Recalling all its previous resolutions on Western Sahara, including resolutions 1495(2003) of 31 July 2003, 1541(2004) of 29 April 2004 and 1570(2004) of 28 October 2004,

Reaffirming its commitment to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara in the context of arrangements consistent with the principles and purposes of the Charter of the United Nations, and noting the role and responsibilities of the parties in this respect,

Reiterating its call upon the parties and States of the region to continue to cooperate fully with the United Nations to end the current impasse and to achieve progress towards a political solution,

Urging the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Seguia El-Hamra y de Río de Oro to release without further delay all remaining prisoners of war in compliance with international humanitarian law, and calling upon Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Seguía El-Hamra y de Río de Oro to continue to cooperate with the International Committee of the Red Cross to resolve the fate of persons who are unaccounted for since the beginning of the conflict,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 19 April 2005, and taking note of his interim report of 27 January 2005,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara until 31 October 2005;

2. Affirms the need for full respect of the military agreements reached with the Mission with regard to the ceasefire;

3. Calls upon Member States to consider voluntary contributions to fund confidence- building measures that allow for increased contact between separated family members, especially family unification visits;

4. Looks forward to receiving the results of the comprehensive review of the structure of the administrative and other civilian components of the Mission, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General of 19 April 2005;

5. Requests that the Secretary-General provide a report on the situation concerning Western Sahara before the end of the mandate period;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Personal Envoy of Secretary-General. By an exchange of letters between the Secretary-General and the Security Council on 25 and 28 July [S/2005/497 & S/2005/498], Peter van Walsum (Netherlands) was appointed Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General for Western Sahara to help assess the situation and to explore how best to overcome the current political impasse. As a first step, the Secretary-General requested his Personal Envoy to establish contacts with the parties, neighbouring States and other stakeholders to ascertain their views on the best way forward.

As later reported by the Secretary-General [S/2006/249], the Personal Envoy, following his preliminary discussions in New York with representatives of the two parties and of Algeria and Mauritania, undertook an exploratory mission to the region from 11 to 17 October.

The Personal Envoy informed the Secretary-General that there continued to be a total lack of agreement on how to enable the people of Western Sahara to exercise their right to self-determination. Morocco had reiterated it would not accept a referendum that would include the option of independence; it strongly advocated negotiations with a view to achieving a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution, but made clear that negotiations would have to be about the autonomy status of Western Sahara. The position of Frente Polisario, with the general support of Algeria, was that the only way forward was to implement either the 2003 peace plan for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara or the 1991 settlement plan [YUN 1991, p. 793], both of which provided for self-determination through a referendum, with independence as one of the options. Any other course would not be acceptable to Frente Polisario. Mauritania reiterated its strict neutrality.

On his return from the region, the Personal Envoy held consultations with authorities in Madrid, Paris and Washington, D.C., on 18, 22 and 25 October, respectively.

Communications. Morocco, on 23 September [S/2005/602], drew attention to continued grave violations of the rights of thousands of Moroccan detainees in prison and civilians in camps in Algeria, the country of asylum. Apart from its limited presence in the refugee camps, UNHCR had been unable to conduct a census of that population because Algeria made such a census conditional upon the settlement of the Western Saharan dispute. Morocco spoke of the existence of detention centres and military barracks within the camps and of peoples held hostage there in violation of the principles governing the right of asylum. As to the photographic montages made of inmates in Laayoune prison, Morocco said they were the manipulated images of persons imprisoned for such crimes as homicide, rape or drug trafficking, and were part of a propaganda campaign against it.

Algeria, on 26 September [S/2005/605], referred to Morocco's letter as directly or tacitly implicating Algeria in some aspects of the Western Sahara conflict. It said that Morocco, caught in the act of repressing Sahrawi civilians and accused by NGOs and the international media of grave crimes and acts of torture against Sahrawi political prisoners, was reacting like any occupying or colonial power by cordoning off the Territory it had been occupying since 1975 and prohibiting by military force NGOs, the media, outside observers and parliamentarians from entering the Territory. Regarding the "thousands of Moroccan civilians still in the camps", Algeria said they included Sahrawi refugees duly identified as such by UNHCR who had had no choice but to flee from their occupied homeland and to whom Algeria had generously offered asylum.

Algeria noted that, given the very serious situation prevailing in Western Sahara, where 151 POWs were being held by Morocco, several hundred Sahrawi civilians remained missing, and 37 prisoners had been staging a hunger strike since 8 August (see below) to obtain political prisoner status, it called on the Security Council to appeal to Morocco concerning the disappeared Sahrawi civilians and the plight of the 37 political prisoners. It should not allow Morocco to stall progress indefinitely, paralyse the Organization and frustrate the hopes of the international community.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In his October report [S/2005/648], the Secretary-General stated that there had been some unrest in the Territory, where several demonstrations were organized in Laayoune and other main towns in support of the self-determination of Western Saharans and respect for their human rights. Violent confrontations between the demonstrators and the Moroccan security forces ensued, resulting in arrests and detentions. A number of detainees went on a hunger strike from early August to 29 September. Tensions ran particularly high following the death of a demonstrator from injuries inflicted by police during a 29 October protest in Laayoune. Two police officers involved in the incident were being held pending completion of a judicial inquiry by Morocco into the circumstances surrounding that death.

In response to the demonstrations, Morocco increased its security and police presence in all the main towns of the Territory and, in December, deployed army troops there for the first time since 1999. In letters of 17 November and 14 and 20 December to the UN Secretary-General, the Frente Polisario Secretary-General called on the United Nations to intervene to protect the Saharan citizens and guarantee their human rights, condemned the intervention of the Moroccan police and military in the demonstrations and warned that deployment of the troops to Western Sahara constituted a dangerous development that could lead to deadly confrontations between Moroccan and Saharan civilians.

New violations of military agreement No. 1 occurred during the reporting period. From 14 April to 14 September, MINURSO observed 13 violations by RMA and 10 by Frente Polisario. They included brief incursions into the buffer strip by armed elements from both sides, construction of new physical structures and movement of military units without prior notification or MINURSO approval. MINURSO pointed out that the civilian demonstrations by Frente Polisario supporters in the buffer strip, while not constituting a breach of the agreement, contributed to increased tensions along the berm.

In keeping with military agreements Nos. 2 and 3, the parties continued to extend a high level of cooperation to MINURSO in the marking and disposal of mines and unexploded ordnance. Between the first and third reporting periods, MINURSO had discovered and marked 407 of such items and monitored the destruction of 3,693. In addition, it monitored 54 disposal operations, all carried out by RMA.

One of the most painful chapters of the Frente Polisario–Morocco conflict was brought to a close on 18 August, when, through the mediation of the United States, Frente Polisario released the last 404 Moroccan POWs in its custody to ICRC for repatriation to Morocco. ICRC continued to pursue the question of persons who remained unaccounted for as a result of the conflict.

With regard to assistance to Western Saharan refugees, by a joint UNHCR-WFP decision communicated to Frente Polisario and to Algeria, as the country of asylum, the number of assisted beneficiaries was reduced from 158,000 to 90,000 as at 1 September, with assistance targeted to the most vulnerable of the population in the Tindouf refugee camps. That number would be used for planning purposes, pending a comprehensive registration of the refugee population. While donor support for humanitarian programmes had risen to over $5 million in 2005, additional international assistance would be required to provide supplementary food to improve the health of the refugees.

The exchange of family visits between the Territory and the Tindouf refugee camps under the confidence-building programme did not resume during the reporting period. Although Frente Polisario and Algeria had approved the action plan for the 2005 phase, Morocco had suggested some amendments that were discussed with UNHCR, after which Morocco accepted the plan; the programme was to resume in early November.

The Secretary-General expressed concern over the alleged human rights abuses in the Territory and in the Tindouf refugee camps (see p. 368). He pointed out that MINURSO had neither the mandate nor the resources to address the issue, but the High Commissioner for Human Rights intended to approach the parties and Algeria, as the country of asylum, with a view to exploring what action might be taken in that regard.

In the belief that MINURSO continued to play an important role in monitoring the ceasefire and stabilizing the situation on the ground, the Secretary-General recommended that its mandate be extended for a further period of six months, until 30 April 2006.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

On 28 October [meeting 5295], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1634 (2005). The draft [S/2005/677] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on Western Sahara, including resolutions 1495(2003) of 31 July 2003,

1541(2004) of 29 April 2004 and 1598(2005) of 28 April 2005,

Reaffirming its commitment to assist the parties to achieve a just, lasting and mutually acceptable political solution which will provide for the self-determination of the people of Western Sahara in the context of arrangements consistent with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and noting the role and responsibilities of the parties in this respect,

Reiterating its call upon the parties and States of the region to continue to cooperate fully with the United Nations to end the current impasse and to achieve progress towards a political solution,

Taking note of the release on 18 August 2005 of the remaining four hundred and four Moroccan prisoners of war by the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro in compliance with international humanitarian law, and calling upon the parties to continue to cooperate with the International Committee of the Red Cross to resolve the fate of persons who are unaccounted for since the beginning of the conflict,

Welcoming the appointment of the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General for Western Sahara Mr. Peter van Walsum, and noting that he recently completed consultations in the region,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 13 October 2005,

1. Reaffirms the need for full respect of the military agreements reached with the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara with regard to the ceasefire;

2. Calls upon Member States to consider voluntary contributions to fund confidence-building measures that allow for increased contact between separated family members, especially family unification visits;

3. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission until 30 April 2006;

4. Requests that the Secretary-General provide a report on the situation concerning Western Sahara before the end of the mandate period, and requests the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General to provide a briefing, within three months of the adoption of the present resolution, on the progress of his efforts;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in December, examined the Secretary-General's July report summarizing his 1 July 2004–30 June 2005 reports to the Security Council on the question of Western Sahara [A/60/116] and the relevant chapter in the report of the Special Committee on decolonization for 2005 [A/60/23] (see p. 658).

On 8 December [meeting 62], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/114 without vote.

Question of Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Having considered in depth the question of Western Sahara,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and General Assembly resolution 1514 (XV) of 14 December 1960 containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 59/131 of 10 December 2004,

Recalling also all resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council on the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling further Security Council resolutions 658 (1990) of 27 June 1990 and 690(1991) of 29 April 1991, by which the Council approved the settlement plan for Western Sahara,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 1359(2001) of 29 June 2001 and 1429(2002) of 30 July 2002, as well as 1495(2003) of 31 July 2003, in which the Council expressed its support of the peace plan for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara as an optimum political solution on the basis of agreement between the two parties, and resolutions 1541(2004) of 29 April 2004, 1570(2004) of 28 October 2004 and 1598(2005) of 28 April 2005,

Taking note of the responses of the parties and neighbouring States to the Personal Envoy of the Secretary-General concerning the peace plan contained in the report of the Secretary-General of 23 May 2003,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the United Nations towards the people of Western Sahara,

Noting with satisfaction the entry into force of the ceasefire in accordance with the proposal made by the Secretary-General, and stressing the importance it attaches to the maintenance of the ceasefire as an integral part of the settlement plan,

Underlining, in this regard, the validity of the settlement plan, while noting the fundamental differences between the parties in its implementation,

Stressing that the lack of progress in the settlement of the dispute on Western Sahara continues to cause suffering to the people of Western Sahara, remains a source of potential instability in the region and obstructs the economic development of the Maghreb region and that, in view of this, the search for a political solution is critically needed,

Welcoming the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy in search of a mutually acceptable political solution, which will provide for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara,

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having also examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Underlines Security Council resolution 1495 (2003), in which the Council expressed its support of the peace plan for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara as an optimum political solution on the basis of agreement between the two parties;

3. Underlines also that the parties reacted differently to this plan;

4. Continues to support strongly the efforts of the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy to achieve a mutually acceptable political solution to the dispute over Western Sahara;

5. Commends the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy for their outstanding efforts and the two parties for the spirit of cooperation they have shown in the support they provide for those efforts;

6. Calls upon all the parties and the States of the region to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General and his Personal Envoy;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the United Nations towards the people of Western Sahara;

8. Calls upon the parties to cooperate with the International Committee of the Red Cross in its efforts to solve the problem of the fate of the people unaccounted for, and calls upon the parties to abide by their obligations under international humanitarian law to release without further delay all those held since the start of the conflict;

9. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

10. Invites the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

Other issues

Zimbabwe

In May, the Government of Zimbabwe launched a clean-up operation of its cities known Operation Murambatsvina (Operation Restore Order), designed to stop all forms of alleged illegal activities in areas such as vending, illegal structures, illegal cultivation, among others, in its cities. The number of people affected by the Operation was estimated at 2.4 million, with some 700,000 having lost their homes. The campaign was condemned by several UN Member States, Zimbabwean opposition parties, church groups and NGOs.

Concerned by the adverse impact of the Operation on the lives of the urban poor, on 20 June, the Secretary-General appointed Anna Kajumulo Tibaijuka, Executive Director of the United Nations Human Settlement Programme (UN-Habitat), as his Special Envoy to lead a fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe to assess the scope and impact of Operation Murambatsvina. The Special Envoy visited Zimbabwe between 26 June and 8 July. The mission reported that the Operation was carried out in an indiscriminate and unjustified manner. The humanitarian consequences were enormous and any humanitarian response would only be meaningful if it contributed to long-term recovery and reconstruction efforts. The mission made a number of recommendations for the Government of Zimbabwe, the United Nations and the wider international community to address the situation.

Communication (July). On 26 July [S/2005/490], Australia, Canada and New Zealand expressed concern at the growing humanitarian and human rights crisis in Zimbabwe. They said that the report of the Secretary-General's Special Envoy had documented the failure of the Government of Zimbabwe to protect its people and was responsible for the situation. The Government had to take urgent action to implement the recommendations contained in the Special Envoy's report. However, they noted that the reaction of the Government of Zimbabwe to the report gave little confidence that it would do so. Noting that the report stated that there would be far-reaching and long-term social, economic, political and institutional consequences, the three States were of the view that for too long the United Nations had been unable to take up the deteriorating situation in Zimbabwe and called on the Security Council to be seized of the situation as a matter of urgency and to engage actively with the Government of Zimbabwe to bring the situation to an end.

Security Council consideration. On 27 July [meeting 5237], at the request of the United Kingdom [S/2005485, S/2005/489], the Council met in a closed session to hear a briefing by the Secretary-General's Special Envoy. The representative of Zimbabwe was invited to participate in the meeting. At the request of the Russian Federation, the agenda was put to the vote and was adopted by a vote of nine in favour, five against and one abstention.

Communications. In a 31 October press statement [SG/SM/10195], the Secretary-General said that he remained concerned by the humanitarian crisis in Zimbabwe as the United Nations continued to receive reports that tens of thousands of people were still homeless and in need of assistance, months after the May eviction campaign. He was dismayed to learn of the Government's rejection of offers of UN assistance and its claim that there was no humanitarian crisis and that its interventions had addressed the most urgent needs. The Secretary-General noted that the Government's decision to decline assistance came despite extensive consultations on relief with the United Nations. In the light of the impending rainy season, he appealed to the Government to ensure that those who were out in the open without shelter and means of sustaining their livelihoods were provided with humanitarian assistance in collaboration with the United Nations and the humanitarian community in order to avert a further deterioration of the humanitarian situation.

The European Union (EU), in a 7 November statement of its Presidency [S/2005/712], noted the Secretary-General's statement and shared his concern over the grave humanitarian situation in Zimbabwe. It called on the Government of Zimbabwe to work with the United Nations and the international community to get aid and shelter to those in need and to implement all the recommendation contained in the report of the Secretary-General's Special Envoy (see above).

In another statement issued on 19 December [S/2005/830], the EU Presidency welcomed the visit (3-7 December) to Zimbabwe by the United Nations Under-Secretary-General for Huamnitarian Affairs, Jan Egleland, and the agreements signed by UN agencies and Zimbabwe for food assistance and HIV/AIDS programmes. It noted the exchanges between the United Nations and Zimbabwe over the need for assistance with shelter. The EU called on Zimbabwe to build on those efforts and to allow the United Nations and other international donors unrestricted access in order to provide urgently needed humanitarian assistance.

Mauritania

Mauritania, on 31 May [S/2005/362], drew the attention of the Security Council to arrests it had made of a number of Islamic extremists in the country, from whom it had elicited information that Mauritanian youths had been trained outside the country by the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, which had ties to an international terrorist network connected with Al-Qaida. Some of the trainees had returned to the country, while others were still in training.

Mauritania further transmitted a press release on 6 June [S/2005/374], reporting an armed attack by the Salafist Group on a national army unit in the village of Limgheiti, killing 15 soldiers and wounding 17 others; two were missing. It also reported that, of 20 Mauritanians recently trained by the Group, 10 had returned to the country, 7 of whom were arrested and 3 were at large.

By a statement issued on 4 August [SG/SM/10030], the Secretary-General condemned the coup d'état in Mauritania the previous day, ousting President Maauya Ould Sid' Ahmed Taya. The Secretary-General called for the restoration of constitutional order and underlined the need for the full respect for human rights and the rule of law.

The AU Peace and Security Council, by a communiqué issued at its thirty-seventh meeting (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 8 September) [S/2005/581], stated that it took note of developments since the 3 August coup and the commitments made by the new Mauritanian authorities towards the swift restoration of constitutional order through a process that should culminate in presidential and legislative elections before 3 August 2007.

Cooperation between the AU and the UN system

On 17 October 2005 [meeting 5282], during consideration by the Security Council of the question of cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations in maintaining peace and security (see p. 96), the Secretary-General welcomed the commitment by the 2005 World Summit to support a 10-year programme aimed at strengthening the capacity of the AU (see p. 59).

The representative of the Chairperson of the African Union Commission said that cooperation between the AU and the United Nations was both political and economic and based on a number of agreements and resolutions, citing UN collaboration with the AU and subregional organizations, such as the Economic Community of West African States, in addressing conflict prevention and peacekeeping operations on the African continent, and on the ongoing crises in Côte d'Ivoire, the Sudan and Somalia. He called for increased support for the consolidation of the African Union Commission in terms of long-term consultants and training programmes, strengthening the organs of the AU and establishment of specialized committees to enable the AU to perform effectively in the area of regional stabilization. He said that regional stabilization was about, among other things, effective conflict management and resolution. Thus, in welcoming the Summit commitment to address the special needs of Africa (see p. 57), the AU representative said that the stabilization of the continent required the swift implementation of the measures proposed to that end.

Chapter III

Americas

During 2005, the United Nations continued to advance the cause of lasting peace, human rights, sustainable development and the rule of law in the Americas. With the ending of the mandate of the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala at the end of 2004, the Guatemalan peace process had matured into a new phase in which national actors had assumed fuller responsibility for monitoring and promoting the accords. A joint agreement in May between the Government of Guatemala and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights resulted in the establishment of an office for monitoring and reporting on human rights in that country.

Despite efforts by the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH) and the Haitian National Police to ensure a secure and stable environment in Haiti, the security situation remained precarious. Outbreaks of violence and illegal activities of armed groups continued to be a serious concern. The risk of retaliation against MINUSTAH and UN personnel increased, hampering the Mission's ability to carry out its mandate, including preparations for elections. The Mission's mandate was extended and its capacity expanded to address the increased political and security challenges prior to and after the elections. The Security Council sent a mission to Haiti, in conjunction with the Ad Hoc Advisory Group of the Economic and Social Council, to assess the situation and to make recommendations on how the international community could help Haiti restore good governance and economic and social stability. The Transitional Government launched the electoral process, which was to be completed in time for the installation of a new President in February 2006, but political and technical difficulties caused delays. It also launched a national dialogue and adopted a disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programme, the success of which depended on the willingness of armed groups to lay down their weapons.

In other developments in the region, the Ibero-American Secretariat was established at the Fifteenth Summit of the Heads of State and Government of the Ibero-American community of nations. Costa Rica filed an application with the International Court of Justice instituting proceedings against Nicaragua in a dispute concerning navigational and related rights on the San Juan River. The General Assembly again called on States to refrain from promulgating laws and measures, such as the ongoing embargo against Cuba by the United States. The Assembly granted observer status to the Ibero-American community of nations and the Latin American Integration Association.

Central America

The situation in Central America

Report of Secretary-General. As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 58/239 [YUN 2003, p. 276], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the situation in Central America [A/60/218], which summarized progress achieved by countries in building democratic, equitable and peaceful societies. The report described activities by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and other UN bodies to support the efforts of Central American countries in achieving sustainable development.

The Secretary-General stated that the electoral processes in some countries highlighted the need for further electoral reforms, particularly in the area of political parties and their financing mechanisms. El Salvador and Guatemala held presidential elections in which former actors in the countries' civil wars played a principal role. However, political parties in both countries were unable to garner citizen participation. The electoral campaign in El Salvador in March 2004, had pitted the ruling Alianza Republicana Nacionalista (ARENA) against the Frente Farabundo Martí para la Liberación Nacional (FMLN), with other political parties unable to pose a significant challenge. ARENA won its fourth consecutive term in office, an outcome that had significant repercussions on El Salvador's political system and deepened its polarization. In Guatemala's second democratic transfer of government since 1966, Óscar Berger was sworn in as the country's President on 15 January 2004. In the first months of the new Government, Congress approved electoral reforms called for in the 1996 Agreement on a Firm and Lasting Peace [YUN 1996, p. 168]. Electoral reforms in Honduras also progressed, with the implementation of regulations on the issuance of separate lists for presidential, congressional and mayoral elections; the participation of small political parties; alliances among parties; and the duration and financing of electoral campaigns. Voters elected Manuel Zelaya as President on 27 November 2004. In Nicaragua, the electoral system needed profound transformation to ensure impartiality and transparency for the November 2006 elections.

As violence in Central America had become widespread, with the homicide rate in some countries reaching epidemic levels, public security was a central concern. Youth gangs were a major security threat in the region, with an estimated 200 to 400 gangs in Guatemala, comprising some 150,000 to 200,000 members between 10 and 17 years old. The youth-gang phenomenon was due to widespread migration as a result of the breakdown in family structures, a young population, 74 per cent of which was under the age of 35 in 2000, the impact of poverty on adolescents' prospects, and the availability of weapons. Organized crime had also afflicted the region, with some countries becoming transit points for illegal drug-trafficking. Efforts to address the public security crisis included joint operations by the police and military in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras. The Secretary-General expressed concern about the potential for blurring the line between security and national defence matters and urged that the distinction between the two be upheld.

While the region had advanced in establishing peace through the eradication of violence, discrimination, impunity and inequities, UN human rights mechanisms continued to observe deficits in those areas. Women and children in Central America were often the victims of violence, and human rights defenders and journalists had become the target of threats and persecution. Many obstacles hampered efforts to bring perpetrators of human rights abuses to justice, and cases of torture, disappearances and extrajudicial executions continued to go unpunished. Inadequate Government funding of national human rights institutions had also slowed progress. The Special Rapporteur on violence against women, in visits to Guatemala and El Salvador in 2004, cited impunity as one of the most prominent concerns in both countries. As recommended by the Special Rapporteur, the Government of El Salvador increased the 2005 budgets of the Salvadoran Institute for the Development of Women and the Office of the Human Rights Procurator.

A joint agreement in May 2005 between the Government of Guatemala and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) resulted in the establishment of an OHCHR office for monitoring and reporting on the national human rights situation. The office, which became operational in July, would continue the work done by the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA) (see p. 376), advise the Government on human rights policies and assist national institutions. The new administration also made efforts to address discrimination against the indigenous population, support a reparation programme for victims of human rights violations, and publicly recognize State responsibility for past human rights violations.

Despite progress achieved in the area of judicial reform, marginalized sectors of Central America had limited access to justice, resulting in widespread impunity. Lack of independence from other State powers, deficient funding and poor coordination were issues prevalent in several judiciaries. In Guatemala, while centres for the administration of justice had been opened in isolated, indigenous areas and there were more mediation centres, poor inter-institutional coordination and unclear policies on hiring bilingual staff for Guatemala's indigenous population, half of whom did not necessarily speak Spanish, had affected their effectiveness. Although the Honduran judicial system had been modernized since the 1990s, resulting in a lessening of corruption, improved access to justice was not included in the reform. In El Salvador, an agreement between the Supreme Court of Justice and the National Council on the Judiciary to establish a judicial training programme marked a positive development towards resolving tension between the two institutions. A climate of mistrust of the justice system prevailed in Nicaragua, especially concerning the lack of political independence. A 2004 judicial career law regulating the judiciary's administrative and financial management granted the politicized Supreme Court discretionary power to name a number of judges.

In the area of governance, the Secretary-General said that corruption was endemic in Central America, although unprecedented steps had been taken to address it. Corruption scandals in Costa Rica involving three former Presidents; the alleged misuse of some $16 million by the former Guatemalan President during his tenure; and the sentencing of the former Nicaraguan President, Arnoldo Alemán, to 20 years in prison for various corruption crimes exemplified the situation. Encouraged that all countries in the region had signed the United Nations Convention against Corruption, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 58/4 [YUN 2003, p. 1127], the Secretary-General urged countries that had not yet ratified it to do so. In the light of Guatemala's failure to ratify a 2004 agreement with the United Nations to establish the Commission for the Investigation of Illegal Groups and Clandestine Security Organizations, he also urged that Government to address the issue of impunity, particularly as it related to those aspects.

In institution-building, progress was achieved in the Central American integration process both within and outside the region. The outward drive stemmed from the signing of the Central American Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA), and from the expectations of a possible agreement of association between the European Union (EU) and Central America, which could translate into a free trade agreement. At the Twenty-first Ministerial Conference on Political Dialogue and Economic Cooperation between the EU and the Central American Integration System (SICA) (Luxembourg, 26 May), ministers reaffirmed that such an agreement would give new impetus to the regional economic integration process. Efforts continued in the designing of regional strategies for integrating the region into the world economy to ensure sustainable development in all Central American countries. In that regard, the Puebla-Panama Plan [YUN 2001, p. 240] had evolved into a mechanism for facilitating, coordinating and articulating eight regional initiatives on tourism, transport, energy, telecommunications, competitiveness and integration, sustainable development, human development and disaster prevention and migration. Further progress had been achieved in regional integration with the political commitment for the creation of a customs union, and the decision by the leaders of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua at the SICA meeting in June to introduce a regional arrest warrant, as well as a Central American passport and common visa requirements.

While Central America had not experienced a large-scale disaster since Hurricane Mitch [YUN 1998, p. 876] and the earthquakes in El Salvador in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 858], those and past disasters had a long-term effect on development. Resources for development had been absorbed by post-disaster relief work and by investments required to rebuild stocks and infrastructure, but the reconstruction processes had not restored conditions to pre-disaster levels. Seasonal phenomena and climatic variations had also negatively affected development in Central America. The Secretary-General highlighted the need for the region to strengthen national and local capacity to respond to emergencies and to promote policies that improved risk management.

Border disputes between Central American countries continued their course in the International Court of Justice (ICJ) (see PART FOUR, Chapter I). The Belize-Guatemala territorial dispute was resolved with facilitation by the Organization of American States (OAS). In July, Belize and Guatemala adopted a new agreement on confidence-building measures and a new framework for negotiations. The Secretary-General emphasized that bringing closure to their territorial issues was a key step in creating long-term stability in the region. Concerning the Nicaraguan-Honduran disagreement, resulting from the 1999 López-Ramírez Treaty between Honduras and Colombia, an ICJ decision was expected by year's end or in 2006.

Cooperation activities carried out by UNDP and other UN organizations and programmes to achieve sustainable development in Central American countries were focused on poverty eradication, agricultural development, health and nutrition, public finance and economic growth, environment, support for consensus-building processes and the strengthening of democratic institutions.

The Secretary-General observed that the Alliance for Sustainable Development of Central America [YUN 1994, p. 389]—a regional strategy for cooperation and integration—had been falling behind as an institutional basis for programme development. He indicated that there was little interest in having a regional conceptual and strategic framework for the development of Central America and some bodies and leaders preferred to harmonize the region's institutions under the aegis of CAFTA. He said that the UN system had made significant efforts to coordinate its work in Central America within the framework of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), particularly in strengthening the coordination and leadership role of national Governments to ensure that foreign assistance responded to national priorities and needs. The Secretary-General emphasized the importance of international cooperation for strengthening the integration of the Central American region within the context of globalization.

On 31 October [meeting 41], in a statement to the Assembly, Nicaragua, on behalf of SICA, said that Central America was a changed region. The decades of armed violence and acute economic and social crises had been overcome and all Governments enjoyed the legitimacy acquired through free elections. Their economies were growing and their political systems had become more open and democratic. In the light of the progress achieved, there was no longer a need to introduce a draft resolution under the agenda item.

The Assembly, by decision 60/508 of 31 October, decided that the item entitled "The situation in Central America: progress in fashioning a region of peace, freedom, democracy and development" would remain on the agenda, for consideration upon notification by a Member State, beginning with the sixty-first (2006) session.

Communications. By a 21 October letter [A/60/447], Spain transmitted to the Secretary-General the Salamanca Declaration, adopted by Heads of State and Government of the Ibero-American community of nations (Salamanca, 14-15 October), as well as communiqués on the integration process in Latin America and the Caribbean and on support for negotiations between the EU and Central America and the Andean Community.

Nicaragua, on behalf of SICA, transmitted to the Secretary-General the Declaration of León [A/60/613], adopted at the Twenty-seventh Ordinary Meeting of Heads of State and Government of SICA (León Santiago de los Caballeros, Nicaragua, 2 December), which outlined measures for further consolidating SICA and for strengthening it as a region of peace, freedom, democracy and development.

On 28 December [A/60/672], El Salvador transmitted the text of the Declaration of San Salvador, adopted by SICA on the occasion of the Fourth Central American Congress on sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and HIV/AIDS, the Fourth Central American Meeting of People Living with HIV/AIDS and the Third Latin American and Caribbean Forum on STIs and HIV/AIDS (San Salvador, 11 November).

Guatemala

In 2005, Guatemala continued to consolidate peace and build upon the foundation developed in previous years, which had resulted in successful elections in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 282] and the handover of power in January 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 286]. The departure of the United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala at the end of 2004 marked the beginning of a new phase in the country, with the opportunity for Guatemalans to shape their own destiny through further development of the peace process and nation-building.

MINUGUA

The United Nations Verification Mission in Guatemala (MINUGUA), established in 1994 to verify implementation of the Comprehensive Agreement on Human Rights [YUN 1994, p. 408] and extended in 1996 to verify the Agreement on a Firm and Lasting Peace [YUN 1996, p. 168], completed its operations on 31 December 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 287].

The Secretary-General, in a March end-of-mission report [A/59/746], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 58/238 [YUN 2003, p. 283], described its work throughout the various stages of the Guatemalan peace process. The report also highlighted the innovative transition strategy implemented during the Mission's last two years of operation to build national capacity to promote the peace accords agenda after MINUGUA's departure.

The Secretary-General said that, operating in the multi-ethnic, multicultural and multilingual environment of Guatemala—with its deeply entrenched racism and abandonment of Mayan, Xinca and Garifuna indigenous communities, which comprised at least half the population—had been one of the most difficult challenges for MINUGUA. Great cultural sensitivity on the part of MINUGUA had been required to ensure effective operations. He indicated that MINUGUA staff, representing dozens of nationalities and fields of work, had performed admirably under difficult circumstances and that international and Guatemalan staff had worked side by side in innovative ways. With the departure of MINUGUA and the end of international verification, the Guatemalan peace process had matured into a new and important phase in which national actors were assuming fuller responsibility for monitoring and promoting the goals of the peace accords. He added that current and future UN operations could benefit from lessons learned from MINUGUA, as a successful example of multidimensional peacebuilding.

Haiti

During 2005, Haiti continued to be beset by political, economic and social challenges, resulting from a combination of weak governance and poverty. In the light of the violence that had erupted in 2004 following the departure of former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide from the country, tensions remained high between his Fanmi Lavalas party and the Transitional Government. Fanmi Lavalas had denounced the pact [YUN 2004, p. 293] signed by the Interim Government, civil society organizations and political groups on measures to be undertaken during the transition period, including the holding of local and national elections, and remained outside the political process. Violence between the Haitian National Police (HNP) and former soldiers of the disbanded armed forces continued. The Security Council decided to send a mission to Haiti, in conjunction with the Ad Hoc Advisory Group of the Economic and Social Council, to assess the situation. The mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), established by Security Council resolution 1542(2004) [ibid., p. 294], was expanded to address the political and security concerns related to the preparation and holding of elections scheduled for the end of the year. In addition to providing security support, MINUSTAH also focused on training and reforming HNP, monitoring the human rights situation, providing humanitarian assistance, and coordinating with the OAS in election preparations.

Political and security situation

Security Council consideration (January). On 12 January [meeting 5110], the Security Council met to discuss the Secretary-General's November 2004 report on MINUSTAH [YUN 2004, p. 298]. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of MINUSTAH, Mr. Juan Gabriel Valdés, in his briefing before the Council, said that, although security threats and challenges remained serious, the level of violence had been reduced and MINUSTAH's ability to handle situations that risked jeopardizing security had improved substantially. Within its security concept of legitimate use of force, balanced by a focus on the most urgent problems affecting the more vulnerable people of Haiti, MINUSTAH embarked on a new phase of its mission. It took steps to stabilize the security situation, forcing groups of former soldiers who defied the authority of the State and the Mission to back down, and causing other illegally armed groups to lose ground. As a result of the success of "Operation Liberty" conducted in December 2004 [ibid., p. 300] in the Cité Soleil district of Port-au-Prince, two police stations were opened and the deployment of MINUSTAH patrols and the activities of the Haitian civil service created conditions for the initiation of a variety of quick-impact projects. The Mission was convinced that gradual progress in health, sanitation and education, as well as the prompt launching of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration (DDR) initiative would qualitatively change the Cité Soleil area and neighbourhood and help eliminate the armed bands active there. To that end, MINUSTAH had started planning and organizing the DDR programme and welcomed the creation of a disarmament committee as announced by Prime Minister Latortue. At the same time, it was closely following the Transitional Government's policy of making compensation and severance pay to former members of the Haitian armed forces. In addition, all the armed former soldiers who had participated in the 15 December 2004 [ibid.] attempt to illegally take possession of the abandoned private residence of former President Aristide had been disarmed and had agreed to participate in reintegration programmes.

Concerning the electoral process, the Special Representative said that the basic technical elements for proceeding with the 2005 electoral timetable were in place, including the swearing in on 6 January of the new representative of the Catholic Church, thereby reinstating full membership of the Provisional Electoral Council, the Transitional Government's decision to allocate additional funding and to establish a mechanism to disburse those funds through UNDP, and the disbursal of the financing pledges by Canada and the EU. The Provisional Electoral Council completed the preparation of the electoral law and the OAS, in cooperation with MINUSTAH, started voter registration in March. The release of some Fanmi Lavalas leaders should be viewed as a step that could positively impact national dialogue and the elimination of violence. However, the Special Representative expressed concern over the imprisonment of former Prime Minister, Yvon Neptune, for nearly a year without trial, and the fact that human rights violations and crimes were being committed with an apparent link to HNP. He reiterated the demands he had made at the Contact Group meeting in December 2004 that the Transitional Government should select a few projects for priority implementation and the international community should simplify its financing mechanisms to allow infrastructure projects to be undertaken in 2005 so as to give hope to thousands of Haitians. He welcomed the World Bank's decision to release $73 million, following the repayment of arrears by the Transitional Government, the announcement by Canada to fund the electoral process and the reiteration of the EU's funding pledge.

Haiti's Minister for Foreign Affairs, Yvon Siméon, said that the Secretary-General's recommendation that the international community should make a long-term commitment to Haiti was justified, as the DDR process was a long-term effort requiring resources in excess of the country's capacity. The security situation, particularly in the working-class neighbourhoods, had deteriorated in recent months and the combined shortage of HNP personnel and the delayed deployment of MINUSTAH troops had complicated efforts to deal with gangs and restore order in dangerous areas. However, HNP, with MINUSTAH assistance, regained control of several illegally occupied police stations and efforts to neutralize gang and criminal activity were being enhanced. The Government, in an effort to establish a stable and secure environment through the disarmament of armed groups, had given special attention to demobilized military personnel. The commission responsible for those matters had been reorganized with encouraging results. The first instalment of pension payments to members of Haiti's armed forces had been made and it was hoped that the full amount due could be provided to all former military personnel, thereby meeting one of their main demands. Efforts were also under way to address human rights issues.

On elections, Mr. Siméon said that the Government was making every effort to facilitate the work of the Provisional Electoral Council and to fulfil its commitment to restore an elected Government by 7 February 2006. Haiti needed the support of its bilateral and multilateral partners and he hoped that the international community's commitment would not be limited to the political transition.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 12 January [meeting 5110], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/1 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council reaffirms the comprehensive mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti as set forth in resolutions 1542 (2004) and 1576(2004), and expresses its support for a United Nations presence in Haiti as long as necessary.
> The Council underlines the fact that national reconciliation, security and economic development remain key to stability in Haiti, and in that regard stresses that all Member States and international organizations, especially those in the region, should support the Transitional Government of Haiti in those efforts.
> The Council underlines the important role of the Mission in ensuring a secure environment and commends the recent joint operations by the Mission and the Haitian National Police, in particular against all illegal armed groups. It notes, however, that further urgent action is needed to continue to improve the security situation. The Council again calls upon all parties in Haiti to respect human rights and to renounce the use of violence to advance their goals.
> The Council encourages the Transitional Government to create without delay the national commission on disarmament, demobilization and reintegration to address all armed groups, particularly former members of the military, in a comprehensive manner. It notes that any compensation should be part of a comprehensive and durable solution.
> The Council renews its appeal for the prompt disbursement of the funds pledged by international financial institutions and donor countries at the International Donors Conference on Haiti, held in July 2004. It recognizes the need for the Mission, other organs of the United Nations system, international financial institutions and Member States to assist the Transitional Government in the preparation and implementation of development projects in Haiti, as well as quick-impact projects. The Council reiterates the need to assist the Transitional Government in establishing a long-term development strategy for Haiti, in accordance with the priorities set forth in the Interim Cooperation Framework.
> The Council welcomes recent steps taken by the Transitional Government to release some individuals being held without formal charge or trial, and calls upon the Transitional Government to review all such cases in order to ensure full respect for due process and the rule of law. In this regard, the Council calls upon the Mission to continue its support for the provision of human rights training to Haitian judicial, police and correctional authorities to ensure adherence to international norms and standards.
> The Council encourages the Transitional Government to continue to take steps towards a comprehensive and inclusive national dialogue and reconciliation process, and calls upon all political actors in Haiti to renounce violence and join this dialogue without delay. The Council fully supports the Mission's continuing facilitation of this process.
> The Council calls upon the Transitional Government, with the assistance of the Mission and the Organization of American States, urgently to take the necessary measures to ensure the holding of free and fair elections in 2005 and the subsequent transfer of power to elected authorities, and welcomes the recent decisions of the Provisional Electoral Council in its preparations. It encourages all political parties that have rejected violence to participate in the electoral process.
> The Council expresses its intention to organize a mission to Haiti before 1 June 2005, possibly in conjunction with a mission of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti of the Economic and Social Council.
> The Council expresses its gratitude to the countries that have contributed personnel to the Mission. It urges troop and police-contributing countries to complete the authorized strength of the Mission as soon as possible, stressing that prompt completion of this step is an essential requirement for the continuing success of the operation.
> The Council expresses its full support for the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Haiti, Mr. Juan Gabriel Valdés, and commends the work done by the Mission and all of its personnel.

Report of Secretary-General (February). In his February report on MINUSTAH [S/2005/124], the Secretary-General indicated that, although the Mission's troop level had increased significantly and its capacity to respond to threats had produced noticeable results, the security situation remained precarious. Illegal activities of armed groups continued to be a serious concern and the risk of retaliation against MINUSTAH and UN personnel had increased due to the Mission's crackdown on gang members and former soldiers. On 7 January, to thwart ongoing shooting, including attacks against the Mission's presence in Cité Soleil, MINUSTAH arrested 96 suspects and placed them in HNP custody. MINUSTAH also maintained a presence in Bel-Air, a poor district affected by gang violence. In January, it launched three clean-up operations in the area to remove accumulated waste that restricted security patrols.

The security situation was further complicated by the Transitional Government's launch, in 2004, of a $2.8 million compensation programme for demobilized former military personnel [YUN 2004, p. 301]. Despite their willingness to accept the indemnity, the former soldiers refused to disarm, demanding the creation of an interim security force. MINUSTAH advised that any further payments should be linked to disarmament and entry into the DDR process, but no official position had been taken by the Haitian authorities. However, funding pledged for DDR activities remained limited, and additional support from the Transitional Government and the international community was needed.

Due to its increased strength, the MINUSTAH civilian police component was able to focus on the training and capacity-building of HNP through a co-location programme aimed at mentoring, advising and assisting the force at all levels. On 21 January, 200 newly trained officers graduated, together with 193 former military who were to be reintegrated into HNP. Training for 370 new recruits began on 10 January, and for 96 inspectors and 25 commissioners on 14 February.

In January, the Provisional Electoral Council presented the proposed electoral calendar to the Transitional Government, which provided for local elections on 9 October, parliamentary and presidential elections on 13 November and 18 December, instalment of Parliament on 9 January 2006, and the swearing in of the new President on 7 February 2006. The presidential decree adopting the new electoral law was published by the Transitional Government on 11 February. On 10 January, a global funding agreement totalling $44.3 million was signed for conducting the elections. On 4 February, a memorandum of understanding was signed between UNDP and the United Nations Office for Project Services for the conduct of a security and logistical assessment mission, to be led by MINUSTAH. The mission, launched on 9 February, evaluated the security and logistical conditions for the elections. In his address to the nation, the interim Prime Minister, Mr. Gérard Latortue, invited all illegally armed groups to disarm and participate in the country's reconstruction process and requested the support of political parties in the transition process. He specifically invited Fanmi Lavalas in the election process.

An ad hoc group (Groupe de réflexion et de promotion du dialogue national) on national dialogue submitted a report to the Prime Minister on 31 December. Discussions among political actors and civil society continued on inclusiveness, structure and timing of the dialogue in its relation to the electoral process. MINUSTAH submitted to the interim President and Prime Minister a working paper on approaches relating to national dialogue, based on consultations by the Secretary-General's Special Representative with sectors throughout the country. On 14 February, the Transitional Government, MINUSTAH and UNDP signed an agreement to launch a $1.7 million project to support national dialogue.

The Secretary-General observed that the political transition was at a sensitive phase and preparations for the elections had to be accelerated. Encouraged by the Prime Minister's invitation to Fanmi Lavalas to participate in the electoral process and anticipating the official launch of the national dialogue, he called on all political parties and Haitian voters to join the electoral process. The Secretary-General remained concerned about the human rights situation in the country, and called on the Haitian authorities to investigate allegations of human rights abuses, including those attributed to HNP officers and to take appropriate action. He also called on the Transitional Government to establish the national commission on DDR.

Security Council mission

On 31 March [S/2005/220], the Security Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council had decided to send a mission to Haiti from 13-16 April, in conjunction with the Economic and Social Council's Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti (see p. 390). The mission, to be led by Ronaldo Mota Sardenberg (Brazil) [S/2005/235], would, among other things, assess the level of MINUSTAH coordination in each aspect of its mandate and between the capital and outlying regions of Haiti; review progress achieved and determine the needs required in the areas of security, political transition, human rights, development, institution-building and the humanitarian situation; and convey to local actors the Council's message of support for MINUSTAH and the UN presence in Haiti, the long-term commitment of the international community in Haiti, and the steps the Transitional Government and all the parties needed to take, including rejecting violence and respecting human rights, engaging fully in the electoral process, and launching an inclusive national dialogue.

Report of Security Council mission. The report of the Security Council mission to Haiti (13-16 April) was issued on 6 May [S/2005/302]. The mission, the first by the Council to Latin America, or the Caribbean, visited Port-au-Prince and the cities of Cap-Haïtien and Gonaïves. The mission met with the Transitional Government, the Provisional Electoral Council, representatives of political parties and civil society, MINUSTAH, and members of the Core Group on Haiti [YUN 2004, p. 299].

The mission found that, while the security situation had improved, it remained fragile and had to be addressed to ensure a stable political transition process and socio-economic development. Some interlocutors believed that the insecurity stemmed from violence by supporters of former President Aristide, former military personnel and armed gangs with ties to criminal activities, such as drug trafficking and illegal arms-dealing, and shifting affiliations, while others felt that it was less of a threat and had been exaggerated by the media. Despite criticisms of its operation, it was agreed that the presence of MINUSTAH military and police forces was essential to prevent the situation from deteriorating and assist in the stabilization process. However, those forces felt handicapped by the lack of reliable tactical intelligence. Joint MINUSTAH/HNP security operations had successfully undermined alliances between illegally armed groups and gangs associated with former President Aristide's supporters and the former military personnel. The security challenges to be faced included retaliation against information sources, collusion between illegal actors and some police officers, the urban environment in which illegal gangs operated and the need to enhance coordination and cooperation.

The mission ascertained that HNP could not adequately exercise public security functions over the entire country due to a lack of personnel, equipment and training, as well as a limited budget and corruption, and called for its immediate reform. Increased international assistance would be required to implement the reforms of the force, the professionalization of which was a long-term task. MINUSTAH, whose mandate was to assist in restructuring and reforming HNP, was hampered by the ambiguous attitude of the police toward serious reform, the diversion of MINUSTAH resources to more immediate security-related operational tasks, and the lack of French-speaking civilian police and specialists in MINUSTAH.

The mission found that, while challenges remained, a promising attitude towards DDR was evolving, with an increased willingness by some members of the former military to participate, although some were more interested in being reabsorbed into public sector positions than accept the benefits offered in a DDR programme. The mission was concerned that promises made by the Transitional Government of indemnity payments, pensions and State employment to members of the former military were not linked to DDR, particularly the need to disarm. Some of the promises had not been kept, which could destabilize the situation and exacerbate frustrations and alienation. The political situation presented promises and challenges. It was dominated by such concerns as the insecurity in the capital, the debate over the imprisonment of former Prime Minister Yvon Neptune and former Interior Minister Jocelerme Privert and controversial issues surrounding the media. The situation was also very complex, with some 90 registered parties and a myriad of civil society organizations, which did not appear to have clearly identifiable political platforms. The possible linkages between some political parties and illegally armed groups remained a source of concern. The mission was reminded of the considerable challenges in conducting elections, such as security, technical issues, possible discrimination against independent candidates, and the need for early adoption of legislation to provide, among other things, for public funding for political parties and the adoption of a national identity card. The mission was concerned that many logistical aspects of organizing elections, arising from the Provisional Electoral Council's lack of capacity, could complicate the timely preparation of the elections.

The mission noted reports that a culture of impunity remained pervasive, as a result of which the population continued to view the national police with fear and lack of respect, and that human rights investigations were hampered by the instability of the situation and the security concerns of victims and witnesses.

The mission, in its recommendations, said that the Haitian authorities and the international community should continue to prepare for Haiti's medium- and long-term institution-building and development, and Haitians themselves, particularly the Transitional Government, should seize the opportunity to take full ownership of their future.

It urged the Haitian authorities to prepare for elections and to ensure their smooth operation, and that sufficient funds were identified for that purpose. The elections should be open to all political parties that publicly renounced violence.

MINUSTAH should provide donors with a budget and integrated timeline for all electoral activities, while the Transitional Government should commence a broad-based civic education programme to ensure the broadest possible participation of the Haitian population. An international coordinated presence, working with the Haitian authorities, should help to ensure that the registration and voting processes conformed with democratic standards, and that arrangements were established for international electoral observation.

The mission requested the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) to conduct a comprehensive review of the security situation and MINUSTAH resources, make recommendations on the need for additional police and military resources, and improve the rules of engagement of the civilian police to provide, among other things, for operational support to HNP, in order to increase global security and protection during the electoral period.

MINUSTAH should continue to support the Transitional Government to ensure a secure and stable environment, including improving coordination procedures with HNP. The mission stressed the need for better coordination between MINUSTAH civil police and military components, and for the MINUSTAH Joint Mission Analysis Cell to become operational as soon as possible in order to pool and better operationalize the information available to its military, police and civilian components.

The political dialogue initiated by the Transitional Government should focus on the needs of the upcoming elections, and allow for broader grass-roots participation. The mission supported a long-term dialogue aimed at developing a common vision for the country's future, involving all sectors of Haitian society.

The Haitian authorities should implement without delay the DDR programme proposed by MINUSTAH (p. 377) and clarify its intention vis-à-vis the status of former military personnel, and payments to any groups should be made only as part of a DDR programme. Concerned about the reported funding gap for DDR, the mission called upon MINUSTAH and DPKO to provide detailed information to the Council on whether further international resources were required and upon the donor community to provide the necessary resources.

The mission stressed the urgency of accelerating HNP reform so that they could establish the trust of Haitian citizens and be counted upon to provide public security in Haiti. That reform should be planned and executed by the Transitional Government with the support of MINUSTAH and bilateral partners.

The international community should provide assistance for rebuilding Haiti's institutions, many of which were barely functioning, such as the judicial and penal systems. The mission recommended that additional measures to assist the judicial system be examined with Haitian authorities, and that MINUSTAH's mandate be amended to allow international experts to participate and assist in that effort.

All actors had to abide by human rights standards, and combating impunity and promoting respect for human rights were urgently demanded by both the Haitian people and the international community. The Haitian authorities were urged to address, as a matter of priority, the most flagrant, sensitive or visible cases, including by investigating alleged human rights violations by HNP.

Stressing that there could be no genuine stability in the country without strengthening its economy, the mission renewed its appeal for the accelerated disbursement of the funds pledged by international financial institutions since the 2004 International Donors Conference on Haiti [YUN 2004, p. 301], and supported the Cayenne (French Guiana) follow-up donor conference to be held by July. The need to urgently implement highly visible quick-impact projects was emphasized, and donors were called upon to resume full cooperation with Haiti, especially in supporting such priority areas as infrastructure, energy and the environment.

To improve the Haitian population's understanding of its mandate and role, the mission recommended that MINUSTAH develop and implement a proactive communications and public relations strategy. It also reaffirmed the Council's view that a long-term UN presence in Haiti was required.

Security Council consideration (April/May). On 20 April [meeting 5164], the Security Council was provided with an oral report on the mission's activities and findings by the head of the mission, Ronaldo Mota Sardenberg. On 13 May [meeting 5178], the Council considered the mission's final report (see above). Mr. Sardenberg, in introducing the report to the Council, said that, notwithstanding the deep-seated root causes of unrest in Haiti, including poverty, the situation required a long-term approach, while at the same time dealing with a number of very serious issues in the short and medium term. The holding of elections was the most pressing and visible challenge for Haitians and the international community in the short term. Free, fair and inclusive elections had to take place in accordance with the established timetable, as they were essential for the formation of a legitimate Government. However, additional resources would be required to cover an estimated $22 million funding gap so that those elections could take place.

Haiti's representative told the Council that the Interim Government's priority remained the holding of free and democratic elections at the end of 2005, and laying the foundation for the country's socio-economic development. He drew the Council's attention to the measures the Government intended to take in that regard, including conducting operations to gain control of some armed gangs, restoring the State's authority throughout the country and regaining control of police stations. Moreover, the national dialogue had been officially initiated and an official commission created to implement DDR programmes. However, the funds required to carry out the latter exercise exceeded available government funding and pledged contributions remained limited. The Interim Government wanted to reaffirm its commitment to working for the respect of human rights and was responsive to the comments and criticisms of human rights organizations. It was working with the international community to rebuild and strengthen State institutions and intended to carry out the reforms of the judiciary and police. To accomplish those things, the ongoing assistance of the international community and MINUSTAH would remain essential. Accordingly, Haiti hoped that MINUSTAH's mandate would be renewed as recommended by the mission.

National dialogue and election preparations

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his May report on MINUSTAH activities [S/2005/313 & Add.1], stated that the two main processes of the political transition—national dialogue and elections—were launched by the Transitional Government and the Provisional Electoral Council, respectively, but internal divisions and limited capacity hampered their ability to decisively move the transition forward, putting into question the inclusiveness, transparency, credibility and legitimacy of those processes. While the Transitional Government had been in office for a year, it continued to be criticized by leading political and civil society groups. As the political discourse failed to offer a clear vision for Haiti's future beyond the elections, the political class remained polarized. Fanmi Lavalas maintained its position to remain outside the transition process, as a result of, among other reasons, the 28 February fatal shooting of a demonstrator by HNP and the continued detention of high-profile party figures, such as Interior Minister Jocelerme Privert. That party itself was internally fractured, with hardliners calling for the return of former President Aristide; moderate elements of the party not ruling out participation; and leaders participating in open discussions with the interim Prime Minister, the Secretary-General's Special Representative and other political parties at a March seminar.

The 7 April launch of national dialogue by interim President Boniface Alexandre had sparked mixed reactions. Outlined in a presidential decree, the dialogue aimed to create an environment conducive to holding the elections; ensure the proper governance of the country after the elections; develop a clear vision for national development; and reinforce mechanisms of good governance. A 12-member preparatory commission would assist the interim President in establishing institutions to lead the dialogue. However, differences remained on what the focus of the dialogue should be and whether a longer-term dialogue should begin before the upcoming elections. Some civil society organizations and political parties were concerned by provisions in the decree, which barred any changes to the Transitional Government, the Consensus on the Political Transition Pact [YUN 2004, p. 293], the electoral calendar or the Constitution. MINUSTAH continued to meet with key political actors, including factions of Fanmi Lavalas, to ensure that the dialogue served the long-term aim of national reconciliation and the holding of credible and inclusive elections.

The electoral law, which was published on 11 February, provided for local elections to be held on 9 October and the first round of parliamentary and presidential elections on 13 November, with a second round on 18 December, if necessary. Voter registration began on 25 April, and by 9 May, 15 of the 409 planned registration offices had opened and more than 16,000 citizens had registered, out of approximately 4 million eligible voters. The deadline for completing the registration process was 9 August. MINUSTAH was concerned about the constitutionality of certain provisions of the electoral law, which it had made known to the Transitional Government, and the fact that necessary decrees, such as those on the funding of political parties and on the official status of the new national identification card, had not yet been adopted. Other concerns included security, highlighted by the attacks on 24 and 29 March on the headquarters of the Provisional Electoral Council, and the shortfall of $22 million out of a total revised electoral budget of $60.7 million. On 1 April, the Prime Minister created an Electoral Security Commission to prepare a comprehensive security plan for the elections and to supervise its execution. The Provisional Electoral Council agreed to establish a corps of 3,600 local electoral assistants, to be armed with non-lethal weapons, to provide security at registration and polling centres alongside MINUSTAH and HNP.

The security situation in Port-au-Prince remained volatile with an increased number of violent acts by various armed groups. The 19 February incident at the National Penitentiary in Port-au-Prince, where a group of unidentified armed men forced their way into the prison and enabled 493 detainees to escape, was a public security setback. Kidnappings reported in Port-au-Prince had also increased. Outside the capital the situation remained generally calm, with only a few incidents reported in Cap-Haïtien, Gonaïves, Hinche and Petit-Goâve. To ensure a stable and secure environment, MINUSTAH undertook a number of successful operations, including the recovery of police stations in Petit-Goâve and Terre-Rouge in March. However, the situation in Cité Soleil presented severe challenges. A joint HNP/MINUSTAH operation to restrict the movements of gang members and the circulation of weapons and ammunition was met with strong resistance. Three MINUSTAH soldiers were killed during the reporting period and there were other instances where MINUSTAH personnel had been targeted. The HNP Director-General said that 45 police officers had been killed in the past year. MINUSTAH monitored public demonstrations mostly organized by Fanmi Lavalas supporters.

An encouraging development in the area of DDR was the adoption by the Transitional Government of the national DDR programme, developed jointly by the Transitional Government, MINUSTAH, UNDP and other stakeholders through the Interim Cooperation Framework Sectoral Round Table on disarmament. However, the programme was not operational and its legal status was still unclear. Other positive developments were the 13 March surrender by 227 former soldiers in Cap-Haïtien of a symbolic number of weapons, and their agreement to be reintegrated into society. MINUSTAH continued its sensitization campaign with other illegal armed groups on a community-by-community basis and members of some urban gangs in Les Cayes and Port-au-Prince had expressed an interest in handing over their weapons in exchange for community development initiatives.

The report also highlighted the 15 March adoption of the HNP 2004-2008 strategic development plan by the Conseil supérieur de la police nationale; implementation by MINUSTAH of a co-location programme for training and capacity-building of the police; supervision and assistance by MINUSTAH police advisers in the training of new HNP recruits; and participation by MINUSTAH in the implementation of the joint HNP vetting programme.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Transitional Government do more to secure broad participation in the electoral process and ensure that legislation conducive to such participation was in place. It should also address the concerns raised regarding the electoral law, while the donor community should ensure that the necessary financial means were available to support the electoral process. Although there had been signs of improvement in the security situation following successful MINUSTAH/HNP operations to curb the activities of illegal armed groups, those efforts had to be maintained to eliminate potential threats to the electoral process. Urging prompt implementation of a comprehensive DDR programme by the Transitional Government, the Secretary-General expressed concern that, unless progress could be achieved in that area, the security situation would remain fragile. He appealed to the Transitional Government to investigate human rights violations allegedly committed by HNP officers, and to explore means by which the international community could assist in expediting some of the most sensitive cases. He advised that reform of the justice and penal systems be pursued in parallel to the efforts to professionalize HNP. In the area of police reform, he urged the Transitional Government to ensure that the technical advice and recommendations provided by MINUSTAH's civilian police officers were implemented by HNP officers at all levels.

Extension and expansion of MINUSTAH mandate

In view of the expectation that security challenges would increase in the months leading up to and following the elections, the Secretary-General indicated [S/2005/313] that a review by his Special Representative and MINUSTAH leadership had concluded that the Mission's structure would need to be enhanced. The proposals included: the development of standard procedures for the police and military components; enhancement of the Joint Operations Centre; development of a mission-wide Joint Mission Analysis Cell; addition of an infantry battalion of 750 troops to address gang violence in Cité Soleil; strengthening of the Mission's "surge" capacity to handle the potentially volatile security environment in the eastern part of the Central District; and creation of a new sector headquarters for the military component for the Port-au-

Prince region, which would require an additional 50 staff officers. Further proposals focused on the need to reorient MINUSTAH resources to enhance coverage of the country with formed police units; and to professionalize HNP by strengthening its involvement in the vetting programme, election-related activities and investigations of human rights abuses or other security incidents. Those activities would require an additional 275 police personnel. Total proposed MINUSTAH requirements would raise from 6,700 to 7,500 troops and from 1,622 to 1,897 police officers. MINUSTAH would also provide support to the judiciary to expedite judicial procedures for all cases of prolonged pre-trial detention, including through the establishment of ad hoc commissions to review the cases of detainees, and to help the Transitional Government overcome deficiencies in the justice and penal sectors. The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council approve the adjustments to MINUSTAH's mandate and extended it for a further 12 months, until after the elections and the establishment of the newly elected Government.

Security Council consideration (23 May). The Security Council, in a closed meeting on 23 May [meeting 5183] with the troop-contributing countries, heard a briefing by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and head of MINUSTAH.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 31 May [meeting 5192], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1601(2005). The draft [S/2005/354] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming resolutions 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004 and 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, and recalling resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, relevant statements by its President, as well as the report of the Security Council on its mission to Haiti from 13 to 16 April 2005,

Determining that the situation in Haiti continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security in the region,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, as described in paragraph 7, section I, of resolution 1542(2004),

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, as contained in resolution 1542(2004), until 24 June 2005, with the intention to renew for further periods;
2. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General;
3. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

The Security Council met on 7 June [meeting 5196] in a private meeting with Haiti's interim Prime Minister, Gérard Latortue, who described the situation in the country and put forward ideas on how to better address the security situation, particularly through cooperation between MINUSTAH and HNP [A/60/2].

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 22 June [meeting 5210], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1608(2005). The draft [S/2005/402] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming resolutions 1542(2004) of 30 April 2004 and 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, and recalling resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, relevant statements by its President, as well as the report of the Security Council on its mission to Haiti from 13 to 16 April 2005,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity of Haiti,

Stressing that free and fair elections, open to all political parties that have renounced violence and with the broadest possible participation of the Haitian people, must take place in 2005 in accordance with the established timetable, and that the democratically elected authorities must take office on 7 February 2006,

Affirming its determination to ensure a secure and stable environment in which the electoral process can take place,

Condemning all violations of human rights, including lack of due process and prolonged pretrial detentions, and urging the Transitional Government of Haiti to take all necessary measures to put an end to impunity and to ensure progress in the respect for the rule of law, including by pursuing reforms in the Haitian National Police and in the justice and correctional systems,

Reaffirming the importance of appropriate expertise on issues relating to gender in peacekeeping operations and post-conflict peacebuilding in accordance with resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000, recalling the need to address violence against women and children, and encouraging the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, as well as the Transitional Government, to actively address these issues,

Underlining the fact that pervasive poverty is an important root cause of unrest in Haiti, and stressing that there can be no genuine stability without strengthening its economy, including through a long-term strategy for sustainable development and the strengthening of Haitian institutions,

Welcoming the approval of a national programme on disarmament, demobilization and reintegration by the Transitional Government, the United Nations Development Programme and the Mission, and emphasizing that its implementation is imperative for broader stabilization efforts to succeed,

Recalling that security, political reconciliation and economic reconstruction efforts remain key to the stability of Haiti,

Noting that the Haitian people must take responsibility for achieving stability, social and economic development and law and order,

Determining that the situation in Haiti continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, as described in paragraph 7, section I, of resolution 1542(2004),

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti, as contained in resolution 1542(2004), until 15 February 2006, with the intention to renew for further periods;

2. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 13 May 2005 on the Mission, and supports the recommendations of the Secretary-General as outlined in paragraphs 44 to 52 thereof, as follows:

(a) A temporary increase, during the electoral period and subsequent political transition, of 750 personnel to the currently authorized military strength of the Mission in order to create a rapid reaction force in Haiti to provide increased security, in particular in and around Port-au-Prince;

(b) An increase of 50 military personnel in order to create a sector headquarters in Port-au-Prince, with the understanding that the Mission will optimize at all levels the coordination between military and police components to ensure efficient and better-integrated operations, including by posting United Nations staff civilian police officers in this headquarters;

(c) A temporary increase, during the electoral period and subsequent political transition, of 275 personnel to the current strength of the Mission's civilian police component to provide increased security;

(d) An assessment of the Haitian judiciary and correctional systems, including to explore possibilities for greater international community support, and a more active role of the Mission, to be submitted to the Security Council as soon as possible;

3. Decides that for a temporary period, the Mission will consist of a military component of up to 7,500 troops of all ranks and of up to 1,897 civilian police, and requests the Secretary-General to devise, in a timely manner, a progressive drawdown strategy of the Mission force levels for the post-election period, in accordance with the situation on the ground;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to share with the Council the overall plan for the successful holding of elections in Haiti, including voter registration, security, logistics, civic education, observation, and detailed budget information, urges Haitian authorities to increase and accelerate efforts to prepare for and ensure the smooth conduct of the elections, and calls upon international donors to provide the necessary resources to support the electoral process;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to share with the Council the reform plan for the Haitian National Police, formulated by the Mission and the Haitian authorities, that includes the anticipated size, standards, implementation timetable and resources;

6. Requests that the Mission concentrate the use of its resources, including civilian police, towards increasing security and protection during the electoral period, including a review, as appropriate, of the rules of engagement of the individual civilian police officers;

7. Also requests that the Mission and the Haitian authorities take all necessary steps to achieve optimal coordination between the Mission's civilian police and the Haitian National Police;

8. Reaffirms the authority of the Mission to vet and certify new and existing Haitian National Police personnel for service, and urges the Transitional Government of Haiti to ensure that police personnel do not serve unless certified and to ensure that technical advice and recommendations provided by the Mission are fully implemented by Haitian authorities at all levels without delay;

9. Calls upon the Mission to make the Joint Mission Analysis Cell operational as soon as possible in order to pool and better use the information available to the military, police and civilian components of the Mission, and also calls for the use of the Mission's aviation assets in an efficient and effective manner in support of security operations;

10. Urges the Transitional Government to conduct thorough and transparent investigations into cases of human rights violations, particularly those allegedly involving Haitian National Police officers, and requests that in order to support this effort the Mission make the Joint Special Investigation Unit operational as soon as possible;

11. Welcomes the launching on 7 April 2005 of the "national dialogue" by the Transitional Government and stresses that such a dialogue should serve the long-term aim of national reconciliation and, in the shorter term, the holding of credible and inclusive elections, urges the Transitional Government to redouble its efforts for this essential process, and invites all Haitians to participate in this dialogue without delay;

12. Urges the Transitional Government and the Mission to begin immediately effective implementation of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programme, and calls upon all Member States to provide timely financial, human and technical resources in support of this programme;

13. Renews its appeal for the accelerated disbursement of the funds pledged by international financial institutions and donors at the International Donors Conference on Haiti on 19 and 20 July 2004, supports the Cayenne follow-up donor conference held in Montreal, Canada, on 16 and 17 June 2005, and calls upon all donors to continue to assist Haiti;

14. Requests the Mission to strengthen its capacity to implement quick-impact projects, and calls for increased coordination between the various development actors in Haiti in order to ensure greater efficiency in development efforts;

15. Invites the Bretton Woods institutions to consider the issue of debt sustainability and the implications of the Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative for Haiti;

16. Urges the Mission to urgently develop and implement a proactive communications and public relations strategy, in order to improve the Haitian population's understanding of the mandate of the Mission and its role in Haiti;

17. Welcomes efforts undertaken by the Mission to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive and disciplinary action to ensure that such acts are properly investigated and punished in cases involving their personnel;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council on the effectiveness of the implementation of the mandate of the Mission at least once every three months, and requests that the Secretariat keep the Council members informed, on a regular basis, on the status of electoral preparations, including party and voter registration figures and other relevant data;

19. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Further political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (October). In an October report [S/2005/631] on MINUSTAH, the Secretary-General said that the Transitional Government and MINUSTAH continued to be confronted with serious political and security challenges. To develop a strategy to combat armed gang violence and strengthen confidence in the Transitional Government and the electoral process, Prime Minister Latortue organized closed meetings with political leaders and the private sector. Other developments included the 14 June resignation of the Minister of Justice and Public Security and the ensuing inauguration of a new cabinet on 22 June; the appointment of a new HNP Director General; and the 25 June presentation by the Council of Eminent Persons to the Transitional Government of a road map outlining priorities for the successful continuation of the transition process.

Political tensions and security concerns peaked when a well-known journalist and poet, Jacques Roche, who had been kidnapped four days earlier, was found murdered on 14 July. Father Gérard Jean-Juste, a Lavalas activist, was taken into protective custody following his appearance at Mr. Roche's funeral on 21 July and was later arrested and charged with participating in the kidnapping and murder of Mr. Roche. On 31 August, he was transferred to the National Penitentiary.

MINUSTAH organized a series of meetings of political parties to create a positive environment for the electoral process. On 17 May, the leaders of 34 political parties signed the "Port-au-Prince declaration against corruption", which called for the development of an ethical code of conduct for political parties, and on 14 June, 17 political parties, including sectors of Fanmi Lavalas, signed an electoral code of conduct barring the use of violence in the pursuit of political power. On 27 September, 12 parties signed a "pacte de stabilité et de gouvernabilité" committing them to cooperating and collaborating before and after the elections. With UNDP, MINUSTAH and the Transitional Government organized a workshop for some 60 political leaders to discuss key governance issues. The Provisional Electoral Council approved the registration of 45 political parties and 32 presidential candidates, including former President René Préval. Considerable progress was made in voter registration, led by OAS. As at 29 September, over 2.9 million people, more than 70 per cent of the estimated 4 million eligible voters, had registered. The deadline for voter registration was extended four times, the latest until 30 September. A few setbacks had hindered progress in the election preparations. The Provisional Electoral Council announced in September a change in the dates for the legislative and presidential elections to 20 November and 3 January 2006, and local and municipal elections on 11 December 2005. The calendar had not been promulgated by the Transitional Government and its feasibility was publicly contested. Prime Minister Latortue asked the Council to review the calendar in the light of the constitutional requirement to swear in the President by 7 February 2006. As the Provisional Electoral Council continued to suffer from structural and operational shortcomings, its ability to organize and administer the elections in a timely manner remained an issue of concern. To support the process, MINUSTAH and OAS identified 10 key decisions and actions to be urgently taken by the Haitian authorities, including providing the Council with an effective executive structure and staff; confirming the electoral calendar; revising the electoral decree; and determining the location and number of polling sites. As no action had been taken by the national authorities to implement the 10 priority measures, it was anticipated that MINUSTAH might need to play a more active role in the electoral process than originally envisaged.

A marked rise in violence and criminality in Port-au-Prince, including 59 kidnappings in June and the killing of 17 people in a 1 July arson attack against the main marketplace, had generated serious public anxiety. On 6 July, in a large-scale operation in Cité Soleil aimed at apprehending a prominent gang leader, Emmanuel Wilmer, MINUSTAH encountered heavy gunfire. While it was believed that Mr. Wilmer and his associates had been killed during the operation, there was concern that, due to the densely populated urban nature of the terrain and the strength of the armed response, civilians might have been caught in the crossfire as MINUSTAH troops were withdrawing. There were unconfirmed reports from HNP and other sources that gangs were seen killing civilians following the operation. Security in other parts of the country remained fragile, but generally stable. Conditions in Bel-Air had improved significantly enough to allow the reopening of HNP community stations in the area.

MINUSTAH developed an electoral security plan, defining responsibilities and security arrangements for the election period, which included increased military and police capacities. It also continued to persuade groups of former soldiers to disarm voluntarily, with no progress being made. The National Commission on Disarmament, with MINUSTAH assistance, devised a modus operandi for negotiating eligibility criteria. In the area of the rule of law, the lack of strong and professional institutions continued to be a concern, particularly in relation to the alleged misconduct of HNP officers. Their alleged involvement in the execution of nine individuals on 20 August at a football game in the Martissant area of Port-au-Prince was under investigation by MINUSTAH. The release of Louis Jodel Chamblain, the second-in-command of a paramilitary group who had been convicted of various crimes in 1993 and 1994, had further tarnished the credibility of the justice system.

In his observations of prospects for a credible electoral process, the Secretary-General indicated that, although a significant number of voters had registered and progress had been made in dealing with urgent security threats, the gains attained were fragile and other issues needed to be addressed, such as the technical problems to the electoral process, the possibility of increased violence during the campaign period, and the persisting impunity and disregard for human rights. The Transitional Government should also address concerns regarding the electoral law and take measures to facilitate inclusive and participatory elections to avoid any perception that the judicial process was being used to adversely affect political participation. The 10 priority actions identified by MINUSTAH and OAS to overcome technical and organizational challenges needed to be taken urgently, with a focus on strengthening the Provisional Electoral Council. He emphasized that the international community should stand ready to play a greater role in organizing the electoral process to ensure its success. The Secretary-General stated that, given the possible increase in tension during the electoral process, a message of reassurance and deterrence could be conveyed if one or more Member States were ready to back up MINUSTAH through the deployment of an offshore presence.

Security Council consideration (October). On 18 October [meeting 5284], the Security Council met to discuss the question concerning Haiti and heard a briefing from interim Prime Minister Gérard Latortue. The Council had before it the Secretary-General's October report on MINUSTAH (see above).

Mr. Latortue reaffirmed the Transitional Government's commitment to ensure the transfer of power on 7 February 2006 and said that the political situation in Haiti had evolved in the right direction. He informed the Council that, although there were more than 40 political parties and 30 presidential candidates, the political parties had been working well together and had signed a governability pact to demonstrate their commitment to working with whichever party was elected and whosoever might become President. He announced the installation of a new Director General of the Provisional Electoral Council, who would oversee implementation of all the major decisions of the Council, and his intention to submit a new electoral timetable to guarantee the handover of power by 7 February 2006. Mr. Latortue also indicated that the Government had observed that some gangs were working in complicity with HNP agents and warned that, despite the apparent calm, there were still forces opposed to democracy and the transfer of power through transparent and free elections. He emphasized that the recent arrest of 15 corrupt police officers had demonstrated the HNP Director General's courage to clean house and the Government's resolve to ensure respect for human rights. He alerted the Security Council to the fact that MINUSTAH's mandate would expire on 15 February 2006, only eight days after the installation of the new Government. Haiti would therefore still require MINUSTAH's assistance for a period of time.

On 18 October [meeting 5285], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/50 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council expresses its full support for the work of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Haiti, Mr. Juan Gabriel Valdés.
> The Council stresses the primary importance of ensuring that Haiti benefits from transparent, inclusive, free and fair elections, in accordance with international democratic standards and open to all political candidates that have renounced violence, thereby enabling legitimate leadership at the national and local levels. The Council conveys its concern regarding the risk of delays in the electoral process, and underlines international expectations that the first round of national elections should take place in 2005, and all efforts should be undertaken so that the democratically elected authorities take office on 7 February 2006 in accordance with the Haitian Constitution. The Council notes with appreciation that, so far, more than 3 million people have been registered. The Council praises the Organization of American States and other relevant international stakeholders for their contribution to that process. The Council welcomes the representation of a broad range of Haitian political opinion in the electoral process and underlines the importance of a collaborative approach by political leaders. National reconciliation and political dialogue should continue to be promoted as a means to ensure long-term stability and good governance.

The Council notes with concern that important challenges to the preparations for the elections remain yet to be overcome. While welcoming the recent steps taken by the Transitional Government and the Provisional Electoral Council, the Security Council urges them to perform the ten urgent tasks required to ensure that elections will take place this year, which were endorsed by the Transitional Government on 17 September 2005 and reiterated by the Core Group on Haiti on 18 October 2005. The Council calls for effective and prompt decision-making in key areas by the relevant Haitian authorities, and urges the Haitian authorities to make full use of the advice and assistance of the Mission in the organization of elections. The Council calls upon them to work with the Mission to develop a phased electoral plan as a matter of priority, with a view to finalizing a feasible electoral calendar. The Council also urges the Haitian authorities to publish swiftly the final list of candidates for the elections, and to agree in consultation with the Mission upon a list of voting centres that ensures voter access and takes into account budgetary, security and logistical implications.

The Council strongly supports the Mission's endeavours to ensure a secure and stable environment in Haiti, which is crucial for the country's progress, and to enable the electoral process to take place. The Council recognizes the contribution of the Mission to the restoration and maintenance of the rule of law in the country, and underlines the need for strong and coordinated assistance to enable the reform and restructuring of Haiti's rule-of-law institutions. To this end, the Council urges the Transitional Government, working with the Mission, to put into effect the initiatives called for in resolution 1608(2005) concerning the Haitian National Police reform and restructuring plan as well as the reform of the judicial system, in order to end impunity and ensure due process. The Council welcomes the improvements in the security situation, due to the resolve of the Mission to act in support of the Transitional Government. The Council expresses concern regarding reports of involvement of some officers of the Haitian National Police in serious crimes and human rights violations and stresses the need to investigate fully any allegations of serious crimes and human rights violations. The Council welcomes the deployment of the additional military and police personnel of the Mission, in accordance with resolution 1608(2005), and expresses its gratitude to troop- and police-contributing countries.

The Council reiterates the need for the Transitional Government and the Mission to begin immediately effective implementation of a disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programme. The Council stresses the need to implement high-visibility, quick-impact projects that create jobs. The Council also recognizes the need to maintain stability in the period immediately following the elections, including through a continued international presence, and to ensure that key Haitian institutions can function adequately, especially those institutions addressing the rule of law and development. The Council recognizes the importance of the upcoming donor conference to be held in Brussels on 20 and 21 October 2005, and calls upon donors to continue to disburse the pledged funds. The Council recognizes further that this conference constitutes an important opportunity to further elaborate on short-, medium- and long-term strategies, within a unified framework, to ensure coordination and continuity in a coherent and well prioritized response to Haitian problems. Haiti is at a critical juncture. While ultimately the responsibility for Haiti's future lies with its Government and people, the international community must continue to provide support.

Communication. On 21 October [A/60/447], Spain transmitted a communiqué adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the Ibero-American community of nations (Salamanca, Spain, 14-15 October), supporting the implementation of MINUSTAH's mandate and requesting the Ibero-American Secretary-General to carry out a mission to Haiti to assess the situation and, in conjunction with the United Nations and other international bodies, encourage the authorities to hold the elections as planned.

Further developments. In a later report [S/2006/60], the Secretary-General stated that the activities of the Haitian authorities and MINUSTAH continued to focus on ensuring the organization of credible and timely elections. However, political and technical difficulties in the decision-making process caused more delays. Disputes arose from the creation of a "commission on nationalities", which had recommended against several candidacies, including that of Dumarsais Siméus, a presidential candidate of the "Tet Ansanm" political party. On 8 December, the Supreme Court, which had previously indicated that Mr. Siméus' candidacy should be retained, refused a request by the Provisional Electoral Council to reverse its decision. The decision by the interim President, on 9 December, to order the retirement of five Supreme Court judges and nominate five others to replace them was considered a serious human rights concern. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights stressed full respect for the separation of powers.

While voter registration had concluded at the end of October, all technical and logistical arrangements had not been completed. Presidential elections were being contested by 33 candidates approved by the Provisional Electoral Council, following weeks of controversy over the eligibility of presidential candidates holding dual nationality, and parliamentary seats by 1,409 candidates. Due to concerns over possible links between political parties and armed groups, technical issues that could impede voter access and transparency of the voting and tabulation processes, and questions of the independence of electoral workers, the Secretary-General stressed the importance of the presence of international observers to ensure credible elections. By early December, observers of the International Mission for Monitoring Haitian Elections had been deployed to all 10 provinces. MINUSTAH maintained contact with observers around the country through regular meetings and briefings and provided logistical and security assistance, in emergency cases.

The overall security environment remained relatively stable in most of the country and in areas of Port-au-Prince that had been problematic, such as the Bel-Air district. However, the situation deteriorated in Cité Soleil and the adjacent Route Nationale 1 during December, and gangs remained active in areas outside the capital in Artibonite and Ouanaminthe. Kidnappings increased sharply during the final months of the year, with 56 in September, 63 in October, 74 in November and 241 in December. A confrontation in October between HNP and armed gangs in Gonaives led to arson, looting and the death of two people over the course of three days. Criminal activities, such as illegal arms and drug trafficking, persisted along Haiti's porous land and sea borders. On 12 December, Haiti and the Dominican Republic reached agreement on the reactivation of the Haitian-Dominican mixed commission in an effort to better manage security at the border. MINUSTAH continued to play a pivotal role in the security and stability of the country, but it had also suffered five fatalities and injury to two military peacekeepers in a 16 December ambush in Plaisance. Although conditions for a comprehensive DDR programme remained elusive, MINUSTAH, in conjunction with the National Commission on Disarmament, established community violence reduction and development committees in some of the more volatile districts. An initial group of 14 disarmed gang members entered the Reintegration Orientation Centre on 11 November, followed by a group of 18 in December. Fifteen former military personnel formally entered the disarmament process on 20 October.

Professional, logistical and technical shortcomings of the HNP continued to inhibit its effectiveness. However, staged demonstrations against the HNP General Director and the spray-painting of MINUSTAH vehicles with slogans, following the 4 November arrest of two senior HNP officers for alleged obstruction of the investigation into the Martissant killings (see p. 387) in August, illustrated the potential resistance to reform measures.

MINUSTAH

In 2005, the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti (MINUSTAH), established by Security Council resolution 1542(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 294], continued to focus on ensuring a secure and stable environment, supporting the political process, and protecting and promoting human rights. In June, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1608(2005), the structure of the Mission was enhanced and its mandate extended to 15 February 2006 (see p. 384).

MINUSTAH activities

During 2005, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on the activities of MINUSTAH and developments in Haiti for the periods 18 November 2004 to 24 February 2005 [S/2005/124], 25 February to 12 May [S/2005/313 & Add.1], and 13 May to 5 October [S/2005/631]. Activities for the remainder of the year were contained in a later report [S/2006/60]. In addition to the political and security aspects, the reports summarized MINUSTAH activities dealing with human rights; child protection; the humanitarian situation and development; gender; the prevention of HIV/AIDS; the implementation of the Interim Cooperative Framework (ICF) and quick-impact projects; coordination with international organizations, such as the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) and OAS; and Mission support.

Human rights. The human rights situation remained alarming, with reported cases of summary executions, prolonged pre-trial detentions, arbitrary arrest, disregard for due process, rape and the alleged torture of children in the detention facilities of the Judicial Police. A hunger strike, which began in February, by Yvon Neptune and Jocelerme Privert, protesting their prolonged pre-trial detentions, resulted in their hospitalization. Although it was reported in May that Mr. Neptune's health had seriously deteriorated, he and Mr. Privert remained in detention through the end of the year. The independent expert on the situation of human rights in Haiti, Louis Joinet, who visited the country in March and November, presented a report [E/CN.4/2006/115] covering those visits to the Commission on Human Rights (see p. 740).

Child protection. MINUSTAH and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) continued to draw attention to violence against children. By

May, another 50 had died from gang violence, while others had been victims of rape. The alleged killing by HNP of two minors in Cité de Dieu and a 4-year-old girl in Pétion-Ville were under investigation by MINUSTAH and UNICEF. Human rights organizations and the main hospital in Cité Soleil reported that 30 to 40 children had died due to gang violence. To address violations of children's rights, MINUSTAH signed an agreement with HNP for the provision of comprehensive child-protection training for all new police recruits. It also organized focus groups to develop ways to reintegrate juvenile members of the armed groups into their communities.

Humanitarian situation. MINUSTAH continued to respond to the humanitarian situation in Haiti. The effects of severe drought early in the year and the ensuing agricultural loss were further exacerbated by Hurricanes Dennis and Emily, which killed 32 people and damaged 15 schools, 400 houses, 3 water-supply systems and 1 bridge in the southern peninsula. Security challenges, particularly in Port-au-Prince, had also hampered the work of humanitarian organizations, requiring MINUSTAH and aid organizations to coordinate their activities.

Development. Further implementation of the ICF [YUN 2004, p. 296] and quick-impact projects progressed. As at 9 May, 57 projects were being implemented in agriculture, education, health, HIV/AIDS, water and sanitation; five of those had been implemented by MINUSTAH troops, mainly in infrastructure rehabilitation. By October, 40 of the 98 projects approved by MINUSTAH for the 2004/05 fiscal year had been implemented. At a ministerial meeting on assistance to Haiti (18 March, Cayenne, French Guiana), the donor community pledged to finance 380 ICF high-impact projects at an estimated cost of 750 million euros. At a donor conference later in the year (20-21 October, Brussels), it was decided that the time frame for ICF would be extended from September 2006 to the end of 2007.

Gender. MINUSTAH supported women's organizations and their recommendations on the draft electoral law, including one granting a two-thirds reduction of the registration fee for candidates from a political party or coalition that had at least 30 per cent female candidates. Following its activities to promote women's participation in the electoral process, MINUSTAH, as a member of the National Coordination Committee on the Prevention of Violence Against Women, intensified its work in that area. The Mission participated in the development of the UN inter-agency national plan on sexual violence against women (see p. 1250); launched a poster campaign in all MINUSTAH offices on the prohibition of sexual exploitation and abuse; and required new staff members to receive compulsory training on UN policy regarding sexual abuse and exploitation.

HIV/AIDS. The MINUSTAH HIV/AIDS Unit provided HIV/AIDS awareness training to its personnel and that of HNP. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and MINUSTAH developed an HIV/AIDS peer leader training programme to engage MINUSTAH personnel in prevention, education and communication activities and to establish partnerships with HIV/AIDS response organizations. MINUSTAH continued to participate in the ICF Sectoral Round-Table on HIV/AIDS and was involved in community outreach activities related to "World AIDS Day" on 1 December, including the training of former gang members and their families on HIV/AIDS prevention, awareness training for 481 Bel-Air community members and the allocation of television spots with a message on HIV/AIDS from MINUSTAH leaders and heads of UN agencies.

Other activities. The reports also chronicled MINUSTAH activities and coordination efforts with OAS and CARICOM. OAS assisted in election preparations, particularly in voter registration. While CARICOM supported the dialogue initiatives and humanitarian relief efforts in Haiti, it had not yet recognized the Transitional Government as a legitimate representative of Haiti within the organization. The Special Representative attended a CARICOM conference (16-17 February, Paramaribo, Suriname), which discussed regional issues, including Haiti. As MINUSTAH operated from shared common offices and other temporary premises at several locations since its establishment, it experienced operational difficulties. In early 2005, a site for an integrated headquarters was selected and by 27 June had been fully established. A later report indicated that renovations of the Mission headquarters were completed and MINUSTAH had erected facilities for the expanded force elements.

Ad Hoc Advisory Group. The Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti, which had been mandated by resolution 2004/322 [YUN 2004, p. 939] to follow and advise on the long-term development of the country, submitted its May report [E/2005/66] to the Economic and Social Council. Acknowledging that the new Government would face immense challenges when installed in February 2006, the Group highlighted possible elements to build on, such as progress in macroeconomic stability and economic governance. The report summarized the activities of the Group, including its April visit to Haiti in conjunction with the Security Council mission (see p. 379); the status of the MDGs; an update on international support to Haiti; priority areas for action; and implications for the long-term development of Haiti. The Group also made recommendations addressed to the Council, MINUSTAH and the UN country team, the Haitian authorities and the donor community.

Communication. On 27 June [E/2005/86], Haiti transmitted to the Economic and Social Council a letter from the interim Prime Minister, Gérard Latortue, in which he supported the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Advisory Group and requested that the Group's mandate be renewed. Mr. Latortue warned the Council not to underestimate the scope of the follow-up activities in the area of DDR. He announced the establishment of a strategic "think tank" to work in collaboration with the Ad Hoc Advisory Group to prepare a programme of work and budget.

On 27 July, the Council adopted resolution 2005/46 on the Ad Hoc Advisory Group on Haiti (see p. 1012).

Financing of missions

MINUSTAH

On 18 March [A/59/745], the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly the budget for MINUSTAH for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 and the expenditure report for the Mission for the period 1 May to 30 June 2004. The budget, which amounted to $478,055,100, provided for the deployment of 6,700 military personnel, 1,622 civilian police officers, 489 international staff, 621 national staff and 179 United Nations Volunteers (UNVs). Total expenditure for the establishment of the Mission for the period 1 May to 30 June 2004 amounted to $34,556,100 gross.

ACABQ report (April). In a 19 April report [A/59/736/Add.13], the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) identified reductions totalling $7,947,000. It therefore recommended that the General Assembly appropriate $470,108,100 for the period 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006; and that the unencumbered balance of $14,703,700 for the period 1 May to 30 June 2004 be credited to Member States in a manner to be determined by the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/530/Add.1], adopted resolution 59/17 B without vote [agenda item 155].

Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti

B

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support continuation of a peaceful and constitutional political process and the maintenance of a secure and stable environment in Haiti,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1542 (2004) of 30 April 2004, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for an initial period of six months, and the subsequent resolution 1576(2004) of 29 November 2004, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 1 June 2005,

Recalling further its resolution 58/311 of 18 June 2004 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolution 59/17 A of 29 October 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874 (S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 80.8 million United States dollars, representing some 35 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-

discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

11. Notes paragraph 20 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to address, as a matter of urgency, structural and management problems that remain to be thoroughly resolved as previously determined by the General Assembly;

13. Decides that the protocol functions shall be absorbed within the existing staff strength of the Mission;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to utilize expertise existing within the United Nations system that could support the Mission in carrying out substantive activities mandated by the Security Council;

15. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

16. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Expenditure report for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2004

17. Takes note of the expenditure report for the Mission for the period from 1 May to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

18. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti the amount of 494,887,000 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 470,073,600 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 20,289,800 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 4,523,600 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

19. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 494,887,000 dollars at a monthly rate of 41,240,583 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006 as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

20. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 13,303,300 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 10,069,500 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 2,867,900 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 365,900 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

21. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 19 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance of 14,703,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004 as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

22. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance of 14,703,700 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 21 above;

23. Decides further that the decrease of 326,300 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be set off against the credits from the amount of 14,703,700 dollars referred to in paragraphs 21 and 22 above;

24. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

25. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

26. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

27. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti".

Report of Secretary General (August). In a 1 August report [A/60/176 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General submitted a revised budget for MINUSTAH for the period 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, in the amount of $518,828,500 gross, representing an increase of $48,754,900, which provided for an additional 800 military contingent personnel, 275 civilian police officers and 17 temporary international staff, 30 national staff and 18 UNVs.

ACABQ report (September). In a September report [A/60/386], ACABQ reviewed the revised budget proposals and after identifying reductions totalling $2,340,000, recommended that the Assembly appropriate an additional amount of $46,414,900 for the period 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 November [meeting 53], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/60/541], adopted resolution 60/18 without vote [agenda item 145].

Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1529(2004) of 29 February 2004, by which the Council declared its readiness to establish a United Nations stabilization force to support continuation of a peaceful and constitutional political process and the maintenance of a secure and stable environment in Haiti,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1542 (2004) of 30 April 2004, by which the Council decided to establish the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti for an initial period of six months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1608(2005) of 22 June 2005, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission until 15 February 2006 and authorized an increase for a temporary period in the military and civilian police components of the Mission,

Recalling further its resolution 58/311 of 18 June 2004 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 59/17 B of 22 June 2005,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti as at 31 August 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 190 million United States dollars, representing some 34 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only twenty Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, subject to the provisions of the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Decides not to endorse paragraph 22 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

11. Decides to reduce the overall level of operational costs by 2,340,000 dollars, taking into account the reductions proposed in paragraphs 18 and 21 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Revised budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

15. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti the amount of 46,414,900 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, in addition to the amount of 494,887,000 dollars already appropriated for the same period under the terms of its resolution 59/17 B;

16. Also decides, taking into account the amount of 494,887,000 dollars previously apportioned at a monthly rate of 41,240,583 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 under the terms of its resolution 59/17 B, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 29,147,500 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 15 February 2006, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003 and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

17. Further decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the additional amount of 104,100 dollars approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2005 to 15 February 2006;

18. Decides to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 17,267,400 dollars for the period from 16 February to 30 June 2006 at a monthly rate of 3,867,900 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Mission;

19. Also decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the additional amount of 61,600 dollars approved for the Mission;

20. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

21. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

22. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

23. Decides to keep under review during its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Stabilization Mission in Haiti".

Other questions

Costa Rica–Nicaragua

On 29 September [A/60/417-S/2005/632], Costa Rica transmitted to the Secretary-General a statement relating to the filing before the International Court of Justice (ICJ) by Costa Rica of a case against Nicaragua concerning navigational rights of Costa Rica on the San Juan River (see p. 1385). Costa Rica said that, despite the progress achieved as a result of the September 2002 Agreement between the two countries, its rights with respect to the San Juan River remained in dispute and that it had brought the issue before the highest international judicial body so as to resolve once and for all the only source of disagreement with Nicaragua.

Cuba–United States

On 21 October [A/60/447], Spain transmitted a communiqué protesting the implementation of the Helms-Burton Act and requesting the United States to end the economic, commercial and financial blockade against Cuba.

In a letter dated 1 November [A/60/531], Cuba transmitted the declaration by organizations that had participated in the "Third Forum of Cuban civil society against the embargo and the annexation" (Havana, 31 October), which indicated that the United States embargo against Cuba had adversely impacted the country's economy, and if not dismantled, would continue to be a fundamental obstacle to Cuba's development. The declaration also demanded that the United States Government proceed with the immediate extradition of alleged terrorist Luis Clemente Posada Carriles to Venezuela and the immediate release of five imprisoned Cuban anti-terrorist fighters.

Report of Secretary-General. On 10 August [A/60/213], in response to General Assembly resolution 59/11 [YUN 2004, p. 305], the Secretary-General forwarded information received by Governments as at 15 July 2005 on the implementation of that resolution. That text had called on States to refrain from unilateral application of economic and trade measures against other States, and urged them to repeal or invalidate such measures. In addition to the replies from 84 States, the report included statements from the EU and from 10 UN bodies and 10 specialized agencies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November [meeting 45], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/12 [draft: A/60/L.9], by recorded vote (182-4-1) [agenda item 18].

Necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States of America against Cuba

The General Assembly,

Determined to encourage strict compliance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming, among other principles, the sovereign equality of States, non-intervention and non-interference in their internal affairs and freedom of international trade and navigation, which are also enshrined in many international legal instruments,

Recalling the statements of the Heads of State or Government at the Ibero-American Summits concerning the need to eliminate the unilateral application of economic and trade measures by one State against another that affect the free flow of international trade,

Concerned at the continued promulgation and application by Member States of laws and regulations, such as that promulgated on 12 March 1996 known as the "Helms-Burton Act", the extraterritorial effects of which affect the sovereignty of other States, the legitimate interests of entities or persons under their jurisdiction and the freedom of trade and navigation,

Taking note of declarations and resolutions of different intergovernmental forums, bodies and Governments that express the rejection by the international community and public opinion of the promulgation and application of regulations of the kind referred to above,

Recalling its resolutions 47/19 of 24 November 1992, 48/16 of 3 November 1993, 49/9 of 26 October 1994, 50/10 of 2 November 1995, 51/17 of 12 November 1996, 52/10 of 5 November 1997, 53/4 of 14 November 1998, 54/21 of 9 November 1999, 55/20 of 9 November 2000, 56/9 of 27 November 2001, 57/11 of 12 November 2002, 58/7 of 4 November 2003 and 59/11 of 28 October 2004,

Concerned that, since the adoption of its resolutions 47/19, 48/16, 49/9, 50/10, 51/17, 52/10, 53/4, 54/21, 55/20, 56/9, 57/11, 58/7 and 59/11, further measures of that nature aimed at strengthening and extending the economic, commercial and financial embargo against Cuba continue to be promulgated and applied, and concerned also at the adverse effects of such measures on the Cuban people and on Cuban nationals living in other countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 59/11;

2. Reiterates its call upon all States to refrain from promulgating and applying laws and measures of the kind referred to in the preamble to the present resolution in conformity with their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations and international law, which, inter alia, reaffirm the freedom of trade and navigation;

3. Once again urges States that have and continue to apply such laws and measures to take the necessary steps to repeal or invalidate them as soon as possible in accordance with their legal regime;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the appropriate organs and agencies of the United Nations system, to prepare a report on the implementation of the present resolution in the light of the purposes and principles of the Charter and international law and to submit it to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Necessity of ending the economic, commercial and financial embargo imposed by the United States of America against Cuba".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/12:

Communications. On 21 May [A/59/808-S/2005/330], Cuba transmitted the text of a 20 May address by President Fidel Castro pertaining to alleged terrorist acts that had taken place in the country. Other letters from Cuba [A/59/812-S/2005/341, A/59/907-S/2005/565, A/60/408-S/2005/626] dealt with the situation of alleged terrorist Luis Posada Carriles. Venezuela also transmitted letters on 15 June [A/59/849-S/2005/394] and 29 September [A/60/406-S/2005/624] in reference to Mr. Carriles.

Ibero-American community

On 21 October [A/60/447], Spain transmitted the Salamanca Declaration, adopted on 15 October by the Heads of State and Government of the Ibero-American community of nations at its Fifteenth Summit (Salamanca, Spain, 14-15 October), establishing the Ibero-American secretariat as a permanent organ to support the institutionalization of the Ibero-American Conference.

Observer status

On 23 November, the General Assembly granted observer status to the Ibero-American Conference (resolution 60/28) (see p. 1543) and to the Latin American Integration Association (resolution 60/25) (see p. 1542) in the work of the Assembly.

Chapter IV

Asia and the Pacific

In 2005, the United Nations continued to face great political and security challenges in Asia, especially in Afghanistan and Iraq, in its efforts to restore peace and stability, and promote economic and social development in that region.

In Afghanistan, the political transition provided for under the Bonn Agreement [YUN 2001, p. 263] was completed with the holding of parliamentary and provincial council elections on 18 September and the inauguration of the National Assembly on 19 December. In recognition of the fact that Afghanistan would require international assistance to meet security, economic and humanitarian challenges, the Afghan Government and the United Nations, following the parliamentary elections, initiated consultations with international actors to reach a consensus on the strategy to address them.

The International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), a multinational force established by Security Council resolution 1386(2001) [ibid., p. 267], continued to assist the Afghan Government in the maintenance of security in Kabul and its surrounding areas. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) continued its role as lead command for ISAF throughout 2005. In December, NATO adopted a revised ISAF operational plan, which expanded its presence to the southern regions of Afghanistan.

In July, the Council further refined its sanctions measures against Osama bin Laden, Al-Qaida, the Taliban and their associates, and provided more clarity regarding who could be placed on the Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee's consolidated list, which remained a critical tool for implementing all sanctions measures. The mandate of the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Committee was extended for 17 months. The Monitoring Team submitted two reports on the implementation of the sanctions measures by States.

The Economic and Social Council, in July, adopted resolution 2005/24 on support to the Government of Afghanistan in its efforts to implement the counter-narcotics implementation plan (see p. 1357). By resolution 60/179, the General Assembly, in December, called on the international community to support the Afghan Government in ensuring the effective implementation of that plan (ibid.). The Council, in July, adopted resolution 2005/8 on the situation of women and girls in Afghanistan (see p. 1259).

Nowhere were the stakes higher and the challenges to global peace and security greater than in Iraq. The United Nations continued to promote an inclusive, participatory and transparent political transition process, despite great security constraints due to an ever increasing level of violence.

During the year, the Iraqi people exercised their right to vote on three different occasions. In January, elections for the Transitional National Assembly, 18 governorate councils and the Kurdistan National Assembly took place. Following the election, Ibrahim al-Jaafari was elected Prime Minister of the Iraqi Transitional Government. The constitutional referendum was held on 15 October, resulting in the adoption of a new constitution, and on 15 December, elections were held for a new Parliament, the Council of Representatives. Though final elections results were expected to be announced in January 2006, the transition timetable set forth in the Transitional Administrative Law and endorsed by resolution 1546(2004) was completed with the holding of those elections. However, while Iraq met all the key benchmarks of that timetable, it continued to face formidable political, security and economic challenges. The political transition was accompanied by an increasingly sophisticated and complex insurgency, underscored by high levels of ethnic and sectarian violence, intimidation and murder, including the assassination of foreign diplomats. The security environment constrained both the UN presence and its ability to operate effectively in Iraq. UN staff continued to rely to a large degree on the multinational force for security and information.

The high-level Independent Inquiry Committee of the Iraq oil-for-food programme, headed by Paul A. Volcker, reported evidence of misadministration in the programme and of corruption within the United Nations and by affiliated contractors. The Committee also found that the programme's general management was characterized by weak administrative practices and inadequate control and auditing. The Committee, however, did note that the programme succeeded in restoring minimal standards of nutrition and health in Iraq, while helping to maintain the international effort to prevent the former regime of Saddam Hussein from acquiring weapons of mass destruction. The Secretary-General took full responsibility for his personal failings, as well as the Organization's.

With the establishment of two liaison detachments in Basra and Erbil, the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI) continued to operate from three countries, with offices in Baghdad, Amman, Jordan, and Kuwait City. Given the prevailing security situation inside Iraq, UNAMI relied on the Multinational Force for logistical support and personnel security.

The United Nations Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission and the International Atomic Energy Agency continued to assess material that was in the public domain pertaining to Iraq's alleged weapons of mass destruction.

Despite greater cooperation from the Iraqi authorities, progress towards the resolution of the issue of the repatriation and return of all Kuwaiti and third-country nationals or their remains was slow. Kuwait continued to face no small task in locating mass graves and in recovering mortal remains.

In 2005, Timor-Leste continued to strengthen its national institutions with help from the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor (UNMISET) and the newly established United Nations Office in Timor-Leste (UNOTIL). As State institutions and security structures were not yet strong enough to stand alone at the close of UNMISET's mandate on 20 May, UNOTIL was created as a follow-on mission, with a scaled-down structure, for a period of one year, to support and monitor progress in the development of critical state institutions and to observe democratic governance and human rights. After a law on restructuring the Government was promulgated, a new Government was selected and sworn in on 28 July. Local elections were completed in all 13 districts. UN support of the serious crimes process, tasked with investigating and prosecuting crimes against humanity committed in 1999, came to a close with the termination of UNMISET's mandate. Significant progress was made towards the demarcation of the land border between Indonesia and Timor-Leste. An agreement between Timor-Leste and Australia over the sharing of Timor Sea oil and gas resources was also close to finalization.

The Papua New Guinea province of Bougainville made significant progress towards the fulfilment of the 2001 Bougainville Peace Agreement. With the support of the United Nations Observer Mission in Bougainville (UNOMB), the weapons disposal process was completed and elections to establish the first Autonomous Bougainville Government were held. Joseph C. Kabui, former President of the Bougainville's People's Congress, was elected to the presidency. Following the elections, UNOMB's mandate, having been fully implemented, was terminated on 30 June.

Among other concerns in the region brought to the attention of the United Nations, were growing instability in Central Asia; developments in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea; the situation in Myanmar; tensions in Nepal; and the issue of the Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa islands in the Persian Gulf. The activities of the United Nations Tajikistan Office of Peacebuilding were extended for another year, until 1 June 2006, in order to continue to support Tajikistan in its post-conflict peacebuilding efforts. The General Assembly adopted a resolution welcoming Mongolia's efforts to celebrate its eight hundredth anniversary of statehood in 2006, emphasizing the concept of dialogue among civilizations.

Afghanistan

Implementation of the Bonn Agreement

In 2005, the United Nations continued to assist the Government of Afghanistan in implementing the 2001 Agreement on Provisional Arrangements in Afghanistan Pending the Re-establishment of Permanent Government Institutions (the Bonn Agreement) [YUN 2001, p. 263], with support provided by the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA), under the direction of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of Mission, and by the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), led by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). Implementation of the Bonn process was completed with the holding of parliamentary elections on 18 September.

The Secretary-General submitted two progress reports to the General Assembly and the Security Council on the implementation of the Bonn Agreement and on UNAMA activities for the period from January to August [A/59/744-S/2005/183, A/60/224-S/2005/525]. Developments for the latter part of the year were contained in a later report [A/60/712-S/2006/145]. ISAF activities were reported to the Council by the NATO Secretary-General through the UN Secretary-General [S/2005/131, S/2005/230, S/2005/431, S/2005/634]. The Council extended UNAMA's mandate until 24 March 2006 (resolution 1589(2005)) (see p. 400) and ISAF's

On 21 December, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention to appoint Tom Koenigs (Germany) as his Special Representative for Afghanistan and Head of UNAMA to replace Jean Arnault (France) [S/2005/819, S/2005/820].

Security Council consideration (January). At the Security Council's 10 January meeting [meeting 5108] to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, in his briefing on developments in Afghanistan and plans for the coming months, said that the 2004 presidential elections and the appointment of a cabinet [YUN 2004, p. 321] had given a new momentum to the Afghan Peace process. Afghans and the international community had to take full advantage of that circumstance to move the Bonn Agenda forward and fulfil as much as possible, in 2005, the broad objectives of the transition. He noted that parliamentary elections were expected to take place between 21 April and 21 May, following the establishment of the Independent Electoral Commission (see below). In order to meet the April-May target date, the Government and the electoral authorities had to decide on: the participation of refugees and nomads; the demarcation of district boundaries; the population figures for each province; the preparation of voter lists; and the revision of the electoral law. The most urgent of those decisions concerned the assignment of population settlements to districts, a task which, under the electoral law, had to be completed 120 days before election day. The Ministry of Interior indicated that good progress had been made in that regard.

With regard to the management of the electoral process, the United Nations had streamlined international support, with United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) overseeing trust fund management and donor relations, in addition to supporting electoral observation, and the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) acting as executing agency for all budget lines. It was estimated that between $120 and $130 million would be needed to cover the three elections, with an additional $30 million if it was decided to hold out-of-country elections as well.

On the issue of security, the national army and professional police would be deployed for the parliamentary elections, for which close to 400 district elections would need to be secured. The strength of the Afghan National Army (ANA) was expected to increase from 28 to 32 battalions by April and to 39 by July, and that of the Afghan National Police (ANP) from approximately 30,000 to more than 45,000 members by July. International forces would provide security and back up national agencies. The United Nations Country Team carried out a comprehensive security assessment to ascertain the type of security challenges that the United Nations itself would be facing. It concluded that, as the security situation remained very diverse in different parts of the country, adequate measures had to be taken to provide UN agencies and electoral operations with access to risk-prone regions.

The narcotics industry and the accompanying corruption remained one of the biggest threats to the building of an effective, democratic Afghan State and to the country's long-term peace and stability. The central Government had shown a commitment to tackling the problem through the establishment of the new Ministry of Counter-Narcotics, and the launch of the national narcotics eradication programme [YUN 2004, p. 328], which was to focus on seven key provinces. To counterbalance the potentially negative impact of eradication initiatives, it was critical that alternative livelihood programmes be strengthened and made known to affected communities, and that the Government develop further its counter-narcotics public information campaign through traditional and community-based channels.

Disarmament, demobilization and reintegration had been a key consideration in deciding the date and modalities of the elections. That concern applied particularly to local elections, where a web of political interests and armed groups could significantly distort the electoral process.

Report of Secretary-General (March). In his March report on the situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security [A/59/744-S/2005/183], submitted in response to Security Council resolution 1536(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 313] and General Assembly resolutions 59/112 A [ibid., p. 323] and 59/112 B [ibid., p. 917], the Secretary-General summarized key developments in Afghanistan since his 26 November 2004 report [ibid., p. 323]. He said that, on 24 January, President Hamid Karzai established the Independent Electoral Commission, which, with international electoral experts would constitute the Joint Electoral Management Body (JEMB) to oversee the elections.

The overall security situation was relatively calm for almost four months as the severe winter season significantly impeded the operations of extremists, terrorists, factional forces and criminal elements. In areas least affected by winter conditions, particularly the south-eastern and southern regions, coalition forces, ANA and Government institutions continued to be targeted by extremists employing anti-tank mines, small unit ambushes and rocket attacks. The Afghan Government, with international community support, had to tackle the problem of illegal armed groups operating throughout the country, which included ex-combatants from decommissioned units who did not enter the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process. Those groups perpetuated the drug industry, imposed illegal taxes on individuals in reconstruction programmes and impeded the progress of State expansion. Through a pilot project under the leadership of the National Security Council, UNAMA was working with national and international security agencies to map and categorize more than 1,000 such groups.

The training of the reformed ANA continued to make progress, but sustaining an effective police force proved challenging. Key areas yet to be effectively addressed included: in-depth reform and expansion of the structure of the police force, and post-deployment monitoring. Measures were also required to identify and exclude corrupt and anti-government elements in the force.

The Secretary-General observed that a number of post-conflict peacebuilding tasks had yet to be fulfilled, including the restoration of countrywide security, the full resettlement of refugees and internally displaced persons, the rehabilitation of key economic and social infrastructure and the establishment of functional State institutions across the country. Some of the important tasks relating to post-conflict rehabilitation had hardly started, such as the settlement of conflicting land claims, property rights, national reconciliation, and transitional justice.

Implementation of the Bonn Agreement would be complete with the holding of elections later in 2005, but in order to move forward with the next phase of the peace process, Afghans would need the sustained engagement of the international community. After more than three years of intensive engagement by the United Nations in Afghanistan, a number of lessons learned had been identified. They included multiple needs for: an extended presence of international forces to overcome a number of bottlenecks that continued to affect the pace and scope of reconstruction, such as a massive skills deficit; a comprehensive approach to the creation or recreation of key State institutions, in particular a national police force, civil service and justice system; sustainability; a stronger link between post-conflict reconstruction and economic growth; and improvements in regional cooperation.

All UN specialized agencies and programmes were expected to play a supportive role in building State capacity in education, health, agriculture, national and subnational administration, among others. While considerable efforts were being made to identify the UN's role following the parliamentary elections, the Afghan leadership, the Parliament, and other relevant parties would have to be consulted before a definitive recommendation could be submitted to the Security Council. In the meantime, the Secretary-General recommended that UNAMA's mandate be extended for 12 months, until March 2006.

Security Council consideration (March). On 22 March [meeting 5145], the Security Council discussed the situation in Afghanistan. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan and Head of UNAMA, Jean Arnault, said that the Afghan electoral authorities had decided that parliamentary and provincial elections would be held on 18 September, four months later than originally anticipated. That would allow for more in-depth civic education of the public, which, in turn, would enhance participation, give more time to complete the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process, place more and better trained army and police units at the disposal of the electoral process, and prepare for the establishment of the future National Assembly.

With regard to security, the two roadside bombs that killed six and injured 31 in Kandahar on 16 March were a reminder that, while the security situation overall had improved, complacency was not in order, particularly for the United Nations, since the two attacks were directed at its humanitarian convoys. It was hoped that a new initiative, entitled "Consolidation of Peace", aimed at allowing rank and file Taliban and other fighters from extremist organizations to disarm and resettle in their communities, could help reduce violence in 2005. The initiative provided for low- and mid-level fighters to enter a reconciliation process under the responsibility of the provincial governors and community leaders. It did not offer, however, unconditional amnesty and did not apply to the worst offenders among Taliban commanders and other senior leaders from extremist groups, whose capture and prosecution would remain a priority for international forces and domestic security agencies. For individuals whose status deserved special measures, reintegration would take place under close monitoring by security agencies.

On 24 March [meeting 5148], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1589(2005). The draft [S/2005/195] was prepared in consultation among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling its previous resolutions on Afghanistan, in particular resolution 1536(2004) of 26 March 2004 extending the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan through 26 March 2005,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Afghanistan,

Welcoming once again the successful holding of the presidential election on 9 October 2004,

Recognizing the urgent need to tackle the ongoing challenges in Afghanistan, including the fight against narcotics, the lack of security in certain areas, terrorist threats, comprehensive nationwide disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of the Afghan Militia Forces and disbandment of illegal armed groups, timely preparation for the parliamentary, provincial and district elections, development of Afghan government institutions, acceleration of justice sector reform, promotion and protection of human rights, and economic and social development,

Reaffirming, in this context, its continued support for the implementation of the provisions of the Bonn Agreement of 5 December 2001 and of the Berlin Declaration of 1 April 2004, including the annexes thereto, and pledging its continued support thereafter for the Government and people of Afghanistan as they rebuild their country, strengthen the foundations of a constitutional democracy and assume their rightful place in the community of nations,

Recalling and emphasizing the importance of the Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations, signed in Kabul on 22 December 2002, and encouraging all States concerned to continue to follow up on the Kabul Declaration and the Declaration on Encouraging Closer Trade, Transit and Investment Cooperation, signed in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on 22 September 2003,

Expressing its appreciation and strong support for the ongoing efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative for Afghanistan, and stressing the central and impartial role that the United Nations continues to play in promoting peace and stability in Afghanistan,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 18 March 2005;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan for an additional period of twelve months from the date of adoption of the present resolution;

3. Stresses the importance of urgently establishing a framework for the holding at the earliest possible date of free and fair elections, welcomes in this regard the announcement of the Joint Electoral Management Body that elections for the lower house of the parliament (Wolesi Jirga) and provincial councils will be held on 18 September 2005, calls upon the Mission to continue to provide necessary support in order to facilitate timely elections with the broadest possible participation, and urges the donor community to promptly make available the necessary financial support based on that framework, in close coordination with the Government of Afghanistan and the Mission, and to consider contributing to electoral observer missions;

4. Also stresses the importance of security for credible parliamentary, provincial and district elections, and to this end calls upon Member States to contribute personnel, equipment and other resources to support the expansion of the International Security Assistance Force and the establishment of provincial reconstruction teams in other parts of Afghanistan, and to coordinate closely with the Mission and the Government of Afghanistan;

5. Welcomes the international efforts to assist in setting up the new Afghan Parliament and ensure its efficient functioning, which will be critical to the political future of Afghanistan and the steps towards a free and democratic Afghanistan;

6. Also welcomes the substantial progress in the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process in accordance with the Bonn Agreement, encourages the Government of Afghanistan to continue its active efforts to accelerate the process towards its completion by June 2006, to disband the illegal armed groups and to dispose of the ammunition stockpile, and requests the international community to further extend assistance for these efforts;

7. Further welcomes the effort to date of the Government of Afghanistan to implement its National Drug Control Strategy, adopted in May 2003, including through the launch of the Counter-narcotics Implementation Plan, in February 2005, which reflects a new determination of the Government to tackle the cultivation, production and trafficking of drugs, urges the Government to take decisive action to stop the processing and trade of drugs and to pursue the specific measures set out in that plan in the fields of: building institutions; information campaigns; alternative livelihoods; interdiction and law enforcement; criminal justice; eradication; demand reduction and treatment of addicts; and regional cooperation, and calls upon the international community to provide every possible assistance to the Government in pursuing full implementation of all aspects of the plan;

8. Supports the fight against the illicit trafficking in drugs and precursors within Afghanistan and in neighbouring States and countries along trafficking routes, including increased cooperation among them to strengthen anti-narcotic controls to curb the drug flow, and welcomes in this context the signing on 1 April 2004 of the Berlin Declaration on Counter-Narcotics within the framework of the Kabul Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations;

9. Requests the Mission to continue to support the ongoing effort for the establishment of a fair and transparent justice system, including the reconstruction and reform of the prison sector, in order to strengthen the rule of law throughout the country;

10. Calls for full respect for human rights and international humanitarian law throughout Afghanistan, and in this regard requests the Mission, with the support of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, to continue to assist in the full implementation of the human rights provisions of the new Afghan Constitution, in particular those regarding the full enjoyment by women of their human rights, commends the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission for its courageous efforts to monitor respect for human rights in Afghanistan as well as to foster and protect these rights, welcomes in this regard the Commission's report of 29 January 2005 and the proposed national strategy for transitional justice, and requests international support for that endeavour;

11. Welcomes the development of the Afghan National Army and Afghan National Police and the ongoing efforts to increase their capabilities as important steps towards the goal of Afghan security forces providing security and ensuring the rule of law throughout the country;

12. Calls upon the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, including the Operation Enduring Freedom Coalition and the International Security Assistance Force, in accordance with their respective designated responsibilities as they evolve, to continue to address the threat to the security and stability of Afghanistan posed by Al-Qaida operatives, the Taliban and other extremist groups, factional violence among militia forces and criminal activities, in particular violence involving the drug trade;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council in a timely manner on developments in Afghanistan, and to make recommendations on the future role of the Mission, after the parliamentary elections;

14. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Security Council consideration (June). On 24 June [meeting 5215], the Security Council discussed the situation in Afghanistan and was briefed on the latest developments by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan and by the Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). The Special Representative said that, since his March report (see p. 398) the security situation in Afghanistan had deteriorated, especially in the southern and eastern part of the country, jeopardizing rebuilding efforts and obliging UN agencies to keep a very low profile. Drugs, local rivalry, corruption and ordinary criminal acts added to the violence, but the decisive factor in the escalation of violence was the offensive by extremist groups, including the Taliban. They had more money, more effective weaponry, more powerful means of disseminating radio propaganda, and were more aggressive vis-à-vis civilians and demonstrated greater cruelty and indiscriminate violence. International response to thwart that policy of destabilization had to focus on attacking the financing of fundamentalist elements, the safe havens where they trained and the networks that supported them.

Despite the security situation, preparations for the elections were encouraging. The electoral administration had been deployed countrywide, with offices being fully operational in Kabul and in the eight regional centres, as well as in all 34 provincial capitals. An independent Electoral Complaints Commission was created to handle and adjudicate all electoral complaints and challenges. Nominations, which took place between 4 and 26 May, saw more than 6,000 candidates submitting their applications for the 249 seats in the lower house and the 420 seats in the 34 provincial councils, 12 per cent of whom were women. At the same time, a countrywide assessment carried out by UNAMA and the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission concluded that there was a broad perception that people linked to armed groups were determined to use violence and intimidation to succeed in getting elected. Measures therefore had to be taken to neutralize them and to reassure the majority of candidates and the population at large that they could vote in September without the risk of reprisals.

Communications. On 30 June [A/59/863-S/2005/427], the Russian Federation transmitted the text of the statement by the Heads of State of Armenia, Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, the Russian Federation and Tajikistan, which was adopted by the Council on Collective Security of the Collective Security Treaty Organization, calling on interested countries and international and regional organizations to coordinate action relating to the post-conflict settlement in Afghanistan, with a central role played by the United Nations.

On 13 July [A/60/129], Kazakhstan transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the declaration adopted by the Heads of State of the Shangai Cooperation Organization (SCO) at their summit meeting (Astana, Kazakhstan, 5 July). In the light of the completion of the active military phase of counter-terrorism operations in Afghanistan, SCO believed those of its members that had made available their ground infrastructure for the temporary accommodation of the coalition members' military contingents and had granted the use of their territories and airspace for military transit to facilitate counter-terrorism operations, should establish end dates for the temporary use of those facilities and the presence of the military contingents in the territories of SCO countries.

Report of Secretary-General (August). The Secretary-General, in his August report on Afghanistan [A/60/224-S/2005/525], said that President Karzai signed, on 27 April, a revised electoral law requiring the Central Statistics Office to release population figures province by province, which were to be used to allocate seats to the Wolesi Jirga (lower house of parliament) and the provincial councils. A voter registration drive took place between 25 June and 21 July and the official electoral campaign began on 17 August. Civic education efforts were also undertaken. However, some $31 million was still required to fill a funding gap and avoid any delay in the holding of the elections.

The Secretary-General observed that, although significant gains had been made in meeting the objectives of the political agenda, the implementation of the institutional agenda of the Bonn Agreement had been uneven across sectors. Many critical State institutions at both the national and provincial levels remained weak and susceptible to corruption. While initiatives had been taken to reform civil administration at the central level, reforms below that level had proved more difficult. In particular, insufficient resources were dedicated to developing effective public administration at the provincial and district levels, which were also plagued by a lack of capacity and corruption, and an uncertain security environment.

In discussions held in June on cooperation between Afghanistan and the international community after the September parliamentary elections, the Government and UNAMA recognized that sustained international community support was required to achieve security, full disarmament, justice and a competent civil administration in all provinces, to implement a robust development strategy and the Afghan constitution and to promote human rights. They elaborated a number of key principles, designed to enhance further cooperation between Afghanistan and the international community.

The security situation in Afghanistan continued to be of paramount concern. Since March, the level of the insurgency had risen, as had the sophistication of the weaponry. The tactics used were more brutal and effective. The southern and parts of the eastern regions of the country had borne the brunt of the upsurge in violence. In a significant departure from their previous tactics, which focused on provincial authorities, international and national forces and election workers, insurgents started targeting local communities and their leaders. The Afghan National Army and the coalition forces intensified their operations in the south and parts of the east of the country, engaging insurgents in often prolonged combat. In the north, north-east, central highlands, central and most of the western region, minor factional clashes and criminal activity continued to be reported. A public demonstration, on 11 May, in Jalalabad (Nangarhar province), turned violent, causing widespread damage, with several casualties reported. With regard to electoral security, there had been multiple attacks against local JEMB employees and other Afghan electoral workers. Various measures were put in place by international military forces and the Government to help contain any upsurge in violence and to mitigate security risks to which the electoral process might be exposed.

The Secretary-General said that following the elections, he would consult with the Afghan Government and international actors to determine the post-electoral agenda. At the conclusion of those discussions, and prior to the expiration of UNAMA's mandate in March 2006, he would make specific proposals to the Council on the future UN role in Afghanistan.

Security Council consideration (August). On 23 August [meeting 5249], the Security Council discussed the situation in Afghanistan. The Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan told the Council that bringing extremist violence and other forms of insecurity under control after the 18 September elections would remain at the top of the agenda for the Afghan Government. Post-election objectives included the strengthening of key State institutions, such as the police, justice and civilian administration; the development of a comprehensive reconstruction strategy; and the elimination of the narcotics industry. The international community appeared committed to working with Afghan authorities towards an extended compact, with benchmarks and timelines for the achievement of its objectives. In the next phase, international financial, technical and security resources would be indispensable to the Afghan State's own political will and fiscal efforts. In that respect, the Afghan Government had proposed that a high-level conference on the post-Bonn compact be held in January 2006, shortly after the anticipated inauguration of the National Assembly. The proposed conference could also lead to closer links between Afghanistan and its neighbours in all fields, including security cooperation, trade, development and counter-narcotics efforts.

On 23 August [meeting 5249], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/40 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the progress in the preparations for the parliamentary (Wolesi Jirga) and provincial council elections scheduled for 18 September 2005, including the compilation of the final candidate list and updating of voter registration, and encourages all Afghan participants, especially the candidates and their supporters, to work constructively to ensure that the ongoing electoral campaigns are conducted peacefully, in an environment free of intimidation, and that the elections can be held successfully. The Council calls upon the international community to extend additional financial assistance in order to fill the gap of 29.6 million United States dollars for these elections.

The Council expresses grave concern about the increased attacks by the Taliban, Al Qaida and other extremist groups in Afghanistan over the past few months. The Council condemns the attempts to disrupt the political process by terrorist acts or other forms of violence in Afghanistan. The Council, in this regard, endorses the effort of the Government of Afghanistan, with the support of the ISAF and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, within their respective responsibilities, to improve the safety and stability of the country.

The Council also stresses the importance of continued cooperation and increased dialogue between neighbouring States and the Government of Afghanistan to promote regional development and the long-term peace and stability of Afghanistan.

The Council notes the progress made to date, in particular in security sector reform, and in this regard welcomes the completion of the disarmament of the Afghan Military Forces. The Council expresses its strong view that the international community must maintain a high level of commitment to assist Afghanistan in addressing its remaining challenges, including the security situation, disbandment of illegal armed groups, production of and trafficking in drugs, development of Afghan government institutions, acceleration of justice sector reform, promotion and protection of human rights, and sustainable economic and social development.

The Council welcomes the desire of the international community and the Government of Afghanistan to agree to a new framework for international engagement beyond the completion of the Bonn political process. The Council expresses, in this regard, its readiness to review, based on the report of the Secretary-General to be submitted in accordance with its resolution 1589(2005), and in the light of consultations that the United Nations will have with the Government of Afghanistan and all concerned international actors, the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan after the completion of the electoral process, in order to allow the United Nations to continue to play a vital role in the post-Bonn period. The Council is also ready to consider the renewal of the mandate of the International Security Assistance Force prior to its expiration, upon the request of the Government of Afghanistan.

Communication. By a 17 October letter to the Secretary-General [A/60/440-S/2005/658], Yemen transmitted the final communiqué of the annual coordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) (New York, 23 September). OIC member States that had pledged donations to the Afghan People Assistance Fund were called upon to expedite the remittance of their donations.

Elections

On 18 September 2005, some 6.4 million Afghans, representing a little over 50 per cent of registered voters, went to the polls to elect representatives to the Lower House of the National Assembly and the 34 provincial councils. The Secretary-General, in a later report [A/60/712-S/2006/145], said that 54 candidates were excluded from the electoral process by the Electoral Complaints Commission. The Commission also adjudicated 3,300 of the some 5,400 complaints lodged, including 575 high-priority cases, most of them alleging fraud. It imposed fines in 22 cases, banned nine officials from serving in future electoral administrations and excluded 74 ballot boxes (2.5 per cent) from the count because of clear indications of fraud. Having received notification from the Electoral Complaints Commission that no remaining complaints could materially alter the outcome of the elections, JEMB announced the final certified results on 12 November. The new Lower House reflected Afghanistan's political and ethnic diversity, including a large number of professionals, liberals, some former commanders, jihadis, a small number of reconciled Taliban, and some individuals accused of human rights abuses. Twenty-seven per cent of all seats were occupied by women, who also were elected to 121 of the 420 seats available in the provincial councils. In November, each provincial council elected from among its members two representatives to serve in the Upper House. The full complement of the National Assembly was reached on 9 December, with the certification by JEMB of the 34 members, including 17 women, nominated by President Karzai. The electoral process was concluded on 19 December with the inauguration of the National Assembly.

Despite fears that violence would disrupt the process, especially given the trend of attacks in the preceding months, which included the murder of eight candidates, security incidents did not significantly affect the polling. However, the counting and the complaints processes that followed took place in a climate of tension and distrust, due to their complexity. More significantly, the tension was fuelled by thousands of defeated candidates, many of whom were reluctant to acknowledge their electoral defeat. Significant protests and demonstrations took place in Kunduz, Kandahar, Nangarhar and Kabul, which resulted in some disruption to the counting process.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (November)

On 23 November [meeting 5309], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/56 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council congratulates the people of Afghanistan on the confirmation of the final results of the parliamentary and provincial council elections. The successful holding of these elections has demonstrated the broad commitment of Afghan voters to democracy and freedom in their country, and the Council welcomes the fact that the completion of the confirmation process has paved the way toward the timely inauguration of the new parliament and thus to the conclusion of the Bonn political process.

The Council commends all Afghans for having taken this step and calls upon them, and, in particular, the representatives-elect and other former candidates, to remain fully committed to peace, the Constitution, the rule of law and democracy in Afghanistan.

The Council, in this connection, reiterates its appreciation to all those who contributed to the electoral process, and extends special appreciation to the Joint Electoral Management Body and the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan for their dedication. The Council also reiterates its endorsement of the efforts of the Afghan security forces, with the support of the International Security Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, within their respective responsibilities, to improve the safety and stability of the country.

The Council hopes for the prompt appointment of all members of the House of Elders (Meshrano Jirga).

The Council reaffirms the importance for the international community to maintain a high level of commitment to assisting Afghanistan in addressing its remaining challenges, in particular in the fields of security, including fighting terrorist and narcotics threats, governance and development.

The Council supports the central and impartial role that the United Nations continues to play for the consolidation of peace and stability in Afghanistan and coordination of the relevant international efforts and welcomes consultations initiated by the Government of Afghanistan and the United Nations on the post-Bonn process.

Finally, the Council stresses that violence in any form intended to disrupt the democratic process in Afghanistan will not be tolerated. The Council unequivocally condemns all recent attacks in Afghanistan, including the attacks against the International Security Assistance Force, and expresses its deepest sympathies to the victims, both Afghan and international, and their families, as well as to the troop contributors of the Force.

Later developments

In a later report on the situation in Afghanistan [A/60/712-S/2006/145], the Secretary-General said that, during the last months of 2005, the operational tempo and tactical sophistication of insurgent and other anti-Government elements continued to develop. Violence and threats against local officials, religious leaders, teachers, staff and facilities of the education system intensified, in particular in the south and south-east of the country. Corruption, the menace of a criminalized economy, dominated by drug and other organized criminal networks, and the presence of illegally armed groups, undermined the authority of the legitimately elected Government. In addition, there was a marked increase in suicide bombings. Up to November, a significant proportion of security related incidents involved clashes between anti-Government elements and security forces, primarily international military forces. Since most of those incidents resulted in the defeat of anti-Government elements, attacks against foreign military forces decreased in favour of attacks against Afghan security forces and soft targets (Government and social institutions) that were difficult to detect or identify.

Communication. On 2 December [A/60/578-S/2005/754], the Russian Federation transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the Declaration adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the member States of the Collective Security Treaty Organization (Moscow, Russian Federation, 30 November). The members said that, in view of the serious situation caused by the sharp increase in drug trafficking worldwide, there was an urgent need to establish under UN auspices, an effective global anti-drug partnership, which should make every effort to set up security zones along the Afghan border.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 30 November [meeting 58], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/32 A [draft: A/60/L.27 & Add.1, as orally revised] without vote [agenda items 17 and 73 (e)].

The situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/112 A of 8 December 2004 and all its previous relevant resolutions,

Recalling also all relevant Security Council resolutions and statements by the President of the Council on the situation in Afghanistan, in particular the most recent resolutions 1589(2005) of 24 March 2005 and 1623(2005) of 13 September 2005, as well as the statement by the President of the Council of 23 August 2005,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Afghanistan, and respecting its multicultural, multiethnic and historical heritage,

Applauding the holding of parliamentary and provincial council elections on 18 September 2005, leading to the completion of the Bonn process,

Emphasizing the importance of the Government being representative of the ethnic, cultural and geographical diversity of the country,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000 on women and peace and security, and applauding the substantive progress achieved in the empowerment of women in Afghan politics as historic milestones in the political process, which will help to consolidate durable peace and national stability in Afghanistan,

Recognizing the urgent need to tackle the remaining challenges in Afghanistan, including terrorist threats, the fight against narcotics, the lack of security in certain areas, the comprehensive nationwide disbandment of illegal armed groups and the reintegration of the Afghan Military Forces, the development of Afghan Government institutions, including at the subnational level, the strengthening of the rule of law, the acceleration of justice sector reform, the promotion of national reconciliation and an Afghan-led transitional justice process, the safe and orderly return of Afghan refugees, the promotion and protection of human rights, and economic and social development,

Reaffirming in this context its continued support for the spirit and the provisions of the Bonn Agreement of 5 December 2001, and of the Berlin Declaration, including the annexes thereto, of 1 April 2004, and pledging its continued support, after the successful completion of the political transition, to the Government and people of Afghanistan as they rebuild their country, strengthen the foundations of a constitutional democracy and resume their rightful place in the community of nations,

Expressing its appreciation and strong support for the central and impartial role that the Secretary-General and his Special Representative continue to play for the consolidation of peace and stability in Afghanistan, and welcoming consultations initiated by the Government of Afghanistan and the United Nations on the post-Bonn process,

Expressing in this context its deep concern over attacks against both Afghan and foreign nationals committed to supporting the consolidation of peace, stability and development in Afghanistan, in particular United Nations and diplomatic staff, national and international humanitarian and development personnel, the International Security Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition,

Noting that, despite improvements in building the security sector, increased terrorist attacks caused by Al-Qaida operatives, the Taliban and other extremist groups, particularly in the south and in parts of the east of Afghanistan over the past months, and the lack of security caused by criminal activity and the illicit production of and trafficking in drugs, still remain a serious challenge, threatening the democratic process as well as reconstruction and economic development,

Noting also that the responsibility for providing security and law and order throughout the country resides with the Government of Afghanistan supported by the Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition, recognizing the progress achieved in this respect, and stressing the importance of further extending central government authority to all parts of Afghanistan,

Commending the Afghan national army and police, the Assistance Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition for their contributions in improving security conditions, including for the electoral process, in Afghanistan,

Deeply concerned about the continued cultivation, production of and trafficking in narcotic drugs in Afghanistan, which is undermining stability and security as well as the political and economic reconstruction of Afghanistan and which has dangerous repercussions in the region and far beyond, and commending in that context the reaffirmed commitment of the Government of Afghanistan to rid the country of this pernicious production and trade, including by decisive law enforcement measures and by combating corruption, which have led to a decrease in opium cultivation in 2005,

Recognizing that the social and economic development of Afghanistan, specifically the development of alternative gainful and sustainable livelihoods in the formal productive sector, is an important element of the successful implementation of the comprehensive Afghan national drug control strategy and depends to a large extent on enhanced international cooperation with the Government of Afghanistan,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General and the recommendations contained therein;

2. Congratulates the people of Afghanistan on the parliamentary and provincial council elections on 18 September 2005, which have demonstrated the broad commitment of Afghan voters towards a democratic future for their country;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the support of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan and of the international community, including from countries neighbouring Afghanistan, which facilitated the holding of parliamentary and provincial council elections through providing security assistance, funds, election personnel and observers;

4. Recognizes the upcoming completion of the political transition according to the Bonn process, with the establishment of the National Assembly of Afghanistan, as well as the challenges lying ahead, and calls upon the international community to continue to provide sustained support;

5. Endorses the key principles for cooperation between the Government of Afghanistan and the international community during the post-Bonn process as set out in the report of the Secretary-General, including the leadership role of Afghanistan in the reconstruction process, the just allocation of domestic and international reconstruction resources across the country, regional cooperation, lasting capacity- and institution-building, combating corruption and the promotion of transparency and accountability, public information and participation, and the continued central role of the United Nations in the post-Bonn process, which should also include fields in which the United Nations offers the best expertise available;

6. Welcomes the readiness of the Government of Afghanistan to prepare an interim national development strategy, which is to be considered at a conference in London planned for January 2006, where a new engagement between the international community and the Government of Afghanistan is also due to be concluded, and urges the international community actively to support this process by, where possible, aligning their support behind this strategy;

7. Stresses the importance of the provision of sufficient security in the post-Bonn process, and to that end calls upon Member States to continue contributing personnel, equipment and other resources to the International Security Assistance Force and to further develop the provincial reconstruction teams in close coordination with the Government of Afghanistan and the Assistance Mission;

8. Welcomes the progress made since the commencement of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process in October 2003, in particular the completion of the disarmament and demobilization of the Afghan Military Forces, and stresses the need to reintegrate former combatants for the success of the programme;

9. Stresses the importance of advancing the disbandment of illegal armed groups throughout the country, while ensuring further coordination and coherence with other relevant efforts regarding security sector reform and community development;

10. Welcomes the development of the new professional Afghan national army and Afghan national police and the progress made in the creation of a fair and effective justice system as important steps towards the goal of strengthening the Government of Afghanistan, providing security, ensuring the rule of law and eliminating corruption throughout the country, and urges the international community to continue to support the efforts of the Government of Afghanistan in these areas in a coordinated manner;

11. Calls upon the Government of Afghanistan, with the assistance of the international community, including through the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition and the Assistance Force, in accordance with their respective designated responsibilities, to continue to address the threat to the security and stability of Afghanistan posed by Al-Qaida operatives, the Taliban and other terrorist or extremist groups as well as by criminal violence, in particular violence involving the drug trade;

12. Calls for full respect for human rights and international humanitarian law throughout Afghanistan and, with the assistance of the Afghan Independent Human Rights Commission and of the Assistance Mission, full implementation of the human rights provisions of the new Afghan Constitution, including those regarding the full enjoyment by women of their human rights, and commends the commitment of the Government of Afghanistan in this respect;

13. Welcomes the efforts to date of the Afghan authorities to carry out their comprehensive counter-narcotics implementation plan presented on 16 February 2005, and urges the Government of Afghanistan to take decisive action, in particular to stop the processing of and trade in drugs, by pursuing the concrete steps set out in the work plan of the Government of Afghanistan, presented at the International Conference on Afghanistan, held in Berlin on 31 March and 1 April 2004;

14. Calls upon the international community to assist the Government of Afghanistan in carrying out its comprehensive counter-narcotics implementation plan, aimed at eliminating illicit poppy cultivation, including through support for increased law enforcement, interdiction, demand reduction, eradication of illicit crops, crop substitution and other alternative livelihood and development programmes, increasing public awareness and building the capacity of drug control institutions, and encourages the channelling of increased counter-narcotics funding through the Government of Afghanistan counter-narcotics trust fund;

15. Supports the fight against the illicit trafficking in drugs and precursors within Afghanistan and in neighbouring States and countries along trafficking routes, including increased cooperation among them to strengthen anti-narcotic controls to curb the drug flow, and welcomes, in this context, the signing on 1 April 2004 of the Berlin Declaration on Counter-Narcotics within the framework of the Kabul Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations of 22 December 2002;

16. Commends the continuing efforts of the signatories of the Kabul Declaration on Good-neighbourly Relations to implement their commitments under the Declaration, including, within that framework, those under the Declaration on Encouraging Closer Trade, Transit and Investment Cooperation of 22 September 2003, and calls upon all other States to respect and support the implementation of those provisions and to promote regional stability;

17. Appreciates the efforts of the members of the Tripartite Commission, namely, Afghanistan, Pakistan and the United States of America, to continue to address cross-border activities in accordance with its mandate;

18. Calls for the provision of continued international assistance to the vast number of Afghan refugees and internally displaced persons to facilitate their safe and orderly return and sustainable reintegration into society so as to contribute to the stability of the entire country;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly every six months during its sixtieth session on developments in Afghanistan, including on parliamentary and provincial elections and on consultations on the post-Bonn process as well as on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session an item entitled the situation in Afghanistan.

On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 60/32 B on emergency international assistance for peace, normalcy and reconstruction of war-stricken Afghanistan (see p. 1000).

Sectoral issues

Judicial system and the rule of law

The United Nations continued to support the reform agenda drawn up by the Judicial Reform Commission, established under the Bonn Agreement. In the light of the lack of clarity in the Commission's mandate and capacity to lead the reform, the Government was gradually shifting responsibility for reform from the Commission to the Supreme Court, the Attorney-General's office and the Ministry of Justice. Those bodies coordinated their efforts through the Consultative Group for Justice, which had become an active player in shaping the reform strategy. The Group, with UNDP and UNAMA support, was developing a comprehensive needs assessment to serve as a basis for future justice sector reform efforts. The strategy would have to address critical issues, including finding an appropriate balance between capacity development and institutional reform. With UNDP support, the Ministry of Justice and the Attorney-General made significant progress in the implementation of the Government's public administrative reform programme. In June, the Law on the Organization and Jurisdiction of the Courts came into force and the Juvenile Justice Code and the Law on Prisons and Detention Centres were adopted. A number of justice sector facilities were rehabilitated and work was under way on new court houses in Herat and in other regions. The Ministry of Justice and the Attorney-General's office, assisted by UNDP, completed the first phase of the Government's priority reform and restructuring process and had commenced the second phase, which required merit-based recruitment of all Ministry of Justice staff under a revised structure. In June, the Judicial Education and Training Committee was established, which was to develop a more coordinated approach to the planning, implementation and evaluation of programmes for judges. In October, the Government endorsed a strategic framework for justice sector reform, entitled "Justice for All", developed by the Consultative Group on Justice. The framework was divided into five areas: law reform, institution-building, access to justice programmes, traditional justice and coordination.

Security sector reform

The reform of the security sector was in its fourth and final phase, making the sector more representative of the demographic realities of the country. Some 965 junior officers within the Ministry of Defence were to be appointed in an attempt to redress previous imbalances in the composition of the Ministry. Training of the reformed Afghan Army continued, with the United States, assisted by France, acting as lead nation. The training schedule was accelerated, allowing five battalions to be trained simultaneously. Plans to train six battalions at a time, to be implemented in March, would enable the Army to reach its target of 70,000 troops by December 2006.

In June, Germany and United States—lead coalition forces—proposed a major new police reform and mentoring programme to the Government and the international community. In December, as part of the restructuring of police leadership, and following an extensive selection process, 31 generals were identified and had taken up senior police positions in the Ministry of Interior.

Disarmament, demobilization and reintegration

On 7 July, Afghanistan's New Beginnings Programme for disarmament, demobilization and reintegration ended, with more than 63,380 (all ranks) Afghan Military Forces troops disarmed. Of those, more than 59,290 were demobilized and over 57,590 had chosen to enter the reintegration process. The Programme enabled the Government to remove all Afghan Military Forces personnel from the Ministry of Defence payroll, resulting in an estimated saving to the national budget of a recurrent cost of over $120 million and effectively dissolving the Afghan Military Forces. The Programme was currently focused on ensuring the sustainable reintegration of ex-combatants into their communities and the legal economy, which included a project to monitor and evaluate the progress made by those who had completed the reintegration programme.

A crucial outcome of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process was the safe removal and cantonment of over 10,880 heavy weapons. Cities such as Jalalabad, Kandahar, Gardiz, Mazar-e-Sharif and Bamian were largely free of operational heavy weapons. Progress in disarmament, demobilization and reintegration helped to improve the political environment for the organization of elections, and together with the creation of the Afghan National Army, furthered the goal of ensuring that military assets and weaponry belonged to the State of Afghanistan alone. Progress was made in the design of the successor project to disarmament, demobilization and reintegration, which would concentrate on enhancing security, governance, access to justice and community-based economic and social benefits.

The illicit narcotics industry continued to pose a threat to peace and stability in Afghanistan, which remained the largest supplier of opium worldwide. Government-led eradication and interdiction efforts had yielded modest results in some areas; however, that had been offset by higher crop yields. In January, the Executive Director of UNODC encouraged the Government and major partners to make development assistance available to farmers to offset their income losses and to make joint efforts to provide mutual legal assistance and create conditions for the extradition of major traffickers. On 16 February, the Government of Afghanistan and the United Kingdom, the lead nation on counter-narcotics, launched the 2005 counter-narcotics implementation plan in Kabul. With 60 per cent of Afghanistan's opium being produced in the provinces of Badakhshan, Helmand and Nangarhar, the new plan initially concentrated Afghan and international efforts on eradication and the creation of alternative livelihoods in those provinces, as well as in Kandahar.

Following the large-scale Government-led anti-cultivation campaign, land under poppy cultivation was estimated to have dropped by 21 per cent. Nevertheless, the average yield of the poppy crop increased to an estimated 39 kilograms per hectare in 2005, compared with 32 kilograms per hectare in 2004. Eradication efforts by provincial governors in 2005 did not achieve the expected success; only some 4,000 hectares (or 4 per cent of the total poppy fields under cultivation) were eradicated. In December, a UNODC survey indicated that some 920,000 Afghans (3.8 per cent of the population) were drug users. In recognition of the urgent need to stem the cycle of insecurity promoted by the narcotics industry, the Government adopted a new Counter-Narcotics Law on 17 December, containing criminal and procedural provisions, including investigation, prosecution and trial, and established the jurisdiction of the Central Narcotics Tribunal.

Recovery, rehabilitation and reconstruction

The economic and developmental challenges facing Afghanistan remained daunting. Although the International Monetary Fund reported that the Afghan economy grew at a rate of 7.5 per cent in 2004-2005, the Government estimated that a growth rate of 9 per cent was required to achieve recovery. In January, the UN country team started developing the United Nations Development Assistance Framework for Afghanistan, which identified those development activities that UN agencies would undertake for the 2006-2008 period. The country's first national human development report entitled "Security with a Human Face" was launched on 21 February. As the country devised its long-term development strategy, the report recommended addressing links between poverty reduction, democracy and conflict prevention to lay the foundation for sustained economic growth and stability. In September, the Government endorsed a report on the MDGs, which provided the framework for the Interim Afghanistan National Development Strategy. In December, the country programme action plans of UNDP, UNICEF and the United Nations Population Fund, as well as the World Food Programme relief and recovery operation, were agreed upon with the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Social aspects

The human rights situation in Afghanistan remained challenging, owing to the security situation and weaknesses in governance. Impunity of factional commanders and former warlords undermined any improvements. The significant upsurge in violence in some parts of the country limited access to those areas by both international humanitarian actors and Government representatives, denying the population entitlements, services and protection. Complaints of serious human rights violations committed by representatives of national security institutions, including arbitrary arrest, illegal detention and torture were numerous. In January, the United Nations High Commissioner visited Afghanistan and, in February, the Secretary-General's Independent Expert on the situation of human rights in Afghanistan also visited the country (see p. 733). In the months prior to the parliamentary elections, just as was the case in 2004 for the presidential elections, a joint political rights verification exercise was carried out by the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission and UNAMA to bring human rights concerns to the attention of the Government, the public and the international community.

A welcome development was the issuance of an order by the Ministry of Interior on 30 November, outlining expectations regarding police adherence to international human rights standards and the terms of reference for new human rights offices to be established within provincial Afghan National Police headquarters. On 12 December, the Government adopted the National Action Plan on Peace, Reconciliation and Justice, which was based on recommendations made by the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. Following the adoption of the plan, which set out a three-year comprehensive strategy on transitional justice, a three-day conference on truth-seeking and reconciliation was hosted by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), with support from UNAMA and the Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission. The conference was attended by representatives of local government and civil society. Participants said the highest priority should be given to: ending impunity, prosecuting and removing human rights abusers from public service and other positions of authority.

UNAMA

The United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan was established by Security Council resolution 1401(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 264] to promote, among other things, national reconciliation and the responsibilities entrusted to the United Nations under the Bonn Agreement. It comprised the Office of the Special Representative, which included four special advisers in the fields of human rights, demobilization, gender and the rule of law, as well as three subcomponents: two substantive pillars, one political (Pillar I) and one relief, recovery and reconstruction (Pillar II), and an administrative component. UNAMA was headquartered in Kabul, with regional offices in Bamiyan, Gardez, Herat, Jalalabad, Kandahar, Kunduz and Mazar-e-Sharif and three sub-offices in Faizabad, Maimana and Panjao. UNAMA was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General. In December, the Secretary-General appointed Tom Koenings (Germany) as Special Representative and Head of UNAMA to replace Jean Arnault (France). By resolution 1589(2005) (see p. 399), the Security Council extended UNAMA's mandate until 24 March 2006.

International Security Assistance Force

During the year, the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council, in accordance with Council resolution 1386(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 267] and 1510(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 310], reports on the activities of ISAF in February [S/2005/131], April [S/2005/230], July [S/2005/431] and October [S/2005/634]. Activities from October to the end of the year were covered in a later report [S/2006/318].

ISAF continued to implement the activities mandated by Council resolution 1386(2001) to assist the Afghan Government in the maintenance of security in Kabul and its surrounding areas and, by resolution 1510(2003), to provide support for and to strengthen the ability of the Government to ensure a more secure environment throughout the country. It executed its security tasks in association with the Afghan National Army and the Kabul police.

As at 30 August, the Force, operating under NATO leadership, comprised 11,551 personnel from 26 NATO nations, plus 309 from 11 non-NATO nations.

The overall security situation in Kabul and its environs remained relatively calm but unstable, with continual warnings of attacks against ISAF, coalition forces and the Afghan Government. The northern area of ISAF operations experienced a steady rise in criminal activity and factional fighting. The western area, where opposing militant forces were less active, remained relatively free of terrorism and crime. The security situation outside ISAF area of operations, mainly in the southern and eastern regions of the country, remained tense due to the activity of those forces.

ISAF increased its military presence in the country in preparation for and in support of the 18 September elections in order to verify procedures and enhance security. ISAF also carried out a strategic assessment of air operations to identify airfields, air capabilities and infrastructure for ISAF to continue its mission in the medium to long term. However, NATO intended to hand over the entire responsibility for Kabul International Airport to the Afghan authorities in the longer term. To that end, a clearing house mechanism was set up to coordinate efforts for the rehabilitation of Afghan airspace management.

ISAF civil-military cooperation shifted its focus from quick-reaction projects and short-term assessment to a more long-term vision aimed at meeting Afghan needs and harmonizing the activities of the international community. Improving civil administration remained the first priority. ISAF helped identify actual needs, promoted the use of respective functional specialists, and acted as a mediator for training and funding issues. Progress was also being made in the reform of the justice sector, including training, facility-building and restoration, as well as the reform of the Ministry of Justice, the Supreme Court and the Office of the General Prosecutor.

Among other things, ISAF established links with counter-narcotics forces and agencies. The Afghan Government counter-narcotics implementation plan (see p. 1357) was coordinated with ISAF, coalition forces and embassy counter-narcotics specialists. The plan adopted an eight-pillar approach, focusing on building institutions, information campaigns, alternative livelihoods, law enforcement, criminal justice, eradication, demand reduction, treatment of addicts and regional cooperation.

Afghanistan, in a 1 September [S/2005/574] letter to the Secretary-General, said that it looked forward to ISAF's future expansion to the south and east of the country and hoped that the Security Council would continue to reflect in its resolutions the importance of fulfilling ISAF's mandate.

The Secretary-General, in a later report on the situation in Afghanistan [A/60/712], reported that, on 8 December, the NATO Foreign Ministers adopted a revised ISAF operational plan which provided for ISAF's expansion to the southern regions of Afghanistan.

Extension of ISAF mandate

On 13 September [meeting 5260], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1623 (2005). The draft [S/2005/576] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on Afghanistan, in particular resolutions 1386(2001) of 20 December 2001, 1413(2002) of 23 May 2002, 1444(2002) of 27 November 2002, 1510(2003) of 13 October 2003 and 1563 (2004) of 17 September 2004,

Reaffirming its strong commitment to the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and national unity of Afghanistan,

Reaffirming its resolutions 1368(2001) of 12 September 2001 and 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001, and reiterating its support for international efforts to root out terrorism in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing that the responsibility for providing security and law and order throughout the country resides with the Afghans themselves, and welcoming the cooperation of the Government of Afghanistan with the International Security Assistance Force,

Recalling the importance of the Bonn Agreement of 5 December 2001 and the Berlin Declaration of 1 April 2004, in particular annex 1 to the Bonn Agreement, which, inter alia, provides for the progressive expansion of the Force to other urban centres and other areas beyond Kabul,

Stressing the importance of extending central government authority to all parts of Afghanistan, of respect for democratic values, of full completion of the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process, of the disbandment of illegal armed groups, of justice sector reform, of security sector reform, including reconstitution of the Afghan National Army and Police, and of combating narcotics trade and production, and recognizing certain progress that has been made in these and other areas with the help of the international community,

Recognizing the challenges facing Afghanistan with regard to the security situation in parts of the country,

Welcoming, in this context, the commitment by lead nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to establish further Provincial Reconstruction Teams,

Further welcoming the role played by the Force and the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition in assisting in securing the conduct of national elections,

Expressing its appreciation to Italy for taking over the lead from Turkey in commanding the Force, and to those nations who contributed to Eurocorps, and recognizing with gratitude the contributions of many nations to the Force,

Taking note of the letter dated 1 September 2005 from Mr. Abdullah Abdullah, Minister for Foreign Affairs of Afghanistan, to the Secretary-General,

Determining that the situation in Afghanistan still constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

Determined to ensure the full implementation of the mandate of the Force, in consultation with the Government of Afghanistan,

Acting, for these reasons, under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Decides to extend the authorization of the International Security Assistance Force, as defined in resolutions 1386(2001) and 1510(2003), for a period of twelve months beyond 13 October 2005;

2. Authorizes the Member States participating in the Force to take all necessary measures to fulfil its mandate;

3. Recognizes the need to strengthen the Force, and in this regard calls upon Member States to contribute personnel, equipment and other resources to the Force, and to make contributions to the trust fund established pursuant to resolution 1386(2001);

4. Calls upon the Force to continue to work in close consultation with the Government of Afghanistan and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Afghanistan as well as with the Operation Enduring Freedom coalition in the implementation of the mandate of the Force;

5. Requests the leadership of the Force to provide quarterly reports on the implementation of the mandate of the Force to the Security Council through the Secretary-General;

6. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Sanctions

In 2005, the Security Council adopted new measures against Osama bin Laden, Al-Qaida, the Taliban, their associates and associated entities. By resolution 1617(2005) (see below), the Council further refined the financial measures, travel ban and arms embargo imposed on those persons identified in the consolidated list created pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 265].

Pursuant to that resolution, the Secretary-General, on 2 September [S/2005/563], informed the Council President that he had appointed eight experts to the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team, established in accordance with resolution 1526(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 332].

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 29 July [meeting 5244], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1617(2005). The draft [S/2005/495] was submitted by Algeria, Argentina, Denmark, France, Greece, Japan, Romania, the Russian Federation, the United Republic of Tanzania, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1267(1999) of 15 October 1999, 1333(2000) of 19 December 2000, 1363(2001) of 30 July 2001, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001, 1390 (2002) of 16 January 2002, 1452(2002) of 20 December 2002, 1455(2003) of 17 January 2003, 1526(2004) of 30 January 2004 and 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004, and the relevant statements by its President,

Reaffirming that terrorism in all its forms and manifestations constitutes one of the most serious threats to peace and security and that any acts of terrorism are criminal and unjustifiable regardless of their motivations, whenever and by whomsoever committed, and reiterating its unequivocal condemnation of Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden, the Taliban—and associated individuals, groups, undertakings and entities—for ongoing and multiple criminal terrorist acts aimed at causing the death of innocent civilians and other victims, destruction of property and greatly undermining stability,

Expressing its concern over the use of various media, including the Internet, by Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, and their associates, including for terrorist propaganda and inciting terrorist violence, and urging the Security Council Working Group established pursuant to resolution 1566(2004) to consider these issues,

Reaffirming the need to combat by all means, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law, threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts, stressing in this regard the important role the United Nations plays in leading and coordinating this effort,

Emphasizing the obligation placed upon all Member States to implement, in full, resolution 1373(2001), including with regard to the Taliban or Al-Qaida, and any individuals, groups, undertakings or entities associated with Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden or the Taliban who have participated in financing, planning, facilitating, recruiting for, preparing, perpetrating, or otherwise supporting terrorist activities or acts, as well as to facilitate the implementation of counter-terrorism obligations in accordance with relevant Security Council resolutions,

Stressing the importance of clarifying which individuals, groups, undertakings and entities are subject to listing in the light of information regarding the changing nature of, and threat from, Al-Qaida, particularly as reported by the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) (the "Monitoring Team"),

Underscoring the importance of Member State designations pursuant to relevant resolutions and robust implementation of existing measures as a significant preventive measure in combating terrorist activity,

Noting that, in giving effect to the measures outlined in paragraph 4 (b) of resolution 1267(1999), paragraph 8 (c) of resolution 1333(2000) and paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1390(2002), full account is to be taken of the provisions of paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1452(2002),

Welcoming the efforts of the International Civil Aviation Organization to prevent travel documents from being made available to terrorists and their associates,

Encouraging Member States to work within the framework of Interpol, in particular through the use of the Interpol database of stolen and lost travel documents, to reinforce the implementation of the measures against Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, and their associates,

Expressing its concern over the possible use by Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden or the Taliban, and their associates, of man-portable air defence systems, commercially available explosives and chemical, biological, radiation or nuclear weapons and material, and encouraging Member States to consider possible action to reduce these threats,

Urging all States, international bodies and regional organizations to allocate sufficient resources, including through international partnership, to meet the ongoing and direct threat posed by Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, and individuals, groups, undertakings and entities associated with them,

Stressing the importance of meeting the ongoing threat that Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, and individuals, groups, undertakings and entities associated with them represent to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Decides that all States shall take the measures as previously imposed by paragraph 4 (b) of resolution 1267(1999), paragraph 8 (c) of resolution 1333(2000) and paragraphs 1 and 2 of resolution 1390(2002) with respect to Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban and other individuals, groups, undertakings and entities associated with them, as referred to in the list created pursuant to resolutions 1267(1999) and 1333 (2000) ("the Consolidated List"):

(a) Freeze without delay the funds and other financial assets or economic resources of those individuals, groups, undertakings and entities, including funds derived from property owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by them or by persons acting on their behalf or at their direction, and ensure that neither these nor any other funds, financial assets or economic resources are made available, directly or indirectly, for the benefit of such persons, by their nationals or by any persons within their territory;

(b) Prevent the entry into or the transit through their territories of those individuals, provided that nothing in the present paragraph shall oblige any State to deny entry into or require the departure from its territories of its own nationals and that the present paragraph shall not apply where entry or transit is necessary for the fulfilment of a judicial process or the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) ("the Committee") determines on a case-by-case basis only that entry or transit is justified;

(c) Prevent the direct or indirect supply, sale or transfer, to those individuals, groups, undertakings and entities from their territories or by their nationals outside their territories, or using their flag vessels or aircraft, of arms and related materiel of all types, including weapons and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, paramilitary equipment and spare parts for the aforementioned, and technical advice, assistance, or training related to military activities;

2. Also decides that acts or activities indicating that an individual, group, undertaking or entity is "associated with" Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden or the Taliban include:

(a) Participating in the financing, planning, facilitating, preparing or perpetrating of acts or activities by, in conjunction with, under the name of, on behalf of, or in support of;

(b) Supplying, selling or transferring arms and related materiel to;

(c) Recruiting for; or

(d) Otherwise supporting acts or activities of;

Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden or the Taliban, or any cell, affiliate, splinter group or derivative thereof;

3. Further decides that any undertaking or entity owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by, or otherwise supporting, such an individual, group, undertaking or entity associated with Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden or the Taliban shall be eligible for designation;

4. Decides that, when proposing names for the Consolidated List, States shall act in accordance with paragraph 17 of resolution 1526(2004) and henceforth also shall provide to the Committee a statement of case describing the basis of the proposal, and further encourages States to identify any undertakings and entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by the proposed subject;

5. Requests relevant States to inform, to the extent possible, and in writing where possible, individuals and entities included in the Consolidated List of the measures imposed on them, the guidelines of the Committee, and, in particular, the listing and de-listing procedures and the provisions of resolution 1452(2002);

6. Decides that the statement of case submitted by the designating State referred to in paragraph 4 above may be used by the Committee in responding to queries from Member States whose nationals, residents or entities have been included on the Consolidated List, decides also that the Committee may decide on a case-by-case basis to release the information to other parties, with the prior consent of the designating State, for example, for operational reasons or to aid the implementation of the measures, and decides further that States may continue to provide additional information which shall be kept on a confidential basis within the Committee unless the submitting State agrees to the dissemination of such information;

7. Strongly urges all Member States to implement the comprehensive, international standards embodied in the Forty Recommendations and the nine Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing of the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary steps to increase cooperation between the United Nations and Interpol in order to provide the Committee with better tools to fulfil its mandate more effectively and to give Member States better tools to implement the measures referred to in paragraph 1 above;

9. Urges all Member States, in their implementation of the measures called for in paragraph 1 above, to ensure that stolen and lost passports and other travel documents are invalidated as soon as possible and to share information on those documents with other Member States through the Interpol database;

10. Calls upon all Member States to use the checklist contained in annex II to the present resolution to report to the Committee by 1 March 2006 on specific actions that they have taken to implement the measures outlined in paragraph 1 above with regard to individuals and entities henceforth added to the Consolidated List, and thereafter at intervals to be determined by the Committee;

11. Directs the Committee to encourage the submission of names and additional identifying information from Member States for inclusion on the Consolidated List;

12. Calls upon the Committee, working in cooperation with the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1373(2001) ("the Counter-Terrorism Committee") to inform the Council of specific additional steps that States could take to implement the measures outlined in paragraph 1 above;

13. Reiterates the need for ongoing close cooperation and exchange of information between the Committee, the Counter-Terrorism Committee and the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004), as well as their respective groups of experts, including enhanced information-sharing, coordinated visits to countries, technical assistance and other issues of relevance to all three committees;

14. Also reiterates the importance of having the Committee follow up via oral and/or written communications with Member States regarding effective implementation of the sanctions measures and provide Member States with an opportunity, at the request of the Committee, to send representatives to meet with the Committee for more in-depth discussion of relevant issues;

15. Requests the Committee to consider, where and when appropriate, visits to selected countries by the Chairman and/or Committee members to enhance the full and effective implementation of the measures referred to in paragraph 1 above, with a view to encouraging States to comply fully with the present resolution and resolutions 1267(1999), 1333(2000), 1390 (2002), 1455(2003) and 1526(2004);

16. Also requests the Committee to report orally, through its Chairman, at least every one hundred and twenty days to the Council on the overall work of the Committee and the Monitoring Team, and, as appropriate, in conjunction with the reports by the Chairmen of the Counter-Terrorism Committee and the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540 (2004), including briefings for all interested Member States;

17. Reminds the Committee of its responsibilities as outlined in paragraph 14 of resolution 1455(2003) and paragraph 13 of resolution 1526(2004), and calls upon the Committee to provide the Council, no later than 31 July 2006, with an update of the written assessment referred to in paragraph 13 of resolution 1526(2004) of actions taken by Member States to implement the measures described in paragraph 1 above;

18. Requests that the Committee continue its work on its guidelines, including on listing and de-listing procedures, and implementation of resolution 1452 (2002), and requests the Chairman, in his periodic reports to the Council pursuant to paragraph 16 above, to provide progress reports on the work of the Committee on these issues;

19. Decides, in order to assist the Committee in the fulfilment of its mandate, to extend the mandate of the New York-based Monitoring Team for a period of seventeen months, under the direction of the Committee, with the responsibilities outlined in annex I to the present resolution;

20. Requests the Secretary-General, upon adoption of the present resolution and acting in close consultation with the Committee, to appoint, consistent with United Nations rules and procedures, no more than eight members, including a coordinator, to the Monitoring Team, taking into account the areas of expertise referred to in paragraph 7 of resolution 1526(2004);

21. Decides to review the measures described in paragraph 1 above with a view to their possible further strengthening in seventeen months, or sooner if necessary;

22. Also decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex I to resolution 1617(2005)

In accordance with paragraph 19 of this resolution, the Monitoring Team shall operate under the direction of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) and shall have the following responsibilities:

(a) To collate, assess, monitor and report on and make recommendations regarding implementation of the measures, to pursue case studies, as appropriate; and to explore in depth any other relevant issues as directed by the Committee;

(b) To submit a comprehensive programme of work to the Committee for its approval and review, as necessary, in which the Monitoring Team should detail the activities envisaged in order to fulfil its responsibilities, including proposed travel, based on close coordination with the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate to avoid duplication and reinforce synergies;

(c) To submit, in writing, three comprehensive, independent reports to the Committee, the first by 31 January 2006, the second by 31 July 2006, and the third by 10 December 2006, on implementation by States of the measures referred to in paragraph 1 of this resolution, including specific recommendations for improved implementation of the measures and possible new measures, as well as reporting on listing, de-listing, and exemptions pursuant to resolution 1452(2002);

(d) To analyse reports submitted pursuant to paragraph 6 of resolution 1455(2003), the checklists submitted pursuant to paragraph 10 of this resolution, and other information submitted by Member States to the Committee as instructed by the Committee;

(e) To work closely and share information with the Counter-Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate and the group of experts of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) to identify areas of convergence and to help to facilitate concrete coordination among the three Committees;

(f) To develop a plan to assist the Committee with addressing non-compliance with the measures referred to in paragraph 1 of this resolution;

(g) To present to the Committee recommendations, which could be used by Member States to assist them with the implementation of the measures referred to in paragraph 1 of this resolution and in preparing proposed additions to the Consolidated List;

(h) To consult with Member States in advance of travel to selected Member States, based on its programme of work as approved by the Committee;

(i) To encourage Member States to submit names and additional identifying information for inclusion on the Consolidated List, as instructed by the Committee;

(j) To study and report to the Committee on the changing nature of the threat of Al-Qaida and the Taliban and the best measures to confront it;

(k) To consult with Member States, including regular dialogue with representatives in New York and in capitals, taking into account comments from Member States, especially regarding any issues that might be contained in the reports of the Monitoring Team referred to in paragraph (c) of this annex;

(l) To report to the Committee, on a regular basis or when the Committee so requests, through oral and/or written briefings on the work of the Monitoring Team, including its visits to Member States and its activities;

(m) To assist the Committee in preparing oral and written assessments to the Council, in particular the analytical summaries referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 of this resolution;

(n) Any other responsibility identified by the Committee.

Annex II to resolution 1617(2005)

1267 Committee Checklist

Please provide to the United Nations 1267 (Al-Qaida/Taliban Sanctions) Committee by XXX date information on the following individuals, groups, undertakings, and entities added in the last six months to the Committee's Consolidated List of those subject to the sanctions described in Security Council resolution 1267(1999) and successor resolutions.

This information is provided by the Government of _____ on XXX date.

Sanctions Committee activities

The Al-Qaida and Taliban Sanctions Committee, established pursuant to resolution 1267(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 265], submitted a report [S/2006/22] covering its activities from 1 January to 31 December 2005. During that period, the Committee held seven formal meetings and 36 informal consultations at the expert level.

The Security Council, in resolution 1617(2005) (see above), provided more clarity regarding the mandatory sanctions measures and their implementation. The resolution provided an explanation of the term "associated with", in reference to association with Al-Qaida, Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, thus clarifying who could be subject to placement on the Committee's Consolidated List. Annex II of the resolution contained a checklist for monitoring sanctions implementation by States. The Council also extended the mandate of the Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team for a period of 17 months, to be discharged under the direction of the Sanctions Committee.

The Committee considered the recommendations contained in the Monitoring Team's second and third reports (see below). Some of the recommendations contained in the third report were referred to the Counter-Terrorism Committee (CTC) for further action and some to the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544] for information. The Committee also identified a number of recommendations, such as listing and de-listing issues, that would require its further consideration. For the first time, the Committee decided to issue, as a letter from the Chairman (see below), its comments and observations on the recommendations contained in the third report, that should be brought to the attention of all States.

To comply with its obligation to submit a written analytical assessment of Member State implementation of relevant sanctions measures pursuant to paragraph 13 of resolution 1526(2004) [ibid., p. 332], the Committee requested the Monitoring Team to assist it by providing a preliminary analysis, which it received on 11 July. Based on the information provided in the analysis, the Committee submitted its assessment (see below) with the expectation that it would serve as feedback for Member States that had submitted their implementation reports and as a source inspiration for the 46 non-reporting States.

The Committee continued to consider notifications and requests submitted by Member States pursuant to resolution 1452(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 280], seeking exceptions to the sanctions measures. It also updated its Consolidated List of individuals and entities belonging to or associated with Al-Qaida and the Taliban on the basis of relevant information provided by Member States. The Committee increased cooperation with the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol). The UN Secretariat and Interpol also elaborated a supplementary agreement to implement the cooperation agreement between the two organizations.

Monitoring Team

The Analytical Support and Sanctions Monitoring Team (the Monitoring Team), established by Security Council resolution 1526(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 332], had the mandate of collating, assessing, monitoring, reporting on and making recommendations regarding the implementation of measures imposed in that resolution.

Report of Monitoring Team (February). Pursuant to Council resolution 1526(2004), the Sanctions Committee Chairman, on 14 February [S/2005/83], transmitted to the Council President the second report of the Monitoring Team. The report noted that there had been no let-up in the determination of Al-Qaida, the Taliban and their associates to continue their campaign of terror, with further escalation in terms of the brutality of attacks. Although the Team's focus was to examine the implementation of existing sanctions, it noted that, by themselves, they could only hope to limit Al-Qaida activity, not end it.

The Team, drawing on its assessment of Member States' reports and other evidence, suggested a list of specific criteria, among other factors, for measuring compliance and implementation at the national level, and proposed various strategies to enhance implementation, including that the Council ask States to complete a compliance checklist after each additional listing. The assets freeze was perhaps the most implemented of the sanctions on a global scale, and constituted the most effective mechanism for preventing large-scale terrorist operations. Member States had generally reformed their official banking systems to prevent listed parties from receiving or transferring money, but there were many unofficial ways to circumvent those restrictions. Cash couriers, alternative remittance systems and charities could all be exploited to finance terrorism, and the challenge for the international community was finding a proper balance between restricting the flow of money to terrorists and allowing legitimate transactions to continue freely.

In terms of the arms embargo, the Team believed the world community had, in some senses, been the victim of its own success. Although embargoes might have impeded terrorists from obtaining military-style weapons and arms, they had not stopped their attacks. The Team considered three areas for action: man-portable anti-aircraft missile systems, commercially available materials that could be turned into explosives and weapons of mass destruction.

Implementation of the travel ban could be viewed as a success to the extent that no Member State had reported any violation. However, it was unlikely that no listed individual crossed a national border in the three years since it was enacted. The Team suggested that the travel ban be refined and clarified to deal with overt attempts by those listed to travel, and proposed new initiatives to prevent covert travel. The Team discussed those topics with Interpol, among others, and proposed a joint partnership between the United Nations and Interpol on matters of common concern, including stolen, lost and fraudulent travel documents, international arrest warrants and additional information on listed persons that Interpol might possess.

Annexed to the report were several annexes containing additional case studies, summaries of sanctions-related litigation and other supplementary information.

Report of Monitoring Team (September). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1526 (2004), the Sanctions Committee Chairman, on 2 September [S/2005/572], transmitted to the Council President the third report of the Monitoring Team. The Team found that Al-Qaida continued to evolve and adapt to the pressures and opportunities of the world around it, and the threat of a significant attack remained real in all areas. At the same time, there had been a revival of the threat from the Taliban. The international consensus against Al-Qaida and the Taliban remained firm, helped by a common understanding of the high level of the threat and of the international consequences of a successful major attack. States increasingly saw the advantage of making the sanctions regime as effective as possible, and more of them wished to participate in shaping its development. While the Consolidated List, the assets freeze, the arms embargo and the travel ban continued to provide the basis for an effective regime, there was scope to further improve implementation of those measures and to make them more powerful. More States had proposed names for the Consolidated List, or improvements to existing entries, and reported activity with regard to implementation. Although there had been further reports of assets freezing, the combination of sanctions had still not achieved its full potential and the Monitoring Team made further recommendations for improvement. The report also addressed two issues of concern to many States: the need for greater fairness in the application of the sanctions and the lack of sufficient identifiers on the Consolidated List. Concerning the assets freeze, apart from the lack of identifiers, it suffered from the ability of terrorists and their supporters to use alternative and often illegal means to raise and transfer money. The Team made specific proposals to deal with the abuse by listed persons and other terrorists of, for example, charities and other non-profit organizations and alternative remittance systems.

As terrorist tactics had evolved, the Team believed the arms embargo should change accordingly, taking into account, among other tactics, how their fundamental objective to influence public opinion through the media affected their choice of weapons. It suggested that the scope of the embargo and its links to other international non-proliferation agreements could provide fruitful areas for future work by the Council and the Committee. Concerning the implementation of the travel ban and similar national prohibitions, the Team supported initiatives to increase the use of biometrics in travel documents and to enhance regional and international cooperation in matters relating to security and the travel of listed persons and other terrorists.

Sanctions Committee observations (December). On 1 December [S/2005/760], the Sanctions Committee's Chairman transmitted to the Council President the Committee's comments and observations on the recommendations contained in the Monitoring Team's third report (see above). The Committee found that many of the recommendations should be brought to the attention of Member States, as they could significantly improve their implementation of the sanctions measures. However, while acknowledging the value of the Team's recommendations, the Committee arrived at its own conclusions, not necessarily shared by the Team.

The Committee supported the Team's recommendation to render the List in both English transliteration and in the language of the original documents, which would lead to greater accuracy and clarity and thus better implementation of sanctions. The Committee had already requested the Team to work with relevant States in ensuring an accurate rendition of the names in their original language and hoped to update the List with that information before the end of December.

The Committee also agreed to replace the current numbering system, which changed each time an individual or entity was added, with a permanent reference number, in order to ease communication between Member States and the Committee.

In its efforts to improve implementation of the sanctions regime, the Committee supported the recommendation that Member States be reminded of the meaning of a UN listing. A criminal conviction or indictment was not a prerequisite for inclusion on the List, and States needed not wait until national administrative, civil, or criminal proceedings could be brought or concluded against an individual or entity before proposing names for the List. Delays in implementing sanctions only allowed Al-Qaida or Taliban supporters an opportunity to circumvent sanctions.

As recommended by the Team, the Committee encouraged States that had not done so to enact legislation, or other measures, to allow for the freezing of assets of parties on the List, without the need for criminal offences or criminal standards of evidence to be demonstrated. While some Member States drew attention to the need to present sufficient evidence to judicial authorities as a condition for the freezing of assets, the Committee noted that such a procedure was not in conformity with Member States' obligations under Chapter VII of the UN Charter and urged States to ensure that assets were frozen as soon as the Committee added the name of an individual or an entity to its List.

The Committee noted the broad nature of the Team's recommendations regarding the implementation of the assets freeze, which would be useful not only in the implementation of sanctions against Al-Qaida and the Taliban, but also in general counter-terrorism efforts. It would therefore forward the recommendations to the Security Council's CTC (see p. 107).

The Committee supported the recommendation that States should improve or adopt measures to deal with the evasion of the travel ban through the issuance of new passports. Such measures could include a requirement that individuals applying for a new passport provide details of any previous identities and travel documents under those names, and mandatory monitoring (with possible referral to law enforcement) of cases of repeat passport requests by individuals.

Assessment of sanctions implementation

In response to Security Council resolution 1526(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 332], the Sanctions Committee Chairman, on 1 December [S/2005/761], transmitted to the Council President an analytical assessment of Member States' implementation of the measures referred to in paragraph 1 of that resolution, with a view to recommending further measures for the Council's consideration. An analysis provided by the Monitoring Team to the Committee on 11 July, based on all reports submitted by Member States in accordance with Council resolution 1455(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 311], reports from the Monitoring Team's and the Chairman's visits to selected States, contacts with Member States, CTC and its Executive Directorate and other sources, was annexed to the Committee's assessment.

The Monitoring Team's analysis noted that all States had a counter-terrorism policy and the great majority showed awareness of Al-Qaida and the Taliban, though many might not have had the Consolidated List as their primary focus. Those States did not necessarily separate action taken against persons on the List from that taken against all those generally regarded as terrorists. States were not likely to voluntarily report that their implementation of the sanctions regime was less than complete, and while the Team could not say that any State had demonstrated a clear lack of political will, the depth of commitment might, in some cases, need further examination, since an apparent lack of capacity might conceal a lack of will.

The Monitoring Team's contacts with Member States suggested that commitment to the sanctions would be enhanced by greater relevance and accuracy in the List and a sense that the sanctions regime was dynamic in tracking the changing nature of the Al-Qaida/Taliban threat. On behalf of the Committee, the Team had written to 85 States with a connection to names on the List to encourage updates. Thirty-seven had replied, 23 of which had supplied additional information. The Committee accepted 146 amendments concerning 63 names, and was considering many others. It was also considering how best to ensure that listed individuals and entities did not have time to move their assets before banks received notification of their listing. Controls beyond the banking sector were more difficult to implement and enforce and listed terrorists were still managing to raise and receive funds from sympathizers outside their immediate circle.

The travel ban would be helped by greater accuracy and relevance of the List, and closer cooperation with Interpol, but considerable international effort would be needed to solve the problem of false and stolen documents. The proper circulation of the List to vulnerable border crossings would need sustained analysis and assistance before solutions were found. Likewise the arms embargo would be more effective as analysis of the ways listed terrorists managed to acquire the means to launch attacks filtered through to help fine-tune international efforts to stem the flow.

In its assessment, the Committee observed that Member States still needed to further improve their implementation of sanctions. It continued to place emphasis on the submission of reports from Member States, especially since there were 47 non-reporting States.

Iraq

Situation in Iraq

In 2005, the United Nations, through the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq (UNAMI), continued to assist Iraq in its transition to democratic governance and reconstruction and reconciliation, despite the ever growing escalation of violence.

Communication (January). By a 19 January letter to the Secretary-General [A/59/679-S/2005/41], Turkey said that Iraq was at a crucial turning point in its political transition with the first free Iraqi elections in many decades to be held on 30 January. The UN Mission had been doing exemplary work and the Organization's seal on the elections would make its results more legitimate for the Iraqis and the international community. However, security, especially in central Iraq, remained elusive. One large segment of Iraqi society was either unwilling or felt unable to take part in the elections, despite Turkey's efforts to persuade that group to make a strong electoral showing. The international community's objective had been, and remained, to transfer sovereign authority to a transition government conferred by popular mandate. As the drafting of the new Iraqi constitution would get under way in the next phase, the participation of all Iraqis in that undertaking would become all the more important.

Meeting of countries neighbouring Iraq. The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the countries neighbouring Iraq, at their seventh meeting (Amman, Jordan, 5-6 January), attended by Bahrain, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Turkey, the Syrian Arab Republic and Iran, agreed on the importance of the elections for Iraq's political transition, including the drafting of a constitution, the subsequent referendum and the election of a constitutional Government. In the concluding communiqué, participants confirmed their readiness to cooperate with the Interim Government of Iraq, to broaden political participation in the spirit of national dialogue and consensus-building and to promote Iraq's transition to a united, democratic and pluralistic State, with a federal structure, if so decided by the Iraqi people.

The follow-up meeting to the 2004 International Ministerial Meeting of the Countries Neighbouring Iraq [YUN 2004, p. 358] was held in Cairo, Egypt, on 11 January. The meeting was attended by Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, the Syrian Arab Republic and Turkey, as well as by Canada, China, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, the Russian Federation, the United States and the United Kingdom. The United Nations, the League of Arab States (LAS) and the EU also attended the meeting. In addition to reaffirming the call on all Iraqis to participate in the elections, several delegates emphasized the need for the political process to create conditions conducive to greater stability and reconstruction efforts.

January elections

On 30 January, more than 8.5 million Iraqis, out of a voter population of over 14 million, exercised their democratic right to vote, despite concerns about the security environment, attempts at disruption and ongoing violence and concerns about the credibility of the elections, the Secretary-General stated in his March report on Iraq [S/2005/141 & Corr.1]. He affirmed that the conduct of the elections for the Transitional National Assembly, 18 Governorate Councils and the Kurdistan National Assembly met recognized international standards and the number of serious irregularities and complaints conveyed to the Independent Electoral Commission was relatively small, all of which were being investigated and addressed by the Commission. The Commission was supported in its work by an electoral assistance team led by the United Nations. It accredited more than 2,000 Iraqi, international and Arabic media personnel throughout the country, 33,141 national observers, 622 international observers and 61,725 agents of political parties and entities to observe the electoral process. The United Nations actively encouraged the development of election observer groups and established a project for that purpose.

The uncertain political environment and security conditions necessitated a range of contingencies and special measures. The Commission worked extensively with national and international security forces to provide a viable security framework for the elections. The security plan put in place, including the closure of borders and a ban on vehicle movements, created a security environment that permitted electoral staff to carry out their work. Of the planned

5,243 polling centres, 5,199 were able to open and operate on polling day.

From 111 competing political entities and coalitions, 275 representatives were elected to the Transitional National Assembly from a total of 7,785 candidates. Over 31 per cent of seats were awarded to female candidates, surpassing the goal established in the Transitional Administrative Law.

Security Council consideration (February). On 16 February [meeting 5123], the Security Council was briefed by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast. The Secretary-General attended the meeting.

The Under-Secretary-General said that the simultaneous holding of three elections on 30 January was a momentous event for Iraq and the international community and marked a significant development in Iraq's transition to democratic government. The electoral system—proportional representation with a single national constituency—was chosen in order to facilitate a wide range of representation, though turnout was low in areas with a high percentage of Sunni Arabs.

The Under-Secretary-General said that the key to forging a national discussion and understanding was the drafting of the new constitution. Iraq's most immediate challenges were forming a transitional Government that was broadly representative of Iraqi society and finding ways to bring together all Iraqi constituencies in a national effort to define the future of their country. Prominent political leaders in Iraq had signalled their sensitivity to the fact that certain constituencies, particularly among Arab Sunnis and other Arab nationalists, were likely to find themselves underrepresented in the Transitional National Assembly due to the low turnout in some regions. Those leaders had indicated their determination to assuage any fears of political alienation, including by raising the possibility of inviting representatives of groups that did not, or could not, take part in the elections to participate both in the transitional Government and in the constitution-drafting process. Conversely, some political elements that had urged a boycott or postponement of elections appeared to be insisting that their views be included in any future dialogue and that they participate fully in the drafting of a permanent constitution.

The new transitional institutions of Iraq would need the active support and engagement of the international community. The United Nations was ready to offer technical assistance and public information support, as well as political facilitation. The Secretary-General, for his part, would continue to foster greater regional and international convergence in support of Iraq's political transition.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (February)

On 16 February [meeting 5124], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/5 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council congratulates the people of Iraq on the successful elections of 30 January 2005. These elections represent a historic moment for Iraq and a positive step in its political transition. In turning out to the polls, Iraqis demonstrated their respect for the rule of law and non-violence. They voted for democracy and full ownership of their affairs. The Council commends the Iraqi people for having taken this step to exercise their right to freely determine their own political future and encourages them to continue to do so in moving ahead with their political transition.
> The Council congratulates the newly-elected coalitions and individuals in these elections.
> The elections took place under difficult conditions, and the Council salutes the bravery of the Iraqi people who demonstrated their commitment to democracy, defying the terrorists. The Council commends the tens of thousands of Iraqis who ran as candidates, administered the elections, staffed the polls, observed the elections and provided security. The Council gives special recognition to the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq for its fortitude and organizational skill in administering the elections.
> The Council commends the Secretary-General and the United Nations for successfully assisting election preparations, including advice and support extended to the Iraqis by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq Ashraf Jehangir Qazi, the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq, particularly the lead electoral adviser Carlos Valenzuela, the United Nations Electoral Assistance Division and its Director Carina Perelli. The Council also appreciates the assistance given by other international actors, including European Union electoral experts.
> The Council also notes the commendable role played by the Iraqi security forces and the Multinational Force-Iraq in providing security for the elections.
> These elections are an important step for Iraq's political transition, as outlined in Council resolution 1546(2004). The Council looks forward to the seating of the Transitional National Assembly and the formation of a new Transitional Government of Iraq in the near future. A Constitution of Iraq, to be drafted under the authority of the Transitional National Assembly, is expected to be put to a referendum by October 2005 and followed by general elections by December 2005 under the new Constitution. The Council affirms its continuing support for the Iraqi people in their political transition and reaffirms the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq.

Underlining the importance of the maximum possible participation of all components of Iraqi society in the political process, the Council stresses the need for sustained political efforts aimed at making the next steps of the transition, in particular the coming constitutional process, as inclusive, participatory and transparent as possible. The Council welcomes the statements recently made by Iraqi leaders in this regard, and strongly encourages the Transitional Government of Iraq and the Transitional National Assembly to reach out broadly to all segments of Iraqi society, with a view to promoting genuine political dialogue and national reconciliation and to ensuring that all Iraqis are duly represented and have a voice in the political process and the drafting of the Iraqi Constitution.

The Council reaffirms the leading role of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq set out in resolution 1546(2004) in support of Iraq's own efforts and as requested by the Government of Iraq, to promote national dialogue and consensus-building on the drafting of a national constitution. In this regard, the Council urges the United Nations to prepare itself rapidly and encourages the members of the international community to provide advisers and technical support to the United Nations to help it to fulfil this role.

The Council condemns, in the strongest possible terms, acts of terrorism in Iraq, which should not be allowed to disrupt Iraq's political and economic transition. The Council calls upon those who use violence in an attempt to subvert the political process to lay down their arms and participate in the political process. It encourages the Iraqi authorities to engage with all those who renounce violence and to create a political atmosphere conducive to national reconciliation and political competition through peaceful means.

The Council stresses the continued importance of Iraq's neighbouring countries and regional organizations in supporting the political process, cooperating with the Iraqi authorities to control transit across Iraq's borders and extending other support for the people of Iraq in their efforts to achieve security and prosperity.

Consistent with resolution 1546(2004), the Council reaffirms its support for a federal, democratic, pluralist and unified Iraq, in which there is full respect for human rights. It welcomes the support of the international community to Iraq and underlines the importance of enhanced and expeditious assistance from all States and relevant international organizations in support of Iraq's further implementation of the political transition process and efforts to achieve national reconciliation, economic reconstruction and stability, in accordance with resolution 1546(2004).

Communications (March-June). On 13 March [A/59/761-S/2005/215], the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), at its ninety-fourth session (Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, 13 March), welcomed the success of the Iraqi electoral process and underlined the importance of involving the entire political spectrum in shaping Iraq's future.

On 23 March [S/2005/274], the Council of LAS, at its seventeenth session (Algiers, Algeria, 22-23 March), adopted a resolution affirming the necessity of participation by all segments of the Iraqi people in the political process, in particular the drafting of a permanent Constitution based on national consensus, the holding of a referendum thereon and participation in the legislative elections scheduled for December. LAS also decided to provide training for Iraqis, including for the police and armed forces, in order to enable the Iraqi Government to terminate the foreign military presence.

On 30 April [S/2005/298], the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the countries neighbouring Iraq, in a joint statement issued at their eighth official meeting (Istanbul, Turkey, 29-30 April), welcomed the holding of the 30 January Iraqi general elections, the subsequent appointment of Prime Minister al-Jaafari and the formation and endorsement of the Transitional National Government. They added that the United Nations should play a pivotal role in the new transitional phase, which would include the holding of the constitutional referendum and parliamentary elections and that UNAMI should serve as the focal point in receiving and processing political and donor assistance to the transition process.

On 5 April [A/59/824-S/2005/363], the Joint Council and Ministerial Meeting between GCC States and the EU, at their fifteenth session (Manama, Bahrain, 5 April), issued a joint communiqué reaffirming their willingness to work with the new Transitional National Assembly and stressing the importance of the continuing implementation of Council resolution 1546(2004) and, in particular, the drafting of a permanent constitution, leading to a constitutionally elected government by 31 December.

On 11 June [A/59/845-S/2005/386], the GCC Ministerial Council, at the ninety-fifth session (Riyadh, 11 June), reviewed the deterioration of the security and humanitarian situation and the increasing cycle of violence in Iraq. It condemned all terrorist acts that targeted Iraqi civilians and military, humanitarian and religious institutions, in addition to the abduction and torture of innocent persons. It also condemned the deliberate mass killing of Iraqis and prisoners of war, including Kuwaiti nationals and nationals of other States, perpetrated by the former Iraqi regime.

UN Assistance Mission for Iraq

resolution 1500(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 346], continued to support the Secretary-General in the fulfilment of his mandate under resolution 1483 (2003) [ibid., p. 338]. UNAMI's mission was expanded by Council resolution 1546(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 348] to include assisting in the convening of a national conference to select a Consultative Council, advising on the holding of elections, promoting national dialogue and consensus-building on the drafting of a new constitution, advising on the development of effective civil and social services and contributing to the coordination and delivery of reconstruction, development and humanitarian assistance. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General and his substantive, security and administrative support staff were based in Baghdad, while the majority of humanitarian project planning and management activities were conducted from Amman, Jordan. The primary logistics support base was in Kuwait, while two small liaison detachments were deployed in Erbil and Basra.

On 6 May, the Secretary-General appointed Michael von der Schulenburg as Deputy Special Representative for Political Affairs in Iraq to further strengthen UNAMI's political presence in Baghdad.

During the year, the Secretary-General submitted four reports on UNAMI's activities [S/2005/141, S/2005/373, S/2005/585, S/2005/766].

Report of Secretary-General (March). In response to resolution 1546(2004), the Secretary-General submitted a March report [S/2005/141 & Corr.1] on UNAMI's activities in Iraq since his December 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 358]. The Secretary-General stated that, since the elections, a number of Iraqi political leaders from successful electoral lists had signalled their willingness to invite prominent representative leaders from Arab Sunni communities to participate in the Transitional Government and in the constitution-making process, so as to ensure balanced representation in both. Similarly, several Arab Sunni and Arab nationalist political entities that did not participate in the elections, or had urged a boycott or postponement, had declared that their points of view had to be included in the next steps of the transition and that they had the right to participate fully in the drafting of a permanent constitution. Efforts were under way to prepare for the convening of the Transitional National Assembly.

Progress in the political process remained heavily influenced by the security situation. The large number of casualties among Iraqi police, security forces and civilians, as well as inadequate judicial protection, were serious impediments to law enforcement. Daily attacks against Iraqis and foreigners resumed immediately after the elections, including a terrorist attack in Hillah on 28 February, during which over 120 persons were killed and 140 injured. Curfews, restrictions on movement and other measures were imposed and eased at regular intervals in most parts of the country. At the end of February, the multinational force (MNF) and Iraqi security forces mounted a counter-insurgency campaign in Anbar province, including Ramadi. The Special Representative conveyed to the Interim Government and MNF concern over the potential political and humanitarian consequences of an escalation of the situation.

UN personnel in Iraq continued to be constrained by security conditions, necessitating extremely well-protected living and working facilities within heavily guarded areas. Movement outside the Baghdad international zone, or similarly well-protected compounds in other parts of the country, continued to be extremely hazardous and therefore dependent on MNF's protection. Under those conditions, any expansion of the UN presence in Iraq would be limited by the number of persons who could be accommodated in the Baghdad international zone, and those who could be protected by the small security liaison detachments deployed to MNF cantonments at Basra and Erbil, which were dispatched there in February to facilitate periodic visits, prepare UN facilities and assess the security conditions required for any expansion of its presence in Iraq.

The trust fund for Iraq, established by the Secretary-General in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 357], had received contributions totalling $8.3 million as at 1 March 2005, from 11 Member States. A mechanism for the disbursement of funds to Member States providing troops to the distinct entity was being finalized. The United States informed the United Nations that the first troop contingent contributed to the distinct entity by Georgia, would be deployed to Baghdad in March 2005.

The Secretary-General observed that the 30 January elections marked the completion of an important first step in Iraq's political transition to the restoration of full sovereignty and the return of peace and stability. Priority attention had to be given to addressing the basic needs of all Iraqis. Security, job creation, infrastructural improvements, institutional capacity-building and effective delivery of basic services were essential for making the political and security context more conducive to a successful transition process. To meet those challenges, the new transitional institutions of Iraq would need continued and active support from the international community. The United Nations would do everything possible to implement its mandate under Security Council resolution 1546(2004), as circumstances permitted. The next step in Iraq's transition was the constitution-making process. Full Iraqi ownership of that process would be particularly important. The Secretary-General's Special Representative was consulting with a wide range of Iraqi representatives to promote dialogue and consensus-building in support of the political transition, including the constitution-making process. The United Nations could provide technical assistance, public information support and coordination of international assistance. UNAMI's work in the reconstruction, development and humanitarian areas was driven by Iraqi demands and priorities; 23 UN agencies, programmes and funds were working from both inside and outside the country to ensure a coordinated and efficient effort in providing reconstruction and humanitarian assistance to Iraq.

Security Council consideration (11 April). On 11 April [meeting 5161], the Council was briefed by the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Iraq, Ashraf Jehangir Qazi, and by the United States representative on behalf of MNF.

Mr. Qazi said that the Transitional National Assembly, which convened for the first time on 16 March, had elected a new president and two vice-presidents. Although there had been a reduction in the number of violent incidents since the elections, the tactics and lethality of the insurgency continued to evolve and were cause for concern. The faster Iraqi security forces could be trained, the sooner they would be able to take charge of the country's security. The international community could provide critical support to Iraq's transition by stepping up reconstruction and developmental assistance through the International Reconstruction Fund Facility, and UNAMI was prepared to play an enhanced coordinating role between donors and the Iraqi authorities. Iraqi interlocutors wanted the United Nations to assume greater responsibilities and greater visibility in Iraq. Liaison offices had been opened in Erbil and Basra for the deployment of an initial number of humanitarian and development staff. The United Nations would assess the scope for increased humanitarian and development initiatives. The arrival of newly contributed guard units assigned to provide UN security in Baghdad and Basra would, it was hoped, encourage other countries to support the expansion of UN activities in Iraq.

The United States said that Iraq remained a very difficult security environment. Terrorists and insurgents were determined to thwart the country's progress towards peace and democracy. They continued a campaign of attacks and intimidation against Iraqi leaders and citizens, security forces and private citizens, as well as against aid workers and MNF. Iraqis continued to volunteer in large numbers to serve their country in the Iraqi security forces, over 150,000 of whom had been equipped and trained. Interior Ministry troops numbered some 85,000, including regular police, members of special police commandos, public order and mechanized battalions, border guard units and dignitary-protection elements. Defence Ministry forces numbered 65,000 and included troops from the regular Iraqi army, air force, navy and special operations. Though progress had been made in building up the Iraqi security forces, more time and continued support from MNF were needed before they could reach full operational capacity. What had changed since the December 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 357] was the increasing use of Iraqi security forces, supported by MNF as required. Military forces and civil affairs personnel, in coordination with the Iraqi Government, international donors and international and national non-governmental organizations (NGOs), also worked to provide civil, humanitarian and reconstruction assistance throughout Iraq. MNF also disbursed funds to build and improve infrastructure, provide for the welfare of the citizens and support education. The United States said that the elections of 30 January were an essential step in the Iraqi people's path towards stability and self-governance. Transparency and broad-based participation in the drafting of Iraq's new constitution would be critical to developing a stable and thriving democracy. Noting that security for UNAMI was a necessary condition for the United Nations to fulfil its mandate in Iraq, the United States acknowledged those countries that had pledged more than $15 million towards funding for the distinct entity under MNF's unified command that provided security for the United Nations in Baghdad. The United States encouraged countries to provide additional assistance to the entity through the provision of funds or troops to meet the security needs of expanded UN activities. It welcomed the deployment of UN liaison teams to Basra and Erbil and wished to see the United Nations expand the implementation of its responsibilities for economic and humanitarian reconstruction assistance in Iraq.

The representative of Iraq said that the country had just marked the two-year anniversary of the fall of the previous regime. The journey had not been easy, nor would it have been possible without outside help. However, Iraq needed to be relieved from the shackles and burdens of the previous regime. It was time for the Council to dismantle the relevant legal, bureaucratic and other relevant structures that it had imposed on Iraq before 2003.

Report of Secretary-General (June). The Secretary-General, in his June report [S/2005/373] on Iraq said that, after delays in reaching an agreement, the Transitional National Assembly was formally inaugurated on 16 March, but it was not until 6 April that the Assembly elected Hajim Al-Hasani as its President and Hussain Sharistani and Aref Taifour as Vice-Presidents. The Assembly's 275 members comprised the United Iraqi Alliance (140 seats), the Kurdistan Alliance List (75 seats), the Iraqi List (40 seats), the Iraqis (five seats), Turkman Iraqi Front (three seats), National Independent Cadres and Elites (three seats), National Union (two seats), Islamic Group of Kurdistan/Iraq (two seats), Islamic Action Organization in Iraq (two seats), National Democratic Alliance (one seat), Al Rafideen National List (one seat), Liberation and Reconciliation Gathering (one seat).

To ensure adequate and legitimate representation of Arab Sunnis in the Transitional Government, many of whom did not participate in the January elections, and were therefore underrepresented in the Assembly, the two main political groupings in the Assembly, the Kurdistan Alliance and the United Iraqi Alliance, negotiated, resulting in a memorandum of understanding that laid the basis for the formation of the new gove-rnment. On 28 April, the Transitional National Assembly endorsed the Transitional Government, comprised of 32 ministerial and 4 deputy ministerial posts, under the premiership of Ibrahim al-Jaafari. The Presidency Council was made up of Jalal Talabani, who was sworn in as President of Iraq on 7 April, and Ghazi al-Yawar and Adel Abdul Medhi as Vice-Presidents.

On 10 May, the Transitional National Assembly established the Constitution Drafting Committee to draft a permanent constitution by 15 August, which would then be presented to the Iraqi people for approval in a general referendum to be held no later than 15 October. The Drafting Committee established a subcommittee to identify mechanisms for making the constitution-making process more inclusive and two more Committees on Federalism and human rights.

At the international level, the United States and the EU, at the request of the Transitional Government, offered to co-host an international conference on Iraq in Brussels, Belgium, in June (see p. 423). The conference would be an opportunity for the newly formed Iraqi Government to present its priorities and strategic directions related to the political process, including the constitution-making process, the upcoming electoral events, reconstruction and development issues and security and public order issues.

The new phase of Iraq's political transition took place in a security environment that had yet to show signs of improvement. Since the inauguration of the Transitional Government, attacks against both Iraqi civilians and public officials had increased significantly. Bombings, strikes against Iraqi and MNF installations and convoys, attacks on aircraft, hostage-takings and targeted assassinations against Iraqi civilians, including public figures, many with increasing sophistication, continued to be centred on Baghdad, Mosul, Ramadi and Tikrit. Iraqi police recruitment centres were particular targets, and indiscriminate attacks against civilians continued to cause growing numbers of casualties, with the apparent intent of demonstrating the weakness and inability of the new Government to control the security situation and of exacerbating sectarian tensions. Ground movement between the Baghdad international zone and airport had occasionally been interrupted. A major attack against local security forces in Erbil and incidents in other parts of Iraq demonstrated a sustained ability of hostile elements to select and coordinate attack targets throughout the country. The significant rise in insurgent attacks in April and May had taken a particularly heavy toll on civilians, but accurate reporting of incidents was problematic and figures concerning the number of casualties remained uncertain. MNF and Iraqi security forces stepped up their anti-insurgent campaigns in and around Baghdad, as well as in western Iraq. There were reports of high casualty rates and alleged violations of civil liberties and human rights by all sides. In response to the security situation, the Transitional Government, on 13 May, extended the Order for Safeguarding National Security to all parts of Iraq, except the three northern governorates, for another 30 days.

To strengthen security arrangements for UN staff in Iraq, a third UN personal security detail was to be deployed in mid-June.

On 30 May, Iraq requested the United Nations and the international donor community, to provide technical assistance in helping to promote national dialogue between the Constitutional Drafting Committee and the Iraqi people, and build consensus nationwide for the draft constitution. UNAMI organized its assistance programme in the areas of facilitation and good offices for promoting inclusiveness and consensus-building; institutional support; knowledge sharing; public outreach; and coordination of international assistance. It also led a joint comprehensive review of the UN-Iraqi assistance strategic framework on 24 March, which outlined the main priority areas for future reconstruction and rehabilitation in Iraq. The United Nations also played an increasingly important role in donor coordination.

The Secretary-General observed that the United Nations had been able, under challenging circumstances, to help Iraq meet each benchmark of its political transition process. The Transitional National Assembly had requested that the Organization provide technical assistance for the Constitutional process. UNAMI had developed a comprehensive support programme and was engaged with the members of the Constitution Drafting Committee and other relevant actors to help make that process a success. However, the volatile security situation remained a formidable challenge to the transition process. The Secretary-General expressed concern about the potential for escalation of inter- and intra-communal tensions into ethnic or sectarian strife and the regional ramifications thereof.

Security Council consideration (June). On 16 June [meeting 5204], the Council was briefed on the situation in Iraq by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Danilo Türk.

Mr. Türk said that the security environment remained extremely challenging, particularly the ever-increasing level of sectarian violence. Security initiatives, in order to work, needed to form part of a broader credible political process that could address the underlying political problems. Two years after the demise of the former regime, it was imperative for the new Government, with the support of the international community, to deliver basic services effectively and to do more to promote the rule of law and respect for human rights.

International Conference on Iraq

On 22 June, the EU and the United States jointly hosted the Iraq International Conference in Brussels. More than 80 countries and organizations, including the United Nations, attended the Conference. The preparatory process was led by a steering group composed of the EU, the United States, Iraq, Egypt, Japan, the Russian Federation and the United Nations. A preparatory meeting took place in Cairo, Egypt on 2 June. The International Conference focused on building a renewed international partnership with Iraq based on a comprehensive approach that involved supporting Iraq's political transition process, encouraging its economic recovery and reconstruction, and helping to establish the rule of law and public order in the country. The Transitional Government of Iraq set out its vision and strategy in those areas, stressing priority activities. Participants resolved to support the Transitional Government in accordance with resolution 1546(2004). The Secretary-General, who attended the conference, expressed the hope that the new partnership forged at the meeting would mean wider and deeper consensus in the Security Council in support of resolution 1546(2004).

Assassination of diplomats and escalation of violence

On 7 July [S/2005/438], Egypt informed the Council President that the Head of the Egyptian Mission to Iraq, Ambassador Ihab El Sherif, had been abducted and killed in Baghdad by a group of terrorists. Egypt also reaffirmed its commitment to the Iraqi people.

On 8 July [S/2005/449], Saudi Arabia said that the killing of Ambassador El Sherif was wrongly and falsely couched under the guise of religion.

The Security Council, in statement S/PRST/2005/29 of 8 July (see p. 1155), condemned the assassination of Ambassador El Sherif, as well as terrorist attacks in Iraq, including the attempted assassinations of diplomats from Bahrain and Pakistan.

In related action, the Council, in statement S/PRST/2005/37 of 27 July (see p. 1100), condemned the assassination of two Algerian diplomats.

Concerned with the escalation of violence, the Council, in resolution 1618(2005) of 4 August (see p. 104), took note of the attacks that had taken place in July, which resulted in over 100 deaths, including 32 children. It expressed concern regarding the increasing attacks on foreign diplomats, including murder or kidnapping.

Communication. On 25 July, Foreign Ministers of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) (Sana'a, Yemen, 28-30 June) [A/59/884-S/2005/522], adopted a resolution on Iraq, in which they stressed, among other things, the necessity for Iraq's neighbours to take effective measures to control their borders, in order to prevent the movement of terrorists from and into Iraq. They also decided to cancel all of the country's arrears to OIC up to the 2004-2005 financial year.

Extension of UNAMI's mandate

On 3 August [S/2005/509], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President that, despite severe operational and security constraints, UNAMI had grown in size and expanded its activities in Baghdad since it resumed operations in Iraq in August 2004. It had 260 UNAMI civilian and military personnel based in Iraq and those numbers were expected to rise further in 2005, with the operational use of new facilities in Erbil and Basra, and increased reconstruction, development and humanitarian activities in those areas. UNAMI's electoral and constitutional support would continue beyond the scheduled completion of the timetable outlined in resolution 1546(2004), if so requested by the Iraqi Government. Similarly, UNAMI was ready to continue to assist in reconstruction, development and humanitarian assistance as long as the Iraqi Government deemed it necessary. Adequate support and resources would be required for UNAMI to continue to implement its mandated tasks. In that regard, the Secretary-General welcomed the spirit of international cooperation, evidenced at the Brussels Conference on Iraq on 22 June (see above), and hoped it would translate into increased support for UN efforts inside Iraq. He recommended that UNAMI's mandate be extended for a further period of 12 months.

On 11 August [meeting 5247], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1619(2005). The draft [S/2005/515] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous relevant resolutions on Iraq, in particular resolutions 1500(2003) of 14 August 2003, 1546(2004) of 8 June 2004 and 1557(2004) of 12 August 2004,

Reaffirming the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq,

Recalling that the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq was established on 14 August 2003 and extended on 12 August 2004, and reaffirming that the United Nations should play a leading role in assisting the efforts of the Iraqi people and Government in developing institutions for representative government, and in promoting national dialogue and unity,

Stressing that this Iraqi national dialogue, which the Mission should assist, is crucial for the political stability and unity of Iraq,

Taking note of the letter dated 3 August 2005 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the Security Council,

1. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq for another period of twelve months from the date of the present resolution;

2. Expresses its intention to review the mandate of the Mission in twelve months or sooner, if requested by the Government of Iraq;

3. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Further political and security developments

Report of Secretary-General (September). The Secretary-General, in his 7 September [S/2005/585] report on UNAMI's operations and on the progress made towards the political transition in Iraq, said that Iraq's evolving transition was dominated by the writing of a permanent constitution, preparations for the referendum on the constitution and elections for a permanent government. The delays in convening the Transitional National Assembly and forming the Transitional Government reduced the time available for completing the draft constitution by the 15 August deadline. Additional time was therefore required to make the Constitution Drafting Committee more inclusive of the aspirations of all Iraqi political constituencies. Some 15 Sunnis and 10 advisers were brought into the process and the Committee held its first meeting on 5 July.

The security situation in Iraq affected the constitution-making process. Among other incidents, representatives of the Sunni Conference were repeatedly threatened because of their participation in the constitutional proceedings and a Sunni Arab representative to the Committee was assassinated on 19 July. On 1 August, the Constitution Drafting Committee decided not to request an extension and to aim at completing the draft by the 15 August deadline. President Jalal Talabani convened a leadership conference on 7 August that brought Iraq's political leaders together to forge a political compact on outstanding issues. The Transitional National Assembly voted twice to extend the deadline. On 28 August, the text of the draft constitution was resubmitted to the Assembly, but agreement on several issues remained elusive and negotiations between the parties continued.

In other developments, on 12 June, the inaugural session of the Kurdistan National Assembly elected Massoud Barzani to a four-year term as President of the Kurdistan Regional Government. At the request of the Iraqi Electoral Commission, the UN Electoral Division deployed a needs assessment mission to Iraq from 5 to 26 June to review electoral planning issues. As a result of the mission's recommendations and a meeting held in Jordan (28-30 June), a "critical path" document outlining tasks, deadlines and resources for UN assistance to the Electoral Commission was drawn up. The Transitional National Assembly and the Independent Electoral Commission began preparations for the constitutional referendum on 15 October. On 25 July, the Assembly adopted the referendum law, which was signed by the President. On 8 August, the Assembly requested UN assistance in drafting a new electoral law. At the request of the Transitional Government, the United Nations initiated steps towards a national census.

At the fourth meeting of regional donors to the International Reconstruction Fund Facility for Iraq (18-19 July, Dead Sea, Jordan), Iraq presented its 2005-2007 development strategy. In the area of human rights, on 8 August, the Transitional Government reinstated capital punishment, which had been abolished by a decree of the Coalition Provisional Authority, and authorized the execution on 17 August of three men convicted of kidnapping, killing and rape.

The Secretary-General observed that the constitutional process had engaged the Iraqi people in an unprecedented debate on key challenges facing their country, which generated significant political momentum despite the difficult circumstances in which the process had taken place. However, continuing acts of terrorism, violent crimes, including kidnappings and torture, and the adverse actions of security forces and paramilitary groups, represented a disconcerting source of human rights violations in the country. Deficiencies in the administration of the justice system posed a major challenge and the lack of basic services and economic prospects furthered the perception among many Iraqis that the political process had yet to fully deliver on its promise of a better life. Developing the capacity of the Iraqi security forces to assume full responsibility for their country's security remained a crucial task and the full reintegration of local militias and paramilitary forces into the new Iraqi security apparatus had to be part of that effort. National reconciliation would remain the major challenge for the Iraqi people. It was incumbent upon the Iraqi political parties and groups to develop mutually beneficial approaches to resolving differences and responding to the demands of all constituencies. While pursuing their respective policy interests, communities had to build bridges of hope and trust between one another with a view to strengthening their sense of nationhood and preserving the unity, territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Iraq. Otherwise, rising sectarian tensions and violence held the potential for escalation into serious civil strife.

Security Council consideration (September). On 21 September [meeting 5266], the Council was briefed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Iraq and by the United States representative on behalf of MNF.

The Special Representative said that the text by the Transitional National Assembly of a draft constitution was not designated until 28 August, which continued to be discussed and changed. Changes to the text were finally read out to the National Assembly on 18 September. Major points of contention were the issue of federalism, modalities for the formation of regions in addition to the existing Kurdistan region, the identity of the State, the role of Islam as a source of law, and the distribution of powers with respect to natural resources, including oil and water. Several important constitutional arrangements were deferred to the next elected national assembly for legislative action. A copy of the constitutional text to be put to the Iraqi people on 15 October was formally communicated to the Special Representative, with a request that UNAMI facilitate its publication and distribution. Preparations were also being made for general elections. The Special Representative said that, while the referendum and the elections were necessary instruments in Iraq's transition to democracy, they were only staging posts along an evolving transition. Irrespective of their outcome, a number of overarching challenges remained, including promoting national reconciliation; respecting Iraqi ownership of the political process and strengthening the security of the State; developing good governance practices and institutional capacity-building; and encouraging international and regional engagement and consensus in support of Iraq's transition.

The United States said that the number of terror incidents had been relatively steady in the post-election period, with attacks concentrated in four of Iraq's 18 provinces. The frequency of attacks on Iraq's infrastructure, such as electricity generation and oil facilities, decreased since the election, but they continued to have an adverse impact on the availability of electricity and on oil revenues. The capacity of Iraqi Security Forces was increasing, reducing the influence and effectiveness of insurgents, and strengthening Iraqi rule-of-law capabilities. As at 19 September, there were 193,000 trained and equipped Iraqi security forces, including 104,000 police, highway patrol and other forces under the Ministry of the Interior, and 89,000 in the army, air force and navy. Those forces, in partnership with MNF, increasingly conducted the full spectrum of counter-insurgency operations to isolate and neutralize former regime extremists and foreign terrorists. To stem the flow of foreign fighters, priority had been placed on securing the Iraqi-Syrian border. MNF and the Iraqi Government were developing a conditions-based security plan to define the environment necessary for further and greater transfers of responsibility from MNF to the Iraqi security forces.

On the same day, in a closed meeting [meeting 5267], the Security Council had a constructive exchange of views with the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Iraq, Hoshyar Zebari.

Referendum on the constitution. The Secretary-General, in his December report on Iraq [S/2005/66], stated that further amendments to the Iraqi constitution were put before the Assembly on 12 October. Those related to the federal and united character of Iraq, the use of Iraq's two official languages in federal and official institutions in the Kurdistan region, Iraqi citizenship, the administration of "national treasures", the question of de-Baathification, and the institution of a constitutional review process, which provided for a comprehensive review of the new constitution following the convening of the new parliament and the Council of Representatives, after the 15 December elections. On 13 October, which was declared National Constitution Day, the amended draft constitution was endorsed by the Transitional Government. The referendum, which was successfully organized by the Independent Electoral Commission, with the assistance of the United Nations and the International Electoral Assistance Team, was held on 15 October.

According to the final certified results released by the Electoral Commission, there was a 64.6 per cent voter turnout, with 79 per cent voting in favour and 21 per cent against. Two governorates (Al Anbar and Salahaddin) voted by more than two thirds to reject the draft constitution. Based on those results, the Board of Commissioners therefore decided that the draft constitution was adopted.

Overall, referendum day saw a high level of voter turnout throughout the country and among all the main political constituencies, despite the difficult security situation. That result marked a change from the elections held in January (see p. 417), where the turnout was significantly low in some areas and among some groups, particularly Arab Sunnis.

Report of Secretary-General (December). In response to resolution 1546(2004), the Secretary-General submitted a December report [S/2005/766] on UNAMI's operations and on developments in the political transition process since his September report (see p. 424). The Secretary-General visited Iraq on 12 November, where he met with political and community leaders. He reiterated the UN's commitment to supporting Iraq's political and economic reconstruction, as well as the need for national dialogue and reconciliation. He also emphasized the need for Iraqis to ensure free and credible elections on 15 December, and that a credible political process ultimately offered the best prospects for improving the security situation. An improvement in the basic living conditions of the Iraqi people and in the human rights situation also remained critical in that regard. The trip also allowed the Secretary-General to meet with UN staff in Baghdad and to better measure the challenges the mission faced on a day-to-day basis, particularly in terms of security, accommodation and movement. He also honoured the memory of the 22 colleagues killed in the attack against the UN headquarters in Baghdad on 19 August 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 346].

A preparatory meeting for the Conference on Iraqi National Accord was held at LAS headquarters in Cairo, Egypt from 19 to 21 November 2005. The meeting was attended by a wide spectrum of Iraqi political and community leaders, government representatives from the region, as well as from regional, international and other organizations. The meeting agreed to convene the Conference on Iraqi National Accord in early 2006 in Baghdad, and requested the cooperation of the United Nations in that regard. The preparatory meeting was a significant event in that, for the first time, a broad range of representatives of Iraq's different communities came together to discuss national reconciliation and the future of their country.

The political transition and attempts to maintain security by the Iraqi Security Forces and MNF were accompanied by an increasingly sophisticated and complex insurgency, underscored by high levels of violence, intimidation and murder. Public instability and insecurity were compounded by an increase in sectarian strife. While the number of attacks during the latter half of the reporting period was lower than average, the lethal character of those attacks had increased, with large numbers of casualties.

The Secretary-General observed that, with the adoption of a new constitution, Iraq was moving towards the scheduled completion of its political transition process outlined in resolution 1546 (2004). The fact that the political process remained on target against an ambitious timetable was a considerable achievement in itself, given the difficult conditions under which it had taken place. Despite meeting those benchmarks, however, Iraq remained beset with formidable security, political and economic challenges. Inside Iraq, promoting an inclusive, participatory and transparent political process that responded to the aspirations of all of Iraq's communities continued to offer the best prospect for improving the overall security situation.

Communications. The ninety-sixth regular session of the GCC Ministerial Council (Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, 6-7 September) [A/60/388-S/2005/612], in a press statement, noted the further deterioration of the security and humanitarian situation in Iraq, and condemned all terrorist acts that targeted civilians and the kidnapping of innocent persons.

The final communiqué of the annual coordination meeting of OIC Ministers for Foreign Affairs (New York, 23 September) [A/60/440-S/2005/658 & Corr.2] condemned all calls based on sectarianism which caused discord among Iraqi people, in particular calls by terrorist groups for Iraqis to fight against each other.

By a 2 December letter to the Secretary-General [A/60/577-S/2005/753], Turkey said that the willingness of the United Nations to work in partnership with the Iraqi Government to assist the Iraqi people in whatever way possible remained a key element for the success of the political transition process.

The Third Extraordinary Session of the Islamic Summit Conference (Makkah Al-Mukkarramah, Saudi Arabia, 7-8 December) [A/60/633-S/2005/826], in the final communiqué, expressed the hope that the legislative elections, scheduled for 15 December (see below), would lead to a constitutional Iraqi Government so as to safeguard the country's unity and territorial integrity and ensure peace, security and stability.

Security Council consideration (December). On 14 December [meeting 5325], the Security Council was briefed on the situation in Iraq by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs and by the United States representative.

The Under-Secretary-General said that the 15 December general election was about to bring to a conclusion the political process outlined in resolution 1546(2004), even though much remained to be done about the security situation. Irrespective of the outcome of the election, the need for national dialogue and reconciliation was of the utmost importance. Moreover, after three years of dramatic change and decades of deprivation, Iraqis were still looking to their leaders for tangible improvements to better their lives and further stabilize their country. It was therefore in the interest of the region and the international community to continue to provide long-term support to Iraq. While in resolution 1637(2005) (see p. 429) the Council reaffirmed the leading role of the United Nations in assisting Iraq with further political and economic development, it had to be recognized that the UN's capacity in Iraq depended on the commitment and support of States Members. In that regard, an agreement was signed on 8 December between the United Nations and the United States for the provision of security for UNAMI, formalizing the security arrangements that were already in place for the United Nations in Iraq.

The United States representative said that, as had happened in the run-up to the October referendum, insurgent attacks increased leading up to the 15 December election. Although about 80 per cent of all attacks were directed against MNF, about 80 per cent of all casualties were Iraqis. While attacks on Iraq's infrastructure accounted for a small portion of total attacks, they continued to have a significant impact on the Iraqi Government's oil revenue and provoked public dissatisfaction with essential services. MNF's operations disrupted key insurgent cells, limited their movement and facilitated progress in reconstruction and democracy-building. Despite persistent security challenges, significant progress was made in wresting territory from enemy control due to MNF and Iraqi-led operations. MNF continued to work with the Iraqi Government to train and equip the Iraqi security forces. The goal was to complete total force generation by August 2007. Despite repeated attacks against volunteers, recruiting from the Shia and Kurdish communities, as well as from Sunni areas, continued to outpace demand. Iraqi units were increasingly able to take the lead in combat operations against the insurgency and were responsible for security in Najaf, Karbala and much of Baghdad province. More than 102,000 Iraqi soldiers, sailors and airmen had been trained and equipped, in addition to 75,000 police and highway patrol officers. However, Iraqi forces were not yet ready to conduct independent operations without MNF's assistance. MNF and its Iraqi partners faced multiple challenges in the security sphere, including countering the intimidation and brutality of enemies; building representative Iraqi security forces and institutions whose first loyalties were to the Iraqi Government; neutralizing the actions of such countries as Syria and Iran, which provided support to terrorists in Iraq; understanding the composition of and relationships between terrorists and other enemy networks; addressing the militias and armed groups that were outside the formal security sector and central Government command; ensuring that the security ministries had the capacity to sustain Iraq's new army and police forces; and integrating political, economic and security tools, and synchronizing them with Iraqi Government efforts to foster good and transparent governance, the rule of law, respect for human rights and the well-being of all Iraqi citizens.

The December election for a new Parliament, the Council of Representatives, marked the beginning of the last phase of the political transition processes set out in the Transitional Administrative Law [YUN 2004, p. 346]. The election, held on 15 December, was the third major national electoral event in Iraq in 2005. A total of 307 political entities and 19 coalitions encompassing more than 7,500 candidates representing almost all Iraqi communities and political affiliations entered the contest for the 275 seats in the Council of Representatives. Despite security concerns, voter turnout was high throughout the country, with a participation rate of over 75 per cent, a significant increase from the voter turnout in the January election, which was approximately 58 per cent. In addition, compared to January, Sunni Arab voters participated in significantly greater numbers.

On 19 and 20 December, the Independent Electoral Commission announced partial election results. In response, 43 parties—mainly belonging to the Iraqi National Front, the Iraqi Accord Front and the National Dialogue Front—formed a group to protest against intimidation, ballot stuffing, over-registration, improper apportionment of seats to governorates and other election-related practices, and to lodge complaints against the Electoral Commission. Amid growing protests over the announced partial results, including calls by political parties for an external investigation, the Electoral Commission welcomed the decision of the International Mission for Iraq Elections, an international non-governmental body composed mainly of independent electoral management bodies, to deploy a monitoring team on 1 January 2006 as part of its observation mandate. Final elections results were expected to be announced in January 2006.

Communication. The final communiqué and the Abu Dhabi Declaration adopted by the GCC Supreme Council at its twenty-sixth session (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, 18-19 December) [A/60/80-S/2006/108] welcomed the 15 December Iraqi parliamentary elections and urged the Iraqi people to continue their dialogue with a view to achieving national reconciliation.

Multinational force

On 24 May [S/2005/337], Iraq noting that, in accordance with Security Council resolution 1546(2004), the mandate of the multinational force (MNF) was due for review, formally requested the Council to allow for the continuation of that mandate until the completion of the political process, or until Iraq could provide for its own security needs.

Security Council consideration (May). On 31 May [meeting 5189], the Council was briefed by the United States representative on MNF's efforts and progress in Iraq.

The United States representative said that MNF's mandate authorized the multinational force to take all necessary measures for maintaining security and stability in Iraq, including preventing and deterring terrorism, so as to allow the Iraqi people to implement freely and without intimidation the timetable and programme for the political process and to benefit from reconstruction and rehabilitation activities. MNF, with its 28 member countries and 160,000 personnel, also provided assistance in building the capacity of the Iraqi security forces and institutions through recruiting, training, equipping, mentoring and monitoring, and provided security for the United Nations. MNF's key goals were to develop increasingly capable Iraqi security forces and to transfer more and more security responsibilities to them. MNF was committed to staying the course in Iraq and to coordinating with the Iraqi Government more effective tactics to defeat the insurgents and prevent their attacks.

MNF was making progress in its goal of helping Iraqi security forces move towards self-reliance. Some 165,000 Iraqi soldiers and police officers had been trained and equipped and the Iraqi army had over 90 battalion-level units conducting operations. Some of those forces carried on independent security operations, and others operated alongside or with MNF support. Iraqi police and military forces were shouldering the burden in 12 of Iraq's 18 provinces. MNF would continue to focus on partnering, mentoring, teaching and capacity-building. Joint headquarters were established at the national and provincial levels to coordinate MNF, Iraqi Ministry of Defence and Iraqi Ministry of Interior operations.

MNF, in coordination with the Iraqi Government and security forces, international donors, and national and international NGOs, continued to support reconstruction and assistance activities, including building schools and hospitals, improving the infrastructure of roads, water and sanitation, and removing landmines and unexploded ordnance. MNF also recognized the difficult security challenges that Iraq posed to the United Nations, and welcomed UNAMI's willingness and UN Secretariat staff to work closely with MNF to ensure that UN personnel faced minimum risk and delivered maximum support to Iraq. MNF units from Georgia and Romania, with United States and United Kingdom support, protected UN facilities and staff in Baghdad and Basra. In addition, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Slovenia and Sweden made financial contributions for UNAMI protection.

A specific timeline for the withdrawal of MNF could not be set, but the force would not remain in Iraq any longer than necessary, nor would it leave until the Iraqis could meet the serious security challenges they faced. Any decision regarding force size would be driven by events on the ground.

On the same day [meeting 5190], the Council had a constructive discussion with the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Iraq.

MNF mandate extension

On 31 October [S/2005/687], Iraq noted that, with the holding on 15 October of the referendum to approve a new Constitution for Iraq (see p. 425), the country had taken an important step in building a strong democratic future and was approaching the completion of its political transformation. However, there still remained an extensive agenda for reconstruction and political development, the realization of which would require security and stability. Iraq was confronted by forces of terrorism that incorporated foreign elements and carried out horrific attacks in an attempt to thwart political and economic development in Iraq. The Iraqi security forces needed more time to fill out their ranks, fully equip themselves and complete their training, with a view to assuming responsibility for all security matters. Until such time as the Iraqi security forces could assume full responsibility for the country's security, continued international support would be needed, including the participation of MNF. Iraq therefore requested the Council to extend for a period of 12 months, starting 31 December 2005, MNF's mandate, as provided for in Council resolution 1546(2004), with the provision that the Council would review that mandate upon being so requested by the Iraqi Government or at the end of eight months from the date of the resolution. It would also declare, in the extension, that it would terminate the mandate earlier if requested by the Iraqi Government. Iraq also believed that the provisions of resolution 1546(2004) relating to the deposit of proceeds into the Development Fund for Iraq and the role of the International Advisory and Monitoring Board (IAMB) (see p. 431) would help to ensure that Iraq's natural resources were used for the benefit of the Iraqi people. Iraq requested the Council to extend the validity of those terms for an additional 12 months, subject to review.

On the same date [S/2005/691], the United States said that, consistent with Iraq's request, MNF was prepared to continue to undertake a broad range of tasks to contribute to the maintenance of security and stability and to ensure force protection.

On 8 November [meeting 5300], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1637 (2005). The draft [S/2005/704] was submitted by Denmark, Japan, Romania, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the beginning of a new phase in Iraq's transition, and looking forward to the completion of the political transition process as well as to the day that Iraqi forces assume full responsibility for the maintenance of security and stability in their country, thus allowing the completion of the multinational force mandate,

Recalling all of its previous relevant resolutions on Iraq,

Reaffirming the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Iraq,

Reaffirming also the right of the Iraqi people freely to determine their own political future and control their own natural resources,

Welcoming the commitment of the Transitional Government of Iraq to work towards a federal, democratic, pluralistic and unified Iraq in which there is full respect for political and human rights,

Calling upon the international community, particularly countries in the region and Iraq's neighbours, to support the Iraqi people in their pursuit of peace, stability, security, democracy and prosperity, and noting the contribution that the successful implementation of the present resolution will bring to regional stability,

Welcoming the assumption of full governmental authority by the Interim Government of Iraq on 28 June 2004, the direct democratic election of the Transitional National Assembly on 30 January 2005, the drafting of a new constitution for Iraq and the recent approval of the draft constitution by the people of Iraq on 15 October 2005,

Noting that the Government of Iraq established as a result of the election scheduled to take place by 15 December 2005 will play a critical role in continuing to promote national dialogue and reconciliation and in shaping the democratic future of Iraq, and reaffirming the willingness of the international community to work closely with the Government of Iraq with respect to efforts to assist the Iraqi people,

Calling upon those who use violence in an attempt to subvert the political process to lay down their arms and participate in the political process, including in the election scheduled for 15 December 2005, and encouraging the Government of Iraq to engage with all those who renounce violence and to promote a political atmosphere conducive to national reconciliation and political competition through peaceful democratic means,

Reaffirming that acts of terrorism must not be allowed to disrupt Iraq's political and economic transition, and further reaffirming the obligations of Member States under resolution 1618(2005) of 4 August 2005 and other relevant resolutions and international obligations with respect, inter alia, to terrorist activities in and from Iraq or against its citizens,

Recognizing the request, conveyed in the letter dated 27 October 2005 from the Prime Minister of Iraq to the President of the Security Council, which is annexed to the present resolution, to retain the presence of the multinational force in Iraq, and further recognizing the importance of the consent of the sovereign Government of Iraq for the presence of the multinational force and of close coordination between the multinational force and that Government,

Welcoming the willingness of the multinational force to continue efforts to contribute to the maintenance of security and stability in Iraq, including participating in the provision of humanitarian and reconstruction assistance, as described in the letter dated 29 October

2005 from the Secretary of State of the United States of America to the President of the Security Council, which is annexed to the present resolution,

Recognizing the tasks and arrangements set out in the letters annexed to resolution 1546(2004) of 8 June 2004 and the cooperative implementation by the Government of Iraq and the multinational force of those arrangements,

Affirming the importance that all forces promoting the maintenance of security and stability in Iraq act in accordance with international law, including obligations under international humanitarian law, and cooperate with relevant international organizations, and welcoming their commitments in this regard,

Recalling the establishment of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq on 14 August 2003, underlining the particular importance of the Mission's assistance for the upcoming election by 15 December 2005 of a Government pursuant to a newly adopted Constitution, and affirming that the United Nations should continue to play a leading role in assisting the Iraqi people and Government with further political and economic development, including advising and supporting the Government of Iraq, as well as the Independent Electoral Commission of Iraq, contributing to the coordination and delivery of reconstruction, development and humanitarian assistance, and promoting the protection of human rights, national reconciliation, as well as judicial and legal reform in order to strengthen the rule of law in Iraq,

Recognizing that international support for security and stability is essential to the well-being of the people of Iraq as well as the ability of all concerned, including the United Nations, to carry out their work on behalf of the people of Iraq, and expressing its appreciation for contributions by Member States in this regard under resolutions 1483(2003) of 22 May 2003, 1511 (2003) of 16 October 2003 and 1546(2004),

Recognizing also that the Government of Iraq will continue to have the primary role in coordinating international assistance to Iraq, and reaffirming the importance of international assistance and development of the Iraqi economy and the importance of coordinated donor assistance,

Recognizing further the significant role of the Development Fund for Iraq and the International Advisory and Monitoring Board in helping the Government of Iraq to ensure that Iraq's resources are being used transparently and equitably for the benefit of the people of Iraq,

Determining that the situation in Iraq continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Notes that the presence of the multinational force in Iraq is at the request of the Government of Iraq and, having regard to the letters annexed to the present resolution, reaffirms the authorization for the multinational force as set forth in resolution 1546(2004), and decides to extend the mandate of the multinational force as set forth in that resolution until 31 December 2006;

2. Decides that the mandate of the multinational force shall be reviewed at the request of the Government of Iraq or no later than 15 June 2006, and declares that it will terminate this mandate earlier if requested by the Government of Iraq;

3. Decides also to extend until 31 December 2006 the arrangements established in paragraph 20 of resolution 1483(2003) for the deposit into the Development Fund for Iraq of proceeds from export sales of petroleum, petroleum products and natural gas and the arrangements referred to in paragraph 12 of resolution 1483(20003) and paragraph 24 of resolution 1546 (2004) for the monitoring of the Development Fund for Iraq by the International Advisory and Monitoring Board;

4. Decides further that the provisions in paragraph 3 above for the deposit of proceeds into the Development Fund for Iraq and for the role of the International Advisory and Monitoring Board shall be reviewed at the request of the Government of Iraq or no later than 15 June 2006;

5. Requests that the Secretary-General continue to report to the Security Council on the operations in Iraq of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq on a quarterly basis;

6. Requests that the United States of America, on behalf of the multinational force, continue to report to the Council on the efforts and progress of the force on a quarterly basis;

7. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Annex I

Letter dated 27 October 2005 from Mr. Ibrahim Aleshaiker al Jaafari, Prime Minister of Iraq, to the President of the Security Council

On 15 October 2005 Iraq voted in a general referendum held at the national level for the purpose of approving a new Constitution for Iraq. The country thus took another important step towards building a strong democratic future and establishing a Government elected in accordance with a permanent Constitution. At the same time, Iraq is approaching the completion of its political transformation through the process of electing its future legislative authority and forming a new Government, which is to take place in December 2005. There still remains an extensive agenda for reconstruction and political development, the realization of which will require security and stability.

We are proceeding towards political stability and economic prosperity and taking fundamental steps towards restoring security and stability. Yet Iraq is still confronted by forces of terrorism that incorporate foreign elements which carry out horrific attacks and terrorist acts in an attempt to thwart political and economic development in Iraq. The Iraqi security forces, which are growing in size, capacity and experience day by day, need more time to fill out their ranks, fully equip themselves and complete their training with a view to assuming responsibility for all security matters and providing adequate security for the Iraqi people. Until such time as the Iraqi security forces assume full responsibility for Iraq's security, we need the continued support of the international community, including the participation of the Multinational Force, in order to establish lasting peace and security in Iraq. We understand that the Multinational Force is willing to continue its efforts. We therefore request the Security Council to extend, for a period of 12 months starting 31 December 2005, the mandate of the Multinational Force, as provided in Council resolution 1546(2004), including the tasks and arrangements specified in the letters annexed thereto, with the proviso that the Council shall review that mandate upon being so requested by the Government of Iraq or at the end of a period of eight months from the date of the resolution and declare, in the extension, that it will terminate the mandate before the expiry of that period should the Government of Iraq so request.

The Government of Iraq believes that the provisions of resolution 1546(2004) relating to the deposit of proceeds into the Development Fund for Iraq and the role of the International Advisory and Monitoring Board will help to ensure that Iraq's natural resources are used for the benefit of the Iraqi people. We understand that the funds deposited in the Development Fund for Iraq belong to Iraq and will continue to enjoy the immunities and privileges of the Fund, given the importance of those terms for the Iraqi people during this critical period. We request the Security Council to extend the validity of those terms for an additional 12 months and to review them upon being so requested by the Government of Iraq or at the end of a period of eight months from the date of the resolution.

The Iraqi people are determined to establish for themselves a stable, peaceful democracy, which will provide the basis for the establishment of a vibrant economy. This vision of Iraq's future can become a reality with the help of the international community.

It is my understanding that the sponsors intend to have the present letter annexed to the resolution on Iraq currently being drafted. In the meantime, I should be grateful if you would have copies of this letter circulated to the members of the Security Council as soon as possible.

Annex II

Letter dated 29 October 2005 from Ms. Condoleezza Rice, Secretary of State of the United States of America, to the President of the Security Council

Having reviewed the request of the Government of Iraq to extend the mandate of the Multinational Force (MNF) in Iraq and following consultations with the Government of Iraq, I am writing to confirm, consistent with this request, that the MNF under unified command stands ready to continue to fulfil its mandate as set out in Security Council resolution 1546 (2004).

Since the end of the occupation on 28 June 2004, the Government of Iraq and the MNF have developed an effective and cooperative security partnership to address the evolving nature of Iraq's security environment, including the continuing need to prevent and deter acts of terrorism. This partnership plays a critical role in the daily efforts to improve security throughout Iraq. In the context of this partnership, the MNF is prepared to continue to undertake a broad range of tasks to contribute to the maintenance of security and stability and to ensure force protection, acting under the authorities set forth in resolution 1546(2004), including the tasks and arrangements set out in the letters annexed thereto, and in close cooperation with the Government of Iraq. The forces that make up the MNF will remain committed to acting consistently with their obligations under international law, including the law of armed conflict.

Substantial progress has already been made in helping to build and train the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF), allowing them to take on increasing security responsibilities. The Government of Iraq and the MNF are developing a security plan to set forth the conditions necessary for transfer of security responsibility from the MNF to the ISF. Conditions permitting, we look forward to notable progress in the next year. Together, we will build towards the day when the Iraqi forces assume full responsibility for the maintenance of security and stability in Iraq.

The co-sponsors intend to annex the present letter to the resolution on Iraq under consideration. In the meantime, I request that you provide copies of the present letter to members of the Council as quickly as possible.

International Advisory and Monitoring Board

The International Advisory and Monitoring Board for Iraq (IAMB), established by Security Council resolution 1483(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 338] to ensure that the Development Fund for Iraq was used in a transparent manner for the purpose set out in paragraph 14 of that resolution and that the Iraqi export sales of petroleum products and natural gas were consistent with international market best practices, continued to oversee the auditing of the Fund.

IAMB report (January). In a 7 January letter [S/2005/12] submitted by the Secretary-General to the Council President, the Secretary-General's representative on IAMB reported on an external audit report on the Fund's operations and Iraq's oil export sales, covering the period from its inception up to the transition of authority by the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA) to the Interim Government of Iraq on 28 June 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 346]. The audit firm concluded that all known oil proceeds, reported frozen assets and transfers from the oil-for-food programme had been properly and transparently accounted for in the Fund. However, on the basis of a review of the audit reports, IAMB believed that controls were insufficient to provide reasonable assurance for the completeness of export sales of petroleum and petroleum products and whether all Fund disbursements were made for the purposes intended. The priority findings of the audit report included: weaknesses in controls over oil extraction, including the absence of metering, resulting in the audit firm qualifying its audit opinions of the Fund's statements of cash receipts and payments; control weaknesses in the administration of resources handled by CPA, including inadequate record-keeping and accounting systems, and the uneven application of agreed-upon contracting procedures; and inadequate controls identified at Iraqi spending ministries, including the absence of reconciliation procedures, insufficient payroll records, deviation from tendering procedures and inadequate contract monitoring by CPA relating to payments on behalf of the Iraqi ministries. The audit reports were submitted to the Iraqi Council of Ministers and CPA for attention and follow-up. As a matter of priority, the financial reporting and control systems needed to be improved in key Iraqi disbursing ministries, including the State Oil Marketing Organization and the regional Governments, and controls strengthened over oil extraction.

The Board received six audit reports prepared by the United States Defense Contract Audit Agency on sole-sourced contracts which it had previously sought. IAMB agreed to the terms of reference for a special audit of those contracts by an independent auditor.

Communication. On 26 May [S/2005/344], Iraq requested the Council to approve the continuation of the Development Fund for Iraq and IAMB, as those mechanisms had demonstrated that Iraq's oil resources were being used transparently for the benefit of the Iraqi people and reassured donors and creditors that Iraq was managing its resources and its debts in a responsible manner. Moreover, IAMB had helped identify areas where stewardship of the Fund could be improved.

IAMB report (June). In a 13 June letter [S/2005/384] submitted by the Secretary-General to the Council President, the Secretary-General's representative on IAMB reported on the Board's activities since January. IAMB received, on 21 May, the reports by an independent auditor covering the audit of Iraq's oil export sales and the Fund's operations for the period from 29 June to 31 December 2004. The audit reports pointed out some weaknesses, including incomplete fund accounting records; untimely recording, reporting, reconciliation and follow-up of spending by Iraqi ministries; incomplete records maintained by United States agencies, including disbursements that were not recorded in the Iraqi budget; lack of documented justification for limited competition for contracts at the Iraqi ministries; unreconciled quantities of oil and oil products exported, indicating a lack of control and possible misappropriation of oil revenues, and significant difficulties in ensuring completeness and accuracy of Iraqi budgets and controls over expenditures; and the non-deposit of proceeds of export sales of petroleum products into the appropriate accounts in contravention of Council resolution 1483(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 338]. IAMB drew to the attention of the Iraqi Government the weaknesses identified in the audit reports and invited it to act on the audit recommendations to strengthen the Fund's financial controls and administration. IAMB also met with Iraqi officials to address issues and concerns raised in the two previous audits covering the period from May 2003 to June 2004. On 15 April 2005, the United States informed IAMB that an independent auditor had been selected to carry out a special audit of sole-sourced contracts.

Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1518(2003)

On 23 December [S/2005/827], the Chairman of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1518(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 362] submitted to the Council President the Committee's annual report for 2005. The Committee was established to continue to identify, in accordance with paragraphs 19 and 23 of resolution 1483 (2003) [ibid., p. 338], individuals and entities associated with the former Iraqi regime whose funds, other financial assets and economic resources should be frozen and transferred to the Development Fund for Iraq. During the reporting period, the Committee held four informal meetings and reviewed, among other things, its draft guidelines for the de-listing of individuals and entities from its assets-freeze and transfer list.

UN Monitoring, Verification and Inspection Commission and IAEA activities

UNMOVIC

On 19 May [S/2005/333] and 23 August [S/2005/540], the Secretary-General proposed to the Security Council the appointments of Stephen G. Rademaker (United States) to the UNMOVIC College of Commissioners, replacing Susan F. Burk (United States); and Lu Yongshou (China), replacing Chen Weixiong (China). The Council agreed to the Secretary-General's proposals [S/2005/334, S/2005/541].

Reports of UNMOVIC (February, May). As called for in resolution 1284(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 230], UNMOVIC submitted to the Council, through the Secretary-General, four quarterly reports on its activities. Throughout the year, the Executive Chairman continued to provide monthly briefings to the Council President and kept the Secretary-General informed about the Commission's activities.

The February report [S/2005/129] stated that, during the period from 1 December 2004 to 28 February 2005, UNMOVIC imagery analysts continued the ongoing review of the status of sites subject to inspection and monitoring in Iraq. Of the 411 sites inspected, Commission experts examined post-war high-resolution imagery of 353. Of that number, approximately 70 showed varying degrees of bomb damage, and about 90 contained dual-use equipment and materials that had been stripped and/or razed. Commission experts also noted that repairs and new construction had commenced at 10 sites.

An UNMOVIC working group of technical experts was convened to prepare an initial study on monitoring procedures of small quantities of weapons of mass destruction (WMD) and to review the history of incidents involving small quantities of biological and chemical agents. The study would serve as the basis for a more in-depth assessment of the matter within UNMOVIC. The group considered the types and range of small quantities of agents; the capabilities needed for the acquisition of such quantities, including the quantity of precursors and capacity of equipment; and the possible points for acquiring, producing and transporting small quantities of agents for WMD, or associated primary precursors. It was noted that, although the ongoing monitoring and verification regime for Iraq included the monitoring of small-scale production activities in the biological and chemical disciplines and that relevant materials were subject to notification, it was possible that small quantities of such materials could be acquired through clandestine procurement networks. Accordingly, the group felt that some changes in emphasis and reporting thresholds in the current monitoring and verification regime might be needed, including more activity-based monitoring of sites and less reliance on specific quantities as triggers. UNMOVIC also continued to enhance its information technology system for inspectors and analysts. It noted the continuing uncertainty over the possible existence in Iraq of biological seed stocks (reference strains of micro-organisms provided by culture collections, as well as to master and working seed stocks) that could be used in the future for the production of biological weapon agents. The College of Commissioners discussed, among other things, confirmation of disarmament, monitoring and the possible need for end-use verification of imports of dual-use items into Iraq for a defined period, and recognized that those issues, including its mandate, were ultimately matters for the Council to decide.

In the May report [S/2005/351] covering the period from 1 March to 31 May, UNMOVIC said that Iran had notified the Commission that no dual-use equipment and materials subject to monitoring, which were known to have been present at Iraqi sites, had been found on Iranian soil. UNMOVIC imagery analysts continued to review the status of sites subject to inspection and monitoring in Iraq. The analysis revealed that dual-use items had been removed totally from 52 sites and partially from 44 others which had suffered less damage. Additionally, at 13 sites, some items that were stored in the open had been removed. No conclusion could be drawn concerning the presence or absence of equipment or materials inside undamaged buildings, nor the destination of all items removed. The report examined some of the most significant dual-use equipment removed from the 109 sites under review with respect to categories, numbers and utilities.

A series of addenda to the October 2004 United States–led Iraq Survey Group report [YUN 2004, p. 362] were released in April 2005. The Group had found that reports of WMD in Iraq were usually scams or resulted from the misidentification of materials or activities. In a very limited number of cases they related to findings of old chemical munitions produced before 1990. Overall, the addenda did not change the previous assessment and comments made by UNMOVIC with regard to the October 2004 comprehensive report, although some information presented differed in detail from that in the Commission's possession. However, it appeared that most of the information came from interviews with individuals and was based mainly on their recollections. On the issue of the status of dual-use items and former weapons sites subject to monitoring, the limited assessments of the Iraq Survey Group corroborated information already obtained by the Commission through satellite imagery assessment.

In 2005, the results of an independent review of the biological provisions and associated annex of the monitoring and verification plan, carried out by a panel of external non-governmental technical experts, were submitted. The panel, first convened by UNMOVIC in November 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 362], suggested that Iraq could be assisted in the drafting and implementation of national legislation and compliance with international obligations, as well as in the establishment of a good records and documentation system which would help the monitoring and verification process. The panel also identified criteria to be the triggers for declarations under the monitoring plan, which pertained to containment, activities, international transfer, equipment and agents. UNMOVIC compiled its first draft of the compendium of Iraq's proscribed weapons and programmes in March. The draft provided a detailed technical description of Iraq's proscribed weapons and programmes with an emphasis on lessons that could be drawn from both the nature of the programmes and the experience gained in the process of their verification by UN inspectors. Examples of such lessons on specific issues were outlined in an appendix to the report.

In the August report [S/2005/545] covering the period from 1 June to 31 August, UNMOVIC said that, in June, the Commission convened a panel of external technical experts to conduct a technical review of the missile provisions and the associated list of dual-use items, equipment and technology. The panel made recommendations regarding the missile provisions, in the light of the UN monitoring and verification experience, the changed situation in Iraq and technical advances in unmanned delivery systems that could be associated with the delivery of weapons of mass destruction. An overview of the biological weapons programme of Iraq was annexed to the report.

The November report [S/2005/742] covering the period from 1 September to 30 November noted that UNMOVIC's imagery analysts had been assessing activities at sites by analysing images of specific locations over successive time frames. Imagery from September showed that agricultural activity had started inside the perimeter of the former Muthanna State Establishment, once Iraq's prime chemical weapons production site, where the majority of chemical weapons destruction also took place. UNMOVIC continued to follow up on dual-use technology developments and to assess the implications for its mandate and the application of new technologies in detection, monitoring and verification. An overview of Iraq's procurement for its WMD programmes was annexed to the report.

Escrow account

On 20 June [S/2005/406], the Secretary-General proposed to the Security Council that an amount of $200,000,000 be transferred from UNMOVIC's escrow account established under Council resolution 1284(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 230] and related resolutions to the Development Fund for Iraq, and $20,256,697 credited against assessments issued in respect of the obligations of the Iraqi Government for UN regular budget, peacekeeping and international Tribunal activities. On 24 June [S/2005/407], the Council approved the Secretary-General's proposal.

On 2 November [S/2005/702], the Secretary-General proposed that $2,182,168 plus 226,493 euros be transferred from the UNMOVIC escrow account to settle Iraq's outstanding arrears with IAEA. On 9 November [S/2005/703], the Council approved the Secretary-General's proposal.

IAEA

IAEA reports (April and October). In accordance with Security Council resolution 1051(1996) [YUN 1996, p. 218], IAEA submitted to the Council, through the Secretary-General, two consolidated six-monthly reports, on 13 April [S/2005/243] and 14 October [S/2005/652], on the Agency's verification activities in Iraq.

In April, IAEA said that, since 17 March 2003, it had not been in a position to implement its mandate in Iraq under Council resolution 687(1991) [YUN 1991, p. 172] and related resolutions. Given the adoption of Council resolution 1546(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 348], IAEA's mandate pursuant to those resolutions remained valid until the Council decided otherwise. IAEA stood ready to resume verification activities in Iraq and maintained a core team with the necessary competence required for the fulfilment of that mandate. During the period under review, IAEA continued to consolidate, restructure and further analyse the information collected by it since 1991, so as to identify lessons learned and secure data in paper and electronic archives for improved future access and maintenance of knowledge, while at the same time developing strategies for future verification activities in Iraq, should the Council direct the Agency to do so. The information obtained was derived principally from open sources and commercial satellite imagery of locations of interest to IAEA for potential future verification in Iraq. The imagery showed that there had been extensive removal of equipment and that one site, which contained buried contaminated rubble, had been extensively excavated.

In October, IAEA reported that, pursuant to the Safeguards Agreement between Iraq and IAEA in connection with the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons [YUN 1968, p. 17], it carried out on 17 and 18 September its annual physical inventory verification of the nuclear material in Iraq located at the store facility near the Tuwaitha complex south of Baghdad. IAEA inspectors were able to verify all nuclear material subject to safeguards. The Iraq Nuclear Verification Office had focused on the further development of an archive system for the storage and retrieval of electronic and hard-copy information collected and generated by IAEA in the course of its Council-mandated activities in Iraq. Satellite imagery of the most significant sites continued to be collected and assessed.

Iraq-Kuwait

Oil-for-food programme: high-level Independent Inquiry Committee

The oil-for-food programme, established by Security Council resolution 986(1995) [YUN 1995,

p. 475] authorizing the sale of Iraqi petroleum and petroleum products as a temporary measure to finance humanitarian assistance, thereby alleviating the adverse consequences of the sanctions regime imposed by the Council, was phased out on 21 November 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 362]. In March 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 364], the Secretary-General informed the Council of his intention to establish an independent, high-level inquiry concerning matters arising from public news reports and commentaries that had called into question the administration and management of the programme, including allegations of fraud and corruption. The independent inquiry, according to its terms of reference, was to determine whether UN procedures for the processing and approving of contracts under the programme, the monitoring of the sale and delivery of petroleum and related products and the purchase of and delivery of humanitarian goods had been violated; and whether any UN official, personnel, agent or contractor had engaged in any illicit or corrupt activities in the carrying out of their respective roles in relation to the programme. In April 2004 [ibid., p. 364], the high-level Independent Inquiry Committee (IIC), headed by Paul A. Volcker, was formed. (For further information, see Part V, Chapter I.)

On 7 September, IIC submitted its final report, "The Management of the United Nations Oil-for-Food Programme", to the Council (see p. 1475).

Security Council consideration (September). On 7 September [meeting 5256], the Council was briefed by IIC Chairman, Paul Volcker on the broad conclusions and recommendations of the Committee's report. The Secretary-General attended the meeting.

Mr. Volcker said that IIC found evidence of mismanagement in the oil-for-food programme and of corruption within the United Nations and by contractors. The responsibility for the failures had to be broadly shared, starting with Member States and the Council itself. In the first place, the programme left too much initiative with Iraq. That basic difficulty was compounded by a failure to clearly define the complex administrative responsibilities shared between the Security Council Committee established by resolution 661(1990) [YUN 1990, p. 192] (Committee on Sanctions) and the UN Secretariat, and by continuing political differences. The result was that no one seemed clearly in command and delays in and evasion of decision-making were chronic. The administrative structure and practices of the Secretariat and some agencies were not up to the challenge presented by the programme. Those weaknesses were aggravated by unethical and corrupt behaviour at key points at the higher levels of the Office of the Iraq Programme and in the purchasing department. There was a pervasive absence of effective auditing and administrative controls, as well as weak planning, inadequate funding and too few professional staff. The absence of truly independent status for the auditing and control functions was a critical deficiency. Close cooperation among various UN organs apparently went against the grain for agencies with their own funding, management and oversight. On the positive side, an expert study commissioned by the Committee confirmed that the programme had averted malnutrition and a further collapse of medical services in Iraq. That was no small achievement, especially when combined with the support that the programme had provided for maintaining the basic sanctions against Iraq and its inability to obtain WMDs.

IIC conclusions and recommendations called for a stronger operational capacity and authority and a new chief operating officer with a clear mandate and authority for administration; strong and independent auditing control and investigatory functions; and a strong independent oversight board.

Mr. Volcker said that IIC's conclusions could not be dismissed as simply reporting aberrations in one programme or something that could be smoothed over with patchwork changes. The problems were symptomatic of deep-seated systemic issues. Those issues arose in an Organization designed 60 years ago for a simpler time, without large and complex operational challenges alongside its political and diplomatic responsibilities. The Organization's credibility and confidence were challenged by the travails of the oil-for-food programme and, to some degree, the Organization had been weakened. Reform was therefore urgent and the Council and the General Assembly should set benchmarks for progress.

The Secretary-General said that the report was critical of him personally, which he accepted. The Committee had previously concluded that he did not influence, or attempt to influence, the procurement process. However, he did accept, with regret, the conclusion that he was not diligent or effective enough in pursuing an investigation after the fact, when he learned that the company that employed his son had won the humanitarian inspection contract. The evidence of actual corruption among a small number of UN staff was also disappointing. On the positive side, the Committee noted that the programme did succeed in restoring and maintaining minimal standards of nutrition and health in Iraq, while helping to maintain the international effort to prevent Saddam Hussein from acquiring WMDs.

Secondly, it observed that the wholesale corruption within the programme took place among private companies manipulated by Saddam Hussein's Government. More important, however, were the Committee's findings about the general management of the programme, which was characterized by weak administrative practices and inadequate control and auditing, which reflected on the system of decision-making, accountability and management throughout the Organization. Here too, the Secretary-General took responsibility for the failings revealed, both in the implementation of the programme and, more generally, in the functioning of the Secretariat.

The Secretary-General said that the report also found that many of those problems were rooted in an unclear demarcation of roles and responsibilities among the Council, its Committee on Sanctions and the Secretariat, and in particular, in the Council's decision to retain substantial elements of operational control within the Committee on Sanctions, composed of national diplomats working under highly politicized instructions from their home Governments, yet willing to take decisions only when there was unanimous consent among all of its 15 members.

The Inquiry's findings underscored the importance of management reforms, many of which were already being considered in the General Assembly as part of a broader agenda of political and institutional change. The Secretary-General had already embarked on new reforms in areas where he had discretion to improve the performance of senior management, strengthen oversight and accountability, increase transparency and ensure the highest standards of ethics, notably by creating a new ethics office. In addition, it was vital to review the rules governing the Organization's budgetary and human resources, to build a stronger and better-resourced oversight structure and ensure that it was fully independent both from the Secretariat and from political interference by Member States. The Secretary-General should be allowed to carry out his functions effectively, taking decisions on the deployment of staff and resources without having to wait for prior approval from the Assembly, the Council or their various committees. As stated in the report, one of the fundamental problems with the oil-for-food programme was that neither the Council nor the Secretariat's leadership was clearly in command, and that turned out to be a recipe for the dilution of Secretariat authority and the evasion of personal responsibility at all levels. The Secretary-General stated that Member States, the Secretariat, agencies, funds and programmes could not be proud of what IIC had found. Reform was imperative if the United Nations was to regain and retain the measure of respect among the international community that its work required.

Communication of Secretary-General. On 20 December [S/2005/847], the Secretary-General informed the Council President that the United Nations had received requests from the IIC Chairman and the Government of Iraq to maintain the Committee's operation until the end of March 2006. Given Iraq's support for that proposal and in view of the volume of inquiries to the Committee for the cooperation by Member States seeking to follow up on the findings of its final report, the Secretary-General decided to accede to the IIC Chairman's request. The basis for the extension and other details on the follow-up functions of IIC and related matters were annexed to the Secretary-General's letter. The Committee, once it had completed its investigation, would not retain any investigative capacity or authority.

On 30 December [S/2005/848], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's information and decision, in particular that the extension would be exclusively to assist national bodies investigating the cases resulting from the Committee's work, manage access to the Committee archives and ensure its preservation and disposition.

The Secretary-General, in response to Security Council resolution 1483(2003) [YUN 2003, p. 338] terminating all activities under the oil-for-food programme on 21 November 2003, had informed the Council [ibid., p. 366] that the United Nations would retain beyond the termination date, and until they were executed or expired, responsibility for the administration and execution of letters of credit issued under the programme by the bank for the United Nations Iraq Account (UNIA) for the purchase of humanitarian supplies for the south/centre of Iraq.

In an 8 August letter to the Council President [S/2005/535], the Secretary-General addressed the issue of the management of those letters of credit so that the termination of the oil-for-food programme could be continued in an orderly manner. As at 31 July, 549 letters of credit were reported by the bank as being "open", due to difficulties in processing the authentication documents required for payment to the vendor, resulting in funds being retained in UNIA for the expired letters of credit. To overcome those difficulties and since most of the letters had already expired, the Secretary-General submitted proposals for reinstating or extending the letters of credit, including those that had expired by 31

December 2004, those expiring in 2005, and those due to expire in 2006 and 2007. He also made proposals for resolving a number of related issues.

On 19 August [S/2005/536], the Council welcomed the Secretary-General's proposal and requested him to report orally to the Council on the implementation of those arrangements by mid-October.

On 17 October [S/2005/656], the Secretary-General said that consultations on the termination of the ongoing operations of the oil-for-food programme were conducted by the UN Controller with the relevant Iraqi authorities on 3 October. Of the 549 letters of credit reported as open as at 8 August, 44 had been paid, 17 reinstated for the purpose of making payments and two cancelled. However, the rate of processing of the authentication documents for the arrival of goods in Iraq had not improved. The Secretary-General outlined his course of action for dealing with the remaining letters of credit.

On 11 November [S/2005/713], the Council President said that the Secretary-General's letter concerning the termination of operations relating to the letters of credit raised against UNIA had been brought to the attention of the Council during private consultations held on 19 October with the Controller. The Council welcomed the 3 October meeting between the UN and the relevant Iraqi authorities and took note of the new arrangements proposed by the Secretary-General. It requested him to inform the Council on the implementation of those arrangements by mid-December.

In a 19 December update [S/2005/807], the Secretary-General informed the Council that some progress had been made on the amendments to the letters of credit by the relevant Iraqi authorities. Since his letter of 17 October, Iraq had provided the United Nations with 127 formal requests for amendments and reinstatements of letters of credit. However, little progress had been made with regard to the processing of authentication documents. Bearing in mind the timetable envisaged in the previous letters, the Secretary-General provided an update on the implementation of the new arrangements concerning the termination of operations relating to the letters of credit raised against UNIA.

POWs, Kuwaiti property and missing persons

On 18 April [S/2005/251], the Council President stated that, following consultations held on 11 April, the Council had agreed that issues relating to the return of all Kuwaiti property, the repatriation or return of all Kuwaiti and third-country nationals or their remains, and the United Nations Compensation Commission would be considered under the agenda item entitled "The situation between Iraq and Kuwait". Other issues that did not fall under that category would be considered under the agenda item entitled "The situation concerning Iraq".

Reports of Secretary-General (April/June). In response to Security Council resolution 1284 (1999) [YUN 1999, p. 230], the Secretary-General submitted reports in April [S/2005/233 & Corr.1], June [S/2005/377], August [S/2005/513], and December [S/2005/769] on Iraq's compliance with its obligations regarding the repatriation or return of all Kuwaiti and third-country nationals or their remains, and on the return of all Kuwaiti property, including archives, seized by Iraq during its occupation of Kuwait, which began in August 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 189]. The High-level Coordinator for compliance by Iraq with its obligations regarding the return of Kuwaiti nationals and property, Yuli M. Vorontsov (Russian Federation), briefed the Council throughout the year.

In April, the Secretary-General observed that the search for Kuwaiti POWs and third-country nationals had not progressed substantially since the submission of his December 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 365]. However, the identification of remains had continued. He supported the determination of the Kuwaiti Government to pursue the issue of Kuwaiti POWs and third-country nationals until all files were closed. The new Iraqi authorities had taken a constructive stance in meeting Iraq's international obligations in accordance with resolution 1284(1999).

In June, the Secretary-General said that the Kuwaiti national archives had still not been found. He welcomed the agreement of the Iraqi Government to send a joint Kuwaiti-Iraqi mission of experts to Tunisia to deal with the issue of spare parts belonging to Kuwait Airways Corporation (KAC) found on board two Iraqi aircrafts stationed in Tunisia.

In his August report, the Secretary-General said that different sources continued to provide information about the location of grave sites possibly containing the remains of Kuwaiti and third-country nationals. Kuwaiti assessment teams visited Iraq between March and May. Iraqi representatives took part in the joint assessment and investigative efforts.

In December, the Secretary-General said that improvement in Iraq's cooperation could speed up the search for the remains of Kuwaiti and third-country missing persons. However, given the security situation in Iraq and the technical difficulties in the identification process, progress in resolving the issue had been slow. The Secretary-General supported Kuwait's call for expertise from specialized laboratories worldwide to resolve the problems of identification. He also reported that the mission of experts, led by the High-level Coordinator to Tunisia (12-16 September), ascertained that the aircraft spare parts and engine found in Tunisia belonged to Kuwait, which was further evidence of the illegal removal of items from Kuwait by the previous Iraqi regime.

UN Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission

The United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission (UNIKOM) discharged its functions until 6 October 2003, in accordance with its terms of reference, as expanded by resolution 806(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 406].

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a report on UNIKOM financing [A/59/614], providing details on the final disposition of its assets, the inventory value of which amounted to $23,916,522, as at 3 July 2003. In April 2005 [A/59/736 & Add.14], ACABQ considered the Secretary-General's report on UNIKOM's financing.

On 22 June, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 59/565).

UN Compensation Commission and Fund

The United Nations Compensation Commission (UNCC), established in 1991 [YUN 1991, p. 195] for the resolution and payment of claims against Iraq for losses and damage resulting from its 1990 invasion and occupation of Kuwait [YUN 1990, p. 189], continued in 2005 to expedite the prompt settlement of claims through the United Nations Compensation Fund, which was established at the same time as the Commission.

Governing Council. The Commission's Governing Council held four sessions in Geneva during the year—the fifty-fifth (8-10 March) [S/2005/169], the fifty-sixth (28-30 June) [S/2005/507], the fifty-seventh (27-29 September) [S/2005/686] and the fifty-eighth (6-8 December) [S/2005/815]—at which it considered the reports and recommendations of the Panels of Commissioners appointed to review specific instalments of various categories of claims. The Governing Council also acted on the Executive Secretary's report submitted at each session, which, in addition to providing a summary of the previous period's activities, covered the processing, withdrawal and payment of claims.

Other matters considered by the Council included the processing and payment of claims, ensuring payments were made into the Compensation Fund, the distribution of payments and the return of undistributed funds. It also decided that it would not give any further consideration to claims preparation costs.

Oversight activities

On 29 December [S/2005/840], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the report of the Board of Auditors, updated as at 31 July 2005, on the implementation of its 2004 recommendations [YUN 2004, p. 367] relating to the Compensation Commission for the 2002-2003 biennium. The Board found that eight of its 20 recommendations had been implemented by June 2005, though the Board had yet to validate the implementation of two of them; nine remained under implementation and the Board had yet to validate the degree of implementation for three of them; and three had not been implemented.

Timor-Leste

In 2005, the Security Council established the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste (UNOTIL) by resolution 1599(2005) (see p. 440) as a follow-on mission to the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor (UNMISET), which came to an end on 20 May. UNOTIL was charged with supporting and monitoring progress in the development of critical state institutions, the police and the Border Patrol Unit and observance of democratic governance and human rights.

Commission of Experts. Pursuant to Council resolution 1573(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 376] reaffirming the need to fight against impunity in Timor-Leste, the Secretary-General on 11 January [S/2005/96] informed the Council of the establishment of an independent Commission of Experts to review the prosecution of serious crimes against humanity committed in East Timor in 1999. The Commission, consisting of three experts, would assess the progress made by the Indonesian judicial process involving the ad hoc Human Rights Tribunal in the Indonesian Capital, Jakarta, and the serious crimes process, involving the Serious Crimes Unit and the Special Panels for Serious Crimes in Timor-Leste's capital, Dili, and identify obstacles and difficulties encountered. It would evaluate the extent to which justice and accountability for the crimes committed in East Timor had been achieved and recommend further measures so that perpetrators could be held accountable and reconciliation promoted.

On 26 January [S/2005/97], the Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council had noted his decision to establish a Commission of Experts. On 17 February [S/2005/104], the Secretary-General informed the Council of the appointment of Prafullachandra Bhagwati (India), Yozo Yokota (Japan) and Shaista Shameem (Fiji) to the Commission of Experts.

UN Mission of Support in East Timor

Prior to its closure on 20 May, UNMISET, which was established under Security Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321], continued to carry out its mandate in Timor-Leste by providing assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security.

Report of Secretary-General (February). In response to Security Council resolution 1573 (2004) [YUN 2004, p. 376], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [S/2005/99] covering UNMISET activities since his November 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 374]. During that period, the overall situation in Timor-Leste remained calm and stable despite the reported incursion of an armed ex-militia group in January and clashes between the military and police.

While the National Parliament continued to strengthen the country's legal framework through the adoption of key legislation, no progress was made in the selection of the Provedor for Human Rights and Justice. The delay was a cause for concern, especially in the light of an increase in reported cases of abuse of police power, especially in dealing with political opposition. Despite efforts to improve the relationship between the Timorese armed forces and the national police, problems continued to arise, and members of the two groups had clashed in past months. Sightings of alleged ex-militia groups, especially in border areas, had also been reported. On 20 January, the Prime Minister, Mari Alkatiri, publicly stated that it should not be assumed that the ex-militia infiltrators were acting at the behest of the Indonesian army. Nevertheless, the Tactical Coordination Line remained porous and disputes between opposing villages, illegal trading, smuggling, illegal border crossings and minor criminal activities continued to occur.

Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to improve, with frequent high-level meetings being held during the reporting period. During his visit to Jakarta from 27 to 29 January, Timor-Leste President, Xanana Gusmão, discussed with Indonesian President, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, the formation of the Truth and Friendship Commission, decided on in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 377] to deal with human rights abuses perpetrated in 1999, as well as other bilateral issues. The Commission's terms of reference were reviewed at a meeting (7-9 February) between the Timor-Leste Minister for Foreign Affairs, José Ramos-Horta, and his Indonesian counterpart, Hassan Wirajuda.

As regards security, work on the defence plan known as "Defence 2020" was ongoing, and further progress was expected at the end of workshops to be held in May. The military liaison group continued to foster close collaboration between the Timorese and Indonesian border security agencies by holding weekly meetings at which the two countries discussed and resolved border issues and disputes. Nevertheless, working relations between the respective border security agencies remained at the developmental stage, reinforcing the continued need for military liaison officers. Additional training by the military liaison group, in cooperation with UNMISET civilian police advisers, would be needed to bring the Timorese border security agencies up to the required level of self-sufficiency. Military liaison officers would also be required to facilitate communication between the two parties, especially since a formal agreement on the demarcation of the border had not been reached. The military liaison arrangement between the Indonesian army and UNMISET was due to expire on 20 May. However, a successor arrangement between Indonesia and Timor-Leste, under which the Tactical Coordination Line would remain in place but the Border Patrol Unit would replace UNMISET's military component, had yet to be endorsed by either side. The Secretary-General urged them to expeditiously resolve, by 20 May, a final agreement on the demarcation of the land border or a border management agreement similar to the military liaison arrangement. Timor-Leste therefore requested that a 41-person military liaison component continue to be deployed beyond 20 May. As advised by UNMISET, the Secretary-General recommended retaining 35 military liaison officers to continue facilitating contacts between the Timorese and Indonesian border security agencies, providing additional training to the Timorese border security agencies and monitoring security-related developments along the border. In addition, the continued deployment of a small international security force, of some 144 troops, including logistic support and air mobility, would be required to protect the military liaison officers and other UN personnel. As the Timorese Police Reserve Unit had become operational, the 125-person International Response Unit would be removed, resulting in a significant reduction of the military component.

The eight transition working groups constituted by the Special Representative in August 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 375] to identify assistance requirements and assess progress made in institutional capacity-building completed their work. While their findings and conclusions did not represent a consensus of all participants, they reflected an objective assessment of the key concerns remaining in the areas covered by the UNMISET mandate, namely the development of a professional police service, the deficiencies of the Timorese security sector and the overall capacity development of State and Government institutions, including the development of a functioning justice sector. Also addressed were the continuing requirements for enhancing transparency and accountability, the future of the serious crimes process and the need to support marginalized groups.

The Secretary-General observed that tangible progress had been made in establishing sustainable State institutions and in promoting democracy, transparency, accountability and respect for human rights during the UNMISET consolidation phase, which started in May 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 368]. Nevertheless, significant challenges remained and the provision of international assistance beyond the expiration of UNMISET's current mandate on 20 May would be crucial for the long-term security, stability and sustainable development of the country. The Secretary-General, noting Timor-Leste's request (see below) for the continuation of UNMISET's mandate, recommended maintaining a UN mission with a scaled-down structure for 12 months, until 20 May 2006.

Communication (February). On 20 January [S/2005/103], Timor-Leste's Prime Minister requested that UNMISET's mandate be extended for another year, with some 41 military liaison officers, 58 civilian trainers and 62 police trainers in order to support the further development of Timorese capacity. He also hoped for a coordinated structure for the provision of that assistance which would be a single focal point of contact and include human rights and other advisers. He requested that the Secretary-General recommend those measures to the Security Council.

Security Council consideration (February). On 28 February [meeting 5132], the Security Council considered the Secretary General's February report (see above). In his briefing to the Council, the Secretary-General's Special Representative to Timor-Leste, Mr. Hasegawa, said that, although progress had been registered in the area of institution-building, as some State institutions, for instance banking institutions, were less dependent on international experts, it had become clear that several ministries and institutions continued to require international advisers, particularly for justice, legal and security matters, as well as in the finance and monetary sector, where highly specialized expertise was required. The Prime Minister had therefore requested the retention of 58 "most critical" posts, and while UNMISET recognized the need for many of those posts, it suggested that 45 posts might be sufficient. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the World Bank were making arrangements to fund some posts, but there had been no other firm commitments. Without some form of continued international assistance, it was almost certain that several State institutions would not be able to discharge their sovereign functions adequately after May.

Legal advisers had pointed out the urgent need to lay out basic legal frameworks for several ministries. Similarly, the Timorese authorities sought guidance on how to combat emerging corruption.

While a provisional line comprising more than 95 per cent of the borderline had been agreed upon at the technical level, Timor-Leste and Indonesia were unable to resolve the remaining issues and to establish a transportation corridor linking the enclave of Oecussi located inside West Timor with the rest of Timor-Leste.

In the area of law enforcement, UN police continued to play an advisory role, focusing on the improvement of policing capability, professional development and the institutional strengthening of the Timor-Leste national police. The professional skills development plan was concluding its second phase of training national police officers in all 13 districts, and UN police advisers and bilateral partners were working closely on a "training the trainers" course and a course for station commanders. Despite significant progress made in training officers of the Timor-Leste national police on human rights issues, the excessive use of force and professional misconduct by the national police remained major challenges. UN police technical advisers were advising and training national police officers to deal with a large backlog of professional ethics cases at the national police headquarters.

On 28 April [meeting 5171], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1599(2005).

The draft [S/2005/267] was prepared in consultations among council members.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on the situation in Timor-Leste, in particular resolutions 1543(2004) of 14 May 2004 and 1573(2004) of 16 November 2004,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 18 February 2005,

Commending the people and the Government of Timor-Leste for the peace and stability they have achieved in the country, as well as for their continuing efforts towards consolidating democracy and strengthening State institutions,

Commending the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, under the leadership of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcoming the continuing progress made towards the completion of key tasks inscribed in its mandate, particularly during its consolidation phase, in accordance with resolutions 1543(2004) and 1573(2004),

Paying tribute to Timor-Leste's bilateral and multilateral partners for their invaluable assistance, particularly with regard to institutional capacity-building and social and economic development,

Expressing its appreciation to those Member States which have provided support to the Mission,

Having considered the letter dated 20 January 2005 from the Prime Minister of Timor-Leste to the Secretary-General,

Noting the Secretary-General's analysis of the need for a United Nations presence to remain in Timor-Leste after 20 May 2005, although at a reduced level,

Noting also that the emerging institutions in Timor-Leste are still in the process of consolidation and that further assistance is required to ensure sustained development and strengthening of key sectors, mainly rule of law, including justice, human rights, and support for the Timor-Leste police, and other public administration,

Acknowledging the excellent communication and goodwill that have characterized relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia, including the decision to establish a Truth and Friendship Commission, and their land border agreement signed in Dili on 8 April 2005, which covers approximately 96 per cent of the land border, and encouraging continued efforts by both Governments towards resolving this and all pending bilateral issues,

Acknowledging also the decision of the Secretary-General outlined in his letter dated 11 January 2005 to the Security Council to send a Commission of Experts to Timor-Leste and Indonesia to review the serious crimes accountability processes and recommend further measures as appropriate,

Remaining fully committed to the promotion of long-lasting stability in Timor-Leste,

1. Decides to establish a one-year follow-on special political mission in Timor-Leste, the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste, which will remain in Timor-Leste until 20 May 2006;

2. Decides also that the Office will have the following mandate:

(a) To support the development of critical State institutions through provision of up to forty-five civilian advisers;

(b) To support further development of the police through provision of up to forty police advisers, and support for development of the Border Patrol Unit through provision of up to thirty-five additional advisers, fifteen of whom may be military advisers;

(c) To provide training in observance of democratic governance and human rights through provision of up to ten human rights officers; and

(d) To monitor and review progress in (a) to (c) above;

3. Requests that, when implementing its mandate, the Office emphasize proper transfer of skills and knowledge in order to build the capacity of the public institutions of Timor-Leste to deliver their services in accordance with international principles of the rule of law, justice, human rights, democratic governance, transparency, accountability and professionalism;

4. Also requests that the Office be led by a Special Representative of the Secretary-General, who will direct the operations of the mission and coordinate all United Nations activities in Timor-Leste through his office, with due attention to safety of personnel, and facilitated by appropriate levels of logistics support, including transportation assets, such as air transport when necessary;

5. Further requests that the Secretary-General deploy some of the advisers, authorized in paragraph 2 (b) above, to assist the National Police of Timor-Leste in developing procedures for and in training the Border Patrol Unit and to assist the Government of Timor-Leste in coordinating contacts with the Indonesian military, with the objective of transferring skills to the Border Patrol Unit to assume full responsibility for such coordination as soon as possible;

6. Underlines the fact that United Nations assistance to Timor-Leste should be coordinated with the efforts of bilateral and multilateral donors, regional mechanisms, non-governmental organizations, private sector organizations and other actors from within the international community, and encourages the Special Representative of the Secretary-General to establish and chair a consultative group, made up of these stakeholders in Timor-Leste, that will meet regularly for that purpose;

7. Urges the donor community, as well as the United Nations agencies and multilateral financial institutions, to continue providing resources and assistance for the implementation of projects towards sustainable and long-term development in Timor-Leste, and urges the donor community to actively participate in the donors conference scheduled to be held in April 2005;

8. Encourages, in particular, the Government of Timor-Leste, the Office, the United Nations Secretariat, United Nations development and humanitarian agencies, and multilateral financial institutions to start immediately planning for a smooth and rapid transition in Timor-Leste from a special political mission to a sustainable development assistance framework;

9. Reaffirms the need for credible accountability for the serious human rights violations committed in East Timor in 1999, and in this regard underlines the need for the Secretariat, in agreement with the authorities of Timor-Leste, to preserve a complete copy of all the records compiled by the Serious Crimes Unit, calls upon all parties to cooperate fully with the work of the Secretary-General's Commission of Experts, and looks forward to the Commission's upcoming report exploring possible ways to address this issue, including ways of assisting the Truth and Friendship Commission which Indonesia and Timor-Leste have agreed to establish;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Council closely and regularly informed of developments on the ground and of the implementation of the mandate of the Office, and the planning for a transition to a sustainable development assistance framework, and to submit a report within four months of the date of adoption of the present resolution and every four months thereafter, with recommendations for any modifications such progress might allow to size, composition, mandate and duration of the presence of the Office;

11. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his May end of mandate report [S/2005/310] reviewing the activities of UNMISET since February, said that occasional problems continued to arise between the Timorese armed forces and the national police, including an altercation near a nightclub in Dili which remained under investigation. The problem posed by the proliferation of weapons in Timor-Leste was highlighted by an assault upon the manager of the Australia–New Zealand Bank and his wife outside their residence in Dili. Violence perpetrated by martial arts groups also increased during the reporting period, as did illegal cross-border activities.

Local elections were successfully held in the eastern districts of Baucau, Lautem and Manatuto in two phases, on 17 and 23 March, respectively. The technical and logistical difficulties encountered in the first phase of the elections, including errors in the voter roll, invalid voter registration cards and inadequate transportation to the polling stations, were mostly overcome in the second phase. While the ruling Fretilin party dominated the elections in the Baucau district, independent and opposition candidates won a significant number of seats in the other two districts.

Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia were further reinforced by the visit of the President of Indonesia, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, to Timor-Leste on 8 and 9 April. In an address to the Timorese Parliament, President Yudhoyono stressed Indonesia's commitment to resolve the outstanding issues between the two countries, including the status of East Timorese refugees residing in western Timor, security in border areas, and the common land and maritime boundaries. Indonesia intended to establish a land connection route between Oecussi and mainland Timor-Leste, continue the scholarship programme for Timorese students studying in Indonesia, and provide training for 100 Timorese police officers in Indonesia. In a symbolic gesture of reconciliation, President Yudhoyono ended his visit by laying a wreath at the Santa Cruz cemetery. During that visit, the Foreign Ministers of Timor-Leste and Indonesia signed the Provisional Agreement on the Borderline, as finalized by the Technical Subcommittee on Border Demarcation and Regulation at its meeting in Bogor, Indonesia, on 28 and 29 March. The Agreement, which came into effect on 8 May, established a provisional borderline covering approximately 96 per cent of the entire land border. The Technical Subcommittee was due to meet again shortly thereafter to discuss the surveys to be carried out on the remaining 4 per cent of the border, most of which was located along the Oecussi enclave border, as well as additional ground surveys to further refine the agreed provisional line.

On 29 March, the National Parliament endorsed Sebastiao Dias Ximenes as the first Provedor (Ombudsman) for Human Rights and Justice of Timor-Leste, paving the way for that office to begin its work. Advances in strengthening the Timorese legal system included the promulgation on 17 February of the law on the Superior Council for Defence and Security.

In accordance with Security Council resolution 1543(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 372], UN support for the serious crimes process was to cease on 20 May. The Secretary-General received, on 29 April, a letter from the Commission of Experts requesting that the liquidation of the Serious Crimes Unit be suspended and that measures be considered to safeguard the institutional knowledge of the serious crimes process until the findings of the Commission had been submitted to and considered by the Security Council. In response to that request, 10 staff of the Serious Crimes Unit, including an international judge, a prosecutor, a legal officer and administrative assistants, were to be retained during the UNMISET liquidation phase. During the reporting period, the Special Panels for serious crimes completed eight trials involving 11 defendants, leaving no pending trials. The Special Panels had tried a total of 87 defendants, 84 of whom were convicted of crimes against humanity and other charges, while three were acquitted of all charges. The Court of Appeal heard six serious crimes cases, while six others were still pending.

With a view to increasing the accountability and professionalism of the police, professional ethics offices were opened in the districts to assist in the investigation of complaints of misconduct. During the reporting period, such complaints, including violations of human rights, decreased; 43 cases of misconduct were reported from February to April 2005, compared to 78 cases from November 2004 to January 2005.

The relationship between the Indonesian Armed Forces and the Border Patrol Unit continued to develop with assistance from the Military Liaison Group. On 21 April, however, the Border Patrol Unit exchanged gunfire with Indonesian military personnel, who were reportedly pursuing a group of smugglers at the Tactical Coordination Line. UNMISET facilitated several meetings between the two groups in order to exchange information and assisted both sides in conducting an impartial investigation. However, the Indonesian Armed Forces cancelled a third meeting, indicating that it would not participate in further talks with the Unit until the Timorese police were prepared to share the results of their investigation.

The Secretary-General welcomed the adoption of Security Council resolution 1599(2005) (see p. 440), in which the Council reaffirmed its continuing commitment to Timor-Leste through the establishment of a one-year follow-on mission in the country, the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste (UNOTIL). Noting that the Council did not authorize the deployment of the 144-strong backup security force, as he had recommended (see p. 439), the Secretary-General warned that the withdrawal of the last uniformed UN troops from Timor-Leste could have a negative impact on the overall security situation in the country, as it would eliminate a significant deterrent to criminal activities, especially in border areas. The withdrawal of the military engineering unit, which ensured the maintenance of the land route between Dili and the border, was also a matter for concern. It was expected that, without such intervention, the route would become impassable, especially during the rainy season. He indicated that further international assistance would be essential, beyond the support provided through UNOTIL, including assistance with security needs. Additionally, the advisory support available through UNOTIL to strengthen administrative and police structures would need to be supplemented with bilateral and multilateral assistance to ensure sustainable progress.

Security Council consideration (May). On 16 May [meeting 5180], the Security Council considered the Secretary-General's end of mandate report on UNMISET (see above). The Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Hédi Annabi, summarized developments pertaining to the political and security situation and briefed the Council on his visit to Timor-Leste between 26 April and 2 May. He commended the Timorese and UNMISET on the progress they had achieved towards building a stable and democratic State, but recognized the need for additional support from the international community in order to consolidate those gains.

On 24 June [S/2005/458], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council President the report of the Commission of Experts reviewing the prosecution of human rights violations committed during the events of 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 707], as well as a summary of that report. The report contained a comprehensive analysis of the judicial processes in question, as well as a wide range of recommendations.

The Commission conducted a fact-finding mission to Timor-Leste from 5 to 10 April to meet with the President and national and local government authorities, the judiciary and UNMISET staff, victims' groups and NGOs. At the invitation of Indonesia, it visited Jakarta from 18 to 20 May.

The Commission found that the serious crimes process in Timor-Leste had ensured a notable degree of accountability for those responsible for the crimes committed in 1999. Investigations and prosecutions had generally met international standards. The process had also significantly contributed to strengthening respect for the rule of law and encouraging community participation in the process of reconciliation and justice. The existence of an effective and credible judicial process, such as the Special Panels, had also discouraged retributive and vengeful attacks. However, there was frustration about the inability of the judicial process to bring to justice those outside the country's jurisdiction, particularly high-level indictees. The Commission concluded that the serious crimes process had not yet achieved full accountability of those who bore the greatest responsibility for serious violations of human rights in 1999, due to several factors, including lack of sufficient resources. The lack of access to evidence and suspects in Indonesia also impeded progress, and there was no extradition agreement between Indonesia and Timor-Leste or any form of effective mutual legal assistance framework to enable the arrest and transfer of indictees. The judicial process before the Ad Hoc Human Rights Court for Timor-Leste was not effective in delivering justice, and many aspects of the ad hoc judicial process revealed scant respect for, or conformity to, relevant international standards.

The Commission recommended that the Council retain the Serious Crimes Unit, the Special Panels and the Defence Lawyers Unit until the Secretary-General and the Council could examine the Commission's recommendations, or alternatively, set up mechanisms for completing the investigation and prosecution of serious human rights violations. It made a number of recommendations relevant to Timor-Leste and Indonesia. If those recommendations were not initiated by the respective Governments, the Council should, under Chapter VII of the UN Charter, create an ad hoc international criminal tribunal for Timor-Leste, to be located in a third State, or use the International Criminal Court. Member States also had the obligation under their respective national laws, to pursue investigation and prosecution of those persons responsible for serious violations of human rights in East Timor in 1999.

On 14 July [S/2005/459], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council President two 22 June letters from the President and Prime Minister of Timor-Leste containing their comments regarding the final report of the Commission of Experts. Although appreciative of the Secretary-General's efforts in appointing the Commission of Experts, Timor-Leste was disappointed that the Commission had failed to provide legally sound and feasible recommendations for the advancement of the investigations of serious crimes and for the enhancement of the proposed Commission for Truth and Friendship. More importantly, the Commission of Experts failed to consider ways in which its analysis might assist both Governments in enhancing their agreed commitments and in elaborating a mechanism to advance the objectives of the Commission for Truth and Friendship.

On 28 September [S/2005/613], the Council President informed the Secretary-General that his 24 June letter (see above), transmitting the summary and full report of the Commission of Experts, had been brought to the Council's attention. Before further consideration of the report, the Council requested that the Secretary-General, in close consultation with his Special Representative, submit a report on justice and reconciliation for Timor-Leste, containing a practically feasible approach, taking into account both the report of the Commission of Experts and the views expressed by Indonesia and Timor-Leste.

United Nations Office in Timor-Leste

By resolution 1599(2005) of 28 April (see p. 440), the Security Council established a one-year follow-on mission to UNMISET, known as the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste (UNOTIL). The mission, to be headed by the Secretary-General's Special Representative, would comprise 40 police trainers to support further development of the police, 20 additional police advisers and 15 military advisers to support the development of the Border Patrol Unit, 45 civilian advisers to help develop critical State institutions, 10 human rights officers to provide training in the observance of democratic governance and human rights and a small office to support the Special Representative and coordinate the work of the mission with UN system partners.

On 27 May [S/2005/356], the Secretary-General informed the Council President of his intention to appoint Sukehiro Hasegawa (Japan) as his Special Representative for Timor-Leste and Head of UNOTIL, with effect from 21 May. On 1 June [S/2005/357], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention.

Report of Secretary-General (August). In August, the Secretary-General submitted a report [S/2005/533] covering developments on the ground since his May report (see p. 442) and describing UNOTIL activities since its inception.

During the reporting period, in order to curb the violent activities of martial arts groups, a series of initiatives was undertaken, with the support of President Gusmão, which culminated in the signing of a joint declaration by 14 groups on 30 June. The signatories to the declaration committed themselves to preventing, reducing and eradicating acts of violence between martial arts groups. On 22 July, six members of a political opposition group were detained in Lautem district following violent clashes with the local community. The following week, the Timorese national police conducted coordinated search operations of that group's premises across the eastern part of the country, reportedly seizing items, including military uniforms, machetes, knives, flags, a firearm and ammunition. Subsequently, the coordinator of the group complained to the Provedor for Human Rights and Justice.

Local elections were held in two phases in the districts of Cova Lima, Ermera and Viqueque, on 12 and 18 May, and in those of Ainaro, Aileu and Manufahi, on 27 June and 2 July. While the ruling party won a relative majority, opposition and independent candidates also fared well. Despite some technical difficulties, primarily involving voter verification, improvements were noted in voter education and in cooperation between the secretariat for the Technical Administration of Elections, the local authorities and the police.

Relations between Timor-Leste and Indonesia continued to improve. Following meetings in June and July, agreement was reached, among other things, on the completion of negotiations on the unresolved segments of the common land boundary by the end of the year; the establishment of a new border management mechanism between Timor-Leste and Indonesia's border security agencies; the opening of a bus line from the Oecussi enclave to mainland Timor-Leste; and the issuance of border passes to border area residents. The 10 members of the bilateral Commission for Truth and Friendship were officially announced on 1 August. The Commission met for the first time in Denpasar, Bali (4-5 August), to discuss matters related to its internal structures, working procedures and its programme of work. On 11 August, the Presidents of the two countries signed a memorandum of understanding on the establishment of the Commission.

Further advances were made towards strengthening the Timorese institutional and legal framework. Two important organs provided for in the Constitution, namely the Superior Council for Defence and Security and the Council of State, were inaugurated on 12 and 17 May, respectively. The Provedor for Human Rights and Justice and his two Deputies were also sworn in by the National Parliament, which approved the statute of the Office of the Public Prosecutor on 25 July. On 29 July, it authorized the adoption of the penal code and of the penal and civil procedure codes by government decree. On 28 June, a decree law on restructuring the Government was promulgated, raising the total number of ministries from 10 to 15 and establishing, among other things, five new Secretary of State posts for the coordination of regional development and investment programmes. On 27 July, Prime Minister Mari Alkatiri officially announced the composition of the new Government, comprising 41 members, seven of whom were women and two with strong ties to the opposition. The new Government was sworn in by President Gusmão on 28 July.

Despite significant progress towards the development of a viable justice sector, Timor-Leste continued to rely on international advisers to perform line functions at both the Court of Appeal and the district courts to help reduce the backlog of cases. UNOTIL advisers trained 15 judges, 15 prosecutors and 10 public defenders, most of whom would assume their duties in the national courts by May 2006, with a probable need for continued on-the-job mentoring.

With continued support from UNOTIL's military training advisers, the Border Patrol Unit began direct dialogue with its Indonesian counterpart. UNOTIL's military training advisers would continue to support both parties in finalizing the border management agreement and establishing a mechanism to facilitate the resolution of border incidents. A joint concept of operations was developed to ensure close cooperation between the police and the military training advisers tasked with further developing the Border Patrol Unit. Joint operations and reporting mechanisms had been established at UNOTIL headquarters, where police and military training advisers planned and coordinated their border activities while maintaining regular contact with the Timorese national police headquarters.

UNOTIL placed special emphasis on the coordination of donor assistance and encouraged the implementation of measures for the sustainable long-term development in Timor-Leste. Towards that end, the Special Representative established a consultative group to coordinate the assistance of stakeholders.

Security Council consideration (August). On 29 August [meeting 5251], the Security Council considered the Secretary-General's August report (see above) and was briefed on the situation in Timor-Leste by his Special Representative, who reported that, as local elections were coming to a close, public attention was focused on the presidential and national parliamentary elections to be held in 18 months. President Gusmão and Prime Minister Alkatiri requested UN assistance in the drafting of electoral laws to establish a legal framework for the nationwide elections. In addition, Timorese authorities requested external assistance to set up database-management systems and administrative support.

New opportunities and challenges had emerged in the economic sphere, with revenues from Timor Sea oil and gas resources starting to flow, which compensated for declining budgetary support from development partners. The National Parliament unanimously passed, on 13 July, the Petroleum Fund Act and the law on petroleum taxation, and on 23 August, the law on petroleum activities.

Regarding the serious crimes process, the first pre-trial hearing of former militia members indicted in Timor Leste took place on 4 August and the Dili district court scheduled trial for 3 September. UNOTIL produced a copy of the records compiled by the Serious Crimes Unit with the support of experts from the UN Department of Management, and was discussing with the Timorese Government the draft agreement on the preservation of serious crimes records. Although the Serious Crimes Unit had made an important contribution to achieving justice, it was able to investigate fewer than half of the estimated 1,450 murders committed in 1999.

While Timorese counterparts had increased their ownership of the functional responsibilities carried out by their offices, the effectiveness of UNOTIL's civilian advisers in transferring skills and knowledge continued to be hindered by the lack of national capacity in such technical and specialized sectors as justice and finance, as well as by the difficulty faced by State institutions in establishing and implementing a viable career development system. To meet those challenges, UNOTIL developed a new strategy, in close cooperation with stakeholders, for strengthening the capacity of key sovereign State institutions responsible for public administration, law and order, justice, human rights and democratic governance.

Further developments. In a later report [S/2006/24], the Secretary-General covered developments in Timor-Leste through the end of the year.

He reported that the fifth round of local elections was held in the districts of Dili and Liquica, on 20 and 30 September, marking the final round of village and sub-village elections in all 13 districts. Overall, the elections were conducted in a peaceful and orderly manner and the average voter turnout reached over 80 per cent, with several political parties fielding candidates. The ruling party won a large majority. Re-elections were held on 21 December for 18 village council positions in 10 districts, following an order from the Court of Appeals, citing technical irregularities during the earlier elections. Preparations for parliamentary and presidential elections in 2007 were already under way, with nine parties registered under the 2004 Law on Political Parties. In response to the request by the Timorese Government for assistance with the 2007 elections, an electoral assistance needs assessment mission was sent to Timor-Leste in November. Based on the mission's recommendations, UNOTIL provided advisory assistance for the preparation of the elections. The mission also recommended that prior to the drafting of electoral laws, discussions should take place within Timor-Leste regarding fundamental issues, such as the role and functions of an independent electoral supervisory body, terms of office for the President and members of Parliament and the timing of the elections. It was also strongly recommended that international assistance be provided, including support to voter registration, electoral administration and provision of resources.

Further progress was achieved in delineating the land border between Timor-Leste and Indonesia. On 30 August, Timor-Leste and Indonesia commenced demarcation of the 96 per cent of the land border agreed to in the Provisional Agreement on the Borderline signed by the foreign ministers in Dili in April (see p. 442). In December, significant progress was made in negotiations between the two sides on the remaining 4 per cent of the border. A number of cross-border incidents occurred in September and October, including the burning of farmland and stone-throwing incidents, mainly as a result of local disputes between villagers living on either side of the border. In response, UNOTIL facilitated exchanges between the Indonesian army and the Timorese police, in which the two sides agreed on joint measures to prevent the recurrence of further incidents. Although the situation had stabilized and a number of community-level meetings aimed at promoting cross-border cultural and economic exchanges had taken place, concerted efforts were nevertheless needed by both sides to inform the population in the border districts about the agreed boundary.

The bilateral Commission for Truth and Friendship, which commenced work in August, focused primarily on the analysis of documents provided by the Ad Hoc Human Rights Tribunal in Jakarta. The Commission requested the Timor-Leste Government to review the records compiled by the former United Nations Serious Crimes Unit in Dili. On 31 October, after close to five years of operation, the Commission for Reception, Truth and Reconciliation transmitted to President Gusmão its final report on human rights abuses in the country between 1974 and 1999, which he submitted to the National Parliament on 28 November, and to Prime Minister Mari Alkatiri on 30 November.

In the area of police development, UNOTIL was planning to complete all training programmes for Timorese national police by 20 May 2006. During the reporting period, the Rapid Intervention Unit completed comprehensive training programmes, and had shown remarkable improvements, especially with regard to professionalism, discipline and observance of human rights. The Immigration Unit also made considerable progress towards self-sufficiency. In addition, three new specialized units, namely the Counter-Terrorism Unit, the Explosive Ordnance Disposal Unit and the Public Information Office, were established. UNOTIL provided basic training in counter-terrorism and explosive ordnance to those units, to be followed by advanced training in the coming months. UNOTIL police advisers and Timorese police leaders were jointly preparing a long-term plan for the Timorese police, known as "Plan 2020", which would provide the Timorese police leadership with an opportunity to think strategically and to plan and organize their future activities. The police advisers also worked in close cooperation with Timorese police leaders in the formulation of operational and training manuals for various units.

Financing of UN operations

During 2005, the General Assembly considered the financing of three UN missions in Timor-Leste—UNMISET, UNOTIL and the United Nations Mission in East Timor (UNAMET). UNMISET was established by Council resolution 1410(2002) [YUN 2002, p. 321] to provide assistance to the administrative, law enforcement and public security structures critical to the viability and political stability of Timor-Leste, in addition to contributing to the maintenance of its external and internal security. UNOTIL was established by Council resolution 1599(2005) as a follow-on mission to UNMISET, charged with supporting and monitoring progress in the development of critical state institutions, the police and BPU and observance of democratic governance and human rights. UNAMET was established by Council resolution 1246(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 283] to conduct the 1999 popular consultations on East Timor's autonomy [ibid., p. 288]; its mandate ended on 30 November 1999, in accordance with resolution 1262 (1999) [ibid., p. 287].

UNMISET and UNOTIL

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, considered the UNMISET performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/655], UNMISET's budget for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [A/59/637] and the related ACABQ report [A/59/736/Add.17]. The Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/531/Add. 1], adopted resolution 59/13 B without vote [agenda item 129].

Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor

B

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1272(1999) of 25 October 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Transitional Administration, the last of which was resolution 1392 (2002) of 31 January 2002, by which the mandate was extended until 20 May 2002,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 1410(2002) of 17 May 2002, by which the Council established the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as of 20 May 2002 for an initial period of twelve months, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission, the last of which was resolution 1573(2004) of 16 November 2004, by which the Council extended the mandate of the Mission for a final period of six months until 20 May 2005,

Recalling further its resolution 54/246 A of 23 December 1999 on the financing of the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and its subsequent resolutions on the financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor, the latest of which was resolution 59/13 A of 29 October 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Mission and to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to complete its administrative liquidation,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Transitional Administration in East Timor and the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 66.4 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only fifty-one Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Transitional Administration and the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary- General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

9. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor the amount of 1,757,800 dollars, inclusive of 1,662,200 dollars for the administrative liquidation of the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2005 and 78,200 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 17,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006;

10. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 1,662,200 dollars for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2005, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

11. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 10 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 119,400 dollars, representing the estimated staff assessment income approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July to 31 October 2005;

12. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 78,200 dollars for the support account and the amount of 17,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

13. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 12,400 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, comprising the prorated share of 11,000 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 1,400 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

14. Decides further that for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 10 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 18,065,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in its resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

15. Decides that for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 18,065,900 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 14 above;

16. Decides also that the increase of 392,100 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 18,065,900 dollars referred to in paragraphs 14 and 15 above;

17. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

18. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

19. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

20. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission of Support in East Timor".

In October [A/60/425], the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a report on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council. The Secretary-General proposed resource requirements for UNOTIL for the period from 21 May to 31 December 2005, estimated at $22,027,700 ($23,890,200 gross). Requirements for the period beyond December 2005 would be presented in a consolidated report containing the budget proposals for all special political missions at the first part of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly. The ongoing operation of UNOTIL was being funded partly through the utilization of savings realized under the United Nations Advance Mission in the Sudan (UNAMIS) and partly through the use of commitments granted by ACABQ under the terms of General Assembly resolution 58/273 [YUN 2003, p. 1422]. The total requirements being sought amounted to $15,726,000 net ($17,588,500 gross).

In November [A/60/7/Add.10], ACABQ recommended that UNOTIL's estimated budget requirement for the period from 21 May to 31 December be reduced from $22,027,700 to $21,939,900.

On 23 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/60/593], adopted resolution 60/244 without vote [agenda item 123].

Estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council: United Nations Office in Timor-Leste

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on estimates in respect of special political missions, good offices and other political initiatives authorized by the General Assembly and/or the Security Council and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Advisory Committee contained in its report, subject to the provisions of the present resolution;

3. Decides to approve the position of Chief of Staff at the D-1 level;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure appropriate coordination of gender mainstreaming activities;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to achieve savings in operational costs, taking into account the recommendations of the Advisory Committee;

6. Approves the budget for the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste in the amount of 23,782,100 United States dollars gross (21,939,900 dollars net) for the period from 21 May to 31 December 2005;

7. Notes that requirements for the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste, after taking into account the utilization of savings of 6,301,700 dollars under the United Nations Advance Mission in the Sudan, amount to 17,480,400 dollars gross (15,638,200 dollars net);

8. Decides to appropriate, under the procedure provided for in paragraph 11 of annex I to General Assembly resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, an amount of 15,638,200 dollars under section 3, Political affairs, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, for the United Nations Office in Timor-Leste;

9. Also decides to appropriate an amount of 1,842,200 dollars under section 34, Staff assessment, of the programme budget for the biennium 2004-2005, to be offset by a corresponding amount under income section 1, Income from staff assessment.

UNAMET

On 12 September, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the item on the financing of UNAMET and included it in the draft agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session (decision 59/570).

Other matters

Cambodia

In 2005, the Secretary-General continued to put in place the arrangements for the entry into force of the Agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed During the Period of Democratic Kampuchea. The Agreement, approved by the General Assembly in resolution 57/228 B [YUN 2003, p. 385], regulated cooperation between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia in bringing to trial senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea and those who were most responsible for the crimes committed during the period from 17 April 1975 to 6 January 1979. The Agreement provided, among other things, the legal basis and the principles and modalities for such cooperation. On 28 March, the Secretary-General convened a pledging conference in New York with a view to seeking the $43 million needed to fund the UN's commitment under the Agreement and received sufficient contributions and pledges to meet the Organization's obligations. On 28 April, the Government of Cambodia was notified that the legal requirements on the part of the United Nations for the entry into force of the Agreement had been complied with, and the Agreement accordingly entered into force the following day. On 14 October, the Secretary-General appointed Michelle Lee as international Deputy Director of the Office of Administration

In a November report [A/60/565], the Secretary-General reviewed progress towards the establishment of Extraordinary Chambers for the Prosecution under Cambodian Law of Crimes Committed during the period of Democratic Kampuchea. The Assembly was requested to take note of the report and decide that the international judges, the international co-prosecutor and the international co-investigating judge be deemed to be UN officials for the purpose of their terms and conditions of service.

India-Pakistan

During the year, steady and meaningful progress was achieved by India and Pakistan in their bilateral dialogue, agreed to in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 382]. The April 2005 launch of a bus service across the line of control between the two countries was an important gesture of peace, and the leaders of both countries assured the Secretary-General of their commitment to work towards resolving all outstanding issues, including that of Jammu and Kashmir.

The United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP) continued in 2005 to monitor the situation in Jammu and Kashmir. On 2 December [S/2005/772], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President of his intention to appoint Major General Dragutin Repinc (Croatia) as Chief Military Observer of UNMOGIP, replacing Major General Guido Dante Palmieri (Italy), who relinquished his post on 13 September. The Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention on 8 December [S/2005/773].

Korea

The Secretary-General, in his report on the work of the Organization [A/60/1], said that, while concerns remained about the situation on the Korean peninsula, some progress was noted in 2005, as intensive diplomatic efforts to revitalize the Beijing process had resulted in the resumption of the six-party talks (China, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK), Japan, the Republic of Korea, the Russian Federation and the United States), aimed at achieving a nuclear-weapon free peninsula and a comprehensive settlement on related issues. The Secretary-General said that he would continue to mobilize international support for that multilateral approach towards a nuclear-weapon free peninsula, as well as look for practical ways in which the United Nations could strengthen its humanitarian and development work in the DPRK.

On 13 July [S/2005/474], the EU welcomed the announcement that the six-party talks were to be resumed. It urged the DPRK to dismantle its nuclear programmes and offered support in achieving that goal.

In separate letters of 23 September [CD/1759, CD/1760], the DPRK and the Republic of Korea transmitted to the Secretary-General of the Conference on Disarmament the joint statement adopted by the six parties (see above), in which they unanimously reaffirmed their goal of the verifiable denuclearization of the Korean peninsula in a peaceful manner.

The DPRK, in a 28 October letter [A/C.1/60/5], objected to urgings by the United States and the United Kingdom that it abandon its nuclear programme first, rather than as part of a process of simultaneous actions undertaken by itself, the United States and the Republic of Korea, as was agreed upon by the six parties. On 9 November, the fifth round of those talks commenced (Beijing, 9-11 November).

In other matters, by a 7 March letter [A/59/732-S/2005/150] to the Secretary-General, the DPRK registered its objection to Japan's attempt to occupy a permanent seat on the Security Council.

Kyrgyzstan

The Secretary-General, in his report on the work of the Organization [A/60/1], said that political upheaval in Kyrgyzstan reflected the growing instability in Central Asia. Responding to that instability, he had established in Turkmenistan the United Nations Regional Centre for Preventive Diplomacy for Central Asia as a tool for strengthening cooperation on issues ranging from the fight against drug trafficking and terrorism to strengthening democratic institutions and respect for human rights.

On 4 April [S/2005/247], the EU said that, in collaboration with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), it was closely following developments in Kyrgyzstan, and had taken note of the resignation of Kyrgyz Prime Minister Tanayev and his government. It appealed to the newly appointed leaders to restore public order as soon as possible, start a dialogue with all political forces involved and implement a policy of national reconciliation. The new Kyrgyz leaders were also called upon to respect democratic values and human rights, and take all necessary measures to guarantee security and stability in the country. The EU was willing to cooperate with the new leaders in that context, and would support OSCE efforts to achieve that goal. The decision of the Kyrgyz Parliament to organize presidential elections within three months and parliamentary elections within six months was noted by the EU.

Mongolia

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 14 November [meeting 52], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/16 [draft: A/60/L.17 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 42].

Eight hundred years of Mongolian statehood

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 56/6 of 9 November 2001 on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations,

Reaffirming that civilizational achievements constitute the collective heritage of mankind, providing a source of inspiration and progress for humanity at large,

Emphasizing the need to achieve an objective understanding of all civilizations and enhance constructive interaction and cooperative engagement among civilizations,

Recognizing the richness of nomadic civilization and its important contribution to promoting dialogue and interaction among all forms of civilization,

Recognizing also that nomadic civilization influenced, inter alia, societies across Asia and Europe and, in turn, absorbed influences from both East and West in a true interchange of human values,

Recognizing further the important role played by a strong and persistent nomadic culture in the development of extensive trade networks and the creation of large administrative, cultural, religious and commercial centres,

Mindful of the ever-increasing significance and relevance of a culture of living in harmony with nature, which is inherent in nomadic civilization, in today's world,

1. Welcomes the efforts of Member States, including Mongolia, to preserve and develop nomadic culture and traditions in modern societies;

2. Also welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Government of Mongolia to celebrate the eight hundredth anniversary of Mongolian statehood in 2006;

3. Invites Member States, the United Nations, its specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as relevant intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, regional organizations and foundations, and academia, to take part actively in the events to be organized by Mongolia in celebration of this anniversary.

Speaking before the vote, the representative of Mongolia said that his nation's traditions, values and culture, as well as its mentality and self-identity, stemmed from its nomadic roots. The eight hundredth anniversary of statehood provided Mongolia with an opportunity to look back at the legacies of its forefathers and to closely study nomadic civilization. The draft resolution sought to reinforce the concept of dialogue among civilizations, bringing the role and contribution of nomadic civilization into the global agenda. It also reaffirmed the importance of preserving and developing the centuries-old traditions and culture of nomadic peoples in modern societies. In addition, it sought to encourage renewed interest in studying various aspects of nomadic civilization on the part of relevant international organizations, civil society and academia, thus contributing to mutual understanding among civilizations and cultures.

Myanmar

In 2005, the Secretary-General continued to provide his good offices in the pursuit of national reconciliation and democratization in Myanmar, but encountered difficulties as the ousting of then Prime Minister General Khin Nyunt in 2004 had significantly reduced political contact between the Myanmar authorities and the United Nations. The UN Special Envoy and the Special Rapporteur for the Commission on Human Rights had still not been allowed into the country. According to the Special Rapporteur, over 1,100 political prisoners reportedly remained in Myanmar, and the release of 249 of them on 6 July had been tempered by the continuation of the arrests, detention and harsh sentences meted out to civilians and democracy advocates for peaceful political activities. The practice of administrative detention continued, and National League for Democracy (NLD) General-Secretary, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, remained under house arrest. While Myanmar had embarked upon the process laid out in the Government's 2003 seven-point road map towards democratization, it had not done so in a genuinely all-inclusive manner. In a meeting with the Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council, Senior General Than Shwe, held during the Asia-Africa Summit (Jakarta, 22-23 April), the Secretary-General emphasized that the transition process had to include all parties.

In his 10 October report on the situation of human rights in Myanmar [A/60/422] (see p. 892), the Secretary-General maintained that the seven-point road map towards democracy and the National Convention had the potential to generate positive change. However, the Convention was not adhering to the recommendations made by successive General Assembly resolutions. The Convention, responsible for elaborating the basic principles for the drafting of a firm and stable constitution, was reconvened from 17 February to 31 March, but without the involvement of a number of political parties, including NLD. The exclusion of important and representative political actors from the process, the restrictions placed on their involvement, the lack of tolerance towards critical voices and the intimidation and detention of pro-democracy activists rendered any notion of a democratic process devoid of meaning. The Secretary-General called upon the Myanmar authorities to resume dialogue with the representatives of all ethnic nationality groups and political leaders and to allow his Special Envoy to recommence visits to Myanmar.

On 24 October [A/C.3/60/2], Myanmar called into question various assertions made in the Secretary-General's 10 October report (see above). The report was said to contain important factual errors and overreached the parameters mandated by Assembly resolution 59/263 [YUN 2004, p. 812].

The Secretary-General, responding on 7 November [A/60/422/Add.1], stated that information in his report came from the public domain, or was provided to him by his Special Envoy, who could not verify the accuracy of the information, as he had been denied access to Myanmar since March 2004. The Secretary-General reiterated his commitment to providing his good offices aimed at facilitating national reconciliation and democratization in Myanmar.

On 2 November [A/C.3/60/6], Myanmar transmitted to the Secretary-General a memorandum on the situation of human rights in the country, which addressed, among other things, recent political developments.

On 28 January, the Executive Board of the United Nations Development Programme/United Nations Population Fund took note of the report of the assessment mission to Myanmar [DP/2005/6] and the report submitted by the independent assessment mission to the country [E/2005/35 (dec. 2005/3)].

Nepal

In Nepal, the UN system strengthened its presence and capacity to respond to the deteriorating situation caused by the ongoing conflict and political crisis. The Secretary-General continued to urge a prompt return to constitutional rule, and reiterated the UN's readiness to help peacefully resolve the conflict. As part of those efforts, the Special Adviser of the Secretary-General, Lakdhar Brahimi, visited Nepal from 10 to 15 July and met with King Gyanendra, senior Government officials, leaders of political parties and a cross-section of Nepalese society.

On 28 February [S/2005/137], the EU, recalling the 2 February statement of its Presidency, expressing deep concern about the dissolution of the multiparty Government in Nepal and the assumption by the King of executive powers, stated that the action taken by the King was a serious setback to the prospects for a negotiated and democratic solution to the conflict in Nepal. It urged the King to take early measures to restore democratic freedoms and civil liberties and to lift the emergency powers he had introduced following the takeover of power on 1 February. In particular, the EU called for the restoration of representative democracy; the fast release of all political and other prisoners detained under emergency ordinances; unrestricted access without the need for prior notice to all detainees by the National Human Rights Commission and its representatives; political parties and civil society organizations to be granted the freedom to organize and operate; the lifting of reporting restrictions on the media; assurances of continued independence for the Commission for the Investigation of Abuse of Authority; and the restoration of the right to assembly and other fundamental rights. The EU was also mindful of the impact the new political situation might have on security conditions in the country and on donors' ability to provide development assistance to Nepal.

On 8 September [S/2005/629], the EU welcomed the statement by the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist) (CPN(M)) of a unilateral ceasefire. It urged the CPN(M) to cease using violence for political ends and called upon all political forces to work towards a democratically based peace process leading to a durable negotiated solution, involving a national consensus and the reintegration of the CPN(M) into a multiparty democracy.

In a 28 October statement [S/2005/751], the EU condemned the seizure, carried out at gunpoint by the security forces, of radio equipment from the Kantipur FM station in Kathmandu. Amendments contained in the new media ordinance also caused concern, as they infringed upon the right to freedom of expression. The EU called upon the Government of Nepal to uphold the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the Kingdom of Nepal and to allow the Nepalese people their right to freedom of expression.

On 5 December [S/2005/804], the EU recognized the efforts of the political parties in Nepal in securing an agreement with the Maoists which could form the basis for a peace process in the country. It continued to support the transition of the Maoists into mainstream politics, but urged them to renounce violence, including by putting their weapons verifiably beyond use. As a first step, the EU called on the Maoists to extend their current ceasefire and to work to create the right conditions for peace talks to resume. It also urged the King and the Government to begin serious engagement on a negotiated settlement to the conflict. In a further statement dated 5 December [S/2005/805], the EU condemned the 27 November seizure, carried out at gunpoint by the security forces, of radio equipment from the Sagamartha FM station in Kathmandu. It once again called upon the Government of Nepal to uphold the fundamental rights of the people of Nepal, including the right to freedom of expression.

Papua New Guinea

In 2005, Bougainville (Papua New Guinea) made substantial progress towards peace and stability through the successful completion of elections and the establishment of the first Autonomous Bougainville Government. Up to its closure on 30 June, the United Nations Observer Mission in Bougainville (UNOMB) continued to assist in the implementation of the 2001 Bougainville Peace Agreement, concluded between the Papua New Guinea Government and the Bougainville parties. The Agreement, which established the framework for a peace process, including a permanent ceasefire, as provided for in the 1998 Lincoln Agreement [YUN 1998, p. 319] and its annex, the Arawa Agreement [ibid.], covered issues of autonomy, the holding of a referendum and agreements on weapons disposal.

Report of Secretary-General (March). On 28 March, in response to a December 2004 Security Council request [YUN 2004, p. 386], the Secretary-General submitted a report [S/2005/204] reviewing the progress achieved by the parties to the 2001 Bougainville Peace Agreement in the preparations for elections, reconciliation with the leaders of the "no-go zone", maintenance of law and order, weapons disposal, and post-conflict peacebuilding. The report also elaborated on UNOMB's closure plan.

The Bougainville Provincial Administration, with the support of the National Election Commission, had made plans for the upcoming elections which would bring about the establishment of the first Autonomous Bougainville Government. The Administration finalized a report on the boundaries of provincial constituencies, and was updating and consolidating the common roll of the province, including the "no-go zone" (mountainous region controlled by rebel leader Francis Ona and his Me'ekamui Defence Force (MDF)). The Transitional Consultative Committee, composed of members of the Bougainville Interim Provincial Government and the Bougainville People's Congress, decided that polling in the elections for the presidency and the Bougainville legislature would be held from 20 May to 2 June. The legislature, to be known as the House of Representatives, would consist of 33 members representing their respective constituencies, along with one woman and one former combatant to be elected for each of Bougainville's three regions (North, Central and South). The President would be elected directly on a Bougainville-wide ballot, while the Speaker would be elected from candidates outside the House by its members.

With the facilitation of UNOMB, community leaders and volunteers from among the former combatants were carrying out an election public-awareness campaign with rank-and-file MDF members in the "no-go zone". As a result of that campaign, a significant number of MDF members had expressed support for and willingness to take part in the elections. Both the national Government and the Bougainville leaders expressed their desire to have international observers present during the elections in order to enhance the confidence of the Bougainville people regarding the peace process and their ability to vote freely.

On 8 March, UNOMB facilitated a meeting that brought together, for the first time, several Bougainville political leaders, former military leaders and combatants of the Bougainville Revolutionary Army and the Bougainville Resistance Force to discuss the peace process with 100 key MDF players. The meeting decided that similar exchanges should be held in the near future to sort out differences and to work together for the future of Bougainville. The MDF representatives also pledged not to interrupt the electoral process. At the second meeting (Arawa, 17 March), the participants discussed the upcoming elections, the lifting of the last roadblock at Morgan Junction and reconciliation between Francis Ona, the leader in the "no-go zone", and Joseph Kabui, President of the Bougainville People's Congress. Mr. Kabui had expressed his readiness to meet Mr. Ona to initiate the reconciliation process, and sources close to Mr. Ona had informed UNOMB that he was ready to reciprocate. That would signify a breakthrough in relations between their factions, and would bode well for a potential opening of the "no-go zone" and the provision of government services to the population living there. UNOMB would continue to provide logistical and other support to the parties in the matter.

Regarding security, the general situation on the ground was steadily improving. UNOMB had destroyed most of the 2,014 weapons originally placed in containers in accordance with the weapons disposal plan, and was working through community leaders to persuade former combatants to destroy the remaining weapons, which were kept in secure storage. The deployment of Bougainville regular police had produced good results, and the people of Bougainville repeatedly commented on security improvements and increased freedom of movement as tangible outcomes of the successful implementation of the Peace Agreement. In the province, over 116 Bougainville Police were on active duty, and 50 more would be graduating from the Police Academy in Bomana, Port Moresby, by the end of the month. They would be deployed before the beginning of the election. Additionally, 383 community police officers were functioning in their respective villages in most areas of the island.

The National Court resumed hearings in Buka for the first time in four years to try a backlog of cases. Although some progress had been achieved, the establishment of correctional institutions was lagging behind, thereby impinging on human rights issues. To remedy the situation, the Provincial Administration was working in close cooperation with the representatives of the Law and Justice Programme, funded by regional donors, to expedite the construction and renovation of the required institutions.

Because of the enormous rehabilitation and recovery challenges the Autonomous Bougainville Government would face upon its establishment, capacity-building needed to be one of its priorities, requiring the continued assistance of UN agencies and programmes and donors. UNDP would implement its Bougainville Planning and Community Support Programme project and the United Nations Children's Fund planned expanding its volunteer teacher training programme. Donor assistance would be channelled through the Governance and Implementation Fund. The agreed steps and priorities of that implementation were provided for in the Joint Working Plan of the Papua New Guinea Government and the Bougainville Administration.

UNDP and major donors were encouraging the Bougainville Administration to take the lead in coordinating the distribution of international assistance in accordance with the priorities specified in the Joint Working Plan.

Given the progress achieved by the parties in weapons disposal and in the preparations for elections, and barring any unforeseen complications, UNOMB would complete its mandate and formally close its activities on 30 June, at which point it was expected that an Autonomous Bougainville Government would already have been set up. In the interim, the Mission would continue to monitor the situation to verify the handing over of weapons and that the level of security was conducive to the holding of elections. Upon the closure of UNOMB, UN developmental and humanitarian agencies and the donor community would take the lead in helping the Autonomous Bougainville Government to implement its rehabilitation and capacity-building programmes.

Elections

The United Nations had been requested by the national Government of Papua New Guinea, in concurrence with the Bougainville leaders, to coordinate the work of the international electoral observers invited by the Papua New Guinea Government. The resultant UN election coordination unit gave extensive briefings to the observers prior to their deployment in Bougainville and, in close cooperation with UNOMB, facilitated their movement by helicopter to 29 of the 33 constituencies throughout the three regions of Bougainville. The United Nations also supported the airlift of polling boxes, electoral officers and observers. International observers from Australia, Fiji, Japan, New Zealand, Samoa, Trinidad and Tobago and Vanuatu, as well as representatives of the Commonwealth and Pacific Islands Forum secretariats, concluded that the elections had been conducted in accordance with the electoral laws and in a calm and peaceful environment.

As declared by the international observers, the outcome of the elections accurately reflected the will of the people of Bougainville. Of the 112,000 voters enlisted on the common roll, 69,343 cast their ballots, constituting 62 per cent of the whole electorate. The presidential campaign was won by Joseph C. Kabui, former President of the Bougainville People's Congress, receiving close to 15,000 more votes than the runner-up, former Governor John Momis. Two key government positions—a senior minister and the Deputy Speaker—were held by women, and a number of former combatants were elected as constituency members. The new Government was inaugurated on 15 June.

On 15 June [meeting 5201], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/23 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the first general elections for the president and members of the House of Representatives of the Autonomous Region of Bougainville held from 20 May through 9 June 2005, and considers that they were competently and transparently conducted, as noted by the international observer team. The Council congratulates the Autonomous Bougainville Government and the people of Bougainville on this achievement, and takes note that these elections, which reflect the expressed will of the people of Bougainville, mark a significant and historical landmark in the Bougainville peace process and make it possible to enter into a new stage for further implementation of the Bougainville Peace Agreement.
> The Council further welcomes the inauguration of the Autonomous Bougainville Government in its full capacity, and affirms its continuing support for the people of Bougainville.
> The Council urges those who did not participate in the electoral process to respect the outcome of the elections and support without delay the Autonomous Bougainville Government in its peacebuilding efforts.
> The Council pays tribute to the efforts of the Government of Papua New Guinea and the Bougainville leaders for fully implementing the Bougainville Peace Agreement. The Council commends the support by the international community, in particular the significant contributions made by the countries in the region, partners in the donor community, as well as the United Nations. The Council also expresses its appreciation for the commendable role played by the Commonwealth and the Pacific Islands Forum in dispatching electoral observers for the smooth conduct of the elections.
> The Council notes with satisfaction that the performance of the United Nations Observer Mission in Bougainville, as well as that of its preceding United Nations Political Office in Bougainville, demonstrated that a small United Nations special political mission with a clearly defined mandate can make a critical contribution to a regional conflict resolution effort in an efficient and effective manner.
> The Council encourages the ongoing support and commitment by the international community to the efforts made by the Government of Papua New Guinea and the people of Bougainville in pursuit of their economic and social development as well as sustainable peace in the region.

Security Council consideration (July). On 6 July [meeting 5222], the Security Council was briefed by the Assistant Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Danilo Türk, on the main developments that had taken place in Bougainville since 7 April. Mr. Türk noted that UNOMB's mandate had been fully implemented. On 19 May, UNOMB informed the parties to the Bougainville Peace Agreement that the weapons disposal plan incorporated into the Agreement had been implemented. Of a total of 2,016 weapons kept in containers, 1,896 were destroyed. UNOMB collected and destroyed an additional 155 weapons, bringing the total to 2,051 weapons. It therefore determined that the parties had substantially complied with the implementation of the plan, paving the way for the holding of elections (see p. 454). The parties agreed that it would be up to the Autonomous Bougainville Government to address the issue of the remaining weapons that had not been placed in containers, or that had been stolen out of them during the implementation of phases II and III of the plan.

On 14 June, the parties to the Peace Agreement convened the final meeting of the Peace Process Consultative Committee. Having resolved that the objectives of the Committee under the Lincoln and Bougainville Peace Agreements had been achieved, the parties agreed to dissolve it. Relations between the national and Bougainville Governments would be managed through the permanent Joint Supervisory Body, which would supervise and check on the implementation of the autonomy arrangements. That and other mechanisms were in place to resolve any disputes that might emerge between the parties. The national and autonomous Governments intended to work together to address the challenges facing them through consultation and cooperation at the appropriate levels.

Following the completion of the weapons disposal plan and the implementation of the autonomous arrangements, there remained the third main pillar of the Peace Agreement—the holding of a referendum on Bougainville's political status 10 to 15 years in the future, which would include the choice of independence for Bougainville. Responsibility for the conduct of the referendum would be shared between the Bougainville and national Governments. In accordance with the Agreement and the Papua New Guinea Constitution, the final decision on the referendum would be left to the Papua New Guinea Parliament and to subsequent consultations with the Autonomous Bougainville Government.

In his inauguration speech, President Kabui indicated that his Government would start negotiations with the national Government and the Bougainville Copper Limited mining company on the transfer of the company's assets and prospecting authority to the Autonomous Bougainville Government. Given the sensitivity of the involvement of Bougainville Copper Limited in Bougainville, the Government might in the future hold wide consultations with the people on the potential resumption of exploration and mining operations.

The success of the elections and the unity of the newly formed Government provided a strong base from which to redesign the laws of the administration and region, improve service delivery and allow for economic development. The Bougainville administration was putting together a coherent development plan for the whole region, but continued support from the United Nations and other international actors would also be crucial in meeting the expectations of the people of Bougainville. UNDP was taking the lead in helping the administration to develop a donor coordination system, and other UN agencies were engaged in a range of activities.

The Papua New Guinea representative noted the challenges that still remained, namely the development of an economy capable of sustaining autonomy, provision of opportunities for individuals and communities to help themselves, promotion of good governance, and encouragement of ongoing reconciliation and mutual respect in the community. While there were still concerns about the continued existence of weapons in Bougainville, and the presence of Francis Ona and his supporters in the "no-go zone", it was recognized that peacebuilding had to be viewed as an ongoing process.

Tajikistan

In 2005, with the assistance of the United Nations Tajikistan Office of Peacebuilding (UNTOP), the Government of Tajikistan took further steps to consolidate the peace. In view of the important role being played by UNTOP and Tajikistan's continuing need for support in its post-conflict peacebuilding efforts, the Secretary-General announced, on 10 May [S/2005/323], his intention to continue the UNTOP activities for a further year, until 1 June 2006. On 18 May [S/2005/324] the Security Council took note of his intention.

UNTOP, established in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 315] following the withdrawal of the United Nations Mission of Observers in Tajikistan (UNMOT), continued in 2005 to facilitate national dialogue and reconciliation, assist in strengthening democratic institutions and conflict prevention mechanisms, promote the rule of law and build human rights capacity. At the recommendation of a UN Electoral Needs Assessment Mission, UNTOP developed and supervised the implementation of a technical assistance project for the parliamentary elections of February 2005, training more than 13,000 poll workers and 300 district election commissioners across all districts of the country, as well as 250 local media representatives. In other training activities, Tajik instructors were trained in conflict prevention and resolution mechanisms. To assist in the reform and transition of national law enforcement agencies to peacetime policing, UNTOP trained staff of the Ministry of the Interior in human rights standards, forensic techniques and modern practices in law enforcement.

Tibet

On 6 July [S/2005/462], the EU welcomed the fourth round of talks between the envoys of the Dalai Lama and members of the Chinese Government (Berne, Switzerland, 30 June–1 July). The EU strongly supported the continuation of dialogue and hoped to see serious negotiations leading to a peaceful, sustainable and mutually agreeable solution for Tibet.

United Arab Emirates-Iran

Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa

In a series of communications between 7 March and 20 September [S/2005/144, S/2005/274, S/2005/597], the League of Arab States (LAS) informed the Security Council President of the adoption of two decisions and one resolution denouncing the Iranian occupation of Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb and Abu Musa, and affirming the full sovereignty of the United Arab Emirates over the three islands. LAS also called upon the Secretary-General and Council President to maintain the issue among the matters of which the Security Council was seized until Iran ended its occupation of the islands.

In a series of letters transmitted between 16 March and 30 December [S/2005/189, S/2005/232, S/2005/300, S/2005/301, S/2005/468, S/2005/697, S/2005/851], Iran stated that the three islands were integral and eternal parts of the Iranian territory and rejected any claims to the contrary. It continued to emphasize the importance of negotiations between itself and the United Arab Emirates to improve bilateral relations and remove any misunderstanding between the two countries.

In other communications issued between March and September [A/59/761-S/2005/215, A/59/845-S/2005/386, A/60/388-S/2005/612], Bahrain transmitted to the Secretary-General statements made by the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council throughout the year, reiterating its support of the sovereignty of the United Arab Emirates over the three islands.

The United Arab Emirates, in a 3 May letter to the Secretary-General [S/2005/283], requested that the Security Council retain on its agenda for 2005 the item entitled "Letter dated 3 December 1971 from the Permanent Representatives of Algeria, Iraq, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council (S/10409)", concerning Iran's occupation of Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb, and Abu Musa, until a settlement of the dispute was achieved by direct peaceful means and negotiation or through recourse to the International Court of Justice.

Uzbekistan

On 25 May [A/59/817], Uzbekistan informed the Secretary-General of events that took place in the Andijan region on 12 and 13 May, in which 30 armed criminals attacked the patrol and sentry service and a military unit. Preliminary reports indicated that the attack was carried out by members of the Islamic group Akromiya, which was directly linked to the religious extremist organization, Hizb ut-Tahrir, whose activities were prohibited in many countries. Early investigation showed a possible link between the fighters and extremist organizations active in certain countries of the region, as well as terrorist groups that were hiding in Afghanistan.

Uzbekistan called upon UN Member States and Governing bodies to be restrained and responsible in evaluating the events in Andijan, and to wait for the results of the official investigation. On 23 May, the Uzbek Parliament set up an independent parliamentary commission to conduct a comprehensive investigation of the circumstances connected with the events in Andijan and an in-depth analysis, determination of the reasons and conditions which led to the tragic events, conduct a comprehensive analysis and legal assessment of the actions by the Government of Uzbekistan and the security structures and inform the Parliament and the public about the course of the investigation.

On 7 November [A/C.3/60/8], Uzbekistan informed the Secretary-General of measures being taken to liberalize the court-judicial system.

On 8 November [S/2005/750], the EU expressed alarm at reports of the detention and harassment of journalists and others, including human rights defenders, who had questioned the Uzbek authorities' version of events in Andijan, and called on the Uzbek Government to discontinue such practices. On 18 November [S/2005/749], the EU expressed concern about the trial of 15 individuals in relation to the 12 and 13 May events in Andijan. The EU said that it had serious doubts about the credibility of the case presented by the prosecution, and believed that the defence procedures were inadequate to ensure a fair trial. The EU continued to place primary importance on a credible and transparent independent international inquiry into the events of 12 and 13 May, and welcomed an opportunity to discuss its concerns with the Uzbek Government.

In a 9 December response [A/60/587-S/2005/778], Uzbekistan called the EU's comments unfair and biased. The Supreme Court of Uzbekistan stated that the judicial proceedings relating to the 15 individuals accused of committing terrorist acts in Andijan in May were conducted in accordance with Uzbek legislation, which itself complied with the standards and requirements of international law. Also on 14 December [A/60/590-S/2005/787], Uzbekistan stated that the EU 8 November statement bore no relation to the facts.

Regional meetings

On 11 March [A/59/741-S/2005/172], Kazakhstan transmitted to the Secretary-General a joint communiqué of the meeting of the Council of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) (Astana, Kazakhstan, 25 February). At the meeting, representatives from China, Kazakhstan, the Kyrgyz Republic, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan and Uzbekistan discussed the broadening of cooperation and international questions of mutual concern.

On 13 July [A/60/129], Kazakhstan submitted to the Secretary-General a declaration by SCO Heads of State (Astana, Kazakhstan, 5 June), noting that the organization was expanding multilateral cooperation among its member States and was actively cooperating with other international organizations and countries.

Following the Ministerial Regional Meeting on the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in Asia and the Pacific (Jakarta, Indonesia, 3-5 August), Indonesia transmitted to the Secretary-General and the General Assembly President the text of the Jakarta Declaration on MDGs in Asia and the Pacific: the Way Forward 2015 [A/60/313], in which countries in the region strengthened their commitment and reaffirmed their solidarity to achieving the MDGs by 2015.

Chapter V

Europe and the Mediterranean

In 2005, the restoration of peace and stability in the post-conflict countries of Europe and the Mediterranean gained momentum as the advances made in re-establishing their institutions and social and economic infrastructure were further consolidated. However, many political issues and situations remained unresolved.

Bosnia and Herzegovina, with the assistance of the international community, led by the European Union (EU), continued to reform its institutions, allowing it to meet the requirements of the EU Stabilization and Association Process and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Partnership for Peace Programme, and thus move closer to full integration into Europe.

In Kosovo (Serbia and Montenegro), the United Nations continued to assist in building a modern, multi-ethnic society through the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK). Significant progress was made by the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government in implementing the standards established in 2002 that Kosovo had to attain, despite some delays and setbacks. That allowed UNMIK to further transfer authority to those institutions, including police and justice responsibilities to the new ministries of interior and justice. In May, the Secretary-General appointed a Special Envoy to assess whether the conditions were right to begin the political process for determining Kosovo's future status. Based on that review and the Secretary-General's recommendation, the Security Council decided, on 24 October, to launch that process. Advances were also made in normalizing relations between the authorities in Pristina (Kosovo's capital) and Belgrade (Serbia and Montenegro).

Renewed efforts were made to end the stalemate in the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process. Senior officials of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (France, Germany, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States) tried to get the two parties to restart dialogue on the basis of the 2001 Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgian Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership). That initiative was boosted when the discussions on security matters led to the signing of a protocol and adoption of measures to strengthen the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces (Moscow Agreement). However, the complex political situations between the two sides prevailed, as evidenced by Georgia's call for the withdrawal of the security forces of the Commonwealth of Independent States and for a UN-led international force.

No progress was made towards a settlement of the conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan over the Nagorny Karabakh region in Azerbaijan.

In the Mediterranean, the situation in Cyprus remained unresolved, following the failed 2004 peace efforts. The Secretary-General, having assessed the situation, determined that progress had been negligible between the Greek Cypriots and the Turkish Cypriots, and concluded that further clarifications were needed before negotiations could be resumed. He also reviewed the mandate and concept of operations of the United Nations Force in Cyprus.

The former Yugoslavia

UN operations

In 2005, the United Nations maintained one peacekeeping mission in the territories of the former Yugoslavia. Through the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo, it continued efforts to restore peace and stability to the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo. Peace activities in Bosnia and Herzegovina were conducted by the European Union, through the European Union Police Mission and the European Union Force.

Financial status and liquidation of closed peacekeeping operations

UNMIBH

In March [A/59/751], the Secretary-General submitted the final performance report on the budget of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (UNMIBH), which ended on 31 December 2002, in which he recommended that the General Assembly retain the cash balance of $7,182,000 available in the UNMIBH special account as at 30 June 2004.

The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in its 18 April report [A/59/736/Add.8], recommended approval of the Secretary-General's recommendations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/832], adopted resolution 59/302 without vote [agenda item 125].

Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General contained in paragraph 13 of his report and his intention to report to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the matter;

2. Also takes note of the status of outstanding contributions to the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina as at 15 April 2005 in the amount of 27.9 million United States dollars, representing some 3 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only one hundred and fifteen Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Endorses the conclusions and recommendation contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

5. Decides to postpone the return of the net cash balance of 7,182,000 dollars available as at 30 June 2004 in the Special Account for the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

6. Also decides that updated information on the financial position of the Mission shall be included in the report to be considered by the General Assembly at its sixtieth session on the updated position of closed peacekeeping missions under the agenda item entitled "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peacekeeping operations";

7. Further decides that the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina" shall be deleted from its agenda.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

In 2005, efforts to assist the two entities comprising the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina—the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina (where mainly Bosnian Muslims (Bosniacs) and Bosnian Croats resided) and Republika Srpska (where mostly Bosnian Serbs resided)—in implementing the 1995 General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (the Peace Agreement) [YUN 1995, p. 544] were conducted by the European Union (EU). Those efforts were accomplished through the activities of the Office of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina, responsible for the Agreement's civilian aspects [YUN 1996, p. 293], and the European Union Police Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina (EUPM). The EU Force (EUFOR) mission executed the responsibilities for the Agreement's military aspects, which were transferred to it by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in December 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 401]. The Peace Implementation Council (PIC) and its Steering Board continued to oversee and facilitate the Agreement's implementation.

The High Representative reported on the progress made in the implementation process and related political developments in the country during the year in the context of his mission implementation plan, which set out a number of core tasks to be accomplished [YUN 2003, p. 401]. Bosnia and Herzegovina undertook a number of reforms, particularly in areas of the rule of law, refugee return, police restructuring, defence reform and economic development, in accordance with European standards, and also continued to work towards full integration into Europe through the EU Stabilization and Association process and NATO's Partnership for Peace requirements. Having made sufficient progress in completing legislative and other requirements of the European Commission feasibility study [ibid., p. 402], the European Council launched formal talks on a stabilization and association agreement on 25 November.

Implementation of Peace Agreement

Civilian aspects

The civilian aspects of the 1995 Peace Agreement entailed a wide range of activities, including humanitarian aid, infrastructure rehabilitation, establishment of political and constitutional institutions, promoting respect for human rights and the holding of free and fair elections. The High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement, who chaired the PIC Steering Board and other key implementation bodies, was the final authority with regard to implementing the civilian aspects of the Peace Agreement [YUN 1995, p. 547]. The reports on EUPM activities were submitted by the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy, Javier Solana, to the Security Council President through the UN Secretary-General.

Office of the High Representative

Reports of High Representative. The High Representative, Lord Paddy Ashdown (United Kingdom), reported to the Security Council through the Secretary-General on the peace implementation process for the periods 1 January to 30 June 2005 [S/2005/706] and 1 July 2005 to 31 January 2006 [S/2006/75], describing progress in the implementation of the Peace Agreement's civilian aspects. (For details on specific topics in the report, see below).

The Council, on 23 March, considered the High Representative's report covering the latter half of 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 392] and, on 15 November, his report covering the first half of 2005.

On 29 December [S/2006/40], Lord Ashdown informed the Council, through the Secretary-General, that the PIC Steering Board had chosen Dr. Christian Schwarz-Schilling (Germany) to succeed him as the High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina, effective 31 January 2006.

Mission implementation plan

The High Representative, in his briefing to the Security Council on 23 March [meeting 5147], during consideration of his report covering the latter half of 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 392], stated that Republika Srpska had, for the first time in 10 years, transferred five of the major war crimes indictees to the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) (see p. 1387), including General Vinko Pandurevic, the third most senior indictee. However, that did not constitute the full cooperation required by ICTY and the international community. The process would not end until Radovan Karadzic, Ratko Mladic and all the other main indictees were in custody.

In terms of the country's future within the EU and NATO, cooperation with ICTY was non-negotiable. The country's application to join NATO's Partnership for Peace Programme was due to be reconsidered again in April and the EU had made it clear that it hoped to decide on Bosnia and Herzegovina's readiness to begin negotiations on a stabilization and association process in May.

The European Union Enlargement Commissioner, Olli Rehn, indicated to Bosnia and Herzegovina that, in addition to cooperation with ICTY, the other cardinal issue on which progress was expected was police restructuring. In January, the Police Restructuring Commission presented its recommendations, which included the establishment of a single State-level police structure, based on operational efficiency, rather than on political control.

Progress in other areas of reform included the opening in March of the new War Crimes Chamber and maximum security prison facilities, the full operationalization of the Taxation Authority in January, and the assumption of defence reform by NATO, with the aim of creating a single State-wide Ministry of Defence. However, the financial sustainability of Bosnia and Herzegovina's government structures was cause for concern, in the face of massive and unsustainable deficits, signalling the need for functional reform to increase governance efficiency.

In his November report [S/2005/706], the High Representative stated that, since the introduction of the first mission implementation plan in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 401], two core tasks had been completed (ensuring that extreme nationalists, war criminals and their organized criminal networks could not reverse peace implementation; and promoting the sustainable return of refugees and displaced persons), leaving four ongoing (entrenching the rule of law; reforming the economy; institution-building; and defence reform).

To accelerate further progress in the mission implementation plan, the Office of the High Representative instituted a new system whereby a detailed action plan was commissioned for each outstanding item, outlining a critical path to the item's completion, and identification of those responsible for taking action.

In a later report [S/2006/75], the High Representative stated that the action planning process helped to clear the accumulated backlog in the mission implementation plan. Of the outstanding rule of law items, all but one were tied to the police restructuring process, which would likely stretch into early 2008, while those related to economic reform and institution-building included a broad range of reform priorities.

Civil affairs

The High Representative, in his reports covering 1 January to 30 June [S/2005/706] and from 1 July to 31 December [S/2006/75], stated that Bosnia and Herzegovina was the only country in the region without a contractual relationship with the EU. The EU Special Representative had explained to the country's authorities and population the tough conditions they had to meet, including improved cooperation with ICTY, respect for the Constitutional Charter, police restructuring and public broadcast reform, in order to move ahead on the EU stabilization and association agreement. They also had to put in place laws ensuring the legal and technical framework of the Indirect Taxation Authority, if the value added tax were to be introduced on time in January 2006.

In other areas, the Defence Reform Commission reached final agreement on the abolition of the entity armies and defence ministries and the model for an integrated and democratically controlled army at the State level, enabling Bosnia and Herzegovina to participate in NATO's Partnership for Peace Programme and its full membership in that organization.

Under the reforms adopted by the entity parliaments, entities would cede their remaining defence responsibilities to the State on 1 January 2006. The phased implementation of the reforms was expected to take two years to complete, and a team of experts, assisted by NATO, would coordinate the transition.

Meanwhile, the political situation remained volatile. In response to measures taken by the High Representative, the United States and EUFOR, following NATO's refusal in December 2004 to admit Bosnia and Herzegovina to the Partnership for Peace Programme, the Republika Srpska government and two of the four Serb members of the Council of Ministers resigned in protest. By mid-February, a new government was formed in Banja Luka, with all State-level ministers agreeing to remain in their positions. In April, there was further instability following the indictments of a number of political figures, particularly Dragan Cavic, the Croat member of the State Presidency, and Branko Dokic, the State Transport Minister. On the insistence of the High Representative, Dokic resigned his post but Cavic was removed from office. The Parliamentary Assembly elected the Croat National Union candidate, Ivo Miro Jovic, to replace Cavic, who was subsequently elected president of the main Croat nationalist party.

The political climate was also affected by the long-running failure of the Council of Ministers to agree on the appointment of the head of the State Investigation and Protection Agency. The decision by the High Representative to appoint the best-qualified candidate, a Serb applicant, rather than the Croat, backed by most of the Ministers, led to further resignations.

By the end of the year, the Bosnia and Herzegovina governments had agreed on and enacted reforms in a number of fields, including the rule of law, human rights, taxation, competition, transport, narcotics control, the information society and the media. The major achievement regarding the rule of law was the agreement on police restructuring, which provided for the legislative and budgetary competences for all police matters to be vested at the State level; no political interference with operational policing; and for the determination of functional local police areas using technical policing criteria in areas where operational command was exercised at the local level. The Directorate for Police Restructuring Implementation was established on 8 December and its steering and executive boards were appointed on 29 December.

Cooperation between the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities and ICTY was enhanced. Of the 18 fugitives wanted by ICTY at the beginning of 2005, only four remained at large, including the two most wanted indictees, Radovan Karadic and Ratko Mladic.

Progress continued towards the unification of Mostar city's administration. Formerly ethnically divided institutions were unified, civil service appointments made in line with the new civil service law, a unified city budget passed and efforts made to recover uncollected revenues inherited from former city municipalities. The long-stalled plan to move several Federation government ministries from Sarajevo to Mostar also gained momentum. The Mostar Implementation Unit completed its mandate and handed over responsibility for supporting and monitoring the finalization of outstanding unification tasks to the Office of the High Representative.

The Brcko District of Bosnia and Herzegovina celebrated its fifth anniversary in March, with its first popularly elected assembly and government in place. Only a few items stemming from the 1999 Final Arbitral Award of the Brcko Arbitral Tribunal [YUN 1999, p. 324] remained to be completed, the most important of which was the elimination of the residual legal traces of the former Inter-Entity Boundary Line in the District, which signalled that the laws and regulations inherited from the two entities and the three former municipalities had been harmonized. Efforts continued to put relations between the State and the Brcko District on a firm footing. In November, an agreement was signed between Bosnia and Herzegovina's Council of Ministers and the Brcko government to open a Brcko District office within the Council of Ministers, ensuring that the District had appropriate representation at the State level.

Judicial reform

The Office of the High Representative continued to assist in strengthening the capacity of the Bosnia and Herzegovina Court. It oversaw the transfer of almost all the legal staff from its Rule of Law Department to the Court. The High Representative indicated that, since Bosnia and Herzegovina currently had laws and legal institutions necessary to inculcate and maintain the rule of law, his Office's Rule of Law Department, as well as its Anti-Crime and Corruption Unit closed at the end of 2005. The latter transferred its files to the requisite local authorities.

Emphasis was also placed on strengthening the capacity of local prosecutors at the district and cantonal levels. The Office completed a survey of criminal and civil asset forfeiture laws to support the Ministry of Justice in dealing with the proceeds of crime.

Economic reforms

The High Representative reported that the Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities took significant steps towards increasing intergovernmental coordination on fiscal matters. On 11 February, they launched the Working Group on Fiscal Sustainability to advise on and make policy recommendations for achieving significant savings at all levels of government. Also, on 14 May, the State and entities established the Bosnia and Herzegovina Fiscal Council, one of whose main tasks was to ensure that the country's consolidated budget included funding for its security institutions and its EU aspirations. In June, the Parliamentary Assembly passed the law on railways. Entity legislation enabling the registration of businesses was also passed.

The overall macroeconomic situation remained positive, with growth in gross domestic product reaching 5.7 per cent, which was among the highest in the region. Industrial production rebounded, but agricultural reform lagged as the country still lacked a coherent agricultural policy. In that regard, the Office of the High Representative recommended that a working group responsible for implementing related EU recommendations be established.

Despite some individual successes during the first half of the year, the overall privatization effort remained lackluster, compounded by fractured administrative responsibility for privatization, especially in the Federation.

Public administration reform

All the outstanding European Commission-funded "functional reviews" of the public sector in Bosnia and Herzegovina were completed and their results publicized. The National Public Administration Reform Coordinator was charged with overseeing the follow-up. Public administration reform was also incorporated in the Bosnia and Herzegovina European Partnership programme. A number of amendments to the Civil Service Law aimed at enhancing staff quality and speeding up the recruitment process, prepared by the Office of the High Representative, in cooperation with the Bosnia and Herzegovina Civil Service Agency, were adopted in June. The Agency, which was working at full capacity since January 2005, reviewed 1,214 civil service posts in 77 Federation bodies.

Media development

On 1 February, the Council of Ministers adopted the draft public broadcasting system law, creating a common system made up of three multi-ethnic services, broadcasting in all three official languages (Bosnian, Croatian, Serbian). The Bosnia and Herzegovina House of Representatives passed the Law on Public Broadcasting Service on 18 May and the State parliament endorsed it on 21 December. To bring their own legislation in line with State law, the Federation and the Republika Srpska governments adopted draft legislation in mid-December, which was forwarded to their respective parliaments for adoption.

On 5 October, the Bosnia and Herzegovina Parliamentary Assembly passed the state framework legislation—the Law on the Radio and Television System of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Relations with other countries

While relations between Bosnia and Herzegovina and its neighbours remained cordial overall, some key peace implementation issues remained unresolved. The country's borders with both Croatia and Serbia and Montenegro were still undefined by treaty, and access to Croatia's Adriatic port of Ploce remained unsettled. The High Representative asked the PIC Steering Board for permission to remove those issues from the mission implementation plan and that they be dealt with bilaterally with the countries concerned. However, many Bosnia and Herzegovina citizens were also citizens of Croatia or Serbia and Montenegro and the constitutional provisions of those countries on the extradition of their citizens meant that the regional battle against organized crime and the pursuit of war criminals not indicted by ICTY were both impeded.

The issue of the final status of the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro (see p. 467) had already had some effect in the country. In June, Serbia and Montenegro's Foreign Minister stated that independence for Kosovo would inevitably raise questions about the status of Republika Srpska within Bosnia and Herzegovina. That issue and the future of the State union of Serbia and Montenegro would likely dominate regional politics.

Security Council consideration (November). The Security Council, on 15 November [meeting 5306], considered recent developments in Bosnia and Herzegovina's path to European Union integration. The High Representative, Lord Ashdown, said that the major obstacles to Bosnia and Herzegovina's Euro-Atlantic integration had been overcome. On 8 November, EU foreign ministers welcomed the European Commission's recommendation to commence drawing up a negotiating mandate for the country's Stabilization and Association Agreement, negotiations for which were expected to be approved on 21 November in Brussels, precisely 10 years after the signing of the Peace Agreement.

The EU, backed by the international community, especially the United States, made it clear that the remaining conditions for Bosnia and Herzegovina to begin stabilization talks were non-negotiable. While the aspiration of EU membership had been a powerful draw, it had taken consistent international pressure over the past 10 years to bring the country closer to the EU and NATO. This was clearly evident in cooperation with ICTY. However, while the transfer of 12 indictees in 2005 to ICTY was a huge step forward, another anniversary of the massacre at Srebrenica [YUN 1995, p. 529] had passed without the transfer of Radovan Karadzic and Ratko Mladic. The opening of the Stabilization and Association Agreement negotiations demonstrated that the reform process was moving from the peace implementation phase to that of achieving European standards.

European Union missions in Bosnia and Herzegovina

EUPM

Report of EU Secretary-General. As invited by the Security Council in presidential statement S/PRST/2002/33 [YUN 2002, p. 363], EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy reported, through the UN Secretary-General, on the activities of the EU Police Mission (EUPM) covering the period 1 January to 31 December [S/2006/125].

The report stated that in 2005, considerable progress was made in setting up the State Investigation and Protection Agency. EUPM monitored and advised on the selection and recruitment process and assisted the Agency in developing its human resources strategy. The structure of the State Border Service (SBS) was brought in line with the other State-level agencies, with clearer procedures and powers given to police officers on the border. EUPM also helped SBS in management training and worked to solve the issue of the failure by the Council of Ministers to appoint a Director of the Service, as that affected implementation of EUPM projects. Following the intervention of the High Representative, Vinko Dumancic was appointed Director. In September, the European Commission and Bosnia and Herzegovina signed a memorandum of understanding on the funding of the new SBS headquarters near Sarajevo airport.

The Police Restructuring Commission presented its report to the High Representative/EU Special Representative in January, with recommendations on the establishment of a single police structure. In October, the Republika Srpska National Assembly adopted the Agreement on Police Restructuring, thus removing one of the last obstacles for Bosnia and Herzegovina to start negotiations with the EU on the Stabilization and Association Agreement. EUPM and the Office of the High Representative/EU Special Representative also developed a framework for the establishment of the Directorate for Implementation of Police Restructuring.

In July, the Ministry of Security presented to the Council of Ministers a strategic agreement with Europol (European Police Office) to facilitate cooperation between EU members and Bosnia and Herzegovina in preventing and combating international crime. EUPM supported efforts to make the nationwide intelligence system more effective, by ensuring that it operated across all entities and police agencies in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

To help achieve financial viability and sustainability of the local police, EUPM also made progress in developing local capacity regarding salary scales, budget planning for organizational units, revising maintenance costs of premises, rationalization of the use of police equipment, control over inventories and payrolls, and general budget implementation and management.

As at 31 December, the Mission numbered 801 personnel, of whom 410 were seconded police officers, 61 international civilians and 330 national staff. The European Council agreed on 24 November to continue EUPM for another two years from 1 January 2006 to 31 December 2007, with a refocus on the coordination of policing efforts under the European security and defence policy in the fight against organized crime, in addition to helping establish in Bosnia and Herzegovina a sustainable, professional and multi-ethnic police service. All 25 EU member States, together with nine non-EU contributing States, participated in the Mission in 2005. Brigadier General Vincenzo Coppola (Italy) was appointed Head of Mission/Police Commissioner from January 2006 to suc-

Police certification

The European Commission for Democracy through Law (the "Venice Commission"), in a 25 October opinion on a possible solution to the issue of decertification of police officers in Bosnia and Herzegovina, concluded that the International Police Task Force (IPTF) responsible for the police certification process instituted in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 332], while implementing the vetting procedure of local police officers, failed to provide the relevant police officers with a public, adversarial, impartial and independent examination of their rights. The review mechanism also appeared to be abortive for the most part. The Venice Commission, therefore, recommended that the United Nations review the decisions that denied certification, and those that had been challenged before domestic authorities after the end of 2002, when IPTF's mission ended.

EUFOR

The EU Force (EUFOR) mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina executed the military aspects of the Peace Agreement as specified in annexes 1-A and 2, which were transferred to it by NATO in December 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 401]. Its activities were recorded in four reports covering the periods 2 December 2004 to 28 February 2005 [S/2005/226], 1 March to 31 May [S/2005/440], 1 June to 15 September [S/2005/698], and 16 September to 30 November [S/2006/12], submitted by the EU Secretary-General and High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the European Union, in accordance with resolution 1575(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 401].

As at 30 November, EUFOR's strength stood at 6,200 troops from 22 EU member States and 11 third countries, deployed in three multinational task forces throughout the country.

EUFOR continued to conduct multiple operations, including patrolling in sensitive and remote areas, local liaison and observation team activities, collection of illegal weapons and promoting cooperation with the local authorities to ensure compliance with the Peace Agreement. Routine liaison activities were conducted to assist and support capacity-building in the local police and other agencies. The EUFOR Integrated Police Unit assisted the State Border Service in preventing illegal activities along the borders and the unauthorized entry of people and goods into the country. EUFOR also carried out large-scale operations to assist Bosnia and Herzegovina authorities in cracking down on organized crime networks, including the smuggling of heroin, and human trafficking. Throughout the year, it conducted, in conjunction with appropriate authorities, operations to collect voluntarily surrendered illegal arms and ammunition under amnesty conditions, and when necessary, in more invasive operations. It also helped to maintain a safe and secure environment, especially during the observance of the tenth anniversary of the Srebrenica massacre, developed cooperation with local authorities and conducted well-coordinated operations on the ground.

On 21 November [meeting 5307], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1639 (2005). The draft [S/2005/727] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous relevant resolutions concerning the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia and the relevant statements by its President, including resolutions 1031(1995) of 15 December 1995, 1088(1996) of 12 December 1996, 1423(2002) of 12 July 2002, 1491(2003) of 11 July 2003, 1551(2004) of 9 July 2004 and 1575 (2004) of 22 November 2004,

Reaffirming its commitment to the political settlement of the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia, preserving the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States there within their internationally recognized borders,

Emphasizing its full support for the continued role in Bosnia and Herzegovina of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina,

Underlining its commitment to support the implementation of the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as the relevant decisions of the Peace Implementation Council,

Recalling all the agreements concerning the status of forces referred to in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, and reminding the parties of their obligation to continue to comply therewith,

Recalling also the provisions of its resolution 1551 (2004) concerning the provisional application of the status-of-forces agreements contained in appendix B to annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing its appreciation to the High Representative, the Commander and personnel of the multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force), the Senior Military Representative and personnel of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters Sarajevo, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the European Union and the personnel of other international organizations and agencies in Bosnia and Herzegovina for their contributions to the implementation of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing that a comprehensive and coordinated return of refugees and displaced persons throughout the region continues to be crucial to lasting peace,

Recalling the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council,

Recognizing that full implementation of the Peace Agreement is not yet complete, while paying tribute to the achievements of the authorities at State and entity level in Bosnia and Herzegovina and of the international community in the ten years since the signing of the Peace Agreement,

Emphasizing the importance of Bosnia and Herzegovina's progress towards Euro-Atlantic integration on the basis of the Peace Agreement, while recognizing the importance of Bosnia and Herzegovina's transition to a functional, reform-oriented, modern and democratic European country,

Taking note of the reports of the High Representative, including his latest report of 2 November 2005,

Determined to promote the peaceful resolution of the conflicts in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994 and the statement by its President of 9 February 2000,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

Taking note of the conclusions of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the European Union at their meeting held in Luxembourg on 13 June 2005 which refer to the requirement for the European Union Force to remain in Bosnia and Herzegovina beyond 2005, and confirm the intention of the European Union to take the steps necessary to that end,

Recalling the letters between the European Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization sent to the Security Council on 19 November 2004, on how those organizations will cooperate together in Bosnia and Herzegovina in which both organizations recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement,

Recalling also the confirmation by the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina, on behalf of Bosnia and Herzegovina, including its constituent entities, of the arrangements for the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters presence,

Welcoming the increased engagement of the European Union in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the continued engagement of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization,

Further welcoming tangible signs of Bosnia and Herzegovina's progress towards the European Union, and, in particular, the decision by the European Union to open negotiations with Bosnia and Herzegovina on a Stabilization and Association Agreement, and calling upon the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina to implement in full their undertakings, including on police reform, as part of that process,

Determining that the situation in the region continues to constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter,

1. Reaffirms once again its support for the General Framework Agreement for Peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the annexes thereto (collectively the "Peace Agreement"), as well as for the Dayton Agreement on Implementing the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina of 10 November 1995, and calls upon the parties to comply strictly with their obligations under those Agreements;

2. Reiterates that the primary responsibility for the further successful implementation of the Peace Agreement lies with the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina themselves and that the continued willingness of the international community and major donors to assume the political, military and economic burden of implementation and reconstruction efforts will be determined by the compliance and active participation by all the authorities in Bosnia and Herzegovina in implementing the Peace Agreement and rebuilding a civil society, in particular in full cooperation with the International Tribunal for the Prosecution of Persons Responsible for Serious Violations of International Humanitarian Law Committed in the Territory of the Former Yugoslavia since 1991, in strengthening joint institutions, which foster the building of a fully functioning self-sustaining State able to integrate itself into the European structures, and in facilitating returns of refugees and displaced persons;

3. Reminds the parties once again that, in accordance with the Peace Agreement, they have committed themselves to cooperate fully with all entities involved in the implementation of this peace settlement, as described in the Peace Agreement, or which are otherwise authorized by the Security Council, including the International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia, as it carries out its responsibilities for dispensing justice impartially, and underlines the fact that full cooperation by States and entities with the Tribunal includes, inter alia, the surrender for trial or apprehension of all persons indicted by the Tribunal and the provision of information to assist in Tribunal investigations;

4. Emphasizes its full support for the continued role of the High Representative for the Implementation of the Peace Agreement on Bosnia and Herzegovina in monitoring the implementation of the Peace Agreement and giving guidance to and coordinating the activities of the civilian organizations and agencies involved in assisting the parties to implement the Peace Agreement, and reaffirms that, under annex 10 of the Peace Agreement, the High Representative is the final authority in theatre regarding the interpretation of civilian implementation of the Peace Agreement and that, in case of dispute, he may give his interpretation and make recommendations, and make binding decisions as he judges necessary on issues as elaborated by the Peace Implementation Council in Bonn, Germany, on 9 and 10 December 1997;

5. Expresses its support for the declarations of the ministerial meetings of the Peace Implementation Council;

6. Reaffirms its intention to keep implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina under close review, taking into account the reports submitted pursuant to paragraphs 18 and 21 below, and any recommendations that those reports might include, and its readiness to consider the imposition of measures if any party fails significantly to meet its obligations under the Peace Agreement;

7. Recalls the support of the authorities of Bosnia and Herzegovina for the European Union Force and the continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence and their confirmation that both are the legal successors to the Stabilization Force for the fulfilment of their missions for the purposes of the Peace Agreement, its annexes and appendices and relevant Security Council resolutions and can take such actions as are required, including the use of force, to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement and relevant Council resolutions;

8. Pays tribute to those Member States which participated in the multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force) and in the continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, established in accordance with its resolution 1575(2004), and welcomes their willingness to assist the Parties to the Peace Agreement by continuing to deploy a multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force) and by maintaining a continued North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence;

9. Welcomes the intention of the European Union to maintain European Union military operation to Bosnia and Herzegovina from November 2005;

10. Authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union to establish for a further period of twelve months, starting from the date of adoption of the present resolution, a multinational stabilization force (the European Union Force) as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters presence in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of 19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

11. Welcomes the decision of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to continue to maintain a presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina in the form of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters in order to continue to assist in implementing the Peace Agreement in conjunction with the European Union Force, and authorizes the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to continue to maintain a North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters as a legal successor to the Stabilization Force under unified command and control, which will fulfil its missions in relation to the implementation of annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement in cooperation with the European Union Force in accordance with the arrangements agreed between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Union as communicated to the Security Council in their letters of 19 November 2004, which recognize that the European Union Force will have the main peace stabilization role under the military aspects of the Peace Agreement;

12. Reaffirms that the Peace Agreement and the provisions of its previous relevant resolutions shall apply to and in respect of both the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as they have applied to and in respect of the Stabilization Force and that, therefore, references in the Peace Agreement, in particular in annex 1-A and the appendices thereto, and in relevant resolutions to the Implementation Force and/or the Stabilization Force, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the North Atlantic Council shall be read as applying, as appropriate, to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, the European Union Force, the European Union and the Political and Security Committee and Council of the European Union, respectively;

13. Expresses its intention to consider the terms of further authorization as necessary in the light of developments in the implementation of the Peace Agreement and the situation in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

14. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above to take all necessary measures to effect the implementation of and to ensure compliance with annexes 1-A and 2 of the Peace Agreement, stresses that the parties shall continue to be held equally responsible for compliance with those annexes and shall be equally subject to such enforcement action by the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence as may be necessary to ensure implementation of those annexes and the protection of the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence;

15. Authorizes Member States to take all necessary measures, at the request of either the European Union Force or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters, in defence of the European Union Force or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, respectively, and to assist both organizations in carrying out their missions, and recognizes the right of both the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence to take all necessary measures to defend themselves from attack or threat of attack;

16. Authorizes the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above, in accordance with annex 1-A of the Peace Agreement, to take all necessary measures to ensure compliance with the rules and procedures governing command and control of airspace over Bosnia and Herzegovina with respect to all civilian and military air traffic;

17. Demands that the parties respect the security and freedom of movement of the European Union Force, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization presence, and other international personnel;

18. Requests the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the European Union and the Member States acting through or in cooperation with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to report to the Security Council on the activity of the European Union Force and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Headquarters presence, respectively, through the appropriate channels and at least at three-monthly intervals;

19. Invites all States, in particular those in the region, to continue to provide appropriate support and facilities, including transit facilities, for the Member States acting under paragraphs 10 and 11 above;

20. Reiterates its appreciation for the deployment by the European Union of its Police Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina since 1 January 2003;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to submit to the Security Council reports from the High Representative, in accordance with annex 10 of the Peace Agreement and the conclusions of the Peace Implementation Conference held in London on 4 and 5

December 1996, and later Peace Implementation Conferences, on the implementation of the Peace Agreement and in particular on compliance by the parties with their commitments under that Agreement;

22. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Serbia and Montenegro

In 2005, the United Nations continued to assist the authorities and people of the Kosovo province of Serbia and Montenegro in building a multi-ethnic society. The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) led efforts, along with the Kosovo authorities, in strengthening the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government, mainly the Kosovo Assembly and the Kosovo Government, and in transferring authority to those institutions, in accordance with the 2001 Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government [YUN 2001, p. 352]. It also monitored progress towards the fulfilment of the eight standards set out in the 2003 "standards for Kosovo" document [YUN 2003, p. 420], under which Kosovo was expected to develop stable democratic institutions under UNMIK administration before any decision could be made on its future status. The standards also included promoting human rights, establishing the rule of law, protecting minority rights, dialogue with Belgrade and the Kosovo Protection Corps (KPC).

For most of 2005, progress in strengthening Kosovo's fledgling institutions was inconsistent. Significant steps were taken to improve the security situation; however, implementation in the areas of the rule of law, protection of minority rights and return of internally displaced persons was slow. In March, the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) issued an indictment for the Prime Minister of Kosovo, Ramush Haradinaj, who resigned his post and voluntarily agreed to go to the Hague. He was succeeded by Bajram Kosumi.

Meanwhile, in September, UNMIK started working on six priority areas: continued implementation of the standards, a comprehensive reform of local government, improving security, building local capacity, maintaining a safe and secure environment and restructuring of the mission. It initiated informal, technical-level talks with the European Union (EU) and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) on contingency planning for their possible involvement in Kosovo following the determination of the province's future status. By the end of 2005, the Mission commenced the transfer of some of its police and justice responsibilities to the new ministries of interior and justice.

The United Nations continued to work towards the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], which set out the modalities for a political solution to the crisis in the Serbia and Montenegro province of Kosovo, and of resolutions 1160(1998) [YUN 1998, p. 369], 1199(1998) [ibid., p. 377], 1203(1998) [ibid., p. 382] and 1239 (1999) [YUN 1999, p. 349]. The civilian aspects of resolution 1244(1999) were being implemented by UNMIK and the military aspects by the international security presence (KFOR), led by NATO.

Report of Secretary-General (February). The Secretary-General, in his February report on UNMIK activities [S/2005/88], said that there had been encouraging and tangible progress in the commitment of the Provisional Institutions of Self-Government to the implementation of the "standards-before-status" policy. However, none of the eight standards had been completely fulfilled. The continued unwillingness of the Kosovo Serbs to engage in dialogue and support the implementation of the standards hampered the ability to move forward, although the participation of their leader in the decentralization working group on 24 January was encouraging. Meanwhile, the transition from the October 2004 elections [YUN 2004, p. 416] to the installation of the new coalition Government, headed by the Prime Minister of Kosovo, Ramush Haradinaj, showed growing political maturity. Agreement was reached on the distribution of chairmanships of the 10 new Assembly committees and the major opposition parties had committed themselves to playing an important role. Kosovo's President, Ibrahim Rugova, confirmed his respect for the Constitutional Framework by resigning as president of his party, the Democratic League of Kosovo (LDK.).

The security situation remained stable, with no serious inter-ethnic crime, especially against Kosovo Serbs, since June 2004. Although the security of minorities had improved since the violence of March 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 405], freedom of movement remained precarious and Kosovo Serbs, in particular, continued to consider themselves at risk. Their fears were fed by isolated incidents that were not always condemned or addressed by the local political leadership. The Government did not take sufficient action to punish ethnically targeted crimes, or put in place a system to monitor and censure violations of the language laws, or promote a culture of human rights and tolerance. The Provisional Institutions had yet to demonstrate their willingness to assume responsibility for the security of Kosovo Serbs and other communities. The reconstruction programme had not been completed, and many of the newly constructed houses remained unoccupied. Some municipalities delayed the drafting of return strategies, the appointment of return officers and other support measures, and none of them had finalized a development plan.

At the same time, most authorities in Belgrade were not supportive of Kosovo Serb participation in the Provisional Institutions, or in processes to address their special needs. The working group on direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade had not met since March 2004, mainly because of obstacles raised by Belgrade.

Some progress was achieved regarding the economy. The Government, with UNMIK, finalized the draft 2005 budget within tight macroeconomic constraints and established an independent tax and customs review board, a credit information centre and an insurance communication platform. The privatization process also continued. Given the increased capability of the Provisional Institutions in the economic area, the Special Representative announced further transfers of economic Competences.

The Secretary-General observed that, while noteworthy steps were taken in some areas, overall progress on the implementation of the standards remained uneven. Further sustained effort was required in areas of importance to minority communities, notwithstanding the lack of engagement by Kosovo Serbs in the Provisional Institutions. The Secretary-General called upon all parties to immediately follow through on their commitment to recommence participation in the direct dialogue working group on missing persons.

Security Council consideration (February). The Special Representative, in his briefing to the Security Council on 24 February [meeting 5130], reported that, while the security situation continued to improve, it remained fragile. He therefore welcomed NATO's decision to maintain KFOR's operational capabilities during the year. The new Government was proceeding with the devolution of authority to the local level, and agreed on five pilot municipalities, two of which were of particular interest to Kosovo Serbs. The next step would be to define the exact nature of additional municipal competences. At the central level, the transfer of competences from UNMIK to the Provisional Institutions accelerated. Three new ministries were established (Communities and Returns, Local Government Administration, Energy and Mining) and were becoming operational. To ensure that transferred competences could be exercised effectively, UNMIK encouraged donors to coordinate and better target their efforts to help build capacity across all areas. Economic stagnation remained a serious concern, with widespread unemployment and the absence of a social safety net. After 12 months of boycott by Belgrade, direct dialogue between Pristina and Belgrade was about to resume. The working group on missing persons was scheduled to meet on 10 March. It was hoped that recent positive signals from Belgrade would result in an intensification of direct dialogue.

The Special Representative informed that, following his next technical assessment of the implementation of standards, a comprehensive review of those standards was planned for mid-2005 (see below). Should that review conclude that sufficient progress had been made, the international community should be prepared to embark on the process leading to status talks. There was broad agreement on a clear way forward and a clear timetable that could lead to negotiations on final status in the second half of 2005.

Communications. The EU Presidency, in a 10 March statement [S/2005/200], noted the indictment by ICTY (see p. 1388) of Kosovo's Prime Minister, Ramush Haradinaj, and welcomed his decision to resign his post and go voluntarily to The Hague. It called on Kosovo's political forces to form as quickly as possible a new government determined to continue implementation of the standards set by the United Nations. In a further statement of 16 March [S/2005/201], the EU welcomed the increasing number of voluntary surrenders and transfer of indictees from Serbia and Montenegro, including Kosovo, and from Bosnia and Herzegovina to ICTY, a trend that should lead to all indictees being brought before the Tribunal. It repeated that the Governments of the region bore the key responsibility in that process and their cooperation with ICTY was essential for further progress towards closer EU relations.

Serbia and Montenegro, on 18 May [S/2005/329], drew attention to the fact that, on 26 April, without consultation, UNMIK and Germany, despite the bilateral Readmission Agreement between Germany and Serbia and Montenegro, which provided that the displaced non-Albanian population would not be forcibly repatriated to Kosovo and Metohija before security and safety standards were met, signed a bilateral agreement stipulating conditions for the deportation of Askalias, Egyptians and Roma from Germany to Kosovo and Metohija. Serbia and Montenegro, while welcoming all opportunities for the return of displaced persons, was concerned over attempts to force displaced non-Albanians, mostly Roma, to return to Kosovo and Metohija without their consent. Serbia and Montenegro urged UNMIK to begin carrying out its international obligations and thus enable all citizens of Kosovo and Metohija to enjoy international legal protection.

Report of Secretary-General (May). The Secretary-General, in his May report [S/2005/335], said that the smooth transition to a new Government led by Prime Minister Bajram Kosumi, following Mr. Haradinaj's resignation, was accompanied by a renewed commitment to carry out the standards implementation programme of the previous Government. The reconfigured coalition of LDK and the Alliance for the Future of Kosovo (AAK) also emphasized and focused on those standards relating to sustainable multi-ethnicity. However, tensions between the governing and opposition parties intensified, as the latter sharpened their criticism of the Kosovo Assembly, alleging repeated violations of Assembly rules to stifle open debate, and walking out of Assembly proceedings on a number of occasions. The Special Representative urged them to work towards Kosovo-wide consensus on issues vital to the territory's future. Kosovo Serb participation in the political process remained low, with the only top central-level government position held by a Kosovo Serb being that of Minister of Returns and Communities. However, minority employment was rising in central Provisional Institutions amidst expanded recruitment activity.

Significant progress was made on the issue of cultural heritage, with the signing by representatives of the Serbian Orthodox Church and the Provisional Institutions of a new memorandum of understanding on the reconstruction of Serbian Orthodox religious sites damaged during the March 2004 riots [YUN 2004, p. 405]. Efforts by the international community in the area of restoration and reconstruction of cultural heritage in Kosovo, including through a donor conference (Paris, France, 13 May), were advanced. Local government reform was further delayed, as the major opposition parties continued to oppose the government-approved work programme for that purpose. Improvements in freedom of movement and a diminishing reliance of Kosovo minorities on escorts when travelling across majority areas were encouraging. KFOR continued to dismantle units providing static protection of designated sites.

The Secretary-General welcomed the offer by Serbian President, Boris Tadic, to meet with Kosovo's President Ibrahim Rugova, and the expressed intention of their respective Prime Ministers to also meet. He was encouraged by the resumption of direct dialogue on practical matters between Pristina and Belgrade. He believed that a comprehensive review of the situation in Kosovo should be initiated and, in that regard, he intended to appoint a Special Envoy to conduct that review.

Security Council consideration. In his briefing to the Council on 27 May [meeting 5188], the Special Representative reported that, in order to manage tension between political parties, and in view of the critical period ahead for Kosovo and the significant political issues to be discussed, party leaders had agreed to his proposal to come together in a forum to enhance constructive dialogue and ensure the maximum possible consensus on critical issues. While regretting that, after 15 months, there was no clear signal from Belgrade to the Kosovo Serbs to participate in the Provisional Institutions, he believed that progress in Kosovo would continue even without meaningful participation by the Kosovo Serbs, but progress in establishing a fully multi-ethnic Kosovo and integrating all communities would be limited.

Comprehensive review of policies and practices

Following the announcement in his May report on UNMIK (see above) to appoint a Special Envoy to initiate a comprehensive review of the situation in Kosovo, in keeping with Security Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353] and relevant presidential statements, the Secretary-General informed the Council President on 27 May [S/2005/364] of the appointment of Ambassador Kai Eide (Norway) to undertake that assessment. The review would assess the current situation and conditions for the next steps in the political process, looking at actual political realities and the formal preconditions for launching the future status process. The Council noted the Secretary-General's intention on 2 June [S/2005/365].

In his report [S/2005/635], transmitted to the Council by the Secretary-General in October, Ambassador Eide said that, following a period of political stagnation and frustration, Kosovo had entered a new dynamic phase of development. Standards implementation, although uneven, had made progress in developing new institutional frameworks. The institutional vacuum that existed after the end of the conflict in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 342] was replaced by a comprehensive set of institutions. Much progress was also made in the development of a sustainable legal framework. Meanwhile, Kosovo Serbs remained outside the central political institutions, maintaining parallel structures for health and educational services out of fear that they would become a decoration to any central-level political institution. The Kosovo Albanians had done little to dispel that fear.

The current economic situation remained bleak. Unemployment was high and poverty widespread, compounded by the lack of public income and an antiquated energy sector. The privatization process, while it could have a positive impact on Kosovo's economy—as many of the socially owned enterprises had been idle—could lead to discrimination in employment along ethnic lines.

The rule of law was hampered by a lack of ability and readiness to enforce legislation at all levels. Although the Kosovo Police Service (KPS) was gradually taking on new and more demanding tasks, crimes of a more serious nature or with ethnic dimensions remained difficult for it to address. The Kosovo justice system was the weakest of the institutions, with an increasing backlog of thousands of civil cases. While organized crime and corruption were the biggest threats to the stability and sustainability of institutions, the Government had not taken the administrative and legislative action to fight them. The Special Envoy noted that, given the weakness of the police and judiciary, further transfer of competences in those areas should be considered with great caution, and the continued presence of international police with executive powers in sensitive areas was still needed. The current reduction in the number of international judges and prosecutors was premature and should be urgently reconsidered.

The overall security situation was stable, yet fragile. Low-level inter-ethnic violence and incidents were frequently unreported. The situation with regard to founding a multi-ethnic society was grim. Property rights were neither respected nor ensured, and a great number of agricultural and commercial properties remained illegally occupied, representing an obstacle to the return process and sustainable livelihoods. Meanwhile, the overall return process had virtually come to a halt, as the general atmosphere in many areas was not conducive to return. The process was further hampered by the fact that assistance was only provided to those returning to their home of origin. The continued existence of displaced persons camps inside Kosovo remained a sore point for the governing structures and for the international community, especially the plight of Roma camps in Plementina and Zitkovac.

The Special Envoy concluded that the time had come to commence the process of addressing Kosovo's future status, as postponing it was unlikely to lead to further tangible results in standards implementation. There was a shared expectation in Kosovo and Belgrade that the future status process would commence soon. However, all sides needed clarity with regard to Kosovo's future status: the Kosovo Albanians needed greater clarity on the framework of Kosovo's political and economic development, while the Kosovo Serbs needed clarity to make informed decisions about their future lives. For Belgrade, determining Kosovo's future status would remove an important source of internal political instability and facilitate the realization of Serbia's European perspective. The process needed to take place while the international community was still present in sufficient strength in Kosovo and could work to bring minority communities into the process. In that regard, Kosovo Serbs would have to be party to the process and mechanisms found to include the smaller communities, as well as neighbouring States, to ensure regional stability. The demarcation of the border with The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia would be of particular significance and should be resolved before the process ended.

Kosovo's future status process had to move forward with caution, with all parties brought together and kept together throughout the process, and with a clear and common agenda. The end result should be stable and sustainable, with no artificial deadlines. Direct talks between Belgrade and Pristina on decentralization and cultural and religious matters would be essential elements of any future status process and would serve as a confidence-building measure.

The international community, in particular the EU, would have to play a prominent role in Kosovo, along with the continued presence of NATO and the involvement of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE). With the United Nations eventually stepping down from its current role, a High Representative or a similar arrangement would have to be considered, firmly anchored in the EU. A road map for integration into international structures would provide Kosovo with real prospects for the future, while Belgrade would need incentives for integration into Euro-Atlantic cooperation frameworks.

The Secretary-General, in his letter transmitting the Special Envoy's report, said that he accepted its conclusion and intended to appoint a Special Envoy to lead the future status process.

Security Council consideration. The Council met on 24 October [meeting 5289] to consider the report on the comprehensive review. In introducing the results of his work, the Special Envoy said that he supported the commencement of the status process because it was important to keep the political process from stagnating. Furthermore, all would benefit from clarity on the status issue and the commencement of the process would give enhanced leverage to the further implementation of standards.

The Special Representative and Head of UNMIK, in his briefing to the Council, said that the start of the status process would be a galvanizing moment in Kosovo. The resolution of Kosovo's status could have only a positive effect on the wider region in terms of political stability and economic growth. In any case, continuing the status quo was not a viable option. However, there was much work to be done outside the status talks as they proceeded.

With that in mind, UNMIK had identified six priority areas for its work in the coming months: continuing with the implementation of standards, especially in the key areas of movement, returns and the economy; supporting the Provisional Institutions in pursuing comprehensive local government reform; pursuing a comprehensive security agenda, including the transfer of competences from UNMIK to the new Provisional Ministries of Public Order and Justice by the end of 2005; strengthening capacity-building to ensure that, regardless of the outcome of status talks, Kosovo's institutions would be fully capable of taking on their future responsibilities; continuing UNMIK's restructuring, with a view to having an optimal set-up throughout the status process, while cooperating with international partners to develop a phased and well-managed transition to eventual future arrangements; and ensuring the maintenance of a safe and secure environment for everyone in Kosovo.

Serbia and Montenegro's Prime Minister, Vojislav Kostunica, emphasized to the Council his country's preparedness to assume its share of responsibility in resolving the issue of Kosovo and Metohija. It was committed to a compromise solution and was willing to ensure substantial autonomy for the province as part of the State of Serbia and Montenegro. The future status process would have the best likelihood of success if it took the form of direct talks between the two sides, mediated by the Special Envoy.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

On 24 October [meeting 5290], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/51 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General's standards review envoy, Mr. Kai Eide, on the comprehensive review of the implementation of standards, as well as of the overall situation in and relating to Kosovo, Serbia and Montenegro, forwarded by the Secretary-General on 7 October 2005. The Council pays tribute to Mr. Eide's work in compiling his important report.
> The Council recalls the report of the Secretary-General of 23 May 2005 in which he initiated the comprehensive review conducted by Mr. Eide. In the light of the findings in Mr Eide's report, the Council stresses that further, more sustained progress is required, and that the implementation of standards in Kosovo must continue with undiminished energy and a stronger sense of commitment, as underlined by the Secretary-General in his letter. It urges Kosovo's leaders to increase their efforts to ensure the implementation of standards at all levels, allowing tangible results to be delivered to all Kosovo's citizens. Particular and time-conscious attention should be given to protecting minorities, developing further the process of decentralization, creating the necessary conditions to allow sustainable returns, preservation of cultural and religious heritage in Kosovo, and promoting reconciliation. The Council also urges the authorities in Belgrade to do their utmost to facilitate this process, and to engage constructively. The Council reaffirms its full support for the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for Kosovo, Mr. Soren Jessen-Petersen, and the United Nations Interim Administration in Kosovo in their continuing work to support the implementation of standards, which must continue during the future status process and will be an important factor in determining the degree of progress.
> The Council agrees with Mr. Eide's overall assessment that, notwithstanding the challenges still facing Kosovo and the wider region, the time has come to move to the next phase of the political process. The Council therefore supports the intention of the Secretary-General to start a political process to determine the future status of Kosovo, as foreseen in Council resolution 1244(1999). The Council reaffirms the framework of the resolution, and welcomes the Secretary-General's readiness to appoint a special envoy to lead the future status process. It looks forward to an early appointment. The Council offers its full support to this political process, which would determine the future status of Kosovo, and further reaffirms its commitment to the objective of a multi-ethnic and democratic Kosovo, which must reinforce regional stability.
> The Council welcomes the intention of the Contact Group (France, Germany, Italy, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America) to remain closely engaged in the political process that will be led by the United Nations, and to support the Secretary-General's future status envoy. The Council calls upon interested regional and international organizations to cooperate closely in the process to determine the future status of Kosovo. The Council also supports the meaningful involvement and cooperation of countries in the region.
> The Council requests that the Secretary-General provide regular updates on progress in determining the future status of Kosovo, as defined by Council resolution 1244(1999), and will remain actively seized of the matter.

Future status process

Appointment of Special Envoy. On 31 October [S/2005/708], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention to appoint Mr. Martti Ahtisaari (Finland) as his Special Envoy to lead the future status process for Kosovo, and Mr. Albert Rohan (Austria) as his deputy, which the Council welcomed on 10 November [S/2005/709].

Guiding principles. By the same letter of 10 November [S/2005/709], the Council also transmitted the guiding principles for the future status process for Kosovo, agreed to by the Contact Group (France, Germany, Italy, Russian Federation, United Kingdom, United States). The Contact Group called on the parties to engage in good faith, refrain from unilateral steps and reject any form of violence. They should establish unified negotiating teams and agree on common positions. The process should provide for the effective participation of the Kosovo Serbs and other Kosovo citizens and communities. The implementation of the standards should continue during the status process and would be a factor in determining progress. The final decision on the status of Kosovo should be endorsed by the Security Council.

The status process should be based on the following principles: the settlement of the Kosovo issue should be fully compatible with international standards of human rights, democracy and international law and contribute to regional security; conform to democratic values and European standards and contribute to realizing Kosovo's European perspective, in particular, its progress in the stabilization and association process, as well as the integration of the entire region into Euro-Atlantic institutions; ensure sustainable multi-ethnicity in Kosovo, including constitutional guarantees and mechanisms to ensure the implementation of human rights for all citizens; ensure the participation of all communities in government, at both the central and local levels; and include safeguards for the protection of cultural and religious heritage, including provisions specifying the status of Serbian Orthodox Church institutions and sites and other patrimony in Kosovo.

The settlement of Kosovo's status should also strengthen regional security and stability, with no changes in its current territory, meaning no partition and no union with any country or part of any country. It should ensure Kosovo's security and that it did not pose a military or security threat to its neighbours; promote mechanisms to strengthen Kosovo's ability to enforce the rule of law, fight organized crime and terrorism and safeguard the multi-ethnic character of the police and the judiciary; ensure sustainable economic and political development, and maintain an international civilian and military presence to supervise compliance with the provisions of the status settlement; ensure security and protection of minorities; and monitor and support the authorities in the continued implementation of standards.

Future status preparations. The Secretary-General, in his report on UNMIK [S/2006/45] describing developments in the latter part of the year, said that his Special Envoy for the future status process, Mr. Ahtisaari, held initial consultations in the region, including in Kosovo, from 21 to 27 November. Since then, the Kosovo Albanian leaders had made significant progress in preparing for the status process. In September, President Rugova established a negotiating team, which met on 6 October, and a political group to prepare specific position papers. In the meantime, Kosovo Albanian political and institutional leaders had welcomed the Contact Group's guiding principles (see above).

At a plenary meeting on 17 November, the Kosovo Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution reconfirming the political will of the people of Kosovo for an independent and sovereign state of Kosovo, and provided a mandate for Kosovo's delegation to the future status process. A similar resolution was adopted by Serbia and Montenegro's Parliament on 21 November. On 22 November, the Kosovo negotiating team met with the Special Envoy and submitted a document outlining its platform for status negotiations, including its commitment to equal rights for majority and minority communities, based on the rule of law. On 9 December, the negotiating team established a Consultative Committee for Minorities to advise on minority issues. The negotiating team and its political group were making progress in preparing Pristina for the status process, although detailed proposals on specific issues had yet to be agreed.

Other developments

Reporting on other developments during the latter part of the year [S/2006/45], the Secretary-General said that the comprehensive review of the situation in Kosovo (see p. 469) had encouraged the Provisional Institutions to make progress on both the implementation of standards and on a number of important processes, including dialogue between the communities and local government reform. However, the participation of Kosovo Serb leaders in the political process had declined. As the main Kosovo Serb party (the Serbian List for Kosovo and Metohija (SLKM)) remained outside the Provisional Institutions, the Serbian National Council of North Kosovo engaged more actively with UNMIK to fill the gap left by SLKM as the international community's main local interlocutor. The mid-September appointment of a new head of the Serbian Coordination Centre in Belgrade, Sanda Raskovic-Ivic, was seen as an expression of Serbia's intention to take a more assertive role in political decisions related to Kosovo and in promoting their implementation through the Centre's coordinators on the ground.

Meanwhile, the security situation remained generally stable, despite the continuation of violent attacks, the most significant of which were the shooting of a KPS senior officer on 28 September, the murder of a Kosovo Serb student on 30 November and a 3 December rocket-propelled grenade attack on a bus with 11 passengers en route to Belgrade, but which failed to explode. There were also reports of illegal checkpoints being set up in remote locations.

Progress in local government reform remained uneven. In August, the Special Representative established the territorial delineation of five pilot municipal units, two in Kosovo Albanian, two in Kosovo Serb and one in Kosovo Turkish-majority areas. With UNMIK support, the units in the Kosovo Albanian and Kosovo Turkish-majority areas were successfully launched. Although the Assemblies of those three units lacked adequate premises, they met regularly. However, the establishment of the Kosovo Serb units was held up by the refusal of the Provisional Institutions to map out those units that would be dominated by a Kosovo Serb majority, and by Kosovo Serb insistence that two of the units be overwhelmingly Kosovo Serb before they would consider participation.

Dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina showed some progress at the political level, but stagnated at the technical level. In addition to the Ministerial-level meeting in Vienna on decentralization, the respective Ministers of Culture met in Belgrade on 23 September and in Bulgaria on 8 and 9 December. At the technical level, the four direct dialogue working groups for technical cooperation continued to meet on the issues of energy, missing persons, returns, and transport and communications, however, progress was limited since September, and, with the initiation of the future status process, the parties were increasingly reluctant to engage constructively in direct dialogue.

Work on repairing and protecting Serbian Orthodox cultural and religious heritage proceeded well. Reconstruction work on Serbian Orthodox churches began on 10 October and the first phase of the consolidation and protection of 30 cultural heritage sites was completed by the end of the year. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization held the first session (Paris, France, 9 December) of the Experts Committee on the Rehabilitation and Safeguarding of the Cultural Heritage in Kosovo, which decided to implement 14 projects at a cost of over $3 million.

UNMIK transferred more competences to the Provisional Institutions, particularly those relating to the rule of law and security. Five out of Kosovo's six regions currently had KPS commanders and all 33 police stations had undergone the transition to KPS operational command. In addition, several prisons and detention centres had local commanders. The promulgation in December of an UNMIK regulation establishing new Ministries of Justice and Internal Affairs marked a key step forward. Another regulation was signed on the KPS framework and guiding principles, which provided for the legal and ethical basis for a transitioned service and guarantees for minorities and paved the way for the creation of new public safety institutions, such as the Police Inspectorate and the Kosovo Academy for Public Service Education and Development.

Future international involvement in Kosovo

Consequent upon the recognition in the Contact Group's guiding principles for the Kosovo future status process that an international civilian and military presence would be required in Kosovo, the Special Representative initiated consultations in October, with a view to preparing a technical assessment of the needs of such an involvement, without prejudice to the actual outcome of the process. The assessment, conducted by UNMIK, in collaboration with OSCE and NATO, as well as with UN funds and agencies and bilateral donors, focused on four main areas: the rule of law; good governance; democratization, human rights and minority issues; and economic and fiscal issues.

Progress on standards implementation

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council the technical assessments of progress in implementing the eight standards for Kosovo (functioning democratic institutions, rule of law, freedom of movement, returns and integration, economy, property rights, dialogue with Belgrade and the Kosovo Protection Corps), which it had to meet to comply with Council resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], the Constitutional Framework for Provisional Self-Government [YUN 2001, p. 352], the original standards/benchmarks statement endorsed by the Council in presidential statement S/PRST/

2002/11 [YUN 2002, p. 369] and the 2004 Kosovo Standards Implementation Plan [YUN 2004, p. 408]. Those assessments, prepared by the Special Representative, were annexed to the Secretary-General's reports on UNMIK covering the periods November 2004 to January 2005 [S/2005/88], February to April [S/2005/335], and May to December [S/2006/45].

Functioning of democratic institutions. Kosovo's political institutions demonstrated deepening maturity by electing a new Government quickly after the resignation of the former Prime Minister, Mr. Haradinaj (see p. 468). Minority community members participating in the Government increased to four (Kosovo Serb and Bosniac Ministers, Kosovo Egyptian and Turk Deputy Ministers). Three further positions (Minister, Deputy Minister and Assembly Presidency) reserved for Kosovo Serbs awaited nominations by their political parties. The Assembly adopted improved rules of procedure and continued to rely on UNMIK support to amend legislation to ensure technical adequacy and compliance with the constitutional framework and international human rights instruments. Ten laws adopted by the Assembly were being reviewed by UNMIK for conformity with international standards, five of which needed revision to comply with the constitutional framework. The Law on Freedom of Association of Non-Governmental Organizations was adopted by the Assembly and was awaiting promulgation. The Government approved a progressive law on the use of languages and established a language compliance monitoring mechanism, which was functioning effectively for the central government and 12 municipalities. The Independent Media Commission law was promulgated and appointments to the Commission's Council were progressing. The Assembly passed, at first reading, the law on the public broadcaster, which was reviewed by relevant Assembly committees. All the main daily and weekly newspapers endorsed the press code and a Press Council was established to monitor its implementation. The Government also adopted a strategic plan for minority media, as well as codes of conduct for elected officials and civil servants, comprehensive government rules of procedure and terms of reference for the new Ministries. Municipal minority employment increased as 15 of 27 municipalities met or exceeded their targets. The Government initiated a special recruitment campaign that reserved and advertised 103 central institution positions for minorities.

Rule of law. Local crime prevention councils were operating in every municipality, and crime clearance rates remained broadly comparable for majority and minority victims. Central and municipal political leaders' condemnation of serious crimes and encouragement to cooperate fully with the police increased markedly. KPS continued to assume greater responsibilities. Seven police stations (total of 27 out of 32) and the first regional command centre (Gnjilane) made the transition to KPS command.

As at December, 426 people were charged for offences relating to the violence in March 2004, 209 of which had been convicted, 12 acquitted, 95 cases dropped and 110 pending. The action plan to combat trafficking in persons was approved and work started on its implementation, including the opening of a toll-free telephone line for victims and a victims' resource centre.

Freedom of movement. Freedom of movement improved in every municipality, except northern Mitrovica. Of the 583 minority community members surveyed, 83 per cent said that they had travelled outside their area of residence to other parts of Kosovo. Their perception of their freedom of movement had also improved. Regular military escorts ceased and KFOR's fixed guarding positions were reduced from 50 before March 2004 to 14. As of July, the Austerlitz Bridge joining northern and southern Mitrovica was opened to traffic 24 hours a day. Five inter-urban bus lines subsidized by the Kosovo consolidated budget were opened, connecting minority communities in Prishtine/Pristina, Mitrovica/Prizren and Gjilan/Gnjilane regions.

Returns and reintegration. The Government and most municipalities significantly increased official support for returns, and undertook a wide-ranging outreach programme to strengthen and support freedom of movement, returns and dialogue and tolerance building. The Prime Minister, Ministers and many municipal leaders actively engaged with internally displaced persons. On 25 February, the Prime Minister and 23 Kosovo Albanian majority municipalities adopted a joint declaration urging the displaced to return and the majority population to accept and implement its responsibilities towards minority communities. It also called for the protection of property rights and the release of illegally occupied property. The Government allocated 10.5 million euros for returns from the 2005 consolidated budget and an additional 2.2 million euros for the reconstruction of houses damaged or destroyed in March 2004. UNHCR documented 1,925 voluntary returns between 1 January to 30 November 2005, one third of which were Kosovo Serbs. Return projects were ongoing in 18 municipalities, 25 had endorsed municipal returns strategies and 28 had functioning municipal returns officers. The Ministry of Labour and Social Welfare assumed humanitarian responsibility for all eligible internally displaced persons. The strategic framework on communities and returns was launched in July and a protocol on returns was agreed to at the technical level between Pristina and Belgrade in September.

On 25 January [S/2005/47], Serbia and Montenegro brought to the Security Council's attention the difficult situation prevailing in Kosovo and Metohija, resulting from harsh winter conditions that had deprived several Serbian villages of power supply. Serbia and Montenegro said that depriving the remaining Serb population of power at the height of winter further discouraged returns and brought additional pressure on them to leave Kosovo and Metohija.

Economy. Five pieces of basic economic legislation were promulgated. Eight laws and regulations were in place, and nine were in the legislative process. A regulatory framework for mines and minerals was established and a Regulation establishing an Independent Commission for Mines and Minerals was adopted, opening the way for investment. Twenty-four per cent of the budget was allocated to public investment, a three per cent increase since 2004. The Government instructed spending agencies to comply with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) recommendations, particularly in reducing recurrent expenditure, and promulgated a system for monitoring spending agencies' expenditures, imposing fiscal discipline and ensuring efficient allocation of expenditures. Budget management was also strengthened, unauthorized budget transfers identified and reversed, and attempted transfers corrected by the Ministry of Finance and Economy. Chairmanship of the Economic Fiscal Council was transferred to the Prime Minister. A letter of intent was signed with IMF on Kosovo's medium-term economic and fiscal policy framework, committing the Government to stricter public expenditure controls and limits on the budget deficit, public sector employment and benefits and growth in government spending. A new excise code, a law to support small and medium-sized enterprises and a revised procedure for appointments to the Kosovo Pension Savings Trust were promulgated.

Property rights. The promulgation of a Regulation on the allocation of socially owned immovable property managed by municipalities laid the foundation for more effective efforts to regularize informal settlements and provide social housing. Political leadership against illegal occupation and use of property was more marked. A working group was created to develop a public information campaign on the issue and the Government developed plans for a new data collection system for property rights by tracking court-adjudicated illegal occupation/repossession claims and related actions. Although there was no evidence of ethnic bias in either property-related court decisions or their execution, efforts were needed to make the related legislation more coherent, consistent and compliant with international human rights and European standards. All administrative instructions to implement the law on spacial planning and the situational analysis of informal settlements and the draft guidelines for spacial planning to protect and begin to regularize informal settlements were completed also. Ninety-four per cent of the residential property caseload of the Housing and Property Directorate had been adjudicated, and was expected to be completed by the end of the year. A joint Provisional Institutions-Housing and Property Directorate forum was established to improve coordination of and increase in public support for implementation of the Directorate's decisions. The backlog of property-related cases in the courts rose to 8,486. UNMIK and the Government agreed on a mechanism to resolve outstanding conflict-related property claims.

Cultural heritage. An action plan for cooperation with the Council of Europe on cultural heritage was drafted, including joint elaboration of a heritage policy (2006-2010) on the preservation of cultural heritage and capacity-building for cultural institutions. A public awareness campaign on the importance of the cultural heritage sites of all Kosovo communities was started. Fieldwork on the inventory of cultural heritage sites was completed, but work on the official inventory stalled. A total of 4.2 million euros was again allocated from the consolidated budget for initial reconstruction of Serbian Orthodox sites damaged in March 2004. A Reconstruction Implementation Commission was established to lead reconstruction of those sites; 30 priority sites had been agreed upon.

Dialogue with Belgrade. Direct dialogue with Belgrade resumed during the year. The working group on missing persons met in Belgrade in March, June, October and December. The working group on energy met in May and November and the working group on returns held an ad hoc meeting in September. Progress was made in establishing a working group on the environment.

Kosovo Protection Corps. The Kosovo Protection Corps (KPC) continued to comply with the rule of law, act in accordance with its mandate as a civilian emergency organization and make significant additional standards efforts. A vigorous minority recruitment and retention campaign continued. A total of 161 minorities actively participated, including 31 Ashkali, 18 Bosniacs, 8 Egyptians, 9 Croats, 14 Muslims, 2 Roma, 48 Serbs, 30 Turks and a Goran.

By the end of the year, KPC teams had cleared over 1.7 million square metres of land of unexploded ordnance. The Civil Protection Brigade was inaugurated and its members received specialized training in the handling of hazardous materials, crisis management and firefighting.

UN Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo

The United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK), established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 357] to facilitate a political process to determine Kosovo's political future, comprised five components referred to as pillars: interim administration (led by the United Nations); institution-building (led by OSCE); economic reconstruction (led by the EU); humanitarian affairs (led by UNHCR); and police and justice (led by the United Nations). UNMIK was headed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Soren Jessen-Petersen.

The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on the activities of UNMIK and developments in Kosovo for the periods 1 November 2004 to 31 January 2005 [S/2005/88] and 1 February to 30 April 2005 [S/2005/335] (see above). Activities for the remainder of the year were covered in a later report [S/2006/45].

Financing

On 13 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's request for an additional appropriation of $33,744,100 for the maintenance of UNMIK for the period 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/59/692] and the comments and recommendation of ACABQ thereon [A/59/728], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/772], resolution 59/286 A without vote [agenda item 133].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo

A

The General Assembly,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo,

Recalling also its resolution 53/241 of 28 July 1999 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which is resolution 58/305 of 18 June 2004,

Acknowledging the complexity of the Mission,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolution of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo as at 28 February 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 132.4 million United States dollars, representing some 7 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only sixty-eight Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

3. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

4. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Revised budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005

11. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo the additional amount of 30 million dollars for the maintenance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, taking into account the total amount of 278,413,700 dollars already appropriated for the Mission for the same period under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 58/305;

Financing of the appropriation

12. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 30 million dollars, taking into account the amount of 278,413,700 dollars already apportioned by the General Assembly in its resolution 58/305 for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, in accordance with the levels set out by the Assembly in its resolution 55/235, as adjusted in its resolution 55/236 of 23 December 2000 and updated in its resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, the scale of assessments for 2004 and 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, to be applied against a portion thereof, that is, 15 million dollars, which is the amount pertaining to the period ended 31 December 2004, and to be applied also against the balance, that is, 15 million dollars for the period from 1 January to 30 June 2005;

13. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 12 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the additional amount of 3,850,800 dollars, approved for the Mission for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005;

14. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

15. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission;

16. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

17. Decides to keep under review during its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo".

On 22 June [meeting 104], the Assembly, having considered UNMIK's financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/736], the proposed budget for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [YUN 2004, p. 418] and ACABQ's comments and recommendations thereon [A/59/736/Add.1], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/772/Add.1], resolution 59/286 B without vote [agenda item 133].

B

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 1244(1999) of 10 June 1999 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo,

Recalling also its resolution 53/241 of 28 July 1999 on the financing of the Mission and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 59/286 A of 13 April 2005,

Acknowledging the complexity of the Mission,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolution of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 82.7 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only seventy-four Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Mission;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests

the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

11. Notes, as pointed out by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraphs 20 and 21 of its report, that the functions of a large number of posts have been performed by staff at grades lower than the budgeted levels, and requests the Secretary-General to take appropriate action;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

14. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Mission for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

15. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo the amount of 252,551,800 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 239,889,800 dollars for the maintenance of the Mission, 10,353,700 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 2,308,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

16. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 252,551,800 dollars, at a monthly rate of 21,045,983 dollars in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

17. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 21,704,300 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 20,054,100 dollars approved for the Mission, the prorated share of 1,463,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 186,700 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

18. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 4,470,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

19. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 4,470,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 18 above;

20. Decides further that the increase of 3,763,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 4,470,000 dollars referred to in paragraphs 18 and 19 above;

21. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

22. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Mission, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

23. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

24. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo".

In December, the Secretary-General submitted the performance report for UNMIK for the period from 1 July to 30 June 2005 [A/60/637 & Corr.1].

International security presence

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council, in accordance with resolution 1244(1999) [YUN 1999, p. 353], reports on the activities of the international security presence in Kosovo (KFOR), also known as Operation Joint Guard, covering the periods 1 January to 31 January [S/2005/352], 1 February to 31 May [S/2005/241, S/2005/308, S/2005/348, S/2005/420], 1 August to 31 August [S/2005/689] and 1 November to 31 December [S/2006/167]. As at 31 December, the force, which operated under NATO leadership, comprised 17,751 troops, including 2,768 from non-NATO countries.

KFOR continued operations to prevent ethnic violence and protect patrimonial sites and remained vigilant to deter possible threats directed against international organizations and military bases. The force continued to improve its crowd and riot control capabilities so as to be better prepared to counter any resurgence of violence.

Georgia

In 2005, renewed efforts were made to end the stalemate in the Georgian/Abkhaz peace process and to restart dialogue on the basis of the 2001 paper known as Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi (Georgia's Government) and Sukhumi (the Abkhaz leadership) [YUN 2001, p. 386], which was intended to serve as a framework for substantive negotiations over the status of Abkhazia as a sovereign entity within the State of Georgia.

In April, for the first time since July 2003, high-level representatives of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (Russia, Germany, France, United Kingdom, United States) met in Geneva, with the participation of the parties. Although those discussions revealed the differing priorities of the Georgian and Abkhaz delegations, they did lead to further cooperation in practical issues. Discussions on security matters were held and a protocol signed, including measures to strengthen implementation of the 1994 Moscow Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces. Draft documents on the non-resumption of hostilities and the safe and dignified return of refugees were finalized for discussion, and meetings of the so-called Sochi working groups on the Sochi-Tbilisi railway and on the return of displaced persons and refugees resumed. In October, the latter working group endorsed in principle documents prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the verification and registration of displaced persons and refugees.

However, those positive developments took place against the backdrop of an increasingly difficult and complex situation on the ground, including a call by the Georgian side for the withdrawal of the security forces of the Commonwealth of Independent States and for a UN-led international force.

UN Observer Mission in Georgia

The United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia (UNOMIG), established by Security Council resolution 858(1993) [YUN 1993, p. 509], continued to monitor compliance with the 1994 Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces (Moscow Agreement) [YUN 1994, p. 583] and to fulfil other tasks as mandated by Council resolution 937(1994) [ibid., p. 584]. At the request of the parties [ibid., p. 583], the Mission operated in close collaboration with the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) located in the zone of conflict since 1994. The Council extended the Mission's mandate twice during the year, the first time until 31 July 2005, and the second, until 31 January 2006.

UNOMIG's main headquarters was located in Sukhumi (Abkhazia, Georgia), with some administrative headquarters in Pitsunda, a liaison office in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi and team bases and a sector headquarters in each of the Gali and Zugdidi sectors. A team base in the Kodori Valley was manned by observers operating from Sukhumi. As at 31 December 2005, UNOMIG's strength stood at 122 military observers and 12 civilian police officers.

Heidi Tagliavini (Switzerland) continued as the Secretary-General's Special Representative for Georgia and Head of UNOMIG. She was assisted by Major General Hussein Ghobashi (Egypt), UNOMIG's Chief Military Observer, who was succeeded on 13 August by Major General Niaz Muhammad Khan Khattak (Pakistan).

Political aspects of the conflict

Report of Secretary-General (January). The Secretary-General, in his January report [S/2005/32] on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, and UNOMIG's operations there, noted that recent efforts to advance dialogue for resolving the conflict had encountered serious challenges. UNOMIG's main efforts were focused on finding ways to re-establish dialogue and avoid further regression. The December 2004 high-level meeting of the Group of Friends [YUN 2004, p. 429] had provided an opportunity to reflect on how best to address those challenges in pursuit of a lasting and comprehensive solution.

The Secretary-General hoped that the political situation would stabilize and that dialogue in the priority areas of economic cooperation, the return of refugees and internally displaced persons and political and security matters would resume, accompanied by relevant confidence-building measures. As UNOMIG's presence was critical to maintaining stability in the conflict zone and advancing the peace process, the Secretary-General recommended that its mandate be extended until 31 July 2005.

Communication. In a 26 January letter to the Security Council President [S/2005/45], Georgia reiterated its readiness to resume negotiations with the Abkhaz side, but regretted the lack of a similar willingness on their part. Georgia said that the longer the conflict remained unresolved, the more difficult it would be to find a compromise. It therefore invited the Council to increase its involvement in the conflict-resolution process, including through a field visit to Georgia to learn first-hand of the reality on the ground and to get the process out of the current stalemate.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 28 January [meeting 5116], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1582(2005). The draft [S/2005/48] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1554(2004) of 29 July 2004,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 17 January 2005,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999, regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel adopted on 9 December 1994,

Deploring the fact that the perpetrators of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of nine people on board, have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming, however, the positive momentum given to the United Nations-led peace process by regular high-level meetings of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the Georgian-Russian summit meetings,

Welcoming also the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

2. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends;

4. Deeply regrets the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

5. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls, once again, that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

6. Notes its position on Abkhaz elections as expressed in its resolution 1255(1999) of 30 July 1999;

7. Calls upon both sides to participate in constructive negotiations towards a political settlement of the conflict and to spare no efforts to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust, and underlines the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

8. Welcomes the commitment by the Georgian side to a peaceful resolution of the conflict, and calls upon both parties further to publicly dissociate themselves from all militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options;

9. Reminds all concerned to refrain from any action that might impede the peace process;

10. Welcomes the convening of regular meetings of senior representatives of the Group of Friends and the United Nations in Geneva, and encourages both sides to participate actively in the next meeting;

11. Urges the parties to participate in a more active, regular and structured manner in the task forces established in the first Geneva meeting (to address issues in the priority areas of economic cooperation, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security matters) and complemented by the working groups established in Sochi, Russian Federation, in March 2003, and reiterates that results-oriented activities in these three priority areas remain key to building common ground between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides and ultimately for concluding meaningful negotiations on a comprehensive political settlement based on the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and its letter of transmittal;

12. Encourages the sides, in that respect, to continue their discussion on security guarantees with the participation of the Group of Friends;

13. Calls again upon the parties to take concrete steps to revitalize the peace process in all its major aspects, including their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001, and to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, with a view to holding a fourth meeting on confidence-building measures, and welcomes the intention expressed by Germany to host such a meeting pending progress in the conflict resolution process;

14. Notes that contacts at the level of civil society can reinforce mutual confidence, and calls upon both sides to facilitate such contacts;

15. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of the refugees and internally displaced persons, calls upon both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and in consultation with the Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees, and the Group of Friends;

16. Calls for the rapid finalization and signature of the letter of intent on returns proposed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcomes the meetings, with the participation of the Special Representative and the Office of the High Commissioner of the Sochi working group on refugees and internally displaced persons;

17. Reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, reaffirms also the inalienable right of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement on the Voluntary Return of Refugees and Displaced Persons of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration;

18. Recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population;

19. Welcomes the continuing activities of the United Nations Development Programme in the Gali, Ochamchira and Tkvarcheli districts and the opening of offices by the United Nations Development Programme in Sukhumi and Gali;

20. Urges the parties, once again, to implement the recommendations of the joint assessment mission of November 2000 to the Gali sector, regrets that there has been no progress to that effect despite the positive consideration by the parties given to those recommendations in the first Geneva meeting, and calls again upon the Abkhaz side to agree to the opening as soon as possible of the Gali branch of the human rights office in Sukhumi and to provide security conditions for its unhindered functioning;

21. Reiterates its concern that despite the start of the deployment of a civilian police component as part of the Mission, as endorsed in resolution 1494(2003) of 30 July 2003, and agreed upon by the parties, the deployment of the remaining officers in the Gali sector is still outstanding, and calls upon the Abkhaz side to allow for a swift deployment of the police component in that region;

22. Calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement involving the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

23. Welcomes the measures taken by the Georgian side to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the maintenance of these efforts;

24. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

25. Welcomes the continuing relative calm in the Kodori Valley, and condemns the killings and abductions of civilians in the Gali district;

26. Urges the parties to abide by the provisions of the protocols on security issues in the Gali district signed on 8 October 2003 and 19 January 2004, to continue their regular meetings and to cooperate more closely with each other to improve security in the Gali sector, and takes note of the resumption of Abkhaz participation in the quadripartite meetings and the Joint Investigation Group;

27. Reiterates its call upon the Georgian side to provide comprehensive security guarantees to allow for independent and regular monitoring of the situation in the upper Kodori Valley by joint patrols of the Mission and the collective peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States;

28. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel;

29. Strongly condemns, in that respect, the repeated abductions of personnel of those missions in the past, deeply deplores the fact that none of the perpetrators have ever been identified or brought to justice, reiterates that it is the responsibility of the parties to end this impunity, and calls upon them to take action;

30. Calls upon the parties, once again, to take all necessary steps, to identify those responsible for the shooting down of a Mission helicopter on 8 October 2001, to bring them to justice, and to inform the Special Representative of the steps taken in particular in the criminal investigation;

31. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 July 2005, subject to a review, as appropriate, of its mandate by the Council in the event of changes in the mandate of the collective peacekeeping force;

32. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

33. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Meeting of Group of Friends (April). For the first time since July 2003, high-level representatives of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General (Russian Federation, Germany, France, United Kingdom, United States) met (Geneva, 7-8 April) with the participation of the parties. Separate consultations were held with each side to discuss their respective concerns and possible areas for follow-up discussions. The meetings revealed the differing priorities of the Georgian and Abkhaz delegations. The Georgian representatives underscored their willingness to discuss economic issues with the Abkhaz side, but emphasized the right of refugees and internally displaced persons to return and, in that context, the need for measures to address human rights and security in the Gali district. The Abkhaz side undertook to pursue the opening of a UNOMIG human rights branch office and Georgian-language instruction in the Gali district, but highlighted their security concerns and urged Tbilisi to avoid militant rhetoric. They also urged the lifting of restrictions imposed by CIS in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 359] and encouraged joint economic projects, such as the reopening of the Sochi-Tbilisi railway, to boost confidence among all parties.

Both sides responded positively to proposals by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) for building trust and confidence at the grass-roots level, verifying the number and needs of the displaced population, developing mechanisms for monitoring and protection, addressing basic social and economic needs and creating conditions conducive to future returns.

The Group of Friends also discussed Germany's offer to host a conference on economic confidence-building and cooperation.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In a 25 April report [S/2005/269] on the situation in Abkhaz, Georgia, the Secretary-General stated that his Special Representative continued active dialogue with the two sides, supported by the Group of Friends. In Sukhumi, the new leadership, following the inauguration of Sergey Bagapsh as de facto President on 12 February, paved the way for renewed discussions, while in Tbilisi, the appointment by Georgian President Mikhail Saakashvili of a new Special Representative for a Georgian-Abkhaz settlement underlined the Government's continued desire for renewed engagement in the peace process. However, that optimism was clouded by naval incidents near Sukhumi on 16 March, and Abkhaz officials accusing the Georgian side of complicating the negotiation process. Following the high-level meeting of the Group of Friends in April (see above), the Special Representative led a joint visit (9-13 April) of senior Georgian and Abkhaz representatives to Italy to study the successful experience in institution-building and economic transformation in the autonomous region of Trentino–South Tyrol.

The Secretary-General said that he was encouraged by signals from the two sides, for while basic differences in their underlying positions remained, the renewed spirit of cooperation and dialogue was welcome and should be encouraged. To maintain momentum, he encouraged them to resume discussions in the relevant task forces and working groups. He welcomed their positive reaction to the UNHCR proposals (see above), which should pave the way for the verification exercise.

Security Council consideration. On 4 May, during consideration of the Secretary-General's report in closed session [meeting 5174], the Security Council heard briefings by the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations and the Special Envoy of the President of Georgia, Irakli Alasania. The Council President, in an assessment of the Council's work during May [S/2005/500], said that the Council took stock of the recent positive developments in the peace process after the high-level meeting of the Group of Friends in Geneva.

Report of Secretary-General (July). Reporting in July on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia [S/2005/453], the Secretary-General said that, on 10 May, United States President George Bush, during his visit to Tbilisi, emphasized the need for the peaceful settlement of conflicts and urged the Georgian leadership to work with the Abkhaz and South Ossetian leaderships towards that end. He pledged his country's support for and cooperation with the United Nations in resolving the Georgian-Abkhaz conflict. On 30 May, the Foreign Ministers of Georgia and the Russian Federation, in a joint declaration on the modalities of functioning and withdrawal of Russian bases from Georgia, affirmed their cooperation in the achievement of a peaceful settlement of the conflicts in Georgia.

On 12 May, the Special Representative brought together the Georgian and Abkhaz representatives at the operational level at UNOMIG's Gali headquarters to discuss security issues. The discussions concluded with the signing of a protocol, which included measures to strengthen the implementation of the Moscow Agreement. The parties undertook to submit information on the strength of their armed personnel in the conflict zone, samples of their identification documents and proposals for establishing additional hotlines between law enforcement agencies across the ceasefire line. They also agreed to maintain a minimum distance between the positions of law enforcement agencies and the ceasefire line, establish groups on each side to monitor the situation in the security zone, share information on criminal activities, resume patrolling in the Kodori Valley, improve the human rights situation and ensure support for the safety of international staff in the region. They agreed to meet on 20 and 21 July to discuss security guarantees, in line with the commitments made at the April meeting of the Group of Friends (see p. 481).

The Russian Federation convened (15-16 June) the so-called Sochi working groups on the rehabilitation of the Sochi-Tbilisi railway and on the return of refugees and internally displaced persons. The Special Representative, the Commander of the CIS peacekeeping force and the head of UNHCR's Tbilisi office participated. Concerning the return of refugees and internally displaced persons, the parties expressed support for the documents prepared by UNHCR, including a draft questionnaire and plan for the verification and registration of returnees to the Gali district and its paper on strategic directions for confidence-building activities in the context of returns. Regarding railway rehabilitation, they agreed that an expert group would discuss the security and practical aspects of conducting a technical survey of the Psou-Inguri section of the railway. At the 2 July meeting of the group, the parties agreed to establish joint mobile groups, which would include representatives from both sides and the Russian Federation, and to finalize all related practical matters to begin the survey in mid-July.

The Secretary-General, welcoming the incremental progress made, expressed hope that each side would muster the political will for a more meaningful and pragmatic re-engagement and pledged UN assistance in that regard. He urged the Georgian side to be forthcoming in meeting Abkhaz security concerns and the Abkhaz side to effectively address practical and security concerns of the local population and returnees. The Secretary-General therefore recommended that UNOMIG's mandate be extended until 31 January 2006.

On 27 July [meeting 5238], the Security Council met in closed session to consider the Secretary-General's report on the situation in Georgia [S/2005/453]. It heard a briefing from the Secretary-General's Special Representative, Ms. Heidi Tagliavini and a statement by the Special Envoy of the President of Georgia, Mr. Irakli Alasania.

On 29 July [meeting 5242], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1615(2005). The draft [S/2005/492] was prepared by France, Germany, Romania, the Russian Federation, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its relevant resolutions, in particular resolution 1582(2005) of 28 January 2005,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 13 July 2005,

Recalling the conclusions of the summits of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Lisbon in December 1996 and in Istanbul on 18 and 19 November 1999 regarding the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia,

Recalling also the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Deploring the fact that the perpetrators of the shooting down of a helicopter of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia on 8 October 2001, which resulted in the death of nine people on board, have still not been identified,

Stressing that the continued lack of progress on key issues of a comprehensive settlement of the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, is unacceptable,

Welcoming, however, the positive momentum given to the United Nations-led peace process by regular high-level meetings of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General in Geneva and the Georgian-Russian summit meetings,

Welcoming also the important contributions made by the Mission and the collective peacekeeping forces of the Commonwealth of Independent States in stabilizing the situation in the zone of conflict, and stressing its attachment to the close cooperation existing between them in the performance of their respective mandates,

1. Reaffirms the commitment of all Member States to the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Georgia within its internationally recognized borders, and the necessity to define the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia in strict accordance with these principles;

2. Commends and strongly supports the sustained efforts of the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, with the assistance of the Russian Federation in its capacity as facilitator as well as of the Group of Friends of the Secretary-General and of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, to promote the stabilization of the situation and the achievement of a comprehensive political settlement, which must include a settlement of the political status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and for its letter of transmittal, finalized by, and with the full support of, all members of the Group of Friends;

4. Deeply regrets the continued refusal of the Abkhaz side to agree to a discussion on the substance of that document, again strongly urges the Abkhaz side to receive the document and its letter of transmittal, urges both parties thereafter to give them full and open consideration and to engage in constructive negotiations on their substance, and urges those having influence with the parties to promote this outcome;

5. Regrets the lack of progress on the initiation of political status negotiations, and recalls, once again, that the purpose of those documents is to facilitate meaningful negotiations between the parties, under the leadership of the United Nations, on the status of Abkhazia within the State of Georgia, and is not an attempt to impose or dictate any specific solution to the parties;

6. Calls upon both sides to participate in constructive negotiations towards a political settlement of the conflict and to spare no efforts to overcome their ongoing mutual mistrust, and underlines the fact that the process of negotiation leading to a lasting political settlement acceptable to both sides will require concessions from both sides;

7. Welcomes the commitment by the Georgian side to a peaceful resolution of the conflict, and calls upon both parties further to publicly dissociate themselves from all militant rhetoric and demonstrations of support for military options;

8. Reminds all concerned to refrain from any action that might impede the peace process;

9. Welcomes the convening of regular meetings of senior representatives of the Group of Friends and the United Nations in Geneva as well as the participation of both sides in the last meeting, held on 7 and 8 April 2005, and the commitments expressed by the parties during this meeting, and strongly urges both sides to continue to participate constructively in future meetings;

10. Urges the parties to participate in a more active, regular and structured manner in the task forces established in the first Geneva meeting (to address issues in the priority areas of economic cooperation, the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, and political and security matters) and complemented by the working groups established in Sochi, Russian Federation, in March 2003, and reiterates that results-oriented activities in these three priority areas remain key to building common ground between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides and ultimately for concluding meaningful negotiations on a comprehensive political settlement based on the document entitled "Basic Principles for the Distribution of Competences between Tbilisi and Sukhumi" and its letter of transmittal;

11. Regrets the cancellation of the meeting on security guarantees planned for July 2005, and expects that such a meeting with the full participation of both sides will be held as soon as possible;

12. Welcomes the signing on 12 May 2005 of a Protocol with measures to strengthen the implementation of the Agreement on Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

13. Calls again upon the parties to take concrete steps to revitalize the peace process in all its major aspects, including their work in the Coordinating Council and its relevant mechanisms, to build on the results of the third meeting on confidence-building measures between the Georgian and Abkhaz sides, held in Yalta, Ukraine, on 15 and 16 March 2001, and to implement the proposals agreed on that occasion in a purposeful and cooperative manner, with a view to holding a fourth meeting on confidence-building measures, and welcomes the intention expressed by Germany to host such a meeting pending progress in the conflict resolution process;

14. Welcomes the positive developments towards the reopening of the railways between Sochi and Tbilisi and towards the return of refugees and internally displaced persons;

15. Notes that contacts at the level of civil society can reinforce mutual confidence, and calls upon both sides to facilitate such contacts;

16. Stresses the urgent need for progress on the question of the refugees and internally displaced persons, calls on both sides to display a genuine commitment to make returns the focus of special attention and to undertake this task in close coordination with the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and in consultation with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the Group of Friends;

17. Calls for the rapid finalization and signature of the letter of intent on returns proposed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General, and welcomes the meetings with the participation of the Special Representative and the Office of the High Commissioner of the Sochi working group on refugees and internally displaced persons;

18. Reaffirms the unacceptability of the demographic changes resulting from the conflict, reaffirms also the inalienable rights of all refugees and internally displaced persons affected by the conflict, and stresses that they have the right to return to their homes in secure and dignified conditions, in accordance with international law and as set out in the Quadripartite Agreement of 4 April 1994 and the Yalta Declaration;

19. Recalls that the Abkhaz side bears a particular responsibility to protect the returnees and to facilitate the return of the remaining displaced population;

20. Welcomes the continuing activities of the United Nations Development Programme in the Gali, Ochamchira and Tkvarcheli districts and the opening of offices by the United Nations Development Programme in Sukhumi and Gali;

21. Urges the parties once again to implement the recommendations of the joint assessment mission of November 2000 to the Gali sector, regrets that there has been no progress to that effect despite the positive consideration by the parties given to those recommendations in the first Geneva meeting, and calls again upon the Abkhaz side to agree to the opening as soon as possible of the Gali branch of the human rights office in Sukhumi and to provide security conditions for its unhindered functioning;

22. Reiterates its concern that despite the start of the deployment of a civilian police component as part of the Mission, as endorsed in resolution 1494(2003) of 30 July 2003 and agreed upon by the parties, the deployment of the remaining officers in the Gali sector is still outstanding, and calls upon the Abkhaz side to allow for a swift deployment of the police component in that region;

23. Calls in particular upon the Abkhaz side to improve law enforcement protection of the local population and to address the lack of instruction in their mother tongue for the ethnic Georgian population;

24. Welcomes the measures taken by the Georgian side to put an end to the activities of illegal armed groups, and encourages the maintenance of these efforts;

25. Condemns any violations of the provisions of the Agreement on a Ceasefire and Separation of Forces signed in Moscow on 14 May 1994;

26. Welcomes the continuing relative calm in the Kodori Valley, and condemns the continuing criminal activities, including killings and abductions of civilians, in the Gali and Zugdidi districts;

27. Urges the parties to abide by the provisions of the protocols on security issues in the Gali district signed on 8 October 2003 and 19 January 2004, to continue their regular meetings and to cooperate more closely with each other to improve security in the Gali sector, and takes note of the resumption of Abkhaz participation in the quadripartite meetings and the Joint Investigation Group;

28. Reiterates its call upon the Georgian side to provide comprehensive security guarantees to allow for independent and regular monitoring of the situation in the upper Kodori Valley by joint patrols of the Mission and the peacekeeping force of the Commonwealth of Independent States;

29. Underlines the fact that it is the primary responsibility of both sides to provide appropriate security and to ensure the freedom of movement of the Mission, the collective peacekeeping force and other international personnel, and calls upon both sides to fulfil their obligations in this regard;

30. Strongly condemns, in that respect, the repeated abductions of personnel of those missions in the past, deeply deplores the fact that none of the perpetrators have ever been identified or brought to justice, reiterates that it is the responsibility of the parties to end this impunity, and calls upon them to take action;

31. Calls upon the parties, once again, to take all necessary steps to identify those responsible for the shooting down of a Mission helicopter on 8 October 2001, to bring them to justice, and to inform the Special Representative of the steps taken in particular in the criminal investigation;

32. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the Mission to implement the zero-tolerance policy of the Secretary-General on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including the conduct of predeployment awareness training, and to take disciplinary action and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

33. Decides to extend the mandate of the Mission for a new period terminating on 31 January 2006, subject to a review, as appropriate, of its mandate by the Council in the event of changes in the mandate of the collective peacekeeping force;

34. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to keep the Council regularly informed and to report three months from the date of the adoption of the present resolution on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia;

35. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

Communication. In identical letters of 23 September [A/60/379-S/2005/606], Georgia brought to the attention of the Secretary-General and the Council President the celebration by the Tskhinvali separatist authorities, on 20 September, of the "independence" of the self-proclaimed republic of South Ossetia. It said that the presence of representatives of the separatist regimes of Abkhazia, Transniestria and Nagorno Karabakh (Azerbaijan), as well as of the State Duma of the Russian Federation was a flagrant violation of universally recognized norms and principles.

Report of Secretary-General (October). In his October report [S/2005/657] on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, the Secretary-General stated that his Special Representative, in her continuing dialogue with the two sides of the Georgian/Abkhaz conflict and with the Group of Friends, focused on the issue of security guarantees. A planned meeting of 22 July with the two sides was postponed after Abkhazia protested the detention of a cargo vessel en route to Sukhumi by the Georgian Navy on 3 July, for violating Georgian maritime space. The ship was released by the Georgian authorities on 31 July and transported with UNOMIG's assistance to Sukhumi, following the Special Representative's intervention. At the meeting, which was subsequently held on 4 August with the participation of the Group of Friends and OSCE, the two sides agreed on the need to reconfirm their commitment to the non-resumption of hostilities and for the safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons and refugees to the Gali district, in the light of the change of their respective leadership. They also discussed a draft joint document on the non-resumption of hostilities, and confirmed their readiness to accept the UNHCR proposals (see p. 482) on the return and registration of refugees to the Gali district. Maritime security issues were also addressed and the two sides agreed to continue discussions on the subject and to submit their views and proposals to UNOMIG before the next meeting which was to be held in October. On 10 August, the Tbilisi-based Ambassadors of the Group of Friends visited Sukhumi to discuss the results of the meeting on security guarantees and to encourage the Abkhaz leadership to engage meaningfully in the priority areas of the peace process.

The so-called Sochi working group on the rehabilitation of the Sochi-Tbilisi railway held follow-up meetings in Tbilisi and Sukhumi on 11 and 19 July, respectively, to discuss further the modalities of a technical survey, which began on 10 August by Russian and Abkhaz specialists. As a result of problems relating to their immigration status, Georgian experts were only able to join them in October. At the October meeting (6-7 October) of the working group on the return of internally displaced persons and refugees, the parties endorsed, in principle, the UNHCR approach to the return of refugees and internally displaced persons and planned activities for the next two years, and discussed modalities for the registration of returnees to Gali and the issue of the language of instruction in schools there.

In other developments, Georgia protested the large-scale Abkhaz military exercises held from 15 to 19 August, while the Abkhaz side continued to question Tbilisi's intentions to seek closer relations with the Russian Federation. On 11 October, the Georgian Parliament adopted a resolution on the possible withdrawal of peacekeeping forces from the Georgian-South Ossetian and Georgian-Abkhaz conflict zones in 2006. During the reporting period, UNOMIG reported three violations of the 1994 Moscow Agreement on the Abkhaz side of the ceasefire line. Two cases related to restrictions placed on the movement of UNOMIG patrols by Abkhaz soldiers on 16 July and 2 August and the third to the presence of 6 Abkhaz tanks and several artillery pieces in the restricted weapons zone during a military exercise.

Communications. On 27 October [S/2005/678], Georgia noted the positive developments in the conflict-resolution process, as outlined in the Secretary-General's report (see above), but stressed that those developments were marred by the largest Abkhaz post-war military exercise held in the zone of responsibility of the Russian peacekeeping force. It also drew attention to the unresolved issues of the establishment of a UNOMIG human rights sub-office in Gali, the full deployment of its civilian police and the banning of instruction in the Georgian language in Gali schools.

Georgia also stated that the role of the Russian-led peacekeeping operation had been exhausted and called for a full-scale international UN-led peacekeeping operation. It also drew attention to the Georgian-South Ossetian peace plan announced by the Georgian Prime Minister on 26 October [A/60/547].

In identical letters of 9 November [A/60/552, S/2005/718] addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, Georgia transmitted an 11 October resolution adopted by its Parliament, which gave a negative assessment of the operations of the peacekeeping forces in Abkhazia and South Ossetia and seriously questioned its mandate, and instructed the Government to intensify negotiations with the Russian Federation, international organizations and interested countries on the fulfilment of obligations undertaken by those forces in Abkhazia and to report by 1 July 2006. If the assessment proved negative, it would demand a cessation of the operation and the withdrawal of Russian peacekeeping forces. The Government was also to submit a peace plan for Abkhazia by 1 May 2006.

Further report of Secretary-General. In a report covering developments on the situation in Abkhazia, Georgia, during late 2005 [S/2006/19], the Secretary-General stated that his Special Representative's contacts with the Group of Friends, the Russian Federation and the two sides were centred on the draft documents on the non-resumption of hostilities and the safe and dignified return of internally displaced persons. She convened meetings (6-7 December) in Sukhumi between the Georgian State Minister for Conflict Resolution and Abkhazia's de facto Foreign Minister, during which an understanding was reached on those documents, with both sides undertaking to secure their approval and signature. Georgian President Saakashvili reiterated his readiness to discuss without preconditions economic, humanitarian, confidence-building and security issues and to possibly sign the joint documents. The de facto Abkhaz President did not exclude the likelihood of such a meeting after a document on the non-resumption of hostilities had been initialled by the sides.

At its first meeting (Sukhumi, Georgia, 6 December), the Steering Committee for the rehabilitation programme in the conflict zone launched the first phase of the programme at an estimated cost of 4 million euros, thereby opening a new chapter in the economic dimension of the peace process. The two-year joint programme, financed by the European Commission and implemented by UNOMIG and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), aimed at improving the living conditions of the local population most affected by the conflict through the restoration of basic services, building confidence and enhancing security and stability in the area.

The Special Representative also facilitated a visit to Georgia from 21 to 24 December (see p. 870) by the Secretary-General's Representative on the human rights of internally displaced persons, who discussed with the Georgian and the de facto Abkhaz authorities ways to enhance the human rights of displaced persons in the zone of conflict.

On 19 November, the Secretary-General met with the Georgian President in Tbilisi and reiterated the UN's commitment to work closely with both sides and with the Group of Friends in search of a peaceful settlement to the conflict.

Those developments took place against the backdrop of an increasingly difficult and complex situation on the ground. The Georgian side called upon the international community to condemn human rights violations committed by the de facto Abkhaz authority and the lack of action by the CIS peacekeeping forces. Meanwhile, the promulgation of a new de facto law on Abkhaz citizenship raised concerns of the local Georgian population that those wishing to remain in Abkhazia would be forced to renounce their Georgian citizenship. The conscription of ethnic Georgians into the Abkhaz military created further tensions between both sides. Georgia protested those actions as attempts to establish a fait accompli prior to a comprehensive settlement of the conflict. The Abkhaz side responded that the escalated tension resulted from the activities of Georgian partisan groups, cross-ceasefire criminal elements and incorrect media reports. They also raised concerns over Georgia's increased military expenditure and the modernization of its armed forces, including the establishment of a military base in Senaki near the Zugdidi restricted weapons zone. The Special Representative discussed with both sides the new de facto Abkhaz law on citizenship and Georgian parliamentary action (see above) on the withdrawal of the CIS peacekeeping force from the conflict zone.

Situation on the ground

Kodori Valley

In early 2005, UNOMIG patrols in the Kodori Valley—the upper part of which was controlled by Georgia and the lower part by the de facto Abkhaz authorities—which were suspended because of inadequate security from both sides, resumed. UNOMIG conducted joint patrols with the CIS peacekeeping force in the lower part of the valley to assess the damage to the main road due to flooding and to monitor the situation on the ground. In December, UNOMIG engineers, with the CIS force, jointly repaired the road.

During the year, UNOMIG also continued to review the feasibility of resuming regular patrols in the upper valley and continued negotiations with the Georgian side to secure adequate security in that regard.

The Mission's patrolling capacity was greatly improved by the donation of two vehicles by the Swiss Government.

Gali and Zugdidi sectors

The overall military situation in the Gali sector was generally calm, but there was an increase in criminal activities throughout 2005. The de facto Abkhaz State Security Service increased its presence in the security zone by establishing three additional temporary posts that were later removed. In May and June, several incidents between the local population and Abkhaz armed personnel, including the forced removal of between 25 and 30 young men from the village of Okumi by Abkhaz military recruitment authorities, significantly increased tension in the area.

On 18 June, two UNOMIG patrol teams were robbed by armed gunmen, forcing UNOMIG to increase its security level in the lower Gali sector. In late 2005, violent attacks increased significantly, including the targeting of a de facto Abkhaz taxation representative and a de facto head of administration on 27 November and 18 December, respectively, the detonation of remotely controlled explosives, and the killing of the de facto Abkhaz chief of security of the Inguri hydro power station on 11 December. Criminal incidents, including smuggling, increased during the year. On 30 January, Georgian police were ambushed during an anti-smuggling operation and on 4 June Georgian police exchanged fire with a group of smugglers from the Abkhaz-controlled side of the ceasefire line.

A Georgian Interior Ministry special-purpose unit deployed near the ceasefire line detained four CIS peacekeeping soldiers on 21 March, who, according to Georgian officers, lacked clearly marked CIS insignia. They were released the same day after their identity was confirmed. The following day, the CIS peacekeeping force temporarily surrounded the headquarters of the Georgian unit and opposed their deployment in close proximity to the ceasefire line. UNOMIG officials mediated a meeting between the Georgian State Minister for Conflict Resolution and the Commander of the CIS peacekeeping force, which agreed that a joint fact-finding group would examine the situation. Subsequent discussions by the Joint Fact-Finding Group resulted in the Georgian unit being moved 150 metres away from the ceasefire line. Relations between the CIS peacekeeping force and the Georgian side were strained further by political tensions, resulting in several demonstrations against the force at its headquarters and at the main Inguri River bridge.

Humanitarian situation and human rights

United Nations agencies, international and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) continued to assist vulnerable groups affected by the conflict in Abkhazia, Georgia, by providing food, medical aid and infrastructure assistance, building capacities of local organizations, developing peace education, empowering women and creating economic opportunities. On 30 September, the Special Representative, the Head of the European Commission delegation to Georgia and Armenia and the UNDP Resident Representative in Georgia signed a memorandum of understanding on the funding and implementation of a programme for the Gali, Tkvarcheli, Ochamchira and Zugdidi districts, the first phase of which would focus on rehabilitation projects in the health and infrastructure sectors. UNDP, with funds provided by the European Commission and Norway, facilitated income generation through agriculture and the rehabilitation of drinking water and irrigation systems. UNHCR, in partnership with other organizations, launched confidence-building measures containing both protection and assistance activities, while the United Nations Children's Fund continued to provide rehabilitated schools with student and teacher supplies, as well as vaccines, immunization equipment and essential drugs, maternity, surgical and emergency health equipment to Abkhaz hospitals. The United Nations Development Fund for Women assisted in raising awareness about gender-based violence and reproductive health and promoted support for women's legal rights. The World Food Programme promoted community-based food-for-work activities, focusing on the rehabilitation of basic agricultural infrastructure and the upgrading of livelihoods of poor households through improved land use and assets.

UNOMIG continued to implement the programme for the protection and promotion of human rights in Abkhazia, Georgia. The human rights office in Sukhumi collected information from victims, witnesses and other reliable sources and followed up on cases related to due process, citizenship, arbitrary detention, treatment of detainees, impunity, involuntary disappearances, arbitrary evictions and property rights violations. The office continued to conduct regular visits to detention facilities, provide legal advisory services to the local population and monitor court trials. The de facto Abkhaz authorities still had not agreed to allow the Mission to open a human rights sub-office in the Gali district.

UNOMIG facilitated the first visit (19 and 20 February) to Sukhumi by the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (see p. 813). The office followed up with local residents and Abkhaz authorities on several alleged cases of involuntary disappearance, religious intolerance and ill-treatment in detention. Cases of denied access to detainees and the reluctance of the de facto authorities to cooperate with the office were registered. Together with local NGOs, the office commenced implementation of an Abkhazia-wide human rights programme, funded by Switzerland. In the Sukhumi militia training centre, UNOMIG staff and police advisers conducted a seven-week training course in human rights and law enforcement.

Financing

The General Assembly considered the UNOMIG financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/622], the Mission's budget for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [A/59/634], and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations thereon [A/59/736/Add.17].

On 22 June [meeting 104], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/834], adopted resolution 59/304 without vote [agenda item 131].

Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 854(1993) of 6 August 1993, by which the Council approved the deployment of an advance team of up to ten United Nations military observers for a period of three months and the incorporation of the advance team into a United Nations observer mission if such a mission was formally established by the Council,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 858(1993) of 24 August 1993, by which the Council established the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Observer Mission, the latest of which was resolution 1582(2005) of 28 January 2005,

Recalling further its decision 48/475 A of 23 December 1993 on the financing of the Observer Mission and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 58/303 of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Observer Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 11 million United States dollars, representing some 4 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only thirty-four Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Observer Mission in full;

4. Expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

5. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-

discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

6. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

7. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Observer Mission;

8. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all action necessary to ensure that the Observer Mission is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

11. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Observer Mission against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Mission;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

12. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Observer Mission for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

13. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia the amount of 36,380,000 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 34,562,100 dollars for the maintenance of the Observer Mission, 1,486,500 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 331,400 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

14. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 3,031,667 dollars for the period from 1 to 31 July 2005, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

15. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 14 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 207,575 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 187,833 dollars approved for the Observer Mission, the prorated share of 17,508 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 2,234 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

16. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 33,348,333 dollars for the period from 1 August 2005 to 30 June 2006 at a monthly rate of 3,031,666 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Observer Mission;

17. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,283,325 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,066,167 dollars approved for the Observer Mission, the prorated share of 192,592 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 24,566 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

18. Decides further that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraphs 14 and 16 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,104,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

19. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Observer Mission, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the total amount of 1,104,100 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 18 above;

20. Decides also that the increase of 179,600 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 1,104,100 dollars referred to in paragraphs 18 and 19 above;

21. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

22. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Observer Mission, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

23. Invites voluntary contributions to the Observer Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

24. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia".

Armenia and Azerbaijan

In 2005, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) Minsk Group (France, Russian Federation, United States) continued to mediate the dispute between Armenia and Azerbaijan, which had erupted in armed conflict in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388], after four years of sporadic fighting in the Nagorny Karabakh region of Azerbaijan. There was no change in the position of either country with regard to the conflict during the year. Both sides continued to address communications to the Secretary-General, clarifying their positions regarding the conflict or lodging complaints against the actions of the other. Nagorny Karabakh's communications were transmitted by Armenia.

The General Assembly, by decision 59/571 of 12 September, decided to defer consideration of the item entitled "The situation in the occupied territories of Azerbaijan" and to include it in the agenda of its sixtieth (2005) session.

Communications. On 2 February [A/59/689-S/2005/64], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General two resolutions adopted on 25 January by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe regretting that, after more than a decade, the Nagorny Karabakh conflict remained unresolved and calling on the OSCE Minsk Group Co-Chairs to take immediate steps to negotiate a political settlement and on the parties to submit to each other, through the Minsk Group, constructive proposals for the peaceful settlement of the conflict. Should negotiations fail, Armenia and Azerbaijan should consider submitting them to the International Court of Justice, in accordance with Article 36, paragraph 1 of the Court's statute. The two countries should also foster political reconciliation by increasing inter-parliamentary cooperation and the Secretary-General of the Council should draw up an action plan for specific support to the two countries targeted at mutual reconciliation processes.

On 24 February [A/59/713-S/2005/125], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General an appeal of refugees from Khodjaly to the United Nations, the Council of Europe and OSCE, to bring the truth of the genocide of February 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 388] to the attention of the world community and to call for a legal-political assessment of that crime. In its letter of transmittal, Azerbaijan regretted that, on the occasion of the thirteenth anniversary of that incident, the international community's response remained inadequate, a fact, it said, was noted by Congressman Dan Burton on 17 February in the United States House of Representatives. In a further letter of 28 February [A/59/720-S/2005/132 & Corr.1], Azerbaijan transmitted to the Secretary-General video films witnessing the Government-supported transfer of Armenians from Yerevan to the occupied Lachin region of Azerbaijan and satellite images of the occupied territories of Azerbaijan. Hard copies of the images were also attached to the letter.

For its part, Armenia, on 7 March [A/59/729-S/2005/145] said that Azerbaijan's actions had threatened the peace process and the relative stability established. Armenia had demonstrated its willingness and readiness to cooperate and to work towards finding a lasting solution to the Nagorny Karabakh conflict, which was possible only through a reduction in tension and discontinuation of hate propaganda. On 8 March [A/59/743-S/2005/184], Armenia refuted Azerbaijan's version of the 1992 incident contained in its February 24 letter (see above), reaffirming that its armed forces had no involvement in the 1992 incident and citing Azerbaijani accounts annexed to the letter to support its contention that the incident was part of Azerbaijan's internal power struggle. On 15 March [A/59/740-S/2005/171], Armenia forwarded to the Secretary-General an 8 March press statement issued by the Ministry of Defence of Nagorny Karabakh, informing of an attempt by an Azerbaijani intelligence-diversionary group to penetrate the rear of the army of Nagorny Karabakh in the north-east section of the contact line near Seysulan, in the Martakert region of Nagorny Karabakh. The statement appealed to Azerbaijan to strictly follow the ceasefire regime and not to threaten peace and security in the region.

Report of OSCE fact-finding mission. The Co-Chairs of OSCE Minsk Group went on a fact-finding mission (31 January–5 February) to the occupied territories of Azerbaijan surrounding Nagorny Karabakh. The mission, first proposed by Azerbaijan in a 1994 draft resolution in the General Assembly, was agreed to by the parties following a series of discussions organized by the Minsk Group Co-Chairs between the Foreign Ministers of Azerbaijan and Armenia. The Mission found evidence of the presence of settlers in the territories examined, but did not determine that such settlements resulted from a deliberate policy by Armenia. While there was evidence of varying degrees of support by the Nagorny Karabakh authorities to settlers in some regions, the Co-Chairs did not assess the extent to which there was coordination between the Government of Armenia and the Nagorny Karabakh authorities, who stated that they did indeed encourage settlements in Lachin (or Berdzor in Armenian maps), located in the narrow strip of territory between Nagorny Karabakh and Armenia. The Co-

Chairs noted that Lachin had been treated as a separate case in previous negotiations.

The Co-Chairs concluded that there was little disagreement between the two sides on the number of settlers and the nature of the settlements, but they did disagree on the question of government sponsorship and the place of origin of the settlers. The areas in question had undergone complete destruction and any settlement allowing the return of internally displaced persons and refugees would require substantial international assistance for reconstruction of shelter and infrastructure. Although most settlers expressed the desire to return to the areas from which they had fled, it was clear that the longer they remained in the occupied territories, the deeper their roots and attachment became. Prolonged continuation of the situation could lead to a fait accompli that could seriously complicate the peace process.

The Co-Chairs recommended that further settlement of the occupied territories be discouraged and urged the parties, as part of negotiations towards a political settlement, to address the problem of settlers and to avoid changes in the region's demographic structure. Relevant international agencies should re-evaluate the needs and funding assessments in the region for resettlement purposes. The Co-Chairs urged the parties to allow direct contact between interested communities as a way of ensuring the preservation of the cultural heritage and sacred sites of the affected regions, to develop practical confidence-building measures between the parties and the communities and to work with their public to prepare the groundwork for a peaceful settlement.

The report of the Co-chairs of the Minsk Group Fact-Finding Mission, together with the letter of transmittal to the OSCE Permanent Council, was transmitted to the Secretary-General by Armenia [A/59/742-S/2005/182] and Azerbaijan [A/59/747-S/2005/187] on 16 and 18 March, respectively.

EU statement. On 4 April [S/2005/246], Luxembourg forwarded to the Secretary-General a 30 March statement issued by the EU Presidency welcoming Azerbaijan's decree of 20 March pardoning 115 prisoners, 53 of whom were designated "political prisoners" by Council of Europe experts. It also expressed concern about the remaining political prisoners and called for their immediate release.

Cyprus

In 2005, the Cyprus problem remained unresolved, following the disappointing result in 2004 of the Secretary-General's mission of good offices, and little prospect of negotiations restarting in the near future. The Secretary-General continued to closely monitor the situation and dispatched a high-level UN official in May and June to Cyprus to assess whether the climate was conducive to a renewal of his mission of good offices. After consultations with both parties and with Greece and Turkey, the Secretary-General determined that progress was negligible at best and the conditions surrounding a resumption of negotiations needed to be further clarified. Despite the call by the parties for the resumption of those negotiations, the Secretary-General considered doing so inopportune. Meanwhile, the military situation on the island remained stable with only a few minor disturbances and small, unsuccessful attempts by each side to alter the status quo. The United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP) implemented a new concept of operations in February, which included a reduction of the Mission's military component and the introduction of a more mobile framework. The Secretary-General recommended that the Security Council extend UNFICYP's mandate, as revised, until June 2006.

Incidents and position statements

Communications. Throughout 2005, the Secretary-General received letters from the Government of Cyprus and from the Turkish Cypriot authorities containing charges and countercharges, protests and accusations, and explanations of positions regarding the question of Cyprus. Letters from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" were transmitted by Turkey.

In communications dated between 7 January and 16 November, Cyprus reported violations of its national airspace and unauthorized intrusion into Nicosia's flight information region by Turkish military jets and civilian aircraft, while those from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" claimed the existence of two independent States on the island of Cyprus and that the flights mentioned took place within the sovereign airspace of the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" [A/59/696-S/2005/75, A/59/755-S/2005/205, A/59/804-S/2005/319, A/59/815-S/2005/349, A/59/892-S/2005/510, A/59/903-S/2005/547, A/60/381-S/2005/607, A/60/411-S/2005/618, A/60/434-S/2005/654, A/60/445-S/2005/670, A/60/554-S/200/714, A/60/564-S/2005/733].

In other communications, the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" authorities objected strongly to the mistreatment of Turkish Cypriots visiting the southern portion of the island, which they claimed was the result of a rising trend of racism, chauvinism and ultra-nationalism among the Greek Cypriots. They also objected to the decision by the Greek Cypriot Government to declare 2005 "The Year for Remembrance and Honouring of EOKA Liberation Struggle", a right-wing nationalist group that supported the complete annexation of the island to Greece [A/59/760-S/2005/214, A/60/442-S/2005/666, A/60/557-S/2005/721].

Cyprus brought to the attention of the Secretary-General on 8 April a decision by the European Court of Human Rights concerning property rights in Cyprus, which rejected Turkey's objections on jurisdiction of a Greek Cypriot's property claim in the northern area of the island and considered that the remedies established to compensate losses in the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" could not be regarded as "effective" or "adequate" means for redressing the applicant's complaints [A/59/777-S/2005/234]. The "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus", in a 31 May response [A/59/821-S/2005/358], noted that the Court's decision was preliminary, based on admissibility, and recounted that the "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" [YUN 2004, p. 438] provided for the establishment of a property board, and recognized that the situation was too complicated to be settled by individual application to the Court. It emphasized that the property issue in Cyprus needed a political solution.

In a 14 June letter [A/59/846-S/2005/387], Cyprus alerted the Secretary-General to the Turkish military actions to reinforce its presence in the northern part of the island, which were refuted, on 28 June [A/59/866-S/2005/439], by the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus". Other letters related to claims by Cyprus of the destruction of cultural heritage [A/60/404-S/2005/622], disturbing statements reportedly made by the Commander of land forces of the Turkish army during his January visit to the occupied areas of Cyprus [A/59/699-S/2005/85], Cyprus's response to Turkish Cypriot claims of racism, chauvinism and ultranationalism (see above) [A/60/558-S/2005/722], violations of the military status quo by the Turkish occupation forces [A/60/446-S/2005/675], and statements reportedly made by the de facto Turkish Cypriot leader concerning the latest efforts to resolve the Cyprus problem [A/59/899-S/2005/537].

Letters from the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" refuted distortions and misinformation regarding the intentions of the de facto Turkish Cypriot leadership [A/60/375-S/2005/601], and contained accusations relating to the Greek Cypriot policy of the continuation of the usurped "Republic of Cyprus" and its goal of extending its authority to northern Cyprus [A/59/906-S/2005/538].

Good offices mission

In 2005, the overall situation in Cyprus remained stable. Official contacts between the Greek Cypriot and the Turkish Cypriot sides, which had ceased since the April 2004 referenda [YUN 2004, p. 440] on the "Comprehensive Settlement of the Cyprus Problem" [ibid., p. 438], had not resumed and there was little sign of an improvement in relations. Differences on core issues of the Cyprus problem were evident during the regular monthly meetings of the political leaders of the two sides, and separate meetings with leaders of political parties of both sides produced no tangible results beyond general declarations of support for a just settlement. However, on 9 May, the Secretary-General held informal consultations with the President of Cyprus, Tassos Papadopoulos, and Turkey's Prime Minister, Recep Tayyip Erdogan. Subsequently, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, held preliminary discussions in New York (16-20 May) with a Greek Cypriot delegation to explore the possibility of resuming negotiations. At the Secretary-General's request, the Under-Secretary-General also held consultations in Cyprus, Greece and Turkey between 30 May and 7 June to seek their respective views on the UN's role in the current circumstances.

Security Council consideration. In his briefing to the Security Council on 22 June [meeting 5211] on the results of those discussions, the Under-Secretary-General reported that Mr. Papadopoulos, while expressing his eagerness for negotiations to resume under the auspices of the Secretary-General, cautioned that they should be carefully prepared but not open-ended, with no deadlines and no arbitration of important issues by the United Nations or any other third party, and that only a settlement agreed by the parties should be submitted to referendum. He believed that future negotiations would be successful only if the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkey were prepared to meet outstanding Greek Cypriot concerns during those negotiations, which included areas of governance, security, citizenship, residency, property, territory, economic and financial issues, transition periods and guarantees of implementation. The Under-Secretary-General indicated to him that, while the United Nations understood those concerns, their breadth and depth might be daunting for the other side, and advised that he produce a list of focused, finite, manageable and prioritized proposals, which he declined to do.

The Turkish Cypriot leader, Mehmet Ali Talat, also wanted negotiations under the auspices of the Secretary-General to resume as soon as possible, based on the Comprehensive Settlement, but with clear time limits for negotiations, since he was concerned that talks might drag on indefinitely. His concerns related to territory, property, resettlement of Turkish Cypriots, financing and guarantees against usurpation of the settlement arrangement by either side. He expressed his disappointment at the failure of the Council and the international community to react to the Secretary-General's May 2004 good offices report [ibid., p. 440] describing the negotiating process and assessing its outcome, and the lack of action to help ease the unjustifiable isolation and punishment of the Turkish Cypriots. Mr. Talat regarded the Greek Cypriot concerns as unacceptable and outside the parameters of the Comprehensive Settlement.

The Under-Secretary-General, in his conclusions, noted the acceptance by the parties that negotiations should resume on the basis of the Comprehensive Settlement, the wide gap between their stated positions, and the low level of confidence between them. He suggested that a prioritized and exhaustive list of concrete proposals for further negotiations would be an important advance in the process. However, while the persistence of the status quo on the island was unacceptable, launching an intensive new process prematurely would be inadvisable. The Secretary-General, therefore, intended to reflect on the future of his mission of good offices, taking into account the Council's reaction and developments on the ground, particularly the evolving positions of the respective parties.

Statement by President of Cyprus. On 18 September [meeting 11], the Cyprus President, in his address during the General Assembly's general debate, said that the Comprehensive Settlement was rejected because it did not provide for and could not bring about the reunification of the country, its society and institutions. However, since the 2004 referenda, the priority had been on revisiting the content, product and shortcomings of the last negotiating process and on dispelling certain misconceptions. He declared that, contrary to general opinion, the Secretary-General's mandate for the good offices mission had not ended but had entered a new phase. It was an ongoing and sustained process, through which a negotiated settlement could be brokered without arbitration and deadlines. Cyprus remained committed to holding those negotiations under UN auspices and to creating conditions for making them fruitful. In that context, Cyprus had been implementing substantial practical measures to build confidence and promote the economic development of the Turkish Cypriots, with the hope of making progress on other aspects of the Cyprus problem, especially the fate of missing persons and the welfare of those in the enclaves. The Cyprus problem was at a critical juncture. Revival of the talks required thorough preparation and an honest assessment that the prospect of success was at least credible.

Communication. In a 4 October letter transmitted to the Secretary-General by Turkey [A/60/414-S/2005/628], the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" refuted the statements made by President Papadopoulus to the Assembly on 18 September. It suggested that the Cypriot President, in asserting that the Comprehensive Settlement was divisive and could not bring about reunification, was implying that the United Nations had somehow finalized a plan that was outside the parameters of the Council's resolution and did not envisage the reunification of the island. Furthermore, the demand for a new UN process, free of arbitration and deadlines, was a recipe for another 40 years of inconclusive negotiations. Lingering Greek Cypriot concerns about security and implementation of the Comprehensive Settlement needed to be articulated with clarity and finality. The Turkish Cypriot people had demonstrated their will and resolution for the reunification of the island in line with international treaties on Cyprus and UN parameters, but they were equally resolute in rejecting a minority status in the island in a Greek-run "Republic of Cyprus".

Report of Secretary-General (November). In his November report on UNFICYP [S/2005/743 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General informed the Council that, in meetings with the Greek Cypriot (16 September) and the Turkish Cypriot (31 October) leaders, supported by Greece and Turkey, both sides had requested him to resume his mission of good offices and to consider holding a new round of negotiations. The Turkish Cypriot leader, Mr. Talat, also raised the issue of ending the isolation of the Turkish Cypriots. However, the Secretary-General advised that the time was not right to resume his mission of good offices, or to appoint a full-time person dedicated to the Cyprus problem, since the conditions surrounding such a resumption required further clarification, but he would continue to dispatch, on an ad hoc basis, senior Secretariat officials to visit Cyprus, Greece and Turkey to assess the situation on the ground.

UNFICYP

In 2005, the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP), established in 1964 [YUN 1964, p. 165], continued to monitor the ceasefire lines between the Turkish and Turkish Cypriot forces on the northern side and the Cypriot

National Guard on the southern side of the island; maintain the military status quo and prevent a recurrence of fighting; and undertake humanitarian and economic activities. In the absence of a formal ceasefire agreement, UNFICYP's task was to judge whether changes in military positions constituted violations of the military status quo, as recorded by the Force in 1974. UNFICYP, under the overall authority of the Secretary-General's Special Representative and Chief of Mission, Zbigniew Wlosowicz (Poland), continued to keep the area between the ceasefire lines, known as the buffer zone, under constant surveillance through a system of observation posts and air, vehicle and foot patrols.

The Secretary-General informed the Security Council on 12 September [S/2005/589] of his intention to appoint Michael Moller (Denmark) to replace Mr. Wlosowicz, whose assignment ended on 30 November, which the Council noted on 15 September [S/2005/590].

As at 31 December, UNFICYP, under the command of Major General Herbert Joaquin Figoli Almandos (Uruguay), comprised 840 troops and 69 civilian police.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (May). In his May report [S/2005/353] covering UNFICYP activities from 25 September 2004 to 20 May 2005, the Secretary-General indicated that the military security situation in Cyprus remained stable and the overall number of incidents along the ceasefire lines decreased. Since November 2004, over 250,000 square metres of Greek Cypriot National Guard minefields in the buffer zone were cleared and 400 anti-personnel and some 900 anti-tank mines removed. On 19 May, the Turkish Cypriot side lifted restrictions imposed since July 2000 on UNFICYP's movement in the north, thereby enabling the Force to effectively restore operations in and around the buffer zone.

On 7 February, the Force commenced the new concept of operations (concentration with mobility) announced in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 445], reducing its operational sites from 12 to 4 camps, its permanent observation posts from 17 to 2, and its patrol bases from 21 to 9. Patrols were increased in frequency (from 50 to 200 per day) and extended in duration to prevent operational gaps resulting from the closure of static observation posts. A joint UNFICYP/Headquarters review team visited the island (6-11 May) to assess UNFICYP's restructuring and the implementation of the new concept of operations. The review team found that the changes had allowed UNFICYP to maintain the same level of mandate implementation, while the introduction of a military observer and liaison group had increased the emphasis on liaison, observation and mediation rather than on the interposition of forces. The civilian police and civil affairs tasks continued to increase in number and complexity, as had requests from both sides for assistance. Regarding the possibility of further reductions in force strength, the review team concluded that more time and experience was needed to assess the full impact of the new concept before taking decisions in that regard. The Secretary-General, while agreeing with the team's observation, noted that delays in the recruitment and deployment of staff had not allowed the new concept to reach its full potential.

UNFICYP's support of projects in the buffer zone continued, especially in the areas of infrastructure, farming and ecology. It also continued its humanitarian assistance and provided facilities for 57 bicommunal events, bringing together some 2,500 Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots. While the movement of people across the buffer zone was steady, trade was limited by technical and political hurdles. In February, the European Council raised the ceiling on the value of personal goods to 135 euros and expanded the list of personal items and agricultural goods that could be taken across the line. The Turkish Cypriot side took reciprocal action with regard to personal goods.

The European Commission's recommendation of a 259 million euro aid package for the north of the island was yet to be acted upon, for while the Greek Cypriot side supported it, the Turkish Cypriot side agreed to accept it only together with the Commission's recommendation on direct trade between the north of the island and the EU.

Cyprus' EU membership had raised other concerns. In the area of property, it had opened new fronts of litigation and acrimony, with hundreds of Greek Cypriots' claims against Turkey for loss of property rights pending before the European Court of Human Rights. In addition, Greek Cypriots had approached courts in the south for EU arrest warrants against foreigners buying or selling Greek Cypriot property in the north. The prospect of an increase of people-to-people litigation in property cases posed a serious threat to the reconciliation process.

The Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend UNFICYP's mandate until 15 December 2005.

On 15 June [meeting 5202], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1604(2005).

The draft [S/2005/382] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 27 May 2005 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus,

Reiterating its call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness, and welcoming in this regard the resumption of the activities of the Committee on Missing Persons since August 2004,

Welcoming the Secretary-General's review of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, pursuant to resolution 1568(2004) of 22 October 2004,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions on the island it is necessary to keep the Force beyond 15 June 2005,

Taking note of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the security situation on the island continues to be stable and that the situation along the Green Line remains calm, and, nonetheless, that there were problems in a few sensitive areas, and welcoming in this context the further decrease in the overall number of incidents involving the two sides,

Welcoming the Secretary-General's intention to keep the operations of the Force under close review, continuing to take into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties, and to revert to the Council with recommendations for further adjustments as appropriate to the mandate, force levels and concept of operation of the Force once he judges that sufficient time has passed since the implementation of its new concept of operations to make this assessment,

Taking note with satisfaction of the lifting of restrictions of movement of the Force by the Turkish Cypriot side and the Turkish forces, and taking note in this connection that the Force enjoys good cooperation from both sides,

Welcoming the fact that over seven million crossings by Greek Cypriots to the north and Turkish Cypriots to the south have taken place, and encouraging the opening of additional crossing points,

Expressing concern at the increase in crime across the ceasefire line and urging both sides to increase cooperation in order to address this issue,

Welcoming all efforts to promote bicommunal contacts and events, including on the part of the United Nations, and urging the two sides to promote further bicommunal contacts and to remove any obstacles to such contacts,

Echoing the Secretary-General's gratitude to the Government of Cyprus and the Government of Greece for their voluntary contributions to the funding of the Force, and his request for further voluntary contributions from other countries and organizations,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1251(1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus for a further period ending 15 December 2005;

3. Calls upon the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkish forces to restore in Strovilia the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report by 1 December 2005 on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including the conduct of predeployment awareness training, and to take disciplinary action and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Communication. On 16 August [A/59/897-S/2005/531], the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus", responding to the Secretary-General's report (see p. 494) and the Council's resolution, provided information on what it considered a number of inaccuracies and misrepresentations contained in the report.

Earlier, on 31 May [A/59/820-S/2005/355], the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" had called for the lifting of all restrictions on the territory and made known its proposals, on 30 May, for reaching a just, durable and comprehensive solution to the Cyprus problem. They included the free movement of people, goods and services to and from the Turkish Cypriot side and between the north and the south; the lifting of all restrictions applied to seaports and airports, including direct flights; the elimination of restrictions regarding third-country nationals; special arrangements for the direct inclusion of the north as an economic entity in the EU's customs union and for the enjoyment of its full benefits by all Turkish Cypriots; and the removal of obstacles that prevented the Turkish Cypriot side from participating in international sports, cultural and other activities.

Cyprus, in a 29 June response [A/59/857-S/2005/422], said that those proposals contravened international law and Council resolutions by attempting to upgrade the status of the illegal entity established by the use of forces in the northern part of Cyprus and elaborate policies for which Turkey had been repeatedly condemned. Over the past two years, the Government of Cyprus had been providing Turkish Cypriots with a generous package of measures, including social benefits, free medical care and employment opportunities. It had also advocated that the 259 million euros earmarked for 2004-2006 by the European Commission for the Turkish Cypriots, in the event of a Cyprus settlement, be made available to them immediately, and that the number of crossing points for persons and goods at the dividing line be increased.

Report of Secretary-General (November). In a 29 November report on UNFICYP [S/2005/743 & Corr.1], the Secretary-General stated that, although the number of incidents continued to decrease since the implementation of the new concept of operations, a few of them raised significant concerns, especially an incursion by Turkish Forces into the buffer zone in the Louroujina Pocket, the placement of buoys by Turkish Forces close to the western maritime security line, the entry into the buffer zone and the removal of a Turkish flag from a Turkish Cypriot observation post by a Greek Cypriot civilian, and shots fired at UNFICYP personnel by a Greek Cypriot hunter. For the first time since 2001, military exercises were held in November by both the Cypriot National Guard and the Turkish Forces/Turkish Cypriot security forces.

The clearing of mines continued. On 5 August, UNFICYP secured an agreement to begin clearing Turkish minefields in Nicosia and the surrounding areas within the buffer zone. Since May, some 78,132 square metres were cleared and more than 470 anti-personnel and approximately 430 anti-tank mines destroyed.

UNFICYP continued to promote confidence-building activities between the two sides and worked to open more border crossing points in order to promote bilateral trade. In August, it facilitated the temporary opening of the Astromeritis/Bostanci crossing point until the completion of the EU-funded road construction project within the buffer zone. During the reporting period, UNFICYP police and military components conducted 62 humanitarian convoys, money runs and humanitarian visits. In September, UNFICYP assisted with the delivery of textbooks for Greek Cypriot primary and secondary schools in the north and facilitated the appointment of seven teachers at the secondary level.

UNFICYP civilian police increased contacts with both sides as a result of increased staffing and monitored and followed up on approximately 100 cases of Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots involved in criminal court proceedings on both sides of the buffer zone.

The Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus held 20 meetings throughout the year in Cyprus. On 30 June, it reached agreement in principle on a common programme of exhumations and identification scheduled to begin in 2006. Further agreements were reached in September and November on the establishment of an anthropological laboratory in the buffer zone, where collected remains from both sides could be stored. The project, which would be staffed by the Inforce Foundation Centre for Forensic Science, Technology and Law based in the United Kingdom and financed by voluntary contributions, was expected to last for three to four years.

The Secretary-General, in his conclusions, said that the early completion of the work of the Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus and a solution to that problem would greatly contribute to reconciliation. He therefore urged all concerned to redouble their efforts and put aside political considerations in order to close that painful humanitarian chapter and end the suffering of the relatives of missing persons. He recommended that UNFICYP's mandate be extended until 15 June 2006.

On 14 December [meeting 5324], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1642 (2005). The draft [S/2005/784] was submitted by the United Kingdom.

The Security Council,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General of 29 November 2005 on the United Nations operation in Cyprus,

Reiterating its call to the parties to assess and address the humanitarian issue of missing persons with due urgency and seriousness, and welcoming in this regard the resumption of the activities of the Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus since August 2004, as well as the intention of the Secretary-General to appoint a third member as of January 2006 and to reinforce his office,

Noting that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that, in view of the prevailing conditions on the island, it is necessary to keep the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus beyond 15 December 2005,

Taking note of the assessment of the Secretary-General that the security situation on the island continues to be stable and that the situation along the Green Line remains calm, welcoming in this context the further decrease in the overall number of incidents involving the two sides, while noting nonetheless that there were incidents of significant concern,

Urging both sides to avoid any action which could lead to an increase in tension, and taking note with concern, in this context, of the conduct, for the first time since 2001, of the "Nikiforos" military exercise, and, afterwards, the "Toros" military exercise,

Regretting that progress towards a political solution has been negligible at best, and urging both sides to work towards the resumption of negotiations for a comprehensive settlement,

Welcoming the continuous engagement of the Secretary-General in the search for a comprehensive settlement of the Cyprus problem,

Welcoming also all demining activity in the buffer zone, including the agreement to begin the clearing of

Turkish Forces minefields in Nicosia and surrounding areas within the buffer zone,

Expressing its concern that, since the release of the report of the Secretary-General, differences have arisen over construction activity related to the proposed additional crossing point at Ledra Street, and urging both sides to cooperate with the Force to resolve this issue,

Welcoming the intention of the Secretary-General to keep the operations of the Force under close review while continuing to take into account developments on the ground and the views of the parties, and to revert to the Security Council with recommendations, as appropriate, for further adjustments of the mandate, force levels and concept of operation of the Force as soon as warranted,

Welcoming also the fact that over nine million crossings by Greek Cypriots to the north and Turkish Cypriots to the south have taken place, and encouraging the opening of additional crossing points,

Welcoming further all efforts to promote bicommunal contacts and events, including, inter alia, on the part of the United Nations, and urging the two sides to promote further bicommunal contacts and to remove any obstacles to such contacts,

Echoing the Secretary-General's gratitude to the Government of Cyprus and the Government of Greece for their voluntary contributions to the funding of the Force, and his request for further voluntary contributions from other countries and organizations,

Welcoming and encouraging efforts by the United Nations to sensitize peacekeeping personnel in the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS and other communicable diseases in all its peacekeeping operations,

1. Reaffirms all its relevant resolutions on Cyprus, in particular resolution 1251(1999) of 29 June 1999 and subsequent resolutions;

2. Expresses its full support for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus, and decides to extend its mandate for a further period ending 15 June 2006;

3. Calls upon the Turkish Cypriot side and Turkish forces to restore in Strovilia the military status quo which existed there prior to 30 June 2000;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution by 1 June 2006;

5. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including conducting predeployment awareness training, and to take disciplinary action and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Financing

On 13 April [meeting 91], the General Assembly, having considered the Secretary-General's report on UNFICYP's financial performance for the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/59/718], and ACABQ's related comments and recommendations [A/59/734], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/770 & Add.1], resolution 59/284 A without vote [agenda item 126].

Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus

A

The General Assembly,

Having considered the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 186(1964) of 4 March 1964, regarding the establishment of the Force, and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which is resolution 1568(2004) of 22 October 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 47/236 of 14 September 1993 on the financing of the Force for the period beginning 16 June 1993 and its subsequent resolutions and decisions thereon, the latest of which is resolution 58/301 of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force by certain Governments,

Noting that voluntary contributions were insufficient to cover all the costs of the Force, including those incurred by troop-contributing Governments prior to 16 June 1993, and regretting the absence of an adequate response to appeals for voluntary contributions, including that contained in the letter dated 17 May 1994 from the Secretary-General to all Member States,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the note by the Secretary-General on the financing arrangements for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Also takes note of the status of contributions to the Force as at 28 February 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 24.1 million United States dollars, representing some 10 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-one Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Endorses the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to expedite negotiations with the host Government on issues surrounding the relocation of military contingent personnel as well as other personnel of the Force, in accordance with the provisions of the March 1964 Agreement between the United Nations and the Government of Cyprus;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

13. Decides to continue to maintain as separate the account established for the Force for the period prior to 16 June 1993, invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to that account, and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in appealing for voluntary contributions to the account;

14. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

15. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

16. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

17. Decides to keep under review during its fifty-ninth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus".

On 22 June [meeting 104], the Assembly, having considered the performance report on UNFICYP's budget for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/620], its budget for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [A/59/656 & Add.1] and the ACABQ report thereon [A/59/736/ Add.6], adopted, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/770/Add.1], resolution 59/284 B, without vote [agenda item 126].

B

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 186(1964) of 4 March 1964 regarding the establishment of the Force and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1568(2004) of 22 October 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force by certain Governments,

Noting that voluntary contributions were insufficient to cover all the costs of the Force, including those incurred by troop-contributing Governments prior to 16 June 1993, and regretting the absence of an adequate response to appeals for voluntary contributions, including that contained in the letter dated 17 May 1994 from the Secretary-General to all Member States,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals, in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 14.1 million United States dollars, representing some 6 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only fifty-five Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Endorses the observations and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

13. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

14. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus the amount of 1,665,400 dollars for the maintenance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, in addition to the amount of 45,772,600 dollars already appropriated for the Force for the same period under the terms of its resolution 57/332 of 18 June 2003;

Financing of the additional appropriation for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

15. Notes with appreciation that a one-third share of the net additional appropriation, equivalent to 500,800 dollars, will be funded through voluntary contributions from the Government of Cyprus;

16. Decides, taking into account the amount of 24,705,100 dollars already apportioned under the terms of its resolution 57/332, to apportion among Member States the additional amount of 1,164,600 dollars for the maintenance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

17. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the amount of 163,000 dollars, representing the additional staff assessment income for the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

18. Decides further that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share of other income in the amount of 701,231 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 16 above;

19. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of other income in the amount of 701,231 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 16 above;

20. Decides also, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2004, that one third of other income in the amount of 451,300 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be returned to the Government of Cyprus;

21. Decides further, taking into account its voluntary contribution for the financial period ended 30 June 2004, that the prorated share of other income in the amount of 201,369 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be returned to the Government of Greece;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

22. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus the amount of 46,512,600 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 44,184,300 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 1,903,800 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 424,500 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

23. Notes with appreciation that a one-third share of the net appropriation, equivalent to 14,699,000 dollars, will be funded through voluntary contributions from the Government of Cyprus and the amount of 6.5 million dollars from the Government of Greece;

24. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 25,313,600 dollars at a monthly rate of 2,109,466 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

25. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 24 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 2,415,600 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 2,112,100 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 269,100 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 34,400 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

26. Decides further to continue to maintain as separate the account established for the Force for the period prior to 16 June 1993, invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to that account and requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts in appealing for voluntary contributions to the account;

27. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

28. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

29. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

30. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force in Cyprus".

In December, the Secretary-General further submitted the performance report on UNFICYP's budget for the period form 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/60/584] and the budget for the period from 1 July 2006 to 30 June 2007 [A/60/592].

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/108 [YUN 2004, p. 448], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/118] containing replies received from Albania, Burkina Faso and Turkey to his 25 February note verbale requesting the views of States and intergovernmental organizations on ways to strengthen cooperation in the Mediterranean region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/60/468], adopted resolution 60/94 without vote [agenda item 102].

Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject, including resolution 59/108 of 3 December 2004,

Reaffirming the primary role of the Mediterranean countries in strengthening and promoting peace, security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region,

Bearing in mind all the previous declarations and commitments, as well as all the initiatives taken by the riparian countries at the recent summits, ministerial meetings and various forums concerning the question of the Mediterranean region,

Recognizing the indivisible character of security in the Mediterranean and that the enhancement of cooperation among Mediterranean countries with a view to promoting the economic and social development of all peoples of the region will contribute significantly to stability, peace and security in the region,

Recognizing also the efforts made so far and the determination of the Mediterranean countries to intensify the process of dialogue and consultations with a view to resolving the problems existing in the Mediterranean region and to eliminating the causes of tension and the consequent threat to peace and security, and their growing awareness of the need for further joint efforts to strengthen economic, social, cultural and environmental cooperation in the region,

Recognizing further that prospects for closer Euro-Mediterranean cooperation in all spheres can be enhanced by positive developments worldwide, in particular in Europe, in the Maghreb and in the Middle East,

Reaffirming the responsibility of all States to contribute to the stability and prosperity of the Mediterranean region and their commitment to respecting the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations as well as the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Expressing its concern at the persistent tension and continuing military activities in parts of the Mediterranean that hinder efforts to strengthen security and cooperation in the region,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that security in the Mediterranean is closely linked to European security as well as to international peace and security;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the continuing efforts by Mediterranean countries to contribute actively to the elimination of all causes of tension in the region and to the promotion of just and lasting solutions to the persistent problems of the region through peaceful means, thus ensuring the withdrawal of foreign forces of occupation and respecting the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of all countries of the Mediterranean and the right of peoples to self-determination, and therefore calls for full adherence to the principles of non-interference, non-intervention, non-use of force or threat of use of force and the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with the Charter and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Commends the Mediterranean countries for their efforts in meeting common challenges through coordinated overall responses, based on a spirit of multilateral partnership, towards the general objective of turning the Mediterranean basin into an area of dialogue, exchanges and cooperation, guaranteeing peace, stability and prosperity, encourages them to strengthen such efforts through, inter alia, a lasting multilateral and action-oriented cooperative dialogue among States of the region, and recognizes the role of the United Nations in promoting regional and international peace and security;

4. Recognizes that the elimination of the economic and social disparities in levels of development and other obstacles as well as respect and greater understanding among cultures in the Mediterranean area will contribute to enhancing peace, security and cooperation among Mediterranean countries through the existing forums;

5. Calls upon all States of the Mediterranean region that have not yet done so to adhere to all the multilaterally negotiated legal instruments related to the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, thus creating the necessary conditions for strengthening peace and cooperation in the region;

6. Encourages all States of the region to favour the necessary conditions for strengthening the confidence-building measures among them by promoting genuine openness and transparency on all military matters, by participating, inter alia, in the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures and by providing accurate data and information to the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms;

7. Encourages the Mediterranean countries to strengthen further their cooperation in combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations, taking into account the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and in combating international crime and illicit arms transfers and illicit drug production, consumption and trafficking, which pose a serious threat to peace, security and stability in the region and therefore to the improvement of the current political, economic and social situation and which jeopardize friendly relations among States, hinder the development of international cooperation and result in the destruction of human rights, fundamental freedoms and the democratic basis of pluralistic society;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on means to strengthen security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Strengthening of security and cooperation in the Mediterranean region".

Cooperation with the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe

On 2 September [A/59/908], Slovenia, on behalf of the member States of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), requested that consideration of the sub-item "Cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe" be deferred to the General Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session and be included in the agenda of that session, as no agreement had been reached on the text of a draft resolution on the subject. The request was made on the understanding that, without setting a precedent, the sub-item would again be considered under the item entitled "Cooperation between the United Nations and regional and other organizations", which was to be included in the agenda of the sixty-first (2006) session and be considered biennially, pursuant to Assembly resolution 55/285 [YUN 2001, p. 1287].

By decision 59/567 of 12 September, the Assembly agreed to that request.

Chapter VI

Middle East

The conflict in the Middle East abated somewhat during the first months of 2005, as actions by Israeli and Palestinians leaders generated new hopes for peace. The summit meeting held at Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 8 February, produced a series of commitments, including a halt to violence and military activities, aimed at rebuilding trust and breaking the cycle of bloodshed. Although formal negotiations were not resumed, the two parties agreed to coordinate the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank. Israel's disengagement from those areas, which took place between 15 August and 12 September, marked a watershed in that it constituted the first removal of Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. However, the disengagement failed to revive the peace process due to a resurgence of violence during the last months of 2005. A November Agreement on Movement and Access between Israel and the Palestinian Authority (PA), which called, among other things, for the continuous operation of the border crossings between Gaza and Israel, was not fully implemented by the end of the year. Israel's ongoing construction of the separation wall in the occupied territories and restrictions on movement in the form of checkpoints, curfews and the permit system greatly contributed to the continuing humanitarian and socio-economic crisis in the Palestinian areas.

The Palestinian presidential election, the first to be held since 1996, took place, on 9 January, in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Voters elected the Chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Mahmoud Abbas, as the new President of the PA to replace Yasser Arafat, who died on 11 November 2004. Four rounds of municipal elections were also held throughout the year. President Abbas repeatedly called for an end to violence and promoted Palestinian reforms, especially in the security sector. He faced major fiscal and budgetary problems, which threatened to paralyze the PA's administration. In addition, a number of unintegrated Palestinian militia groups, clans and individual force commanders continued to wield undue influence. The political wing of the Islamic organization, Hamas, took part in the municipal elections, though it boycotted the presidential one. Legislative elections were scheduled to take place in January 2006.

In Israel, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon carried out the disengagement plan, originally announced in February 2004, despite strong domestic opposition. The international community commended the Israeli Government for the smooth and professional execution of the disengagement operation. Throughout 2005, Israel expressed concern over the inability by the PA to control Palestinian terrorist organizations and dismantle their infrastructure.

The Quartet, a coordinating mechanism for international peace efforts, comprising the Russian Federation, the United States, the European Union and the United Nations, continued to promote the road map initiative as the best solution to the conflict. The road map, which was endorsed by the Security Council in 2003, aimed to achieve progress through parallel and reciprocal steps by Israel and the PA in the political, security, economic, humanitarian and institution-building areas, under an international monitoring system. In April, the Quartet principals named James D. Wolfensohn as their Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement, whose mandate focused on the non-security aspects of the Israeli withdrawal, including trade, and the revival of the Palestinian economy.

In March, the United Kingdom hosted a meeting on supporting the PA, which was attended by representatives of the Quartet, including the Secretary-General. The participants agreed to support the Palestinian leadership in its efforts to strengthen the PA's institutions.

During a visit to Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory in March, the Secretary-General urged the two sides to seek further progress through direct dialogue and negotiations. In May, he appointed Alvaro de Soto as the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and his Personal Representative to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the PA.

In February, a bomb attack killed former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and 20 others in Beirut. The Secretary-General designated a Special Envoy for the implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004), which called, among other measures, for the withdrawal of foreign forces from the country and the disbanding and disarmament of militias. In addition, the Secretary-General dispatched a team of military experts to Lebanon at the end of April to verify whether Syrian military assets, except in one disputed border area, had been withdrawn fully from Lebanon. He sent the team back in June to clarify allegations that Syrian intelligence operatives continued to operate in the country. The assassination of Mr. Hariri, occurring only months before planned parliamentary elections, raised fears that Lebanon would return to its violent past. In condemning the attack, the Security Council requested that the Secretary-General report on the causes, circumstances and consequences of the attack. A UN mission of inquiry, which was dispatched by the Secretary-General, concluded that an international commission should independently investigate the crime. The Council established the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC). In resolution 1636(2005), it took note, with concern, of the Commission's conclusion that there was converging evidence pointing to the involvement of both Lebanese and Syrian officials in Mr. Hariri's assassination, and insisted that Syria should not interfere in Lebanese domestic affairs.

The mandates of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force in the Golan Heights were extended twice during the year, and the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization continued to assist both peacekeeping operations in their tasks.

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide education and health and social services to over four million Palestinian refugees living both in and outside camps in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, as well as in Jordan.

During the year, the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories reported to the Assembly on the situation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, the Gaza Strip and the Golan Heights. The Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People continued to mobilize international support for the Palestinians.

Peace process

Overall situation

The Secretary-General, in a November report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/60/539-S/2005/701] (see also p. 535), said that, despite setbacks, 2005 witnessed the successful completion of the Israeli disengagement from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank, first announced by prime Minister Ariel Sharon in February 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 455]. On 12 September, Israel withdrew the last of its military personnel and installations from the Gaza Strip, and by 20 September from four settlements in the northern West Bank, thereby putting an end to its permanent presence in the area. As Israel's first withdrawal from the Occupied Palestinian Territory since the occupation began in 1967, it was a landmark in Israeli-Palestinian relations, setting an important precedent for the eventual realization of the two-State solution.

In the aftermath of the Israeli withdrawal, the Quartet's Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement, James D. Wolfensohn, who had helped to enhance crucial channels of coordination between the parties during the disengagement process, continued to follow up on a six-point agenda: border crossings and trade corridors; movement between the West Bank and Gaza; movement within the West Bank; the Gaza airport and seaport; the houses in the Israeli settlements; and their agricultural assets. Many of those issues remained unresolved. Mr. Wolfensohn identified three key areas for the Palestinian Authority (PA) to address: the PA's fiscal crisis and development of a fiscal stabilization plan to be included in the 2006 budget; the creation of a general development plan related to a fiscally sound financial plan for 2006-2008; and the design of quick-impact economic programmes for short-term employment generation. Those issues were important elements of the foundations for economic recovery, good governance and eventual statehood.

The Palestinian presidential election, held in January, was complicated by the continuing Israeli occupation and restrictions on freedom of movement imposed in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. However, voter turnout was high. Mahmoud Abbas, who won with 62.5 per cent of the votes, was elected President. Elections for the Palestinian Legislative Council were scheduled to be held in January 2006. The PA leadership sought to encourage groups engaged in terrorism to abandon that course and engage in the democratic process.

At the Sharm el-Sheikh summit in February 2005, convened by Egypt and with the participation of Jordan, the parties pledged to end all violence. Israel agreed to release a number of Palestinian prisoners and transfer control of five West Bank cities to the PA. However, while Israel released a number of prisoners, it transferred control of only two of the five cities agreed upon and resumed its policy of extrajudicial killings. Nevertheless, the Israeli Defence Force (IDF) exercised restraint in its military activities in the period prior to disengagement, despite incidents of Palestinian violence and halted its policy of demolishing Palestinian houses.

The Palestinian security services remained divided, weak, overstaffed, badly motivated and under-armed. A number of unintegrated forces, Palestinian clans and individual force commanders continued to wield undue influence. They were also hampered by corruption, institutional hierarchies, cults of personality and lack of cohesive training. The security services were consolidated into three main branches—the national forces, the intelligence forces and the police—under the supervision of the Ministry of Interior. New heads of those services were appointed and the security retirement law implemented. President Abbas stressed his commitment to work towards the PA's monopoly on the use of force.

Israel, for its part, did not make progress in implementing its core commitments under the June 2003 road map [YUN 2003, p. 461]. Settlement expansion and lack of action on removing illegal settlement outposts erected since 2001 undermined trust in Israel's intentions. In early 2005, Israel announced plans to construct 3,500 new housing units in Ma'ale Adumim and two other settlement blocs in the West Bank.

On 6 May [S/2005/306], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council President of his intention to appoint Alvaro de Soto (Peru) as the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and as his Personal Representative to the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) and the PA. He succeeded Terje Roed-Larsen (Norway), who served in that position from 1 October 1999 to 31 December 2004. Mr. de Soto would coordinate all UN activities on the ground related to the Middle East peace process; ensure that the Organization's contribution was fully integrated and coordinated; represent the Secretary-General in all meetings and structures involving the parties and the international community and provide political guidance to the UN family. On 10 May [S/2005/307], the Council took note of the Secretary-General's intention.

Occupied Palestinian Territory

Presidential elections and related developments

Security Council consideration (January). The Security Council met on 13 January [meeting 5111] to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Kieran Prendergast, said that a real opportunity existed to start implementing the road map and moving toward a settlement of the conflict. The election of a new PA President, Mahmoud Abbas, on 9 January, in a politically competitive, yet peaceful atmosphere, marked the successful completion by the Palestinians of another critical step in the democratic transition in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israel played a commendable part in facilitating the elections. Its forces generally allowed free movement and reduced their own activity inside the Palestinian areas on election day.

The United Nations continued to support the Palestinian Central Elections Commission and provided technical assistance for the preparation and conduct of the elections. The United Nations Liaison Support Unit facilitated contacts with Palestinian and Israeli authorities and assisted the international observers. UN technical support to the Palestinians would continue for the elections to the Palestinian Legislative Council. A new Israeli coalition Government was also in place to tackle the implementation of Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's 2004 withdrawal plan [YUN 2004, p. 455]. The new Cabinet was expected to decide in late January on the evacuation of settlements in the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank. Prime Minister Sharon's plan should be implemented as part of the road map [YUN 2003, p. 464] and in coordination with the new Israeli Government and the new Palestinian leadership.

In the period prior to the 9 January elections, Palestinian militants fired some 210 Qassam rockets and mortar shells against Israeli settlements in Gaza and civilian targets inside Israel. The marked increase in attacks came despite public calls by PLO Chairman Abbas to end rocket attacks against Israeli targets. During the same period, Israeli forces conducted 40 military incursions and bulldozing operations, causing death and injury to Palestinian civilians, as well as militants. On 4 January [A/ES-10/293-S/2005/2], eight Palestinian civilians were killed, including at least five children from the same family, when an Israeli tank shell hit an agricultural area in Beit Lahia.

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution ES-10/15 [YUN 2004, p. 465], the Secretary-General, on 11 January, sent a letter to the Assembly President setting out a framework for the establishment of a register of damage in connection with the barrier. It would consist of an independent board, legal and technical experts and a small secretariat—a registry. The board would have overall responsibility for the register and would establish rules and regulations governing the registry's work. The registry would focus on the technical task of gathering claims of damage relating to the construction of the barrier.

The construction of the barrier and restrictions on movement in the form of checkpoints, curfews and the permit system were the chief reasons for the continuing socio-economic crisis in the Palestinian areas. Lifting those restrictions on freedom of movement was indispensable to economic recovery. The PA's stability—and with it, prospects for real and tangible reform and political progress—was crucially dependent on a sound fiscal base. Despite its strong 2004 revenue performance, the PA remained under pressure, owing to lower than expected disbursement of external budget support and a growing wage bill. December 2004 salaries could be paid only as a result of a $20 million contribution from the United States and the release of arrears of tax remittances by Israel.

Both parties had important steps to take. Israeli settlement activity—including the natural growth of settlements—had not been frozen, as Israel was obliged to do under the road map. In 2004, the number of people living in the West Bank and Gaza strip settlements rose by 6 per cent. On the Palestinian side, there was the need to establish credible and reformed institutions and to put an end to the violence and terror. It was crucial that Palestinian reform efforts be supported, especially in the areas of security and governance, and that the PA was financially secure and able to meet the humanitarian needs of the population. In that context, the United Nations welcomed the initiative of United Kingdom Prime Minister, Tony Blair, to convene an international meeting (see p. 507) to discuss important issues on the agenda of the new Palestinian leadership. Coordination between the parties and active support from the international community were needed to achieve a successful disengagement plan that would lead to further steps in the implementation of the road map and the resumption of full peace negotiations.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 13 January [meeting 5111], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/2 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the Palestinian presidential election held on 9 January 2005. It commends the credible and fair character of the vote and congratulates the Palestinian people who demonstrated their commitment to democracy by participating in the election under challenging conditions. The Council pays tribute to the Central Elections Commission which played a key role in ensuring the successful conclusion of the election, and expresses its appreciation for the contribution of international observers and for the support of the United Nations.
> The Council congratulates the newly elected President of the Palestinian Authority on his election.
> The Council looks forward to the convening of the Palestinian legislative elections in the near future, and affirms its continuing support for the Palestinian people in their democratic process.
> The Council supports the Palestinian Authority and its efforts to pursue the process of strengthening institutions.
> The Council underlines the importance of enhanced and expeditious international assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority.
> The Council stresses the need for the full implementation of the Quartet Road map, as endorsed by the Council in its resolution 1515(2003), for the creation of an independent, viable, democratic and sovereign State of Palestine living side by side with Israel in peace and security.
> The Council calls upon Israelis and Palestinians to relaunch a genuine political process and advance towards a just and lasting peace in the region.

Communications (18-26 January). The Permanent Observer of Palestine, in an 18 January letter to the Secretary-General and the Council President [A/ES-10/295-S/2005/38], said that the situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory continued to be marred by instability, escalating tensions and violence. Israeli forces continued to raid and launch military attacks against civilian areas. The situation in the Gaza Strip, in particular, continued to be critical. On 15 and 16 January, four Palestinians were killed and two others wounded by Israeli forces in Gaza. IDF had also closed all border crossings into and out of Gaza. On 26 January [A/ES-10/296-S/2005/46], the Permanent Observer said that IDF, on that day, killed four Palestinian civilians. In addition, Israel had resumed construction of a section of the separation wall by the settlement of Ariel, located 12 miles into the West Bank, despite the 2004 advisory opinion by the International Court of Justice (ICJ) on its illegality [YUN 2004, p. 465]. Israel also continued to confiscate Palestinian land in Jerusalem and to enact unlawful measures in its drive to entrench its annexation of the city.

For its part, Israel said that between 9 and 18 January [A/59/678-S/2005/40], Palestinian gunmen killed eight Israelis and wounded some 15 others. The worst attack occurred on 13 January in northern Gaza, when six Israeli civilians were killed and five wounded. Israel said that there was little evidence that the new Palestinian leadership was serious about confronting Palestinian terrorism. The window of opportunity for progress in the peace process would close if the Palestinian leaders continued to fail to abide by their road map's obligations.

Sharm el-Sheikh meeting

A summit meeting between President Abbas and Prime Minister Sharon took place in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, on 8 February, hosted by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, in the presence of Jordan's King Abdullah II. At the meeting, President Abbas and Prime Minister Sharon reaffirmed their commitment to the road map and agreed that "all Palestinians [would] stop all acts of violence against Israelis everywhere" and that "Israel [would] cease all its military activity against all Palestinians everywhere".

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (February)

On 16 February [meeting 5126], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/6 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the summit held in Sharm El-Sheikh, Egypt, on 8 February 2005, and the resumption of direct talks between the Prime Minister of Israel, Mr. Ariel Sharon, and the President of the Palestinian Authority, Mr. Mahmoud Abbas. The Council expresses its appreciation to Mr. Hosni Mubarak, President of the Arab Republic of Egypt, for the invitation to both parties to the summit, and to King Abdullah II bin Al Hussein of Jordan for his participation.
> The Council underlines the understandings reached by the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority, in particular that all Palestinians will stop all acts of violence against all Israelis everywhere and that Israel will cease all its military activities against all Palestinians everywhere. The Council calls for the full respect by the parties of their commitments in this regard.
> The Council recognizes these understandings, along with other recent positive developments, as primary steps towards restoring confidence between the two parties and as a significant opportunity to enhance a new spirit of cooperation and to promote an atmosphere conducive to the establishment of peace and coexistence in the region.
> The Council commends the role being played by Egypt and Jordan in facilitating a successful resumption of dialogue between the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority within the framework of the road map.
> The Council welcomes the initiative of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in convening an international meeting in London on 1 March 2005 to support Palestinian efforts to prepare the ground for a viable Palestinian State. The Council also welcomes the upcoming meeting of the Quartet at the ministerial level which will convene in the margins of the London meeting.
> The Council looks forward to further engagement by the Quartet with the two parties to ensure continued progress in the peace process and the full implementation of the road map and relevant Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973), 1397(2002) and 1515(2003), towards the creation of an independent, viable, democratic and sovereign State of Palestine living side by side with Israel in peace and security.
> The Council looks forward to the establishment of a just, lasting and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

Post-electoral period.

Communication (22 February). In identical letters to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President [A/ES-10/297-S/2005/101], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 20 February, the Israeli Government approved the final route of the separation wall. If completed, the new route of the wall would result in the de facto annexation of at least seven per cent of the total area of the West Bank, not including the area of East Jerusalem. The wall was severing and isolating cities, towns and villages in the West bank, imprisoning thousands of civilians in walled enclaves and causing the complete encirclement of East Jerusalem, isolating it from the rest of the West Bank.

Security Council consideration (February). The Security Council, on 22 February [meeting 5128], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Mr. Prendergast, said that the latest developments had rekindled hopes for progress towards peace between Israel and the Palestinians. Israel announced that it would release 900 prisoners and withdraw from five West Bank cities and the surrounding areas. On 21 February, 500 Palestinian prisoners were released. Israel also halted punitive house demolitions, reopened three crossing points into Gaza and issued more work permits. Most significantly, Prime Minister Sharon reiterated his readiness to coordinate with the Palestinians the disengagement plan from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank. The first meetings to that effect had taken place between Israel's Vice Premier, Shimon Peres, and senior Palestinian officials to begin coordinating the civilian and economic aspects of Israel's withdrawal. On 20 February, the Israeli Cabinet approved in principle the evacuation of settlements under the disengagement plan. The Knesset (Parliament) also demonstrated support for the Prime Minister by passing, on 16 February, the Compensation and Evacuation Law, which represented an essential step in carrying out the withdrawal plan.

On the Palestinian side, the PA deployed 1,000 security officers along the Gaza Strip's northern border with Israel, and hundreds more in the central and southern districts of Gaza. Fulfilling an important obligation under the road map, President Abbas restructured the security services into three main branches (see p. 504) , all of which would report to the PA Minister of the Interior.

During the period under review, 54 Palestinians and 8 Israelis were killed, and 150 Palestinians and 46 Israelis injured. On 13 January, Hamas, the Popular Resistance Committees and the Al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigade attacked the Karni crossing between Israel and the Gaza Strip, killing six Israeli civilians (see above). In response, Israel announced that it would temporarily cut all ties with the PA, and renewed military incursions into Palestinian areas, which had been suspended since the Palestinian presidential elections.

On 20 February, the Israeli Cabinet approved the revised route of Israel's barrier in the West Bank, which, although it had been moved closer to the Green Line, still incorporated a large amount of Palestinian land. To the south of Jerusalem, the new route placed the Gush Etzion settlement block on the Israeli side of the barrier and surrounded four Palestinian villages, plus a sizeable amount of Palestinian agricultural land. Barrier construction restarted in the Salfit area of the northern West Bank around the settlement of Ariel, raising concerns that large amounts of Palestinian territory might end up being incorporated on the Israeli side. Barrier activity also intensified in the Jerusalem area, where a large number of confiscation orders were served to landowners.

The Under-Secretary-General stated that the United Nations recognized Israel's right and duty to protect its people against terrorist attacks, but urged it to address its legitimate security needs in ways that did not increase suffering among Palestinians, prejudge final status issues or threaten longer-term prospects for peace by making the creation of a viable and contiguous Palestinian state more difficult.

London meetings

On 1 March, the United Kingdom hosted the 2005 London Meeting on Supporting the PA, which was attended by representatives of the Quartet, including the Secretary-General. PA President Abbas presented his plans for building the institutions needed to underpin a future viable Palestinian State. The central aim of the Meeting was to help the Palestinian leadership strengthen PA institutions. The Quartet, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Arab League and 20 national delegations agreed to, among other things, support the PA's plans on governance, security and economic development; address the PA's short-term economic priorities and hold an international donors' meeting to address the long-term challenges; galvanise international private sector involvement; and streamline the international structures for supporting Palestinian reform and economic development. The international community also agreed to support Palestinian efforts to prepare for Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the West Bank.

Quartet meeting (1 March). Following the London Meeting on Supporting the PA (see above), representatives of the Quartet met in London. They condemned the terrorist attack that occurred in Tel Aviv on 25 February (see above). The Quartet welcomed President Abbas' condemnation of that attack and his pledge to act against those responsible, and stressed the need for further action by the PA to prevent acts of terrorism. The Quartet recognized the importance of the Sharm el-Sheikh summit of 8 February (see p. 506) at which both parties called for a halt to violence and military activities. It commended the Israeli cabinet's decision to withdraw from Gaza and parts of the West Bank and reiterated that withdrawal from those areas should be full and complete and undertaken in a manner consistent with the road map. The Quartet reiterated its view that no party should undertake unilateral actions that could prejudge the resolution of final status issues. It welcomed the London Meeting and urged the international community to review and energize donor coordination structures, with a view to increasing their effectiveness.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (9 March)

On 9 March [meeting 5136], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/12 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the conclusions of the London Meeting on Supporting the Palestinian Authority, held on 1 March 2005. The Council supports the objectives of the London Meeting to help the Palestinian leadership to strengthen the institutions needed for a viable and independent Palestinian State.
> The Council hopes that the London Meeting will be part of the longer-term process of international support to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority and a contribution to helping both sides to implement the road map endorsed by the Council in its resolution 1515(2003) and agreed to by the parties as the path towards a lasting comprehensive negotiated settlement to the Middle East conflict, based on Council resolutions 242(1967), 338 (1973) and 1397(2002).

The Council stresses the crucial importance of security, good governance and development of the Palestinian economy. In this context, the Council welcomes President Abbas's comprehensive plan presented at the London Meeting for strengthening the institutions of the Palestinian Authority in these three areas.

The Council stresses the key role of the international community in assisting the Palestinian Authority in taking forward this plan. The Council welcomes the international community's commitments to respond to the plans of the Palestinian Authority by providing financial and political support. The Council recognizes the important role of the Quartet in international efforts aimed at providing assistance to the Palestinian Authority in the fields of security, economic development and governance.

The Council supports the proposals for follow-up to the London Meeting and looks forward to their early implementation.

The Council supports the Joint Statement of the Quartet issued following the meeting of the Quartet held in the margins of the London Meeting, and looks forward to the Quartet's active engagement over the forthcoming period, while recognizing also the important role of other interested parties.

The Council reiterates its call for full respect by the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority of understandings reached at the Sharm El-Sheikh summit on 8 February 2005, in particular that all Palestinians will stop all acts of violence against all Israelis everywhere and that Israel will cease all its military activities against all Palestinians everywhere.

The Council reiterates its call upon both Israel and the Palestinian Authority to ensure continued progress in the peace process towards full implementation of the road map in direct contact with the Quartet. It stresses the need for concerted and sustained action by the Palestinian Authority to fulfil its security-related commitments and welcomes in this context President Abbas' commitment to exert every effort towards that end. The Council stresses also the need for Israel to implement its road map commitments.

The Council reiterates its demand for immediate cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction.

The Council reiterates its commitment to the vision of two States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security.

Further political and security developments

Communication (23 March). On 23 March [A/ES-10/298-S/2005/202], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that on 21 March, the Israeli Government confirmed its approval of plans to build 3,500 more housing units in the Ma'ale Adumim settlement, the largest Israeli settlement in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

Security Council consideration (March). The Security Council, on 24 March [meeting 5149], met to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs reported that the Secretary-General visited Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory from 13 to 16 March, at the invitation of the Israeli Government, to attend the inauguration of the new Holocaust History Museum at Yad Vashem. The Secretary-General used the occasion to hold meetings with Israeli and Palestinian leaders, including Prime Minister Sharon and President Abbas. During those discussions, Israeli leaders emphasized that their overriding concern was for the PA to move from words to action and to take steps to bring to justice those who organized and perpetrated terrorist acts, noting that the dismantlement of terrorist organizations and infrastructure was a Palestinian obligation under the road map.

PA leaders expressed frustration over Israel's refusal to ease closures significantly or to release large numbers of prisoners, particularly those with significant influence among Palestinians, and over the delays in the full implementation of 8 February Sharm el-Sheikh commitments. Without such confidence-building steps, they would be unable to consolidate popular support for the peace process. Palestinian interlocutors were also concerned by what they described as continuing unilateral acts by Israel. The respective presentations by the parties impressed on the Secretary-General the immediate and urgent need to rebuild trust and restore confidence. He urged the parties to engage in direct dialogue and negotiations. The Secretary-General also said that the United Nations remained committed to supporting the PA in the areas of security reform and elections.

The Israeli disengagement plan was discussed extensively. The Secretary-General was left with a strong impression of Prime Minister Sharon's determination to proceed with the plan, even in the face of serious domestic opposition. The Secretary-General emphasized the importance of all aspects of the withdrawal being fully coordinated and that the withdrawal was an important step in a broader process and should be consistent with the road map and its goals. Prime Minister Sharon cautioned that the timely implementation of the withdrawal initiative could be jeopardized if the Knesset failed to approve the budget before the end of March, which would cause the Government to fall and new elections to be held automatically.

After his visit to Israel, the Secretary-General travelled to Algiers to attend the Arab Summit (see below). He welcomed the decision taken by Arab leaders to relaunch the Arab peace initiative, as approved at the 2002 Beirut Summit [YUN

2002, p. 419], as Arab involvement in the peace process was essential.

The Under-Secretary-General said that the United Nations continued to be concerned over Israel's failure to dismantle settlement outposts and freeze their expansion. The Israeli Government's report on outposts by former Chief State Prosecutor Talia Sasson found that various ministries, as well as IDF and the World Zionist Organization, had supported construction of unauthorized outposts. The Cabinet approved the report on 13 March, including the core recommendation that the Government should take responsibility for what was happening in the outposts in the territories. However, there were unofficial reports of a Government decision to approve the building of at least 3,500 new settlement housing units in 2005, linking the major Israeli settlement of Ma'ale Adumim to Jerusalem. A halt to such actions was needed to preserve hope of a viable future for the Palestinian people.

During the reporting period, implementation of the commitments made at the 8 February Sharm el-Sheikh summit continued, but not as quickly as expected. It was only on 16 March that outstanding issues related to the handover of Jericho—the first of five West Bank cities and their environs to be transferred to Palestinian control—were fully resolved. Tulkarem was handed over on 21 March after similar delays. Negotiations on the transfer of Bethlehem, Qalqiliya and Ramallah were under way, but difficulties remained. The transfer of three other major urban centres in the West Bank—Nablus, Jenin and Hebron—would be discussed by the parties at a later date. Meanwhile, the joint Israeli-Palestinian ministerial committee on Palestinian prisoners did not reach agreement on the release of an additional 400 Palestinian prisoners. Only 16 out of 60 Palestinian deportees were allowed to return to Bethlehem so far.

Communications. On 20 April [A/ES-10/301-S/2005/262], the Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) expressed deep concern at Israel's settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. He said that, on 18 April, the Israel Lands Authority announced that tenders had been issued for the construction of 50 homes in the settlement of "Elkana" in the West Bank. In March, the Israeli Government had made public its intention to construct some 3,500 homes in the area between East Jerusalem and the Ma'ale Adumim settlement, effectively cutting off East Jerusalem from the rest of the West Bank. In mid-April, construction activity in Ma'ale Adumim continued, despite international criticism. Israel's policy precluded the possibility of establishing a viable and contiguous Palestinian State, prejudged the outcome of final status negotiations and undermined international efforts at achieving a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East.

On 18 April [S/2005/274], the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States (LAS) transmitted to the Council President the texts of the resolutions and the Algiers Declaration adopted by the LAS Council at its seventeenth session (Algiers, Algeria, 22-23 March), which the Secretary-General attended. The LAS Council reaffirmed that the 2002 Arab peace initiative was fundamental to a peaceful, just, comprehensive and lasting settlement in the region. The Council rejected all efforts to pre-empt the outcome of final status negotiations, and stressed that the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank had to take place in the framework of the road map. The Council, among other things, invited all Arab States to support the PA's budget.

Security Council consideration (April). At the Security Council's 21 April meeting [meeting 5166] to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs said that, on 14 April, the Quartet principals named James D. Wolfensohn (United States) as their Special Envoy to coordinate the international community's efforts in support of Israel's disengagement initiative. His task was to promote coordination and cooperation between Israel and the PA. (For further information on the Special Envoy, see p. 513.)

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Sharon had overcome the remaining official challenges to his withdrawal initiative. On 28 March, the Knesset rejected draft legislation to introduce a national referendum on disengagement and the next day passed the 2005 State budget, thereby averting the need for new elections. Israeli preparations for evacuating and relocating Israeli settlers went ahead, not withstanding continued opposition from a militant minority.

On the Palestinian side, both President Abbas and Prime Minister Ahmed Qurei announced that the PA was prepared to coordinate the withdrawal with Israel, despite the PA's political concerns regarding the plan. President Abbas established a ministerial committee for coordination, headed by the Prime Minister, with ministers assigned to sectoral subcommittees tasked with preparing for the pullout and developing longer-term strategies for the post disengagement period. PA Prime Minister Qurei and Israeli Defence Minister Mofaz and Minister Dahlam

Despite the doubts and the difficult challenges ahead, the hope and optimism of the past months remained. That was confirmed by the continued overall decline in casualties, violence and military operations. However, there was an apparent failure to break the tendency towards retributive violence, so that even one incident carried with it the risk of escalation. Israel justified its military incursions, arrest campaigns, curfews and movement restrictions as necessary to confront and preempt security threats. Israel charged that the PA was not taking serious action against violence and militants. Palestinian leaders, for their part, claimed that they were taking action but acknowledged the slow and difficult nature of the process. They believed that Israeli military operations were counterproductive, in that they made it more difficult for the PA to disarm or arrest militants and threatened the viability of the ceasefire. At the same time, Al-Aqsa militants had become the main disrupters of law and order, threatening PA officials and ordinary citizens alike. In response, President Abbas declared a state of alert and reshuffled the security forces in the West Bank. He subsequently announced his intention to disarm those Fatah militants who were on Israel's wanted list and to integrate them into the PA's security agencies. In addition, President Abbas issued a presidential decree enforcing the security forces pension bill, which would lead to the retirement of some 2,000 security staff.

The Under-Secretary-General observed that, although those actions and announcements were positive, they were not enough. Security reform and a visible and sustained effort to stop all violent activity were basic requirements of the road map. As such, they could not be a matter for compromise and the will to act had to come from the PA. However, there was also much that Israel could do to support, rather than hinder, President Abbas' ability to take difficult steps. The joint Israeli-Palestinian committees dealing with fugitives, prisoners and the transfer of major urban centres in the West Bank did not meet in the past month. Security control was not transferred in any of the Palestinian cities during that period; nor were any prisoners released. The United Nations also noted with great concern that Prime Minister Sharon had publicly reiterated his commitment to implementing a plan aimed at connecting Jerusalem with Ma'ale Adumim, the largest West Bank settlement and the announcement (see p. 509) that bids were being invited for the construction of 50 housing units in the West Bank settlement of Elkan. In that connection, United States President George Bush, after a meeting with Prime Minister Sharon, said that Israel should not undertake any activity that contravened road map obligations or prejudiced final status negotiations, and that Israel should meet its road map obligations regarding settlements in the West Bank and remove unauthorized outposts. The Under-Secretary-General said that President Bush's statement represented the position of all four members of the Quartet.

Quartet meeting (9 May). Representatives of the Quartet—the UN Secretary-General, the Russian Foreign Minister, the United States Secretary of State and the High Representative for European Common Foreign Policy and Security Policy—met in Moscow, the Russian Federation, on 9 May to review developments in the Middle East. The Quartet, in a statement issued at the end of its meeting [A/59/803-S/2005/314], urged Israel and the PA to renew efforts to fulfil the commitments they had agreed to at the Sharm el-Sheikh summit in order to maintain momentum. It reiterated its commitment to the two-state solution and to Israeli withdrawal as a way to re-energize the road map. The Quartet affirmed that a new Palestinian state had to be truly viable, with contiguity in the West Bank, that a state of scattered territories would not work and that no party should take unilateral actions that could prejudge final status issues. The Quartet also affirmed that the two-state vision and the road map were the best means of achieving a negotiated settlement leading to permanent peace and an end to the occupation.

The Quartet expressed its full support for James Wolfensohn, its Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement, whose task was to focus on the non-security aspects of withdrawal, particularly disposition of assets; passages, access and trade; and revival of the Palestinian economy during and after the Israeli withdrawal. In that regard, both Israel and the Palestinians would have to cooperate closely to identify and implement actions and policies that would ensure a smooth and successful implementation of the Israeli initiative. The Palestinian side would have to demonstrate a strong commitment to security reform and performance, and to building transparent, accountable government institutions and an investor-friendly climate, with a view to restoring growth. The Israeli side would need to relieve the economic hardships faced by the Palestinian people, facilitate rehabilitation and reconstruction by easing the system of restrictions on the movement of Palestinian people and goods, and take further steps to respect the dignity of the Palestinian people and improve their quality of life, while not endangering Israeli security.

The Quartet recognized that economic development and progress on security went hand in hand, as security reforms and the re-establishment of the rule of law were necessary to creating an enabling environment for economic growth and political progress. The Quartet also recognized the need for continued efforts by the international community to assist the PA in accomplishing those tasks, including rebuilding the capabilities of the Palestinian security services. It expressed its full support for General William Ward, United States Security Coordinator, who was assisting the Palestinians in reforming and reconstructing their security forces and coordinating international assistance in that regard. The Quartet welcomed the steps taken by President Abbas to reform the Palestinian security services and stressed the need for continued implementation of those reforms in order to reinstate permanently law and order in Gaza and the West Bank.

Communication (17 May). On 17 May [A/ES-10/302-S/2005/321], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that the Israeli Government had announced its intention to continue with its plans to extend the wall around the Ma'ale Adumim settlement and to begin construction of another section connecting the "Gush Etzion" settlement to Jerusalem from the South.

Security Council consideration (May). The Security Council, on 18 May [meeting 5181], heard a briefing by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs. He said that, on 9 May, Prime Minister Sharon announced a three-week delay of the Gaza disengagement because of a traditional Jewish period of mourning. The practical preparations for the withdrawal, however, were progressing, as were the Israeli Government's efforts to find acceptable solutions for the relocation of settlers. Direct talks were renewed on 21 April between Israel and the PA on the disengagement plan.

The level of violence between Palestinians and Israelis remained far below that which prevailed before the Sharm el-Sheikh summit. However, there were reports of a slow but steady increase in violent incidents, including attacks by Palestinian militants against Israelis, clashes between Israeli security forces and Palestinian protestors and Israeli arrest operations against wanted militants.

As to the implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh commitments, the Under-Secretary-General worried that further delays in handing over the remaining three Palestinian cities and in releasing prisoners threatened to undermine President Abbas. It would be difficult for the PA to undertake sustained and sustainable action on security unless it was aided and supported in its efforts to rein in the militants. A significant step forward in that regard was Israel's reported approval of the deployment of hundreds of armed Palestinian police in all West Bank cities in order to strengthen the PA ahead of the transfer of further areas to Palestinian security control.

On 5 May, Palestinians held a second round of local elections in 84 municipalities in Gaza and the West Bank. Hamas won a substantial share of the vote and of the municipal councils, which was an indication of the support the militants enjoyed among the Palestinian population, partly as a result of their engagement in social welfare activities. At the same time, it also reflected popular frustration with the PA. As part of preparations for the 17 July legislative elections, the Palestinian Legislative Council approved a revised electoral law, which envisioned a mix of constituency-based and national representation.

The United Nations remained concerned about the continued construction of Israel's barrier in the West Bank. On Monday, 16 May, the Israeli High Court of Justice rescinded the temporary injunctions it had previously imposed on the construction of the barrier around the West Bank settlement of Ariel.

Communications (19 May–7 June). The fifteenth session of the Ministerial Meeting between the Gulf Cooperation Council States (GCC) and the EU (Manama, Bahrain, 5 April) [A/59/805-S/2005/327] welcomed, in a 19 May joint communiqué, the prospect of Israel's withdrawal from Gaza and from certain parts of the northern West Bank as an initial stage in the process towards achieving a lasting peace in the Middle East. They also welcomed the steps taken by the PA to address the security issue and called on it to continue in that regard. Both sides called on the Israeli Government to take further action to alleviate the suffering of the Palestinians by lifting prohibitions on movement, and reversing its settlement policy and the construction of the so-called security fence in the Palestinian territory, including in and around East Jerusalem.

On 6 June [A/ES-10/303-S/2005/372], in identical letters addressed to the Secretary-General and the Council President, the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that 5 June 2005 marked 38 years since the onset of Israel's occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem. Israel continued to undertake unilateral and concrete measures that were altering the situation on the ground and would negatively influence the outcome of any final settlement between the two sides.

The ninety-fifth regular session of the Ministerial Council of GCC (Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, 11 June) [A/59/845-S/2005/386] noted that a just and comprehensive peace in the Middle East would not be achieved unless the principle of land for peace was applied and a lasting independent Palestinian State established with Jerusalem as its capital, existing alongside the State of Israel in peace and security, in addition to Israel's withdrawal from the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967.

Security Council consideration (June). The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, in his 17 June [meeting 5206] briefing to the Security Council, said that Israeli and Palestinian authorities were slowly, and not without difficulty, coordinating the implementation of Israel's withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank. Confidence-building measures were also being discussed. A variety of bilateral meetings were also held to discuss questions such as the assets of settlements and their eventual fate. Israelis and Palestinians agreed to continue their coordination on security matters at the ministerial, planning and operational levels. According to the United States Security Coordinator, an improved atmosphere and increased willingness to engage in coordination characterized the latest cooperative efforts between the parties. On the Palestinian side, an integrated team comprising top-level personnel from the three security services was set up, and planning was proceeding based on a timeline provided by the Israeli side. Some progress was also made on the implementation of the February Sharm el-Sheikh understandings. On 29 May, the Israeli cabinet approved the release of an additional 400 Palestinian prisoners, 398 of whom were released on 2 June.

In Israel, opponents to the disengagement were still vocal and resorted to protests, demonstrations and, in some cases, acts of sabotage and civil disobedience. The Government nevertheless pressed ahead with its plans to relocate the evacuated settlers and remained committed to the full and timely withdrawal. The PA also faced a number of serious internal challenges, partly as a result of its efforts to institute comprehensive security reform. On 2 June, Palestinian military intelligence forces went on a rampage in the Gaza Strip.

Against the backdrop of increased internal challenges and disorder, violence between Palestinians and Israelis continued to pose a serious threat to the safety and security of both peoples. Of particular concern, was the escalation in rocket and mortar attacks by Palestinian militants against Israeli targets. During the reporting period, IDF resumed the practice of targeting from the air Palestinian militants engaged in suspicious activity. Despite the serious nature of those various incidents, there was evidence of a serious effort on the Palestinian side to maintain the calm and, on the Israeli side, of determination not to overreact to isolated incidents. The Under-Secretary-General expressed concern, however, over statements by some Palestinian factions that they no longer felt bound by their earlier pledge to maintain a ceasefire. He also repeated his concern that Israel was not living up to its road map obligations. In particular, Israel's construction of the barrier encroached upon Palestinian land and threatened to prejudge eventual bilateral negotiations between the parties.

Quartet meeting (23 June). Representatives of the Quartet, meeting in London on 23 June, reaffirmed their support for the Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank and an orderly Palestinian takeover in those areas. Noting that less than two months remained until the announced start of the disengagement, the Quartet called on Israelis and Palestinians to work together towards that end. It reiterated its full support for the Quartet's Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement in his efforts to assist with the non-security aspects of disengagement and revival of the Palestinian economy: strengthening the overall capacity of the PA; facilitating legal and judicial reform; completing the reform of the financial system to establish a sound, transparent regulatory regime; and implementing anti-corruption efforts, a comprehensive budget strategy and wage and pension reform. Private sector job creation and a vibrant civil society sector were also critical. The Quartet urged Israel to take immediate steps, without endangering its security, to relieve the economic hardships faced by the Palestinian people and to facilitate rehabilitation and reconstruction by easing the flow of goods and people in and out of Gaza and the West Bank and between them.

The Quartet noted that peace and security were essential for political and economic revival and stressed that the Palestinians had to confront violence and terror in order for political and economic life to flourish. It urged both parties to avoid and prevent any escalation in violence so that the Israeli withdrawal could proceed peacefully. The Quartet condemned the upsurge in violence in Gaza, including the firing of mortars and Qassam rockets into Israeli towns and homes. In that regard, the Quartet welcomed the PA's full cooperation with General William Ward, the United States Security Coordinator, in assisting them to reform and restructure their security forces. Rapid reform of the security services and restructuring of the rule of law were essential for improving security for Palestinians and Israelis alike. The Quartet also expressed its concern over settlement activity.

Quartet Special Envoy. On 28 June [S/2005/432], the Secretary-General requested the Security Council President to confirm support for the establishment of an office in Jerusalem for the Quartet's Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement, Mr. Wolfensohn. He would also provide logistical, technical and financial assistance to support the office. The Envoy's mandate began on 1 June and was due to end on 31 December 2005. On 5 July [S/2005/433], the Council confirmed support for the arrangements proposed by the Secretary-General.

On 13 December [S/2005/797], the Secretary-General informed the Council President that the Quartet had decided to extend Mr. Wolfensohn's mandate for a further three months until 31 March 2006. The Quartet's Special Envoy would continue to work on issues related to disengagement and to coordinate the international community's efforts to ensure recovery of the economy in Gaza, in preparation for a Consultative Group meeting of donors scheduled for 21 March 2006. On 16 December [S/2005/798], the Council welcomed the proposed arrangements set out in the Secretary-General's letter.

Security situation

In communications dated between 28 February and 18 August [A/ES-10/293-S/2005/2, A/59/717-S/2005/130, A/ES-10/298-S/2005/202, A/ES-10/299-S/2005/237, A/59/829-S/2005/375, A/59/854-S/2005/410, A/59/870-S/2005/452, A/59/873-S/2005/457, A/ES-10/305-S/2005/530, A/59/905-S/2005/552], both Israel and Palestine brought to the attention of the Secretary-General and the Security Council President information on attacks committed by either side.

Israel said that on 25 February a Palestinian suicide bomber blew himself up in Tel Aviv, killing five civilians and wounding 50 others. The terrorist organization Islamic Jihad announced responsibility for the attack from its headquarters in Damascus, Syria. Despite the toll in Israeli lives claimed by the attack, Israel continued to exercise restraint and hoped that the new Palestinian leadership would meet its obligations and adopt a zero tolerance policy for terrorism. On 19 May, Palestinian terrorists fired over 40 mortar shells at Israeli communities in the Gaza Strip. The PA was notified of those attacks, but did not successfully prevent further attacks, or arrest the terrorists involved. On 7 June, Hamas terrorists fired a volley of rockets at the Israeli town of Sderot, wounding three civilians. Several other attacks occured on the same day, including the shelling of the Israeli community of Ganei Tal by the Islamic Jihad terrorist organization, in which three workers were killed and six others wounded. On 20 June, IDF thwarted a planned Palestinian suicide bombing. That incident occured on the same day that two Israelis were killed and three wounded in other Palestinian terrorist attacks. In the Gaza Strip, the average number of terrorist attacks per week had risen to between 50 and 80, as opposed to an average of 10 to 15 in early February. On 12 July, another Palestinian suicide bomber killed four Israeli civilians and wounded 90 others at a shopping mall in the Israeli town of Netanya. On 14 July, terrorists affiliated with the Hamas and Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade organizations launched four rockets into an Israeli village, killing one civilian. On 29 August, Israel reported that the previous day, a suicide bombing carried out by a member of the Islamic Jihad organization wounded 48 civilians in the Israel city of Be'er Sheva. That attack was preceded by militants operating in the Gaza Strip launching rockets against Israel.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that on 4 January, Israeli forces killed at least seven Palestinian civilians and wounded eight more in an attack in the town of Beit Lahiya in the Gaza Strip. Between 25 February and 10 April, ten more Palestinian civilians were killed by IDF and dozens more injured.

On 14 April, IDF carried out an extrajudicial killing by assassinating Ibrahim Hashash El-Sumari in a refugee camp in the city of Nablus. Between 10 April and 16 May, 11 more Palestinians were killed by IDF. On 17 August, an Israeli settler killed four Palestinian civilians in the West Bank. In total, from 17 May to 18 August, Israeli forces killed 51 Palestinians.

Security Council consideration (July). On 21 July [meeting 5230], at the request of Kuwait [S/2005/469], in its capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group and on behalf of LAS, the Security Council met to discuss the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Alvaro de Soto, said that the forthcoming Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank continued to overshadow all other issues. The Quartet's Special Envoy for Gaza Disengagement focused his effort on six key issues: border crossings and trade corridors; connecting Gaza with the West Bank; movement within the West Bank; the Gaza airport and seaport; the houses in Israeli settlements; and the greenhouses and dairy industry in the settlements. In addition, the Special Envoy pointed out three essential areas the Palestinians should address, with international community support: the PA's fiscal crisis and development of a fiscal stabilization plan for incorporation into the 2006 budget; the creation of a broad development plan linked to a fiscally sound financial plan for 2006 to 2008; and the design of quick-impact economic programmes to respond to pressures and demands for short-term employment generation. UN agencies operating in the Occupied Palestinian Territory remained committed to supporting Mr. Wolfensohn's rapid action programme.

With respect to violence, there had been a gradual erosion of the informal quasi-ceasefire that had prevailed since the Sharm el-Sheikh summit. Palestinian militants attacked Israeli settlements and urban centres with mortar and Qassam rocket fire. Shooting incidents in the West Bank, in particular, claimed the lives of several Israeli settlers and the level of frequency of such incidents grew significantly. Partially in response to such incidents, Palestinian militants, as well as unarmed Palestinians, were killed by Israeli troops and security forces. On 14 July, in response to a Qassam rocket attack, Israel retaliated by firing missiles against targets in the Gaza Strip; the PA declared a state of emergency in Gaza and Palestinian security forces acted forcefully to prevent the launching of further rockets. In the following days, the violence escalated further, with Israel resuming its practice of targeted killings to prevent terrorist operations. Israel also began amassing military forces outside the Gaza Strip, but vowed to give the PA a last chance to prevent mortar and Qassam rocket fire against Israeli targets inside and outside the Gaza Strip.

The PA had been hard-pressed to establish law and order in both the West Bank and Gaza. President Abbas reiterated his commitment to working towards "one authority, one gun"—a pledge to assert the PA's monopoly on the use of force. Rejecting an offer by President Abbas to join with the PA, Hamas threatened open confrontation with the PA and the continuation of attacks against Israel. The PA demonstrated resolve in confronting challenges to its authority and in pursuing its obligations under the road map. On 23 June, a deal was reached involving the handover of weapons by more than 200 militants in Nablus; similar deals had been previously reached and were partially implemented in Tulkarem and Jericho. On 16 July, in a primetime radio and television address, President Abbas reiterated his commitment to asserting his authority vis-à-vis militants who were threatening to upset the fragile calm that had prevailed during the first months of 2005.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, while the international community was directing its efforts towards the success of Israel's withdrawal from Gaza and some areas in the northern West Bank, Israel was expanding settlements and speeding up the building of the wall. Because of its desire to see the success of Israeli disengagement from Gaza, the international community had been reluctant to exert pressure on the Israeli Government and had been condoning Israel's current settlement activities, its land confiscations, its isolation of Jerusalem and its work to complete the wall. The understandings reached at Sharm el-Sheikh were an encouraging beginning for a return to the negotiating table and for calming conditions on the ground. The PA had taken steps to meet its Sharm el-Sheikh commitments, while the Israeli Government had met none of its commitments, least of all with regard to withdrawal to the lines of September 2000, the freeing of prisoners and ending illegal extrajudicial assassinations, the closures and the siege imposed on the Palestinian people.

Israel said that more than 25,400 terrorist attacks had been launced against Israelis in less than five years. The situation in the Middle East was dire, given that, on the other side of Israel's northern border, the only force that was in control of the territory was a terrorist organization which was being helped, sponsored and guided by two UN Members States. The Israeli Government was preparing to implement an unprecedented initiative: the disengagement of all Israeli civilians and forces from the Gaza Strip and the dismantling of four settlements in the northern West Bank. The implementation of that plan, in the absence of any corresponding acts of good faith from the Palestinian side, had created divisions within Israeli society. The disengagement initiative was not Israel's first plan of choice, as the Government would have preferred a fully negotiated agreement with the PA. However, Israel was not going to waver in its intention to complete the disengagement plan. The PA had failed to fulfil its responsibility to prevent terror emanating from Palestinian areas. As a result, Israel was left with no choice but to find defensive measures to protect itself, such as the security fence. The security fence worked, as there had been a 90 per cent reduction in the number of successful terrorist attacks, 70 per cent in the number of citizens killed and 85 per cent in the number of wounded. Israel was, however, sensitive to the impact of the defensive measures it had been forced to take and was coordinating with PA officials to facilitate humanitarian passage to those areas. Israeli and UN experts were also examining the consequences of those measures on the freedom of movement of Palestinian civilians.

Communications. On 25 July [A/59/884-S/2005/522], Yemen transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the final communiqué, the Sana'a Declaration and the resolutions adopted by OIC Foreign Ministers at its thirty-second session (Sana'a, Yemen, 28-30 June). The Conference, among other things, affirmed the illegality of Israeli practices in East Jerusalem, aimed at annexing and changing the demographic make-up of the city and condemned Israel for continuing to build the wall on Palestinian territories.

Disengagement

Security Council consideration (August). The Security Council, on 24 August [meeting 5250], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Ibrahim Gambari, said that the Israeli disengagement from Gaza and northern parts of the West Bank began on 15 August as announced. Despite the dramatic scenes of Israeli military and police personnel removing settlers from their houses in Gaza, the operation mostly proceeded smoothly, aided by the restraint generally observed by militant Palestinian factions. IDF and the Israeli police avoided the use of force and completed the evacuation of the settlements on 22 August, well in advance of the target date. Evacuation of settlers from the settlements in the northern West Bank was carried out on 23 August.

For its part, the PA renewed its commitment to a smooth and peaceful withdrawal and to cooperate and coordinate with the Israeli side towards that end. On 14 August, a large force of Palestinian police began to deploy in several areas of the Gaza Strip adjacent to Jewish settlements to provide buffer cordons and to deter the firing of homemade rockets and mortars.

However, the Under-Secretary-General said that, while Israel's bold first withdrawal from the Occupied Palestinian Territory was welcomed, the situation elsewhere in the occupied territory continued to fester, with many Palestinians fearing that Israel was consolidating its occupation in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem. In addition, non-governmental monitoring groups reported that settlement activity in the West Bank continued during the reporting period. In Jerusalem, on 25 July, the Israeli local planning committee of the Jerusalem municipality approved a Ministry of Housing scheme to construct a new Jewish settlement in the Muslim quarter of Jerusalem's Old City. Also in July, the Knesset approved a three-year aid plan to improve infrastructure, agriculture and settlement expansion in the Jordan Valley area. According to press reports, Prime Minister Sharon confirmed his intention to continue building in the settlement blocs in the West Bank. Settlement expansion was linked to the construction of Israel's security barrier. In August, land expropriation orders for approximately 396 acres were issued in the Jerusalem governorate for the construction of a portion of the barrier around the Ma'ale Adumim settlement which would cut a reported 23 kilometres into the Occupied Palestinian Territory and separate the northern West Bank from the south.

The Under-Secretary-General concluded that Israeli disengagement from Gaza and the northern West Bank marked a watershed in that it constituted the first removal by Israel of settlements on occupied Palestinian territory. Israeli policy demonstrated that it had the requisite maturity to do what was required in order to achieve lasting peace, and IDF the ability to discharge its mission with carefully calibrated restraint. Prime Minister Sharon was to be commended for his determination and courage to carry out the disengagement in the face of forceful and often strident internal opposition.

Communications. On 26 August [S/2005/559], the EU welcomed the historic progress made on Israel's withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank and commended the Israeli Government and the PA for their commitment to overcome the difficult challenges they faced.

On 30 August [A/ES-10/306-S/2005/556], the Chairman of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People expressed concern over Israel's decision to expand and consolidate its settlements in the West Bank, despite having removed its settlements in Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank. In particular, Israeli authorities had begun issuing orders to seize Palestinian-owned land for the construction of parts of the separation wall that would eventually surround the Ma'ale Adumim settlement.

The ninety-sixth regular session of the GCC Ministerial Council (Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, 6-7 September) [A/60/388-S/2005/612], among other things, expressed the hope that the evacuation of the Israeli settlements in the Gaza Strip would be followed by steps towards total withdrawal from all occupied Palestinian lands so as to enable the Palestinian people to build an independent State with Al-Quds al-Sharif as its capital.

Statement of Prime Minister Sharon (15 September). Israeli Prime Minister Sharon, speaking before the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly on 15 September [meeting 5], said that, in withdrawing from the Gaza Strip, Israel had proved that it was ready to make painful concessions to resolve the conflict with the Palestinians, whose turn it was to prove their desire for peace. The end of Israeli control over the Gaza Strip would allow them to develop their economy and build a peaceful, free, law-abiding and democratic society. Their leadership would be tested to put an end to terror, as well as the terrorist infrastructure, eliminate the regime of armed guards and cease the incitement and indoctrination of hatred towards Israel. Successful implementation of the disengagement plan opened a window of opportunity for advancing peace in accordance with the road map and the Sharm el-Sheik understandings, to which Israel was committed.

Security Council consideration (September). On 23 September [meeting 5270], the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council that Israel withdrew the last of its military personnel and installation from the Gaza Strip on 12 September. Following the completion of the evacuation of civilian army infrastructure, Israeli forces put an end to their permanent presence in the four settlements in the northern West Bank as of 20 September. Facing vociferous opposition, the Israeli Government proved its ability to carry out democratic decisions in the general interest, while knowing that they would cause pain and disruption to a significant number of its citizens. The exemplary consideration shown by the Israeli armed forces towards those affected, on some of whom carefully measured force had to be employed, showed that they could be held to the highest standards in dealing with civilians.

The timing of Israel's disengagement was not the result of an agreement with the Palestinian side but of a unilateral Israeli decision. However, all relevant PA sectors worked constructively to coordinate with their Israeli counterparts and other international actors. Early fears that the operation might have to be conducted under fire were dissipated, for Palestinian armed groups, by and large, held back from violent action against settlers. The Israeli settlers, armed forces and police withdrew in peace.

The Special Coordinator observed that Israel's need for security had led them to install a barrier and set up a system of roadblocks and checkpoints to control the movement of persons and goods into and throughout much of the West Bank. Apart from impeding economic revival, to many Palestinians, the barrier and the closures, and the travails of traversing them, were a source of humiliation and a constant check on their aspiration to one day run their own affairs. The expense incurred in the building of the barrier raised doubts in some minds as to its stated provisionality. Questions had also been posed as to whether the purpose was only to ensure security. While Israelis should understand those considerations and recognize that it was ultimately in their interest to address them, Palestinians, for their part, had to understand, accept and address Israel's need to be assured of the safety and security of its citizens. Countless innocent Israelis had fallen victim to terrorist acts and Israelis had a right to demand and end to those attacks. Those who carried out acts of terror or instigated them should understand that violence had rendered the achievement of the goal of a State in which Palestinians lived in freedom and dignity more distant. The Palestinian people at large also demanded that law and order be established in the streets, which meant not only an efficient police, but also a reliable court system and an end to impunity and corruption. The establishment of a State run by the rule of law, in which the Government held the monopoly over the instruments of violence went hand in hand with the strengthening of Israel's sense of security.

On 29 September [A/60/416-S/2005/619], the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on behalf of LAS, transmitted a letter to the Secretary-General from the Arab Group expressing concern at Mr. de Soto's 23 September remarks (see above). In particular, it noted that they referred to Israel's need for security as the reason behind the building of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, despite the fact that the International Court of Justice (ICJ) in its 2004 advisory opinion [YUN 2004,p.465] had rejected that argument.

On 17 October [A/60/440-S/2005/658/Corr.2], Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of OIC (New York, 23 September), at their annual coordination meeting, noted with regret Israel's defiant response to ICJ's Advisory Opinion, its non-compliance with Assembly resolution ES-10/15 [YUN 2004, p. 465] and its continued construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. The ministers stressed that the Gaza withdrawal and the dismantling of the settlements were promising steps and emphasized that the withdrawal should be complete and irreversible, be accompanied by similar steps in the West bank and consistent with the road map.

Quartet 20 September statement

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 23 September [meeting 5270], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/44 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council supports the Statement issued in New York on 20 September 2005 by the Quartet, which is annexed to the present statement.

The Council urges the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority to cooperate, along with other parties concerned, with the efforts to achieve the goals set out in the Quartet Statement.

The Council calls for renewed action in parallel by the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority on their obligations in accordance with the road map, to ensure continued progress towards the creation of an independent, sovereign, democratic and viable State of Palestine living side by side with Israel in peace and security.

The Council stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973), 1397(2002) and 1515(2003), the Madrid terms of reference and the principle of land for peace.

Quartet Statement

New York, 20 September 2005

Representatives of the Quartet—the Secretary General of the United Nations, Mr. Kofi Annan, the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Russian Federation, Mr. Sergey Lavrov, the Secretary of State of the United States of America, Ms. Condoleezza Rice, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Mr. Jack Straw, the High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the European Union, Mr. Javier Solana, and the European Commissioner for External Relations, Ms. Benita Ferrero-Waldner—met today in New York to discuss the Gaza disengagement and the prospects for movement towards peace in the Middle East.

The Quartet recognizes and welcomes the successful conclusion of the Israeli withdrawal from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank and the moment of opportunity that it brings to renew efforts on the road map. The Quartet reiterates its belief that this brave and historic decision should open a new chapter on the path to peace in the region. It paid tribute to the political courage of Prime Minister Sharon and commends the Government of Israel, its armed forces and its police for the smooth and professional execution of the operation. It also expresses its appreciation for the responsible behaviour of the Palestinian Authority and people for helping to maintain a peaceful environment during the evacuation. The Quartet applauds the close coordination between the Israeli and Palestinian security services during the process. These significant developments create new opportunities and call for renewed focus on the responsibilities of all parties. The conclusion of disengagement represents an important step toward achieving the vision of two democratic States, Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security.

The Quartet commends continued cooperation between both parties and the United States Security Coordinator, General William Ward, on security issues related to the disengagement. The Quartet calls for an end to all violence and terror. While the leadership of the Palestinian Authority has condemned violence and has sought to encourage Palestinian groups who have engaged in terrorism to abandon this course and engage in the democratic process, the Quartet further urges the Palestinian Authority to maintain law and order and dismantle terrorist capabilities and infrastructure. The Quartet reaffirms the continued importance of comprehensive reform of the Palestinian security services. The rule of law through authorized security institutions is fundamental to democratic practice. The Quartet expresses appreciation to those parties which have made contributions to the security reform effort, particularly Egypt, the European Union and the United States. Finally, the Quartet welcomes the agreement between the Governments of Israel and Egypt on security arrangements along the Gaza-Egypt border.

At today's meeting, Quartet Special Envoy Wolfensohn's report on his current efforts and initiatives was discussed. The Quartet encourages his further work to facilitate continued discussion between the parties to build on the success of disengagement. The Palestinian Authority should demonstrate its ability to govern, and all members of the international community should look for ways to support these efforts. The Quartet will continue to lead international efforts to support sustainable growth of the Palestinian economy and to strengthen the overall capacity of the Palestinian Authority to assume its responsibilities through an aggressive pursuit of state-building and democratic reform efforts. Given the critical importance of free movement in the West Bank to the viability of the Palestinian economy, the Quartet urges an easing of the system of movement restrictions, consistent with Israel's security needs. The Quartet reaffirms that coordinated action by the international donor community is crucial for the success of the Quartet Special Envoy's Quick-Impact Economic Programme, as well as for the longer-term three-year plan for Palestinian development. In this regard, it notes the importance of the $750 million in assistance which will be disbursed to the Palestinian Authority during the remainder of this year. The Quartet urges Arab States to implement existing commitments and to engage fully and positively in response to the Special Envoy's initiatives. To ensure the success of this effort, the Quartet views continued progress on institutional reform of the Palestinian Authority, as well as progress in combating corruption, as essential. The Quartet also welcomes the announcement of Palestinian Legislative Council elections and upcoming municipal elections.

Looking beyond disengagement, the Quartet reviewed progress on implementation of the road map. The Quartet calls for renewed action in parallel by both parties on their obligations in accordance with the sequence of the Road map. As part of the confidence-building process the Quartet urged both sides to return to the cooperative agenda reached at Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt. Contacts between the parties should be intensified at all levels. The Quartet charges the Envoys to keep progress under review.

Both parties are reminded of their obligations under the road map to avoid unilateral actions which prejudice final status issues. The Quartet reaffirms that any final agreement must be reached through negotiation between the parties and that a new Palestinian State must be truly viable with contiguity in the West Bank and connectivity to Gaza. On settlements, the Quartet welcomed the fact that, in areas covered by disengagement, Israel has gone beyond its obligations under the first phase of the Road map. The Quartet expresses its concern that settlement expansion elsewhere must stop, and Israel must remove unauthorized outposts. The Quartet continues to note with concern the route of the Israeli separation barrier, particularly as it results in the confiscation of Palestinian land, cuts off the movement of people and goods, and undermines Palestinians' trust in the road map process as it appears to prejudge the final borders of a Palestinian State.

The Quartet members exchanged views on the Russian proposal to hold an international meeting of experts in Moscow. Contacts on this matter will continue, taking into consideration the need to give attention to the various aspects of the Middle East situation, including multilateral matters.

The Quartet reiterates its commitment to the principles outlined in previous statements, including those of 4 May 2004, and 9 May and 23 June 2005, and reaffirms its commitment to a just, comprehensive and lasting settlement to the Arab-Israeli conflict based upon Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973).

Post-disengagement period

Communications. On 26 September [A/ES-10/307-S/2005/608], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel had intensified its military campaign in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, escalating overnight air raids and attacks in the Gaza Strip, which resulted in the extrajudicial killing of four Palestinians. At least 15 more Palestinian civilians were wounded during Israeli air raids and more than 200 arrested and detained.

On the same day [A/60/382-S/2005/609], Israel said that, from 23 to 25 September, Hamas had launched more than 40 artillery rockets onto the Israeli town of Sderot, wounding five persons and causing extensive damage. In response to those attacks, Israel deployed forces around the Gaza Strip to prevent further assaults, targeted the terrorist infrastructure in Gaza and arrested wanted terrorists. Subsequently, Hamas issued a ceasefire, which it later abrogated by firing additional rockets onto Israeli towns. In a separate incident, some 20 Palestinians were killed on 23 September because of a Hamas explosion in a neighbourhood in Gaza, for which Hamas blamed Israel. Israel also reported that, on 21 September [A/60/385-S/2005/610], Hamas admitted abducting and killing an Israeli civilian.

Security incidents

On 29 September [A/ES-10/308-S/2005/617], the Permanent Observer of Palestine stated that, between 24 August and 28 September, Israeli military forces killed 24 Palestinians. IDF carried out air and artillery raids and attacks in Gaza leading to extensive infrastructure damage.

On 10 October [A/ES-10/309-S/2005/640], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, between 3 and 9 October, IDF killed six Palestinians and wounded dozens of others.

On 17 October [A/60/435-S/2005/655], Israel reported that, on 16 October, Palestinian terrorists associated with the Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade killed three Israeli civilians and wounded another one in two separate drive-by shootings.

On 25 October [A/ES-10/310-S/2005/674], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, between 16 and 23 October, IDF killed four Palestinians. Israeli forces also continued with their campaign of arresting and detaining Palestinian civilians.

Israel said that, on 26 October [A/60/448-S/2005/680], a terrorist affiliated with the Islamic Jihad organization carried out a suicide-bombing attack in the city of Hadera, killing five people and wounding 55 others. Despite the increased activity of Islamic Jihad and other terrorist organizations, Palestinian security officers remained inert in the face of that growing threat.

Representatives of the Quartet, in a 28 October statement, condemned the 26 October terrorist attack in Haderat, responsibility for which was claimed by Palestinian Islamic Jihad headquarters in Damascus, Syria. The Quartet urged the Syrian Government to close the offices of the Islamic Jihad and to prevent the use of its territory by armed groups engaged in terrorist acts, The Quartet also encouraged and supported the PA in its effort to prevent armed groups from acting against law and order and the policy of the Authority itself.

Also on 26 October, [A/60/449-S/2005/681], Israel said that the President of Iran, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, had called for the destruction of the State of Israel. The EU condemned the statement attributed to President Ahmadinejad [S/2005/683] and noted that calls for the destruction of any State were inconsistent with any claim to be a mature and responsible member of the international community.

The Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 28 October [A/ES-10/311-S/2005/685], seven Palestinians were killed after an Israeli warplane fired three missiles at a car near a refugee camp in Gaza.

Security Council consideration (October). On 20 October [meeting 5287], the Under-Secretary-

General for Political Affairs said that disengagement had yet to revive the peace process, due to a resurgence of violence on the ground. The security situation had deteriorated significantly during the last week of September and the first week of October. The situation improved somewhat during the second week of October, but on 16 October, militants from the Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade shot dead three Israelis as they travelled to settlements in the West Bank. Israel responded by imposing tight restrictions on Palestinian movement in the West Bank. The Palestinian leadership announced a decision to confiscate illegally held weapons and nominated three officials who would bear overall responsibility for security sector reform. Such steps could contribute significantly to the control of internal violence and to progress towards the fulfilment of Palestinian security related road map commitments. Further progress in that area was absolutely critical during the coming weeks and months.

The Quartet's Special Envoy returned to the region on 7 October to push forward the Quartet's agenda in relation to disengagement. Mr. Wolfensohn sought to conclude agreements on the six-plus-three issues relating to movement, security and reform, which formed the basis of his work since June. The first of the six issues were border crossings and trade corridors. Reopening the Rafah border crossing between Egypt and Gaza was of immediate social and political importance, because it would restore a measure of Palestinian access to the world outside Gaza and pave the way for agreements on border crossing with Israel, the link between Gaza and the West Bank and the reopening of Gaza's air and sea ports. Since 17 September, the Rafah crossing was open for only five days, pending agreement between the parties on the administration of the crossing. According to the Special Envoy, agreement on the crossing regime was close: the parties had reached consensus on the main technical elements of its administration and on a third-party presence along the border with Egypt. The EU had offered to consider such a role in that connection, although a formal invitation had not yet been issued. The flow of people and goods between Israel and Gaza and between Israel and the West Bank needed to be improved. It was the judgement of the Special Envoy that the parties were close to an agreement on a management system for those borders but Israel had, since 5 September, declined to meet with the PA in order to take the negotiations forward. Meanwhile, the Quartet was implementing a major programme of assistance aimed at creating jobs and at boosting Palestinian recovery after the disengagement. The EU proposed increasing assistance to the Palestinians by 250 million euros, on the condition that security and the situation regarding the movement of people improved. Other donors had provided additional assistance, and according to an early estimate, overall disbursements for 2005 would reach between $1.1 billion to $1.3 billion, a 25 to 35 per cent increase over the annual average of the past four years. At least 35 per cent of that international assistance to the Palestinians would be channelled through UN agencies.

The increase in violence played a role in derailing the plans for bilateral talks between the Israeli and Palestinian leaders and also made their domestic positions even more difficult. Prime Minister Sharon carried out disengagement in the face of vocal domestic pressure; that pressure revived following the 24 September rocket attacks on the town of Sderot. On the Palestinian side, on 3 October, the Palestinian Legislative Council called on the President to dissolve the Government and to form another within two weeks. That call was precipitated by heavy armed clashes in Gaza between Palestinian police and militants.

The Palestinians held a third round of municipal elections in the West Bank on 29 September. Elections in Gaza were postponed due to security concerns. Participation in the poll was high and Fatah won over 53 per cent of seats in the municipal councils, compared to 26 per cent won by Hamas. Technical preparations were under way for the forthcoming Palestinian legislative elections, which were scheduled for 25 January 2006.

Communication (15 November). On 15 November [A/ES-10/312-S/2005/720], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that Israel had escalated its military aggression against the Palestinian people, in particular its campaign of extrajudicial killings. Between 27 October and 14 November, IDF killed 18 Palestinians. Israeli officials had also been making highly inflammatory statements against the Palestinian leadership and the future of peace prospects that had only served to undermine the efforts made by the PA to secure and maintain the ceasefire.

Security Council consideration (November). The Security Council, at a meeting on 30 November [meeting 5312], heard a statement by the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Mr. Gambari, who had just returned from a visit to the Middle East. He reported that, in mid-November, the Israeli Government and the PA concluded an Agreement on Movement and Access, Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing, which envisaged an unprecedented third-party role for the EU, an enhanced contribution by the United States Security Coordinator, support from the Quartet Special Envoy and the continued close involvement of the United Nations and the World Bank. The EU's 90-man-strong Border Assistance Mission would be responsible for resolving any disputes between Israel and the PA arising from the Agreement. The parties agreed that the crossings between Gaza and Israel would operate continuously, which would allow 150 export trucks to be processed daily by the end of 2005 and 400 by the end of 2006. Goods would enter Gaza through Kerem Shalom, where Israel, Egypt and Gaza met. The EU would monitor customs arrangements, with its mission being reviewed in a year's time. Bus convoys between Gaza and the West Bank would start on 15 December and truck convoys on 15 January 2006. The Government of Israel would review the system of movement restrictions in the West Bank and reduce them to the maximum extent possible by the end of 2005. The construction of the seaport was to begin immediately and discussions on the construction of a Palestinian airport would continue. The Agreement resolved a number of pending issues related to Israel's withdrawal of settlements and military infrastructure from Gaza, or set up frameworks for doing so. The United States would work closely with the parties to implement the Agreement and the United Nations would play its part in that regard, particularly with regard to the easing of movement restrictions in the West Bank. The first aspect of the Agreement was implemented on 27 November, when the Rafah crossing reopened under Palestinian control for travelers in both directions and for the outgoing passage of goods under supervision by the EU.

The full implementation of all aspects of the Agreement was a vital step towards Palestinian economic recovery but it would require the strengthening of Palestinian institutions and economic management and the effective distribution of international aid, issues that would be discussed at the mid-December meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, the primary policy-making meeting of donors, the PA and the Israeli Government (see p. 521).

The fragile security situation and the need for more decisive action in accordance with the road map were underlined by continued violence. Throughout November, the Israeli army targeted alleged militants in the West Bank and Gaza and undertook major arrest campaigns in the West Bank. The Palestinian security services took some action, including arrests, against those who persisted in carrying out terrorist attacks, to keep weapons off the streets and to assert the rule of law in areas under Palestinian control, though more work needed to be done in that regard. Efforts were also made to rehabilitate former militia members by employing them in the security services. President Abbas established a leadership committee on security reform, which, in turn, mandated a technical team to develop a white paper on safety and security for Palestinians. That process, which would involve public dialogue in an effort to build national consensus, had the strong support of the United States Security Coordinator, Lieutenant General William Ward, who was to be succeeded by Lieutenant General Keith Dayton.

Technical preparations for the 25 January 2006 legislative elections continued. The United Nations would assist the Palestinian Central Election Commission through a liaison and support unit to coordinate international observers. Meanwhile, in Israel, the Labour Party elected a new leader, Amir Peretz, who informed Prime Minister Sharon that Labour would leave the coalition Government. New elections were expected by the end of March 2006. Prime Minister Sharon announced his intention to leave the Likud party and seek reelection as Prime Minister and head of the new Kadima—or Forward—Party.

The Under-Secretary-General said that he had returned from the region with the strong belief that the only way forward for Israelis and Palestinians alike was for the parties to ensure the success of disengagement by fully implementing the Agreement on Movement and Access and to take renewed action, in parallel, to fulfil their obligations under the road map.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (30 November)

On 30 November [meeting 5313], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/57 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the Agreement on Movement and Access and the Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority on 15 November 2005. The successful opening of the Rafah crossing on 25 November 2005 represents an important step forward.
> The Council commends the efforts of the Quartet, the Quartet Special Envoy and his team, as well as the positive contributions of the Government of Egypt, and expresses its strong appreciation to the European Union for assuming the role of third-party monitor.
> The Council calls upon the parties to take immediate action to implement the terms of both agreements according to the timelines established therein.
> The Council calls for renewed action in parallel by the Government of Israel and the Palestinian Authority on their obligations in accordance with the Road map, to ensure continued progress towards the creation of a viable, democratic, sovereign and contiguous Palestine living side by side with Israel in peace and security. The Council stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967), 338 (1973), 1397(2002) and 1515(2003), the Madrid terms of reference and the principle of land for peace.

Communications (5 December). On 5 December [A/60/580-S/2005/756], Israel said that, on 3 and 4 December, the Al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade, a terrorist organization affiliated with PA President Abbas Fatah movement, launched rockets against the town of Nativ Ha'asara causing damage to community property. On the same day [A/60/581-S/2005/757], Israel said that at least five people were killed and more than 55 wounded when a Palestinian terrorist associated with the Islamic Jihad organization detonated himself in the city of Netanya.

Quartet statement (5 December). Representatives of the Quartet, issued a statement on 5 December [SG/2102] on the situation in the Middle East, in which it condemned the terrorist attack in Netanya in the strongest possible terms. The Quartet repeated its demand that the Syrian Government take immediate action to close the offices of the Islamic Jihad and to prevent the use of its territory by armed groups engaged in terrorist acts. The Quartet denounced all acts of terrorism and urged all parties to exercise restraint, avoid escalation of violence and keep channels of communication open.

Communications (8-16 December). On 8 December [A/ES-10/313-S/2005/771], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that, on 5 December, the Israeli Defense Minister had ordered IDF to launch wide-scale military operations in the Gaza Strip and in the north and northeast parts of the West Bank. On that day, Israeli war planes fired missiles at a house in Gaza, killing two Palestinians and injuring six others. On 7 December, IDF carried out another extrajudicial killing, in which one Palestinian was killed and several others wounded. IDF had tightened its siege of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, isolating the Palestinian population in their towns, further compounding their socio-economic hardships.

On 16 December [A/60/633-S/2005/826], Saudi Arabia transmitted the text of the Makkah Declaration adopted at the Third Extraordinary Session of the Islamic Summit Conference (Makkah Al-Mukarramah, Saudi Arabia, 7-8 December), in which the Conference called for the dismantling of settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, as well as the demolition of the separation wall.

Security Council consideration (December). The Security Council, on 20 December [meeting 5337], discussed the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question.

The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Mr. Gambari, said that since the end of November, despite the fact that some progress was made toward the implementation of the Access and Movement Agreement between Israel and the PA, violence continued in the region. Following the 5 December suicide bombing in Netanya, (see above) the PA had arrested some 60 suspects, while Israel responded to the attack and to the firing of Qassam rockets against Israeli territory by tightening the closure regime and by implementing a previously announced resumption of targeted killings. Meanwhile, the Palestinian internal security situation had worsened, with attacks on electoral offices, armed clashes between Fatah factions at the party headquarters and between the Palestinian security forces and armed elements.

At the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting (London, 14 December), donors, the PA and the Israeli Government discussed the economic, fiscal and humanitarian situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and assessed progress in Palestinian reform. The need for the PA to adhere to the reform agenda and to re-establish fiscal discipline was a central theme of the meeting. The PA presented an update on its precarious financial situation and shared with donors the main elements of its medium-term development plan for the next three years. The meeting adopted a revised donor structure that strengthened the PA's role. Donors agreed on the need for the PA to implement, as a matter of priority, a medium-term fiscal stabilization plan and stressed that reform had to continue in the coming months, even though the election period could make that more difficult. The PA's fiscal situation was so acute that there was real concern that the December salaries of government-employees might not be paid. The Committee also discussed the convening in 2006, of a pledging conference to mobilize the target sum of $3 billion.

Implementation was proceeding on some parts of the Agreement on Movement and Access (see p. 520). The Rafah crossing between Gaza and Egypt, was open for five hours each day since 26 November. The Karni crossing, through which produce entered Israel from Gaza, also remained open since 15 November, allowing the first post-disengagement Palestinian harvest to reach Israeli markets. Despite the concerted efforts of the United States and the Quartet's Special Envoy to resolve outstanding differences and to ensure that Israel's security concerns were met, the commencement of the bus convoys between Gaza and the West Bank, which should have started on 15 December remained suspended.

On 15 December, the fourth round of municipal elections took place in the West Bank, including in larger municipalities such as Nablus, Jenin and AlBireh, where Hamas won an overwhelming majority of seats, and Ramallah, where Fatah won. The fifth, and final round, which would include major constituencies in Gaza, would be held in early 2006, after the legislative elections.

The Under-Secretary-General said that the road map's target date for a final and comprehensive settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict was set for 31 December 2005. It was obvious that, while progress had been made, no comprehensive peace would be achieved by then. That did not detract from the centrality of the road map, which remained the agreed framework for achieving a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. The deadline represented an occasion for all parties to reflect on what more they could do to ensure that road map obligations were met.

Quartet statement (28 December). On 28 December, the Quartet issued a statement welcoming the upcoming Palestinian Legislative Council elections as a positive step toward consolidation of Palestinian democracy and the goal of a two-state solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. It called on the PA and the Central Election Commission to ensure a free, fair and open process in accordance with Palestinian law. The PA had to ensure the security of polling stations and of election personnel, enforce existing law, regulations and decrees, particularly those prohibiting the public display of weapons, external financing of campaigns and the use of religious facilities for campaign purposes. The Quartet reaffirmed that those who wanted to be a part of the political process should not engage in armed group or militia activities, and called on all participants to renounce violence, recognize Israel's right to exist, and to disarm. The Quartet was encouraged by the negotiation of an electoral code of conduct and welcomed the PA's invitation to international election observers. In particular, the Quartet expressed its view that a future PA Cabinet should include no member who had not committed to the principles of Israel's right to exist in peace and security and to an unequivocal end to violence and terrorism. The Quartet believed it was essential that direct dialogue begin immediately between the Israeli Government and the PA to coordinate preparation for the legislative elections. Both parties should work to put in place a mechanism to allow Palestinians residents in Jerusalem to exercise their legitimate democratic rights.

Further communications. In a later communication [A/ES-10/314-S/2006/11], the Permanent Observer of Palestine said that between 14 November and 31 December, IDF killed 27 Palestinians. In addition, Israel had begun implementing a unilateral plan to create a so-called "buffer zone" in the northern Gaza Strip through the shelling and bombing of that area. Israel also refused to implement the Agreement on Movement and Access, as Israeli authorities had yet to allow bus convoy traffic between Gaza and the West Bank, originally scheduled to commence on 15 December.

The Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council, at its twenty-sixth session (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, 18-19 December) [A/60/680-S/2006/108], called on Israel to desist from its arbitrary practices against Palestinians, including, among other things, ending targeted assassinations, stopping settlement activity and ceasing construction of the separation wall.

Jerusalem

East Jerusalem, where most of the city's Arab inhabitants lived, remained one of the most sensitive issues in the Middle East peace process and a focal point of concern for the United Nations in 2005.

Committee on Palestinian Rights. In its annual report [A/60/35], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) expressed concern over the intensified expansion of Israeli settlements in the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, as well as by public pronouncements by Israeli officials in September concerning the future of Jerusalem and its borders, the two issues that were to be resolved through permanent status negotiations between the parties. The Committee also noted that Israel continued the construction of the wall in the occupied territories. In the Jerusalem area, the wall's route remained the same, with 40 more kilometres that would surround the Ma'ale Adumim settlement, as well as four others nearby. The wall, when completed, would place Ma'ale Adumim, its industrial zone, Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem, and most of East Jerusalem on the Israeli side. A new road being planned to connect Ramallah, north of Jerusalem, with Bethlehem in the south, would deny access for Palestinians to East Jerusalem, because the road would bypass the city. Some 60,000 Palestinians with Jerusalem identity documents would be on the east side of the wall, while some 30,000 Ma'ale Adumim settlers would be in Jerusalem.

Transfer of diplomatic missions

Report of Secretary-General. On 16 August [A/60/258], the Secretary-General reported that four Member States had replied to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 59/32 [YUN 2004, p. 473], which addressed the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem, in violation of Security Council resolution 478 (1980) [YUN 1980, p. 426]. Israel had not replied to the Secretary-General's request.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/41 [draft: A/60/L.33 & Add.1] by recorded vote (153-7-12) [agenda item 14].

Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947, in particular its provisions regarding the City of Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolution 36/120 E of 10 December 1981 and all subsequent resolutions, including resolution 56/31 of 3 December 2001, in which it, inter alia, determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which have altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called "Basic Law" on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling further Security Council resolutions relevant to Jerusalem, including resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the "Basic Law" and called upon those States which had established diplomatic missions in Jerusalem to withdraw such missions from the Holy City,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Expressing its grave concern at any action taken by any body, governmental or non-governmental, in violation of the above-mentioned resolutions,

Expressing its grave concern in particular about the continuation by Israel, the occupying Power, of illegal settlement activities and its construction of the wall in and around East Jerusalem, and the further isolation of the city from the rest of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, which is having a detrimental effect on the lives of Palestinians and could prejudge a final status agreement on Jerusalem,

Reaffirming that the international community, through the United Nations, has a legitimate interest in the question of the City of Jerusalem and the protection of the unique spiritual, religious and cultural dimensions of the city, as foreseen in relevant United Nations resolutions on this matter,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reiterates its determination that any actions taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem are illegal and therefore null and void and have no validity whatsoever;

2. Deplores the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980), and calls once more upon those States to abide by the provisions of the relevant United Nations resolutions, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Stresses that a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of the City of Jerusalem should take into account the legitimate concerns of both the Palestinian and Israeli sides and should include internationally guaranteed provisions to ensure the freedom of religion and of conscience of its inhabitants, as well as permanent, free and unhindered access to the holy places by the people of all religions and nationalities;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/41:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Cameroon, El Salvador, Fiji, Guatemala, Haiti, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Tuvalu, Uganda, Vanuatu.

Economic and social situation

A May report on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of Palestinians in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan [A/60/65-E/2005/13] was prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/54 [YUN 2004, p. 474] and General Assembly resolution 59/251 [ibid., p. 475]; it covered developments since the last ESCWA report [ibid., p. 474].

The report noted that the Israeli occupation continued to deepen the economic and social hardship for Palestinians. Economic indicators continued to show negative trends: high unemployment; greater dependency on food aid; and untold losses from the physical destruction of Palestinian homes, public buildings, agricultural assets, infrastructure and private property. Israel's confiscation of Palestinian land and water resources for settlements and the erection of the West Bank barrier accelerated during the period under review. Refugees, women and children bore a significant brunt of those measures. Malnutrition and other health problems afflicted a growing number of Palestinians at a time of curtailed access to needed services. Over 60 per cent of children below 2 years of age, 36 per cent of pregnant women, and over 43 per cent of nursing mothers in the Gaza Strip were anaemic. An estimated 38 per cent of the Palestinian population was subject to food insecurity. Israeli restrictions regularly impeded humanitarian services to the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Israeli settlements, land confiscation and the construction of the barrier in the occupied territory, isolated occupied East Jerusalem, bisected the West Bank, curtailed normal economic and social life, and continued to fuel the conflict. In 2004, the number of Israeli settlers in the West Bank and Gaza Strip grew to 250,179, a 6 per cent increase from 2003. Israeli settlements in the occupied Syrian Golan Heights, housing an estimated 20,000 Israeli settlers, continued to expand unabated. Access to natural resources and social services remained inadequate for the Arab population in the Syrian Golan Heights.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2005/51 [draft: E/2005/L.24/Rev.1] by recorded vote (49-2-1) [agenda item 11].

Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 59/251 of 22 December 2004,

Also recalling its resolution 2004/54 of 23 July 2004,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 452(1979) of 20 July 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981, 904(1994) of 18 March 1994, 1073 (1996) of 28 September 1996, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004,

Recalling the resolutions of the tenth emergency special session of the General Assembly, including ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, ES-10/14 of 8 December 2003 and ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Stressing the importance of the revival of the Middle East peace process on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973), 425(1978) of 19 March 1978, 1397(2002), 1515(2003) and 1544(2004) and the principle of land for peace as well as compliance with the agreements reached between the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Convinced that the Israeli occupation has gravely impeded the efforts to achieve sustainable development and a sound economic environment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan,

Gravely concerned about the deterioration of the economic and living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan and the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of their natural resources,

Gravely concerned also by the grave impact on the economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people caused by Israel's construction of the wall and its associated regime inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and the resulting violation of their economic and social rights, including the right to work, to health, to education and to an adequate standard of living,

Recalling, in this regard, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as in the occupied Syrian Golan,

Gravely concerned at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of agricultural land and orchards in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, during the recent period, including, and in particular, as a result of its unlawful construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, recalling also Assembly resolution ES-10/15, and stressing the need to comply with the obligations mentioned therein,

Expressing concern at the recent escalation of violence that has been characteristic of recent years following a period of relative calm, and, in this context, expressing its concern about the tragic and violent events that have taken place since September 2000, which have led to many deaths and injuries,

Aware of the important work being done by the United Nations and the specialized agencies in support of the economic and social development of the Palestinian people, as well as the assistance being provided in the humanitarian field,

Conscious of the urgent need for the reconstruction and development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as the urgent need to address the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Calling upon both parties to fulfil their obligations under the road map in cooperation with the Quartet,

1. Stresses the need to preserve the national unity and the territorial integrity of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods in the Territory, including the removal of restrictions on going into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

2. Also stresses the vital importance of the construction and operation of the airport and the seaport in Gaza and the establishment of the safe passage between the West Bank and Gaza for the economic and social development of the Palestinian people;

3. Demands the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction;

4. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to end its occupation of Palestinian cities, towns and other populated centres, to cease its destruction of homes and properties, economic institutions and agricultural fields and to end the imposition of all forms of closure and curfew, which impede efforts aimed at the amelioration of the economic and social conditions and the development of the Palestinian people;

5. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the Palestinian people and the Arab population of the occupied Syrian Golan to all their natural and economic resources, and calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, endanger or cause loss or depletion of those resources;

6. Also reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan, are illegal and an obstacle to economic and social development, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

7. Stresses that the wall being constructed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, is contrary to international law and is seriously debilitating to the economic and social development of the Palestinian people, and calls in this regard for full compliance with the legal obligations mentioned in the 9 July 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and in Assembly resolution ES-10/15;

8. Emphasizes the importance of the work of the organizations and agencies of the United Nations and of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority;

9. Urges Member States to encourage private foreign investment in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in infrastructure, job-creation projects and social development in order to alleviate the hardships being faced by the Palestinian people and improve their living conditions;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session, through the Economic and Social Council, a report on the implementation of the present resolution and to continue to include in the report of the United Nations Special Coordinator an update on the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in collaboration with relevant United Nations agencies;

11. Decides to include the item entitled "Economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan" in the agenda of its substantive session of 2006.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2005/51:

In favour: Albania, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Brazil, Canada, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Germany, Guinea, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Lithuania, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mexico, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Spain, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania.

Against: Australia, United States.

Abstaining: Costa Rica.

On the same date (decision 2005/304), the Council took note of the note of the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by ESCWA (see p. 523).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 22 December [meeting 68], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee [A/60/484], adopted resolution 60/183 by recorded vote (156-6-8) [agenda item 38].

Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/251 of 22 December 2004, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 2005/51 of 27 July 2005,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Reaffirming the principle of the permanent sovereignty of peoples under foreign occupation over their natural resources,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, and recalling relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980 and 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling, in this regard, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, as well as in the occupied Syrian Golan,

Recalling also the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling further its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Expressing its concern at the exploitation by Israel, the occupying Power, of the natural resources of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Expressing its concern also at the extensive destruction by Israel, the occupying Power, of agricultural land and orchards in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including the uprooting of a vast number of fruit-bearing trees,

Aware of the detrimental impact of the Israeli settlements on Palestinian and other Arab natural resources, especially as a result of the confiscation of land and the forced diversion of water resources, and of the dire economic and social consequences in this regard,

Aware also of the detrimental impact on Palestinian natural resources being caused by the unlawful construction of the wall by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and of its grave effect on the natural resources and economic and social conditions of the Palestinian people,

Reaffirming the need for the immediate resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967), 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, the principle of land for peace and the Quartet performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, as endorsed by the Security Council in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, and for the achievement of a final settlement on all tracks,

Acknowledging the importance of the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and of the dismantlement of settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Taking note with appreciation of the note by the Secretary-General transmitting the report prepared by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia on the economic and social repercussions of the Israeli occupation on the living conditions of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and the population of the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources, including land and water;

2. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, not to exploit, damage, cause loss or depletion of, or endanger the natural resources in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan;

3. Recognizes the right of the Palestinian people to claim restitution as a result of any exploitation, damage, loss or depletion, or endangerment of their natural resources resulting from illegal measures taken by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and expresses the hope that this issue will be dealt with in the framework of the final status negotiations between the Palestinian and Israeli sides;

4. Stresses that the wall being constructed by Israel in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, is contrary to international law and is seriously depriving the Palestinian people of their natural resources, and calls in this regard for full compliance with the legal obligations mentioned in the 9 July 2004 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice and in resolution ES-10/15;

5. Welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map;

6. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, in this regard, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character and status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Also calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to cease the dumping of all kinds of waste materials in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, which gravely threaten their natural resources, namely the water and land resources, and pose an environmental hazard and health threat to the civilian populations;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to it at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution, and decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Permanent sovereignty of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and of the Arab population in the occupied Syrian Golan over their natural resources".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/183:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Su-

Other aspects

Special Committee on Israeli Practices. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/121 [YUN 2004, p. 480], the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories, in September, reported for the thirty-seventh time to the General Assembly on events and the human rights situation in the territories it considered occupied—the Golan Heights, the West Bank, including East Jerusalem, and the Gaza Strip [A/60/380]. The report reflected information gathered during the Committee's mission to Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic from 25 June to 9 July. In those three countries, the Committee met with 46 witnesses representing Palestinian non-governmental organizations (NGOs), as well as individuals from Syria. The report reviewed the human rights situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the Syrian Golan.

As in the past, the Committee was not authorized by Israel to visit the occupied territories, which had been the case since 1968, when the Committee was established [YUN 1968, p. 556]. After 37 years of being denied access to the occupied territories by Israel, the Special Committee wondered whether Israel should not revisit the reasons behind such refusal. The world had changed since the inception of the Special Committee's mandate, with younger generations taking over. Disagreement should not be a hindrance to meeting and interacting; discussing issues of common concern would not affect the legal state of affairs.

The Special Committee, during its field trips to the Middle East, in 2005, was challenged by various interlocutors, including a number of Palestinian witnesses, as to what actions it envisaged to implement its mandate. The Committee, while indicating that its main role and responsibility were to report to the General Assembly, suggested that the time might have come for the Assembly to consider innovative ways of assisting it in fulfilling its mandate.

The Special Committee noted that hopes for progress in the occupied territories tended to vanish in the face of persistent negative factors, such as the loss of control by the Palestinians over strategic resources like water and energy; the loss of contiguity of their lands due to the wall, road closures and checkpoints, as well as to growing settlers' communities and the network of roads built for their benefit. The Committee also noted the serious deterioration of the situation of Palestinian children and youth whose lives were at risk, whose freedom of movement was severely curtailed by long hours of waiting at entry points to the wall or at checkpoints and other restrictions, and whose level of education and academic achievements were negatively affected by the numerous impediments imposed by the occupying authorities.

Report of Special Rapporteur. The Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967, John Dugard, submitted to the Commission on Human Rights at its 2005 session reports describing the situation of human rights in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. [E/CN.4/2005/29 & Add.1, A/60/271], (see pp. 904 & 905).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/60/477], adopted resolution 60/107 by recorded vote (148-7-17) [agenda item 31].

Israeli practices affecting the human rights of the Palestinian people in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolution 59/124 of 10 December 2004, as well as those adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the report of the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the report of the Human Rights Inquiry Commission established by the Commission on Human Rights and the recent reports of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Noting in particular the Court's reply, including that the construction of the wall being built by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime are contrary to international law,

Recalling the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the responsibility of the international community to promote human rights and ensure respect for international law, and recalling in this regard its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Reaffirming further the obligation of the States parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention under articles 146, 147 and 148 with regard to penal sanctions, grave breaches and responsibilities of the High Contracting Parties,

Reaffirming that all States have the right and the duty to take actions in conformity with international law and international humanitarian law to counter deadly acts of violence against their civilian population in order to protect the lives of their citizens,

Stressing the need for full compliance with the Israeli-Palestinian agreements reached within the context of the Middle East peace process, including the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings, and the implementation of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Acknowledging the importance of the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and of the dismantlement of settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Expressing grave concern about the continuing systematic violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people by Israel, the occupying Power, including that arising from the excessive use of force, the use of collective punishment, the reoccupation and closure of areas, the confiscation of land, the establishment and expansion of settlements, the construction of the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, the destruction of property and all other actions by it designed to change the legal status, geographical nature and demographic composition of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Gravely concerned about the military actions that have been carried out since 28 September 2000 and that have led to thousands of deaths among Palestinian civilians, including hundreds of children, and tens of thousands of injuries,

Expressing deep concern about the continuing detrimental impact of the extensive destruction caused by the Israeli occupying forces, including of religious, cultural and historical sites, of vital infrastructure and institutions of the Palestinian Authority, and of agricultural land throughout Palestinian cities, towns, villages and refugee camps,

Expressing deep concern also about the Israeli policy of closure and the severe restrictions, including curfews, that continue to be imposed on the movement of persons and goods, including medical and humanitarian personnel and goods, throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the consequent negative impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestinian people, which remains that of a dire humanitarian crisis,

Concerned about the continued establishment of checkpoints in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the transformation of several of these checkpoints into structures akin to permanent border crossings inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Expressing concern that thousands of Palestinians continue to be held in Israeli prisons or detention centres under harsh conditions that impair their well-being, and also expressing concern about the ill-treatment and harassment of any Palestinian prisoners and all reports of torture,

Convinced of the need for an international presence to monitor the situation, to contribute to ending the violence and protecting the Palestinian civilians and to help the parties to implement agreements reached, and, in this regard, recalls the positive contribution of the Temporary International Presence in Hebron,

Stressing the necessity for the full implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions,

1. Reiterates that all measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, in violation of the relevant provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and contrary to the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, are illegal and have no validity;

2. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949 and cease immediately all measures and actions taken in violation and in breach of the Convention, including all of its settlement activities and the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, as well as the extrajudicial executions;

3. Condemns all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in extensive loss of life, vast numbers of injuries and massive destruction of homes, properties, agricultural lands and vital infrastructure;

4. Expresses grave concern at the use of suicide bombing attacks against Israeli civilians resulting in extensive loss of life and injury;

5. Welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map;

6. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, in this regard, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character and status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, cease all practices and actions which violate the human rights of the Palestinian people, and that it respect human rights law and comply with its legal obligations in this regard;

8. Demands also that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice and as demanded in resolution ES-10/15 and resolution ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003, and that it immediately cease the construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, dismantle forthwith the structure situated therein, repeal or render ineffective all legislative and regulatory acts relating thereto, and make reparation for all damage caused by the construction of the wall;

9. Stresses the need for unity and territorial integrity of all the Occupied Palestinian Territory and to guarantee the freedom of movement of persons and goods within the Palestinian territory, including the removal of restrictions on movement into and from East Jerusalem, and the freedom of movement to and from the outside world;

10. Stresses also the need for the full implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/107:

By resolution 60/39 of 1 December, the Assembly reaffirmed the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination, including the right to their State, and urged all States and UN specialized agencies and organizations to support the Palestinian people in their quest for self-determination (see p. 536).

Work of Special Committee

In an August report [A/60/294], the Secretary-General stated that all necessary facilities were provided to the Special Committee on Israeli Practices, as requested in General Assembly resolution 59/121 [YUN 2004, p. 480]. Arrangements were made for it to meet in March and June in Geneva, and a field mission was carried out to Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic from 25 June to 9 July. The UN Department of Public Information continued to disseminate information on the Committee's activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/477], adopted resolution 60/104 by recorded vote (86-10-74) [agenda item 31].

Work of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Guided also by international humanitarian law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, as well as international standards of human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 2443(XXIII) of 19 December 1968 and 59/121 of 10 December 2004, and the relevant resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Taking into account the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling in this regard General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Convinced that occupation itself represents a gross and grave violation of human rights,

Gravely concerned about the continuing detrimental impact of the events that have taken place since 28 September 2000, including the excessive use of force by the Israeli occupying forces against Palestinian civilians, resulting in thousands of deaths and injuries, and the widespread destruction of property,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Expressing the hope that the Israeli occupation will be brought to an early end and that therefore the violation of the human rights of the Palestinian people will cease, and recalling in this regard its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

1. Commends the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly and for its impartiality;

2. Reiterates its demand that Israel, the occupying Power, cooperate with the Special Committee in implementing its mandate;

3. Deplores those policies and practices of Israel that violate the human rights of the Palestinian people and other Arabs of the occupied territories, as reflected in the report of the Special Committee covering the reporting period;

4. Expresses grave concern about the critical situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000, as a result of unlawful Israeli practices and measures, and especially condemns all Israeli settlement activities and the construction of the wall, as well as the excessive and indiscriminate use of force against the civilian population, including extrajudicial executions;

5. Requests the Special Committee, pending complete termination of the Israeli occupation, to continue to investigate Israeli policies and practices in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, especially Israeli violations of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and to consult, as appropriate, with the International Committee of the Red Cross according to its regulations in order to ensure that the welfare and human rights of the peoples of the occupied territories are safeguarded and to report to the Secretary-General as soon as possible and whenever the need arises thereafter;

6. Also requests the Special Committee to submit regularly to the Secretary-General periodic reports on the current situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Further requests the Special Committee to continue to investigate the treatment of prisoners and detainees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

8. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To provide the Special Committee with all necessary facilities, including those required for its visits to the occupied territories, so that it may investigate Israeli policies and practices referred to in the present resolution;

(b) To continue to make available such staff as may be necessary to assist the Special Committee in the performance of its tasks;

(c) To circulate regularly to Member States the periodic reports mentioned in paragraph 6 above;

(d) To ensure the widest circulation of the reports of the Special Committee and of information regarding its activities and findings, by all means available, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat and, where necessary, to reprint those reports of the Special Committee that are no longer available;

(e) To report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the tasks entrusted to him in the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/104:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burundi, Cambodia, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Paraguay, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Canada, Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, Palau, Tuvalu, United States.

Fourth Geneva Convention

Report of Secretary-General. In an August report [A/60/296], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his July request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 59/122 [YUN 2004, p. 481] demanding that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that it comply scrupulously with its provisions. The Secretary-General noted that he had drawn the attention of all States parties to the Convention to paragraph 3 of resolution 59/122 calling on them to exert all efforts to ensure respect by Israel for the Convention's provisions, and to paragraph 6 of resolution 59/125 [ibid., p. 516] calling on States not to recognize any legislative or administrative measures and actions taken by Israel in the occupied Syrian Golan.

The High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention had ratified the applicability of the Convention to the Occupied Palestinian Territory at meetings in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 415] and in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 425].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/477], adopted resolution 60/105 by recorded vote (158-6-7) [agenda item 31].

Applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the other occupied Arab territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including its resolution 59/122 of 10 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Bearing in mind the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Recalling the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention IV of 1907, the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the four Geneva Conventions,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories and the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

Considering that the promotion of respect for the obligations arising from the Charter of the United Nations and other instruments and rules of international law is among the basic purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice, and also recalling General Assembly resolution ES-10/15,

Noting in particular the Court's reply, including that the Fourth Geneva Convention is applicable in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and that Israel is in breach of several of the provisions of the Convention,

Noting the convening for the first time, on 15 July 1999, of a Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention, as recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution ES-10/6 of 9 February 1999, on measures to enforce the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to ensure respect thereof in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, and aware of the statement adopted by the Conference,

Welcoming the reconvening of the Conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention on 5 December 2001 in Geneva and stressing the importance of the Declaration adopted by the Conference, and underlining the need for the parties to follow up the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming and encouraging the initiatives by States parties to the Convention, both individually and collectively, according to article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions, aimed at ensuring respect for the Convention,

Stressing that Israel, the occupying Power, should comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law,

1. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Demands that Israel accept the de jure applicability of the Convention in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, and that it comply scrupulously with the provisions of the Convention;

3. Calls upon all High Contracting Parties to the Convention, in accordance with article 1 common to the four Geneva Conventions and as mentioned in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 9 July 2004, to continue to exert all efforts to ensure respect for its provisions by Israel, the occupying Power, in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

4. Reiterates the need for speedy implementation of the relevant recommendations contained in the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth emergency special session, including resolution ES-10/15, with regard to ensuring respect by Israel, the occupying Power, for the provisions of the Convention;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/105:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Cameroon, Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Haiti, Uganda.

Israeli settlements

Report of Secretary-General. On 24 August [A/60/297], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that Israel had not replied to his July request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement the relevant provisions of resolution 59/123 [YUN 2004, p. 482] demanding that Israel, among other things, cease all construction of the wall and new settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/477], adopted resolution 60/106 by recorded vote (153-7-10) [agenda item 31].

Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and the occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Guided by the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and affirming the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolution 59/123 of 10 December 2004, as well as those resolutions adopted at its tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 446(1979) of 22 March 1979, 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, 476(1980) of 30 June 1980, 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981 and 904 (1994) of 18 March 1994,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Considering that the transfer by the occupying Power of parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies constitutes a breach of the Fourth Geneva Convention and relevant provisions of customary law, including those codified in Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Noting that the International Court of Justice concluded that "the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory (including East Jerusalem) have been established in breach of international law",

Taking note of the recent report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Human Rights on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territories occupied by Israel since 1967,

Recalling the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993 and the subsequent implementation agreements between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and noting specifically its call for a freeze on all settlement activity,

Aware that Israeli settlement activities have involved, inter alia, the transfer of nationals of the occupying Power into the occupied territories, the confiscation of land, the exploitation of natural resources and other illegal actions against the Palestinian civilian population,

Bearing in mind the detrimental impact of Israeli settlement policies, decisions and activities on efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East,

Expressing grave concern about the continuation by Israel, the occupying Power, of settlement activities, in violation of international humanitarian law, relevant United Nations resolutions and the agreements reached between the parties, including the construction and expansion of the settlements in Jabal Abu-Ghneim and Ras Al-Amud in and around Occupied East Jerusalem and the so-called E-1 plan, aimed at connecting its illegal settlements around and further isolating Occupied East Jerusalem,

Expressing grave concern also about the continuing unlawful construction by Israel of the wall inside the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and expressing its concern in particular about the route of the wall in departure from the Armistice Line of 1949, which could prejudge future negotiations and make the two-State solution physically impossible to implement and which is causing the Palestinian people further humanitarian hardship,

Deeply concerned that the wall's route has been traced in such a way as to include the great majority of the Israeli settlements in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Reiterating its opposition to settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to any activities involving the confiscation of land, the disruption of the livelihood of protected persons and the de facto annexation of land,

Recalling the need to end all acts of violence, including acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction,

Gravely concerned about the dangerous situation resulting from actions taken by the illegal armed Israeli settlers in the occupied territory,

Acknowledging the importance of the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Taking note of the relevant reports of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that Israeli settlements in the Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan are illegal and an obstacle to peace and economic and social development;

2. Calls upon Israel to accept the de jure applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and to the occupied Syrian Golan and to abide scrupulously by the provisions of the Convention, in particular article 49;

3. Welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map;

4. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, in this regard, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character and status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

5. Emphasizes the need for the parties to speedily resolve all remaining issues in the Gaza Strip, including the removal of rubble;

6. Reiterates its demand for the immediate and complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in all of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Security Council;

7. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice;

8. Stresses the need for full implementation of Security Council resolution 904(1994), in which, among other things, the Council called upon Israel, the occupying Power, to continue to take and implement measures, including confiscation of arms, with the aim of preventing illegal acts of violence by Israeli settlers, and called for measures to be taken to guarantee the safety and protection of the Palestinian civilians in the occupied territory;

9. Reiterates its calls for the prevention of all acts of violence by Israeli settlers, especially against Palestinian civilians and properties, particularly in the light of recent developments;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/106:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Cameroon, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Haiti, Papua New Guinea, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Uganda.

Palestinian women

The Secretary-General, in a report [E/CN.6/2005/4] to the Commission on the Status of Women, as requested by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 2004/56 [YUN 2004, p. 484], reviewed the situation of Palestinian women and assistance provided by UN organizations from October 2003 to September 2004. He said that during that period, the occupation of Palestinian territory by Israel continued to have a detrimental effect on the lives of Palestinian women and children. The hardship of daily life was felt most acutely by Palestinian women who carried the burden of responsibility within the household because of the death, imprisonment, or unemployment of male members. Between September 2000 and September 2004, some 250 Palestinians had died.

The social, economic and cultural context of women's health remained challenging. In particular, malnutrition continued to have a major impact on the lives of Palestinian women and children. Land confiscation and the destruction of cultivated fields and houses divided families and communities, denied farmers access to their land, workers to their jobs, children and youth to schools, colleges and universities and women and children basic health and social services. In addition, Palestinian women in prison were reported to have been subjected to torture or inhuman and degrading treatment. The severe economic depression of the Palestinian economy since September 2000 continued unabated during the reporting period. Low levels of employment resulted in high levels of poverty among Palestinians, particularly women. Women's labour force participation remained low, in spite of their high and successful secondary school enrolment (only 11 per cent of women of employment age participated in the labour force). In cases where they did participate in the labour market, they were mostly located in the agriculture and service sectors. A number of objectives had been identified to address the low participation of women in the labour force, including upgrading governmental political commitment to include gender, democracy and human rights issues in the policies and plans of the various ministries and relevant legislation and regulations; linking lobbying and advocacy activities with the development of policies and laws; and building a network of links with women governmental institutions and NGOs and human rights organizations at the regional and international levels, and exchanging experience with them on the implementation and support of international conventions on women and human rights. Efforts were made to address discrimination against women and the concerns of Palestinian women through the newly established PA Ministry of Women's Affairs.

The UN system continued to provide direct assistance to Palestinian women. The World Bank implemented the second Palestinian NGO project, under which a counselling centre for women in difficult circumstances was designed. The International Labour Organization established a Palestinian fund for employment and social protection. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) initiated a number of projects aimed at women's economic empowerment. In June 2004, UNDP entered into an agreement with the Ministry of Women's Affairs to support the development of a three-year action plan aimed at promoting gender-sensitive structures, programmes and policies. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) granted $2.47 million to women through its microfinance and microenterprise programme. (For more information on UNRWA's activities, see p. 544.) The United Nations Development Fund for Women opened a programme office in Jerusalem in April 2004.

The Secretary-General stated that many of the initiatives undertaken by UN system entities were aimed at long-term sustainable development for Palestinian people, including women. Palestinian women continued to require assistance with income-generating projects aimed at poverty alleviation, education and training, access to health care and health-care services, and with ongoing advocacy to combat violence against women and protect their fundamental human rights. While the reports by relevant bodies provided considerable information on the overall situation in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and made reference to women, limited information was provided on the specific situation of women and girls. The specific impact of the crisis on women, as compared to men, should be highlighted so that targeted actions could be taken to mitigate gender-specific negative ones. Gender perspectives should be more fully integrated into international assistance programmes through, among other things, in-depth gender analysis and the collection of data disaggregated by sex, and be fully incorporated into all UN studies and reports on the Palestinian people in order to effectively assess the impact of the situation of Palestinian women. Since the status and living conditions of Palestinian women were linked to achieving a peaceful resolution of the conflict, additional efforts needed to be made by the international community to end the violent confrontations in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July [meeting 39], the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of the Commission on the Status of Women [E/2005/27 & Corr.1], adopted resolution 2005/43 by recorded vote (46-2-4) [agenda item 14 (a)].

Situation of and assistance to Palestinian women

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered with appreciation the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action adopted at the Fourth World Conference on Women and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century",

Recalling also its resolution 2004/56 of 23 July 2004 and other relevant United Nations resolutions,

Recalling further the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women as it concerns the protection of civilian populations,

Expressing the urgent need for the full resumption of negotiations within the Middle East peace process on its agreed basis and towards the speedy achievement of a final settlement between the Palestinian and Israeli sides,

Concerned about the grave situation of Palestinian women in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, resulting from the severe impact of ongoing illegal Israeli settlement activities and the unlawful construction of the wall, as well as the severe consequences arising from Israeli military operations on and sieges of civilian areas, which have detrimentally impacted their social and economic conditions and deepened the humanitarian crisis faced by Palestinian women and their families,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also General Assembly resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Recalling also the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, and affirming that these human rights instruments must be respected in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem,

Expressing its condemnation of all acts of violence, including all acts of terror, provocation, incitement and destruction, especially the excessive use of force against Palestinian civilians, many of them women and children, resulting in injury and loss of human life,

1. Calls upon the concerned parties, as well as the international community, to exert all the efforts necessary to ensure the full resumption of the peace process on its agreed basis, taking into account the common ground already gained, and calls for measures for tangible improvement of the difficult situation on the ground and the living conditions faced by Palestinian women and their families;

2. Reaffirms that the Israeli occupation remains a major obstacle for Palestinian women with regard to their advancement, self-reliance and integration in the development planning of their society;

3. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply fully with the provisions and principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention respecting the Laws and Custom of War on Land of 18 October 1907 (Convention IV), and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, in order to protect the rights of Palestinian women and their families;

4. Calls upon Israel to facilitate the return of all refugees and displaced Palestinian women and children to their homes and properties, in compliance with the relevant United Nations resolutions;

5. Calls upon the international community to continue to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian women and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

6. Requests the Commission on the Status of Women to continue to monitor and take action with regard to the implementation of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraph 260 concerning Palestinian women and children, the Beijing Platform for Action and the outcome of the twenty-third special session of the General Assembly, entitled "Women 2000: gender equality, development and peace for the twenty-first century";

7. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to review the situation, to assist Palestinian women by all available means, including those set out in his report, and to submit to the Commission on the Status of Women at its fiftieth session a report, including information provided by the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Issues related to Palestine

General aspects

The General Assembly again considered the question of Palestine in 2005. Having discussed the annual report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian Rights) [A/60/35], the Assembly adopted four resolutions, reaffirming, among other things, the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the Palestine question—the core of Arab-Israeli conflict—and stressing the need for the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinians, primarily the right to self-determination, for Israeli withdrawal from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 and for resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees. It called on the Secretariat to continue its activities to promote and raise awareness of Palestinian rights.

The most significant political development in the Occupied Palestinian Territory was the build-up to, and implementation of, Israel's evacuation of its settlements in the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank. The Quartet responded by establishing the Office of the Special Envoy of the Quartet for Gaza Disengagement. In observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, celebrated annually on 29 November in accordance with Assembly resolution 32/40 B [YUN 1977, p. 304], the Committee held a solemn meeting.

Report of Secretary-General. In a November report on the peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine [A/60/539-S/2005/701], submitted in response to Assembly resolution 59/31 [YUN 2004, p. 487], the Secretary-General made observations on the status of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and on international efforts to move the Middle East peace process forward (see also p. 503). On 31 May, the Secretary-General sought the positions of Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Palestine Liberation Organization regarding steps taken to implement the resolution. As at 20 September, Israel and the Permanent Observer of Palestine had responded.

In a 4 August note verbale, Israel said that it viewed the resolution as unbalanced and politically motivated, and interference in matters that the parties had agreed to resolve within the context of direct bilateral negotiations. The violence in the region was a result of a Palestinian decision to abandon peace negotiations and pursue their goals through violence and terrorism. The one-sided approach of the resolution, which sought to dictate the outcome of the negotiating process, effectively rewarded violence at a time when the Palestinian side should discontinue such acts and boldly pursue peaceful dialogue.

The Permanent Observer, in a 2 August note verbale, said that Israel's withdrawal from Palestinian territory was a fundamental requisite for solving the question of Palestine and achieving a peaceful settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, based on the two-State solution.

The Secretary-General observed that the window of opportunity to revitalize the Middle East peace process that had emerged during the year, despite setbacks, remained open. The increased coordination between the parties as a result of the smooth and peaceful operation of Israel's disengagement from the Gaza Strip and part of the northern West Bank was a positive step, which should be built upon in the future. The Secretary-General stated that the PA had to push ahead with the reform of its security services. Decisive action in that regard should help to restore law and order. He noted the information in the independent report by the Strategic Assessment Initiative that the Palestinian security services remained weak, overstaffed, badly motivated and under-armed, and were affected by corruption, institutional hierarchies, cults of personality and lack of cohesive training.

He said that Israel had failed to make progress on the implementation of its core commitments under the road map. Settlement expansion and lack of action on removing illegal settlement outposts severely undermined trust. The Secretary-General said that he also remained concerned about the continued construction of the barrier in the West bank, which encroached on Palestinian land. He urged Israel to address its security concerns in a manner that would not increase suffering among Palestinians, prejudge final status or threaten longer-term prospects for peace by making the creation of a viable, contiguous Palestinian State more difficult. Noticing that the humanitarian situation of the Palestinians remained grave, the Secretary-General called upon the international community to provide adequate funding for UNRWA so that it could continue to deliver the necessary services to Palestinian refugees.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/39 [draft A/60/L.31 & Add.1] by recorded vote (156-6-9) [agenda item 15].

Peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine

The General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including those adopted at the tenth emergency special session,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973, 1397(2002) of 12 March 2002, 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003 and 1544(2004) of 19 May 2004,

Welcoming the affirmation by the Security Council of the vision of a region where two States, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognized borders,

Noting with concern that it has been fifty-eight years since the adoption of resolution 181(II) of 29 November 1947 and thirty-eight years since the occupation of Palestinian territory, including East Jerusalem, in 1967,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to the request made in its resolution 59/31 of 1 December 2004,

Reaffirming the permanent responsibility of the United Nations with regard to the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in accordance with international law,

Recalling the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Convinced that achieving a final and peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, is imperative for the attainment of comprehensive and lasting peace and stability in the Middle East,

Aware that the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples is among the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Affirming the principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by war,

Recalling its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Reaffirming the illegality of the Israeli settlements in the territory occupied since 1967 and of Israeli actions aimed at changing the status of Jerusalem,

Reaffirming also that the construction by Israel, the occupying Power, of a wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including in and around East Jerusalem, and its associated regime, are contrary to international law,

Affirming once again the right of all States in the region to live in peace within secure and internationally recognized borders,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the agreements concluded between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the endorsement by the Security Council, in resolution 1515(2003), of the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the urgent need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Recognizing the efforts being undertaken by the Palestinian Authority, with international support, to rebuild, reform and strengthen its damaged institutions,

Welcoming the important contribution to the peace process of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority, including in the framework of the activities of the Quartet,

Welcoming also the convening of international donor meetings, as well as the establishment of international mechanisms to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Expressing its concern over the tragic events that have occurred in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, since 28 September 2000, including the large number of deaths and injuries, mostly among Palestinian civilians, the deterioration of the socio-economic and humanitarian conditions of the Palestinian people and the widespread destruction of public and private Palestinian property and infrastructure,

Expressing its grave concern over the repeated military actions in the Occupied Palestinian Territory and the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres by the Israeli occupying forces, and emphasizing in this regard the need for the implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all civilians in the whole Middle East region, and condemning all acts of violence and terror against civilians on both sides, including the suicide bombings, the extrajudicial executions and the excessive use of force,

Acknowledging the importance of the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and of the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map,

Stressing the urgent need for sustained and active international involvement, including by the Quartet, to support both parties in revitalizing the peace process towards the resumption and acceleration of direct negotiations between the parties for the achievement of a final peace settlement, in accordance with the road map,

Welcoming the initiatives and efforts undertaken by civil society in pursuit of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine,

Taking note of the findings by the International Court of Justice, in its advisory opinion, including on the urgent necessity for the United Nations as a whole to redouble its efforts to bring the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, which continues to pose a threat to international peace and security, to a speedy conclusion, thereby establishing a just and lasting peace in the region,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of achieving a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict, in all its aspects, and of intensifying all efforts towards that end;

2. Also reaffirms its full support for the Middle East peace process, which began in Madrid, and the existing agreements between the Israeli and Palestinian sides, stresses the necessity for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and welcomes in this regard the ongoing efforts of the Quartet;

3. Welcomes the Arab Peace Initiative adopted by the Council of the League of Arab States at its fourteenth session, held in Beirut on 27 and 28 March 2002;

4. Calls upon both parties to fulfil their obligations in implementation of the road map by taking parallel and reciprocal steps in this regard, and stresses the importance and urgency of establishing a credible and effective third-party monitoring mechanism including all members of the Quartet;

5. Welcomes the Israeli withdrawal from within the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank and the dismantlement of the settlements therein as a step towards the implementation of the road map;

6. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, in this regard, to comply strictly with its obligations under international law, including international humanitarian law, with respect to the alteration of the character and status of the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

7. Emphasizes the need for the parties, with the help of the international community, speedily and fully to resolve all remaining issues in the Gaza Strip, including a durable arrangement for the border crossings, the airport, the construction of the seaport, the removal of the rubble and the establishment of a permanent physical link between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, and welcomes the positive role being played in this regard by the Quartet Special Envoy for Disengagement;

8. Stresses the need for a speedy end to the reoccupation of Palestinian population centres and for the complete cessation of all acts of violence, including military attacks, destruction and acts of terror;

9. Also stresses the need for the immediate implementation of the Sharm el-Sheikh understandings;

10. Calls upon the parties, with the support of the Quartet and other interested parties, to exert all efforts necessary to halt the deterioration of the situation, to reverse all measures taken on the ground since 28 September 2000 and to facilitate a speedy resumption of the peace process and the conclusion of a final peaceful settlement;

11. Demands that Israel, the occupying Power, comply with its legal obligations under international law, as mentioned in the advisory opinion and as demanded in resolutions ES-10/13 of 21 October 2003 and ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004 and, inter alia, that it immediately cease its construction of the wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and calls upon all States Members of the United Nations to comply with their legal obligations, as mentioned in the advisory opinion;

12. Reaffirms its commitment, in accordance with international law, to the two-State solution of Israel and Palestine, living side by side in peace and security within recognized borders, based on the pre-1967 borders;

13. Reiterates its demand for the complete cessation of all Israeli settlement activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, and in the occupied Syrian Golan, and calls for the full implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

14. Stresses the need for:

(a) The withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967;

(b) The realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily the right to self-determination and the right to their independent State;

15. Also stresses the need for resolving the problem of Palestine refugees in conformity with its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948;

16. Welcomes the recent agreement on movement and access between the two sides, and stresses the need to ensure that the commitments made therein are fully implemented in accordance with the timeline set out in the agreement;

17. Urges Member States to expedite the provision of economic, humanitarian and technical assistance to the Palestinian people and the Palestinian Authority during this critical period to help to alleviate the humanitarian crisis being faced by the Palestinian people, rebuild the Palestinian economy and infrastructure and support the restructuring and reform of Palestinian institutions;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts with the parties concerned, and in consultation with the Security Council, towards the attainment of a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine and the promotion of peace in the region and to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on these efforts and on developments on this matter.

Committee on Palestinian Rights

As mandated by General Assembly resolution 59/28 [YUN 2004, p. 491], the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People reviewed the Palestine question, reported on it and made suggestions to the Assembly and the Security Council.

The Committee followed the Palestine-related activities of intergovernmental bodies, such as, the African Union, the Non-Aligned Movement, and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, and through its Chairman, participation in meetings of those bodies. In March, the Committee's Bureau held consultations with EU representatives as part of the effort to build a constructive relationship on issues of common concern. Throughout the year, the Committee held a number of international events, including the United Nations International Meeting on the Question of Palestine (Geneva, 8-9 March) and the United Nations International Conference of Civil Society in Support of Middle East Peace (Paris, 12-13 July).

The Committee's annual report to the Assembly [A/60/35] covered the period from 7 October 2004 to 5 October 2005. The Committee closely monitored the situation on the ground and was concerned by the continuing violence in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. It condemned the policy of extrajudicial executions, as well as terrorist attacks against Israeli civilians in Israel. It was concerned at the continuation of housing demolitions, particularly in East Jerusalem. The Committee emphasized that the withdrawal of Israel from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank should be followed by firm action to implement the Sharm el-Sheik understandings, including the withdrawal from cities in the West Bank, the release of more prisoners and the cessation of all acts of violence. It considered that early agreement was needed on a number of actions that would allow the PA to exercise control over its borders, crossing points, territorial sea and airspace and the establishment of a permanent and direct link to the West Bank.

The Committee noted that the construction of the wall continued in defiance of the ICJ opinion and the position of the international community. It believed that it was imperative that the Secretary-General expedite the establishment of the register of damage caused by the building of the wall and begin the important work in that regard.

The Committee noted that settlement construction and expansion in the West Bank continued apace. In letters to the Secretary-General [A/ES-10/301-S/2005/262,A/ES-10/306-S/2005/556], it expressed serious concern over Israel's decision to expand and consolidate its settlements in the West Bank. It also expressed concern at the deterioration of the health and nutritional status of the Palestinian population, particularly women and children.

It reiterated that the road map remained the best way to achieve the goal of a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the question of Palestine through the establishment of two States. It intended to address issues such as the need to end the occupation of all Palestinian land; support of the efforts by the PA to rehabilitate the economy, especially that of Gaza; the responsibility of all Governments to apply international law to all aspects of the question of Palestine, in accordance with the ICJ advisory opinion; the humanitarian and socio-economic situation; and the role of civil society.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/36 [A/60/L.28 & Add.1] by recorded vote (106-8-59) [agenda item 15].

Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 181(II) of 29 November 1947, 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 3236(XXIX) of 22 November 1974, 3375(XXX) and 3376(XXX) of 10 November 1975, 31/20 of 24 November 1976 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including those adopted by the General Assembly at its emergency special sessions and resolution 59/28 of 1 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 58/292 of 6 May 2004,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Recalling further the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, and recalling also its resolution ES-10/15 of 20 July 2004,

Reaffirming that the United Nations has a permanent responsibility towards the question of Palestine until the question is resolved in all its aspects in a satisfactory manner in accordance with international legitimacy,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People for its efforts in performing the tasks assigned to it by the General Assembly, and takes note of its annual report, including the conclusions and recommendations contained in chapter VII thereof;

2. Requests the Committee to continue to exert all efforts to promote the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, to support the Middle East peace process and to mobilize international support for and assistance to the Palestinian people, and authorizes the Committee to make such adjustments in its approved programme of work as it may consider appropriate and necessary in the light of developments and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session and thereafter;

3. Also requests the Committee to continue to keep under review the situation relating to the question of Palestine and to report and make suggestions to the General Assembly, the Security Council or the Secretary-General, as appropriate;

4. Further requests the Committee to continue to extend its cooperation and support to Palestinian and other civil society organizations in order to mobilize international solidarity and support for the achievement by the Palestinian people of its inalienable rights and for a peaceful settlement of the question of Palestine, and to involve additional civil society organizations in its work;

5. Requests the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, established under General Assembly resolution 194(III), and other United Nations bodies associated with the question of Palestine to continue to cooperate fully with the Committee and to make available to it, at its request, the relevant information and documentation which they have at their disposal;

6. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Committee in the performance of its tasks;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate the report of the Committee to all the competent bodies of the United Nations, and urges them to take the necessary action, as appropriate;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Committee with all the necessary facilities for the performance of its tasks.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/36:

Division for Palestinian Rights

Under the guidance of the Committee on Palestinian Rights, the Division for Palestinian Rights of the UN Secretariat continued to research, monitor, prepare studies, collect and disseminate information on all issues related to the Palestine question. The Division responded to requests for information and issued the following publications: a monthly bulletin covering action taken by the United Nations and intergovernmental organizations on the issue of Palestine; monthly chronology of developments relating to the question of Palestine, based on media reports and other sources; special bulletins and notes on the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People (29 November); periodic reviews of developments relating to Middle East peace efforts; the annual compilation of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to the question of Palestine.

The Committee, in its annual report [A/60/35], requested the Division to continue its programme of publications and other informational activities, including the electronic United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine and the graphic enhancement of the Question of Palestine website. It requested that the annual training programme of PA staff be continued.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/37 [draft A/60/L.29 & Add.1] by recorded vote (105-8-59) [agenda item 15].

Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the relevant information contained in chapter V.B of that report,

Recalling its resolution 32/40 B of 2 December 1977 and all subsequent relevant resolutions, including resolution 59/29 of 1 December 2004,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Secretary-General in compliance with its resolution 59/29;

2. Considers that the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat continues to make a useful and constructive contribution;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Division with the necessary resources and to ensure that it continues to carry out its programme of work as detailed in the relevant earlier resolutions, in consultation with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and under its guidance, including, in particular, the organization of meetings and conferences in various regions with the participation of all sectors of the international community, the further development and expansion of the documents collection of the United Nations Information System on the Question of Palestine, the preparation and widest possible dissemination of publications and information materials on various aspects of the question of Palestine and the provision of the annual training programme for staff of the Palestinian Authority;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure the continued cooperation of the Department of Public Information and other units of the Secretariat in enabling the Division to perform its tasks and in covering adequately the various aspects of the question of Palestine;

5. Invites all Governments and organizations to extend their cooperation to the Division in the performance of its tasks;

6. Requests the Committee and the Division, as part of the observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November, to continue to organize an annual exhibit on Palestinian rights or a cultural event in cooperation with the Permanent Observer Mission of Palestine to the United Nations, and encourages Member States to continue to give the widest support and publicity to the observance of the Day of Solidarity.

Special Information programme

As requested in General Assembly resolution 59/30 [YUN 2004, p. 493], the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) continued its special information programme on the question of Palestine, which included the maintenance of the web page on the question of Palestine under Global issues and other pages of the UN website, the issuing of press releases and preparation for the annual training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists. The Radio Section provided coverage of various aspects of the question of Palestine in its broadcasts in all six official languages. The quarterly UN Chronicle and UN Chronicle Online reported on relevant issues and action taken by the Assembly and the Security Council. DPI, in cooperation with the Foreign Ministry of Egypt, organized an international media seminar on peace in the Middle East (Cairo, 13-14 June).

As in previous years, the network of the United Nations information centres (UNICs) and other UN offices carried out activities in connection with the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People. Throughout the year, many UNICs dealt with the Palestine question and organized related outreach activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/38 [A/60/L.30 & Add.1] by recorded vote (160-7-6) [agenda item 15].

Special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Taking note in particular of the information contained in chapter VI of that report,

Recalling its resolution 59/30 of 1 December 2004,

Convinced that the worldwide dissemination of accurate and comprehensive information and the role of civil society organizations and institutions remain of vital importance in heightening awareness of and support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people,

Recalling the mutual recognition between the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, as well as the existing agreements between the two sides and the need for full compliance with those agreements,

Recalling also the Quartet road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict,

Taking note of the advisory opinion rendered on 9 July 2004 by the International Court of Justice on the Legal Consequences of the Construction of a Wall in the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

1. Notes with appreciation the action taken by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat in compliance with resolution 59/30;

2. Considers that the special information programme on the question of Palestine of the Department is very useful in raising the awareness of the international community concerning the question of Palestine and the situation in the Middle East and that the programme is contributing effectively to an atmosphere conducive to dialogue and supportive of the peace process;

3. Requests the Department, in full cooperation and coordination with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, to continue, with the necessary flexibility as may be required by developments affecting the question of Palestine, its special information programme for the biennium 2006-2007, in particular:

(a) To disseminate information on all the activities of the United Nations system relating to the question of Palestine, including reports on the work carried out by the relevant United Nations organizations;

(b) To continue to issue and update publications on the various aspects of the question of Palestine in all fields, including materials concerning the recent developments in that regard, in particular the prospects for peace;

(c) To expand its collection of audio-visual material on the question of Palestine and to continue the production and preservation of such material and the updating of the exhibit in the Secretariat;

(d) To organize and promote fact-finding news missions for journalists to the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

(e) To organize international, regional and national seminars or encounters for journalists, aiming in particular at sensitizing public opinion to the question of Palestine;

(f) To continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people in the field of media development, in particular to strengthen the training programme for Palestinian broadcasters and journalists initiated in 1995.

Assistance to Palestinians

UN activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/56 [YUN 2004, p. 495], the Secretary-General submitted a June report [A/60/90-E/2005/80] describing UN and other assistance to the Palestinian people from May 2004 to April 2005.

During the reporting period, the international community continued to work with both parties to ensure that Israel's withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank proceeded in a manner that contributed to the revival of the Palestinian economy and bolstered the peace process. The macroeconomic indicators for the Occupied Palestinian Territory showed that the economy was resilient, despite the pressures of ongoing conflict and closure. Gross domestic product growth, estimated at three per cent, remained positive. However Israeli restrictions on movement were a proximate cause of economic hardship among ordinary Palestinians. The total number of workers entering Israel and crossing into the Erez industrial zone dropped significantly in 2004 but picked up again as of mid-February 2005.

A critical aspect of institutional support during the reporting period was the emergency financing of the PA's recurrent budget. Salary support was a particularly high priority, given the importance of public sector salaries for individual Palestinian livelihoods and for the economy as a whole. The World Bank served as administrator for the multi-donor public financial management-reform trust fund, which as at May had disbursed over $198 million in budget support to the PA. Given the ongoing political instability and economic hardship, a large proportion of UN assistance to the Occupied Palestinian Territory was directed towards short-term, emergency responses, but operations were frequently affected by restrictions on the movement of goods and personnel. As the political situation appeared to improve in the first months of 2005, the increasing attention of donors to medium-term assistance agendas resulted in a relative decline in support for emergency programmes.

The Office of the Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the PA continued to coordinate UN assistance to the Palestinian people and represent the UN system at donor forums. In April, the Office began serving as the focal point for coordination between the UN system and the new Office of the Quartet's Special Envoy for Disengagement.

The Secretary-General noted that, despite an apparent stabilization of the economy and growth in private sector activities since 2003, progress towards economic recovery was unlikely to benefit all Palestinians equitably. Many refugee and non-refugee Palestinians who lost assets and livelihoods during the years of the second intifada were likely to increase the numbers of the chronically poor and would require targeted social assistance over the medium term. Public institutions were likely to remain only partially able to finance and implement large-scale social assistance programmes in the near term.

He observed that, while international assistance could alleviate the suffering of the Palestinian people, only a peace process and a full and final settlement of the conflict would enable a shift from crisis management and recovery to sustained and sustainable development and prosperity. Such a settlement could be achieved through the full implementation of the Quartet's road map, designed to resolve the Israel-Palestinian conflict and end the occupation.

UNCTAD assistance to Palestinians

At its fifty-second session (Geneva, 3-14 October) [A/60/15], the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) considered the report on UNCTAD assistance to the Palestinian people [TD/B/52/2]. The report stated that UNCTAD's technical cooperation with the Palestinian people continued to provide support in building capacities for effective economic policymaking and management and strengthening the enabling environment for the private sector. The UNCTAD secretariat achieved notable progress in project implementation and its technical assistance had become increasingly relevant to the Palestinian Occupied Territory after the Israeli disengagement from the Gaza Strip. As at mid-2005, UNCTAD had disbursed a total of $2,620,000 in extrabudgetary resources for technical cooperation activities, most of it, some 83 per cent, during the period 2001 to 2004. By the end of 2005, the secretariat expected to conclude three new agreements with donors for project implementation in 2005-2007 totalling over $3 million. An additional $1 million was still being sought for three other projects to enable implementation in 2006-2007. During the 2004-2005 biennium, technical assistance to the Palestinian people continued to receive extrabudgetary support from Norway, the EU, the International Development Research Centre (Canada) and the International Labour Organization. The United Nations Development Programme continued to extend logistical and liaison field support to UNCTAD. Among the projects implemented were: the establishment of the Palestinian Shippers Council; support for small and medium-sized enterprise development and preparation for Palestine's application for membership in the World Trade Organization (WTO).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 15 December [meeting 63], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/126 [draft: A/60/L.36 & Add.1] without vote [agenda item 73 (d)].

Assistance to the Palestinian people

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/56 of 2 December 2004, as well as previous resolutions on the question,

Recalling also the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements in Washington, D.C., on 13 September 1993, by the Government of the State of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people, and the subsequent implementation agreements concluded by the two sides,

Recalling further the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Gravely concerned at the deterioration in the living conditions of the Palestinian people, in particular children, throughout the occupied territory, which constitutes a mounting humanitarian crisis,

Conscious of the urgent need for improvement in the economic and social infrastructure of the occupied territory,

Aware that development is difficult under occupation and is best promoted in circumstances of peace and stability,

Noting the great economic and social challenges facing the Palestinian people and their leadership,

Emphasizing the importance of the safety and well-being of all children in the whole Middle East region,

Deeply concerned about the negative impact, including the health and psychological consequences, of violence on the present and future well-being of children in the region,

Conscious of the urgent necessity for international assistance to the Palestinian people, taking into account the Palestinian priorities,

Welcoming the results of the Conference to Support Middle East Peace, convened in Washington, D.C., on 1 October 1993, the establishment of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee and the work being done by the World Bank as its secretariat and the establishment of the Consultative Group, as well as all follow-up meetings and international mechanisms established to provide assistance to the Palestinian people,

Welcoming also the work of the Joint Liaison Committee, which provides a forum in which economic policy and practical matters related to donor assistance are discussed with the Palestinian Authority,

Stressing the continued importance of the work of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee in the coordination of assistance to the Palestinian people,

Noting the upcoming meeting of the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee to review the state of the Palestinian economy, and progress in drawing up a medium-term development plan for the Palestinian economy,

Stressing the need for the full engagement of the United Nations in the process of building Palestinian institutions and in providing broad assistance to the Palestinian people, and welcoming in this regard the support provided to the Palestinian Authority by the Task Force on Palestinian Reform, established by the Quartet in 2002,

Noting, in this regard, the active participation of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority in the activities of the Special Envoys of the Quartet,

Welcoming the endorsement by the Security Council, in its resolution 1515(2003) of 19 November 2003, of the performance-based road map to a permanent two-State solution to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, and stressing the need for its implementation and compliance with its provisions,

Welcoming also the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza Strip and parts of the northern West Bank as a step towards implementation of the road map,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Expressing grave concern at the continuation of the recent tragic and violent events that have led to many deaths and injuries, including among children,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Personal Humanitarian Envoy of the Secretary-General on the humanitarian conditions and needs of the Palestinian people;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his rapid response and efforts regarding assistance to the Palestinian people;

4. Also expresses its appreciation to the Member States, United Nations bodies and intergovernmental, regional and non-governmental organizations that have provided and continue to provide assistance to the Palestinian people;

5. Stresses the importance of the work of the United Nations Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General to the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Palestinian Authority and of the steps taken under the auspices of the Secretary-General to ensure the achievement of a coordinated mechanism for United Nations activities throughout the occupied territories;

6. Urges Member States, international financial institutions of the United Nations system, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and regional and interregional organizations to extend, as rapidly and as generously as possible, economic and social assistance to the Palestinian people, in close cooperation with the Palestine Liberation Organization and through official Palestinian institutions;

7. Calls upon relevant organizations and agencies of the United Nations system to intensify their assistance in response to the urgent needs of the Palestinian people in accordance with Palestinian priorities set forth by the Palestinian Authority;

8. Calls upon the international community to provide urgently needed assistance and services in an effort to alleviate the dire humanitarian crisis being faced by Palestinian children and their families and to help in the reconstruction of relevant Palestinian institutions;

9. Urges Member States to open their markets to exports of Palestinian products on the most favourable terms, consistent with appropriate trading rules, and to implement fully existing trade and cooperation agreements;

10. Calls upon the international donor community to expedite the delivery of pledged assistance to the Palestinian people to meet their urgent needs;

11. Stresses, in this context, the importance of ensuring the free passage of aid to the Palestinian people and the free movement of persons and goods;

12. Welcomes the recent agreement on movement and access between the two sides and the subsequent opening of the Rafah border on 25 November 2005, and stresses the need to ensure that the commitments made in the agreement are fully implemented in accordance with the timeline set out in the agreement;

13. Stresses the need for all concerned parties to work together for the speedy resolution of all outstanding issues relating to disengagement, and welcomes in this regard the work of the Quartet Special Envoy for Disengagement;

14. Urges the international donor community, United Nations agencies and organizations and non-governmental organizations to extend as rapidly as possible emergency economic and humanitarian assistance to the Palestinian people to counter the impact of the current crisis;

15. Stresses the need to implement the Paris Protocol on Economic Relations of 29 April 1994, fifth annex to the Israeli-Palestinian Interim Agreement on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, signed in Washington, D.C., on 28 September 1995, in particular with regard to the full and prompt clearance of Palestinian indirect tax revenues, and welcomes the progress made in this regard;

16. Suggests the convening in 2006 of a United Nations-sponsored seminar on assistance to the Palestinian people;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, through the Economic and Social Council, on the implementation of the present resolution, containing:

(a) An assessment of the assistance actually received by the Palestinian people;

(b) An assessment of the needs still unmet and specific proposals for responding effectively to them;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the sub-item entitled "Assistance to the Palestinian people".

UNRWA

As at 30 June, some 4.3 million refugees were registered with UNRWA, an increase of 2.3 per cent over the 2004 figure of 4 million. Approximately 70.5 per cent of the registered refugees resided outside the 58 recognized refugee camps. The largest refugee population was registered in Jordan (41.9 per cent), followed by the Gaza Strip (22.6 per cent), the West Bank (16.1 per cent), the Syrian Arab Republic (10 per cent) and Lebanon (9.4 per cent).

In 2005, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East continued to provide vital education, health and relief and social services to an ever growing refugee population in the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic.

In his reports on the work of the Agency from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005 [A/60/13] and 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2005 [A/61/13], the UNRWA Commissioner-General said that UNRWA worked closely with the Special Envoy of the Quartet for Gaza Disengagement in determining microfinance and microenterprise programmes to facilitate increased lending and accelerate reconstruction of Palestinian homes demolished during the intifada.

The signing, on 15 November 2005, of the Agreement on Movement and Access and the Agreed Principles for the Rafah Crossing led to hopes of a major improvement in the ability to allow people, but not goods, to move between Gaza and Egypt through the Rafah crossing. However, Palestinian labourers wanting to work in Israel and Palestinian exporters using the commercial crossings out of Gaza into Israel faced increasing difficulties, further exacerbating the dire economic situation.

In February, UNRWA launched its medium-term plan for 2005-2009, which had four main objectives: achieving parity of UNRWA services with host authority and international standards; addressing the needs of the most vulnerable refugees; maximizing the economic potential of refugees; and building capacity within UNRWA. In other internal developments, the Secretary-General appointed Karen Koning AbuZayd as the new Commissioner-General of UNRWA for a three-year term beginning on 28 June 2005, to succeed Peter Hansen, who retired from his post in March.

Advisory Commission. By a 26 September letter to the Commissioner-General, which was included in his annual report [A/60/13], the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of UNRWA expressed concern at the deteriorating situation in Gaza, the West Bank and Lebanon. The unilateral disengagement by Israel from Gaza and parts of the northern West Bank did not bring the hope for stabilization and subsequent phasing out of UNRWA emergency operations. The deteriorating economic situation and increased poverty in the West Bank and Gaza had created additional demand on the Agency's services.

The Commission opposed Israel's continued efforts to impose a direct charge on Agency containers passing through Karni, as it violated the exemption granted to UNRWA under the 1946 Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations [YUN 1946-47, p. 100]. It commended the Lebanese Government on its June announcement to ease restrictions on granting work permits to Palestine refugees in Lebanon so as to make better the conditions of those refugees living in camps.

UNRWA's regular budget for 2005 was set at $396.4 million, against which the Agency received $378.6 million.

On 8 December, the General Assembly decided to continue the membership of those States serving as members of the Advisory Commission to UNRWA. It invited Australia, Canada, Denmark, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland, whose contributions to UNRWA's activities had exceeded an annual average of $5 million over the past three years, to become members of the Advisory Commission; Palestine to attend and fully participate in the Commission's meetings as an observer; the EU to attend the Commission's meetings; and the League of Arab States to attend also as an observer (decision 60/522).

Report of Conciliation Commission. The United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, in its fifty-ninth report covering the period from 1 September 2004 to 31 August 2005 [A/60/277], submitted in response to General Assembly resolution 59/117 [YUN 2004, p. 499], noted its August 2004 report [ibid., p. 497] and observed that it had nothing to report since its submission.

Projects and major service areas

UNRWA continued to implement its regular programmes, providing education, health, social services and microcredit assistance to Palestinian refugees in its five field operations. The education programme remained the largest activity, operating 647 schools, which provided basic and preparatory education to 490,000 pupils, as well as 5 secondary schools in Lebanon, 8 vocational training centres and 3 teacher training colleges. It continued to benefit from close cooperation with UNESCO. The programme also provided staff training, community involvement and strategic development plan, also known as the "School as a focus for development" project. The Agency launched a psychosocial support programme, designed to reach some 90,000 pupils in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Through some of its information technology projects, internet access was provided for all Agency schools in Gaza.

The health programme, supervised by the World Health Organization, focused on sustaining adequate levels of investment in primary health care, enhancing institutional capacity-building and developing human resources. Management reforms implemented during the reporting period led to the introduction of new systems for health information, hospital and drug-supply management. The Agency maintained its environmental health services in refugee camps, introducing and/or improving sewage disposal, storm water drainage, and providing drinking water and refuse collection. Major water and sewage system projects were underway in the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon in various refugee camps. It conducted three major health research projects to assess the health status of Palestinian refugees, which included prevalence of anaemia among schoolchildren; current contraceptive practices among mothers with children up to 3 years; and oral health status among school children.

The Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programme, aimed at improving the quality of life of small business owners, sustain jobs, and create household assets, grew significantly in 2005. The programme produced record outreach, financing 22,000 loans totalling $20.4 million. Half of that financing was in the Gaza Strip, 31 per cent in the West Bank, 12 per cent in Jordan and 7 per cent in the Syrian Arab Republic.

Through the relief and social services programme, UNRWA continued to provide a social safety net and promote self-reliance for Palestinian refugees, especially women, the elderly, youth and persons with disabilities. Its relief and social services included food support; shelter rehabilitation and cash assistance to families living in conditions of special hardship. Specific services included microenterprise credit, solidarity-group lending, small-scale enterprise, consumer lending, housing loans and small microenterprise training.

The Agency expended $484.2 million during 2005, against a budget of $537.7 million on its regular, project and emergency appeal activities. The largest component was an expenditure of $377.2 million under the regular budget, accounting for nearly 78 per cent of total expenditures. Emergency appeal activities and projects accounted for 18 per cent and 4 per cent, respectively.

Emergency appeals

UNRWA continued its programme of emergency assistance, focusing on food aid, emergency employment creation, shelter repair, rebuilding and health and education. In 2005, the Agency launched an emergency appeal for the West Bank and Gaza for $185.81 million. As at 31 December, $110.7 million had been pledged and $70.15 million received. Its largest-scale emergency activities were the provision of food aid to cover 1.3 million refugees and the creation of 2.3 million workdays for 33,000 unemployed breadwinners. Emergency operations also included the provision of mobile medical clinics in the West Bank and cash assistance and replacement accommodation for those whose shelters had been demolished during Israeli military operations. By the end of 2005,UNRWA had completed 925 new shelters for homeless refugees in the Gaza Strip and had over 1,000 under construction.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendations of the Fourth Committee [A/60/476], adopted resolution 60/100 by recorded vote (161-1-11) [agenda item 30].

Assistance to Palestine refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question, including resolution 59/117 of 10 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 302(IV) of 8 December 1949, by which, inter alia, it established the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,

Recalling further relevant Security Council resolutions,

Aware of the fact that, for more than five decades, the Palestine refugees have suffered from the loss of their homes, lands and means of livelihood,

Affirming the imperative of resolving the problem of the Palestine refugees for the achievement of justice and for the achievement of lasting peace in the region,

Acknowledging the essential role that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East has played for more than fifty-five years since its establishment in ameliorating the plight of the Palestine refugees in the fields of education, health and relief and social services,

Taking note of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005,

Aware of the continuing needs of the Palestine refugees throughout all the fields of operation, namely Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the Occupied Palestinian Territory,

Expressing grave concern at the especially difficult situation of the Palestine refugees under occupation, including with regard to their safety, well-being and living conditions,

Noting the signing of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements on 13 September 1993 by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware of the important role to be played in the peace process by the Multilateral Working Group on Refugees of the Middle East peace process,

1. Notes with regret that repatriation or compensation of the refugees, as provided for in paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III), has not yet been effected and that, therefore, the situation of the Palestine refugees continues to be a matter of grave concern;

2. Also notes with regret that the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine has been unable to find a means of achieving progress in the implementation of paragraph 11 of General Assembly resolution 194(III), and reiterates its request to the Conciliation Commission to exert continued efforts towards the implementation of that paragraph and to report to the Assembly as appropriate, but no later than 1 September 2006;

3. Affirms the necessity for the continuation of the work of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the importance of its operation and its services for the well-being of the Palestine refugees and for the stability of the region, pending the resolution of the question of the Palestine refugees;

4. Calls upon all donors to continue to make the most generous efforts possible to meet the anticipated needs of the Agency, including those mentioned in recent emergency appeals.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/100:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel.

Abstaining: Albania, Cameroon, Grenada, Haiti, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, Tuvalu, Uganda, United States, Vanuatu.

The Assembly, also on 8 December [meeting 62] and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/60/476], adopted resolution 60/102 by recorded vote (159-6-3) [agenda item 30].

Operations of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 212(III) of 19 November 1948, 302(IV) of 8 December 1949 and all subsequent related resolutions, including its resolution 59/119 of 10 December 2004,

Recalling also the relevant Security Council resolutions,

Having considered the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005,

Taking note of the letter dated 26 September 2005 from the Chairperson of the Advisory Commission of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East addressed to the Commissioner-General,

Deeply concerned about the critical financial situation of the Agency and its effect on the provision of necessary Agency services to the Palestine refugees, including its emergency-related and development programmes,

Recalling Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

Recalling also the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel,

Affirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967, including East Jerusalem,

Aware of the continuing needs of the Palestine refugees throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory and in the other fields of operation, namely Jordan, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic,

Gravely concerned about the extremely difficult living conditions being faced by the Palestine refugees in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, including in the Rafah and Jabaliya refugee camps, resulting, inter alia, from loss of life and injury, extensive destruction and damage to their shelters and properties, and displacement,

Aware of the extraordinary efforts being undertaken by the Agency for the repair or rebuilding of thousands of damaged or destroyed refugee shelters,

Aware also of the valuable work done by the refugee affairs officers of the Agency in providing protection to the Palestinian people, in particular Palestine refugees,

Gravely concerned about the endangerment of the safety of the Agency's staff and about the damage caused to the facilities of the Agency as a result of Israeli military operations during the reporting period,

Deploring the killing of twelve Agency staff members by the Israeli occupying forces since September 2000,

Deploring also the killing and wounding of children in the Agency's schools by the Israeli occupying forces,

Expressing deep concern about the policies of closure and severe restrictions, including the curfews, that continue to be imposed on the movement of persons and goods throughout the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem, which have had a grave impact on the socio-economic situation of the Palestine refugees and have greatly contributed to the dire humanitarian crisis facing the Palestinian people,

Deeply concerned about the continuing imposition of restrictions on the freedom of movement of the Agency's staff, vehicles and goods, and the harassment and intimidation of the Agency's staff, which undermine and obstruct the work of the Agency, including its ability to provide its essential services, notably its education, health and relief and social services,

Recalling the signing, on 13 September 1993, of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements by the Government of Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization and the subsequent implementation agreements,

Aware of the agreement between the Agency and the Government of Israel,

Taking note of the agreement reached on 24 June 1994, embodied in an exchange of letters between the Agency and the Palestine Liberation Organization,

Recalling the Geneva Conference convened by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and the Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation on 7 and 8 June 2004 to increase support for the United Nations Relief and Works Agency,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, as well as to all of the staff of the Agency, for their tireless efforts and valuable work, particularly in the light of the difficult conditions during the past year;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to the Advisory Commission of the Agency, and requests it to continue its efforts and to keep the General Assembly informed of its activities;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, and the efforts of the Working Group to assist in ensuring the financial security of the Agency, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary services and assistance to the Working Group for the conduct of its work;

4. Commends the continuing efforts of the Commissioner-General to increase the budgetary transparency and efficiency of the Agency, as reflected in the Agency's programme budget for the biennium 2006-2007;

5. Acknowledges the important support provided by the host Governments to the Agency in the discharge of its duties;

6. Encourages the Agency's further consideration of the needs and rights of children in its operations in accordance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child;

7. Expresses concern about the temporary relocation of the headquarters international staff of the Agency from Gaza City and the disruption of operations at the headquarters;

8. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply fully with the provisions of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

9. Also calls upon Israel to abide by Articles 100, 104 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations in order to ensure the safety of the personnel of the Agency, the protection of its institutions and the safeguarding of the security of its facilities in the Occupied Palestinian Territory, including East Jerusalem;

10. Urges the Government of Israel to speedily compensate the Agency for damage to its property and facilities resulting from actions by the Israeli side;

11. Calls upon Israel particularly to cease obstructing the movement of the staff, vehicles and supplies of the Agency and to cease the levying of extra fees and charges, which affect the Agency's operations detrimentally;

12. Requests the Commissioner-General to proceed with the issuance of identification cards for Palestine refugees and their descendants in the Occupied Palestinian Territory;

13. Affirms that the functioning of the Agency remains essential in all the fields of operation;

14. Notes the success of the Agency's microfinance and microenterprise programmes, and calls upon the Agency, in close cooperation with the relevant agencies, to continue to contribute to the development of the economic and social stability of the Palestine refugees in all the fields of operation;

15. Reiterates its request to the Commissioner-General to proceed with the modernization of the archives of the Agency through the Palestine Refugee Records Project, and to indicate progress in her report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

16. Reiterates its previous appeals to all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to augment the special allocations for grants and scholarships for higher education to Palestine refugees in addition to their contributions to the regular budget of the Agency and to contribute to the establishment of vocational training centres for Palestine refugees, and requests the Agency to act as the recipient and trustee for the special allocations for grants and scholarships;

17. Urges all States, specialized agencies and non-governmental organizations to continue and to increase their contributions to the Agency so as to ease the ongoing financial constraints, exacerbated by the current humanitarian situation on the ground, and to support the Agency's valuable work in assisting the Palestine refugees.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/102:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Grenada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Cameroon, Uganda.

UNRWA financing

At the end of 2004, UNRWA experienced a funding gap for the regular budget of $8.7 million, including exchange rate gains and interest income, and a project budget shortfall of $23 million. Emergency appeals were underfunded by 98.4 million. The overall Agency-wide impact of underfunding meant that UNRWA was unable to implement crucial activities to the value of $130.1 million. The projected funding gap for the 2005 regular budget was estimated to be $11.1 million.

The proposed programme budget for the 2006-2007 biennium [A/60/13/Add.1] amounted to $1,280,560, including $994,329 for the regular budget and $286,321 for projects.

Working Group. The Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA held two meetings in 2005, on 8 September and 18 October. In its report to the General Assembly [A/60/439], the Working Group said that it was concerned about reduced coverage in food and cash assistance in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. As at 30 September, the Agency had received only $92.9 million in confirmed pledges from a total request of $185.8 million for the 2005 emergency appeal, which seriously curtailed its humanitarian activities. In addition, some $6 million remained outstanding for pre-year emergency appeals. The group encouraged donors to increase their contributions to the Agency's 2005 appeal and to pay outstanding contributions. The Working Group also remained concerned about the port and related charges, exacerbated by security procedures, that had been imposed on humanitarian goods imported through Israel by UNRWA. Those charges totalled $27.6 million, as at 31 December 2004.

The Group noted the declining funding gap for the Agency's regular budget, but remained concerned that the trend would not be maintained in 2005. It called for the early and complete fulfilment of pledges and urged the international community to fund fully the 2006-2007 budget, which had been prepared on a needs basis, so as to reverse the effects of successive years of underfunding and bring services up to most government standards and to build capacity.

Displaced persons

In an August report [A/60/212] on compliance with General Assembly resolution 59/118 [YUN 2004, p. 503], which called for the accelerated return of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to their homes in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967, the Secretary-General said that the Agency's information was based on requests by returning registered refugees for the transfer of their entitlements to their areas of return. UNRWA was not involved in arrangements for the return of either refugees or displaced persons not registered with it. Currently, displaced refugees known by UNRWA to have returned to the West Bank and Gaza Strip since 1967 totalled about 25,160. From 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005, 489 refugees registered by UNRWA had returned to the West Bank and 74 to the Gaza Strip from places outside the Occupied Palestinian Territory. Some of those refugees might not have been displaced since 1967, but were possibly family members of a displaced registered refugee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/476], adopted resolution 60/101 by recorded vote (161-6-5) [agenda item 30].

Persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2252 (ES-V) of 4 July 1967, 2341 B(XXII) of 19 December 1967 and all subsequent related resolutions,

Recalling also Security Council resolutions 237(1967) of 14 June 1967 and 259(1968) of 27 September 1968,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of its resolution 59/118 of 10 December 2004,

Taking note also of the report of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East covering the period from 1 July 2004 to 30 June 2005,

Concerned about the continuing human suffering resulting from the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities,

Taking note of the relevant provisions of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 with regard to the modalities for the admission of persons displaced in 1967, and concerned that the process agreed upon has not yet been effected,

1. Reaffirms the right of all persons displaced as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities to return to their homes or former places of residence in the territories occupied by Israel since 1967;

2. Expresses deep concern that the mechanism agreed upon by the parties in article XII of the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 1993 on the return of displaced persons has not been complied with, and stresses the necessity for an accelerated return of displaced persons;

3. Endorses, in the meantime, the efforts of the Commissioner-General of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East to continue to provide humanitarian assistance, as far as practicable, on an emergency basis, and as a temporary measure, to persons in the area who are currently displaced and in serious need of continued assistance as a result of the June 1967 and subsequent hostilities;

4. Strongly appeals to all Governments and to organizations and individuals to contribute generously to the Agency and to the other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations concerned for the above-mentioned purposes;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, after consulting with the Commissioner-General, to report to the General Assembly before its sixty-first session on the progress made with regard to the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/101:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran,, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Property rights

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/120 [YUN 2004, p. 504], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/60/256] on steps taken to protect and administer Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel, and establish a fund for income derived therefrom, on behalf of the rightful owners. He indicated that he had transmitted the resolution to Israel and all other Member States, requesting information on any steps taken or envisaged to implement it. The report detailed replies from Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic, covering various aspects of Assembly resolutions 59/117 [YUN 2004, p. 499] and 59/120 pertaining to assistance to Palestine refugees. Israel, in its reply, said that it supported UNRWA's humanitarian mission and recognized its contribution to the welfare of Palestinian refugee. It was concerned, however, about the politicization of UNRWA operations and the need to take account of the campaign of terror being waged against Israel's citizens. Israel urged UNRWA to draw attention to the misuse of refugee camps by armed elements, in violation of Security Council resolutions and international law.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/476], adopted resolution 60/103 by recorded vote (160-6-3) [agenda item 30].

Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 194(III) of 11 December 1948, 36/146 C of 16 December 1981 and all its subsequent resolutions on the question,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 59/120 of 10 December 2004,

Taking note also of the report of the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine for the period from 1 September 2004 to 31 August 2005,

Recalling that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the principles of international law uphold the principle that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his or her property,

Recalling in particular its resolution 394(V) of 14 December 1950, in which it directed the Conciliation Commission, in consultation with the parties concerned, to prescribe measures for the protection of the rights, property and interests of the Palestine refugees,

Noting the completion of the programme of identification and evaluation of Arab property, as announced by the Conciliation Commission in its twenty-second progress report, and the fact that the Land Office had a schedule of Arab owners and file of documents defining the location, area and other particulars of Arab property,

Expressing its appreciation for the work done to preserve and modernize the existing records, including the land records, of the Conciliation Commission and the importance of such records for a just resolution of the plight of the Palestine refugees in conformity with resolution 194(III),

Recalling that, in the framework of the Middle East peace process, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Government of Israel agreed, in the Declaration of Principles on Interim Self-Government Arrangements of 13 September 1993, to commence negotiations on permanent status issues, including the important issue of the refugees,

1. Reaffirms that the Palestine refugees are entitled to their property and to the income derived therefrom, in conformity with the principles of equity and justice;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all appropriate steps, in consultation with the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, for the protection of Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel;

3. Calls once again upon Israel to render all facilities and assistance to the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Calls upon all the parties concerned to provide the Secretary-General with any pertinent information in their possession concerning Arab property, assets and property rights in Israel that would assist him in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Urges the Palestinian and Israeli sides, as agreed between them, to deal with the important issue of Palestine refugees' properties and their revenues within the framework of the final status negotiations of the Middle East peace process;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/103:

Peacekeeping operations

In 2005, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO), originally set up to monitor the ceasefire called for by the Security Council in resolution S/801 of 29 May 1948 [YUN 1947-48, p. 427] in newly partitioned Palestine, continued its work. UNTSO unarmed military observers fulfilled evolving mandates—from supervising the original four armistice agreements between Israel and its neighbours (Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Syrian Arab Republic) to observing and monitoring other ceasefires, as well as performing a number of additional tasks. During the year, UNTSO personnel worked with the two remaining UN peacekeeping forces in the Middle East—the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

Lebanon

Lebanon became a focus of international attention in February, following the bomb attack that killed former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and an estimated 20 others in Beirut. More bombings occurred throughout the year, in some cases targeting prominent Lebanese figures, several of whom were killed. Following the assassination of Mr. Hariri, the Secretary-General, at the request of the Security Council, dispatched a mission of inquiry to report on the circumstances of the attack. The mission recommended the establishment of an international commission to investigate the crime, and by June, the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC) was operational. The findings of UNIIIC implicated both the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon in the assassination. Other UN involvement in Lebanon included the investigation of the technical military team sent to verify the withdrawal of all Syrian military and intelligence presence from Lebanon, pursuant to resolution 1559(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 506]. The team concluded, to the best of its ability, that Syrian military assets, except in one disputed border area, had been withdrawn fully from Lebanon. While it was more difficult to verify the withdrawal of intelligence operatives, in a second trip to Lebanon, the team corroborated its earlier conclusion that there was no remaining visible or significant Syrian intelligence presence in Lebanon. The UN also provided assistance in preparing for the parliamentary elections that ended in June. The completion of those elections on time and in a credible manner was a key element in a transition, in which the Lebanese people expressed their determination to shape their own future, strengthen political institutions and restore their full sovereignty.

Monthly briefings on the Palestine question were given to the Security Council by Alvaro de Soto, Special Coordinator for the Middle East Peace Process and Personal Representative of the Secretary-General, Kieran Prendergast, Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, and his replacement, Mr. Gambari. Those briefings also covered developments in southern Lebanon. Terje Roed-Larsen, Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the implementation of resolution 1559(2004), briefed the Council on the first semi-annual report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 1559(2004).

The paramilitary group Hizbullah continued to carry out attacks against positions of the Israel Defence Forces (IDF) inside Israel, while IDF continued to carry out attacks within Lebanon. The Shab'a farmlands had been an area of contention since the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465]. According to the Lebanese Government, Israel's withdrawal from southern Lebanon was incomplete, as Israeli forces continued to occupy the Shab'a farms, while Israel held the view that the area was occupied Syrian territory and thus within the purview of Council resolution 242(1967) [YUN 1967, p. 257] on the Israeli-Syrian conflict, and not resolution 425(1978) [YUN 1978, p. 312], which dealt with Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon. However, Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic maintained that the Shab'a farmlands were inside Lebanese territory.

In March 2005, the Secretary-General appointed Geir O. Pedersen as his Personal Representative for Southern Lebanon, responsible for coordinating UN activities in the area. In view of the increased scope of such activities, in November, the Secretary-General expanded Mr. Pedersen's mandate to include coordination of UN political activities for the whole of Lebanon. Accordingly, the title of the post was changed to Personal Representative of the Secretary-General for Lebanon.

Communications. On 12 January [A/59/670-S/2005/23], Lebanon made clarifications regarding the 10 January press release of the Secretary-General and the 11 January press statement of the Security Council President, issued in response to a lethal attack by Hizbullah against an Israeli patrol and the subsequent Israeli military response, which resulted in the injury and death of UN military observers on 9 January.

In communications received throughout the year [A/59/671-S/2005/24, A/59/672-S/2005/25, A/59/673-S/2005/26, A/59/686-S/2005/58, A/59/711-S/2005/105, A/59/712-S/2005/106, A/59/737-S/2005/168, A/59/778-S/2005/242, A/59/799-S/2005/304, A/59/810-S/2005/339, A/59/827-S/2005/369, A/59/859-S/2005/424, A/59/865-S/2005/435, A/59/893-S/2005/526, A/59/911-S/2005/568, A/60/423-S/2005/641, A/60/555-S/2005/715, A/60/569-S/2005/746, A/60/570-S/2005/747, A/60/579-S/2005/755, A/60/638-S/2005/836], Lebanon detailed Israeli acts of aggression and violations of the Blue Line, the provisional border drawn by the United Nations following the withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon in 2000, and consequently of Lebanese sovereignty and territorial integrity.

In a series of letters [A/59/667-S/2005/14, A/59/802-S/2005/312, A/59/819-S/2005/352, A/59/858-S/2005/423, A/59/902-S/2005/546, A/60/563-S/2005/731, A/60/639-S/2005/837], Israel reported attacks carried out across the Blue Line by Hizbullah and other militias against Israeli civilian and military targets. Israel also alleged that those attacks were enabled by the complicity of the Government of Lebanon and the support of the Iranian and Syrian regimes.

In two separate responses [A/59/739-S/2005/170, A/59/848-S/2005/389], Iran refuted Israel's allegations, calling them an attempt to distract the international community from the numerous crimes committed by Israel in the region.

Assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri

On 14 February, an explosion in downtown Beirut killed 20 persons, among them former Lebanese Prime Minister, Rafik Hariri, and injured 220 others; one person was also missing and believed to be among the victims. The killing of Mr. Hariri drew widespread international condemnation. The Security Council President issued a statement the following day (see below).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (February)

On 15 February [meeting 5122], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/4 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council received a briefing from the Secretariat on the situation in Lebanon on 15 February 2005.
> The Council unequivocally condemns the terrorist bombing in Beirut on 14 February 2005 that killed former Prime Minister of Lebanon Rafik Hariri and others, and caused serious injury to dozens of people, including former Minister Basil Fleihan.
> The Council expresses its deepest sympathy and condolences to the people and Government of Lebanon and to the victims and their families.
> The Council calls upon the Government of Lebanon to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of this heinous terrorist act, and notes the Government's commitments in this regard. The Council urges all States, in accordance with its resolutions 1373(2001) and 1566(2004), to cooperate fully in the fight against terrorism.
> The Council is gravely concerned by the murder of the former Prime Minister of Lebanon and its possible impact on ongoing efforts by the people of Lebanon to solidify Lebanon's democracy, including during the upcoming parliamentary elections. Such a terrorist act should not jeopardize the holding of those elections in transparent, free and democratic conditions.
> The Council is concerned by the potential for further destabilization of Lebanon, and expresses the hope that the Lebanese people will be able to emerge from this terrible event united, and to use peaceful means in support of their long-standing national aspiration to full sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity.

> The Council reaffirms its previous calls upon all parties concerned to cooperate fully and urgently with the Council for the full implementation of all relevant resolutions concerning the restoration of the territorial integrity, full sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon.
> The Council requests the Secretary-General to follow closely the situation in Lebanon and to report urgently on the circumstances, causes and consequences of this terrorist act.

Consequent upon the Council's request to him in statement S/PRST/2005/4 (above), the Secretary-General announced, on 18 February, that he was sending a fact-finding mission to Beirut to gather such information as was necessary for him to report to the Council in a timely manner. The Mission, to be headed by Peter Fitzgerald (Ireland), included two police investigators, a legal adviser and a political adviser; later additional experts in explosives, ballistics, DNA and crime scene examinations were added. The mission was tasked with examining the crime scene and samples collected from it and to gather facts about the causes, circumstances and consequences of the assassination.

Communication (22 March). In March [A/59/761-S/2005/215], the ninety-fourth session of the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) (Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, 13 March), in a press statement, expressed its strong condemnation of the 14 February bombing in Beirut, which killed the former Prime Minister Hariri along with several of his escorts and called for a swift and transparent investigation into the assassination. GCC also applauded Syria's decision to withdraw fully from Lebanon.

Report of mission of inquiry (March). On 24 March [S/2005/203], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Council President the report of the fact-finding mission to Lebanon inquiring into the circumstances, causes and consequences of the assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, prepared pursuant to S/PRST/2005/4 (see above). The mission, which conducted its inquiry between 25 February and 16 March, met with a large number of Lebanese officials and representatives of different political groups. It performed a thorough review of the Lebanese investigation and legal proceedings, examined the crime scene and the evidence collected by the local police, collected and analysed samples from the crime scene and interviewed witnesses in relation to the crime.

The mission observed that the specific causes of the assassination of Mr. Hariri could not be reliably asserted until after the perpetrators of the crime were brought to justice. However, it was clear that the assassination took place in a political and security context marked by acute polarization around the Syrian influence in Lebanon and the failure of the Lebanese State to provide adequate protection for its citizens. The mission concluded that the Lebanese security services and the Syrian Military Intelligence bore the primary responsibility for the lack of security, protection, and law and order in Lebanon, thereby contributing to the propagation of a culture of intimidation and impunity. In addition, the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic bore primary responsibility for the political tension that preceded the assassination. It clearly exerted influence beyond the reasonable exercise of cooperative relations, and its interference with the details of governance in Lebanon was the primary reason for the political polarization that ensued, providing the backdrop for Mr. Hariri's assassination.

The review of the Lebanese investigation into the bombing indicated a distinct lack of commitment on the part of the Lebanese authorities to investigating the crime effectively. Their investigation was not carried out in accordance with acceptable international standards, and lacked the confidence of the population necessary for its results to be accepted. To uncover the truth, it would be necessary to entrust the investigation to an international independent commission. Furthermore, it was very doubtful that such an international commission could carry out its tasks satisfactorily—and receive the necessary active cooperation from local authorities—while the current leadership of the Lebanese security services remained in office. It was the mission's view that the restoration of the integrity and credibility of the Lebanese security apparatus was of vital importance to the security and stability of the country. A sustained effort to restructure, reform and retrain the Lebanese security services would be necessary to achieve that end, and would require international assistance and active engagement. The mission was also of the view that international and regional political support would be necessary to safeguard Lebanon's national unity and to shield its fragile polity from unwarranted pressure. Improving the prospects of peace and security in the region would offer a more solid ground for restoring normality in Lebanon.

The Secretary-General, in his letter transmitting the report, noted the mission's observation that an independent international investigation was needed, and endorsed its recommendation that such an investigation be conducted.

Communications (29 March). In identical letters of 29 March to the Secretary-General and the Council President [S/2005/209], the Syrian Arab Republic qualified the mission's report as lacking objectivity, giving only one point of view. It also asked that a reference to an alleged conversation between Rafik Hariri and Syrian President Bashar Al-Assad be removed from the report. Syria stressed the importance of quickly finding the perpetrators of the crime, and said that it would support the position of Lebanon in any investigation. On the same day [A/59/757-S/2005/208], Lebanon informed the Secretary-General that it approved the decision of the Security Council concerning the establishment of an international commission of inquiry into the assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and was ready to cooperate with such a commission.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (April)

On 7 April [meeting 5160], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1595(2005). The draft [S/2005/227] was submitted by Denmark, France, Greece, Japan, the Philippines, Romania, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Reiterating its call for the strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon,

Endorsing the opinion of the Secretary-General, as expressed in his letter dated 24 March 2005 to the President of the Security Council, that Lebanon is passing through a difficult and sensitive period, that all concerned should imperatively behave with the utmost restraint and that the future of Lebanon should be decided strictly through peaceful means,

Reaffirming its unequivocal condemnation of the terrorist bombing in Beirut on 14 February 2005 that killed former Prime Minister of Lebanon Rafiq Hariri and others, and caused injury to dozens of people, and condemning the subsequent attacks in Lebanon,

Having examined the report of the fact-finding mission to Lebanon inquiring into the circumstances, causes and consequences of this terrorist act, transmitted to the Security Council by the Secretary-General following the statement by the President of the Security Council of 15 February 2005,

Noting with concern the conclusion of the fact-finding mission that the Lebanese investigation process suffers from serious flaws and has neither the capacity nor the commitment to reach a satisfactory and credible conclusion,

Noting, in this context, the opinion of the fact-finding mission that an international independent investigation with executive authority and self-sufficient resources in all relevant fields of expertise would be necessary to elucidate all aspects of this heinous crime,

Mindful of the unanimous demand of the Lebanese people that those responsible be identified and held accountable, and willing to assist Lebanon in the search for the truth,

Welcoming the Government of Lebanon's approval of the decision to be taken by the Council concerning the establishment of an international independent investigation commission, and welcoming also its readiness to cooperate fully with such a commission within the framework of Lebanese sovereignty and of its legal system, as expressed in the letter dated 29 March 2005 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

1. Decides, consistent with the letter dated 29 March 2005 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, to establish an international independent investigation commission ("the Commission") based in Lebanon to assist the Lebanese authorities in their investigation of all aspects of this terrorist act, including to help to identify its perpetrators, sponsors and organizers and their accomplices;

2. Reiterates its call upon the Government of Lebanon to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of the 14 February 2005 terrorist bombing, and calls upon the Government of Lebanon to ensure that the findings and conclusions of the investigation by the Commission are taken into account fully;

3. Decides that, to ensure the effectiveness of the Commission in the discharge of its duties, the Commission shall:

(a) Enjoy the full cooperation of the Lebanese authorities, including full access to all documentary, testimonial and physical information and evidence in their possession that the Commission deems relevant to the inquiry;

(b) Have the authority to collect any additional information and evidence, both documentary and physical, pertaining to this terrorist act, as well as to interview all officials and other persons in Lebanon that the Commission deems relevant to the inquiry;

(c) Enjoy freedom of movement throughout the Lebanese territory, including access to all sites and facilities that the Commission deems relevant to the inquiry;

(d) Be provided with the facilities necessary to perform its functions, and be granted, with its premises, staff and equipment, the privileges and immunities to which they are entitled under the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consult urgently with the Government of Lebanon with a view to facilitating the establishment and operation of the Commission pursuant to its mandate and terms of reference as mentioned in paragraphs 2 and 3 above, and requests also that he report to the Security Council accordingly and notify it of the date on which the Commission begins its full operations;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General, notwithstanding paragraph 4 above, to undertake without delay the steps, measures and arrangements necessary for the speedy establishment and full functioning of the Commission, including recruiting impartial and experienced staff with relevant skills and expertise;

6. Directs the Commission to determine procedures for carrying out its investigation, taking into account Lebanese law and judicial procedures;

7. Calls upon all States and all parties to cooperate fully with the Commission, and in particular to provide it with any relevant information they may possess pertaining to the above-mentioned terrorist act;

8. Requests the Commission to complete its work within three months of the date on which it commences its full operations, as notified by the Secretary-General, and authorizes the Secretary-General to extend the operation of the Commission for a further period not exceeding three months, if he deems it necessary to enable the Commission to complete its investigation, and requests that he inform the Council accordingly;

9. Also requests the Commission to report to the Council on the conclusions of its investigation, and requests the Secretary-General to update the Council orally on the progress of the Commission every two months during the operations of the Commission or more frequently as needed.

Communications (May/June). On 13 May [S/2005/317], the Secretary-General informed the Security Council of his intention, in accordance with resolution 1595(2005), to appoint Detlev Mehlis (Germany) as the Commissioner of the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC), which the Council noted on 17 May [S/2005/318]. He also informed the Council that the Commission became operational on 16 June based on the memorandum of understanding between the Government of Lebanon and the Commission, concluded by the Commissioner on the same day [S/2005/393]. The Secretary-General intended to report to the Council every two months on the progress of the Commission's work.

Briefings by Under-Secretary-General. The Council President, in his assessment of the Council's work for the month of August [S/2005/367], said that, on 25 August, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs briefed the Council on the UNIIIC investigation during informal consultations. After the briefing, the Council noted that the Commission had made significant progress in its investigation and reiterated support to its efforts to help identify those responsible for the crime. Council members reiterated their call on all States and parties, especially those who had yet to respond adequately, to cooperate fully in order to expedite the Commission's work.

The Under-Secretary-General provided the Council with a further update on 30 August, including information on the detention of four suspects on that day. The Council, in a press statement, took note of the information on the detention of the four suspects, welcomed the progress made in the investigation and expressed the hope that the final report would fully establish the facts and provide solid evidence in support of its findings.

Communications (September/October). On 9 September [S/2005/587], based on the request of the Commissioner, the Secretary-General informed the Council that he intended to extend UNIIIC's mandate for 40 days until 25 October to allow it to complete its investigation, which the Council noted on 15 September [S/2005/588]. During the additional period, UNIIIC staff would be downsized. On 14 October [S/2005/651], Lebanon requested the Secretary-General to extend the mandate further until mid-December to allow UNIIIC to assist in any further investigation of the 14 February bombing and explore possible follow-up measures to the findings and recommendations of its forthcoming report (see below).

Report of International Independent Investigative Committee

On 20 October [S/2005/662], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council President the report of UNIIIC detailing progress made in the investigation of the 14 February Beirut bombing and the conclusions of the Commission up to that point. As a result of the Commission's investigation, a number of people had been arrested and charged with conspiracy to murder and for related crimes in connection with the assassination of Mr. Hariri and 22 others. The Secretary-General expressed his intention to extend UNIIIC's mandate until 15 December.

It was the Commission's view that the assassination was carried out by a group with an extensive organization and considerable resources and capabilities. The crime had been prepared over the course of several months, and for that purpose, the timing and location of Mr. Hariri's movements had been monitored and the itineraries of his convoy recorded in detail. Converging evidence pointed at both Lebanese and Syrian involvement in the terrorist act. It was a well known fact that Syrian military intelligence had a pervasive presence in Lebanon, at least up to the withdrawal of Syrian forces pursuant to resolution 1559(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 506], and former senior security officials of Lebanon were their appointees. Given the infiltration of Lebanese institutions and society by the Syrian and Lebanese intelligence services, it was difficult to imagine that such a complex assassination plot could have been carried out without their knowledge. The Committee was of the view that the likely motive of the assassination was political, but did not rule out fraud, corruption and money-laundering.

During the course of its investigation, the Commission received extensive support from the Government of Lebanon and benefitted from expert input from a number of national and international entities. The Commission concluded that the investigation should be continued by the appropriate Lebanese judicial and security authorities, who had proven during the investigation that, with international assistance and support, they could move ahead and take the lead in an effective and professional manner. A sustained effort on the part of the international community to establish an assistance and cooperation platform together with the Lebanese authorities in the field of security and justice was considered essential.

Having established that many leads pointed directly to the involvement of Syrian security officials in the assassination, it was incumbent upon the Syrian Arab Republic to clarify a considerable part of the unresolved questions. While the Syrian authorities had cooperated to a limited degree with the Commission, several interviewees tried to mislead the investigation by providing false information. A full picture of the assassination could only be obtained through an extensive and credible investigation conducted in an open and transparent manner.

Security Council consideration (October). On 25 October [meeting 5292], the Security Council heard a briefing by the UNIIIC Commissioner, Detlev Mehlis, on the Commission's first report (see above). The Secretary-General was in attendance at the briefing. The Commissioner said that, for such a multidimensional and complex case, the investigation could not be considered complete. More time should be allotted to further investigate the findings and look into emerging leads. During the extended period of its mandate, the Commission would re-interview a number of witnesses and interview new ones and complete its examination of material evidence obtained recently. That would give the Syrian authorities another opportunity to show greater and meaningful cooperation and to provide any relevant substantial evidence. In that regard, they might wish to carry out their own investigation in an open and transparent manner so as to help the Commission fill the gaps and have a clear picture of the organizers and perpetrators. On the completion of the overall investigation, it would be up to the Lebanese authorities to determine the nature and location of any judicial mechanism to be set up.

The Syrian Arab Republic found it regrettable that the report could be seen as accusing Syria of the crime, and said that it had cooperated faithfully and sincerely with UNIIIC.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

On 31 October [meeting 5297], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1636 (2005). The draft [S/2005/684] was submitted by France, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its previous relevant resolutions, in particular resolutions 1595(2005) of 7 April 2005, 1373(2001) of 28 September 2001 and 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004,

Reiterating its call for the strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon,

Reaffirming that terrorism in all its forms and manifestations constitutes one of the most serious threats to peace and security,

Having examined carefully the report of the United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission ("the Commission") concerning its investigation into the terrorist bombing in Beirut on 14 February 2005 that killed former Prime Minister of Lebanon Rafiq Hariri and twenty-two others, and caused injury to dozens of people,

Commending the Commission for the outstanding professional work it has accomplished under difficult circumstances in assisting the Lebanese authorities in their investigation of all aspects of this terrorist act, and taking note of the conclusion of the Commission that the investigation is not yet complete,

Commending States which have provided assistance to the Commission in the discharge of its duties,

Commending the Lebanese authorities for the full cooperation they have provided to the Commission in the discharge of its duties, in accordance with paragraph 3 of resolution 1595(2005),

Recalling that, pursuant to its relevant resolutions, all States are required to afford one another the greatest measure of assistance in connection with criminal investigations or criminal proceedings relating to terrorist acts, and recalling in particular that in resolution 1595(2005) it had requested all States and all parties to cooperate fully with the Commission,

Taking note of the findings of the Commission that although the inquiry has already made considerable progress and achieved significant results, it is of the utmost importance to continue the trail both within and outside Lebanon in order to elucidate fully all aspects of this terrorist act, and in particular to identify and hold accountable all those who bear responsibility in its planning, sponsoring, organization and perpetration,

Mindful of the demand of the Lebanese people that all those responsible for the terrorist bombing that killed former Prime Minister of Lebanon Rafiq Hariri and others be identified and held accountable,

Acknowledging, in this connection, the letter dated 13 October 2005 from the Prime Minister of Lebanon to the Secretary-General requesting that the mandate of the Commission be extended to enable the Commission to continue to assist the competent Lebanese authorities in any further investigation of the various dimensions of the terrorist crime,

Acknowledging also the concurrent recommendation of the Commission that continued international assistance is needed to help the Lebanese authorities to get right to the bottom of this terrorist act and that a sustained effort on the part of the international community to establish an assistance and cooperation platform together with the Lebanese authorities in the field of security and justice is essential,

Willing to continue to assist Lebanon in the search for the truth and in holding those responsible for this terrorist act accountable for their crime,

Calling upon all States to extend to the Lebanese authorities and to the Commission the assistance they may need and request in connection with the inquiry, and in particular to provide them with all relevant information they may possess pertaining to this terrorist attack,

Reaffirming its profound commitment to the national unity and stability of Lebanon, emphasizing that the future of Lebanon should be decided through peaceful means by the Lebanese themselves, free of intimidation and foreign interference, and warning in this regard that attempts to undermine the stability of Lebanon will not be tolerated,

Taking note of the conclusions of the Commission that, given the infiltration of Lebanese institutions and society by the Syrian and Lebanese intelligence services working in tandem, it would be difficult to envisage a scenario whereby such a complex assassination plot could have been carried out without their knowledge, and that there is probable cause to believe that the decision to assassinate former Prime Minister Rafiq Hariri could not have been taken without the approval of top-ranked Syrian security officials,

Mindful of the conclusion of the Commission that while the Syrian authorities, after initial hesitation, have cooperated to a limited degree with the Commission, several Syrian officials have tried to mislead the investigation by giving false or inaccurate statements,

Convinced that it is unacceptable in principle that anyone anywhere should escape accountability for an act of terrorism for any reason, including because of his own obstruction of the investigation or failure to cooperate in good faith,

Determining that this terrorist act and its implications constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Emphasizing the importance of peace and stability in the region, and the need for peaceful solutions,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

I

1. Welcomes the report of the Commission;

2. Takes note with extreme concern of the conclusion of the Commission that there is converging evidence pointing at the involvement of both Lebanese and Syrian officials in this terrorist act and that it is difficult to envisage a scenario whereby such a complex assassination could have been carried out without their knowledge;

3. Decides, as a step to assist in the investigation of this crime and without prejudice to the ultimate judicial determination of the guilt or innocence of any individual:

(a) That all individuals designated by the Commission or the Government of Lebanon as suspected of involvement in the planning, sponsoring, organizing or perpetrating of this terrorist act, upon notification of such designation to and agreement of the Committee established in subparagraph (b) below, shall be subject to the following measures:

- All States shall take the measures necessary to prevent entry into or transit through their territories of such individuals, provided that nothing in the present paragraph shall obligate a State to refuse entry into its territory to its own nationals, or, if such individuals are found within their territory, shall ensure in accordance with applicable law that they are available for interview by the Commission if it so requests;
- All States shall freeze all funds, financial assets and economic resources that are on their territories that are owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by such individuals, or that are held by entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by such individuals or by persons acting on their behalf or at their direction; ensure that no funds, financial assets or economic resources are made available by their nationals or by any persons within their territories to or for the benefit of such individuals or entities; and cooperate fully in accordance with applicable law with any international investigations related to the assets or financial transactions of such individuals, entities or persons acting on their behalf, including through the sharing of financial information;

(b) To establish, in accordance with rule 28 of its provisional rules of procedure, a Committee of the Security Council consisting of all the members of the Council to undertake the tasks described in the annex to the present resolution;

(c) That the Committee and any measures still in force under subparagraph (a) will terminate when the Committee reports to the Council that all investigative and judicial proceedings relating to this terrorist attack have been completed, unless otherwise decided by the Council;

4. Determines that the involvement of any State in this terrorist act would constitute a serious violation by that State of its obligations to work to prevent and refrain from supporting terrorism, in accordance, in particular, with resolutions 1373(2001) and 1566 (2004), and that it would amount also to a serious violation of its obligation to respect the sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon;

5. Takes note with extreme concern of the conclusion of the Commission that, while the Syrian authorities have cooperated in form but not in substance with the Commission, several Syrian officials have tried to mislead the Commission by giving false or inaccurate information, and determines that continued lack of cooperation by the Syrian Arab Republic with the inquiry would constitute a serious violation of its obligations under relevant resolutions, including resolutions 1373(2001), 1566(2004) and 1595(2005);

6. Takes note of the recent statement by the Syrian Arab Republic regarding its intention now to cooperate with the Commission, and expects the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic to implement in full the commitments it is now making;

II

7. Acknowledges that continued assistance from the Commission to Lebanon, as requested by its Government in the letter dated 13 October 2005 to the Secretary-General and recommended by the Commission in its report, remains necessary to elucidate fully all aspects of this heinous crime, thus enabling all those involved in the planning, sponsoring, organizing and perpetrating of this terrorist act, as well as their accomplices, to be identified and brought to justice;

8. Welcomes, in this regard, the decision of the Secretary-General to extend the mandate of the Commission until 15 December 2005, as authorized by the Council in its resolution 1595(2005), and decides that it will extend the mandate further if recommended by the Commission and requested by the Government of Lebanon;

9. Commends the Lebanese authorities for the courageous decisions they have already taken in relation to the inquiry, including upon recommendation of the Commission, in particular the arrest and indictment of former Lebanese security officials suspected of involvement in this terrorist act, and encourages the Lebanese authorities to persist in their efforts with the same determination in order to get right to the bottom of this crime;

III

10. Endorses the conclusion of the Commission that it is incumbent upon the Syrian authorities to clarify a considerable part of the questions which remain unresolved;

11. Decides, in this context, that:

(a) The Syrian Arab Republic must detain those Syrian officials or individuals whom the Commission considers as suspected of involvement in the planning, sponsoring, organizing or perpetrating of this terrorist act, and make them fully available to the Commission;

(b) The Commission shall have vis-à-vis the Syrian Arab Republic the same rights and authorities as mentioned in paragraph 3 of resolution 1595(2005), and the Syrian Arab Republic must cooperate with the Commission fully and unconditionally on that basis;

(c) The Commission shall have the authority to determine the location and modalities for interview of Syrian officials and individuals it deems relevant to the inquiry;

12. Insists that the Syrian Arab Republic not interfere in Lebanese domestic affairs, either directly or indirectly, refrain from any attempt aimed at destabilizing Lebanon, and respect scrupulously the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of that country;

IV

13. Requests the Commission to report to the Council on the progress of the inquiry by 15 December 2005, including on the cooperation received by the Commission from the Syrian authorities, or anytime before that date if the Commission deems that such cooperation does not meet the requirements of the present resolution, so that the Council, if necessary, can consider further action;

14. Expresses its readiness to consider any additional request for assistance from the Government of Lebanon to ensure that all those responsible for this crime are held accountable;

15. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Annex

The following are the functions of the Committee established pursuant to paragraph 3 of this resolution:

1. To register as subject to the measures in paragraph 3 (a) of this resolution an individual designated by the Commission or the Government of Lebanon, provided that within two working days of receipt of such designation no member of the Committee objects, in which case the Committee shall meet within fifteen days to determine the applicability of the measures in paragraph 3 (a).

2. To approve exceptions to the measures established in paragraph 3 (a) on a case-by-case basis:

(i) With respect to the travel restrictions, where the Committee determines that such travel is justified on the ground of humanitarian need, including religious obligation, or where the Committee concludes that an exemption would otherwise further the objectives of this resolution;

(ii) With respect to the freezing of funds and other economic resources, where the Committee determines that such exceptions are necessary for basic expenses, including payments for foodstuffs, rent or mortgage, medicines and medical treatment, taxes, insurance premiums, and public utility charges, or exclusively for payment of reasonable professional fees and reimbursement of incurred expenses associated with the provision of legal services, or fees or service charges for routine holding or maintenance of frozen funds or other financial assets or economic resources.

3. To register the removal of an individual from the scope of the measures in paragraph 3 (a) upon notification from the Commission or the Government of Lebanon that the individual is no longer suspected of involvement in this terrorist act, provided that within two working days of receipt of such designation no member of the Committee objects, in which case the Committee shall meet within fifteen days to determine the removal of an individual from the scope of the measures in paragraph 3 (a).

4. To inform all Member States as to which individuals are subject to the measures in paragraph 3 (a).

Speaking after the vote, the United States said that Syria had chosen to dismiss the UNIIIC report as politically motivated, and had sought to impede the investigation by intentionally misleading UNIIIC. With the unanimous adoption of resolution 1636(2005), the United Nations had taken a step to hold Syria accountable for any further failure to cooperate with UNIIIC's investigations and to consider further action if necessary. The Chapter VII resolution adopted was the only way to compel the Syrian Government to accept the just demands of the United Nations and to cooperate fully with the investigation.

Syria criticized the report as proceeding from the presumption that it was guilty of committing the crime, rather than presuming its innocence. It further stated that the report did not seek the facts and evidence that would lead to the real perpetrator.

Communications (1 November–5 December). By a 1 November letter addressed to the Secretary-General and the President of the Security Council [S/2005/693], Syria transmitted a legislative decree issued on 29 October by Syrian President Bashar Al-Assad. The decree established a Syrian special judicial commission to deal with all matters relating to the UNIIIC mission.

On 14 November [S/2005/717], Syria informed the Secretary-General and the President of the Security Council about the progress of the Syrian judicial commission (see above) established with reference to UNIIIC. The judicial commission had studied the UNIIIC report, expressed its wish to fully cooperate with it, and extended an invitation to the UNIIIC Commissioner to visit Syria in order to implement the cooperation required pursuant to resolution 1636(2005).

In a 28 November note by the Security Council President [S/2005/734], Ambassador Kenzo Oshima (Japan) was identified as Chairman of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1636(2005) (see above) concerning the suspects implicated in the assassination of Rafik Hariri. The Committee would have the role of registering those suspects, as well as approving exceptions to the measures imposed on them from a humanitarian standpoint.

By a 5 December letter to the Secretary-General [S/2005/762], Lebanon requested the extension of UNIIIC's mandate for a period of six months from 15 December, with the possibility of an additional extension in the light of progress made in the investigation. Lebanon further urged that no gap be allowed to occur in UNIIIC's work.

Report of UNIIIC (December). In a 10 December report [S/2005/775], UNIIIC outlined in detail substantive progress made on a number of aspects of the investigation into the 14 February bombing that killed Rafik Hariri and 22 others. It was found that the conclusions in its previous report (see p. 554) remained valid and had been reinforced by further investigation. The report demonstrated a growing partnership between UNIIIC and the Lebanese authorities, who were seen as having the will and capacity to carry forward the investigation in Lebanon. The report also described the Commission's efforts to gain the cooperation of the Syrian authorities. While an official channel of communication was operating between UNIIIC and the Syrian authorities regarding cooperation, statements issued by Syria calling upon UNIIIC to reconsider past mistakes and to revise its report made it clear that the Syrian authorities and judicial commission were aiming to cast doubt on the content of the UNIIIC report. That was an attempt to hinder the investigation internally and procedurally. However, the Syrian authorities did make available for questioning the five Syrian officials that UNIIIC had summoned. It was up to the Syrian authorities to be more forthcoming in order to make headway in what looked to be a long process. Given that its substantive lines of enquiry were far from completed and Syrian participation was slow, UNIIIC recommended that its mandate be extended for another six months.

Security Council consideration (December). On 13 December [meeting 5323], the Security Council was briefed on the second report of UNIIIC (see above) by Detlev Mehlis, Commissioner of UNIIIC. The Secretary-General attended the briefing. According to Mr. Mehlis, UNIIIC was working mainly on two tracks: one Lebanese and one Syrian. On the Lebanese track, UNIIIC had been able to resolve most impediments, thanks to the cooperation of the Lebanese authorities. In parallel to the Lebanese track, UNIIIC had been trying to make headway on the Syrian track, but its relations with the Syrian authorities had been marked by conflicting signals. It was not clear at all times who from the Syrian side was the privileged interlocutor of UNIIIC, causing confusion and delays.

Syria disagreed with the imprecise statements contained in UNIIIC's report, referring to Syria's reluctance to fully cooperate with UNIIIC and its work. On the contrary, Syria had consistently and continuously communicated with UNIIIC.

Communication (13 December). Lebanon, in a 13 December letter to the Secretary-General [S/2005/783], requested the establishment of an international tribunal to try all those found responsible for the murder of Mr. Hariri. It also asked that UNIIIC's mandate be expanded, or an independent international investigation commission be created, to investigate the assassination attempts, assassinations and explosions that took place in Lebanon, starting with the attempt on the life of Minister Marwan Hamade on 1 October 2004.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (December)

On 15 December [meeting 5329], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1644 (2005). The draft [S/2005/788] was submitted by France, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its previous relevant resolutions, including resolutions 1595(2005) of 7 April 2005, 1373 (2001) of 28 September 2001, and 1566(2004) of 8 October 2004, and reaffirming in particular resolution 1636(2005) of 31 October 2005,

Reaffirming its strongest condemnation of the terrorist bombing of 14 February 2005, as well as of all other terrorist attacks in Lebanon since October 2004, and reaffirming also that all those involved in these attacks must be held accountable for their crimes,

Having examined carefully the report of the United Nations International Independent Investigation

Commission ("the Commission") concerning its investigation into the terrorist bombing in Beirut on 14 February 2005 that killed former Prime Minister of Lebanon Rafiq Hariri and twenty-two others, and caused injury to dozens of people,

Commending the Commission for the outstanding professional work it has accomplished under difficult circumstances in assisting the Lebanese authorities in their investigation of this terrorist act, and commending in particular Mr. Detlev Mehlis for his leadership in the discharge of his duties as the Head of the Commission and for his dedication to the cause of justice,

Reiterating its call upon all States to extend to the Lebanese authorities and to the Commission the assistance they may need and request in connection with the inquiry, and in particular to provide them with all relevant information they may possess pertaining to this terrorist attack,

Acknowledging the letter dated 5 December 2005 from the Prime Minister of Lebanon to the Secretary-General requesting that the mandate of the Commission be extended for a further period of six months, with a possibility of an additional extension as necessary, to enable the Commission to continue to assist the competent Lebanese authorities in the ongoing investigations of the crime, and to explore possible follow-up measures in order to bring the perpetrators of the said crime to justice, and acknowledging also the concurrent recommendation of the Commission in that regard,

Acknowledging also the letter dated 13 December 2005 from the Prime Minister of Lebanon to the Secretary-General requesting the establishment of a tribunal of an international character to try all those who are found responsible for this terrorist crime and requesting also that the mandate of the Commission be expanded or that another international investigation commission be created, to investigate the terrorist attacks that have taken place in Lebanon since 1 October 2004,

Noting that Syrian authorities have made available Syrian officials for questioning, but deeply concerned at the Commission's assessment of Syrian performance to date, and noting that the Commission is still awaiting the provision of other requested materials from Syrian authorities,

Reaffirming its determination that this terrorist act and its implications constitute a threat to international peace and security,

Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Welcomes the report of the Commission;

2. Decides, as recommended by the Commission and requested by the Government of Lebanon, to extend the mandate of the Commission, as set forth in resolutions 1595(2005) and 1636(2005), initially until 15 June 2006;

3. Takes note with satisfaction of the progress of the inquiry achieved since the last report of the Commission to the Security Council, and notes with extreme concern that, while the inquiry is not yet complete, it confirms its previous conclusions and that the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic has yet to provide the Commission with the full and unconditional cooperation demanded in resolution 1636(2005);

4. Underscores the obligation and commitment of the Syrian Arab Republic to cooperate fully and unconditionally with the Commission, and specifically demands that the Syrian Arab Republic respond unambiguously and immediately in those areas adduced by the Commissioner and also that it implement without delay any future request of the Commission;

5. Requests the Commission to report to the Council on the progress of the inquiry every three months from the adoption of the present resolution, including on the cooperation received from the Syrian authorities, or anytime before that date if the Commission deems that such cooperation does not meet the requirements of the present resolution and of resolutions 1595(2005) and 1636(2005);

6. Acknowledges the request of the Government of Lebanon that those eventually charged with involvement in this terrorist attack be tried by a tribunal of an international character, requests the Secretary-General to help the Government of Lebanon to identify the nature and scope of the international assistance needed in this regard, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council in a timely manner;

7. Authorizes the Commission, following the request of the Government of Lebanon, to extend its technical assistance, as appropriate, to the Lebanese authorities with regard to their investigations of the terrorist attacks perpetrated in Lebanon since 1 October 2004, and requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Commission and the Government of Lebanon, to present recommendations to expand the mandate of the Commission to include investigations of those other attacks;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Commission with the support and resources necessary for the discharge of its duties;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Speaking after the vote, Lebanon thanked the Council for unanimously adopting the resolution.

Syria expressed full appreciation for the efforts made by many Member States to prevent the adoption of a resolution contravening international law and the United Nations Charter. It was regrettable that, although contacts between Syria and UNIIIC were under way and efforts were being made by both sides to reach mutual agreement on issues relating to the questioning of Syrian citizens, certain States had reached selective conclusions based on the Commission's report and had used them in a distorted way against Syria.

Terrorist bombings

In 2005, in addition to the 14 February bombing that killed former Prime Minister Hariri, a series of other bombings in Lebanon killed and injured scores of people, including several prominent Lebanese journalists and political figures.

In various meetings throughout the year, the Security Council denounced those violent acts.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June/ December)

On 7 June [meeting 5197], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/22 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council condemns in the strongest terms the terrorist bombing on 2 June 2005 in Beirut that killed a Lebanese journalist, Samir Qassir, who was a symbol of political independence and freedom, and expresses its deepest sympathy and condolences to the family of the victim and to the people of Lebanon.
> The Council welcomes the determination and commitment of the Government of Lebanon to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of this assassination and determines that this assassination, like others before it, constitutes a pernicious effort to undermine security, stability, sovereignty, political independence and efforts aimed at preserving civil accord in the country.
> The Council expresses its concern about the destabilizing impact of political assassinations and other terrorist acts in Lebanon, and warns that the sponsors of recent terrorist acts against political leaders and leading members of civil society in Lebanon should not be permitted to jeopardize the holding of parliamentary elections in transparent, free and democratic conditions.
> The Council calls upon all parties to show restraint and a sense of responsibility with a view to the successful completion of the electoral process and government formation in the country.
> The Council reaffirms its resolution 1559(2004), and reiterates its call for the strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon. The Council urges all States, in accordance with its resolutions 1373(2001) and 1566(2004), to cooperate fully in the fight against terrorism.

On 12 December [meeting 5320], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/61 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council condemns in the strongest terms the terrorist bombing on 12 December 2005 in the suburbs of Beirut that killed Lebanese member of Parliament, editor and journalist Gebrane Tueni, a patriot who was an outspoken symbol of freedom and the sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon, as well as three others. It expresses its deepest sympathy to the families of those killed and injured.
> The Council reiterates its deepest concern about the destabilizing impact of political assassinations and other terrorist acts in Lebanon. It reiterates also its warning that the sponsors of today's and previous terrorist attacks against political leaders and leading members of civil society in Lebanon, whose obvious aim is to undermine Lebanon's security, stability, sovereignty, national unity, political independence and press freedom, will not be permitted to succeed and will finally be held accountable for their crimes.
> The Council welcomes the determination and commitment of the Government of Lebanon to bring to justice all those responsible for this assassination and others before, and expresses its readiness to consider positively any request for assistance in this regard from the Government of Lebanon.
> The Council reaffirms its resolution 1559(2004), and reiterates once again its call for the strict respect of the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon. The Council urges all States, in accordance with its resolutions 1373(2001) and 1566(2004), to cooperate fully in the fight against terrorism.

Implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004)

Withdrawal of Syrian armed forces

Communication (23 March). On 23 March [S/2005/219], Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic transmitted to the President of the Security Council the closing statement of the meeting of the Syrian-Lebanese Higher Council (Damascus, 7 March).

The Council decided to withdraw the Syrian Arab forces stationed in Lebanon to the Bekaa region and the entrance to the Western Bekaa at Dahr al-Baydar up to the Hammana-Mudayrij-Ayn Dara line before the end of March; and to assign to the Joint Military Committee the task of determining the size and period of stay of the Syrian forces in that region and their relationship with the Lebanese State authorities. At the end of the agreed period of stay, both Governments should agree on completion of the withdrawal of the remaining Arab forces.

Report of Secretary-General (April). In April [S/2005/272], the Secretary-General submitted a report on progress made in the implementation of Council resolution 1559(2004), which called for the withdrawal of all remaining foreign forces from Lebanon.

On 12 and 21 March, Syrian President Bashar Al-Assad affirmed to the Secretary-General his March pledge to withdraw Syrian troops and intelligence personnel from Lebanon in fulfillment of resolution 1559(2004). The withdrawal would be done in two stages: the first would relocate about one third of all Syrian troops and intelligence personnel in Lebanon into the Bekaa Valley by the end of March; the second stage would lead to a complete and full withdrawal of all Syrian military personnel, assets and intelligence apparatus. Following the endorsement of the withdrawal plan between President Al-Assad and Lebanese President Lahoud, the first stage of the Syrian withdrawal began on 8 March.

To verify the withdrawal, the Secretary-General dispatched a UN technical mission to the area in April and requested the two Governments to provide it with all relevant documentation concerning the former deployment of all Syrian troops, military assets and intelligence apparatus in Lebanon. The United Nations had been able thus far to verify that the Syrian military intelligence had vacated sites previously occupied in Lebanon under the first stage of the withdrawal plan and confirmed that there was ongoing movement to withdraw Syrian troops from the Bekaa Valley into the Syrian Arab Republic as part of the second stage of the withdrawal. However, some Member States and the Lebanese opposition had asserted that Syrian military intelligence had taken up new positions to the south of Beirut and elsewhere and had been using the headquarters of parties affiliated with the Syrian Government. Both Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic denied the assertions.

Although it had stated that it was not constrained in doing so, several incidents over the previous six months had illustrated the fact that the Government of Lebanon did not fully exert control over all of its territory. There had been no noticeable change in the deployment of Lebanese armed forces along the Blue Line, and Government representatives had acknowledged that it had not yet deployed forces to the far south of the country. The Secretary-General stated that more needed to be done to ensure the return of effective governmental authority throughout the south of Lebanon, including the deployment of additional Lebanese armed forces. Despite concerns expressed by both Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic regarding the stability of Lebanon after a full Syrian withdrawal, Lebanese officials assured the Secretary-General that the Lebanese armed forces had the capacity to guarantee security and stability. They said that the Lebanese forces were gradually assuming responsibility for the vacated areas.

Throughout the reporting period, the United Nations discussed with various relevant parties the issue of the disbanding and disarmament of Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias, consistent with 1989 Taif Agreement, but had not yet reached operational conclusions on the matter. There was no noticeable change in the status of Palestinian armed groups in Lebanon since the October 2004 report of the Secretary-General [YUN 2004, p. 507], nor in the status of Hizbullah, seen as the most significant remaining armed group. Its activities along the Blue Line highlighted the need for the Government of Lebanon to extend exclusive control over all its territory. The increasingly tense political situation in Lebanon had led to the establishment and operation of so-called armed vigilante groups, which, while not formal militias, could signify the beginning of a return to the days when armed groups and militias were prevalent in Lebanon. That development was discussed with representatives of the Government of Lebanon, who stated that preventive action would be taken.

The Secretary-General observed that, although the parties had made significant progress towards the fulfilment of resolution 1559(2004), all the requirements of that resolution had not been met as at 26 April. The full and complete withdrawal of Syrian troops and military assets would represent a significant step towards ending heavy-handed foreign interference that had characterized Lebanese politics for decades. That withdrawal would require the Syrian and Lebanese Governments to redefine the special relationship between them. In that regard, the Secretary-General expected the two countries to make progress towards establishing mutual diplomatic representation and formalizing their special relationship prior to his next report on the implementation of resolution 1559 (2004).

The Secretary-General noted that the six-week political stalemate in Lebanon raised the spectre of a delay of the parliamentary election scheduled for May. Such a delay would contribute to further exacerbating the political divisions in Lebanon and threaten the country's security, stability and prosperity. He encouraged the idea of inviting international observers to monitor the elections.

Security Council consideration (April). On 29 April [meeting 5172], the Security Council was briefed by the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Implementation of Security Council resolution 1559(2004), Terje Roed-Larsen, on the implementation of that resolution. The briefing was attended by the Secretary-General. Mr. Roed-Larsen commended the decision of Lebanese Prime Minister Mikati's Government to hold elections as scheduled, beginning on 29 May. He welcomed the unequivocal confirmation that Mr. Mikati's new Government had received in the Lebanese Parliament, where on 27 April it passed a vote of confidence, with 109 votes to one, plus three abstentions. That was seen as a strong manifestation of the will of the Lebanese people and an endorsement of Mr. Mikati's pledge to hold parliamentary elections on time.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May)

On 4 May [meeting 5175], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/17 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council recalls all its previous resolutions on Lebanon, in particular resolutions 1559 (2004), 425(1978), 426(1978), 520(1982) and 1583 (2005), as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statements of 18 June 2000 and 19 October 2004.
> The Council reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized borders and under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon.
> The Council welcomes the first semi-annual report of the Secretary-General to the Security Council of 26 April 2005 on the implementation of Council resolution 1559(2004).
> The Council welcomes also the fact that the parties concerned have made significant and noticeable progress towards implementing some of the provisions contained in resolution 1559(2004), while expressing concern at the determination of the Secretary-General that there has been no progress in the implementation of other provisions of the resolution, in particular the disarmament of Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias and the extension of the control of the Government of Lebanon over all Lebanese territory, and that the requirements of the resolution have not yet been met.
> The Council reiterates its call for the full implementation of all requirements of resolution 1559(2004), and calls upon all concerned parties to cooperate fully with the Council and the Secretary-General to achieve this goal.
> The Council acknowledges the letter dated 26 April 2005 from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Syrian Arab Republic to the Secretary-General stating that the Syrian Arab Republic has completed the full withdrawal of its forces, military assets and the intelligence apparatus from Lebanon.
> The Council calls upon the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic and the Government of Lebanon to extend their full cooperation to the United Nations verification team dispatched by the Secretary-General with their agreement to verify whether there has been full and complete withdrawal, and looks forward to his report.
> The Council acknowledges that the full and complete Syrian withdrawal would represent a significant and important step towards Lebanon's full political independence and full exercise of its sovereignty that is the ultimate goal of resolution 1559(2004), thus opening a new chapter in Lebanese history.
> The Council welcomes the deployment of Lebanese armed forces to positions vacated by Syrian forces and the assumption of responsibility by the Government of Lebanon for these areas and calls for the deployment of additional Lebanese armed forces throughout the south of the country.
> The Council urges all concerned parties to do their utmost to safeguard the stability and national unity of Lebanon and underlines the importance of national dialogue among all Lebanese political forces in this regard.
> The Council commends the Lebanese people for the dignified manner in which they have expressed their views and for their commitment to a peaceful and democratic process, and stresses that the Lebanese people must be allowed to decide the future of their country free of violence and intimidation. It condemns, in this context, the recent terrorist acts in Lebanon that have resulted in several deaths and injuries, and calls for their perpetrators to be brought to justice.
> The Council welcomes the decision of the Government of Lebanon to conduct elections beginning on 29 May 2005, and underlines the importance that such elections be held according to schedule. The Council shares the opinion of the Secretary-General that a delay in holding the parliamentary elections would contribute to exacerbating further the political divisions in Lebanon and threaten the security, stability and prosperity of the country. The Council underlines the fact that free and credible elections held without foreign interference or influence would be another central indication of the political independence and sovereignty of Lebanon.
> The Council encourages the Secretary-General and the Government of Lebanon to reach arrangements for international assistance, including United Nations assistance, to ensure that such elections are conducted in a free and credible manner, in particular by inviting international governmental and/or non-governmental electoral observers to monitor the electoral process. The Council urges Member States to extend assistance accordingly.
> The Council commends the Secretary-General and his Special Envoy for their relentless efforts and dedication to facilitate and assist the parties in the implementation of all provisions of resolution 1559 (2004), and requests that they continue their work in this regard.
> The Council shares the view that the full implementation of resolution 1559(2004) would contribute positively to the situation in the Middle East in general.

Report of verification team (May). On 23 May [S/2005/331], the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council President the report of the technical military team dispatched to Lebanon to verify the full and complete withdrawal of all Syrian troops, military assets and intelligence apparatus.

After travelling more than 1,500 kilometres in Lebanon and visiting 133 former Syrian troop and military intelligence positions, the team found no Syrian military forces, assets or intelligence apparatus in Lebanese territory, with the exception of one Syrian battalion deployed near Deir Al-Ashayr. Eleven former Syrian positions had already been taken over by the Lebanese army. The mission therefore concluded, to the best of its ability, that Syrian troops and military assets had been fully and completely withdrawn from Lebanese territory, with the possible exception of Deir Al-Ashayr, the status of which remained unclear. Due to the absence of a border agreement between the Governments of the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon, and the lack of a clear line of demarcation on the ground, the team was unable to verify whether the Syrian military unit in the Deir Al-Ashayr area was in Syrian or Lebanese territory. The status of that unit would be clarified once the two Governments had concluded a border agreement. The withdrawal of the Syrian intelligence apparatus had been harder to verify. The team could only conclude, to the best of its ability, that no Syrian military intelligence personnel remained in Lebanon in known locations or in military uniform, and was unable to conclude with certainty that all the intelligence apparatus had been withdrawn. In some of the locations previously occupied by the Syrian military intelligence, cells were found which indicated that prisoners had been held.

The team concluded that a further verification mission was not necessary, as it would still be unable to verify the complete withdrawal of clandestine intelligence apparatus.

Communication (11 June). On 11 June [S/2005/388], Syria said that statements made by certain officials in the United States Administration regarding Syrian interference in Lebanese affairs through the action of intelligence agents were unfounded. Syria stated that it had completed the full return of its forces and intelligence apparatus on 26 April.

Elections

In his second report of the implementation of Security Council resolution 1559 (2004) [S/2005/673], the Secretary-General stated that the Lebanese parliamentary elections took place in four rounds, beginning on 29 May, two days before the expiration of the legal term of the sitting Parliament, and concluded on 19 June. The elections were successful, credible and well-conducted technically in a free and non-violent environment. They were monitored by more than 100 international electoral observers. The United Nations provided technical assistance and coordinated the electoral observers. The elections resulted in a clear victory for a coalition, comprising the Future Movement, led by Saad Harri and the Progressive Socialist Party, led by Walid Jumblatt, which gained 72 seats, followed by an alliance of the Amal Party and Hizbullah, 35 seats, and the Free Patriotic Movement led by Michel Aoun who had returned to Lebanon after 14 years in exile, 21 seats.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

On 22 June [meeting 5212], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/26 on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council welcomes the Lebanese parliamentary elections held between 29 May and 19 June 2005. It commends the fair and credible character of the vote and pays tribute to the Lebanese people who demonstrated, throughout the process, their strong commitment to democracy, freedom and independence.

The Council congratulates the newly elected members of the Lebanese Parliament.

The Council commends the Government of Lebanon for the successful conduct of the elections, in accordance with the Constitution and the planned schedule. It expresses its appreciation for the advice and technical support given to the Lebanese authorities by the United Nations Electoral Assistance Division. The Council also pays tribute to the crucial contribution of the international observers, notably from the European Union. In this regard, it welcomes the report of the European Union observer mission and its conclusions regarding the satisfactory conduct of the four electoral stages.

The Council looks forward to the formation of a new government in the near future. It stresses that the establishment of this government in accordance with the constitutional rules and without any foreign interference would be another sign of the political independence and sovereignty of Lebanon.

The Council reaffirms that the Lebanese people must be allowed to decide the future of their country free of violence and intimidation. It strongly condemns, in this context, the recent terrorist acts in Lebanon, in particular the heinous assassination of former leader of the Communist Party George Hawi, and calls for their perpetrators to be brought to justice.

The Council reaffirms its profound commitment to a stable, secure and prosperous Lebanon. It underlines accordingly the need for the newly elected Lebanese authorities to exercise their full sovereignty over the entire territory, to preserve unity through national dialogue, to strengthen the nation's institutions and to respect the principles of good governance, in the sole interest of the Lebanese people.

The Council calls upon the international community to stand ready to examine possible requests from the newly elected Lebanese authorities for enhanced assistance and cooperation, in support of a credible governmental programme of political and economic reform.

The Council reiterates its call for the full implementation of all requirements of resolution 1559 (2004) and urges all concerned parties to cooperate fully with the Council and the Secretary-General to achieve this goal.

The Council also calls for the full implementation of resolution 1595(2005) and looks forward to the cooperation of the newly elected Lebanese authorities in this regard.

The Council reaffirms its strong support for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized borders and under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon.

Report of Secretary-General (October). On 26 October [S/2005/673], the Secretary-General submitted his second semi-annual report on the implementation of resolution 1559(2004). He stated that, after intense discussions, a new Government was formed on 19 July, led by Prime Minister Fouad Siniora of the Future Movement. The Government included, for the first time, a member of Hizbullah. Following reports suggesting that Syrian intelligence continued to operate in Lebanon and influence events there, in June, the Secretary-General directed the verification team to return to Lebanon to clarify issues regarding the withdrawal of the Syrian intelligence apparatus. The team reported that numerous sources, including ministers, former ministers and security officials, were of the view that Syrian intelligence activity was taking place in Lebanon. There were credible reports of Syrian intelligence activity, but most were exaggerated. The team also believed it possible that some Syrian intelligence officers had briefly visited Lebanon after their withdrawal and that they maintained networks of contacts. However, the extent and purpose of any such activity were difficult to assess. The verification team corroborated its earlier conclusion that there was no remaining visible or significant Syrian intelligence presence in Lebanon, though the distinctly close historical and other ties between the Syrian Arab Republic and Lebanon also had to be taken into account when assessing a possibly ongoing influence of Syrian intelligence in Lebanon.

Following the May parliamentary elections (see p. 563), the electoral observers emphasized a need for urgent reform of the legal and election framework, as provisions on electoral campaigning were lacking, and shortcomings were found in the areas of election administration, campaign and financial disclosure and voter registration. At the request of the Lebanese authorities, the Secretary-General was maintaining his efforts to assist with the establishment of an appropriate and enduring legal and institutional framework to ensure free and fair electoral processes in Lebanon. The United Nations continued to support the Lebanese National Commission, a special panel of preeminent personalities appointed by the Government of new Prime Minister Fouad Siniora immediately after the parliamentary elections to draft a new and permanent electoral law.

Regarding the disbanding and disarmament of all Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias, there was no fundamental change in the status of such groups, and information suggested that there had been an increasing influx of weaponry and personnel from Syria to some of those groups. The Government of Lebanon informed the Secretary-General that it had undertaken significant measures towards restricting movement to and from the Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon. To that end, the Lebanese Armed Forces had enhanced their deployment along the border with the Syrian Arab Republic and increased patrols. They had also increased their presence, erected new checkpoints and tightened controls around the positions of Palestinian armed groups headquartered in the Syrian Arab Republic to the south of Beirut and in the Bekaa Valley. The Secretary-General noted Prime Minister Siniora's call on the Syrian leadership to practice self-restraint in its ties with Palestinian factions, and the Prime Minister's commitment that the Lebanese State and its security institutions had the duty to guarantee the security of the people, citizens and guests, including the Palestinians. The Prime Minister emphasized his resolve to continue the internal dialogue to achieve the disarmament of Palestinian armed groups peacefully, without resorting to confrontation. He would seek, as a first step, to establish order and control among armed Palestinian groups inside the camps. On 8 October, Prime Minister Siniora reached an agreement with PLO factions to organize the armed Palestinian presence in the camps to guarantee security, and with armed Palestinian groups headquartered in Damascus to create a follow-up committee to discuss all issues, including the issue of arms. There was no noticeable change in the operational status and capabilities of Hizbullah, which according to its own leadership, had more than 12,000 missiles at its disposal. Hizbullah, which also operated as a political party, was given a ministerial portfolio in the Government, and the group's leaders indicated their readiness for discussion.

The Government of Lebanon had not yet fully exerted control over all of its territory. In early June, the Lebanese army appeared to be reducing its presence and control in the south of the country as part of an overall redeployment and reduction of troops, as Hizbullah strengthened its own presence in response. After the United Nations had expressed its concern, on 1 July, the Lebanese army reestablished its original presence. Along the Blue Line, a fragile calm continued to prevail during most of the period, though violations had, in one instance, led to deaths and injuries.

The Secretary-General observed that the parties concerned had made considerable progress towards the implementation of resolution 1559(2004). The requirements of the withdrawal of Syrian troops and military assets, as well as of the conduct of free and credible legislative elections had been met. Progress had also been made on broader electoral reforms, with UN assistance. The disbanding and disarming of all Lebanese and non-Lebanese militias were under discussion among the Lebanese and between the Lebanese and the Palestinians. The Secretary-General was also encouraged by his dialogue with the Government of Lebanon on the extension of its control over all of Lebanon's territory. However, tangible results were yet to be achieved in those two areas, and he would continue his efforts in that regard. The complications that had arisen from the lack of a clearly agreed upon and demarcated border between Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic also highlighted the need for a formal border agreement and demarcation of that border between the two countries. The Secretary-General noted that, in the aftermath of the withdrawal of the Syrian military and intelligence presence, the Lebanese security and intelligence services needed to regain public confidence. A start had been made in that regard as the Lebanese authorities had undertaken steps to appoint new permanent, professional directors-general who could enjoy the trust of the public and to change personnel, culture, training and equipment.

UNIFIL

In 2005, the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) continued to discharge its mandate by observing, monitoring and reporting on developments in its area of operation. The Security Council twice extended UNIFIL's mandate in 2005, in January and in July, each time for a period of six months.

UNIFIL, established by Council resolution 425(1978) following Israel's invasion of Lebanon [YUN 1978, p. 312], was originally entrusted with confirming the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restoring international peace and security, and assisting Lebanon in regaining authority in southern Lebanon. Following a second invasion in 1982 [YUN 1982, p. 428], the Council, in resolution 511(1982) [ibid., p. 450], authorized the Force to carry out the additional task of providing protection and humanitarian assistance to the local population. Following the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon in June 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 465], UNIFIL was reinforced to be able to monitor those territories previously occupied by Israeli forces [ibid.] to prevent the recurrence of fighting and create conditions for the restoration of Lebanese authority in the area.

The Force headquarters, based in Naqoura, provided command and control, and liaison with Lebanon and Israel, UNDOF, UNTSO and a number of NGOs.

Since UNIFIL's establishment, 246 members had lost their lives: 79 as a result of firings or bomb explosions, 105 as a result of accidents and 62 from other causes.

Activities

Report of Secretary-General (January). In a January [S/2005/26] report on developments in the UNIFIL area of operations since his previous report [YUN 2004, p. 510], the Secretary-General said that the relatively quiet but tense situation that had prevailed through much of the reporting period was shattered by a Hizbullah roadside bomb attack on an Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) convoy in the Shab'a farms area on 9 January. The attack killed an IDF soldier and the ensuing military reaction by IDF resulted in the death of a UN military observer. UNIFIL operations were concentrated along the Blue Line, and the Force remained focused on maintaining the ceasefire through ground and air patrols of its area of operation, observation from fixed positions and close contact with the parties.

The Secretary-General was disturbed by the resumption of military measures, for which Hizbullah took credit, claiming the prerogative to forcefully resist Israeli occupation of Lebanese territory. He emphasized that no violations of the Blue Line were acceptable and that Lebanon's continually asserted position that the Blue Line was not valid in the Shab'a Farms area was not compatible with Security Council resolutions. Air violations also continued to be a matter of concern, as Israel's policy of overflying Lebanon whenever it saw fit risked provoking retaliation from the Lebanese side. Rocket-firing incidents perpetrated by individuals allegedly affiliated with Palestinian militant factions further demonstrated the volatility of the sector, but to the credit of the parties and UNIFIL, none of those incidents resulted in a military escalation. The Government of Lebanon continued to demonstrate the capacity to exert its security authority through various activities of the Joint Security Force, including prompt responses to specific incidents, but the Secretary-General called for more to be done to ensure the return of effective governmental authority throughout the south. He recommended that UNIFIL's mandate be extended for another six months, until 31 July 2005.

Communication (10 January). On 10 January [S/2005/13], Lebanon requested that UNIFIL's mandate, due to expire at the end of the month, be extended for six months. That would provide a reaffirmation of the international community's commitment to the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty over its entire territory.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (January)

On 28 January [meeting 5117], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1583(2005). The draft [S/2005/53] was submitted by Denmark, France, Greece, Romania, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on Lebanon, including resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and resolution 1553(2004) of 29 July 2004, as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000,

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from its President to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Gravely concerned at the persistence of tension and violence along the Blue Line,

Emphasizing once again the interim nature of the Force,

Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon to extend the mandate of the Force for a new period of six months, presented in the letter dated 10 January 2005 from the Permanent Representative of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General, while reaffirming that the Security Council has recognized the Blue Line as valid for the purpose of confirming the withdrawal of Israel pursuant to resolution 425(1978) and that the Blue Line must be respected in its entirety,

Expressing its concern over the tensions and potential for escalation as noted in the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 2005,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 20 January 2005 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 July 2005;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries and under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon;

4. Calls upon the Government of Lebanon to fully extend and exercise its sole and effective authority throughout the south, including through the deployment of sufficient numbers of Lebanese armed and security forces, to ensure a calm environment throughout the area, including along the Blue Line, and to exert control over the use of force on its territory and from it;

5. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General, and requests the Force to report any obstruction it may face in the discharge of its mandate;

6. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the entire withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, to exercise utmost restraint and to cooperate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

7. Condemns all acts of violence, including the recent incidents across the Blue Line that have resulted in the killing and wounding of United Nations military observers, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the sea, land and continuing air violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations, to refrain from any act or provocation that could further escalate the tension and to abide scrupulously by their obligation to respect the safety of the Force and other United Nations personnel;

8. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent their escalation, while stressing the primary responsibility of the parties in this regard;

9. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational mine clearance, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and clearance of the remaining mine/unexploded ordnance threat in the south, commends donor countries for supporting those efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, and stresses the necessity for the provision to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of any additional existing maps and minefield records;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Security Council before the end of the present mandate as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

11. Expresses its intention to review the mandate and structures of the Force at the end of the present mandate, and requests the Secretary-General, following appropriate consultations, including with the Government of Lebanon, to include in his report recommendations in this regard, taking into account the prevailing situation on the ground, the activities actually performed by the Force in its area of operation and its contribution towards the remaining task of restoring international peace and security;

12. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

13. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

Report of Secretary-General (July). In response to resolution 1583(2005) (see above) the Secretary-General submitted a July report on UNIFIL covering the period from January to July [S/2005/460]. He said that violations of the Blue Line continued throughout the period, most often in the form of recurring air violations by Israeli jets, helicopters and drones, as well as ground violations from the Lebanese side, primarily by Lebanese shepherds. Additionally, there was one Lebanese air violation by a Hizbullah drone. Hostilities in the area escalated in May with armed exchanges between Hizbullah and IDF and with rocket firing by unidentified armed elements. The situation deteriorated significantly on 29 June, when Hizbullah and IDF engaged in a heavy exchange of fire in the Shab'a farms area, resulting in the death of one IDF soldier and two Hizbullah fighters.

The Lebanese Joint Security Force and the Lebanese Army continued to operate in the areas vacated by Israel in 2000. The strength and activity of the Joint Security Force remained the same and their routine activities continued. At the request of UNIFIL, the Joint Security Force intervened on a few occasions to control demonstrations and prevent protestors from approaching the Blue Line facing IDF positions. Nevertheless, the Government of Lebanon continued to maintain the position that, as long as there was no comprehensive peace with Israel, Lebanese armed forces would not be deployed along the Blue Line. With its permanent observation posts, temporary checkpoints and patrols, Hizbullah maintained a visible presence at the Blue Line, occasionally threatening or denying access to UN patrols. However, UNIFIL was able to regain and assert its freedom of movement within a very short period of time.

UNIFIL provided humanitarian assistance to the Lebanese civilian population in the form of medical care, water projects, equipment and services for schools and orphanages and social services for the needy, cooperating closely with the Lebanese authorities, UN agencies, several embassies and other organizations and agencies operating in the country. Following an increase in civilian land-mine casualties in the area along the Blue Line, a joint UN and Lebanese Army team conducted an assessment and subsequently initiated a programme to repair damaged or missing minefield fencing and erect new fencing where required. UNIFIL carried out regular mine-risk education for schoolchildren and continued its operational mine clearance activities, demolishing some 300 mines and pieces of unexploded ordnance.

In accordance with the review of UNIFIL's mandate and structures called for in Security Council resolution 1583(2005) (see p. 566), the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO) sent an assessment mission to Lebanon from 8 to 14 May. The mission reviewed the deployment concept of UNIFIL troop strength, evaluated its role in fulfilling its current mandate, assessed the political environment and its implications for UNIFIL, evaluated the situation along the Blue Line, and analysed the consequences for UNIFIL's mandate of any possible adjustments to the Force. The team found that the military situation in southern Lebanon and in the vicinity of the Blue Line between Lebanon and Israel had not changed significantly since December 2002, when the size and role of UNIFIL were last reconfigured. Supported by the Observer Group Lebanon, UNIFIL had the authority to investigate and verify operationally sensitive issues, establish liaison with the parties to the conflict and thereby reduce tensions and incidents on the Blue Line. As there were no formal links between the Governments or defence forces of Israel and Lebanon, UNIFIL was the principal source of liaison on military matters between the countries. It was the view of the assessment team that UNIFIL, in conjunction with the Observer Group, had the appropriate size, capabilities, structure and deployment to undertake its tasks in a professional and efficient manner, in accordance with its mandate and regional conditions.

The Secretary-General observed that, during a period characterized by heightened political instability in the country, southern Lebanon enjoyed relative calm. Nevertheless, the hostilities that occurred in May and the grave incident on 29 June demonstrated once more that the situation remained volatile and fragile, with the potential for conditions to deteriorate. He encouraged the parties to do their utmost to avoid all violations of the Blue Line and called upon them to abide by their obligations under the relevant Security Council resolutions, and to cooperate fully with the United Nations and UNIFIL. Since the assassination of former Prime Minister Rafik Hariri on 14 February (see p. 551), Lebanon had undergone a period of increased political uncertainty. The Secretary-General hoped that the newly formed Government of Lebanon would seize the opportunities presented by the changed political situation and make strong efforts to return its full and effective authority throughout the south, including the deployment of Lebanese armed forces, and to do its utmost to prevent attacks from Lebanon across the Blue Line. He agreed with the DPKO assessment that the current level of the force was required to maintain the critical positions to monitor the Blue Line and its approaches and to protect UNIFIL's personnel and assets and the Observer Group Lebanon. The Secretary-General therefore recommended that UNIFIL's mandate be extended until 31 January 2006, with no changes to the strength and composition of the Force.

Communication. On 11 July [S/2005/444], Lebanon requested the extension of UNIFIL's mandate for a further six months, through 31 January 2006.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July)

On 29 July [meeting 5241], the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 1614(2005). The draft [S/2005/491] was submitted by France, Greece, the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Security Council,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on Lebanon, including resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978 and 1583(2005) of 28 January 2005, as well as the statements by its President on the situation in Lebanon, in particular the statement of 18 June 2000,

Recalling also the letter dated 18 May 2001 from its President to the Secretary-General,

Recalling further the conclusion of the Secretary-General that, as of 16 June 2000, Israel had withdrawn its forces from Lebanon in accordance with resolution 425(1978) and met the requirements defined in the report of the Secretary-General of 22 May 2000, as well as the conclusion of the Secretary-General that the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon had essentially completed two of the three parts of its mandate, focusing now on the remaining task of restoring international peace and security,

Reaffirming that the Security Council has recognized the Blue Line as valid for the purpose of confirming the withdrawal of Israel pursuant to resolution 425 (1978) and that the Blue Line must be respected in its entirety,

Gravely concerned at the persistence of tension and violence along the Blue Line, in particular the hostilities that took place in May 2005 and the grave incident of 29 June 2005, which demonstrated once more that the situation remains volatile and fragile, as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2005,

Emphasizing once again the interim nature of the Force,

Recalling its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

Recalling also its resolution 1325(2000) of 31 October 2000,

Recalling further the relevant principles contained in the Convention on the Safety of United Nations and Associated Personnel of 9 December 1994,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon to extend the mandate of the Force for a new period of six months presented in the letter dated 11 July 2005 from the Chargé d'affaires a.i. of the Permanent Mission of Lebanon to the United Nations addressed to the Secretary-General,

Taking note of the opinion of the Secretary-General that the situation does not support a change in the mandate of the Force or another reconfiguration of the Force at this stage, and his recommendation that the mandate be extended with no changes to the strength and composition of the Force,

1. Endorses the report of the Secretary-General of 21 July 2005 on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon;

2. Decides to extend the present mandate until 31 January 2006;

3. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and political independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries and under the sole and exclusive authority of the Government of Lebanon;

4. Condemns all acts of violence, including the recent incidents across the Blue Line that have resulted in deaths and injuries on both sides, expresses great concern about the serious breaches and the sea, land and continuing air violations of the withdrawal line, and urges the parties to put an end to these violations, to refrain from any act or provocation that could further escalate the tension and to abide scrupulously by their obligation to respect the safety of the Force and other United Nations personnel, including by avoiding any course of action which endangers United Nations personnel;

5. Reiterates its call upon the parties to continue to fulfil the commitments they have given to respect fully the entire withdrawal line identified by the United Nations, as set out in the report of the Secretary-General of 16 June 2000, and to exercise utmost restraint;

6. Calls upon the Government of Lebanon to fully extend and exercise its sole and effective authority throughout the south, including through the deployment of sufficient numbers of Lebanese armed and security forces, to ensure a calm environment throughout the area, including along the Blue Line, and to exert control and monopoly over the use of force on its entire territory and to prevent attacks from Lebanon across the Blue Line;

7. Welcomes the intention of the Secretary-General to discuss with the Government of Lebanon the next steps in preparing for an expansion of its authority in the south;

8. Supports the continued efforts of the Force to maintain the ceasefire along the withdrawal line through mobile land and air patrols and observation from fixed positions and through close contacts with the parties to correct violations, resolve incidents and prevent their escalation, while stressing the primary responsibility of the parties in this regard;

9. Welcomes the continued contribution of the Force to operational mine clearance, encourages further assistance in mine action by the United Nations to the Government of Lebanon in support of both the continued development of its national mine action capacity and clearance of the remaining mine/unexploded ordnance threat in the south, commends donor countries for supporting those efforts through financial and in-kind contributions and encourages further international contributions, and stresses the necessity for the provision to the Government of Lebanon and the Force of any additional existing maps and minefield records;

10. Calls upon the parties to ensure that the Force is accorded full freedom of movement throughout its area of operation as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General, requests the Force to report any obstruction it may face in the discharge of its mandate, and reiterates its call upon the parties to cooperate fully with the United Nations and the Force;

11. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take appropriate preventive action, including conducting predeployment awareness training, and to take disciplinary action and other action to ensure full accountability in cases of such conduct involving their personnel;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council before the end of the present mandate as well as on the activities of the Force and the tasks presently carried out by the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization;

13. Expresses its intention to keep the mandate and structures of the Force under regular review, taking into account the prevailing situation on the ground, the activities actually performed by the Force in its area of operation, its contribution towards the remaining task of restoring international peace and security, the views of the Government of Lebanon and the implications for the Force of an increased presence of the Lebanese army in the south;

14. Looks forward to the early fulfilment of the mandate of the Force;

15. Stresses the importance of, and the need to achieve, a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, based on all its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973.

Further developments

In a report on developments during the second half of 2005 [S/2006/26], the Secretary-General said that a tense and fragile quiet generally prevailed in the UNIFIL area of operation, interrupted by a few serious clashes across the Blue Line. In the most serious incident, a heavy exchange of fire between Hizbullah and IDF across the Blue Line took place on 21 November, surpassing any activity level since Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon in May 2000. That serious breach of the ceasefire began with heavy Hizbullah mortar and rocket fire against several IDF positions close to the Blue Line. Simultaneously, a large group of Hizbullah fighters infiltrated Ghajar village and launched an assault on the Mayor's office and the IDF position inside the village, causing significant damage to civilian property. The ensuing Israeli retaliation was heavy and included aerial bombing. The exchange of fire subsequently spread all along the Blue Line and lasted for over nine hours. A number of Hizbullah positions close to the Blue Line were destroyed or heavily damaged and there was significant damage to some IDF positions and equipment. UNIFIL and the Secretary-General's senior representatives in the region were in close contact with the parties throughout the hostilities, urging them to exercise maximum restraint. Their intervention contributed to avoiding a further deterioration of the situation and prevented the incident from escalating out of control. UNIFIL eventually succeeded in brokering a ceasefire. Owing to the volatile situation in the area, UNIFIL maintained a static patrol presence along the northern side of Ghajar village. In November, there was more exchange of fire between IDF and Hizbullah, and on several occasions, unidentified armed elements fired rockets from Lebanese territory towards Israel. Recurrent Israeli air violations were a continuous source of tension, and there were almost daily violations of the line of withdrawal by Lebanese shepherds and frequent incidents of stone throwing from the Lebanese side. Control of the Blue Line and its vicinity seemed to remain for the most part with Hizbullah.

The Secretary-General noted that the rocket firing incidents in August and December carried the potential for military escalation. He also noted IDF restraint, in August, in not responding to such attacks. He was encouraged by the determination and commitment of the Lebanese authorities, in a letter transmitted to him on 28 November, to hold the perpetrators of such attacks responsible so as to avoid a recurrence of such incidents in the future.

Financing

In June, the General Assembly considered the performance report on UNIFIL's budget from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/626]. Total expenditure for the period amounted to $89,896,000, compared with a total apportionment of $90,000,000, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $104,000.

The Assembly also had before it the proposed UNIFIL budget for 1 July 2005 to 20 June 2006 [A/59/654], in the amount of $94,277,700, and the related comments and recommendations of the ACABQ [A/59/736/Add.3].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (June)

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee [A/59/838], adopted resolution 59/307 by recorded vote (126-2-1) [agenda item 135 (b)].

Financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1583(2005) of 28 January 2005,

Recalling also its resolution S-8/2 of 21 April 1978 on the financing of the Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 58/307 of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming its resolutions 51/233 of 13 June 1997, 52/237 of 26 June 1998, 53/227 of 8 June 1999, 54/267 of 15 June 2000, 55/180 A of 19 December 2000, 55/180 B of 14 June 2001, 56/214 A of 21 December 2001, 56/214 B of 27 June 2002, 57/325 of 18 June 2003 and 58/307 of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming also the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Noting with appreciation that voluntary contributions have been made to the Force,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 60.9 million United States dollars, representing some 2 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only seventy-three Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

3. Expresses deep concern that Israel did not comply with General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A, 56/214 B, 57/325 and 58/307;

4. Stresses once again that Israel should strictly abide by General Assembly resolutions 51/233, 52/237, 53/227, 54/267, 55/180 A, 55/180 B, 56/214 A, 56/214 B, 57/325 and 58/307;

5. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

6. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

7. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

8. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

9. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

10. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

13. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to ensure the full implementation of paragraph 8 of its resolution 51/233, paragraph 5 of its resolution 52/237, paragraph 11 of its resolution 53/227, paragraph 14 of its resolution 54/267, paragraph 14 of its resolution 55/180 A, paragraph 15 of its resolution 55/180 B, paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 A, paragraph 13 of its resolution 56/214 B, paragraph 14 of its resolution 57/325 and paragraph 13 of its resolution 58/307, stresses once again that Israel shall pay the amount of 1,117,005 dollars resulting from the incident at Qana on 18 April 1996, and requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

14. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

15. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon the amount of 99,228,300 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 94,252,900 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 4,068,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 907,000 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

16. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 8,269,025 dollars for the period from 1 to 31 July 2005, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003;

17. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 16 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 447,008 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 392,975 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 47,925 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 6,108 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

18. Decides to apportion among Member States the amount of 90,959,275 dollars for the period from 1 August 2005 to 30 June 2006 at a monthly rate of 8,269,025 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

19. Decides also that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X), there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 18 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 4,917,092 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 4,322,725 dollars approved for the Force, the prorated share of 527,175 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 67,192 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

20. Decides further that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraphs 16 and 18 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 8,463,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in its resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B;

21. Decides that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 8,463,000 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 20 above;

22. Decides also that the increase of 541,200 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 8,463,000 dollars referred to in paragraphs 20 and 21 above;

23. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

24. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force;

25. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

26. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 59/307:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Estonia, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Monaco, Morocco, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Rwanda, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Tonga.

The Assembly adopted the fourth preambular paragraph and operative paragraphs 3, 4 and 13 by a single recorded vote of 77 to 2, with 47 abstentions. The Committee adopted those paragraphs by a recorded vote of 79 to 3, with 50 abstentions.

Syrian Arab Republic

In 2005, the General Assembly again called for Israel's withdrawal from the Golan Heights in the Syrian Arab Republic, which it had occupied since 1967. The area was effectively annexed by Israel when it extended its laws, jurisdiction and administration to the territory towards the end of 1981 [YUN 1981, p. 309].

The United Nations International Independent Investigation Commission (UNIIIC), established following the 14 February assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri (see p. 551), found evidence to suggest Syrian involvement in the incident. UNIIIC concluded that the Syrian authorities had cooperated in form but not in substance with its investigation, and several Syrian officials had tried to mislead UNIIIC by giving false or inaccurate information.

It determined that Syria's continued lack of cooperation in the inquiry would constitute a serious violation of its obligations under relevant resolutions, including 1373(2001), 1566(2004) and 1595(2005). Pursuant to Security Council resolution 1559 (2004), by 26 April, Syria had withdrawn its armed forces and intelligence apparatus from Lebanon (see p. 561). The withdrawal was verified by a UN technical military team. Israeli policies and measures affecting the human rights of the population in the Golan Heights and other occupied territories were monitored by the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli Practices) and were the subject of resolutions adopted by the Commission on Human Rights (see PART TWO, Chapter III) and the Assembly.

Communications. The Syrian Arab Republic, on 19 January [A/59/677-S/2005/39], responded to Israeli allegations that its Government had sponsored, trained and financed terrorist groups. It called the accusations unfounded, saying that its goal was regional peace and that Israel had been the primary threat to that peace.

On 7 March [A/59/726-S/2005/143], Syria responded to accusations made by Israel to the effect that the Syrian Government supported Islamic Jihad, which Israel held responsible for a 25 February Tel Aviv suicide bombing [A/59/717-S/2005/130] (see p. 513). Syria said that it condemned the bombing, that its competent authorities had denied any Syrian connection to the incident, and that the Israeli Government had a policy of making false accusations.

On 15 April [A/59/781-S/2005/250], Israel held Syria responsible for an incident in which a gunman wearing a shirt with the Palestinian flag crossed the Israeli-Syrian border, infiltrated an Israel Defence Forces (IDF) outpost, and opened fire. It said that Syria was morally and legally obligated to prevent similar incidents in future.

Syria responded on 25 April [A/59/792-S/2005/271], stating that the infiltration referred to by Israel was an isolated incident.

In identical letters of 30 September addressed to the Secretary-General and the Security Council President [A/60/409-S/2005-627], Syria objected to statements made by members of the Israeli administration regarding its intentions to continue settlement operations in the Syrian Golan, as well as statements to the effect that Israel would not return the Golan. Syria asserted that the occupied Golan was Syrian territory that had to be relinquished and that Israel was required under international resolutions to withdraw to the line of 4 June 1967.

The Supreme Council of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), in the Abu Dhabi Declaration adopted at its twenty-sixth session (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, 18-19 December) [A/60/680-S/2006/108], stressed the need for an Israeli withdrawal from the occupied Syrian Arab Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 and from the Shab'a farmlands in southern Lebanon. It condemned the assassination of former Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and other leaders and stressed the desire of GCC States to support political, security and economic stability for the Lebanese people. The Council expressed its satisfaction with the Syrian Arab Republic's receptiveness to Security Council resolution 1644 (2005) (see p. 558) regarding UNIIIC, emphasizing the concern of GCC States for the sovereignty, independence, unity and security of both Syria and Lebanon.

Committee on Israeli Practices. In its annual report [A/60/380], the Committee on Israeli Practices stated that it had visited Damascus, Syria, and Quneitra province, bordering the occupied area, where it met with Syrian authorities and received information from witnesses with personal knowledge of the human rights situation in the occupied Syrian Golan. Syrian Government officials emphasized that the situation continued to deteriorate and that Israel was still pursuing its policy of settlement expansion and land expropriation. New settlements were being planned on the sites of Arab villages destroyed by the occupation forces, and 21 of the 44 existing Israeli settlements were to be expanded. Additionally, 300 Jewish families would be encouraged to settle in the occupied Golan, besides the 700 families already established there during the previous four years. The Syrian population of the occupied Golan was still under threat from landmines, laid close to villages and fields, and in the vicinity of military camps. Israeli authorities continued to bury their nuclear waste about 100 meters from the summit of Jabal al-Sheikh, close to the Syrian border, presenting the threat of catastrophic ecological consequences. Another concern voiced by the Governor of Quneitra was the installation of large air fans on the western side of the Jabal al-Sheikh summit, which in case of leaks, would blow nuclear waste radiation into Syria. The problem of access to education, health care and employment persisted. Schools were overcrowded and in poor condition, and there was a shortage of health centres. Syrian workers in the occupied Golan continuously faced harassment, lack of employment opportunities, dismissal, discrimination during recruitment, low wages and high taxes. Most of them were employed in temporary jobs, unable to work in public sector institutions, where the jobs were reserved for Jewish settlers. They had no trade unions that could represent them and defend their rights.

Reports of Secretary-General (August). In an August report [A/60/258], the Secretary-General transmitted replies from four Member States, in response to his request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement General Assembly resolution 59/33 [YUN 2004, p. 516], which dealt with Israeli policies in the Syrian territory since 1967, and resolution 59/32 [ibid., p. 473] on the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem (see p. 523).

On 24 August [A/60/298], the Secretary-General reported that no reply had been received from Israel to his August request for information on steps taken or envisaged to implement Assembly resolution 59/125 [YUN 2004, p. 516], which called on Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the Syrian Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

On 1 December [meeting 60], the General Assembly adopted resolution 60/40 [draft: A/60/L.32 & Add.1] by recorded vote (106-6-62) [agenda item 14].

The Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "The situation in the Middle East",

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Reaffirming the fundamental principle of the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming once more the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Deeply concerned that Israel has not withdrawn from the Syrian Golan, which has been under occupation since 1967, contrary to the relevant Security Council and General Assembly resolutions,

Stressing the illegality of the Israeli settlement construction and other activities in the occupied Syrian Golan since 1967,

Noting with satisfaction the convening in Madrid on 30 October 1991 of the Peace Conference on the Middle East, on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967, 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 and 425(1978) of 19 March 1978 and the formula of land for peace,

Expressing grave concern over the halt in the peace process on the Syrian track, and expressing the hope that peace talks will soon resume from the point they had reached,

1. Declares that Israel has failed so far to comply with Security Council resolution 497(1981);

2. Also declares that the Israeli decision of 14 December 1981 to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan is null and void and has no validity whatsoever, as confirmed by the Security Council in its resolution 497(1981), and calls upon Israel to rescind it;

3. Reaffirms its determination that all relevant provisions of the Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 1907, and the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, continue to apply to the Syrian territory occupied by Israel since 1967, and calls upon the parties thereto to respect and ensure respect for their obligations under those instruments in all circumstances;

4. Determines once more that the continued occupation of the Syrian Golan and its de facto annexation constitute a stumbling block in the way of achieving a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the region;

5. Calls upon Israel to resume the talks on the Syrian and Lebanese tracks and to respect the commitments and undertakings reached during the previous talks;

6. Demands once more that Israel withdraw from all the occupied Syrian Golan to the line of 4 June 1967 in implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions;

7. Calls upon all the parties concerned, the cosponsors of the peace process and the entire international community to exert all the necessary efforts to ensure the resumption of the peace process and its success by implementing Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973);

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/40

Against: Canada, Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Cameroon, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Vanuatu.

On 8 December [meeting 62], the Assembly, under the agenda item on the report of the Committee on Israeli Practices and on the Fourth Committee's recommendation [A/60/477], adopted resolution 60/108 by recorded vote (156-1-15) [agenda item 31].

The occupied Syrian Golan

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Palestinian People and Other Arabs of the Occupied Territories,

Deeply concerned that the Syrian Golan, occupied since 1967, has been under continued Israeli military occupation,

Recalling Security Council resolution 497(1981) of 17 December 1981,

Recalling also its previous relevant resolutions, the most recent of which was resolution 59/125 of 10 December 2004,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General submitted in pursuance of resolution 59/125,

Recalling its previous relevant resolutions in which, inter alia, it called upon Israel to put an end to its occupation of the Arab territories,

Reaffirming once more the illegality of the decision of 14 December 1981 taken by Israel to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan, which has resulted in the effective annexation of that territory,

Reaffirming that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible under international law, including the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to the occupied Syrian Golan,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 237 (1967) of 14 June 1967,

Welcoming the convening at Madrid of the Peace Conference on the Middle East on the basis of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) of 22 November 1967 and 338(1973) of 22 October 1973 aimed at the realization of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace, and expressing grave concern about the stalling of the peace process on all tracks,

1. Calls upon Israel, the occupying Power, to comply with the relevant resolutions on the occupied Syrian Golan, in particular Security Council resolution 497(1981), in which the Council, inter alia, decided that the Israeli decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan was null and void and without international legal effect, and demanded that Israel, the occupying Power, rescind forthwith its decision;

2. Also calls upon Israel to desist from changing the physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan and in particular to desist from the establishment of settlements;

3. Determines that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken or to be taken by Israel, the occupying Power, that purport to alter the character and legal status of the occupied Syrian Golan are null and void, constitute a flagrant violation of international law and of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, and have no legal effect;

4. Calls upon Israel to desist from imposing Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on the Syrian citizens in the occupied Syrian Golan, and from its repressive measures against the population of the occupied Syrian Golan;

5. Deplores the violations by Israel of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

6. Calls once again upon Member States not to recognize any of the legislative or administrative measures and actions referred to above;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/108:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

UNDOF

The mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), established by Security Council resolution 350(1974) [YUN 1974, p. 205] to supervise the observance of the ceasefire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights and ensure the separation of their forces, was renewed twice in 2005, in June and December, each time for a six-month period.

UNDOF maintained an area of separation, which was some 75 kilometres long and varied in width between approximately 12.5 kilometres in the centre to less than 200 metres in the extreme south. The area of separation was inhabited and policed by the Syrian authorities, and no military forces other than UNDOF were permitted within it.

As at 5 December, UNDOF comprised 1,047 troops from Austria (380), Canada (185), Japan (30), Nepal (2), Poland (355) and Slovakia (95). It was assisted by 79 UNTSO military observers.

Lieutenant General Bala Nanda Sharma (Nepal) continued as Force Commander.

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on UNDOF activities between 8 December 2004 and 10 June 2005 [S/2005/379] and between 10 June and 9 December 2005 [S/2005/767]. Both reports noted that the UNDOF area of operation remained calm, except in the Shab'a farms area. During the year, there were two incidents involving crossings of the ceasefire line. On 15 April, a male civilian crossed the line from the Syrian side and fired at an Israeli military post, and on 8 May, Israeli soldiers crossed into the area of separation and captured a Syrian civilian, who was taken to the Israeli side for interrogation and subsequently released.

UNDOF continued in 2005 to supervise the area of separation between Israeli and Syrian troops in the Golan Heights, ensuring by means of fixed positions and patrols that no military forces of either party were deployed there. The Force, accompanied by liaison officers from the parties concerned, carried out fortnightly inspections of equipment and force levels in the area of limitation. As in the past, both sides denied inspection teams access to some of their positions and imposed restrictions on the Force's freedom of movement. Mines, especially in the area of separation, continued to pose a threat to UNDOF personnel and local inhabitants, and the Force carried out operational mine clearance, supporting the United Nations Children's Fund in mine-awareness activities. The Force assisted the International Committee of the Red Cross with the passage of persons through the area of separation, and provided medical treatment to the local population upon request.

The Secretary-General observed that the situation in the Middle East continued to be very tense and was likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the problem could be reached. He hoped that determined efforts would be made by all concerned to tackle the problem in all its aspects, with a view to arriving at a just and durable peace settlement, as called for by Council resolution 338(1973) [YUN 1973, p. 213]. Stating that he considered the Force's continued presence in the area to be essential, the Secretary-General, with the agreement of both Israel and Syria, recommended, in June, that UNDOF's mandate be extended until 31 December 2005 and, in December, until 30 June 2006.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

On 17 June [meeting 5205], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1605(2005). The draft [S/2005/383] was prepared in consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 10 June 2005 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take preventive and disciplinary action to ensure that such acts are properly investigated and punished in cases involving their personnel;

3. Decides to renew the mandate of the Force for a period of six months, that is, until 31 December 2005;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

On 21 December [meeting 5339], the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1648(2005). The draft [S/2005/801] was prepared during consultations among Council members.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 7 December 2005 on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and reaffirming its resolution 1308(2000) of 17 July 2000,

1. Calls upon the parties concerned to implement immediately its resolution 338(1973) of 22 October 1973;

2. Welcomes the efforts being undertaken by the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force to implement the Secretary-General's zero-tolerance policy on sexual exploitation and abuse and to ensure full compliance of its personnel with the United Nations code of conduct, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take all necessary action in this regard and to keep the Security Council informed, and urges troop-contributing countries to take preventive and disciplinary action to ensure that such acts are properly investigated and punished in cases involving their personnel;

3. Decides to renew the mandate of the Force for a period of six months, that is, until 30 June 2006;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

After the adoption of each resolution, the President, following consultations among Council members, made identical statements S/PRST/2005/24 [meeting 5205] on 17 June and S/PRST/

2005/65 [meeting 5339] on 21 December, on behalf of the Council:

> "In connection with the resolution just adopted on the renewal of the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, I have been authorized to make the following complementary statement on behalf of the Security Council:
> 'As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states in paragraph 12: "... the situation in the Middle East is very tense and is likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached." That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council.'"

Financing

The General Assembly had before it the performance report on UNDOF's budget for 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004 [A/59/625]. Expenditures totalled $39,743,800 against an apportionment of $40,009,200, resulting in an unencumbered balance of $265,400. It also had before it the UNDOF budget for 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006 [A/59/653 & Corr. 1, 2], totalling $41,581,200 and ACABQ's comments and recommendations thereon [A/59/736/Add.4].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (June)

On 22 June [meeting 104], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee [A/59/837], adopted resolution 59/306 without vote [agenda item 135 (a)].

Financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force

The General Assembly,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the related reports of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling Security Council resolution 350(1974) of 31 May 1974 regarding the establishment of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and the subsequent resolutions by which the Council extended the mandate of the Force, the latest of which was resolution 1578(2004) of 15 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 3211 B(XXIX) of 29 November 1974 on the financing of the United Nations Emergency Force and of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and its subsequent resolutions thereon, the latest of which was resolution 58/306 of 18 June 2004,

Reaffirming the general principles underlying the financing of United Nations peacekeeping operations, as stated in General Assembly resolutions 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973 and 55/235 of 23 December 2000,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to entrust the Head of Mission with the task of formulating future budget proposals in full accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 59/296 of 22 June 2005, as well as other relevant resolutions;

2. Takes note of the status of contributions to the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force as at 15 April 2005, including the contributions outstanding in the amount of 16.2 million United States dollars, representing some 1 per cent of the total assessed contributions, notes with concern that only forty-nine Member States have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States, in particular those in arrears, to ensure the payment of their outstanding assessed contributions;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States which have paid their assessed contributions in full, and urges all other Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Force in full;

4. Expresses concern at the financial situation with regard to peacekeeping activities, in particular as regards the reimbursements to troop contributors that bear additional burdens owing to overdue payments by Member States of their assessments;

5. Also expresses concern at the delay experienced by the Secretary-General in deploying and providing adequate resources to some recent peacekeeping missions, in particular those in Africa;

6. Emphasizes that all future and existing peacekeeping missions shall be given equal and non-discriminatory treatment in respect of financial and administrative arrangements;

7. Also emphasizes that all peacekeeping missions shall be provided with adequate resources for the effective and efficient discharge of their respective mandates;

8. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to make the fullest possible use of facilities and equipment at the United Nations Logistics Base at Brindisi, Italy, in order to minimize the costs of procurement for the Force;

9. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained in the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure their full implementation;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the full implementation of the relevant provisions of its resolution 59/296;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the Force is administered with a maximum of efficiency and economy;

12. Further requests the Secretary-General, in order to reduce the cost of employing General Service staff, to continue efforts to recruit local staff for the Force against General Service posts, commensurate with the requirements of the Force;

Financial performance report for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004

13. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the financial performance of the Force for the period from 1 July 2003 to 30 June 2004;

Budget estimates for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006

14. Decides to appropriate to the Special Account for the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force the amount of 43,706,100 dollars for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, inclusive of 41,521,400 dollars for the maintenance of the Force, 1,786,400 dollars for the support account for peacekeeping operations and 398,300 dollars for the United Nations Logistics Base;

Financing of the appropriation

15. Decides also to apportion among Member States the amount of 43,706,100 dollars at a monthly rate of 3,642,175 dollars, in accordance with the levels updated in General Assembly resolution 58/256 of 23 December 2003, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2005 and 2006, as set out in its resolution 58/1 B of 23 December 2003, subject to a decision of the Security Council to extend the mandate of the Force;

16. Decides further that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of 1,427,100 dollars, comprising the estimated staff assessment income of 1,142,400 dollars approved for the Force for the period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006, the prorated share of 252,500 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the support account and the prorated share of 32,200 dollars of the estimated staff assessment income approved for the United Nations Logistics Base;

17. Decides that, for Member States that have fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their apportionment, as provided for in paragraph 15 above, their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,593,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the levels updated in its resolution 58/256, and taking into account the scale of assessments for 2004, as set out in its resolutions 58/1 B;

18. Decides also that, for Member States that have not fulfilled their financial obligations to the Force, there shall be set off against their outstanding obligations their respective share of the unencumbered balance and other income in the amount of 1,593,400 dollars in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004, in accordance with the scheme set out in paragraph 17 above;

19. Decides further that the increase of 105,100 dollars in the estimated staff assessment income in respect of the financial period ended 30 June 2004 shall be added to the credits from the amount of 1,593,400 dollars referred to in paragraphs 17 and 18 above;

20. Emphasizes that no peacekeeping mission shall be financed by borrowing funds from other active peacekeeping missions;

21. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take additional measures to ensure the safety and security of all personnel under the auspices of the United Nations participating in the Force, bearing in mind paragraphs 5 and 6 of Security Council resolution 1502(2003) of 26 August 2003;

22. Invites voluntary contributions to the Force in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure and practices established by the General Assembly;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixtieth session, under the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Middle East", the sub-item entitled "United Nations Disengagement Observer Force".

Chapter VII

Disarmament

In 2005, the United Nations continued efforts to advance the cause of disarmament, especially in combating the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and conventional armaments. However, those opportunities were undermined by deepening differences among Member States on a number of security issues of global concern, resulting in, according to the Secretary-General, a crisis of relevance for the multilateral disarmament negotiating framework. Those differences, which mostly arose over procedural and organizational questions, prevented the Conference on Disarmament and the Disarmament Commission from undertaking any substantive work for the seventh and fourth consecutive years, respectively. For the same reason, the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), which took place in May, ended without a consensus outcome on any substantive issue on its agenda and the High-Level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly (2005 World Summit), held in September, excluded from its Outcome Document any substantive pronouncement on disarmament and non-proliferation.

International anxiety arose over particular situations of concern, especially the nuclear programmes of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, which announced early in the year that it had manufactured nuclear weapons, and of Iran, which decided to resume uranium conversion it had voluntarily suspended previously. Against that background, the Secretary-General called for measures to revitalize NPT as the cornerstone of the global non-proliferation regime, while the Assembly called on States to comply with their nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation commitments and to avoid action that might be detrimental to either cause.

In continuing efforts to address perceived threats to global peace and stability stemming from the potential proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, the Secretary-General outlined a strategy to prevent terrorists from gaining access to those weapons, while the Security Council emphasized the need for the effective implementation of the sanctions imposed against such terrorist organizations as Al-Qaida and the Taliban. To safeguard the operation of nuclear installations, the International Atomic Energy Agency convened a conference of the States parties to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Materials, which adopted amendments extending the Convention's scope to cover nuclear facilities. In November, the tenth session of the States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (Chemical Weapons Convention) decided that 29 April—the date in 1997 of the Convention's entry into force—would be observed yearly as the day of remembrance for chemical warfare victims.

There were also positive developments regarding the movement to make whole geographic regions nuclear-weapon-free zones, following the finalization of the draft text on a Central Asian nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty, negotiated over seven years. The first Conference of States parties and signatories to the four existing treaties establishing such zones in Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, South-East Asia and the South Pacific took place in Mexico City and considered cooperative ways of strengthening those zones, thereby raising the momentum for the idea of a nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas.

In the field of conventional disarmament, Member States maintained focus in dealing with security problems relating to the spread of small arms and light weapons at national and regional levels and within the framework of the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects. The most auspicious development in that regard was the Assembly's adoption of a politically binding international instrument to enable States to identify and trace those weapons effectively. It also established a group of governmental experts to consider further steps to enhance international cooperation in tackling illicit brokering in those weapons. In other action, the Assembly continued to promote the relationship between disarmament and development, encouraging the international community to accord attention to the contribution that disarmament could make towards the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

On the bilateral level, the United States and the Russian Federation continued to implement their 2002 Strategic Offensive Reduction Treaty (Moscow Treaty), under which they had agreed to cut the level of their deployed strategic nuclear warheads to between 3,000 and 3,500 by 31 December 2012.

UN role in disarmament

UN machinery

In 2005, as in previous years, disarmament issues before the United Nations were considered mainly through the Security Council, the General Assembly and its First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee, the Disarmament Commission (a deliberative body) and the Conference on Disarmament (a multilateral negotiating forum, which met in Geneva). In addition, the Organization increasingly engaged civil society organizations concerned with disarmament issues.

The UN Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) continued to support the work of Member States and treaty bodies, to service the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters and to administer the UN Disarmament Fellowship Programme.

Fourth special session devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly had decided, by resolution 51/45 C [YUN 1996, p. 447], to convene the fourth special session of the Assembly devoted to disarmament in 1999, subject to the emergence of consensus on its agenda and objectives, which had not been achieved. To facilitate agreement on the issue, the Assembly, by resolution 57/61, established an open-ended working group in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 487] to consider a basis for consensus, but its efforts were to no avail. By resolution 59/71 [YUN 2004, p. 522], the Assembly re-established the group and mandated it to hold an organizational session in order to set the dates for its substantive session in 2006.

On 8 December, the Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first (2006) session the item entitled "Convening of the fourth special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament" (decision 60/518).

Disarmament Commission

In 2005, the Disarmament Commission, composed of all UN Member States, again did not hold any substantive meetings as no agreement could be reached on an agenda for discussing two preliminary items pertaining to nuclear and conventional weapons.

The Commission held five informal meetings (New York, June-July) [A/60/42] and a number of organizational meetings in July, November and December, to discuss possible topics for inclusion in its provisional agenda, based on the Chairman's proposals. On 18 and 19 July, the Commission agreed, ad referendum, to the inclusion of two items: recommendations for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects, in particular for achieving the objective of nuclear disarmament; and practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons. On 20 July, the Commission further agreed, provisionally, to include in its report the issue of measures for improving the effectiveness of the Commission's methods of work, for consideration during its 2006 substantive session. However, agreement could not be reached on the proposed agenda items, following a 22 July motion by one delegation for an oral amendment to the item on nuclear disarmament. Consequently, the Commission decided, on 26 July, to close its 2005 organizational session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/465], adopted resolution 60/91 without vote [agenda item 99 (d)].

Report of the Disarmament Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Recalling its resolutions 47/54 A of 9 December 1992, 47/54 G of 8 April 1993, 48/77 A of 16 December 1993, 49/77 A of 15 December 1994, 50/72 D of 12 December 1995, 51/47 B of 10 December 1996, 52/40 B of 9 December 1997, 53/79 A of 4 December 1998, 54/56 A of 1 December 1999, 55/35 C of 20 November 2000, 56/26 A of 29 November 2001, 57/95 of 22 November 2002, 58/67 of 8 December 2003 and 59/105 of 3 December 2004,

Considering the role that the Disarmament Commission has been called upon to play and the contribution that it should make in examining and submitting recommendations on various problems in the field of disarmament and in the promotion of the implementation of the relevant decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session,

Bearing in mind its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998,

1. Takes note of the report of the Disarmament Commission;

2. Reaffirms the mandate of the Disarmament Commission as the specialized, deliberative body within the United Nations multilateral disarmament machinery that allows for in-depth deliberations on specific disarmament issues, leading to the submission of concrete recommendations on those issues;

3. Reaffirms also the importance of further enhancing the dialogue and cooperation among the First Committee of the General Assembly, the Disarmament Commission and the Conference on Disarmament;

4. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its work in accordance with its mandate, as set forth in paragraph 118 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and with paragraph 3 of Assembly resolution 37/78 H of 9 December 1982, and to that end to make every effort to achieve specific recommendations on the items on its agenda, taking into account the adopted "Ways and means to enhance the functioning of the Disarmament Commission";

5. Welcomes the efforts made by the Disarmament Commission during its organizational meeting in July 2005 towards achieving its objectives, and recommends that the Commission intensify consultations on those efforts with a view to reaching definitive agreements before the start of its substantive session in 2006;

6. Requests the Disarmament Commission to meet for a period not exceeding three weeks during 2006, from 10 to 28 April, and to submit a substantive report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Disarmament Commission the annual report of the Conference on Disarmament, together with all the official records of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly relating to disarmament matters, and to render all assistance that the Commission may require for implementing the present resolution;

8. Also requests the Secretary-General to ensure full provision to the Disarmament Commission and its subsidiary bodies of interpretation and translation facilities in the official languages and to assign, as a matter of priority, all the necessary resources and services, including verbatim records, to that end;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Disarmament Commission".

Conference on Disarmament

The Conference on Disarmament, the multilateral negotiating body, held a three-part session in Geneva (24 January–1 April, 30 May–15 July and 8 August–23 September) [A/60/27].

The Conference, in 29 formal and 6 informal plenary meetings, continued to consider the cessation of the nuclear arms race and nuclear disarmament; prevention of nuclear war; prevention of an arms race in outer space; effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons; new types of weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) and new systems of delivery of such weapons (see p. 600); radiological weapons; a comprehensive programme of disarmament; and transparency in armaments.

Before adopting the agenda, the Conference discussed a proposal by France for a new item entitled "New and additional issues". While those favouring the idea argued that the traditional agenda of the Conference did not fully reflect the current threats and challenges to non-proliferation and disarmament, others felt that the meaning of the new item was not clear. The Conference reached an understanding, enabling it to deal with any new issue within the existing agenda, including terrorism and WMDs, as well as strengthening compliance with arms control and disarmament agreements, provided that consensus existed.

To overcome the persisting impasse among delegates over a programme of work for the Conference, successive Presidents conducted intensive consultations, in the course of which a number of informal proposals were put forward. Despite those efforts, no agreement could be reached, as delegates maintained their previously pronounced positions. The Non-Aligned Movement, in particular, continued to oppose any marginalization of the issue of negative security assurances and renewed support for the 2003 cross-group proposal on the work programme presented by five former Presidents ("A-5 proposal") [YUN 2003, p. 531], which was also endorsed by a number of other States, including China and the Russian Federation. Western States, on the other hand, were more inclined towards breaking existing linkages between agenda items and establishing subsidiary bodies on the basis of their own merits.

During the second part of the session, the President of the Conference (Norway) organized a series of plenary meetings on the four core topics on the agenda (nuclear disarmament, the prohibition of the production of fissile material for weapon purposes, the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and negative security assurances) and on other issues relevant to the international security environment. Views were exchanged on such issues as the functioning of the disarmament machinery and the way ahead in multilateral disarmament and non-proliferation, in the light of the failure of the 2005 Review Conference (see p. 597) on the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) [YUN 1968, p. 17]. Although the initiative was supported by some delegations, others expressed doubts about the utility of those discussions, which came to a halt with the end of the Norwegian Presidency of the Conference. Regarding the adoption of a programme of work, the last President of the 2005 session (Peru) submitted a new proposal merging earlier ideas. Unfortunately, the Conference took no decision on the proposal and concluded its 2005 session without resolving the issue. Consequently, for the seventh consecutive year, the Conference did not establish any mechanism to address any of its agenda items.

Concerned over the impasse, Foreign Ministers from nine countries (Canada, Finland, Kazakhstan, the Netherlands, Peru, Poland, Slovakia, Sweden, Ukraine) and one Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs (Japan) attending a high-level segment of the Conference, provided ideas on how to rebuild its political role in arms control and disarmament. While noting that the responsibility for the impasse should not be attributed to any single State or group, they emphasized the need to develop new political consensus that would make it possible to go beyond national security interests. The Conference decided to hold its 2006 session between January and September and asked its current and incoming Presidents to conduct consultations during the intersessional period and make recommendations, taking into account all relevant proposals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/465], adopted resolution 60/90 without vote [agenda item 99 (c)].

Report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament, as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community, has the primary role in substantive negotiations on priority questions of disarmament,

Recognizing the need to conduct multilateral negotiations with the aim of reaching agreement on concrete issues,

Recalling, in this respect, that the Conference has a number of urgent and important issues for negotiation,

Taking note of active discussions held on the programme of work during the 2005 session of the Conference, as duly reflected in the report and the records of the plenary meetings,

Taking note also of significant contributions made during the 2005 session to promote substantive discussions on issues on the agenda, as well as of discussions held on other issues that could also be relevant to the current international security environment,

Stressing the urgent need for the Conference to commence its substantive work at the beginning of its 2006 session,

Recognizing the addresses of Ministers for Foreign Affairs as expressions of support for the endeavours of the Conference and its role as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum,

1. Reaffirms the role of the Conference on Disarmament as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum of the international community;

2. Calls upon the Conference to intensify consultations and explore possibilities with a view to reaching an agreement on a programme of work;

3. Takes note of the strong collective interest of the Conference in commencing substantive work as soon as possible during its 2006 session;

4. Welcomes the decision of the Conference to request its current President and the incoming President to conduct consultations during the intersessional period and, if possible, to make recommendations, taking into account all relevant proposals, including those submitted as the documents of the Conference, views presented and discussions held, and to endeavour to keep the membership of the Conference informed, as appropriate, of their consultations, as expressed in paragraph 38 of its report;

5. Requests all States members of the Conference to cooperate with the current President and successive Presidents in their efforts to guide the Conference to the early commencement of substantive work in its 2006 session;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the provision to the Conference of adequate administrative, substantive and conference support services;

7. Requests the Conference to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Conference on Disarmament".

Multilateral disarmament agreements

As at 31 December 2005, the following number of States had become parties to the multilateral agreements listed below (in chronological order, with the years in which they were initially signed or opened for signature).

(Geneva) Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (1925): 133 parties

The Antarctic Treaty (1959): 45 parties

Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water (1963): 124 parties

Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies (1967) [YUN 1966, p. 41, GA res. 2222(XXI), annex]: 98 parties

Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (1967): 39 parties

Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (1968) [YUN 1968, p. 17, GA res. 2373(XXII), annex]: 189 parties

Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Seabed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof (1971) [YUN 1970, p. 18, GA res. 2660(XXV), annex]: 92 parties

Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their

Destruction (1972) [YUN 1971, p. 19, GA res. 2826 (XXVI), annex]: 154 parties
Convention on the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques (1977) [YUN 1976, p. 45, GA res. 31/72, annex]: 72 parties
Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies (1979) [YUN 1979, p. 111, GA res. 34/68, annex]: 12 parties
Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects (1981): 100 parties
South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Rarotonga) (1985): 17 parties
Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE Treaty) (1990): 30 parties
Treaty on Open Skies (1992): 33 parties
Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (1993): 175 parties
Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty) (1995): 10 parties
African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Pelindaba Treaty) (1996): 23 parties Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (1996): 126 parties
Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials (1997): 26 parties
Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-Personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (Mine-Ban Convention, formerly known as Ottawa Convention) (1997): 148 parties
Inter-American Convention on Transparency in Conventional Weapons Acquisitions (1999): 11 parties
Agreement on Adaptation of the CFE Treaty (1999): 4 parties

Nuclear disarmament

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolutions 59/77 [YUN 2004, p. 532] and 59/79 [ibid., p. 534], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/122] assessing efforts to address nuclear disarmament issues. He observed that dangers resulting from the acquisition, possession and possible use of WMDs, including nuclear weapons and radiological dispersal devices, or "dirty bombs", were challenges the international community continued to confront. To effectively reduce related threats, efforts were needed at the unilateral, bilateral and multilateral levels, and nuclear-weapon States bore the responsibility to reduce existing arsenals. The Secretary-General acknowledged that some progress had been made in that regard, as the implementation of the 2002 Moscow Treaty [YUN 2002, p. 493], signed by the Russian Federation and the United States, had helped strengthen international peace and security. However, applying the principles of transparency, irreversibility and verification to the Treaty would greatly enhance the international nuclear non-proliferation regime. Another positive development was a five-year research programme undertaken by the United Kingdom to study techniques and technologies with the potential for use in verifying future arrangements for the control, reduction and elimination of nuclear weapon stockpiles. The summary findings of the study were outlined in a working paper presented to the 2005 NPT Review Conference (see p. 597). Also important were continuing international efforts to achieve universal adherence to, and effective implementation of existing arms control and disarmament agreements. Unfortunately, owing to persisting divergence of views, the NPT Review Conference concluded without agreement on substantive issues, thereby missing the opportunity to address important threats and challenges to the international non-proliferation regime. As the cornerstone of that regime, action was needed on many fronts to revitalize the NPT, including strengthening confidence in the Treaty's integrity; achieving further irreversible cuts in nuclear arsenals; ensuring that compliance measures were more effective; taking action to reduce the threat of proliferation to States and non-State actors; and finding durable ways to reconcile the right to peaceful uses with the imperative of non-proliferation. Reflecting on the fact that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) (see p. 593) still lacked the ratifications required for its entry into force, the Secretary-General called on States that had not yet done so to sign and ratify it as soon as possible, especially those whose ratification was needed to enable it to take effect. Regarding the impasse preventing the Conference on Disarmament from resuming substantive work, he encouraged States members of the Conference to overcome their differences and agree on a programme of work that would facilitate the resumption of negotiations without further delay. It was critical for the Conference to succeed in doing so, as the relevance of multilateral disarmament machinery had been called into question. Noting that the full implementation of the seven recommendations put forth by his Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 474] for reducing nuclear dangers required further efforts, the Secretary-General said he was continuing to support initiatives and actions taken to that effect, as requested in Assembly resolution 59/79. With regard to the proposal contained in the 2000 Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] for convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers, consultations with Member States demonstrated that international consensus for holding such a conference remained elusive.

Conference on Disarmament

In 2005, the continuing lack of consensus over a programme of work (see p. 580) prevented the Conference on Disarmament, for the seventh consecutive year, from establishing any subsidiary body to deal with nuclear disarmament, leaving the issue to be addressed during plenary meetings where delegates reaffirmed or further elaborated their respective positions. The disappointing outcome of the 2005 NPT Review Conference (see p. 597), as well as the outcome of the 2005 World Summit (see p. 47) had further entrenched the divergent views among delegations. Against that background, the Non-Aligned Movement continued to accord the highest priority to the elimination of nuclear weapons within a specified time frame; the Western group underscored the high importance attached to negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty as a contribution to nuclear disarmament; China and the Russian Federation maintained emphasis on the prevention of an arms race in outer space (PAROS); and many other delegations reasserted the link between nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation.

Fissile material

In 2005, the Conference on Disarmament made no progress on the question of negotiating a fissile material cut-off treaty (FMCT) to prohibit the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices, because disagreements over a programme of work prevented the Conference from establishing any mechanism to consider the items on its agenda. During plenary meetings, however, delegates reaffirmed their respective positions on the issue. As opposed to those who favoured negotiations on the FMCT, the Group of 21 (G-21) emphasized the priority it attached to creating an ad hoc committee to deal with nuclear disarmament instead. Delegations also addressed the issue of verification as a possible element of FMCT, with many States arguing that it should be an integral part of the negotiations, while others, notably the United States, believed that proposals for FMCT could be achieved without a verification mechanism. Positions also continued to differ on whether the proposed negotiations should cover existing stockpiles of fissile materials and on the desirability of declaring a moratorium on the production of those materials for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices before the conclusion of a treaty.

The General Assembly, in resolution 60/70 (see p. 588) urged the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work, which would include the immediate commencement of negotiations on an FMCT, to be concluded within five years.

Security assurances

The Conference on Disarmament was also unable to establish a subsidiary body to address the question of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, leaving the topic to be discussed primarily at a 7 July thematic debate that also considered other items. Many delegates made references to Security Council resolution 984(1995) [YUN 1995, p. 192] on the issue and linked the need for security assurances with the provisions of article VI of NPT relating to States parties' obligation to pursue negotiations in good faith on the cessation of the nuclear arms race and on nuclear disarmament. They also invoked the 1996 advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) [YUN 1996, p. 461], which held that the threat or use of nuclear weapons would generally be contrary to the rules of international law applicable in armed conflict. Members of the Non-Aligned Movement, concerned about the development of new types of nuclear weapons and new doctrines expounding their possible use, underlined that, pending the total elimination of nuclear weapons, there was a need to conclude a universal, unconditional and legally binding instrument on security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/461], adopted resolution 60/53 by recorded vote (120-0-59) [agenda item 95].

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to allay the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Welcoming the progress achieved in recent years in both nuclear and conventional disarmament,

Noting that, despite recent progress in the field of nuclear disarmament, further efforts are necessary towards the achievement of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Determined to abide strictly by the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations on the non-use of force or threat of force,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures and arrangements to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures and arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can contribute positively to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document,

Recalling the relevant parts of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, and of the special report of the Conference on Disarmament submitted to the Assembly at its fifteenth special session, the third special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the report of the Conference on its 1992 session,

Recalling also paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this question,

Taking note of the proposals submitted under the item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note also of the relevant decision of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference,

Taking note further of the unilateral declarations made by all the nuclear-weapon States on their policies of non-use or non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against the non-nuclear-weapon States,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 984(1995) of 11 April 1995 and the views expressed on it,

Recalling its relevant resolutions adopted in previous years, in particular resolutions 45/54 of 4 December 1990, 46/32 of 6 December 1991, 47/50 of 9 December 1992, 48/73 of 16 December 1993, 49/73 of 15 December 1994, 50/68 of 12 December 1995, 51/43 of 10 December 1996, 52/36 of 9 December 1997, 53/75 of 4 December 1998, 54/52 of 1 December 1999, 55/31 of 20 November 2000, 56/22 of 29 November 2001, 57/56 of 22 November 2002, 58/35 of 8 December 2003 and 59/64 of 3 December 2004,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach an early agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties with regard to evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to work actively towards an early agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula that could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including, in particular, those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, be explored further in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Also recommends that the Conference on Disarmament actively continue intensive negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international arrangements to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/53:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Disarmament Commission

The Disarmament Commission considered a proposal by its Chairman to include in the substantive agenda for its 2005 session an item entitled "Recommendations for nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects, in particular for achieving the objective of nuclear disarmament". However, unresolved differences among delegates regarding the agenda prevented the Commission from deliberating on any substantive issue, including those pertaining to nuclear disarmament (see p. 579).

START and other bilateral agreements and unilateral measures

In 2005, the United States and the Russian Federation continued to implement the 2002 Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty (SORT), also known as the Moscow Treaty [YUN 2002, p. 493], under which they had agreed to reduce the level of their deployed strategic nuclear warheads to between 3,000 and 3,500 by 31 December 2012. To achieve the reductions, the United States planned to reduce its operationally deployed strategic nuclear warheads to between 3,500-4,000 by 2007. It anticipated that reductions thereafter would involve decreasing the number of operationally deployed strategic nuclear warheads on ballistic missiles and at heavy bomber bases. Against that background, the United States envisioned no obstacles to its capacity to meet its commitments under SORT, and neither party had expressed concerns about the intent or ability of the other to do so. The verification of both sides' compliance was expected to be facilitated by increasing openness in their strategic relationship under SORT and by the knowledge gained from their implementation of their 1991 Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I) [YUN 1991, p. 34], scheduled to expire in 2009.

In April, the European Community and the Gulf Cooperation Council, at the fifteenth session of their Joint Council (Manama, Bahrain, 5 April), underlined the importance of compliance with and implementation of existing disarmament and non-proliferation agreements and other relevant international obligations. Both sides stressed the importance to the universalization of international instruments against the proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery through signature, accession or ratification of all relevant instruments.

At the seventh Asia-Europe Meeting (Kyoto, Japan, 6-7 May), 48 Foreign Ministers from Asian countries and the European Union (EU) emphasized the importance of reinforcing efforts in addressing disarmament and the non-proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery, and the need to promote universalisation in implementing related treaties and norms, including in the area of counter-terrorism.

The fifteenth EU-Russia Summit (Moscow, 10 May) adopted road maps for tackling mutual challenges, including strengthening cooperation on security and crisis management to address such global and regional challenges as those relating to WMD proliferation, export controls and disarmament, with a view to harmonizing positions and coordinating actions on the international stage. In order to pursue that objective, both sides outlined priority areas for enhanced cooperation on disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation issues.

In preparation for the High-Level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly (2005 World Summit) (see p. 47), Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Non-Aligned Movement, at a special meeting (Doha, Qatar, 13 June) [A/59/880], issued a declaration reaffirming the importance of achieving the total elimination of WMDs, particularly nuclear weapons. Recalling that Member States had resolved in the 2000 Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49] to strive for the elimination of those weapons and to keep all options open, they reaffirmed the need for States to fulfil their arms control and disarmament obligations, maintaining that the ultimate objective of all efforts in that regard was general and complete disarmament.

On 18 July, Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh and United States President George W. Bush, in a joint statement, resolved to establish a global partnership to provide leadership in areas of mutual concern and interest, including in the field of non-proliferation and security. They committed themselves to playing a leading role in international efforts to prevent the proliferation of WMDs, including nuclear, chemical, biological and radiological weapons, and to working together for such other nuclear non-proliferation initiatives as the conclusion of a multilateral fissile material cut-off treaty and securing nuclear materials and technology.

On 16 September in Washington, D.C., Russian President Vladimir Putin and United States President George W. Bush, at a joint press conference, expressed their understanding about the need to stop the spread of WMDs, with emphasis on ensuring that terrorists not obtain those weapons. They also identified with the common goal of preventing non-nuclear-weapon States from acquiring nuclear weapons, most notably Iran and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK). Addressing the need to improve nuclear security, they indicated that they had reached a milestone during the year in non-proliferation cooperation by completing the conversion of 10,000 Russian nuclear warheads into peaceful fuel for United States power reactors.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted four resolutions and one decision related to nuclear disarmament. The Assembly adopted resolution 60/56 by recorded vote (153-5-20) [agenda item 97 (l)].

Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: accelerating the implementation of nuclear disarmament commitments

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 58/51 of 8 December 2003 and 59/75 of 3 December 2004,

Also recalling the decisions and resolution on the Middle East of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Regretting the lack of any substantive outcome of the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as well as the inability of the General Assembly, at its 2005 World Summit, to reach agreement on matters relating to nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation,

Bearing in mind that 2005 marks the sixtieth anniversary of the dropping of atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, and that humankind should never again be exposed to such horrific devastation,

Expressing its grave concern at the danger to humanity posed by the possibility that nuclear weapons could be used,

Noting the growing concern at the lack of implementation of binding obligations and agreed steps towards nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are mutually reinforcing processes requiring urgent irreversible progress on both fronts,

Recalling the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals, leading to nuclear disarmament, in accordance with commitments made under article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Underlining the importance of the Treaty and its universality to achieving nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation,

1. Reaffirms that the outcome of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons sets out the framework for systematic and progressive efforts towards nuclear disarmament;

2. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States to accelerate the implementation of the practical steps towards nuclear disarmament that were agreed upon at the 2000 Review Conference, thereby contributing to a safer world for all;

3. Calls upon all States to comply fully with commitments made regarding nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation and not to act in any way that may be detrimental to either cause or that may lead to a new nuclear arms race;

4. Calls upon all States parties to spare no efforts to achieve the universality of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, and urges India, Israel and Pakistan, which are not yet parties to the Treaty, to accede to it as non-nuclear-weapon States promptly and without conditions;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Towards a nuclear-weapon-free world: accelerating the implementation of nuclear disarmament commitments" and to review the implementation of the present resolution at that session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/56:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Germany, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, India, Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Australia, Belarus, Bhutan, Estonia, Georgia, Greece, Hungary, Latvia, Micronesia, Pakistan, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Slovenia, Spain, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

The First Committee adopted paragraph 4 by a separate recorded vote of 148 to 3, with 9 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 158 to 2, with 11 abstentions.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/65 by recorded vote (168-2-7) [agenda item 97].

Renewed determination towards the total elimination of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling, on the sixtieth anniversary of the atomic bombings in Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, the need for all States to take further practical steps and effective measures towards the total elimination of nuclear weapons, with a view to achieving a peaceful and safe world free of nuclear weapons, and renewing the determination to do so,

Noting that the ultimate objective of the efforts of States in the disarmament process is general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

Recalling its resolution 59/76 of 3 December 2004,

Convinced that every effort should be made to avoid nuclear war and nuclear terrorism,

Reaffirming the crucial importance of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons as the cornerstone of the international nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation regime, and expressing regret over the lack of agreement on substantive issues at the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, as well as over the elimination of references to nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation in the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Recalling the decisions and the resolution of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international peace and security and the promotion of nuclear disarmament are mutually reinforcing,

Reaffirming that further advancement in nuclear disarmament will contribute to consolidating the international regime for nuclear non-proliferation and thereby ensuring international peace and security,

Expressing deep concern regarding the growing dangers posed by the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, inter alia, nuclear weapons, including that caused by proliferation networks,

Welcoming the Final Declaration of the fourth Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, convened in New York in September 2005,

1. Reaffirms the importance of all States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons complying with their obligations under all the articles of the Treaty, and stresses the importance of an effective Treaty review process;

2. Also reaffirms the importance of the universality of the Treaty, and calls upon States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it as non-nuclear-weapon States without delay and without conditions, and pending their accession to refrain from acts that would defeat the objective and purpose of the Treaty as well as to take practical steps in support of the Treaty;

3. Encourages further steps leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties to the Treaty are committed under article VI of the Treaty, including deeper reductions in all types of nuclear weapons, and emphasizes the importance of applying irreversibility and verifiability, as well as increased transparency in a way that promotes international stability and undiminished security for all, in the process of working towards the elimination of nuclear weapons;

4. Encourages the Russian Federation and the United States of America to implement fully the Treaty on Strategic Offensive Reductions, which should serve as a step for further nuclear disarmament, and to undertake nuclear arms reductions beyond those provided for by the Treaty, while welcoming the progress made by nuclear-weapon States, including the Russian Federation and the United States, on nuclear arms reductions;

5. Encourages States to continue to pursue efforts, within the framework of international cooperation, contributing to the reduction of nuclear-weapons-related materials;

6. Calls for the nuclear-weapon States to further reduce the operational status of nuclear weapons systems in ways that promote international stability and security;

7. Stresses the necessity of a diminishing role for nuclear weapons in security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination, in a way that promotes international stability and based on the principle of undiminished security for all;

8. Urges all States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty at the earliest opportunity with a view to its early entry into force, stresses the importance of maintaining existing moratoriums on nuclear-weapon test explosions pending the entry into force of the Treaty, and reaffirms the importance of the continued development of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty verification regime, including the international monitoring system, which will be required to provide assurance of compliance with the Treaty;

9. Emphasizes the importance of the immediate commencement of negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty and its early conclusion, and calls upon all nuclear-weapon States and States not parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to declare moratoriums on the production of fissile material for any nuclear weapons pending the entry into force of the Treaty;

10. Calls upon all States to redouble their efforts to prevent and curb the proliferation of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

11. Stresses the importance of further efforts for non-proliferation, including the universalization of the International Atomic Energy Agency comprehensive safeguards agreements and Model Protocol Additional to the Agreement(s) between State(s) and the International Atomic Energy Agency for the Application of Safeguards approved by the Board of Governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency on 15 May 1997, and the full implementation of Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004;

12. Encourages all States to undertake concrete activities to implement, as appropriate, the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, submitted to the General Assembly at its fifty-seventh session, and to voluntarily share information on efforts they have been undertaking to that end;

13. Encourages the constructive role played by civil society in promoting nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament.

RECORDED VOTE RESOLUTION 60/65:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: India, United States.

Abstaining: Bhutan, China, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Israel, Myanmar, Pakistan.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/70 by recorded vote (113-45-20) [agenda item 97 (m)].

Nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 49/75 E of 15 December 1994 on a step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat, and its resolutions 50/70 P of 12 December 1995, 51/45 O of 10 December 1996, 52/38 L of 9 December 1997, 53/77 X of 4 December 1998, 54/54 P of 1 December 1999, 55/33 T of 20 November 2000, 56/24 R of 29 November 2001, 57/79 of 22 November 2002, 58/56 of 8 December 2003 and 59/77 of 3 December 2004 on nuclear disarmament,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Bearing in mind that the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1972 and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction of 1993 have already established legal regimes on the complete prohibition of biological and chemical weapons, respectively, and determined to achieve a nuclear weapons convention on the prohibition of the development, testing, production, stockpiling, loan, transfer, use and threat of use of nuclear weapons and on their destruction, and to conclude such an international convention at an early date,

Recognizing that there now exist conditions for the establishment of a world free of nuclear weapons, and stressing the need to take concrete practical steps towards achieving this goal,

Bearing in mind paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, calling for the urgent negotiation of agreements for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, and for a comprehensive and phased programme with agreed time frames, wherever feasible, for the progressive and balanced reduction of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, leading to their ultimate and complete elimination at the earliest possible time,

Reaffirming the conviction of the States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that the Treaty is a cornerstone of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament and the importance of the decision on strengthening the review process for the Treaty, the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, the decision on the extension of the Treaty and the resolution on the Middle East, adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Stressing the importance of the thirteen steps for the systematic and progressive efforts to achieve the objective of nuclear disarmament leading to the total elimination of nuclear weapons, as agreed to by the States parties in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, held in New York from 24 April to 19 May 2000,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Reiterating its call for an early entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty,

Noting with appreciation the entry into force of the Treaty on the Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (START I), to which Belarus, Kazakhstan, the Russian Federation, Ukraine and the United States of America are States parties,

Also noting with appreciation the entry into force of the Treaty between the United States of America and the Russian Federation on Strategic Offensive Reductions ("the Moscow Treaty") as a significant step towards reducing their deployed strategic nuclear weapons, while calling for further irreversible deep cuts in their nuclear arsenals,

Further noting with appreciation the unilateral measures taken by the nuclear-weapon States for nuclear arms limitation, and encouraging them to take further such measures,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament, and that bilateral negotiations can never replace multilateral negotiations in this respect,

Noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, and the multilateral efforts in the Conference on Disarmament to reach agreement on such an international convention at an early date,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996, and welcoming the unanimous reaffirmation by all Judges of the Court that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Mindful of paragraph 74 and other relevant recommendations in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, as soon as possible and as the highest priority, an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament and to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Recalling paragraph 61 of the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004,

Also recalling paragraph 19 of the declaration of the special meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Non-Aligned Movement, held in Doha on 13 June 2005,

Reaffirming the specific mandate conferred by the General Assembly in its decision 52/492 of 8 September 1998 upon the Disarmament Commission to discuss the subject of nuclear disarmament as one of its main substantive agenda items,

Recalling the United Nations Millennium Declaration, in which Heads of State and Government resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, and to keep all options open for achieving this aim, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

Reaffirming that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, States should refrain from the use or the threat of use of nuclear weapons in settling their disputes in international relations,

Seized of the danger of the use of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, in terrorist acts and the urgent need for concerted international efforts to control and overcome it,

1. Recognizes that, in view of recent political developments, the time is now opportune for all the nuclear-weapon States to take effective disarmament measures with a view to achieving the elimination of these weapons;

2. Reaffirms that nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation are substantively interrelated and mutually reinforcing, that the two processes must go hand in hand and that there is a genuine need for a systematic and progressive process of nuclear disarmament;

3. Welcomes and encourages the efforts to establish new nuclear-weapon-free zones in different parts of the world on the basis of agreements or arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the regions concerned, which is an effective measure for limiting the further spread of nuclear weapons geographically and contributes to the cause of nuclear disarmament;

4. Recognizes that there is a genuine need to diminish the role of nuclear weapons in strategic doctrines and security policies to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;

5. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to stop immediately the qualitative improvement, development, production and stockpiling of nuclear warheads and their delivery systems;

6. Also urges the nuclear-weapon States, as an interim measure, to de-alert and deactivate immediately their nuclear weapons and to take other concrete measures to reduce further the operational status of their nuclear-weapon systems;

7. Reiterates its call upon the nuclear-weapon States to undertake the step-by-step reduction of the nuclear threat and to carry out effective nuclear disarmament measures with a view to achieving the total elimination of these weapons;

8. Calls upon the nuclear-weapon States, pending the achievement of the total elimination of nuclear weapons, to agree on an internationally and legally binding instrument on a joint undertaking not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, and calls upon all States to conclude an internationally and legally binding instrument on security assurances of non-use and non-threat of use of nuclear weapons against non-nuclear-weapon States;

9. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to commence plurilateral negotiations among themselves at an appropriate stage on further deep reductions of nuclear weapons as an effective measure of nuclear disarmament;

10. Underlines the importance of applying the principle of irreversibility to the process of nuclear disarmament, nuclear and other related arms control and reduction measures;

11. Underscores the importance of the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties are committed under article VI of the Treaty, and the reaffirmation by the States parties that the total elimination of nuclear weapons is the only absolute guarantee against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

12. Calls for the full and effective implementation of the thirteen steps for nuclear disarmament contained in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference;

13. Urges the nuclear-weapon States to carry out further reductions of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;

14. Calls for the immediate commencement of negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on a non-discriminatory, multilateral and internationally and effectively verifiable treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices on the basis of the report of the Special Coordinator and the mandate contained therein;

15. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to agree on a programme of work which includes the immediate commencement of negotiations on such a treaty with a view to their conclusion within five years;

16. Calls for the conclusion of an international legal instrument or instruments on adequate security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States;

17. Also calls for the early entry into force and strict observance of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

18. Expresses its regret that the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons was unable to achieve any substantive result and that the 2005 World Summit Outcome failed to make any reference to nuclear disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation;

19. Also expresses its regret that the Conference on Disarmament was unable to establish an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament at its 2005 session, as called for in resolution 59/104 of 3 December 2004;

20. Reiterates its call upon the Conference on Disarmament to establish, on a priority basis, an ad hoc committee to deal with nuclear disarmament early in 2006 and to commence negotiations on a phased programme of nuclear disarmament leading to the eventual total elimination of nuclear weapons;

21. Calls for the convening of an international conference on nuclear disarmament in all its aspects at an early date to identify and deal with concrete measures of nuclear disarmament;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

23. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Nuclear disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/70:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/79 by recorded vote (115-49-15) [agenda item 97 (o)].

Reducing nuclear danger

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Reaffirming that any use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would constitute a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

Convinced that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects would seriously enhance the danger of nuclear war,

Convinced also that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Considering that, until nuclear weapons cease to exist, it is imperative on the part of the nuclear-weapon States to adopt measures that assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering also that the hair-trigger alert of nuclear weapons carries unacceptable risks of unintentional or accidental use of nuclear weapons, which would have catastrophic consequences for all mankind,

Emphasizing the imperative need to adopt measures to avoid accidental, unauthorized or unexplained incidents arising from computer anomaly or other technical malfunctions,

Conscious that limited steps relating to detargeting have been taken by the nuclear-weapon States and that further practical, realistic and mutually reinforcing steps are necessary to contribute to the improvement in the international climate for negotiations leading to the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Mindful that the reduction of tensions brought about by a change in nuclear doctrines would positively impact on international peace and security and improve the conditions for the further reduction and the elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reiterating the highest priority accorded to nuclear disarmament in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and by the international community,

Recalling that in the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons it is stated that there exists an obligation for all States to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control,

Recalling also the call in the United Nations Millennium Declaration to seek to eliminate the dangers posed by weapons of mass destruction and the resolve to strive for the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons, including the possibility of convening an international conference to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers,

1. Calls for a review of nuclear doctrines and, in this context, immediate and urgent steps to reduce the risks of unintentional and accidental use of nuclear weapons;

2. Requests the five nuclear-weapon States to take measures towards the implementation of paragraph 1 above;

3. Calls upon Member States to take the necessary measures to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to promote nuclear disarmament, with the objective of eliminating nuclear weapons;

4. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 5 of General Assembly resolution 59/79 of 3 December 2004;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to intensify efforts and support initiatives that would contribute towards the full implementation of the seven recommendations identified in the report of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters that would significantly reduce the risk of nuclear war, and also to continue to encourage Member States to endeavour to create conditions that would allow the emergence of an international consensus to hold an international conference as proposed in the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to identify ways of eliminating nuclear dangers, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Reducing nuclear danger".

Missile defence issues

In 2005, the international community continued to address global security challenges stemming from missile defence issues, particularly the related proliferation of long-range ballistic missiles. The United States, whose plans to build a missile defence system [YUN 1999, p. 469] aroused much concern in that regard, continued to develop the system, primarily through its Missile Defense Agency. During the year, the Agency successfully completed two additional interceptor emplacements. By the end of the year, it would achieve a total of 10 Ground-Based Interceptors, with two at the United States Air Force base in Vandenberg, California and at its Army base in Fort Greely, Alaska. The Agency conducted numerous related missile tests in the course of the year and also upgraded integral radar and surveillance systems.

The fifteenth EU-Russia Summit (Moscow, 10 May) pledged to conduct dialogue on developing a legally binding arrangement for a global system of control for the non-proliferation of missiles and their related technology, taking into account the wide subscription to the non-legally binding international code of conduct against ballistic missile proliferation, also known as the Hague Code of Conduct [YUN 2002, p. 504]. The following month, the EU–United States meeting on the joint programme of work on the non-proliferation of WMDs (Washington, 20 June) pledged to increase efforts to promote adherence to the Hague Code of Conduct among other disarmament and non-proliferation arrangements. Expressing similar sentiments in a statement on non-proliferation, the Group of major industrialized countries (G-8) (Scotland, United Kingdom, 6-8 July) called on States accede to the Code, and on DPRK in particular not to contribute to missile proliferation and to maintain indefinitely its moratorium on the launching of missiles.

In June, the subscribing States to the Hague Code of Conduct, at their fourth regular meeting (Vienna, 2-3 June), discussed, among other subjects, confidence-building measures, such as pre-launch notifications and annual declarations. As part of future outreach activities, they considered the need to promote the universalization of the Code in specific regions and also agreed on the text of a draft resolution for consideration by the General Assembly at its sixtieth (2005) session. The fifth regular meeting of the subscribing States was scheduled to be held in Vienna in June 2006 to continue discussions on confidence-building measures and the universalization of the Code. At year's end, subscribing States to the Code numbered 123.

In September, the Missile Technology Control Regime (MTCR)—an informal and voluntary association of countries sharing the goals of non-proliferation of unmanned delivery systems capable of delivering WMDs—at its twentieth plenary meeting (Madrid, Spain, 12-16 September), evaluated trends in missile proliferation, particularly regarding tests and activities of concern in the Middle East and South and East Asia, among other regions. Recognizing that export controls remained an essential tool in addressing missile proliferation, the Plenary renewed its commitment to the strict implementation and enforcement of such controls, including the strengthening of existing rules to respond to technological development and the evolving security environment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/62 by recorded vote (158-1-11) [agenda item 97 (y)].

The Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation

The General Assembly,

Concerned about the increasing regional and global security challenges caused, inter alia, by the ongoing proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its role and responsibility in the field of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Emphasizing the significance of regional and international efforts to prevent and curb comprehensively the proliferation of ballistic missile systems capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction, as a contribution to international peace and security,

Welcoming the adoption of the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation on 25 November 2002 at The Hague, and convinced that the Code of Conduct will contribute to enhancing transparency and confidence among States,

Recalling its resolution 59/91 of 3 December 2004 entitled "The Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation",

Confirming its commitment to the Declaration on International Cooperation in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space for the Benefit and in the Interest of All States, Taking into Particular Account the Needs of Developing Countries, as contained in the annex to its resolution 51/122 of 13 December 1996,

Recognizing that States should not be excluded from utilizing the benefits of space for peaceful purposes, but that in reaping such benefits and in conducting related cooperation they must not contribute to the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of carrying weapons of mass destruction,

Mindful of the need to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery,

1. Notes with satisfaction that one hundred and twenty-three States have already subscribed to the Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation as a practical step against the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Invites all States that have not yet subscribed to the Code of Conduct to do so;

3. Encourages the exploration of further ways and means to deal effectively with the problem of the proliferation of ballistic missiles capable of delivering weapons of mass destruction;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "The Hague Code of Conduct against Ballistic Missile Proliferation".

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

Status

As at 31 December, 176 States had signed the 1996 Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty (CTBT) adopted by General Assembly resolution 50/245 [YUN 1996, p. 454], and 126 had ratified it. During the year, instruments of ratification were deposited by Cook Islands, Djibouti, Haiti, Madagascar, Saint Kitts and Nevis and Vanuatu. In accordance with article XIV, CTBT would enter into force 180 days after the 44 States possessing nuclear reactors, listed in annex 2 of the Treaty, had deposited their instruments of ratification. By year's end, 33 of those States had ratified the Treaty.

Reports of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/109 [YUN 2004, p. 539], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/127] containing information prepared by the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO) (see p. 594) on the efforts of ratifying States towards the Treaty's universalization and possibilities for providing assistance on ratification procedures to States requesting it.

By a 20 July note [A/60/136], the Secretary-General informed the Assembly of the availability of the report of the Commission's Executive Secretary covering its activities in 2004.

Conference on facilitating entry into force

The fourth Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of CTBT (New York, 21-23 September) [CTBT-Art.XIV/2005/6] was convened in accordance with article XIV of the Treaty, which stipulated that if the Treaty had not entered into force three years from the date it opened for signature [YUN 1996, p. 452], the depositary should convene a conference at the request of a majority of ratifying States to consider and decide by consensus measures to facilitate an early entry into force. The first such Conference took place in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 471], the second in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 482] and the third in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 547].

The Conference had before it a draft final declaration [CTBT-Art.XIV/2005/WP.1] and a document outlining the activities undertaken by signatory and ratifying States aimed at helping the Treaty take effect [CTBT-Art.XIV/2005/4]. On 23 September, the Conference adopted a Final Declaration and measures to promote the Treaty's entry into force, in which participants called upon States that had not done so to sign and ratify the Treaty promptly, particularly those whose ratification was needed for the Treaty to take effect. As an interim measure, they emphasized the need to maintain voluntary adherence to a moratorium on nuclear weapon test explosions and any other nuclear explosion and called on States to desist from such activities. Acknowledging the scientific and civil benefits of the CTBT verification system being established, participants pledged to consider ways to ensure that those benefits could be broadly shared by the international community, in conformity with the Treaty. They agreed to maintain the practice of selecting one of the ratifying States as a coordinator to promote cooperation through informal consultations with all interested countries aimed at promoting further signatures and ratifications, and that the special representative appointed following the 2003 Conference [YUN 2003, p. 547] would continue to assist the coordinating State in that regard. The Conference recommended that ratifying States consider establishing a trust fund, financed through voluntary contributions, to support an outreach programme for promoting the Treaty, and that the Provisional Technical Secretariat continue to provide States with legal assistance with respect to the ratification process and implementation measures.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/469], adopted resolution 60/95 by recorded vote (172-1-4) [agenda item 103].

Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty

The General Assembly,

Reiterating that the cessation of nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions constitutes an effective nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation measure, and convinced that this is a meaningful step in the realization of a systematic process to achieve nuclear disarmament,

Recalling that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, adopted by its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, was opened for signature on 24 September 1996,

Stressing that a universal and effectively verifiable Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty constitutes a fundamental instrument in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation,

Encouraged by the signing of the Treaty by one hundred and seventy-six States, including forty-one of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, and welcoming the ratification of one hundred and twenty-five States, including thirty-three of the forty-four needed for its entry into force, among which there are three nuclear-weapon States,

Recalling its resolution 59/109 of 3 December 2004,

Welcoming the Final Declaration of the fourth Conference on Facilitating the Entry into Force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, held in New York from 21 to 23 September 2005, pursuant to article XIV of the Treaty,

1. Stresses the importance and urgency of signature and ratification, without delay and without conditions, to achieve the earliest entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty;

2. Welcomes the contributions by the States signatories to the work of the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, in particular its efforts to ensure that the Treaty's verification regime will be capable of meeting the verification requirements of the Treaty upon its entry into force, in accordance with article IV of the Treaty;

3. Underlines the need to maintain momentum towards completion of the verification regime;

4. Urges all States to maintain their moratoriums on nuclear-weapon test explosions or any other nuclear explosions and to refrain from acts that would defeat the object and purpose of the Treaty;

5. Urges all States that have not yet signed the Treaty to sign and ratify it as soon as possible;

6. Urges all States that have signed but not yet ratified the Treaty, in particular those whose ratification is needed for its entry into force, to accelerate their ratification processes with a view to their earliest successful conclusion;

7. Urges all States to remain seized of the issue at the highest political level;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, to prepare a report on the efforts of States that have ratified the Treaty towards its universalization and possibilities for providing assistance on ratification procedures to States that so request it, and to submit such a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/95:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Colombia, India, Mauritius, Syrian Arab Republic.

Preparatory Commission for the CTBT Organization

During the year, the Preparatory Commission for the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization (CTBTO), established in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 452], continued to develop the Treaty's verification regime for monitoring Treaty compliance. Further progress was made in setting up the International Monitoring System (IMS) [YUN 1999, p. 472], the global network of 337 facilities (comprising 321 monitoring stations and 16 related laboratories) in 90 countries designed to detect nuclear explosions prohibited by CTBT via a global satellite communication system. The relevant information would then be transmitted to the International Data Centre (IDC) in Vienna for processing. At year's end, the installation of 219 of those stations (68 per cent) had been completed, 156 of which were certified as meeting the requisite technical requirements. In addition, six laboratories were certified. The development of provisional operation and maintenance processes and procedures continued during the year, and significant progress was made in configuration and information management through the establishment of baseline configuration of certified stations in the database of the technical secretariat. In the course of the year, the number of those stations in IDC operations reached the 50 per cent mark, substantially enhancing the geographic coverage of data being received. Also, some 89 national data centres increased their data processing capacity, resulting in over three million data segments and products being distributed to authorized users. Following the Indian Ocean tsunami disaster of December 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 952], the Preparatory Commission began testing the usefulness of IMS data in the context of a tsunami alert.

During the first part of its twenty-fourth session, the Preparatory Commission held a special session (Vienna, 4 March) [CTBT/PC-24/1] to consider its possible contribution to tsunami warning and other alert systems. It tasked its provisional technical secretariat to explore with national and international tsunami warning organizations recognized by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) data and products that could be provided by the secretariat for tsunami warning. The Commission held the main part of its twenty-fourth (27-28 June) [CTBT/PC-24/3] and its twenty-fifth (14 September, 17 October, 14-18 November) [CTBT/PC-25/1, CTBT/PC-25/2, CTBT/PC-25/3] sessions, both in Vienna, to consider the reports of its working groups and to discuss organizational, budgetary and other matters. The Commission adopted its 2006 programme budget in the combined amounts of $50,894,000 and 44,437,900 euros, of which approximately $30 million and 12 million euros were earmarked for the IMS network.

Prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons

In 2005, the Conference on Disarmament remained unable to undertake negotiations on a convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons, as called for in General Assembly resolution 59/102 [YUN 2004, p. 540], owing to the impasse among delegates over a programme of work.

The Assembly, in resolution 60/88 (see below), reiterated its request to the Conference to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on such a convention, and to report thereon.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/88 by recorded vote (111-49-13) [agenda item 98 (f)].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 8 July 1996 on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons,

Convinced that a multilateral, universal and binding agreement prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would contribute to the elimination of the nuclear threat and to the climate for negotiations leading to the ultimate elimination of nuclear weapons, thereby strengthening international peace and security,

Conscious that some steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards a reduction of their nuclear weapons and the improvement in the international climate can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and that would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 E of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Determined to achieve an international convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of nuclear weapons, leading to their ultimate destruction,

Stressing that an international convention on the prohibition of the use of nuclear weapons would be an important step in a phased programme towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons, with a specified framework of time,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its 2005 session, was unable to undertake negotiations on this subject as called for in General Assembly resolution 59/102 of 3 December 2004,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly on the results of those negotiations.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/88:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Ukraine, Uzbekistan.

Advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/83 [YUN 2004, p. 541] on the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) that the threat or use of nuclear weapons was contrary to the UN Charter [YUN 1996, p. 461], the Secretary-General presented information received from six States (Chile, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, Panama, Syrian Arab Republic) on measures they had taken to implement the resolution and towards nuclear disarmament [A/60/122].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/76 by recorded vote (126-29-24) [agenda item 97 (q)].

Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 49/75 K of 15 December 1994, 51/45 M of 10 December 1996, 52/38 O of 9 December 1997, 53/77 W of 4 December 1998, 54/54 Q of 1 December 1999, 55/33 X of 20 November 2000, 56/24 S of 29 November 2001, 57/85 of 22 November 2002, 58/46 of 8 December 2003 and 59/83 of 3 December 2004,

Convinced that the continuing existence of nuclear weapons poses a threat to all humanity and that their use would have catastrophic consequences for all life on Earth, and recognizing that the only defence against a nuclear catastrophe is the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the certainty that they will never be produced again,

Reaffirming the commitment of the international community to the goal of the total elimination of nuclear weapons and the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free world,

Mindful of the solemn obligations of States parties, undertaken in article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, particularly to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear-arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Recalling the principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted at the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Emphasizing the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, adopted at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recalling the adoption of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty in its resolution 50/245 of 10 September 1996, and expressing its satisfaction at the increasing number of States that have signed and ratified the Treaty,

Recognizing with satisfaction that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are gradually freeing the entire southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons,

Stressing the importance of strengthening all existing nuclear-related disarmament and arms control and reduction measures,

Recognizing the need for a multilaterally negotiated and legally binding instrument to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the threat or use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming the central role of the Conference on Disarmament as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, and regretting the lack of progress in disarmament negotiations, particularly nuclear disarmament, in the Conference during its 2005 session,

Emphasizing the need for the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations on a phased programme for the complete elimination of nuclear weapons with a specified framework of time,

Expressing its regret over the failure of the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to reach agreement on any substantive issues,

Expressing its deep concern at the lack of progress in the implementation of the thirteen steps to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons agreed to at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Desiring to achieve the objective of a legally binding prohibition of the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, threat or use of nuclear weapons and their destruction under effective international control,

Recalling the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons, issued on 8 July 1996,

Taking note of the relevant portions of the report of the Secretary-General relating to the implementation of resolution 59/83,

1. Underlines once again the unanimous conclusion of the International Court of Justice that there exists an obligation to pursue in good faith and bring to a conclusion negotiations leading to nuclear disarmament in all its aspects under strict and effective international control;

2. Calls once again upon all States immediately to fulfil that obligation by commencing multilateral negotiations leading to an early conclusion of a nuclear weapons convention prohibiting the development, production, testing, deployment, stockpiling, transfer, threat or use of nuclear weapons and providing for their elimination;

3. Requests all States to inform the Secretary-General of the efforts and measures they have taken on the implementation of the present resolution and nuclear disarmament, and requests the Secretary-General to apprise the General Assembly of that information at its sixty-first session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Follow-up to the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice on the Legality of the Threat or Use of Nuclear Weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/76:

The First Committee adopted paragraph 1 by a recorded vote of 142 to 3, with 5 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 165 to 3, with 4 abstentions.

Non-proliferation issues

Non-Proliferation Treaty

Status

In 2005, the number of States party to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT), adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2373(XXII) [YUN 1968, p. 17], remained at 189. NPT entered into force on 5 March 1970.

NPT Review Conference

The 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (New York, 2-27 May) [NPT/CONF.2005/57] was held to review the Treaty's operation, as provided for in article VIII, paragraph 3, and in accordance with General Assembly resolution 56/24 O [YUN 2001, p. 483] and with the decisions of the 1995 Review Conference [YUN 1995, p. 189], which extended NPT indefinitely and provided for further review conferences at five-year intervals. Previous quinquennial review conferences took place in 1975 [YUN 1975, p. 27], 1980 [YUN 1980, p. 51], 1985 [YUN 1985, p. 56], 1990 [YUN 1990, p. 50], 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 189] and 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 487].

The Preparatory Committee for the 2005 Conference had met in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 507], 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 549] and 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 542].

Participants at the Conference included 153 States parties and Palestine as an observer, representatives of the United Nations, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), regional and intergovernmental organizations, research institutes and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Conference established three Main Committees and corresponding subsidiary bodies, a Drafting Committee and a Credentials Committee. Substantive issues were to be discussed by the Main Committees, including a review of the implementation of the Treaty's provisions relating to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, disarmament and international peace and security; security assurances; and the Treaty's role in promoting the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons, nuclear disarmament in strengthening international peace and security and measures aimed at strengthening the implementation of the Treaty and achieving its universality. The issue of Treaty withdrawal was also accorded special consideration, in the light of DPRK's withdrawal from the Treaty, its previous non-compliance with its non-proliferation obligations and most importantly, its announcement earlier in the year that it had manufactured nuclear weapons. Unfortunately, deliberations within the Main Committees, based on working papers presented by the Chairman, were undermined by pronounced disagreements among the parties on procedural issues and over all the substantive agenda items on nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament-related questions, particularly the language in which to address key aspects of the issues under review. Consequently, the Conference was not able to achieve a consensus outcome on any of the substantive issues on its agenda concerning the review of the implementation of the Treaty's provisions. On 27 May, the Conference adopted a Final Document, which merely outlined its organizational and procedural arrangements and a summary record of its proceedings.

Several States parties, disappointed at the outcome of the Conference, stressed the need to strengthen the Treaty and to address the challenges facing it. Nonetheless, the President of the Conference concluded that the proceedings strengthened his conviction that NPT still enjoyed the strong support of all States parties.

Related events held during the Conference included a meeting on verification pursuant to the NPT: concluding safeguards agreements and additional protocols, sponsored by the IAEA (5 May); a workshop which considered the question "why do States abandon nuclear weapons ambitions?", sponsored by Finland on behalf of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Commission (9 May); a workshop on United Nations capacity for monitoring weapons of mass destruction, sponsored by New Zealand (10 May); a presentation on verification by the United Kingdom (10 May); and a meeting on transparency and accountability in nuclear arms, sponsored by Germany (17 May).

Communications. Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Non-Aligned Movement, at a special meeting (Doha, Qatar, 13 June) [A/59/880], expressed disappointment over the inability of the Review Conference to reach consensus on the substantive questions relating to NPT. Noting that its members had acted in good faith to advance positions towards strengthening the Treaty, the Ministers pointed to the unwillingness of some States, including certain nuclear-weapon States, to honour their previous obligations and commitments in nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation.

On 26 July [A/60/415], the Foreign Ministers of Australia, Chile, Indonesia, Norway, Romania, South Africa and the United Kingdom issued a joint declaration on disarmament and non-proliferation expressing their disappointment at the outcome of the 2005 Review Conference and calling on all States to take a strong stand on disarmament and non-proliferation at the High-Level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly (2005 World Summit) (see p. 47). A large number of countries from all regions expressed support for the initiative.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/72 by recorded vote (87-56-26) [agenda item 97].

Follow-up to nuclear disarmament obligations agreed to at the 1995 and 2000 Review Conferences of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its various resolutions in the field of nuclear disarmament, including its most recent, resolutions 59/77, 59/83 and 59/102 of 3 December 2004,

Bearing in mind its resolution 2373(XXII) of 12 June 1968, the annex to which contains the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Noting the provisions of article VIII, paragraph 3, of the Treaty regarding the convening of review conferences at five-year intervals,

Recalling its resolution 50/70 Q of 12 December 1995, in which the General Assembly noted that the States parties to the Treaty affirmed the need to continue to move with determination towards the full realization and effective implementation of the provisions of the Treaty, and accordingly adopted a set of principles and objectives,

Recalling also that, on 11 May 1995, the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons adopted three decisions on strengthening the review process for the Treaty, principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament, and extension of the Treaty,

Reaffirming the resolution on the Middle East adopted on 11 May 1995 by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty, in which the Conference reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and placement of nuclear facilities under full-scope International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Reaffirming also its resolution 55/33 D of 20 November 2000, in which the General Assembly welcomed the adoption by consensus on 19 May 2000 of the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, including, in particular, the documents entitled "Review of the operation of the Treaty, taking into account the decisions and the resolution adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference" and "Improving the effectiveness of the strengthened review process for the Treaty",

Taking into consideration the unequivocal undertaking by the nuclear-weapon States, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty, to accomplish the total elimination of their nuclear arsenals leading to nuclear disarmament, to which all States parties to the Treaty are committed under article VI of the Treaty,

Gravely concerned over the failure of the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty to reach any substantive agreement on the follow-up to the nuclear disarmament obligations,

1. Determines to pursue practical steps for systematic and progressive efforts to implement article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and paragraphs 3 and 4 (c) of the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament of the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty;

2. Calls for practical steps, as agreed to at the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty, to be taken by all nuclear-weapon States that would lead to nuclear disarmament in a way that promotes international stability and, based upon the principle of undiminished security for all, for:

(a) Further efforts to be made by the nuclear-weapon States to reduce their nuclear arsenals unilaterally;

(b) Increased transparency by the nuclear-weapon States with regard to nuclear weapons capabilities and the implementation of agreements pursuant to article VI of the Treaty and as a voluntary confidence-building measure to support further progress in nuclear disarmament;

(c) The further reduction of non-strategic nuclear weapons, based on unilateral initiatives and as an integral part of the nuclear arms reduction and disarmament process;

(d) Concrete agreed measures to reduce further the operational status of nuclear weapons systems;

(e) A diminishing role for nuclear weapons in security policies so as to minimize the risk that these weapons will ever be used and to facilitate the process of their total elimination;

(f) The engagement, as soon as appropriate, of all the nuclear-weapon States in the process leading to the total elimination of their nuclear weapons;

3. Notes that the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty agreed that legally binding security assurances by the five nuclear-weapon States to the non-nuclear-weapon States parties to the Treaty strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation regime;

4. Urges the States parties to the Treaty to follow up on the implementation of the nuclear disarmament obligations under the Treaty agreed to at the 1995 and 2000 Review Conferences of the Parties to the Treaty within the framework of the 2010 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty and its preparatory committee;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session an item entitled "Follow-up to nuclear disarmament obligations agreed to at the 1995 and 2000 Review Conferences of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/72:

In favour: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Egypt, Eritrea, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nigeria, Oman, Philippines, Qatar, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United States, Vanuatu.

Abstaining: Argentina, Armenia, Belarus, Bolivia, Burundi, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Liberia, Mexico, Nicaragua, Niger, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru.

Non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction

In his March report to the 2005 World Summit entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all" [A/59/2005 & Add.1] (see p. 67), the Secretary-General highlighted the security challenges relating to nuclear, chemical and biological weapons and multilateral efforts to tackle them. He noted in particular that while NPT currently faced a crisis of confidence and compliance owing to increasing strain on verification and enforcement, the Conference on Disarmament faced a similar crisis of relevance, resulting partly from dysfunctional decision-making procedures and consequent paralysis. He stressed that progress in disarmament and non-proliferation was essential and that neither should be held hostage. While recognizing the disarmament efforts of nuclear-weapon States, the Secretary-General said the unique status of those States also entailed a unique responsibility to do more, including but not limited to further reductions in their arsenals of non-strategic nuclear weapons and pursuing arms control agreements that entailed both dismantlement and irreversibility. In addition, they should reaffirm their commitment to negative security assurances. Swift negotiation of a fissile material cut-off treaty was essential and the moratorium on nuclear test explosions should be upheld until the entry into force of CTBT (see p. 593).

Noting the fact that the technology required for civilian nuclear fuel could also be used to develop nuclear weapons, the Secretary-General said that, while the access of non-nuclear-weapon States to the benefits of nuclear technology for peaceful purposes should not be curtailed, there was a need to focus on creating incentives for States to forgo voluntarily the development of domestic uranium enrichment and plutonium separation capacities. Recent efforts to supplement NPT as the foundation of the non-proliferation regime should be welcomed, including Security Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544], which was designed to prevent non-State actors from acquiring WMDs and their means of delivery, and the Proliferation Security Initiative [YUN 2003, p. 536], under which States were cooperating to prevent illicit trafficking in WMDs. Also, Member States should adopt effective national export controls covering missiles and other means of WMD delivery, rockets and shoulder-fired missiles, as well as banning their transfer to non-State actors. The Secretary-General stated that his capacity to investigate the suspected use of biological agents, as authorized by the General Assembly, should also be strengthened to incorporate the latest technology and expertise. Adding that the Security Council should be better informed on all matters relevant to nuclear, chemical and biological threats, the Secretary-General encouraged the Council to invite regularly the Directors-General of IAEA and of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW) to brief it on the status of safeguards and verification processes. The Secretary-General declared his readiness, in consultation with the Director-General of the World Health Organization (WHO), to use his powers under Article 99 of the UN Charter to call the Council's attention to any overwhelming outbreak of infectious diseases that threatened international peace and security.

Security Council Committee on WMDs. On 7 January [S/2005/11], the Security Council President informed the Secretary-General that the Council had taken note of his intention, announced in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 545], to appoint four experts to assist the Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) [ibid., p. 544] to monitor the implementation of measures set out in that resolution to combat the proliferation of WMDs and their means of delivery. On 6 May [S/2005/299], the Secretary-General informed the Council of his appointment of an additional four experts to facilitate the Committee's work.

During the year, the Committee became fully operational and began the substantive part of its work. In April [S/PV.5168], July [S/PV.5229] and October [S/PV.5293 & Corr.1], the Committee Chairman briefed the Council on the Committee's programme of work for the year, a key aspect of which related to the examination of national reports, as called for in resolution 1540(2004).

On 25 April [meeting 5168], the Council, in Presidential statement S/PRST/2005/16 (see p. 109), invited the Committee to pursue its undertakings in accordance with its approved programme of work and called on States that had not done so to submit national reports as soon as possible. In subsequent action on 20 July [meeting 5229], the Council, in Presidential statement S/PRST/2005/34 (see p. 110), encouraged the Committee to enhance cooperation with related Council bodies and other organizations, with a view to developing best practices to provide clarity and guidance to States on the implementation of relevant resolutions.

On 19 December [S/2005/799], the Committee Chairman submitted a consolidated report on the Committee's activities and the results achieved during the period from 1 January to 16 December. The report indicated that 124 States had submitted national reports, 42 of which were subsequently updated in response to the Chairman's request for additional information. Having determined in that regard that some States might require technical assistance from international organizations with the requisite expertise, particularly IAEA and OPCW, the Committee facilitated the process for providing such assistance through cooperation with competent organizations. To further improve its work, it accorded priority to transparency by maintaining regular contacts with Member States and undertaking joint briefings with other Council bodies. It also undertook awareness-raising activities, the most notable being the first regional seminar for countries of Latin America and the Caribbean entitled "Advancing the implementation of Security Council resolution 1540(2004)", which was organized jointly by Argentina and the United Kingdom (Buenos Aires, Argentina, 26-28 September) and designed to promote better understanding of the objectives of that resolution and of the steps to be taken in implementing it. The Committee also promoted its outreach programme in Africa and Eurasia and participated in a number of related international meetings, including the second World Conference of Speakers of Parliaments (New York, 7-9 September) the workshop entitled "The Global Bargain for Biosecurity and Health" (Kampala, Uganda, 28 September–1 October), and the Seventh International Export Control Conference organized jointly by the United States and Sweden (Stockholm, Sweden, 20-22 September), which considered recent export control initiatives and ways to strengthen non-proliferation efforts globally.

The Committee Chairman noted that, although the Committee had achieved the targets set out in its 2005 work programmes, full implementation of resolution 1540(2004) by all States through national legislation and measures to enforce such legislation was a long-term objective that went beyond the Committee's current mandate. Continuous efforts would be required at the national, regional and international levels to provide capacity-building and assistance.

New types of weapons of mass destruction

In 2005, the persisting disagreement among delegates over a programme of work again prevented the Conference on Disarmament [A/60/27] from establishing any mechanism to consider any of its agenda items, including the item on "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons". As a result, the topic was addressed only during plenary meetings when delegations reaffirmed their respective positions on the item.

The General Assembly, in resolution 60/46 (see below), reaffirmed the need to prevent the emergence of new types of weapons of mass destruction and asked the Conference on Disarmament to keep the matter under review.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/453], adopted resolution 60/46 by recorded vote (180-1-1) [agenda item 87].

Prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons: report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons,

Recalling also its resolutions 51/37 of 10 December 1996, 54/44 of 1 December 1999 and 57/50 of 22 November 2002 relating to the prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons,

Recalling further paragraph 77 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Determined to prevent the emergence of new types of weapons of mass destruction that have characteristics comparable in destructive effect to those of weapons of mass destruction identified in the definition of weapons of mass destruction adopted by the United Nations in 1948,

Noting the desirability of keeping the matter under review, as appropriate,

1. Reaffirms that effective measures should be taken to prevent the emergence of new types of weapons of mass destruction;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament, without prejudice to further overview of its agenda, to keep the matter under review, as appropriate, with a view to making, when necessary, recommendations on undertaking specific negotiations on identified types of such weapons;

3. Calls upon all States, immediately following any recommendations of the Conference on Disarmament, to give favourable consideration to those recommendations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Conference on Disarmament all documents relating to the consideration of this item by the General Assembly at its sixtieth session;

5. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report the results of any consideration of the matter in its annual reports to the General Assembly;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-third session the item entitled "Prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons: report of the Conference on Disarmament".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/46:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Israel.

Terrorism and WMDs

In 2005, the United Nations maintained efforts to address the growing threat to global peace and stability posed by international terrorism, particularly the risk of acquisition and use by terrorists of WMDs. In January, the Counter-Terrorism Committee, established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1373(2001) [YUN 2001, p. 61] (see p. 107), continued to implement its mandate to monitor Member States' efforts to combat terrorism.

In his March report to the 2005 World Summit (see p. 67), the Secretary-General determined that terrorism and weapons of mass destruction were among the threats to peace and security in the twenty-first century and threatened all that the United Nations stood for. As such, he outlined a strategy for dealing with it, based on five pillars: dissuading people from resorting to terrorism or supporting it; denying terrorists access to funds and materials; deterring States from sponsoring terrorism; developing State capacity to defeat terrorism; and defending human rights.

In April, the General Assembly adopted by consensus, in resolution 59/290 (see p. 1411), the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism. By the terms of the Convention, Member States were called upon to develop legal frameworks criminalizing nuclear terrorism-related offenses and to promote international cooperation in investigating and prosecuting offenders. In other action, the Assembly, in resolution 60/78 (see below) requested the Secretary-General to report on measures already taken by international organizations regarding the linkage between the fight against terrorism and WMD proliferation, and to seek Member States' views on additional measures for tackling the threat. Focusing on radiological terrorism, the Assembly, in resolution 60/73 (see p. 603), called on Member States to support international efforts to prevent the acquisition and use by terrorists of radioactive materials and sources. In July, the Security Council, in resolution 1617(2005) on threats to international peace and security caused by terrorist acts (see p. 410) expressed concern over the possible use by Al-Qaida or the Taliban and their associates of chemical, biological, radiation or nuclear weapons and material and emphasized the need for the effective implementation of the sanctions imposed against them. In an August report [A/60/285] to the Assembly, the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters highlighted the urgency of addressing proliferation challenges stemming from States' possible acquisition of nuclear weapons under the cover of peaceful nuclear activities and related terrorists threats.

IAEA, in an effort to strengthen the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material [YUN 1980, p. 161], convened a conference of the States parties (Vienna, 4-8 July) [GOV/INF/2005/10-GC(49)/INF/6], which adopted by consensus a number of amendments to the Convention. The first changed its title to "Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material and Nuclear Facilities", thereby extending its scope to cover the protection of nuclear facilities and the domestic transport, storage and use of nuclear material. Other amendments revised and fortified many of the Convention's principles and provisions. On 30 September, the IAEA General Conference, in a resolution [GC(49)/RES/10] on nuclear security: measures to protect against nuclear terrorism, welcomed those amendments, encouraged the States parties to ratify them and appealed to States that had not done so to adhere to the Convention. In the same resolution [GC(49)/RES/10], the Conference called on Member States to provide political, financial and technical support to improve nuclear and radiological security and prevent related terrorism. Also in September [GC(49)17], the IAEA Board of Governors approved a new nuclear security plan for 2006-2009, which outlined measures and activities planned to help prevent nuclear and radiological terrorism.

Report of Secretary-General. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/80 [YUN 2004, p. 577], the Secretary-General, in an August report, with a later addendum [A/60/185 & Add.1], presented the views of 10 Member States and 11 international organizations, including UN agencies, on measures they had taken to prevent terrorists from acquiring WMDs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/78 without vote [agenda item 97 (p)].

Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/80 of 3 December 2004,

Recognizing the determination of the international community to combat terrorism, as evidenced in relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Deeply concerned by the growing risk of linkages between terrorism and weapons of mass destruction, and in particular by the fact that terrorists may seek to acquire weapons of mass destruction,

Cognizant of the steps taken by States to implement Security Council resolution 1540(2004) on the non-proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, adopted on 28 April 2004,

Welcoming the adoption, by consensus, of the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism on 13 April 2005,

Welcoming also the adoption, by consensus, of amendments to strengthen the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material by the International Atomic Energy Agency on 8 July 2005,

Noting the support expressed in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, which was held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, and in the Final Document of the Fourteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, which was held in Durban, South Africa, from 17 to 19 August 2004, for measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction,

Noting also that the Group of Eight, the European Union, the Regional Forum of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and others have taken into account in their deliberations the dangers posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction, and the need for international cooperation in combating it,

Acknowledging the consideration of issues relating to terrorism and weapons of mass destruction by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters,

Taking note of resolution GC(49)/RES/10, adopted on 30 September 2005 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-ninth regular session,

Taking note also of the report of the Policy Working Group on the United Nations and Terrorism,

Taking note further of the report of the Secretary-General, submitted pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 4 of resolution 59/80,

Mindful of the urgent need for addressing, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, this threat to humanity,

Emphasizing that progress is urgently needed in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation in order to help to maintain international peace and security and to contribute to global efforts against terrorism,

1. Calls upon all Member States to support international efforts to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction and their means of delivery;

2. Invites all Member States to consider signing and ratifying the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism in order to bring about its early entry into force;

3. Urges all Member States to take and strengthen national measures, as appropriate, to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction, their means of delivery and materials and technologies related to their manufacture, and invites them to inform the Secretary-General, on a voluntary basis, of the measures taken in this regard;

4. Encourages cooperation among and between Member States and relevant regional and international organizations for strengthening national capacities in this regard;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to compile a report on measures already taken by international organizations on issues relating to the linkage between the fight against terrorism and the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, to seek the views of Member States on additional relevant measures for tackling the global threat posed by the acquisition by terrorists of weapons of mass destruction and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Measures to prevent terrorists from acquiring weapons of mass destruction".

On the same date [meeting 61], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/73 without vote [agenda item 97].

Preventing the risk of radiological terrorism

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the essential contribution of radioactive materials and sources to social and economic development, and the benefits drawn from their use for all States,

Recognizing also the determination of the international community to combat terrorism, as evident in relevant General Assembly and Security Council resolutions,

Deeply concerned by the threat of terrorism and the risk that terrorists may acquire, traffic in or use radioactive materials or sources in radiological dispersion devices,

Recalling the importance of international conventions aimed at preventing and suppressing such a risk, in particular the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism, adopted on 13 April 2005,

Noting that actions of the international community to combat the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and prevent access by non-State actors to weapons of mass destruction and related material, notably Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, constitute contributions to the protection against nuclear and radiological terrorism,

Stressing the importance of the role of the International Atomic Energy Agency in promoting and reinforcing the safety and security of radioactive materials and sources, in particular by supporting the improvement of national legal and regulatory infrastructure,

Taking note of the importance of the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management with respect to the safety of the end of life of radioactive sources,

Taking note also of the importance of the Code of Conduct on the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources as a valuable instrument for enhancing the safety and security of radioactive sources, while recognizing that the Code is not a legally binding instrument, and of the International Atomic Energy Agency Revised Action Plan for the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources and its Nuclear Security Plan for 2006-2009,

Taking note further of resolutions GC(49)/RES/9 and GC(49)/RES/10, adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-ninth regular session, which address measures to strengthen international cooperation in nuclear, radiation and transport safety and waste management and measures to protect against nuclear and radiological terrorism,

Welcoming the ongoing individual and collective efforts of Member States to take into account in their deliberations the dangers posed by the lack or insufficiency of control over radioactive materials and sources, and recognizing the need for States to take more effective measures to strengthen those controls in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law,

Welcoming also the fact that Member States have undertaken multilateral actions to address this issue, as reflected in General Assembly resolution 57/9 of 11 November 2002,

Welcoming further the contribution of the International Atomic Energy Agency International Conference on the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources: Towards a Global System for the Continuous Control of Sources throughout Their Life Cycle, held in Bordeaux, France, from 27 June to 1 July 2005, to the activities of the Agency on these issues,

Mindful of the need for addressing, within the United Nations framework and through international cooperation, this rising concern for international security,

1. Calls upon Member States to support international efforts to prevent the acquisition and use by terrorists of radioactive materials and sources, and, if necessary, suppress such acts, in accordance with their national legal authorities and legislation and consistent with international law;

2. Urges Member States to take and strengthen national measures, as appropriate, to prevent the acquisition and use by terrorists of radioactive materials and sources as well as terrorist attacks on nuclear plants and facilities which would result in radioactive releases, and, if necessary, suppress such acts, in particular by taking effective measures to account for, secure and physically protect such high-risk materials in accordance with their international obligations;

3. Invites all Member States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism;

4. Invites Member States to support and endorse the efforts of the International Atomic Energy Agency to enhance the safety and security of radioactive sources, as described in the Agency's Nuclear Security Plan for 2006-2009, urges all States to work towards following the guidance contained in the Agency Code of Conduct on the Safety and Security of Radioactive Sources, including, as appropriate, the guidance on the import and export of radioactive sources, noting that the guidance is complementary to the Code, and encourages Member States to notify the Director General of the Agency of their intention to do so pursuant to resolution GC(48)/RES/10 of the General Conference of the Agency, recognizes the value of information exchange on national approaches to controlling radioactive sources, and encourages consultations by the secretariat of the Agency with its member States with a view to establishing a formalized process for a periodic exchange of information and lessons learned and for the evaluation of progress made by States towards implementing the provisions of the Code;

5. Encourages cooperation among and between Member States and through relevant international and, where appropriate, regional organizations for strengthening national capacities in this regard;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session an item entitled "Preventing the risk of radiological terrorism".

Multilateralism in disarmament and non-proliferation

Report of Secretary-General. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/69 [YUN 2004, p. 546], the Secretary-General, in a July report, with a later addendum [A/60/98 & Add.1], presented replies received from 10 Governments regarding the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation.

Other developments. On 13 May [S/2005/521], the Indian Parliament passed the Weapons of Mass Destruction and their Delivery System (Prohibition of Unlawful Activities) Bill, prohibiting unlawful activities in relation to WMDs and fulfilling India's obligations pursuant to Security Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544].

In a 2 June statement [CD/1750], Poland summarized the 2005 activities undertaken to promote the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI), including a number of naval, air and ground interdiction exercises and other measures to improve information exchange and cooperation between the participating countries' special services, border and customs officers. Launched in Krakow, Poland, in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 536], PSI was intended to combat the proliferation of WMDs by searching suspicious land, air and sea vessels and to confiscate any illegal weapons on board. Over 60 countries were involved. In commemoration of the second anniversary of the founding of PSI, United States President George W. Bush urged all States to join the global campaign by endorsing the Initiative's principle of interdiction and by committing to working to end the security threat posed by WMD proliferation.

The EU and the United States, at their 2005 summit (Washington, D.C., 20 June), adopted a declaration on enhancing cooperation in the field of non-proliferation and the fight against terrorism, by which they pledged to further strengthen measures against the spread of WMDs by State and non-State actors; and to respond more effectively to related threats, particularly with regard to the policies and activities of Iran and DPRK. They also adopted an EU–United States joint programme of work on the non-proliferation of WMDs.

At the fifteenth plenary meeting of the Nuclear Suppliers Group (Oslo, Norway, 23-24 June), the 45 participating States analysed current proliferation challenges, particularly those posed by DPRK and Iran, and declared their readiness to cooperate in implementing Security Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544]. They also adopted measures to further strengthen their national export controls.

The Group of major industrialized countries G-8 (Scotland, United Kingdom, 6-8 July) adopted a statement on non-proliferation emphasizing their determination to meet related challenges decisively, through national efforts and effective multilateralism. They reaffirmed their commitment to their 2002 Global Partnership against the Proliferation of Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction [YUN 2002, p. 494], under which they had pledged to support cooperative projects addressing non-proliferation, disarmament, counter-terrorism and nuclear safety issues, and renewed their pledge to raise up to $20 billion towards that end by 2012.

On 18 July, United States President George W. Bush and Indian Prime Minister Manmohan Singh, in a joint statement, announced the establishment of a global partnership to promote stability, democracy, prosperity and peace in the world, and to provide global leadership in areas of mutual concern and interest, including on non-proliferation and security questions.

On 24 October [A/60/549], the People's Council of Turkmenistan adopted a statement of support of international initiatives to combat the proliferation of WMDs, in which, among other things, it announced the country's prohibition of the use of its sovereign airspace for the transportation of those weapons and related materials, as well as missiles and missile technology.

On 17 November, the European Parliament adopted a resolution on the non-proliferation of WMDs, by which it called for, among other things, preventing the proliferation of ballistic missiles with extended range and greater accuracy; developing and enforcing effective export and transit controls and reinforcing border security to limit the risk of sensitive WMD-related materials falling into the wrong hands; fostering the role of the UN Security Council and enhancing expertise in meeting the challenge of proliferation; and strengthening effective multilateralism in addressing non-proliferation questions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/59 by recorded vote (122-8-50) [agenda item 97 (h)].

Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation

The General Assembly,

Determined to foster strict respect for the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 56/24 T of 29 November 2001 on multilateral cooperation in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and global efforts against terrorism and other relevant resolutions, as well as its resolutions 57/63 of 22 November 2002, 58/44 of 8 December 2003 and 59/69 of 3 December 2004 on promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation,

Recalling also the purpose of the United Nations to maintain international peace and security and, to that end, to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace, as enshrined in the Charter,

Recalling further the United Nations Millennium Declaration, which states, inter alia, that the responsibility for managing worldwide economic and social development, as well as threats to international peace and security, must be shared among the nations of the world and should be exercised multilaterally and that, as the most universal and most representative organization in the world, the United Nations must play the central role,

Convinced that, in the globalization era and with the information revolution, arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament problems are more than ever the concern of all countries in the world, which are affected in one way or another by these problems and, therefore, should have the possibility to participate in the negotiations that arise to tackle them,

Bearing in mind the existence of a broad structure of disarmament and arms regulation agreements resulting from non-discriminatory and transparent multilateral negotiations with the participation of a large number of countries, regardless of their size and power,

Aware of the need to advance further in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament on the basis of universal, multilateral, non-discriminatory and transparent negotiations with the goal of reaching general and complete disarmament under strict international control,

Recognizing the complementarity of bilateral, plurilateral and multilateral negotiations on disarmament,

Recognizing also that the proliferation and development of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons, are among the most immediate threats to international peace and security which need to be dealt with, with the highest priority,

Considering that the multilateral disarmament agreements provide the mechanism for States parties to consult one another and to cooperate in solving any problems which may arise in relation to the objective of, or in the application of, the provisions of the agreements and that such consultations and cooperation may also be undertaken through appropriate international procedures within the framework of the United Nations and in accordance with the Charter,

Stressing that international cooperation, the peaceful settlement of disputes, dialogue and confidence-building measures would contribute essentially to the creation of multilateral and bilateral friendly relations among peoples and nations,

Being concerned at the continuous erosion of multilateralism in the field of arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament, and recognizing that a resort to unilateral actions by Member States in resolving their security concerns would jeopardize international peace and security and undermine confidence in the international security system as well as the foundations of the United Nations itself,

Reaffirming the absolute validity of multilateral diplomacy in the field of disarmament and non-proliferation, and determined to promote multilateralism as an essential way to develop arms regulation and disarmament negotiations,

1. Reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in negotiations in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation with a view to maintaining and strengthening universal norms and enlarging their scope;

2. Also reaffirms multilateralism as the core principle in resolving disarmament and non-proliferation concerns;

3. Urges the participation of all interested States in multilateral negotiations on arms regulation, non-proliferation and disarmament in a non-discriminatory and transparent manner;

4. Underlines the importance of preserving the existing agreements on arms regulation and disarmament, which constitute an expression of the results of international cooperation and multilateral negotiations in response to the challenges facing mankind;

5. Calls once again upon all Member States to renew and fulfil their individual and collective commitments to multilateral cooperation as an important means of pursuing and achieving their common objectives in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation;

6. Requests the States parties to the relevant instruments on weapons of mass destruction to consult and cooperate among themselves in resolving their concerns with regard to cases of non-compliance as well as on implementation, in accordance with the procedures defined in those instruments, and to refrain from resorting or threatening to resort to unilateral actions or directing unverified non-compliance accusations against one another to resolve their concerns;

7. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies of Member States on the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation, submitted pursuant to resolution 59/69;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the issue of the promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation and to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Promotion of multilateralism in the area of disarmament and non-proliferation".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/59:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, France, Israel, Latvia, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Andorra, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Samoa, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine, Vanuatu.

IAEA safeguards

As at 31 December, the Model Protocol Additional to Safeguards Agreements strengthening the safeguards regime of IAEA, approved by the Agency's Board of Governors in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 486], had been signed and/or approved by 113 States, including the five nuclear-weapon States, and was in force or being provisionally applied in 73 States.

As in previous years, the IAEA General Conference [GC(49)/RES/13] requested concerned States and other parties to safeguard agreements, including nuclear-weapon States, that had not done so to sign additional protocols promptly and bring them into force as soon as possible, in conformity with their national legislation. The Conference called for innovative technological solutions to strengthen the effectiveness of safeguards and for cooperation among member States to facilitate the exchange of equipment, material and scientific and technological information for implementing those protocols. It commended member States, notably Japan, that had implemented elements of a plan of action first outlined in a 2000 resolution of the Conference [YUN 2000, p. 505] and updated in February 2005, and recommended that other member States consider such action to facilitate the entry into force of comprehensive safeguards agreements and additional protocols.

In 2005, international anxiety over DPRK's nuclear status rose markedly in the wake of its 10 February announcement that it had manufactured nuclear weapons and its continued denial of access to IAEA to verify that it had declared all nuclear material subject to Agency safeguards. Consequently, the Agency remained unable to draw any conclusions or provide assurances about nuclear material or activities in the country. In a 4 August report to the General Conference [GC(49)/13], the Director General noted that DPRK's nuclear activities outside international verification were a serious challenge to the nuclear non-proliferation regime and its admission; that it possessed nuclear weapons was a matter of the utmost concern, with serious security implications. On 30 September [GC(49)/RES/14], the General Conference, while expressing concern over the DPRK's official statement that it had nuclear weapons, welcomed progress at the six-party talks (see p. 450) toward the goal of the verifiable denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula and called on the DPRK to cooperate with the Agency in the full and effective implementation of comprehensive IAEA safeguards.

On 1 August [INFCIRC/648], Iran notified IAEA that it had decided to resume uranium conversion, which it had suspended voluntarily in 2003 as a confidence-building measure and as part of an agreement with France, Germany and the United Kingdom to promote transparency, cooperation and access to nuclear and other advanced technology. It had taken that action because it had received little in return for the expansion of its voluntary confidence-building measures and had not gained the expected benefit of unrestricted access to advanced nuclear technology. Nonetheless, it would continue to abide by its obligations under the NPT. In a 9 August statement to the IAEA Board of Governors, issued on behalf of the EU, the United Kingdom expressed regret about Iran's actions at a time when outstanding questions about its nuclear programme had yet to be resolved and new questions about its plutonium-related activities had arisen. It asked the Board to react firmly. On 11 August [GOV/2005/64], the Board urged Iran to re-establish full suspension of all enrichment-related activities on the same voluntary and non-legally binding basis as requested in previous Board resolutions and to permit the Director General to reinstate seals that had been removed at its Uranium Conversion Facility in Esfahan. On 24 September [GOV/2005/77], the Board, having considered a situation report by the Director General [GOV/2005/67], found that Iran's history of concealment of its nuclear activities and related issues and the resulting lack of confidence in its nuclear programme being exclusively for peaceful purposes, had raised questions that were within the competence of the Security Council. It urged Iran to suspend all enrichment-related and reprocessing activity in order to help the Director General resolve outstanding questions and provide necessary assurances and to return to the negotiating process. On 18 November [GOV/2005/87], the Director General reported that, although Iran had provided access to necessary documentation and other information relating to its procurement network, it needed to become more transparent in providing data on the procurement of dual use equipment and in permitting visits to relevant military facilities and research and development locations.

Concerning Iraq, the Director General, in a 26 September statement to the General Conference, said that IAEA's mandate under various Security Council resolutions to maintain inspections of Iraq's nuclear programme remained in effect in 2005 and the Agency's future work in that regard was expected to be guided by the Council's planned review of the mandate, as indicated in resolution 1546(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 548]. Pending that review, the Agency had reduced to a minimum the staff of its Iraq Nuclear Verification Office (INVO). He hoped the review would be undertaken as soon as possible.

Note by Secretary-General. In August [A/60/204], the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly of the availability of the forty-ninth report of IAEA [GC(49)/5] covering its 2004 activities.

Communication. On 1 November [A/C.1/60/5], the DPRK alleged that the United States and the United Kingdom, in arguments made in the First Committee of the General Assembly regarding the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula, had attempted to mislead world opinion by urging the DPRK to dismantle its nuclear weapons programme unconditionally, in accordance with the Beijing joint statement under the six-party talks (see p. 450), as though it carried the obligation of only the DPRK. The denuclearization of the Peninsula could not be achieved only through the unilateral abandonment by the DPRK of its nuclear programmes.

Middle East

In 2005, the General Assembly (see below) and the IAEA General Conference [GC(49)/RES/15] took action regarding the risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. While the Assembly continued to call on the non-party in the region to place all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards, IAEA reaffirmed the need for States in the region to accept the application of full-scope Agency safeguards to all their nuclear activities.

In response to Assembly resolution 59/106 [YUN 2004, p. 549], the Secretary-General reported in October [A/60/126 (Part II)] that, apart from the IAEA resolution on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East, which was annexed to his report, he had not received any additional information since his 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 549].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/466], adopted resolution 60/92 by recorded vote (164-5-5) [agenda item 100].

The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions adopted by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the latest of which is resolution GC(49)/RES/15 adopted on 30 September 2005,

Cognizant that the proliferation of nuclear weapons in the region of the Middle East would pose a serious threat to international peace and security,

Mindful of the immediate need for placing all nuclear facilities in the region of the Middle East under full-scope safeguards of the Agency,

Recalling the decision on principles and objectives for nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference urged universal adherence to the Treaty as an urgent priority and called upon all States not yet parties to the Treaty to accede to it at the earliest date, particularly those States that operate unsafeguarded nuclear facilities,

Recognizing with satisfaction that, in the Final Document of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, the Conference undertook to make determined efforts towards the achievement of the goal of universality of the Treaty, called upon those remaining States not parties to the Treaty to accede to it, thereby accepting an international legally binding commitment not to acquire nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices and to accept Agency safeguards on all their nuclear activities, and underlined the necessity of universal adherence to the Treaty and of strict compliance by all parties with their obligations under the Treaty,

Recalling the resolution on the Middle East adopted by the 1995 Review and Extension Conference on 11 May 1995, in which the Conference noted with concern the continued existence in the Middle East of unsafeguarded nuclear facilities, reaffirmed the importance of the early realization of universal adherence to the Treaty and called upon all States in the Middle East that had not yet done so, without exception, to accede to the Treaty as soon as possible and to place all their nuclear facilities under full-scope Agency safeguards,

Noting that Israel remains the only State in the Middle East that has not yet become party to the Treaty,

Concerned about the threats posed by the proliferation of nuclear weapons to the security and stability of the Middle East region,

Stressing the importance of taking confidence-building measures, in particular the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, in order to enhance peace and security in the region and to consolidate the global non-proliferation regime,

Emphasizing the need for all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, as a means of promoting this objective, inviting the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty and, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under Agency safeguards,

Noting that one hundred and seventy-six States have signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, including a number of States in the region,

1. Welcomes the conclusions on the Middle East of the 2000 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Reaffirms the importance of Israel's accession to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons and placement of all its nuclear facilities under comprehensive International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards, in realizing the goal of universal adherence to the Treaty in the Middle East;

3. Calls upon that State to accede to the Treaty without further delay and not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons, and to renounce possession of nuclear weapons, and to place all its unsafeguarded nuclear facilities under full-scope Agency safeguards as an important confidence-building measure among all States of the region and as a step towards enhancing peace and security;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "The risk of nuclear proliferation in the Middle East".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/92:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cambodia, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Palau, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Cameroon, Ethiopia, India, Tonga.

The First Committee adopted the sixth preambular paragraph by a separate recorded vote of 145 to 2, with 5 abstentions. The Assembly retained the paragraph by a recorded vote of 162 to 2, with 6 abstentions.

Radioactive waste

To enhance the safe transport of radioactive material, IAEA updated its comprehensive training manual on transport safety to include the latest requirements of the Agency's Transport Regulations. In June, the IAEA Board of Governors approved a new policy for reviewing and revising those Regulations every two years to strengthen their effectiveness and enable member States to more easily harmonize national regulations with them. In September [GC/49/RES/9], the IAEA General Conference encouraged a wider participation in the review process by concerned member States. Recognizing concerns about the potential for damage in the event of an accident while transporting radioactive materials by sea, including pollution of the marine environment, the Conference urged member States that did not have national regulatory documents governing the transport of those materials to adopt them and ensure that they conformed with the amended edition of the IAEA Transport Regulations. During the year, a number of international organizations and carriers, including the International Maritime Organization (IMO), the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) and the International Federation of Air Line Pilots Associations addressed the issue of denial of shipments of radioactive materials intended for use in medical diagnosis and treatment.

Conferences. In 2005, IAEA organized two international conferences on the safety of radioactive materials: the international conference on the safety and security of radioactive sources: towards a global system for the continuous control over sources throughout their life cycle (Bordeaux, France, 27 June–1 July), which promoted information exchange on key issues relating to the safety and security of radioactive sources and adopted a number of findings and recommendations; and the international conference on the safety of radioactive waste disposal (Tokyo, Japan, 3-7 October), which considered, among other things, possible disposal options available.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/57 without vote [agenda item 97 (b)].

Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind resolutions CM/Res.1153(XLVIII) of 1988 and CM/Res.1225(L) of 1989, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, concerning the dumping of nuclear and industrial wastes in Africa,

Welcoming resolution GC(XXXIV)/RES/530 establishing a Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste, adopted on 21 September 1990 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its thirty-fourth regular session,

Taking note of the commitment by the participants in the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security, held in Moscow on 19 and 20 April 1996, to ban the dumping at sea of radioactive wastes,

Considering its resolution 2602 C(XXIV) of 16 December 1969, in which it requested the Conference of the Committee on Disarmament, inter alia, to consider effective methods of control against the use of radiological methods of warfare,

Aware of the potential hazards underlying any use of radioactive wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and its implications for regional and international security, in particular for the security of developing countries,

Recalling all its resolutions on the matter since its forty-third session in 1988, including its resolution 51/45 J of 10 December 1996,

Also recalling resolution GC(45)/RES/10 adopted by consensus on 21 September 2001 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-fifth regular session, in which States shipping radioactive materials are invited to provide, as appropriate, assurances to concerned States, upon their request, that the national regulations of the shipping State take into account the Agency's transport regulations and to provide them with relevant information relating to the shipment of such materials; the information provided should in no case be contradictory to the measures of physical security and safety,

Welcoming the adoption at Vienna, on 5 September 1997, of the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management, as recommended by the participants at the Summit on Nuclear Safety and Security,

Noting with satisfaction that the Joint Convention entered into force on 18 June 2001,

Noting that the first Review Meeting of the Contracting Parties to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management was convened in Vienna from 3 to 14 November 2003,

Desirous of promoting the implementation of paragraph 76 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

1. Takes note of the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to a future convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons;

2. Expresses grave concern regarding any use of nuclear wastes that would constitute radiological warfare and have grave implications for the national security of all States;

3. Calls upon all States to take appropriate measures with a view to preventing any dumping of nuclear or radioactive wastes that would infringe upon the sovereignty of States;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to take into account, in the negotiations for a convention on the prohibition of radiological weapons, radioactive wastes as part of the scope of such a convention;

5. Also requests the Conference on Disarmament to intensify efforts towards an early conclusion of such a convention and to include in its report to the General Assembly at its sixty-second session the progress recorded in the negotiations on this subject;

6. Takes note of resolution CM/Res.1356(LIV) of 1991, adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity, on the Bamako Convention on the Ban on the Import of Hazardous Wastes into Africa and on the Control of Their Transboundary Movements within Africa;

7. Expresses the hope that the effective implementation of the International Atomic Energy Agency Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste will enhance the protection of all States from the dumping of radioactive wastes on their territories;

8. Appeals to all Member States that have not yet taken the necessary steps to become party to the Joint Convention on the Safety of Spent Fuel Management and on the Safety of Radioactive Waste Management to do so as soon as possible;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes".

Also on 8 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 60/73 on preventing the risk of radiological terrorism (see p. 603).

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

Africa

As at 31 December, 23 States had ratified the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) [YUN 1995, p. 203], which was opened for signature in 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 486]. China, France and the United Kingdom had ratified Protocols I and II thereto, and France had also ratified Protocol III. The Russian Federation and the United States had signed Protocols I and II. The Treaty had 55 signatories. By the terms of the Treaty, ratification by 28 States was required for its entry into force.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/456], adopted resolution 60/49 without vote [agenda item 90].

African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/53 of 10 December 1996 and 56/17 of 29 November 2001 and all its other relevant resolutions, as well as those of the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling also the signing of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) at Cairo on 11 April 1996,

Recalling further the Cairo Declaration adopted on that occasion, which emphasized that nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in regions of tension, such as the Middle East, enhance global and regional peace and security,

Taking note of the statement made by the President of the Security Council on behalf of the members of the Council on 12 April 1996, affirming that the signature of the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty constituted an important contribution by the African countries to the maintenance of international peace and security,

Considering that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, especially in the Middle East, would enhance the security of Africa and the viability of the African nuclear-weapon-free zone,

1. Calls upon African States that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Pelindaba) as soon as possible so that it may enter into force without delay;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the nuclear-weapon States that have signed the Protocols that concern them, and calls upon those that have not yet ratified the Protocols concerning them to do so as soon as possible;

3. Calls upon the States contemplated in Protocol III to the Treaty that have not yet done so to take all necessary measures to ensure the speedy application of the Treaty to territories for which they are, de jure or de facto, internationally responsible and that lie within the limits of the geographical zone established in the Treaty;

4. Calls upon the African States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons that have not yet done so to conclude comprehensive safeguards agreements with the International Atomic Energy Agency pursuant to the Treaty, thereby satisfying the requirements of article 9 (b) of and annex II to the Treaty of Pelindaba when it enters into force, and to conclude additional protocols to their safeguards agreements on the basis of the Model Protocol approved by the Board of Governors of the Agency on 15 May 1997;

5. Expresses its gratitude to the Secretary-General, the Chairman of the Commission of the African Union and the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency for the diligence with which they have rendered effective assistance to the signatories to the Treaty;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "African Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone Treaty".

Asia

Central Asia

During the year, the Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA), through its Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (see p. 648), facilitated the conclusion of seven years of negotiations to finalize the text on a Central Asian nuclear-weapon-free zone treaty. The draft text, which was considered at a meeting (Tashkent, Uzbekistan, 7-9 February) attended by the five Central Asian States (Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan), reflected developments in the field of nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation, including those relating to the CTBT (see p. 593) and the IAEA Additional Protocol (see p. 606).

On 8 December, the General Assembly decided to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first (2006) session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia"(decision 60/516).

Mongolia

The Organization continued efforts in 2005 to consolidate Mongolia's nuclear-weapon-free status, mainly through DDA's Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific (see p. 648), which organized a series of consultations with relevant UN agencies to follow up on the recommendations made in the two studies on economic and ecological vulnerabilities as they related to human security in Mongolia.

South-East Asia

In 2005, the States parties to the Treaty on the South-East Asia Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zone (Bangkok Treaty), which opened for signature in 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 207] and entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 495], maintained efforts to establish an institutional framework to implement the Treaty. To that end, Ministers from members of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN), at the twelfth meeting of the ASEAN Regional Forum (Vientiane, Lao People's Democratic Republic, 29 July), reaffirmed the importance of continuing consultation on the Treaty's Protocol between the States parties and nuclear-weapon States.

Latin America and the Caribbean

During the year, the nineteenth regular session of the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (OPANAL) (Santiago, Chile, 7-8 November) [GC/res.487], adopted the Declaration of Santiago de Chile, by which countries in the region resolved to intensify cooperation and coordination mechanisms with other nuclear-weapon-free zones and with those that might be established in the future, in order to speed up the achievement of common objectives and promote the consolidation of the legal regimes established by the zones. They reaffirmed support for the total elimination of nuclear weapons, and reiterated to the nuclear powers that had signed or ratified Additional Protocols I and II to the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) [YUN 1967, p. 13] with reservations or unilateral interpretations affecting the denuclearized status of the zone, to modify or withdraw such reservations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/457], adopted resolution 60/50 without vote [agenda item 91].

Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) was opened for signature at Mexico City on 14 February 1967,

Recalling also that, in its preamble, the Treaty of Tlatelolco states that military denuclearized zones are not an end in themselves but rather a means for achieving general and complete disarmament at a later stage,

Recalling further that, in its resolution 2286(XXII) of 5 December 1967, it welcomed with special satisfaction the Treaty of Tlatelolco as an event of historic significance in the efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to promote international peace and security,

Recalling that in 1990, 1991 and 1992 the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean approved and opened for signature a set of amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco, with the aim of enabling the full entry into force of that instrument,

Highlighting that the Treaty of Tlatelolco is now in force for thirty-three sovereign States of the region, thereby consolidating the first nuclear-weapon-free zone established in a densely populated region,

Noting with satisfaction the leadership of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean in the convening of the first Conference of States Parties and Signatories to Treaties that Establish Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones, held in Tlatelolco, Mexico, from 26 to 28 April 2005,

Reaffirming the importance of strengthening the Agency as the appropriate legal and political forum for ensuring cooperation with the agencies of other nuclear-weapon-free zones,

1. Welcomes the fact that the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) is now in force for the sovereign States of the region, and that this fact was officially acknowledged by the General Conference of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean at its eighteenth session, held at Havana on 5 and 6 November 2003, and takes note of the results of the aforementioned session of the General Conference, including the adoption of the Havana Declaration;

2. Urges the countries of the region that have not yet done so to deposit their instruments of ratification of the amendments to the Treaty of Tlatelolco approved by the General Conference of the Agency in its resolutions 267 (E-V), 268(XII) and 290 (E-VII);

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "Consolidation of the regime established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco)".

Middle East

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/63 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East [YUN 2004, p. 552], the Secretary-General, in a July report, with later addenda [A/60/126 (Part I) & Add.1, 2], provided information on the resolution's implementation. He stated that he had maintained consultation with concerned parties within and beyond the region to explore further ways of promoting the establishment of the zone, but was concerned that developments in the region since his 2004 report [YUN 2004, p. 552] might affect efforts towards that goal. Welcoming recent attempts to give new impetus to the road map for peace in the region developed by the Quartet of the European Union, the Russian Federation, the United States and the United Nations (see p. 502), the Secretary-General called on all parties concerned to resume dialogue, with a view to creating stable security conditions and an eventual settlement that would facilitate the process of establishing the zone. The report included the views of Bolivia, Canada, Chile, Egypt, Iran, Israel, Japan, Mexico, the Russian Federation and the Syrian Arab Republic.

In September, the IAEA General Conference adopted a resolution on the Middle East [GC(49)/RES/15] calling on all parties directly concerned to take the steps required to implement the proposal for a mutually and effectively verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/460], adopted resolution 60/52 without vote [agenda item 94].

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3263(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3474(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/71 of 10 December 1976, 32/82 of 12 December 1977, 33/64 of 14 December 1978, 34/77 of 11 December 1979, 35/147 of 12 December 1980, 36/87 A and B of 9 December 1981, 37/75 of 9 December 1982, 38/64 of 15 December 1983, 39/54 of 12 December 1984, 40/82 of 12 December 1985, 41/48 of 3 December 1986, 42/28 of 30 November 1987, 43/65 of 7 December 1988, 44/108 of 15 December 1989, 45/52 of 4 December 1990, 46/30 of 6 December 1991, 47/48 of 9 December 1992, 48/71 of 16 December 1993, 49/71 of 15 December 1994, 50/66 of 12 December 1995, 51/41 of 10 December 1996, 52/34 of 9 December 1997, 53/74 of 4 December 1998, 54/51 of 1 December 1999, 55/30 of 20 November 2000, 56/21 of 29 November 2001, 57/55 of 22 November 2002, 58/34 of 8 December 2003 and 59/63 of 3 December 2004 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Recalling also the recommendations for the establishment of such a zone in the Middle East consistent with paragraphs 60 to 63, and in particular paragraph 63 (d), of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the basic provisions of the above-mentioned resolutions, which call upon all parties directly concerned to consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East and, pending and during the establishment of such a zone, to declare solemnly that they will refrain, on a reciprocal basis, from producing, acquiring or in any other way possessing nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive devices and from permitting the stationing of nuclear weapons on their territory by any third party, to agree to place their nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and to declare their support for the establishment of the zone and to deposit such declarations with the Security Council for consideration, as appropriate,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all States to acquire and develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes,

Emphasizing the need for appropriate measures on the question of the prohibition of military attacks on nuclear facilities,

Bearing in mind the consensus reached by the General Assembly since its thirty-fifth session that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East would greatly enhance international peace and security,

Desirous of building on that consensus so that substantial progress can be made towards establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East,

Welcoming all initiatives leading to general and complete disarmament, including in the region of the Middle East, and in particular on the establishment therein of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons,

Noting the peace negotiations in the Middle East, which should be of a comprehensive nature and represent an appropriate framework for the peaceful settlement of contentious issues in the region,

Recognizing the importance of credible regional security, including the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Emphasizing the essential role of the United Nations in the establishment of a mutually verifiable nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 59/63,

1. Urges all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and, as a means of promoting this objective, invites the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon all countries of the region that have not done so, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Takes note of resolution GC(49)/RES/15, adopted on 30 September 2005 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency at its forty-ninth regular session, concerning the application of Agency safeguards in the Middle East;

4. Notes the importance of the ongoing bilateral Middle East peace negotiations and the activities of the multilateral Working Group on Arms Control and Regional Security in promoting mutual confidence and security in the Middle East, including the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone;

5. Invites all countries of the region, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East, to declare their support for establishing such a zone, consistent with paragraph 63 (d) of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to deposit those declarations with the Security Council;

6. Also invites those countries, pending the establishment of the zone, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or permit the stationing on their territories, or territories under their control, of nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices;

7. Invites the nuclear-weapon States and all other States to render their assistance in the establishment of the zone and at the same time to refrain from any action that runs counter to both the letter and the spirit of the present resolution;

8. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

9. Invites all parties to consider the appropriate means that may contribute towards the goal of general and complete disarmament and the establishment of a zone free of weapons of mass destruction in the region of the Middle East;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to pursue consultations with the States of the region and other concerned States, in accordance with paragraph 7 of resolution 46/30 and taking into account the evolving situation in the region, and to seek from those States their views on the measures outlined in chapters III and IV of the study annexed to his report of 10 October 1990 or other relevant measures, in order to move towards the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East".

South Pacific

In 2005, the number of States that had ratified the 1985 South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty (Treaty of Rarotonga) [YUN 1985, p. 58], remained at 17. China and the Russian Federation had ratified Protocols 2 and 3, and France, the United Kingdom and the United States had ratified all three Protocols.

Under Protocol 1, the States internationally responsible for territories situated within the zone would undertake to apply the relevant prohibitions of the Treaty to those territories; under Protocol 2, the five nuclear-weapon States would provide security assurances to parties or territories within the same zone; and under Protocol 3, the five would not carry out nuclear tests in the zone.

Southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

The first Conference of States Parties and Signatories to Treaties that Establish Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones (Tlatelolco, Mexico, 26-28 April) [A/60/121] considered cooperative ways of strengthening the nuclear-weapon-free zone regime, thereby contributing to the disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation processes and advancing the achievement of the universal goal of a nuclear-weapon-free world. The Conference, attended by the States parties and signatories to the Treaties of Bangkok, Pelindaba, Rarotonga and Tlatelolco establishing the four zones currently in existence, and by Mongolia, which maintained an international nuclear-weapon-free status, adopted the Declaration of the Conference of Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones (the Declaration of Tlatelolco), in which they reaffirmed that the continued existence of nuclear weapons constituted a threat to all humanity. They expressed the conviction that the establishment of internationally-recognized nuclear-weapon-free zones strengthened global and regional peace and security, reinforced the nuclear non-proliferation regime and contributed to nuclear disarmament. They emphasized that the status of those zones should be respected by all States within and outside the regions covered, most notably the nuclear-weapon States whose cooperation was essential for the maximum effectiveness of the zones. The participants also reaffirmed their commitment to reaching the common objectives set forth in the treaties of the four existing zones.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/58 by recorded vote (167-3-8) [agenda item 97 (s)].

Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/45 B of 10 December 1996, 52/38 N of 9 December 1997, 53/77 Q of 4 December 1998, 54/54 L of 1 December 1999, 55/33 I of 20 November 2000, 56/24 G of 29 November 2001, 57/73 of 22 November 2002, 58/49 of 8 December 2003 and 59/85 of 3 December 2004,

Recalling also the adoption by the Disarmament Commission at its 1999 substantive session of a text entitled "Establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned",

Determined to pursue the total elimination of nuclear weapons,

Determined also to continue to contribute to the prevention of the proliferation of nuclear weapons in all its aspects and to the process of general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control, in particular in the field of nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction, with a view to strengthening international peace and security, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the provisions on nuclear-weapon-free zones of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Stressing the importance of the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba establishing nuclear-weapon-free zones, as well as the Antarctic Treaty, to, inter alia, achieve a world entirely free of nuclear weapons,

Underlining the value of enhancing cooperation among the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaty members by means of mechanisms such as joint meetings of States parties, signatories and observers to those treaties,

Noting, in this context, that the first Conference of States Parties and Signatories to Treaties that Establish Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones was held in Tlatelolco, Mexico, from 26 to 28 April 2005, on the eve of the 2005 Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,

Recalling the applicable principles and rules of international law relating to the freedom of the high seas and the rights of passage through maritime space, including those of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,

1. Welcomes the continued contribution that the Antarctic Treaty and the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba are making towards freeing the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas covered by those treaties from nuclear weapons;

2. Also welcomes the ratification by all original parties of the Treaty of Rarotonga, and calls upon eligible States to adhere to the treaty and the protocols thereto;

3. Further welcomes the efforts towards the completion of the ratification process of the Treaty of Pelindaba, and calls upon the States of the region that have not yet done so to sign and ratify the treaty, with the aim of its early entry into force;

4. Calls upon all concerned States to continue to work together in order to facilitate adherence to the protocols to nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties by all relevant States that have not yet done so;

5. Welcomes the steps taken to conclude further nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, and calls upon all States to consider all relevant proposals, including those reflected in its resolutions on the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in the Middle East and South Asia;

6. Also welcomes the ongoing efforts to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia;

7. Affirms its conviction of the important role of nuclear-weapon-free zones in strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime and in extending the areas of the world that are nuclear-weapon-free, and, with particular reference to the responsibilities of the nuclear-weapon States, calls upon all States to support the process of nuclear disarmament and to work for the total elimination of all nuclear weapons;

8. Welcomes the progress made on increased collaboration within and between zones at the first Conference of States Parties and Signatories to Treaties that Establish Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones, at which States reaffirmed their need to cooperate in order to achieve their common objectives;

9. Congratulates the States parties and signatories to the treaties of Tlatelolco, Rarotonga, Bangkok and Pelindaba, as well as Mongolia, for their efforts to pursue the common goals envisaged in those treaties and to promote the nuclear-weapon-free status of the southern hemisphere and adjacent areas, and calls upon them to explore and implement further ways and means of cooperation among themselves and their treaty agencies;

10. Encourages the competent authorities of the nuclear-weapon-free-zone treaties to provide assistance to the States parties and signatories to those treaties so as to facilitate the accomplishment of these goals;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Nuclear-weapon-free southern hemisphere and adjacent areas".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/58:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Bhutan, India, Israel, Marshall Islands, Pakistan, Palau, Russian Federation, Spain.

The First Committee adopted paragraph 5 and its last three words, "and South Asia", by two separate recorded votes of 140 to 2, with 7 abstentions and 141 to 1, with 9 abstentions, respectively. The Assembly retained that paragraph and its last three words, by recorded votes of 162 to 2, with 7 abstentions and 162 to 1, with 9 abstentions, respectively.

Bacteriological (biological) and chemical weapons

In 2005, the continuing threat posed by biological and chemical weapons, particularly the possibility of their acquisition by terrorists, remained of pressing concern to the international community, fuelling further calls for strengthening the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction (BWC) (see p. 615) and the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (CWC) (see p. 616). States parties to both instruments continued to implement national measures addressing those concerns, while the Security Council Committee established pursuant to Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544] to monitor Member States' implementation of measures to combat the proliferation of WMDs, including chemical and biological weapons, became fully operational and began the substantive part of its work (see p. 600).

Bacteriological (biological) weapons

Meeting of States parties

As decided by the States parties to BWC in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 559], the third and final scheduled annual meeting of those States was convened (Geneva, 5-9 December) [BWC/MSP/2005/3] to discuss and promote common understanding and effective action on the content, promulgation and adoption of codes of conduct for scientists. While recognizing that they themselves had the primary responsibility for implementing the Convention, States parties acknowledged that codes of conduct voluntarily adopted for scientists in relevant fields could support the object and purpose of the Convention. Considering the differences in national requirements and circumstances, a range of different approaches existed for developing such codes, which should reflect the Convention's provisions and contribute to national implementation measures, while not impeding scientific discovery, placing undue constraints on research or international cooperation and exchange for peaceful purposes. Since science had the potential to be misused in ways prohibited by the Convention, codes of conduct should require and enable relevant actors to reasonably foresee the consequences of their activities.

The States parties agreed that those codes should not just apply to scientists but to everyone involved in scientific activity, including managers and technical and ancillary staff. The codes should be compatible with national legislation and regulatory controls and contribute to national implementation measures. They should be simple, clear and easily understandable to scientists and the wider civil society; helpful and effective for guiding relevant actors in making decisions and taking action in accordance with the Convention's purposes and objectives; sufficiently broad in scope; and regularly reviewed, evaluated for effectiveness and revised as necessary.

Regarding the adoption of codes of conduct, States parties also agreed on demonstrating the benefits of codes and encouraging relevant actors to develop them themselves; using existing codes, mechanisms, frameworks and bodies as far as possible; and tailoring adoption strategies to individual needs. States parties further agreed on the value of continuous efforts on promulgation of the codes through appropriate channels, and that the lessons, perspectives, recommendations and conclusions drawn from the statements and working papers presented at the experts' meeting (see below), as well as a synthesis of the issues considered and views expressed, prepared by the Chairman and annexed to the meeting's report, should be considered. Participants were encouraged to inform the Sixth Review Conference of any actions, measures or steps they had taken based on discussions at the 2005 meeting of States parties and experts' meeting, in order to facilitate the work of the Conference. The States parties decided that the Preparatory Committee for the Sixth Review Conference would be held in Geneva, in April 2006, with the Conference scheduled for November and December of the same year.

Experts' meeting

In accordance with the outcome of the Fifth Review Conference [YUN 2002, p. 516], the 2005 meeting of States parties (see above) was preceded by a preparatory expert meeting (Geneva, 13-24 June) [BWC/MSP/2005/MX/3], which addressed issues relating to the topics discussed by the meeting of States parties. The experts also considered government science and other relevant matters concerning universities, funders, research, publishers, industry and professional bodies. The meeting had before it a number of working papers and heard statements and thematic presentations from States parties and observer organizations. On 24 June, the meeting adopted its report, to which was annexed a compilation of the lessons, perspectives, recommendations, conclusions and proposals drawn from the presentations, statements and working papers considered.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/470], adopted resolution 60/96 without vote [agenda item 104].

Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete and effective prohibition of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and to their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that there are one hundred and fifty-five States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, including all of the permanent members of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the implementation of the recommendations of the Review Conferences, including the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, and to provide such information and data in conformity with standardized procedure to the Secretary-General on an annual basis and no later than 15 April,

Welcoming the reaffirmation made in the Final Declaration of the Fourth Review Conference that under all circumstances the use of bacteriological (biological) and toxin weapons and their development, production and stockpiling are effectively prohibited under article I of the Convention,

Recalling the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference to hold three annual meetings of the States parties of one week's duration each year commencing in 2003 until the Sixth Review Conference and to hold a two-week meeting of experts to prepare for each meeting of the States parties,

Recalling also the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference that the Sixth Review Conference would be held in Geneva in 2006 and would be preceded by a preparatory committee,

1. Notes with satisfaction the increase in the number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, reaffirms the call upon all signatory States that have not yet ratified the Convention to do so without delay, and calls upon those States that have not signed the Convention to become parties thereto at an early date, thus contributing to the achievement of universal adherence to the Convention;

2. Welcomes the information and data provided to date, and reiterates its call upon all States parties to the Convention to participate in the exchange of information and data agreed to in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Convention;

3. Recalls the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference to discuss and promote common understanding and effective action in 2003 on the two topics of the adoption of necessary national measures to implement the prohibitions set forth in the Convention, including the enactment of penal legislation, and national mechanisms to establish and maintain the security and oversight of pathogenic micro-organisms and toxins; in 2004 on the two topics of enhancing international capabilities for responding to, investigating and mitigating the effects of cases of alleged use of biological or toxin weapons or suspicious outbreaks of disease, and strengthening and broadening national and international institutional efforts and existing mechanisms for the surveillance, detection, diagnosis and combating of infectious diseases affecting humans, animals and plants; and in 2005 on the topic of the content, promulgation and adoption of codes of conduct for scientists; and calls upon the States parties to the Convention to participate in its implementation;

4. Welcomes the significant participation of the States parties at the meetings of States parties and meetings of experts to date and the constructive and useful exchange of information achieved, and welcomes also the discussion and the promotion of common understanding and effective action on agreed topics;

5. Notes that, in accordance with the decision reached at the Fifth Review Conference, the Sixth Review Conference will be held in Geneva in 2006 and the dates will be formally agreed by the preparatory committee for that Conference, which will be open to all States parties to the Convention and which will meet in Geneva during the week beginning 24 April 2006;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render the necessary assistance to the depositary Governments of the Convention and to provide such services as may be required for the implementation of the decisions and recommendations of the Review Conferences, including all necessary assistance to the annual meetings of the States parties and the meetings of experts, and to render the necessary assistance and provide such services as may be required for the Sixth Review Conference and the preparations for it;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Chemical weapons

Chemical weapons convention

In 2005, Antigua and Barbuda, Bhutan, Cambodia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Grenada, Honduras, Niue and Vanuatu ratified or acceded to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction (CWC), bringing the total number of States parties to 175. The number of signatories stood at 165. The Convention, adopted by the Conference on Disarmament in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 65], entered into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499].

The tenth session of the Conference of the States parties (The Hague, Netherlands, 7-11 November) [C-10/5] considered, among other issues, the status of the Convention's implementation, fostering international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities, ensuring the Convention's universality and administrative and budgetary matters. The Conference adopted decisions on follow-up to the plan of action regarding the implementation of article VII of the Convention addressing national implementation measures; a format for the formulation, specification or renewal of offers of assistance under article X on assistance and protection from chemical weapons; amendments to the confidentiality policy of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (OPCW); the full implementation of article XI on economic and technological development; the implementation of the plan of action concerning the Convention's universality; the establishment of an OPCW Office in Africa; the captive use of Schedule 1 chemicals; and administrative, financial and oversight matters, including OPCW's 2006 programme and budget. The Conference approved the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya's request for an extension of the intermediate deadlines for the destruction of its categories 1, 2 and 3 chemical weapons stockpiles. It decided that 29 April—the date in 1997 of the Convention's entry into force—would be observed yearly as the day of remembrance for all victims of chemical warfare. It also decided to hold its eleventh session in December 2006.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/67 without vote [agenda item 97 (j)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the subject of chemical weapons, in particular resolution 59/72 of 3 December 2004, adopted without a vote, in which it noted with appreciation the ongoing work to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction,

Determined to achieve the effective prohibition of the development, production, acquisition, transfer, stockpiling and use of chemical weapons and their destruction,

Noting with satisfaction that, since the adoption of resolution 59/72, seven additional States have ratified the Convention or acceded to it, bringing the total number of States parties to the Convention to one hundred and seventy-four,

Reaffirming the importance of the outcome of the First Special Session of the Conference of the States Parties to Review the Operation of the Chemical Weapons Convention, including the Political Declaration, in which the States parties reaffirmed their commitment to achieving the objective and purpose of the Convention, and the final report, which addressed all aspects of the Convention and made important recommendations on its continued implementation,

1. Emphasizes that the universality of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction is fundamental to the achievement of its objective and purpose and acknowledges progress made in the implementation of the action plan for the universality of the Convention, and calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Convention without delay;

2. Underlines that the Convention and its implementation contribute to enhancing international peace and security, and emphasizes that its full, universal and effective implementation will contribute further to that purpose by excluding completely, for the sake of all humankind, the possibility of the use of chemical weapons;

3. Stresses that the full and effective implementation of all provisions of the Convention, including those on national implementation (article VII) and assistance and protection against chemical weapons (article X), constitutes an important contribution to the efforts of the United Nations in the global fight against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations;

4. Also stresses the importance to the Convention that all possessors of chemical weapons, chemical weapons production facilities or chemical weapons development facilities, including previously declared possessor States, should be among the States parties to the Convention, and welcomes progress to that end;

5. Notes that the effective application of the verification system builds confidence in compliance with the Convention by States parties;

6. Stresses the importance of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in verifying compliance with the provisions of the Convention as well as in promoting the timely and efficient accomplishment of all its objectives;

7. Urges all States parties to the Convention to meet in full and on time their obligations under the Convention and to support the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in its implementation activities;

8. Welcomes progress made in the implementation of the action plan on the implementation of article VII obligations and commends the States parties and the Technical Secretariat for assisting other States parties, on request, with the implementation of their article VII obligations, and urges States parties that have not fulfilled their obligations under article VII to do so without further delay, in accordance with their constitutional processes;

9. Reaffirms the importance of article XI provisions relating to the economic and technological development of States parties and recalls that the full, effective and non-discriminatory implementation of those provisions contributes to universality, and also reaffirms the undertaking of the States parties to foster international cooperation for peaceful purposes in the field of chemical activities of the States parties and the importance of that cooperation and its contribution to the promotion of the Convention as a whole;

10. Notes with appreciation the ongoing work of the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons to achieve the objective and purpose of the Convention, to ensure the full implementation of its provisions, including those for international verification of compliance with it, and to provide a forum for consultation and cooperation among States parties, and also notes with appreciation the substantial contribution of the Technical Secretariat and the Director-General to the continued development and success of the Organization;

11. Welcomes the cooperation between the United Nations and the Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons within the framework of the Relationship Agreement between the United Nations and the Organization, in accordance with the provisions of the Convention;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production, Stockpiling and Use of Chemical Weapons and on Their Destruction".

Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons

In 2005, OPCW continued to undertake wide-ranging chemical disarmament, non-proliferation and assistance and protection activities, towards the complete elimination of chemical weapons.

Since the Convention's entry into force in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 499], OPCW had verified the destruction of approximately 12,435 tons of chemical warfare agents declared by five of the six identified chemical weapons possessor States, accounting for over 17 per cent of the total stockpiles declared. To ensure the complete destruction of those weapons and their non-proliferation, OPCW undertook up to 2,200 inspection exercises at over 800 sites in 72 countries. In the area of international cooperation and assistance, OPCW collaborated with Ukraine and the Euro-Atlantic Disaster Response Coordination Centre of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in the organization of an exercise on the delivery of assistance entitled "Joint Assistance 2005" conducted at the Yavoriv training area (Lviv, Ukraine, 9-13 October), aimed at testing the requisite skills and capacities in investigating alleged use of chemical warfare agents. The exercise, which involved some 1,000 participants from OPCW member States, defined international cooperation procedures for delivering emergency assistance following a simulated terrorist attack with chemical warfare agents. OPCW also undertook capacity-building projects, notably in the Middle East and Central Asia, while implementation efforts were enhanced by a number of national and regional meetings in Latin America and the Caribbean.

The OPCW Executive Council held its fortieth (15-18 March), forty-first (28 June–1 July) forty-second (27-30 September) and forty-third (6-9 December) sessions. It adopted decisions on the destruction of chemical weapons and/or the conversion of chemical weapons production facilities (CWPFs) and on issues relating to the chemical industry and financial matters. It made recommendations regarding the plan of action for implementing article VII obligations on national implementation measures, reviewed the effectiveness of verification activities, monitored the implementation of the action plan for the Convention's universality, approved facility agreements between OPCW and a number of States parties and established an open-ended working group on the establishment of an OPCW office in Africa.

Conventional weapons

Programme of Action on illicit trade in small arms

In 2005, the international community continued to address security challenges relating to the spread of small arms within the framework of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The Security Council, in statement S/PRST/2005/7 (see p. 619), encouraged international and regional cooperation in identifying the origin and transfer of those weapons in order to prevent their diversion, particularly to terrorist groups, and to restrict their supply to areas of instability. The General Assembly, in decision 60/519 (see p. 621), adopted an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace small arms and light weapons effectively, and in resolution 60/81 (see p. 625) established a Group of Governmental Experts to consider further steps to enhance international cooperation in tackling illicit brokering in those weapons. In resolution 60/68 (see p. 621), it called on States to better address the negative humanitarian and development impact of illicit small arms and light weapons and their excessive accumulation, including by integrating comprehensive armed violence prevention programmes into their national development strategies.

The second biennial meeting of States to consider the implementation of the Programme of Action (New York, 11-15 July), as well as ongoing consultations on the illicit brokering of those weapons, reached a broad consensus on the need for further international action to address the small arms problem. Member States continued to make progress in strengthening the Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and related Protocols and to promote transparency in armaments. In July, the Protocol against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Their Parts and Components and Ammunition, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime [YUN 2001, p. 1036], entered into force.

Report of Secretary-General. Responding to Security Council presidential statement S/PRST/2004/1 [YUN 2004, p. 559], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [S/2005/69] updating the Council on the initiatives undertaken to implement the recommendations contained in his 2002 report [YUN 2002, p. 521] on ways the Council could contribute to dealing with the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons. The Secretary-General reported that much progress had been achieved in some key areas, including under the recommendation on tracing illicit arms flow, through the work of the Open-ended Working Group (see below) which negotiated the draft international instrument for the timely and reliable identification and tracing of small arms and light weapons, adopted subsequently by the Assembly in decision 60/519 (see p. 621). Progress was also being made on the issue of the illicit brokering in those weapons, which had been a source of concern, particularly in connection with the activities of terrorist groups. Notable progress had also been made regarding the systematic establishment of monitoring mechanisms to support the implementation of sanctions, the adoption of more vigorous measures against violations of arms embargoes and efforts to increase participation in the Organization's reporting instruments on arms transparency. However, more needed to be done in other areas, particularly regarding interaction between the Council and the Assembly, for which no structure had been established. In order to develop a coherent and comprehensive UN policy on small arms and light weapons, he recommended that both organs establish a committee to examine how they might work together in that regard. Much also remained to be done to implement his other recommendations regarding support for the Small Arms Advisory Service and for the reintegration of former combatants into their communities.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 17 February [meeting 5127], following consultations among Security Council members, the President made statement S/PRST/2005/7 on behalf of the Council:

> The Security Council welcomes the report of the Secretary-General of 7 February 2005 on the implementation of his recommendations to the Council on small arms, and reaffirms the statements by its President of 24 September 1999, 31 August 2001, 31 October 2002 and 19 January 2004.
> The Council recalls its primary responsibility under the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security. In this regard, the Council recognizes that the dissemination of illicit small arms and light weapons has hampered the peaceful settlement of disputes, fuelled such disputes into armed conflicts and contributed to the prolongation of such armed conflicts. The Council reaffirms the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter and, subject to the Charter, the right of each State to import, produce and retain small arms and light weapons for its self-defence and security needs.
> The Council encourages the arms-exporting countries to exercise the highest degree of responsibility in small arms and light weapons transactions according to their existing responsibilities under relevant international law. It also encourages international and regional cooperation in identifying the origin and transfer of small arms and light weapons in order to prevent their diversion, in particular, to Al-Qaida and other terrorist groups. The Council welcomes the significant steps that have been taken by Member States and international and regional organizations in this regard. The obligation of Member States to enforce the arms embargo should be coupled with enhanced international and regional cooperation concerning arms exports. The Council encourages Members to undertake vigorous actions aimed at restricting the supply of small arms, light weapons and ammunitions to areas of instability.
> The Council takes note that the United Nations Second Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects will be held from 11 to 15 July 2005, and encourages Member States to fully cooperate with the Chair of the Meeting to have a successful outcome.
> The Council notes with appreciation that regional actions on illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects have been strengthened in recent years, and encourages the continuation of assistance at the national, regional and international levels that would fit the needs of Member States to implement the recommendations contained in the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted on 20 July 2001 by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects.
> The Council welcomes the ongoing efforts by the open-ended working group established by the General Assembly in resolution 58/241 of 23 December 2003 to negotiate an international instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons, and calls upon all Member States to support all efforts aimed at this purpose. It expresses the wish that the ongoing work within the group will lead to a positive conclusion at its third session as scheduled.
> The Council welcomes the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 59/86 of 3 December 2004 in which, among other things, it requested the Secretary-General to continue broad-based consultations on further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons, with a view to establishing a group of governmental experts to consider the issue.

The Council welcomes the inclusion of man-portable air defence systems, on an exceptional basis, in the United Nations Register on Conventional Arms.

The Council further encourages Member States that have not already done so to establish the necessary legislative or other measures, including the use of authenticated end-user certificates, to ensure effective control over the export and transit of small arms and light weapons.

The Council renews the support given to the plan of the Economic Community of West African States to strengthen the moratorium signed in Abuja on 31 October 1998 on the import, export and manufacture of small arms and light weapons, and to replace it with a mandatory convention. It welcomes the decision by the European Council on 2 December 2004 to significantly support this initiative, and calls upon all States and organizations in a position to do so to support this endeavour.

The Council calls upon all Member States to enforce all Council resolutions on sanctions, including those imposing arms embargoes, in accordance with the Charter, and to bring their own domestic implementation into compliance with the Council's measures on sanctions. The Council calls upon all Member States to continue to make available to the sanctions committees all pertinent information on any alleged violations of arms embargoes and to take appropriate measures to investigate such allegations. The Council urges Member States in a position to do so to provide assistance to interested States in strengthening their capacity to fulfil their obligations in this regard.

The Council underlines the fact that the issue of the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons must be addressed together with the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process in the post-conflict phases. The Council recognizes that disarmament, demobilization and reintegration is closely linked with long-term peace and security in a post-conflict situation, and recalls that a growing number of peacekeeping missions contain the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration element as part of their mandate. In this regard, the Council stresses the importance of a comprehensive international and regional approach to disarmament, demobilization and reintegration that is not limited to the political and security aspects of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants, but addresses also its social and economic aspects, including special needs of child soldiers and women.

The Council, while bearing in mind that the issue of the illicit small arms and light weapons has a multidisciplinary nature, encourages Member States, in a position to do so, to provide assistance and support to the United Nations Coordinating Action on Small Arms mechanism.

The Council continues to recognize the need to engage the relevant international organizations, non-governmental organizations, business and financial institutions and other actors at the international, regional and local levels to contribute to the implementation of arms embargoes and to the wider objective of preventing illicit trafficking of small arms and light weapons.

The Council requests the Secretary-General to update the Council on 28 February 2006 for its earliest possible consideration of the implementation of all the recommendations contained in his report of 20 September 2002 on small arms.

Working Group activities. The Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, established by General Assembly resolution 58/241 [YUN 2003, p. 564], held its second (24 January–4 February) and third (6-17 June) substantive sessions [A/60/88 & Corr.1, 2], in New York. The Group, in a total of 58 meetings, negotiated the instrument, based on the Chairman's draft text. Following several readings of the draft text, the Group considered, on 17 June, the Chairman's compromise proposals and adopted by consensus a draft international instrument of a political character, which it recommended for adoption by the General Assembly. The Group also recommended that, the issue of small arms and light weapons ammunition be addressed in a comprehensive manner as part of a separate process and that the applicability of the provisions of the draft instrument to UN peacekeeping operations be considered further. The draft instrument was annexed to the Group's report.

Biennial meeting of States. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/86 [YUN 2004, p. 561], the Second Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects [YUN 2001, p. 499] was convened (New York, 11-15 July) [A/CONF.192/BMS/2005/1]. It had before it the report of the Open-ended Working Group to negotiate an international instrument (see above) and national reports on the implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action submitted by 100 States. The Meeting considered the implementation of the Programme under the following themes: weapons collection and destruction; stockpile management; disarmament, demobilization and reintegration of former combatants; capacity-building; resource mobilization; institution-building; marking and tracing; linkages (terrorism, organized crime, trafficking in drugs and precious minerals); import/export control; illicit brokering; human development; public awareness and culture of peace; and children, women and the elderly. International cooperation and assistance were discussed as a cross-cutting theme. Some issues relevant to the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons but not covered by the Programme were also addressed.

Member States reaffirmed their strong commitment to the implementation of the Programme of Action, and while welcoming the significant progress made in that regard at the national, regional and global levels, they recognized that further action was needed to fulfil the commitments contained in the Programme. The Meeting, with a view to strengthening the implementation of the Programme and contributing to a successful review conference in 2006, noted that further follow-up to the implementation process could benefit from being consolidated around future biennial meetings of States.

Report of Secretary-General. As requested in General Assembly resolutions 59/74 [YUN 2004, p. 560] and 59/86 [ibid., p. 561], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/161] covering the period from July 2004 to July 2005, which summarized national, subregional and regional activities undertaken in Africa to assist States in curbing the illicit trade in small arms and in collecting and disposing of them. The report also provided an overview of activities undertaken by the UN system and by States to combat the illicit trade in those weapons and to implement the 2001 Programme of Action.

The Secretary-General noted that continuing efforts were being made to assist countries in addressing the proliferation of illicit weapons in their territories in implementing the provisions of the 2001 Programme of Action. Efforts at the regional level were also very encouraging and there was a noticeable improvement in the collaboration and cooperation of members of the Coordinating Action on Small Arms (CASA) mechanism [YUN 1998, p. 525]. Initiatives undertaken by the UN system under the auspices of CASA attested to the fact that assistance to States and the development of capacity to implement the 2001 Programme of Action remained a central priority of the United Nations. At the global level, the outcome of the work of the Open-ended Working Group to negotiate an international instrument on tracing such weapons constituted a significant step towards the realization of the commitments under the 2001 Programme of Action. That politically binding international instrument, agreed upon by the Group, would provide States with an important tool to enhance cooperation in tracing the sources of leakage of small arms and light weapons into the illicit trade.

Communications. On 13 June [A/59/844], the United Kingdom transmitted the conclusions of an international experts' meeting (London, 26 May), which explored how an arms trade treaty could help to set common global principles for the trade in conventional arms.

On 23 September [A/60/379-S/2005/606], Georgia transmitted a statement by its Foreign Ministry on recent developments in the conflict zone of its Tskhinvali region, including the alleged display by separatist forces of heavy conventional weapons and of the existence of illicit arms in the zone.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly adopted decision 60/519 by recorded vote (151-0-25) [agenda item 97].

International instrument to enable States to identify and trace, in a timely and reliable manner, illicit small arms and light weapons

At its 61st plenary meeting, on 8 December 2005, the General Assembly, by a recorded vote of 151 to none, with 25 abstentions, and on the recommendation of the First Committee, decided to adopt the International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, contained in the annex to the report of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons.

Also, on 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted five resolutions relating to conventional weapons and the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons. The Assembly adopted resolution 60/68 by recorded vote (177-1-0) [agenda item 97].

Addressing the negative humanitarian and development impact of the illicit manufacture, transfer and circulation of small arms and light weapons and their excessive accumulation

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its respect for and commitment to international law and the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing that, as stated in the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, the illicit manufacture, transfer and circulation of small arms and light weapons and their excessive accumulation have a wide range of humanitarian and socio-economic consequences and pose a serious threat to peace, reconciliation, safety, security, stability and sustainable development at the individual, local, national, regional and international levels,

Concerned by the implications that poverty and underdevelopment may have for the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, and determined to reduce the human suffering caused by the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects and to enhance the respect for life and the dignity of the human person through the promotion of a culture of peace,

Reaffirming the urgent necessity for international cooperation and assistance, including financial and technical assistance, as appropriate, to support and facilitate efforts at the local, national, regional and global levels to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects,

Recalling the second biennial meeting of States to consider the implementation of the Programme of Action at which States, while welcoming the significant progress made in that regard, recognized that further action was required to fulfil the commitments undertaken in the Programme of Action,

Recognizing that, in 2005, world leaders expressed grave concern at the negative effects on development, peace and security, and human rights posed by, inter alia, the illicit trade of small arms and light weapons, and that they committed themselves to supporting the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Noting, in that regard, that the 2006 review conference on the Programme of Action represents an opportunity to address interconnected peace and security and development challenges, which are relevant to the agenda of the conference,

Placing particular emphasis on the regions of the world where conflicts have come to an end and where serious problems with the excessive and destabilizing accumulation of small arms and light weapons have to be dealt with urgently,

Calls upon States, when addressing the issue of the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, explore ways, as appropriate, to more effectively address the humanitarian and development impact of the illicit manufacture, transfer and circulation of small arms and light weapons and their excessive accumulation, in particular in conflict or post-conflict situations, including by:

(a) Developing, where appropriate, comprehensive armed violence prevention programmes integrated into national development strategies, including poverty reduction strategies;

(b) Building on the commitment by States and appropriate international and regional organizations in a position to do so to, upon the request of the relevant authorities, seriously consider rendering assistance, including technical and financial assistance where needed, such as small arms funds, in order to support the implementation of measures to prevent, combat and eradicate the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, as contained in the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

(c) Encouraging United Nations peacekeeping operations to address the safe storage and disposal of small arms and light weapons as an integral part of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes;

(d) Systematically including national measures to regulate small arms and light weapons in longer term post-conflict peacebuilding strategies and programmes;

(e) Ensuring, where appropriate, that the activities mentioned in subparagraphs (c) and (d) above take full account of the roles that women and women's organizations could play in small arms disarmament, demobilization and reintegration processes; the requirement that the needs of women and girl combatants and dependants be addressed in disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes; and the commitment to promote and protect the rights and welfare of children in armed conflicts.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/68:

Against: United States.

Abstaining: None.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/71 without vote [agenda item 97 (k)].

Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and collecting them

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/74 of 3 December 2004 on assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them,

Deeply concerned by the magnitude of human casualty and suffering, especially among children, caused by the illicit proliferation and use of small arms and light weapons,

Concerned by the negative impact that the illicit proliferation and use of those weapons continue to have on the efforts of States in the Sahelo-Saharan subregion in the areas of poverty eradication, sustainable development and the maintenance of peace, security and stability,

Taking note of the latest report of the Secretary-General on assistance to States for curbing illicit traffic in small arms and collecting them and the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects, in which he states, inter alia, that continued efforts are being made to provide assistance to countries in need of addressing the proliferation of illicit weapons in their territories,

Welcoming the decision taken by the Economic Community of West African States to strengthen the moratorium on the importation, exportation and manufacture of small arms and light weapons in West Africa, adopted by the Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community at Abuja on 31 October 1998, by upgrading it to a legally binding instrument,

Welcoming also, in that regard, the decision of the European Union to significantly support the initiative of the Economic Community to strengthen the moratorium,

Welcoming further the decision taken by the Economic Community to establish a Small Arms Unit and to adopt a new Small Arms Control Programme,

Bearing in mind the Bamako Declaration on an African Common Position on the Illicit Proliferation, Circulation and Trafficking of Small Arms and Light Weapons, adopted at Bamako on 1 December 2000,

Recalling the report of the Secretary-General entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all", in which he emphasized that States must strive just as hard to eliminate the threat of illicit small arms and light weapons as they do to eliminate the threat of weapons of mass destruction,

Taking note of the report of the second biennial meeting of States to consider the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects at the national, regional and global levels, held in New York from 11 to 15 July 2005,

Welcoming the expression of support in the 2005 World Summit Outcome for the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Taking note of the draft International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, concluded in June 2005,

Recognizing the important role that the organizations of civil society play in raising public awareness in efforts to curb the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons,

1. Commends the United Nations, international, regional and other organizations for their assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and collecting them;

2. Encourages the Secretary-General to pursue his efforts in the context of the implementation of General Assembly resolution 49/75 G of 15 December 1994 and the recommendations of the United Nations advisory missions, aimed at curbing the illicit circulation of small arms and light weapons and collecting them in the affected States that so request, with the support of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa and in close cooperation with the African Union;

3. Encourages the international community to support the implementation of the moratorium on the importation, exportation and manufacture of small arms and light weapons in West Africa, and to extend further assistance in transforming the moratorium into a legally binding instrument;

4. Encourages the countries of the Sahelo-Saharan subregion to facilitate the effective functioning of national commissions to combat the illicit proliferation of small arms and light weapons, and, in that regard, invites the international community to lend its support wherever possible;

5. Encourages the collaboration of organizations and associations of civil society in the efforts of the national commissions to combat the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

6. Also encourages cooperation among State organs, international organizations and civil society in supporting programmes and projects aimed at combating the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and collecting them;

7. Calls upon the international community to provide technical and financial support to strengthen the capacity of civil society organizations to take action to combat the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons;

8. Invites the Secretary-General and those States and organizations that are in a position to do so to continue to provide assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and collecting them;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consider the matter and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session an item entitled "Assistance to States for curbing the illicit traffic in small arms and light weapons and collecting them"

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/74 without vote [agenda item 97 (dd)].

Problems arising from the accumulation of conventional ammunition stockpiles in surplus

The General Assembly,

Mindful of contributing to the process initiated within the framework of the United Nations reform to make the Organization more effective in maintaining peace and security by giving it the resources and tools it needs for conflict prevention, peaceful resolution of disputes, peacekeeping, post-conflict peacebuilding and reconstruction,

Underlining the importance of a comprehensive and integrated approach to disarmament through the development of practical measures,

Taking note of the report of the Group of Experts on the problem of ammunition and explosives,

Recalling the recommendation contained in paragraph 27 of the report submitted by the Chairman of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons, namely, to address the issue of small arms and light weapons ammunition in a comprehensive manner as part of a separate process conducted within the framework of the United Nations,

Noting with satisfaction the work and measures pursued at the regional and subregional levels with regard to the issue of conventional ammunition,

Recalling its decision 59/515 of 3 December 2004, by which it decided to include the question of conventional ammunition stockpiles in surplus in the agenda of its sixtieth session,

1. Encourages all interested States to assess, on a voluntary basis, whether, in conformity with their legitimate security needs, parts of their stockpiles of conventional ammunition should be considered to be in surplus, and recognizes that the security of such stockpiles must be taken into consideration and that appropriate controls with regard to the security and safety of stockpiles of conventional ammunition are indispensable at the national level in order to eliminate the risk of explosion, pollution or diversion;

2. Appeals to all interested States to determine the size and nature of their surplus stockpiles of conventional ammunition, whether they represent a security risk, if appropriate, their means of destruction, and whether external assistance is needed to eliminate this risk;

3. Encourages States in a position to do so to assist interested States within a bilateral framework or through international or regional organizations, on a voluntary and transparent basis, in elaborating and implementing programmes to eliminate surplus stockpiles or to improve their management;

4. Encourages all Member States to examine the possibility of developing and implementing, within a national, regional or subregional framework, measures to address accordingly the illicit trafficking related to the accumulation of such stockpiles;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States regarding the risks arising from the accumulation of conventional ammunition stockpiles in surplus and regarding national ways of strengthening controls on conventional ammunition, and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

6. Decides to include this issue in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/77 without vote [agenda item 97 (x)].

Prevention of the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of man-portable air defence systems

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 58/42 and 58/54 of 8 December 2003, 58/241 of 23 December 2003 and 59/90 of 3 December 2004,

Recognizing that disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Acknowledging the authorized trade in man-portable air defence systems between Governments and the legitimate right of Governments to possess such weapons in the interests of their national security,

Recognizing the threat to civil aviation, peacekeeping, crisis management and security posed by the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of man-portable air defence systems,

Taking into account the fact that man-portable air defence systems are easily carried, concealed, fired and, in certain circumstances, obtained,

Recognizing that effective control over man-portable air defence systems acquires special importance in the context of the intensified international fight against global terrorism,

Convinced of the importance of effective national control of transfers of man-portable air defence systems and their training and instruction materials and of the safe and effective management of stockpiles of such weapons,

Acknowledging the role of the unauthorized transfer of relevant materials and information in assisting the unauthorized manufacture and illicit transfer of man-portable air defence systems and related components,

Welcoming the ongoing efforts of, and noting declarations by, various international and regional forums to enhance transport security and to strengthen management of man-portable air defence systems stockpiles in order to prevent the illicit transfer and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons,

Noting the importance of information exchange and transparency in the trade in man-portable air defence systems to build confidence and security among States and to prevent the illicit trade in and unauthorized access to such weapons,

Acknowledging the considerable efforts of some Member States to collect, secure and destroy voluntarily those man-portable air defence systems declared to be surplus by the competent national authority,

1. Emphasizes the importance of the full implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

2. Urges Member States to support current international, regional and national efforts to combat and prevent the illicit transfer of man-portable air defence systems and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons;

3. Stresses the importance of effective and comprehensive national controls on the production, stockpiling, transfer and brokering of man-portable air defence systems to prevent the illicit trade in and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons, their components and training and instruction materials;

4. Encourages Member States to enact or improve legislation, regulations, procedures and stockpile management practices and to assist other States, at their request, to exercise effective control over access to and transfer of man-portable air defence systems so as to prevent the illicit brokering and transfer of and unauthorized access to and use of such weapons;

5. Also encourages Member States to enact or improve legislation, regulations and procedures to ban the transfer of man-portable air defence systems to non-State end-users and to ensure that such weapons are exported only to Governments or agents authorized by a Government;

6. Encourages initiatives to exchange information and to mobilize resources and technical expertise to assist States, at their request, in enhancing national controls and stockpile management practices to prevent unauthorized access to and use and transfer of man-portable air defence systems and to destroy excess or obsolete stockpiles of such weapons, as appropriate;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/81 without vote [agenda item 97 (t)].

The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 56/24 V of 24 December 2001, 57/72 of 22 November 2002, 58/241 of 23 December 2003 and 59/86 of 3 December 2004,

Emphasizing the importance of the early and full implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, adopted by the United Nations Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects,

Welcoming the efforts by Member States to submit, on a voluntary basis, national reports on their implementation of the Programme of Action,

Noting with satisfaction regional and subregional efforts being undertaken in support of the implementation of the Programme of Action, and commending the progress that has already been made in this regard, including tackling both supply and demand factors that are relevant to addressing the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons,

Recognizing the efforts undertaken by non-governmental organizations in the provision of assistance to States for the implementation of the Programme of Action,

Taking into account the relevant paragraphs on the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in the 2005 World Summit Outcome,

Welcoming the report of the Second Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects, held in New York from 11 to 15 July 2005, and expressing its appreciation for the efforts undertaken by the Chair of the Meeting,

Taking note of the report of the Open-ended Working Group to Negotiate an International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons,

Recognizing that illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons is a serious problem that the international community should address urgently, and, in this regard, welcoming the broad-based consultations held by the Secretary-General with all Member States and interested regional and subregional organizations on further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of resolution 59/86,

Conscious of its decision to convene in New York the United Nations conference to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects for a period of two weeks, from 26 June to 7 July 2006, and its preparatory committee for two weeks, from 9 to 20 January 2006, followed, if necessary, by a subsequent session of up to two weeks in duration, which is especially relevant in order to set the agenda for activities of the international community for continuing to tackle problems in this field beyond 2006,

1. Encourages all initiatives, including those of the United Nations, other international organizations, regional and subregional organizations, non-governmental organizations and civil society, for the successful conclusion of the United Nations conference to review progress made in the implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects in order to set the agenda for tackling problems in the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons by the international community beyond 2006, and calls upon all Member States to continue to contribute towards the preparation of the conference and to make every effort to fully implement the Programme of Action;

2. Calls upon all States to implement the International Instrument to Enable States to Identify and Trace, in a Timely and Reliable Manner, Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons;

3. Decides to establish a group of governmental experts, appointed by the Secretary-General on the basis of equitable geographical representation, commencing after the review conference and no later than 2007, to consider further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons in three sessions of one week's duration each, and to submit the report on the outcome of its study to the General Assembly at its sixty-second session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the group of governmental experts with any assistance and services that may be required for the discharge of its tasks;

5. Continues to encourage all initiatives, including regional and subregional ones, to mobilize resources and expertise to promote the implementation of the Programme of Action and to provide assistance to States in its implementation;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to collate and circulate data and information provided by States on a voluntary basis, including national reports, on their implementation of the Programme of Action, and encourages Member States to submit such reports;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "The illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects".

(For regional initiatives regarding implementation of the Programme of Action, see pp. 641-652.)

Convention on excessively injurious conventional weapons and Protocols

As at 31 December, the accessions of Liberia and Venezuela and the ratification of Turkey brought to 100 the number of States parties to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects [YUN 1980, p. 76] and its annexed Protocols on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I); on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices, as amended on 3 May 1996 (Protocol II) [YUN 1996, p. 484]; and on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III). The 1995 Additional Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV) [YUN 1995, p. 221], which took effect on 30 July 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 530], had 81 parties following the consent of Liberia and Turkey in 2005 to be bound by the Protocol's terms.

Group of Governmental Experts

The Group of Governmental Experts established by the Second Review Conference of the States parties to the Convention [YUN 2001, p. 504] to consider the issues of explosive remnants of war, mines other than anti-personnel mines, small-calibre weapons and ammunition, and promotion of compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols, held its tenth (7-11 March) [CCW/GGE/X/5], eleventh (2-12 August) [CCW/GGE/XI/4] and twelfth (14-22 November) [CCW/GGE/XII/4] sessions, all in Geneva. The Group discussed issues relating to the weapons under consideration and preparations for the Third Review Conference of the States parties, and considered working papers and presentations from delegations, international organizations and other participants, including military experts. The Group also had before it the reports of its working groups on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines. The latter did not reach agreement on recommendations and consequently forwarded the issue to the Meeting of the States parties (see below). On 22 November, the Group adopted its report and recommended that the Third Review Conference be held in November 2006 and that the Meeting of States parties nominate the President-designate for the Conference, who should undertake consultations during the intersessional period on possible options to promote compliance with the Convention and its annexed Protocols and submit a consensus report to the States parties. The President-designate should undertake consultations on the establishment of a sponsorship programme under the Convention and report thereon. The Group further recommended that follow-up work arising from the States parties' meeting be held under the oversight of the President-designate and that intersessional work be undertaken in three sessions during 2006.

Annual Conference of States Parties to Amended Protocol II

The Seventh Annual Conference of the States Parties to Amended Protocol II (Geneva, 23 November) [CCW/AP.II/CONF.7/2] reviewed the operation and status of that Protocol, considered related issues and examined national reports received from 59 States parties. The Conference adopted a final document containing conclusions and recommendations and an appeal to States to accede to Amended Protocol II. It recommended that the Secretary-General, as depositary, and the President of the Conference exercise their authority to achieve the goal of universality of the Protocol and called on the States parties to promote wider adherence.

Meeting of States parties

The 2005 Meeting of the States parties (Geneva, 24-25 November) [CCW/MSP/2005/2 & Corr.1] considered the work of the Group of Governmental Experts (see above) and decided that the Group should continue its work in 2006 in three sessions. It mandated the Working Group on Explosive Remnants of War to continue to consider the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and possible preventive measures, aimed at improving the design of certain types of munitions, including sub-munitions, with a view to minimizing their risk of becoming explosive remnants of war. The working group on mines other than anti-personnel mines was asked to consider all proposals in that category of mines and to make recommendations for consideration by the Third Review Conference of the Convention in 2006. The meeting endorsed the recommendations of the Group of Experts regarding preparations for the Conference and the intersessional duties of the President-designate (see above). It decided that the Eighth Annual Conference of the States parties to Amended Protocol II would be held in November 2006 in Geneva and called on States parties to the Convention to promote wider adherence to the instrument and its annexed Protocols in their respective regions, and to organize national or regional workshops and conferences towards that end.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/467], adopted resolution 60/93 without vote [agenda item 101].

Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/107 of 3 December 2004,

Recalling with satisfaction the adoption and the entry into force of the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, and its amended article 1, and the Protocol on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I), the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) and its amended version, the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III) and the Protocol on Blinding Laser Weapons (Protocol IV),

Recalling the decision of the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects to establish an open-ended group of governmental experts with two separate coordinators on explosive remnants of war and on mines other than anti-personnel mines,

Recalling also the role played by the International Committee of the Red Cross in the elaboration of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, and welcoming the particular efforts of various international, non-governmental and other organizations in raising awareness of the humanitarian consequences of explosive remnants of war,

1. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to take all measures to become parties, as soon as possible, to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects and the Protocols thereto, as amended, with a view to achieving the widest possible adherence to these instruments at an early date, and so as to ultimately achieve their universality;

2. Calls upon all States parties to the Convention that have not yet done so to express their consent to be bound by the Protocols to the Convention and the amendment extending the scope of the Convention and the Protocols thereto to include armed conflicts of a non-international character;

3. Welcomes with satisfaction the adoption of the Protocol on Explosive Remnants of War (Protocol V) at the Meeting of the States Parties to the Convention held in Geneva on 27 and 28 November 2003, and calls upon the States parties to express their consent to be bound by the Protocol and to notify the depositary at an early date of their consent;

4. Notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Working Group on Mines Other Than Anti-Personnel Mines would continue its work in 2005 with the mandate to consider all proposals on mines other than anti-personnel mines put forward since the establishment of the Group of Governmental Experts, and to conduct meetings of military experts to provide advice, with the aim of elaborating appropriate recommendations on this issue for submission to the next Meeting of the States Parties;

5. Also notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Working Group on Explosive Remnants of War would continue its work in 2005 with the mandate to continue to consider, including through participation of legal experts, the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and to further study, on an open-ended basis, with particular emphasis on meetings of military and technical experts, possible preventive measures aimed at improving the design of certain specific types of munitions, including sub-munitions, with a view to minimizing the humanitarian risk of these munitions becoming explosive remnants of war;

6. Further notes the decision of the Meeting of the States Parties that the Chairperson-designate should continue to undertake consultations during the intersessional period on possible options with respect to promoting compliance with the Convention and the Protocols thereto, taking into account proposals put forward;

7. Expresses support for the work conducted by the Group of Governmental Experts, and encourages the Chairperson-designate and the Group to conduct work, in accordance with the mandate for 2005, with the aim of elaborating appropriate recommendations on mines other than anti-personnel mines, for submission to the Meeting of the States Parties on 24 and 25 November 2005, and to report on the work done on compliance, as well as on the implementation of existing principles of international humanitarian law and on possible preventive technical measures to minimize the risk of munitions becoming explosive remnants of war;

8. Recalls the decision of the Second Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects to convene a further conference not later than 2006, requests that the conference be held in November 2006 in Geneva and be preceded by as many preparatory meetings as deemed necessary by the States parties, and also requests the Meeting of the States Parties on 24 and 25 November 2005 to take a final decision on these matters;

9. Notes that, in conformity with article 8 of the Convention, the Third Review Conference may consider any proposal for amendments to the Convention or the Protocols thereto as well as any proposal for additional protocols relating to other categories of conventional weapons not covered by existing protocols to the Convention;

10. Requests that the Third Review Conference and its preparatory meetings exert maximum effort to promote universalization of the Convention, as amended, and of all Protocols thereto, including through the holding of regional conferences and seminars;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to render the necessary assistance and to provide such services, including summary records, as may be required for the Meeting of the States Parties on 24 and 25 November 2005, as well as for any possible continuation of work after the Meeting, should the States parties deem it appropriate, and for the Third Review Conference and its preparatory meetings;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as depositary of the Convention and the Protocols thereto, to continue to inform the General Assembly periodically, by electronic means, of ratifications and acceptances of and accessions to the Convention, its amended article 1, and the Protocols thereto;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects".

Practical disarmament

The Group of Interested States, established in 1998 [YUN 1998, p. 531] to examine and support concrete practical disarmament initiatives, met four times during 2005 to assess project proposals and review requests for assistance by Governments. Projects funded through the Group included a joint UN fact-finding mission to Burundi involving the UN Department for Disarmament Affairs (DDA) and the UNDP Bureau for Crisis Prevention, and the funding of travel expenses for an expert from Kenya who briefed the Group on the small arms and light weapons situation and related activities in the Sudan and Uganda. The Group also supported a project on the implementation of measures to control those weapons in southern Sudan, being implemented by the Bonn International Centre for Conversion.

Disarmament Commission action. In 2005 [A/60/42], the Disarmament Commission considered, as one of its proposed agenda items, practical confidence-building measures in the field of conventional weapons, but owing to unresolved disagreements among delegations regarding the item, the Commission was not able to reach consensus on its substantive agenda and decided to continue deliberations in 2006.

Transparency

Conference on Disarmament. In 2005, the continuing deadlock among delegates over a substantive programme of work again prevented the Conference on Disarmament [A/60/27] from establishing or re-establishing any mechanism to deal with transparency in armaments, leaving the item to be addressed at plenary meetings, where delegates reaffirmed their respective positions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/463], adopted two resolutions relating to transparency in conventional arms transfers. The Assembly adopted resolution 60/69 without vote [agenda item 97 (e)].

National legislation on transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that disarmament, arms control and non-proliferation are essential for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recalling that effective national control of the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, including those transfers that could contribute to proliferation activities, is an important tool for achieving those objectives,

Recalling also that the States parties to the international disarmament and non-proliferation treaties have undertaken to facilitate the fullest possible exchange of materials, equipment and technological information for peaceful purposes, in accordance with the provisions of those treaties,

Considering that the exchange of national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

Convinced that such an exchange would be beneficial to Member States that are in the process of developing such legislation,

Reaffirming the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence in accordance with Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations,

1. Invites Member States that are in a position to do so, without prejudice to the provisions contained in Security Council resolution 1540(2004) of 28 April 2004, to enact or improve national legislation, regulations and procedures to exercise effective control over the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, while ensuring that such legislation, regulations and procedures are consistent with the obligations of States parties under international treaties;

2. Encourages Member States to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to the Secretary-General on their national legislation, regulations and procedures on the transfer of arms, military equipment and dual-use goods and technology, as well as the changes therein, and requests the Secretary-General to make this information accessible to Member States;

3. Decides to remain attentive to the matter.

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/82 without vote [agenda item 97 (z)].

Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the contribution of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms, adopted on the initiative and with the agreement of the States concerned, to the improvement of the overall international peace and security situation,

Convinced that the relationship between the development of confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and the international security environment can also be mutually reinforcing,

Considering the important role that confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms can also play in creating favourable conditions for progress in the field of disarmament,

Recognizing that the exchange of information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms contributes to mutual understanding and confidence among Member States,

1. Welcomes all confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms already undertaken by Member States as well as the information on such measures voluntarily provided;

2. Encourages Member States to continue to adopt confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms and to provide information in that regard;

3. Also encourages Member States to continue the dialogue on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to establish, with the financial support of States in a position to do so, an electronic database containing information provided by Member States and to assist them, at their request, in the organization of seminars, courses and workshops aimed at enhancing the knowledge of new developments in this field;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Information on confidence-building measures in the field of conventional arms".

UN Register of Conventional Arms

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/54 [YUN 2003, p. 568], the Secretary-General submitted the thirteenth annual report on the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms [A/60/160 & Corr.1 & Add.1, 2], established in 1992 [YUN 1992, p. 75] to promote enhanced levels of transparency on arms transfers. The report presented information provided by 115 Governments on imports and exports in 2004 in the seven categories of conventional arms covered (battle tanks, armoured combat vehicles, large-calibre artillery systems, attack helicopters, combat aircraft, warships and missiles and missile launchers). Governments also provided information on military holdings and procurement through national production and on small arms and light weapons and national policies. The report indicated a slight increase in the number of submissions from 114 in 2003.

In response to the Assembly's request that the Secretary-General implement the recommendations contained in the 2003 report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the continuing operation and further development of the Register [YUN 2003, p. 568], the report highlighted numerous activities undertaken by the Secretariat during the year, through DDA and in collaboration with Governments and regional organizations, in order to enhance awareness of the Register and to encourage greater participation in it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December [meeting 69], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/463], adopted resolution 60/226 by recorded vote (99-0-22) [agenda item 97 (d)].

Transparency in armaments

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 46/36 L of 9 December 1991, 47/52 L of 15 December 1992, 48/75 E of 16 December 1993, 49/75 C of 15 December 1994, 50/70 D of 12 December 1995, 51/45 H of 10 December 1996, 52/38 R of 9 December 1997, 53/77 V of 4 December 1998, 54/54 O of 1 December 1999, 55/33 U of 20 November 2000, 56/24 Q of 29 November 2001, 57/75 of 22 November 2002 and 58/54 of 8 December 2003 entitled "Transparency in armaments",

Continuing to take the view that an enhanced level of transparency in armaments contributes greatly to confidence-building and security among States and that the establishment of the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms constitutes an important step forward in the promotion of transparency in military matters,

Welcoming the consolidated report of the Secretary-General on the Register, which includes the returns of Member States for 2004,

Welcoming also the response of Member States to the request contained in paragraphs 9 and 10 of resolution 46/36 L to provide data on their imports and exports of arms, as well as available background information regarding their military holdings, procurement through national production and relevant policies,

Welcoming further the inclusion by some Member States of their transfers of small arms and light weapons in their annual report to the Register as part of their additional background information,

Stressing that the continuing operation of the Register and its further development should be reviewed in order to secure a Register that is capable of attracting the widest possible participation,

1. Reaffirms its determination to ensure the effective operation of the United Nations Register of Conventional Arms, as provided for in paragraphs 7 to 10 of resolution 46/36 L;

2. Calls upon Member States, with a view to achieving universal participation, to provide the Secretary-General, by 31 May annually, with the requested data and information for the Register, including nil reports if appropriate, on the basis of resolutions 46/36 L and 47/52 L, the recommendations contained in paragraph 64 of the 1997 report of the Secretary-General on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, the recommendations contained in paragraph 94 of the 2000 report of the Secretary-

General and the appendices and annexes thereto and the recommendations contained in paragraphs 112 to 114 of the 2003 report of the Secretary-General;

3. Invites Member States in a position to do so, pending further development of the Register, to provide additional information on procurement through national production and military holdings and to make use of the "Remarks" column in the standardized reporting form to provide additional information such as types or models and to include transfers of small arms and light weapons, using definitions and reporting measures they deem appropriate, as part of their additional background information;

4. Reaffirms its decision, with a view to further development of the Register, to keep the scope of and participation in the Register under review and, to that end:

(a) Recalls its request to Member States to provide the Secretary-General with their views on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and on transparency measures related to weapons of mass destruction;

(b) Requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a group of governmental experts to be convened in 2006, within available resources, on the basis of equitable geographical representation, to prepare a report on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, taking into account the work of the Conference on Disarmament, the views expressed by Member States and the reports of the Secretary-General on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development, with a view to taking a decision at its sixty-first session;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the recommendations contained in his 2000 and 2003 reports on the continuing operation of the Register and its further development and to ensure that sufficient resources are made available for the Secretariat to operate and maintain the Register;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to consider continuing its work undertaken in the field of transparency in armaments;

7. Reiterates its call upon all Member States to cooperate at the regional and subregional levels, taking fully into account the specific conditions prevailing in the region or subregion, with a view to enhancing and coordinating international efforts aimed at increased openness and transparency in armaments;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on progress made in implementing the present resolution;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Transparency in armaments".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/226:

In favour: Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Benin, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Canada, Chile, Costa Rica, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guyana, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lesotho, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Venezuela, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Algeria, Bahrain, China, Comoros, Cuba, Djibouti, Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Pakistan, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, Yemen.

The First Committee adopted by separate recorded votes the words "and the recommendations contained in paragraphs 112 to 114 of the 2003 report of the Secretary-General" in paragraph 2 of the resolution (108 to 1, with 16 abstentions); paragraph 3 (115 to 0, with 18 abstentions); paragraph 4 (b) (118 to 0, with 16 abstentions); and paragraph 6 (116 to 0, with 19 abstentions). The Assembly retained those paragraphs by separate recorded votes of 97 to none, with 20 abstentions; 94 to none, with 22 abstentions; 97 to none, with 19 abstentions; and 93 to none, with 22 abstentions, respectively.

Transparency of military expenditures

In response to General Assembly resolution 58/28 [YUN 2003, p. 570], the Secretary-General, in a July report with later addenda [A/60/159 & Add.1, 2, 3], presented reports from 77 Member States on military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data were available. The reporting instrument was that recommended by the Assembly in resolution 35/142 B [YUN 1980, p. 88].

The report also described activities undertaken by the Secretariat, through DDA, to enhance familiarity with and encourage greater participation in the standardized reporting instrument. Those included a DDA presentation to the Committee on Hemispheric Security of the Organization of American States (OAS) (Washington, D.C., 25 April) and a regional workshop focusing on the Horn of Africa, the Great Lakes region and Southern Africa (Nairobi, Kenya, 31 May–2 June), organized by DDA, with support from a number of Member States. Also in May, DDA published technical guidelines to assist Member States in preparing their submissions on military expenditures, in accordance with the UN reporting matrix.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/59/451], adopted resolution 60/44 without vote [agenda item 85 (b)].

Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/72 of 4 December 1998, 54/43 of 1 December 1999, 56/14 of 29 November 2001 and 58/28 of 8 December 2003 on objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures,

Also recalling its resolution 35/142 B of 12 December 1980, which introduced the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, and its resolutions 48/62 of 16 December 1993, 49/66 of 15 December 1994, 51/38 of 10 December 1996 and 52/32 of 9 December 1997, calling upon all Member States to participate in it, and its resolution 47/54 B of 9 December 1992, endorsing the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters and inviting Member States to provide the Secretary-General with relevant information regarding their implementation,

Noting that since then, national reports on military expenditures and on the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters have been submitted by a number of Member States belonging to different geographic regions,

Convinced that the improvement of international relations forms a sound basis for promoting further openness and transparency in all military matters,

Also convinced that transparency in military matters is an essential element for building a climate of trust and confidence between States worldwide and that a better flow of objective information on military matters can help to relieve international tension and is therefore an important contribution to conflict prevention,

Noting the role of the standardized reporting system, as instituted through its resolution 35/142 B, as an important instrument to enhance transparency in military matters,

Conscious that the value of the standardized reporting system would be enhanced by a broader participation of Member States,

Welcoming, therefore, the report of the Secretary-General on ways and means to implement the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters, including, in particular, how to strengthen and broaden participation in the standardized reporting system,

Recalling that the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters recommended certain areas for further consideration, such as the improvement of the standardized reporting system,

Noting the efforts of several regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures, including standardized annual exchanges of relevant information among their member States,

1. Calls upon Member States to report annually, by 30 April, to the Secretary-General their military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data are available, using, preferably and to the extent possible, the reporting instrument as recommended in its resolution 35/142 B or, as appropriate, any other format developed in conjunction with similar reporting on military expenditures to other international or regional organizations, and, in the same context, encourages Member States to submit nil returns, if appropriate;

2. Recommends the guidelines and recommendations for objective information on military matters to all Member States for implementation, fully taking into account specific political, military and other conditions prevailing in a region, on the basis of initiatives and with the agreement of the States of the region concerned;

3. Encourages relevant international bodies and regional organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures and to enhance complementarity among reporting systems, taking into account the particular characteristics of each region, and to consider the possibility of an exchange of information with the United Nations;

4. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General on objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, within available resources:

(a) To continue the practice of sending an annual note verbale to Member States requesting the submission of data to the United Nations system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, together with the reporting format and related instructions, and to publish in a timely fashion in appropriate United Nations media the due date for transmitting data on military expenditures;

(b) To circulate annually the reports on military expenditures as received from Member States;

(c) To continue consultations with relevant international bodies, with a view to ascertaining requirements for adjusting the present instrument, with a view to encouraging wider participation, and to make recommendations, based on the outcome of those consultations and taking into account the views of Member States, on necessary changes to the content and structure of the standardized reporting system;

(d) To encourage relevant international bodies and organizations to promote transparency of military expenditures and to consult with those bodies and organizations with emphasis on examining possibilities for enhancing complementarity among international and regional reporting systems and for exchanging related information between those bodies and the United Nations;

(e) To encourage the United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament in Africa, in Asia and the Pacific, and in Latin America and the Caribbean to assist Member States in their regions in enhancing their knowledge of the standardized reporting system;

(f) To promote international and regional/subregional symposiums and training seminars to explain the purpose of the standardized reporting system and to give relevant technical instructions;

(g) To report on experiences gained during such symposiums and training seminars;

6. Encourages Member States:

(a) To inform the Secretary-General about possible problems with the standardized reporting system and their reasons for not submitting the requested data;

(b) To continue to provide the Secretary-General, in time for deliberation by the General Assembly at its sixty-second session, with their views and suggestions on ways and means to strengthen and broaden participation in the standardized reporting system, including necessary changes to its content and structure;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "Objective information on military matters, including transparency of military expenditures".

Verification

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/60 [YUN 2004, p. 568], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with later addendum [A/60/96 & Add.1] containing the views of eight Member States (Canada, Chile, Guatemala, Iran, Japan, Mexico, Russian Federation, Sweden) on the importance of effective verification measures in disarmament agreements.

In October [A/60/458], the First Committee considered the issue of verification in all its aspects, including the role of the United Nations in the field of verification. It had before it the above-mentioned report of the Secretary-General.

On 8 December, the Assembly took note of the First Committee's report on the item (decision 60/514).

Anti-personnel mines

1997 Convention

The number of States parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction (Mine-Ban Convention), adopted in 1997 [YUN 1997, p. 503], and which entered into force in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 498], reached 148 as at 31 December. During the year, four States adhered to the Convention.

Meeting of States parties

As decided by the 2004 Review Conference of the Convention [YUN 2004, p. 568], the Sixth Meeting of the States parties was convened (Zagreb, Croatia, 28 November–2 December) [APLC/MSP.6/2005/5] to consider the Convention's general status and operation. It reviewed progress made and remaining challenges in the pursuit of the Convention's aims and in the application of the Nairobi Action Plan 2005-2009, adopted at the 2004 Review Conference. Particular provisions of the Convention discussed included the submission of requests under article 5 on the destruction of anti-personnel mines in mined areas, under article 8 on facilitation and clarification of compliance, and under article 7 on transparency measures.

The Meeting had before it a background document, contained in part II of its report, entitled "Achieving the aims of the Nairobi Plan of Action: the Zagreb progress report", presented by Austria and Croatia and designed to support the application of the Nairobi Plan by measuring progress made between 3 December 2004 and 2 December 2005. The Zagreb progress report highlighted priority areas of work relating to the Action Plan and was considered the first in a series of annual progress reports to be prepared by States parties in advance of the Second Review Conference in 2009.

On 2 December, the Meeting agreed to amend the article 7 reporting format based on a proposal by Argentina and Chile, which was annexed to its report. It adopted the Zagreb Declaration, contained in part III of its report, reaffirming the commitments made by the States parties in the Nairobi Action Plan, particularly the determination to meet outstanding challenges in realizing the universalization of the Convention, ending the use of anti-personnel mines globally, destroying stockpiled mines, clearing mined areas, providing mine risk education and assisting the victims. The Meeting acknowledged the work of the Standing Committees and agreed that they would meet from 8 to 12 May 2006. It scheduled the Seventh Meeting of the States parties for September 2006 in Geneva, and the Eighth in 2007 in Jordan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/80 by recorded vote (158-0-17) [agenda item 97 (r)].

Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 54/54 B of 1 December 1999, 55/33 V of 20 November 2000, 56/24 M of 29 November 2001, 57/74 of 22 November 2002, 58/53 of 8 December 2003 and 59/84 of 3 December 2004,

Reaffirming its determination to put an end to the suffering and casualties caused by anti-personnel mines, which kill or maim hundreds of people every week, mostly innocent and defenceless civilians and especially children, obstruct economic development and reconstruction, inhibit the repatriation of refugees and internally displaced persons and have other severe consequences for years after emplacement,

Believing it necessary to do the utmost to contribute in an efficient and coordinated manner to facing the challenge of removing anti-personnel mines placed throughout the world and to assure their destruction,

Wishing to do the utmost in ensuring assistance for the care and rehabilitation, including the social and economic reintegration, of mine victims,

Welcoming the entry into force, on 1 March 1999, of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, and noting with satisfaction the work undertaken to implement the Convention and the substantial progress made towards addressing the global landmine problem,

Recalling the first to fifth meetings of the States parties to the Convention held in Maputo (1999), Geneva

(2000), Managua (2001), Geneva (2002) and Bangkok (2003),

Recalling also the First Review Conference of the States Parties to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction, held in Nairobi from 29 November to 3 December 2004, at which the international community renewed its unwavering commitment to achieving the goal of a world free of anti-personnel mines and witnessed the adoption by the States parties to the Convention of the Nairobi Action Plan 2005-2009 to achieve major progress towards ending, for all people and for all time, the suffering caused by anti-personnel mines,

Recalling further the 2005 World Summit Outcome, wherein Heads of State and Government, inter alia, urged the States parties to the Convention to fully implement their obligations,

Noting with satisfaction that additional States have ratified or acceded to the Convention, bringing the total number of States that have formally accepted the obligations of the Convention to one hundred and forty-seven,

Emphasizing the desirability of attracting the adherence of all States to the Convention, and determined to work strenuously towards the promotion of its universalization,

Noting with regret that anti-personnel mines continue to be used in conflicts around the world, causing human suffering and impeding post-conflict development,

1. Invites all States that have not signed the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction to accede to it without delay;

2. Urges all States that have signed but have not ratified the Convention to ratify it without delay;

3. Stresses the importance of the full and effective implementation of and compliance with the Convention, including through the swift implementation of the Nairobi Action Plan 2005-2009;

4. Urges all States parties to provide the Secretary-General with complete and timely information as required under article 7 of the Convention in order to promote transparency and compliance with the Convention;

5. Invites all States that have not ratified the Convention or acceded to it to provide, on a voluntary basis, information to make global mine action efforts more effective;

6. Renews its call upon all States and other relevant parties to work together to promote, support and advance the care, rehabilitation and social and economic reintegration of mine victims, mine risk education programmes and the removal and destruction of anti-personnel mines placed or stockpiled throughout the world;

7. Invites and encourages all interested States, the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to participate in the sixth meeting of the States parties to the Convention, to be held in Zagreb from 28 November to 2 December 2005, and in the intersessional work programme established at the first meeting of the States parties, and further developed at subsequent meetings of the States parties;

8. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with article 11, paragraph 2, of the Convention, to undertake the preparations necessary to convene the next meeting of the States parties, pending a decision to be taken at the sixth meeting of the States parties, and on behalf of the States parties and in accordance with article 11, paragraph 4, of the Convention, to invite States not parties to the Convention, as well as the United Nations, other relevant international organizations or institutions, regional organizations, the International Committee of the Red Cross and relevant non-governmental organizations to attend the seventh meeting of the States parties as observers;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Implementation of the Convention on the Prohibition of the Use, Stockpiling, Production and Transfer of Anti-personnel Mines and on Their Destruction".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/80:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Latvia, Lesotho, Liberia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Morocco, Mozambique, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Cuba, Egypt, India, Iran, Israel, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Myanmar, Pakistan, Palau, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Syrian Arab Republic, United States, Uzbekistan, Viet Nam.

Other disarmament issues

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

As the Conference on Disarmament [A/60/27] remained deadlocked on a work programme during the year, it was not able to establish a subsidiary body to deal with its substantive agenda items, including the question of the prevention of an arms race in outer space. Nonetheless, delegates devoted one plenary meeting to discussion of related matters. China and the Russian Federation, the primary advocates of the need for a legal instrument on the issue, maintained their collaboration in that regard. While many delegates identified with their position and reaffirmed support for the establishment of an ad hoc committee to address the item, others remained opposed to the idea, making consensus impossible. In March, China and the Russian Federation collaborated with the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) and Canada's Simons Centre for Disarmament and Non-proliferation Research to host an international conference on safeguarding space security: prevention of an arms race in outer space (Geneva, 21-22 March) [CD/1753], which brought the issue of space security to a new level of political urgency and declared it a priority for the international community to develop a work programme on the topic.

An open-ended informal meeting organized by the Russian Federation (Geneva, 16 August) [CD/1756] considered the possible elements for a future international legal agreement on the prevention of the deployment of weapons in outer space and the threat or use of force against outer space objects.

The General Assembly, in resolution 60/54 (see below), asked the Conference on Disarmament to complete the examination and updating of the mandate contained in its 1992 decision [YUN 1992, p. 97] and to establish an ad hoc committee as early as possible during its 2006 session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/462], adopted resolution 60/54 by recorded vote (180-2-0) [agenda item 96].

Prevention of an arms race in outer space

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes and shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development,

Reaffirming also the provisions of articles III and IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recalling the obligation of all States to observe the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations regarding the use or threat of use of force in their international relations, including in their space activities,

Reaffirming paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this issue, and taking note of the proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions, and of the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Recognizing that prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security,

Emphasizing the paramount importance of strict compliance with existing arms limitation and disarmament agreements relevant to outer space, including bilateral agreements, and with the existing legal regime concerning the use of outer space,

Considering that wide participation in the legal regime applicable to outer space could contribute to enhancing its effectiveness,

Noting that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, taking into account its previous efforts since its establishment in 1985 and seeking to enhance its functioning in qualitative terms, continued the examination and identification of various issues, existing agreements and existing proposals, as well as future initiatives relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space, and that this contributed to a better understanding of a number of problems and to a clearer perception of the various positions,

Noting also that there were no objections in principle in the Conference on Disarmament to the re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee, subject to re-examination of the mandate contained in the decision of the Conference on Disarmament of 13 February 1992,

Emphasizing the mutually complementary nature of bilateral and multilateral efforts in the field of preventing an arms race in outer space, and hoping that concrete results will emerge from those efforts as soon as possible,

Convinced that further measures should be examined in the search for effective and verifiable bilateral and multilateral agreements in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Stressing that the growing use of outer space increases the need for greater transparency and better information on the part of the international community,

Recalling, in this context, its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 45/55 B of 4 December 1990, 47/51 of 9 December 1992 and 48/74 A of 16 December 1993, in which, inter alia, it reaffirmed the importance of confidence-building measures as a means conducive to ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Conscious of the benefits of confidence- and security-building measures in the military field,

Recognizing that negotiations for the conclusion of an international agreement or agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space remain a priority task of the Ad Hoc Committee and that the concrete proposals on confidence-building measures could form an integral part of such agreements,

1. Reaffirms the importance and urgency of preventing an arms race in outer space and the readiness of all States to contribute to that common objective, in conformity with the provisions of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies;

2. Reaffirms its recognition, as stated in the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Prevention of an Arms Race in Outer Space, that the legal regime applicable to outer space does not in and of itself guarantee the prevention of an arms race in outer space, that the regime plays a significant role in the prevention of an arms race in that environment, that there is a need to consolidate and reinforce that regime and enhance its effectiveness and that it is important to comply strictly with existing agreements, both bilateral and multilateral;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and of the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to refrain from actions contrary to that objective and to the relevant existing treaties in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation;

5. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

6. Invites the Conference on Disarmament to complete the examination and updating of the mandate contained in its decision of 13 February 1992 and to establish an ad hoc committee as early as possible during its 2006 session;

7. Recognizes, in this respect, the growing convergence of views on the elaboration of measures designed to strengthen transparency, confidence and security in the peaceful uses of outer space;

8. Urges States conducting activities in outer space, as well as States interested in conducting such activities, to keep the Conference on Disarmament informed of the progress of bilateral and multilateral negotiations on the matter, if any, so as to facilitate its work;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/54:

On the same date [meeting 61], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/66 by recorded vote (178-1-1) [agenda item 97].

Transparency and confidence-building measures in outer space activities

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming that the prevention of an arms race in outer space would avert a grave danger to international peace and security,

Conscious that further measures should be examined in the search for agreements to prevent an arms race in outer space, including the weaponization of outer space,

Recalling, in this context, its previous resolutions which, inter alia, emphasize the need for increased transparency and confirm the importance of confidence-building measures as a conducive means of ensuring the attainment of the objective of the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Recalling also the report of the Secretary-General to its forty-eighth session, the annex to which contains the study by governmental experts on the application of confidence-building measures in outer space,

1. Invites all Member States to inform the Secretary-General before its sixty-first session of their views on the advisability of further developing international outer space transparency and confidence-building measures in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international cooperation and the prevention of an arms race in outer space;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session an item entitled "Transparency and confidence-building measures in outer space activities".

Disarmament and development

In 2005, the relationship between disarmament and development remained a controversial issue in the international community. While the majority of Member States, mostly members of the Non-Aligned Movement, continued to call for the implementation of the action programme adopted by the 1987 International Conference, which examined the relationship in all its aspects [YUN 1987, p. 82], other States, particularly EU member States and the United States, emphasized that an automatic link did not exist between both concepts.

High-level Steering Group. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/78 [YUN 2004, p. 580], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/94] containing the observations of the high-level Steering Group on Disarmament and Development established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 506], regarding the 2004 report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship [YUN 2004, p. 579]. The Steering Group acknowledged the importance of the recommendation of the Expert Group that the UN and other intergovernmental organizations make greater efforts to integrate their disarmament, humanitarian and development activities. The Group announced that it had designated focal points at the working level and was examining how disarmament-related issues and development could be better integrated into the activities of appropriate components of the UN system. It was also considering modalities for raising greater awareness of the subject. The Group summarized activities relevant to disarmament and development undertaken by its partner departments and agency and highlighted similar initiatives being undertaken by various components of the UN system. Unfortunately, financial constraints continued to hamper efforts to implement activities promoting disarmament and development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/61 by recorded vote (177-1-2) [agenda item 97 (n)].

Relationship between disarmament and development

The General Assembly,

Recalling that the Charter of the United Nations envisages the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources,

Recalling also the provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly concerning the relationship between disarmament and development, as well as the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

Recalling further its resolutions 49/75 J of 15 December 1994, 50/70 G of 12 December 1995, 51/45 D of 10 December 1996, 52/38 D of 9 December 1997, 53/77 K of 4 December 1998, 54/54 T of 1 December 1999, 55/33 L of 20 November 2000, 56/24 E of 29 November 2001, 57/65 of 22 November 2002 and 59/78 of 3 December 2004, and its decision 58/520 of 8 December 2003,

Bearing in mind the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, and the Final Document of the Thirteenth Ministerial Conference of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Cartagena, Colombia, on 8 and 9 April 2000,

Mindful of the changes in international relations that have taken place since the adoption on 11 September 1987 of the Final Document of the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, including the development agenda that has emerged over the past decade,

Bearing in mind the new challenges for the international community in the field of development, poverty eradication and the elimination of the diseases that afflict humanity,

Stressing the importance of the symbiotic relationship between disarmament and development and the important role of security in this connection, and concerned at increasing global military expenditure, which could otherwise be spent on development needs,

1. Welcomes the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development and its reappraisal of this significant issue in the current international context;

2. Stresses the central role of the United Nations in the disarmament-development relationship, and requests the Secretary-General to strengthen further the role of the Organization in this field, in particular the high-level Steering Group on Disarmament and Development, in order to assure continued and effective coordination and close cooperation between the relevant United Nations departments, agencies and sub-agencies;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to take action, through appropriate organs and within available resources, for the implementation of the action programme adopted at the 1987 International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development;

4. Urges the international community to devote part of the resources made available by the implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements to economic and social development, with a view to reducing the ever-widening gap between developed and developing countries;

5. Encourages the international community to achieve the Millennium Development Goals and to make reference to the contribution that disarmament could provide in meeting them when it reviews its progress towards this purpose in 2006, as well as to make greater efforts to integrate disarmament, humanitarian and development activities;

6. Encourages the relevant regional and subregional organizations and institutions, non-governmental organizations and research institutes to incorporate issues related to the relationship between disarmament and development in their agendas and, in this regard, to take into account the report of the Group of Governmental Experts;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Relationship between disarmament and development".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/61:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Human rights, human security and disarmament

As part of growing international efforts to protect civilians' human rights in situations of armed conflict, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights (see p. 713) considered in 2005 the threat posed to those rights by weapons accumulation and proliferation. It considered a set of revised draft principles on the prevention of human rights violations committed with small arms, prepared by Barbara Frey (United States), the Special Rapporteur mandated in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 720] to conduct a study on the topic.

The question of the relationship between disarmament and human security was taken up during the year by UNIDIR (see p. 640). Its activities on the issue related primarily to the small arms scourge and the danger posed by explosive remnants of war and landmines, as those weapons continued to be widely used, crippling human activities and hampering peace and the reconstruction of post-conflict societies. In collaboration with DDA and other partners, UNIDIR made efforts to identify ways to control those weapons and seek adequate solutions to the security concerns of affected populations.

Arms limitation and disarmament agreements

Responding to General Assembly resolution 59/68 [YUN 2004, p. 581], the Secretary-General submitted a July report with later addendum [A/60/97 & Add.1], containing information from six Member States on measures they had taken to ensure the application of scientific and technological progress in the context of international security, disarmament and related areas, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/60 by recorded vote (176-1-4) [agenda item 97 (g)].

Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 50/70 M of 12 December 1995, 51/45 E of 10 December 1996, 52/38 E of 9 December 1997, 53/77 J of 4 December 1998, 54/54 S of 1 December 1999, 55/33 K of 20 November 2000, 56/24 F of 29 November 2001, 57/64 of 22 November 2002, 58/45 of 8 December 2003 and 59/68 of 3 December 2004,

Emphasizing the importance of the observance of environmental norms in the preparation and implementation of disarmament and arms limitation agreements,

Recognizing that it is necessary to take duly into account the agreements adopted at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, as well as prior relevant agreements, in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms limitation,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Mindful of the detrimental environmental effects of the use of nuclear weapons,

1. Reaffirms that international disarmament forums should take fully into account the relevant environmental norms in negotiating treaties and agreements on disarmament and arms limitation and that all States, through their actions, should contribute fully to ensuring compliance with the aforementioned norms in the implementation of treaties and conventions to which they are parties;

2. Calls upon States to adopt unilateral, bilateral, regional and multilateral measures so as to contribute to ensuring the application of scientific and technological progress within the framework of international security, disarmament and other related spheres, without detriment to the environment or to its effective contribution to attaining sustainable development;

3. Welcomes the information provided by Member States on the implementation of the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution;

4. Invites all Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General information on the measures they have adopted to promote the objectives envisaged in the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report containing this information to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Observance of environmental norms in the drafting and implementation of agreements on disarmament and arms control".

RECORDED VOTE RESOLUTION 60/60:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: France, Israel, Palau, United Kingdom.

Also on 8 December [meeting 61], the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted resolution 60/55 by recorded vote (163-0-10) [agenda item 97].

Compliance with non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/86 of 22 November 2002 and other relevant resolutions on the question,

Recognizing the abiding concern of all Member States for maintaining respect for the rights and obligations arising from treaties to which they are parties and other sources of international law,

Convinced that observance by Member States of the Charter of the United Nations and compliance with non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements to which they are parties and with other agreed obligations are essential for regional and global peace, security and stability,

Stressing that failure by States parties to comply with such agreements and other agreed obligations not only adversely affects the security of States parties but can also create security risks for other States relying on the constraints and commitments stipulated in those agreements,

Stressing also that the viability and effectiveness of non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other agreed obligations require that those agreements be fully complied with,

Concerned by non-compliance by some States with their respective obligations,

Noting that verification and compliance, and enforcement in a manner consistent with the Charter, are integrally related,

Recognizing that full compliance by States with their respective non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other agreed obligations contributes to efforts to prevent the development and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and their technologies and means of delivery contrary to international obligations, and to efforts to deny non-State actors access to such capabilities,

1. Underscores the contribution that compliance with non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other agreed obligations makes to enhancing confidence and strengthening security and stability;

2. Urges all States to implement and to comply fully with their respective obligations;

3. Urges those States not currently in compliance with their respective obligations to make the strategic decision to come back into compliance with those obligations;

4. Calls upon all Member States to take concerted action in a manner consistent with relevant international law to encourage, through bilateral and multilateral means, the compliance by all States with their respective non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament agreements and other agreed obligations and to hold those not in compliance with such agreements accountable for their non-compliance in a manner consistent with the Charter of the United Nations;

5. Encourages efforts by all States parties, the United Nations and other international organizations, pursuant to their mandates, to take action, consistent with the Charter, to prevent serious damage to international security and stability arising from non-compliance by States with their existing non-proliferation, arms limitation and disarmament obligations;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/55:

Studies, information and training

Disarmament studies programme

During the year, DDA and Canada organized a panel discussion (New York, 20 October) on verifying disarmament and non-proliferation agreements, which explored issues relating to the work of the Panel of Governmental Experts on verification, to be established in 2006, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/60 [YUN 2004, p. 568]. In other developments, Governments, UN organizations, and civil society groups began implementation of the recommendations contained in the UN study on disarmament and non-proliferation education, as called for in Assembly resolution 59/93 [ibid., p. 582].

In 2005, the Assembly, in resolution 60/81 (see p. 625), decided to establish a group of governmental experts to consider further steps to enhance international cooperation in preventing, combating and eradicating illicit brokering in small arms and light weapons and to report to the Assembly in 2007. By resolution 60/226 (see p. 629), the Assembly requested the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a group of governmental experts to be convened in 2006, to prepare a report on the continuing operation of the UN Register of Conventional Arms and its further development, with a view to making a decision at its sixty-first (2006) session.

Disarmament Information Programme

During the year, priority issues for the Disarmament Information Programme were WMDs and conventional weapons, especially small arms and light weapons. Other areas covered included the publications programme; website access, exhibits and the activities of the Secretary-General's Messenger of Peace programme; cooperation with civil society, NGOs in particular; and the activities of the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) (see p. 691), which administered the Programme in close collaboration with DDA, on information campaigns supporting major disarmament-related events and conferences. DDA continued to work closely with such NGOs as Reaching Critical Will and the International Action Network on Small Arms to facilitate the participation of civil society organizations at meetings, including the 2005 NPT Review Conference (see p. 597) and the second biennial meeting of States to consider the implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action on Small Arms [YUN 2001, p. 499]. DPI focused on the promotion and coverage of major disarmament-related conferences. Its activities included public information campaigns, radio and television broadcasts, webcasts and printed material.

Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters

The Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, which advised the Secretary-General on the disarmament studies programme and implementation of the Disarmament Information Programme and served as the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) (see below), held its forty-fourth and forty-fifth sessions (New York, 23-25 February; Geneva, 29 June–1 July) [A/60/285]. The Board deliberated on nuclear fuel cycle and fissile material control; regional security and global norms; small arms and light weapons; challenges and opportunities at the regional level regarding WMDs and conventional arms; and a review of the disarmament machinery. On the issue of nuclear fuel cycle and fissile material control, the Board recommended that nearer-term opportunities for multilateral nuclear approaches, based on voluntary participation, be considered, and that the recommendation of the High-level Panel on Threats, Challenges and Change [YUN 2004, p. 54] for a voluntary moratorium on the development of more facilities, matched by the guaranteed supply of fissile material, be further elaborated. Existing approaches and instruments should be utilized fully to strengthen the security of fissile material and all States with advanced nuclear programmes, whether or not they were parties to NPT, should participate actively in international efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons. Concerning small arms and light weapons, the Board proposed that the High-level Plenary Meeting of the sixtieth session of the General Assembly (see p. 47) accord high priority to the challenge posed by those weapons. The second Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499] and the first review conference on the Programme's Implementation, to be held in 2006, should aim to expand and deepen global norms governing that category of weapons. The United Nations should take the lead in enhancing the inclusive process at the global, regional, national and civil society levels, in order to better address the threat posed by those weapons. In addition, international coordination and cooperation should be strengthened, including between the General Assembly and the Security Council, and between the United Nations and relevant financial institutions, so as to facilitate effective action in a comprehensive and integrated manner.

On the issue of challenges and opportunities at the regional level regarding WMDs and conventional arms, the Board recommended, among other things, interregional dialogue to share information, successful experiences and lessons learned, and strengthening cooperation between regional organizations or mechanisms to promote disarmament and non-proliferation. As to the disarmament machinery, the Board proposed that the Conference on Disarmament be strengthened, without prejudice to adjustments in its procedural arrangements that could facilitate progress in the consideration of disarmament measures. Also, the functioning of the First Committee should be improved to enable it to address better traditional and current security challenges facing the international community, particularly those regarding disarmament and non-proliferation.

In its capacity as UNIDIR's Board of Trustees (see below), the Board made recommendations concerning the Institute's 2005 work programme and budget. After considering an audit report on UNIDIR's activities by the Office of Internal Oversight Services (see below), which identified difficulties relating to its staffing and funding status, the Board recommended that UNIDIR's core staff be funded from the UN regular budget and that the Institute explore ways to apply UN staff regulations and rules to all its personnel.

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

OIOS audit report. Between November 2004 and January 2005, the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) conducted its first audit of UNIDIR's programmes and activities, with a total expenditure of $4.2 million undertaken in the period from January 2002 to October 2004. The audit intended to determine, among other things, the effectiveness of UNIDIR's management structure and practices in achieving its programmes and of internal controls to ensure the efficient use of resources and compliance with UN regulations and rules, focused on the Institute's statute, funding research projects, outputs and outreach activities. OIOS established that UNIDIR's research and other activities were making a positive impact, but found that some areas needed attention. In particular, it had concerns regarding the in which the Institute managed its staff and about its funding status and made a number of recommendations for improvement.

During the year, UNIDIR marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of its establishment.

Report of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report of the UNIDIR Director covering the period from August 2004 to July 2005 [A/60/135], as well as the report of the UNIDIR Board of Trustees on the proposed 2005-2006 programme of work and budget [YUN 2004, p. 548]. The Institute's research activities continued to focus on global security, regional security and human security, addressing the full range of substantive disarmament issues, from small arms to weapons in space. As in previous years, the report highlighted the scope of UNIDIR's research activities worldwide, including through conferences, seminars and discussion meetings, as well as its networking initiatives with UN system specialized agencies, organizations and institutions. The report also contained a list of UNIDIR publications issued during the reporting period.

The General Assembly, in section IV of resolution 60/248 (see p. 1494), having considered the Secretary-General's request for a subvention to UNIDIR [A/C.5/60/3], as recommended by the Board of Trustees, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions [A/60/7/Add.8], approved a subvention for the Institute in the amount of $468,100 from the UN regular budget for the 2006-2007 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/465], adopted resolution 60/89 without vote [agenda item 99 (b)].

Twenty-fifth anniversary of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 34/83 M of 11 December 1979, in which it requested the Secretary-General to establish the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research on the basis of the recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General,

Reaffirming its resolution 39/148 H of 17 December 1984, in which it approved the statute of the Institute, renewed the invitation to Governments to consider making voluntary contributions to the Institute and requested the Secretary-General to continue to give the Institute administrative and other support,

Recalling its resolution 45/62 G of 4 December 1990 on the tenth anniversary of the Institute and its resolution 55/35 A of 20 November 2000 on the twentieth anniversary of the Institute,

Considering the continuing need for the international community to have access to independent and in-depth research on security issues and prospects for disarmament and non-proliferation,

Underlining the particularly relevant contribution of the Institute to thinking and analysis on international security issues in the current context,

Taking note of the audit report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the Institute, which makes a positive assessment of the impact of the work of the Institute and recommends that the Institute should seek adequate funding from the regular budget to better meet the costs of its core staff and that the Institute, in consultation with its Board of Trustees, should establish specific posts for the core functions of the Institute,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Matters, in which, after considering the audit report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services, the Board recommended that the costs of the core staff of the Institute should be funded from the regular budget of the United Nations,

1. Welcomes the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research;

2. Recognizes the importance, the timeliness and the high quality of the work of the Institute;

3. Reiterates its conviction that the Institute should continue to conduct independent research on problems relating to disarmament and security and to undertake specialized research requiring a high degree of expertise;

4. Appeals to all Member States to continue to make financial contributions to the Institute in order to ensure its viability and the quality of its work over the long term;

5. Recommends that the Secretary-General implement the relevant recommendations of the Office of Internal Oversight Services and the decisions of the Board of Trustees of the Institute and continue to seek ways to increase the funding of the Institute, within existing resources.

Disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services

In 2005, 30 fellows participated in the UN disarmament fellowship, training and advisory services programme, which began in Geneva on 29 August and terminated in New York on 2 November. The programme comprised study sessions in Geneva and New York and study visits to intergovernmental organizations working in the field of disarmament, and to Member States, including Germany and Japan.

Regional disarmament

In 2005, the United Nations continued to promote regional approaches to disarmament and security and to complement relevant activities by strengthening predictable partnerships and arrangements with regional organizations. In February, the Security Council acknowledged in presidential statement S/PRST/2005/7 (see p. 619) the significant contribution of regional organizations in combating the proliferation of those weapons and encouraged continuing assistance to Member States to implement the Programme of Action adopted by the UN Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects[YUN 2001, p. 499].

Reports of Secretary-General. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/88 [YUN 2004, p. 574], the Secretary-General, in July [A/60/92], presented the views of three States (Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Georgia) regarding conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels.

In response to Assembly resolution 59/87 [YUN 2004, p. 575], he also submitted a July report with later addendum [A/60/119 & Add.1] containing the views of 12 States (Albania, Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Grenada, Guatemala, Japan, Mexico, Poland, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Thailand, Turkey) on confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/463], adopted three resolutions relating to regional disarmament. The Assembly adopted resolution 60/63 without vote [agenda item 97 (w)].

Regional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/58 P of 4 December 1990, 46/36 I of 6 December 1991, 47/52 J of 9 December 1992, 48/75 I of 16 December 1993, 49/75 N of 15 December 1994, 50/70 K of 12 December 1995, 51/45 K of 10 December 1996, 52/38 P of 9 December 1997, 53/77 O of 4 December 1998, 54/54 N of 1 December 1999, 55/33 O of 20 November 2000, 56/24 H of 29 November 2001, 57/76 of 22 November 2002, 58/38 of 8 December 2003 and 59/89 of 3 December 2004 on regional disarmament,

Believing that the efforts of the international community to move towards the ideal of general and complete disarmament are guided by the inherent human desire for genuine peace and security, the elimination of the danger of war and the release of economic, intellectual and other resources for peaceful pursuits,

Affirming the abiding commitment of all States to the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations in the conduct of their international relations,

Noting that essential guidelines for progress towards general and complete disarmament were adopted at the tenth special session of the General Assembly,

Taking note of the guidelines and recommendations for regional approaches to disarmament within the context of global security adopted by the Disarmament Commission at its 1993 substantive session,

Welcoming the prospects of genuine progress in the field of disarmament engendered in recent years as a result of negotiations between the two super-Powers,

Taking note of the recent proposals for disarmament at the regional and subregional levels,

Recognizing the importance of confidence-building measures for regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that endeavours by countries to promote regional disarmament, taking into account the specific characteristics of each region and in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armaments, would enhance the security of all States and would thus contribute to international peace and security by reducing the risk of regional conflicts,

1. Stresses that sustained efforts are needed, within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament and under the umbrella of the United Nations, to make progress on the entire range of disarmament issues;

2. Affirms that global and regional approaches to disarmament complement each other and should therefore be pursued simultaneously to promote regional and international peace and security;

3. Calls upon States to conclude agreements, wherever possible, for nuclear non-proliferation, disarmament and confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels;

4. Welcomes the initiatives towards disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation and security undertaken by some countries at the regional and subregional levels;

5. Supports and encourages efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels to ease regional tensions and to further disarmament and nuclear non-proliferation measures at the regional and subregional levels;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Regional disarmament".

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/64 without vote [agenda item 97 (u)].

Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context

The General Assembly,

Guided by the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 59/87 of 3 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolution 57/337 of 3 July 2003, entitled "Prevention of armed conflict", in which it called upon Member States to settle their disputes by peaceful means, as set out in Chapter VI of the Charter, inter alia, by any procedures adopted by the parties,

Recalling further the resolutions and guidelines adopted by consensus by the General Assembly and the Disarmament Commission relating to confidence-building measures and their implementation at the global, regional and subregional levels,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the agreement of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability,

Convinced that resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recognizing the need for meaningful dialogue among States concerned to avert conflict,

Welcoming the peace processes already initiated by States concerned to resolve their disputes through peaceful means bilaterally or through mediation, inter alia, by third parties, regional organizations or the United Nations,

Recognizing that States in some regions have already taken steps towards confidence-building measures at the bilateral, subregional and regional levels in the political and military fields, including arms control and disarmament, and noting that such confidence-building measures have improved peace and security in those regions and contributed to progress in the socio-economic conditions of their people,

Concerned that the continuation of disputes among States, particularly in the absence of an effective mechanism to resolve them through peaceful means, may contribute to the arms race and endanger the maintenance of international peace and security and the efforts of the international community to promote arms control and disarmament,

1. Calls upon Member States to refrain from the use or threat of use of force, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms its commitment to the peaceful settlement of disputes under Chapter VI of the Charter, in particular Article 33, which provides for a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means chosen by the parties;

3. Reaffirms the ways and means regarding confidence- and security-building measures set out in the report of the Disarmament Commission on its 1993 session;

4. Calls upon Member States to pursue those ways and means through sustained consultations and dialogue, while at the same time avoiding actions which may hinder or impair such a dialogue;

5. Urges States to comply strictly with all bilateral, regional and international agreements, including arms control and disarmament agreements, to which they are party;

6. Emphasizes that the objective of confidence-building measures should be to help to strengthen international peace and security and be consistent with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest level of armament;

7. Encourages the promotion of bilateral and regional confidence-building measures, with the consent and participation of the parties concerned, to avoid conflict and prevent the unintended and accidental outbreak of hostilities;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session containing the views of Member States on confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Confidence-building measures in the regional and subregional context".

The Assembly adopted resolution 60/75 by recorded vote (174-1-1) [agenda item 97 (v)].

Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 48/75 J of 16 December 1993, 49/75 O of 15 December 1994, 50/70 L of 12 December 1995, 51/45 Q of 10 December 1996, 52/38 Q of 9 December 1997, 53/77 P of 4 December 1998, 54/54 M of 1 December 1999, 55/33 P of 20 November 2000, 56/24 I of 29 November 2001, 57/77 of 22 November 2002, 58/39 of 8 December 2003 and 59/88 of 3 December 2004,

Recognizing the crucial role of conventional arms control in promoting regional and international peace and security,

Convinced that conventional arms control needs to be pursued primarily in the regional and subregional contexts, since most threats to peace and security in the post-cold-war era arise mainly among States located in the same region or subregion,

Aware that the preservation of a balance in the defence capabilities of States at the lowest level of armaments would contribute to peace and stability and should be a prime objective of conventional arms control,

Desirous of promoting agreements to strengthen regional peace and security at the lowest possible level of armaments and military forces,

Noting with particular interest the initiatives taken in this regard in different regions of the world, in particular the commencement of consultations among a number of Latin American countries and the proposals for conventional arms control made in the context of South Asia, and recognizing, in the context of this subject, the relevance and value of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe, which is a cornerstone of European security,

Believing that militarily significant States and States with larger military capabilities have a special responsibility in promoting such agreements for regional security,

Believing also that an important objective of conventional arms control in regions of tension should be to prevent the possibility of military attack launched by surprise and to avoid aggression,

1. Decides to give urgent consideration to the issues involved in conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider the formulation of principles that can serve as a framework for regional agreements on conventional arms control, and looks forward to a report of the Conference on this subject;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, in the meantime, to seek the views of Member States on the subject and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Conventional arms control at the regional and subregional levels".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/75:

Against: India.

Abstaining: Bhutan.

Africa

In 2005, African States maintained efforts to address challenges stemming from the proliferation of small arms and light weapons on the continent. The Regional Consultation of Governmental Experts on Small Arms and Light Weapons and the Biennial Meeting of States Reporting in West Africa (Bamako, Mali, 28-29 April) reviewed regional and international commitments and initiatives and mechanisms regarding those weapons. They discussed, among other things, common concerns and needs relating to three broad themes: country reporting to the Biennial Meeting of States to Consider the Implementation of the 2001 Programme of Action on small arms (see p. 618); ways to support a newly created small arms unit of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) in fulfilling its tasks; and the complementarity and/or compatibility of existing regional commitments to the control of illicit arms.

The Third Ministerial Review Conference of the Nairobi Declaration on the Problem of the Proliferation of Illicit Small Arms and Light Weapons in the Great Lakes Region and Horn of Africa [YUN 2000, p. 518] (Nairobi, 20-21 June) declared its commitment to continue efforts in tackling the problem. To that end, it established a Regional Centre for Small Arms and Light Weapons (RECSA) to oversee the full implementation of the Nairobi Declaration and related Protocol in the Great Lakes Region and the Horn of Africa.

The Second Continental Conference of African Governmental Experts and Regional Economic Communities on the Illicit Small Arms Trade (Windhoek, Namibia, 14-16 December) agreed on measures at the national, regional and international levels for implementing the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499] and to present a common African position at the planned 2006 Conference to review progress in the implementation process. It requested the African Union to take follow-up action, including organizing biennial high-level governmental meetings in 2008, 2010 and 2012, to review progress. To reinforce efforts in combating the illicit trafficking in small arms and light weapons, particularly illicit brokering, Interpol and the International Criminal Court (ICC) Prosecutor collaborated on a project to collect and analyse information on key figures involved in those activities and on their mode of operation in the Great Lakes region. The project was expected to provide the international law enforcement community with an additional tool for tackling those criminal activities. UNDP's Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery and Small Arms and Demobilization Unit organized a meeting, which considered lessons learned from the Small Arms Reduction Programme in the Great Lakes Region and ways to increase support for enhancing the regional agenda in that context.

Standing Advisory Committee

At its twenty-second ministerial meeting (Brazzaville, Republic of the Congo, 14-18 March) [A/59/769-S/2005/212], the Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa reviewed the geopolitical and security situation in its member States, the mercenary threat in Central Africa, its own role in promoting peace and development in the Great Lakes region, preparations for a military exercise in the Sudanese region of Bahr-El-Ghazal and regional contribution to the work of the Second Biennial Meeting of States on the implementation of the Programme of Action adopted by the 2001 UN Conference [YUN 2001, p. 499]. While welcoming the positive developments in the Central African Republic (see p. 217), including the holding of legislative and presidential elections and the establishment of the national Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration Commission for excombatants, the Committee expressed concern at continuing insecurity in that country, characterized by abuses and summary executions by agents of law and order and noted the commitment of the authorities to bring the perpetrators to justice. The Committee also expressed concern at persisting tensions on the border between the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) and Rwanda and welcomed their mutual efforts to improve the situation. It adopted two declarations on the mercenary threat in Central Africa and on peace, security, democracy and development in the Great Lakes region, respectively, both of which were annexed to its report.

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/96 [YUN 2004, p. 571], the Secretary-General, in July [A/60/166], described the activities of the Committee. He observed that the Committee, which remained the only forum for States members of the Economic Community of Central African States (ECCAS) to meet regularly to examine political and security developments in the region, demonstrated its valuable role by adopting two declarations during the year. He observed that the declaration on mercenary activity in Central Africa addressed the obstacle which such activity posed to peace, stability and development in the region. The declaration on peace, security, democracy and development in the Great Lakes region recognized the link between peace in that region and in the Central African subregion. Despite those commendable initiatives, however, concrete actions were imperative in order for the Central African subregion to attain sustainable peace, stability and development. It was critical, therefore, that the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa, established in 1999 [YUN 1999, p. 500], became operational, particularly its early warning mechanisms. It was also vital that the capacity of the ECCAS secretariat be strengthened to enable it to spearhead the implementation of the various declarations, decisions and recommendations of the Committee.

In September, the Congo transmitted the report of the Committee's twenty-third ministerial meeting (Brazzaville, Congo, 29 August–2 September) [A/60/393-S/2005/616]. The Committee continued to consider issues relating to its member States' geopolitical and security situation, security cooperation among them, and the review of related declarations and other initiatives. It also adopted its 2005-2006 programme of work.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/87 without vote [agenda item 98 (a)].

Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the purposes and principles of the United Nations and its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 43/78 H and 43/85 of 7 December 1988, 44/21 of 15 November 1989, 45/58 M of 4 December 1990, 46/37 B of 6 December 1991, 47/53 F of 15 December 1992, 48/76 A of 16 December 1993, 49/76 C of 15 December 1994, 50/71 B of 12 December 1995, 51/46 C of 10 December 1996, 52/39 B of 9 December 1997, 53/78 A of 4 December 1998, 54/55 A of 1 December 1999, 55/34 B of 20 November 2000, 56/25 A of 29 November 2001, 57/88 of 22 November 2002, 58/65 of 8 December 2003 and 59/96 of 3 December 2004,

Considering the importance and effectiveness of confidence-building measures taken at the initiative and with the participation of all States concerned and taking into account the specific characteristics of each region, since such measures can contribute to regional stability and to international peace and security,

Convinced that the resources released by disarmament, including regional disarmament, can be devoted to economic and social development and to the protection of the environment for the benefit of all peoples, in particular those of the developing countries,

Recalling the guidelines for general and complete disarmament adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Convinced that development can be achieved only in a climate of peace, security and mutual confidence both within and among States,

Bearing in mind the establishment by the Secretary-General on 28 May 1992 of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa, the purpose of which is to encourage arms limitation, disarmament, non-proliferation and development in the subregion,

Recalling the Brazzaville Declaration on Cooperation for Peace and Security in Central Africa, the Bata Declaration for the Promotion of Lasting Democracy, Peace and Development in Central Africa and the Yaoundé Declaration on Peace, Security and Stability in Central Africa,

Bearing in mind resolutions 1196(1998) and 1197 (1998), adopted by the Security Council on 16 and 18 September 1998 respectively, following its consideration of the report of the Secretary-General on the causes of conflict and the promotion of durable peace and sustainable development in Africa,

Emphasizing the need to strengthen the capacity for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa,

Recalling the decision of the fourth ministerial meeting of the Standing Advisory Committee in favour of establishing, under the auspices of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, a subregional centre for human rights and democracy in Central Africa at Yaoundé,

Noting with satisfaction the efforts being made by the countries members of the Economic Community of Central African States to promote peace and security in their subregion, including the visit to Kinshasa, on 24 June 2005, of the President of the Republic of the Congo and current Chairman of the Economic Community of Central African States, as well as the convening in Kinshasa, on 16 July 2005, of a quadripartite summit of the Heads of State of Angola, the Congo, the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Gabon, held within the framework of the mandate entrusted to the current Chairman at the twelfth session of the Conference of Heads of State and Government of the Economic Community of Central African States,

Noting with satisfaction also the improvement in the situation between the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Rwanda, particularly the encouraging results of the meetings of the Democratic Republic of the Congo-Rwanda-Uganda Tripartite Commission on security in that part of the Great Lakes region,

Taking note of the successful completion of electoral processes in the Central African Republic and Burundi,

Recognizing the importance of disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes in strengthening peace, political stability and reconstruction, especially in post-conflict situations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on regional confidence-building measures, which deals with the activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa in the period since the adoption by the General Assembly of its resolution 59/96;

2. Reaffirms its support for efforts aimed at promoting confidence-building measures at the regional and subregional levels in order to ease tensions and conflicts in Central Africa and to further sustainable peace, stability and development in the subregion;

3. Encourages the States members of the Economic Community of Central African States to pursue their efforts to promote peace and security in their subregion;

4. Encourages the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Rwanda to pursue their efforts to strengthen their bilateral relations;

5. Strongly appeals to the international community to provide all necessary support for the smooth functioning of the electoral process currently under way in the Democratic Republic of the Congo;

6. Appeals to the international community to support the efforts undertaken by the States concerned to implement disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes;

7. Reaffirms its support for the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee adopted at the organizational meeting of the Committee, held at Yaoundé from 27 to 31 July 1992;

8. Notes with satisfaction the progress made by the Standing Advisory Committee in implementing its programme of work for the period 2004-2005;

9. Emphasizes the importance of providing the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the essential support they need to carry out the full programme of activities which they adopted at their ministerial meetings;

10. Welcomes the creation of a mechanism for the promotion, maintenance and consolidation of peace and security in Central Africa, known as the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa, by the Conference of Heads of State and Government of the countries members of the Economic Community of Central African States, held at Yaoundé on 25 February 1999, and requests the Secretary-General to give his full support to the effective realization of that important mechanism;

11. Emphasizes the need to make the early warning mechanism in Central Africa operational so that it will serve, on the one hand, as an instrument for analysing and monitoring political situations in the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with a view to preventing the outbreak of future armed conflicts and, on the other hand, as a technical body through which the member States will carry out the programme of work of the Committee, adopted at its organizational meeting held at Yaoundé in 1992, and requests the Secretary-General to provide it with the assistance necessary for it to function properly;

12. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to continue to provide their full assistance for the proper functioning of the Subregional Centre for Human Rights and Democracy in Central Africa;

13. Requests the Secretary-General, pursuant to Security Council resolution 1197(1998), to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with the necessary support for the implementation and smooth functioning of the Council for Peace and Security in Central Africa and the early warning mechanism;

14. Also requests the Secretary-General to support the establishment of a network of parliamentarians with a view to the creation of a subregional parliament in Central Africa;

15. Requests the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to continue to provide increased assistance to the countries of Central Africa for coping with the problems of refugees and displaced persons in their territories;

16. Thanks the Secretary-General for having established the Trust Fund for the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa;

17. Appeals to Member States and to governmental and non-governmental organizations to make additional voluntary contributions to the Trust Fund for the implementation of the programme of work of the Standing Advisory Committee;

18. Thanks the Secretary-General for sending a multidisciplinary mission from 8 to 22 June 2003 for the purpose of undertaking an assessment of the priority needs of the region and challenges confronting it in the areas of peace, security, economic development, human rights and HIV/AIDS, and in the humanitarian field;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the States members of the Standing Advisory Committee with assistance to ensure that they are able to carry on their efforts;

20. Calls upon the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session a report on the implementation of the present resolution;

21. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Regional confidence-building measures: activities of the United Nations Standing Advisory Committee on Security Questions in Central Africa".

Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/101 [YUN 2004, p. 586], the Secretary-General described the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa [A/60/153], covering the period from July 2004 to June 2005. The Centre was established in Lomé, Togo, in 1986 [YUN 1986, p. 85].

During the reporting period, the Centre maintained focus on the priority areas of peace and security, which remained at the core of its work; arms control and disarmament; research, information and publication; and cooperation with regional organizations and civil society. The Centre participated in the Conference of Heads of State and Government of ECOWAS (Accra, Ghana, 25 January) on the crisis in Côte d'Ivoire, which provided it with an opportunity to explore the possible role it could play in the disarmament aspects of the peace process. In the Great Lakes region, the Centre, in collaboration with UNDP, deployed a one-month mission in the DRC to review the disarmament, demobilization and reintegration process launched in the context of the peace process in that country. In continuing efforts to promote civil-military relations in Africa, the Centre produced a draft code of conduct for armed and security forces on the continent, for consideration by the AU Commission. In related action, it launched pilot surveys, the first ones in Togo, which would serve as a basis for formulating action-oriented programmes to address areas of tension between the civilian population and the military, especially in emerging democracies in Africa. The Centre completed work on the parliamentary defence committees training course for West Africa and contributed to civil society efforts in Togo to mainstream gender in peace and disarmament processes. It also promoted adherence to and implementation of multilateral disarmament agreements on WMDs and supported regional efforts to tackle the small arms scourge.

In cooperation with its partners, including the AU and UNIDIR, the Centre elaborated the terms of reference and operational framework and guidelines for conducting national inventories of local capacities for the production of small arms and light weapons in the participating States of the Small Arms Transparency and Control Regime in Africa, launched in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 587]. Between March and June, field missions were deployed to participating countries to launch the inventory process. In April, the Centre, together with UNDP's Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery and UNIDIR, participated in a mission to six southern African countries (Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia, Zimbabwe) to raise awareness about the problem of small arms and light weapons and to build national capacity for tackling it. Other activities of the Centre promoted research in the areas of peace and disarmament on the continent, and cooperation with regional organizations and NGOs in advancing related courses, through exchange programmes and the provision of technical advice and expertise, particularly regarding the drafting of concept papers, project documents and conference reports.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/86 without vote [agenda item 98 (e)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa

The General Assembly,

Mindful of the provisions of Article 11, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations stipulating that a function of the General Assembly is to consider the general principles of cooperation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and arms limitation,

Recalling its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 D of 3 December 1986, 42/39 J of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 D of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, and its resolutions 46/36 F of 6 December 1991 and 47/52 G of 9 December 1992 on regional disarmament, including confidence-building measures,

Recalling also its resolutions 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 51/46 E of 10 December 1996, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 C of 4 December 1998, 54/55 B of 1 December 1999, 55/34 D of 20 November 2000, 56/25 D of 29 November 2001, 57/91 of 22 November 2002, 58/61 of 8 December 2003 and 59/101 of 3 December 2004,

Aware of the important role that the Regional Centre can play in promoting confidence-building and arms-limitation measures at the regional level, thereby promoting progress in the area of sustainable development,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, in which it was stated that the Regional Centre continued to carry out its mandate under very strenuous financial and operational difficulties,

Concerned that the activities and staffing of the Regional Centre have been reduced in view of the limited resources at its disposal,

Deeply concerned that, as noted in the report of the Secretary-General, the future of the Regional Centre looks bleak owing to the lack of a reliable source of funding that would ensure the sustainability of its operations,

Bearing in mind the efforts undertaken to mobilize the necessary resources for the operational costs of the Regional Centre,

Conscious of the need to review the mandate and programmes of the Regional Centre in the light of developments in the field of peace and security in Africa since its establishment,

Taking into account the need to establish close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the Peace and Security Council of the African Union, in particular its institutions in the field of peace, disarmament and security, as well as with relevant United Nations bodies and programmes in Africa for greater effectiveness,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to establish, within existing resources, a consultative mechanism of interested States, in particular African States, for the reorganization of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

2. Appeals once again to all States, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions in order to strengthen the programmes and activities of the Regional Centre and facilitate their implementation;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary support to the Regional Centre for better achievements and results;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to facilitate close cooperation between the Regional Centre and the African Union, in particular in the areas of peace, security and development, and to continue to provide assistance towards stabilizing the financial situation of the Centre;

5. Appeals in particular to the Regional Centre, in cooperation with the African Union, regional and subregional organizations and the African States, to take steps to promote the consistent implementation of the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa".

Asia and the Pacific

In 2005, disarmament and non-proliferation issues in Asia and the Pacific continued to be addressed by the regional States within the framework of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), its Regional Forum (ARF) and the six-member Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) (China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgystan, Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan). SCO, founded in 2001 as a multilateral platform for strengthening regional peace, security and stability, at its fifth summit (Astana, Kazakhstan, 5 July), adopted a declaration expressing member States' determination to contribute to efforts to strengthen international security at sea and in the air, especially with regard to combating terrorism and other challenges and threats. The twelfth ARF ministerial meeting (Vientiane, Lao People's Democratic Republic, 29 July), pointing to the continuing security challenge posed by the proliferation of WMDs and their delivery vehicles, particularly regarding the risk of those weapons falling into the hands of terrorists, underlined the need to maintain efforts to strengthen the international legal foundation for combating terrorism. The Ministers expressed support for the work of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544] to monitor national efforts to combat WMD proliferation, the importance of the NPT in promoting nuclear disarmament and the need for all regional States to combat illicit trafficking in small arms and light weapons. At the first East Asia summit (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, 14 December), ASEAN leaders endorsed the idea of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula in a peaceful and verifiable manner within the framework of the six-party talks (see p. 450) as something that could contribute to the peace, stability and prosperity of the region.

Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific

As requested by the General Assembly in resolution 59/100 [YUN 2004, p. 587], the Secretary-General reported in July on the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific from July 2004 to July 2005 [A/60/152]. The Centre was inaugurated in Kathmandu, Nepal, in 1989 [YUN 1989, p. 88].

During the reporting period, the Centre continued to promote disarmament and security through the organization of meetings and conferences, including a regional workshop to address issues relating to small arms (Beijing, China, 19-21 April), which enabled the regional States to exchange experiences on efforts to combat those weapons, identify related problems and challenges and explore ways to implement the 2001 Programme of Action adopted by the UN Conference on small arms [YUN 2001, p. 499]. The Centre contributed to the work of a study group on countering the proliferation of WMDs (Singapore, 27-28 May), under the auspices of the Council for Security Cooperation in Asia and the Pacific, and to ongoing efforts to advance cooperation with regional States and organizations in addressing security issues of concern. The Centre initiated consultations with some ASEAN members on disarmament and non-proliferation education. It also continued to develop working relations with disarmament-related intergovernmental organizations, including IAEA, OPCW, and CTBTO.

In efforts to maintain support to the five Central Asian States in finalizing the draft text of a treaty to make the region a nuclear-weapon-free zone, the Centre organized a series of expert group meetings, which facilitated the conclusion of negotiations on the text and the adoption of the Central Asian Nuclear-Weapon-Free-Zone Treaty and Protocol (see p. 610). In June, the Centre helped the United Nations Association of Japan to organize an international symposium on peace and environmental issues in Ishikawa (Kanazawa, Japan, 13-14 June), which addressed current peace and environmental issues in the region, as well as other security concerns. It also provided assistance in consolidating and strengthening Mongolia's nuclear-weapon-free status and, to that end, organized a meeting of a consultative group of UN departments, programmes, funds and agencies (New York, 7 July), which focused on follow-up to the studies conducted by the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) and UNDP on ecological vulnerabilities and human security in the country. In cooperation with Japan, the Centre organized a conference (Kyoto, Japan, 17-19 August) on the subject "The United Nations: after six decades and renewed efforts for the promotion of disarmament", which addressed the wide range of issues raised at the 2005 NPT Review Conference (see p. 597). The Centre also collaborated with the Republic of Korea to organize the fourth "UN–Republic of Korea Joint Conference on Disarmament and Non-Proliferation (Busan, 1-3 December), which considered challenges to the nuclear non-proliferation regime and ways to strengthen it. Other regional workshops organized by the Centre promoted the UN study on non-proliferation education.

Consultations continued during the year with the host country on the Centre's relocation from

UN Headquarters in New York, including the draft host country agreement and the draft memorandum of understanding on operational costs. Given the Centre's financial and logistical difficulties, the Secretary-General was considering the possibility of co-locating it with the Economic Commission for Asia and the Pacific in Bangkok, as a way of ensuring its operational viability.

Communications. On 2 August [A/60/230], the host country of the Centre, Nepal, reaffirmed its commitment to the Centre's relocation and its eagerness to sign the related host country agreement with the United Nations at the earliest possible date. It indicated its intention to bear the operating costs of the Centre, including additional security-related expenses, and requested a revised text of the host country agreement.

In a related 14 September communication [A/60/369], Nepal emphasized its willingness to sort out outstanding issues relating to the Centre's relocation and stated, in that connection, that privileges and immunities for the Centre's locally recruited staff would be granted in accordance with the provisions of the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations [YUN 1946-47, p. 100, GA res. 22 A (I)].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/85 without vote [agenda item 98 (d)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989, by which it established the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and renamed it the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific, with headquarters in Kathmandu and with the mandate of providing, on request, substantive support for the initiatives and other activities mutually agreed upon by the Member States of the Asia-Pacific region for the implementation of measures for peace and disarmament, through appropriate utilization of available resources,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General, in which he expresses his belief that the mandate of the Regional Centre remains valid and that the Centre has been a useful instrument for fostering a climate of cooperation for peace and disarmament in the region,

Noting that trends in the post-cold-war era have emphasized the function of the Regional Centre in assisting Member States as they deal with new security concerns and disarmament issues emerging in the region,

Commending the useful activities carried out by the Regional Centre in encouraging regional and subregional dialogue for the enhancement of openness, transparency and confidence-building, as well as the promotion of disarmament and security through the organization of regional meetings, which has come to be widely known within the Asia-Pacific region as "the Kathmandu process",

Expressing its appreciation to the Regional Centre for its organization of meetings and conferences in the region, held in Sapporo, Japan, from 26 to 29 July 2004, in Nadi, Fiji, from 18 to 20 August 2004, on Jeju Island, Republic of Korea, from 6 to 8 December 2004, in Beijing from 19 to 21 April 2005 and in Kanazawa, Japan, on 13 and 14 June 2005,

Welcoming the idea of the possible creation of an educational and training programme for peace and disarmament in Asia and the Pacific for young people with different backgrounds, to be financed from voluntary contributions,

Noting the important role of the Regional Centre in assisting region-specific initiatives of Member States, including its continued assistance in finalizing a treaty related to the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in Central Asia, as well as to Mongolia's international security and nuclear-weapon-free status,

Appreciating highly the overall support that Nepal has extended as the host nation of the headquarters of the Regional Centre,

1. Reaffirms its strong support for the forthcoming operation and further strengthening of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific;

2. Underlines the importance of the Kathmandu process as a powerful vehicle for the development of the practice of region-wide security and disarmament dialogue;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the continuing political support and voluntary financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Asia-Pacific region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions, the only resources of the Regional Centre, to strengthen the programme of activities of the Centre and the implementation thereof;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, taking note of paragraph 6 of General Assembly resolution 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, to provide the Regional Centre with the necessary support, within existing resources, in carrying out its programme of activities;

6. Urges the Secretary-General to ensure the physical operation of the Regional Centre from Kathmandu within six months of the date of signature of the host country agreement and to enable the Centre to function effectively;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific".

Europe

During the year, European countries continued to address security and disarmament issues within the framework of regional institutions. The EU, which had considerably increased its activities on matters relating to WMDs and small arms and light weapons, implemented during the year a significant number of concrete actions foreseen in its 2003 security strategy [YUN 2003, p. 576] for addressing global security threats and challenges. In a bid to help strengthen nuclear security, the EU adopted a Joint Action in July [2005/574/CFSP] pledging support for IAEA activities in the areas of nuclear security and verification. To that end, it undertook to implement projects that would help strengthen the physical protection of nuclear and other radioactive materials in use, storage and transport of nuclear facilities; secure radioactive materials in non-nuclear applications; strengthen States' capabilities for detection and response to illicit trafficking in those materials; and provide legislative assistance for the implementation of States' obligations under IAEA safeguards agreements and additional protocols.

During the year, the EU also made efforts to support the activities of OPCW (see p. 618), aimed at promoting the universalization of the Chemical Weapons Convention and at supporting its implementation by States. It continued its work on conventional arms control through the 1998 EU Code of Conduct for Arms Export [YUN 1998, p. 540]. Priorities for the future included outreach to promote the Code's principles and criteria, and providing practical and technical assistance to States in that context. The EU endorsed the principle of an international arms trade treaty and made a commitment in October to work towards its negotiation. In December, the European Council adopted the EU Strategy to combat illicit accumulation and trafficking in small arms and light weapons and their ammunition. The Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) also accorded particular attention to security-related concerns posed by the illicit trafficking of small arms and light weapons. The thirteenth meeting of the OSCE Ministerial Council (Ljubljana, Slovenia, 5-6 December) adopted a decision on further efforts to implement previous OSCE documents on those weapons, aspects of which covered ammunition stockpiles. OSCE also assisted many of its participating States to reduce conventional arms stocks, improve stockpile security or destroy excess or unwelcome armaments. Those States began drafting a "best practice guide" on stockpiles of conventional ammunition. OSCE also accorded considerable attention to WMD proliferation and the threat of their acquisition by non-State actors, focusing on ways of assisting in the implementation of Security Council resolution 1540(2004) [YUN 2004, p. 544] on measures to combat the problem.

Communications. On 19 August [A/60/292], the Russian Federation transmitted the text of a 22 June declaration of the States members of the Collective Security Treaty Organization, by which they pledged to take measures to encourage national procedures for the ratification of the Agreement on Adaptation of the Treaty on Conventional Armed Forces in Europe.

Latin America

In 2005, the Organization of American States (OAS) continued to promote regional disarmament and non-proliferation initiatives. The OAS General Assembly, at its thirty-fifth regular session (Florida, United States, 5-7 June), adopted resolutions underscoring the disarmament elements of the Inter-American Convention against the Illicit Manufacturing of and Trafficking in Firearms, Ammunition, Explosives, and Other Related Materials (CIFTA); consolidation of the regime established in the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco) (see p. 611); the Americas as a biological- and chemical-weapons-free region; the proliferation of and the illicit trade in small arms and light weapons in all its aspects; disarmament and non-proliferation education; the Inter-American Convention on Transparency in Conventional Weapons Acquisitions; inter-American support for the CTBT; and the Americas as an anti-personnel land-mine-free zone. Within the framework of CIFTA, the first meeting of national authorities directly responsible for granting the export, import and international transit licences or authorizations for transfers of firearms, ammunition, explosives and other related materials (Washington, D.C., 6-7 October) discussed mechanisms to help prevent the illegal manufacturing and trafficking in firearms. The Fourth Summit of the Americas (Mar del Plata, Argentina, 4-5 November) adopted the Declaration of Mar Del Plata reaffirming commitment to the objectives and purposes of the 2003 Declaration on Security in the Americas [YUN 2003, p. 577], based on a multidimensional concept of security and cooperation among the regional States. The Central American Integration System, with support from UNDP's Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery/Small Arms and Demobilization Unit, developed a regional small arms control project expected to begin operation in 2006. The Unit, together with the United Kingdom, also supported Nicaragua in developing and implementing a project relating to the control of those weapons.

Regional Centre

Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/99 [YUN 2004, p. 589], the Secretary-General submitted a July report [A/60/132] describing the activities of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean from July 2004 to June 2005. The Centre was inaugurated in Lima, Peru, in 1987 [YUN 1987, p. 88].

The Centre focused attention on WMDs and stockpile management; training courses for the law enforcement community, members of Parliament and NGO representatives; guidance on reporting in connection with weapons-related instruments; and development of methodologies for future confidence-building measures between States. Concerning the promotion of subregional and regional security, the Centre devoted increased attention to defining, better understanding and supporting projects that affected the security and lives of people on a daily basis. It also helped coordinate the efforts of related entities and undertook capacity-building initiatives on the link between security and sustainable development.

In the field of good governance and security sector reform, the Centre supported a project in Costa Rica aimed at researching ways to reduce the impact of firearms-related violence on human development, improve firearms legislation and conduct capacity-building activities, decentralize firearms-related policy and develop awareness on firearms control. A similar initiative in Guatemala involved studies on the impact of firearms proliferation on development. The Centre also fostered the development and implementation of firearms-related instruments, the strengthening of firearms legislation, the development of training courses. It focused on assisting with weapons destruction and stockpile management, increasing database tools to enhance coordination and the exchange of information, enhancing participation of the firearms, ammunition and explosives industry and fostering UN coordination. In that context, it helped organize various conferences and workshops to assist the regional States in implementing their obligations regarding such issues as the design of firearms legislation and the development of capacity-building courses and reporting procedures.

During the reporting period, the Centre, in cooperation with several partners, developed and organized training courses on the control of the legal arms trade and the illicit trafficking in firearms, ammunition and explosives, in which some 329 individuals in the region participated, including law enforcement officials, members of Parliament and NGO representatives. Regarding weapons destruction and stockpile management, the Centre assisted with the destruction or removal of 52,000 firearms in Brazil, Costa Rica and Paraguay, as well as the destruction of over 96 tons of ammunition and explosives in Paraguay. Plans were currently under way for additional weapons destruction in those countries. The Centre assisted regional States to enhance confidence- and security-building measures by helping to develop a standardized methodology on the comparison of military expenditures, which provided the basis for the discussion of the mission, objectives and policies of national defence. It also assisted in developing defence white papers addressing issues relating to the strengthening of democratic values, practices and human security in the region. The Centre undertook a variety of other activities designed to enhance cooperation for a safer region by promoting dialogue and information exchange among the regional States and supporting efforts in the field of regional security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/84 without vote [agenda item 98 (c)].

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 K of 30 November 1987 and 43/76 H of 7 December 1988 on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean, with headquarters in Lima,

Recalling also its resolutions 46/37 F of 9 December 1991, 48/76 E of 16 December 1993, 49/76 D of 15 December 1994, 50/71 C of 12 December 1995, 52/220 of 22 December 1997, 53/78 F of 4 December 1998, 54/55 F of 1 December 1999, 55/34 E of 20 November 2000, 56/25 E of 29 November 2001, 57/89 of 22 November 2002, 58/60 of 8 December 2003 and 59/99 of 3 December 2004,

Underlining the revitalization of the Regional Centre, the efforts made by the Government of Peru and other countries to that end, as well as the important work done by the Director of the Centre,

Recognizing that the Regional Centre has continued to act as an instrument for the implementation of regional initiatives and has intensified its contribution to the coordination of United Nations efforts towards peace and security,

Welcoming the report of the Secretary-General, which concludes that the Regional Centre has continued to provide assistance to States in the Latin American and Caribbean region in the implementation of regional initiatives in the areas of peace, disarmament and development and that during the period under review, such assistance was provided in the form of, inter alia, weapons destruction and stockpile management, training courses for the law enforcement community, members of Parliament and their advisers and representatives of non-governmental organizations, guidance on reporting in connection with weapons-related instruments and the development of methodologies for future confidence-building measures among States,

Recalling the report of the Group of Governmental Experts on the relationship between disarmament and development, referred to in General Assembly resolution 59/78 of 3 December 2004, which is of utmost interest with regard to the role that the Regional Centre plays in promoting the issue in the region in pursuit of its mandate to promote economic and social development related to peace and disarmament,

Noting that security and disarmament issues have always been recognized as significant topics in Latin America and the Caribbean, the first inhabited region in the world to be declared a nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Welcoming the support provided by the Regional Centre to strengthening the nuclear-weapon-free zone established by the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America and the Caribbean (Treaty of Tlatelolco), as well as to promoting and assisting the ratification and implementation of existing multilateral agreements related to weapons of mass destruction and to promoting peace and disarmament education projects during the period under review,

Bearing in mind the important role that the Regional Centre can play in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, disarmament and development at the regional level,

Bearing in mind also the importance of information, research, education and training for peace, disarmament and development in order to achieve understanding and cooperation among States,

Recognizing the need to provide the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament with sufficient financial resources and cooperation for the planning and implementation of their programmes of activities,

1. Reiterates its strong support for the role of the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean in the promotion of United Nations activities at the regional level to strengthen peace, stability, security and development among its member States;

2. Expresses its satisfaction and congratulates the Regional Centre for the expansion of the vast range of activities carried out in the last year in the fields of peace, disarmament and development, and requests the Centre to take into account the proposals to be submitted by the countries of the region in promoting confidence-building measures, arms control and limitation, transparency, disarmament and development at the regional level;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the political support and financial contributions to the Regional Centre, which are essential for its continued operation;

4. Invites all States of the region to continue to take part in the activities of the Regional Centre, proposing items for inclusion in its programme and making greater and better use of the potential of the Centre to meet the current challenges facing the international community with a view to fulfilling the aims of the Charter of the United Nations in the fields of peace, disarmament and development;

5. Recognizes that the Regional Centre has an important role in the promotion and development of regional initiatives agreed upon by the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean in the field of weapons of mass destruction, in particular nuclear weapons, conventional arms, including small arms and light weapons, as well as the relationship between disarmament and development;

6. Encourages the Regional Centre to further develop activities in the important area of disarmament and development;

7. Highlights the conclusion contained in the report of the Secretary-General that, through its activities, the Regional Centre has demonstrated its role as a viable regional actor in assisting States in the region to advance the cause of peace, disarmament and development in Latin America and the Caribbean;

8. Appeals to Member States, in particular those within the Latin American and Caribbean region, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make and to increase voluntary contributions to strengthen the Regional Centre, its programme of activities and the implementation thereof;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Regional Centre with all necessary support, within existing resources, so that it may carry out its programme of activities in accordance with its mandate;

10. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean".

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/464], adopted resolution 60/83 without vote [agenda item 98 (b)].

United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/98 of 3 December 2004 regarding the maintenance and revitalization of the three United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament,

Recalling also the reports of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa, the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Asia and the Pacific and the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace, Disarmament and Development in Latin America and the Caribbean,

Reaffirming its decision, taken in 1982 at its twelfth special session, to establish the United Nations Disarmament Information Programme, the purpose of which is to inform, educate and generate public understanding and support for the objectives of the United Nations in the field of arms control and disarmament,

Bearing in mind its resolutions 40/151 G of 16 December 1985, 41/60 J of 3 December 1986, 42/39 D of 30 November 1987 and 44/117 F of 15 December 1989 on the regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

Recognizing that the changes that have taken place in the world have created new opportunities as well as posed new challenges for the pursuit of disarmament, and, in this regard, bearing in mind that the regional centres for peace and disarmament can contribute substantially to understanding and cooperation among States in each particular region in the areas of peace, disarmament and development,

Noting that in paragraph 146 of the Final Document of the Twelfth Conference of Heads of State or Government of the Non-Aligned Countries, held at Durban, South Africa, from 29 August to 3 September 1998, the Heads of State or Government welcomed the decision adopted by the General Assembly on maintaining and revitalizing the three regional centres for peace and disarmament in Nepal, Peru and Togo,

1. Reiterates the importance of the United Nations activities at the regional level to increase the stability and security of its Member States, which could be promoted in a substantive manner by the maintenance and revitalization of the three regional centres for peace and disarmament;

2. Reaffirms that, in order to achieve positive results, it is useful for the three regional centres to carry out dissemination and educational programmes that promote regional peace and security and that are aimed at changing basic attitudes with respect to peace and security and disarmament so as to support the achievement of the purposes and principles of the United Nations;

3. Appeals to Member States in each region and those that are able to do so, as well as to international governmental and non-governmental organizations and foundations, to make voluntary contributions to the regional centres in their respective regions to strengthen their activities and initiatives;

4. Emphasizes the importance of the activities of the regional branch of the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary support, within existing resources, to the regional centres in carrying out their programmes of activities;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "United Nations regional centres for peace and disarmament".

Chapter VIII

Other political and security questions

In 2005, the United Nations continued to consider political and security questions relating to its efforts to support democratization worldwide, the promotion of decolonization, the Organization's public information activities and the peaceful uses of outer space.

The Organization continued to promote and strengthen democratic practices and principles around the world and to better coordinate and strengthen UN activities to support that objective. In July, the Secretary-General announced the establishment of the United Nations Democracy Fund, a voluntary trust fund to promote democracy worldwide. Efforts also continued to promote measures to ensure regional peace, security and stability, especially in Antarctica, the South Atlantic and the Indian Ocean, through the General Assembly's ad hoc committees established for those purposes. The Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples reviewed progress in the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, particularly the exercise of self-determination by the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories.

During the year, the national representative body of Tokelau, a New Zealand administered Territory, approved a draft treaty of free association between Tokelau and New Zealand, and the holding of a referendum on the change in the Territory's status in 2006. The Special Committee, at the invitation of the Bermuda Independence Commission, visited Bermuda during the year to assess the type of assistance the UN system could provide to help that Territory define its future status. Progress was also made in the new Tripartite Forum for Dialogue on Gibraltar.

In the area of information, the Secretary-General reported that the process of reorientation of the Department of Public Information (DPI), launched in 2002, was completed, and that DPI had implemented those aspects of the 2002 comprehensive review of its work that were within his authority. While the Regional United Nations Information Centre (UNIC) in Brussels, Belgium, made steady progress as an information hub for Western Europe, the Secretary-General revised his plan for the further rationalization of information centres around hubs in other regions and proposed instead a strategic recalibration of the existing network of UNICs, by which key centres in each region would be strengthened to support other centres. The Secretary-General also set out new strategic directions for UN libraries to align library policy with the recommendations put forward in his 2002 report on strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for further change.

In a December resolution on developments in information and telecommunications, the Assembly called on Member States to consider existing and potential threats in the field of information security. Regarding the role of science and technology in the context of international security, the Assembly, in another December resolution, encouraged UN bodies, within existing mandates, to promote the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes.

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space considered the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space. Implementation of the recommendations by Member States continued through regional and international efforts and the work of some of the action teams established for that purpose.

The United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation held its fifty-third session.

General aspects of international security

Support for democracies

UN system activities

Reports of Secretary-General. The Secretary-General, in his report to the 2005 World Summit (see p. 67), entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all" [A/59/2005], said that the United Nations had done more than any other single organization to promote and strengthen democratic institutions and practices around the world by supporting emerging democracies with legal, technical and financial assistance and advice. However, the impact of that work was reduced by the way it was dispersed among the different parts of the UN bureaucracy. Significant gaps still existed in the UN's capacity in several critical areas. The Organization as a whole needed to be better coordinated and resources mobilized more effectively. It should not restrict its role to norm-setting but expand it to help broaden and deepen democratic trends throughout the world. He supported the establishment of a democracy fund (see below).

In a November report [A/60/556], submitted in response to General Assembly resolutions 58/13 [YUN 2003, p. 594] and 58/281 [YUN 2004, p. 592], the Secretary-General discussed the follow-up to the Fifth (2003) International Conference of New or Restored Democracies [YUN 2003, p. 593]; preparations for the Sixth International Conference, to be held in Doha, Qatar, from 30 October to 1 November 2006; and proposals for strengthening UN support for democratic governance.

The Secretary-General believed that strengthening new and restored democracies, as well as respect for human rights and the rule of law, was essential for preventing the emergence of new security threats and combating existing ones. Significant progress had been made by the Chair of the Fifth International Conference in strengthening and institutionalizing the new or restored democracies movement, but the implementation of the decisions taken at each conference needed to be strengthened and broadened. He planned to ask relevant UN entities to study the comparative advantages, complementarity and distribution of labour of various intergovernmental democracy movements, organizations and institutes, and how the UN system had worked and could work further to support them. The Secretary-General called on the Assembly to decide, taking into account the financial implications, on ways to strengthen UN support to the Chair of the International Conference and UN cooperation with relevant movements and organizations to make their work in that area more effective and complementary.

In Assembly resolution 60/1 (see p. 48), world leaders renewed their commitment to support democracy by strengthening countries' capacity to implement democratic principles and practices and resolved to strengthen UN capacity to assist Member States. They also welcomed the establishment of the Democracy Fund in July (see below).

Democracy Fund

The Secretary-General, in his March report entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all" [A/59/2005] (see p. 67), said that he supported the creation of a UN democracy fund, first proposed by United States President George W. Bush in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 66] to provide assistance to countries seeking to establish or strengthen their democracy. He intended to ensure closer coordination of UN activities in that regard by establishing a more explicit link between the democratic governance work of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the Electoral Assistance Division of the UN Department of Political Affairs.

Addressing the fifth African Union Summit (Sirte, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, 4 July), the Secretary-General announced the establishment of the United Nations Democracy Fund (UNDEF), the primary purpose of which would be to promote democracy throughout the world by providing assistance for projects that consolidated and strengthened democratic institutions and facilitated democratic governance in new or restored democracies, as was called for by the General Assembly in resolution 58/13 [YUN 2003, p. 594]. UNDEF would complement current UN efforts and ensure an integrated, holistic, capacity-building and demand-driven approach. It would be a voluntary trust fund, located within the UN Fund for International Partnerships and overseen by an Advisory Board.

In his October report [A/60/430] on the implementation of the decisions of the 2005 World Summit Outcome (see p. 77), the Secretary-General stated that 15 countries had so far made pledges to the Fund, amounting to $42.2 million.

Regional aspects of international peace and security

Antarctica

In response to General Assembly resolution 57/51 [YUN 2002, p. 555], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/60/222], prepared by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), on the activities of the Antarctic Treaty system and international bodies and recent developments pertaining to the Antarctic environment. The information was drawn from the final reports of the Twenty-fifth through Twenty-eighth Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meetings (ATCMs) (Warsaw, Poland, 10-20 September 2002; Madrid, Spain, 9-20 June 2003; Cape Town, South Africa, 24 May–4 June 2004; and Stockholm, Sweden, 6-17 June 2005), and from information provided by the parties to the Antarctic Treaty, which was adopted in 1959 and entered into force on 23 June 1961.

The three inspections carried out in Antarctica since 2002 to ensure observance of the Treaty's provisions found that all stations and facilities were in compliance with those provisions. The inspections also checked the implementation of the 1991 Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty (Madrid Protocol), and noted a high degree of understanding of the Protocol and of developments regarding the use of alternative energy systems, including wind and solar. However, a number of areas were identified for improvement, including fuel transfer and storage containment; oil spill contingency plans; the environmental impact assessment of current activities; air emission filtering and monitoring; and sewage treatment systems. One inspection found a significant number of stations unoccupied and little coordination in scientific research in the Antarctic Peninsula, even among neighbouring stations. As at June 2005, there were 32 parties to the Protocol.

Fishing, sealing and whaling were regulated by the 1980 Convention on the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. Towards the implementation of its conservation measures, the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources was increasingly cooperating with non-contracting parties, and had further strengthened cooperation with the Antarctic Treaty parties.

The report also described recent developments pertaining to the Antarctic environment, including those relating to science and support activities; environmental monitoring; the publication of a "state of the Antarctic environment" report; the development of environmental impact assessment procedures; safety of operations, emergency response and contingency planning; waste disposal and management; prevention of marine pollution; ozone depletion; conservation of Antarctic fauna and flora; area protection and management; the question of liability arising from activities covered by the Madrid Protocol; Antarctic tourism and other non-governmental operations; biological prospecting; and preparations for the third International Polar Year 2007-2008, for which a joint planning committee had been established by the International Council for Science and the World Meteorological Organization in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 1504].

The Secretary-General stated that Antarctica had witnessed successful international cooperation in research, particularly in connection with the study of global changes. However, illegal, unregulated and unreported fishing for toothfish in the Southern Ocean still exceeded reported catches, despite major efforts to address those activities. Further enforcement and cooperation were required from all States involved to end them and efforts should continue to ensure that expanding commercial activities in the region would not affect the successes of the Treaty system, in particular in securing Antarctica as a natural reserve, devoted to peace and science. Global changes, in particular climate change and the depletion of the ozone layer, remained major threats to the integrity of the Antarctic environment.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First (Disarmament and International Security) Committee [A/60/454], adopted resolution 60/47 without vote [agenda item 88].

Question of Antarctica

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 57/51 of 22 November 2002, in which it requested the Secretary-General to submit a report consisting of the information provided by the Antarctic Treaty Consultative Parties on their consultative meetings, on their activities in Antarctica and on developments in relation to Antarctica,

Taking into account the debates on the question of Antarctica held since its thirty-eighth session,

Conscious of the particular significance of Antarctica to the international community, including for international peace and security, the global and regional environment, its effects on global and regional climate conditions, and scientific research,

Reaffirming that the management and use of Antarctica should be conducted in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and of promoting international cooperation for the benefit of mankind as a whole,

Recognizing that the Antarctic Treaty, which provides, inter alia, for the demilitarization of the continent, the prohibition of nuclear explosions and the disposal of nuclear wastes, the freedom of scientific research and the free exchange of scientific information, is in furtherance of the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Noting with satisfaction the entry into force of the Protocol on Environmental Protection to the Antarctic Treaty on 14 January 1998, under which Antarctica has been designated as a natural reserve, devoted to peace and science, and the provisions contained in the Protocol regarding the protection of the Antarctic environment and dependent and associated ecosystems, including the need for environmental impact assessment in the planning and conduct of all relevant activities in Antarctica,

Welcoming the continuing cooperation among countries undertaking scientific research activities in Antarctica, which may help to minimize human impact on the Antarctic environment,

Welcoming also the increasing awareness of and interest in Antarctica shown by the international community, and convinced of the advantages to the whole of mankind of a better knowledge of Antarctica,

Welcoming further the secretariat of the Antarctic Treaty, established in Buenos Aires, which became operational as of 1 September 2004,

Reaffirming its conviction that, in the interest of all mankind, Antarctica should continue forever to be used exclusively for peaceful purposes and that it should not become the scene or object of international discord,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the question of Antarctica and the role accorded by the Secretary-General to the United Nations Environment Programme in preparing his report, and also of the Twenty-sixth Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting, held in Madrid from 9 to 20 June 2003, the Twenty-seventh Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting, held in Cape Town, South Africa, from 24 May to 4 June 2004, and the Twenty-eighth Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meeting, held in Stockholm from 6 to 17 June 2005;

2. Recalls the statement under chapter 17 of Agenda 21, adopted by the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, that States carrying out research activities in Antarctica should, as provided for in article III of the Antarctic Treaty, continue:

(a) To ensure that data and information resulting from such research are freely available to the international community;

(b) To enhance the access of the international scientific community and the specialized agencies of the United Nations system to such data and information, including the encouragement of periodic seminars and symposiums;

3. Welcomes the invitations to the Executive Director of the United Nations Environment Programme to attend Antarctic Treaty Consultative Meetings in order to assist such meetings in their substantive work, and urges the parties to continue to do so for future consultative meetings;

4. Welcomes also the practice whereby the Antarctic Treaty Consultative Parties regularly provide the Secretary-General with information on their consultative meetings and on their activities in Antarctica, and encourages the parties to continue to provide the Secretary-General and interested States with information on those meetings, activities and developments in relation to Antarctica;

5. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

South Atlantic

As requested in General Assembly resolution 58/10 [YUN 2003, p. 596], the Secretary-General submitted an August report on the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic [A/60/253], declared in 1986 to promote cooperation among States of the region in the political, economic, scientific, technical, cultural and other fields [YUN 1986, p. 369]. The Secretary-General stated that, as at 8 August, five States (Argentina, Bolivia, Iraq, Kenya, Panama) and one UN body (United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime) had responded to his request for views on the implementation of the declaration.

On 31 October (decision 60/509), the Assembly decided to defer consideration of the item on the zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic and the Secretary-General's report thereon, include it in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first (2006) session and maintain biennial consideration of the item thereafter.

Indian Ocean

In 2005, the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean (New York, 26 July) [A/60/29] continued to consider approaches for achieving the goals of the 1971 Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 2832(XXVI) [YUN 1971, p. 34].

Pursuant to Assembly resolution 58/29 [YUN 2003, p. 597], the Chairman of the Committee, following informal consultations with Committee members, stated that regional groupings had undertaken a number of cooperative initiatives to bring about socio-economic development in the Indian Ocean region. However, new threats, such as terrorism, were affecting regional stability and security, and disarmament and arms control efforts lagged. The Committee was the only UN body of its kind with a capacity to address security issues in a broader sense, involving all interrelated aspects and new approaches to the scope of its work could be explored in the context of the ongoing UN reform process, which sought to promote larger freedom, while encompassing security, human rights and development. In that effort, it might be necessary to revise the Declaration to bring it in line with current realities, and give the Committee a new focus so as to become useful to the UN system. While there appeared to be a general sense among members that the Declaration's objectives remained relevant, a number of complexities and constraints stood in the way of its implementation. It was felt that more time would be needed before any discussion could take place on practical measures to ensure peace and stability in the Indian Ocean in line with the Declaration.

France, the United Kingdom and the United States had not yet changed their position on non-participation in the Committee. The Committee remained convinced that the participation of all permanent members of the Security Council and major maritime users in its work was important and would assist in a mutually beneficial dialogue aimed at peace, security and stability in the region. It decided that the Bureau would meet before the Committee's 2007 session to examine ways to revitalize its work.

The Committee reaffirmed the conclusions of its 1994 [YUN 1994, p. 155], 1995 [YUN 1995, p. 182] and 1996 [YUN 1996, p. 512] sessions and requested the Chairman to continue informal consultations with the Committee members and to report to the Assembly's sixty-second (2007) session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/455], adopted resolution 60/48 by recorded vote (132-3-46) [agenda item 89].

Implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, contained in its resolution 2832(XXVI) of 16 December 1971, and recalling also its resolutions 54/47 of 1 December 1999, 56/16 of 29 November 2001 and 58/29 of 8 December 2003 and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling also the report of the Meeting of the Littoral and Hinterland States of the Indian Ocean held in July 1979,

Recalling further paragraph 102 of the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Kuala Lumpur, from 20 to 25 February 2003, in which it was noted, inter alia, that the Chairperson of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean would continue his informal consultations on the future work of the Committee,

Emphasizing the need to foster consensual approaches that are conducive to the pursuit of such endeavours,

Noting the initiatives taken by countries of the region to promote cooperation, in particular economic cooperation, in the Indian Ocean area and the possible contribution of such initiatives to overall objectives of a zone of peace,

Convinced that the participation of all permanent members of the Security Council and the major maritime users of the Indian Ocean in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee is important and would assist the progress of a mutually beneficial dialogue to develop conditions of peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region,

Considering that greater efforts and more time are required to develop a focused discussion on practical measures to ensure conditions of peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean;

2. Reiterates its conviction that the participation of all permanent members of the Security Council and the major maritime users of the Indian Ocean in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee is important and would greatly facilitate the development of a mutually beneficial dialogue to advance peace, security and stability in the Indian Ocean region;

3. Requests the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee to continue his informal consultations with the members of the Committee and to report through the Committee to the General Assembly at its sixty-second session;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render, within existing resources, all necessary assistance to the Ad Hoc Committee, including the provision of summary records;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-second session the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/48:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Cuba, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkmenistan, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Uzbekistan, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Andorra, Austria, Belgium, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Palau, Papua New Guinea, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Moldova, Romania, San Marino, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey.

Decolonization

The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Special Committee on decolonization) held its annual session in New York in two parts—17 February and 11 March (first part); and 6-8, 13, 15-16 and 20-24 June (second part). It considered various aspects of the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, adopted by the Assembly in resolution 1514(XV) [YUN 1960, p. 49], including general decolonization issues and the situation of individual Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs). In accordance with Assembly resolution 59/129

[YUN 2004, p. 598], the Special Committee transmitted to the Assembly the report on its 2005 activities [A/60/23].

Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

As required under the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001-2010) [YUN 2001, p. 530], declared by the General Assembly in resolution 55/146 [YUN 2000, p. 548], the Secretary-General submitted a midpoint report in April [A/60/71 & Add.1] on action taken to date to implement the Plan of Action by UN organs and Member States. Action taken by UN specialized agencies was covered in a separate report of the Economic and Social Council President [E/2005/47 & Corr.1] (see p. 662).

The Secretary-General concluded that the task of eradicating colonialism remained unfinished, requiring the sustained and determined efforts of all concerned. Some specialized agencies and regional commissions continued to facilitate the participation of many NSGTs in their bodies as observers or associate members, enabling their participation in world conferences on economic and social issues. The Special Committee on decolonization continued to strengthen consultation mechanisms and dialogue with the administering powers and improvements in some NSGTs offered a unique opportunity to develop decolonization plans on a case-by-case basis with their participation. That opportunity should be seized to accelerate the decolonization process and ensure the implementation of UN resolutions on the subject.

(For more information on developments in specific NSGTs, see the relevant sections below.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth (Special Political and Decolonization) Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/120 by recorded vote (133-3-36) [agenda item 26].

Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 55/146 of 8 December 2000, by which it declared the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Recalling also that 2005 marks the mid-point of the Decade,

Recalling further that the plan of action for the Decade requested the Secretary-General to submit a report on action taken to implement the plan of action,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the plan of action,

Taking into account the important contribution of the United Nations in the field of decolonization, in particular through the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Calls upon Member States to redouble their efforts to implement the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism;

3. Calls upon the administering Powers to cooperate fully with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to develop constructive programmes of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

4. Requests Member States, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, and other governmental and non-governmental organizations actively to support and participate in the implementation of the plan of action during the Decade;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the necessary resources for the successful implementation of the plan of action;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/120:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Tuvalu, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Albania, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Latvia, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Monaco, Netherlands, Norway, Palau, Poland, Republic of Moldova, Serbia and Montenegro, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Turkey, Ukraine.

Caribbean regional seminar

As part of its efforts to implement the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (2001-2010), the Special Committee on decolonization [A/60/23] organized a Caribbean regional seminar (Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, 17-19 May) to assess the situation in NSGTs.

After conducting a midterm review of the implementation of the plan of action, the seminar recommended that the Special Committee, the administering Powers and NSGTs discuss innovative ways to expedite the implementation of the goals of the Second International Decade and that the Special Committee continue to monitor the evolution of NSGTs towards self-determination. The Special Committee should include NSGT representatives, on a case-by-case basis in the consultations between the Special Committee and the administering Powers and continue to develop a mechanism to review, annually, the implementation of the specific recommendations on decolonization.

The seminar also recommended that the Special Committee, along with the UN Department of Public Information (DPI) and other UN bodies, develop a programme to disseminate information and raise public awareness in NSGTs of the legitimate political status options available to them. UN information centres (UNICs) should be directed to disseminate information on decolonization to NSGTs and the administering Powers and the Electoral Assistance Division of the UN Department of Political Affairs (DPA) should be asked to support and assist any consultation process held in an NSGT regarding any act of self-determination.

Participants supported closer cooperation between the Special Committee and the Economic and Social Council in order to promote increased UN assistance in the economic and social sphere to NSGTs. They also urged the Special Committee to solicit the Council's assistance regarding the implementation of Council resolution 2004/53 [YUN 2004, p. 596] on the implementation of the 1960 Declaration by the UN specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations. The seminar stressed that the UN system should continue to strengthen measures of support and formulate programmes of assistance to the remaining NSGTs, and make proposals for the full implementation of relevant UN resolutions by the specialized agencies, as detailed in Assembly resolution 56/67 [YUN 2001, p. 534]. Participants requested those Special Committee members that were members of the Economic and Social Council to support the inclusion of those NSGTs that were associate members of UN regional commissions as observers in the Council. They recommended that the Special Committee establish closer ties with the Caribbean Community and Common Market and the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States, and encouraged Caribbean NSGTs to develop closer contacts with those two organizations.

Participants welcomed the presence at the seminar of a representative of France and regretted the lack of representation of the United Kingdom, which had participated in previous seminars. They recommended that the Special Committee integrate, to the extent possible, the seminar's recommendations into its resolutions on decolonization, as they were important expressions of the people of the NSGTs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/119 by recorded vote (166-3-4) [agenda item 26].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all its subsequent resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, the most recent of which was resolution 59/136 of 10 December 2004, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Bearing in mind its resolution 55/146 of 8 December 2000, by which it declared the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and the need to examine ways to ascertain the wishes of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories on the basis of resolution 1514 (XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization,

Recognizing that the eradication of colonialism has been one of the priorities of the United Nations and continues to be one of its priorities for the decade that began in 2001,

Reconfirming the need to take measures to eliminate colonialism by 2010, as called for in its resolution 55/146,

Reiterating its conviction of the need for the eradication of colonialism, as well as racial discrimination and violations of basic human rights,

Noting with satisfaction the achievements of the Special Committee in contributing to the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Stressing the importance of the formal participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting with interest the cooperation and active participation of some administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee, and encouraging the others also to do so,

Taking note of the fact that the Special Committee held a Caribbean regional seminar on the mid-term review, follow-up and priorities for action of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism at Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions and decisions on decolonization, including its resolution 55/146, by which it declared the period 2001-2010 the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories concerned to exercise fully as soon as possible their right to self-determination, including independence;

2. Reaffirms once again that the existence of colonialism in any form or manifestation, including economic exploitation, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

3. Reaffirms its determination to continue to take all steps necessary to bring about the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and the faithful observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its support for the aspirations of the peoples under colonial rule to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

5. Calls upon the administering Powers to cooperate fully with the Special Committee to finalize before the end of 2005 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

6. Welcomes the progress made in the ongoing consultations between the Special Committee and New Zealand, as administering Power for Tokelau, with the participation of representatives of the people of Tokelau, as evidenced by the decision of the General Fono of Tokelau in November 2003 to actively explore with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association;

7. Also welcomes the dispatch of the United Nations special mission to Bermuda, at the request of the territorial Government and with the concurrence of the administering Power, which provided information to the people of the Territory on the role of the United Nations in the process of self-determination, on the legitimate political status options, as clearly defined in General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, and on the experiences of other small States which have achieved a full measure of self-government;

8. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out the actions approved by the General Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism and the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism in all Territories that have not yet exercised their right to self-determination, including independence, and in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals to bring about an end to colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

(b) To continue to examine the implementation by Member States of resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(c) To continue to examine the political, economic and social situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and to recommend, as appropriate, to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination, including independence, in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(d) To finalize before the end of 2006 a constructive programme of work on a case-by-case basis for the Non-Self-Governing Territories to facilitate the implementation of the mandate of the Special Committee and the relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(e) To continue to dispatch visiting missions to the Non-Self-Governing Territories in accordance with relevant resolutions on decolonization, including resolutions on specific Territories;

(f) To conduct seminars, as appropriate, for the purpose of receiving and disseminating information on the work of the Special Committee, and to facilitate participation by the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in those seminars;

(g) To take all necessary steps to enlist worldwide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

(h) To observe annually the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

9. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to give effect within their respective spheres of competence to the recommendations of the Special Committee for the implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers to ensure that the economic activities in the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration do not adversely affect the interests of the peoples but instead promote development, and to assist them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

11. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable rights of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources, including land, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

12. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and requests the administering

Powers to take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

13. Reaffirms that the United Nations visiting missions to the Territories are an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, as well as the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants, and calls upon the administering Powers to continue to cooperate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to facilitate visiting missions to the Territories;

14. Calls upon the administering Powers that have not participated formally in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its session in 2006;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide economic, social and other assistance to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to continue to do so, as appropriate, after they exercise their right to self-determination, including independence;

16. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 2005, including the programme of work envisaged for 2006;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as the other resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

Implementation by international organizations

In a March report [A/60/64], the Secretary-General stated that he had brought General Assembly resolution 59/129 [YUN 2004, p. 598] to the attention of UN specialized agencies and other international institutions associated with the United Nations and invited them to submit information regarding their implementation activities in support of NSGTs. Replies received from three agencies or institutions were summarized in a May report of the Economic and Social Council President on consultations held with the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization [E/2005/47 & Corr.1]. According to the information provided, a number of specialized agencies and organizations continued to extend assistance programmes to NSGTs from their own budgetary resources, in addition to their respective contributions as executing agencies of projects funded by UNDP. Seven specialized agencies indicated that they were not currently carrying out any assistance programmes in NSGTs.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 27 July [meeting 40], the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 2005/49 [draft: E/2005/L.22, orally revised] by recorded vote (32-0-20) [agenda item 9].

Support to Non-Self-Governing Territories by the specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council containing the information submitted by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations on their activities with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having heard the statement by the representative of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, the resolutions of the Special Committee and other relevant resolutions and decisions, including, in particular, Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/53 of 23 July 2004,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration,

Welcoming the participation, in the capacity of observer, of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of the regional commissions in world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories,

Noting that only some specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system have been involved in providing assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Stressing that, because the development options of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories are limited, there are special challenges to planning for and implementing sustainable development and that those Territories will be constrained in meeting the challenges without the continued cooperation and assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system,

Stressing also the importance of securing the resources necessary to fund expanded programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all the major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Reaffirming the mandate of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all appropriate measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation of Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions,

Expressing its appreciation to the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum, the Caribbean Community and other regional organizations for the continued cooperation and assistance they have extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of programmes of assistance for the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions related to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Non-Self-Governing Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes, cyclones and sea-level rise, and recalling the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 59/129 of 10 December 2004, entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

1. Takes note of the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council, and endorses the observations and suggestions arising therefrom;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV), and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

4. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the implementation of the Declaration and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

5. Also reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspirations of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to exercise their right to self-determination entails, as a corollary, the extension of all appropriate assistance to those peoples;

6. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the regional and subregional organizations in the implementation of Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and requests all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to implement the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

7. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and to formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active cooperation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

10. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review, at the regular meetings of their governing bodies, the implementation of Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

11. Welcomes the continuing initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, including the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, and in providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

12. Requests the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, in consultation with the United Nations Development Programme, the specialized agencies and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, to prepare an information leaflet on assistance programmes available to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to disseminate it widely among them;

13. Encourages Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

14. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee related to specific Territories, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

15. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

16. Draws the attention of the Special Committee to the present resolution and to the discussion held on the subject at the substantive session of 2005 of the Economic and Social Council;

17. Welcomes the adoption by the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean of its resolution 574(XXVII) of 16 May 1998 calling for the mechanisms necessary for its associate members, including small island Non-Self-Governing Territories, to participate in the special sessions of the General Assembly, subject to the rules of procedure of the Assembly, to review and assess the implementation of the plans of action of those United Nations world conferences in which the Territories originally participated in the capacity of observer, and in the work of the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies;

18. Requests the President of the Council to continue to maintain close contact on these matters with the Chairman of the Special Committee and to report thereon to the Council;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to follow the implementation of the present resolution, paying particular attention to cooperation and integration arrangements for maximizing the efficiency of the assistance activities undertaken by various organizations of the United Nations system, and to report thereon to the Council at its substantive session of 2006;

20. Decides to keep these questions under continuous review.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 2005/49:

In favour: Azerbaijan, Bangladesh, Belize, Benin, Brazil, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Guinea, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Kenya, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mexico, Mozambique, Namibia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, South Africa, Thailand, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/482, orally amended], adopted resolution 60/112 by recorded vote (123-0-50) [agenda item 36].

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Having also considered the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the Economic and Social Council on the item,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and the resolutions of the Special Committee, as well as other relevant resolutions and decisions, including in particular Economic and Social Council resolution 2004/53 of 23 July 2004,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

Conscious of the need to facilitate the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in resolution 1514(XV),

Noting that the large majority of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories are small island Territories,

Welcoming the assistance extended to Non-Self-Governing Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Also welcoming the current participation in the capacity of observers of those Non-Self-Governing Territories that are associate members of regional commissions in the world conferences in the economic and social sphere, subject to the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories,

6. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and international and regional organizations to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

7. Urges those specialized agencies and organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet provided assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories to do so as soon as possible;

8. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system and regional organizations to strengthen existing measures of support and formulate appropriate programmes of assistance to the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, within the framework of their respective mandates, in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system concerned to provide information on:

(a) Environmental problems facing the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) The impact of natural disasters, such as hurricanes and volcanic eruptions, and other environmental problems, such as beach and coastal erosion and droughts, on those Territories;

(c) Ways and means to assist the Territories to fight drug trafficking, money-laundering and other illegal and criminal activities;

(d) The illegal exploitation of the marine resources of the Territories and the need to utilize those resources for the benefit of the peoples of the Territories;

10. Recommends that the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system formulate, with the active cooperation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and submit the proposals to their governing and legislative organs;

11. Also recommends that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system continue to review at the regular meetings of their governing bodies the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

16. Encourages the Non-Self-Governing Territories to take steps to establish and/or strengthen disaster preparedness and management institutions and policies;

17. Requests the administering Powers concerned to facilitate, when appropriate, the participation of appointed and elected representatives of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the relevant meetings and conferences of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in accordance with relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions, including resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Special Committee on specific Territories, so that the Territories may benefit from the related activities of those agencies and organizations;

18. Recommends that all Governments intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to accord priority to the question of providing assistance to the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

19. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

20. Commends the Economic and Social Council for its debate and resolution on this question, and requests it to continue to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee, appropriate measures for the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

21. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General on the implementation of the present resolution;

22. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the governing bodies of the appropriate specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations so that those bodies may take the necessary measures to implement the resolution, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

23. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

Military activities and arrangements in colonial countries

Secretariat working papers on Bermuda [A/AC.109/2005/5], Guam [A/AC.109/2005/7] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2005/9] contained information on, among other subjects, military activities and arrangements by the administering Powers in those Territories.

Economic and other activities affecting the interests of NSGTs

The Special Committee on decolonization continued consideration of economic and other activities affecting the interests of the peoples of NSGTs. It had before it Secretariat working papers containing information on, among other subjects, economic conditions, with particular reference to foreign economic activities, in Anguilla [A/AC.109/2005/4], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2005/5], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2005/12], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2005/6], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2005/16], New Caledonia [A/AC.109/2005/13], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2005/8] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2005/9].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/481], adopted resolution 60/111 by recorded vote (169-1-3) [agenda item 35].

Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Economic and other activities which affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, as well as all other relevant resolutions of the Assembly, including, in particular, resolutions 46/181 of 19 December 1991 and 55/146 of 8 December 2000,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming also that any economic or other activity that has a negative impact on the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and on the exercise of their right to self-determination in conformity with the Charter and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) is contrary to the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Reaffirming further that the natural resources are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location, size and economic conditions of each Territory, and bearing in mind the need to promote the economic stability, diversification and strengthening of the economy of each Territory,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Conscious also that foreign economic investment, when undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes, could make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories and also to the exercise of their right to self-determination,

Concerned about any activities aimed at exploiting the natural and human resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the African Union, the Pacific Islands Forum and the Caribbean Community,

1. Reaffirms the right of peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as their right to the enjoyment of their natural resources and their right to dispose of those resources in their best interest;

2. Affirms the value of foreign economic investment undertaken in collaboration with the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and in accordance with their wishes in order to make a valid contribution to the socio-economic development of the Territories;

3. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and reaffirms the legitimate rights of their peoples over their natural resources;

4. Reaffirms its concern about any activities aimed at the exploitation of the natural resources that are the heritage of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, including the indigenous populations, in the Caribbean, the Pacific and other regions, and of their human resources, to the detriment of their interests, and in such a way as to deprive them of their right to dispose of those resources;

5. Reaffirms the need to avoid any economic and other activities that adversely affect the interests of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories;

6. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises;

7. Reiterates that the damaging exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, are a threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

8. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system to take all possible measures to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

9. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to ensure that no discriminatory working conditions prevail in the Territories under their administration and to promote in each Territory a fair system of wages applicable to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, through all means at his disposal, to inform world public opinion of any activity that affects the exercise of the right of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination in conformity with the Charter and General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

12. Appeals to trade unions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to continue their efforts to promote the economic well-being of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and also appeals to the media to disseminate information about the developments in this regard;

13. Decides to follow the situation in the Non-Self-Governing Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interest of their peoples, including the indigenous populations, and at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories;

14. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/111:

Dissemination of information

The Special Committee on decolonization held consultations in June with representatives of DPA and DPI on the dissemination of information on decolonization. It also considered a report of the Secretary-General on DPI activities on the topic from June 2004 to March 2005 [A/AC.109/2005/18].

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/118 by recorded vote (167-3-2) [agenda item 26].

Dissemination of information on decolonization

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular Assembly resolution 59/135 of 10 December 2004,

Recognizing the need for flexible, practical and innovative approaches towards reviewing the options of self-determination for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories with a view to implementing the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Reiterating the importance of dissemination of information as an instrument for furthering the aims of the Declaration, and mindful of the role of world public opinion in effectively assisting the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories to achieve self-determination,

Recognizing the role played by the administering Powers in transmitting information to the Secretary-General in accordance with the terms of Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Aware of the role of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization,

1. Approves the activities in the field of dissemination of information on decolonization undertaken by the Department of Public Information and the Department of Political Affairs of the Secretariat, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization;

2. Considers it important to continue and expand its efforts to ensure the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with particular emphasis on the options of self-determination available for the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Requests the Department of Political Affairs and the Department of Public Information to implement the recommendations of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue their efforts to take measures through all the media available, including publications, radio and television, as well as the Internet, to give publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and, inter alia:

(a) To develop procedures to collect, prepare and disseminate, particularly to the Territories, basic material on the issue of self-determination of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

(b) To seek the full cooperation of the administering Powers in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To develop a working relationship with the appropriate regional and intergovernmental organizations, particularly in the Pacific and Caribbean regions, by holding periodic consultations and exchanging information;

(d) To encourage the involvement of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization;

(e) To encourage the involvement of Non-Self-Governing Territories in the dissemination of information on decolonization;

(f) To report to the Special Committee on measures taken in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, including the administering Powers, to accelerate the dissemination of information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine this question and to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/118:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Andorra, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Singapore, Slovakia, Slovenia, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Tajikistan, Thailand, The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Timor-Leste, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Tuvalu, Uganda, Ukraine, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Information on Territories

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/127 [YUN 2004, p. 603], the Secretary-General submitted an April report [A/60/69 & Corr.1] showing the dates of transmittal of information on economic, social and educational conditions in NSGTs for the years 2002-2004, under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/480], adopted resolution 60/110 by recorded vote (169-0-5) [agenda item 34].

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 59/127 of 10 December 2004, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter of the United Nations, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

2. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit or continue to transmit to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure that adequate information is drawn from all available published sources in connection with the preparation of the working papers relating to the Territories concerned;

4. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures.

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/110:

Study and training

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/130 [YUN 2004, p. 604], the Secretary-General reported [A/60/67] on offers of study and training scholarships for inhabitants of NSGTs during the period 16 April 2004 to 25 March 2005 by five Member States (Australia, Malaysia, Portugal, Thailand, United Kingdom) and one non-member State (Holy See). Fifty-eight Member States and one non-member State had made such offers over the years.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/483], adopted resolution 60/113 without vote [agenda item 37].

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 59/130 of 10 December 2004,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to its resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Invites all States to make or to continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;

4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

Visiting missions

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of sending visiting missions to NSGTs [A/60/23]. It adopted a resolution stressing the need to dispatch periodic visiting missions to facilitate the full implementation of the 1960 Declaration on decolonization and called on the administering Powers to receive those missions in the Territories under their administration.

The Committee recommended to the General Assembly for adoption draft resolutions on 11 small NSGTs (see p. 677) and on Tokelau (see p. 675), endorsing a number of conclusions and recommendations concerning the sending of visiting missions to those Territories.

Bermuda mission

In March, the Special Committee on decolonization accepted an 18 February invitation from the Bermuda Independence Commission to send a UN Special Mission to Bermuda in two phases (March and May), subject to the concurrence of the United Kingdom (the administering Power). The Mission's objective was to gather first-hand information on the situation in Bermuda and assess the type of assistance the UN system could provide to the self-determination process in that Territory, with a view to defining its future status. It should also inform Bermudians about the process of self-determination and subsequent decolonization under the UN Charter and about the Special Committee's mandate, as well as the wider UN system in that regard.

The Special Mission visited Bermuda from 26 to 31 March and from 30 May to 3 June. In its June report [A/AC.109/2005/19], the Mission concluded that there was insufficient knowledge and awareness among the people of Bermuda and its political leadership of the role of international law in the process of political and constitutional development, including the role the UN system could play in supporting the self-determination and subsequent decolonization of the Territory. The message heard by Bermudians on the question was mixed, since the available political options presented by the administering Power differed substantively from the consensus position in UN resolutions, which confirmed a broader range of legitimate political alternatives. The issue of whether Bermuda's current status was self-governing or not was also raised and the Mission provided information on the minimum standards for what constituted self-government. It was evident that the lack of previous communication with the United Nations had resulted in a number of misconceptions in Bermuda regarding the Organization's role in the self-determination process and the parameters of self-government. The Mission therefore provided a mechanism of communication between the people of Bermuda and their leadership, on one hand, and the United Nations, on the other.

Puerto Rico

In accordance with the Special Committee's 2004 resolution concerning the self-determination and independence of Puerto Rico [YUN 2004, p. 604], the Committee's Rapporteur, in an April report [A/AC.109/2005/L.3], provided information on Puerto Rico, including recent political, military and economic developments and UN action.

Following its usual practice, the Special Committee acceded to requests for hearings from representatives of a number of organizations, who presented their views on 13 June [A/60/23]. The Committee adopted a resolution, without vote, by which it reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence; called upon the United States to assume its responsibility of expediting a process to allow the Puerto Rican people to exercise that right; urged the United States to return the occupied land and installations on Vieques Island and in Ceiba to the people of Puerto Rico; and requested the Rapporteur to report in 2006 on the resolution's implementation.

Territories under review

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

The Special Committee on decolonization, in considering the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) on 15 June [A/60/23], examined a Secretariat working paper on constitutional and political developments, mine clearance and economic and social conditions in that Territory [A/AC.109/2005/17]. It adopted a resolution requesting Argentina and the United Kingdom to consolidate the current dialogue and cooperation by resuming negotiations to find a peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute.

Argentina, in a 3 January statement [A/59/662], recalled its objective to recover full sovereignty over the Malvinas, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands and surrounding maritime areas through peaceful means. It reaffirmed the need to carry out UN resolutions and the Organization of American States declarations urging the resumption of bilateral negotiations in order to find a just, peaceful and lasting solution to the sovereignty dispute. It also recalled its readiness to resume such negotiations immediately and exhorted the United Kingdom to do likewise.

The United Kingdom responded on 31 January [A/59/687] that it had no doubts about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, and rejected Argentina's claim to sovereignty.

Annexed to a 10 May letter [A/60/76] from Argentina to the Secretary-General were identical notes dated 20 April from Argentina, addressed to Luxembourg in its capacity as President of the EU Council and President of the European Commission, and 6 May to the British Embassy in Buenos Aires. In those notes, Argentina drew attention to part III, title IV, annex II of the 2004 Constitutional Treaty of the EU, which referred to the Malvinas Islands, South Georgia, South Sandwich Islands and the "British Antarctic Territory", and reiterated its previous rejection of such references in the 1957 Constitutional Treaty (Treaty of Rome) establishing the European Economic Community. It recalled that the islands in question and the surrounding maritime areas were an integral part of its territory, and were illegally occupied by the United Kingdom and were the subject of a sovereignty dispute. The inclusion of those territories in the annex on the association of the overseas countries and territories, in no way affected Argentina's sovereignty and jurisdiction. Argentina also noted that the inclusion of the "British Antarctic Territory" in annex II did not affect Argentina's rights in the Argentine Antarctic Sector.

On 7 June [A/59/843], the United Kingdom rejected the protest contained in Argentina's 6 May letter, stating that the inclusion of the islands in question and the British Antarctic Territory in the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe confirmed the current position with regard to the status of those British Overseas Territories, which had been included in the Rome Treaty since the accession of the United Kingdom on 1 January 1973.

In a 6 July letter to the Economic and Social Council President [E/2005/84], Argentina referred to the Council President's May report [E/2004/47] on consultations held with the Chairman of the Special Committee on decolonization and its reference to the United Kingdom's declaration that international labour conventions were applicable under article 35 of the constitution of the International Labour Organization (ILO) to the Falkland Islands (Malvinas). Argentina requested that all references to the Malvinas Islands in the Council's official documentation should conform to the provisions on bilingual terminology contained in the UN Secretariat's 1999 editorial directive, and that special reference be made, in a footnote, to the existence of a sovereignty dispute between Argentina and the United Kingdom over the Malvinas Islands. A June corrigendum to the report [E/2005/47/Corr.1] contained such a footnote.

On 25 July [E/2005/87], the United Kingdom, responding to Argentina's 6 July letter, stated that it had no doubts about its sovereignty over the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands, as well as the surrounding maritime areas, and rejected Argentina's claims to sovereignty over those islands and areas and its assertion that they were under illegal occupation by the United Kingdom.

Addressing the General Assembly during the general debate on 14 September [A/60/PV.4], Argentina's President, Néstor Kirchner, reaffirmed his country's readiness to reach a final, fair and peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute and urged the United Kingdom to resume negotiations. In exercise of its right of reply, the United Kingdom, in a 16 September letter to the Assembly President [A/60/361], responded that the elected representatives of the Falkland Islands had again asked the Special Committee on decolonization to recognize that they, like any other people, were entitled to exercise their right of self-determination, and reiterated that the people of the Falkland Islands did not wish for any change in the status of the Islands. The United Kingdom stated that there could be no negotiations on sovereignty unless and until such time as the islanders so wished.

On 28 October [A/60/527], Argentina expressed strong rejection of and formal protest at a new measure whereby the United Kingdom claimed to assign ownership rights to the fisheries resources in the maritime areas surrounding the Malvinas Islands. Argentina said that the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission made no provision for an agreed fisheries administration between the two countries and the United Kingdom's unilateral measure was incompatible with the bilateral arrangements on cooperation for the conservation of fisheries resources. Moreover, the new measure was not compatible with the General Assembly's call in resolution 31/49 [YUN 1976, p. 747] that the two parties refrain from taking decisions that would imply the introduction of unilateral modifications in the situation, while negotiations on the sovereignty dispute were ongoing.

On 1 December [A/60/583], the United Kingdom rejected Argentina's protest and reiterated that the Falkland Islands Government was entitled to adopt whatever measure it considered necessary to conserve, manage, and exploit fish stocks within its waters. It was disappointed that the matter was affecting the level of Argentina's cooperation on the conservation of fisheries resources under the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission.

On 12 December [A/60/594], Argentina stated that the British unilateral measures seriously impaired cooperation in the South Atlantic Fisheries Commission and that it would take legal actions available to it regarding enterprises that exploited fisheries resources in the Argentine exclusive economic zone without appropriate authorization.

Gibraltar

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Gibraltar on 7 June [A/60/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper describing political developments and economic and social conditions in that Territory, and setting forth the positions of the United Kingdom (the administering Power), Gibraltar and Spain concerning Gibraltar's future status [A/AC.109/2005/11].

Gibraltar's Chief Minister, Peter Caruana, in his New Year message, said that the December 2004 agreement between the United Kingdom, Spain and Gibraltar [YUN 2004, p. 606] to set up a new trilateral process of dialogue outside the Brussels Process [YUN 1984, p. 1075] was a major political development. As far as Gibraltar was concerned, the Brussels agreement [ibid.] had become totally irrelevant and should be formally abandoned by the United Kingdom and Spain. There was no prospect of Gibraltar's participation in it, nor could there be any question of parallel bilateral sovereignty talks between the United Kingdom and Spain.

The new Trilateral Forum for Dialogue held three meetings (Malaga, Spain, 10-11 February; Faro, Portugal, 8-9 July; Mallorca, Spain, 10-11 October), to discuss, among other subjects, the possibility of an expanded use of Gibraltar's airport, pension entitlements of Spanish workers who had worked in Gibraltar until 1969 and improvements in telephone communication between Gibraltar and Spain. According to joint statements made after the meetings, significant progress was made and all three participants hoped to convene a full ministerial meeting in the near future to transform the results of the negotiations into political decisions.

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2006/9] reported that on 5 October, the United Kingdom representative had told the Fourth Committee, that his country welcomed the progress being made in the constitutional review process which begun in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 605] between the United Kingdom and the 10 NSGTs, including Gibraltar, under its administration.

Gibraltar's Chief Minister, speaking before the Fourth Committee on 6 October, said that the position of the people of Gibraltar was that their homeland could be decolonized only through the exercise of their inalienable right to freely decide their own political future. The Committee, or Spain and the United Kingdom, could refer the matter to the International Court of Justice for an advisory opinion if they disagreed with that position. It was expected that Gibraltar's negotiations with the United Kingdom on a non-colonial constitution, endowing the people of Gibraltar with the greatest possible measure of self-government, would be concluded satisfactorily in early 2006. Gibraltar would continue to participate in the Trilateral Forum for Dialogue.

At that same meeting, Spain's representative said that, in the case of decisions properly taken bilaterally between Spain and the United Kingdom, it was understood that the latter country would not reach agreement without Gibraltar's consent, and with regard to the issue of Gibraltar's sovereignty, the aspirations and interest of the people of Gibraltar would be taken into account. The atmosphere of mutual confidence and cooperation that had been instituted meant that, as the Forum proceeded with its work, it would be possible to begin at the appropriate moment, to consider a definitive solution to the question of Gibraltar. The United Kingdom representative welcomed Spain's remarks, saying that issues related to Gibraltar could only be resolved in a climate of trust.

On 8 December (decision 60/525), the Assembly urged Spain and the United Kingdom, while listening to the interests and aspirations of Gibraltar, to reach, in the spirit of the 1984 statement on Gibraltar agreed to by both countries [YUN 1984, p. 1075], a definitive solution to the question of Gibraltar, in the light of relevant Assembly resolutions and applicable principles, and in the spirit of the UN Charter. It also welcomed the establishment of the new Tripartite Forum for Dialogue on Gibraltar, under the December 2004 statement [YUN 2004, p. 606], separate from the Brussels process.

New Caledonia

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of New Caledonia on 16 June [A/60/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2005/13] describing the political situation and economic data and developments in the Territory.

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2006/14] reported that, in January, following the 2004 elections [YUN 2004, p. 606], which ended the 25-year domination of the Caledonian Government by the Rassemblement pour la Calédonie dans la République (RPCR), which favoured integration with France (the administering Power), Jacques Lafleur resigned as RPCR President and was replaced by Pierre Frogier. A report by the French National Assembly indicated that the election results led to growing political divisions between a pro-independence North and an anti-independence South.

The Committee of signatories of the 1998 Nouméa Accord on New Caledonia's future status [YUN 1998, p. 574] met in Paris in January and discussed: the composition of the electorate for New Caledonian elections; the introduction of the euro; the 2006-2009 development arrangements; and the implications of the new census related to financial support for New Caledonia. In November, the pro-independence Union Calédonienne (UC) confirmed as its President, Pascal Naouna, a strong supporter of the fixed electoral body whereby only people born in New Caledonia could vote in the Territory. In contrast, the RPCR President, in October, had defended the "sliding" electoral body's provisions, whereby 10 years of residence would be sufficient for eligibility to vote in the independence referendum to be held between 2014 and 2019. In the same month, the Libération Kanak Socialiste party reaffirmed its opposition to those provisions, even for non-natives who would have resided in New Caledonia for 20 years on the date of the vote. Inter-ethnic strain between the Kanaks and settlers from the French territory of Wallis and Futuna continued to cause tension in New Caledonia.

Addressing the Fourth Committee on 10 October, Mr. Roch Wamytan, the Front de libération nationale kanak socialiste (FLNKS) representative, said that independence was his country's non-negotiable aim and FLNKS had signed the Nouméa

Accord with a view to ending colonial rule. He claimed that France continued to fund European settlement and metallurgical projects, while tax breaks stimulated immigration to the Territory's South Province, which could ultimately lead to the partition of New Caledonia. He said that the vote on the issue of voter eligibility in a future referendum on self-determination, which had been postponed to 2006, would likely be postponed indefinitely, owing to the upcoming French Presidential elections in 2007. During his visit in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 612], French President Jacques Chirac promised to resolve the question of voter registration before the end of his term of office.

During the period under review, five country laws (lois du pays), which had the full force of law and could be contested only before the Constitutional Council, were adopted, the most recent relating to social, finance and customs issues and various tax laws.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/115 without vote [agenda item 26].

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Reaffirming the right of peoples to self-determination as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960,

Noting the importance of the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in cooperation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, including measures in the area of environmental protection and action with respect to drug abuse and trafficking, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

Noting also, in this context, the importance of equitable economic and social development, as well as continued dialogue among the parties involved in New Caledonia in the preparation of the act of self-determination of New Caledonia,

Noting with satisfaction the intensification of contacts between New Caledonia and neighbouring countries of the South Pacific region,

1. Welcomes the significant developments that have taken place in New Caledonia as exemplified by the signing of the Nouméa Accord of 5 May 1998 by the representatives of New Caledonia and the Government of France;

2. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia, to maintain, in the framework of the Nouméa Accord, their dialogue in a spirit of harmony;

3. Notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord aimed at taking more broadly into account the Kanak identity in the political and social organization of New Caledonia, and also those provisions of the Accord relating to control of immigration and protection of local employment;

4. Also notes the relevant provisions of the Nouméa Accord to the effect that New Caledonia may become a member or associate member of certain international organizations, such as international organizations in the Pacific region, the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the International Labour Organization, according to their regulations;

5. Further notes the agreement between the signatories of the Nouméa Accord that the progress made in the emancipation process shall be brought to the attention of the United Nations;

6. Welcomes the fact that the administering Power invited to New Caledonia, at the time the new institutions were established, a mission of information which comprised representatives of countries of the Pacific region;

7. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to transmit to the Secretary-General information as required under Article 73 e of the Charter;

8. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights of all sectors of the population, according to the letter and the spirit of the Nouméa Accord, which is based on the principle that it is for the populations of New Caledonia to choose how to control their destiny;

9. Welcomes the measures that have been taken to strengthen and diversify the New Caledonian economy in all fields, and encourages further such measures in accordance with the spirit of the Matignon and Nouméa Accords;

10. Also welcomes the importance attached by the parties to the Matignon and Nouméa Accords to greater progress in housing, employment, training, education and health care in New Caledonia;

11. Acknowledges the contribution of the Melanesian Cultural Centre to the protection of the indigenous Kanak culture of New Caledonia;

12. Notes the positive initiatives aimed at protecting the natural environment of New Caledonia, notably the "Zonéco" operation designed to map and evaluate marine resources within the economic zone of New Caledonia;

13. Acknowledges the close links between New Caledonia and the peoples of the South Pacific and the positive actions being taken by the French and territorial authorities to facilitate the further development of those links, including the development of closer relations with the countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

14. Welcomes, in this regard, the accession by New Caledonia to the status of observer in the Pacific Islands Forum, continuing high-level visits to New Caledonia by delegations from countries of the Pacific region and high-level visits by delegations from New

Caledonia to countries members of the Pacific Islands Forum;

15. Welcomes also the cooperative attitude of other States and Territories in the region towards New Caledonia, its economic and political aspirations and its increasing participation in regional and international affairs and its intention to host the 2005 meeting of the Ministerial Committee of the Pacific Islands Forum;

16. Decides to keep under continuous review the process unfolding in New Caledonia as a result of the signing of the Nouméa Accord;

17. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue the examination of the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of New Caledonia and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

Tokelau

On 24 June, the Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Tokelau (the three small atolls of Nukunonu, Fakaofo and Atafu in the South Pacific), administered by New Zealand [A/60/23]. Before it was a Secretariat working paper covering constitutional and political developments, and economic and social conditions in the Territory, and setting out the positions of New Zealand and Tokelau on the Territory's future status [A/AC.109/2005/3].

A later Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2006/10] reported that elections for Faipule (the representative of each village/atoll), Pulenuku (the mayor of each village/atoll) and General Fono (Tokelau's national representative body) were held in January. Pio Tuia was re-elected Faipule of Nukunonu and was installed as Ulu-o-Tokelau for the year (titular head of the Territory, a position that was rotated annually among the three Faipule). Kolouei O'Brien and Kuresa Nasau were also re-elected Faipule of Fakaofo and Atafu, respectively.

In August, the General Fono endorsed Tokelau's draft constitution; approved the text of a draft treaty of free association between Tokelau and New Zealand as a basis for an act of self-determination; and appointed a translation committee and a referendum commission. In November, it approved the translations of the draft constitution and draft treaty, as well as the draft referendum rules, including a closing date of 23 December for voter registration. It set 11 to 15 February 2006 as the dates for the referendum; agreed that an overall majority of two thirds of the valid votes cast would be required for a change of Tokelau's status; and decided that the voting should take place sequentially in Apia, and on the three atolls.

New Zealand, on behalf of itself and Tokelau, formally invited the United Nations to monitor the act of self-determination and indicated that the presence of representatives of the Special Committee would also be welcome.

Speaking before the Special Committee on decolonization on 24 June, the Administrator of New Zealand noted that the previous 12 months had seen an intensification of work on all fronts, including a series of regional and international meetings and the signing of a new three-year agreement between Tokelau and New Zealand on economic support for the Territory. Work was well advanced on legislative amendments that would be required in New Zealand to give effect to Tokelau's decision to become self-governing. Tokelau, which retained the option of revisiting the question of its status in the future, faced extreme challenges owing to its small size, isolation and lack of natural resources, and would need support from the international community. New Zealand hoped that Member States would help build the Tokelau International Trust Fund, established in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 608], to a level where it could provide an independent source of revenue to future generations. To that end, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) would facilitate a donors' round-table meeting for the Trust Fund in New York after the act of self-determination. The Administrator also announced a further contribution by New Zealand of 7.5 million New Zealand dollars to the Fund, which was welcomed by the Ulu-o-Tokelau, who also hoped that the international community would be equally generous.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolution 60/116 without vote [agenda item 26].

Question of Tokelau

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Tokelau,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Tokelau,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Non-Self-Governing Territories, in particular Assembly resolution 59/133 of 10 December 2004,

Noting with appreciation the continuing exemplary cooperation of New Zealand as the administering Power with regard to the work of the Special Committee relating to Tokelau and its readiness to permit access by United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Noting also with appreciation the collaborative contribution to the development of Tokelau by New Zealand and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme,

Recalling the inauguration in 1999 of a national legislative body, the General Fono, based on village elections by universal adult suffrage and the assumption by that body in June 2003 of full responsibility for the Tokelau budget,

Recalling also the report of the United Nations mission dispatched in August 2002 to Tokelau at the invitation of the Government of New Zealand and the representatives of Tokelau,

Noting that, as a small island Territory, Tokelau exemplifies the situation of most remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories and that, as a case study pointing to successful cooperation for decolonization, Tokelau has wider significance for the United Nations as it seeks to complete its work in decolonization,

Recalling that New Zealand and Tokelau signed in November 2003 a document entitled "Joint statement of the principles of partnership", which sets out in writing, for the first time, the rights and obligations of the two partner countries,

Bearing in mind the decision of the General Fono at its meeting in November 2003, following extensive consultations undertaken in all three villages, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association, and its decision in August 2005 to hold a referendum on self-government on the basis of a draft constitution for Tokelau and a treaty of free association with New Zealand,

1. Notes that Tokelau remains firmly committed to the development of self-government and to an act of self-determination that would result in Tokelau assuming a status in accordance with the options on future status for Non-Self-Governing Territories contained in principle VI of the annex to General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960;

2. Welcomes the substantial progress made towards the devolution of power to the three taupulega (village councils), in particular the delegation of the Administrator's powers to the three taupulega with effect from 1 July 2004 and the assumption by each taupulega from that date of full responsibility for the management of all its public services;

3. Recalls the decision of the General Fono in November 2003, following extensive consultations in all three villages and a meeting of the Special Committee on the Constitution of Tokelau, to explore formally with New Zealand the option of self-government in free association, and the discussions between Tokelau and New Zealand pursuant to the General Fono decision;

4. Welcomes the decision of the General Fono in August 2005 to hold a referendum on self-government on the basis of a draft constitution for Tokelau and a treaty of free association with New Zealand, and notes the General Fono's enactment of rules for the referendum;

5. Notes that it is the wish of Tokelau, supported by New Zealand, that the United Nations monitor the referendum;

6. Acknowledges Tokelau's initiative in devising a strategic economic development plan for the period 2002-2004 to advance its capacity for self-government, and notes that a plan for the period 2005-2007 has been finalized;

7. Also acknowledges the continuing assistance that New Zealand has committed to promoting Tokelau's welfare, as well as the cooperation of the United Nations Development Programme, including the relief and recovery assistance provided in the aftermath of Cyclone Percy earlier this year;

8. Further acknowledges Tokelau's need for continued reassurance, given the cultural adjustments that are taking place with the strengthening of its capacity for self-government and, since local resources cannot adequately cover the material side of self-determination, the ongoing responsibility of Tokelau's external partners to assist Tokelau in balancing its desire to be self-reliant to the greatest extent possible with its need for external assistance;

9. Welcomes the establishment of the Tokelau International Trust Fund to support the future development needs of Tokelau and the facilitation of this process through a donor round table to be convened by the United Nations Development Programme following an act of self-determination by Tokelau, and calls upon Member States and international and regional agencies to announce contributions to the Fund and thereby lend practical support to assist this emerging country in overcoming the problems of smallness, isolation and lack of resources;

10. Also welcomes the assurance of the Government of New Zealand that it will meet its obligations to the United Nations with respect to Tokelau and abide by the freely expressed wishes of the people of Tokelau with regard to their future status;

11. Further welcomes the cooperative attitude of the other States and territories in the region towards Tokelau, its economic and political aspirations and its increasing participation in regional and international affairs;

12. Welcomes the associate membership of Tokelau in the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, its recent accession to membership in the Forum Fisheries Agency and its application for observer status at the Pacific Islands Forum and associate membership in the South Pacific Applied Geoscience Commission;

13. Calls upon the administering Power and United Nations agencies to continue to provide assistance to Tokelau as it further develops its economy and governance structures in the context of its ongoing constitutional evolution;

14. Welcomes the actions taken by the administering Power to transmit information regarding the political, economic and social situation of Tokelau to the Secretary-General;

15. Notes with satisfaction the successful visit to Tokelau in October 2004 by the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to attend the workshop of the Tokelauan Special Committee on the Constitution;

16. Notes the considerable progress made towards the adoption of a Constitution and of national symbols by Tokelau, the steps taken by Tokelau and New Zealand to agree to a draft treaty of free association as a basis for an act of self-determination and the strong support expressed by Tokelauan communities in New Zealand for the move by Tokelau towards self-determination;

17. Welcomes the invitation extended by the representatives of Tokelau and the administering Power to the United Nations to monitor an act of self-determination by Tokelau;

18. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territory of Tokelau and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

Western Sahara

The Special Committee on decolonization considered the question of Western Sahara on 8 June [A/60/23]. A Secretariat working paper [A/AC.109/2005/2] detailed the Secretary-General's good offices with the parties concerned and actions taken by the General Assembly and Security Council (see p. 363). The Special Committee transmitted the relevant documentation to the Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session to facilitate the Fourth Committee's consideration of the question. The Secretary-General's report was submitted to the Assembly in July [A/60/116].

Island Territories

In June, the Special Committee on decolonization [A/60/23] considered working papers on American Samoa [A/AC.109/2005/15], Anguilla [A/AC.109/2005/4], Bermuda [A/AC.109/2005/5], the British Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2005/12], the Cayman Islands [A/AC.109/2005/6], Guam [A/AC.109/2005/7], Montserrat [A/AC.109/2005/16], Pitcairn [A/AC.109/2005/10], Saint Helena [A/AC.109/2005/14], the Turks and Caicos Islands [A/AC.109/2005/8] and the United States Virgin Islands [A/AC.109/2005/9], describing political developments and economic and social conditions in each of those 11 island Territories. On 20 June, the Committee approved a two-part consolidated draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/472], adopted resolutions 60/117 A and B without vote [agenda item 26].

Questions of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands

A

General

The General Assembly,

Having considered the questions of the Non-Self-Governing Territories of American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, the British Virgin Islands, the Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, Saint Helena, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the United States Virgin Islands, hereinafter referred to as "the Territories",

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling all resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to those Territories, including, in particular, the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly at its fifty-ninth session on the individual Territories covered by the present resolution,

Recognizing that all available options for self-determination of the Territories are valid as long as they are in accordance with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned and in conformity with the clearly defined principles contained in resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960 and other resolutions of the Assembly,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1541(XV), containing the principles that should guide Member States in determining whether or not an obligation exists to transmit the information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations,

Expressing its concern that more than forty-four years after the adoption of the Declaration there still remain a number of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Conscious of the importance of continuing effective implementation of the Declaration, taking into account the target set by the United Nations to eradicate colonialism by 2010 and the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Recognizing that the specific characteristics and the sentiments of the peoples of the Territories require flexible, practical and innovative approaches to the options of self-determination, without any prejudice to territorial size, geographical location, size of population or natural resources,

Taking note of the stated position of the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland on the Non-Self-Governing Territories under its administration,

Taking note also of the stated position of the Government of the United States of America on the Non-Self-Governing Territories under its administration,

Taking note further of the stated positions of the representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories before the Special Committee and in its regional seminars,

Noting the constitutional developments in some Non-Self-Governing Territories about which the Special Committee has received information,

Aware of the importance both to the Territories and to the Special Committee of the participation of elected and appointed representatives of the Territories in the work of the Special Committee,

Convinced that the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories should continue to guide the development of their future political status and that referendums, free and fair elections and other forms of popular consultation play an important role in ascertaining the wishes and aspirations of the people,

Convinced also that any negotiations to determine the status of a Territory must take place with the active involvement and participation of the people of that Territory, under the supervision of the United Nations, on a case-by-case basis, and that the views of the peoples of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in respect of their right to self-determination should be ascertained,

Aware of the importance of international financial services for the economies of some of the Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Noting the continued cooperation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories at the local and regional levels, including their participation in the work of regional organizations,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the Territories, that some Territories have not received a United Nations visiting mission for a long time and that no visiting missions have been sent to some of the Territories, and considering the possibility of sending further visiting missions to the Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers,

Mindful also that, in order for the Special Committee to enhance its understanding of the political status of the peoples of the Territories and to fulfil its mandate effectively, it is important for it to be apprised by the administering Powers and to receive information from other appropriate sources, including the representatives of the Territories, concerning the wishes and aspirations of the peoples of the Territories,

Recognizing the need for the Special Committee to embark actively on a public awareness campaign aimed at assisting the peoples of the Territories in gaining an understanding of the options of self-determination,

Mindful, in this connection, that the holding of regional seminars in the Caribbean and Pacific regions and at Headquarters and other venues, with the active participation of representatives of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, provides a helpful means for the Special Committee to fulfil its mandate, and that the regional nature of the seminars, which alternate between the Caribbean and the Pacific, is a crucial element in their success, while recognizing the need for reviewing the role of those seminars in the context of a United Nations programme for ascertaining the political status of the Territories,

Mindful also that, by holding a Caribbean regional seminar in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005, the Special Committee was able to hear the views of the representatives of the Territories and Member States as well as organizations and experts in the region, in order to review the political, economic and social conditions in the Territories,

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation and, in this connection, bearing in mind the applicability to the territories of the programmes of action of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, the World Conference on Natural Disaster Reduction, the Global Conference on the Sustainable Development of Small Island Developing States, the International Conference on Population and Development, the United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II), the World Summit on Sustainable Development, the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance and other relevant United Nations world conferences and summits,

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, as well as regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank, the Caribbean Community, the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Pacific Islands Forum and the agencies of the Council of Regional Organizations in the Pacific,

Aware that the Human Rights Committee, as part of its mandate under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, reviews the status of the self-determination process of small island Territories under examination by the Special Committee,

Recalling the ongoing efforts of the Special Committee in carrying out a critical review of its work with the aim of making appropriate and constructive recommendations and decisions to attain its objectives in accordance with its mandate,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the Territories to self-determination, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

2. Reaffirms also that, in the process of decolonization, there is no alternative to the principle of self-determination, which is also a fundamental human right, as recognized under the relevant human rights conventions;

3. Reaffirms further that it is ultimately for the peoples of the Territories themselves to determine freely their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly, and in that connection reiterates its long-standing call for the administering Powers, in cooperation with the territorial Governments, to promote political education in the Territories in order to foster an awareness among the people of their right to self-determination in conformity with the legitimate political status options, based on the principles clearly defined in General Assembly resolution 1541(XV);

4. Requests the administering Powers to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General information called for under Article 73 e of the Charter;

5. Stresses the importance of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples being apprised of the views and wishes of the peoples of the Territories and enhancing its understanding of their conditions, including the nature and scope of the existing political and constitutional arrangements between the Non-Self-Governing Territories and their respective administering Powers;

6. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Powers under the Charter to promote the economic and social development and to preserve the cultural identity of the Territories, and recommends that priority continue to be given, in consultation with the territorial Governments concerned, to the strengthening and diversification of their respective economies;

7. Requests the Special Committee to continue to follow closely the developments in legislation in the area of international financial services and their impact on the economy in some of the Territories;

8. Requests the Territories and the administering Powers to take all necessary measures to protect and conserve the environment of the Territories under their administration against any environmental degradation, and once again requests the specialized agencies concerned to continue to monitor environmental conditions in those Territories;

9. Welcomes the participation of the Non-Self-Governing Territories in regional activities, including the work of regional organizations;

10. Stresses the importance of implementing the plan of action for the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, in particular by expediting the application of the work programme for the decolonization of each Non-Self-Governing Territory, on a case-by-case basis and by completing the periodic analyses of the progress and extent of the implementation of the Declaration in each Territory;

11. Invites the administering Powers to participate fully in the work of the Special Committee in order to implement the provisions of Article 73 e of the Charter and the Declaration and in order to advise the Special Committee on the implementation of provisions under Article 73 b of the Charter on efforts to promote self-government in the Territories;

12. Urges Member States to contribute to the efforts of the United Nations to usher in a world free of colonialism within the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon them to continue to give their full support to the Special Committee in its endeavours towards that noble goal;

13. Notes that some Non-Self-Governing Territories have expressed concern at the procedure followed by one administering Power, contrary to the wishes of the Territories themselves, namely, of amending or enacting legislation for the Territories through Orders in Council, in order to apply to the Territories the international treaty obligations of the administering Power;

14. Takes note of the constitutional reviews in the Territories administered by the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, led by the territorial Governments and designed to address the internal constitutional structure within the present territorial arrangement;

15. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the midterm review of the Second International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the implementation of decolonization resolutions adopted since the declaration of the Second International Decade;

16. Requests the Special Committee to collaborate with the Human Rights Committee within the framework of its mandate on the right to self-determination as contained in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights with the aim of exchanging information, given that the Committee reviews political and constitutional developments in many of the Non-Self-Governing Territories that are under review by the Special Committee;

17. Also requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session.

B

Individual Territories

The General Assembly,

Referring to resolution A above,

I

American Samoa

Taking note of the position of the administering Power and the statements of representatives of American Samoa made in the regional seminars expressing satisfaction with the Territory's present relationship with the United States of America,

Noting that the Government of the Territory continues to take steps to increase revenues and decrease government expenditures,

Noting also that the Territory, similar to isolated communities with limited funds, continues to experience a lack of adequate medical and other infrastructural facilities,

1. Notes that the Department of the Interior of the United States of America provides that the Secretary of the Interior has administrative jurisdiction over American Samoa;

2. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in the economic and social development of the Territory, including measures to rebuild financial management capabilities and strengthen other governmental functions of the Government of the Territory, and welcomes the assistance from the administering Power to the Territory in its recovery efforts following the recent floods;

3. Welcomes the invitation extended to the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the Governor of American Samoa and reiterated, most recently at the Caribbean regional seminar held in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005, to send a visiting mission to the Territory, calls upon the administering Power to facilitate such a mission, and requests the Chairman of the Special Committee to take all the necessary steps to that end;

4. Takes note of the statement of the representative of the Governor of the Territory at the Caribbean regional seminar requesting the Special Committee to provide information on the process of self-governance;

II

Anguilla

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Recalling the holding of the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, the first time that the seminar has been held in a Non-Self-Governing Territory,

Noting the desire of the territorial Government and the people of Anguilla for a visiting mission by the Special Committee,

Aware of the efforts of the Government of Anguilla to continue to develop the Territory as a viable offshore centre and well-regulated financial centre for investors by enacting modern company and trust laws, as well as partnership and insurance legislation, and computerizing the company registry system,

1. Welcomes the constitutional review process led by the Government of Anguilla in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Recalls the cooperation of the territorial Government of Anguilla and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland in holding the 2003 Caribbean regional seminar in Anguilla, and notes that the staging of the seminar in a Non-Self-Governing Territory for the first time, as well as a town hall meeting between the people of Anguilla and the Special Committee during the seminar, contributed to its success;

III

Bermuda

Noting the results of the independence referendum held on 16 August 1995, conscious of the different viewpoints of the political parties of the Territory on the future status of the Territory, and aware of the active boycott of the referendum by the then-opposition party,

Noting also the statement of the Premier of Bermuda in his Founder's Day address that there could never be a true democracy as long as the country remains a colony or an overseas dependent Territory, and that only with independence can national unity be forged and pride in being Bermudian fully developed,

1. Welcomes the agreement reached in June 2002 between the United States of America, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Territory formally transferring the former military base lands to the territorial Government, and the provision of financial resources to address some of the environmental problems;

2. Also welcomes the dispatch of the United Nations special mission to Bermuda at the request of the territorial Government and with the concurrence of the administering Power, which provided information to the people of the Territory on the role of the United Nations in the process of self-determination, on the legitimate political status options as clearly defined in General Assembly resolution 1541(XV) and on the experiences of other small States that have achieved a full measure of self-government;

3. Decides to follow closely the public consultations on the future political status of Bermuda under way in the Territory, and requests the relevant United Nations organizations to provide assistance to the Territory, if requested, in the context of its public education programme;

IV

British Virgin Islands

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Noting that the Territory continues to emerge as one of the world's leading offshore financial centres,

1. Welcomes the constitutional review process led by the Government of the British Virgin Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Takes note of the statement made by the representative of the Legislative Council of the Territory at the Caribbean regional seminar held in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005, who presented an analysis of the internal constitutional review process;

3. Welcomes the establishment of the Inter-Virgin Islands Council between the elected Governments of the British Virgin Islands and the United States Virgin Islands as a mechanism for functional cooperation between the two neighbouring Territories and the subsequent creation of eleven standing committees on natural resources management, mutual disaster preparedness and assistance and constitutional development, among other areas;

V

Cayman Islands

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

Noting the approval by the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly of the Territory's Vision 2008 Development Plan, which aims to promote development that is consistent with the aims and values of Caymanian society,

1. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of the Cayman Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Takes note of the statement made by the representative of the Non-Governmental Organizations Constitutional Working Group of the Cayman Islands Chamber of Commerce at the Caribbean regional seminar held in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005, which called for a comprehensive educational programme, to be defined by the Special Committee, on the issue of self-determination, as well as a visiting mission to the Territory;

VI

Guam

Recalling that, in a referendum held in 1987, the registered and eligible voters of Guam endorsed a draft Guam Commonwealth Act that would establish a new framework for relations between the Territory and the administering Power, providing for a greater measure of internal self-government for Guam and recognition of the right of the Chamorro people of Guam to self-determination for the Territory,

Recalling also the requests by the elected representatives and non-governmental organizations of the Territory that Guam not be removed from the list of the Non-Self-Governing Territories with which the Special Committee is concerned, pending the self-determination of the Chamorro people and taking into account their legitimate rights and interests,

Aware that negotiations between the administering Power and the territorial Government on the draft Guam Commonwealth Act are no longer continuing and that Guam has established the process for a self-determination vote by the eligible Chamorro voters,

Cognizant that the administering Power continues to implement its programme of transferring surplus federal land to the Government of Guam,

Noting that the people of the Territory have called for reform in the programme of the administering Power with respect to the thorough, unconditional and expeditious transfer of land property to the people of Guam,

Conscious that immigration into Guam has resulted in the indigenous Chamorros becoming a minority in their homeland,

Aware of the potential for diversifying and developing the economy of Guam through commercial fishing and agriculture and other viable activities,

Recalling the dispatch in 1979 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory, and noting the recommendation of the 1996 Pacific regional seminar for sending a visiting mission to Guam,

1. Calls upon the administering Power to take into consideration the expressed will of the Chamorro people as supported by Guam voters in the plebiscite of 1987 and as provided for in Guam law, encourages the administering Power and the territorial Government of Guam to enter into negotiations on the matter, and requests the administering Power to inform the Secretary-General of progress to that end;

2. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the elected territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

3. Also requests the administering Power, in cooperation with the territorial Government, to continue to transfer land to the original landowners of the Territory;

4. Further requests the administering Power to continue to recognize and respect the political rights and the cultural and ethnic identity of the Chamorro people of Guam, and to take all necessary measures to respond to the concerns of the territorial Government with regard to the question of immigration;

5. Requests the administering Power to cooperate in establishing programmes specifically intended to promote the sustainable development of economic activities and enterprises, noting the special role of the Chamorro people in the development of Guam;

6. Also requests the administering Power to continue to support appropriate measures by the territorial Government aimed at promoting growth in commercial fishing and agricultural and other viable activities;

VII

Montserrat

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information on the political and economic situation in Montserrat provided by the Chief Minister of the Territory to the Caribbean regional seminar, held at The Valley, Anguilla, from 20 to 22 May 2003,

Noting with concern the dire consequences of a volcanic eruption, which led to the evacuation of three quarters of the Territory's population to safe areas of the island and to areas outside the Territory, in particular Antigua and Barbuda and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and which continues to have enduring consequences for the economy of the island,

Welcoming the continued assistance provided to the Territory by States members of the Caribbean Community, in particular Antigua and Barbuda, which has offered safe refuge and access to educational and health facilities, as well as employment for thousands who have left the Territory,

Noting the continuing efforts of the administering Power to deal with the consequences of the volcanic eruption,

Noting with concern that a number of the inhabitants of the Territory continue to live in shelters because of volcanic activity,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

1. Calls upon the administering Power, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as regional and other organizations, to continue to provide assistance to the Territory in alleviating the consequences of the volcanic eruption;

2. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of Montserrat in cooperation with the administering Power;

VIII

Pitcairn

Taking into account the unique nature of Pitcairn in terms of population and area,

Requests the administering Power to continue its assistance for the improvement of the economic, social, educational and other conditions of the population of the Territory and to continue its discussions with the representatives of Pitcairn on how best to support their economic security;

IX

Saint Helena

Taking into account the unique character of Saint Helena, its population and its natural resources,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government and the consultative poll with regard to a new Constitution held in Saint Helena on 25 May 2005,

Aware of the efforts of the administering Power and the territorial authorities to improve the socio-economic conditions of the population of Saint Helena, in particular in the sphere of food production, continuing high unemployment and limited transport and communications,

Noting the importance of improving the infrastructure and accessibility of Saint Helena,

Noting also the importance of the right to nationality for Saint Helenians and their request that it, in principle, be included in the new Constitution,

Noting with concern the problem of unemployment on the island and the joint action of the administering Power and the territorial Government to deal with it,

1. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process and the recent consultative poll led by the Government of Saint Helena in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Also welcomes the decision by the administering Power to provide funding for the construction of an international airport on Saint Helena to become operational in 2010, including all required infrastructure;

3. Requests the administering Power and relevant international organizations to continue to support the efforts of the territorial Government to address the socio-economic development challenges, including the high unemployment and the limited transport and communications problems, as well as to support the additional infrastructure required for the airport project;

4. Calls upon the administering Power to take into account the concerns of Saint Helenians with regard to the right to nationality;

X

Turks and Caicos Islands

Noting the results of the general election held in April 2003,

Noting with concern the vulnerability of the Territory to drug trafficking and related activities, as well as its problems caused by illegal immigration and the need for continued cooperation between the administering Power and the territorial Government in countering drug trafficking and money-laundering,

Taking note of the constitutional review process led by the territorial Government,

1. Welcomes the continuing constitutional review process led by the Government of the Turks and Caicos Islands in cooperation with the administering Power;

2. Takes note of the statement made by the Chief Minister of the Territory at the Caribbean regional seminar held in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005, that his Government was in favour of a reasonable period of full internal self-government before moving to independence;

XI

United States Virgin Islands

Taking note with interest of the statements made and the information provided by the representative of the Governor of the Territory at the Caribbean regional seminar held in Canouan, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, from 17 to 19 May 2005,

Noting the continuing interest of the territorial Government in seeking associate membership in the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States and observer status in the Caribbean Community and the pending request by the Territory to the administering Power for the delegation of authority to proceed, as well as the 2003 resolution of the territorial legislature in support of that request,

Noting also the expressed interest of the territorial Government to be included in regional programmes of the United Nations Development Programme,

Noting further the necessity of further diversifying the economy of the Territory and the efforts of the Government of the Territory to promote the Territory as an offshore financial services centre,

Recalling that the Territory has not received a United Nations visiting mission since 1977, and bearing in mind the formal request of the Territory for such a mission in 1993 to assist the Territory in its political education process and to observe the Territory's only referendum on political status options in its history,

Noting the stated position of the elected Government of the Territory in opposition to legislation presently before the Congress of the administering Power to appoint a chief financial officer against the wishes of the elected Government of the Territory, and bearing in mind resolution 1664 of 17 December 2003 adopted by the Legislature of the Territory at its twenty-fifth session, in which the Legislature opposed the proposal and indicated that it would retard political and civil progress,

Noting also the ongoing cooperation between the territorial Government and Denmark on the exchange of artefacts and archives,

1. Requests the administering Power to continue to assist the territorial Government in achieving its political, economic and social goals;

2. Once again requests the administering Power to facilitate the participation of the Territory, as appropriate, in various organizations, in particular the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States, the Caribbean Community and the Association of Caribbean States;

3. Calls for the inclusion of the Territory in regional programmes of the United Nations Development Programme, consistent with the participation of other Non-Self-Governing Territories;

4. Welcomes the establishment of the Inter–Virgin Islands Council between the elected Governments of the United States Virgin Islands and the British Virgin Islands and as a mechanism of functional cooperation between the two neighbouring Territories, and the subsequent creation of eleven standing committees on natural resources management, mutual disaster preparedness and assistance, constitutional development, among other areas;

5. Calls upon the administering Power to refrain from enacting any legislative or other measures that would reduce the authority of the elected Government of the Territory to control its own financial affairs;

6. Notes the position of the territorial Government, including its articulation in resolution 1609 of 9 April 2001, adopted by the Legislature of the Territory at its twenty-fourth session, of its opposition to the assumption by the administering Power of submerged land in territorial waters, having regard to relevant resolutions of the General Assembly on the ownership and control of natural resources, including marine resources, by the people of the Non-Self-Governing Territories, and its calls for the return of those marine resources within its jurisdiction;

7. Notes with appreciation the cooperation agreements existing between the Territory and Denmark, the former colonial Power of the Territory, on the exchange of artefacts and the repatriation of archival material, consistent with the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance on 8 September 2001, and once again requests the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, under its records and archives management programme, to assist the Territory in carrying out its artefacts and archival initiative.

Information

UN public information

The General Assembly's Committee on Information, at its twenty-seventh session (New York, 18 April–3 May) [A/60/21], continued to consider UN information policies and activities and to evaluate and follow up efforts made and progress achieved in information and communications.

The major report before the Committee dealt with the reorientation of UN activities in public information and communications. The Committee also considered reports on the rationalization of the network of UN information centres (UNICs); modernization and integrated management of UN libraries, including the 2004 Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) report on the topic [YUN 2004, p. 627]; the 2004 activities of the United Nations Communications Group (UNCG) [YUN 2004, p. 629]; and progress towards parity among the official languages on the UN website.

Those issues and the Secretary-General's report on questions relating to information [A/60/173] are discussed in the relevant sections below.

By decision 60/524 of 8 December, the Assembly increased the Committee's membership from 107 to 108.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/479], adopted resolutions 60/109 A and B without vote [agenda item 33].

Questions relating to information

A

Information in the service of humanity

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the comprehensive and important report of the Committee on Information,

Also taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on questions relating to information,

Urges all countries, organizations of the United Nations system as a whole and all others concerned, reaffirming their commitment to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and to the principles of freedom of the press and freedom of information, as well as to those of the independence, pluralism and diversity of the media, deeply concerned by the disparities existing between developed and developing countries and the consequences of every kind arising from those disparities that affect the capability of the public, private or other media and individuals in developing countries to disseminate information and communicate their views and their cultural and ethical values through endogenous cultural production, as well as to ensure the diversity of sources and their free access to information, and recognizing the call in this context for what in the United Nations and at various international forums has been termed "a new world information and communication order, seen as an evolving and continuous process":

(a) To cooperate and interact with a view to reducing existing disparities in information flows at all levels by increasing assistance for the development of communication infrastructures and capabilities in developing countries, with due regard for their needs and the priorities attached to such areas by those countries, and in order to enable them and the public, private or other media in developing countries to develop their own information and communication policies freely and independently and increase the participation of media and individuals in the communication process, and to ensure a free flow of information at all levels;

(b) To ensure for journalists the free and effective performance of their professional tasks and condemn resolutely all attacks against them;

(c) To provide support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes for broadcasters and journalists from public, private and other media in developing countries;

(d) To enhance regional efforts and cooperation among developing countries, as well as cooperation between developed and developing countries, to strengthen communication capacities and to improve the media infrastructure and communication technology in the developing countries, especially in the areas of training and dissemination of information;

(e) To aim at, in addition to bilateral cooperation, providing all possible support and assistance to the developing countries and their media, public, private or other, with due regard to their interests and needs in the field of information and to action already adopted within the United Nations system, including:

(i) The development of the human and technical resources that are indispensable for the improvement of information and communication systems in developing countries and support for the continuation and strengthening of practical training programmes, such as those already operating under both public and private auspices throughout the developing world;

(ii) The creation of conditions that will enable developing countries and their media, public, private or other, to have, by using their national and regional resources, the communication technology suited to their national needs, as well as the necessary programme material, especially for radio and television broadcasting;

(iii) Assistance in establishing and promoting telecommunication links at the subregional, regional and interregional levels, especially among developing countries;

(iv) The facilitation, as appropriate, of access by the developing countries to advanced communication technology available on the open market;

(f) To provide full support for the International Programme for the Development of Communication of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which should support both public and private media.

United Nations public information policies and activities

The General Assembly,

Emphasizing the role of the Committee on Information as its main subsidiary body mandated to make recommendations to it relating to the work of the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat,

Reaffirming its resolution 13(I) of 13 February 1946, establishing the Department, which states in paragraph 2 of annex I that "the activities of the Department should be so organized and directed as to promote to the greatest possible extent an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the United Nations among the peoples of the world",

Concurring with the view of the Secretary-General that the contents of public information and communications should be placed at the heart of the strategic management of the United Nations and that a culture of communications should permeate all levels of the Organization, as a means of fully informing the peoples of the world of the aims and activities of the United Nations, in accordance with the purposes and principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, in order to create broad-based global support for the United Nations,

Stressing that the primary mission of the Department of Public Information is to provide, through its outreach activities, accurate, impartial, comprehensive and timely information to the public on the tasks and responsibilities of the United Nations in order to strengthen international support for the activities of the Organization with the greatest transparency,

Recalling that the comprehensive review of the work of the Department of Public Information, requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 56/253 of 24 December 2001, and the implementation of its second phase, described in the report of the Secretary-General on reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications to the Committee on Information at its twenty-fifth session, as well as the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Strengthening of the United Nations: an agenda for further change", and Assembly resolutions 57/300 of 20 December 2002 and 59/126 B of 10 December 2004, as they apply to the Department, providing an opportunity to take due steps to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the Department and to maximize the use of its resources,

Expressing concern that the gap in the information and communication technologies between the developed and the developing countries has continued to widen and that vast segments of the population in developing countries are not benefiting from the present information and technology revolution, and, in this regard, underlining the necessity of rectifying the imbalances of the global information and technology revolution in order to make it more just, equitable and effective,

Recognizing that developments in the information and communication technology revolution open vast new opportunities for economic growth and social development and can play an important role in the eradication of poverty in developing countries, and, at the same time, emphasizing that the revolution also poses challenges and risks and could lead to the further widening of disparities between and within countries,

Recalling its resolution 59/309 of 22 June 2005 on multilingualism, and emphasizing the importance of making appropriate use of the official languages of the United Nations in the activities of the Department of Public Information, aiming to eliminate the disparity between the use of English and the five other official languages,

Welcoming Cape Verde, Iceland, Luxembourg, Madagascar and Qatar to membership in the Committee on Information,

I

Introduction

1. Reaffirms its resolution 13(I), in which it established the Department of Public Information, and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions related to the activities of the Department, and requests the Secretary-General, in respect of the public information policies and activities of the United Nations, to continue to implement fully the recommendations contained in paragraph 2 of its resolution 48/44 B of 10 December 1993 and other mandates as established by the General Assembly;

2. Also reaffirms that the United Nations remains the indispensable foundation of a peaceful and just world and that its voice must be heard in a clear and effective manner, and emphasizes the essential role of the Department of Public Information in this context, the activities of which should be so organized and directed as to promote to the greatest possible extent an informed understanding of the work and purposes of the United Nations among the peoples of the world;

3. Stresses the importance of the clear and timely provision of information by the Secretariat to Member States, upon their request, within the framework of existing mandates and procedures;

4. Reaffirms the central role of the Committee on Information in United Nations public information policies and activities, including the prioritization of those activities, and decides that recommendations relating to the programme of the Department of Public Information shall originate, to the extent possible, in the Committee and shall be considered by the Committee;

5. Requests the Department of Public Information, following the priorities laid down by the General Assembly in its resolution 59/275 of 23 December 2004, and guided by the United Nations Millennium Declaration, to pay particular attention to such major issues as the eradication of poverty, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, the HIV/AIDS epidemic, combating terrorism in all its forms and manifestations and the needs of the African continent;

6. Also requests the Department of Public Information to pay particular attention to progress in implementing the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and the outcomes of the major related United Nations summits and conferences in carrying out its activities;

7. Reaffirms the need to enhance the technological infrastructure of the Department of Public Information on a continuous basis in order to widen its outreach and improve the United Nations website;

8. Recognizes the important work carried out by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and its collaboration with news agencies and broadcasting organizations in developing countries in disseminating information on priority issues, and encourages a continued collaboration between the Department of Public Information and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in the promotion of culture and in the fields of education and communication;

II

General activities of the Department of Public Information

9. Notes the proposals of the Secretary-General to improve the effective and targeted delivery of public information activities, emphasizes that these proposals should be in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

10. Acknowledges that the Department of Public Information has entered the third and final year of its collaborative project with the Office of Internal Oversight Services to systematically evaluate public information products and activities, and requests the Secretary-General to report on the final outcome of the project to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

11. Requests the Department of Public Information, in this regard, to continue to evaluate its products and activities with the objective of improving their effectiveness, including through interdepartmental consultations;

12. Reaffirms that the Department of Public Information is the focal point for information policies of the United Nations and the primary news centre for information about the United Nations, its activities and those of the Secretary-General;

13. Also reaffirms the importance of better coordination between the Department of Public Information and the Office of the Spokesman for the Secretary-General, and requests the Secretary-General to ensure consistency in the messages of the Organization;

14. Further reaffirms that the Department of Public Information must prioritize its work programme while respecting existing mandates and in line with regulation 5.6 of the Regulations and Rules Governing Programme Planning, the Programme Aspects of the Budget, the Monitoring of Implementation and the Methods of Evaluation, to focus its message and concentrate its efforts better and, as a function of performance management, to match its programmes with the needs of its target audiences, on the basis of improved feedback and evaluation mechanisms;

15. Notes with appreciation the efforts of the Department of Public Information to publicize the work and decisions of the General Assembly, encourages the Department to further strengthen its working relationship with the Office of the President of the General Assembly, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to exert all efforts to ensure that publications and other information services of the Secretariat, including the United Nations website and the United Nations News Service, contain comprehensive, objective and equitable information about the issues before the Organization and that they maintain editorial independence, impartiality, accuracy and full consistency with resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly;

17. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to coordinate closely with all other departments of the Secretariat, to avoid duplication in the issuance of United Nations publications and to ensure that they are produced in a cost-effective manner;

18. Emphasizes that the Department of Public Information should maintain and improve its activities in the areas of special interest to developing countries and, where appropriate, other countries with special needs, and that the Department's activities should contribute to bridging the existing gap between the developing and the developed countries in the crucial field of public information and communications;

19. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to strengthen the coordination between the Department of Public Information and other departments of the Secretariat in the context of its client-oriented approach and to identify target audiences and develop information programmes and media strategies for priority issues, and emphasizes that public information capacities and activities in other departments should function under the guidance of the Department;

20. Welcomes the initiatives that have been taken by the Department of Public Information to strengthen the public information system of the United Nations, and, in this regard, stresses the importance of the coherent and results-oriented approach being taken by the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the programmes and funds of the United Nations system involved in public information activities and the provision of resources for their implementation, and that feedback from Member States on the relevance and effectiveness of programme delivery should be taken into account;

21. Notes with appreciation the continued efforts of the Department of Public Information in issuing daily press releases, and requests the Department to continue providing this invaluable service to both Member States and representatives of the media, while considering possible means of improving their production process and streamlining their format, structure and length, keeping in mind the views of Member States;

22. Also notes with appreciation the efforts of the Department of Public Information to work at the local level with other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to enhance the coordination of their communication activities, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session on progress achieved in this regard and on the activities of the United Nations Communications Group;

23. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to continue to examine its policies and activities regarding the durable preservation of its radio, television and photographic archives, to take action, within existing resources, to ensure that such archives are preserved and are accessible and to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

Multilingualism and public information

24. Emphasizes the importance of making appropriate use of all the official languages of the United Nations in all the activities of the Department of Public Information, with the aim of eliminating the disparity between the use of English and the five other official languages;

25. Welcomes the ongoing efforts of the Department of Public Information to enhance multilingualism in its activities, and encourages the Department to continue its endeavours in this regard;

26. Emphasizes the importance of ensuring the full, equitable treatment of all the official languages of the United Nations in all activities of the Department of Public Information, and, in this regard, reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department has appropriate staffing capacity in all official languages of the United Nations to undertake all its activities;

27. Stresses the importance of fully implementing its resolution 52/214 of 22 December 1997, in section C of which it requested the Secretary-General to ensure that the texts of all new public documents in all six official languages and information materials of the United Nations are made available daily through the United Nations website and are accessible to Member States without delay;

28. Reiterates paragraph 4 of section C of its resolution 52/214, and requests the Secretary-General to continue towards completion of the task of uploading all important older United Nations documents on the United Nations website in all six official languages on a priority basis, so that these archives are also available to Member States through that medium;

29. Reaffirms that it is important that the Secretary-General include in future programme budget proposals for the Department of Public Information the importance of using all six official languages in its activities;

30. Takes note with appreciation of the work done by the network of United Nations information centres in favour of the publication of United Nations information materials and the translation of important documents in languages other than United Nations official languages, with a view to reaching the widest possible spectrum of audiences and extending the United Nations message to all the corners of the world in order to strengthen international support for the activities of the Organization;

Bridging the digital divide

31. Notes with satisfaction the adoption of the Declaration of Principles and the Plan of Action at the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, held in Geneva from 10 to 12 December 2003, and welcomes the holding of the second phase of the Summit from 16 to 18 November 2005 in Tunis;

32. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to contribute to raising the awareness of the international community of the importance of the World Summit on the Information Society and the need to join efforts to make it a success;

33. Recalls paragraph 32 of its resolution 59/126 B, and welcomes the contribution of the Department of Public Information in publicizing the efforts of the Secretary-General to close the digital divide as a means of spurring economic growth and as a response to the continuing gap between developed and developing countries, and, in this context, requests the Department to further enhance its role;

Network of United Nations information centres

34. Emphasizes the importance of the network of United Nations information centres in enhancing the public image of the United Nations and in disseminating messages on the United Nations to local populations, especially in developing countries;

35. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on further rationalization of the network of United Nations information centres, and, in this regard, recognizes the constraints of further regionalization as described in paragraph 25 of the report;

36. Stresses the importance of rationalizing the network of United Nations information centres, and, in this regard, requests the Secretary-General to continue to make proposals in this direction, including through the redeployment of resources where necessary, and to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

37. Reaffirms that rationalization of United Nations information centres must be carried out on a case-by-case basis in consultation with all concerned Member States in which existing information centres are located, the countries served by those information centres and other interested countries in the region, taking into consideration the distinctive characteristics of each region;

38. Recognizes that the network of United Nations information centres, especially in developing countries, should continue to enhance its impact and activities, including through strategic communications support, and calls upon the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of this approach to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

39. Stresses the importance of taking into account the special needs and requirements of developing countries in the field of information and communications technology for the effective flow of information in those countries;

40. Also stresses that the Department of Public Information, through its network of United Nations information centres, should continue to promote public awareness of and mobilize support for the work of the United Nations at the local level, bearing in mind that information in local languages has the strongest impact on local populations;

41. Further stresses the importance of efforts to strengthen the outreach activities of the United Nations to those Member States remaining outside the network of United Nations information centres, and encourages the Secretary-General, within the context of rationalization, to extend the services of the network of United Nations information centres to those Member States;

42. Stresses that the Department of Public Information should continue to review the allocation of both staff and financial resources to the United Nations information centres in developing countries, emphasizing the needs of the least developed countries;

43. Encourages the network of United Nations information centres to continue to develop web pages in local languages, also encourages the Department of Public Information to provide resources and technical facilities, in particular to those information centres whose web pages are not yet operational, and further encourages host countries to respond to the needs of the information centres;

44. Takes note of the proposal by the Secretary-General to work closely with the Governments concerned to explore the possibility of identifying rent-

free premises, while taking into account the economic condition of the host countries and bearing in mind that such support should not be a substitute for the full allocation of financial resources for the information centres in the context of the programme budget of the United Nations;

45. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General containing the discussion regarding the creation of a United Nations information centre in Luanda to address the special needs of Portuguese-speaking African countries, welcomes the offer made by the Government of Angola to host the centre as part of the network of United Nations information centres by providing rent-free premises, and encourages the Secretary-General, within the context of rationalization, to take all necessary measures to accommodate those needs;

III

Strategic communications services

46. Takes note of paragraph 19 of the report of the Secretary-General on the continuing reorientation of United Nations activities in the field of public information and communications, and, in this context, reaffirms that the Department of Public Information is the principal department responsible for the implementation of information strategies, as mandated;

47. Reaffirms the role of the strategic communications services in devising and disseminating United Nations messages by developing communications strategies, in close collaboration with the substantive departments, United Nations funds and programmes and the specialized agencies, in full compliance with the legislative mandates;

Promotional campaigns

48. Recognizes that promotional campaigns aimed at supporting special sessions and international conferences of the United Nations are part of the core responsibility of the Department of Public Information, welcomes the efforts of the Department to examine creative ways in which it can organize and implement these campaigns in partnership with the substantive departments concerned, using the United Nations Millennium Declaration as its guide, and requests the Department to pay particular attention to progress in implementing the internationally agreed development goals, including those contained in the Millennium Declaration, and the outcomes of the major related United Nations summits and conferences in carrying out its activities;

49. Appreciates the work of the Department of Public Information in promoting, through its campaigns, issues of importance to the international community, such as sustainable development, strategic coordination in humanitarian relief, especially in natural disasters and other crises, children, HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases and decolonization, as well as the dialogue among civilizations, culture of peace and tolerance and the consequences of the Chernobyl disaster, and encourages the Department, in cooperation with the countries concerned and with the relevant organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, to continue to take appropriate measures to enhance world public awareness of these and other important global issues;

50. Welcomes the new initiative of the Department of Public Information entitled "Ten Stories the World Should Hear More About";

51. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to work within the United Nations Communications Group to coordinate the preparation and implementation of communication strategies with the heads of information of the agencies, funds and programmes of the United Nations system, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at successive sessions on the activities of the Group;

52. Stresses the need for the renewed emphasis in support of Africa's development, in particular by the Department of Public Information, in order to promote awareness in the international community of the nature of the critical economic and social situation in Africa and of the priorities of the New Partnership for Africa's Development;

Role of the Department of Public Information in United Nations peacekeeping

53. Commends the efforts of the Secretary-General to strengthen the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information for the establishment and functioning of the information components of United Nations peacekeeping operations and of political and peacebuilding missions, including its promotional efforts and other information support activities, and requests the Secretariat to continue to ensure the involvement of the Department from the planning stage of future operations through interdepartmental consultations and coordination with other departments of the Secretariat, in particular with the Department of Peacekeeping Operations;

54. Stresses the importance of enhancing the public information capacity of the Department of Public Information in the field of peacekeeping operations and its role in the selection process of spokespersons for United Nations peacekeeping operations or missions, and, in this regard, encourages the Department to second spokespersons who have the necessary skills to fulfil the tasks of the operations or missions, taking into account the principle of equitable geographical distribution in accordance with Chapter XV, Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, and to consider views expressed, especially by host countries, when appropriate, in this regard;

55. Welcomes the actions taken by the Department of Public Information to increase its involvement in the planning stage of new or expanding peacekeeping operations, as well as the deployment of public information components in new missions, also welcomes the improvements made to the peacekeeping portal on the United Nations website, and encourages the Department of Public Information to continue its efforts in supporting the peacekeeping missions to further develop their websites;

56. Encourages the Department of Public Information and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to continue their cooperation in raising awareness of the new realities, successes and challenges faced by peacekeeping operations, especially multidimensional and complex ones, and of the recent surge in United Nations peacekeeping activities, and welcomes efforts by the two Departments to develop and implement a comprehensive communications strategy on current challenges facing United Nations peacekeeping;

57. Also encourages the Department of Public Information and the Department of Peacekeeping Operations to cooperate in establishing an effective outreach programme to explain the policy of the Organization against sexual exploitation and abuse;

58. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to report to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions on the role of the Department of Public Information in United Nations peacekeeping operations;

Role of the Department of Public Information in strengthening dialogue among civilizations and the culture of peace as means of enhancing understanding among nations

59. Recalls its resolutions 53/22 of 4 November 1998 and 55/23 of 13 November 2000 on the United Nations Year of Dialogue among Civilizations, 52/15 of 20 November 1997, by which it proclaimed 2000 the International Year for the Culture of Peace, 53/25 of 10 November 1998, by which it proclaimed the period 2001-2010 the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World, 56/6 of 9 November 2001 on the Global Agenda for Dialogue among Civilizations, and 59/142 of 15 December 2004 on the promotion of religious and cultural understanding, harmony and cooperation, encourages the Department of Public Information to continue to provide the necessary support for the dissemination of information pertaining to dialogue among civilizations and the culture of peace and to take due steps in fostering the culture of dialogue among civilizations via all mass media, such as the Internet, print, radio and television, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report in this regard to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions;

IV

News services

60. Stresses that the central objective of the news services implemented by the Department of Public Information is the timely delivery of accurate, objective and balanced news and information emanating from the United Nations system in all four mass media—print, radio, television and Internet—to the media and other audiences worldwide, with the overall emphasis on multilingualism, and reiterates its request to the Department to ensure that all news-breaking stories and news alerts are accurate, impartial and free of bias;

Traditional means of communication

61. Also stresses that radio remains one of the most cost-effective and far-reaching traditional media available to the Department of Public Information and an important instrument in United Nations activities, including development and peacekeeping, with a view to achieving a broad client base around the world;

62. Notes that the international radio broadcasting capacity for the United Nations is an integral part of the activities of the Department of Public Information, and requests the Secretary-General to make every effort to ensure its success and to report on its activities to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

63. Encourages the Secretary-General to achieve parity in the six official languages in United Nations radio production;

64. Notes the efforts being made by the Department of Public Information to disseminate programmes directly to broadcasting stations all over the world in the six official languages, with the addition of Portuguese, as well as in other languages where possible, and, in this regard, stresses the need for impartiality and objectivity concerning information activities of the United Nations;

65. Encourages the Department of Public Information to continue building partnerships with local, national and regional broadcasters to extend the United Nations message to all the corners of the world in an accurate and impartial way, and also encourages the Radio and Television Service of the Department to continue to take full advantage of the technological infrastructure made available in recent years;

United Nations website

66. Reaffirms that the United Nations website remains a very useful tool for the media, nongovernmental organizations, educational institutions, Member States and the general public, and, in this regard, reiterates its appreciation for the efforts of the Department of Public Information in creating and maintaining it;

67. Recognizes the efforts made by the Department of Public Information to implement the basic accessibility requirements for persons with disabilities to the United Nations website, calls upon the Department to continue to work towards compliance with all levels of accessibility requirements on all pages of the website with the aim of ensuring its accessibility by persons with different kinds of disabilities, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session on progress made in this regard;

68. Reaffirms the need to achieve full parity among the six official languages on United Nations websites while noting with concern the increasing gap among different official languages on United Nations websites;

69. Takes note of the fact that the multilingual development and enrichment of the United Nations website has improved, although at a slower rate than expected owing to several constraints that need to be addressed, and, in this regard, requests the Department of Public Information, in coordination with content-providing offices, to improve the actions undertaken to achieve parity among the six official languages on the United Nations website;

70. Welcomes the cooperative arrangements undertaken by the Department of Public Information with academic institutions to increase the number of web pages available in some official languages, and encourages the Secretary-General to explore additional ways to further extend these cooperative arrangements to include all the official languages of the United Nations;

71. Stresses the need to adopt a decision on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of the United Nations website, and requests the Secretary-General to submit proposals to establish separate language units for each of the six official languages within the Department of Public Information, in order to achieve full parity among the official languages of the United Nations;

72. Reaffirms paragraph 2 of part IX of its resolution 59/276 of 23 December 2004 on proposals to strengthen the United Nations website;

73. Reaffirms its request to the Secretary-General to ensure, until such a decision has been taken and implemented and while maintaining an up-to-date and accurate website, the adequate distribution of financial and human resources within the Department of Public Information allocated to the United Nations website among all official languages, taking into consideration the specificity of each official language on a continuous basis;

74. Takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General to translate all English language materials and databases posted on the United Nations websites by the respective content-providing offices of the Secretariat into all official languages, and reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session on the most practical, efficient and cost-effective means of implementing this proposal;

75. Encourages the Secretary-General to continue to take full advantage of recent developments in information technology in order to improve, in a cost-effective manner, the expeditious dissemination of information on the United Nations, in accordance with the priorities established by General Assembly resolutions and taking into account the linguistic diversity of the Organization;

76. Recognizes that some official languages use non-Latin and bidirectional scripts and that technological infrastructures and supportive applications in the United Nations are based on Latin script, which leads to difficulties in processing non-Latin and bidirectional scripts, and requests the Department of Public Information, in cooperation with the Information Technology Services Division of the Department of Management, to continue its efforts to ensure that technological infrastructures and supportive applications in the United Nations fully support Latin, non-Latin and bidirectional scripts in order to enhance the equality of all official languages on the United Nations website;

77. Notes with satisfaction that access to the Official Document System of the United Nations, which is now being provided free to the public through its integration with the United Nations website, has resulted in a significant enhancement of the multilingual nature of the website owing to the availability of United Nations parliamentary documentation in the six official languages;

78. Also notes with satisfaction that United Nations webcast services provide live video of United Nations meetings and events, and encourages the Department of Public Information to also make the webcast available in the original language in which it is delivered;

79. Welcomes the electronic mail-based United Nations News Service, distributed worldwide in the English and French languages through e-mail by the Department of Public Information, and requests the Department as a matter of priority to continue to examine ways to provide this service in all official languages;

80. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to work within the United Nations System Chief Executives Board for Coordination and other appropriate inter-agency bodies to establish a United Nations gateway, an inter-agency search facility in which all entities of the United Nations system should be encouraged to participate, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its successive sessions on the activities of the High-level Committee on Management in this regard;

V

Library services

81. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General entitled "Modernization and integrated management of United Nations libraries: new strategic directions";

82. Calls upon the Department of Public Information to continue to lead the Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, and encourages the member libraries of the Steering Committee to coordinate closely and to establish time frames for the fulfilment of its programme of work;

83. Takes note of the report of the Office of Internal Oversight Services on the review of the operations and management of United Nations libraries, requests the Steering Committee to pursue new strategies for the work of United Nations libraries, which should aim at enhancing the effectiveness of libraries within existing legislative mandates, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session;

84. Also takes note of the steps taken by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library and the other member libraries of the Steering Committee to align their activities, services and outputs more closely with the goals, objectives and operational priorities of the Organization;

85. Reiterates the need to enable the provision of hard copies of library materials to Member States, and notes the efforts of the Secretary-General to enrich, on a multilingual basis, the stock of books and journals in the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, including publications on peace and security and development-related issues, in order to ensure that the Library is enriched and continues to be a broadly accessible resource for information about the United Nations and its activities;

86. Recognizes the importance of the depository libraries in disseminating information and knowledge about United Nations activities, and, in this connection, urges the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, in its capacity as the focal point, to continue to take the initiatives necessary to strengthen such libraries by providing regional training and other assistance and by improving their role with the aim of strengthening their support to users in developing countries;

87. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session on the activities of the Steering Committee and the work of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, including on the application of measures to enhance the effectiveness of the libraries within existing legislative mandates;

88. Acknowledges that the Dag Hammarskjöld Library, as part of the Outreach Division of the Department of Public Information, endeavours to facilitate access to timely and up-to-date library products and services for use by delegates, permanent missions of Member States, the Secretariat, researchers and depository libraries worldwide;

89. Notes the holding of training courses conducted by the Dag Hammarskjöld Library for the representatives of Member States and Secretariat staff on the use of Cyberseek, web search, the Intranet, United Nations documentation, United Nations Info Quest and the Official Document System of the United Nations;

90. Recalls paragraph 44 of its resolution 56/64 B of 24 December 2001, in which it welcomed the role of the Department of Public Information in fostering increased collaboration among libraries of the United Nations system;

VI

Outreach services

91. Acknowledges that the outreach services implemented by the Department of Public Information continue to work towards promoting awareness of the role and work of the United Nations on priority issues;

92. Notes the importance of the continued implementation by the Department of Public Information of the ongoing programme for broadcasters and journalists from developing countries and countries with economies in transition, as mandated by the General Assembly, and encourages the Department to consider how best to maximize the benefits derived from the programme by reviewing, inter alia, its duration and the number of its participants;

93. Welcomes the movement towards educational outreach and the orientation of the UN Chronicle, both print and online editions, and, to this end, encourages the UN Chronicle to continue to develop co-publishing partnerships, collaborative educational activities and events, including the "Unlearning Intolerance" seminar series, with civil society organizations and institutions of higher learning;

94. Reaffirms the important role that guided tours play as a means of reaching out to the general public, including children and students at all levels;

95. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Department of Public Information in organizing exhibitions on important United Nations-related issues within existing mandates at United Nations Headquarters and at other United Nations offices as a useful tool for reaching out to the general public;

96. Requests the Department of Public Information to strengthen its role as a focal point for two-way interaction with civil society relating to the priorities and concerns of the Organization;

97. Commends the United Nations Correspondents Association on its Dag Hammarskjöld Memorial Scholarship Fund, which sponsors journalists from developing countries to come to the United Nations Headquarters and report on the activities during the General Assembly, and urges donors to extend financial support to the Fund so that it may increase the number of such scholarships to journalists in this context;

98. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts and contribution of United Nations Messengers of Peace, Goodwill Ambassadors and other advocates to promote the work of the United Nations and to enhance international public awareness of its priorities and concerns, and calls upon the Department of Public Information to continue to involve them in its communications and media strategies and outreach activities;

99. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its next session on the activities being carried out by the Department of Public Information to enhance the public image of the Organization, especially where there is a component of the network of United Nation information centres;

VII

Final remarks

100. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that all reports requested by the Committee on Information are submitted and issued in accordance with the legislative mandate;

101. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Information at its twenty-eighth session and to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session on the activities of the Department of Public Information and on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the present resolution;

102. Requests the Committee on Information to report to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

103. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Questions relating to information".

Reorientation of information and communications activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], the Secretary-General, in a February report to the Committee on Information [A/AC.198/2005/2 & Corr.1], detailed progress in the continuing reorientation of the Department of Public Information (DPI), launched in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 585].

Responding to the needs of its global audience, DPI maintained a balance between new communications technologies, especially the Internet, and traditional media, including radio and print materials. At the same time, it widened its pool of communications partners in the private, public and corporate sectors. In response to allegations of corruption, mismanagement and lack of transparency and accountability within the Organization, DPI strengthened its monitoring of media around the world to provide senior officials with press materials and regular analyses. It also strengthened its media outreach capacity to ensure a coordinated and rapid response to misinformation, as well as the formulation of substantive information for the use of UN officials when speaking to the press on specific issues. In addition, DPI assisted in the drafting of opinion articles by senior officials for publication in newspapers around the world to further project the Organization's perspective on crucial issues. It undertook proactive outreach efforts aimed at showing the media and the public at large the many ways in which the Organization was responding to global challenges on a daily basis. Throughout the second half of 2004 and early 2005, DPI concentrated on drawing the world's attention to the UN revitalization and reform process promoted by the Secretary-General. At the center of its campaign were preparations for the high-level plenary meeting of the General Assembly in September (see p. 47). Rallying greater support for the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [YUN 2000, p. 51], especially at the national level, was also a central focus for DPI.

A cornerstone of DPI's reorientation process was the creation of a culture of evaluation. The collaborative project with OIOS to evaluate all DPI activities was in its final year. The systematic review of the impact of public information activities had encouraged managers at all levels to focus on the evaluation of programme outcomes. Survey activities had more than doubled with the introduction of the annual programme impact review. Overall, surveys conducted since 2002 demonstrated that DPI had managed to meet the demands of 80 per cent of its target audiences in terms of usefulness, relevance and quality of products, activities and services. DPI was building its technical infrastructure and internal capacities to conduct systematic media monitoring and analysis of its communications campaigns and press coverage of UN activities. The client planning process initiated in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 631] as part of DPI's reform was further strengthened.

Guided by the United Nations Millennium Declaration adopted by the Assembly in resolution 55/2 [YUN 2000, p. 49] and resolutions 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623] and 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], DPI continued to pay particular attention to the major issues of poverty, conflict prevention, sustainable development, human rights, the HIV/AIDS epidemic, combating terrorism, the needs of Africa, and dialogue among civilizations and cultures of peace.

In the light of the surge in demand for UN peacekeeping, DPI raised awareness about UN peacekeeping operations, particularly the challenges posed in deploying new and expanded missions, and prepared public information components of peacekeeping operations for rapid and effective deployment. DPI continued its close cooperation with the UN Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), intensifying planning and coordination in the preparation and dissemination of public information materials to the media and UNICs, and provided backstopping support to the public information components of ongoing peace missions.

The Regional United Nations Information Centre in Brussels, Belgium, established in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 628], made steady progress as a regional information hub for Western Europe, establishing and expanding its dissemination, media-monitoring and promotional activities in an increasing number of languages to all 22 countries of the region it served. It also emerged as a venue for major UN events, including the launching of key reports, press briefings and other media-aimed activities. (For further information on UNIC rationalization, see p. 694.)

The Secretary-General also described DPI's efforts to connect with the media, focusing on strengthening partnerships with radio and television broadcasters and with civil society to enhance outreach, and to implement knowledge services through the Dag Hammarskjöld Library. (For information on UN libraries, see p. 692.)

The report concluded that the reorientation process was completed. DPI had implemented those aspects of the comprehensive review of its work within the Secretary-General's authority, based on Assembly resolutions and guidance provided by the Committee on Information. DPI was well prepared to take on the challenge of telling the story of a renewed and revitalized United Nations, but needed the support of Member States and the Committee to do so effectively.

DPI activities

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], the Secretary-General submitted an August report [A/60/173] covering DPI's activities since his previous report [ibid., p. 624], which were organized within its four subprogrammes: strategic communications services, news services, library services and outreach services. The report also included an overview of DPI's continuing efforts to promote and refine a culture of evaluation.

DPI continued to communicate to the world the process of UN revitalization and reform envisaged by the Secretary-General. It also played a key role in planning and carrying out a worldwide communications strategy for the launch of the Secretary-General's report entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all" [A/59/2005] (see p. 67), which was presented to the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly in September (see p. 47). To promote the development agenda of that meeting, the Department organized a multi-site launch of the Millennium Development Goals Report 2005 in a reader-friendly format describing progress on the implementation of the UN MDGs [YUN 2000, p. 51]. DPI also completed an intensive promotional campaign for the 2005 review of the implementation of the 1995 Beijing Platform for Action [YUN 1995, p. 1170] and the outcome documents of the twenty-third (2000) special session of the General Assembly on women [YUN 2000, p. 1082] by the Commission on the Status of Women. The Department made the protection and promotion of human rights a priority issue, and collaborated with the UN Department of Political Affairs and the Committee of 24 to disseminate information on decolonization.

DPI worked closely with DPKO to further develop and adjust its global communications strategy in support of UN peace operations, particularly in assisting newly established operations in launching effective, well-prepared and properly equipped public information components. It helped train 25 public information field officers in rapid response and peacekeeping planning and doctrine; worked with DPKO to develop a public information module for its framework plan on disarmament, demobilization and reintegration programmes; developed communications strategies, guidance and training on the issue of sexual exploitation and abuse; elaborated a communication strategy for raising the Secretary-General's profile on the situation in Darfur, the Sudan, in May; and drafted a strategy to promote the Secretary-General's approach to counter-terrorism as well as provided public information support to the Counter-Terrorism Executive Directorate, other counter-terrorism bodies and the Secretariat.

The UN website, which was in its tenth year of operation, had become a premier site for providing a wide range of information in multiple languages to users around the world. Enhancing the site's multilingual capacity was a key goal for DPI, which had used in-house technical and linguistic expertise to introduce programming and graphic design as a common service for all official languages. The UN News Centre portal continued to gain importance as a focal point for the latest news and related resources on UN global activities.

DPI continued to strengthen its radio programming and expand partnerships with international broadcasters, and, in the light of the broadband and mobile revolutions, was exploring ways to offer more varied content from the entire UN family, ensuring that its products, delivered through multiple means and platforms, appealed specifically to various target audiences. A pilot survey, conducted in November 2004, as part of DPI's self-evaluation efforts, indicated that overall, clients had a positive view of UN radio and video programmes. A larger-scale survey was to be conducted in the third quarter of 2005.

The UN Chronicle further strengthened the targeting of educators and institutions of higher education through the use of thematic clusters that could be used as part of their curricula. Its Feature Service re-disseminated some 40 articles from eminent contributors through UNICs to newspapers and magazines worldwide.

DPI continued to build partnerships with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) through weekly briefings, the annual orientation programme for newly associated NGO representatives, communication workshops, the NGO website and the NGO Resource Centre. As at June 2005, the total number of associated NGOs stood at 1,517.

Library services

As at June 2005, there were 405 active depository libraries and electronic deposit recipients increased from 127 to 138. During the reporting period, the Dag Hammarskjöld Library conducted more than 150 training sessions for some 1,300 trainees, including Secretariat staff and mission personnel. Its web page continued to expand services in the six official languages within the limits of available resources.

The Library would coordinate the revamping of the UN Intranet, known as iSeek, and to that end, had conducted a needs assessment in April and formed a dedicated unit in the Library's Knowledge Sharing Section during the third quarter of the year. The Library continued to bring high-quality information resources to official users by purchasing online information services at considerably reduced prices through the United Nations System Electronic Information Acquisitions Consortium.

The Steering Committee for the Modernization and Integrated Management of United Nations Libraries, established in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 635], held three meetings between September 2004 and July 2005. The September 2004 meeting focused on the development of a strategy for UN libraries and information services for the future. In March 2005, the Steering Committee endorsed the report on new strategic directions for UN libraries, which was submitted by its Subcommittee on Strategic Directions for UN Libraries. The report [A/AC.198/2005/4] (see p. 693) was also submitted to the Committee on Information at its twenty-seventh (2005) session. The Steering Committee decided to reorganize its work programme by focusing on the management of UN documentation, information skills and learning, electronic and web resources and knowledge-sharing.

The Dag Hammarskjöld Library reorganized its services at the end of 2004, placing greater focus on fostering knowledge management. Steps taken in that regard included the establishment of a weekly reading and discussion group to foster the exchange of ideas among Library staff; an online forum for staff members to improve internal communication within the Library; a personal knowledge management programme that incorporated client needs assessment, one-on-one coaching and small team training programmes; and capacity-building activities aimed at enhancing the skills and knowledge of Library staff.

Management of UN libraries

Pursuant to resolution 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [A/AC.198/2005/4] defining strategic directions for the libraries that served the UN Secretariat, UN bodies, Member States and its broader constituency. The report also provided information on libraries throughout the UN system that would be affected by the changes envisaged.

The report stated that technological advances and organizational change had allowed for UN libraries to move from being independent repositories to a network of knowledge-sharing communities (from collections to connections). With those changes, the potential of value added by the library would increase, providing the opportunity for new, more relevant services. UN documents would remain at the core of library collections and more attention and resources would be devoted both to preserving those materials and making them more accessible and available. The Dag Hammarskjöld Library would focus staff resources on ensuring that the unique content of the UN document collections was put to best use. Libraries would produce electronic collections of external materials on demand through systems that provided access to multiple types of information resources held in different locations. Although print collections would not disappear, they would become smaller and more focused. As vendors of electronic journals and news sources developed systems to allow more direct, on-demand delivery of their materials directly to individual users, UN libraries would redirect their specialized expertise to helping users select optimal delivery mechanisms. Such changes, facilitated by a higher level of resource sharing, would reduce the costly duplication of acquisitions. The libraries would increasingly turn to electronic sources for new information products to summarize, filter and select relevant and timely information for users. The greatest change in the work of UN libraries would be the realignment of their services towards operational priorities. The role of UN libraries as preservers and disseminators of cultural information would be enhanced and new services would support the creation of a knowledge-enabling environment in and among the UN library system. The needs of individual users and small teams would be met through the introduction at the Dag Hammarskjöld Library of a Personal Knowledge Management programme, which would include team training and individual coaching in the tools and techniques provided by the Organization. Personal Knowledge Management teams would work with support service units to ensure that users had the most appropriate tools to meet their needs and that they knew how to use them. With UN documentation available free of charge over the Internet through the Official Document System (ODS), the role of depository libraries would have to be re-examined. As part of their contribution to bridging the digital divide and supporting education in developing countries, UN libraries would work through the depository libraries to support users in those countries. The buildings and physical environment that had characterized UN libraries were being re-examined in the light of new ways of working. Paper-based collections of externally published books and periodicals would remain essential for the UN libraries for some time, but would be reduced if those materials became more readily available outside UN libraries.

UN library staff would strengthen their skills in communications, software performance, interviewing, coaching and training, information systems design and electronic publishing, and would align their work more closely with the goals, objectives and operational priorities of the Organization. The ability of library staff to analyse and evaluate information environments and sources would be enhanced to produce value-added products and services targeted to the needs of UN users. The staff would move towards a more interactive role, acting as a catalyst in and across organizations. The programme of change within UN libraries would be carried out through collaboration between the libraries and the constituencies they served.

The goal of transforming the skills, methods and knowledge bases of UN libraries into a powerful resource for the Organization in the twenty-first century would require training and technological resources, and a careful evaluation of information policy issues and staffing procedures in the planning process. Implementation of those new directions would ensure that UN libraries aligned their policy with the recommendations put forward by the Secretary-General in his 2002 report on strengthening the United Nations: an agenda for further change [YUN 2002, p. 585].

By decision 59/557 of 13 April, the General Assembly deferred until its sixtieth (2005) session consideration of the 2004 OIOS report on the review of the operations and management of UN libraries [YUN 2004, p. 627].

United Nations information centres

Pursuant to General Assembly resolutions 57/300 [YUN 2002, p. 1353], 58/101 B [YUN 2003, p. 623] and 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], the Secretary-General submitted a February report [A/AC.198/2005/3] on the further rationalization of the United Nations information centres (UNICs) network. It provided information on the implementation of the regionalization initiative in Western Europe that began with the opening of the regional UNIC in Brussels in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 628], and in other high-cost developed countries, and set out a proposed implementation strategy for other regions.

The Secretary-General stated that underlying further rationalization of the network of UNICs was DPI's strategic approach to communications, emphasizing the use of new technologies, expanded partnerships, and a reallocation of resources to achieve greater overall impact, and taking into account the practical concerns and geographic realities facing such a network. However, DPI's analysis of the current situation in the field and of the various proposals for further rationalization revealed that further progress towards regionalization would require a level of funding not currently available to the Department. The unanticipated reduction of $2 million from the 2004-2005 biennium allocation for UNICs [ibid.] drained resources that were intended for strengthening those in developing countries and facilitating the creation of regional hubs. In addition, rising operational expenditures had further strained UNICs' budgets.

Faced with those concerns, DPI recommended a strategic recalibration of the existing network of UNICs by systematically extending a regional approach to communications to the rest of the network. Key information centres in each region would be strengthened to enable them to play a greater role in providing broad strategic communications guidance, coordination and support to centres in that region. That would be accommodated within current budgetary allocations and entail a strategic alignment of existing staff resources. The recalibration would help focus UNICs' work on priority thematic issues and concerns of particular relevance in each region, and enable DPI to fulfil its mission statement [YUN 2003, p. 630] by communicating more strategically to achieve the greatest impact in the field. The report concluded that an adequate level of operational resources was essential for progress towards a broader realignment of the network of UNICs, in consultation with regional groups and individual States concerned.

Development of UN website

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/126 B [YUN 2004, p. 616], the Secretary-General submitted to the Committee on Information a February report on the multilingual development, maintenance and enrichment of the UN website [A/AC.198/2005/6]. The report provided updates in that regard and outlined proposals for achieving the goal of parity among UN official languages on the website.

The report stated that the UN website was a decentralized system on which various departments were entitled to post their materials. As manager of the website, DPI emphasized that, to ensure coherence, avoid duplication and rationalize its management, coordination should be enhanced in terms of language and technical expertise. To that end, the Working Group on Internet Matters of the UN Publications Board was working to improve guidelines to promote a more coordinated and centralized approach to website development in languages other than English.

Accesses to the UN website grew from 2.1 billion in 2003 to 2.3 billion in 2004 and page views rose by nearly 26 per cent, indicating continued growth of interest in and use of UN materials via the website. However, while the upward trend in website use was consistent among the language sites, the level of increase varied widely. The Web Services Section, which handled the bulk of the language pages, posted more new or updated pages in languages other than English or French, signifying a positive move towards incorporating more materials in the languages, but other content-providing UN offices posted new pages or updated existing ones overwhelmingly in English.

To further advance parity on the website, DPI was taking steps to supplement regular staffing resources and had increased the number of pages available in some languages through pro bono translations provided by academic institutions, signing agreements to that end with universities in Belarus, China and Spain. However, the need for editorial control, programming and processing had put an additional workload on existing staff resources. The site-wide search engine for all UN official languages was implemented in September 2004, but its further development would be sporadic, as adequate resources had not been identified. Using in-house technical and linguistic expertise, the Web Services Section introduced programming and graphic design as a common service for all languages. The use of UNICODE software had drastically reduced the need to create the underlying programming for each language separately. A UN radio site was launched in English and was also being made available in other languages. Information on UN activities was also available on the web to local audiences in 27 other languages, thanks largely to the work of UNICs.

DPI continued to improve linguistic parity without sacrificing the comprehensive and up-to-date nature of the site. Parity had already been achieved in the General Assembly, the Security Council, news and radio portions of the site. UN Webcast planned to expand its Internet services in the six official languages and was building partnerships with other departments and offices to produce training and other informational webcast videos for distance learning.

Resources were also being allocated to ensure accessibility to the UN website by persons with disabilities. The basic accessibility requirements for the top layers of the site had been implemented, and plans were being made to redesign it to ensure better navigation, presentation, search and accessibility, in compliance with the requirements for persons with disabilities.

The report concluded that DPI would be unable to redeploy additional resources towards linguistic parity on the UN website without adversely affecting other mandated activities. Proposals to strengthen the UN website would be submitted within the context of the 2006-2007 proposed programme budget to further enable DPI to accelerate the move toward parity in the maintenance and development of key areas of the site.

UN Communications Group

The Secretary-General's August report on questions relating to information [A/60/173] included information on the 2005 activities of the United Nations Communications Group (UNCG), established in 2002 [YUN 2002, p. 589]. The Group, which had evolved into a communications platform for the entire UN system, held its fourth annual meeting in Geneva on 23-24 May. The Group took steps to further enhance cooperation and coordination among UN communicators, which included: the April launch of a media calendar of events; the establishment of a new operating model for UNCG that would consolidate UN system communications resources at the country level and eliminate duplication and/or overlap; and the adoption of a business plan for the promotion of the International Year of Sport and Physical Education 2005 (see p. 1206) to be implemented system-wide. UNifeed, a satellite newsfeed allowing broadcasters immediate access to the audio and visual material of DPI and UN agencies, was launched in March, bringing UNCG members into an unprecedented partnership with international broadcast networks.

Information and communications in the context of international security

In response to General Assembly resolution 59/61 [YUN 2004, p. 630], the Secretary-General, in a July report and later addendum [A/60/95 & Add.1], transmitted the views of four Member States on the general appreciation of the issues of information security; the definition of basic notions related to information security, including unauthorized interference with or misuse of information and telecommunication systems and information resources; and the context of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunication systems.

Group of Governmental Experts. The Group of Governmental Experts on Developments in the Field of Information and Telecommunications in the Context of International Security, appointed by the Secretary-General in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 630], held its second (Geneva, 28 March–1 April) and third (New York, 11-22 July) sessions. The Secretary-General submitted a report on their activities in August [A/60/202]. The Group held a comprehensive, in-depth exchange of views on developments in information and telecommunications in the context of international security, taking into account replies received from Member States in response to Assembly resolution 59/61 [YUN 2004, p. 630] and earlier resolutions on the topic, as well as contributions and background papers from individual members of the Group. However, given the complexity of the issues involved, no consensus was reached on the preparation of a final report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/452], adopted resolution 60/45 by recorded vote (177-1-0) [agenda item 86].

Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 53/70 of 4 December 1998, 54/49 of 1 December 1999, 55/28 of 20 November 2000, 56/19 of 29 November 2001, 57/53 of 22 November 2002, 58/32 of 8 December 2003, and 59/61 of 3 December 2004,

Recalling also its resolutions on the role of science and technology in the context of international security, in which, inter alia, it recognized that scientific and technological developments could have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needed to be maintained and encouraged,

Noting that considerable progress has been achieved in developing and applying the latest information technologies and means of telecommunication,

Affirming that it sees in this process the broadest positive opportunities for the further development of civilization, the expansion of opportunities for cooperation for the common good of all States, the enhancement of the creative potential of humankind and additional improvements in the circulation of information in the global community,

Recalling, in this connection, the approaches and principles outlined at the Information Society and Development Conference, held in Midrand, South Africa, from 13 to 15 May 1996,

Bearing in mind the results of the Ministerial Conference on Terrorism, held in Paris on 30 July 1996, and the recommendations that it made,

Bearing in mind also the results of the first phase of the World Summit on the Information Society, held in Geneva from 10 to 12 December 2003,

Noting that the dissemination and use of information technologies and means affect the interests of the entire international community and that optimum effectiveness is enhanced by broad international cooperation,

Expressing its concern that these technologies and means can potentially be used for purposes that are inconsistent with the objectives of maintaining international stability and security and may adversely affect the integrity of the infrastructure of States to the detriment of their security in both civil and military fields,

Considering that it is necessary to prevent the use of information resources or technologies for criminal or terrorist purposes,

Noting the contribution of those Member States that have submitted their assessments on issues of information security to the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraphs 1 to 3 of resolutions 53/70, 54/49, 55/28, 56/19, 57/53, 58/32 and 59/61,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General containing those assessments,

Welcoming the initiative taken by the Secretariat and the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in convening an international meeting of experts in Geneva in August 1999 on developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security, as well as its results,

Considering that the assessments of the Member States contained in the reports of the Secretary-General and the international meeting of experts have contributed to a better understanding of the substance of issues of international information security and related notions,

Bearing in mind that the Secretary-General, in fulfilment of resolution 58/32, established in 2004 a group of governmental experts, which, in accordance with its mandate, considered existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them and conducted a study on relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the Group of Governmental Experts on Developments in the Field of Information and Telecommunications in the Context of International Security, prepared on the basis of the results of the Group's work,

1. Calls upon Member States to promote further at multilateral levels the consideration of existing and potential threats in the field of information security, as well as possible measures to limit the threats emerging in this field, consistent with the need to preserve the free flow of information;

2. Considers that the purpose of such measures could be served through the examination of relevant international concepts aimed at strengthening the security of global information and telecommunications systems;

3. Invites all Member States to continue to inform the Secretary-General of their views and assessments on the following questions:

(a) General appreciation of the issues of information security;

(b) Efforts taken at the national level to strengthen information security and promote international cooperation in this field;

(c) The content of the concepts mentioned in paragraph 2 above;

(d) Possible measures that could be taken by the international community to strengthen information security at the global level;

4. Requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a group of governmental experts, to be established in 2009 on the basis of equitable geographical distribution, to continue to study existing and potential threats in the sphere of information security and possible cooperative measures to address them, as well as the concepts referred to in paragraph 2 above, and to submit a report on the results of this study to the General Assembly at its sixty-fifth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Developments in the field of information and telecommunications in the context of international security".

RECORDED VOTE ON RESOLUTION 60/45:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Andorra, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Azerbaijan, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belarus, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Cambodia, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Croatia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Eritrea, Estonia, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Georgia, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kazakhstan, Kenya, Kuwait, Kyrgyzstan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Latvia, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Micronesia, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Myanmar, Namibia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Palau, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Republic of Korea, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Russian Federation, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, San Marino, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Serbia and Montenegro, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Against: United States.

Abstaining: None.

Science and technology in international security and disarmament

On 8 December [meeting 61], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee [A/60/459], adopted resolution 60/51 by recorded vote (110-53-17) [agenda item 93].

Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recognizing that scientific and technological developments can have both civilian and military applications and that progress in science and technology for civilian applications needs to be maintained and encouraged,

Concerned that military applications of scientific and technological developments can contribute significantly to the improvement and upgrading of advanced weapons systems and, in particular, weapons of mass destruction,

Aware of the need to follow closely the scientific and technological developments that may have a negative impact on international security and disarmament, and to channel scientific and technological developments for beneficial purposes,

Cognizant that international transfers of dual-use as well as high-technology products, services and know-how for peaceful purposes are important for the economic and social development of States,

Also cognizant of the need to regulate such transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications through multilaterally negotiated, universally applicable, non-discriminatory guidelines,

Expressing its concern about the growing proliferation of ad hoc and exclusive export control regimes and arrangements for dual-use goods and technologies, which tend to impede the economic and social development of developing countries,

Recalling that in the Final Document of the Thirteenth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held in Kuala Lumpur from 20 to 25 February 2003, it was again noted with concern that undue restrictions on exports to developing countries of material, equipment and technology for peaceful purposes persisted,

Emphasizing that internationally negotiated guidelines for the transfer of high technology with military applications should take into account the legitimate defence requirements of all States and the requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, while ensuring that access to high-technology products and services and know-how for peaceful purposes is not denied,

1. Affirms that scientific and technological progress should be used for the benefit of all mankind to promote the sustainable economic and social development of all States and to safeguard international security, and that international cooperation in the use of science and technology through the transfer and exchange of technological know-how for peaceful purposes should be promoted;

2. Invites Member States to undertake additional efforts to apply science and technology for disarmament-related purposes and to make disarmament-related technologies available to interested States;

3. Urges Member States to undertake multilateral negotiations with the participation of all interested States in order to establish universally acceptable, non-discriminatory guidelines for international transfers of dual-use goods and technologies and high technology with military applications;

4. Encourages United Nations bodies to contribute, within existing mandates, to promoting the application of science and technology for peaceful purposes;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its sixty-first session the item entitled "Role of science and technology in the context of international security and disarmament".

Peaceful uses of outer space

The Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on Outer Space), at its forty-eighth session (Vienna, 8-17 June) [A/60/20 & Corr.1], discussed ways to maintain outer space for peaceful purposes, the spin-off benefits of space technology, space and society, and space and water. It examined the implementation of the recommendations of the Third (1999) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III) [YUN 1999, p. 556], and reviewed the work of its two subcommittees, one dealing with scientific and technical issues and the other with legal questions.

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/116 [YUN 2004, p. 632], Colombia, in its capacity as pro tempore secretariat of the Fourth (2002) Space Conference of the Americas [YUN 2002, p. 598], submitted a July report to the Committee [A/AC.105/L.261] on the implementation of the Conference's mandates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/475], adopted resolution 60/99 without vote [agenda item 29].

International cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 51/122 of 13 December 1996, 54/68 of 6 December 1999, 59/2 of 20 October 2004 and 59/116 of 10 December 2004,

Deeply convinced of the common interest of mankind in promoting and expanding the exploration and use of outer space, as the province of all mankind, for peaceful purposes and in continuing efforts to extend to all States the benefits derived therefrom, and also of the importance of international cooperation in this field, for which the United Nations should continue to provide a focal point,

Reaffirming the importance of international cooperation in developing the rule of law, including the relevant norms of space law and their important role in international cooperation for the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes, and of the widest possible adherence to international treaties that promote the peaceful uses of outer space in order to meet emerging new challenges, especially for developing countries,

Seriously concerned about the possibility of an arms race in outer space, and bearing in mind the importance of article IV of the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,

Recognizing that all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, should contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion and strengthening of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Considering that space debris is an issue of concern to all nations,

Noting the progress achieved in the further development of peaceful space exploration and applications as well as in various national and cooperative space projects, which contributes to international cooperation, and the importance of further developing the legal framework to strengthen international cooperation in this field,

Convinced of the importance of the recommendations in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development", adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III), held at Vienna from 19 to 30 July 1999, and the need to promote the use of space technology towards implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration,

Taking note of the actions already taken as well as those to be embarked upon to further implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III, as reflected in resolution 59/2 and the Plan of Action of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space,

Convinced that the use of space science and technology and their applications in such areas as telemedicine, tele-education, disaster management and environmental protection as well as other Earth observation applications contribute to achieving the objectives of the global conferences of the United Nations that address various aspects of economic, social and cultural development, inter alia, poverty eradication,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-eighth session,

1. Endorses the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its forty-eighth session;

2. Urges States that have not yet become parties to the international treaties governing the uses of outer space to give consideration to ratifying or acceding to those treaties as well as incorporating them in their national legislation;

3. Notes that, at its forty-fourth session, the Legal Subcommittee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space continued its work, as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 59/116;

4. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fifth session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

(a) Consider the following as regular agenda items:

(i) General exchange of views;

(ii) Status and application of the five United Nations treaties on outer space;

(iii) Information on the activities of international organizations relating to space law;

(iv) Matters relating to:

a. The definition and delimitation of outer space;

b. The character and utilization of the geostationary orbit, including consideration of ways and means to ensure the rational and equitable use of the geostationary orbit without prejudice to the role of the International Telecommunication Union;

(b) Consider the following single issues/items for discussion:

(i) Review and possible revision of the Principles Relevant to the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space;

(ii) Examination and review of the developments concerning the draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment;

(c) Consider the practice of States and international organizations in registering space objects in accordance with the workplan adopted by the Committee;

5. Notes that the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fifth session, will submit its proposals to the Committee for new items to be considered by the Subcommittee at its forty-sixth session, in 2007;

6. Also notes that, in the context of paragraph 4 (a) (ii) above, the Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fifth session, will reconvene its Working Group and review the need to extend the mandate of the Working Group beyond that session of the Subcommittee;

7. Further notes that, in the context of paragraph 4 (a) (iv) a. above, the Legal Subcommittee will reconvene its Working Group on the item only to consider matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space;

8. Agrees that, in the context of paragraph 4 (c) above, the Legal Subcommittee should reconvene its Working Group in accordance with the workplan adopted by the Committee;

9. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-second session, continued its work as mandated by the General Assembly in its resolution 59/116;

10. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, taking into account the concerns of all countries, in particular those of developing countries:

(a) Consider the following items:

(i) General exchange of views and introduction to reports submitted on national activities;

(ii) United Nations Programme on Space Applications;

(iii) Implementation of the recommendations of the Third United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE III);

(iv) Matters relating to remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment;

(b) Consider the following items in accordance with the workplans adopted by the Committee:

(i) Space debris;

(ii) Use of nuclear power sources in outer space;

(iii) Space-system-based telemedicine;

(iv) Near-Earth objects;

(v) Space-system-based disaster management support;

(vi) International Heliophysical Year 2007;

(c) Consider the following single issue/item for discussion: examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications, including in the field of space communications, as well as other questions relating to developments in space communications, taking particular account of the needs and interests of developing countries;

11. Notes that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, will submit its proposal to the Committee for a draft provisional agenda for the forty-fourth session of the Subcommittee, in 2007;

12. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee that the symposium to strengthen the partnership with industry should be organized during the first week of the forty-third session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and should address synthetic aperture radar missions and their applications;

13. Agrees that, in the context of paragraphs 10 (a) (ii) and (iii) and 11 above, the Scientific and Technical Sub-committee, at its forty-third session, should reconvene the Working Group of the Whole;

14. Also agrees that, in the context of paragraph 10 (b) (i) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, should reconvene its Working Group on Space Debris to consider issues arising from its workplan and, in particular, the draft of the space debris mitigation document of the Subcommittee and that the Working Group should continue its intersessional work as required to expedite agreement on the document;

15. Further agrees that, in the context of paragraph 10 (b) (ii) above, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, at its forty-third session, should reconvene its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space and that the Working Group should continue its intersessional work on the topics described in the multi-year workplan as amended by the Subcommittee at its forty-second session;

16. Agrees that a joint technical workshop on the objectives, scope and general attributes of a potential technical safety standard for nuclear power sources in outer space should be organized together with the International Atomic Energy Agency and held during the forty-third session of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee;

17. Endorses the United Nations Programme on Space Applications for 2006, as proposed to the Committee by the Expert on Space Applications and endorsed by the Committee;

18. Notes with satisfaction that, in accordance with paragraph 30 of General Assembly resolution 50/27 of 6 December 1995, the African regional centres for space science and technology education, in the French language and in the English language, located in Morocco and Nigeria, respectively, as well as the Centre for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific and the Regional Centre for Space Science and Technology Education for Latin America and the Caribbean, entered into an affiliation agreement with the Office for Outer Space Affairs of the Secretariat and have continued their education programmes in 2005;

19. Agrees that the regional centres referred to in paragraph 18 above should continue to report to the Committee on their activities on an annual basis;

20. Notes with satisfaction that the Centre for Space Science and Technology Education in Asia and the Pacific celebrated its tenth anniversary in 2005;

21. Also notes with satisfaction the contribution being made by the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and the efforts of Member States and the Office for Outer Space Affairs to promote and support the activities being organized within the framework of the International Heliophysical Year 2007;

22. Further notes with satisfaction that the Government of Ecuador will be hosting the Fifth Space Conference of the Americas in Quito in July 2006 and that the Government of Chile will organize a preparatory meeting for the Conference, with the support of the Government of Colombia, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Office for Outer Space Affairs, during the International Air and Space Fair, to be held in Santiago in March 2006;

23. Notes with satisfaction that the Pro Tempore Secretariat of the Fourth Space Conference of the Americas, in accordance with paragraph 21 of resolution 59/116, informed the Committee of its activities to implement the Declaration of Cartagena de Indias and the Plan of Action of the Conference;

24. Also notes with satisfaction that the Federal Government of Nigeria, in collaboration with the Governments of Algeria and South Africa, hosted the first African Leadership Conference on Space Science and Technology for Sustainable Development from 23 to 25 November 2005 and that the Conference provided, under the theme "Space: an indispensable tool for Africa's development", a forum to exchange information on global space activities for societal development and African needs, including capacity-building, to benefit from the applications of space science and technology and to consider how to strengthen the participation of Africa in the work of the Committee and its Subcommittees;

25. Further notes with satisfaction that the Islamic Republic of Iran, in cooperation with the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, hosted the eleventh session of the Intergovernmental Consultative Committee on the Regional Space Applications Programme for Sustainable Development in September 2005;

26. Recommends that more attention be paid and political support be provided to all matters relating to the protection and the preservation of the outer space environment, especially those potentially affecting the Earth's environment;

27. Considers that it is essential that Member States pay more attention to the problem of collisions of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources, with space debris, and other aspects of space debris, calls for the continuation of national research on this question, for the development of improved technology for the monitoring of space debris and for the compilation and dissemination of data on space debris, also considers that, to the extent possible, information thereon should be provided to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee and agrees that international cooperation is needed to expand appropriate and affordable strategies to minimize the impact of space debris on future space missions;

28. Urges all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion of international cooperation in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes;

29. Emphasizes the need to increase the benefits of space technology and its applications and to contribute to an orderly growth of space activities favourable to sustained economic growth and sustainable development in all countries, including mitigation of the consequences of disasters, in particular in the developing countries;

30. Notes that space science and technology and their applications could make important contributions to economic, social and cultural development and welfare, as indicated in the resolution entitled "The Space Millennium: Vienna Declaration on Space and Human Development";

31. Reiterates that the benefits of space technology and its applications should be prominently brought to the attention, in particular, of the major United Nations conferences and summits for economic, social and cultural development and related fields and that the use of space technology should be promoted towards achieving the objectives of those conferences and summits and for implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration;

32. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, through the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, a report on the inclusion of the issue of the use of space technology in the reports submitted by the Secretary-General to those conferences and summits, and its inclusion in the outcomes and commitments of those conferences and summits;

33. Notes with satisfaction the increased efforts of the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee as well as the Office for Outer Space Affairs and the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to promote the use of space science and technology and their applications in carrying out actions recommended in the Plan of Implementation of the World Summit on Sustainable Development ("Johannesburg Plan of Implementation");

34. Urges entities of the United Nations system, particularly those participating in the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, to examine, in cooperation with the Committee, how space science and technology and their applications could contribute to implementing the United Nations Millennium Declaration, particularly in the areas relating to, inter alia, food security and increasing opportunities for education;

35. Invites the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities to continue to contribute to the work of the Committee and to report to the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee on the work conducted at its annual sessions;

36. Notes with satisfaction that the open informal meetings, held in conjunction with the annual sessions of the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities and in which representatives of member States and observers in the Committee participate, provide a constructive mechanism for an active dialogue between the entities of the United Nations system and member States and observers in the Committee;

37. Encourages entities of the United Nations system to participate fully in the work of the Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities;

38. Notes that space technology could play a central role in disaster reduction and that both the Committee and its Scientific and Technical Subcommittee could contribute to the implementation of the Hyogo Declaration and the Hyogo Framework for Action 2005-2015, adopted by the World Conference on Disaster Reduction, held at Kobe, Hyogo, Japan, from 18 to 22 January 2005;

39. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, as a matter of priority, ways and means of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session, and agrees that during its consideration of the matter, the Committee could continue to consider ways to promote regional and interregional cooperation based on experiences stemming from the Space Conference of the Americas and the role space technology could play in the implementation of recommendations of the World Summit on Sustainable Development;

40. Notes with satisfaction that the Committee would be establishing a closer link between its work to implement the recommendations of UNISPACE III and the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development by contributing to the thematic areas that will be addressed by the Commission;

41. Agrees that the Director of the Division for Sustainable Development of the Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat should be invited to participate in the sessions of the Committee to inform it how it could best contribute to the work of the Commission;

42. Also agrees that the Director of the Office for Outer Space Affairs should participate in the sessions of the Commission on Sustainable Development to raise awareness and promote the benefits of space science and technology for sustainable development;

43. Notes with satisfaction the progress made, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/2, by Global Navigation Satellite Systems (GNSS) and augmentation system providers to establish an international committee on GNSS and by the ad hoc expert group established to study the possibility of creating an international entity to provide for coordination and the means of realistically optimizing the effectiveness of space-based services for use in disaster management;

44. Welcomes the fact that the Office for Outer Space Affairs could integrate into its programme of work a number of actions identified for implementation by the Office in the Plan of Action of the Committee for the further implementation of the recommendations of UNISPACE III;

45. Notes that some actions identified for implementation by the Office in the Plan of Action could only be integrated into its programme of work if additional staff and financial resources were provided;

46. Urges all Member States to contribute to the Trust Fund for the United Nations Programme on Space Applications to enhance the capacity of the Office to provide technical and legal advisory services and initiate pilot projects in accordance with the Plan of Action of the Committee, while maintaining the priority thematic areas agreed by the Committee;

47. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider a report on the activities of the International Satellite System for Search and Rescue as a part of its consideration of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications under the agenda item entitled "Report of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee", and invites Member States to report on their activities regarding the System;

48. Requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-ninth session, its agenda item entitled "Spin-off benefits of space technology: review of current status";

49. Also requests the Committee to continue to consider, at its forty-ninth session, under its agenda item entitled "Space and society", the special theme for the focus of discussions for the period 2004-2006 "Space and education", in accordance with the workplan adopted by the Committee;

50. Agrees that the Committee should continue to consider, at its forty-ninth session, its agenda item entitled "Space and water";

51. Also agrees that a new item entitled "Recommendations of the World Summit on the Information Society" should be included in the agenda of the Committee at its forty-ninth session, with a view to contributing to their implementation;

52. Further agrees that a symposium on space and forests should be held during the forty-ninth session of the Committee;

53. Notes with satisfaction that the Committee agreed to consider, at its forty-ninth session, under its agenda item "Other matters", the evolution of space activities and how to develop a long-term plan to strengthen the role of the Committee in international cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space;

54. Notes that in accordance with the agreement reached by the Committee at its forty-sixth session on the measures relating to the future composition of the bureaux of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, on the basis of the measures relating to the working methods of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies, the Group of African States, the Group of Eastern European States, the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States and the Group of Western European and Other States nominated their candidates for the offices of Second Vice-Chair/Rapporteur of the Committee, First Vice-Chair of the Committee, Chair of the Legal Subcommittee and Chair of the Committee, respectively, for the period 2006-2007;

55. Urges the Group of Asian States to nominate its candidate for the office of Chair of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee for the period 2006-2007 in time for the Subcommittee to begin its work at its forty-third session as scheduled;

56. Agrees that, upon the nomination of the candidate of the Group of Asian States for the Chair of the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee, the two Subcommittees should elect their officers;

57. Notes that the Committee, at its forty-ninth session, would endorse the election of the officers of its Subcommittees and would elect its officers for the period 2006-2007;

58. Also notes that the Group of Western European and Other States nominated its candidate for the office of Second Vice-Chair/Rapporteur of the Committee, for the period 2008-2009, at the forty-eighth session of the Committee, for its consideration;

59. Further notes that each of the regional groups has the responsibility to actively promote the participation in the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies of the member States of the Committee that are also members of the respective regional groups, and agrees that the regional groups should consider this Committee-related matter among their members;

60. Endorses the decision of the Committee to grant permanent observer status to the European Space Policy Institute;

61. Urges the Committee to expand the scope of international cooperation relating to the social, economic, ethical and human dimensions in space science and technology applications;

62. Requests entities of the United Nations system and other international organizations to continue and, where appropriate, to enhance their cooperation with the Committee and to provide it with reports on the issues dealt with in the work of the Committee and its subsidiary bodies.

Implementation of UNISPACE III recommendations

In accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/2 [YUN 2004, p. 637], the Committee on Outer Space considered the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations. Before it were the Secretary-General's 2004 note transmitting the Committee's report on the implementation of the recommendations [YUN 2004, p. 636] and a series of conference room papers on issues related to that topic. The Committee emphasized the importance of implementing the plan of action for operationalizing the UNISPACE III recommendations. It noted the continuing implementation of the recommendations by Member States through national, regional and international efforts, and the work of some of the action teams established in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 568] and 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 641].

The Committee agreed that, in order to establish a closer link between its efforts to implement the UNISPACE III recommendations and the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development, the Director of the Division for Sustainable Development of the UN Department of Economic and Social Affairs should be invited to participate in the Committee's sessions, and the Director of the Office for Outer Space Affairs should attend the Commission's sessions, with a view to raising awareness and promoting the benefits of space science and technology. It agreed that Member States should provide inputs for the development of a concise document for the policy year of the Commission's 2006-2007 thematic policy areas, which the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee should review and finalize in 2006, with the support of the Action Team on Sustainable Development, and transmit to the Commission on the Committee's behalf. In addition, they should provide inputs for the Committee's annual contribution to the work of the Commission one year before the Commission addressed the thematic areas. The Subcommittee should review and finalize it. In that regard, the Committee agreed that the Subcommittee should finalize, in 2006, the Committee's contribution for that year and the first draft for 2007.

The Committee reviewed a draft of the study agreed to by the Assembly in resolution 59/2, conducted by the ad hoc expert group, on the possibility of creating an international entity to provide for coordination and the means of realistically optimizing the effectiveness of space-based services for use in disaster management. It requested the ad hoc expert group to finalize the study, which should be reviewed by Member States and the Fourth Committee's Working Group of the Whole and submitted to the Subcommittee in 2006 for review and recommendation to the Committee.

The Committee also considered the strategy, presented by the Office for Outer Space Affairs [A/AC.105/L.262], in accordance with resolution 59/2, for incorporating into its programme of work the actions identified for implementation by the Office in the Committee's 2004 plan of action. The Committee welcomed the fact that the Office could integrate, within existing resources, many of the actions contained in the plan. However, to accommodate new actions, the Office would need to adjust its operational priorities and increase its extrabudgetary resources in order to provide technical and legal services and initiate pilot projects.

The Committee agreed that the Office should promote cooperation with and support for the regional centres for space science at the regional and international levels, and should launch a support campaign for the centres among space-related institutions and relevant companies. The Committee considered the activities of the UN Programme on Space Applications and agreed that the Programme should continue to focus on thematic areas identified by the Expert on Space Applications in her briefing to the Committee and include water among its thematic priority areas, as a contribution to the work of the Commission on Sustainable Development.

In accordance with Assembly resolution 59/116 [YUN 2004, p. 632], the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee convened the Working Group of the Whole to consider the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations.

Scientific and Technical Subcommittee

The Scientific and Technical Subcommittee of the Committee on Outer Space, at its forty-second session (Vienna, 21 February–4 March) [A/AC.105/848], considered the United Nations Programme on Space Applications and the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations. It also dealt with matters relating to the remote sensing of the Earth by satellite, including applications for developing countries and monitoring of the Earth's environment; space debris; the use of nuclear power sources in space; space-system-based telemedicine and disaster management support; near-Earth objects; the examination of the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit and its utilization and applications; and support to proclaim 2007 as the International Geophysical and Heliophysical Year.

UN Programme on Space Applications

The United Nations Programme on Space Applications, as mandated by General Assembly resolution 37/90 [YUN 1982, p. 163], continued to assist developing countries and countries with economies in transition to establish or strengthen their capacity in space science and technology through long-term training fellowships, technical advisory services, regional and international training courses and conferences, and to promote cooperation between developed and developing countries.

The United Nations Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/861] said that the Programme continued to emphasize cooperation with Member States at the regional and international levels in support of the UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education. Within the framework of the Programme, and with the cooperation of the Australian Maritime Safety Authority, the United Nations/Australia Training Course on Satellite-Aided Search and Rescue was organized (Canberra, Australia, 14-18 March) [A/AC.105/851] to benefit countries in the Pacific region. Under the Programme's priority area of space technology for disaster management, which aimed at supporting developing countries' use of space technology to deal with natural disasters, the Programme organized jointly with the Algerian Space Agency, the United Nations/Algeria/European Space Agency (ESA) International Seminar on the Use of Space Technology for Disaster Management: Prevention and Management of Natural Disasters (Algiers, Algeria, 22-26 May) [A/AC.105/852]. The Programme initiated the United Nations/ESA/Argentina Workshop on the Use of Space Technology for Human Health for the benefit of Latin American countries (Córdoba, Argentina, 19-23 September) and the Office for Outer Space Affairs/Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific/China Workshop on Tele-Health Development in Asia and the Pacific (Guangzhou, China, 5-9 December). The United Nations International Meeting for the Establishment of the International Committee on Global Navigation Satellite Systems (ICG) (Vienna, 1-2 December) established the Committee on a voluntary basis. Other workshops held during the year included the fifteenth United Nations/International Astronautical Federation Workshop on Space Education and Capacity-Building for Sustainable Development (Kitakyushu, Japan, 14-15 October) [A/AC.105/854]; the United Nations/ESA/United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration Workshop on the International Heliophysical Year 2007 (Abu Dhabi and Al-Ain, United Arab Emirates, 20-23 November) [A/AC.105/856]; and the fourth United Nations Workshop on Space Law (Abuja, Nigeria, 21-24 November). In all, the Programme held 10 workshops, training courses and conferences in 2005 and provided technical advisory services to activities promoting regional cooperation.

Following consideration of the report of the Expert on Space Applications [A/AC.105/840], describing 2004 programme activities, those scheduled for 2005, and activities of UN-affiliated regional centres for space science and technology education for 2004, 2005 and 2006, the Subcommittee reiterated its concern over the Programme's limited financial resources and appealed to Member States for voluntary contributions.

The General Assembly, in resolution 60/99 (see p. 698), endorsed the Programme on Space Applications for 2006, as proposed by the Expert.

Cooperation

The Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, at its twenty-fifth session (Vienna, 31 January–2 February) [A/AC.105/842], discussed the coordination of plans and programmes in the practical application of space technology and related areas; ways of establishing inventories of space-related resources, especially data sets, space-related devices and educational and training materials; involvement of UN entities in the International Charter on Space and Major Disasters, to which the UN Office for Outer Space Affairs became a cooperating body in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 643]; space-related outcomes of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821]; electronic information-networking in the UN system; implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations; and a revised brochure on the use of space technology by the UN system for sustainable development.

Noting the reduced participation of some UN entities that played key roles in various coordinated space-related activities, the Meeting agreed that letters emphasizing the benefits of participating in its meetings should be sent by the Director of the Office for Outer Space Affairs to the heads of those entities. The Committee on Outer Space should also encourage UN system entities to participate in the Meeting's work. Those entities could enhance their participation in the meetings of the Committee and the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee by submitting written reports instead of making oral presentations, as well as information and reports on their activities related to the work of the Committee and its Subcommittee. The Meeting invited UN entities to contribute to a unified list of space-related training events for 2005 maintained by the Office for Outer Space Affairs. The Meeting reviewed and amended the Secretary-General's draft report on the coordination of space-related activities within the UN system: directions and anticipated results for the period 2005-2006 [A/AC.105/841].

The Meeting noted that the World Health Organization (WHO) would be taking a leading role in telemedicine and would welcome cooperation with other UN system entities and that the Office for Outer Space Affairs had invited interested entities to join in the development of pilot projects for water resource management that included the use of space technologies.

The Meeting agreed that the Office of Outer Space Affairs should coordinate with UN system entities in setting up a web page that would make available links to inventories of space-related resources that could be shared. The web page should be reviewed in 2006.

Having examined the list of space-related initiatives and programmes of Member States of the Committee on Outer Space and within the UN system that responded to recommendations contained in the Plan of Implementation of the 2002 World Summit on Sustainable Development [YUN 2002, p. 821], it agreed that UN system entities should be invited to provide, by 16 February, updated information and comments for inclusion in the list, an updated version of which should be submitted to the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee at its forty-second (2005) session.

The Meeting agreed that UN system entities should examine the 2004 Committee on Outer Space plan of action for the implementation of the UNISPACE III recommendations [YUN 2004, p. 637], with a view to identifying those actions that they could address or to which they could contribute. Noting that the brochure on the use of space technology by the UN system for sustainable development had proven to be useful in disseminating information on how UN system entities were using space technology for sustainable development, the meeting directed the Office of Outer Space Affairs to explore the possibility of making it available in the six UN official languages. It invited interested UN entities to provide funding and in-kind support for printing the brochure.

The Meeting also agreed that its informal open session, held in conjunction with its annual sessions, was a constructive mechanism for ensuring active dialogue between UN entities and member States of the Committee on Outer Space.

In response to the Meeting's 2003 request [YUN 2003, p. 643] that the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee invite UN entities to submit annual reports on specific themes, the Meeting submitted a February report [A/AC.105/843] to the Committee on Outer Space on new and emerging technologies and applications and initiatives for space-related inter-agency cooperation.

Scientific and technical issues

In 2005, the Scientific and Technical Subcommittee [A/AC.105/848] continued to emphasize the importance of providing non-discriminatory access to remote sensing data and to derive information at reasonable cost and in a timely manner, and capacity-building for the adoption and use of remote sensing technology, in particular to meet the needs of developing countries. It encouraged further international cooperation in the use of remote sensing satellites, in particular by sharing experiences and technologies through bilateral, regional and international collaborative projects.

The Subcommittee agreed that Member States, in particular space-faring countries, should pay more attention to the problem of the collision of space objects, including those with nuclear power sources on board, with space debris, and to other aspects of space debris, and make available the results of national research on space debris, including information on minimizing its creation. The Subcommittee noted that the Inter-Agency Space Debris Coordination Committee (IADC) continued to achieve progress in understanding the technical issues related to space debris. Pursuant to General Assembly resolution 59/116 [YUN 2004, p. 632], the Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on Space Debris to consider the 2003 IADC proposals on space debris mitigation [YUN 2003, p. 644], and endorsed the working group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report.

Also, in accordance with resolution 59/116, the Subcommittee reconvened its Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources (NPS) in Outer Space and noted the progress made during the intersessional period by the Working Group on the development of potential implementation options for establishing an international technically based framework of goals and recommendations for the safety of planned and currently foreseeable space NPS applications. The Subcommittee also noted that the Working Group had agreed to hold a joint technical workshop with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), in 2006, on a potential technical safety standard for NPS in outer space, as proposed in the Group's working paper [A/AC.105/C.1/L.278]. The Subcommittee endorsed the Working Group's report, which was annexed to the Subcommittee's report and the recommendation that the Group continue its intersessional work on the topics described in the multi-year programme on the use of NPS adopted in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 644], as amended. The Subcommittee noted that relief efforts conducted in response to the Indian Ocean tsunami disaster of 26 December 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 952] had shown that emergency satellite-based communications were crucial in saving lives and reducing human suffering.

The Committee on Outer Space [A/60/20 & Corr.1] agreed that the Working Group on the Use of Nuclear Power Sources in Outer Space should continue its intersessional work, by electronic means, in close cooperation with IAEA and the Office of Outer Space Affairs to finalize the technical workshop to be held jointly in 2006 on the objective, scope and general attributes of a potential technical safety standard for nuclear power sources in outer space. During the intersessional meeting (Vienna, 13-15 June) [A/AC.105/L.260], the Working Group finalized a list of workshop objectives and topics and prepared an indicative schedule of work. In response to the Subcommittee's request that Member States and regional space agencies continue to report on national research concerning the safety of space objects with NPS, the Secretariat submitted, in a January addendum [A/AC.105/838/Add.1] to a 2004 note [YUN 2004, p. 641], the reply received from one Member State.

Also submitted to the Subcommittee were a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/857] and a series of addenda [A/AC.105/832/Add.1-4] to a 2004 note [YUN 2004, p. 641] containing information received from 11 Member States on their space activities.

Legal Subcommittee

The Legal Subcommittee, at its forty-fourth session (Vienna, 4-15 April) [A/AC.105/850], reconvened its working group on the examination of the preliminary draft protocol on matters specific to space assets to the Convention on International Interests in Mobile Equipment, which was opened for signature in 2001 [YUN 2001, p. 570]. The working group considered separately the possibility of the United Nations serving as supervisory body under the future protocol and the relationship between the terms of the future protocol and the rights and obligations of States under the legal regime applicable to outer space.

In response to the group's 2003 recommendation [YUN 2004, p. 641], endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 59/116 [ibid., p. 633], an open-ended ad hoc working group was established to continue consideration of the appropriateness of the United Nations serving as supervisory authority, in the period between its Subcommittee's 2004 and 2005 sessions. The ad hoc working group's final report [A/AC.105/C.2/L.256] was appended to that of the Subcommittee's, as well as a draft resolution on the subject submitted by Canada, the Czech Republic, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden and the United States for possible future consideration and adoption by the Assembly. The Subcommittee reported that consensus was not reached on the question of the appropriateness of the United Nations serving as supervisory authority.

The Subcommittee also reconvened its working group on the definition and delimitation of outer space, which considered an analytical summary of the replies to a questionnaire on possible legal issues with regard to aerospace objects [A/AC.105/C.2/L.249/Add.1] and on the preferences of Member States in that regard [A/AC.105/849]. The working group agreed to: continue to invite Member States to reply to the questionnaire and submit their preferences regarding those replies, as well as proposals on a methodology for reviewing them, with a view to developing an acceptable common understanding regarding the definition and delimitation of outer space, along with information on national legislation or practices relating to the subject. The working group recommended that the Committee on Outer Space invite the Subcommittee to prepare a report on the technical characteristics of aerospace objects in the light of the current level of technological advancement and possible developments in the foreseeable future.

Also, in accordance with Assembly resolution 59/116, the Subcommittee established, in April, a working group on the practice of States and international organizations in registering space objects. The working group had before it a Secretariat background paper on the subject [A/AC.105/C.2/L.255 & Corr.1, 2] and a conference room paper containing statistical information on the number of space objects launched and registered or unregistered between 1957 and 2004.

The working group encouraged States parties to the 1974 Convention on Registration of Objects

Launched into Outer Space (the Registration Convention), contained in Assembly resolution 3235(XXIX) [YUN 1974, p. 63], to provide information to the Secretary-General in accordance with the Convention and establish a national registry and inform the Secretary-General accordingly. UN Member States that had not yet done so were encouraged to become party to the Convention and to furnish, until such time, information in accordance with Assembly resolution 1721 B (XVI) [YUN 1961, p. 35]. States should study the background paper and submit information and views on the issues of harmonization of practices (administrative and practical), non-registration of space objects, and practice with regard to the transfer of ownership of space objects in orbit and registration/non-registration of "foreign" space objects. The working group also agreed that international intergovernmental organizations should again be invited to submit information on their practices in registering space objects and the Secretariat should prepare a list of all States that had launched objects into outer space.

To facilitate its consideration of the benefits of being party to the Registration Convention, the working group agreed that the Secretariat should prepare a paper on the subject, based on the indicative list of benefits to, and rights and obligations of, parties to the five UN treaties on outer space [YUN 2001, p. 571], and compile relevant elements from the proceedings of the UN workshops on space law.

The Subcommittee agreed that it would be premature for the working group on the status and application of the five UN treaties on outer space, to meet during the current session, as Member States and international organizations needed time to respond to the letters sent to them concerning those treaties and to the Assembly's recommendation in resolution 59/115 [YUN 2004, p. 642] on the voluntary submission by Member States of information on their current practices regarding on-orbit transfer of ownership of space objects. It agreed to reconvene the working group in 2006. The Subcommittee also agreed that Member States should regularly provide the Office of Outer Space Affairs with information on their national space legislation and policy in order for the Office to maintain an up-to-date database on that subject.

The Subcommittee also considered a Secretariat note [A/AC.105/C.2/L.254 & Corr.1 & Add.1] and a conference room paper containing information on activities related to space law received from five international organizations.

The Committee on Outer Space [A/60/20 & Corr.1] endorsed the recommendations of the Subcommittee and its working groups on the definition and delimitation of outer space and on the practice of States and international organizations in registering space objects.

Effects of atomic radiation

At its fifty-third session (Vienna, 26-30 September) [A/60/46], the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation continued the development of new documents on the sources and effects of ionizing radiation, last reviewed by the Committee in 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 642]. It held detailed technical discussions that resulted in clear instructions to the Secretariat on the content and form of future scientific annexes. It was envisaged that a report with scientific annexes would be submitted to the General Assembly for consideration in 2006, and additional annexes in 2007. The Committee reviewed advanced draft documents on the exposure of workers and the public to various sources of radiation; re-evaluated the risks from radon in homes and workplaces; reviewed the risk and effects of radiation on non-human biota; considerated new evidence for the mechanisms by which ionizing radiation could induce health effects; evaluated new epidemiological studies of radiation and cancer; reviewed evidence for diseases other than cancer that might be related to radiation exposure; and analysed the wide variability globally in medical radiation exposures and the health impact due to radiation from the 1986 Chernobyl accident [YUN 1986, p. 584], for which the Committee had established official collaboration with scientists in Belarus, the Russian Federation and Ukraine in 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 650], later known as the Chernobyl Forum. The Committee noted that the Forum's recent findings affirmed the scientific conclusions on the health consequences due to radiation from the accident, which the Committee had reported to the Assembly in 2000 [YUN 2000, p. 590], and expressed its readiness to continue to provide the scientific basis for a better understanding of those consequences. It called on Member States, UN system specialized agencies and other scientific international and national bodies to provide information for its reviews.

The need for the restoration of an adequate operating budget to allow the Committee to fulfil its mandate, most recently expressed in Assembly resolutions 58/88 [YUN 2003, p. 650] and 59/114 [YUN 2004, p. 643], remained a concern. Although increased funds had been provided for recruiting consultants, only partial restitution had occurred. The Committee anticipated that, pursuant to resolution 59/114, funding in the 2008-2009 biennium would be strengthened, and the United Nations Environment Programme would provide additional resources in 2006-2007 to allow for the effective implementation of the plans endorsed by the Assembly.

The Committee decided to hold its fifty-fourth session in Vienna from 29 May to 2 June 2006.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 December [meeting 62], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee [A/60/474], adopted resolution 60/98 without vote [agenda item 28].

Effects of atomic radiation

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 913(X) of 3 December 1955, by which it established the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation, and its subsequent resolutions on the subject, including resolution 59/114 of 10 December 2004, in which, inter alia, it requested the Scientific Committee to continue its work,

Taking note with appreciation of the work of the Scientific Committee,

Reaffirming the desirability of the Scientific Committee continuing its work,

Concerned about the potentially harmful effects on present and future generations resulting from the levels of radiation to which mankind and the environment are exposed,

Noting the views expressed by Member States at its sixtieth session with regard to the work of the Scientific Committee,

Noting with satisfaction that some Member States have expressed particular interest in becoming members of the Scientific Committee, and expressing its intention to consider the issue further at its next session,

Conscious of the continuing need to examine and compile information about atomic and ionizing radiation and to analyse its effects on mankind and the environment,

1. Commends the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation for the valuable contribution it has been making in the course of the past fifty years, since its inception, to wider knowledge and understanding of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation, and for fulfilling its original mandate with scientific authority and independence of judgement;

2. Reaffirms the decision to maintain the present functions and independent role of the Scientific Committee;

3. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue its work, including its important activities to increase knowledge of the levels, effects and risks of ionizing radiation from all sources, and invites the Scientific Committee to submit its programme of work to the General Assembly;

4. Endorses the intentions and plans of the Scientific Committee for its future activities of scientific review and assessment on behalf of the General Assembly;

5. Requests the Scientific Committee to continue at its next session the review of the important problems in the field of ionizing radiation and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its sixty-first session;

6. Emphasizes the need for the Scientific Committee to hold regular sessions on an annual basis so that its report can reflect the latest developments and findings in the field of ionizing radiation and thereby provide updated information for dissemination among all States;

7. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance rendered to the Scientific Committee by Member States, the specialized agencies, the International Atomic Energy Agency and non-governmental organizations, and invites them to increase their cooperation in this field;

8. Invites the Scientific Committee to continue its consultations with scientists and experts from interested Member States in the process of preparing its future scientific reports, and requests the Secretariat to facilitate such consultations;

9. Welcomes, in this context, the readiness of Member States to provide the Scientific Committee with relevant information on the effects of ionizing radiation in affected areas, and invites the Scientific Committee to analyse and give due consideration to such information, particularly in the light of its own findings;

10. Invites Member States, the organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations concerned to provide further relevant data about doses, effects and risks from various sources of radiation, which would greatly help in the preparation of future reports of the Scientific Committee to the General Assembly;

11. Requests the United Nations Environment Programme to continue providing support for the effective conduct of the work of the Scientific Committee and for the dissemination of its findings to the General Assembly, the scientific community and the public;

12. Urges the United Nations Environment Programme to review and strengthen the present funding of the Scientific Committee, pursuant to paragraph 6 of resolution 59/114, so that the Committee can discharge the responsibilities and mandate entrusted to it by the General Assembly.

PART TWO

Human rights

Chapter I

Promotion of human rights

In 2005, human rights were promoted through initiatives undertaken by legally binding instruments and the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary body, the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights continued its coordination and implementation activities, and provided advisory services and assistance through its technical cooperation programme.

As a follow-up to the conclusion of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004), the World Programme for Human Rights Education, proclaimed in 2004 by the General Assembly, began on 1 January 2005. Subsequently, the Assembly adopted the revised plan of action for the Programme's first phase (2005-2007), which focused on primary and secondary school systems. Within the framework of his reform agenda to further improve the work of the United Nations and its common system, the Secretary-General proposed that the Commission on Human Rights be replaced with a smaller standing body to enable the Organization to take the cause of human rights as seriously as those of security and development. In September, the Assembly, acting on the Secretary-General's proposal, created the Human Rights Council and charged it with promoting universal respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, addressing violations and mainstreaming human rights within the UN system. In the same context, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights drew up a Plan of Action outlining a strategic vision for its future work. Other human rights monitoring bodies continued to promote civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, and took action to eliminate racial discrimination and discrimination against women, to protect the rights of children and migrant workers and their families, and to end the practice of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

The year also marked the midterm review of the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the Children of the World (2001-2010), proclaimed in 1998. The Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which led efforts to implement the Decade, recommended measures to maintain visibility between the midpoint and the completion of the Decade. In December, the Assembly reaffirmed that the objective of the Decade was to strengthen further the global movement for a culture of peace and invited Member States to observe 21 September yearly as the International Day of Peace, and as a day of global ceasefire and non-violence.

UN machinery

Commission on Human Rights

The Commission on Human Rights held its sixty-first session in Geneva from 14 March to 22 April [E/2005/23 & Corr.1], during which it adopted 85 resolutions and 18 decisions. It recommended 43 draft decisions and one draft resolution for adoption by the Economic and Social Council. The Council took note of the Commission's report on 25 and 27 July (decision 2005/296).

In response to a 2000 Commission decision on enhancing the effectiveness of its mechanisms [YUN 2000, p. 595], the Commission Chairperson convened a one-day informal meeting on 27 September to facilitate the exchange of information in preparation for the General Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session [E/CN.4/IM/2005/1]. In a September note [E/CN.4/IM/2005/2], the Secretariat summarized the post-sessional meetings and activities of the Commission's Expanded Bureau.

The Commission had before it a discussion paper on enhancing and strengthening the effectiveness of its mechanisms and responses thereto, prepared by Asian human rights experts. On 21 April [dec. 2005/113], the Commission requested the High Commissioner to transmit the discussion paper to the special procedures and to solicit their views; organize an informal consultation between the special procedures and States devoted to an exchange of views on the item at the annual meeting of those procedures in 2005; study the issues raised in the discussion paper and contributions thereto and identify the practical steps taken by her Office to address them; organize an open-ended seminar in 2005 as part of efforts to enhance and strengthen the effectiveness of the special procedures; and report in 2006 on the implementation of the Commission's current decision. On 25 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's requests to the High Commissioner (decision 2005/290).

In response to the Commission's request (see above), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) organized a seminar on strengthening the effectiveness of the special procedures (Geneva, 12-13 October) [E/CN.4/2006/116], during which participants agreed that those procedures should be an integral part of the proposed human rights council (see below). It was also agreed that the human rights system could be further enhanced by fostering a greater sense of collegiality among mandate holders.

Organization of work

Note by Secretariat. The Commission had before it a note by the Secretariat [E/CN.4/2005/9] containing statistical data on its 2004 session, which was intended to assist with the organization of the Commission's work in 2005.

On 14 March [dec. 2005/101], the Commission invited special representatives, special rapporteurs, chairpersons and chairpersons/rapporteurs of various working groups and experts to participate in its meetings.

On 21 April [dec. 2005/114], the Commission decided that the first meeting of its sixty-second (2006) session would take place in January to elect its officers and that the session would be held from 13 March to 21 April. The Economic and Social Council approved the Commission's decision on 25 July (decision 2005/291).

Also on 21 April [dec. 2005/115], the Commission recommended that the Council authorize six additional meetings for its sixty-second session and requested the Chairperson of that session to organize the session's work within the time normally allotted so that the additional meetings would be utilized only if necessary.

On 25 July, the Council approved that measure (decision 2005/292).

Thematic procedures

In January, the Secretary-General provided a list of thematic and country-specific procedures and other Commission mechanisms for 2005 [E/CN.4/2005/1/Add.1]. Pursuant to a 2004 Commission resolution [YUN 2004, p. 648], he submitted a March report [E/CN.4/2005/108] containing references to the conclusions and recommendations of thematic special rapporteurs and working groups. The twelfth meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission and of the advisory services programme was held in June [E/CN.4/2006/4] (see p. 732).

Proposal for a human rights council

Report of Secretary-General (March). In the main part of his March report entitled "In larger freedom: towards development, security and human rights for all" [A/59/2005] (see p. 67), submitted to the 2005 World Summit, the Secretary-General suggested that the Commission on Human Rights be replaced with a smaller human rights council, to enable the Organization to take the cause of human rights as seriously as those of security and development. While acknowledging that the Commission had provided the international community with a universal framework for addressing human rights issues and a unique opportunity for working with civil society, the Secretary-General noted that the Commission's capacity to perform its tasks had been undermined by its declining credibility and professionalism. States sought Commission membership not to help strengthen human rights but to protect themselves from criticism or to criticize others, the Secretary-General observed. Consequently, a credibility deficit had developed, casting a shadow on the reputation of the UN system as a whole. Against that background, the creation of a human rights council would accord human rights a more authoritative position, corresponding to the primacy of human rights in the UN Charter.

While addressing the Commission on 7 April [E/CN.4/2005/SR.37], the Secretary-General outlined a key peer review function for the proposed human rights council, which was to evaluate States' fulfilment of their human rights obligations.

Commission action. On 22 April [E/2005/23 (dec. 2005/116)], the Commission, by a recorded vote of 34 to 15, with 4 abstentions, decided to establish an open-ended working group, to be chaired by its current Chairperson, and to convene a five-day intersessional meeting in June to reflect on the recommendations contained in the Secretary-General's March report (see above), with a view to contributing to the intergovernmental deliberations in the General Assembly on the proposed reform of the United Nations. To that end, the Commission also decided to convene a one-day special session to adopt formally the outcome of the working group.

On 9 June, the Economic and Social Council, taking note of the Commission's decision, requested its Chairperson to organize during the Commission's 2005 session an open-ended informal consultation of up to two days to reflect on the human rights recommendations contained in the Secretary-General's report (see above), and to prepare a summary thereof by 15 June, to be transmitted to the Assembly through the Council (decision 2005/217).

Those consultations took place on 20 June [A/59/847-E/2005/73], during which participants considered the role, functions, status and composition of the proposed new human rights body and related issues, as well as treaty body reform and the work of OHCHR.

Report of Secretary-General (May). In a 23 May addendum to his March report [A/59/2005/Add.1], the Secretary-General further explained that the establishment of a human rights council would reflect in concrete terms the increasing importance of human rights in the collective work of the Organization. It would offer structural clarity, given that the Organization already had Councils dealing with two other main issues—security and development. The proposed council would be a standing body, able to meet regularly and at any time to address imminent crises and enable timely and in-depth consideration of human rights issues. Its members would be elected directly by the General Assembly—the United Nations principal legislative body—which should make them more accountable and give the council greater authority than the Commission, which was a subsidiary body of the Economic and Social Council. Furthermore, a relatively smaller membership would enable the proposed council to hold more focused debates and discussions. The Secretary-General suggested that Member States agree on a number of issues in advance of the 2005 World Summit (see p. 47), including the proposed council's mandate and function, composition and size and whether it should be a principal organ of the Organization or subsidiary body of the Assembly. Thereafter, Member States could agree to endorse, in principle, the establishment of a human rights council in the Summit's Final Declaration. Further work on how the council would fulfil its functions and other details would be addressed in the post-summit phase.

General Assembly action. The General Assembly, in resolution 60/1 of 16 September entitled the 2005 World Summit Outcome (see p. 48), resolved to create a Human Rights Council, which would be responsible for promoting universal respect for the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all. The Council should address human rights violations and make recommendations thereon, and should also promote effective coordination and mainstreaming of human rights within the UN system. The Assembly President was requested to conduct negotiations during the Assembly's sixtieth (2005) session, aimed at establishing the Council's mandate, modalities, functions, size, composition, membership, working method and procedures.

Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights

The Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights, at its fifty-seventh session (Geneva, 25 July–12 August) [E/CN.4/2006/2], adopted 32 resolutions and 15 decisions, and recommended 7 draft decisions for adoption by the Commission.

On 10 August [dec. 2005/107], the Subcommission, by a roll-call vote of 19 to none, with 2 abstentions, requested OHCHR to provide the Subcommission annually and before the beginning of its sessions with a list of countries that had proclaimed a state of emergency; States that had issued a standing invitation to the special procedures; States that had rejected a request by a special procedure; States that were members of the Commission, including those that had issued standing invitations; States on the Commission's agenda; States being considered under the Commission's agenda item 9 on the question of the violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in any part of the world that had denied access to the special procedures; and States where those procedures had indicated inadequate or non-existent follow-up to their recommendations.

On 11 August [dec. 2005/113], the Subcommission approved the composition of its working groups for 2006.

On the same date [dec. 2005/114], the Subcommission, following an exchange of views on issues relating to the proposed reform of the United Nations, including of its human rights mechanisms (see p. 712), asked its Chairperson to transmit to the Commission's Chairperson and to OHCHR a document, annexed to its current decision, on the role of an independent expert body within the context of the reform of the UN human rights machinery, and to request that it be distributed widely, particularly to Member States. The document, intended to contribute to the debate on reform initiatives, concluded that, for 58 years, the political standard- setting organs had felt the need for an independent expert body. That need had not disappeared and would increase in the future.

Working papers. The Subcommission had before it a working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2005/4] on the organization, content and outcome of its work under agenda item 2 on the question of human rights and fundamental freedoms, prepared by Françoise Hampson (United Kingdom), in response to a 2004 Subcommission request [YUN 2004, p. 648]. The paper set out the background to concerns regarding the manner in which the Subcommission addressed the item, examined the role and importance of the subject and made suggestions for improving its deliberations on the item, with a view to enabling the Subcommission to retain its mandate, contribute distinctively to the examination of human rights violations and avoid the duplication of work with other bodies.

The Subcommission also considered a June working paper [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2005/5] on its methods of work relating to reports, submitted by Emmanuel Decaux (France), in response to a 2004 Subcommission request [YUN 2004, p. 648]. The paper, which aimed to provide a framework to facilitate in-depth debate among Subcommission members, focused on the guidelines annexed to a 1999 Subcommission decision [YUN 1999, p. 569] and examined, among other things, the origins of studies considered by the Subcommission, the factors governing the selection of those studies, and their organization and scope. Reflecting on the Subcommission's 2003 [YUN 2003, p. 656] and 2004 [YUN 2004, p. 648] deliberations, it raised questions and made suggestions, with a view to stimulating joint discussion. The paper stated that the Subcommission should decide whether a working group needed to be set up, as had been done previously, given the uncertainty arising from ongoing negotiations at the High-level Plenary Meeting of the General Assembly (2005 World Summit).

Report of Subcommission Chairperson. The Commission had before it a report [E/CN.4/2005/90] of the Subcommission's 2004 Chairperson, Soli Jehangir Sorabjee (India), which summarized the Subcommission's work in 2004.

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2005/53], the Commission decided that the Subcommission should continue to debate country situations not being addressed by the Commission, but should not adopt country-specific resolutions, decisions or chairperson's statements. It further decided that the Subcommission could best assist it by providing it with independent expert studies and working papers; recommendations based on their studies; and studies, research and expert advice at the Commission's request. It recommended that the Subcommission should continue holding annual closed meetings with the Commission's Expanded Bureau; streamlining its agenda; holding closed meetings on its working rules, procedures and timetables; drafting as many of its resolutions as possible in closed session; and using a question-and-answer format and expert panel discussions. The Commission also recommended that the Subcommission improve its methods of work by focusing on its primary role as the Commission's advisory body; giving particular attention to studies recommended or confirmed by the Commission; respecting the highest standards of impartiality and expertise, and avoiding acts which would undermine the independence of its members; facilitating participation by non-governmental organizations (NGOs); considering studies and working papers by special rapporteurs and its members before sending them to the Commission; taking further steps to accomplish its work within a three-week session; proposing to the Commission ways to assist it in improving its work and vice versa; focusing on human rights questions relating to its mandate; avoiding duplication of its work with that of other bodies and mechanisms; and giving appropriate regard to legal opinions addressed to it. The Commission outlined criteria for States when nominating and electing Subcommission members and alternates.

OHCHR was asked to ensure that all initiatives of the Subcommission with financial implications for the UN budget, including from voluntary sources, were brought before the Commission for consideration. It should submit to the Commission in 2006 a comprehensive report on the administrative and programme budget of the Subcommission and recommendations for strengthening and enhancing its budgetary planning and management. The Secretary-General was asked to support the Subcommission by making available documentation in good time before each session in UN official languages and assisting it with requests for information from Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs. The Commission recommended that the Subcommission Chairperson or his/her representative attend the meeting of special rapporteurs/representatives, experts and chairpersons of working groups of the special procedures of the Commission (see p. 732) and the meeting of chairpersons of treaty bodies (see p. 723) to facilitate coordination between the Subcommission and other relevant UN bodies and procedures. The Chairperson of the Subcommission's 2005 session was asked to report in 2006 on how recent enhancements of the Subcommission's procedures had worked in practice.

Subcommission action. On 8 August [dec. 2005/104], the Subcommission requested its Chairperson to forward the summary records of its 2005 deliberations on agenda item 2 to the Commission, as requested in Commission resolution 2005/53 (see above).

Notes by Secretary-General. A note of the Secretary-General, with a later addendum [E/CN.4/2006/80 & Add.1], contained the nominations and biographical data of candidates for election to the 26-member Subcommission and the corresponding alternates, as the term of office of half the membership was due to expire.

A May note of the Secretary-General [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2005/32] reviewed developments between 1 June 2004 and 1 June 2005 in areas with which the Subcommission had been concerned.

Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights

Reports of High Commissioner. The UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Louise Arbour (Canada), in a 17 May report [E/2005/65] to the Economic and Social Council, addressed the human rights dimension of the Millennium Declaration [YUN 2000, p. 49], particularly regarding the link between human rights and the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) [ibid., p. 51]. Stressing that it was only in ensuring respect for human rights that MDGs could be achieved in a sustainable way, the High Commissioner identified a number of human rights concerns in that regard, concerning respect for the principle of non-discrimination, meaningful participation and adequate monitoring and accountability mechanisms. Regarding the implications of adopting a rights-based approach for specific goals, the report drew attention to the work undertaken by UN human rights mechanisms on rights-based approaches to development issues, including related guidelines published by OHCHR. It concluded that the current review of the Millennium Declaration should recognize States' human rights obligations to the strategies for achieving the MDGs.

The Council took note of the High Commissioner's report on 25 and 27 July (decision 2005/296).

By a 26 May report to the General Assembly [A/59/2005/Add.3], the Secretary-General transmitted the Plan of Action submitted by the High Commissioner, as called for in the main part of his March report to the 2005 World Summit (see p. 67). The Plan was drawn up against the backdrop of discussions on the future of the Commission, within the context of the Secretary-General's proposal for replacing it with an upgraded human rights council (see p. 712). As such, the Plan focused on the work of OHCHR and presented a strategic vision for the future direction of the Office, building on the Secretary-General's view that much more needed to be done by the international community to address current human rights threats and that OHCHR should be better resourced to play its central role in meeting that challenge. Given that combating human rights problems stemming from poverty, discrimination, conflict, impunity, democratic deficits and institutional weaknesses necessitated greater focus on the implementation of human rights norms and standards developed in the past 60 years, the Plan envisaged action to address to a range of "implementation gaps", including those relating to knowledge, capacity, commitment and security. Based on the premise that OHCHR's mission was to help close those gaps and thereby empower people to realize their rights, the Plan set forth action points in five areas relating to country engagement, leadership, partnership, the UN human rights bodies and management, staffing and planning. The Plan's implementation was intended to begin within the year.

The High Commissioner's report to the Assembly [A/60/36] further described the Plan of Action, highlighting its two dimensions: programming human rights work, in accordance with the Secretary-General's reform agenda; and optimizing the use of resources, capacities and strengths of the UN human rights programme. The report noted that the goals of the Plan—protection and empowerment—reflected a more holistic view of the activities of the human rights programme and a recognition that human rights protection and the empowerment of individual right holders and duty bearers were decisive for bridging the gap between human rights rhetoric and reality. The Plan set out a strategy to address key human rights challenges, indicating that OHCHR needed to assume responsibility for identifying those challenges and obstacles, shaping international dialogues around them and proposing common strategies for addressing them effectively. To that end, the Plan outlined a series of initiatives, including, among others, periodic UN system-wide consultations and a global campaign for human rights. Pointing out that the reform of the human rights machinery would be an essential step in ensuring the effective implementation of human rights norms and standards at the national level, the High Commissioner reaffirmed support for a new human rights body (Human Rights Council), as proposed by the Secretary-General (see p. 712) and subsequently established by the Assembly in resolution 60/1 (see p. 48). The report also highlighted various activities undertaken during the year by the High Commissioner and OHCHR to implement the Plan of Action, concluding, however, that its full realization and success depended on Member States' support. The High Commissioner urged Assembly members to join in future efforts to ensure a stronger and better-equipped OHCHR to meet the human rights needs of States, institutional partners, civil society and, most importantly, victims of human rights violations everywhere.

On 16 December, the General Assembly took note of a report of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee [A/60/509/Add.5] regarding the High Commissioner's report (decision 60/535).

Strengthening the function of OHCHR

Report of High Commissioner. In her first annual report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2005/12], the High Commissioner highlighted OHCHR activities designed to strengthen its capacity to promote and protect human rights at the country level, including through the provision of technical cooperation, support to national institutions, monitoring and protection work, and support to country rapporteurs and independent experts of the Commission. An important means of strengthening national systems of human rights protection was through cooperation with, and capacity-building for, UN country teams.

Composition of staff

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2004 Commission request [YUN 2004, p. 651], the High Commissioner submitted a report on the composition of OHCHR staff by nationality, grade and gender, as at 31 December 2004 [E/CN.4/2005/109].

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2005/72], by a recorded vote of 36 to 15, with 2 abstentions, the Commission reaffirmed that it was necessary to change the prevailing geographical distribution of OHCHR staff, and requested the Secretary-General to ensure that particular attention was paid to recruiting staff from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States, particularly from developing countries and countries with economies in transition. The High Commissioner was asked to ensure that the one-time post regularization of all core posts at headquarters and in the field resulted in a new and balanced geographical distribution of OHCHR staff; prepare an action plan aimed at reducing the current staff imbalance, indicating specific targets and deadlines to be achieved; avoid duplication of functions and work toward the goal of improved effectiveness and management; use the Junior Professional Officers programme as a tool for training national technical personnel in developing countries and countries with economies in transition; and report in 2006. The General Assembly and its appropriate subsidiary bodies were invited to give due consideration to the Commission's current resolution and to the 2004 report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) [YUN 2004, p. 650] on a management review of OHCHR and the recommendations contained therein. JIU was asked to assist the Commission in monitoring the implementation of its current resolution and to submit to the Assembly in 2006 and to the Commission in 2007 a follow-up review of the implementation of the decisions of the Commission and other UN intergovernmental bodies regarding the management, programmes and administration of OHCHR, particularly their impact on the recruitment policy and staff composition. Annexed to the Commission's resolution was tabular information on the geographical distribution of OHCHR's staff between 2001 and 2005.

On 25 July, the Economic and Social Council endorsed the Commission's request to the Assembly and its subsidiary bodies, and to JIU (decision 2005/274).

Annual Appeal 2005

During the year, OHCHR received $73.9 million in voluntary contributions from donors towards activities outlined in the 2005 Annual Appeal, representing an increase of $13.9 million over 2004. The UN regular budget provided $34.8 million in 2005.

Strengthening action to promote human rights

In response to General Assembly resolutions 56/153 [YUN 2001, p. 582], 57/203 [YUN 2002, p. 616], 58/168 [YUN 2003, p. 660] and 59/190 [YUN 2004, p. 652], the Secretary-General, in a July report [A/60/134], submitted the proposals of one Member State (Georgia) for strengthening UN action in human rights through the promotion of international cooperation based on the principles of non-selectivity, impartiality and objectivity.

On 16 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (decision 60/533).

International cooperation in the field of human rights

On 20 April [res. 2005/54], the Commission called on Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to continue constructive dialogue and consultations to enhance the understanding of human rights promotion and protection and fundamental freedoms. States and relevant UN human rights mechanisms and procedures were asked to continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation in ensuring human rights promotion and protection.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/60/509/Add.2], adopted resolution 60/156 without vote [agenda item 71 (b)].

Enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its commitment to promoting international cooperation, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Article 1, paragraph 3, as well as relevant provisions of the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted by the World Conference on Human Rights on 25 June 1993, for enhancing genuine cooperation among Member States in the field of human rights,

Recalling its adoption of the United Nations Millennium Declaration on 8 September 2000 and its resolution 59/187 of 20 December 2004, and taking note of Commission on Human Rights resolution 2005/54 of 20 April 2005 on the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recalling also the World Conference against Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance, held at Durban, South Africa, from 31 August to 8 September 2001, and its role in the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights,

Recognizing that the enhancement of international cooperation in the field of human rights is essential for the full achievement of the purposes of the United Nations, including the effective promotion and protection of all human rights,

Reaffirming that dialogue among religions, cultures and civilizations in the field of human rights could contribute greatly to the enhancement of international cooperation in this field,

Emphasizing the need for further progress in the promotion and encouragement of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation,

Underlining the fact that mutual understanding, dialogue, cooperation, transparency and confidence-building are important elements in all the activities for the promotion and protection of human rights,

Recalling the adoption of resolution 2000/22 of 18 August 2000, on the promotion of dialogue on human rights issues, by the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights at its fifty-second session,

1. Reaffirms that it is one of the purposes of the United Nations and the responsibility of all Member States to promote, protect and encourage respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms through, inter alia, international cooperation;

2. Recognizes that, in addition to their separate responsibilities to their individual societies, States have a collective responsibility to uphold the principles of human dignity, equality and equity at the global level;

3. Reaffirms that dialogue among cultures and civilizations facilitates the promotion of a culture of tolerance and respect for diversity, and welcomes in this regard the holding of conferences and meetings at the national, regional and international levels on dialogue among civilizations;

4. Urges all actors on the international scene to build an international order based on inclusion, justice, equality and equity, human dignity, mutual understanding and promotion of and respect for cultural diversity and universal human rights, and to reject all doctrines of exclusion based on racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

5. Reaffirms the importance of the enhancement of international cooperation for the promotion and protection of human rights and for the achievement of the objectives of the fight against racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance;

6. Considers that international cooperation in the field of human rights, in conformity with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, should make an effective and practical contribution to the urgent task of preventing violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

7. Reaffirms that the promotion, protection and full realization of all human rights and fundamental freedoms should be guided by the principles of universality, non-selectivity, objectivity and transparency, in a manner consistent with the purposes and principles set out in the Charter;

8. Calls upon Member States, specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations to continue to carry out a constructive dialogue and consultations for the enhancement of understanding and the promotion and protection of all human rights and fundamental freedoms, and encourages non-governmental organizations to contribute actively to this endeavour;

9. Invites States and relevant United Nations human rights mechanisms and procedures to continue to pay attention to the importance of mutual cooperation, understanding and dialogue in ensuring the promotion and protection of all human rights;

10. Decides to continue its consideration of the question at its sixty-first session.

Right to promote and protect human rights

Human rights defenders

Reports of Special Representative. In his annual report to the Commission [E/CN.4/2005/101], the Secretary-General's Special Representative on human rights defenders, Hina Jilani (Pakistan), described her activities, analysed trends in Governments' responses to her communications, examined the situation and role of human rights defenders in the context of international peace and security, including numerous allegations of violations of their rights, and made recommendations for recognizing and promoting their work. The Special Representative had sent 316 communications, of which 251 were sent jointly with other mechanisms, concerning over 330 cases of alleged violations against some 895 defenders and 165 NGOs. Defenders were targeted in their professional capacities as journalists, lawyers and doctors, with trade unionists, victims' relatives and civil servants also suffering hostility in their work. The Special Representative was concerned that violations were increasingly shifting from low-level targeting, such as intimidation and harassment, to more serious attacks that resulted to the death of some 47 defenders in the reporting period, with much of the atrocities allegedly committed by the police and security forces. The Special Representative urged States to respect the peaceful expression of demands for human rights; refrain from stigmatizing and discrediting the work of human rights defenders; review their legislation and ensure it conformed with the 1998 Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Declaration on human rights defenders) adopted by the General Assembly in resolution 53/144 [YUN 1998, p. 608]; guarantee a positive environment for the defence of internationally recognized human rights; and train the judiciary, law enforcement agencies and other branches of Government accordingly. Governments and other warring parties in situations of armed conflicts were urged to refrain from targeting defenders, while UN organs and agencies were asked to pay particular attention to their protection. A March addendum to the report [E/CN.4/2005/101/Add.1] summarized communications sent to and received from Governments.

The Special Representative visited Nigeria (3-12 May) to assess the situation and role of human rights defenders in the country [E/CN.4/2006/95/Add.2]. She described the country's vibrant civil society, where defenders addressed a vast array of issues relating to civil and political rights, including freedom of expression, illegal detention, summary executions, police abuse, women's rights and a variety of economic, social and cultural rights. The oppressive military regimes of the 1990s had systematically targeted defenders, many of whom suffered egregious violations, including extrajudicial killings, aimed at suppressing their activities and silencing them. The transition to civilian rule in 1999 brought hope for a new era of respect for fundamental rights and democracy, as the Government, in efforts to promote human rights, adopted laws, developed policies and strengthened relevant institutions, which helped establish a more constructive environment for defenders to work in. The Government's initiatives in that regard included the ratification of key international human rights instruments; increased support for the National Human Rights Commission mandated to collaborate with defenders; and the development of a national plan of action designed to serve as a framework for sustained and coordinated country-wide measures to promote and protect human rights. The transition to democracy, however, also brought new challenges, especially regarding the transformation of State structures and the political, economic and social conditions that affected the enjoyment of human rights. In particular, while defenders reported an overall improvement in their situation following the advent of civilian rule, they maintained that some federal laws continued to undermine their work and safety, including those relating to the freedom of association, of assembly and of information. The Government also remained intolerant of defenders working on issues perceived as sensitive and relating mostly to democratic governance, elections, corruption, economic, social and environmental rights, as well as women's rights.

The Special Representative, expressing concern at those remaining shortcomings, called on the Government to further strengthen the National Human Rights Commission by providing for its independence and autonomy and to establish directorates for citizen's rights and ensure that they were sufficiently funded to fulfil their mandate. She also recommended that the Government reconsider any plans for adopting regulations that infringed on the freedom of association of human rights organizations or that limited their independence; review the provisions of the Public Order Act to ensure respect for the freedom of assembly; expedite the process of adopting an adequate legislative framework for freedom of information; and take measures to address impunity and to adequately protect election monitors and journalists within the context of the elections planned for 2007.

In Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory (5-11 October) [E/CN.4/2006/95/Add.3], where defenders operated against a backdrop of 38 years of occupation and conflict, the Special Representative found that security-driven laws and practices had resulted in the repression of activities for defending human rights. The main concern of defenders in both Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territory was the violation of the rights of the Palestinian population under Israeli occupation, as they were being deprived of even the basic right to human dignity. Although the Israeli Government generally respected the rights of Israeli defenders and did not seem to restrain their activities within Israel, the same defenders faced difficulties in promoting and protecting the rights of minorities, including the Arab and Palestinian communities in Israel and in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. In that regard, violations by Israeli authorities against defenders included, among other things, unlawful killings, harassment or threats to physical integrity; administrative detention and ill-treatment; restrictions on the freedom of movement; denial of humanitarian access; infringements on the right to freedom of assembly and to protest; and settler violence. The Special Representative was particularly concerned that, in the wake of Israel's unilateral withdrawal from the Gaza Strip (see p. 535), defenders in Gaza might become more vulnerable to obstruction and risks, owing to their isolation from other parts of the Palestinian territory and the outside world. The difficulties facing defenders were compounded by the failure of the Palestinian authority itself to respect human rights and the rule of law in areas under its control. Consequently, the security of defenders, particularly those who exposed violations by security agents, was affected by lawlessness and impunity for human rights abusers. Affirming that resistance to the occupation was a legitimate right of the Palestinian people, the Special Representative recommended that Israel end the administrative detention of defenders and allow peaceful activities in defence of human rights to be conducted free of fear and risk. She further recommended that the Palestinian Authority respect the rule of law, ensure that the fundamental rights and freedoms of the Palestinian population were fully restored and protected in areas under its control, end impunity for human rights violations and investigate complaints against officials, who threatened defenders. The Special Representative asked the United Nations to prioritize support for defenders and to adopt measures for their protection, suggesting that the Organization's international monitoring and reporting mechanisms and those documenting violations with the objective of compensating victims be given a wider mandate to help protect them. The United Nations also needed to take concrete action, in accordance with its Charter, to enforce compliance with international law in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.

In Brazil (5-21 December) [E/CN.4/2006/95/Add.4], the Special Representative acknowledged the existence, despite difficult circumstances, of a vibrant human rights movement and examined the situation of defenders concerned with the rights of landless rural workers, peasants, indigenous communities, people of African descent and other minorities. She highlighted positive efforts by the Government to ensure that defenders operated unimpeded and in safety, noting that the Government respected defenders' work and had adopted policies and initiatives to facilitate the implementation of a legal framework for human rights protection. Despite those initiatives, serious concerns persisted, owing to a wide gap between policy declaration and implementation and the creation of mechanisms and their effectiveness. Of particular concern, were reports of violent incidents and threats that hampered defenders' security and compelled many of them to flee their homes for long periods, perpetuating distrust and lack of faith in existing human rights mechanisms and initiatives. In their efforts to expose human rights violations and end impunity for the perpetrators, defenders suffered numerous assassination attempts, killings and threats by "extermination groups" linked to security forces, unfair and malicious prosecution, and numerous other crimes. The Special Representative believed that more uniformity of commitment to the implementation of human rights policies by federal and states authorities could mitigate those concerns and highlighted the need for the legislature to become more sensitive to human rights issues and assign more priority to protecting activities for defending them. The Government needed to adopt more comprehensive strategies for protecting defenders and ending impunity for violations against them. There was also a need for the State to be more proactive in addressing social conflict and legitimizing defenders' intervention on behalf of local movements. It was the State's responsibility to ensure that defenders were not isolated in that struggle for social justice.

A September note of the Secretary-General [A/60/339] transmitted the Special Representative's annual report, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 59/192 [YUN 2004, p. 657] and Commission resolution 2005/67 (see p. 720). The Special Representative described the contribution of human rights defenders to the efforts of UN system bodies, particularly the Security Council and the Commission, to preserve and restore international peace and security. She determined that defenders had been mostly active regarding early warning about threats and challenges, human rights preservation in situations of armed conflict and in addressing human rights issues in peacebuilding operations. Defenders provided early warning of emerging problems, including gross human rights violations, and helped prevent their deterioration. Where peace and security had already collapsed, they protected the civilians affected and their constant monitoring helped expose deviations from international human rights and humanitarian law by parties to conflicts, allowing the international community to take action. Defenders also contributed significantly to post-conflict peacebuilding by helping to strengthen the rule of law in the countries concerned, addressing the human rights factors that caused the conflict and supporting the establishment of democratic principles. Case studies illustrating such efforts by defenders included the armed conflicts in the Sudan (particularly in the Darfur region), and in Nepal and Guatemala, where they helped alert the Security Council and the Commission to the violations against civilians and the need to take action. Despite their fundamental role, and sometimes because of it, defenders were themselves victims of killings, disappearances, torture, arbitrary arrest and detention, harassment and intimidation. The Special Representative recommended that the Security Council and the Commission accord greater attention to protecting defenders. Noting that both the Council and the Commission had expressed interest in developing early warning mechanisms to alert them to emerging peace and human rights problems, the Special Representative stated that defenders, through their work, already served as such a mechanism. Pointing out that previous failure by both bodies to respond sufficiently early to defenders' warnings had caused peace and human rights concerns to deteriorate, the Special Representative recommended that the Security Council and the Commission react more expeditiously to information from defenders on evolving issues and consider how such information could reach them in a timely manner. She further recommended that the essential role of defenders be recognized within the context of a reformed Commission on Human Rights (Human Rights Council) (see p. 712), to which they should be given adequate access to report on relevant issues and have those reports be duly considered. Other recommendations on the need to protect defenders and to facilitate their work were addressed to States, the UN Secretariat and specialized agencies.

On 16 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's note (decision 60/533).

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2005/67], the Commission, condemning all human rights violations committed against persons promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms, called on States to protect human rights defenders and asked the Special Representative to report on her activities to the General Assembly and to the Commission. The Secretary-General and concerned UN agencies and organizations were requested to assist her, while OHCHR was asked to draw the attention of UN bodies to her reports.

Communication. On 24 March [E/CN.4/2005/G/25], Turkey transmitted its observations on the Special Representative's report on her visit to the country. While pointing to encouraging findings in the report, it disagreed with references to the activities of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), which it alleged was a terrorist organization. As such, Turkey's struggle against that organization should not have been portrayed as an armed conflict but as a "fight against terrorism". It was also unfair that a new law it had adopted to improve the conditions under which human rights defenders operated in the country were not well covered in the Special Representative's report. Furthermore, a majority of the recommendations contained in the report had been implemented well before the Special Representative's visit.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/60/509/Add.2], adopted resolution 60/161 without vote [agenda item 71 (b)].

Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 53/144 of 9 December 1998, by which it adopted by consensus the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms annexed to that resolution, and reiterating the importance of the Declaration and its wide dissemination,

Recalling also all previous resolutions on this subject, in particular its resolution 59/192 of 20 December 2004 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2005/67 of 20 April 2005,

Noting with deep concern that, in many countries, persons and organizations engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms are facing threats, harassment and insecurity as a result of those activities,

Gravely concerned by the continuing high level of human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world and by the fact that, in a number of countries in all regions of the world, impunity for threats, attacks and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders persists and that this has a negative impact on their work and safety,

Recalling that human rights defenders are entitled to equal protection of the law, and deeply concerned about the increase in new restrictive legislation regulating the creation and operation of non-governmental organizations and any abuse of civil or criminal proceedings against them because of their activities for the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Concerned by the considerable number of communications received by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders that, together with the reports submitted by some of the special procedure mechanisms, indicate the serious nature of the risks faced by human rights defenders, including women human rights defenders,

Emphasizing the important role that individuals, non-governmental organizations and groups play in the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including in combating impunity, promoting access to justice, information and public participation in decision-making and promoting, strengthening and preserving democracy,

Recognizing the substantial role that human rights defenders can play in supporting peace through dialogue, openness, participation and justice, including by monitoring and reporting on human rights,

Recalling that, in accordance with article 4 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, certain rights are recognized as non-derogable in any circumstances and that any measures derogating from other provisions of the Covenant must be in accordance with that article in all cases, and underlining the exceptional and temporary nature of any such derogations, as stated in General Comment No. 29, on states of emergency, adopted by the Human Rights Committee on 24 July 2001,

Gravely concerned that, in some instances, national security and counter-terrorism legislation and other measures have been misused to target human rights defenders or have hindered their work and safety in a manner contrary to international law,

Welcoming the significant work conducted by the Special Representative, and encouraging strengthened cooperation between the Special Representative and other special procedures of the Commission on Human Rights as well as other relevant United Nations bodies, offices, departments and specialized agencies and personnel, both at headquarters and at the country level,

Welcoming also regional initiatives for the promotion and protection of human rights and the cooperation between international and regional mechanisms for the protection of human rights defenders, and encouraging further development in this regard,

Welcoming further the steps taken by some States towards adopting national policies or legislation for the protection of human rights defenders,

Recalling that the primary responsibility for promoting and protecting human rights rests with the State, and reaffirming that national legislation consistent with the Charter of the United Nations and other international obligations of the State in the field of human rights and fundamental freedoms is the juridical framework within which human rights defenders conduct their activities, and noting with deep concern that the activities of some non-State actors pose a major threat to the security of human rights defenders,

Emphasizing the need for strong and effective measures for the protection of human rights defenders,

1. Calls upon all States to promote and give full effect to the Declaration on the Right and Responsibility of Individuals, Groups and Organs of Society to Promote and Protect Universally Recognized Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, including by taking, as appropriate, practical steps to that end;

2. Welcomes the reports of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General on the situation of human rights defenders and her contribution to the effective promotion of the Declaration and the improvement of the protection of human rights defenders worldwide;

3. Condemns all human rights violations committed against persons engaged in promoting and defending human rights and fundamental freedoms around the world, and urges States to take all appropriate action, consistent with the Declaration and all other relevant human rights instruments, to eliminate such human rights violations;

4. Calls upon all States to take all necessary measures to ensure the protection of human rights defenders, at both the local and the national levels, including in times of conflict and peacebuilding;

5. Also calls upon all States to ensure, protect and respect the freedom of expression and association of human rights defenders and, where registration is required, to facilitate registration, including through the establishment of effective and transparent criteria and non-discriminatory, expeditious and inexpensive procedures in accordance with national legislation;

6. Urges States to ensure that any measures to combat terrorism and preserve national security comply with their obligations under international law, in particular under international human rights law, and do not hinder the work and safety of human rights defenders;

7. Also urges States to take appropriate measures to address the question of impunity for attacks, threats and acts of intimidation against human rights defenders and their relatives, including by ensuring that complaints from human rights defenders are promptly investigated and addressed in a transparent, independent and accountable manner;

8. Urges all States to cooperate with and assist the Special Representative in the performance of her tasks and to furnish, upon request, all information for the fulfilment of her mandate;

9. Calls upon States to give serious consideration to responding favourably to the requests of the Special Representative to visit their countries, and urges them to enter into a constructive dialogue with the Special Representative with respect to the follow-up to and implementation of her recommendations so as to enable her to fulfil her mandate even more effectively;

10. Urges those States that have not yet responded to the communications transmitted to them to do so without delay and to investigate expeditiously urgent appeals and allegations brought to their attention by the Special Representative;

11. Invites States to translate the Declaration into national languages and to take measures to improve its dissemination;

12. Encourages States to promote awareness and training in regard to the Declaration in order to enable officials, agencies, authorities and the judiciary to observe the provisions of the Declaration and thus to promote better understanding and respect for human rights defenders;

13. Invites relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, within their respective mandates and working in cooperation with States, to give due consideration to the Declaration and to the reports of the Special Representative, and in this context requests the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to draw the attention of all relevant United Nations bodies, including at the country level, to the reports of the Special Representative;

14. Requests that the Office of the High Commissioner as well as other relevant United Nations bodies, offices, departments and specialized agencies consider ways in which they can assist States to strengthen the role and security of human rights defenders, including in conflict situations and peacebuilding;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Representative with human, material and financial resources in order to enable her to continue to carry out her mandate effectively, including through country visits;

16. Requests all concerned United Nations agencies and organizations, within their mandates, to provide all possible assistance and support to the Special Representative in the implementation of her programme of activities;

17. Requests the Special Representative to continue to report annually on her activities to the General Assembly and to the Commission on Human Rights in accordance with her mandate;

18. Decides to consider the question at its sixty-second session under the item entitled "Human rights questions".

Human rights and human responsibilities

Report of High Commissioner. In response to a 2004 Commission request [YUN 2004, p. 658], the High Commissioner submitted a February report [E/CN.4/2005/99] containing the views of 27 Member States, two intergovernmental organizations and one NGO on the pre-draft declaration on human social responsibilities.

Commission action. On 20 April [dec. 2005/111], by a recorded vote of 26 to 25, with 1 abstention, the Commission asked Miguel Alfonso Martínez (Cuba) to prepare, without financial implications and for submission in 2006, a new version of his 2003 report on human responsibilities [E/CN.4/2003/105, annex 1], taking into account the comments made by Member States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs.

Other aspects

Good governance

Commission action. On 20 April [res. 2005/68], the Commission, welcoming the report on the 2004 seminar on good governance practices for the promotion of human rights [YUN 2004, p. 658], requested the High Commissioner to ensure that relevant UN agencies and other bodies with governance programmes were aware of the seminar's outcome and to encourage them to examine whether their approaches to good governance promoted human rights. The High Commissioner was further asked to publish for consultation by States a selection of practices arising from the seminar, and to convene another seminar in 2006 on the role of anti-corruption measures at the national and international levels in good practices for promoting and protecting human rights.

Human rights instruments

General aspects

In 2005, seven UN human rights instruments were in force, whose implementation were monitored by expert bodies. The instruments and their treaty bodies were: the 1965 International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination [YUN 1965, p. 440, GA res. 2106 A (XX)] (Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination); the 1966 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocol thereto [YUN 1966, p. 423, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] and the Second Optional Protocol aiming at the abolition of the death penalty [YUN 1989, p. 484, GA res. 44/128] (Human Rights Committee); the 1966 International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights [YUN 1966, p. 419, GA res. 2200 A (XXI)] (Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights); the 1979 Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women [YUN 1979, p. 895, GA res. 54/4] (Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women); the 1984 Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Punishment [YUN 1984, p. 813, GA res. 39/46] and related 2002 Optional Protocol [YUN 2002, p. 631, GA res. 57/199] (Committee against Torture); the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child [YUN 1989, p. 560, GA res. 44/25] and Optional Protocols on the involvement of children in armed conflict and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography [YUN 2000, pp. 616 & 618, GA res. 54/263] (Committee on the Rights of the Child); and the 1990 International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families [YUN 1990, p. 594, GA res. 45/158] (Committee on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Migrants and Their Families).

Interim report of Special Rapporteur. In a June interim report [E/CN.4/Sub.2/2005/8] submitted in response to a 2004 Commission request [YUN 2004, p. 659], the Special Rapporteur on the study of the universal implementation of international human rights treaties, Emmanuel Decaux

(France), provided a brief overview of the current situation and updated information contained in his previous report [ibid.]. The current report, which focused on developing the first set of working hypotheses proposed by the Special Rapporteur in 2004 [ibid.], reviewed UN annual initiatives to encourage universal participation in relevant treaties, discussed good practice in that context and suggested measures to revive a movement towards universal ratification of international human rights instruments. The Special Rapporteur was expected to submit a final report on the study in 2006, as requested by the Commission [ibid.].

Subcommission action. On 8 August [res. 2005/4], the Subcommission asked the Secretary-General to continue to assist the Special Rapporteur, who would submit a final report in 2006.

Human rights treaty body system

Meeting of chairpersons. A May note by the Secretary-General [HRI/MC/2005/1 & Corr.1] contained the provisional agenda and annotations for the seventeenth meeting of chairpersons of human rights treaty bodies (see below). In an August note [A/60/278], he submitted the report of the meeting (Geneva, 23 and 24 June). The meeting considered the follow-up recommendations of the sixteenth meeting [YUN 2004, p. 660] and reviewed developments relating to the work of the treaty bodies. In that context, the chairpersons considered the issues of strengthening support to the treaty bodies, enhancing their effectiveness and streamlining their reporting procedures and requirements.

The meeting had before it Secretariat reports providing an overview of the current working methods of treaty bodies relating to the State party reporting process [HRI/MC/2005/4]; a comparative analysis of reservations [HRI/MC/2005/5]; a report [HRI/MC/2005/6 & Add.1] on the discussions of the treaty bodies in the past year regarding provisional guidelines for reporting with an expanded core document, prepared by the Rapporteur of the Third Inter-Committee Meeting, Kamel Filali (Algeria); and the revised draft of the guidelines [HRI/MC/2005/3], prepared by the Secretariat. Also held, was the seventh joint meeting of treaty body chairpersons, special rapporteurs/representatives, independent experts and chairpersons of working groups of the Commission's special procedures. The meeting adopted recommendations relating to interaction with the Commission; technical cooperation; cooperation with special procedures; statistical information relating to human rights; and meetings with mandate-holders. The chairpersons requested the Secretariat to organize consultations between the treaty bodies, States parties, OHCHR, UN entities and other stakeholders to discuss the Secretary-General's proposals for reforming the UN human rights system, as contained in his report to the 2005 World Summit (see p. 67), as well as the related proposals contained in the Plan of Action presented by the High Commissioner for the reform of the treaty body system (see p. 715). Annexed to the report was the report of the Fourth Inter-Committee Meeting of human rights treaty bodies (Geneva, 20-22 June), which adopted recommendations on reporting guidelines, reservations, technical terminology, NGO participation and engagement with national human rights institutions.

On 16 December, the General Assembly took note of the report of the chairpersons' meeting (decision 60/533).

Report of Secretary-General. An August report of the Secretary-General [A/60/278] described efforts to implement General Assembly resolution 57/202 [YUN 2002, p. 623] on the effective implementation of international human rights instruments, including reporting obligations under those instruments. The report focused on the outcomes of the chairpersons' meetings (see above) and on the work of treaty bodies relating to cooperation and harmonization of work.

Equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies

Report of High Commissioner. In response to General Assembly resolution 59/181 [YUN 2004, p. 661], the High Commissioner submitted a September report [A/60/351 & Corr.1] on the equitable geographical distribution in the membership of the human rights treaty bodies. The report provided information on the system of electing treaty body members, analysed the past and current membership of each treaty body by geographical region and concluded that the election modalities was a matter for the States parties.

On 16 December, the General Assembly took note of the High Commissioner's report (decision 60/533).

Reservations to human rights treaties

Report of Secretariat. As requested by the Third Inter-Committee Meeting of human rights treaty bodies [YUN 2004, p. 660], a June Secretariat report [HRI/MC/2005/5] provided information on the practice of human rights treaty bodies regarding reservations to the treaties they monitored. The report described the provisions in relevant treaties relating to reservations and those in the 1969 Convention on the Law of Treaties [YUN 1969, p. 784] and also surveyed the treaty bodies' approaches to reservations and the response of other UN bodies to the issue.

The report found that, although the issue of reservations had been of significant concern to treaty bodies, the way in which they expressed that concern and the remedial measures they recommended varied. While they had all been motivated to restrict the scope of existing reservations and had encouraged their removal by States parties, they offered little guidance on the criteria by which a reservation should be determined impermissible and in breach of a treaty's object and purpose and on the consequences of such a determination. As such, there was a need for treaty bodies to take a more harmonized approach to the issue, which might be guided by a joint general comment. Annexed to the report were an outline of the practice of the treaty bodies with respect to reservations, including concluding observations/comments and miscellaneous issues, as well as tables of reservations, objections and withdrawals.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December [meeting 64], the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee [A/60/509/Add.1], adopted resolution 60/149 without vote [agenda item 71 (a)].

International Covenants on Human Rights

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 58/165 of 22 December 2003 and Commission on Human Rights resolution 2004/69 of 21 April 2004,

Mindful that the International Covenants on Human Rights constitute the first all-embracing and legally binding international treaties in the field of human rights and, together with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, form the core of the International Bill of Human Rights,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the status of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,

Recalling the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and reaffirming that all human rights and fundamental freedoms are universal, indivisible, interdependent and interrelated and that the promotion and protection of one category of rights should never exempt or excuse States from the promotion and protection of the other rights,

Recognizing the important role of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in examining the progress made by States parties in fulfilling the obligations undertaken in the International Covenants on Human Rights and the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and in providing recommendations to States parties on their implementation,

Considering that the effective functioning of the Human Rights Committee and the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights is indispensable for the full and effective implementation of the International Covenants on Human Rights,

Recognizing the importance of regional human rights instruments and monitoring mechanisms in complementing the universal system of promotion and protection of human rights,

1. Reaffirms the importance of the International Covenants on Human Rights as major components of international efforts to promote universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms;

2. Strongly appeals to all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and to consider as a matter of priority acceding to the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and making the declaration provided for in article 41 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and, while acknowledging that additional States have recently become parties to these instruments, requests the Secretary-General to continue to support the annual treaty event to this end;

3. Invites the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights to intensify systematic efforts to encourage States to become parties to the International Covenants on Human Rights and, through the programme of advisory services in the field of human rights, to assist such States, at their request, in ratifying or acceding to the Covenants and to the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights with a view to achieving universal adherence;

4. Calls for the strictest compliance by States parties with their obligations under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and, where applicable, the Optional Protocols to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights;

5. Emphasizes that States must ensure that any measure to combat terrorism complies with their obligations under relevant international law, including their obligations under the International Covenants on Human Rights, and welcomes the establishment by the Commission on Human Rights of the mandate of a Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism;
