willing to serve on the joint appeals boards and/or joint disciplinary committees, in order to ensure that the current system continues to operate in an effective and timely manner;

38. Decides to abolish, as of 1 July 2009, the joint appeals boards, the joint disciplinary committees and the disciplinary committees of the separately administered funds and programmes;

39. Also decides that the terms of the members of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal that expire on 31 December 2008 shall be extended to 31 December 2009;

40. Authorizes honorariums for the members of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal as of 1 January 2009, in the amount of 1,500 United States dollars per case (1,000 dollars for the drafter and 250 dollars each for the other two signatories);

41. Acknowledges the need to clear the existing backlog of cases as soon as possible, requests the Secretary-General to coordinate with the United Nations Administrative Tribunal in order to hold Administrative Tribunal sessions in 2009 earlier than scheduled, and authorizes extension of the sessions by up to four weeks;

42. Decides that the United Nations Administrative Tribunal shall cease to accept new cases as of 1 July 2009;

43. Also decides to abolish the United Nations Administrative Tribunal as of 31 December 2009;

44. Further decides that all cases pending before the joint appeals boards, the joint disciplinary committees and the disciplinary committees shall be transferred, as from the abolishment of those bodies, to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal;

45. Decides that all cases from the United Nations and the separately administered funds and programmes pending before the United Nations Administrative Tribunal shall be transferred to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, as from the abolishment of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal;

46. Also decides that pending cases from the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and from organizations that have concluded a special agreement with the Secretary-General, according to article 2, paragraph 10, of the statute of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, or article 2, paragraph 5, of the statute of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, shall be transferred to the Appeals Tribunal or the Dispute Tribunal, as appropriate, as from the abolishment of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal;

47. Invites the United Nations Administrative Tribunal to consider cases from organizations that have concluded a special agreement under article 14 of its statute as a matter of priority, with a view to concluding those cases before its abolishment;

48. Decides that three ad litem judges shall be appointed by the General Assembly to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal;

49. Stresses that the three ad litem judges appointed to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal shall have all the powers conferred on the permanent judges of the Dispute Tribunal and shall be appointed only for a period of one year as of 1 July 2009;

50. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all entities that utilize the United Nations Administrative Tribunal pursuant to article 14 of its statute are notified that it will cease to accept new cases as of 1 July 2009, and that if those entities (with the exception of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund) wish to continue to participate in the internal justice system of the Organization they will need to negotiate new special agreements;

51. Invites the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to consider the new system of administration of justice as approved by the General Assembly;

V

Financial implications and cost-sharing arrangements

52. Recalls paragraphs 62 and 63 of its resolution 62/228, and requests the Secretary-General to conclude cost-sharing arrangements, based on headcount, with the relevant funds and programmes by 30 June 2009 and to report thereon;

53. Requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to meet any additional requirements relating to the decisions in section IV above within the existing appropriation and to report on the actual costs in the context of the second performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 2008–2009;

VI

Other issues

54. Recalls paragraph 14 of its resolution 59/283, and requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with existing rules and regulations, to pursue the financial liability of managers when the situation justifies such action;

55. Also recalls paragraph 69 of its resolution 62/228, reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that information concerning the details of the new system of administration of justice, in particular options for recourse, is readily accessible by all persons covered under the new system, and stresses that the information should clearly explain the roles of the various elements in the new system, as well as the process for bringing complaints;

56. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to provide the terms of reference of the Registries of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal as soon as possible;

57. Decides that for future appointments the Internal Justice Council shall not recommend more than one candidate from any one Member State for a judgeship on the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, or more than one candidate from any one Member State for a judgeship on the United Nations Appeals Tribunal;

58. Invites Member States, when electing judges to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and the United Nations Appeals Tribunal, to take due consideration of geographical distribution and gender balance;

59. Requests the Secretary-General to conduct a review of the new system of administration of justice and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

60. Decides that the sub-item entitled “Appointment of members of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal” of the item entitled “Appointments to fill vacancies in subsidiary organs and other appointments” shall be deleted from its agenda;

61. Approves revision of staff regulations 10.1 and 11.1, as proposed in paragraph 80 of the report of the Secretary-General, and decides to abolish staff regulations 10.2 and 11.2, with effect from the implementation of the new system of administration of justice on 1 July 2009.

ANNEX I

Statute of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal

Article 1

A tribunal is established by the present statute as the first instance of the two-tier formal system of administration of justice, to be known as the United Nations Dispute Tribunal.

Article 2

1. The Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an application filed by an individual, as provided for in article 3, paragraph 1, of the present statute, against the Secretary-General as the Chief Administrative Officer of the United Nations:

(a) To appeal an administrative decision that is alleged to be in non-compliance with the terms of appointment or the contract of employment. The terms “contract” and “terms of appointment” include all pertinent regulations and rules and all relevant administrative issuances in force at the time of alleged non-compliance;

(b) To appeal an administrative decision imposing a disciplinary measure;

(c) To enforce the implementation of an agreement reached through mediation pursuant to article 8, paragraph 2, of the present statute.

2. The Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an application filed by an individual requesting the Dispute Tribunal to suspend, during the pendency of the management evaluation, the implementation of a contested administrative decision that is the subject of an ongoing management evaluation, where the decision appears prima facie to be unlawful, in cases of particular urgency, and where its implementation would cause irreparable damage. The decision of the Dispute Tribunal on such an application shall not be subject to appeal.

3. The Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to permit or deny leave to an application to file a friend-of-the-court brief by a staff association.

4. The Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to permit an individual who is entitled to appeal the same administrative decision under paragraph 1 (a) of the present article to intervene in a matter brought by another staff member under the same paragraph.

5. The Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an application filed against a specialized agency brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Articles 57 and 63 of the Charter of the United Nations or other international organization or entity established by a treaty and participating in the common system of conditions of service, where a special agreement has been concluded between the agency, organization or entity concerned and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to accept the terms of the jurisdiction of the Dispute Tribunal, consonant with the present statute. Such special agreement shall provide that the agency, organization or entity concerned shall be bound by the judgements of the Dispute Tribunal and be responsible for the payment of any compensation awarded by the Dispute Tribunal in respect of its own staff members and shall include, inter alia, provisions concerning its participation in the administrative arrangements for the functioning of the Dispute Tribunal and concerning its sharing of the expenses of the Dispute Tribunal. Such special agreement shall also contain other provisions required for the Dispute Tribunal to carry out its functions vis-à-vis the agency, organization or entity.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Dispute Tribunal has competence under the present statute, the Dispute Tribunal shall decide on the matter.

7. As a transitional measure, the Dispute Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on:

(a) A case transferred to it from a joint appeals board or a joint disciplinary committee established by the United Nations, or from another similar body established by a separately administered fund or programme;

(b) A case transferred to it from the United Nations Administrative Tribunal; as decided by the General Assembly.

Article 3

1. An application under article 2, paragraph 1, of the present statute may be filed by:

(a) Any staff member of the United Nations, including the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes;

(b) Any former staff member of the United Nations, including the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes;

(c) Any person making claims in the name of an incapacitated or deceased staff member of the United Nations, including the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes.

2. A request for a suspension of action under article 2, paragraph 2, of the present statute may be filed by an individual, as provided for in paragraph 1 of the present article.

Article 4

1. The Dispute Tribunal shall be composed of three full-time judges and two half-time judges.

2. The judges shall be appointed by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Internal Justice Council in accordance with Assembly resolution 62/228. No two judges shall be of the same nationality. Due regard shall be given to geographical distribution and gender balance.

3. To be eligible for appointment as a judge, a person shall:

(a) Be of high moral character; and

(b) Possess at least 10 years of judicial experience in the field of administrative law, or the equivalent within one or more national jurisdictions.

4. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal shall be appointed for one non-renewable term of seven years. As a transitional measure, two of the judges (one full-time judge and one half-time judge) initially appointed, to be determined by drawing of lots, shall serve three years and may be reappointed to the same Dispute Tribunal for a further non-renewable term of seven years. A current or former judge of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal shall not be eligible to serve in the Dispute Tribunal.

5. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal appointed to replace a judge whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his or her predecessor's term, and may be reappointed for one non-renewable term of seven years, provided that the unexpired term is less than three years.

6. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal shall not be eligible for any appointment within the United Nations, except another judicial post, for a period of five years following his or her term of office.

7. The Dispute Tribunal shall elect a President.

8. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal shall serve in his or her personal capacity and enjoy full independence.

9. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal who has, or appears to have, a conflict of interest shall recuse himself or herself from the case. Where a party requests such recusal, the decision shall be taken by the President of the Dispute Tribunal.

10. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal may only be removed by the General Assembly in case of misconduct or incapacity.

11. A judge of the Dispute Tribunal may resign, by notifying the General Assembly through the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The resignation shall take effect from the date of notification, unless the notice of resignation specifies a later date.

Article 5

The three full-time judges of the Dispute Tribunal shall exercise their functions in New York, Geneva and Nairobi, respectively. However, the Dispute Tribunal may decide to hold sessions at other duty stations, as required by its caseload.

Article 6

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall make the administrative arrangements necessary for the functioning of the Dispute Tribunal, including provisions for the travel and related costs of staff whose physical presence before the Dispute Tribunal is deemed necessary by the Dispute Tribunal and for judges to travel as necessary to hold sessions at other duty stations.

2. The Registries of the Dispute Tribunal shall be established in New York, Geneva and Nairobi, each consisting of a Registrar and such other staff as necessary.

3. The expenses of the Dispute Tribunal shall be borne by the United Nations.

4. Compensation ordered by the Dispute Tribunal shall be paid by the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes, as applicable and appropriate, or by the specialized agency, organization or entity that has accepted the jurisdiction of the Dispute Tribunal.

Article 7

1. Subject to the provisions of the present statute, the Dispute Tribunal shall establish its own rules of procedure, which shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. The rules of procedure of the Dispute Tribunal shall include provisions concerning:

(a) Organization of work;

(b) Presentation of submissions and the procedure to be followed in respect thereto;

(c) Procedures for maintaining the confidentiality and inadmissibility of verbal or written statements made during the mediation process;

(d) Intervention by persons not party to the case whose rights may be affected by the judgement;

(e) Oral hearings;

(f) Publication of judgements;

(g) Functions of the Registries;

(h) Procedure for summary dismissal;

(i) Evidentiary procedure;

(j) Suspension of implementation of contested administrative decisions;

(k) Procedure for the recusal of judges;

(l) Other matters relating to the functioning of the Dispute Tribunal.

Article 8

1. An application shall be receivable if:
  - (a) The Dispute Tribunal is competent to hear and pass judgement on the application, pursuant to article 2 of the present statute;
  - (b) An applicant is eligible to file an application, pursuant to article 3 of the present statute;
  - (c) An applicant has previously submitted the contested administrative decision for management evaluation, where required; and
  - (d) The application is filed within the following deadlines:
    - (i) In cases where a management evaluation of the contested decision is required:
      - a. Within 90 calendar days of the applicant's receipt of the response by management to his or her submission; or
      - b. Within 90 calendar days of the expiry of the relevant response period for the management evaluation if no response to the request was provided. The response period shall be 30 calendar days after the submission of the decision to management evaluation for disputes arising at Headquarters and 45 calendar days for other offices;
    - (ii) In cases where a management evaluation of the contested decision is not required, within 90 calendar days of the applicant's receipt of the administrative decision;
    - (iii) The deadlines provided for in subparagraphs (d) (i) and (ii) of the present paragraph shall be extended to one year if the application is filed by any person making claims in the name of an incapacitated or deceased staff member of the United Nations, including the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes;
    - (iv) Where the parties have sought mediation of their dispute within the deadlines for the filing of an application under subparagraph (d) of the present paragraph, but did not reach an agreement, the application is filed within 90 calendar days after the mediation has broken down in accordance with the procedures laid down in the terms of reference of the Mediation Division.
2. An application shall not be receivable if the dispute arising from the contested administrative decision had been resolved by an agreement reached through mediation. However, an applicant may file an application to enforce the implementation of an agreement reached through mediation, which shall be receivable if the agreement has not been implemented and the application is filed within 90 calendar days after the last day for the implementation as specified in the mediation agreement or, when the mediation agreement is silent on the matter, after the thirtieth day from the date of the signing of the agreement.
3. The Dispute Tribunal may decide in writing, upon written request by the applicant, to suspend or waive the deadlines for a limited period of time and only in exceptional cases. The Dispute Tribunal shall not suspend or waive the deadlines for management evaluation.

4. Notwithstanding paragraph 3 of the present article, an application shall not be receivable if it is filed more than three years after the applicant's receipt of the contested administrative decision.

5. The filing of an application shall not have the effect of suspending the implementation of the contested administrative decision.

6. An application and other submissions shall be filed in any of the official languages of the United Nations.

Article 9

1. The Dispute Tribunal may order production of documents or such other evidence as it deems necessary.
2. The Dispute Tribunal shall decide whether the personal appearance of the applicant or any other person is required at oral proceedings and the appropriate means for satisfying the requirement of personal appearance.
3. The oral proceedings of the Dispute Tribunal shall be held in public unless the Dispute Tribunal decides, at its own initiative or at the request of either party, that exceptional circumstances require the proceedings to be closed.

Article 10

1. The Dispute Tribunal may suspend proceedings in a case at the request of the parties for a time to be specified by it in writing.
2. At any time during the proceedings, the Dispute Tribunal may order an interim measure, which is without appeal, to provide temporary relief to either party, where the contested administrative decision appears prima facie to be unlawful, in cases of particular urgency, and where its implementation would cause irreparable damage. This temporary relief may include an order to suspend the implementation of the contested administrative decision, except in cases of appointment, promotion or termination.
3. At any time during the deliberations, the Dispute Tribunal may propose to refer the case to mediation. With the consent of the parties, it shall suspend the proceedings for a time to be specified by it. If a mediation agreement is not reached within this period of time, the Dispute Tribunal shall continue with its proceedings unless the parties request otherwise.
4. Prior to a determination of the merits of a case, should the Dispute Tribunal find that a relevant procedure prescribed in the Staff Regulations and Rules or applicable administrative issuances has not been observed, the Dispute Tribunal may, with the concurrence of the Secretary-General of the United Nations, remand the case for institution or correction of the required procedure, which, in any case, should not exceed three months. In such cases, the Dispute Tribunal may order the payment of compensation for procedural delay to the applicant for such loss as may have been caused by such procedural delay, which is not to exceed the equivalent of three months' net base salary.
5. As part of its judgement, the Dispute Tribunal may order one or both of the following:
  - (a) Rescission of the contested administrative decision or specific performance, provided that, where the contested administrative decision concerns appointment, promotion or termination, the Dispute Tribunal shall also set an amount of compensation that the respondent may elect to pay as an alternative to the rescission of the contested administrative decision or specific performance ordered, subject to subparagraph (b) of the present paragraph;

(b) Compensation, which shall normally not exceed the equivalent of two years' net base salary of the applicant. The Dispute Tribunal may, however, in exceptional cases order the payment of a higher compensation and shall provide the reasons for that decision.

6. Where the Dispute Tribunal determines that a party has manifestly abused the proceedings before it, it may award costs against that party.

7. The Dispute Tribunal shall not award exemplary or punitive damages.

8. The Dispute Tribunal may refer appropriate cases to the Secretary-General of the United Nations or the executive heads of separately administered United Nations funds and programmes for possible action to enforce accountability.

9. Cases before the Dispute Tribunal shall normally be considered by a single judge. However, the President of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal may, within seven calendar days of a written request by the President of the Dispute Tribunal, authorize the referral of a case to a panel of three judges of the Dispute Tribunal, when necessary, by reason of the particular complexity or importance of the case. Cases referred to a panel of three judges shall be decided by a majority vote.

Article 11

1. The judgements of the Dispute Tribunal shall be issued in writing and shall state the reasons, facts and law on which they are based.

2. The deliberations of the Dispute Tribunal shall be confidential.

3. The judgements of the Dispute Tribunal shall be binding upon the parties, but are subject to appeal in accordance with the statute of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal. In the absence of such appeal, they shall be executable following the expiry of the time provided for appeal in the statute of the Appeals Tribunal.

4. The judgements of the Dispute Tribunal shall be drawn up in any of the official languages of the United Nations, in two originals, which shall be deposited in the archives of the United Nations.

5. A copy of the judgement shall be communicated to each party in the case. The applicant shall receive a copy in the language in which the application was submitted unless he or she requests a copy in another official language of the United Nations.

6. The judgements of the Dispute Tribunal shall be published, while protecting personal data, and made generally available by the Registry of the Tribunal.

Article 12

1. Either party may apply to the Dispute Tribunal for a revision of an executable judgement on the basis of the discovery of a decisive fact which was, at the time the judgement was rendered, unknown to the Dispute Tribunal and to the party applying for revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence. The application must be made within 30 calendar days of the discovery of the fact and within one year of the date of the judgement.

2. Clerical or arithmetical mistakes, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the Dispute Tribunal, either on its own motion or on the application of any of the parties.

3. Either party may apply to the Dispute Tribunal for an interpretation of the meaning or the scope of the final judgement, provided that it is not under consideration by the Appeals Tribunal.

4. Once a judgement is executable under article 11, paragraph 3, of the present statute, either party may apply to the Dispute Tribunal for an order for execution of the judgement if the judgement requires execution within a certain period of time and such execution has not been carried out.

Article 13

The present statute may be amended by decision of the General Assembly.

ANNEX II

Statute of the United Nations Appeals Tribunal

Article 1

A tribunal is established by the present statute as the second instance of the two-tier formal system of administration of justice, to be known as the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.

Article 2

1. The Appeals Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an appeal filed against a judgement rendered by the United Nations Dispute Tribunal in which it is asserted that the Dispute Tribunal has:

- (a) Exceeded its jurisdiction or competence;
- (b) Failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in it;
- (c) Erred on a question of law;
- (d) Committed an error in procedure, such as to affect the decision of the case; or
- (e) Erred on a question of fact, resulting in a manifestly unreasonable decision.

2. An appeal may be filed by either party (i.e., the applicant, a person making claims in the name of an incapacitated or deceased applicant, or the respondent) to a judgement of the Dispute Tribunal.

3. The Appeals Tribunal may affirm, reverse, modify or remand the judgement of the Dispute Tribunal. It may also issue all orders necessary or appropriate in aid of its jurisdiction and consonant with the present statute.

4. In cases of appeal under paragraph 1 (e) of the present article, the Appeals Tribunal shall be competent:

- (a) To affirm, reverse or modify findings of fact of the Dispute Tribunal on the basis of substantial evidence in the written record; or
- (b) To remand the case to the Dispute Tribunal for additional findings of fact, subject to paragraph 5 of the present article, if it determines that further findings of fact are necessary.

5. In exceptional circumstances, and where the Appeals Tribunal determines that the facts are likely to be established with documentary evidence, including written testimony, it may receive such additional evidence if that is in the interest of justice and the efficient and expeditious resolution of the proceedings. Where this is not the case, or where the Appeals Tribunal determines that a decision cannot be taken without oral testimony or other forms of non-written evidence, it shall remand the case to the Dispute Tribunal. The evidence under this paragraph shall not include evidence that was known to either party and should have been presented at the level of the Dispute Tribunal.

6. Where the Appeals Tribunal remands a case to the Dispute Tribunal, it may order that the case be considered by a different judge of the Dispute Tribunal.

7. For the purposes of the present article, "written record" means anything that has been entered in the formal record of the Dispute Tribunal, including submissions, evidence, testimony, motions, objections, rulings and the judgement, and any evidence received in accordance with paragraph 5 of the present article.

8. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Appeals Tribunal has competence under the present statute, the Appeals Tribunal shall decide on the matter.

9. The Appeals Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an appeal of a decision of the Standing Committee acting on behalf of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, alleging non-observance of the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, submitted by:

(a) Any staff member of a member organization of the Pension Fund which has accepted the jurisdiction of the Appeals Tribunal in Pension Fund cases who is eligible under article 21 of the regulations of the Fund as a participant in the Fund, even if his or her employment has ceased, and any person who has acceded to such staff member's rights upon his or her death;

(b) Any other person who can show that he or she is entitled to rights under the regulations of the Pension Fund by virtue of the participation in the Fund of a staff member of such member organization. In such cases, remands, if any, shall be to the Standing Committee acting on behalf of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board.

10. The Appeals Tribunal shall be competent to hear and pass judgement on an application filed against a specialized agency brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Articles 57 and 63 of the Charter of the United Nations or other international organization or entity established by a treaty and participating in the common system of conditions of service, where a special agreement has been concluded between the agency, organization or entity concerned and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to accept the terms of the jurisdiction of the Appeals Tribunal, consonant with the present statute. Such special agreement shall provide that the agency, organization or entity concerned shall be bound by the judgements of the Appeals Tribunal and be responsible for the payment of any compensation awarded by the Appeals Tribunal in respect of its own staff members and shall include, inter alia, provisions concerning its participation in the administrative arrangements for the functioning of the Appeals Tribunal and concerning its sharing of the expenses of the Appeals Tribunal. Such special agreement shall also contain other provisions required for the Appeals Tribunal to carry out its functions vis-a-vis the agency, organization or entity. Such special agreement may only be concluded if the agency, organization or entity utilizes a neutral first instance process that includes a written record and a written decision providing reasons, fact and law. In such cases remands, if any, shall be to the first instance process of the agency, organization or entity.

Article 3

1. The Appeals Tribunal shall be composed of seven judges.

2. The judges shall be appointed by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Internal Justice Council in accordance with General Assembly resolution 62/228. No two judges shall be of the same nationality. Due regard shall be given to geographical distribution and gender balance.

3. To be eligible for appointment as a judge, a person shall:

(a) Be of high moral character; and

(b) Possess at least 15 years of judicial experience in the field of administrative law, or the equivalent within one or more national jurisdictions.

4. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal shall be appointed for one non-renewable term of seven years. As a transitional measure, three of the judges initially appointed, to be determined by drawing of lots, shall serve three years and may be reappointed to the same Appeals Tribunal for a further non-renewable term of seven years. A current or former judge of the Dispute Tribunal shall not be eligible to serve in the Appeals Tribunal.

5. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal appointed to replace a judge whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his or her predecessor's term and may be reappointed for one non-renewable term of seven years, provided that the unexpired term is less than three years.

6. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal shall not be eligible for any appointment within the United Nations, except another judicial post, for a period of five years following his or her term of office.

7. The Appeals Tribunal shall elect a President and two Vice-Presidents.

8. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal shall serve in his or her personal capacity and enjoy full independence.

9. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal who has, or appears to have, a conflict of interest shall recuse himself or herself from the case. Where a party requests such recusal, the decision shall be taken by the President of the Appeals Tribunal.

10. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal may only be removed by the General Assembly in case of misconduct or incapacity.

11. A judge of the Appeals Tribunal may resign, by notifying the General Assembly through the Secretary-General of the United Nations. The resignation shall take effect from the date of notification, unless the notice of resignation specifies a later date.

Article 4

1. The Appeals Tribunal shall exercise its functions in New York. However, it may decide to hold sessions in Geneva or Nairobi, as required by its caseload.

2. The Appeals Tribunal shall hold ordinary sessions at dates to be fixed by its rules of procedure, subject to the determination of its President that there is a sufficient number of cases to justify holding the session.

3. Extraordinary sessions may be convoked by the President, as required by the caseload.

Article 5

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall make the administrative arrangements necessary for the functioning of the Appeals Tribunal, including provisions for the travel and related costs of staff whose physical presence before the Appeals Tribunal is deemed necessary by the Appeals Tribunal and for judges to travel as necessary to hold sessions in Geneva and Nairobi.

2. The Registry of the Appeals Tribunal shall be established in New York. It shall consist of a Registrar and such other staff as necessary.

3. The expenses of the Appeals Tribunal shall be borne by the United Nations.

4. Compensation ordered by the Appeals Tribunal shall be paid by the United Nations Secretariat or separately administered United Nations funds and programmes, as applicable and appropriate, or by the specialized agency, organization or entity that has accepted the jurisdiction of the Appeals Tribunal.

Article 6

1. Subject to the provisions of the present statute, the Appeals Tribunal shall establish its own rules of procedure, which shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. The rules of procedure of the Appeals Tribunal shall include provisions concerning:

- (a) Election of the President and Vice-Presidents;
- (b) Composition of the Appeals Tribunal for its sessions;
- (c) Organization of work;
- (d) Presentation of submissions and the procedure to be followed in respect thereto;
- (e) Procedures for maintaining the confidentiality and inadmissibility of verbal or written statements made during the mediation process;
- (f) Intervention by persons not party to the case whose rights may have been affected by the judgement of the Dispute Tribunal and whose rights might therefore also be affected by the judgement of the Appeals Tribunal;
- (g) The filing of friend-of-court briefs, upon motion and with the permission of the Appeals Tribunal;
- (h) Oral proceedings;
- (i) Publication of judgements;
- (j) Functions of the Registry;
- (k) Procedure for the recusal of judges;
- (l) Other matters relating to the functioning of the Appeals Tribunal.

Article 7

1. An appeal shall be receivable if:

(a) The Appeals Tribunal is competent to hear and pass judgement on the appeal, pursuant to article 2, paragraph 1, of the present statute;

(b) The appellant is eligible to file the appeal, pursuant to article 2, paragraph 2, of the present statute; and

(c) The appeal is filed within 45 calendar days of the receipt of the judgement of the Dispute Tribunal or, where the Appeals Tribunal has decided to waive or suspend that deadline in accordance with paragraph 3 of the present article, within the period specified by the Appeals Tribunal.

2. For purposes of applications alleging non-observance of the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund arising out of a decision of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, an application shall be receivable if filed within 90 calendar days of receipt of the Board's decision.

3. The Appeals Tribunal may decide in writing, upon written request by the applicant, to suspend or waive the deadlines for a limited period of time and only in exceptional cases. The Appeals Tribunal shall not suspend or waive the deadlines for management evaluation.

4. Notwithstanding paragraph 3 of the present article, an application shall not be receivable if it is filed more than one year after the judgement of the Dispute Tribunal.

5. The filing of appeals shall have the effect of suspending the execution of the judgement contested.

6. An appeal and other submissions shall be filed in any of the official languages of the United Nations.

Article 8

1. The Appeals Tribunal may order production of documents or such other evidence as it deems necessary, subject to article 2 of the present statute.

2. The Appeals Tribunal shall decide whether the personal appearance of the appellant or any other person is required at oral proceedings and the appropriate means to achieve that purpose.

3. The judges assigned to a case will determine whether to hold oral proceedings.

4. The oral proceedings of the Appeals Tribunal shall be held in public unless the Appeals Tribunal decides, at its own initiative or at the request of either party, that exceptional circumstances require the proceedings to be closed.

Article 9

1. The Appeals Tribunal may order one or both of the following:

(a) Rescission of the contested administrative decision or specific performance, provided that, where the contested administrative decision concerns appointment, promotion or termination, the Appeals Tribunal shall also set an amount of compensation that the respondent may elect to pay as an alternative to the rescission of the contested administrative decision or specific performance ordered, subject to subparagraph (b) of the present paragraph;

(b) Compensation, which shall normally not exceed the equivalent of two years' net base salary of the applicant. The Appeals Tribunal may, however, in exceptional cases order the payment of a higher compensation and shall provide the reasons for that decision.

2. Where the Appeals Tribunal determines that a party has manifestly abused the appeals process, it may award costs against that party.

3. The Appeals Tribunal shall not award exemplary or punitive damages.

4. At any time during the proceedings, the Appeals Tribunal may order an interim measure to provide temporary relief to either party to prevent irreparable harm and to maintain consistency with the judgement of the Dispute Tribunal.

5. The Appeals Tribunal may refer appropriate cases to the Secretary-General of the United Nations or executive heads of separately administered United Nations funds and programmes for possible action to enforce accountability.

Article 10

1. Cases before the Appeals Tribunal shall normally be reviewed by a panel of three judges and shall be decided by a majority vote.

2. Where the President or any two judges sitting on a particular case consider that the case raises a significant question of law, at any time before judgement is rendered, the case may be referred for consideration by the whole Appeals Tribunal. A quorum in such cases shall be five judges.

3. The judgements of the Appeals Tribunal shall be issued in writing and shall state the reasons, facts and law on which they are based.

4. The deliberations of the Appeals Tribunal shall be confidential.

5. The judgements of the Appeals Tribunal shall be binding upon the parties.

6. The judgements of the Appeals Tribunal shall be final and without appeal, subject to the provisions of article 11 of the present statute.

7. The judgements of the Appeals Tribunal shall be drawn up in any of the official languages of the United Nations, in two originals, which shall be deposited in the archives of the United Nations.

8. A copy of the judgement shall be communicated to each party in the case. The applicant shall receive a copy in the language in which the appeal was submitted unless he or she requests a copy in another official language of the United Nations.

9. The judgements of the Appeals Tribunal shall be published, while protecting personal data, and made generally available by the Registry of the Tribunal.

Article 11

1. Subject to article 2 of the present statute, either party may apply to the Appeals Tribunal for a revision of a judgement on the basis of the discovery of a decisive fact which was, at the time the judgement was rendered, unknown to the Appeals Tribunal and to the party applying for revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence. The application must be made within 30 calendar days of the discovery of the fact and within one year of the date of the judgement.

2. Clerical or arithmetical mistakes, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the Appeals Tribunal, either on its own motion or on the application of any of the parties.

3. Either party may apply to the Appeals Tribunal for an interpretation of the meaning or scope of the judgement.

4. Where the judgement requires execution within a certain period of time and such execution has not been carried out, either party may apply to the Appeals Tribunal for an order for execution of the judgement.

Article 12

The present statute may be amended by decision of the General Assembly.

Also on 24 December, the Assembly decided that the agenda item on the administration of justice at the United Nations would remain for consideration during its resumed sixty-third (2009) session (decision 63/552).

Ad Hoc Committee

In preparation for the meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Administration of Justice at the United Nations scheduled for April (see below), the Secretary-General, in a March note [A/62/748 & Corr.1], in response to General Assembly decision 62/519 [YUN 2007, p. 1528], set out his responses to the Sixth Committee's requests for information, as well as the discussion on the draft statutes of the Dispute and the Appeals Tribunals, which incorporated the input provided by staff representatives through the contact group on the administration of justice in annexes I and II, respectively, to the note.

The first session of the Ad Hoc Committee (New York, 10-18, and 21 and 24 April) [A/63/55], discussed the two draft statutes, including scope ratione personae of the new system of the administration of justice, appointment, composition, jurisdiction and powers of the tribunals, and legal assistance.

The Ad Hoc Committee recommend that, at the Assembly's sixty-third (2008) session, its Sixth Committee should establish a working group to finalize the draft statutes of the Tribunals as a priority, bearing in mind the Assembly's decision to establish a two-tier formal system of administration of justice as from 1 January 2009, and continue the discussion of the other legal aspects of the administration of justice at the United Nations.

Communications. On 29 April [A/C.5/62/27], the General Assembly President drew to the attention of the Chairman of the Fifth Committee a 24 April letter from the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee on the informal consultations held during the Committee's session on the basis of the Secretary-General's March note (above), and the coordinator's summary of the preliminary observations made during those consultations on the draft statutes.

On 9 July [A/62/914], Germany, in a letter to the General Assembly President, said that informal discussions on the two draft statutes were held in May and June, coordinated by Germany, the results of which were contained in a paper by the coordinator, which updated the earlier paper annexed to the Ad Hoc Committee's April report (see above). Germany requested the re-establishment of the Committee for one meeting to take note of the coordinator's oral report on the informal inter-sessional consultations and to request the Secretary-General to issue the coordinator's summary as an addendum to the Ad Hoc Committee's report.

By decision 62/551 of 28 July, the Assembly re-established the Ad Hoc Committee and requested the Secretary-General to issue the coordinator's summary as an addendum to the Ad Hoc Committee's report.

By decision 63/531 of 11 December, the Assembly decided that the Ad Hoc Committee would continue its work on the outstanding legal aspects of the administration of justice at the United Nations. It would meet from 20 to 24 April 2009 and report on its work to the Assembly at its sixty-fourth (2009) session.

Joint Appeals Board

In response to General Assembly resolution 55/258 [YUN 2001, p. 1337], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/211] on the outcome of the work of the Joint Appeals Board (JAB) in New York, Geneva, Vienna and Nairobi for 2007. The report also compared 2007 and 2006 data and, in response to Assembly resolution 57/307 [YUN 2003, p. 1459], provided statistics on the disposition of cases and information on the work of the Panel of Counsel.

The Secretary-General observed that 177 appeals and suspension-of-action cases were filed with JAB in those duty stations in 2007, as compared to 152 in the previous year; JAB disposed of 181 cases, compared to 140 in 2006. Regarding disciplinary cases, which were accorded priority, 32 such cases were referred to the New York Joint Disciplinary Committee, which disposed of 21 of those cases; the Geneva Committee received seven new cases and disposed of 17; the Nairobi Committee considered one case; and no cases were submitted to the Vienna Committee. In 2007, the Secretary-General accepted fully or partially 143 (or 88 per cent) of unanimous JAB decisions, compared to 83 in 2006, and rejected 20 (12 per cent), compared to 16 (16 per cent) in 2006. In 2007, 339 cases were brought to the Panel of Counsel in New York, compared with 294 in 2006, an increase of 15.31 per cent. Of those cases, 240 (70.8 per cent) went through the formal appeals process and 99 (29.2 per cent) were dealt with informally.

Office of Ombudsman

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/283 [YUN 2005, p. 1529], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/63/283] on the activities of the United Nations Ombudsman covering the period from 1 August 2007 to 31 July 2008, which reviewed transitional measures being developed regarding the establishment of a single integrated and decentralized office.

During the reporting period, 670 new cases were opened—almost 56 each month. Men initiating cases outnumbered women 52 per cent to 47 per cent, while groups constituted 1 per cent. The most important issues raised by staff related to promotion or career considerations (23 per cent of all cases), followed by interpersonal conflicts, conditions of service, entitlements, separation and termination, and standards of conduct. In over half of the cases, the assistance provided by the Office involved coaching and helping staff to explore options and solutions to work-related problems. Direct action by the Ombudsman to resolve problems was undertaken in 28 per cent of cases, while referral to other offices and direct mediation was provided in 9 and 2 per cent of cases, respectively.

ACABQ report. In a November report [A/63/545], ACABQ said that the Secretary-General should report regularly to the General Assembly on actions taken to address the findings of the Ombudsman on systemic issues. It noted with concern the comments of the Ombudsman about the lack of clarity and overlap in the role of the Office of the Ombudsman and that of other offices, such as the Ethics Office. It urged the Secretary-General to clarify the roles and responsibilities of both Offices, and recommended that he ensure the expeditious issuance of the updated information circular on conflict resolution in the Secretariat [ST/IC/2004/4]. It urged the Ombudsman to complete the revision of the terms of reference of that Office and to issue those terms as rapidly as possible. ACABQ said that it would be helpful if future reports on the activities of the Ombudsman included monthly data and analysis for the current period, as well as statistical information on cases and analysis of data and trends over a five-year period or longer. Consideration should be given to ways of measuring the effectiveness of the Ombudsman interventions. The report should also provide indicators that would allow an assessment of progress towards such goals. ACABQ encouraged the Ombudsman to elaborate on statistics and data in the report by providing descriptive material based on actual work performed, without prejudicing staff confidentiality.

Systemic human resources issues

In response to General Assembly resolution 62/228 [YUN 2007, p. 1528], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/63/132] on specific measures taken by the administration to address seven systemic human resources issues raised in the context of the reform of the internal system of the administration of justice in his 2007 report of the activities of the Ombudsman [YUN 2007, p. 1533]. Those issues included: the staff selection system; mobility; locally recruited staff; contractual practices; special entities established by the United Nations; staff welfare; and coverage for psychological care.

The Secretary-General recognized that many of the issues included in the report on the activities of the Ombudsman were under review internally and would result in proposals to the Assembly; others were already before the Assembly or were in need of further consideration. Furthermore, he intended to ask the Office of the Ombudsman, the Office of Human Resources Management and the Departments of Political Affairs, Peacekeeping Operations and Field Support to intensify their communication strategies with the staff of the entire Organization.

Criminal behaviour and disciplinary action

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/287 [YUN 2005, p. 1474], the Secretary-General transmitted a July report [A/63/202] on disciplinary matters and possible criminal behaviour, covering the period from 1 July 2007 to 30 June 2008. The report provided information on the disciplinary and/or legal action taken in cases of established misconduct and/or criminal behaviour. It reviewed the administrative machinery in disciplinary matters and summarized cases for which a disciplinary measure was imposed by the Secretary-General, most of which related to abuse of authority/harassment; gross negligence; fraud/misrepresentation; theft/misappropriation; sexual exploitation and abuse; computer-related misconduct; and conflict of interest.

In response to resolution 62/63 [YUN 2007, p. 102], the Secretary-General transmitted an August report [A/63/260 & Add.1] on criminal accountability of UN officials and experts on mission, which the General Assembly acted on in resolution 63/119 of 11 December (see p. 98).

As requested in Assembly resolution 62/247 (see p. 1576), the Secretary-General transmitted an August report [A/63/331] on the practices relating to the sharing of information between the UN and law enforcement authorities, as well as referrals of possible criminal cases related to UN staff and officials and experts on mission. The two principal situations in which information was passed between the Organization and law enforcement authorities were: when the Organization, through its own investigations, had uncovered prima facie evidence of potential criminal conduct within the jurisdiction of a Member State and decided to refer that evidence to the Member State for appropriate action; and when the Organization had been approached by a Member State for access to information or material and/or witnesses in the context of an external investigation by law enforcement authorities and/or criminal proceedings being conducted by the Member State.

The Secretary-General stated that overall the United Nations had not experienced any problems in its cooperation with the law enforcement authorities of Member States in sharing information or material for criminal investigations. There had been a significant increase in the number of requests made to the Organization from law enforcement authorities of Member States for information or material. The United Nations was currently cooperating with law enforcement authorities in 65 jurisdictions of 28 Member States.

ACABQ report. In an October report [A/63/492], ACABQ stated that the information-sharing practices between the UN and national law enforcement authorities, as well as referrals of possible criminal cases related to UN staff and officials and experts on mission, were extremely important issues that went to the heart of the independence of the international civil service and the ability of other UN officials to carry out their duties effectively, including accountability for personal conduct. Noting that the issues dealt with in the Secretary-General's report had administrative and legal implications, affecting UN officials in duty stations all over the world, ACABQ said that the procedures for such cooperation with host countries, in particular in situations involving requests for waivers of immunity, should be consistent and transparent.

UN Administrative Tribunal

In its annual note to the General Assembly [A/INF/63/5], the seven-member United Nations Administrative Tribunal reported, through the Secretary-General, that it had delivered 62 judgements in 2008, relating to cases brought by staff against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other UN bodies concerning disputes involving terms of appointment and other issues. It also drew the Assembly's attention to cases that merited special attention. The Tribunal met in plenary in New York on 21 November and held three panel sessions (New York, 21 April–2 May; Geneva, 23 June–25 July; and New York, 27 October–26 November).

NOTES

<sup>2</sup> The Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was an original Member of the United Nations, the Charter having been signed on its behalf on 26 June 1945 and ratified 19 October 1945, until its dissolution following the establishment and subsequent admission, as new Members, of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia, the Republic of Slovenia, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia were admitted as Members of the United Nations on 22 May 1992. On 8 April 1993, the General Assembly decided to admit as a Member of the United Nations the state provisionally referred to for all purposes within the United Nations as "The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia", pending settlement of the difference that had arisen over its name. The Federal Republic of Yugoslavia was admitted as a Member of the United Nations on 1 November 2000. On 12 February 2003, it informed the United Nations that it had changed its name to Serbia and Montenegro, effective 4 February 2003. In a letter dated 3 June 2006, the President of the Republic of Serbia informed the Secretary-General that the membership of Serbia and Montenegro was being continued by the Republic of Serbia following Montenegro's declaration of independence from Serbia on 3 June 2006. On 28 June 2006, Montenegro was accepted as a United Nations Member State by the General Assembly.

<sup>3</sup> Czechoslovakia, an original Member of the United Nations from 24 October 1945, changed its name to the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic on 20 April 1990. It was dissolved on 1 January 1993 and succeeded by the Czech Republic and Slovakia, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 19 January 1993.

<sup>4</sup> The Republic of Zaire informed the United Nations that, effective 17 May 1997, it had changed its name to the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

<sup>5</sup> Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together—following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name Egypt on 2 September 1971.

<sup>6</sup> Through accession of the German Democratic Republic to the Federal Republic of Germany on 3 October 1990, the two German States (both of which had become Members of the United Nations on 18 September 1973) united to form one sovereign State. As from that date, the Federal Republic of Germany has acted in the United Nations under the designation Germany.

<sup>7</sup> On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. On 19 September 1966, it notified the Secretary-General of its decision to resume participation in the activities of the United Nations. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision, and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

<sup>8</sup> On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a Member of the United Nations on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State; on 21 September 1965, it became a Member of the United Nations.

<sup>10</sup> Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, Zanzibar on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

<sup>11</sup> Yemen was admitted to the United Nations on 30 September 1947, Democratic Yemen on 14 December 1967. On 22 May 1990, the two countries merged and were thereafter represented as one Member of the United Nations under the designation Yemen.

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971 and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarges the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increases the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organization to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonizing the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends.

Article 2

The Organization and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles:

1. The Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.
3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.
4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations.
5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.
6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.
7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace-loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.
2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organization by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an International Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.
2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs.

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations.
2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and Powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or both on any such questions or matters.

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.
2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.
3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security.
4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international co-operation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international co-operation in the economic, social, cultural, educational and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1 (b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

VotingArticle 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1 (c) of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

ProcedureArticle 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and Powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIII and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Voting

Article 27<sup>2</sup>

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.

2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.

3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations.

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.

2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute, or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.

3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.

2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties.

3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.

2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE,
AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION*Article 39*

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give effect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures. These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorization of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional sub-committees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

If preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorization of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organization may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION

Article 55

With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, the United Nations shall promote:

- a. higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development;
- b. solutions of international economic, social, health, and related problems; and international cultural and educational co-operation; and
- c. universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

Article 56

All Members pledge themselves to take joint and separate action in co-operation with the Organization for the achievement of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 57

1. The various specialized agencies, established by intergovernmental agreement and having wide international responsibilities, as defined in their basic instruments, in economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields, shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations in accordance with the provisions of Article 63.

2. Such agencies thus brought into relationship with the United Nations are hereinafter referred to as specialized agencies.

Article 58

The Organization shall make recommendations for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies.

Article 59

The Organization shall, where appropriate, initiate negotiations among the states concerned for the creation of any new specialized agencies required for the accomplishment of the purposes set forth in Article 55.

Article 60

Responsibility for the discharge of the functions of the Organization set forth in this Chapter shall be vested in the General Assembly and, under the authority of the General Assembly, in the Economic and Social Council, which shall have for this purpose the powers set forth in Chapter X.

Chapter X
THE ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

CompositionArticle 61<sup>3</sup>

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of fifty-four Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.

2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, eighteen members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from twenty-seven to fifty-four members, in addition to the members elected in place of the nine members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, twenty-seven additional members shall be elected. Of these twenty-seven additional members, the term of office of nine members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of nine other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.

4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

Functions and PowersArticle 62

1. The Economic and Social Council may make or initiate studies and reports with respect to international economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related matters and may make recommendations with respect to any such matters to the General Assembly, to the Members of the United Nations, and to the specialized agencies concerned.

2. It may make recommendations for the purpose of promoting respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all.

3. It may prepare draft conventions for submission to the General Assembly, with respect to matters falling within its competence.

4. It may call, in accordance with the rules prescribed by the United Nations, international conferences on matters falling within its competence.

Article 63

1. The Economic and Social Council may enter into agreements with any of the agencies referred to in Article 57, defining the terms on which the agency concerned shall be brought into relationship with the United Nations. Such agreements shall be subject to approval by the General Assembly.

2. It may co-ordinate the activities of the specialized agencies through consultation with and recommendations to such agencies and through recommendations to the General Assembly and to the Members of the United Nations.

Article 64

1. The Economic and Social Council may take appropriate steps to obtain regular reports from the specialized agencies. It may make arrangements with the Members of the United Nations and with the specialized agencies to obtain reports on the steps taken to give effect to its own recommendations and to recommendations on matters falling within its competence made by the General Assembly.

2. It may communicate its observations on these reports to the General Assembly.

Article 65

The Economic and Social Council may furnish information to the Security Council and shall assist the Security Council upon its request.

Article 66

1. The Economic and Social Council shall perform such functions as fall within its competence in connection with the carrying out of the recommendations of the General Assembly.

2. It may, with the approval of the General Assembly, perform services at the request of Members of the United Nations and at the request of specialized agencies.

3. It shall perform such other functions as are specified elsewhere in the present Charter or as may be assigned to it by the General Assembly.

VotingArticle 67

1. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Economic and Social Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

ProcedureArticle 68

The Economic and Social Council shall set up commissions in economic and social fields and for the promotion of human rights, and such other commissions as may be required for the performance of its functions.

Article 69

The Economic and Social Council shall invite any Member of the United Nations to participate, without vote, in its deliberations on any matter of particular concern to that Member.

Article 70

The Economic and Social Council may make arrangements for representatives of the specialized agencies to participate, without vote, in its deliberations and in those of the commissions established by it, and for its representatives to participate in the deliberations of the specialized agencies.

Article 71

The Economic and Social Council may make suitable arrangements for consultation with non-governmental organizations which are concerned with matters within its competence. Such arrangements may be made with international organizations and, where appropriate, with national organizations after consultation with the Member of the United Nations concerned.

Article 72

1. The Economic and Social Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Economic and Social Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
- b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, and their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
- c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- d. to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
- b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79 and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties.

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas.

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions.

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

CompositionArticle 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
- b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and PowersArticle 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements.

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

VotingArticle 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

ProcedureArticle 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.

2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialized agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice.

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities.

Chapter XV

THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connection with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII

TRANSITIONAL SECURITY
ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII
AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109<sup>4</sup>

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX

RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states.

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications.

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

NOTES

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect six other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid in the first instance to the contributions of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.
2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members, however, three shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

<sup>2</sup>Amended text of Article 27, which came into force on 31 August 1965. The text of Article 27 before it was amended read as follows:

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.

3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.

<sup>3</sup>Amended text of Article 61, which came into force on 24 September 1973. The text of Article 61 as previously amended on 31 August 1965 read as follows:

1. The Economic and Social Council shall consist of twenty-seven Members of the United Nations elected by the General Assembly.
2. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 3, nine members of the Economic and Social Council shall be elected each year for a term of three years. A retiring member shall be eligible for immediate re-election.
3. At the first election after the increase in the membership of the Economic and Social Council from eighteen to twenty-seven members, in addition to the members elected in place of the six members whose term of office expires at the end of that year, nine additional members shall be elected. Of these nine additional members, the term of office of three members so elected shall expire at the end of one year, and of three other members at the end of two years, in accordance with arrangements made by the General Assembly.
4. Each member of the Economic and Social Council shall have one representative.

<sup>4</sup>Amended text of Article 109, which came into force on 12 June 1968. The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.
2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.
3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

The International Court of Justice established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I

ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurisconsults of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state.
2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights.

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions.
2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes.
3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the Court.
2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.
2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.
2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.
3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.
2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.
3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.
4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be re-elected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.
2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.
2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.
3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.
4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.
5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.
6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.
4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.
5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.
6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.
7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.

8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.
2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.
3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the states parties to the present Statute.
2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.
3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.
2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:
  - a. the interpretation of a treaty;
  - b. any question of international law;
  - c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
  - d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.
3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.
4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.
5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.

6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:

- a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
- b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
- c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
- d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.

2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative.

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.

2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.

2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates.

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the state upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 49

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.

2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.

2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognizing that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorized by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organizations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organizations having submitted similar statements.

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organizations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognizes them to be applicable.

Chapter V
AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations.

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Indices

Subject index

BOLD CAPITAL LETTERS are used for main subject entries (e.g. DEVELOPMENT) and chapter topics (e.g. DISARMAMENT), as well as country names (e.g. TAJIKISTAN), region names (e.g. AFRICA) and principal UN organs (e.g. GENERAL ASSEMBLY).

CAPITAL LETTERS are used to highlight major issues (e.g. POVERTY), as well as the names of territories (e.g. MONTserrat), subregions (e.g. CENTRAL AMERICA), specialized agencies (e.g. WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION) and regional commissions (e.g. ECONOMIC COMMISSION FOR EUROPE).

Regular text is used for single and cross-reference entries (e.g. arms embargo, mercenaries, terrorism).

An asterisk (*) preceding a page number or range of page numbers indicates the presence of a text, reproduced in full, of a General Assembly, Security Council or Economic and Social Council resolution or decision, or a Security Council presidential statement.

United Nations bodies are listed alphabetically and may also appear under related entries.
