ANNEX

United Nations Principles for Older Persons

To add life to the years that have been added to life

The General Assembly,

Appreciating the contribution that older persons make to their societies,

Recognizing that, in the Charter of the United Nations, the peoples of the United Nations declare, inter alia, their determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Noting the elaboration of those rights in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and other declarations to ensure the application of universal standards to particular groups,

In pursuance of the International Plan of Action on Ageing, adopted by the World Assembly on Ageing and endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 37/51 of 3 December 1982,

Appreciating the tremendous diversity in the situation of older persons, not only between countries but within countries and between individuals, which requires a variety of policy responses,

Aware that in all countries, individuals are reaching an advanced age in greater numbers and in better health than ever before,

Aware of the scientific research disproving many stereotypes about inevitable and irreversible declines with age,

Convinced that in a world characterized by an increasing number and proportion of older persons, opportunities must be provided for willing and capable older persons to participate in and contribute to the ongoing activities of society,

Mindful that the strains on family life in both developed and developing countries require support for those providing care to frail older persons,

Bearing in mind the standards already set by the International Plan of Action on Ageing and the conventions, recommendations and resolutions of the International Labour Organisation, the World Health Organization and other United Nations entities,

Encourages Governments to incorporate the following principles into their national programmes whenever possible:

Independence

1. Older persons should have access to adequate food, water, shelter, clothing and health care through the provision of income, family and community support and self-help.

2. Older persons should have the opportunity to work or to have access to other income-generating opportunities.

3. Older persons should be able to participate in determining when and at what pace withdrawal from the labour force takes place.

4. Older persons should have access to appropriate educational and training programmes.

5. Older persons should be able to live in environments that are safe and adaptable to personal preferences and changing capacities.

6. Older persons should be able to reside at home for as long as possible.

Participation

7. Older persons should remain integrated in society, participate actively in the formulation and implementation of policies that directly affect their well-being and share their knowledge and skills with younger generations.

8. Older persons should be able to seek and develop opportunities for service to the community and to serve as volunteers in positions appropriate to their interests and capabilities.

9. Older persons should be able to form movements or associations of older persons.

Care

10. Older persons should benefit from family and community care and protection in accordance with each society's system of cultural values.

11. Older persons should have access to health care to help them to maintain or regain the optimum level of physical, mental and emotional well-being and to prevent or delay the onset of illness.

12. Older persons should have access to social and legal services to enhance their autonomy, protection and care.

13. Older persons should be able to utilize appropriate levels of institutional care providing protection, rehabilitation and social and mental stimulation in a humane and secure environment.

14. Older persons should be able to enjoy human rights and fundamental freedoms when residing in any shelter, care or treatment facility, including full respect for their dignity, beliefs, needs and privacy and for the right to make decisions about their care and the quality of their lives.

Self-fulfilment

15. Older persons should be able to pursue opportunities for the full development of their potential.

16. Older persons should have access to the educational, cultural, spiritual and recreational resources of society.

Dignity

17. Older persons should be able to live in dignity and security and be free of exploitation and physical or mental abuse.

18. Older persons should be treated fairly regardless of age, gender, racial or ethnic background, disability or other status, and be valued independently of their economic contribution.

Chapter XV

Refugees and displaced persons

There was a deterioration in the overall refugee situation in 1991, particularly in the Persian Gulf, the Horn of Africa, South-West Asia and Europe. While progress was made in other areas, notably in Central America and South-East Asia, the world's refugee population remained at a staggering 17 million.

In 1991, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), with the support of the international community, continued to devise new approaches to the refugee problem and to seek durable solutions. During 1991, its fortieth anniversary, UNHCR charted a forward-looking strategy focusing on emergency preparedness, prevention and finding solutions to the totality of the refugee problem, from exodus and relief to return and reintegration.

In October, the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme considered, among other things, refugee protection, refugee women and children, Indo-Chinese refugees, repatriation of refugees to Cambodia and Central American refugees.

The Nansen Medal for 1991—awarded since 1954 in honour of Fridtjof Nansen, the first League of Nations High Commissioner for Refugees—was awarded posthumously to Paul Weiss (United Kingdom), for his contribution to refugee law, and to Libertine Amathila (Namibia), the first African woman to receive the distinction, for her long service to refugee children.

Sadako Ogata (Japan) assumed her functions as the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on 1 January 1991.

UNHCR programme and finances

Programme policy

Executive Committee action. At its forty-second session (Geneva, 7-11 October 1991), the Executive Committee of the UNHCR Programme(*) expressed concern over the lack of adequate international protection for various groups of refugees, encouraged States to intensify efforts to protect their rights and hoped that United Nations efforts in that regard would continue. It asked the High Commissioner to encourage repatriation of refugees and their safe integration in their countries of origin.

The Committee stressed the need to implement and monitor the effectiveness of UNHCR policy on refugee women.(2) It noted that the post of Senior Coordinator for Refugee Women, funded through donor funds, was scheduled to terminate on 1 July 1992, and urged the High Commissioner to continue to finance that position through regular resources. The Committee urged the High Commissioner to continue her efforts on behalf of refugee children and welcomed her decision to establish a new post of coordinator for refugee children. (For Economic and Social Council action on refugee and displaced women and children, see PART THREE, Chapter XIII.)

The Executive Committee urged States to assist the High Commissioner in ensuring an adequate and effective emergency preparedness and response capability and adopted conclusions and recommendations concerning the Comprehensive Plan of Action on Indo-Chinese Refugees (CPA), repatriation to Cambodia and the 1989 International Conference on Central American Refugees (CIREFCA), and took decisions on administrative and financial matters. On 6 February(3) and 28 June 1991,(4) the Executive Committee, at special sessions held at Geneva, took additional decisions on financial matters (see below).

UNHCR continued cooperating with other United Nations organizations, in particular with the World Food Programme (WFP) in providing food aid. Cooperation with development, humanitarian and disaster relief agencies, such as the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the World Health Organization (WHO), the International Labour Organisation and the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Coordinator (UNDRO), included immunization and health planning and care, supplementary feeding, basic education and vocational training, water supply and sanitation, household security, family planning and mother/child medical welfare and reafforestation. UNHCR continued to cooperate with WFP, UNDP, UNICEF, the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and financial institutions such as the World Bank in areas of emergency response to man-made and natural disasters, alleviation and eradication of poverty and addressing the needs of uprooted populations. It also cooperated with the Organization of African Unity (OAU), the International Organization for Migration (IOM), the Organization of American States (OAS), the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the Islamic Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development and the Commission of the European Community, as well as liberation movements and non-governmental organizations (NGOs).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July 1991, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1991/290, took note of the High Commissioner's report for 1990/91.(5)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted resolution 46/106 without vote.

Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees on the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner, as well as the report of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner on the work of its forty-second session, and taking note of the statement made by the High Commissioner on 7 November 1991,

Recalling its resolutions 45/140 A and B of 14 December 1990,

Reaffirming the purely humanitarian and non-political character of the activities of the Office of the High Commissioner, as well as the fundamental importance of the High Commissioner's international protection function and the need for States to cooperate with the High Commissioner in the exercise of this primary and essential responsibility,

Welcoming the High Commissioner's commitment to address refugee situations through a threefold strategy consisting of the enhancement of the emergency preparedness and response mechanisms of the Office of the High Commissioner, the concerted pursuit of the preferred durable solution of voluntary repatriation and the promotion of solutions through preventive measures,

Noting with satisfaction that one hundred and nine States are now parties to the 1951 Convention and/or the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees,

Welcoming the valuable support extended by Governments to the Office of the High Commissioner in the discharge of its humanitarian tasks,

Bearing in mind that the relationship between human rights and refugee flows merits further consideration,

Noting with concern that despite developments that offer hope for solutions to refugee problems, the number of refugees and displaced persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner has increased and their protection continues to be seriously jeopardized in many situations as a result of non-admission, expulsion, refoulement and unjustified detention, as well as other threats to their physical security, dignity and well-being, and lack of respect for fundamental human rights,

Welcoming the commitment of the Office of the High Commissioner to improving the situation of refugee women and children, who represent the majority of refugee populations and who, in many cases, are exposed to a variety of difficult situations affecting their physical and legal protection, as well as their psychological and material well-being,

Conscious of the link between international protection and resettlement as an instrument of protection and of the need for the international community to continue to provide adequate resettlement places for those refugees for whom no other durable solution is in sight,

Commending those States that, despite severe economic and development challenges of their own, continue to admit large numbers of refugees and displaced persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner into their territories, and emphasizing the need to share the burden of these States to the maximum extent possible through international assistance, including development-oriented assistance,

Commending the Office of the High Commissioner and its staff for the dedicated manner in which they discharge their responsibilities, and paying special tribute to those staff members who have lost their lives in the course of their duties,

1. Strongly reaffirms the fundamental nature of the function of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to provide international protection and the need for States to cooperate fully with the Office in fulfilling this function, in particular by acceding to and fully and effectively implementing the relevant international and regional refugee instruments;

2. Recognizes the need to keep issues related to refugees, asylum-seekers and other migratory flows firmly on the international political agenda, especially the question of solution-oriented approaches to deal with today's refugee problems;

3. Recognizes also that the current size and complexity of the world refugee situation require vigorous promotion of existing protection principles, as well as full and open debate on new directions for protection and on further development of the law in this area, paying particular attention to the responsibilities of States to resolve refugee situations and, especially with respect to countries of origin, to address and try to eradicate causes of refugee flows;

4. Culls upon all States to refrain from taking measures that jeopardize the institution of asylum, in particular by returning or expelling refugees and asylum-seekers contrary to the fundamental prohibitions against these practices, and urges States to ensure fair and efficient determination procedures and to continue to give humane treatment and to grant asylum to refugees;

5. Condemns all violations of the rights and safety of refugees and asylum-seekers, in particular those perpetrated by military or armed attacks against refugee camps and settlements and forced recruitment into armed forces;

6. Recognizes that growing misuse of asylum procedures could compromise the institution of asylum and the maintenance of fair and efficient refugee status determination procedures, and endorses the general conclusion on international protection, in particular in relation to refugee status determination, adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees at its forty-second session;

7. Endorses the conclusion on refugee children adopted by the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner at its forty-second session, including the decision to establish a new post of coordinator for refugee children within the Office of the High Commissioner;

8. Commends the High Commissioner on the Guidelines on the Protection of Refugee Women, which provide a practical means of ensuring the protection of refugee women, including through the delivery of appropriate assistance programmes, and calls upon States, relevant agencies of the United Nations system and other organizations, whether governmental, inter-governmental or non-governmental, to implement the Guidelines;

9. Stresses the overriding importance of attaining durable solutions to refugee problems and, in particular, the need to address in this process the root causes of refugee movements, and calls upon the High Commissioner actively to explore new options for preventive strategies that are consistent with protection principles, as well as ways in which State responsibility and burden-sharing mechanisms might be strengthened;

10. Underlines strongly State responsibility, particularly as it relates to the countries of origin, including addressing root causes, facilitating voluntary repatriation of refugees and the return, in accordance with international practice, of their nationals who are not refugees;

11. Urges all States and relevant organizations to support the Office of the High Commissioner in its efforts to search for durable solutions to the problem of refugees and displaced persons of concern to the Office, primarily through voluntary repatriation;

12. Acknowledges that at present there are important opportunities for resolving long-standing refugee situations and welcomes the intention of the High Commissioner to reinforce the efforts of the Office to encourage and promote voluntary repatriation of refugees and their safe reintegration in the countries of origin;

13. Recognizes the importance of pursuing resettlement as a last resort where no other durable solutions are available and the need for States to respond rapidly and with flexibility to evolving situations where resettlement is required to ensure the protection of the refugees concerned;

14. Welcomes the initiatives taken by the High Commissioner to enhance the capacity of the Office to respond to emergencies and, taking into account current deliberations on a United Nations system-wide response, encourages the High Commissioner to continue to work closely with other United Nations agencies, as well as other organizations, whether governmental, intergovernmental or non-governmental, to assure a coordinated and effective response to emergency humanitarian situations of a complex and protracted nature, and calls upon Governments to assist in implementing these initiatives;

15. Endorses the decision of the Executive Committee of the Programme of the High Commissioner at its forty-second session concerning inter-agency cooperation and calls upon the High Commissioner to sustain her efforts in this area so that the multifaceted needs of refugees, returnees, displaced persons and their host communities might be better addressed, in particular through development initiatives by relevant United Nations agencies and programmes;

16. Expresses deep appreciation & for the valuable material and humanitarian response of receiving countries, in particular those developing countries that, despite limited resources, continue to admit large numbers of refugees and asylum-seekers on a permanent or temporary basis;

17. Urges the international community, including non-governmental organizations, in accordance with the principle of international solidarity and in the spirit of burden-sharing, to continue to assist the countries referred to in paragraph 16 above and the High Commissioner in order to enable them to cope with the additional burden that the care for refugees and asylum-seekers represents;

18. Calls upon all Governments and other donors to contribute to the High Commissioner's programmes and, taking into account the need to achieve greater burden-sharing among donors, to assist the High Commissioner in securing additional and timely income from traditional governmental sources, other Governments and the private sector in order to ensure that the needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons of concern to the Office of the High Commissioner are met.

Financial and administrative questions

UNHCR total voluntary funds expenditure in 1991 amounted to $862.5 million which, compared to 1990, represented an increase of $318.5 million. Some $370 million was spent on General Programmes and $492.5 million under Special Programmes and other trust funds. As at 31 May 1991, total contributions, paid or pledged, amounted to $515.2 million.

Special appeals were made in 1991 to respond to new situations such as the massive exodus of over 1 million Iraqi nationals into neighbouring countries and their subsequent return to northern Iraq, the emergency in the Horn of Africa, CPA, the repatriation of South African refugees and exiles, the preparatory phase of the voluntary repatriation to Cambodia and the humanitarian assistance programme in Yugoslavia.

The Executive Committee in 1990 had approved a budget for 1991 General Programmes of $345.6 million. Revised estimates for 1991 General Programmes were submitted to special sessions of the Executive Committee in February(3) and June 1991.(4) In February, the Executive Committee approved an increase in the General Programmes target by $10 million to accommodate an increase in the Emergency Fund to $20 million. The budget figure for General Programmes of $355.6 million was subsequently increased by the Executive Committee to $379.1 million on 28 June 1991 to cover other needs, especially in Africa.

In October, the UNHCR Executive Committee approved the country and area programmes and the overall allocations for 1992 General Programmes amounting to $373.1 million (including $20 million for the Emergency Fund and a Programme Reserve of $32.1 million).

Accounts

1990 accounts

The audited financial statements on funds administered by UNHCR for the year ended 31 December 1990 showed a total expenditure of $544 million and total income of $668 million.(6)

In July 1991,(7) the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a synthesis of the main observations of the Board of Auditors on the audit of various United Nations funds; comments related to UNHCR project activities, improved facilities planning, and financial management and control systems.

Concurring with the Board's findings, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in October 1991,(8) recommended strengthening the management of cash resources in field offices, streamlining reporting procedures and planning adequately for storage facilities.

In October,(1) the UNHCR Executive Committee took note of the accounts and reports, and called on the High Commissioner to undertake a comprehensive review of reports to the Committee on UNHCR activities financed by voluntary funds, taking into account ACABQ's recommendations concerning simplification of reporting.

In December, the General Assembly, in resolution 46/183, accepted the financial report and the Board's audit opinions, endorsed ACABQ's recommendations and observations and requested the High Commissioner to take the required remedial action.

Subcommittee on

Administrative and Financial Matters

The Executive Committee's Subcommittee on Administrative and Financial Matters met in 1991 at Geneva on 3 May and 4 and 8 October. In May, the Subcommittee discussed human resources management, including staffing strategy for emergency preparedness; funding mechanisms; 1990 income and expenditure; 1991 programme requirements and funding for those programmes; evaluation activities; and the 1992-1993 United Nations regular budget.(9) The Subcommittee considered a broad range of issues in October including UNHCR evaluation; General Programmes targets for 1992; rationalized reporting; hosting countries; WFP/UNHCR cooperation; refugee women and children; evaluation activities; emergency response; audit report; status of contributions; fund-raising strategy; support costs; staffing; inter-agency cooperation; and public information.(10)

After taking note of a report on UNHCR's capacity to respond to refugee emergencies,(11) the Executive Committee requested the High Commissioner to keep the Subcommittee informed about the implementation of its decision on that subject.

Refugee assistance and protection

Assistance

During 1991,(1) UNHCR continued to cooperate with concerned Governments and the international community in efforts to meet the humanitarian needs of refugees throughout the world. In the absence of durable solutions, UNHCR was forced to maintain care and maintenance programmes.

The international community's response to the plight of refugees in 1991 had been unparalleled in the 40-year history of UNHCR; total extra-budgetary funds received under General and Special Programmes amounted to some $904 million. Obligations amounted to $862.5 million, of which General Programmes expenditure was $370 million and that of Special Programmes $492.5 million. Administrative expenditure, covered by the United Nations regular budget, amounted to a further $20.4 million. In terms of volume of activity and related expenditure, 1991 exceeded 1990 expenditure by almost 60 per cent. The total amount obligated from the Emergency Fund was more than $18.5 million, including $4 million for assistance to newly arrived Ethiopians in the Sudan, $2.9 million for persons from Yugoslavia in Hungary, $1.8 million for Ethiopian refugees in Djibouti, $1 million for Sudanese refugees in Ethiopia, $1.2 million for Ethiopian and Somali refugees in Kenya, $1.1 million for Burundi, Rwandese and Sudanese refugees in Zaire, $700,000 for Ethiopian and Somali refugees in Yemen and $1.05 million for displaced persons in Yugoslavia.

UNHCR continued to provide intermediate assistance in the form of care and maintenance, and $211.8 million was allocated for such assistance. Some $59.1 million was allocated in Ethiopia, and Guinea, Hong Kong, Kenya, Mexico, Pakistan, the Sudan and Thailand also received major care programmes, as did Malawi for its growing Mozambican refugee population.

The primary objective of UNHCR remained the pursuit of durable solutions through voluntary repatriation, local integration in a country of first asylum or resettlement in a third country. In 1991, some $222.1 million was obligated under General and Special Programmes to promote this objective. A total of $134.1 million was spent in 1991 on voluntary repatriation, with major programmes mounted in Ethiopia, Hong Kong, Nicaragua, Pakistan, the Sudan and Viet Nam. Expenditures for local settlement activities amounted to $70.2 million, with assistance for the establishment of rural settlement projects provided to China, Côte d'Ivoire, Ethiopia, Guinea, Mexico, Senegal, Uganda, Zaire and Zambia. South-East Asia remained the principal focus of resettlement operations, with new homes provided to 25,720 Indo-Chinese from the region facilitated under CPA. By 31 December, of the 49,220 persons belonging to the pre-cut-off date group of long-stayers, as defined by CPA, a total of 48,338 had been accepted and 46,500 had departed. During 1991, 119 of those resettled were rescued at sea. Some 3,525 refugees from the Middle East and South-West Asia were resettled as a result of conflict in those regions, including a few Afghans, Iranians and Iraqis. In 1991, UNHCR assistance activities in Africa totalled $274.5 million; in Latin America and the Caribbean, $38.7 million; in Europe and North America, $29.8 million; in Asia and Oceania, $133.9 million; and in South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, $282.7 million.

UNHCR promoted greater public awareness of the refugee problem by producing and distributing a variety of written and audio-visual materials. Three issues of the magazine Refugees were published in Japanese and German, four in Italian and six in English, French and Spanish. In 1991, over 300 events in more than 100 countries, including round-tables, seminars, television programmes, concerts, commemorative stamp issues, special publications and photo exhibits, were organized to commemorate UNHCR's fortieth anniversary.

Refugee aid and development assistance

In October, a refugee aid and development programme costing $10 million was prepared jointly by UNDP and UNHCR in Malawi to address environmental and development needs. Technical planning was completed for phase III of the income-generating project for refugee areas in Pakistan, a project executed by the World Bank. The IFAD/UNHCR South Khorasan Rangeland rehabilitation and refugee income-generating activities project in Iran began on a reduced scale, pending additional funding. In Central America, of the 59 projects presented by the seven countries (Belize, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua) of CIREFCA, 34 had received funding totalling $65 million.

In October also,(2) the Executive Committee encouraged the High Commissioner to continue advocating greater inter-agency cooperation and, with the UNDP Administrator, to undertake steps to bring to fruition joint development activities aimed at benefiting refugees, returnees, displaced persons and their host communities.

In May, the UNDP Administrator reported on UNDP's response to emergencies, refugees and displaced persons during the year.

On 25 June,(3) the UNDP Governing Council recommended that the Administrator continue cooperation with UNHCR, UNDRO and other United Nations organizations dealing with natural and other disasters. It requested him to assess the impact on the development process of countries hosting large refugee populations and displaced persons and integrating returnees, and, based on that assessment, to mobilize resources to assist the development process in relation to the scale of the disruption.

Also on 25 June,(4), the Council, in a decision concerning assistance to Djibouti, Ethiopia, Kenya, Somalia, the Sudan and Yemen, requested the Administrator, in cooperation with other organizations, particularly UNHCR, WFP, UNICEF and WHO, to assist the Secretary-General in mobilizing resources to meet the immediate needs of refugees, returnees and displaced persons. It also requested him to assess the impact of the critical humanitarian situation on the development of the affected countries, with a view to providing technical and financial assistance.

Assistance to refugees in Africa

The trend, pattern and overall magnitude of refugee movements in Africa remained comparatively stable during 1991. However, influxes into Malawi from Mozambique continued unabated. Events in Somalia, Ethiopia, the Sudan, Burundi, Zaire and Sierra Leone led respectively to further influxes of refugees into Djibouti, Kenya, Uganda, Rwanda, Zaire, the Congo and Guinea. By the end of 1991, the total refugee population in Africa totalled 5.4 million. The new exoduses made it necessary to initiate emergency assistance programmes.

Mozambican refugees in Malawi increased by over 70,000, to almost 1 million. However, drought had an adverse impact on UNHCR's ability to deal effectively with problems related to food shortages, water supply, health services, inadequate logistic capacity and storage systems, road maintenance, education and steps to reverse the ecological degradation created by the presence of such a large number of refugees. Assistance to 140,000 Mozambicans in Swaziland, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe continued. Simultaneously, however, some voluntary repatriation to Mozambique, both spontaneous and organized, took place. UNHCR's assistance programme in Mozambique continued to meet the needs of those returnees, estimated at some 253,000 as at the end of 1991.

The West African subregion was again confronted with internal strife, among which was the intensification of the armed conflict in the south-eastern provinces of Sierra Leone, culminating in the internal displacement of hundreds of thousands of Sierra Leoneans and causing 160,000 to seek asylum in Guinea and 12,000 in Liberia in April. Emergency relief assistance was provided to the Sierra Leonean refugees from the ongoing care and maintenance project in Guinea.

Efforts to resolve the Touareg problem in Mali were stalemated. In addition to Touareg refugees in Algeria and Mauritania, over 1,000 urban cases were registered in Burkina Faso (Ouagadougou) and the Niger (Niamey).

Unsuccessful attempts to find a solution to the crisis in Liberia forced over 665,000 persons to remain in exile in neighbouring countries. A joint donor/United Nations agency, WFP/UNHCR and NGO mission was fielded at the end of 1991 to Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea and Sierra Leone-the three main countries hosting Liberian refugees-as well as to Liberia, to review the food situation. (For details on the situation in Liberia, see PART TWO, Chapter I.)

In Somalia, since the collapse in January 1991 of the former Government, the majority of the Issak Somali refugees had expressed their wish to repatriate to north-west Somalia. Some 100,000 of them had spontaneously returned to north-west Somalia due to poor security in eastern Ethiopia. Some 300,000 out of an estimated 550,000 Ethiopian returnees from Somalia were paid $10.6 million in travel grants and were dispersed to their home villages. In March, UNHCR appealed to the international community for $41.9 million. In July, UNHCR undertook a successful repatriation airlift for 53,000 ex-soldiers from Kassala in eastern Sudan to Jimma in western Ethiopia.

With a national population of over half a million, Djibouti was host to some 91,500 refugees of Somali origin and 13,000 Ethiopian refugees. Assistance in the form of food aid, health and water services and the strengthening of logistic services-port and railroad-enabled cost-effective delivery of emergency relief supplies to Ethiopia. The changed political climate in Ethiopia permitted the voluntary repatriation of Eritreans. Discussions with the Sudan and Eritrea began to establish the modalities for registration, transportation and reception and rehabilitation in Eritrea of 250,000 Eritreans who had been in the Sudan. UNHCR continued its care and maintenance programme in the Sudan at a total cost of $9.9 million. In addition, food was provided through WFP to all refugees living in UNHCR-assisted camps and settlements. In a related development, the Sudanese refugees in the Gambela region of western Ethiopia were forced to flee their camps in May 1991 and return involuntarily to their country of origin. Some 200,000 to 250,000 persons arrived in the Nasir-Pochala area in south-east Sudan. Emergency assistance was provided through Operation Lifeline Sudan, a UNDP/UNICEF programme.

Events in Somalia had led to a continuing large-scale outflow of refugees to Kenya's coastal area between the border and Mombasa, as well as to the Liboi area in Garissa district. Some 122,000 Somalis were accommodated at the reception centre at Liboi, as well as at the camps in Ifo and Utange. In June, substantial numbers of Ethiopian refugees began to arrive in Kenya, reaching a maximum of 8,000 who were accommodated in Walda camp. Most of them later repatriated spontaneously.

Ongoing conflicts in southern Sudan led to new refugee influxes into northern Zaire and the Central African Republic. A major UNHCR care and maintenance programme at a cost of $2.5 million in 1991 was undertaken in Haut-Zaïre.

UNHCR and South Africa signed a Memorandum of Understanding on the Voluntary Repatriation and Reintegration of South African Returnees in September. An operative Agreement Governing the Status of UNHCR in South Africa was also signed in October. On 18 October, an appeal for repatriation to South Africa for an amount of $28.4 million was launched to assist 30,000 beneficiaries with transport and reintegration assistance for six months. The first flights carrying returnees from the United Republic of Tanzania to Johannesburg and Durban took place in mid-December. However, high unemployment and lack of shelter discouraged many South Africans from returning home at that time.

During 1991, UNHCR expenditures in Africa totalled $290.9 million, of which $185.2 million was under General Programmes and $105.7 million under Special Programmes.

Refugees in southern Africa

The 1988 International Conference on the Plight of Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in Southern Africa,<sup>(5)</sup> called for by OAU<sup>(6)</sup> and welcomed by the General Assembly in 1987,<sup>(7)</sup> had sought to sensitize the international community to the plight of refugees, returnees and displaced persons in the nine countries which, for the purpose of the Conference, constituted the southern African region (Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Malawi, Mozambique, Swaziland, United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia, Zimbabwe).

In response to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report in September 1991 on action taken by 10 Member States, the United Nations Secretariat, five specialized agencies and six intergovernmental organizations to assist refugees, returnees and displaced persons in southern Africa.<sup>(9)</sup>

Student refugees

Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of 1990, <sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General reported in September 1991 on assistance to student refugees in southern Africa.<sup>(11)</sup> As in previous years, UNHCR continued to organize and implement programmes for educational and other assistance, mainly for South African and Mozambican refugees in southern Africa and elsewhere. Following a mass repatriation operation between June 1989 and June 1990, UNHCR activities on behalf of Namibian students were virtually discontinued. A group of 2,266 Namibian students in Zambia was assisted beyond the closure of the repatriation operation to allow completion of the school year and was subsequently repatriated. Although UNHCR educational programmes were designed for South African and Mozambican students and targeted at the primary and secondary levels, UNHCR continued to provide assistance to refugee students of other nationalities at higher post-secondary levels. Such assistance continued to be funded by the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa.

Some 19,100 refugee students in Botswana, Lesotho, Mozambique, Swaziland and Zimbabwe were supported at primary, secondary and vocational levels. In Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland, some 42 students of various nationalities were sponsored for study at the university level for the 1991/92 academic year.

Refugees in other African countries

Chad

In response to a General Assembly request of 1990, (12) the Secretary-General submitted in September 1991 a report on assistance to voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad.(13) During the first live months of 1991, limited repatriation had continued and 2,700 refugees had been repatriated from Cameroon. That operation was financed under UNHCR annual programme allocations. Some 20,000 Chadians in settlements in Northern Darfur, Sudan, were expected to be repatriated towards the end of 1991 or early in 1992.

Djibouti

Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,(14) the Secretary-General submitted in September 1991 a report on humanitarian assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Djibouti.(15) In early 1991, new influxes of Somali refugees were reported in the border villages of Ali-Ade, Assamo and Hol-Hol. By May, some 20,000 had been registered. With the escalation of armed conflict in Ethiopia, there were large influxes of Ethiopian refugees into neighbouring countries. In the early stages, some 140,000 refugees were reported to have arrived in Djibouti. By mid-June that figure had been reduced to 15,000 due to spontaneous repatriation. Following the influxes from Ethiopia and Somalia, the Government of Djibouti allocated three sites to the Somalis and two to the Ethiopians and appealed to the international community for assistance in establishing refugee reception centres. UNHCR responded by making immediately available some $1.8 million from its Programme Reserve and Emergency Fund to meet the basic needs of the refugees for shelter, domestic items and an adequate supply of potable water. Four of the five reception centres were established by mid-June-three for 20,000 Somali refugees and one for about 5,000 Ethiopians. WFP mobilized a six-month ration for 30,000 Ethiopian and Somali refugees, while UNICEF and WHO provided emergency health-kits and medicines.

At the end of 1991, there were some 96,144 refugees in Djibouti.

Ethiopia

In accordance with a General Assembly request of 1990,(16) the Secretary-General submitted in September 1991 a report describing assistance to refugees and returnees in Ethiopia.(17) The escalation of civil strife in Somalia since late 1990 had generated further influxes of Somali refugees (600,000) and Ethiopian returnees (200,000) into Ethiopia, bringing the total number of people receiving UNHCR assistance as at the end of June 1991 to 1.2 million. UNHCR responded to a new influx of more than 200,000 Somali refugees in early 1991 by mobilizing existing resources and airlifting emergency relief items. The 1991 budgetary allocation for assistance to 1 million Somali and Sudanese refugees was subsequently revised upwards to $76.2 million. The relief operation was disrupted by the civil strife and change of government in Ethiopia in May 1991. Many camp facilities, warehouses, offices, clinics, staff houses, vehicles and trucks were looted and destroyed, and many refugees fled. UNHCR together with other United Nations agencies and NGOs attempted to re-establish the relief operation.

UNHCR attempted to assist some 200,000 former Ethiopian refugees from Somalia who had spontaneously returned in early 1991; it provided an initial travel grant and a one-month food package to enable as many of them as possible to return to their areas of origin. UNHCR tried to encourage as many persons as possible to move away from the Ethiopia-Somalia border. A cross-border operation from Kenya to Negele/Dolo and Suftu was under way, with UNHCR consulting with WFP to make available the food required for distribution.

At the end of 1991, there were 527,000 refugees in Ethiopia.

Liberia

In accordance with a General Assembly request of 1990,(18) the Secretary-General submitted a report in September 1991 on emergency humanitarian assistance to Liberian refugees and displaced persons.(19) The year-long civil war in Liberia had caused over 750,000 Liberians to seek asylum in Côte d'Ivoire (300,000), Ghana (10,000), Guinea

(325,000), Nigeria (1,000), and Sierra Leone (125,000), as well as the internal displacement of another 1.5 million Liberians. Emergency assistance was provided through the United Nations Emergency Relief Operation in Liberia (UNSCOL). Food was provided by WFP and Catholic Relief Services, and WHO, operating in the medical field for UNSCOL, supervised medical institutions. UNICEF, Plan International and Médecins sans Frontières (Belgium) finalized plans for the support of up to 30 educational community centres to provide a literacy and numeracy programme in addition to day-care facilities and counselling. UNICEF was also soliciting $300,000 for rehabilitating water and electricity systems.

In May, a revised operational budget of $27.1 million for Liberian refugees was approved at the annual UNHCR target review exercise. The assistance base, which began in 1990 and was consolidated in 1991, emphasized the promotion of self-reliance and local integration through agricultural and income-generating activities, education and health. Efforts were made to improve water and sanitation in all affected countries and UNHCR contributed complementary commodities to refugee relief operations in Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea and Sierra Leone. In terms of education, the refugees had organized schools and were teaching on a voluntary basis using basic school materials provided by UNHCR.

Malawi

In response to a General Assembly request of 1990,(20) the Secretary-General submitted a report in September 1991 describing assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Malawi.(21) At the end of March 1991, government figures indicated a total refugee case-load of 954,000, of whom 50,000 had spontaneously settled in various districts. All the refugees in Malawi were Mozambicans of rural origin, most of whom were illiterate. UNHCR's assistance programme was carried out through government ministries and supplemented, where necessary, by NGOs.

The 1991 appropriation of $25 million for UNHCR assistance to refugees in Malawi was provided as food; health care; water and sanitation; domestic items such as blankets, clothing, cooking utensils, water containers and soap; materials for shelter construction; community services; education; agricultural activities; veterinary services; and forestry. Some $4 million of that appropriation went to legal assistance, operational support and project personnel.

At the end of 1991, there were 950,031 refugees in Malawi.

Somalia

Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,(22) the Secretary-General in September 1991

summarized replies received from one Member State, two specialized agencies and four other United Nations organizations on assistance provided to Somalia.(23) The specialized agencies and other organizations reported that the intensification of civil unrest had led to the suspension, as at January 1991, of United Nations operations, some of which were resumed on a limited scale in August.

At the end of 1991, there were 460,000 refugees in Somalia.

Sudan

In response to a General Assembly request of 1990,(24) the Secretary-General submitted in September 1991 a report on the situation of refugees in the Sudan.(25) An emergency operation was begun in May to meet the relief needs of nearly 100,000 Ethiopians, mainly young conscripts who had fled their garrisons in Eritrea. Food rations were provided to all UNHCR-assisted refugees, which involved doubling the food requirements, which had to be imported by WFP or received by UNHCR as donations in kind. Efforts were continued to reduce refugee dependence on direct assistance by linking UNHCR assistance to national development efforts carried out by bilateral donors and the European Community. UNHCR completed the first phase of a programme to improve infrastructure and services in refugee-affected areas in eastern Sudan with special contributions from a major donor. The second phase of the programme was to be completed by 1993.

The drought and resulting food shortages in Chad postponed organized repatriation of Chadians until later in the year.

There were 729,200 refugees in the Sudan at the end of 1991.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 46/108 without vote.

Assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 45/139 of 14 December 1990 on emergency humanitarian assistance to Liberian refugees and displaced persons, as well as its resolutions 45/154 on assistance to refugees in Somalia, 45/156 on assistance to voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Chad, 45/157 on humanitarian assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Djibouti, 45/159 on assistance to refugees and displaced persons in Malawi, 45/160 on the situation of refugees in the Sudan, 45/161 on assistance to refugees and returnees in Ethiopia, 45/171 on assistance to student refugees in southern Africa, all of 18 December 1990, and resolution 45/137 on the International Conference on the Plight of Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in Southern Africa of 14 December 1990,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

Bearing in mind that the affected countries are least developed countries,

Convinced of the necessity of strengthening the capacity within the United Nations system for the implementation and the overall coordination of relief programmes for refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Welcoming the prospects for voluntary repatriation and durable solutions across the continent,

Recognizing the need for States of origin to create conditions conducive to voluntary repatriation,

Noting with appreciation the commitment of the countries concerned to do their utmost to facilitate the provision of assistance to the affected populations and to take the necessary measures in this regard,

Realizing the importance of assisting the host countries, in particular those countries that have been hosting refugees for a longer time, to remedy environmental deterioration and the negative impact on public services and the development process,

Recognizing the catalytic role the High Commissioner plays, together with the international community and development agencies, in the promotion of humanitarian aid and development with a view to finding durable and lasting solutions for refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Deeply concerned about the critical humanitarian situation in countries in the Horn of Africa and other African countries caused by drought, conflict and population movements,

Welcoming the establishment by the Secretary-General of an office for the Special Emergency Programme for the Horn of Africa and its efforts to coordinate needs assessment and to mobilize resources,

Taking into account the consolidated inter-agency appeal for the Special Emergency Programme for the Horn of Africa,

Bearing in mind the necessity of facilitating the work of humanitarian organizations in the Horn of Africa, in particular in the supply of food, medicine and health care to refugees, returnees and displaced persons,

Deeply concerned by the incessant inflow of externally displaced persons and refugees, which has added considerably to the burden already being carried by Djibouti in respect of refugees in the country, whose combined number now stands at over ninety thousand,

Noting that according to the situation report No. 1 of 1 October 1991 issued by the office for the Special Emergency Programme for the Horn of Africa, 'in Djibouti the ratio of refugees to nationals is nearing one to four, which poses a considerable burden on the country in terms of security, a drain on economic resources and pressure on social services, given the alarming number of externally displaced persons and refugees and the size of the country and its population,

Bearing in mind that the majority of externally displaced persons and refugees in Djibouti are concentrated in the country's main urban centres and aware of all the implications thereof,

Recognizing the influxes of refugees and voluntary returnees and the presence of displaced persons in Ethiopia,

Deeply concerned about the massive presence of refugees, voluntary returnees and displaced persons in Ethiopia and the enormous burden this has placed on the country's infrastructure and meagre resources,

Deeply concerned also about the grave consequences this situation has entailed for Ethiopia's capability to grapple with the effects of the prolonged drought and rebuild the country's economy,

Aware of the heavy burden placed on the Government of Ethiopia and of the need for immediate and adequate assistance to refugees, voluntary returnees, displaced persons and victims of natural disasters,

Aware also of the burden placed on the Government of Somalia because of the recent influx of refugees from Somalia and Ethiopia,

Recognizing the efforts that have been made by the Government of Kenya with the assistance of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and bilateral donors to deal with this emergency situation, and the need for further assistance to over forty-eight thousand refugees still in Kenya,

Deeply concerned about the tragic impact that the civil war in Somalia has had on the lives of its people, affecting four to five million people who are either refugees in neighbouring countries or internally displaced and are in need of urgent humanitarian assistance,

Welcoming the High Commissioner's initial repatriation plan and aware that thousands of Somali refugees who are at present in other neighbouring countries, as well as internally displaced persons who wish to return to their homes of origin, require a planned and integrated international assistance programme designed to cover their basic needs,

Equally concerned about the plight of Ethiopian refugees remaining in Somalia who urgently need international assistance for their voluntary repatriation to their country of origin,

Deeply convinced that it is necessary that humanitarian assistance to Somali refugees, returnees and displaced persons be mobilized urgently and delivered without delay in view of the gravity of the situation,

Noting with appreciation that the Sudan has hosted, over an extended period of time, more than seven hundred and eighty thousand refugees, and that the country received an additional influx of nearly one hundred thousand Ethiopian refugees in May 1991, notwithstanding the consequent heavy burden shouldered by the people and the Government of the Sudan and in spite of the prevailing economic difficulties of the country,

Recognizing the efforts of the Government of the Sudan, the Government of Ethiopia and the Office of the High Commissioner to organize the voluntary repatriation of the Ethiopian refugees despite the serious financial and logistical problems,

Emphasizing the need to help refugees by implementing the projects for refugee aid and development in refugee-affected areas of the Sudan in accordance with resolution 45/160,

Considering that the difficulties of repatriation and reintegration of returnees and relocation of displaced persons are aggravated by natural disasters and that the process poses serious humanitarian, social and economic problems to the Government of Chad,

Cognizant of the appeal to Member States and inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations to continue to provide the necessary assistance to the Government of Chad to alleviate its problems and improve its abilities to implement the programme of repatriation, reintegration and relocation of voluntary returnees and displaced persons,

Noting with appreciation the continuing mediatory efforts of the Economic Community of West African States to find a peaceful solution to the Liberian crisis and the important decisions reached at the meeting held at Yamoussoukro, Côte d'Ivoire, on 30 October 1991, which could lead to a final settlement,

Bearing in mind the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the Secretary-General on emergency humanitarian assistance to Liberian refugees and displaced persons, particularly the need to continue emergency relief operations pending a comprehensive needs-assessment mission to all parts of Liberia, which will result in a unified appeal and a concerted plan of action for the relief and rehabilitation of Liberia,

Recognizing the increasing number of voluntary returnees to Liberia and the enormous burden this has placed on the country's infrastructure and fragile economy,

Concerned that despite the efforts made to provide the necessary material and financial assistance for the Liberian refugees and for the relocation of displaced persons, the situation still remains precarious and has serious implications for the long-term development process of Liberia, as well as for those West African countries hosting Liberian refugees,

Recognizing the heavy burden placed on the people and Government of Malawi and the sacrifices they are making in caring for the refugees, given the country's limited social services and infrastructure, and the need for adequate international assistance to enable them to continue their efforts to provide assistance to the refugees,

Gravely concerned about the continuing serious social and economic impact of the massive presence of these refugees, as well as its far-reaching consequences for the country's long-term development process,

Bearing in mind the findings and recommendations of the inter-agency mission to Malawi,<sup>a</sup> particularly on the need to strengthen the country's socio-economic infrastructure in order to enable it to provide for the immediate humanitarian relief requirements of the refugees, as well as the long-term national development needs of the country,

Recognizing the need to view refugee-related development projects within local and national development plans,

Convinced that there is an urgent need for the international community to extend maximum and concerted assistance to southern African countries sheltering refugees, returnees and displaced persons and also to highlight the plight of these persons,

Welcoming with appreciation the fact that the High Commissioner has continued in 1990 and 1991 to organize and implement programmes for educational and other appropriate assistance for student refugees in the southern African region,

Expressing its appreciation to the Governments of Botswana, Lesotho, Mozambique, Swaziland, Zambia and Zimbabwe for the cooperation that they have extended to the High Commissioner on matters concerning the welfare of student refugees,

1. Takes note of the reports of the Secretary-General and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General, the High Commissioner, donor countries and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations for their assistance in mitigating the plight of the large number of refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

3. Commends the Governments concerned for providing assistance to refugees, returnees and displaced persons and their efforts to promote voluntary repatriation and other measures taken in order to find appropriate and lasting solutions;

4. Expresses deep concern at the serious and far-reaching consequences of the massive presence of refugees and displaced persons in the countries concerned and the implications for their long-term socio-economic development;

5. Expresses the hope that additional resources will be made available for general refugee programmes to keep pace with refugee needs;

6. Appeals to Member States, international organizations and non-governmental organizations to provide adequate material, financial and technical assistance for relief and rehabilitation programmes for the large number of refugees, voluntary returnees and displaced persons and victims of natural disasters;

7. Calls upon the Secretary-General and the High Commissioner to continue their efforts to mobilize humanitarian assistance for the relief, repatriation, rehabilitation and resettlement of refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to mobilize adequate financial and material assistance for the full implementation of ongoing projects in rural and urban areas affected by the presence of refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

9. Requests the High Commissioner to continue her efforts with the appropriate United Nations agencies and intergovernmental, governmental and non-governmental organizations in order to consolidate and increase essential services to refugees, returnees and displaced persons;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to study and assess the environmental and socio-economic impact of the prolonged presence of refugees in the host countries with a view to rehabilitating those areas;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive and consolidated report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, under the sub-item entitled "Questions relating to refugees, returnees and displaced persons", and an oral report to the Economic and Social Council at its regular session of 1992.

Europe and North America

Following changes affecting Central and Eastern Europe, UNHCR substantially increased its activities in that area. It also increased its promotion of refugee law and advisory activities to help Governments to address the flow of asylum-seekers. The management of mass flows triggered by the Persian Gulf crisis, into Turkey and back to Iraq, and by events in Yugoslavia proved difficult in view of budgetary and staffing constraints. In addition to the emergency operation in Yugoslavia, implemented at the Secretary-General's request, for over 600,000 displaced persons, UNHCR opened an office in Moscow and placed liaison officers in all Central European capitals. (For details of events in Europe, see PART TWO, Chapter IV.)

In Western Europe, the number of asylum-seekers continued to increase in 1991, reaching 545,000, compared to 420,000 in 1990. Most of the new arrivals came from outside the region, while asylum-seekers from south-eastern Europe constituted a significantly higher proportion than in previous years. The increasing influx created large backlogs of asylum applications, straining reception facilities and public and private relief efforts. In addition, high rejection rates suggested that asylum procedures were being used for ordinary migratory movements. Following an increase in xenophobic and racist attitudes, with a high incidence of violent attacks on reception centres, many Governments introduced legislation and practical measures to speed up the determination process and attempted to harmonize their asylum systems and prevent unsuccessful applicants from lodging successive claims in the same or other countries. In addition, countries had moved closer to establishing common entry requirements and had increased border controls, visa regulations and carrier sanctions for bringing in undocumented aliens.

UNHCR voluntary funds expenditure in Europe and North America totalled $24.6 million, of which $21.5 million was under General Programmes.

Latin America and the Caribbean

In 1991, the CIREFCA process, as contained in the Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons<sup>(26)</sup> adopted at the 1989 Conference, had facilitated the promotion of durable solutions for Central American refugees. Voluntary repatriation continued with 12,666 refugees repatriated from Costa Rica to Nicaragua, 2,326 from Mexico to Guatemala and 2,663 from various Central American countries to El Salvador. In addition, by March 1991, 36,392 Nicaraguans had repatriated from Honduras under the International Support and Verification Commission established in 1989<sup>(27)</sup> to carry out the demobilization and repatriation or relocation of the Nicaraguan Resistance and their families. Some 8,887 Sal-vadorians also had repatriated. These movements permitted the closure of refugee camps and corresponding UNHCR sub-offices at La Mosquitia and El Paraiso, Danlí. An additional 6,627 refugees and 132 demobilized members of the Nicaraguan Resistance repatriated voluntarily from Costa Rica. The Costa Rican Government's policy of promoting voluntary repatriation while permitting local integration resulted in the closure of all its refugee camps. In Belize, Costa Rica and Mexico, the region's three main asylum countries, assistance was provided to 58,479 registered refugees.

The voluntary repatriation of Guatemalan refugees was facilitated by a Letter of Understanding signed in November 1991 by the High Commissioner and the President of Guatemala. Guatemalan refugees in the Mexican states of Campeche and Quintana Roo continued to benefit from a local integration programme.

Following the overthrow in September of Haiti's President, UNHCR encouraged countries in the region to respect the principle of non-refoulement—whereby refugees and asylum-seekers would not forcibly be returned to countries where they faced persecution or other dangers—and to offer Haitian arrivals temporary asylum pending negotiation by UNHCR of a regional burden-sharing framework, in coordination with OAS, and the stabilization of the situation in Haiti. Honduras, Suriname and Venezuela agreed to accept a quota of Haitians on a temporary basis, while direct arrivals were reported in the Bahamas, Cuba and Jamaica.

The voluntary repatriation of Chileans from neighbouring countries and from Eastern Europe and Australia continued in 1991. A joint UNHCR/IOM appeal was launched in February for an assistance project to benefit 5,000 returnees.

During 1991, UNHCR expenditures in Latin America and the Caribbean totalled $43.8 million, of which $19.8 million was under General Programmes and $23.9 under Special Programmes.

Follow-up to the International Conference on Central American Refugees

In September 1991,<sup>(28)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on progress made since his September 1990 report<sup>(29)</sup> in implementing a 1989 resolution of the General Assembly relating to CIREFCA.<sup>(30)</sup>

UNHCR efforts, in cooperation with UNDP, had been directed at implementing and funding projects that attracted donor support, while attempting to secure the necessary resources for the remainder. Of the 59 projects presented by the CIREFCA countries, 34 had received funding totalling $65 million and were being implemented.

The Development Programme for Displaced Persons, Refugees and Returnees, a region-wide inter-agency programme implemented by UNDP in cooperation with other United Nations agencies, including UNHCR, was under way. The Programme aimed at the social and economic integration of uprooted populations in Central America and Belize.

In accordance with CIREFCA's Concerted Plan of Action,<sup>(26)</sup> meetings of the CIREFCA Follow-Up Committee were held in 1991 at San José, Costa Rica (2 and 3 April), San Pedro Sula, Honduras (17-19 June), Tegucigalpa, Honduras (13 and 14 August) and Managua, Nicaragua (25 and 26 October).<sup>(31)</sup>

In October,<sup>(2)</sup> the UNHCR Executive Committee called on the Secretary-General, UNHCR and UNDP to maintain the CIREFCA process and expressed its support for the CIREFCA countries' decision to convene a further international meeting of the Follow-Up Committee in El Salvador in March 1992.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, adopted resolution 46/107 without vote.

International Conference on Central American Refugees

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 42/1 of 7 October 1987, 42/110 of 7 December 1987, 42/204 of 11 December 1987, 42/231 of 12 May 1988, 43/118 of 8 December 1988, 44/139 of 15 December 1989 and 45/141 of 14 December 1990,

Recalling also that the International Conference on Central American Refugees is related to the initiative of the Central American Presidents expressed in the procedures for the establishment of a firm and lasting peace in Central America concluded at the Esquipulas II summit meeting in August 1987, as indicated in the San Salvador communiqué on the Central American refugees, of 9 September 1988,<sup>a</sup>

Recognizing the importance and validity of the Declaration and the Concerted Plan of Action in favour of Central American Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons, adopted at the International Conference on Central American Refugees held at Guatemala City from 29 to 31 May 1989 and the Declaration of the First International Meeting of the Follow-Up Committee of the Conference,<sup>b</sup> especially the framework contained in the Concerted Plan of Action,

Noting with satisfaction the concerted efforts being made by the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico to find lasting solutions to the problems of the refugees, returnees and displaced persons in implementing the aims and objectives of the Concerted Plan of Action as an integral part of efforts to achieve a stable and lasting peace and democratization of the region,

Welcoming the substantial progress in the peace process in El Salvador, whereby efforts are being made to consult with all national sectors, the peace dialogue in Guatemala and the progress being made in Nicaragua in the implementation of its national reconciliation policy and in assistance to the uprooted populations, which continues to encourage movements of voluntary repatriation and settlement of internally displaced persons,

Recognizing the substantial support that, inter alia, the Secretary-General, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme, the donor community and national and international non-governmental organizations have given the Conference since its inception,

Convinced that peace, liberty, development and democracy are essential in order to solve the problems of uprooted populations in the region,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General, and the relevant sections of the report of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

2. Welcomes with satisfaction the outcome of the meetings of the Follow-Up Committee of the International Conference on Central American Refugees, held at San José on 2 and 3 April 1991, at San Pedro Sula, Honduras, from 17 to 19 June 1991, at Tegucigalpa on 13 and 14 August 1991 and at Managua on 25 and 26 October 1991;

3. Urges the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico to continue to implement and follow up the programmes benefiting refugees, returnees and displaced persons in accordance with their national development plans;

4. Reaffirms its conviction that the voluntary repatriation of refugees and the return of displaced persons to their countries or communities of origin is one of the most positive signs of the progress of peace in the region;

5. Expresses its conviction that the processes of return to and reintegration in the countries and communities of origin should take place in conditions of dignity and security and with the necessary guarantees to ensure that the affected populations are included in the respective national development plans;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Development Programme and other organs of the United Nations system to continue their support for and involvement in the planning, implementation, evaluation and follow-up of the programmes generated through the Conference process;

7. Welcomes with satisfaction the progress made in the implementation of the Development Programme for Displaced Persons, Refugees and Repatriated Persons, and urges the Central American countries to continue their determined support to ensure that the Programme achieves its aims;

8. Appeals to the international community, particularly to the donor community, to continue and to strengthen their support for the Conference and to continue complying with the financing offered so as to be able effectively to achieve the goals and objectives of the Concerted Plan of Action, and to consolidate the progress made thus far in humanitarian assistance to refugees and repatriated and displaced persons of the region;

9. Supports the special attention that the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico are giving to the particular needs of refugee, repatriated and displaced women and children and to the measures being adopted to protect and improve the environment and to preserve ethnic and cultural values;

10. Also supports the decision of the Central American countries, Belize and Mexico to convene the second international meeting of the Follow-Up Committee of the Conference at San Salvador in March 1992, for the purpose of evaluating the progress made thus far in the implementation of the Concerted Plan of Action and to define ways of improving its application;

11. Supports the initiative of the Governments of the countries of Central America, Belize and Mexico to extend the duration of the Conference process as long as may be necessary, in light of the new needs that have emerged following the changes in the region;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session a report on the implementation of the present resolution.

East and South Asia and Oceania

As at 31 March 1991, 109,000 Vietnamese asylum-seekers remained in camps in the region, the highest total since 1979. Also, 8,600 Vietnamese asylum-seekers, each provided with the equivalent of $30 per month for one year, returned to Viet Nam. In early April, the Commission of the European Communities concluded a Memorandum of Understanding with UNHCR under which the Commission would provide training and long-term reintegration assistance to all returnees and contribute towards financing their return.

Intensive preparations were made for repatriating some 370,000 Cambodian refugees and displaced persons in Thailand, following the signing in Paris on 23 October 1991 of the Comprehensive Political Settlement of the Cambodian Conflict. UNHCR was entrusted with coordinating international assistance, while the operation was being conducted under the overall authority of the Secretary-General and his Representative in Cambodia. On 2 November 1991, Thailand, the Supreme National Council of Cambodia and UNHCR signed a tripartite memorandum of understanding detailing the responsibilities of the three parties and establishing their cooperation to ensure the voluntary character of the repatriation. The memorandum ensured that no residual cases would remain in Thailand. During the planning phase, UNHCR registered potential returnees to Cambodia, intensified an information campaign and helped construct transit and processing facilities. In November, a land identification mission and an initial survey of the presence of mines took place. In an appeal by the Secretary-General, a budgetary provision of $2 million was included for mine surveys. (For details of the situation in Cambodia, see PART TWO, Chapter III.)

On 1 November, the management of the United Nations Border Relief Operations, which since 1982 had been responsible for the care and maintenance of the border population, was transferred to UNHCR.

Considerable progress was made in implementing CPA, adopted at the 1989 International Conference on Indo-Chinese Refugees.<sup>(32)</sup> A total of 28,612 Vietnamese asylum-seekers arrived in Hong Kong and in countries in South-East Asia in 1991, compared with 39,079 in 1990. The decrease was due to a mass information campaign, joint UNHCR/European Community announcements that the level of cash assistance would be reduced for all asylum-seekers arriving in countries of first asylum after 27 September and the bilateral agreement between the United Kingdom-Hong Kong and Viet Nam on 29 October on a programme of orderly return of non-refugee Vietnamese. In 1991, under the Orderly Departure Programme, 64,870 Vietnamese left Viet Nam, bringing total departures since 1980 to 317,630.

The UNHCR Executive Committee, noting that on 1 October, the Secretary-General had renewed his call for funding the preparatory phase of the operation for repatriation to Cambodia, estimated at $33 million, called on Governments concerned to respond generously to that appeal and to work constructively towards the early implementation of measures to be organized by UNHCR for the safe repatriation and reintegration of returnees.

Efforts to promote the repatriation of both Vietnamese and Lao asylum-seekers continued in 1991, with a total of 12,109 Vietnamese repatriated voluntarily and some 2,300 Lao repatriated. Some 64,000 Lao still remained in camps in Thailand.

In China, local settlement assistance continued to be given to 285,000 Vietnamese refugees settled on state farms in five southern provinces. Activities relating to income generation, crop production, vocational training and education were further expanded under existing projects.

In June, three border camps were closed in Papua New Guinea's West Sepik province. Some 120 Irian Jaya refugees were relocated to the East Awin local settlement site, while 330 opted for repatriation to Irian Jaya. A group of 390 refugees returned to Indonesia during the year. In Sri Lanka, UNHCR initiated a programme of limited assistance to earlier returnees from India who had been displaced again after further armed conflict in June, as well as to other displaced persons who would otherwise had been forced to seek refuge in India. Under that programme, UNHCR assisted in operating two open relief centres on the island of Mannar and at Madhu. UNHCR transported government-provided food to Madhu and financed the operation of both centres. As a consequence of the continuing strife in the area, the vast majority in the two centres were unable to return home.

During the second half of 1991, an increasing number of refugees from the Arakan State of Myanmar entered the Cox's Bazaar District of Bangladesh. WFP, UNICEF, WHO and NGOs were mobilized to assist Bangladesh, but a shortage of land made it impossible to provide adequate shelter.

Afghans constituted 92 per cent of UNHCR beneficiaries in India, totalling 10,600 persons, the largest group of urban refugees assisted by UNHCR. Only 794 Afghan refugees were repatriated with UNHCR assistance in 1991. Of some 210,000 Tamils in Tamil Nadu, 130,000 received government assistance in camps. Some 13,000 Tamil refugees were repatriated from Tamil Nadu to Sri Lanka under bilateral arrangements between India and Sri Lanka.

Early in the year, refugees from Bhutan began arriving in Nepal. They were accommodated in two camps at Maidhar and Timai, in the Jhapa district in eastern Nepal, but the camps had become extremely overcrowded by the end of 1991.

UNHCR, in 1991, obligated a total of $141.9 million, $49 million under General Programmes and $92.9 under Special Programmes, to assist refugees in East and South Asia and Oceania.

South-West Asia,
North Africa and the Middle East

With renewed signs of a resolution of the Afghan conflict, the number of spontaneous returnees during 1991 reached some 200,000 persons. Other repatriation-related activities continued in the form of support to cross-border projects to facilitate the reintegration of the returnees, data collection and transport assistance to returnees from Iran. UNHCR's main activity in Afghanistan was the upgrading of facilities in Mazar-i-Sharif, Herat, Jalalabad and Lashkargar and the provision of food rations to 30,000 returnees. Refugees in Pakistan continued to apply to UNHCR for repatriation assistance. Considerable progress was achieved in 1991 through the retrenchment of 2,400 administrative and project staff employed by the Government. In 1991, UNHCR provided Iran with assistance in health, water, sanitation, construction, education and the logistics sector. Of the appropriation for Iran amounting to $12.7 million, some $5.3 million was targeted for refugees from Iraq. The rate of implementation was affected in 1991 by the crisis in the Persian Gulf, which prompted the reallocation of staff and logistical resources to the new emergency.

During the first phase of the crisis, UNHCR concentrated on providing indirect support to the overall programmes facilitating the repatriation of over 700,000 third-country nationals who had left Iraq and Kuwait. Within that group, UNHCR directly assisted a few thousand refugees and asylum-seekers for whom immediate repatriation was not feasible.

On 11 January 1991, the United Nations presented the Regional Humanitarian Plan of Action and appealed for start-up contributions. The Plan detailed requirements corresponding to the arrival and assistance during three months of up to 400,000 persons (100,000 each in Iran, Jordan, the Syrian Arab Republic and Turkey) at an estimated budget of $175 million, of which $38 million was identified as the minimum required to create additional reception capacity. Between January and March, some 65,000 persons arrived in those four countries from Iraq and Kuwait. The first few weeks of that period were marked by the arrival of a large number of third-country nationals, mostly to Jordan, the majority of whom were immediately repatriated to their countries of origin. Iraqi nationals started to arrive mostly in Iran and Turkey. During that period, UNHCR organized 84 flights, four road convoys and two shipments which positioned 264,000 blankets and 30,000 tents and tarpaulins in the region, in addition to kitchen equipment, lamps, stoves and other supplies. UNICEF, WHO, WFP, UNDRO and IOM also sent food and supplies or provided services, as established by the Plan.

During the first week of April, the Iraqi refugees in Iran increased from 50,000 to 700,000, and in Turkey from 7,500 to 250,000 as a result of civil unrest and hostilities in Iraq. By May, the figures had reached 1.4 million in Iran and 400,000 in the Turkish border area. Responding to the new emergency, the United Nations revised the Plan in April, designating UNHCR as the lead agency. The new estimated budget was set at $400 million, of which $238.5 million was earmarked to UNHCR. As at 1 May, UNHCR had received $94 million and had sent to Iran and Turkey some 970,000 blankets, 68,915 family tents, 682 hospital tents, 100,809 plastic sheeting tarpaulins and other relief supplies and complementary food. During the emergency, 259 flights to the Persian Gulf region transported some 10,000 metric tons of supplies.

By the end of May, 250,000 refugees had returned to specific areas in Iraq and 65 international staff had been flown to Baghdad. In early June, UNHCR sub-offices had been opened in Dohuk, Erbil and Suleimaniyah, with a number of field offices in those three governorates and in Basrah. Over 150 international staff were in position in Iraq in July. By December, only 45,362 Iraqis were left in Iran and some 10,000 in Turkey. In northern Iraq, UNHCR launched an unprecedentedly large shelter-construction programme. Over 1,500 villages, out of some 4,000 which had been destroyed, were rebuilt between October and December with UNHCR and NGO assistance. An estimated 500,000 persons benefited from that programme.

Between January and December 1991, the UNHCR budget for the Persian Gulf emergency operation was $220 million. Of this amount, $62 million was spent on shelter, $40.3 million on domestic items, $37.5 million on transport, and $26.9 million on health and water in Iraq and other countries affected by the influx.

In addition to several thousand urban refugees, the Syrian Arab Republic received some 5,000 Iraqi refugees in the aftermath of the Persian Gulf crisis.

In Yemen, the number of Somali and Ethiopian refugees increased considerably. In June 1991, UNHCR began implementing an emergency project in the amount of $710,025 to assist Yemen and the Red Crescent Society to cope with the influx. Two camps were set up near Aden and Taiz to provide basic emergency food assistance to newcomers.

Some 165,000 Western Saharan refugees in the Tindouf area of Algeria received assistance pending voluntary repatriation. Budget requirements for their needs were estimated at $3.4 million, of which $2.4 million had been obligated.

In Mauritania, the influx of refugees from Mali continued during the latter part of the year. On 13 June, UNHCR received an appeal from Mauritania to provide and coordinate assistance to asylum-seekers. An emergency assistance programme was launched for some 1,500 families. Most of the needs were covered through cash or in-kind donations from the European Community, France, Germany and Spain, as well as the United Nations system.

The number of refugees in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya continued to increase late in 1991 with arrivals from Cameroon, Chad, Ethiopia, Ghana, Liberia, Nigeria and the Sudan. A sudden influx of some 400 Somali refugees from Saudi Arabia took place in October and November, rendering necessary an urgent response for vulnerable cases. The basic needs of that group were met through the help and cooperation of the Libyan authorities, UNDP and donor embassies. In addition, a sizeable influx of refugees from the Persian Gulf region, particularly Iraqis and Palestinians, fled to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

During 1991, UNHCR expenditures in South-West Asia, North Africa and the Middle East totalled $287.3 million, of which $53.7 million was under General Programmes and $233.6 million under Special Programmes.

Assistance to Iraqi refugees

Pursuant to an Economic and Social Council resolution of 30 May 1991 (see below), the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in November a report describing humanitarian assistance to Iraqi refugees and displaced persons.<sup>(33)</sup>

On 9 April, the Secretary-General appointed Sadruddin Aga Khan as his Executive Delegate for a United Nations inter-agency humanitarian programme for Iraq, Kuwait and the Iraq/Turkey and Iraq/Iran border areas to respond promptly and effectively to the situation. With the Executive Delegate's appointment, the programme began to take shape, covering the work of eight United Nations agencies, 18 NGOs and a contingent of 500 United Nations guards. A Memorandum of Understanding governing the humanitarian activities of the inter-agency programme was signed by the Foreign Minister of Iraq and the Executive Delegate. An assessment of Iraq's humanitarian needs was furnished by a mission led by the Executive Delegate, which surveyed the areas of water and sanitation, health, food supply and energy.<sup>(34)</sup> An appeal, updated in June to include a United Nations guard contingent, requested $460.3 million, of which $285.6 million had been received as at 29 October 1991.

Under the inter-agency programme, action was taken by UNHCR, UNICEF, WHO and WFP, as well as IOM and other NGOs, to support and sustain the refugees until they could return home and assist the reintegration of the returnee population. UNICEF and WHO provided essential drugs; 81 United Nations Volunteers served in Iraq, and to a lesser degree in Iran, Jordan, the Syrian Arab Republic and Turkey, working with WFP, UNICEF, UNHCR, the Iraq Relief Coordination Unit, WHO and IOM. Food allocations were provided by FAO, the International Committee of the Red Cross and WFP in cooperation with UNHCR. Under the humanitarian programme in Kuwait, the Abdali camp, set up by the League of Red Cross Societies to accommodate displaced persons, primarily Palestinians and Bedouins, in the wake of the Persian Gulf war, was closed on 11 October. The United Nations Guards Contingent in Iraq provided protection to the staff of the inter-agency humanitarian programme, United Nations property, warehouses and offices and the 1,500-truck UNHCR winterization convoys. The Guards were also mandated to report on any incident affecting the security situation and the effective implementation of the humanitarian programme.

The Secretary-General concluded that the priority of the programme would continue to focus on the needs of the most vulnerable groups in the country. In the light of the number of humanitarian crises demanding the urgent attention of the international community and the limited resources available to meet them, the Secretary-General stated that it was neither just nor practical to continue to request funding for a country capable of feeding its people and seeing that their needs were met. In his report,<sup>(34)</sup> the Executive Delegate had proposed that agreement be secured on a mechanism whereby Iraq's own resources could be used to fund essential civilian needs to the satisfaction of the international community.

By decision 46/427 of 16 December, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 May 1991, the Economic and Social Council, acting on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, adopted resolution 1991/5 without vote.

Noting the return of approximately one million Yemeni expatriates to their country as the result of the situation between Iraq and Kuwait, in addition to the flows of tens of thousands of refugees and returnees from the Horn of Africa because of the recent developments in that region,

Deeply concerned at the grave economic and social consequences of the considerable flows of returnees, taking place at a time when Yemen is afflicted by severe economic crises,

1. Calls upon States, United Nations organizations, governmental organizations, international non-governmental organizations and financial institutions to extend special assistance to Yemen to enable that country to deal with the effects of the flows of refugees and returnees;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to assist in mobilizing resources and to prepare a comprehensive programme to assist Yemen in finding a solution to the serious situation created by the flows of refugees and returnees;

Refugee protection

In addition to its traditional activities such as prevention of refoulement and defending the rights of refugees and asylum-seekers in countries of asylum, UNHCR had become in 1991 increasingly involved in activities in countries of origin with returning refugees and also, on request, with internally displaced persons.

During the year further progress was made in dealing with certain long-standing refugee situations in Africa, Central America and South-East Asia. However, while voluntary repatriation occurred in many parts of the world, other refugee situations, such as in the Horn of Africa, continued to present major challenges, and new refugee flows continued to occur. In the Middle East, the Persian Gulf crisis presented novel protection challenges, as had the situation in Central and Eastern Europe.

Protection was a particular challenge in situations of ongoing armed conflict or fragile security, with the most difficult of those problems occurring in the Horn of Africa. While opportunities for the solution of long-standing refugee problems arose, an aggravated state of civil strife and insecurity continued to cause internal and external displacement of large populations of people, as well as to hamper UNHCR's ability to deliver international protection and material assistance. Furthermore, the safety of both refugees and UNHCR personnel was placed under unacceptable forms and levels of risk so that in some instances UNHCR was forced to suspend its operations altogether.

Pressures on asylum continued to manifest themselves in every region. Instances of refoulement occurred in many countries despite widespread acceptance of the principles of non-refoulement. Protection issues related to asylum were prevalent in Western Europe, where large numbers of persons continued to seek asylum, including refugees, persons who were fleeing war and generalized violence, and migrants, with the result that status determination procedures were overburdened and public opinion became increasingly negative.

UNHCR undertook a variety of protection-oriented promotional activities on the occasion of the fortieth anniversaries of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees<sup>(35)</sup> and of UNHCR, including over 30 refugee law training seminars for government officials and others on status determination procedures.

The Centre for Documentation on Refugees (CDR) continued to publish the quarterly bulletin Refugee Abstracts and bibliographies on refugees. Collaboration continued with the Oxford University Press in the publication of the International Journal of Refugee Law. CDR maintained a bibliographic database on refugee-specific literature containing over 9,000 items in English, French, German and Spanish. It also maintained three databases containing texts of national legislations relating to refugee status determination, asylum and nationality; texts of international instruments relating to the protection of refugees; and abstracts of judgements of national courts and tribunals relating to refugee status determination or the rights of refugees.

In September,<sup>(36)</sup> the High Commissioner submitted to the Executive Committee a fortieth anniversary note on international protection, analysing UNHCR's protection function, current protection issues, new directions for protection and further development of refugee law. The High Commissioner concluded that a new multilateral order was emerging for cooperation on refugee, migration and humanitarian affairs.

The Subcommittee of the Whole on International Protection<sup>(37)</sup> of the UNHCR Executive Committee (Geneva, 3 October 1991) made recommendations to its parent body on resettlement as an instrument of protection. It also discussed the safe-country concept and refugee status, protection of refugee women and implementation of the 1951 Convention<sup>(35)</sup> and the 1967 Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees.<sup>(38)</sup>

The Executive Committee, in October,<sup>(2)</sup> adopted a number of conclusions on those topics.

International instruments

As at 31 December 1991, the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees<sup>(35)</sup> had been ratified or acceded to by 106 States as a result of the 1991 accession by Czechoslovakia, Poland and Romania. The 1967 Protocol<sup>(38)</sup> to the Convention had 107 States parties as a result of the 1991 accession by the same States.<sup>(39)</sup>

Other intergovernmental legal instruments of benefit to refugees included the 1969 OAU Convention governing the Specific Aspects of Refugee Problems in Africa, the 1957 Agreement relating to Refugee Seamen and its 1973 Protocol, the 1959 European Agreement on the Abolition of Visas to Refugees, the 1980 European Agreement on the Transfer of Responsibility for Refugees, and the 1969 American Convention on Human Rights, Pact of San José, Costa Rica.

As at 31 December 1991, there were 36 States parties to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons<sup>(40)</sup> and 15 States parties to the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.<sup>(41)</sup>

Early warning of possible refugee flows

Coordination

In April,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the comments of the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) on a report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) concerning the coordination of activities relating to early warning of possible refugee flows.<sup>(2)</sup> ACC agreed with JIU, stating that there was a need to make the United Nations system more effective in anticipating major humanitarian problems. ACC supported recommendations for improving the early warning capacity of the United Nations system in refugee matters through strengthening coordination. The Secretary-General's comments on the JIU recommendations were contained in a separate report.<sup>(3)</sup>

At its April session, ACC decided to designate the United Nations Office for Research and the Collection of Information as the focal point for early warning and the strengthening of cooperation on information-gathering, analysis and dissemination among United Nations organizations, agencies and programmes on new flows of refugees and displaced persons.<sup>(4)</sup> An ad hoc working group had been established to develop an effective early warning system related to possible new flows of refugees and displaced persons (see also PART THREE, Chapter <sup>(X)</sup>).

By decision 46/427 of 16 December 1991, the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Chapter XVI

Drugs of abuse

Illicit drug production, trafficking and abuse continued to be serious problems throughout the world in 1991, imperiling public health in virtually all countries. Programmes designed to eradicate narcotic plants on a large scale and to provide large-scale alternative income possibilities for farmers had not yet been implemented. Interlocking criminal trafficking organizations, well financed and heavily armed, continued to produce and smuggle enormous quantities of heroin and cocaine, according to the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB) in its annual report. On the positive side, surveys in a number of countries showed stabilization or a decline in the abuse of certain illicit drugs.

The United Nations undertook several measures to intensify the international fight against drug abuse. Various programmes and organs were integrated into the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, based at Vienna, whose Executive Director was given the exclusive responsibility for coordinating and providing effective leadership for all drug control activities. The General Assembly adopted four resolutions dealing with drug abuse control. The Economic and Social Council adopted 11 resolutions related to the issue, 10 of which were recommended by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs—the principal policy-making body of the United Nations on drug control issues. INCB continued its overall supervision of the implementation of drug control treaties as well as its comprehensive survey of the drug control situation worldwide.

Drug abuse and international control

The establishment of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme (UNDCP) in 1991 integrated the structures and functions of the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control (UNFDAC) and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board (INCB). The Secretary-General appointed its Executive Director at the Under-Secretary-General level, with effect from March.

The Secretary-General, in a report to the General Assembly in October,<sup>(1)</sup> discussed the measures he had taken to implement the Assembly's resolution of 1990 calling for the programme's establishment.<sup>(2)</sup> The new Programme would have four main substantive components: treaty implementation and legal services, operational activities, technical services, and interorganizational cooperation. The Secretary-General proposed that a new fund be established, to which the assets and liabilities of UNFDAC would be transferred, as well as the extrabudgetary resources administered by the Division of Narcotic Drugs and INCB. As a result, UNFDAC would cease to exist. The estimated budget of UNFDAC for 1991 was 71.2 million.

The Secretary-General reported that, as a new and enhanced presence in international drug abuse control, UNDCP must review and redefine its work strategy. Its main objectives would be: to serve as a world-wide repository of information on drug abuse control; to promote the universal application of the international drug control treaties; to further the analysis of drug abuse problems and the development of drug control strategies; to promote regional and subregional initiatives; to mobilize the international community in focusing expertise and resources on drug abuse control; and to anticipate events or trends which could aggravate illicit drug production, trafficking and/or abuse.

To discharge its responsibilities, UNDCP would strengthen its field network. It would develop master plans, which would serve as a yardstick for all national and international drug control activities in a given country or region.

The role of UNDCP was also discussed by the Secretary-General in a report on international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking,<sup>(3)</sup> which outlined drug control-related activities undertaken by specialized agencies and other entities in the United Nations system (see below) with respect to the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control of 1990<sup>(4)</sup> and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control of 1987.<sup>(5)</sup>

In an August report,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General gave a brief overview of action taken and recommendations of the Intergovernmental Expert Group to Study the Economic and Social Consequences of Illicit Traffic in Drugs. During 1990, the Group had met twice. The Assembly invited the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in December 1990 to study the recommendations and conclusions of the Group.<sup>(7)</sup>

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. On 9 May 1991,<sup>(8)</sup> the Commission took note of the recommendations of the Expert Group, but regretted that, due to a heavy workload, it was unable to discuss them comprehensively. The Executive Director of UNDCP was requested to analyse the recommendations and transmit to the Commission in 1992 his views on possible follow-up, taking into account the Global Programme of Action adopted by the Assembly in 1990,<sup>(9)</sup> and the financial implications involved.

On 7 May,<sup>(10)</sup> the Commission requested the Executive Director to examine the means of ensuring coordination of drug control activities in the United Nations system, to study the frequency and duration of meetings of the heads of national drug law enforcement agencies, and to ensure that activities undertaken at the global, regional, subregional and national levels complemented each other as much as possible.

On 8 May, the Commission set out seven priority themes,<sup>(11)</sup> to be taken into consideration by the Executive Director in developing, in consultation with Governments, a five-year plan to implement the Global Programme of Action. The themes were: prevention and reduction of drug abuse; treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration of drug addicts; control of production and supply of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances; suppression of illicit trafficking; measures to be taken against the effects of money derived from, used in or intended for use in illicit drug trafficking, illegal financial flows and illegal use of the banking system; strengthening of judicial systems, including law enforcement; and measures to be taken against the diversion of arms and explosives, and illicit traffic by vessels, aircraft and vehicles.

Also on 8 May,<sup>(12)</sup> the Commission urged Governments to support UNDCP so that the commitments expressed in the Political Declaration<sup>(9)</sup> and Global Programme of Action could be fulfilled. It urged the Secretary-General to ensure the provision of financial and human resources and requested the Executive Director to pursue the integration process in the implementation of his responsibility of coordinating and providing leadership for all United Nations drug control activities.

UNDP Governing Council action. On 25 June 1991<sup>(13)</sup> the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) took note of the central role of the UNDCP Executive Director in coordinating drug control activities of the United Nations system, including crop substitution efforts. The Council also noted that the new activities of UNDP included, for the first time, an allocation to finance drug abuse control and crop substitution. The Council asked the Administrator of UNDP to ensure close coordination with UNDCP.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second (Social) Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/47 without vote.

United Nations International Drug Control Programme

The Economic and Social Council,

Reaffirming that the new dimensions of illicit production, abuse and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances in all regions of the world necessitate a more comprehensive and integrated approach to international drug control and an efficient structure in order to enable the United Nations to play a central and greatly enhanced role in that field,

Mindful of General Assembly resolution 45/179 of 21 December 1990, entitled "Enhancement of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control", in which the Secretary-General was requested to create a single drug control programme, to be called the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, and to appoint a senior official who would execute the integration process and head the new Programme,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in resolution 45/179, invited the Secretary-General to ensure that adequate financial and other resources from within the regular budget were allocated to the Programme to enable it to discharge its functions effectively,

Bearing in mind Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolutions I(XXXIV), 2(XXXIV) and 3(XXXIV) of 9 May 1991, concerning, respectively, the strengthening of the role of the Programme as the main focus for concerted international action for drug abuse control, the development of proposals to address priority themes, and the provision of support to the Programme,

1. Welcomes the prompt appointment of a senior official, at the level of Under-Secretary-General, in the position of Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme with exclusive responsibility for coordinating and providing effective leadership for all the United Nations drug control activities, in order to ensure coherence of actions within the Programme as well as coordination, complementarity and non-duplication of such activities across the United Nations system;

2. Commends the Executive Director for his ongoing efforts to fully integrate the structures and functions of the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control into the new Programme;

3. Strongly urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the Programme in order to enable it to fulfil all of its mandates and functions deriving from the Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control and the international drug control treaties, particularly by increasing their extrabudgetary contributions to the Programme, with a view to expanding and strengthening its programmes for technical cooperation with developing countries;

4. Requests the specialized agencies and the programmes of the United Nations system to take an active part in the international struggle against narcotic drugs and to fully coordinate their efforts with the Programme to enable the Executive Director to fully exercise his exclusive responsibility for coordinating and providing effective leadership for all United Nations drug control activities, in compliance with paragraph 4 of General Assembly resolution 45/179;

5. Urges all intergovernmental organizations having specific competence in drug control matters to collaborate fully with the Executive Director to ensure coordination, coherence of action, complementarity and non-duplication of activities with the Programme;

6. Requests the Executive Director to complete, as a matter of priority, the integration process of the Programme.

Emphasizing that the problem of drug abuse and illicit trafficking has to be considered within the broader economic and social context,

Reaffirming the importance of the role of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as the main focus for concerted international action for drug abuse control,

Underlining the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal United Nations policy-making body on drug control issues, and endorsing paragraph 1 (C) of Economic and Social Council resolution 1991/38 of 21 June 1991,

Reaffirming the importance of the full technical independence of the International Narcotics Control Board in accordance with article 9, paragraph 2, of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, and endorsing Economic and Social Council resolution 1991/48 of 21 June 1991 approving administrative arrangements between the Board and the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to ensure this independence,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the measures taken to implement resolution 45/179 on the enhancement of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control,

Noting that in the consideration of the programme budget proposals submitted by the Secretary-General for the biennium 1992-1993 full account should be taken of the measures proposed pursuant to resolution 45/179,

Commending the United Nations International Drug Control Programme for the activities undertaken so far in the performance of the functions entrusted to it,

Nations system, and in this context actively to seek cooperation and support for a global approach from other international organizations, non-governmental organizations, bilateral programmes and national institutions;

8. Strongly urges all Governments to provide the fullest possible financial and political support to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in particular by increasing the extrabudgetary contributions to the Programme, with a view to expanding and strengthening its operational activities and technical cooperation in particular with developing countries;

Endorses the proposal of the Secretary-General to place the financial resources of the existing United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control under the direct responsibility of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as a fund for financing operational activities, mainly in developing countries;

10. Emphasizes that, in accordance with established United Nations priorities as contained in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, adequate resources should be allocated so as to enable the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to carry out its activities and fulfil the functions assigned to it by resolution 45/179 and by other relevant General Assembly and Economic and Social Council resolutions;

International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned that the illicit demand for, production of and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances continue to pose a serious threat to mankind, to have a negative impact on the socio-economic and political systems and to threaten the stability, national security and sovereignty of an increasing number of States,

Reaffirming the principle of shared responsibility of the international community in combating drug abuse and illicit trafficking,

Reaffirming also that the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, the Political Declaration and the Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, and the Declaration adopted by the World Ministerial Summit to Reduce the Demand for Drugs and to combat the Cocaine Threat, held in London from 9 to 11 April 1990, together with the international drug control treaties, provide a comprehensive framework for international cooperation in drug control,

Recognizing the efforts made to date by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to implement the mandates and courses of action contained in the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control and the Global Programme of Action,

Emphasizing the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the principal policy-making body for drug control issues within the United Nations system,

Considering that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, in its resolution 2(XXXIV), selected seven priority themes around which the United Nations International Drug Control Programme is requested, in consultation with Governments, to develop proposals for a five-year plan to implement the Global Programme of Action, in the context of the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse, 1991-2000,

Noting with satisfaction that the regional meetings of heads of national drug law enforcement agencies and the Sub-commission on Illicit Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs are sources of very useful recommendations for law enforcement action at the regional level oriented towards solving specific problems of the various regions,

Reiterating that the transit routes used by drug traffickers change constantly and that an ever-growing number of countries in all regions of the world, and even entire regions, are particularly vulnerable to illicit transit traffic on account, inter alia, of their geographical location,

Alarmed by the growing connection between drug trafficking and terrorism,

Recognizing the efforts of countries that produce narcotic drugs for scientific, medicinal and therapeutic uses to prevent the channelling of such substances to illicit markets and to maintain production at a level consistent with licit demand,

Reiterating its condemnation of criminal activities that involve children in the use, production and illicit distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and appealing to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and other competent international agencies to give high priority to measures designed to address this problem,

Noting the increasing number of States acceding to or ratifying the international drug control treaties, including those that have become States parties to the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Taking note of United Nations Development Programme decision 1991/13 concerning the allocation of resources for drug abuse control and crop substitution, Reaffirming that all efforts to combat problems related to the consumption, production, manufacture and traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and the flow of money related to these activities should be accompanied by effective measures to promote the economic and social development of affected States,

Recalling its resolution 44/142 of 15 December 1989, in which it requested the Secretary-General to undertake a study on the economic and social consequences of illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and section II of its resolution 45/149 of 18 December 1990, in which it invited the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to study the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the Intergovernmental Expert Group to Study the Economic and Social Consequences of Illicit Traffic in Drugs,

Regretting that, owing to its heavy workload, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-fourth session could not undertake a thorough and extensive examination of the recommendations and conclusions contained in the report of the Intergovernmental Expert Group,

Bearing in mind that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs has decided to consider the recommendations of the Intergovernmental Expert Group, together with the comments of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and to report on its consideration to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, through the Economic and Social Council,

Noting with interest the reports of the Secretary-General,

I

International action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking

2. Strongly condemns the crime of drug trafficking in all its forms and urges continued commitment and effective international action to combat it, in keeping with the principle of shared responsibility and with full respect for national sovereignty and the cultural identity of States;
3. Urges Governments and organizations to adhere to the principles set forth in the Declaration adopted by the 'International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking and the Political Declaration adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, and to implement the recommendations contained in the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control and in the Global Programme of Action;
4. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to implement the mandates and recommendations contained in the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control and the Global Programme of Action, particularly those pertaining to demand reduction, treatment and social reintegration of drug addicts, reduction in supply, eradication and substitution of illicit crops, integrated rural development, educational programmes, expanded opportunities for trade and investment, including international cooperation to facilitate the marketing of substitute crops, elimination of illicit trafficking, interdiction, supervision and control of precursors and essential chemicals, money-laundering and problems of licit producers;
5. Welcomes the initiatives of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme aimed at promoting and supporting subregional programmes, as envisaged in the Global Programme of Action, and urges concerned Governments to cooperate with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and among themselves in implementing subregional strategies;
6. welcomes also the new arrangements for inter-agency cooperation, including the designation of focal points throughout the United Nations system, which should enhance the implementation of the United Nations System-Wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control;

7. Notes with appreciation that the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme has already allocated some resources under Special Programme Resources for the promotion of drug abuse control during the fifth programming cycle;

8. Supports the master-plan approach to drug control programmes at the national and regional levels that is being promoted by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme;

9. Notes with satisfaction increased international action for demand reduction, including the development by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System, and requests that appropriate attention be given to treatment and rehabilitation in all related activities;

10. Endorses the proposal of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs that the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme should develop proposals for a five-year plan to implement the Global Programme of Action, in the context of the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse, 1991-2000, giving priority to the themes selected by the Commission at its thirty-fourth session;

11. Welcomes the appointment of a Coordinator for the United Nations Decade against Drug Abuse, 1991-2000, invites the Coordinator to promote and monitor international efforts for the Decade, and requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, through the Economic and Social Council, to keep the General Assembly informed of developments in this area;

12. Expresses its satisfaction with initiatives to improve the functioning and impact of the network of regional meetings of heads of national drug law enforcement agencies, which, together with the Subcommission on Illicit Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East, constitute effective mechanisms against the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

13. Considers that analyses should be made of the methods and routes used for transit traffic of illicit narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, with a view to establishing a system that would enhance the interdiction capability of States along such routes;

14. Emphasizes the connection between the illicit production and supply of, demand for, sale of and traffic and transit in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances and the economic, social and cultural conditions of the countries affected and that solutions to these problems must take into account the differences and diversity of the problem in each country;

15. Calls upon the international community to provide increased international economic and technical cooperation to Governments, at their request, in support of programmes for the substitution of illicit crops by means of integrated rural development and alternative development programmes that respect fully the jurisdiction and sovereignty of countries and the cultural traditions of peoples;

16. Encourages all countries to take action to prevent the illicit arms trade by which weapons are provided to drug traffickers;

17. Welcomes the trend towards ratification and implementation of the Single Convention on Narcotic

Drugs of 1961, that Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol, the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 and the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988;

18. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in its activities to promote the implementation of the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances, and in its work generally, to deal specifically with all aspects of money-laundering and recommend measures that would facilitate regional and international cooperation in this area;

19. Stresses the need for effective action to prevent the diversion for illicit purposes of precursors and other chemicals, materials and equipment frequently used in the illicit manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

20. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its valuable work in monitoring production and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances so as to limit their use to medical and scientific purposes, and for implementing its additional responsibilities under the United Nations Convention against Illicit Trafficking in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances;

21. Urge Member States to increase substantially their voluntary contributions to the Fund of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to enable it to expand further its programmes;

22. Requests that adequate financial and human resources be allocated to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to enable it to discharge its mandate;

23. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation topics raised in the present section to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, under the item entitled "Narcotic drugs".

Implementation of the Global Programme of Action

The General Assembly, when it adopted the Global Programme of Action in 1990, requested the Secretary-General to monitor its implementation. Consequently, the Secretary-General conducted a system-wide analysis of drug control activities in the United Nations system. The analysis was discussed in his October report on international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking.<sup>(3)</sup>

Within the United Nations, the Department of Public Information showed its new video on the international drug situation, entitled "High Hopes", on the International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, in New York and at information centres worldwide on 26 June 1991.

Activities of UNDP related to drug abuse control were either financed and executed by UNDP itself or funded by UNDP and executed by UNDCP. Activities financed by UNDCP totalled $18.5 million in 1990 and were estimated to reach $33 million in 1991. In Latin America and the Caribbean, almost $28 million was earmarked for rural development or income substitution programmes, as well as activities to strengthen law enforcement, health programmes or the administration of justice. Activities were carried out in Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Guyana, Mexico, Peru and Saint Lucia. African programmes, costing $0.75 million, were oriented towards demand reduction and preventive education in Kenya, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Somalia and the United Republic of Tanzania. Of $4.6 million for projects in Asia and the Pacific, over one half was earmarked for eight projects in Thailand, with most going into rural development programmes. The remainder financed largely rural-based projects in Afghanistan, China, Myanmar and Pakistan.

Drug abuse control activities of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific continued to expand. A project on drug abuse prevention programme development was completed and a follow-up project initiated.

The United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and the United Nations University jointly initiated a research programme on the socio-economic and political consequences of the international trade in illegal drugs, resulting in the publication of a handbook as well as two essays on the drug trade. A workshop on the impact of production, trade and use of narcotic drugs was held at Geneva in May.

The United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI), with the participation of UNDCP, the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Centre for Human Rights, sought to define better the objectives for the prevention of drug abuse and the deviant and criminal phenomena linked to it, as well as to identify methodologies for the training in prevention. In March, UNICRI helped organize a multidisciplinary international seminar on cocaine and its effects on the individual and society.

The International Labour Organisation continued to expand its programmes on vocational rehabilitation and social reintegration of recovering addicts in the community and on prevention and assistance measures in the workplace.

In February 1991, the the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization signed a memorandum of understanding with UNDCP involving $1.4 million over two years for preventive education against drug abuse.

WHO continued to review dependence-producing psychoactive drugs and, in collaboration with the UNDCP Laboratory, expanded its fellowship training programme in laboratory testing of drugs of abuse. In the promotion of national plans of demand reduction, WHO cooperated with UNDCP in missions to Bolivia, Brazil and Nepal, and designed programmes for health sector action in all three countries. To improve the quality of health data on substance abuse, WHO developed the Abuse Trends Linkage Assessment System which provided a global overview of the health implications of current trends in substance abuse.

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued to address the supply side of the drug abuse problem. In its rural poverty alleviation programmes in areas where drug crops were cultivated, it tried to provide illicit drug producers with alternative income sources. Major projects were carried out in Bolivia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Myanmar and Peru involving expenditures by IFAD of almost $78 million.

Drug control-related activities were also carried out by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the International Trade Centre, the World Food Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the International Civil Aviation Organization, the Universal Postal Union, the International Maritime Organization and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1991, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 46/102.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 44/16 of 1 November 1989, 44/141 of 15 December 1989 and 45/148 of 18 December 1990, as well as Economic and Social Council resolution 1990/84 of 27 July 1990,

Stressing the important role of the United Nations, its relevant bodies and the specialized agencies in the fight against drug abuse at the national, regional and international levels,

Recalling the Political Declaration and Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session on 23 February 1990,

Emphasizing the continuing importance and validity of the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control, as adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, and the Declaration adopted at the World Ministerial Summit to Reduce the Demand for Drugs and to Combat the Cocaine Threat, held in London from 9 to 11 April 1990,

1. Reaffirms the commitment expressed in the Global Programme of Action and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control;

2. Calls upon States to take all possible steps to promote and implement individually and in cooperation with other States the mandates and recommendations contained in the Global Programme of Action, with a view to translating the Programme into practical action to the widest possible extent at the national, regional and international levels;

3. Requests the Commission on Narcotic Drugs and in particular the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to promote and continuously monitor the implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

4. Calls upon the United Nations and its relevant bodies, the specialized agencies, other relevant intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations to extend their cooperation and assistance to States in the promotion and implementation of the Global Programme of Action;

Charter of the United Nations and international law

In his October report on international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary-General, in complying with a request of the General Assembly of 1990,<sup>(15)</sup> discussed respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking. Outlining the legal framework for international cooperation through drug control treaties, the Secretary-General recalled the guiding principles of the United Nations fight against drug abuse: sovereignty of States; shared responsibility between them; non-interference in their internal affairs; and strengthening of cooperation under mutually agreed conditions through bilateral and multi-lateral mechanisms.

The principles applied to the bilateral and regional assistance offered by UNDCP, which was extended to developing countries only at their request. UNDCP had developed a master-plan approach entailing identification by the country or region involved of drug control activities already under way, resources available and future requirements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1991, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 46/101.

Respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking

The General Assembly,

Conscious that the adoption of the Political Declaration and the Global Programme of Action at its seventeenth special session, devoted to the question of international cooperation against illicit production, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, was an important step in the harmonization of the efforts of all to combat this scourge of mankind,

Reaffirming the purpose of the United Nations to develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace,

Convinced that intensification of international cooperation and concerted action among States is the fundamental basis for confronting the problem of drug abuse and illicit trafficking,

Recognizing that the international fight against illicit trafficking should be pursued in full conformity with the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, and the principles of international law, particularly respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, non-interference in the internal affairs of States, and non-use of force or the threat of force in international relations,

1. Reaffirms that the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking should continue to be based on strict respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, particularly respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of States, non-interference in the internal affairs of States, and non-use of force or the threat of force in international relations;

2. Calls upon all States to intensify their actions to promote effective cooperation in the efforts to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking, so as to contribute to a climate conducive to achieving this end, and to refrain from using the issue for political purposes;

3. Affirms that the international fight against drug trafficking should not in any way justify violation of the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law, particularly the right of all peoples freely to determine, without external interference, their political status and to pursue their economic, social and cultural development, and that every State has the duty to respect this right in accordance with the provisions of the Charter;

4. Invites the Secretary-General, in preparing the report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, and the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, in carrying out the activities of the Programme, to give due consideration to the principles set out in the present resolution;

5. Decides to consider at its forty-seventh session the question of respect for the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and international law in the fight against drug abuse and illicit trafficking under the item entitled "Narcotic drugs".

Supply and demand

Demand reduction

In April/May 1991, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered a 1990 report of the Secretary-General which reviewed drug abuse and measures to reduce illicit demand.<sup>(16)</sup> The report analysed responses to a questionnaire on the implementation of seven targets on demand reduction of the 1987 Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline.<sup>(5)</sup>

INCB, in its 1991 report,<sup>(17)</sup> stated that reduction of illicit demand was a critical and intractable component of the drug problem. Unless progress towards demand reduction was made, sustained successes in other dimensions of the drug equation would only be temporary, since one source of supply or one particular drug would promptly be substituted by another. The Board reiterated that Governments should redouble their efforts to accelerate progress in reducing drug abuse. Success required involvement at the family and community levels; stress should be placed on preventive measures aimed at young children as well as on education against all kinds of substance abuse.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/46 without vote.

Reduction of the demand for narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances

The Economic and Social Council,

Recognising the crucial importance of demand reduction as part of a balanced approach to combat the drug problem,

Welcoming the work currently being undertaken in demand reduction by the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the specialized agencies and the establishment by the World Health Organization of its Programme on Substance Abuse,

Recognising the important role that regional and intergovernmental organizations can play in the development of demand reduction programmes adapted to specific regional conditions,

Noting the results being achieved by the Declaration and the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control adopted by the International Conference on Drug Abuse<sup>1</sup> and illicit Trafficking, the Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session and the Declaration adopted at the World Ministerial Summit to Reduce the Demand for Drugs and to Combat the Cocaine Threat, held in London from 9 to 11 April 1990,

Recalling its earlier resolutions on the subject, especially resolution 1989/14 of 22 May 1989,

Welcoming the analysis of the replies to the questionnaire on the implementation of the seven targets set out in chapter I of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline, as contained in the report of the Secretary-General on the review of drug abuse and measures to reduce illicit demand,

Recognising the benefits of sharing information on demand reduction strategies and their effectiveness,

Welcoming the establishment of mechanisms such as the United Kingdom demand reduction task force announced at the World Ministerial Summit,

Noting the development in some countries of needle exchange schemes as a means of harm reduction, particularly the containment of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infection, and the claims of some countries that this approach is of value,

Considering the importance of education in helping young people and others to resist the pressures to take drugs and the fact that such education is best set in the context of continuing progressive programmes of preventive health education and health promotion,

Recognising the major role that non-governmental organizations continue to play in the development and implementation of demand reduction strategies,

1. Urges all Governments, particularly Governments of countries where serious problems of drug misuse exist, to consider adopting or further developing national strategies for demand reduction and to give such strategies at least the same priority as those to combat the illicit traffic in drugs;

2. Recognizes the importance of giving due attention to the underlying causes of the demand for drugs, in particular the disadvantages that youth and other groups at risk often experience in inner-city areas;

3. Encourages all Governments to continue to develop education through schools, colleges and youth organizations and, in the wider community, to enable young people and others to acquire the necessary information, skills and attitudes to resist pressures to take drugs, and to live healthy lives;

4. Urges all Governments to provide or support preventive education and training opportunities for teachers, youth leaders and other professionals who work with young people in order to equip them to educate and otherwise help young people who are at risk because of current or likely drug use;

5. Emphasizes the importance of providing information and education materials to encourage and to help parents to understand their own influence as role models and to help promote the health of their children;

6. Emphasizes also the grave impact of drug-taking on health, safety and costs in the workplace;

7. Invites all Governments to encourage employers and employees to develop joint action programmes which publicize information in the workplace, warning of the risks of drug use, and which help employees to obtain advice and appropriate treatment;

8. Emphasizes the importance of coordinated and consistent action between governmental and non-governmental organizations at the local and national levels in fostering education, training and treatment initiatives;

9. Stresses the need to develop comprehensive treatment, rehabilitation and social reintegration options, including services tailored to the specific needs of different groups of drug users;

10. Urges all Governments to reflect in education campaigns the serious implications of drug-injecting for the spread of HIV infection and acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS);

11. Encourages Governments, in the light of the spread of HIV infection, to work strenuously to bring greater numbers of drug abusers, particularly those who inject, into contact with treatment services and agencies;

12. Urges Governments that have chosen to make available sterile syringes and needles to conduct such schemes under close monitoring and, to the extent possible, to evaluate the efficacy of those schemes in reducing the spread of HIV infection, as well as their usefulness as contact opportunities to encourage drug-dependent persons to enter or remain in treatment;

13. Encourages Governments with appropriate expertise to consider establishing mechanisms to share with interested States knowledge and expertise on the development and evaluation of demand reduction strategies, in coordination with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme and the specialized agencies and utilizing the experience of relevant non-governmental organizations where appropriate;

14. Encourages the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to continue to develop the work undertaken by the former United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, in particular by elaborating master plans that give due attention to demand reduction activities tailored to regional and local needs and by providing a greater proportion of extrabudgetary resources for related intervention programmes;

15. Urges States that are able to do so to increase substantially their voluntary contributions to the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to enable it to expand further its operational and technical assistance programmes, especially in the demand reduction sector;

16. Requests the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to utilize the database of its International Drug Abuse Assessment System to disseminate the demand reduction information received from Governments, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and non-governmental organizations in such a way that it helps Governments and those organizations to develop their demand reduction policies;

17. Encourages non-governmental organizations to continue to develop their work on demand reduction in coordination with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme;

18. Invites the New York Non-Governmental Organization Committee on Narcotics and Substance Abuse and the Vienna Non-Governmental Organization Committee on Narcotic Drugs to coordinate the preparation of an annual report, for submission to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, on activities of international non-governmental organizations within the relevant terms of reference of the Commission;

19. Requests the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme to continue the analytical work on progress achieved in implementing targets 1 to 7 of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control and to prepare a succinct report for consideration by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-fifth session on progress achieved at the national and international levels in implementing targets 29 to 35 of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline;

20. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the present resolution to all Governments, specialized agencies and relevant non-governmental organizations in consultative status with the Economic and Social Council for consideration and implementation as appropriate.

International drug abuse assessment system

During 1991, UNDCP sought to develop an International Drug Abuse Assessment System (IDAAS) to provide a comprehensive overview and analysis of drug abuse and prevention programmes being pursued by Governments and national organizations. Information relating to all aspects of drug abuse, including epidemiology, prevention, education, treatment, rehabilitation and social integration obtained from Governments in response to a questionnaire adopted by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs in accordance with the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic

Drugs<sup>(18)</sup> An expert group had met in October 1990<sup>(19)</sup> to revise the questionnaire, which was accepted by the Commission in May 1991<sup>(20)</sup> as a replacement of part B of the annual reports questionnaire. UNDCP began the process of computerizing the previous five years of records in this area in order to form the basis of IDAAS.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/45 without vote.

Implementation of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind that the parties to the international drug control treaties have an obligation to submit to the Secretary-General an annual report on the workings of the treaties within their territories,

Recognizing that an assessment of the nature and extent of drug abuse constitutes the basis of drug demand reduction policies and programmes at the local, national and international levels,

Recalling Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 3 (S-X) of 19 February 1988 on the establishment of an international drug abuse assessment system,

Recalling also that the General Assembly, in Paragraph 13 of the Global Programme of Action annexed to its resolution S-17/2 of 23 February 1990, requested States to establish databases consistent with the international drug abuse assessment system being developed by the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat,

Having considered the report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on its thirty-fourth session,

1. Urges all States to give high priority to the collection of quality drug abuse data for use, inter alia, in annual reports to the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with appreciation the work done by the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, with the expert assistance of and in cooperation with the International Narcotics Control Board, the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, the World Health Organization and other international and regional organizations, on the development of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System;

3. Expresses its gratitude to Governments that have contributed to the development and field testing of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System;

4. Endorses Commission on Narcotic Drugs decision 1 (XXXIV) of 9 May 1991, in which the Commission decided to use, beginning with the annual reports questionnaire for the calendar year 1991, the revised version of part B of the annual reports questionnaire, incorporating the changes recommended by the Expert Group Meeting on the Establishment of an International Drug Abuse Assessment System, held at Vienna from 29 to 31 October 1990;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to revise also other parts of the annual reports questionnaire and, using modern presentation techniques, to make such changes in format as may be appropriate to achieve optimum acceptability and to facilitate its use;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to allocate adequate resources from existing regular budget appropriations, as of the biennium 1992-1993, to implement the International Drug Abuse Assessment System and to ensure its continued viability;

7. Invites the specialized agencies, as well as other relevant intergovernmental and regional organizations, to contribute to the provision of data to the International Drug Abuse Assessment System and to collaborate with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme in its implementation;

8. Encourages all Governments to support, and to participate actively in the implementation of the International Drug Abuse Assessment System.

Narcotic raw materials for licit use

In 1991, INCB continued to monitor the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs. It stated that, in 1990, the last year for which complete statistical information was available, aggregate annual consumption of opiates amounted to approximately 200 metric tons in morphine equivalent. Codeine continued to account for the substantial part, totalling 160 tons in morphine equivalent, having remained at that level for two decades. Morphine consumption continued to increase, to nearly 7 tons. From 1980 to 1985, annual global production of opiate raw materials declined; total annual production from 1986 to 1990 was on average 40 tons in morphine equivalent below global consumption, thus reducing excess stocks of raw materials. The Board estimated that the trend was likely to continue through 1991.

The Board reiterated its recommendation that all producer countries refrain from increasing areas of opium poppy cultivation until excess global stocks of raw materials were depleted.

Following the publication in 1989, in conjunction with WHO, of its special report on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs,<sup>(21)</sup> INCB had reviewed the methods used by Governments to assess their domestic needs for opiates. It continued its cooperation with WHO as well as with other bodies of the United Nations system and intergovernmental organizations whose programmes included rational use of opiates, particularly codeine and morphine, which were on the WHO list of essential drugs.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/43 without vote.

Demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling its resolutions 1979/8 of 9 May 1979, 1980/20 of 30 April 1980, 1981/8 of 6 May 1981, 1982/12 of 30 April 1982, 1983/3 of 24 May 1983, 1984/21 of 24 May 1984, 1985/16 of 28 May 1985, 1986/9 of 21 May 1986, 1987/31 of 26 May 1987, 1988/10 of 25 May 1988, 1989/15 of 22 May 1989 and 1990/31 of 24 May 1990,

Emphasizing once again that achieving a balance between the licit supply of opiates and the legitimate demand for opiates for medical and scientific purposes constitutes an important aspect of the international strategy and policy of drug abuse control and that resolving the problem of excess stocks of opiate raw materials is an essential step in that direction,

Noting the fundamental need for international cooperation and solidarity in overcoming the problem of excess stocks, which imposes heavy financial and other burdens on the traditional supplier countries,

Having considered the special report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1989 on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs, and the recommendations contained therein,

1. Urges all Governments to give serious consideration to ways to bring about a rapid improvement in solving the problem of excess stocks of opiate raw materials held by the traditional supplier countries;

2. Commends the International Narcotics Control Board for its special report on the demand for and supply of opiates for medical and scientific needs, in which the Board, inter alia, highlighted the impediments to the availability of opiates for medical use, impediments which make it difficult to assess the full licit medical needs for opiates realistically;

3. Requests the International Narcotics Control Board to accord priority to monitoring the implementation of the recommendations contained in the above-mentioned report;

4. Requests the World Health Organization to develop guidelines on the rational use of opiates and on the treatment of conditions for which opiates may be prescribed, with a view to assisting Governments in evolving national policy in this regard;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments for consideration and implementation.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1991/43

21 June 1991 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1991/103) without vote, 19 June (meeting 201: draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1991/24); agenda item 10.

Illicit traffic

Drug law enforcement

In his report on international action to combat drug abuse and illicit trafficking,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that technical advice continued to be provided to Member States. Substantive servicing of the global network of meetings was provided in order to enhance coordination of action against illicit traffic. The network included the Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East and the meetings of the Heads of National Drug Law Enforcement Agencies (HONLEA) for other regions (see below). By adopting a new approach of identifying the most urgent issues facing drug law enforcement, the meetings had attracted a wider participation by both States and individuals than in previous years. Other developments included the completion in December 1990 of the United Nations Drug Law Enforcement Training Manual.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. On 9 May 1991,<sup>(26)</sup> the Commission on Narcotic Drugs invited UNDCP to convene working groups for the purpose of developing a law enforcement training strategy for each region. It recommended the establishment of subregional training centres based on those strategies and requested the Executive Director of UNDCP to promote the use of the training manual and to develop and update the manual so as to meet the varying training needs of regions and subregions. In other action,<sup>(27)</sup> the Commission recommended that each Government establish a national drug intelligence unit as a basis for coordinating operations against illicit drug trafficking. Periodic consultations should be organized between the coordinating units at the subregional level, international assistance should be provided to Governments in setting up the units, and all States should provide UNDCP with details concerning the structure of the units.

Diversion of chemicals for illicit drug production

In its 1991 report, INCB stated that effective implementation of the 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances<sup>(22)</sup>—to prevent diversion of precursors from legitimate commerce—required adoption by Governments of practical control measures. A number of steps were taken collectively by some Governments, including the establishment in 1990 of a Chemical Action Task Force (CATF) by the Group of Seven major industrialized countries. Having participated in the work of CATF, INCB recommended that the international community consider the comprehensive control measures proposed by it.

Action by the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. In 1991, the Commission on Narcotic Drugs considered a 1990 report of INCB<sup>(23)</sup> on the implementation of article 12 of the 1988 Convention, which dealt with the control of precursors. On 9 May,<sup>(24)</sup> the Commission welcomed the establishment of CATF and urged States to act together but also independently in establishing measures whereby the legitimacy of chemical shipments might be determined and to develop the means whereby suspicions on the legitimacy of specific transactions might promptly be communicated between them.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/40 without vote.

Control of chemicals used in the production of cocaine, heroin and other illicit drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Aware that chemicals are essential to the processing of illicit drugs, that such chemicals are produced worldwide and are shipped to Latin America and that a large percentage of the chemicals are being diverted to drug cartels,

Welcoming the escalated efforts of Latin American States to restrict the import, export and production of such chemicals, as demonstrated by the model regulations to control chemical precursors and chemical substances, machines and materials, recommended by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in June 1990,

Noting that six Latin American States have incorporated the model regulations into their national legislation and that others are considering similar action,

Recognizing the importance of controlling the export of such chemicals, as illustrated by the fact that the issue of chemical control was raised at the drug summit held at Cartagena, Colombia, on 15 February 1990, and at the sixteenth annual economic summit, held at Houston, Texas, in July 1990,

Considering that the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988, which entered into force on 11 November 1990, specifically deals with chemical control,

Noting that the United States of America took positive action in passing the Chemical Diversion and Trafficking Act of 1988, which gives its Drug Enforcement Administration the authority to stop shipments of chemicals not destined for legitimate industrial, commercial or scientific use,

Convinced that it is vital to the world-wide effort to combat drug abuse that chemicals used to process illicit drugs are controlled and monitored at their source and destination and that the resulting information is communicated to the competent authorities of the country concerned,

Bearing in mind that the Council of Ministers of the European Community is currently considering a draft directive for the control of chemicals, which, if adopted, will be the standard used by each State member of the Community in developing national legislation on chemical control,

Wishing to ensure that measures to control precursor chemicals are both specific and comprehensive in designating the chemicals subject to monitoring and control, including, for example, 2-butanone (methyl ethyl ketone) and potassium permanganate,

1. Urges all Governments that have not approved legislation for the control and monitoring of precursors and essential chemicals to do so as soon as possible, using as one of their references the model regulations to control chemical precursors and chemical substances, machines and materials recommended by the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in June 1990;

2. Urges States that are the main producers of precursors and essential chemicals in Europe and elsewhere to work with the International Narcotics Control Board and heads of national drug law enforcement agencies in drafting and enacting suitably comprehensive laws, taking into account the model regulations recommended by the Organization of American States;

3. Requests the relevant United Nations entities and the competent regional and interregional organizations to make available the funds and support required for the provision of training in the application of regulations for the control and monitoring of precursors and essential chemicals, as well as resources for establishing specialized offices in that field.

Diversion of psychotropic drugs for illicit use

INCB reported that most States parties to the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances<sup>(25)</sup> cooperated with INCB in providing statistics so that it was able to monitor the movement of those substances. INCB expressed concern, however, that some major manufacturing and exporting countries not yet adhering to the Convention were affecting the efficacy of controls in importing countries. The diversion of large quantities of psychotropic substances to illicit channels in parts of Africa and Asia remained a problem and INCB called for a continuous and timely flow of information from national authorities so that INCB could maintain effective operation of the international control system for those substances. Problems arose, for example, because in a number of exporting countries, the manufacture of drugs destined for other countries was not under the same stringent control as manufacture for the domestic market. Unscrupulous companies and individuals continued to take advantage of the inadequacy of control methods in certain countries to manufacture psychotropic substances destined for illicit markets.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June and on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Council adopted resolution 1991/44 without vote.

Prevention of diversion from international trade into illicit channels of psychotropic substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting with concern the widespread and increasing abuse of psychotropic substances in many countries and the related trafficking, which often involves diversion from licit channels,

Alarmed by the large quantities of substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971 that have been diverted from international trade into illicit channels,

Recognising that the present control mechanisms for international trade set forth in the Convention require further strengthening if diversion into illicit channels of substances listed in Schedules III and IV is to be prevented,

Recalling targets 8 and 10 of the Comprehensive Multidisciplinary Outline of Future Activities in Drug Abuse Control,

Bearing in mind the Political Declaration and the Global Programme of Action adopted by the General Assembly at its seventeenth special session, in particular the section of the Global Programme of Action on the control of the supply of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Reiterating its request, contained in its resolutions 1985/15 of 28 May 1985 and 1987/30 of 26 May 1987, to all Governments, to the extent possible, voluntarily to extend the system of import and export authorizations provided for in article 12, paragraph 1, of the Convention to cover international trade in substances listed in Schedules III and IV,

Recalling its resolution 1981/7 of 6 May 1981, in which it invited all Governments to assess from time to time their medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedule II of the Convention,

Noting with satisfaction that the system of assessment of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedule II of the Convention has contributed effectively to the prevention of diversion of those substances from licit international trade into illicit channels,

Having considered the report of the International Narcotics Control Board for 1990, in particular paragraph 38, concerning the successful operation of the simplified estimate system with regard to substances listed in Schedule II of the Convention,

1. Invites all Governments to extend the system of voluntary assessments of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedule II to include also substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention on Psychotropic Substances of 1971;

2. Calls upon importing countries to exercise continuing vigilance to ensure that imports of psychotropic substances are in accordance with requirements for medical and scientific purposes and to cooperate with exporting countries and with the International Narcotics Control Board in order to prevent the diversion of such substances into illicit channels;

3. Invites all Governments to communicate from time to time their assessments of annual medical and scientific requirements for substances listed in Schedules III and IV of the Convention to the International

Narcotics Control Board for publication, with a view to providing guidance for manufacture and export;

4. Also invites all Governments to develop mechanisms to ensure that exports of psychotropic substances are in line with the assessments of importing countries and, if necessary, to consult with the Governments of such countries or with the International Narcotics Control Board on such matters;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to all Governments and to invite them to bring it to the attention of the competent national authorities in order to ensure the implementation of its provisions.

Regional issues

Africa

Drug control administrations in Africa were not, in the view of INCB, sufficiently well-structured and efficient. Unreliable statistical data made it difficult to obtain a clear picture of the international licit movements of controlled substances. The Board identified three factors contributing to the abuse and trafficking situation in the region: traditional trafficking and abuse of cannabis; transit trafficking in heroin and cocaine and the resulting local abuse of those drugs; and trafficking in and abuse of psychotropic substances.

During 1991, UNDCP further developed its subregionally structured approach to the growing drug problems in Africa. Projects in over 30 countries were grouped in four subregions, and assistance was concentrated on improving legislation and on training and equipping drug law enforcement squads to protect the local populations.

The fourth meeting of HONLEA, Africa, was held at Nairobi, Kenya, from 15 to 19 April 1991.

Asia

East and South-East Asia. Illicit opiate production in parts of South-East Asia remained at a high level. Trafficking from Myanmar, the major illicit opium producer, caused major opiate abuse along new routes, notably in China. Cannabis continued to be extensively cultivated and readily available, and seizure data indicated that traffickers sought to establish new markets for cocaine.

However, some important steps were taken by Governments in the region to tight more effectively against drug trafficking and the spread of drug abuse. Bilateral and multilateral discussions were held and important agreements reached on ways to improve coordination among national authorities. Within that framework, in addition to providing Governments with technical assistance, UNDCP assisted them in coordinating national drug control activities. As a result of those efforts, in May 1991, China and Myanmar signed an agreement to strengthen border controls and improve cooperation. INCB was able for the first time to initiate a dialogue with Mongolia and an INCB mission visited the country in August.

South Asia. The large quantities of heroin which previously transited India from Pakistan bound for Europe and North America appeared to have declined, though seizures in some coastal towns suggested that alternative routes might be developing on a reduced scale. The significant shift of transit heroin away from India towards Eastern Europe were possibly related to the political changes in that region, as well as to the Indian Government's stringent legislative and administrative measures.

The sixteenth meeting of HONLEA, Asia and the Pacific, was held at Canberra, Australia, from 28 October to 1 November 1991.

Europe

In its 1991 report, INCB welcomed the efforts for regional cooperation which had been bolstered by the creation of a number of European organizations and committees. However, the political and economic changes under way in several countries in Central and Eastern Europe had increased the danger that drug abuse and trafficking would spread further there.

Seizure data showed that drug trafficking was increasing throughout Europe. The purity of heroin seized at street level had increased, while prices had remained stable. In recent years, law enforcement agencies had concentrated their efforts against cocaine and heroin trafficking, but in the light of evolving seizure data, increased action was also warranted against trafficking in other drugs.

In Western Europe, the abuse of cannabis and heroin appeared either to be levelling off or even declining, while abuse of cocaine was increasing. Heroin and poly-drug abusers accounted for most of the increase in drug-related deaths.

Near and Middle East

Demand for opiates and cannabis inside and outside the Near and Middle East continued to stimulate drug production, which was reflected in massive seizures. Abuse was increasing, in addition to a growing illicit market for psychotropic substances. Control problems were compounded by the presence of a large number of refugees. Annual opium production was substantial, largely in Afghanistan. Heroin trafficked to Europe from the Near and Middle East went via the Balkan route. The Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East was urged by INCB to consider the issue of illicit Poppy cultivation, especially in Afghanistan. The Subcommission was called on to adopt measures to verify the extent and location of cultivation as well as to contain and reduce opiate production. An INCB mission to Afghanistan in February found that estimates of annual opium production varied widely—from 400 metric tons to well over double that figure. Projects to support crop substitution continued to be carried out in Afghanistan by UNDP in cooperation with UNDCP. As recommended by the INCB mission, UNDCP established a permanent office in Kabul in 1991.

Following a mission to Pakistan, where the high level of production was reflected in seizures within the country and abroad, INCB stated that consensus at the highest levels was necessary if trafficking organizations were to be crippled.

In Turkey, the control of licit production of poppy straw for the extraction of alkaloids continued to function effectively and no opium was produced. However, the country was widely used by traffickers to smuggle large amounts of drugs produced in the region to Europe.

The Subcommission on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East held its twenty-eighth session in 1991 (Tehran, Iran, 25-29 November).

The Subcommission recommended that a subregional training centre be established at Tehran and that an annual seminar be held for trainers to ensure that training courses contained relevant information on illicit traffic developments. The seminar would be coordinated by UNDCP in conjunction with the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) and the Customs Cooperation Council (CCC).

The Subcommission requested UNDCP to consult with Interpol and CCC for the production of guidance material on the use of “controlled delivery”; to assist the members of the Subcommission in establishing a system of contact points for their drug law enforcement authorities; and to consider arranging seminars for groups of neighbouring countries on the subject of mutual legal assistance arrangements. UNDCP was also requested to recommend action to control illicit traffic in fenetylline.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/41 without vote.

Establishment of regional drug law enforcement countermeasures in the Near and Middle East in the context of socio-economic and cultural development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling and reaffirming Commission on Narcotic Drugs resolution 3(XXXIII) of 17 February 1989, Recognizing drug law enforcement training as being central to the fight against illicit drugs.

Desiring to bring about high-calibre training of drug law enforcement personnel throughout the Near and Middle East,

Emphasising the urgent need for a regionally focused, comprehensive training plan, based on the requirements, concerns, priorities and prevailing socio-economic and cultural conditions of the region,

Expressing its appreciation to the Secretariat for the development of the United Nations drug law enforcement training manual,

Charing the manual to be a milestone in the field of drug law enforcement and a new international instrument of paramount significance that provides States with a model and a set of guidelines that reflect the best practice, methods and techniques to be pursued,

Considering also that the manual will standardize training at an upgraded level, enhance specialized skills and improve operational performance, which will result in overall compatibility and greater cooperative drug law enforcement interaction and counter-action,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake, as a matter of high priority and as soon as possible, in close cooperation with the Arab Security Studies and Training-centre, the Colombo Plan Bureau, the International Criminal Police Organization and other interested parties, for the benefit of all States in the Near and Middle East, in the context of socio-economic and cultural development:

(a) To disseminate and to promote the widest possible use of the United Nations drug law enforcement training manual at all levels and to intensify training activities based on its content;

(b) To assess training needs, priorities and concerns, in consultation with relevant officials and institutions in the region;

(c) To establish and coordinate a region-wide drug law enforcement training plan and programme and to design and conduct courses to meet the challenge of the ever-changing patterns of illicit traffic in a more effective, cooperative and interactive way;

(d) conduct research and impact studies on the use of the manual;

(e) To continually update and develop supplementary, specialized drug law enforcement training material,

(f) To establish collaborative subregional training centres for drug law enforcement officials;

2. Invites the Arab Security Studies and Training Centre, the Colombo Plan Bureau, the Customs Cooperation Council, the International Criminal Police Organization and other parties concerned to work jointly with the Secretariat in the implementation of the present resolution.

Approved by Sanction Committee (E/1991/103) without vote, 19 June (meeting 20); draft by commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1991/24); agenda item

Also on 21 June 1991 and on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Council adopted resolution 1991/42 without vote.

Convening of a meeting at the ministerial level in the Near and Middle East to enhance the effectiveness of cooperation in resolving matters related to illicit trafficking and drug abuse

The Economic and Social Council,

Considering the alarming increase in the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs in the Near and Middle East,

Aware of the supply of illicit narcotic drugs in certain States in the region and the spill-over effects it may have on transit and neighbouring States in the region,

Convinced of the importance of concerted efforts by States to cooperate in combating these problems,

1. Recommends that all States members of the Subcommittee on Illicit Drug Traffic and Related Matters in the Near and Middle East should ensure that their delegations at the twenty-eighth session and at all subsequent sessions of the Subcommittee held in the region include the heads of operational law enforcement units, with a view to elaborating practical recommendations to resolve matters related to illicit trafficking;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to convene a meeting at the ministerial level in the Near and Middle East to enhance the effectiveness of regional cooperation by considering the early implementation of the recommendations made by the Subcommittee at its twenty-eighth session, particularly in respect of transit routes, including the Balkan route.

21 June 1991 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1991/103) without vote, 19 June (meeting 20); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1991/24); agenda item 10.

North America

Drug abuse in the United States, which emerged as a national problem in the late 1960s and had become increasingly serious, stabilized or decreased in 1991. The number of cocaine abusers was estimated by the National Household Survey on Drug Abuse to have declined around 70 per cent between 1985 and 1990; the number of users of all illicit drugs was estimated to have decreased from 23 million to 13 million in the same period.

Cocaine, particularly in the form of "crack", continued to pose a major threat; the estimated number of abusers remained unchanged at about half a million. Heroin abuse and trafficking showed signs of increasing, apparently due to increased supplies, lower prices and higher purities stemming from high production levels in South-East Asia. Lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD) had reappeared as the drug of choice among certain groups of abusers.

The United States cooperated with many countries bilaterally and multilaterally to fight drug trafficking and money-laundering. On the supply-reduction front, agreements were entered into with Bolivia and Peru. In addition, cooperation was strengthened with Mexico and the Caribbean countries in joint efforts to control air- and sea-trafficking lanes.

Drug abuse increased in Mexico in 1991, while in Canada, cocaine abuse appeared steady despite a dramatic increase in seizures. Cannabis continued to be the most widely abused drug in Canada.

Latin America and the Caribbean

Encouraging developments in some countries in the South American region were reported by INCB. The Andean countries strengthened cooperation through multilateral and bilateral law enforcement agreements and by developing broad economic and social strategies aimed at replacing the coca economy with a healthy formal economy. Attacks by the Bolivian and Colombian authorities against trafficking organizations achieved impressive results, although in some parts of the Andean region guerrilla groups continued to hinder drug control efforts and eradication programmes. Serious economic problems also impeded the implementation of comprehensive drug control strategies.

In response to drug control efforts, traffickers became more innovative at all steps in the drug trafficking chain. During 1991, trafficking routes proliferated and virtually all countries were being used for transiting drugs and precursors; increasingly sophisticated means were being used to launder money derived from the illicit activities.

The chief and many members of the Medellín cartel, Colombia's most powerful trafficking organization, were taken into custody in 1991. Coca bush cultivation had decreased, but illicit production and trafficking in cocaine remained the great challenge to authorities. During the first seven months of 1991, over 60 tons of cocaine were seized.

Peru's serious economic situation and the continuing demand for coca leaf led to increased coca bush cultivation, and the country remained the world's main producer of coca leaf. Successful law enforcement and military action was hampered by insurgent violence and terrorist acts on the part of guerrilla groups, which also hindered rural development activities.

While coca bush cultivation decreased significantly in Brazil - a result of eradication operations carried out over the last five years - traffickers continued to use the country as a transshipment point for cocaine destined for the United States and Europe.

As controls became stricter and enforcement operations intensified in several South American and Caribbean countries, traffickers continued to shift and expand their operations to Central America.

The fourth meeting of HONLEA, Latin America and the Caribbean, was held at Santa Cruz de la Sierra, Bolivia, from 8 to 12 October 1991. Among its recommendations, most of which were addressed to Governments of the region, was a request that UNDCP study new mechanisms throughout the region for financial cooperation, with a view to strengthening and expanding communications and control networks, including drug detection equipment.

Conventions

INCB reported that, as of 1 November 1991, the number of parties to the 1961 Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, <sup>(18)</sup> in its original or amended forms, stood at 133. Of that number, 106 were parties to the Convention as amended by the 1972 Protocol. <sup>(28)</sup> Since the Board's 1990 report, the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands, Mongolia and Saint Lucia had become parties to the 1961 Convention and that Convention as amended. Parties to the 1971 Convention on Psychotropic Substances <sup>(25)</sup> numbered 106, including the three countries which became parties in 1991: the Federated States of Micronesia, Luxembourg and the Marshall Islands. The Board was concerned that 20 years after the conclusion of the 1971 Convention, a number of developed countries had not become parties, despite their announced intentions to do so. The Board asked that they do so, since several of them were major manufacturers and exporters of psychotropic substances.

The control system for psychotropic substances set forth in the 1971 Convention was working well. Many parties and non-parties applied the controls stipulated in the Convention as well as the special voluntary measures recommended by the Board to bolster those controls.

The 1988 United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances <sup>(22)</sup> had entered into force on 11 November 1990. As of 1 November 1991, a total of 50 States and the European Economic Community had become parties to it. The Convention was adopted by 106 States at a plenipotentiary conference in Vienna in 1988. Its 34 substantive articles covered a wide range of international activities designed to counter the threat of trafficking organizations operating on a global scale. As none of the Conventions could operate fully unless all States became Parties and actively carried out their obligations, the Board appealed to States which had not done so to become parties to all three Conventions without further delay.

Under the 1971 Convention, drugs which might be abused were placed under international control. Schedule I listed those substances which were completely prohibited, except for scientific and limited medical purposes. Schedules II, III and IV dictated that each of the parties to the Convention must apply specific control measures in order to limit manufacture, export, import, distribution, stockpiles, trade, use and possession to medical and scientific purposes.

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs, on 29 April, <sup>(29)</sup> decided that delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol (delta-9-THC) and its stereochemical variants should be transferred from Schedule I to Schedule II of the 1971 Convention. It also decided <sup>(30)</sup> that propylhexedrine should be deleted from Schedule IV. In other action, <sup>(31)</sup> the Commission terminated the exemption by the United States of 55 preparations containing butalbital from certain control measures provided for in the Convention.

Organizational questions

Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Commission on Narcotic Drugs held its thirty-fourth session at Vienna from 29 April to 9 May 1991. <sup>(32)</sup>

On 28 January 1991, <sup>(33)</sup> the Chairman of the Commission informed the Secretary-General that it would be necessary to establish an ad hoc committee of the whole to meet simultaneously with the Commission. That arrangement would enable the Commission to consider ways of improving its functioning as a policy-making body, as requested by the General Assembly in 1990. <sup>(34)</sup>

On 7 February, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1991/201, requested the Commission to establish an ad hoc committee of the whole at its thirty-fourth session.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted three resolutions related to the Commission on Narcotic Drugs. The Council adopted resolution 1991/38 without vote.

Terms of reference of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling that the General Assembly, in its resolution 45/179 of 21 December 1990, requested the Commission on Narcotic Drugs to consider ways and means of improving its functioning as a policy-making body and to submit its recommendations to the Council at its first regular session of 1991,

Taking into account the report of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs on its thirty-fourth session,

Considering that the terms of reference of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs, as laid down in Council resolution 9(I) of 16 February 1946, need to be adjusted and broadened in the light of the intensification of international cooperation against illicit cultivation, production, manufacture, supply, demand, trafficking and distribution of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, as well as against money-laundering and in the control of chemicals used in the illicit production of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances,

Considering the functions of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs under the international drug control treaties,

Considering also that in its future activities the Commission should apply an integral and balanced approach to the drug problem, taking into account all its aspects,

Reaffirming that, in fulfilling its mandate, the Commission should apply the principles underlying current international cooperation in this field, in particular, shared responsibility and balanced attention to supply and demand, and taking into account the relation in a number of countries between the drug problem and development issues, as well as the need for all international activities in this field to be conducted according to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting with satisfaction the Secretary-General has taken the necessary steps to implement General Assembly resolution 45/79, in which the Assembly requested him to create the United Nations International Drug Control Programme,

Having regard to paragraph 2 (e) of Council resolution 9(I),

1. Calls upon the Commission on Narcotic Drugs:

(a) To review the implementation of the Global Programme of Action annexed to General Assembly resolution S-17/2 of 23 February 1990, in accordance with paragraph 97 of the Global Programme of Action and Assembly resolution 45/148 of 18 December 1990;

(b) To review the development and implementation of the United Nations System-wide Action Plan on Drug Abuse Control;

(c) To give policy guidance to the newly created United Nations International Drug Control Programme, based at Vienna, and to monitor its activities;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the appropriate administrative and substantive steps to ensure that the Commission on Narcotic Drugs will be able to assume those additional functions with effect from the date set for its 1992 session.

21 June 1991 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1991/103) without vote, 19 June (meeting 20); draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1991/24); agenda item 10.

The Council adopted resolution 1991/39 without vote.

21 June 1991 Meeting 15 Adopted without vote

Approved by Second Committee (E/1991/103) without vote, 19 June (meeting 201: draft by Commission on Narcotic Drugs (E/1991/24): agenda item 10.

The Council adopted resolution 1991/49 without vote.

Enlargement of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs
The Economic and Social Council.

Recalling its resolution 1983/5 of 24 May 1983, which established the membership of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its current size,

Considering that in the Declaration of the International Conference on Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking, importance is attached to the role of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs as the policy-making body of the United Nations on drug control matters,

Bearing in mind the responsibilities of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs under the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances of 1988,

Recognizing the concern expressed by the international community about the seriousness of the problem, as well as the increasing interest of all States in participating in and contributing to efforts to find adequate solutions,

1. Decides to increase the membership of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs from forty to fifty-three, the thirteen new seats being distributed among the regional groups as follows:

- (a) Four seats for African States;
  - (b) Three seats for Asian States;
  - (c) One seat for Eastern European States;
  - (d) Three seats for Latin American and Caribbean States;
  - (e) One seat for Western European and other States;
  - (f) One seat to rotate between the Asian States and the Latin American and Caribbean States every four years;
2. Also decides to fill the thirteen new seats resulting from the increase in the membership of the Commission at its organizational session of 1992.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 June 1991, on the recommendation of its Second Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/48 without vote.

Administrative arrangements to ensure the full technical independence of the International Narcotics Control Board

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting the establishment, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 45/179 of 21 December 1990 on the enhancement of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control, of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme as the single drug control programme into which the structures and functions of the Division of Narcotic Drugs of the Secretariat, the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control are to be fully integrated, with the objective of enhancing the effectiveness and efficiency of the United Nations structure for drug abuse control in keeping with the functions and mandates of the Organization in this field,

Noting that the General Assembly invited the Secretary-General to structure the United Nations International Drug Control Programme along the following lines:

- (a) Treaty implementation, which would integrate, with due consideration to treaty arrangements, the functions of the secretariat of the International Narcotics

Control Board and the treaty implementation functions of the Division of Narcotic Drugs, taking into account the independent role of the Board;

(b) Policy implementation and research, with responsibility for implementing policy decisions of the relevant legislative bodies and conducting analytical work;

(c) Operational activities, with responsibility for coordinating and carrying out the technical cooperation projects currently being executed mainly by the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control, the Division of Narcotic Drugs and the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board,

Noting also the appointment by the Secretary-General of the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme, who assumed his functions on 1 March 1991 and who will execute the integration process and head the new integrated Programme, with the exclusive responsibility for coordinating and providing effective leadership for all United Nations drug control activities, in order to ensure coherence of actions within the Programme as well as coordination, complementarity and non-duplication of such activities across the United Nations system,

Noting with appreciation the steps taken so far in the integration of the structures and functions of the Division of Narcotic Drugs, the secretariat of the International Narcotics Control Board and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control and in the organizational and managerial arrangements for the United Nations International Drug Control Programme,

Taking into account the provisions of article 9, paragraph 2, of the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs of 1961, according to which the Economic and Social Council shall, in consultation with the International Narcotics Control Board, make all arrangements necessary to ensure the full technical independence of the Board in carrying out its functions,

Considering the importance of such independence in view of the functions of the International Narcotics Control Board,

Recalling its resolution 1196(XLII) of 16 May 1967, the administrative arrangements contained in the annex to that resolution, and its resolutions 1775(LIV) of 18 May 1973 and 2017(LXI) of 3 August 1976, by which those administrative arrangements were continued,

Convinced that revised administrative arrangements are necessary in the light of developments and that such arrangements will ensure the full technical independence of the International Narcotics Control Board to the full satisfaction, of the international community,

Having considered the draft of the revised arrangements agreed upon by the Executive Director of the Programme and the International Narcotics Control Board,

1. Recognizes its obligations to ensure the full technical independence of the International Narcotics Control Board;

2. Approves the administrative arrangements prepared on behalf of the Secretary-General by the Executive Director of the United Nations International Drug Control Programme in agreement with the International Narcotics Control Board and contained in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Requests the Executive Director to implement those arrangements, taking into account the character, powers and functions of the International Narcotics Control

Board and the importance of its full technical independence in the performance of its tasks;

4. Also requests the Executive Director to report to the Council through the Commission on Narcotic Drugs at its thirty-sixth session, in 1993, on the implementation of the present resolution.

Chapter XVII

Statistics

The United Nations Statistical Commission in 1991 stressed the increasing importance of environment statistics, which were needed to support policies and programmes, and endorsed the work on development indicators and the qualitative aspects of development undertaken by the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development. As to the proposed programme of work for 1992-1993, the Commission expressed concern about the review process, the instructions given and the format and terminology used, and requested that a more simple format be used in the future.

The Subcommittee on Statistical Activities of the Administrative Committee on Coordination made recommendations on improving the compilation and dissemination in a wide range of statistical areas, while the Commission's Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination reviewed the provisional agenda for the Commission's 1993 session.

In July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/94 on patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development. It noted that a meeting of experts on social development indicators had been held in Morocco in April; requested the Secretary-General to organize another meeting to advance further the work on the indicators; and requested the regional commissions to organize workshops aimed at disseminating the concept of qualitative indicators of development.

UN statistical bodies

Statistical Commission

The Statistical Commission held its twenty-sixth session in New York from 4 to 13 February 1991.<sup>(1)</sup> It discussed two special issues: increasing user awareness of the value of statistical outputs and services; and the effects of the debt burden and structural adjustment on statistical activities at the national and international levels (see below).

The Commission drew the attention of the Economic and Social Council to its decisions and other recommendations. Its recommendations were made in connection with the special issues; the System of National Accounts (SNA), the System of Balances of the National Economy and the links between the two; international economic classifications; service, price and industrial statistics; demographic, social and environment statistics; development and integration of methodological work; technical cooperation; coordination and integration of international statistical programmes; and programme questions.

On 26 July, by decision 1991/310, the Council took note of the Commission's report on its twenty-sixth session and approved the provisional agenda and documentation for its twenty-seventh (1993) session.

Working Group on Statistical Programmes and Coordination

The Commission had before it the report on the thirteenth (1989) session of the Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination.<sup>(2)</sup> The Commission noted the ongoing work on promoting coordination of statistical data collection activities, both regular collection by the statistical divisions of international organizations and ad hoc requests to Member States for statistical information from non-statistical units of the United Nations and other organizations. It also noted that the Working Group had concluded that considerable progress had been made among international organizations on those issues during the past two years. The Commission requested the Working Group to consider the question of strengthening international statistical cooperation and to review experience with new initiatives taken by international organizations to accelerate statistical development.

The Working Group held its fourteenth session at Geneva from 17 to 20 September 1991.<sup>(3)</sup> It considered amendments to the Standard International Trade Classification, Revision 3; the reconciliation of international trade statistics and estimates; the revision of SNA; the effects of structural adjustment programmes and the debt burden on the work programmes of national and international statistical services; coordination of the statistical data-collection activities of international organizations; evaluation of the survey programmes of the United Nations and the World Bank; the provisional agenda and documentation for the twenty-seventh session of the Commission; initiatives undertaken by international organizations to accelerate statistical development; and strengthening international statistical cooperation.

ACC Subcommittee

held its twenty-fifth session in 1991 (Vienna, 10-14 June).<sup>(4)</sup> It made recommendations on ways to improve coordination of data collection, compilation and dissemination and the development of concepts, definitions and recommendations within a wide range of statistical fields comprising, among others, international trade statistics; revision of SNA; the International Comparison Programme; services statistics; demographic statistics, including population and housing censuses and the International Programme for Accelerating the Improvement of Vital Statistics and Civil Registration Systems; social statistics and indicators; indicative patterns of consumption; tourism and migration statistics; and the World Programme of Industrial Statistics.

The Subcommittee also considered ways to maintain and improve coordination of publication and dissemination policies for such activities as the servicing of ad hoc requests for data, dissemination of statistics and statistical databases to developing countries and secondary dissemination of statistical data. Methods to improve coordinated development of databases, both technically and in terms of content, were also considered, along with the work of the Advisory Committee for the Coordination of Information Systems relevant to work in statistics, in particular its activities related to the United Nations telecommunications network, work on computer security and database dissemination.

The changing role of the statistical function in an international organization resulting particularly from the evolution of informatics was also considered. The Subcommittee reviewed the implications for technical cooperation in statistics of changes in the policies of the United Nations Development Programme and United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) related to project execution and agency support costs. It considered coordination of household survey programmes, in particular the National Household Survey Capability Programme, the Living Standards Measurement Study and the Social Dimensions of Adjustment Project.

The Subcommittee recommended that its next session be held from 8 to 12 June 1992, with the location to be decided at a later date.

Special issues

User awareness and use of statistics

The Secretary-General, in response to a request made by the Statistical Commission in 1989, submitted a report in 1991 on user awareness and use of statistics.<sup>(5)</sup> Thirty-two countries, 12 international organizations, 4 regional commissions and the Statistical Office of the United Nations Secretariat had responded to a questionnaire on user awareness. The report reviewed the role of statistics and need for user support, the level of user awareness and the value attached to statistical outputs and services. It further reviewed national and international experiences in user awareness and strategies for improving that awareness.

The Commission noted that national statistical offices had taken steps to improve user awareness and to meet user needs and that both national offices and international organizations must keep abreast of changes in needs and respond to them. It commented that the stage reached in meeting user needs varied from country to country and could be enhanced. It requested the Statistical Office to extend the survey of user awareness to more countries and to circulate the results to offices and organizations.

Effects of structural adjustment programmes

In response to a recommendation by the Statistical Commission in 1989, the Secretary-General submitted in 1991 a report prepared by the Statistical Office on the effects of structural adjustment programmes and the debt burden on the work programmes of national and international statistical services.<sup>(6)</sup> The report summarized information on structural adjustment and the debt crisis; assessed information about their effects on the programmes of national statistical offices in developing countries during the 1980s; and examined the statistical implications of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade (1991-2000).

The Commission requested the Statistical Office to circulate the report and statements by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund on the report to national statistical offices in developing countries. It requested the Office to transmit comments received and related materials to the Working Group on International Statistical Programmes and Coordination for its views on further action.

Economic statistics

National accounts and balances

A progress report on the revision of the System of National Accounts<sup>(7)</sup> was submitted by the Secretary-General to the Statistical Commission at its twenty-sixth session. SNA played a major role in macroeconomic description, analysis and policy-making at both the national and international levels. The report provided information on past and future work on the revision of SNA; described the main outstanding issues and the review of the revised SNA features by the regional commissions; explained the concerns and requirements for a successful implementation of SNA; and included points for discussion.

The Commission noted that the 1991 target date for completion of the SNA review had not been met, but insisted unanimously that the revised target date of 1993 be strictly adhered to. It mandated that the Intersecretariat Working Group on National Accounts should take decisions on issues on which expert groups could not reach a consensus; gave high priority to the development of two handbooks, one on SNA for transition economies and the other on national accounting in constant prices and inflation accounting; and recommended that a multilingual glossary of national accounts terms be developed.

The Secretary-General transmitted to the Commission a report by the secretariat of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (CMEA)<sup>(8)</sup> on the activities of the CMEA Standing Commission for Cooperation in the Field of Statistics with respect to the System of Balances of the National Economy (MPS) and related issues. Attention had been focused on the development of a unified methodology for the computation of gross domestic product (GDP) by CMEA member countries and on the removal of some disparities between MPS and SNA in the treatment of selected items of output, input, income and expenditure.

The Commission noted that the second draft of the methodology for calculating GDP in CMEA member countries had been discussed at a CMEA expert group meeting (Moscow, January 1991). Participants agreed to finalize the second draft after revision of SNA. The Commission requested that any further elaboration of MPS methodology made to bring MPS and SNA closer together be reported to the Commission in 1993.

A report of the Secretary-General on recent and future work in regard to harmonizing SNA and MPS was also submitted to the Commission.<sup>(9)</sup> The Commission welcomed developments and emphasized the need for coordinated efforts to introduce SNA in varying degrees of detail in many countries using MPS. It endorsed the planned work on a handbook on the application of SNA in transition economies; stressed that the concerns of countries in transition should be considered in the revision of SNA; and endorsed the view that future work by the Statistical Office in national accounting should be carried out in the context of ongoing methodological work.

Price statistics

The Commission considered a report by the Secretary-General on price statistics<sup>(10)</sup> and took note of the status of completion of phase V of the International Comparison Programme (ICP), comparing real product and purchasing power in order to assess the relative economic development of countries. The Commission urged that the global results be published as quickly as possible. It emphasized the need to establish ICP-related work as a regular feature of statistical work at the national level, thereby making ICP policy relevant and ensuring its long-term viability. It requested the Statistical Office to expedite the completion, publication and dissemination of the handbook on ICP.

The Commission reaffirmed the regionalization of ICP as the basic approach to obtaining internationally comparable results; recognized that the core commodity approach might be a more satisfactory methodology for linking regional comparisons; agreed that a group of experts should be convened to resolve the technical issues; and also agreed that the Statistical Office should continue with the preparation of the core commodity lists and the related work needed to support the comparison work in the developing regions.

Industrial statistics

Having examined a report by the Secretary-General on industrial statistics<sup>(11)</sup> the Commission endorsed the continuation of the World Programme of Industrial Statistics to cover as many countries as possible and the need to promote the collection of annual data for policy purposes and the compilation of national accounts. It noted that although participation in the World Programme in 1983 had increased somewhat compared with 1973, the Programme did not cover as large a number of countries as desirable. It recommended that the International Recommendations Industrial Statistics remain the core document for the next World Programme, endorsing 1993 as the reference year for it.

The Commission requested the Statistical Office to prepare a technical report as part of the documentation for the 1993 Programme, setting out the various strategies available to deal with problems of capturing reliable and timely information on industrial activity and taking into account the strengths and weaknesses of benchmark inquiries and various kinds of annual surveys, including those covering all or part of the industrial sector, all or some of the size categories of industrial units and all or a part of a country.

Environment statistics

Following a review of reports by the Secretary-General on environment statistics<sup>(12)</sup> and on the methodology of environment statistics developed under the work programme of the Conference of European Statisticians,<sup>(13)</sup> the Commission stressed the increasing importance of and demand for environment statistics; welcomed the preparation of technical reports on the concepts and methods of environment statistics; and requested the Statistical Office to give priority to adaptation of the standard statistical classifications of the Economic Commission for Europe for application in other parts of the world.

It requested that future work of the Statistical Office focus on: coordination of international work on environment statistics; adaptation and/or expansion of methodological work carried out under the aegis of the Conference of European Statisticians; analysis of country practices in the implementation of environment statistics programmes; development of integrated economic/environmental accounting by means of satellite accounts; work on compilation and dissemination of international series of environment statistics and indicators; establishment of inventories of databases and related statistical work; and support for technical cooperation, in particular through country projects and training.

Service statistics

The role of the service sector in generating employment and income and in improving the efficiency of the production and distribution process had been increasingly recognized in macroeconomic analysis and policy-making. For those purposes there was interest in the conditions of the service economy and the related indicators of growth and development. The required statistics could be categorized into industry performance data, measures of growth in output and productivity, and the size of the domestic and international markets for services.

The Commission considered two reports on service statistics: one reviewed the work done by national and international agencies;<sup>(14)</sup> the other dealt with a model survey of computer services.<sup>(15)</sup> Following its examination of the former, the Commission supported proposed activities in service statistics for 1992-1993 in respect of methodology, technical cooperation and the promotion of coordination, and endorsed the function of the Statistical Office as the continuing secretariat of the Voorburg Group on Service Statistics—a cooperative effort among volunteer statistical agencies to address problems associated with data gaps and conceptual issues. The Commission emphasized the need for the use of traditional processes for developing international recommendations in the area of service statistics, and requested the Statistical Office to arrange for the dissemination of technical materials to ensure the visibility of substantive work in those statistics. With regard to the report surveying computer services, the Commission requested the Statistical Office to arrange for its publication.

International economic classifications

Having considered a report by the International Labour Office on the International Classification of Status in Employment (ICSE),<sup>(16)</sup> the Commission endorsed the future work on ICSE by that Office in collaboration with the Statistical Office; supported a proposal by the International Labour Organisation to convene an expert group meeting on ICSE; and requested the International Labour Office to submit to the Commission in 1993 a further report on ICSE.

Social and demographic statistics

population and housing censuses

After considering a report of the Secretary-General on developments in methodological work in the 1990 round of population and housing censuses,<sup>(17)</sup> the Commission welcomed the publication of the Supplementary Principles and Recommendations for Population and Housing Censuses, the Use of Microcomputers for Census Data Processing and the Manual on Population Census Data Processing Using Microcomputers. It noted the increasing application of microcomputers in census work; in addition to data processing, there was growing interest in the development and use of census databases to make tabulations readily available for investigating new phenomena and the use of desk-top publishing to avoid delays and to disseminate census results. It stressed the importance of the use of census results by various government departments and research organizations, including secondary analysis and promotion of the usefulness of data among the public.

The Commission expressed satisfaction with work carried out by the Statistical Office, the regional commissions and other bodies in connection with the 1990 World Population and Housing Census Programme; emphasized the importance of census methodological studies, including handbooks, guides and manuals, and requested their timely publication and wide distribution to countries; recommended the dissemination and utilization of census data at national, regional and community levels and their analysis, with special reference to women, children, the elderly and the disabled; and also recommended that the Statistical Office give increased emphasis to housing censuses and related issues.

Civil registration and vital statistics

Following consideration of a report on civil registration and vital statistics submitted by the Secretary-General,<sup>(18)</sup> the Commission expressed satisfaction that the revised Handbook of Vital Statistics Systems and Methods and a study on approaches in population censuses to collecting information for estimating vital rates had been completed. It endorsed the International Programme for Accelerating the Improvement of Vital Statistics and Civil Registration Systems, developed jointly by the Statistical Office, the World Health Organization, UNFPA and the International Institute for Vital Registration and Statistics, and stressed the central role of national efforts in its success. The Commission accepted the offer of UNFPA to provide the mechanism for coordinating support for the Programme from other multilateral and bilateral organizations and urged the Statistical Office, in cooperation with others, to proceed with the training and other components of the Programme.

Social indicators

A report describing progress in the development of coordinated and integrated databases of key social statistics and indicators<sup>(19)</sup> was submitted to the Statistical Commission by the Secretary-General. It reviewed a programme for monitoring and compiling social and economic indicators, the need for common social statistics, and statistical and measurement issues.

The Commission endorsed the overall effort to develop a programme for national capacity-building for monitoring social goals in the 1990s; suggested that the participating organizations and countries work to ensure the greatest possible cost-effectiveness in data collection, tabulation and analysis; approved the activities of the Statistical Office on statistics on women and on special population groups; and noted the reservations expressed by the World Bank on the form, content and thrust of the programme.

Patterns of consumption

The Commission had before it a report of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) on case-studies carried out by it on qualitative aspects of development as well as on preparations for an international statistical meeting on indicators of patterns of consumption.<sup>(20)</sup>

The Commission endorsed the work by UNRISD, performed in cooperation with the Statistical Office and other international agencies; urged UNRISD to disseminate widely the findings of the case-studies; and emphasized the importance of linking innovative indicators and collection techniques with ongoing statistical programmes.

An international meeting of experts (Rabat, Morocco, 8-11 April 1991) surveyed developments in the area of qualitative indicators of development and the information needed to analyse changes in standards of living with regard to food, housing, clothing, education, health care and social services.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July 1991, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its First (Economic) Committee, adopted without vote resolution 1991/94.

Patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 40/179 of 17 December 1985 and 44/234 of 22 December 1989,

Recalling also its resolutions 1987/6 of 26 May 1987 and 1989/4 of 22 May 1989,

Recalling further the reports of the Statistical Commission on its twenty-fourth, twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sessions, in particular the sections on development indicators,

Recalling the work of the relevant organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the Statistical Office of the Secretariat and the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development, on qualitative indicators of development,

Reiterating that the subject of patterns of consumption and related socio-economic indicators is of considerable importance and high priority for developing countries,

Encouraging countries, in this regard, to improve their basic statistical programmes and capabilities and to make efforts to develop the collection, processing, analysis and dissemination of data relating to patterns of consumption, and inviting the international community to strengthen the national capabilities of the developing countries with respect to the collection of integrated socio-economic data and their processing, in particular by microcomputer, with a view to having better and more up-to-date data,

Convinced of the need to preserve, in the long term, balance between resources, population, environment and development, taking into account the advances made in science and technology and the need to make progress in the transfer of technological innovations to developing countries,

Stressing that the development of indicators tailored to the fundamental economic and socio-cultural needs of a population in the fields of food, clothing, housing, education, health care and necessary social services would help to orient national development and support international cooperation by helping Governments to formulate and follow policies better geared to human development,

Stressing also that the identification of indicative patterns of consumption and the development of qualitative indicators of development would be extremely useful in the evaluation of the progress achieved in the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade and would make a substantial contribution to the work of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, to be held in 1992,

Stressing further the need for harmonization of the work of the United Nations system on qualitative indicators of development,

1. Notes that the High-level Meeting of Experts on Social Development Indicators, envisaged by the General Assembly in its resolution 44/234; was held at Rabat from 8 to 11 April 1991 under the auspices of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to organize, in close consultation with the relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development, the Statistical Office of the Secretariat, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organization, in New York or Geneva, another high-level meeting of experts with a view to further advancing the work on qualitative indicators of development on the basis of the outcome of the first high-level meeting and the necessary further research, bearing in mind the need to ensure wider participation and collaboration of different scientific and technical disciplines;

3. Invites interested donor countries and relevant multilateral agencies to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development for the purpose of holding in good time the meeting referred to in paragraph 2 above, and invites the relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, the International Labour Organisation and the World Health Organization, to support such a meeting;

4. Requests the regional commissions to organize workshops aimed at disseminating the concept of qualitative indicators of development on the basis of extrabudgetary support;

5. Requests the Statistical Commission to keep the issue of patterns of consumption and qualitative indicators of development under consideration, with a view to assisting the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council in their appraisal of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade and, in particular, the mid-term review;

6. Invites, in the interest of harmonization, the relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, in particular the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs of the Secretariat, the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme and the United Nations Population Fund, as well as the international financial and development institutions, to use in their annual reports, as appropriate, qualitative indicators of development that are based on the areas identified in General Assembly resolution 40/179;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and other relevant organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, to report orally to the Economic and Social Council at its regular session of 1992 on the progress achieved in the implementation of the present resolution.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1991/94

26 July 1991 Meeting 32 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (E/1991/125) without vote. 24 July (meeting 14); draft by Morocco (E/1991/C.1/L.11) orally revised: agenda item 8 (g).

On 30 May, by decision 1991/225, the Council took note of a report of the Secretary-General on the work being done within the United Nations system on improving quantitative and qualitative indicators on social conditions and standards of living.<sup>(21)</sup>

National Household Survey Capability Programme

After considering a report by the Secretary-General on the National Household Survey Capability Programme (NHSCP),<sup>(22)</sup> the Commission said the Programme was effective in providing assistance to developing countries. It urged multilateral and bilateral organizations to continue to support country projects under its umbrella; recommended its extension beyond 1991; recognized the supportive role played by the regional commissions; and, in the context of household surveys, supported continuous development of technical studies, training and interregional workshops.

World Bank household survey initiatives

Having considered a report of the World Bank on its initiatives in the design of permanent integrated household surveys,<sup>(23)</sup> culminating in the launching of the Living Standards Measurement Study (LSMS) programme and the Social Dimensions of Adjustment (SDA) programme, the Commission noted the contribution of LSMS in the areas of methodological design, survey development and analysis, the focus of SDA on developing national information systems that fed information directly into the policy-making process, and the progress achieved in coordination between LSMS and NHSCP. It deferred endorsing SDA inasmuch as sufficient evidence had not been received, and requested the Bank to prepare a progress report for its 1993 session.

Other statistical activities

Technical cooperation

A report summarizing the technical cooperation programmes in statistics of organizations of the United Nations system<sup>(24)</sup> was submitted to the Commission by the Secretary-General. The Commission said it was pleased that an updated edition of the Directory of Technical Cooperation in Statistics had been issued. It stressed the importance of technical cooperation programmes with developing countries and endorsed current activities in statistics carried out by the Department of Technical Cooperation for Development. It emphasized the importance of the training component in the implementation of country projects and urged that allocated resources be increased. It stressed the importance of coordination in multilateral and bilateral technical cooperation in statistical activities, urging the Statistical Office to promote such coordination.

Programme questions

The Secretary-General submitted four reports on programme questions to the Commission in 1991—a review of the statistical work of international organizations,<sup>(25)</sup> plans of those organizations in the area of statistics,<sup>(26)</sup> the proposed programme of work of the Statistical Office for 1992-1993 and the medium-term plan for 1992-1997,<sup>(27)</sup> and updated information on the work of the Statistical Office.<sup>(28)</sup>

The Commission expressed satisfaction with the information given on progress made by international organizations in implementing their work programmes and approved the proposed programme of work of the Statistical Office for 1992-1993 and the designated priorities. However, it commented that its review of the Office's programme was hampered by a number of constraints and limitations, many of which had been identified at previous sessions. Others arose out of new procedures and instructions introduced in connection with preparation of the programme for 1992-1993. The problems raised included: the limited time in which to consider the proposed programme of work; the strict separation in the procedures between the review of the programme of work and budgetary considerations; limited information on the allocation of real resources; and the artificiality of designating low-priority outputs or activities only from those sub-programmes not designated as high priority in the medium-term plan.

In addition, according to the Commission, the format and terminology of the budget documentation were not readily comprehensible, and the terms of reference of the Commission in respect of the programme of work were not clear.

Despite those concerns, the Commission agreed that the proposed programme of work reflected broadly the priorities and objectives set by it and constituted an appropriate basis for organizing the work of the Statistical Office.

Chapter XVIII

Institutional arrangements

The General Assembly at its forty-fifth session in 1990 had adopted a resolution on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields. The Assembly endorsed a resolution of the Economic and Social Council on the revitalization of the Council, in which its President was given a mandate to undertake consultations with Member States on that matter.

The Assembly adopted resolution 45/264 in May 1991, by which it approved basic principles and guidelines for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations, including the Council, and issues to be addressed in the future.

Within the context of this reform process, the Council considered its revitalization at its second regular session of 1991 and took note of an oral report by its President on all relevant issues pertaining to the review of the implementation of the measures agreed upon for its revitalization (decision 1991/277).

The Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC), the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) and the yearly Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC continued their efforts to improve existing mechanisms of coordination and to proceed effectively with the implementation of system-wide programmes and action plans.

The conclusions and recommendations of CPC at its 1991 session were endorsed by the Council (resolution 1991/67), which also stressed the central role of ACC in the coordination of activities of the United Nations system at the intersecretariat level, and by the General Assembly (resolution 46/189, sections VI and VII).

In keeping with the established practice of promoting complementarity between the work of the Council and the Assembly's Second (Economic and Financial) and Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committees, the Assembly approved the Second and Third Committee's biennial work programme for 1992-1993 (decision 46/455 and resolution 46/140, respectively).

Following the biennial session of the Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) and the Council's granting of consultative status to 35 new applicants in May (decision 1991/216), the number of NGOs in consultative status with the Council rose to 928.

Restructuring questions

In 1990, at its forty-fifth session, the General Assembly had adopted a resolution on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields.<sup>(1)</sup> It had endorsed an Economic and Social Council resolution,<sup>(2)</sup> in which the Council President was given a mandate to undertake broad consultations with Member States on the revitalization of the Council. The Assembly had also decided to reconvene in a resumed session in 1991 for an in-depth consideration and negotiations of proposals for restructuring and revitalizing the United Nations in the economic and social fields.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 May 1991, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 45/264.

Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolution 45/177 of 19 December 1990, on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic and social fields, and other relevant resolutions,

1. Adopts the text contained in the annex to the present resolution, including the basic principles and guidelines, goals and measures, as well as issues to be addressed in the future, for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to implement the recommendations addressed to him in the annex to the present resolution and to report thereon as proposed;

3. Invites the specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system to implement, as appropriate, those recommendations within their respective spheres of competence;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session an item entitled "Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields".

ANNEX

Restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

1. Given the role of the United Nations in the economic, social and related sectors as set out in the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, including Article 55, the overall objective of the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields is defined in resolution 45/177 adopted by the General Assembly on 19 December 1990. In paragraph 3 of the resolution, the Assembly "stresses the need for more effective and efficient functioning of the intergovernmental machinery of the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields in order to be more responsive to the needs of enhancing international economic cooperation and promoting the development of the developing countries". The restructuring and revitalization process should also take account of Assembly resolutions 32/197 of 20 December 1977 and 41/213 of 19 December 1986, and other relevant resolutions.

2. The objective in paragraph 1 of the present annex needs to be addressed through a concerted, deliberate and continuing process of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations, encompassing all organs and bodies concerned in the economic, social and related fields. Such an approach should ensure orderly restructuring and revitalization of the economic, social and related fields and enhance the flexibility and adaptability of the Organization in the performance of its functions, and its ability to address the most urgent tasks and new demands, and should bear in mind the need for an efficient and effective United Nations system to deal with a number of global challenges in the economic, social and related fields in a world of growing interdependence, as well as enhance the interest taken by the international community in the work of the Organization. Thus it would also enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of the Organization.

I. Basic principles and guidelines for the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields

3. The deliberations and decisions of the restructuring and revitalization process should be predicated on the following basic principles and guidelines, in order to ensure a successful outcome:

(a) Restructuring is primarily an intergovernmental responsibility and needs to be pursued in this context. The Secretary-General, in fulfilment of his responsibility as the chief administrative officer of the United Nations, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter, is requested to assist and cooperate in this regard;

(b) The process of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields should be in accordance with the mandate set forth in General Assembly resolution 45/177, the provisions agreed upon at the resumed forty-fifth session of the Assembly, and other relevant resolutions;

(c) Political will is an essential prerequisite for enhancing international cooperation. The socio-economic goals of the United Nations will remain unachievable in the absence of the requisite political will of all States;

(d) The current restructuring and revitalization process should promote the achievement of the objectives and priorities of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields as set forth in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

(e) The restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields should aim at achieving greater complementarity between the bodies and organs of the United Nations with the General Assembly, while ensuring the latter's position as a principal organ of the United Nations;

(f) The restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields should preserve the democratic principles which underpin the decision-making process of the United Nations;

(g) Transparency and openness need to be preserved and strengthened in the functioning of the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields;

(h) Restructuring and revitalization should be examined and pursued while ensuring the most efficient and effective use of the financial and human resources of the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields;

(i) The ongoing process of revitalization of the Economic and Social Council, on the basis of all its relevant resolutions, as appropriate, remains valid.

II. Goals of the resumed forty-fifth session of the General Assembly

4. The reconvened session is a step in the process of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields, on the basis of the basic principles and guidelines set out in paragraph 3 of the present annex. The session is aimed at reaching agreement, inter alia, on the role and functioning of the Economic and Social Council, in order to:

(a) Enable the Council to discharge the responsibilities entrusted to it by the Charter by enhancing its role as a central forum for major economic, social and related issues and policies and its coordinating functions relating to the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields;

(b) Improve its effectiveness and efficiency in the consideration of and action on the reports of its subsidiary bodies and other relevant reports;

(c) Ensure greater complementarity with the work of the General Assembly, in accordance with Article 60 of the Charter;

(d) Avoid duplication with other organs of the United Nations;

(e) Follow an integrated approach to policy and programme aspects of the economic and social issues.

In addition, the session agreed on the agenda and the timetable for the continuation of the process of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, as specified in section IV of the present annex.

III. Measures for the restructuring and revitalization of the Economic and Social Council

5. The following measures are adopted:

(a) The continued implementation of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly as well as Economic and Social Council resolutions 1988/77 of 29 July 1988, 1989/114 of 28 July 1989, 1990/69 of 27 July 1990 and Council decision 1990/205 of 9 February 1990, as appropriate;

(b) An organizational session not to exceed four days to be held in New York in early February to determine the annual agenda of the Council and related organizational matters, taking into account the relevant provisions of the resolutions and decision mentioned in paragraph 5 (a) of the present annex, particularly on the themes to be discussed in the high-level segment. This session will also select themes for the coordination segment, taking into account, inter alia, the recommendations of the joint meetings of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Administrative Committee on Coordination. Elections, appointments and confirmations to take place during a resumed organizational session of one or two days at the end of April;

(c) One substantive session of four to five weeks to take place in alternate years in New York and Geneva between May and July;

(d) The substantive session to be broadly organized, sequentially, along the following lines:

High-level segment

- (i) A high-level segment of four days open to all Member States in accordance with Article 69 of the Charter, with ministerial participation, devoted to the consideration of one or more major economic and/or social policy themes to be determined at the organizational session, taking into account the Economic and Social Council multi-year work programme; adequate Secretariat preparation, including, in particular, one comprehensive background document for each theme; debate to follow an integrated and interdisciplinary approach; heads of the relevant organizations, agencies and other organs to participate actively; One-day policy dialogue and discussion on important developments in the world economy and international economic cooperation. In this context, heads of multilateral financial and trade institutions of the United Nations system are invited to participate actively in this dialogue and discussion on matters of mutual interest with a view to building areas of understanding;

The main features of the deliberations of the high-level segment would be presented to the Economic and Social Council by its President in the form of a summary, which would be incorporated in its final report;

The deliberations of the high-level segment would provide political impetus for building areas of convergence and facilitate the consideration of the issues in question, including the emergence of new recommendations on the issues, in the relevant forums.

Coordination segment

- (ii) Coordination of the activities of the specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system in the economic, social and related fields, in accordance with Articles 63 and 64 of the Charter. This segment will consist of the following:

- a. A segment of four to five days devoted to the coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system relating to the achievement of the economic and social objectives of the United Nations. Discussion will be organized around one or more themes selected at the organizational session, and designed to focus attention on the activities of the United Nations system in the selected economic and social areas;

- b. Discussion will take into account the report of the Secretary-General as Chairman of the Administrative committee on Coordination, together with appropriate recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the joint meetings of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Administrative Committee on Coordination. This report should contain a system-wide assessment of the status of coordination with regard to the themes and include recommendations, as appropriate;

- c. The heads of concerned specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, including multilateral financial and trade institutions, are invited to participate actively, making contributions to the policy dialogue reflecting a global perspective on the agreed theme or themes, as well as their activities in the chosen themes;
- d. Recommendations which result from these discussions shall be submitted to the General Assembly and forwarded, as appropriate, to the governing bodies of the specialized agencies, organs, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system as well as to the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Administrative Committee on Coordination. In this context, the Secretary-General should arrange to apprise the next session of the Economic and Social Council of steps taken by the United Nations system to give effect to these recommendations.

Operational activities segment

- (iii) A segment of two to three days devoted to operational activities of the United Nations system focusing, in particular, on the follow-up of policy recommendations and decisions of the General Assembly and coordination of operational activities on a system-wide basis, taking account of Economic and Social Council resolution 1988/77. The triennial review would continue to be undertaken by the General Assembly.

Committee segment

- (iv) Consideration of specific economic, social and related issues, including their programme implications, in two separate committees meeting simultaneously to consider and take decisions on the reports of the subsidiary bodies of the Economic and Social Council and other relevant reports; these reports should be arranged in clusters, as appropriate, for consideration; discussions to be decision-oriented focusing on specific recommendations and issues and not to involve a general debate. Review and monitoring of the implementation of the decisions of the General Assembly in the economic, social and related fields. Reports of the committees to be submitted to the plenary Council for approval.
- (v) Adoption of the report.
- (e) The above measures will come into effect in February 1992.

IV. Issues to be addressed in the future

6. The following non-exclusive list contains issues to be addressed in the future. The agenda and timetable for some further steps will be as follows:

- (1) Complementarity between the work of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly

Review at the forty-seventh session of the General Assembly of ways of enhancing the complementarity between the work of the Economic and Social Council and its own work, in accordance with Article 60 of the Charter.

(2) Composition of the Economic and Social Council

The process of restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields, undertaken with a view to enhancing its impact and effectiveness, shall include a review of the composition of the Economic and Social Council with due regard to equitable geographical representation and other relevant factors, in order to ensure the most effective participation of Member States, to be undertaken at a resumed forty-seventh session of the General Assembly.

(3) Subsidiary machinery in the economic, social related fields

A review at the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly of the subsidiary bodies of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, with the objective of possible restructuring and revitalization, and of their reporting responsibilities and procedures with a view to avoiding duplication, where possible. The review should be on the basis of, inter alia, the following criteria:

(a) Ensuring that programme delivery of a subsidiary body meets the needs of Member States and that it is consistent with the goals and priorities of the United Nations in the economic and social fields;

(b) Application of the same basic principles and guidelines for enhancing the effectiveness and efficiency of the subsidiary machinery as those set out in paragraph 3 of the present annex;

(c) Avoidance of subsuming highly technical functions of subsidiary bodies and expert groups into the Council;

(d) Ensuring that the subsidiary machinery in the economic, social and related fields is able to offer sound recommendations and advice as input into and not a substitute for the consideration and decisions by the Council and the Assembly.

The Secretary-General is requested to provide to the Assembly at its forty-sixth session relevant information, including information on the status of subsidiary bodies and their reporting procedures, in order to facilitate the review of the subsidiary bodies of the Council and of the Assembly.

(4) Secretariat

A review of the Secretariat structure will be necessary on the basis of the agreements to be reached in the restructuring and revitalization process. In this context, the Secretary-General is requested to review the structure of the Secretariat in the economic, social and related fields, taking into account the outcome of the resumed forty-fifth session of the General Assembly, future work, and other relevant resolutions, as appropriate, and to report thereon with such recommendations as might be appropriate to the Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Noting that management of the Secretariat is the responsibility of the Secretary-General, he is requested expeditiously to implement those measures within his purview, in accordance with the Charter and the relevant resolutions of the Assembly, to streamline Secretariat operations in the economic, social and related fields in order to reinforce the restructuring and revitalization process directed by the Assembly, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-sixth and forty-seventh sessions.

(5) Progress report

The Secretary-General is requested to submit an annual progress report to the General Assembly, starting with its forty-seventh session, on the implementation of the result of the restructuring and revitalization process in the economic, social and related fields, in which he is requested to provide information on any recommendation agreed upon which has not been implemented as scheduled.

(6) Review

As part of the restructuring and revitalization process the implementation of the measures in paragraph 5 above, including all organizational aspects of both the organizational and substantive sessions of the Economic and Social Council, will be reviewed at the forty-eighth session of the General Assembly in the light of the experience of the reforms agreed upon, with a view to enhancing the impact and effectiveness of the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields.

Rationalization of the work of the Third Committee

The Working Group met on 25 and 31 October and on 4 and 5 December, and recommended a draft resolution for adoption by the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December, on the recommendation of the Third Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 46/140.

Rationalization of the work of the Third Committee, including the biennial programme of work of the Committee for 1992-1993

The General Assembly

1. Takes note of the report of the Working Group on the Rationalization of the Work of the Third Committee;
2. Reaffirms the recommendations on the rationalization of the work of the Third Committee contained in General Assembly resolution 45/175 of 18 December 1990 and recommends further rationalization measures, as outlined in annex I to the present resolution;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to draw up the provisional agenda for the Third Committee at the forty-seventh session in accordance with the present resolution.

ANNEX I

Further measures for the rationalisation of the work of the Third Committee

A. Guidelines concerning time-limits and number of statements by delegations and Secretariat officials

1. In accordance with rule 106 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly and paragraph 22 of decision 34/401 on the rationalization of the procedures and organization of the General Assembly, at the beginning of each session, the Chairman of the Third Committee should propose to the Committee the limitation of the time to be allowed to speakers.
2. Further to General Assembly resolution 45/175 of 18 December 1990, on the rationalization of the work of the Third Committee, statements made by delegations or on behalf of groups of delegations and by Secretariat officials, unless decided otherwise by the Committee at the beginning of the session, should not exceed 15 minutes. This time-limit will have to be applied with a degree of flexibility towards all speakers. With a view to saving time, all speakers are encouraged to exercise self-discipline, in particular delegations associated with group statements. For practical reasons, group statements are encouraged for the first day of the discussion of an item or sub-item. In this connection, it is important to emphasize the timely distribution of documentation in accordance with the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, in order to enable delegations to inscribe themselves on the list of speakers at an early stage.

Introductory statements by Secretariat officials

3. In addition to the provisions contained in General Assembly resolution 45/175 concerning introductory statements by Secretariat officials, introductory statements should be made at the beginning of the discussion of an item.

Statements under the items entitled "Elimination of racism and racial discrimination" and "Right of peoples to self-determination"

4. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/175, the above items are to be discussed jointly.
5. Delegations wishing to make two separate statements, i.e., one on each of the above items, may do so.

Statements under the item entitled "Social development:

- (a) Questions relating to the world social situation and to youth, ageing disabled persons and the family;
- (b) Crime prevention and criminal justice"
6. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/175, sub-items (a) and (b) are to be discussed separately
7. Delegations wishing to make two separate statements under sub-item (a) may do so.

Statements under the item entitled "Human rights questions:

- (a) Implementation of human rights instruments;
- (b) Human rights questions, including alternative approaches for improving the effective enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms;
- (c) Human rights situations and reports of special rapporteurs and representatives"

Coordination in the UN system

On 17 and 20 May 1991, the Committee for Programme and Coordination considered the annual report for 1990 of the Administrative Committee on Coordination<sup>(1)</sup> and preparations for the Joint Meetings of the two Committees. CPC affirmed that coordination should ensure the most effective division of labour and mutual complementarity of efforts.<sup>(2)</sup> It emphasized the need for enhanced coordination at the field level, while the central role of ACC in bringing about concerted responses by all entities of the system to global problems was underlined. ACC was encouraged to move forward with the development and implementation of system-wide action plans as requested by Member States.

The new ACC report on programmes and resources of the United Nations, contained in an addendum to the annual report, was described by CPC as a useful reference tool which would enable Member States and organizations to avoid overlapping and duplication. CPC requested ACC to continue its study of the feasibility of establishing a system-wide database on programmes and resources, with more detail on programme activities.

In keeping with the practice of promoting complementarity between the work of the Economic and Social Council and that of the General Assembly's Second and Third Committees, the Assembly approved the Committees' biennial work programme for 1992-1993 by decision 46/455 and resolution 46/140, respectively.

ACC activities

In 1991, ACC monitored the performance of the world economy and emphasized the need for international action to stimulate growth and development.<sup>(3)</sup> It considered the economic and other impacts of the transitions currently under way in Central and Eastern Europe and the USSR. Major initiatives undertaken by the United Nations system in the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Action for African Economic Recovery and Development 1986-1990<sup>(4)</sup> were reviewed. The provision of emergency and humanitarian relief in Africa continued to be a major preoccupation.

A number of environmental issues were considered, particularly the preparations for the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED) in 1992, climate change, desertification and the consequences of the Chernobyl accident and of the Kuwait-Iraq conflict. As to operational activities for development, ACC focused its attention on efforts to improve their overall coherence, cost effectiveness and impact.

ACC presented statements to the International Civil Service Commission and the General Assembly, focusing on the need to ensure competitive levels of remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories and on the continuing instability of employment conditions in the United Nations common system. The financial situation of organizations of the United Nations system continued to cause concern and to have serious implications for the planning and implementation of programme activities.

Through its Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Operational Activities) (CCSQ(OPS)), ACC considered the role of the United Nations development system in the 1990s and the draft annual report of the Director-General for Development and International Economic Cooperation.<sup>(5)</sup> It reviewed the implementation of a General Assembly resolution of 1989<sup>(6)</sup> on the operational activities for development of the United Nations system and support costs. It examined options for strengthening the work of CCSQ(OPS) and its secretariat as well as the global perspectives of the work of the International Telecommunication Union and the Universal Postal Union. It focused attention on information on developments within organizations that had system-wide implications.<sup>(7)</sup>

Through the Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Programme Matters) (CCSQ(PROG)), ACC reviewed programme classification and considered the development of a system-wide database on programmes and resources as well as the role of CCSQ(PROG) in the review of thematic analyses to be prepared for future sessions of the Economic and Social Council.<sup>(8)</sup> It also discussed its biennial report on the programmes and resources of United Nations organizations.<sup>(9)</sup>

ACC continued through the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Personnel and General Administrative Questions) (CCAQ(PER)) to consider such matters as remuneration of the Professional and higher categories of staff, the methodology for the determination of the pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials and for determining the level of the education grant; conditions of employment; field-related issues; implementation of the common classification standard for small and medium-sized duty stations; pensions; and personnel policy and management.<sup>(10)</sup>

During the year, ACC held two regular sessions (Paris, 17-19 April; New York, 24 and 25 October). Its principal subsidiary bodies met as follows:

Organizational Committee (New York, 11-13 February, Paris, 3-5 April, New York, 7-9 October); CCAQ(PER) Paris, 4-22 March, New York, 29 July-16 August; Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (Financial and Budgetary Questions) (CCAQ(FB)) (Vienna, 11-15 March, New York, 9-13 September); CCSQ(PROG) (Vienna, 13-15 March, New York, 11 and 12 September); CCSQ(OPS) (Geneva, 25-28 March, New York, 16-20 September); informal joint working group of CCSQ(PROG) and CCAQ(FB) (Vienna, 18 and 19 March); joint meeting of CCSQ(PROG) and CCAQ(FB) (New York, 12 September).

Bodies on specific subjects met as follows:

Task Force on Science and Technology for Development, twelfth session, New York, 6-8 February; fourth inter-agency meeting on ageing, Vienna, 21 and 22 February; Subcommittee on Nutrition, eighteenth session, New York, 25 February-1 March; fifteenth ad hoc inter-agency meeting on women, Vienna, 11 and 12 March; first ad hoc inter-agency meeting on the International Year of the Family, Vienna, 13 and 14 March; Task Force on Long-term Development Objectives, twentieth session, Geneva, 19-22 March; Inter-Agency Group on New and Renewable Sources of Energy, tenth session, Geneva, 25 and 26 March; Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Coordination in Matters of International Drug Abuse Control, Vienna, 10 May; Task Force on Rural Development; nineteenth meeting, Nairobi, Kenya, 22-24 May; informal inter-agency working group at the technical level on youth: eighth meet&, Vienna, 30 and 31 May; Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Security Matters, Geneva, 10-13 June; Subcommittee on Statistical Activities, twenty-fifth session, Vienna, 10-14 June; Joint United Nations Information Committee, seventeenth session, New York, 24-26 June; inter-agency consultation on the follow-up to the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the 1990s, Geneva, 1 and 2 July; Inter-Agency Meeting on Coordination in Matters of International Drug Abuse Control, London, 11-13 September; Advisor; Committee for the Coordination of Information Systems, Geneva, 17-20 September; Ad Hoc Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities, Geneva, 78-26 September; Intersecretariat Group for Water Resources, twelfth session, Rome, 25-27 September; ninth inter-agency meeting on the United Nations Decade of Disabled Persons, Vienna, 3-6 December.

Report for 1990

The ACC annual overview report for 1990<sup>(1)</sup> was considered on 17 and 20 May by CPC,<sup>(2)</sup> which described it as an improvement over previous reports. It expressed appreciation for the format of the report as well as the emphasis it gave to substantive issues and found the foreword of the Secretary-General most useful. However, CPC was of the view that the report should be more analytical and action-oriented.

CPC activities

CPC met in New York for an organizational meeting on 6 May and for its thirty-first session from 13 May to 12 June 1991.<sup>(2)</sup>

At the session, CPC considered the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993, including overall resource requirements, priorities, the methodology used for its preparation, its structure and the accompanying documentation.

CPC also considered several reports of the Secretary-General, including one on the methodology for monitoring and reporting the programme performance of the United Nations.<sup>(11)</sup> Another reviewed the procedures for the provision of statements of programme budget implications and for the use and operation of the contingency fund.<sup>(12)</sup>

Others examined the in-depth evaluation of the disarmament programme,<sup>(13)</sup> the in-depth evaluation of the programme on the international protection of and assistance to refugees,<sup>(14)</sup> the implementation of recommendations of CPC on the evaluation of the programmes on development issues and policies,<sup>(15)</sup> and the in-depth evaluation of the programme on development issues and policies of the Economic Commission for Africa.<sup>(16)</sup>

On the basis of a statement by a representative of the Secretary-General, CPC considered its contribution to the implementation of a General Assembly resolution of 1990 reviewing the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations.<sup>(17)</sup>

CPC also gave its assessment of a report by the Joint Inspection Unit on practices and procedures aimed at a more equitable geographical distribution of sources of procurement for technical cooperation projects<sup>(18)</sup> and the comments on it by ACC.<sup>(19)</sup>

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Coordination) Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted without vote resolution 1991/67.

Report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination

The Economic and Social Council,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its thirty-first session,

Recalling the provisions of Chapters IX and X of the Charter of the United Nations and, in particular, the role of the Economic and Social Council in coordination in the economic and social fields within the United Nations system,

Also recalling General Assembly resolution 45/264 of 13 May 1991 on the restructuring and revitalization of the United Nations in the economic, social and related fields,

Reaffirming the importance of the programming and coordinating functions currently being carried out by the Committee for Programme and Coordination as the main subsidiary organ of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly for planning, programming and coordination,

Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its thirty-first session, and endorses the conclusions and recommendations contained therein;

I

Programme questions

1. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993;

2. Stresses that the allocation of resources in the programme budget should enable the Organization to fulfil its objectives and mandates, responding effectively to the needs of the international community, particularly in the economic and social fields;

3. Endorses the conclusions of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on how the broad priorities set in General Assembly resolution 45/253 of 21 December 1990 have been reflected in the proposed programme budget, and endorses the recommendations of the Committee on how such priorities should guide the implementation of the proposed activities, within the context of a continuing search for greater efficiency and effectiveness;

4. Notes with concern that for only a few sections of the proposed programme budget have the programmes of work been reviewed by the relevant intergovernmental bodies, stresses the need for their full participation in the budgetary process as set out in General Assembly resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986, and requests the Secretary-General to use, when necessary, ad hoc mechanisms to ensure that this review is made in a timely manner;

5. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the progressive extension of statements of programme budget implications to all subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and on the enhancement of their programmatic content, in the context of the implementation of the programme budget and of the use and operation of the contingency fund;

6. Concurs with the views of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the need for better justification of proposed changes in the staffing table of the Organization;

7. Recognizes the need for further improvement in the methodology and format of the proposed programme budget, and endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination thereon;

8. Stresses the importance of all the reports requested by the Committee for Programme and Coordination, including those referred to in paragraphs 96, 117 and 263 of its report, for submission to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

II

Coordination questions

1. Endorses the views of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the importance of enhancing coordination through the optimal use of existing mechanisms;

2. Stresses the central role of the Administrative Committee on Coordination in the coordination of activities of the United Nations system at the intersecretariat level and, in this context, the leadership role of the Secretary-General as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination;

3. Welcomes the annual overview report of the Administrative Committee on Coordination for 1990 and, in particular, the report on programmes and resources of the United Nations system;

4. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the Joint Meetings of the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Administrative Committee on Coordination, especially those concerning the need for a genuine dialogue at a high level between member States and executive heads;

5. Notes that the topic chosen for the twenty-sixth series of Joint Meetings of the two Committees, to be held in New York on 22 and 23 October 1991, is the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade by the organizations of the United Nations system, to be considered in the light of the implementation of the Declaration on International Economic Cooperation, in particular the Revitalization of Economic Growth and Development of the Developing Countries, contained in the annex to General Assembly resolution S-18/3 of 1 May 1990;

6. Recalls that at the twenty-sixth series the Joint Meetings of the two Committees are to make recommendations to the Council, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 45/264, on themes to be selected at the organizational session of the Council for discussion at its coordination segment;

7. Also recall that, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 45/264, the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Joint Meetings of the two Committees are to make recommendations to the Council, for consideration at its coordination segment, on the system-wide assessment of the status of coordination;

8. Requests the Committee for Programme and Coordination, in the light of the above and bearing in mind the increased workload of the Committee ensuing from the implementation of General Assembly resolution 41/213 and the projected availability of documentation, to review its programme of work and make suggestions on the timing and duration of its sessions, taking into account the review of the subsidiary machinery in the economic, social and related fields with the possible objective of restructuring and revitalization, which is to be conducted during the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly, in accordance with its resolution 45/264;

9. Approves the provisional agenda of the thirty-second session of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, as set out in paragraph 478 of the report of the Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/189, section VI on coordination and section VII on the programme of work of CPC. In section VI, the Assembly expressed its appreciation to ACC for the improvement it made in its annual report for 1990, in particular through the new report on programmes and resources of the United Nations system; reaffirmed the importance of coordination in the system and the central role of ACC in ensuring greater complementarity and compatibility of activities and programmes; endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of CPC on the ACC report; and requested ACC to pursue its efforts to improve its annual reports. In section VII, the Assembly requested CPC to review its programme of work in the light of Economic and Social Council resolution 199/167 and to make suggestions on the timing and duration of its sessions.

Joint meetings of CPC and ACC

The twenty-sixth series of Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC was held in New York on 22, 23 and 25 October 1991.<sup>(20)</sup> The topic for consideration was the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Fourth United Nations Development Decade, which had been adopted by the General Assembly in 1990.<sup>(21)</sup>

The Joint Meetings reaffirmed the validity of the goals of the Strategy and reiterated that existing instruments and mechanisms for inter-agency coordination should be fully utilized in pursuit of those goals.

The Joint Meetings also decided to submit for the consideration of the Economic and Social Council in 1992 the following proposed themes: strengthening of the work of the United Nations in operational activities; the coordinating role of the Council therein; science and technology for development; coordination issues arising from decisions to be taken at UNCED in 1992; relationships among socio-economic development, protection of human rights and democratization of society; the international trade system; eradication of poverty in the developing countries; and the financing of development.

Economic and Social Council

Cooperation with other organizations

Non-governmental organizations

The Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations met in New York from 21 January to 1 February 1991.<sup>(1)</sup> It recommended to the Economic and Social Council that consultative status be granted to 36 NGOs, that nine NGOs be reclassified and that the consultative status of three NGOs that failed to submit reports on their activities for 1986-1989 be withdrawn.

The Committee drew the attention of the Council to a number of recommendations in connection with its future activities. It recommended a review of the staff resources of the NGO Unit of the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs, in view of the expanding volume of documentation and the increase in the number of NGOs in consultative status. It also stressed that the Council's resolution of 1968 on arrangements for consultation with NGO<sup>(2)</sup> should remain the basis of the Committee's work.

Further, the Committee established a working group to prepare draft guidelines aimed at assisting the Committee to carry out its work in the most effective manner. The working group was to be open to members of the Committee and other interested States; the NGO Unit would be invited to participate; and NGOs would be able to express their views through the Conference of NGOs in Consultative Status with the Economic and Social Council.

The Committee examined the quadrennial reports from 206 NGOs on their United Nations-related activities during 1986-1989.<sup>(3)</sup>

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 13 and 15 May, by decision 1991/213, the Economic and Social Council approved requests by NGOs to be heard at the Council's current session.<sup>(4)</sup> Also in May, the Council adopted decision 1991/216 without vote.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December, by decision 46/431, the General Assembly requested the Economic and Social Council to review in 1992 the conditions necessary for the effective functioning of the NGO Unit.

Other organizational matters

Work programme for 1991-1992

At its 1991 organizational session, held in New York on 30 January and on 5 and 7 February, the Economic and Social Council considered its draft programme of work for 1991 and 1992 as submitted by the Secretary-General.<sup>(7)</sup> The Council on 7 February adopted decision 1991/202.

The Council confirmed, pursuant to a 1990 decision,@ that the major policy theme to be considered at its special high-level meeting with ministerial participation in 1991 would be the impact of the recent evolution of East-West relations on the growth of the world economy, in particular on the economic growth and development of the developing countries, as well as on international economic cooperation. It approved the list of items for consideration in 1991-12 items at the first regular session and 18 at the second regular session-and allocated the items to its sessional committees and plenary meetings.

The Council decided to consider at its second regular session, under the item on regional cooperation, the question of strengthening the role of the regional commissions to promote subregional, regional and inter regional cooperation. It decided to undertake at that session an in-depth review of the report of the World Food Council and to submit recommendations thereon to the General Assembly. It also decided to review at that session the reports of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme, the Commission on Human Settlements and the Intergovernmental Committee on Science and Technology for Development, but not to consider the draft proposals put forward, except those requiring Council action or relating to the coordination aspects of the work covered. The Council also decided to consider at the second session the report of the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development on the second part of its thirty-seventh session and to transmit directly to the Assembly the report on the first part of the Board's thirty-eighth session.

Also on 7 February, the Council, in decision 1991/203, took note of the list of questions for inclusion in its 1992 work programme.

The Council held a resumed organizational session on 25 March in New York, its first regular session in New York from 13 to 31 May, its resumed first regular session from 17 to 21 June, its second regular session at Geneva from 3 to 26 July and its resumed second regular session in New York on 17 October. The Second (Social) Committee met during the first session and the First (Economic) and Third (Programme and Coordination) Committees during the second session.

Agendas of 1991 sessions

On 7 February 1991, the Economic and Social Council adopted a five-item annotated agenda for its organizational session.<sup>(9)</sup>

The agenda of the first regular session listed the same items approved by decision 1991/202, with the addition of an item on emergency assistance to Somalia; also, the item on statistical and cartographic questions was modified to read "Cartography".

The agenda of the second regular session listed the same items approved by decision 1991/202, with the addition of a sub-item on statistics under the item on development and international economic cooperation and an item entitled "Elections".

The agenda of the first regular session, as annotated and revised,<sup>(10)</sup> was adopted on 13 and 15 May (decision 1991/213); the organization of work for the session<sup>(11)</sup> also was approved. The provisional agenda and organization of work for the second regular session<sup>(12)</sup> was adopted on 31 May (decision 1991/270).

By decision 1991/273, the Council on 3 and 15 July adopted the agenda of the second regular session and approved its organization of work.<sup>(13)</sup>

Calendar of meetings

By decision 1991/208 of 7 February, the Economic and Social Council decided that its first regular session of 1991, which was to have been held from 7 to 31 May, would be held from 13 to 31 May, and that the session would be resumed from 17 to 21 June to consider the item on narcotic drugs.

The Council, also on 7 February, decided, by decision 1991/209, to resume its organizational session, at a date to be determined, to complete consideration of its basic programme of work.

On 26 July, the Council, by decision 1991/294, approved the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1992 and 1993.<sup>(14)</sup>

Summary records

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted decision 1991/295, discontinuing for a further period of one year, from 1992, summary records for its three sessional committees and for the following subsidiary bodies: Commission for Social Development; Commission on the Status of Women; Commission on Narcotic Drugs; Economic Commission for Europe; Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific; Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean; Economic Commission for Africa; Committee on NGOs; Committee on Natural Resources; Committee for Programme and Coordination; and Committee on Transnational Corporations.

The Council would review the question of summary records of all its subsidiary bodies in 1992.

Report for 1991

The work of the Economic and Social Council at its organizational session and two regular sessions in 1991 was summarized in its annual report to the General Assembly.<sup>(15)</sup>

In December, the Assembly adopted three decisions by which it took note of the chapters of the report as follows: on 17 December, chapters I, IV (sections A, E and F), VI, VII (sections B, G and H) and IX, following the recommendation of the Third Committee (decision 46/432); on 20 December, chapters I, IV (section F), VIII and IX—considered in plenary meetings (decision 46/448); and also on 20 December, chapters I, IV (section F) and VII (sections B and D) (decision 46/447), on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee.

PART FOUR

Trusteeship and decolonization

Chapter I

Questions relating to decolonization

During 1991, decolonization, based on the General Assembly's 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, continued to be an issue considered by the United Nations. The main body dealing with the subject was the Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries). It examined the decolonization issue in general as well as individual Non-Self-Governing Territories. The Assembly, as recommended by the Committee, adopted resolutions dealing with, inter alia, decolonization in general (46/68 A), 10 small Territories (46/68 B), and the question of New Caledonia (46/69). It also adopted a plan of action for the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000) (46/181).

After consultations with the parties concerned, the Secretary-General formulated a plan for holding a referendum in Western Sahara. The Security Council approved the plan in April (resolution 690(1991)) but, as at the end of the year, the parties were in disagreement over the terms of the settlement plan and the process was held in abeyance.

1960 Declaration on colonial countries

The United Nations took action in 1991 to reaffirm the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples<sup>(1)</sup> as the basis for the decolonization process. As part of the effort to promote the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, the General Assembly adopted a plan of action submitted by the Secretary-General.

Plan of action for the Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

The Secretary-General, as requested by the General Assembly in 1988,<sup>(2)</sup> submitted a report in December 1991<sup>(3)</sup> proposing a plan of action for the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism (1990-2000), aimed at concluding the twentieth century with a world free from colonialism. He had submitted three interim reports,<sup>(4)</sup> in 1989, 1990 and 1991, which included the suggestions of Member States and international organizations on a plan of action.

The plan called on the international community to assist the people of Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTS) to exercise their right to self-determination through such measures as improving educational systems in the Territories, protecting human rights and ensuring that political exercises relating to self-determination were carried out free from intimidation and outside interference. The United Nations was called upon to arrange self-determination referendums in each of the Territories no later than 1999. Administering Powers were also urged to take certain measures, including facilitating United Nations visiting missions, conserving natural resources and preserving the environment. At the national level, the plan called on States to protect NSGTS against environmental damage and to refrain from using them for military purposes. The Committee on colonial countries was to prepare analyses of progress on the implementation of the 1960 Declaration, review the impact of the economic and social situation on the constitutional and political advancement of NSGTS, and organize seminars to review the implementation of the plan of action, as well as submit an annual report to the Assembly appraising the activities of the Decade. The Secretary-General was requested to submit every three years a report on action taken to implement the plan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 19 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/181 without vote.

International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism

The General Assembly,

Guided by the fundamental and universal principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Reaffirming in all its terms its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, which contains the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988, by which it declared the decade beginning in 1990 as the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Having examined the three interim reports of the Secretary-General prepared in pursuance of its resolution 43/47,

Bearing in mind the report of the Working Group of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries on Decolonization, adopted by the Conference of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Accra from 2 to 7 September 1991,

Bearing in mind also the important contribution of the United Nations in the field of decolonization, in particular through the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories to Self-determination and independence in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant United Nations resolutions and decisions;

2. Declares that the ultimate goal of the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism is the free exercise of the right to self-determination by the peoples of each and every remaining Non-Self-Governing Territory in accordance with resolution 1514(XV) and all other relevant resolutions and decisions adopted by the General Assembly;

3. Declares that exercise of the right to Self-determination should be carried out freely and without outside pressure, in a form reflecting authentic interests and aspirations of the peoples of Non-Self-Governing Territories and with the United Nations playing an appropriate role;

4. Adopts the proposals contained in the annex to the report of the Secretary-General, dated 13 December 1991, to serve as a plan of action for the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism;

5. Invites Member States, the United Nations system, other governmental and non-governmental organizations actively to support and participate in the implementation of the plan of action.

Committee on colonial countries

The Committee on colonial countries held its 1991 session in two parts, at which it considered aspects of implementation of the 1960 Declaration. Meeting on 21 February and from 22 April to 23 August in New York,<sup>(5)</sup> it considered the reports of an open-ended working group on the rationalization of its work<sup>(6)</sup> and of its Subcommittee on Petitions, Information and Assistance,<sup>(7)</sup> as well as four reports of its Subcommittee on Small Territories dealing with Pitcairn, St. Helena<sup>(9)</sup> the Trust Territory of the Pacific Island<sup>(10)</sup> (see PART FOUR, Chapter II) and 10 other small Territories.<sup>(11)</sup>

On the recommendation of the working group, the Committee decided to merge its two subcommittees with effect from January 1992 and to consolidate its draft resolutions, resulting in the adoption of an omnibus resolution on 10 territories.

Implementation of the Declaration

On 11 December 1991, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/71 by recorded vote.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all its previous resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, most recently resolution 45/34 of 20 November 1990, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Recognizing that the eradication of colonialism is one of the priorities of the Organization for the decade beginning in 1990,

Deeply conscious of the need to take, speedily, measures to eliminate the last vestiges of colonialism by the year 2000, as called for in its resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988,

Reiterating its conviction of the need for the elimination of colonialism, as well as of the need for the total eradication of racial discrimination, apartheid and violations of basic human rights,

Conscious that the success of national liberation struggles and the resultant international situation have provided the international community with a unique opportunity to make a decisive contribution towards the elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations,

Noting with satisfaction the achievements of the Special Committee in contributing to the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations on decolonization,

Stressing the importance of the participation of the administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee,

Noting also with satisfaction the cooperation and active participation of some administering Powers in the work of the Special Committee, as well as their continued readiness to receive United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under their administration,

Noting with concern the negative impact which the non-participation of certain administering Powers has had on the work of the Special Committee, depriving it of an important source of information on the Territories under their administration,

Aware of the pressing need of newly independent and emerging States for assistance from the United Nations and its system of organizations in the economic, social and other fields,

Aware also of the pressing need of the remaining Non-self-Governing Territories, including particularly the small island Territories, for economic, social and other assistance from the United Nations and the organizations within its system,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions on decolonization, including its resolution 43/47 in which it declared the decade beginning in 1990 as the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism, and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the peoples of the Territories concerned to exercise fully as soon as possible their right to self-determination and independence;

2. Affirms once again that the continuation of colonialism in any form or manifestation-including racism, apartheid and economic exploitation, as well as policies and practices to suppress legitimate national liberation movements-is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and poses a threat to international peace and security;

3. Reaffirms its determination to continue to take all steps necessary to bring about the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and the faithful and strict observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its support for the struggle of the peoples under colonial rule to exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 1991, including the programme of work envisaged for 1992;

6. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to give effect within their respective spheres of competence to the recommendations of the Special Committee for the speedy implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

7. Condemns the activities of foreign economic and other interests that are impeding the implementation of the Declaration as well as the elimination of colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination;

8. Calls upon the administering Powers to ensure that no activity of foreign economic and other interests in the Non-Self-Governing Territories under their administration hinders the peoples of those Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence;

9. Strongly condemns any nuclear collaboration with the Government of South Africa and calls upon any States that are so involved to cease all such collaboration forthwith;

10. Calls upon the administering Powers to terminate military activities in the Territories under their administration and to eliminate military bases there in compliance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and urges them not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States;

11. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the Specialized agencies and other Organizations of the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories and requests that the administering Powers, in consultation with the Governments of the Territories under their administration, take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration and to carry out those actions approved by the General Assembly regarding the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism in all Territories that have not yet attained independence and, in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

(b) To make concrete suggestions which could assist the Security Council in considering appropriate measures under the Charter with regard to developments in colonial Territories that are likely to threaten international peace and security;

(c) To continue to examine the compliance of Member States with resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization;

(d) To continue to pay special attention to the small Territories, in particular through the dispatch of regular visiting missions, and to recommend to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

(e) To take all necessary steps to enlist world-wide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

13. Also calls upon the administering Powers to continue to cooperate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and to receive visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants;

14. Further calls upon the administering Powers that have not participated in the work of the Special Committee to do so at its 1992 session;

15. Requests the Secretary-General, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide economic, social and other assistance to the Non-Self-Governing Territories and to continue to do so, as appropriate, after they exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

16. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the other resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

Implementation by international organizations

The committee on colonial countries in 1991 again considered the implementation of the 1960 Declaration by the specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations. The Subcommittee on Petitions, Information and Assistance reported to the Committee, which in turn adopted its recommendations. Among them was a call for the United Nations system to assist in accelerating progress in all sectors of the national life of the small Territories, particularly in the development of their economies. Also before the Committee was a report by its Acting Chairman<sup>(12)</sup> on his consultations with the President of the Economic and Social Council and the Council's consideration of the topic in 1991 (see below).

Report of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to an Assembly request of 1990,<sup>(13)</sup> the Secretary-General reported in June 1991 on action taken by United Nations bodies to implement the Declaration.<sup>(14)</sup> Information on their activities in that regard was provided by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), the World Food Programme, the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Report of the President of the Economic and Social Council. The President of the Economic and Social Council, in July 1991,<sup>(15)</sup> reported on his ongoing consultations with the Acting Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries and the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid on the implementation of the Declaration by the United Nations system. The President appealed to the specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations to formulate additional programmes of assistance to NSGTs. In his consultations with the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid, the President reviewed recent developments in South Africa and action taken by the international community, which, they felt, had the duty to maintain pressure on South Africa until a new constitution establishing a non-racial democracy was adopted.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Coordination) Committee, adopted resolution 1991/68 by vote.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council concerning the question of the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

Having heard the statements made by the representative of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and by the Vice-Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions adopted by United Nations bodies on the subject, including in particular General Assembly resolution 45/18 of 20 November 1990 and Economic and Social Council resolution 1990/60 of 26 July 1990,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all effective measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to assist in the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations bodies,

Also recalling General Assembly resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989, containing the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa,

Recognizing that permanent peace and stability in southern Africa can only be achieved when the system of apartheid in South Africa has been eradicated and South Africa has been transformed into a united, democratic and non-racial country, and reiterating, therefore, that all the necessary measures should be adopted at the present time to bring a speedy end to the apartheid system in the interest of all the people of southern Africa, the African continent and the world at large,

Deeply concerned that the objectives of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples have not been fully achieved,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes and cyclones, and recalling relevant General Assembly resolutions,

Also bearing in mind the conclusions and recommendations of the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations, held in New York from 25 to 29 June 1990,<sup>a</sup>

Noting with appreciation that assistance has continued to be extended to refugees from southern Africa through the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees,

1. Takes note of the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council, and endorses the observations and suggestions contained therein;

2. Also takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

3. Reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the aspiration of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entails, as a corollary, the extension by the organizations of the United Nations system of all the necessary moral and material assistance to those peoples;

4. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate in varying forms and degrees with the United Nations and the regional organizations concerned in the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies, and urges all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to contribute to the full and speedy implementation of the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

5. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration and other related resolutions of the United Nations system;

6. Requests the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations to strengthen existing measures of support and formulate additional programmes of assistance to the remaining Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories within the framework of their respective mandates;

7. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as international and regional organizations, to take appropriate measures within their spheres of competence in order to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of those Territories;

8. Also requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in formulating their assistance programmes, to take due account of the text entitled "Challenges and opportunities: a strategic framework", which was adopted unanimously by the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations;

9. Welcomes the continued initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, and in coordinating the activities of the specialized agencies in extending effective assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories, and calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as a matter of urgency, to contribute generously to the relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts in the Non-Self-Governing Territories affected by natural disasters;

10. Urges the administering Powers concerned to facilitate the participation of the representatives of the Governments of Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories at the relevant meetings and conferences of the agencies and organizations so that the Territories may draw the maximum benefits from the related activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system;

11. Urges the governing bodies of those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not already done so to include in the agenda of their regular sessions a separate item on the progress made and action to be taken by their organizations in the implementation of the Declaration and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies;

12. Urges the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to formulate, with the active cooperation of the regional organizations concerned, concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant United Nations resolutions and to submit the proposals as a matter of priority to their governing and legislative organs;

13. 14. Stresses in the context of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa the need for the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render all possible assistance to the front-line and neighbouring States to enable them to rebuild their economies, which have been adversely affected by South Africa's acts of aggression and destabilization, to withstand any further such acts and to continue to support the people of South Africa;

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/65 by recorded vote.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Having considered the reports submitted on the item by the Secretary-General and the Acting Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and resolution 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960, as well as all its other resolutions on this subject, including, in particular, resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988, on the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism.

Recalling also its resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989; the annex to which contains the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity,

Deeply concerned that the objectives of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples have not been fully achieved,

Recognizing that permanent peace and stability in southern Africa can only be achieved when the system of apartheid in South Africa has been eradicated and South Africa has been transformed into a united, democratic and non-racial country, and reiterating therefore that all the necessary measures should be adopted at the present time to bring a speedy end to the apartheid system in the interest of all the people of southern Africa, the African continent and the world at large,

Noting that the large majority of the remaining colonial Territories are small island Territories,

Recalling its resolution 43/189 of 20 December 1988, concerning specific measures in favour of island developing countries,

Bearing in mind the conclusions and recommendations of the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations, held in New York from 25 to 29 June 1990,

Recalling relevant resolutions of the Caribbean Development and Cooperation Committee concerning the access of colonial Territories to programmes of the United Nations system;

Noting the assistance extended thus far to colonial Territories by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, and considering that such assistance should be expanded further, commensurate with the pressing needs of the peoples concerned for external assistance,

Stressing the importance of securing necessary resources for funding expanded assistance programmes for the peoples concerned and the need to enlist the support of all major funding institutions within the United Nations system in that regard,

Noting with serious concern the continuing effects of the acts of aggression and destabilization that have been committed by South Africa against neighbouring independent African States,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the necessary measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full implementation, without further delay, of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, particularly those relating to the extension of assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories.

Expressing its appreciation to the General Secretariat of the Organization of African Unity for the continued cooperation and assistance it has extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in this regard,

Gravely concerned that while the international community has generally adhered to the Programme of Action contained in the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, some Member States have continued relations with South Africa in the political, diplomatic, economic and other fields,

Bearing in mind the importance of the activities of non-governmental organizations aimed at putting an end to the assistance which is still being rendered to South Africa by some specialized agencies,

Expressing its conviction that closer contacts and consultations between and among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and regional organizations help to facilitate the effective formulation of assistance programmes to the peoples concerned,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the extremely fragile economies of the small island Territories and their vulnerability to natural disasters, such as hurricanes and cyclones, and recalling relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item;

2. Recommends that all States intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute to the full implementation, without further delay, of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and all other relevant General Assembly resolutions;

4. Reaffirms also that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entails, as a corollary, the extension of all necessary moral and material assistance to those peoples and their national liberation movements by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system;

5. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have continued to cooperate with the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and urges all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to accelerate the full and speedy implementation of the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

6. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as international and regional organizations, to examine and review conditions in each Territory so as to take appropriate measures to accelerate progress in the economic and social sectors of the Territories;

7. Requests all specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to strengthen measures of support and formulate adequate programmes of assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories, bearing in mind that such assistance should not only meet their immediate needs but also create conditions for development after they have exercised their right to self-determination and independence;

8. Also requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide, through an inter-agency framework, the necessary assistance to colonial Territories in order to alleviate the adverse conditions arising from the interplay of a combination of factors reflecting the vulnerable character of their economies;

9. Further requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in formulating their assistance programmes, to take due account of the conclusions and recommendations, entitled "Challenges and opportunities: a strategic framework", of the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations, held in New York in June 1990;

10. Requests once again the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to provide all humanitarian, material and moral assistance to Namibia and all newly independent and emerging States so as to enable them to consolidate their political independence and achieve genuine economic independence;

11. Urges the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in cooperation with the regional and other organizations where appropriate, to submit to their governing and legislative organs concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant United Nations decisions, particularly specific programmes of assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements;

12. Recommends to the executive heads of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to draw the attention of their governing bodies to the present resolution and to consider introducing flexible procedures to prepare specific programmes for the peoples of the colonial Territories;

13. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not already done so to include in the agenda of the regular meetings of their governing bodies a separate item on the progress they have made in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

14. Welcome the continued initiative exercised by the United Nations Development Programme in maintaining close liaison among the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and in coordinating the activities of the agencies in extending effective assistance to the peoples of colonial Territories, and calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as a matter of urgency, to contribute generously to the relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction efforts in those Non-Self-Governing Territories affected by natural disasters;

15. Urges the administering Powers concerned to facilitate the participation of the representatives of the Governments of Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories in the relevant meetings and conferences of the agencies and organizations so that the Territories may draw the maximum benefits from the related activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system;

16. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to adhere to the Programme of Action contained in the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, in particular with regard to increased support for the opponents of apartheid, the use of concerted and effective measures aimed at applying pressure to ensure a speedy end to apartheid, and ensuring the non-relaxation of existing measures to encourage the South African regime to eradicate apartheid until there is clear evidence of profound and irreversible changes;

17. Stresses, in the context of the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, the need for the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render all possible assistance to the front-line and neighbouring States to enable them to rebuild their economies, which have been adversely affected by acts of aggression and destabilization by South Africa, to withstand any further such acts and to continue to support the people of South Africa;

18. Invites the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to cooperate with the Action for Resisting Invasion, Colonialism and Apartheid Fund established by the Eighth Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Harare from 1 to 6 September 1986, with the common objective of providing emergency assistance to the front-line States and national liberation movements struggling against the apartheid regime;

19. Urges all States, especially those which continue to have economic and financial links to South Africa, to adhere fully to the Programme of Action contained in the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa;

20. Recommends that all Governments should intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to ensure the full and effective implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations and, in that connection, should accord priority to the question of providing assistance on an emergency basis to the peoples of the colonial Territories;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

22. Commends the Economic and Social Council for its debate and resolution on this issue and requests it to continue, as appropriate, to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, appropriate measures for coordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

23. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General on the implementation of the present resolution;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the present resolution to the governing bodies of the appropriate specialized agencies and international institutions associated with the United Nations so that those bodies take the necessary measures to comply with the resolution, and also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution;

25. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Cooperation and coordination of specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations in their assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories
The General Assembly,

Aware that in addition to general problems facing developing countries, the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, many of which are small island Territories, also suffer handicaps arising from the interplay of such factors as their size, remoteness, geographical dispersion, vulnerability to natural disasters, the fragility of their ecosystems, constraints in transport and communications, great distances from market centres, a highly limited internal market, lack of natural resources, weak indigenous technological capacity, the acute problem of obtaining freshwater supplies, heavy dependence on imports and a small number of commodities, depletion of non-renewable resources, migration, particularly of personnel with high-level skills, shortage of administrative personnel and heavy financial burdens,

Recalling resolution 24(XI), on the Programme of Assistance to Small Island Developing Countries, adopted by the eleventh session of the Caribbean Development and Cooperation Committee on 22 November 1988, in which the Committee directed its secretariat to continue to examine the access of the non-independent Caribbean countries to programmes and activities of the United Nations system with the aim of identifying areas within that system which could provide technical and other assistance to those countries in the furtherance of their development process, and other resolutions of the Caribbean Development and Cooperation Committee,

Taking note of the report of the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations which was held in New York from 25 to 29 June 1990,

Mindful of the growing importance that the General Assembly attaches to the contributions of specialized agencies and the international institutions to the economic and social development of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Welcoming the role being played by the United Nations Development Programme and the specialized agencies in that regard,

Recalling its resolution 44/211 of 22 December 1989, entitled "Comprehensive triennial policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system",

Taking into account the suggestions made by Member States during the general debate on the relevant item,

1. Invites the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations to increase their participation in the debates of the General Assembly on the remaining Non-Self-Governing Territories, with a view to apprising the Assembly of their development programmes in those Territories and thereby facilitating more informed comments on their work;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures for promoting and expanding cooperation and coordination among the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations in their assistance to Non-Self-Governing Territories and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution;

3. Decides to keep this question under review.

Foreign interests impeding implementation of the Declaration

At its 1991 session,<sup>(5)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries considered activities of foreign economic and other interests which impeded the implementation of the 1960 Declaration. It had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on economic conditions and foreign activities in Anguilla, Bermuda, the Cayman Islands, Montserrat and the United States Virgin Islands (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly, on 11 December, adopted by recorded vote resolution 46/64.

Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as all its other resolutions on this subject, including, in particular, resolution 43/47 of 22 November 1988, declaring the period 1990-2000 as the International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming also that those economic and other activities which impede the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and obstruct efforts aimed at the elimination of colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in South Africa and in colonial Territories are in direct violation of the rights of the inhabitants and of the principles of the Charter and all relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Seriously concerned about the activities of those foreign economic, financial and other interests which continue to exploit the natural resources that are the heritage of the indigenous populations of the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories in the Caribbean, the Pacific and other regions, as well as their human resources, to the detriment of their interests, thus depriving them of their right to control the resources of their Territories and impeding the realization by those peoples of their legitimate aspirations for self-determination and independence,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the final documents of the successive Conferences of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries and of the resolutions adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity,

Gravely concerned that certain countries, transnational corporations and international financial institutions have continued their economic relations with South Africa,

Recognizing the crucial and decisive role that the imposition of international sanctions has played in applying the necessary pressure on the South African regime to undertake significant measures towards the eradication of apartheid,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories to self-determination and independence and to the enjoyment of the natural resources of their Territories, as well as their right to dispose of those resources in their best interests;

3. Reiterates that any administering or occupying Power that deprives the colonial peoples of the exercise of their legitimate rights over their natural resources or subordinates the rights and interests of those peoples to foreign economic and financial interests violates the solemn obligations it has assumed under the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Reaffirms its concern over the activities of those foreign economic, financial and other interests which continue to exploit the natural resources that are the heritage of the indigenous populations of the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories in the Caribbean, the Pacific and other regions, as well as their human resources, to the detriment of their interests, thus depriving them of their right to control the resources of their Territories and impeding the realization by those peoples of their legitimate aspirations for self-determination and independence;

5. Condemns those activities of foreign economic and other interests in the colonial Territories which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), and the efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination;

6. Strongly condemns the collaboration with the South African regime by certain countries as well as transnational corporations that continue to make new investments in South Africa and supply the racist regime with armaments, nuclear technology and all other materials that are likely to buttress it and thus aggravate the threat to world peace;

7. Calls upon all States to maintain the existing measures against the apartheid regime as specified in the Declaration on Apartheid and its Destructive Consequences in Southern Africa, annexed to General Assembly resolution S-16/1 of 14 December 1989;

8. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take, in accordance with the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolution 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in colonial Territories that are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises and to prevent new investments that run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories;

9. Calls upon those oil-producing and oil-exporting countries that have not yet done so to take effective measures against the oil companies concerned so as to terminate the supply of crude oil and petroleum products to the racist regime of South Africa;

10. Reiterates that the exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories by foreign economic interests, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, is a grave threat to the integrity and prosperity of those Territories;

11. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system to take all possible measures to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the peoples of colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

12. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

13. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to ensure that no discriminatory and unjust wage systems or working conditions prevail in the Territories under their administration and to apply in each Territory a uniform system of wages to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to inform world public opinion of those activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples;

15. Appeals to mass media, trade unions and non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to continue their efforts in the struggle against apartheid and the mobilization of international public opinion against the policy pursued by the South African apartheid regime and to oppose the relaxation of existing measures against the regime, in order to accelerate the process of constitutional change;

16. Decides to continue to monitor closely the situation in the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interest of the indigenous peoples and at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories, in order to facilitate and accelerate the exercise by the peoples of those Territories of their right to self-determination and independence;

17. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Military activities in colonial countries

At its 1991 session,<sup>(5)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries considered military activities by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might impede the implementation of the 1960 Declaration. It had before it working papers prepared by the Secretariat on military activities and arrangements in Bermuda, Guam and the United States Virgin Islands (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in December 1991, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 46/419 by recorded vote.

Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

At its 68th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text:

"1. The General Assembly, having considered the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to an item on the agenda of the Special Committee entitled 'Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples' and recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military activities in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, reaffirms its strong conviction that military bases and installations in the Territories concerned could constitute an obstacle to the exercise by the people of those Territories of their right to self-determination and reiterates its strong views that existing bases and installations, which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration, should be withdrawn and that no further entrenchment should be condoned.

"2. The General Assembly reaffirms that it is the responsibility of the administering Powers to ensure that the existence of military bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration. Furthermore, aware of the presence of such bases and installations in some of those Territories, the Assembly urges the administering Powers concerned to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States, and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter.

"3. The General Assembly reiterates its condemnation of all military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might run counter to the rights and interests of the colonial peoples concerned, especially their right to self-determination and independence. The Assembly once again calls upon the colonial Powers concerned to terminate such activities and to eliminate such military bases in compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Assembly.

"4. The General Assembly reiterates that the colonial Territories and areas adjacent thereto should not be used for nuclear testing, dumping of nuclear wastes or deployment of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction.

"5. The General Assembly welcomes the important changes taking place in South Africa aimed at facilitating the commencement of substantive constitutional negotiations. The Assembly notes that, these developments notwithstanding, apartheid remains firmly entrenched and that as a result there is a continuing threat to the peace and security of the region.

"6. The General Assembly notes with grave concern revelations of covert funding and collusion by the South African regime with certain political organizations and reports of the involvement of its security forces in perpetrating acts of violence.

"7. The General Assembly condemns the continued military, nuclear and intelligence collaboration between South Africa and certain countries, which constitutes a violation of the military embargo imposed against South Africa by the Security Council in its resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977, and which poses a threat to international peace and security. The Assembly urges the Council to consider, as a matter of urgency, the report of the Council Committee established under its resolution 421(1977) of 9 December 1977 and to adopt further measures to widen the scope of resolution 418(1977) in order to make it more effective and comprehensive. The Assembly calls for an immediate end to all forms of such collaboration. The Assembly further calls for scrupulous observance of resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984, by which the Council enjoined Member States to refrain from importing armaments from South Africa.

"8. The General Assembly considers that the acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability by the South African regime, with its infamous record of violence and aggression, constitutes a further effort on its part to ter-rorize and intimidate independent States in the region into submission. The Assembly condemns the continuing support to the South African regime in the military and other fields. In this context, the Assembly expresses its concern at the grave consequences for international peace and security of the collaboration between the apartheid system in South Africa and certain Western Powers, Israel and other countries in the military and nuclear fields. It calls upon the States concerned to end all such collaboration and, in particular, to halt the supply to the apartheid system of equipment, technology, materials and training enabling the regime to increase its capability to manufacture nuclear weapons.

"9. The General Assembly strongly condemns the continuing collaboration of certain countries with the racist regime in the military and nuclear fields and expresses its conviction that such collaboration is in contravention of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Security Council resolution 418(1977) and undermines international solidarity against the apartheid regime. The Assembly thus calls for the termination forthwith of all such collaboration.

"10. The General Assembly is particularly mindful in that regard of the Declaration on South Africa, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its twenty-seventh ordinary session, held at Abuja, Nigeria, from 3 to 5 June 1991,<sup>a</sup> the report of the Tenth Conference of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Accra from 2 to 7 September 1991,<sup>b</sup> and the Communiqué adopted by the Heads of Government of the countries of the Commonwealth at their meeting held at Harare from 16 to 22 October 1991.<sup>c</sup>

"11. The General Assembly urges all Governments, the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to provide increased material assistance to the thousands of refugees who have been forced by the oppressive policies of the apartheid regime in South Africa to flee into the neighbouring States and for the purpose of resettlement of those who are returning.

"12. The General Assembly deplores the continued alienation of land in colonial Territories, particularly in the small island Territories of the Pacific and Caribbean regions, for military installations. The large-scale utilization of the local resources for this purpose could adversely affect the economic development of the Territories concerned.

"13. The General Assembly requests the Secretary-General to continue, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, to inform world public opinion of the facts concerning the military activities and arrangements in colonial Territories which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV).

"14. The General Assembly requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-seventh session."

Information dissemination

The Committee on colonial countries, acting on the recommendation of its Subcommittee on Petitions, Information and Assistance, adopted recommendations for dissemination of information on decolonization. It proposed that the Secretariat's Department of Public Information (DPI) intensify its publicity on decolonization; disseminate such information more widely, through parliamentary bodies, non-governmental organizations (NGOs), mass media and universities, as well as United Nations information centres; and produce visual material on problems of decolonization. The Committee requested that DPI provide it with feedback reports from information centres regarding dissemination of information on decolonization and that the Secretariat cooperate with NGOs in disseminating information. It appealed to the mass media to support decolonization by providing broader coverage of events relating to decolonization, through conferences, seminars and round tables, as well as by publication and distribution of materials.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/72 by recorded vote.

Dissemination of information on decolonization

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular General Assembly resolution 45/35 of 20 November 1990,

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the aims of the Declaration and mindful of the role of world public opinion in effectively assisting the peoples of the colonial Territories to achieve self-determination and independence,

Noting that while censorship laws have been repealed, existing legislation and other measures still curtail the freedom of the press in South Africa,

Aware of the importance of non-governmental organizations in the dissemination of information on decolonization,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization;

2. Considers it important for the United Nations to continue to play an active role in the process of decolonization and to intensify its efforts to ensure the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with a view to further mobilizing international public opinion in support of complete decolonization by the year 2000;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, taking into account the suggestions of the Special Committee, to continue to take concrete measures through all the media at his disposal, including publications, radio and television, to give widespread and continuous publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization and, inter alia:

(a) To continue, in consultation with the Special Committee, to collect, prepare and disseminate basic material, studies and articles relating to the problems of decolonization and, in particular, to continue to publish the periodical Objective: Justice and other publications, special articles and studies, including the Decolonization series, and to increase the information on all the Territories under consideration by the Special Committee, selecting appropriate material for wider dissemination by reprints in various languages;

(b) To seek the full cooperation of the administering Powers in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To intensify the decolonization-oriented activities of all United Nations information centres;

(d) To maintain a working relationship with the Organization of African Unity and appropriate regional and intergovernmental organizations, particularly in the Pacific and Caribbean regions, by holding periodic consultations and exchanging information;

(e) To solicit, in consultation with United Nations information centres, assistance in the dissemination of information on decolonization from non-governmental organizations;

(f) To continue to produce comprehensive press releases for all meetings of the Special Committee and its subsidiary bodies;

(g) To ensure that the necessary facilities and services to that end are made available;

(h) To report to the Special Committee on measures taken in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations with a special interest in decolonization, to undertake or intensify, in cooperation with the Secretary-General and within their respective spheres of competence, the large-scale dissemination of information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Puerto Rico

In 1991, the Committee on colonial countries considered a separate item on Puerto Rico, based on a 1990 resolution<sup>(16)</sup> by which it had reaffirmed the right of the Puerto Rican people to self-determination and independence, expressed the hope that measures would be taken leading to their self-determination, and requested the Rapporteur to report on the implementation of its resolutions concerning Puerto Rico. The Rapporteur, in an August 1991 report,<sup>(17)</sup> said he had transmitted the text of the 1990 resolution to the United States, requesting information on action taken or envisaged in implementing relevant resolutions.

After hearing statements by several Puerto Ricans, the Committee adopted a resolution on 15 August,<sup>(18)</sup> by which it deplored the fact that the United States Congress had not adopted a legal framework for holding a referendum to enable the people of Puerto Rico to determine their political future. The Committee trusted that the Congress would soon adopt a framework to allow the people to exercise their right to self-determination, through popular consultations.

New Caledonia

The Committee on colonial countries considered the question of New Caledonia as a separate item at its 1991 session,<sup>(5)</sup> during which it heard the views of two representatives of political parties. It reviewed a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on recent developments in the Territory.<sup>(19)</sup> The Committee to Monitor the Matignon Agreement<sup>(20)</sup> had met for the second time in December 1990. By that Agreement, France agreed to hold a self-determination referendum in New Caledonia in 1998.

The meeting focused on economic and social developments, and the participants agreed that progress had been made but that further efforts on the part of France were required to bring about more equitable economic distribution among the three provinces and to provide education and training that would enable the indigenous Melanesians, known as Kanaks, to participate equally in the economy and government of the Territory. According to the French representative at the meeting, during 1990 various local institutions called for by the Matignon Agreement had been created and regional authorities had assumed responsibility for managing their own affairs. Consultative councils on customary matters and on economic and social affairs were expected to become operational in January 1991. The two bodies that remained to be set up were committees on mining and on credit. France acknowledged that insufficient progress had been made in creating employment opportunities for Kanaks and in training young professionals, but several new programmes would be undertaken.

In March 1991, a group of 14 lawyers appointed by the French Supreme Court went to the Territory to begin registering voters for the 1998 referendum. Similar groups would visit the Territory in 1995 and 1998 to update the voter list.

The Secretariat paper also covered economic conditions in the Pacific island Territory. It stated that nickel, the basis of the economy, accounted for 80 per cent of exports. The mining sector and most arable land were controlled by European settlers, while the majority of the Kanaks were involved in subsistence agriculture. In 1990, the volume of exports increased slightly over 1989, but the value of the goods decreased by 43.6 per cent, mainly due to the fall in the world price of nickel.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/69 on 11 December, without vote.

Question of New Caledonia

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of New Caledonia, Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia,

Reaffirming the right of peoples to self-determination as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations, Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 1541(XV) of 15 December 1960.

Noting the importance of the positive measures being pursued in New Caledonia by the French authorities, in cooperation with all sectors of the population, to promote political, economic and social development in the Territory, including measures in the area of environmental protection and action with respect to drug abuse and trafficking, in order to provide a framework for its peaceful progress to self-determination,

Noting also, in this context, the importance of equitable economic and social development, as well as continued dialogue among the parties involved in New Caledonia in the preparation of the act of self-determination of New Caledonia.

Acknowledging the close links between New Caledonia and the peoples of the South Pacific and the positive actions being taken by the French authorities to facilitate the further development of those links, including the development of closer relations with the member countries of the South Pacific Forum,

1. Approves the section of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to New Caledonia;

2. Urges all the parties involved, in the interest of all the people of New Caledonia, to maintain their dialogue in a spirit of harmony;

3. Invites all the parties involved to continue promoting a framework for the peaceful progress of the Territory towards an act of self-determination in which all options are open and which would safeguard the rights of all New Caledonians;

4. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Other general questions

Scholarships

The Secretary-General, in accordance with a General Assembly request of 1990,<sup>(1)</sup> reported in October 1991<sup>(2)</sup> on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of NSGTS. The General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 46/66 on 11 December without vote.

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 45/20 of 20 November 1990,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Conscious of the importance of promoting the educational advancement of the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories,

Strongly convinced that the continuation and expansion of offers of scholarships is essential in order to meet the increasing need of students from Non-Self-Governing Territories for educational and training assistance, and considering that students in those Territories should be encouraged to avail themselves of such offers,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;

4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

The Secretariat used the available information in preparing, for the Committee on colonial countries, working papers on each Territory. In reports to the Committee<sup>(3)</sup> and the General Assembly,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General listed the date of receipt of the information provided by the administering States and the period covered by their reports. He had received information on the following NSGTS:

New Zealand: Tokelau

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 46/63 on 11 December by recorded vote.

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and the action taken by the Special Committee in respect of that information,

Recalling also its resolution 45/16 of 20 November 1990, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

Stressing the importance of timely transmission by the administering Powers of adequate information under Article 73 e of the Charter, in particular in relation to the preparation by the Secretariat of the working papers on the Territories concerned,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

3. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit or continue to transmit to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

Visiting missions

The Acting Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries, as requested by the Committee in 1990, held consultations with those administering Powers of NSGTS which did not participate in the Committee's work. As he reported in July 1991,<sup>(5)</sup> those Powers expressed willingness to continue to provide information in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter, but they were not ready to accept visiting missions; further consultations would be necessary. One administering Power indicated the possibility that the United Nations would be invited in 1992 to send a mission to the Territory under its administration. Others, however, considered it essential first to ascertain that the peoples of the Territories really wanted such missions and, if so, to determine the objectives of those missions on a case-by-case basis. In their view, a mission would more likely be accepted if the Committee demonstrated that it would concentrate efforts exclusively on the well-being of the peoples. In that connection, the Acting Chairman pointed out the Committee's reforms aimed at improving its efficiency and method of work. He expressed the hope that all administering Powers would invite visiting missions to the Territories.

On 9 August,<sup>(6)</sup> the Committee adopted a resolution by which it stressed the need to dispatch periodic visiting missions to colonial Territories in order to facilitate implementation of the 1960 Declaration. It called on administering Powers to receive United Nations missions and to participate in its work. The Committee requested its Acting Chairman to continue consultations with administering Powers and to report to the Committee as appropriate.

Other colonial Territories

Western Sahara

In 1991, the Secretary-General, after holding consultations with the parties concerned, proposed a detailed settlement plan for Western Sahara, which was approved by the Security Council. By approving the plan and timetable for the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO), the Council decided that, during a transitional period, the United Nations would organize and conduct a referendum in the Territory to enable the people of Western Sahara to choose between independence or integration with Morocco. The plan called for a Special Representative of the Secretary-General to be assisted by civilian, security and military units of MINURSO. The units began deployment in 1991. The formal cease-fire between Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro (POLISARIO) was scheduled to come into effect on 6 September, but differences of opinion between the parties remained at that time and hostilities broke out. By the end of the year, the Secretary-General predicted a further delay of some months while consultations continued.

The Secretary-General's plan was submitted to the Security Council in April,<sup>(1)</sup> in response to its 1990 request.<sup>(2)</sup> His 1991 report expanded on proposals put forward by him in 1990.<sup>(3)</sup> Under the plan, a transitional period would begin when the cease-fire came into effect and would end with the proclamation of the results of the referendum, a period of at least 20 weeks. During the transitional period, Morocco would reduce its troops in the Territory to 65,000 and those remaining would be confined to designated locations. POLISARIO troops would also be confined to certain locations. An Identification Commission would identify and register all Western Saharans eligible to vote in the referendum. As agreed by the two parties, all Western Saharans to whom the 1974 census undertaken by Spain related and who were 18 years of age or older would have the right to vote, whether or not they were living in the Territory. The Commission's mandate would be to update the 1974 census, deleting the names of those who had died and adding those who claimed they had been omitted from the census and could provide required evidence. The United Nations would hold a free and fair referendum with the participation of official observers.

An essential element of the settlement plan would be the repatriation of Western Saharans who were eligible to vote and who wished to return to the Territory. UNHCR would be responsible for the implementation of the repatriation programme, an integral part of the MINURSO operation. The programme would involve ascertaining the repatriation wishes of Western Saharans outside the Territory, issuing documents, and ensuring security at reception centres for those returning. It was intended that repatriation would begin immediately after the Identification Commission's work was completed, or immediately before the referendum campaign began.

The Secretary-General estimated the total cost of MINURSO to be approximately $200 million. Implementation of the plan could begin once the General Assembly approved MINURSO's budget.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (April)

Speaking at informal consultations of the Security Council on 24 April,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General said the plan constituted a practical means of achieving the objective set by the General Assembly and endorsed by the Security Council, namely holding a free and fair referendum for the Western Saharan people, organized and conducted by the United Nations in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity (OAU). Efforts had been made to keep costs to a minimum, and he hoped that voluntary contributions would be forthcoming. He said that, should the Council decide to establish MINURSO, its expenditures should be considered as expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17 of the Charter. Assessments levied on them would be credited to a special account.

In addition to the necessary financial resources, other necessary elements of the plan were the full support of the Council, the full co-operation of the two parties, and the full co-operation of the neighbouring countries (Algeria and Mauritania). Those two countries had given assurances to the Secretary-General in that regard. The Secretary-General recommended that the Council authorize the establishment of MINURSO as soon as possible.

On 29 April, the Council adopted resolution 690(1991) unanimously.

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 621(1988) of 20 September 1988, by which it, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General to transmit to it a report on the holding of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara and on ways and means to ensure the organization and supervision of such a referendum by the United Nations in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling also that, on 30 August 1988, the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguía el-Hamra y de Río de Oro gave their agreement in principle to the proposals of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity in the framework of their joint mission of good offices,

Recalling further its resolution 658(1990) of 27 June 1990, by which it approved the report of the Secretary-General of 18 June 1990, which contains the full text of the settlement proposals as accepted by the two parties on 30 August 1988, as well as an outline of the plan provided by the Secretary-General in order to implement those proposals, and by which it requested the Secretary-General to transmit to it a further detailed report on his implementation plan, containing in particular an estimate of the cost of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara,

Desirous of reaching a just and lasting solution of the question of Western Sahara,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General of 19 April 1991 on the situation concerning Western Sahara,

1. Approves the report of the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council in accordance with resolution 658(1990);

2. Expresses its full support for the efforts of the Secretary-General for the organization and the supervision, by the United Nations in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity, of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, in accordance with the objectives mentioned in his report;

3. Calls upon the two parties to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General in the implementation of his plan as described in his report of 18 June 1990 and amplified in his report of 19 April 1991;

4. Decides to establish, under its authority, a United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara in accordance with the aforementioned report of 19 April 1991;

5. Also decides that the transitional period will begin no later than 16 weeks after the General Assembly approves the budget for the Mission;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to keep the Security Council regularly informed of the implementation of his settlement plan.

Security Council resolution 690(1991)

29 April 1991 Meeting 2984 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/22525).

Following the adoption of the resolution, both Algeria, on 1 May,<sup>(5)</sup> and Mauritania, on 6

May,<sup>(6)</sup> sent letters to the Secretary-General expressing support for the settlement plan.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (May)

By a note of 7 May,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General requested the inclusion in the agenda of the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly of an additional item on the financing of MINURSO and that it be allocated to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee. An addendum contained cost estimates and a proposed staffing table. The Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), in a report of 13 May, approved an initial expenditure of not more than $572,800 for MINURSO preparatory expenses, pending Assembly approval of the MINURSO budget. It also made suggestions for reducing costs, particularly by contributions in kind. It recommended that the Assembly approve the Secretary-General's cost estimates and assess a total of $143 million gross ($140 million net) for the initial six-month period, to be financed in accordance with the special scale for peace-keeping operations, as well as reduce MINURSO top staff and the number of civilian members. The Secretary-General was requested to submit a performance report for the first six months of the operation, which the Assembly could consider at its next regular session before taking action on financing MINURSO for the remaining three-month period.

On 17 May, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 45/266 without vote.

Financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 45/21 of 20 November 1990, Bearing in mind Security Council resolutions 621(1988) of 20 September 1988 and 458(1990) of 27 June 1990 as well as Council resolution 690(1991) of 29 April 1991, by which the Council established, under its authority, the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Noting that the budgetary estimates for the Mission as contained in the report of the Secretary-General amount to 180,617,000 United States dollars gross (176,868,000 dollars net),

Recognizing that the costs of the Mission are expenses of the Organization to be borne by Member States in accordance with Article 17, paragraph 2, of the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the Mission with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Urging all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to the Mission in full and on time, particularly in view of the urgent need for the start-up cost of the operation and its brevity of duration,

Recognizing that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by the Mission, a different procedure is required from the one applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards such an operation,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963, in the financing of the Mission,

1. Recalls that, in accordance with Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations, it is the General Assembly that shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization;

2. Approves in principle, the budgetary estimates proposed by the Secretary-General for the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (180,617,000 dollars gross, 176,868,000 dollars net), as contained in his report, for the mandate period approved by the Security Council in its resolution 690(1991) and in respect of which the Secretary-General is requested to establish a special account in accordance with paragraph 16 of his report;

3. Decides to appropriate an initial amount of 143 million dollars gross (140 million dollars net), inclusive of the amount of 889,700 dollars authorized with the concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions for pre-implementation expenses under the terms of General Assembly resolution 44/203 of 21 December 1989, for the operation of the Mission in accordance with the implementation timetable set out in paragraph 10 of the report of the Secretary-General;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a detailed performance report for the first six months of the operation to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session and to take all necessary measures to ensure that the operation is administered with the maximum of efficiency and economy, bearing in mind the observations and recommendations contained in paragraphs 10 to 18 of the report of the Advisory Committee;

5. Decides to consider at its forty-sixth session the appropriations required to finance the Mission for the remaining three-month mandate period in the light of the performance report referred to in paragraph 4 of the present resolution;

6. Takes note of the views expressed by the Secretary-General in paragraphs 18 and 19 of his report and acknowledges that the repatriation programme to be carried out by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, in accordance with its statute, is an essential political element in the settlement proposals without which an impartial referendum could not take place, and calls upon Member States to respond expeditiously to the appeal by the Secretary-General for voluntary contributions in this regard;

7. Adopts the recommendations of the Advisory Committee, as contained in paragraph 8 of its report, in respect of voluntary contributions totalling 34.5 million dollars estimated as the requirements of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees for the repatriation of Western Saharans in accordance with the settlement plan as contained in paragraphs 72 to 74 of the report of the Secretary-General of 18 June 1990 and in paragraphs 34 to 36 of the report of the Secretary-General of 19 April 1991;

8. Takes note of the recommendation of the Advisory Committee, contained in paragraph 15 of its report, concerning the high-level posts for the Mission and decides that no more than one Under-Secretary-General and two Assistant Secretaries-General shall be appointed for the Mission;

9. Decides, as an ad hoc arrangement, to apportion the amount of 143 million dollars gross (140 million dollars net) among Member States in accordance with the composition of groups set out in paragraphs 3 and 4 of General Assembly resolution 43/232 of 1 March 1989, as adjusted by the Assembly in its resolution 44/192 B of 21 December 1989, and taking into account the scale of assessments for the years 1989, 1990 and 1991;

10. Decides also that Liechtenstein shall be included in the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (b) of General Assembly resolution 43/232;

11. Decides further that Namibia shall be included in the group of Member States set out in paragraph 3 (d) of General Assembly resolution 43/232;

12. Decides that, in accordance with the provisions of its resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided for in paragraph 9 of the present resolution, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund of the estimated staff assessment income of 3 million dollars approved for the initial six-month period;

13. Invites voluntary contributions to the Mission in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with the procedure established by the General Assembly in its resolution 44/192 A of 21 December 1989;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session the item entitled "Financing of the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara".

17 May 1991 Meeting 76 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/45/1013) without vote, 16 May (meeting 59); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/45/L.30), orally revised; agenda item 157. Meeting numbers. GA 45th session: 5th Committee 57-59; plenary 76.

Action by the Secretary-General (June-November). Following the Security Council's approval of the Western Sahara settlement plan, the Secretary-General began preparations for establishing MINURSO. By a letter of 21 June to the Council President,<sup>(9)</sup> he requested the Council's consent to his appointment of Major-General Armand Roy (Canada) as the Force Commander of the MINURSO military unit, which the Council approved on 24 June.<sup>(10)</sup> On 3 July,<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General proposed that 36 specific countries contribute contingents to the unit. Those countries had indicated their willingness to do so. The Council agreed to the proposal on 9 July.<sup>(12)</sup>

The Secretary-General on 8 July<sup>(13)</sup> informed the Council that he had proposed to Morocco and POLISARIO that they commence a formal ceasefire on 6 September and the two parties had agreed. However, in a letter of 3 September,<sup>(14)</sup> the Secretary-General expressed concern at recent developments along the international frontier and informed the Council of his decision to concentrate United Nations efforts in certain areas. The military observers would be deployed at 10 observation posts in forward positions in time to supervise the beginning of the cease-fire. Logistical support and communications would be set up and it was expected that, in accordance with established practice, the host country would offer facilities and subsistence until the Mission became self-reliant. The Council endorsed his action on 4 September.<sup>(15)</sup> On 13 September,<sup>(16)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the Council of his decision to deploy about 100 additional military observers and the staff necessary for command and control functions and logistical support, an action endorsed by the Council on 17 September.<sup>(17)</sup>

As requested by the General Assembly in 1990,<sup>(18)</sup> the Secretary General reported in October 1991<sup>(19)</sup> on the situation in Western Sahara and described the steps he had taken towards a settlement. He had visited Morocco and Algeria in late May 1991 where he discussed the implementation of the plan with leaders of the two countries as well as POLISARIO. The three components of MINURSO had been established and the Identification Commission had begun its work. The Secretary-General's action and other political developments were also described in a Secretariat working paper,<sup>(20)</sup> which was considered by the Committee on colonial countries.<sup>(21)</sup>

Reporting to the Assembly in December,<sup>(22)</sup> the Secretary-General summarized the financial situation of MINURSO and gave a performance report for 17 May to 30 November. As at the latter date, assessments totalling $140.9 million had been apportioned among Member States to finance the operation, and contributions amounted to $57.9 million, leaving a balance of $83 million outstanding, excluding some contributions in kind (accommodation, office space, fuel, food, transportation). By the end of November, 234 military observers were deployed, and the general headquarters and regional offices in the northern and southern sectors had been established, as well as 10 military observation posts. A total of 132 international staff were assigned to MINURSO. Due to unforeseen political difficulties, it had not been possible to carry out all the tasks foreseen in the plan prior to the transition period. Those difficulties pertained to identification of Saharans eligible to participate in the referendum; the parties interpreted the plan differently in that regard. They also disagreed on the confinement of troops and the movement to the Territory of refugees and other Saharans living outside. Under the circumstances, a delay was likely, according to the Secretary-General, requiring consultations and analysis of the situation. In the meantime, he recommended that the Assembly maintain the operational costs of MINURSO until February 1992 or until the current political problems were resolved. For the three-month period from 1 December 1991 to 29 February 1992, he estimated the cost at $8,628,000 gross ($8,136,000 net).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

The General Assembly's Fourth Committee, during its debate on Western Sahara, heard statements by two petitioners, one on behalf of POLISARIO and the other of the Sahara Fund.

Acting on a recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the Assembly adopted without vote on 11 December resolution 46/67.

3. Also welcomes the entry into force of the cease-fire in Western Sahara on 6 September 1991, in accordance with the proposal of the Secretary-General accepted by the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro;

4. Endorses the call by the Security Council upon the two parties to continue to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General in the implementation of his plan as described in his report of 18 June 1990 and amplified in his report of 19 April 1991;

5. Pays tribute to the Secretary-General for his action with a view to settling the question of Western Sahara by the implementation of his peace plan;

6. Expresses its full support for the efforts of the Secretary-General for the organization and supervision by the United Nations, in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity, of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, in accordance with the objectives mentioned in his report of 19 April 1991;

7. #### SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (December)

The Secretary-General, in a December report to the Security Council,<sup>(23)</sup> described progress made on the settlement plan. He noted that it had not been possible to carry out a number of tasks that were supposed to be completed before the cease-fire came into effect, due to differences between the two parties. One party could not agree that the transition period should begin on 6 September, as envisaged in the plan. Since the deployment of the military observers to the area, no loss of life or property had been reported. Both sides, however, had complained about violations of the cease-fire, with one side complaining of overflights of military aircraft and the other complaining about infiltration of troops into the Territory. Differing views on the identification process had caused a delay in the timetable for the transition period, but progress had been made in formulating regulations for organizing the referendum and the mandate of the Identification Commission had been finalized.

The two outstanding problems related to the confinement of troops and the return of Saharans living outside the Territory. A number of persons who were said to belong to Western Sahara had been moved into the Territory. In light of these circumstances, the Secretary-General said, it was likely that a further delay of some months would occur while consultations continued on those issues. The delay had obliged him to accept the resignation of his Special Representative, Johannes Manz. In the meantime, efforts would be made to cut costs by reducing staff.

In a letter to the Council President of 23 December,<sup>(24)</sup> Ghana, on behalf of the African Group of States, transmitted a statement of the General Secretariat of OAU, by which OAU reaffirmed its commitment to the settlement plan for Western Sahara, adding that any change would be prejudicial to the process and to the organization of a fair referendum for self-determination. Morocco, on 24 December,<sup>(25)</sup> said that the letter from Ghana had not been authorized by the African Group and that the OAU General Secretariat could not legally express views on behalf of that organization.

Algeria, on 26 December,<sup>(26)</sup> said that the peace plan, which had won wide support within the international community, had become bogged down because of obstacles confronting the United Nations; to introduce new elements without the prior consent of the two parties would be incompatible with the Council's resolutions, thus risking the settlement process.

The Council, on 31 December, unanimously adopted resolution 725(1991).

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolutions 621(1988) of 20 September 1988, 658(1990) of 27 June 1990 and 690(1991) of 29 April 1991,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 19 December 1991 on the situation concerning Western Sahara,

Noting with concern the difficulties and delays encountered in the implementation of the settlement plan regarding the question of Western Sahara, as adopted by resolutions 658(1990) and 690(1991),

1. Approves the efforts of the Secretary-General for the organization and the supervision, by the United Nations in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity, of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara and therefore welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on the situation concerning Western Sahara;

2. Reiterates its support for further efforts by the Secretary-General for the organization and the supervision, by the United Nations in cooperation with the Organization of African Unity, of a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara in conformity with resolutions 658(1990) and 690(1991), by which the Council adopted the settlement plan for Western Sahara;

3. Calls upon the two parties to cooperate fully with the Secretary-General in the implementation of his settlement plan, which has been accepted by them;

4. Invites the Secretary-General to submit a further report to the Security Council as soon as possible but in any event within two months of the date of passage of this resolution.

Security Council resolution 725(1991)

31 December 1991 Meeting 3025 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/23330).

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

The Committee on colonial countries again considered the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) in 1991. The Committee had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat on the economic, social and educational conditions in the islands.<sup>(27)</sup> There were no political developments in the reporting period (April 1990-March 1991).

By 21 votes to none, with 3 abstentions, the Committee adopted a resolution on the question on 14 August,<sup>(28)</sup> requesting Argentina and the United Kingdom to consolidate the current process of dialogue through the resumption of negotiations, and reiterating its support for the mission of good offices of the Secretary-General in finding a solution.

Argentina and the United Kingdom, in a letter of 23 October to the Secretary-General,<sup>(29)</sup> transmitted a statement of 25 September issued by their Governments, describing areas of cooperation they had agreed on— a communication and consultation system between their military authorities, maritime and air search and rescue, safety of navigation and an air control zone.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 November, the General Assembly, by decision 46/406, took note of the joint statement by Argentina and the United Kingdom and decided to include the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh (1992) session.

East Timor

Although the question of East Timor was not considered by the General Assembly in 1991, the Committee on colonial countries considered it in August. In addition to statements by Indonesia (which maintained that the process of decolonization of East Timor was complete and that East Timor had been integrated into Indonesia),<sup>(30)</sup> Portugal (as the administering Power), Cape Verde and Papua New Guinea, the Committee heard statements from 18 petitioners. It had before it a working paper by the Secretariat on political developments, the human rights situation and economic and social conditions in East Timor.<sup>(31)</sup>

In December 1989, Indonesia and Australia signed an agreement on a zone of cooperation for exploration and exploitation of offshore oil resources in Timor Gap, located between East Timor's southern coast and Australia's northern coast. In February 1991, Portugal instituted proceedings against Australia at the International Court of Justice in protest of Australia's plan to mine natural resources in the Timor Gap seabed (see PART FIVE, Chapter I). In Portugal's view,<sup>(32)</sup> the Australian-Indonesian agreement was a violation of international law, including the right to self-determination of peoples, as well as a violation of the Convention on the Continental Shelf, of 29 April 1958. In a letter to the Secretary-General of 18 December 1991,<sup>(33)</sup> Portugal noted that, on 12 December, Australia announced that 11 production-sharing contracts had been approved for petroleum exploration in the Timor Gap, thereby aggravating the dispute between Australia and Portugal before the International Court. Portugal reserved the right to obtain from Australia and the companies involved reparations due to the people of East Timor and to Portugal in virtue of damages caused by those actions.

In regard to human rights, the Secretariat quoted other sources, which said that the human rights situation in East Timor had not improved over the past year and there was a continuing pattern of serious violations, including short-term detention and ill-treatment and torture of alleged political opponents of Indonesian rule. According to Amnesty International, more than 100 persons had been detained between August 1990 and January 1991 for their alleged involvement in pro-independence demonstrations or related political activities. A related incident occurred on 12 November 1991 when members of the Indonesian armed forces in Dili opened fire on a group of demonstrators, killing and wounding a number of them. Several countries—the Netherlands on behalf of the European Community;<sup>(34)</sup> Cape Verde, also on behalf of Angola, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique and Sao Tome and Principe;<sup>(35)</sup> and Portugal<sup>(36)</sup>—addressed letters to the Secretary-General expressing concern over that action and some called for an international panel to investigate the incident.

In a September report to the General Assembly,<sup>(37)</sup> the Secretary-General said that Indonesia and Portugal had been holding, under his auspices, talks on the terms of reference of and modalities for a visit to East Timor by a delegation from the Portuguese Parliament. The Secretary-General, with the assistance of Under-Secretary-General Rafeeuddin Ahmed, had held discussions with the Portuguese President, Prime Minister and Foreign Minister and the Indonesian Foreign Minister. Both sides had reiterated their desire to seek a comprehensive and internationally acceptable solution through continuing dialogue and negotiation. In June, the two countries agreed on a number of issues related to the terms of reference of the proposed visit, which would be for 10 to 12 days during the dry season. An advance team of two members from each country, accompanied by a representative of the Secretary-General, would prepare arrangements for the visit.

By decision 46/402 of 20 September 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the General Committee,<sup>(38)</sup> deferred consideration of the item on East Timor to its forty-seventh (1992) session.

Other Territories

Besides those Territories which were considered as separate agenda items in 1991 (see Western Sahara, Falkland Islands (Malvinas) and East Timor, above, and Gibraltar, below), the Committee on colonial countries dealt with 13 island Territories—American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, Tokelau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (see PART FOUR, Chapter II), Turks and Caicos Islands, United States Virgin Islands. The Committee allocated the item to its Subcommittee on Small Territories and itself took up the item on 9 and 14 August. It heard statements by administering Powers and considered reports from those Powers and working papers prepared by the Secretariat.

The Committee considered the report of the Meeting of Governmental Experts of Island Developing Countries and Donor Countries and Organizations (New York, 25-29 June 1990).<sup>(39)</sup> The Meeting discussed specific problems of island developing countries (IDCs), such as remoteness, vulnerability to natural disasters, fragility of the ecosystem, constraints in transport and communications, lack of natural resources and weak technological capacity, and drew up a broad strategy for dealing with them. It recommended that international support, including concessional assistance, be provided over a long time-frame, and that international and national measures to assist IDCs be monitored by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

The Committee adopted two draft resolutions, one on decolonization in general and the other on 10 specific Territories, and two draft decisions, one on Pitcairn and the other on St. Helena, as recommendations to the General Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Conscious of the particular vulnerability of the small Territories to natural disasters and environmental degradation,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide a means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and considering that the possibility of sending further visiting missions to those Territories at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Powers should be kept under review,

Noting with appreciation the contribution to the development of some Territories by specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, in particular the United Nations Development Programme, as well as regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank,

General Assembly resolution 46/68 B

11 December 1991 Meeting 68 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/46/629) without vote (A & B together), 15 November (meeting 17); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/46/23), amended by Chairman (A/C4/46/L.10 & A/C4/46/L.11); agenda item 19.

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 4th Committee 7-17; plenary 68.

American Samoa

The Committee on colonial countries, during its consideration of the question of American Samoa, had before it a working paper<sup>(40)</sup> by the Secretariat covering political developments and economic and social conditions in the Territory. According to the official 1990 census, the population was 46,638 persons, over 90 per cent of whom were ethnically Samoan, 2.5 per cent Caucasians, and 3.5 per cent Tongans, Tokelauans and Niueans. In November 1990, the Governor reportedly took initial steps to establish a commission to review the Territory's political status and, on 14 January 1991, he called for the opening of talks with the United States on the issue. Specifically he called on the Territory's political leaders to join him in requesting the United States to authorize the Governor to appoint a political and constitutional review commission to look at all the political options of the Territory.

Anguilla

The Committee on colonial countries in 1991 had before it two working papers on Anguilla. One covered basic information on political, economic and social conditions,<sup>(41)</sup> and the other provided information on activities of foreign economic and other interests in the Territory.<sup>(42)</sup> Anguilla, with a population of 7,300 by mid-1988, increased its powers of self-government under a constitutional amendment that went into effect in May 1990, but lost jurisdiction over offshore banking operations. The amendment also placed responsibility for the island's international financial services in the hands of the Governor. Tourism, the main economic activity, continued to be predominantly controlled by foreigners. The Government continued to promote the Territory as a haven for regional and international deposits, with its chief attractions being convertibility of a wide range of foreign currencies and no taxes on income and capital gains. Fishing, the second most important economic activity, was threatened because of poaching by foreign vessels. In July 1990, legislation was adopted authorizing Anguilla to enter into legal cooperation agreements with the United States concerning drug-trafficking investigations.

For General Assembly action, see resolution 46/68 B above.

Bermuda

In three 1991 working papers submitted to the Committee on colonial countries, the Secretariat described recent developments and conditions in Bermuda. The first covered political developments and economic and social conditions.<sup>(43)</sup> It noted that, following the general elections of February 1989, the Premier of Bermuda said independence was no longer a major issue and the majority of the people did not seem to want independence. His Government planned to pay special attention to the problems of drug trafficking, the laundering of illegal money and overcrowding. The leader of the opposition, however, favoured independence. With no natural resources and little manufacturing and agriculture, Bermuda continued to rely on tourism as the main element of the economy, with the international business sector the second largest export earner. The international business companies included a wide range of multinational trading and investment companies and, at the end of 1989, over 7,000 international companies were registered in Bermuda. The depressed economies throughout the world had affected the gross domestic product of Bermuda in 1990. Details of foreign economic and other interests were provided in a second working paper.<sup>(44)</sup>

In a paper on military activities in Bermuda,<sup>(45)</sup> the Secretariat said there were two United States military installations in Bermuda and one Canadian base, together comprising one tenth of Bermuda's area. In 1990, the United States reduced its forces there by 10 per cent. According to the commanding officer of the United States Naval Air Station, discussions were under way in May 1991 between defence officials of the United States and the United Kingdom regarding closing one base and establishing a North Atlantic Treaty Organization base at an existing site.

British Virgin Islands

The Committee on colonial countries, for its consideration of the British Virgin Islands, received a working paper prepared by the Secretariat,<sup>(46)</sup> which noted that the islands had been struck by a hurricane and an earthquake in September 1989 and November 1990, respectively. The Territory had agreed to a Memorandum of Understanding on Emergency Preparedness with the Caribbean Community. According to statements by the Chief Minister (March 1991) and the Deputy Chief Minister (June 1990), there was no move for independence under consideration by the inhabitants, estimated in mid-1989 to number about 14,000. The economy, based mainly on tourism, continued to expand and the Territory had one of the highest per capita income levels in the Caribbean.

Cayman Islands

In a working paper submitted to the Committee on colonial countries,<sup>(47)</sup> the Secretariat said that, in February 1990, the Governor of the Cayman Islands stated that the Government had decided to request the United Kingdom to conduct a constitutional review in the Territory. Later that year, the Legislative Assembly passed a motion for the establishment of a Select Committee on the Constitution, consisting of all elected members of the Assembly. Members of the Constitutional Commission appointed by the United Kingdom arrived in the Cayman Islands in January 1991 to start the review work by evaluating public opinion on possible constitutional evolution.

Tourism and the financial industry continued to provide foreign exchange for the Territory. The Cayman Islands had become one of the world's leading offshore financial centres and by 1989, a total of 538 licences had been issued. Of the world's 50 largest international banks, 44 were licensed in the Territory.

In a second working paper, the Secretariat elaborated on foreign economic interests in the Territory. Over the preceding decade, the economy had showed unprecedented growth. The standard of living in 1989 was the highest in the Caribbean and one of the highest in the world. The territorial Government continued to promote the Cayman Islands as one of the world's largest financial centres, while taking steps to protect the economic structure from illicit activities, such as drug trafficking, money laundering, smuggling of funds, tax evasion and other forms of economic fraud.

Gibraltar

In a working paper on Gibraltar,<sup>(49)</sup> the Secretariat described the current status of negotiations between Spain and the United Kingdom, begun in 1984, on the sovereignty of Gibraltar and promoting cooperation. Following a meeting in May 1991 with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, the Spanish Prime Minister said that his Government was waiting for the United Kingdom to take steps to solve the "historic anachronism" and that his country was not prepared to wait indefinitely for a solution to the problem. In 1991, Spain and the United Kingdom continued to disagree on expansion of the civilian use of the Gibraltar airport. Spain reiterated its position that it would consider building its own airport on the Spanish side of the Gibraltar border if the Government of Gibraltar continued to block the Anglo-Spanish agreement on the joint use of the airport. As to the economic conditions of Gibraltar, the economy was largely dependent on tourism and the provision of financial services.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 46/420 without vote.

Question of Gibraltar

At its 68th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, recalling its decision 45/407 of 20 November 1990 and recalling at the same time that the statement agreed to by the Governments of Spain and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland at Brussels on 27 November 1984 stipulates, inter alia, the following:

"The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting cooperation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environmental matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution", takes note of the fact that, as part of this process, the Ministers for Foreign Affairs have held annual meetings alternatively in each capital, and urges both Governments to continue their negotiations with the object of reaching a definitive solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations."

General Assembly decision 46/420

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/46/629) without objection, 29 October (meeting, 14): draft consensus (A/C.4/46/L.3); agenda item 19. Meeting numbers, GA 46th session: 4th Committee 7-14; plenary 68.

Guam

In a working paper on Guam for the Committee on colonial countries, the Secretariat described general political and economic and social developments.<sup>(50)</sup> The paper covered the status of the draft Commonwealth Act that had been voted on in August 1987, providing for Guam to become a fully self-governing Commonwealth of the United States under a locally adopted constitution, under United States sovereignty. Following the determination by United States authorities in 1989 that some provisions were unconstitutional, particularly those relating to an exercise of self-determination by Chamorro people alone, officials of Guam and the United States held talks to make mutually acceptable revisions. By February 1991, understanding had been reached on courts, defence, foreign affairs, enforcement of federal laws, immigration, self-government and overseas economic and tourism offices. The economic situation in Guam had changed little since the Second World War, when the majority of the labour force, which had been mostly involved in subsistence agriculture, was employed to service the United States military or the territorial Government. Recent attempts had been made to diversify the economy, and, as the tourism industry expanded, a construction boom and prosperity in the commercial sector followed.

According to another Secretariat working paper dealing with military activities in Guam,<sup>(51)</sup> 30 per cent of the island was reserved for the use of the United States Department of Defense. The Air Force and Navy maintained major military installations, with 10,700 active duty military personnel in December 1989. In 1990, the United States withdrew all B-52 bombers from Guam, which reportedly meant that the air base there would lose more than $54 million a year in salaries and wages of the 1,402 military personnel and 11 civilians employed in the bomb wing. The United States maintained that the military presence on Guam was of a defensive nature only and it did not constitute an obstacle to the Territory's economic development.

Montserrat

imately 12,000 was still recovering from the impact of hurricane Hugo in September 1989. The Territory was administered under the Montserrat Constitution Order, 1989, which had come into effect on 13 February 1990. The Constitution instituted a bill of human rights and transferred the responsibility for offshore financial institutions from elected local representatives to the Governor. All the political parties shared the view that economic viability should precede independence. Although most people preferred to retain a special relationship with the United Kingdom, it was hoped that the Territory would be in a position to express its right to self-determination in the near future. The United Kingdom said its policy was always guided by the wishes of the inhabitants. The economy of Montserrat continued to grow in 1990 at an average annual rate of 10 per cent, with tourism and related activities the main contributors to the economy.

A second working paper covered the activities of foreign economic interests in Montserrat.<sup>(53)</sup> Foreign investment, mainly from Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States, continued to play a paramount role and was concentrated in tourism, real estate, manufacturing, international business and telecommunications. To promote private sector investment, including joint-venture projects, the Government introduced a new system of tax incentives and duty-free concessions.

Pitcairn

Pitcairn, a Territory of four South Pacific islands, one of which was inhabited with a total population of 56 as at February 1990, was administered by the United Kingdom.<sup>(54)</sup> Its principal sources of income were the sale of postage stamps, as well as interest and dividends. Most food and all other goods were imported. Exports consisted of handicrafts and some fruits and vegetables, which were sold mainly to passing vessels.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1991, the General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 46/421 without vote.

Question of Pitcairn

At its 68th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of members of the Assembly:

“The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and People, reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Pitcairn to self-determination in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, which fully applies to the Territory. The Assembly further reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory. The Assembly urges the administering Power to continue to respect the very individual lifestyle that the people of the Territory have chosen and to preserve, promote and protect it. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of Pitcairn at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-seventh session.”

St. Helena

St. Helena, which had an estimated population of 5,500 as of 1987, consists of the main island of St. Helena, the island of Ascension and a group of islands known as Tristan da Cunha, and is located in the South Atlantic Ocean. Its economic and social conditions were described in a Secretariat working paper.<sup>(55)</sup>

St. Helena possessed few natural resources. Food production was insufficient to supply needs and it relied on the importation of most requirements. Its development programme was financed mainly by the United Kingdom, the administering Power. UNDP provided $695,000 to finance a five-year (1987-1992) livestock development programme, intended to make the island largely self-sufficient in pig and cattle feed. The only export crop was coffee. The principal resource was the fishing industry, although fish were exported only when there was a surplus to the domestic requirements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1991, the General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 46/422 by recorded vote.

Question of St. Helena

At its 68th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1991, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of St. Helena to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960. The Assembly urged the administering Power, in consultation with the Legislative Council and other representatives of the people of St. Helena, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory and, in that connection, reaffirmed the importance of promoting an awareness among the people of St. Helena of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination. The Assembly reaffirmed the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory and called upon the administering Power to continue, in cooperation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy and to increase its assistance to diversification programmes. The Assembly urged the administering Power, in cooperation with the territorial Government, to continue to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the people of St. Helena to own and dispose of the natural resources of the Territory, including marine resources, and to establish and maintain control over the future development of those resources. The Assembly expressed the view that the administering Power should continue to implement infrastructure and community development projects aimed at improving the general welfare of the community, including the unemployment situation, and to encourage local initiative and enterprise, particularly in the areas of fisheries development, forestry, handicrafts and agriculture. The Assembly reaffirmed that continued development assistance from the administering Power, together with any assistance that the international community might be able to provide, constitutes an important means of developing the economic potential of the Territory and of enhancing the capacity of its people to realize fully the goals set forth in the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. The Assembly, in that connection, welcomed the assistance rendered by the United Nations Development Programme and invited other organizations of the United Nations system to assist in the development of the Territory. The continued presence of military facilities in the Territory prompted the Assembly, on the basis of previous United Nations resolutions and decisions concerning military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, to urge the administering Power to take measures to avoid the involvement of the Territory in offensive acts or interference against neighbouring States. The Assembly considered that the possibility of dispatching a United Nations visiting mission to St. Helena at an appropriate time should be kept under review, and requested the Special Committee to continue to examine the question of St. Helena at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

Tokelau

Tokelau, a Territory administered by New Zealand, consists of three small atolls in the South Pacific and, according to the 1986 census, had a population of 1,690.

According to a working paper by the Secretariat,<sup>(56)</sup> progress continued to be made in giving the people of Tokelau a greater voice in the Territory's development priorities and budgetary issues, and New Zealand was committed to assisting Tokelau in attaining a greater degree of self-government and economic self-sufficiency. The people of Tokelau had repeatedly expressed the desire to retain their special relationship with New Zealand. As for the economy of the Territory, it was at a subsistence level, being limited by the Territory's size, isolation and lack of resources. After cyclone Ofa hit Tokelau in February 1990, New Zealand provided emergency aid supplies and assisted in reconstruction. New Zealand remained the main source of development assistance; the second largest donor was UNDP.

Turks and Caicos Islands

The Turks and Caicos Islands, two groups of islands in the Caribbean under the administration of the United Kingdom, had a population of 11,465 as at 31 May 1990, an increase of 54 per cent since 1980.<sup>(57)</sup> The economy of the islands continued to be based primarily on tourism, property development, offshore banking, the export of fish (the only export) and government expenditure. The economy continued its upward trend in 1989; government revenue in 1990/91 was expected to equal expenditures.

For General Assembly action, see resolution 46/68 B above.

United States Virgin Islands

The Committee on colonial countries, during its 1991 consideration of the United States Virgin Islands, had before it three working papers, submitted by the Secretariat, on political, economic and social conditions,<sup>(58)</sup> on military activities<sup>(59)</sup> and on foreign economic activities.<sup>(60)</sup> The islands, with an estimated population of 97,000 in 1990, were still undergoing recovery and reconstruction following hurricane Hugo in September 1989.

The Territory's delegate to the United States Congress, in November 1990, had stated that the debate on the future status of the Territory should be postponed as the Territory was not ready for it. However, in February 1991, the President of the Senate of the Virgin Islands said the political status of the Territory remained an important issue.

The Commission on Status and Federal Relations, established in 1988, recommended postponing the referendum on the future status of the Territory from November 1989 to 1991, owing to the devastation caused by hurricane Hugo. Three options proposed for the referendum had been: statehood; compact of federal relations, Commonwealth and status quo; and free association and independence. The Commission resumed its meetings on 23 March 1991 and voted to recommend to the Legislature postponement of the referendum until 1993 to allow sufficient time for an effective political education campaign.

The territorial Government had been negotiating with the United States Government over the return of Water Island, the fourth largest island in the Territory, which had been leased to a company of developers in 1952. The lease was due to expire in December 1992.

The economy of the Territory was based on tourism and related services, construction and industrial development. The development of agriculture remained a priority of the Government's overall policy of diversification.

The United States Government currently maintained a radar and sonar calibration station and an underwater tracking station in the Virgin Islands. The Territory continued to be a port of call for United States naval vessels and those of its allies, and the United States Coast Guard contributed to efforts to block drug trafficking in the area.

Chapter II

International Trusteeship System

During 1991, progress was made towards self-government in the last Trust Territory under the International Trusteeship System-the Republic of Palau, a strategic territory administered by the United States-after the Security Council, by resolution 683(1990), had terminated the Trusteeship Agreement for the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and the Northern Mariana Islands. Palau continued to be supervised by the Trusteeship Council on behalf of the Security Council.

The Trusteeship Council, composed of China, France, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States, held its fifty-eighth regular session in New York between 3 May and 19 December. It held its twenty-first special session, also in New York, on 19 December. During the year it considered the Administering Authority's annual report, heard five petitioners, and examined 24 written petitions and 11 communications regarding the Territory.

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

Constitutional and political developments

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, designated as a strategic area, was administered by the United States in accordance with the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the Security Council in 1947.<sup>(1)</sup> The Trust Territory of Palau was located in the Western Caroline Islands and was composed of many islands, with a total land area of 492 square kilometres and an estimated population of 15,105. Two thirds of the population was located on Koror, the capital of Palau.

In December 1989, the United States passed the Implementation Act to authorize the entry into force of the Compact of Free Association with Palau. However, although majority support for the Compact had been voiced in several plebiscites over a number of years, the Compact had not been adopted. In the last plebiscite, held in February 1990, slightly over 60 per cent of the electorate had voted in favour of the Compact, which was not sufficient to satisfy the 75 per cent majority required by the Palauan Constitution.

Recognizing that the Compact would not soon be approved, the United States<sup>(2)</sup> stated that it remained mindful of its obligations to Palau under the Trusteeship Agreement. In order to strengthen the foundation for Palau's future, the United States Department of the Interior had, in October 1990, issued a Secretarial Order, stationing in Palau a Department official to report directly to the Assistant Secretary for Territorial and International Affairs. The main thrust of the Order was to reaffirm the United States commitment to its trusteeship responsibilities and to develop a master plan for Palau's economic development. Discussions on the introduction of this plan had taken place in Palau in January 1991 with the President, members of the Olbiil Era Kelulau (Palau National Congress), the State governors, traditional leaders, environmentalists and concerned citizens. There was, however, concern that the Order amounted to a usurpation of certain constitutional powers of Palau's Government and would delay its progress towards self-government.<sup>(3)</sup>

The United States assured the Trusteeship Council that until the future political status of Palau was resolved, it intended to continue exercising its trusteeship obligations fully and responsibly. Although the United States remained responsible for Palau's defence, it had no plans to establish any military bases there.

The United States further stated that, in January 1991, it had opened a Trust Territory Government Office at Koror (Palau) and was currently closing the Office at Saipan (Northern Mariana Islands). That measure had provided additional resources to Palau and would benefit the relationship between the United States and the Trust Territory.

A sum of $121,000 had been received in Palau in 1990 to cover Title I war claims<sup>(4)</sup> (damages sustained by the indigenous population during the Second World War) for some 70 claimants. Final payment of Title I claims was nearly complete. The United States stated that some 91 per cent of outstanding payments had been made in Palau: of the total award of $5.8 million issued by the Micronesian Claims Commission to recipients in Palau, some $5.2 million had been paid.

Trusteeship Council consideration. The Trusteeship Council held its fifty-eighth session in New York from 3 May to 19 December. Following the adoption of its agenda on 3 May,<sup>(5)</sup> and taking note, without objection, of the Secretary-General's report on credentials,<sup>(6)</sup> it held six meetings between 3 and 14 May. It had before it the annual report for the year ending 30 September 1990 by the United States as the Administering Authority for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands,<sup>(7)</sup> and a working paper prepared by the Secretariat,<sup>(4)</sup> outlining the conditions in the Territory, which was also before the Committee on colonial countries (see below).

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL ACTION

The Secretary-General forwarded the report by the United States on the administration of the Trust Territory for the year ending 30 September 1990 on 20 March<sup>(7)</sup> to the Trusteeship Council, and on 16 April<sup>(8)</sup> to the Security Council.

On 19 December, the Trusteeship Council adopted its report to the Security Council<sup>(2)</sup> covering the period 29 November 1990 to 19 December 1991. The report contained conclusions and recommendations prepared by its Drafting Committee (France and the United Kingdom)<sup>(9)</sup> and adopted by the Council without a vote on 14 May. The Council, taking note of a 1986 resolution, welcomed the adoption of Security Council resolution 683(1990) which determined, in the light of new status agreements for the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and the Northern Mariana Islands, that the objectives of the Trusteeship Agreement<sup>(1)</sup> had been fully attained, and that the applicability of the Trusteeship Agreement had terminated with respect to those entities. The Council welcomed the Administering Authority's assurances that it would assist the Government of Palau in any endeavour leading to the final determination of the political status for Palau, in accordance with the free choice of its people. It noted that the peoples of the Trust Territory had elected to assume full responsibility for administration in the economic, social and educational fields, noted also the concerns of the Government of Palau regarding economic development and self-sufficiency, and welcomed current consultations between the Administering Authority and Palau's Government towards a master national development plan.

Consideration by the Committee on colonial countries. The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries)<sup>(10)</sup> considered the Trust Territory on 9 and 14 August. It adopted on 14 August a resolution based on conclusions and recommendations made by its Subcommittee on Small Territories.<sup>(11)</sup> In considering the question, the Special Committee had before it a Secretariat working paper outlining conditions in the Trust Territory.<sup>(4)</sup> It was understood that reservations expressed by Bulgaria, Chile, Czech-slovakia and Norway<sup>(12)</sup> concerning the draft resolution on the Trust Territory would be reflected in the record of the meeting.

The Committee reaffirmed the importance of ensuring that the people of the Trust Territory fully and freely exercised their inalienable rights and that the obligations of the Administering Authority under the Trusteeship Agreement<sup>(1)</sup> and the Charter of the United Nations were duly discharged. Taking note of the adoption by the Security Council of resolution 683(1990), it expressed the hope that Palau, the only remaining Territory under the Trusteeship Agreement, would be able to complete the process of exercising its rights to self-determination in due course. Noting that the Trusteeship Council welcomed the Administering Authority's assurance that it would assist the Government of Palau in any appropriate endeavour leading to the final determination of its political status, the Committee called upon the Administering Authority to discharge its responsibilities in that connection, in strict conformity with the provisions of the Charter, particularly Article 83, and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(13)</sup> The Committee urged the Administering Authority to assist the maritime authorities of the Trust Territory in strengthening the existing legislation concerning exploitation, management and conservation of a 200-mile exclusive economic zone, stressed the need to preserve the cultural identity and heritage of the Palauan people, and took note of the interest of the people of the Trust Territory in the creation of a nuclear-free zone in the Pacific.

The Committee's Acting Chairman transmitted the text of the resolution on 12 September to the President of the Trusteeship Council<sup>(14)</sup> and, on the same date, to the President of the Security Council.<sup>(15)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY CONSIDERATION

On 29 October, the Chairman of the Fourth Committee of the General Assembly, on the basis of consultations with the Acting Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries and with concerned delegations, suggested that no action be taken on the draft resolution recommended by the latter Committee. That suggestion was adopted without objection.

Visiting mission

On 21 October,<sup>(17)</sup> the United States requested that a special session of the Trusteeship Council be convened to consider the prompt dispatch of a visiting mission to Palau to facilitate a better understanding of economic and social conditions there.

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL ACTION

On 19 December, during its twenty-first special session, the Trusteeship Council adopted resolution 2194(S-XXI) without vote.

Arrangements for the dispatch of a visiting mission to observe current conditions in Palau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

The Trusteeship Council,

Recalling Security Council resolution 683(1990) of 22 December 1990, in which the Council determined, in the light of the entry into force of the new status agreements for the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and the Northern Mariana Islands, that the objectives of the Trusteeship Agreement had been fully attained, and that the applicability of the Trusteeship Agreement had terminated, with respect to those entities,

Having been invited by the Administering Authority to dispatch a mission to observe current conditions in Palau,

Considering that it would be desirable to include in such a mission representatives of countries of the region that are not members of the Trusteeship Council,

1. Decides to dispatch a visiting mission to Palau, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, in March 1992, for approximately two weeks to observe current conditions in the Territory;

2. Further decides that the Visiting Mission to Palau should be composed of four members of the Trusteeship Council-China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland-and two representatives of countries of the region that are not members of the Council, to be determined through further consultations;

3. Directs the Visiting Mission to obtain first-hand information concerning-political, economic and social developments in Palau;

4. Directs the Visiting Mission to receive petitions, without prejudice to its action in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Trusteeship Council, and to examine on the spot such of the petitions as, in its opinion, warrant special examination;

5. Requests the Visiting Mission to submit to the Trusteeship Council as soon as practicable a report on its visit containing its findings, with such observations, conclusions and recommendations as it may wish to make;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and facilities to assist the Visiting Mission in the performance of its functions.

Trusteeship Council resolution 2194(S-XXI)

19 December 1991 Meeting 1690 Adopted without vote

Draft by President (T/L.1279); agenda item 3.

Financial implications. S-G. T/L.1280.

On 18 December,<sup>(18)</sup> the Secretary-General estimated the costs of the proposed mission to be $92,100, which could be met from available resources of the Trusteeship Council's programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993.

Hearings

On 3 May, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(2)</sup> heard five petitioners concerning conditions in, and the future status of, the Trust Territory.

On 18 October,<sup>(19)</sup> the Fourth Committee of the General Assembly heard one petitioner, J. A. Gonzalez González. In considering his request for a hearing<sup>(20)</sup> in the Committee,<sup>(21)</sup> Norway, on behalf of the Nordic countries, said that its granting should not be interpreted as an indication that the General Assembly had a right to hear petitioners speaking on matters relating to the Territory. Article 83 of the Charter of the United Nations stipulated that all United Nations functions relating to strategic areas should be exercised by the Security Council with the Trusteeship Council's assistance. A similar opinion was expressed by the Netherlands.

Petitions and communications

On 8 May, the Trusteeship Council considered 11 written communications and 24 petitions.

Other aspects of the International Trusteeship System

Fellowships and scholarships

Under a scholarship programme launched by the General Assembly in 1952,<sup>(1)</sup> 11 Member States had in past years made scholarships available for students from Trust Territories: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Tunisia, USSR, Yugoslavia. In a report to the Trusteeship Council covering the period from 15 May 1990 to 1 May 1991,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he had requested up-to-date information on scholarships for students from the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, but had received no response as of 1 May 1991. Other information on scholarships made available under the programme was included in the twenty-sixth edition of Study Abroad (1989/1990/1991), published by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Information dissemination

A report of the Secretary-General, covering the period from 1 May 1990 to 30 April 1991,<sup>(3)</sup> described the dissemination by the Department of Public Information of the United Nations (DPI) of information to the Trust Territory on the aims and objectives of the International Trusteeship System and of the United Nations.

DPI, with the cooperation of the Trusteeship Council and the Department of Conference Services, distributed information materials both directly to the Trust Territory and through United Nations Information Centres (UNICs), primarily the UNIC at Tokyo. Documents of the Trusteeship Council were sent by airmail to 79 recipients in the Territory, while taped radio and video programmes were regularly distributed to 13 recipients of DPI. Mailing lists for United Nations publications, radio programmes, videotapes and other information materials included government offices, radio stations, newspapers, educational institutions, libraries and individuals.

During the period under review, DPI produced 22 press releases in English and 22 in French dealing with the work of the Trusteeship Council. Photo coverage of the Council's proceedings and archival footage were made available to the news media. The UN chronicle covered the Visiting Mission to Palau in 1990 as well as the Trusteeship Council's fifty-seventh session.

In the Trusteeship Council, the USSR asked how effective the work of disseminating United Nations materials in the Territory had been. The DPI representative noted that, in April 1991, DPI had sent a questionnaire asking for reactions on the distributed materials, but that responses had been slow.

On 8 May, the Council,<sup>(4)</sup> acting without objection, took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Cooperation with the Committee on colonial countries

In 1991, at its fifty-eighth session, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(4)</sup> considered the attainment of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory and, at the same time, cooperation with the Committee on colonial countries.

During the discussion in the Council, the USSR noted that its comments dealt again with the need for closer cooperation among all United Nations bodies. Close cooperation with the Committee on colonial countries would benefit the work of the Council since that Committee had great expertise and was prepared to cooperate.

On 14 May,<sup>(4)</sup> the Trusteeship Council drew the Security Council's attention to the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the Trusteeship Council at its fifty-eighth session concerning the attainment, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter, in particular Article 83, of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory.

Cooperation with CERD and the Decade against racial discrimination

In 1991, the Trusteeship Council<sup>(4)</sup> considered the question of cooperation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and, at the same time, the Second Decade to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination (1983-1993).

The USSR declared that it attached great importance to the expansion and strengthening of cooperation among all countries and United Nations bodies to eliminate racism and racial discrimination. It regretted that for several years there had been no cooperation between the Council and United Nations bodies dealing with human rights; with good will and proper organization such cooperation could be arranged.

On 9 May,<sup>(4)</sup> the Trusteeship Council took note of the statements on the two agenda items.

Legal questions

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 1991, the International Court of Justice (ICJ) continued to deal with eight contentious cases. Four new disputes were referred to it, and one case was removed from the Court's list. The Court delivered in 1991 one Judgment and nine Orders.

The General Assembly and the Security Council, independently of one another, held elections to fill a vacancy in the Court created by the death on 14 August 1991 of a Judge. On 5 December, by General Assembly decision 46/315, and in accordance with Security Council resolution 708(1991), Bola Ajibola (Nigeria) was elected as a Judge of ICJ.

In October, Estonia deposited with the Secretary-General a declaration recognizing as compulsory the jurisdiction of the Court, as contemplated by Article 36 of the ICJ Statute.

The President of the Court, in addressing the General Assembly on 8 November, outlined the future role of the Court.

Judicial work of the Court

In 1991, the President of the Court made an Order in the case concerning Military and Paramilitary Activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States), recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the Court's list. The Court made an Order on the request by Finland for the indication of provisional measures in the case concerning Passage through the Great Belt (Finland v. Denmark). It gave a Judgment in the case concerning the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal). The Court and its President made several Orders on the conduct of proceedings in pending cases.

The 1991 activities of ICJ were described in two reports to the General Assembly, covering the periods 1 August 1990 to 31 July 1991<sup>(1)</sup> and 1 August 1991 to 31 July 1992.<sup>(2)</sup> By decision 46/405 of 8 November 1991, the Assembly took note of the 1990/91 report.

Military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua

The question of responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in Nicaragua had been before the ILC since 1984.<sup>(3)</sup> In its 1986 Judgment<sup>(4)</sup> on the merits of the case, the Court had found, inter alia, that the United States was under an obligation to make reparation to Nicaragua for all injury caused to it by certain breaches of obligations under international law. After a 1987 Court Order<sup>(5)</sup> had fixed specific time-limits, Nicaragua duly filed, in 1988, its Memorial, while the United States did not file a Counter-Memorial. In 1990, Nicaragua informed the President of the Court that its new Government was carefully studying the complex case, and that it considered it inconvenient to take a decision on what procedure to follow in the future. The Court's President stated that he would inform the Court and in the meantime take no action to fix a date for hearings.

On 12 September 1991, Nicaragua informed the Court that it had decided to renounce all further rights of action based on the case and did not wish to go on with the proceedings. It requested that an Order be made officially recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the list. The President of the Court fixed 25 September 1991 as the time-limit within which the United States might state whether it opposed the discontinuance. On that date, a letter welcoming the discontinuance was received from the United States. In consequence, the President of the Court, on 26 September, made an Order<sup>(6)</sup> recording the discontinuance of the proceedings and directing the removal of the case from the Court's list.

Border and transborder armed actions (Nicaragua v. Honduras)

This case had been before the Court since 1986,<sup>(7)</sup> when Nicaragua instituted proceedings against Honduras. In April 1989, the President of the Court had fixed time-limits for written proceedings, which were extended by an Order in August. The Memorial of Nicaragua was filed within the prescribed time-limit. In December 1989, both Parties transmitted to the Court the text of an agreement aimed at achieving an extra-judicial settlement of the dispute, and requested the postponement of the date for fixing the time-limit for the Honduran Counter-Memorial until June 1990. It was so decided by a Court Order of December 1989.

Subsequent to the fixed June 1990 date, the President of the Court, consulting with Nicaragua and Honduras, was informed that neither party desired the new time-limit for the Counter-

Memorial to be fixed for the time being. The President of the Court stated that he would so advise the Court. No further developments took place.

Maritime delimitation in the area between Greenland and Jan Mayen (Denmark v. Norway)

Denmark had, in 1988, instituted proceedings against Norway, requesting the Court to decide where a single line of delimitation should be drawn between Denmark's and Norway's fishing zones and continental shelf areas in the waters between the east coast of Greenland and the Norwegian island of Jan Mayen.

Taking into account an agreement between the Parties that there should be a Reply and a Rejoinder to a 1989 Memorial by Denmark and a 1990 Counter-Memorial by Norway, the President of the Court, by a June 1990 Order, fixed 1 February 1991 as the time-limit for the Reply of Denmark and 1 October 1991 as that for the Rejoinder of Norway. Both were filed within the prescribed time-limits.

Aerial incident of 3 July 1988 (Iran v. United States)

Iran had, in 1989, instituted proceedings against the United States, referring to the destruction of an Iranian aircraft, on 3 July 1988, and the killing of its 290 passengers and crew by missiles launched from the United States guided-missile cruiser USS Vincennes in Iranian airspace. By a June 1990 Court Order, the time-limits fixed in a December 1989 Court Order for a Memorial by Iran and a Counter-Memorial by the United States were extended to 24 July 1990 and 4 March 1991, respectively.

On 4 March, within the time-limit fixed, the United States filed certain preliminary objections to the jurisdiction of the Court. By virtue of the Rules of the Court, the proceedings on the merits were suspended and a time-limit had to be fixed for the presentation by the other Party of a written statement on its observations and submissions on the preliminary objections. By an Order of 9 April 1991,<sup>(8)</sup> the Court fixed 9 December 1991 as the time-limit within which Iran might present such observations and submissions.

As requested by Iran, the President of the Court, by an Order of 18 December 1991,<sup>(9)</sup> extended that time-limit to 9 June 1992.

Iran chose Mohsen Aghahosseini to sit as Judge ad hoc in the case. At a public meeting, held on 9 April 1991, Judge ad hoc Aghahosseini made the solemn declaration required by the Statute and Rules of the Court.

Certain phosphate lands in Nauru (Nauru v. Australia)

In 1989, Nauru had instituted proceedings against Australia in a dispute concerning the rehabilitation of certain phosphate lands mined under Australian administration before Nauruan independence.

The Court had, in July 1989, fixed 20 April as the time-limit for a Memorial of Nauru and 21 January 1991 for the Counter-Memorial of Australia. Nauru filed its Memorial within the prescribed time-limit. Also within the time-limit, on 16 January 1991, Australia filed certain preliminary objections whereby it asked the Court to adjudge and declare that the application by Nauru was inadmissible and that the Court lacked jurisdiction to hear the claims made by Nauru.

In accordance with the Rules of the Court, the proceedings on the merits of the case were suspended. By an Order of 8 February 1991,<sup>(10)</sup> the Court fixed 19 July 1991 as the time-limit within which Nauru might present a written statement of its observations and submissions on the objections. That statement was filed within the time-limit.

Arbitral award of 31 July 1989 (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal)

This case had been dealt with by the Court since 1989, when Guinea-Bissau instituted proceedings against Senegal, asking the Court to rule on the line delimiting the maritime territories appertaining to the two Parties. Time-limits for a Memorial of Guinea-Bissau and a Counter-Memorial by Senegal were filed in November 1989, and met by both parties in 1990.

Oral proceedings on the merits of the case were held from 3 to 11 April 1991. Kéba Mbaye, chosen by Senegal as Judge ad hoc made the solemn declaration required by the Statute and Rules of Court at the opening sitting on 3 April.

On 12 November, at a public meeting, the Court delivered a Judgment,<sup>(11)</sup> the operative provisions of which read as follows:

The Court,

(1) Unanimously,

Rejects the submission of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau that the Arbitral Award given on 31 July 1989 by the Arbitration Tribunal established pursuant to the Agreement of 12 March 1985 between the Republic of Guinea-Bissau and the Republic of Senegal is inexistent;

(2) By eleven votes to four,

Rejects the submission of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau that the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 is absolutely null and void;

In favour: President Sir Robert Jennings; Vice-President Oda; Judges Lachs, Ago, Schwebel, Ni, Evensen, Tarassov, Guillaume, Shahabuddeen; Judge ad hoc Mbaye;

Against: Judges Aguilar Mawdsley, Weeramantry, Ranjeva; Judge ad hoc Thierry.

(3) By twelve votes to three,

Rejects the submission of the Republic of Guinea-Bissau that the Government of Senegal is not justified in seeking to require the Government of Guinea-Bissau to apply the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989; and, on the submission to that effect of the Republic of Senegal, finds that the Arbitral Award of 31 July 1989 is valid and binding for the Republic of Senegal and the Republic of Guinea-Bissau, which have the obligation to apply it;

In favour: President Sir Robert Jennings; Vice-President Oda and Judges Lachs, Ago, Schwebel, Ni, Evensen, Tarassov, Guillaume, Shahabuddeen, Ranjeva; Judge ad hoc Mbaye; Against: Judges Aguilar Mawdsley, Weeramantry; Judge ad hoc Thierry.

Judge Tarassov and Judge ad hoc Mbaye appended declarations to the Judgment. Separate opinions were appended by Vice-President Oda and Judges Lachs, Ni and Shahabuddeen. A joint dissenting opinion was appended by Judges Aguilar Mawdsley and Ranjeva, and dissenting opinions were appended by Judge Weeramantry and Judge ad hoc Thierry.

Territorial dispute

(Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Chad)

In this case, before the Court since 1990, the Court had, by an October 1990 Order, decided that each Party should file a Memorial and Counter-Memorial by 26 August 1991. After both Parties had filed their Memorials within the prescribed time-limit, the Court, by an Order of 26 August 1991,<sup>(12)</sup> fixed 27 March 1992 as the time-limit for the filing of Counter-Memorials.

East Timor (Portugal v. Australia)

On 22 February 1991, Portugal filed in the Registry of the Court an Application instituting proceedings against Australia in a dispute concerning certain activities of Australia with respect to East Timor and requested the Court to rule on the matter. Portugal claimed that Australia, by negotiating with Indonesia an agreement, signed on 11 December 1989, relating to the exploration and exploitation of the continental shelf in the area of the Timor Gap, had caused legal and moral damage to the people of East Timor and Portugal, which would become material if the exploitation of hydrocarbon resources there began.

By an Order of 3 May 1991,<sup>(13)</sup> the President of the Court, after a meeting with agents of the two Parties on 2 May, fixed 18 November 1991 as the time-limit for the filing of a Memorial by Portugal and 1 June 1992 for a Counter-

Memorial by Australia. The Memorial of Portugal was filed within the time-limit.

Maritime delimitation (Guinea-Bissau v. Senegal)

On 12 March 1991, Guinea-Bissau filed in the Registry of the Court an Application instituting proceedings against Senegal in a dispute concerning the delimitation of all maritime territories of those two States. In its Application, Guinea-Bissau recalled that, by a 1989 Application, it referred to the Court a dispute concerning the existence and validity of the 31 July 1989 Arbitral Award by the Arbitration Tribunal formed to determine the maritime boundary between the two States (see above).

Guinea-Bissau claimed that the result of the Arbitration was not such as to make possible a definitive delimitation of all the maritime areas over which the Parties had rights. Thus, Guinea-Bissau asked the Court to adjudge and declare what should be, on the basis of international law of the sea and of all relevant elements of the case, including a future decision of the Court on the Arbitral Award, the line delimiting all the maritime territories appertaining respectively to Guinea-Bissau and Senegal.

Passage through the Great Belt (Finland v. Denmark)

On 17 May 1991, Finland filed in the Registry of the Court an Application instituting proceedings against Denmark in a dispute concerning the passage of oil rigs through the Great Belt (Store Bælt—one of the three straits linking the Baltic to the Kattegat and thence to the North Sea), and asked the Court to rule on the matter.

Finland contended that there was no foundation in international law for the unilateral exclusion by Denmark, through the projected construction of a high-level bridge, 65 metres above main sea level, of the passage between the Baltic and the North Sea by vessels such as drill ships, oil rigs and others with a height of 65 metres or above to and from Finnish shipyards and ports. Such exclusion allegedly violated Finland's rights in respect of free passage through the Great Belt as established in relevant conventions and customary international law. In Finland's view, those rights had been ignored by Denmark's refusal to enter into negotiations with Finland in order to find a solution and by its insistence that the planned bridge project be completed without modification.

Thus, on 23 May 1991, Finland filed in the Registry a request for the indication of provisional measures, contending that construction work for the East Channel bridge would prejudice the very outcome of the dispute; that the object of the Application related precisely to the right of passage which the completion of the bridge in its planned form would effectively deny; and that continuation of the construction work prejudiced the negotiating result which the Finnish submissions aimed to attain.

Accordingly, Finland requested the Court to indicate that Denmark should, pending the Court's decision, refrain from continuing or otherwise proceeding with such construction, as well as from any other action that might prejudice the outcome of the present proceedings.

Finland chose Bengt Broms, and Denmark Paul Henning Fischer as Judges ad hoc. Both Judges ad hoc made the solemn declaration required by the Statute and Rules of Court at a public sitting on 1 July 1991. Between 1 and 5 July, the Court, at six public sittings, heard oral observations by both Parties on the request for provisional measures.

On 29 July 1991, at a public sitting, the Court delivered an Order<sup>(14)</sup> on the request for provisional measures filed by Finland, the operative clause of which reads as follows:

The Court,

(1) Unanimously,

Finds that the circumstances, as they now present themselves to the Court, are not such as to require the exercise of its power under Article 41 of the Statute to indicate provisional measures.

Judge Tarassov appended a declaration, and Vice-President Oda, Judge Shahabuddeen and Judge ad hoc Broms appended separate opinions to the Order.

By an Order of 29 July 1991,<sup>(15)</sup> the Court fixed 30 December 1991 as the time-limit for the filing of a Memorial by Finland and 1 June 1992 for a Counter-Memorial by Denmark. The Memorial of Finland was filed within the prescribed time-limit.

Maritime delimitation and territorial questions between Qatar and Bahrain

On 8 July 1991, Qatar filed in the Registry of the Court an Application instituting proceedings against Bahrain in respect of disputes relating to sovereignty over the Hawar islands, sovereign rights over the shoals of Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah, and the delimitation of the maritime areas of the two States.

Qatar claimed that its sovereignty over the Hawar islands was well founded on the basis of customary international law and applicable local practices and customs. It had therefore continuously opposed a decision by the British Government in 1939, during the time of British presence in Bahrain and Qatar, that the Hawar islands belonged to Bahrain. A further British decision of 1947 to delimit the seabed boundary between Bahrain and Qatar purported to recognize that

Bahrain had sovereign rights in the areas of the shoals of Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah. Qatar claimed that such sovereign rights over the shoals belonged to Qatar. Qatar further rejected the claim made by Bahrain in 1964 of a new line delimiting the seabed boundary of the two States.

Thus, Qatar requested the Court, to adjudge and declare that Qatar had sovereignty over the Hawar islands; that Qatar had sovereign rights over Dibal and Qit'at Jaradah shoals; and to draw a single maritime boundary between the maritime areas of seabed, subsoil and superjacent waters appertaining to the two States.

By letters of 14 July and 18 August addressed to the Registrar of the Court, Bahrain contested the basis of jurisdiction invoked by Qatar.

The President of the Court, by an Order of 11 October 1991,<sup>(16)</sup> decided that written proceedings should first be addressed to the questions of jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the dispute and of admissibility of the Application. He fixed 10 February 1992 as the time-limit for the filing of a Memorial by Qatar, and 11 June 1992 for a Counter-Memorial by Bahrain.

Land, island and maritime frontier dispute
(El Salvador/Honduras: Nicaragua intervening)

El Salvador and Honduras had in 1986<sup>(17)</sup> submitted to the Court a frontier dispute, and the Court had acceded to their request for a Special Chamber to deal with the case. The Court had fixed 1 June 1988 as the time-limit for the filing of Memorials, and both Parties complied. By Orders of January and December 1989, the Court had extended time-limits for the filing of Counter-Memorials and Replies, which were subsequently filed within the prescribed time-limits.

In November 1989, Nicaragua addressed to the Court an Application for permission to intervene in the case, its object being the protection of the legal rights of Nicaragua in the Gulf of Fonseca and adjacent maritime areas. This permission was granted by a Judgment of the Chamber of 13 September 1990. By an Order of 14 September 1990, the President of the Chamber fixed 14 December 1990 as the time-limit for submission of a written statement by Nicaragua, and 14 March 1991 for written observations by El Salvador and Honduras on that statement, if they desired to do so.

At 50 public sittings, held between 15 April and 14 June 1991, the Chamber heard oral statements by the two Parties, as well as Nicaragua's observations with respect to the subject-matter of its intervention and the two Parties' observations thereon. It also heard a witness, presented by El Salvador.

Organizational questions

Vacancy in the Court

The Secretary-General, on 16 August 1991,<sup>(18)</sup> informed the Security Council of the death, on 14 August, of Judge Elias, and thus of the occurrence of a vacancy in the Court. The procedure in the General Assembly and in the Security Council for filling the vacancy was outlined in a 20 November memorandum<sup>(19)</sup> by the Secretary-General. On 29 November, the Secretary-General, in accordance with the Statute of the Court, submitted to the Assembly and to the Council a list of candidates<sup>(20)</sup> for the vacancy, nominated by national groups, and their respective curricula vitae.<sup>(21)</sup>

Elections to the Court

Chapter II

Legal aspects of international political relations

In 1991, the General Assembly continued its efforts to develop and strengthen good-neighbourliness between States. It expressed the conviction that good-neighbourliness was best fostered by each State respecting the rule of law in its international relations, and by practical measures designed to promote good relations with other States (resolution 46/62).

The Assembly condemned all acts of terrorism, called on States to fulfil their obligations under international law to refrain from terrorist acts and urged them to take effective measures for the elimination of international terrorism. Further, it called for the release of all hostages and abducted persons, and called on States to use their political influence, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and international law, to secure their release (resolution 46/51).

The Assembly brought the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses to the attention of Member States and interested intergovernmental organizations (decision 46/416).

The International Law Commission provisionally adopted complete sets of draft articles on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, at its session of February 1991,<sup>(1)</sup> continued to elaborate on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, in addition to one other main item, namely, the maintenance of international peace and security (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter V).

In response to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,<sup>(2)</sup> the Committee examined the final progress report<sup>(3)</sup> by the Secretary-General on the preparation of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, to which the complete text of the draft handbook was attached. The handbook, prepared at the Assembly's annual request since 1983,<sup>(4)</sup> consisted of four chapters: principle of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States; means of settlement; procedures envisaged in the Charter of the United Nations; and procedures envisaged in other international documents.

On 8 February, the Committee recommended to the General Assembly the publication of the handbook.

Good-neighbourliness between States

In response to a General Assembly decision of 1990,<sup>(5)</sup> the Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee considered the development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States on 25 and 28 October and 4 November 1991,<sup>(6)</sup> subsequently recommending to the Assembly the adoption of a draft resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/62 without vote.

Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations, living together in peace with one another as good neighbours is one of the means by which the ends of the United Nations are to be achieved,

Recalling the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, approved by its resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970,

Considering that the great changes of a political, economic and social nature, as well as the scientific and technological advances that have taken place in the world and led to unprecedented interdependence of nations, have given new dimensions to good-neighbourliness in the conduct of States and increased the need to develop and strengthen it,

Bearing in mind that good-neighbourliness should continue to be taken into account by United Nations bodies in their efforts to promote and strengthen the rule of law,

1. Reaffirms that, by acting as good neighbours, States can help to ensure that the ends for which the United Nations was established are achieved;

2. Emphasizes that States should act as good neighbours whether or not they are contiguous;

3. Calls upon all States to keep in mind the need to act as good neighbours both in their dealings with other States and when taking decisions that could affect them;

4. Expresses the conviction that good-neighbourliness is best fostered by each State respecting the rule of law in its international relations, and by practical measures designed to promote good relations with other States;

5. Decider that the question of development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States should continue to guide States as a goal to be pursued in their consideration of the issues before the United Nations, and notes that it could be considered in the future.

9 December 1991 Meeting 67 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/46/656) without vote, 4 November (meeting 28); draft by Chairman (A/C.6/46/L.5); agenda item 135.

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 6th Committee 21, 22, 28; plenary 67.

Draft code of crimes against peace and security

In 1991, at its forty-third session, the International Law Commission (ILC)<sup>(7)</sup> concluded the first reading of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and provisionally adopted a complete set of draft articles. In December, the General Assembly invited ILC to continue work on the topic, on which ILC had resumed work in further the issue of international criminal juris-1982,<sup>(8)</sup> in particular to analyse diction. The draft Code, originally prepared by ILC in 1954<sup>(9)</sup> in response to a 1947 Assembly request,<sup>(10)</sup> defined offences which were crimes under international law and for which the responsible individual was to be punished.

ILC consideration. The Commission considered in 1991<sup>(7)</sup> the ninth report submitted by its Special Rapporteur on the topic,<sup>(11)</sup> in response to a General Assembly resolution of 1990.<sup>(12)</sup> The report comprised part I, which dealt with penalties applicable to crimes against the peace and security of mankind, and part II, on the question of the establishment of an international criminal jurisdiction. ILC decided to refer the draft article on applicable penalties to its Drafting Committee.

On the basis of the recommendations of the Drafting Committee, the Commission provisionally adopted articles 3 (responsibility and punishment); 4 (motives); 5 (responsibility of States), corresponding to article 3 as originally adopted; 11 (order of a Government or superior); 14 (defences and extenuating circumstances); 19 (genocide); 20 (apartheid); 21 (systematic or mass violations of human rights); 22 (war crimes); and 26 (wilful and severe damage to the environment). It also adopted revised versions of articles which had been provisionally adopted at previous sessions.

In September,<sup>(13)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted the provisionally adopted articles to the General Assembly.

In resolution 46/54 on the work of ILC, the Assembly expressed appreciation for the completion of the provisional draft articles on the draft Code and drew the attention of Governments to the importance, for ILC, of having their views on the draft articles. It urged them to present their comments and observations in writing by 1 January 1993, as requested by ILC. The Assembly invited ILC to consider further and analyse the question of international criminal jurisdiction, including proposals for the establishment of a criminal court or other trial mechanism (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter V).

Prevention of terrorism

The prevention of terrorism in all its aspects remained a concern of the United Nations in 1991.

A number of communications,<sup>(14)</sup> addressed to the Secretary-General, concerned the alleged involvement of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya in the crash of Pan American flight 103 in 1988 and the attack on Union de Transports Aeriens flight 772 in 1989.

On 13 March,<sup>(15)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the President of the Security Council the text of a new Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, adopted by a diplomatic conference convened by the International Civil Aviation Organization (Montreal, Canada, 12 February-1 March 1991).

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly, in August, a report with later addenda<sup>(16)</sup> containing replies received from 22 Member States and three intergovernmental organizations in response to invitations in 1990 by the Secretary-General and the Legal Counsel, and as requested by the General Assembly in 1989.<sup>(17)</sup>

Annexed to the report was information on the state, as at 16 July, of signatures of, ratifications of, or accessions to a number of international conventions relating to terrorism, including two adopted by the General Assembly for which the Secretary-General performed depository functions: the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, and the 1979 International Convention against the Taking of Hostages. In 1991, the 1973 Convention was acceded to by Estonia and Sri Lanka. The 1979 Convention was ratified by Luxembourg and acceded to by Argentina, Cyprus, Saint Kitts and Nevis and Saudi Arabia. As at 31 December 1991, the two instruments had 79 and 69 parties, respectively.<sup>(20)</sup>

On 9 December, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/51 without vote.

Measures to eliminate international terrorism

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3034(XXVII) of 18 December 1972, 31/102 of 15 December 1976, 32/147 of 16 December 1977, 34/145 of 17 December 1979, 36/109 of 10 December 1981, 38/130 of 19 December 1983, 40/61 of 9 December 1985, 42/159 of 7 December 1987 and 44/129 of 4 December 1989,

Recalling also the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on International Terrorism contained in its report to the General Assembly at its thirty-fourth session,

Recalling further the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, the Definition of Aggression and relevant instruments on international humanitarian law applicable in armed conflict,

Recalling moreover the existing international conventions relating to various aspects of the problem of international terrorism, inter alia, the Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft, signed at Tokyo on 14 September 1963, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, signed at The Hague on 16 December 1970, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, concluded at Montreal on 23 September 1971, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, adopted in New York on 14 December 1973, the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted in New York on 17 December 1979, the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, adopted at Vienna on 3 March 1980, the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts of Violence at Airports Serving International Civil Aviation, supplementary to the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, signed at Montreal on 24 February 1988, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, done at Rome on 10 March 1988, the Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms located on the Continental Shelf, done at Rome on 10 March 1988, and the Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, done at Montreal on 1 March 1991,

Convinced that a policy of firmness and effective measures should be taken in accordance with international law in order that all acts, methods and practices of international terrorism may be brought to an end,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolution 638(1989) of 31 July 1989 on the taking of hostages,

Deeply disturbed by the world-wide persistence of acts of international terrorism in all its forms, including those in which States are directly or indirectly involved, which endanger or take innocent lives, have a deleterious effect on international relations and may jeopardize the territorial integrity and security of States,

Calling attention to the growing connection between terrorist groups and drug traffickers,

Convinced of the importance of the observance by States of their obligations under the relevant international conventions to ensure that appropriate law enforcement measures are taken in connection with the offences addressed in those conventions,

Convinced also of the importance of expanding and improving international cooperation among States, on a bilateral, regional and multilateral basis, which will contribute to the elimination of acts of international terrorism and their underlying causes and to the prevention and elimination of this criminal scourge,

Convinced further that international cooperation in combating and preventing terrorism will contribute to the strengthening of confidence among States, reduce tensions and create a better climate among them,

Mindful of the need to enhance the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism,

Mindful also of the necessity of maintaining and protecting the basic rights of, and guarantees for, the individual in accordance with the relevant international human rights instruments and generally accepted international standards,

Reaffirming the principle of self-determination of peoples as enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the inalienable right to self-determination and independence of all peoples under colonial and racist regimes and other forms of alien domination and foreign occupation, and upholding the legitimacy of their struggle, in particular the struggle of national liberation movements, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Noting the efforts and important achievements of the International Civil Aviation Organization and the International Maritime Organization in promoting the security of international air and sea transport against acts of terrorism,

Recognizing that the effectiveness of the struggle against terrorism could be enhanced by the establishment of a generally agreed definition of international terrorism,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Once again unequivocally condemns, as criminal and unjustifiable, all acts, methods and practices of terrorism wherever and by whomever committed, including those which jeopardize the friendly relations among States and their security;

2. Deeply deplores the loss of human lives which results from such acts of terrorism, as well as the pernicious impact of these acts on relations of cooperation among States;

3. Calls upon all States to fulfil their obligations under international law to refrain from organizing, instigating, assisting or participating in terrorist acts in other States, or acquiescing in or encouraging activities within their territory directed towards the commission of such acts;

4. Urges all states to fulfil their obligations under international law and take effective and resolute measures for the speedy and final elimination of international terrorism and to that end, in particular:

(a) To prevent the preparation and organization in their respective territories, for commission within or outside their territories, of terrorist and subversive acts directed against other States and their citizens;

(b) To ensure the apprehension and prosecution or extradition of perpetrators of terrorist acts;

(c) To endeavour to conclude special agreements to that effect on a bilateral, regional and multilateral basis;

(d) To cooperate with one another in exchanging relevant information concerning the prevention and combating of terrorism;

(e) To take promptly all steps necessary to implement the existing international conventions on this subject to which they are parties, including the harmonization of their domestic legislation with those conventions;

5. Appeals to all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming party to the international conventions relating to various aspects of international terrorism referred to in the preamble to the present resolution;

6. Urges all States, unilaterally and in cooperation with other States, as well as relevant United Nations organs, to contribute to the progressive elimination of the causes underlying international terrorism and to pay special attention to all situations, including colonialism, racism and situations involving mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms and those involving alien domination and foreign occupation, that may give rise to international terrorism and may endanger international peace and security;

7. Firmly calls for the immediate and safe release of all hostages and abducted persons, wherever and by whom-ever they are being held;

8. Calls upon all States to use their political influence in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law to secure the safe release of all hostages and abducted persons and to prevent the commission of acts of hostage-taking and abduction;

9. Expresses concern at the growing and dangerous links between terrorist groups, drug traffickers and their paramilitary gangs, which have resorted to all types of violence, thus endangering the constitutional order of States and violating basic human rights;

10. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the International Civil Aviation Organization aimed at promoting universal acceptance of, and strict compliance with, international air security conventions, and welcomes also the recent adoption of the Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection;

11. Requests the other relevant specialized agencies and intergovernmental organizations, in particular the International Maritime Organization, the Universal Postal Union, the World Tourism Organization, the International Atomic Energy Agency and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, within their respective spheres of competence, to consider what further measures can usefully be taken to combat and eliminate terrorism;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to continue seeking the views of Member States on international terrorism in all its aspects and on ways and means of combating it, including the convening at an appropriate time, under the auspices of the United Nations, of an international conference to deal with international terrorism in the light of the proposal referred to in the penultimate preambular paragraph of resolution 44/29;

13. Also requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States on the proposals contained in his report or made during the debate on this item in the Sixth Committee, and on the ways and means of enhancing the role of the United Nations and the relevant specialized agencies in combating international terrorism;

14. Further requests the Secretary-General to follow up, as appropriate, the implementation of the present resolution and to submit a report in this respect to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

15. Considers that nothing in the present resolution could in any way prejudice the right to self-determination, freedom and independence, as derived from the Charter of the United Nations, of peoples forcibly deprived of that right referred to in the Declaration of Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, particularly peoples under colonial and racist regimes or other forms of alien domination, or the right of these peoples to struggle legitimately to this end and to seek and receive support in accordance with the principles of the Charter, the above-mentioned Declaration and the relevant General Assembly resolutions, including the present resolution;

16. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-eighth session an item entitled "Measures to eliminate international terrorism".

Draft articles on non-navigational uses of international watercourses

ILC<sup>(7)</sup> continued work on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses, in accordance with a request of the General Assembly of 1990.<sup>(12)</sup> It adopted a complete set of draft articles on the matter and had before it, for its consideration, the second part of the sixth report<sup>(21)</sup> as well as the seventh report<sup>(22)</sup> submitted by its Special Rapporteur on the topic. The debate in the Commission focused on the latter report, which also contained a draft article on the use of terms.

On the basis of the recommendations of its Drafting Committee, the Commission provisionally adopted articles 2 (use of terms); 10 (relationship between uses); 26 (management); 27 (regulation); 28 (installations); 29 (international watercourses in time of armed conflict); and 32 (non-discrimination). It also adopted revised versions of articles which had been provisionally adopted at previous sessions.

In September,<sup>(13)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted the provisionally adopted articles to the General Assembly.

In resolution 46/54 on the work of ILC, the Assembly expressed appreciation for the completion of the provisional draft articles and drew the attention of Governments to the importance, for ILC, of having their views on the draft articles. It urged them to present their comments and observations in writing by 1 January 1993, as requested by the Commission.

Draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses

In response to a General Assembly decision of 1988,<sup>(23)</sup> the Assembly's Sixth Committee considered the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses on 26 September 1991,<sup>(24)</sup> subsequently recommending to the Assembly the adoption of a draft decision.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly adopted decision 46/416, whereby it decided to bring the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses contained in a 1978 report by the International Law Commission<sup>(25)</sup> to the attention of Member States and interested intergovernmental organizations.

Chapter III

States and international law

The General Assembly decided, in December 1991, to examine, during its forty-seventh (1992) session, a proposal for an additional protocol on consular functions to the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations (resolution 46/61). It expressed satisfaction at the useful consultations held at its forty-sixth session on the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and the draft optional protocols thereto, and decided to resume the consultations at its forty-seventh session (46/57). The Assembly expressed appreciation to the International Law Commission for its adoption in 1991 of draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property and decided to establish, at its forty-seventh session, a working group of the Sixth (Legal) Committee to facilitate a successful conclusion of a convention (46/55).

The International Law Commission (see PART FIVE, Chapter V) continued to elaborate on the international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, and on relations between States and international organizations. However, it did not consider in 1991, due to a lack of time, State responsibility.

The Secretariat continued its depositary functions for agreements, conventions and treaties deposited with the Secretary-General.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomats

As at 31 December 1991, the number of parties to the various international instruments relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations<sup>(1)</sup> was as follows: 156 States were parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations,<sup>(2)</sup> with Estonia, the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia and Zimbabwe acceding in 1991; 44 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality,<sup>(3)</sup> with Estonia acceding in 1991; and 57 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the

The 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations<sup>(4)</sup> had 133 parties, with Albania, Estonia, Malaysia, Maldives, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia and Zimbabwe acceding in 1991; 35 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality,<sup>(5)</sup> and 44 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes,<sup>(5)</sup> with Estonia acceding to both Protocols in 1991.

The 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,<sup>(6)</sup> had 79 States parties, Estonia and Sri Lanka having acceded in 1991.

Report of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General, in February 1991, requested States to submit information on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives. In September,<sup>(8)</sup> he submitted a report to the Assembly containing such information, as well as a list of States parties, as at 30 September 1991, to the relevant conventions (see above). Annexed to the report were views by States (Cuba and Panama) with respect to enhancing diplomatic protection, as requested by the Assembly in 1987.<sup>(9)</sup> A total of 35 cases of violations were reported by States during the period 1 November 1990 to 30 September 1991.

Iraq drew attention to a breach of the inviolability of its diplomatic premises in Washington, D.C., by authorities of the United States. According to Iraq, United States security authorities entered on two separate occasions the Iraqi Embassy and the residence of its Ambassador without authorization, after the head of the Iraqi Interests Branch had been requested to leave and the premises had been closed down. In response, the United States concluded that the events referred to by Iraq involved no breach of inviolable premises and that its proper authorities lawfully assumed custody of the Iraqi chancery and residence more than a month after Iraq had severed diplomatic relations with the United States, therefore at a time when the premises were no more inviolable.

Sweden reported that, during the Iraqi military occupation of Kuwait, Iraq prevented the performance of diplomatic functions of the Swedish Embassy in Kuwait. For this purpose, Iraq reportedly confiscated the car and other properties of the Embassy, interrupted its supply of electricity and water, restricted the freedom of movement of its personnel, and cut off the telephone lines at both the Embassy and the Ambassador's residence. Norway and the United Kingdom accused Iraq of similar incidents. Once in Baghdad, the Swedish Ambassador to Kuwait and the First Secretary were allegedly prevented from leaving until 29 November 1990.

The Holy See informed of a violent incursion into the Apostolic Nunciature in Haiti, during which hundreds of demonstrators ransacked, set on fire and systematically destroyed the entire diplomatic mission, together with its contents, most of the archived documents and its cars. The assailants also reportedly abducted the religious and lay staff of the Nunciature, subjecting them to threats, intimidation and physical abuse, and inflicted particularly serious harm to the Apostolic Nuncio and the Secretary of the Nunciature.

Poland reported the incursion of armed attackers into the premises of its Mission in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, and the robbery of its Consulate-General in São Paulo, Brazil. Regarding the former incident, Poland added that, before leaving the Mission, the attackers wounded its Trade Representative. Belgium informed of the incursion of a group of demonstrators into the Iraqi Embassy in Brussels. During the ensuing occupation, the Embassy premises and other property were damaged and a member of its administrative personnel was taken hostage and seriously harmed.

A number of bomb attacks were made on the premises of diplomatic and consular missions, the residence of diplomatic personnel or their cars. Most of the explosions caused moderate damage; one person was wounded. Turkey reported four such attacks, in France, Germany, Iran and Yemen. Israel listed four explosions, which occurred in Ethiopia, Peru, Poland and Turkey. As subsequently explained by Peru, the explosion reported by Israel was directed against a building which also housed the consular missions of Colombia and the United Kingdom. Sweden provided information on an attack on the Iraqi Embassy in Stockholm. Belgium reported bomb attacks on the Embassy of Yugoslavia and the residence of the Ambassador of Turkey in Brussels. Greece and Peru transmitted information on bomb attacks against diplomatic missions of the USSR in Athens and Lima, respectively. Bolivia reported a bomb attack on the United States Marine barracks, which killed one policeman and seriously wounded another. Finland, Germany and Turkey reported the disturbance of the peace of the Iraqi Embassy in Finland and the Turkish Consulates-General in Frankfurt and Hamburg by demonstrators throwing stones.

Three cases of murder were reported during the period. The Netherlands and Tunisia reported the shooting outside his home of the First Secretary of the Netherlands Embassy in Tunis. Pakistan and Iran reported the murder of the Director of the Iranian Cultural Centre at Lahore; Pakistan indicated that eight culprits had been tried and sentenced in connection with the murder. Concerning the murder of the daughter of the Political Counsellor of Poland in Cologne, Germany stated that, despite extensive investigation, a perpetrator had not been identified. Gabon communicated that the assailants of the Argentine Ambassador to Gabon and his wife had been arrested and were being tried.

Belgium reported an act of violence at the residence of a United States official posted to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization at Brussels. According to Greece, a bomb device was detonated in the building where the United Nations offices in Athens are located, causing material damage.

Consular relations

Pursuant to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,<sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General invited States, in February 1991, to submit their views on the proposal and on the procedure to be followed in considering an additional protocol on consular functions to the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations.<sup>(4)</sup> In August, he submitted to the Assembly a report, with later addenda,<sup>(11)</sup> containing the replies received from 16 States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/61 without vote.

Additional protocol on consular functions to the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 45/47 of 28 November 1990,

Taking note with appreciations of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies received from Member States and other States parties to the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations concerning an additional protocol on consular functions to that Convention,

1. Decides to hold informal consultations during its forty-seventh session to examine the proposal concerning an additional protocol on consular functions to the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, particularly in the light of the views of States reflected in the report of the Secretary-General or expressed during the debate on this question in the Sixth Committee;

2. Invites Member States as well as other States parties to the Convention to submit their views on this question to the Secretary-General in accordance with paragraph 3 of resolution 45/47;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session a further report containing the replies received under paragraph 2 above;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh session the item entitled "Additional protocol on consular functions to the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations".

9 December 1991 Meeting 67 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/46/692) without vote, 26 November (meeting 44); 4-nation draft (A/C.6/46/L.18); agenda item 133.

Status of diplomatic bags and couriers

As requested by the General Assembly in 1990,<sup>(12)</sup> its Sixth Committee resumed in 1991 the informal consultations initiated in accordance with an Assembly resolution of 1989<sup>(13)</sup> on the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and the draft optional protocols thereto. The Committee also studied the question of how to deal further with those draft instruments, with a view to facilitating the reaching of a generally acceptable decision.

In considering the question on 19 November 1991<sup>(14)</sup> the Committee had before it a 1989 report<sup>(15)</sup> of the International Law Commission (ILC), containing the draft articles adopted by ILC, as well as two draft optional protocols, one on the status of the courier and the bag of special missions, and the other on the status of the courier and the bag of international organizations of a universal character.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/57 without vote.

Consideration of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and of the draft optional protocols thereto

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 44/36 of 4 December 1989, in which it noted that the International Law Commission, taking into account the written comments of Governments and views expressed in debates in the Assembly, had completed at its forty-first session the second reading of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and had also prepared a draft optional protocol on the status of the courier and the bag of special missions and a draft optional protocol on the status of the courier and the bag of international organizations of a universal character,

Recalling also its resolution 45/43 of 28 November 1990, by which it decided that the informal consultations that were held at its forty-fifth session would be resumed at its forty-sixth session,

1. Expresses its satisfaction at the useful informal consultations that were accordingly held at its forty-sixth session to study the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and the draft optional protocols thereto, as well as the question of how to deal further with those draft instruments with a view to facilitating the reaching of a generally acceptable decision in the latter respect, and takes note of the report of the Vice-Chairman of the Sixth Committee who presided over those consultations;

2. Decides that these informal consultations will be resumed at its forty-seventh session;

3. Also decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh session the item entitled "Consideration of the draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier and of the draft optional protocols thereto".

State immunities, liability, relations and responsibility

In response to a 1990 request of the General Assembly,<sup>(1)</sup> ILC, at its 1991 session,<sup>(2)</sup> continued work on four aspects of international law concerning States: jurisdictional immunities of States and their property; international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law; relations between States and international organizations; and State responsibility.

In December, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account government comments, ILC should continue work on those topics (resolution 46/54).

Draft articles on State immunities

At its 1991 session,<sup>(2)</sup> ILC completed the second reading of draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property.

On the basis of reports of the Drafting Committee, the Commission adopted the final text of 22 draft articles in five parts: introduction (articles 1 to 4); general principles (articles 5 to 9); proceedings in which State immunity cannot be invoked (articles 10 to 17); State immunity from measures of constraint in connection with proceedings before a court (articles 18 and 19); and miscellaneous provisions (articles 20 to 22).

The draft articles were, in September,<sup>(3)</sup> transmitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General. ILC recommended to the Assembly that it convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries to consider the articles and to conclude a convention on the subject. It was of the view that the question of the settlement of disputes on which draft articles were proposed by its former Special Rapporteur could be dealt with by such a conference, if it considered that a legal mechanism on the settlement of disputes should be provided in connection with the draft articles.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/55 without vote.

Consideration of the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property

The General Assembly,

Noting that the International Law Commission, taking into account the written comments of Governments as well as views expressed in debates in the Assembly, completed at its forty-third session the second reading of the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property,

Noting also that, as reflected in paragraph 25 of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-third session, the Commission decided to recommend that the General Assembly should convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries to examine the draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property prepared by the Commission and to conclude a convention on the subject,

Mindful of Article 13, paragraph 1 (a), of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Believing that the successful codification and progressive development of the rules of international law governing jurisdictional immunities of States and their property would assist in promoting and implementing the purposes and principles set forth in Articles 1 and 2 of the Charter,

Recognizing the desirability of the conclusion of a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property,

Recognizing also the importance, for the successful completion of such a convention, of the promotion of general agreement,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for its valuable work on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property and to the special rapporteurs for their contribution to this work;

2. Invites States to submit, not later than 1 July 1992, their written comments and observations on the draft articles adopted by the International Law Commission;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to circulate such comments and observations so as to facilitate a discussion on the subject at the forty-seventh session of the General Assembly;

4. Decides to establish at its forty-seventh session an open-ended working group of the Sixth Committee to examine, in the light of the written comments of Governments, as well as views expressed in debates at the forty-sixth session of the Assembly:

(a) Issues of substance arising out of the draft articles, in order to facilitate a successful conclusion of a convention through the promotion of general agreement;

(b) The question of the convening of an international conference, to be held in 1994 or subsequently, to conclude a convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh session an item entitled "Convention on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property".

Draft articles on State liability

Draft articles on international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law continued to be considered by ILC in 1991<sup>(2)</sup> on the basis of the seventh report<sup>(4)</sup> of its Special Rapporteur on the topic, Julio Barboza (Argentina). The report, consisting of four parts—title of the topic, the first 10 articles, prevention and liability—contained a re-examination of the principal issues in order to identify areas of agreement in ILC and facilitate work on the item.

Draft articles on State relations

ILC continued in 1991<sup>(2)</sup> to consider relations between States and international organizations (second part of the topic), having before it the fifth<sup>(5)</sup> and sixth<sup>(6)</sup> reports of its Special Rapporteur on the matter, Leonardo Díaz-González (Venezuela). The fifth report contained, inter alia, five draft articles, namely article 12 (archives) and articles 13 to 16 (publications and communication facilities); the sixth report also contained five draft articles, namely articles 18 to 22 (fiscal immunity and exemptions from customs duties). The Commission agreed to refer all the articles to its Drafting Committee.

Draft articles on State responsibility

In 1991, ILC<sup>(2)</sup> heard the presentation by its Special Rapporteur, Gaetano Arangio-Ruiz (Italy), of his third report<sup>(7)</sup> on State responsibility, consisting of 10 chapters: kinds of measures to be considered; an internationally wrongful act as a precondition; functions of measures and aims pursued; the issue of a prior claim of reparation; the impact of dispute settlement obligations; the problem of proportionality; the regime of suspension and termination of treaties as countermeasures; the issue of so-called self-contained regimes; the problem of differently injured States; and substantive limitations issues. Though the report was not discussed for lack of time, ILC deemed it nevertheless advisable for it to be introduced in order to expedite work on the topic at its next session.

Treaties and agreements

In 1991, the Secretariat continued its depositary functions for bilateral and multilateral agreements deposited with the Secretary-General.

Treaties involving international organizations

The 1986 Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations<sup>(1)</sup> was ratified in 1991 by Cyprus, Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom.<sup>(2)</sup> The Convention, which was not in force, had 16 parties as at 31 December 1991.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 1991, some 1,003 international agreements and 262 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 336 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performs depositary functions.

The texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded are published in the United Nations Treaty Series in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. In 1991, the following volumes of the Treaty Series covering treaties registered or filed between 1978 and 1983 were issued:

Chapter IV

Law of the sea

The 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea continued in 1991 to set the legal standards for the use of the world's seas and oceans. During the year, the number of parties to the Convention increased to 51.

The Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, at its ninth session, approved the applications of China and a five-State consortium-Bulgaria, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the USSR-for registration as pioneer investors in the international seabed "Area" (the seabed beyond national jurisdiction), bringing the number of pioneer investors to six.

In December, the General Assembly, by resolution 46/78, called on all States that had not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention and to observe its provisions when enacting national legislation. It urged States with advanced marine capabilities to review relevant policies and programmes in the context of integrating the marine sector in national development strategies and to explore prospects for intensifying cooperation with developing States.

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

During 1991, the number of ratifications of, or accessions to, the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea increased to 51 (49 ratifications, 2 accessions),<sup>(1)</sup> with ratifications by Djibouti, Dominica, Grenada and Seychelles, and accessions by the Marshall Islands and Micronesia. The Convention was to enter into force 12 months after receipt of the sixtieth instrument of ratification or accession.

The Convention, which was adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in 1982,<sup>(2)</sup> had closed for signature in 1984, having received 159 signatures.<sup>(3)</sup>

Developments relating to the Convention

In response to a General Assembly resolution of 1990,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General reported in December 1991<sup>(5)</sup> on developments relating to the Convention and on the implementation of that resolution. The report reviewed the Convention's impact on State practice and national policy, the settlement of conflicts and disputes, peace and security issues, protection of the marine environment, marine scientific research and the work of the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea. It also described the activities of the Secretariat's Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea.

According to the report, the Convention provided the indispensable foundation for the conduct of States in all matters relating to the sea, to such an extent that States could consider building that foundation. The unique role and status of the Convention was also a central consideration in facing issues where maritime and coastal State interests might conflict, and where the individual exercise of sovereign and jurisdictional rights might impinge on the rights of the international community, as was becoming more evident in marine environmental protection and conservation. Through national and international legislation, States had demonstrated the authority of the Convention as the pre-eminent international legal instrument on all matters within its purview.

The major impact of the Convention, in the area of State practice, had been on the delimitation of maritime jurisdictional zones. By December 1991, 133 States had established territorial seas not exceeding 12 miles, 33 States had adopted a 24-mile contiguous zone, 82 States had proclaimed a 200-mile exclusive economic zone and 16 States had claims to 200-mile exclusive fishery zones. Those claims all accorded with the limits prescribed in the Convention.

Another area that had been positively affected by the Convention was the passage of ships in the territorial sea or through straits used for international navigation. Though the Convention was primarily designed to reflect the law of the sea in time of peace, it also influenced the law of naval warfare, particularly the rules of neutrality. The establishment, under the Convention, of a 12-mile territorial sea and the creation of precise rules for innocent passage, transit passage and archipelagic-sea lanes passage had clarified the rights and duties of neutral States and those of belligerent forces. It had been noted that those rules assumed some importance in the hostilities in the Persian Gulf (for details of those hostilities, see PART Two, Chapter III).

with interested States aimed at achieving universal participation in the Convention, during which nine issues relating to the regime for deep-seabed mining, as contained in the Convention, were identified as problem areas for some States: costs to States parties; the Enterprise (see below); transfer of technology; production limitation; compensation fund; financial terms for contracts; decision-making; environmental consideration; and the Review Conference, as called for under article 155 of the Convention.

Under settlement of conflicts and disputes, the report noted that the trend continued towards creation of joint development zones for exploration and exploitation of mineral resources, enabling a number of countries to benefit from the resources, without prejudice to the boundary issue. The report described several agreements which served the primary purpose of delineating maritime boundaries by making specific provision for the possibility of future joint development. It pointed out that in 1991 the International Court of Justice was seized of a number of cases concerning maritime boundaries disputes and other disputes pertaining to the law of the sea (see PART FIVE, Chapter I).

The report noted that considerable progress had been made to interrelate and strengthen rules and standards, guidelines and recommended procedures pertaining to both ship safety and the prevention of pollution. The 1974 International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea,<sup>(6)</sup> which had 111 States parties and covered 97 per cent of merchant tonnage, several other conventions of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) and numerous IMO codes and recommendations had contributed to reducing the percentage of ships involved in serious casualties or lost at sea; however, much remained to be done to improve safety at sea.

Other developments relating to the law of the sea which were reviewed in the report included peace and security, conservation of living marine resources and marine scientific research.

The report recalled an earlier report on protection and preservation of the marine environment,<sup>(7)</sup> emphasizing that the Convention was an instrument for environmentally sustainable development. The Convention placed States under the responsibility to protect and preserve the marine environment, and thus to prevent, reduce and control all sources of marine pollution. It ensured that the measures taken gave due regard to legitimate uses of the marine environment and imposed unprecedented obligations on States with respect to marine pollution that might arise from activities under their jurisdiction or control. Although there was a large body of existing international law on the marine environment, supported by the basic framework contained in the Convention, the report stated that the marine environment and its resources continued to experience serious and growing degradation. It concluded that there was a continuous need to balance potentially conflicting uses and interests, including navigational rights and environmental protection interests, and discussed trends in that regard. (For details on the protection of the marine environment, see PART THREE, Chapter VIII.)

A meeting of technical experts on the issue of high-seas fisheries (New York, 22-26 July 1991), convened by the Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea, examined the high-seas fisheries regime with a view to enhancing the understanding of the rights and duties of States in respect of fisheries resources.

For General Assembly action with regard to the Convention, see resolution 46/78 below.

Ocean resources

In response to a General Assembly request of 1989,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General reported in December 1991<sup>(9)</sup> on the realization of benefits under the Convention and measures taken in response to needs of States regarding the development and management of ocean resources. The report was based on information received from 33 States, 9 programmes and organizations of the United Nations system, 15 specialized agencies and 6 international organizations.

The Secretary-General concluded that the responses from States and organizations reflected the degree of urgency attached to the adoption of effective measures in implementing the Convention and supplementing national incomes by maximizing benefits under the Convention's new ocean regime. While some States had the capacity and capabilities and had commenced the process of marine development, they desired to enhance their efforts. The crucial problem faced by most developing countries was that their capabilities and financial and human resources were limited and already committed to existing non-marine development sectors. Most developing countries had some rudimentary marine activities which needed to be enhanced and made more productive. New activities had to be identified and incorporated in their developmental efforts.

Preparatory Commission

The Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea met twice in 1991 at its ninth session (Kingston, Jamaica, 25 February-22 March; New York, 12-30 August).<sup>(5)</sup> Major issues considered were the implementation of resolution II on the registration of pioneer investors in deep-seabed mining,<sup>(10)</sup> adopted in 1982 by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, and the preparation of draft agreements, rules, regulations and procedures for the Authority.

The Preparatory Commission approved two applications for registration as pioneer investors in 1991. China's application for exploration rights in 150,000 square kilometres of the north Pacific Ocean, made on behalf of the China Ocean Mineral Resources Research and Development Association, was approved by the General Committee on 5 March.<sup>(11)</sup> The Preparatory Committee also received an application from a five-state consortium, comprising Bulgaria, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the USSR,<sup>(12)</sup> to register the Inter-oceanmetal Joint Organization (IOM) as a pioneer investor. IOM had applied for exploration in a specified configuration of sections in the easternmost part of the Clarion-Clipperton area of the ocean floor, situated in international waters south-west of Baja California, Mexico. In accepting IOM's application for registration on 21 August,<sup>(13)</sup> the General Committee requested the Secretary-General to issue the five-State consortium with a certificate of registration which would specify the geographical coordinates of the seabed areas allocated to it and would record its exclusive right to carry out pioneer activities in those areas.

With respect to the implementation of the obligations of the first group of registered pioneer investors (France, India, Japan and the USSR),<sup>(14)</sup> in accordance with the 1990 Understanding on the Fulfilment of Obligations by the Registered Pioneer Investors and their Certifying States,<sup>(15)</sup> the Training Panel, established at the Preparatory Commission's ninth session, held four meetings to develop a training schedule (New York, 19-21 August 1991). Following an examination of the training programmes submitted by France, Japan and the USSR, the Panel requested Japan and the USSR to make adjustments to their programmes. It decided that the commencement date specified in the French training programme would be maintained. In addition, the Panel decided that traineeships should cover the following disciplines: chemical/metallurgical, electrical, electronic, mechanical and mining engineering, and marine geology, geophysics and ecology. The decision of the General Committee on matters relating to the Training Panel was annexed to a statement by the Chairman of the Preparatory Commission describing the Commission's work in August.<sup>(16)</sup>

Also in accordance with the 1990 Understanding, the preparatory work for the exploration of one mine site in the areas reserved for the Authority had been completed by France, Japan and the USSR.

Regarding the preparation of draft agreements, rules, regulations and procedures for the International Seabed Authority, the plenary completed, in 1991, its second reading of the draft Agreement concerning the Relationship between the United Nations and the Authority and provisionally approved several provisions. Three articles were deleted concerning relations with specialized agencies, administrative cooperation, and cooperation among regional branches, centres and offices. Discussion on articles on which no agreement could be reached were to be continued in informal consultations. As to articles on personnel arrangements, budgetary and financial matters and financing of special services, it was decided to defer their consideration until after a discussion of administrative arrangements, structure and financial implications of the Authority.

The Commission agreed that the Authority's structure should ensure efficiency and cost-effectiveness; it should be no larger or smaller than required to guarantee the adequate performance of its functions; an evolutionary approach should be provided for; and the nature and level of the staff would depend on its activities.

Special Commissions

The Preparatory Commission's four Special Commissions continued to work in accordance with their respective mandates.

Developing land-based producer States

Special Commission 1 considered the provisional conclusions of its previous deliberations on recommendations to the Authority on how best to minimize the difficulties of developing land-based producer States, whose economies might be affected by seabed mineral production. As there appeared to be widely divergent views, the Chairman of the Special Commission formed a negotiating group to help bridge the gap among various groups of delegations. It was agreed that the negotiating group would consider one provisional conclusion at a time with a view to identifying areas of agreement and disagreement. The Chairman reported that the group had progressed from provisional conclusion 1 to provisional conclusion 10 and that the search for finding a basis for solutions was bearing fruit in many instances.<sup>(17)</sup>

The ad hoc working group of the Special Commission discussed the criteria for identifying developing land-based producer States actually or likely to be affected by seabed production and a compensation fund and assistance for the States affected. The report of the working group was annexed to a March 1991 statement by the Chairman of Special Commission 1 on the progress of its work.<sup>(18)</sup> In August, the Chairman of the group stated that intensive efforts to resolve the issue concerning criteria for identifying developing land-based producer States seemed to be leading to successful outcomes. A further report of the group was annexed to an August statement on progress by the Chairman of Special Commission 1.<sup>(17)</sup>

Following a review of international commodity agreements or arrangements to assess the potentials for minimizing the difficulties of developing land-based producer States affected by seabed mineral production and helping them to make the necessary economic adjustment, the Special Commission agreed that it, and in the future the Authority, might benefit most by keeping abreast with developments with regard to such agreements or arrangements and in due time making further assessments as to the feasibility and effectiveness of those instruments.

The Enterprise

Special Commission 2 was charged with preparing for the early entry into operation of the Enterprise—the operational arm of the Authority—which was to begin functioning when the Convention entered into force.

In March, it agreed on transitional arrangements for the Enterprise before the start of seabed mining. Transitional arrangements were needed to address the possible occurrence of a hiatus between the time of entry into force of the Convention and the time when seabed mining would be sufficiently viable to warrant project planning and development. The Special Commission agreed that the basic function under transitional arrangements would be to monitor and report on all developments affecting seabed mining, including analysis of world market conditions and metal prices and trends; collection of information on the availability of trained manpower; evaluation of technological developments; and assessment of the state of knowledge of deep-sea environments and of data relating to prospecting and exploration.

The Special Commission continued to work on a set of annotations to the Convention designed to adapt provisions dealing with the structure and organization of the Enterprise for application to the period when the Convention was in force but seabed mining had not begun. Its recommended annotations were outlined in an August 1991 document.<sup>(19)</sup>

In August, the Special Commission concluded its first reading of a model joint venture contract prepared by the Secretariat.

The Chairman's advisory group on assumptions reviewed price movements of nickel, copper, cobalt and manganese and studied the economic viability of deep-seabed mining.

In March<sup>(20)</sup> and in August<sup>(21)</sup> the Chairman of Special Commission 2 reported on the progress of work.

Seabed mining code

Special Commission 3, which prepared rules, regulations and procedures for the exploration and exploitation of the deep seabed, completed its first reading of the part of the draft regulations on prospecting, exploration and exploitation of polymetallic nodules in the Area dealing with the protection of the marine environment from the harmful effects of future seabed mining.<sup>(22)</sup> It also concluded consideration of draft regulations on accommodation of activities in the Area and in the marine environment. The rules, based on guidelines adopted by IMO on the removal of offshore installations and structures, were adapted by the Commission for application to future deep-seabed mining activities.

In August, the Special Commission completed its first reading of draft regulations on accounting principles and procedures relating to the financial terms of contracts between the Authority and its contractors. It would be necessary to ensure, through those regulations, that the Authority gained the financial benefits to which it was entitled under the Convention.<sup>(23)</sup>

International Tribunal

Special Commission 4 prepared recommendations regarding practical arrangements for the establishment of the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

It continued to consider administrative arrangements, structure and financial implications of the Tribunal, and examined a scheme to phase in the establishment of the Tribunal to serve during the initial stages of its existence. Consultations were held on the number of languages to be used by the Tribunal, the number of members of the Tribunal that would be required to be available at the seat of the Tribunal on a regular basis and the structure of the registry and staffing requirements.

The Special Commission conducted an article-by-article reading of the revised draft Protocol on the Privileges and Immunities of the Tribunal. While a considerable number of provisions were approved, some still required further consultation.

With regard to a revised draft headquarters agreement between the Tribunal and Germany, the host country, the Special Commission approved, with some exceptions, articles 1-19.

The Special Commission's Chairman reported in March<sup>(24)</sup> and August<sup>(25)</sup> on progress made.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

For General Assembly action concerning the work of the Preparatory Commission, see resolution 46/78 below.

Functions of the Secretary-General

Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea

In 1991, the Office for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea continued to provide information, advice and assistance primarily to States and also to global and regional bodies of the United Nations system, regional and subregional organizations, academic institutions, scholars and others. Measures continued to be taken to facilitate a better understanding by States of the Convention, to assist them in ratifying or acceding to it and to promote the wider acceptance and implementation of its provisions. The Office prepared studies and analyses relating to specific technical issues arising from the Convention and provided methodological approaches and formulated guidelines for integrated ocean management, marine policy-making and programme development. It provided services to intergovernmental entities in preparing for the entry into force of the Convention and for the commencement of the functioning of the International Seabed Authority and the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

In support of its activities, the Office continued to monitor and analyse developments related to the new ocean regime. Those functions required continuing research and data and information collection and evaluation, which were supported by the convening of groups of technical experts on specialized subjects and by developing the Office's reference library and its computerized Law of the Sea Information System (LOSIS).

As the focal point for marine affairs within the United Nations, the Office continued to participate in and support inter-agency programmes and activities. Among those activities was its long-standing assistance to the Indian Ocean Marine Affairs Cooperation secretariat. The seventh meeting of its Standing Committee (Colombo, Sri Lanka, July 1991) emphasized that the growing dependence on marine resources of a major part of the population of Africa and Asia which bordered the Indian Ocean warranted an early response to the needs of those States through a comprehensive programme of assistance from the United Nations.

The second meeting of the Group of Experts of the States Members of the Zone of Peace and Cooperation in the South Atlantic (Montevideo, Uruguay, 3-6 April) focused on marine legislation, policy and planning, ocean-resource development and marine science and technology, protection and preservation of the marine environment, and development of skills and capabilities in the marine sector.

The Permanent Commission of the South Pacific organized and convened, with the co-sponsorship of the Office, the Organization of American States and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, a meeting of legal experts (Santiago, Chile, 13-17 May) to assess the degree of implementation of the Convention in Latin America and consider the possibilities for obtaining universal participation in it.

Under a project funded by the United Nations Development Programme, Côte d'Ivoire in 1991 requested the assistance of the Office in reviewing its marine policy to maximize the benefits of the development of marine resources and uses.

To facilitate research and study on the law of the sea, its implementation and related marine affairs, the Office offered annually the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea established in 1981<sup>(26)</sup> in honour of the first President of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea. The 1991 fellowship was awarded to Maria de Lourdes Pina Aguiar, of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Sao Tome and Principe.<sup>(5)</sup> The fellowship, approximately $20,000 in value, provided six months of postgraduate university study or research and a three-month internship with the Office.

The Office published legislative histories and studies of State practice. It published a legislative history of Part III of the Convention and the first volume in an 11-volume series containing official documentation of the Preparatory Commission at its first (1983) session.<sup>(28)</sup> As to State practice, work was completed on three volumes, dealing with maritime boundary agreements (1985-1991),<sup>(29)</sup> national claims to maritime jurisdiction (excerpts of legislation and table of claims to maritime zones),<sup>(30)</sup> and archipelagic States.<sup>(31)</sup> Four issues of the Law of the Sea Bulletin appeared in English, French and Spanish (Nos. 17, 18 and 19 and Special Issue III).

In 1991, the Office further developed LOSIS. Three systems, composed of a group of databases, each containing information relating to different aspects of the law of the sea, were being supplemented by the collection of additional marine-related data. Of those databases, the Country Marine Profile Database contained 98 categories of information for more than 240 countries and other entities. References to legislation and regulations had been coded into the National Marine Legislation Database, which comprised some 4,000 entries. The Minerals Database contained 25 categories of information on copper, nickel, manganese and cobalt, by country and globally covering production, consumption, import and export of the minerals in various forms, for the period 1971-1986. Updated information, through 1990, was included in the PRODAUTH database dealing with the production ceiling for seabed mining provisions of the Convention.

The Library Bibliographic Information System, a database comprising all holdings of the Law of the Sea Library, became operational.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December 1991, the General Assembly adopted resolution 46/78 by recorded vote.

Law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions, including resolution 45/145 of 14 December 1990, on the law of the sea.

Recognizing that, as stated in the third Preambular paragraph of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, the problems of ocean space are closely inter-related and need to be considered as a whole,

Convinced that it is important to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose,

Emphasizing the need for States to ensure consistent application of the Convention, as well as the need for harmonization of national legislation with the provisions of the Convention,

Considering that, in its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, it proclaimed that the seabed and ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction (hereinafter referred to as "the Area"), as well as the resources of the Area, are the common heritage of mankind,

Recalling that the Convention provides the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources,

Recalling with satisfaction the expressions of willingness to explore all possibilities of addressing issues of concern to some States in order to secure universal participation in the Convention,<sup>a</sup>

Recognizing the need for cooperation in the early and effective implementation by the Preparatory Commission of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea,

Noting with satisfaction the progress made in the Preparatory Commission since its inception, including the registration of six pioneer investors and the designation by the Preparatory Commission of reserved areas for the International Seabed Authority from the application areas submitted by the pioneer investors pursuant to resolution II, bearing in mind that such registration entails both rights and obligations for pioneer investors,

Noting the increasing needs of countries, especially developing countries, for information, advice and assistance in the implementation of the Convention and in their developmental process for the full realization of the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention,

Concerned that the developing countries are as yet unable to take effective measures for the full realization of these benefits owing to the lack of resources and of the necessary scientific and technological capabilities,

Recognizing the need to enhance and supplement the efforts of States and competent international organizations aimed at enabling developing countries to acquire such capabilities,

Recognizing also that the Convention encompasses all uses and resources of the sea and that all related activities within the United Nations system need to be implemented in a manner consistent with it,

Deeply concerned at the current state of the marine environment,

Mindful of the importance of the Convention for the protection of the marine environment,

Noting with concern the use of fishing methods and practices, including those aimed at evading regulations and controls, which can have an adverse impact on the conservation and management of marine living resources,

Considering the need for effective and balanced conservation and management of marine living resources, giving full effect to the relevant provisions in the Convention,

Taking note of activities carried out in 1991 under the major programme on marine affairs, set forth in chapter 25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989 and extended for the period 1990-1991, in accordance with the report of the Secretary-General, as approved in General Assembly resolution 38/59 A of 14 December 1983, and of the report of the Secretary-General, as well as of programme 10 (Law of the sea and ocean affairs) in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997,<sup>b</sup>

Taking special note of the report of the Secretary-General prepared in pursuance of paragraph 20 of General Assembly resolution 45/145,

1. Recalls the historic significance of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea as an important contribution to the maintenance of peace, justice and progress for all peoples of the world;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the increasing and overwhelming support for the Convention, as evidenced, inter alia by the one hundred and fifty-nine signatures and fifty-one of the sixty ratifications or accessions required for entry into force of the Convention;

3. Invites all States to make renewed efforts to facilitate universal participation in the Convention;

4. Notes with appreciation the initiative of the Secretary-General to promote dialogue aimed at addressing issues of concern to some States in order to achieve universal participation in the Convention;

5. Recognizes that political and economic changes, including particularly a growing reliance on market principles, underscore the need to re-evaluate, in the light of the issues of concern to some States, matters in the regime to be applied to the Area and its resources, and that a productive dialogue on such issues involving all interested parties would facilitate the prospect of universal participation in the Convention, for the benefit of mankind as a whole;

6. Calls upon all States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention at the earliest possible date to allow the effective entry into force of the new legal regime for the uses of the sea and its resources and calls upon all States to take appropriate steps to promote universal participation in the Convention, including through dialogue aimed at addressing the issues of concern to some States;

7. Calls upon all States to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to apply them in a manner consistent with that character and with their object and purpose;

8. Also calls upon States to observe the provisions of the Convention when enacting their national legislation;

9. Notes the progress being made by the Preparatory Commission for the International Seabed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea in all areas of its work;

10. Recalls the Understanding on the Fulfilment of Obligations by the Registered Pioneer Investors and their Certifying States adopted by the Preparatory Commission on 30 August 1990;

11. Notes that negotiations on the fulfilment of the obligations have already been completed in respect of the pioneer investor registered in March 1991;

12. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his efforts in support of the Convention and for the effective execution of the major programme on marine affairs set forth in chapter 25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989 and extended for the period 1990-1991, and requests him, in the execution of programme 10 (Law of the sea and ocean affairs) in the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997, to provide an effective response to the increased needs of States for assistance in the implementation of the Convention;

13. Also expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the report prepared in pursuance of paragraph 20 of General Assembly resolution 45/145 and requests him to carry out the activities outlined therein, as well as those aimed at the strengthening of the legal regime of the sea, special emphasis being placed on the work of the Preparatory Commission, including the implementation of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea;

14. Welcomes regional efforts being undertaken by developing countries to integrate the ocean sector in national development plans and programmes through the process of international cooperation and assistance, in particular the initiatives mentioned in the report of the Secretary-General;

15. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to assist States in the implementation of the Convention and in the development of a consistent and uniform approach to the legal regime thereunder, as well as in their national, subregional and regional efforts towards the full realization of the benefits therefrom, and invites the organs and organizations of the United Nations system to cooperate and lend assistance in these endeavours;

16. Urges interested Member States, in particular States with advanced marine capabilities, to review relevant policies and programmes in the context of the integration of the marine sector in national development strategies, and to explore prospects for intensifying cooperation with developing States, including States of regions active in this field;

17. Requests the competent international organizations, the United Nations Development Programme, the World Bank and other multilateral funding agencies, in accordance with their respective policies, to intensify financial, technological, organizational and managerial assistance to the developing countries in their efforts to realize the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention and to strengthen cooperation among themselves and with donor States in the provision of such assistance;

18. Welcomes the second report of the Secretary-General submitted pursuant to paragraph 13 of General Assembly resolution 44/26 of 20 November 1989 and paragraph 15 of General Assembly resolution 45/145 identifying the measures currently taken by States and by the competent international organizations, as well as future approaches to address the needs of States in regard to the development and management of ocean resources, and requests the Secretary-General to keep under review, in cooperation with States and the competent international organizations, the measures being undertaken and any necessary follow-up action, in order to facilitate the realization by States of the benefits of the comprehensive legal regime established by the Convention and to report thereon periodically to the General Assembly;

19. Approves the decision of the Preparatory Commission to hold its tenth regular session at Kingston from 24 February to 13 March 1992 and to hold a summer meeting in New York in 1992;

20. Recognizes that the protection of the marine environment will be significantly enhanced by the implementation of applicable provisions of the Convention;

Chapter V

Other legal questions

In 1991, the United Nations continued to work on various aspects of international law and international economic law.

The International Law Commission continued to work on the progressive development and codification of international law. It concluded consideration of jurisdictional immunities of States and provisionally adopted complete sets of draft articles on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and on the law of the non-navigational uses of international water-courses.

Legal aspects of international economic law and the new international economic order continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth (Legal) Committee of the General Assembly. At its twenty-fourth session, UNCITRAL focused on a draft Model Law on International Credit Transfers, which was adopted by its Working Group on International Payments. The Assembly took note of the adoption, in 1991, of the United Nations Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade. It repeated its invitation to States which had not done so to sign, ratify or accede to the conventions elaborated under the auspices of the Commission (resolution 46/56 A).

A working group of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization completed its work on a draft Declaration on Fact-finding by the United Nations in the Field of the Maintenance of Peace and Security, which the General Assembly subsequently approved (resolution 46/59).

International organizations and international law

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

The Secretary-General, in his annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), stated that one of the effects of the transformation of the global scene had been the end of the long season of stagnation for the United Nations. Satisfaction could be derived from the fact that at no point in that time of tumult did the United Nations fail to keep pace with historic change. But the concern that the principles of its Charter should govern the emerging international order continued and was accentuated by all current developments. The renaissance of the Organization had reflected a qualitative change in attitudes and perceptions, the outcome of the active cooperation of Member States and long preparation and intense effort by the Secretariat. United Nations field operations showed that peace was being guarded or built in a number of situations.

A re-examination of the Security Council's role and procedures was accompanied by agreement in the General Assembly on the manner in which the Organization's budget should be adopted by consensus. A major effort to streamline the Secretariat to adapt it to the requirements of the period ahead had begun.

Referring to the implementation of Security Council resolutions pertaining to the hostilities in the Persian Gulf, the Secretary-General stated that the effectiveness of the United Nations could no longer be in doubt. World leaders had recognized the central place of the United Nations in the international system and solemnly affirmed their reliance on it. The Organization was being increasingly looked upon as a trusted intermediary. The United Nations, if supported by the generality of its membership, could help purge international relations of the elements leading to violent hostility or causing a pervasive sense of insecurity.

However, the experience of operations in the Persian Gulf had suggested the need for a collective reflection on questions relating to the future use of the powers vested in the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter. The Secretary-General also noted the persistence of a trend not to utilize the machinery of the United Nations to resolve certain important issues, including some relating to areas of incipient or potential conflict. Another discordant note was the pronounced contrast between the tasks imposed on the Organization and the resources provided to it.

The main problem concerning the effective execution of preventive diplomacy was the lack of means at the disposal of the United Nations to maintain an impartial and effective global watch over conflict situations. Preventive diplomacy presupposed an early warning capacity, which, in turn, implied a reliable and independent database. The pool of information available to the Secretary-General was wholly inadequate, and its absence hindered the use of Article 99 of the Charter, especially in its anticipatory aspect.

Another deficiency in the system of collective security was the insufficient use of the principal judicial organ of the United Nations, the International Court of Justice (ICJ). The Secretary-General reiterated his suggestion that he be given the authority to request an advisory opinion from the Court.

The United Nations was entering uncharted territories and undertaking tasks of a kind unforeseen in its original design, prompting an examination of its executive organ, the Secretariat. Its heterogeneous composition, as much as the variety of its mandate, demanded cohesive and integrated control at the top. That kind of control could be eroded if there were excessive interference from outside.

In noting that some of the Charter's provisions—such as the composition of the Security Council—had come into question, the Secretary-General emphasized that the Charter was the only multilateral treaty of its nature and scope that had been accepted by, and was binding on, all States, and any revisions, except on the basis of genuine consensus, would create more problems than they would solve.

Activities of the Special Committee

The Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization<sup>(1)</sup> (New York, 4-22 February 1991) continued its discussion of several proposals on the maintenance of international peace and security, along with its examination of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States (see PART FIVE, Chapter II as requested by the General Assembly in 1990.<sup>(2)</sup>)

The Committee's Working Group completed its work on a draft Declaration on Fact-finding by the United Nations in the Field of the Maintenance of International Peace and Security and decided to submit it to the Assembly for consideration and adoption (see below, General Assembly resolution 46/59). In considering the draft Declaration, the Committee had before it a working paper<sup>(3)</sup> by Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand and Spain, which was later revised.<sup>(4)</sup>

The Committee considered several proposals concerning the maintenance of international peace and security: one working paper submitted by the USSR proposed new issues for consideration in the Committee and another dealt with the enhancement of cooperation between the United Nations and regional organizations; the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya submitted a proposal dealing with enhancing the effectiveness of the Security Council in regard to the maintenance of international peace and security.

On 8 February, the Committee, having taken note of the final progress report of the Secretary-General on the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States<sup>(5)</sup> and, having considered the final text of the draft handbook, recommended its publication, as annexed to the Committee's report, to the Assembly (see below, General Assembly resolution 46/58).

The Assembly in 1990<sup>(6)</sup> had approved the conclusions of the Committee concerning the rationalization of existing United Nations procedures and decided that they should be annexed to the Assembly's rules of procedure. The conclusions were issued as amendments to those annexes in August 1991.<sup>(7)</sup>

ANNEX

Declaration on Fact-finding by the United Nations in the Field of the Maintenance of International Peace and Security

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, the Declaration on the Enhancement of the Effectiveness of the Principle of Refraining from the Threat or Use of Force in International Relations, the Declaration on the Prevention and Removal of Disputes and Situations Which May Threaten International Peace and Security and on the Role of the United Nations in this Field, and their provisions regarding fact-finding,

Recognising that the full use and further improvement of the means for fact-finding of the United Nations could contribute to the strengthening of the role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security and promote the peaceful settlement of disputes, as well as the prevention and removal of threats to peace,

Desiring to encourage States to bear in mind the role that competent organs of the United Nations can play in ascertaining the facts in relation to disputes or situations,

Recognizing the particular usefulness of fact-finding missions that the competent United Nations organs may undertake in this respect,

Bearing in mind the experience and expertise acquired by the United Nations in the field of fact-finding missions,

Recognizing the need for States, in exercising their sovereignty, to cooperate with the relevant organs of the United Nations as regards fact-finding missions undertaken by them,

Seeking to contribute to the effectiveness of the United Nations, with a view to enhancing mutual understanding, trust and stability in the world,

Solemnly declares that:

I

1. In performing their functions in relation to the maintenance of international peace and security, the competent organs of the United Nations should endeavour to have full knowledge of all relevant facts. To this end they should consider undertaking fact-finding activities.

2. For the purpose of the present Declaration fact-finding means any activity designed to obtain detailed knowledge of the relevant facts of any dispute or situation which the competent United Nations organs need in order to exercise effectively their functions in relation to the maintenance of international peace and security.

3. Fact-finding should be comprehensive, objective, impartial and timely.

4. Unless a satisfactory knowledge of all relevant facts can be obtained through the use of the information-gathering capabilities of the Secretary-General or other existing means, the competent organ of the United Nations should consider resorting to a fact-finding mission.

5. In deciding if and when to undertake such a mission, the competent United Nations organs should bear in mind that the sending of a fact-finding mission can signal the concern of the Organization and should contribute to building confidence and defusing the dispute or situation while avoiding any aggravation of it.

6. The sending of a United Nations fact-finding mission to the territory of any State requires the prior consent of that State, subject to the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations.

II

7. Fact-finding missions may be undertaken by the Security Council, the General Assembly and the Secretary-General, in the context of their respective responsibilities for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter.

8. The Security Council should consider the possibility of undertaking fact-finding to discharge effectively its primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security in accordance with the Charter.

9. The Security Council should, wherever appropriate, consider the possibility of providing in its resolutions for recourse to fact-finding.

10. The General Assembly should consider the possibility of undertaking fact-finding for exercising effectively its responsibilities under the Charter for the maintenance of international peace and security.

11. The General Assembly should, wherever appropriate, consider the possibility of providing for recourse to fact-finding in its resolutions relevant to the maintenance of international peace and security.

12. The Secretary-General should pay special attention to using the United Nations fact-finding capabilities at an early stage in order to contribute to the prevention of disputes and situations.

13. The Secretary-General, on his own initiative or at the request of the States concerned, should consider undertaking a fact-finding mission when a dispute or a situation exists.

14. The Secretary-General should prepare and update lists of experts in various fields who would be available for fact-finding missions. He should also maintain and develop, within existing resources, capabilities for mounting emergency fact-finding missions.

15. The Security Council and the General Assembly should, in deciding to whom to entrust the conduct of a fact-finding mission, give preference to the Secretary-General, who may, Inter alia, designate a special representative or a group of experts reporting to him. Resort to an ad hoc subsidiary body of the Security Council or the General Assembly may also be considered.

16. In considering the possibility of undertaking a fact-finding mission, the competent United Nations organ should bear in mind other relevant fact-finding efforts, including those undertaken by the States concerned and in the framework of regional arrangements or agencies.

17. The decision by the competent United Nations organ to undertake fact-finding should always contain a clear mandate for the fact-finding mission and precise requirements to be met by its report. The report should be limited to a presentation of findings of a factual nature.

18. Any request by a State to a competent organ of the United Nations for the sending of a United Nations fact-finding mission to its territory should be considered without undue delay.

III

19. Any request by a competent organ of the United Nations for the consent of a State to receive a fact-finding mission within its territory should be given timely consideration by that State. This State should inform the organ of its decision without delay.

20. In the event a State decides not to admit a United Nations fact-finding mission to its territory, it should, if it deems it appropriate, indicate the reasons for its decision. It should also keep the possibility of admitting the fact-finding mission under review.

21. States should endeavour to follow a policy of admitting United Nations fact-finding missions to their territory.

22. States should cooperate with United Nations fact-finding missions and give them, within the limits of their capabilities, full and prompt assistance necessary for the exercise of their functions and the fulfilment of their mandate.

23. Fact-finding missions should be accorded all immunities and facilities needed for discharging their mandate, in particular full confidentiality in their work and access to all relevant places and persons, it being understood that no harmful consequences will result to these persons. Fact-finding missions have an obligation to respect the laws and regulations of the State in which they exercise their functions; such laws and regulations should not however be applied in such a way as to hinder missions in the proper discharge of their functions.

24. The members of fact-finding missions, as a minimum, enjoy the privileges and immunities accorded to experts on missions by the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations. Without prejudice to their privileges and immunities, members of fact-finding missions have an obligation to respect the laws and regulations of the State in the territory in which they exercise their functions.

25. Fact-finding missions have an obligation to act in strict conformity with their mandate and perform their task in an impartial way. Their members have an obligation not to seek or receive instructions from any Government or from any authority other than the competent United Nations organ. They should keep the information acquired in discharging their mandate confidential even after the mission has fulfilled its task.

26. The States directly concerned should be given an opportunity, at all stages of the fact-finding process, to express their views in respect of the facts the fact-finding mission has been entrusted to obtain. When the results of fact-finding are to be made public, the views expressed by the States directly concerned should, if they so wish, also be made public.

27. Whenever fact-finding includes hearings, appropriate rules of procedure should ensure their fairness.

IV

28. The Secretary-General should monitor the state of international peace and security regularly and systematically in order to provide early warning of disputes or situations which might threaten international peace and security. The Secretary-General may bring relevant information to the attention of the Security Council and, where appropriate, of the General Assembly, 29. To this end, the Secretary-General should make full use of the information-gathering capabilities of the Secretariat and keep under review the improvement of these capabilities.

V

30. The sending of a United Nations fact-finding mission is without prejudice to the use by the States concerned of inquiry or any similar procedure or of any means of peaceful settlement of disputes agreed by them.

31. Nothing in the present Declaration is to be construed as prejudicing in any manner the provisions of the Charter.

General Assembly resolution 46/59

9 December 1991 Meeting 67 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/46/690) without vote, 15 November (meeting 38); 16-nation draft (A/C.6/46/L.9); agenda item 131.

Sponsors: Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Germany, Ghana, Hungary, Italy, Japan, New Zealand, Nigeria, Poland, Romania, Spain.

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 6th Committee 6-11, 38; plenary 67.

After the General Assembly had, in 1990,<sup>(8)</sup> decided to defer consideration of the implementation of the resolutions of the United Nations, it again decided, by decision 46/444 of 20 December 1991, to defer consideration until 1992.

Host country relations

The Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued to consider in 1991 various aspects of relations between the United Nations diplomatic community and the United States, its host country. Summaries of discussions held at six meetings between March and November and summaries of communications from Member States on the security of their missions and the safety of their personnel were contained in the Committee's report to the Assembly.<sup>(9)</sup> In April, the Committee set up a working group to consider the problem of financial indebtedness and possible concrete measures for urgent assistance to certain missions in distress.

During the year, travel restrictions previously issued by the host country for permanent mission staff and United Nations employees and their dependants had been lifted for Albania, Bulgaria and Mongolia. Travel restrictions also had been lifted on officials of the Government of Nicaragua not permanently accredited to the Permanent Mission of Nicaragua.

The Committee dealt with an allegation by Cuba that weekly demonstrations held in front of its Mission, for more than 18 months, were essentially a camouflage for a policy of intimidation of members of the Mission and their families. A complaint by Iraq concerned the freezing of the Mission's accounts.

Other topics dealt with by the Committee were: acceleration of immigration and customs procedures, exemption from taxes, establishment of a commissary at Headquarters, transportation and related matters.

Among the recommendations and conclusions approved on 15 November, the Committee was convinced that the host country would continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions; called on the missions to cooperate fully with the United States authorities in cases affecting the security of missions and their personnel; appealed to the host country to review the measures relating to diplomatic vehicles with a view to responding to the needs of the diplomatic community, and to consult with the Committee on matters relating to transportation; and stressed the importance of the work of its working group concerning problems of financial indebtedness. It welcomed the cooperation of all interested parties, and reminded all United Nations missions and their personnel to meet their financial obligations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/60 without vote.

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

1. Endorses the recommendations and conclusions of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 76 of its report;

2. Considers that the maintenance of appropriate conditions for the normal work of the delegations and the missions accredited to the United Nations is in the interests of the United Nations and all Member States, and expresses the hope that the host country will continue to take all measures necessary to prevent any interference with the functioning of missions;

3. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts made by the host country and hopes that outstanding problems raised at the meetings of the Committee will be duly resolved in a spirit of cooperation and in accordance with international law;

4. Urges the host country, in the light of the consideration by the Committee of travel regulations issued by the host country, to continue to bear in mind its obligations to facilitate the functioning of the United Nations and the missions accredited to it;

5. Stresses the importance of a positive perception of the work of the United Nations, and urges that efforts be continued to build up public awareness by explaining, through all available means, the importance of the role, played by the United Nations and the missions accredited to it in the strengthening of international peace and security;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country;

7. Requests the Committee to continue its work, in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819 (XXVI) of 15 December 1971;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

United Nations Decade of International Law

The General Assembly had, in 1989,<sup>(10)</sup> declared the period 1990-1999 as the United Nations Decade of International Law, the main purposes of which would be to promote acceptance of and respect for the principles of international law; promote means and methods for the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, including resort to and full respect for ICJ; encourage the progressive development of international law and its codification; and encourage its teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation (see below).

In 1990,<sup>(11)</sup> the Assembly adopted the programme for the activities to be commenced during the first term (1990-1992) of the Decade which, among other things, requested the Secretary-General to submit a progress report in 1991 on the implementation of the programme (see below) and to report on United Nations activities relevant to the progressive development of international law and its codification, including those of the International Law Commission (ILC).

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly, in September 1991,<sup>(12)</sup> a report containing replies on the implementation of the programme received from a number of States and intergovernmental organizations, United Nations bodies, international courts and tribunals, and non-governmental organizations. The report consisted of an analytical presentation of those replies and described the activities of the United Nations relevant to the progressive development of international law and its codification.

The Sixth Committee's Working Group on the United Nations Decade of International Law, established in 1990 with a view to preparing generally acceptable recommendations on the programme for the activities for the Decade, considered in November 1991<sup>(13)</sup> the Secretary-General's progress report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/53 without vote.

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Sixth Committee and its Working Group on the United Nations Decade of International Law for their work at the current session and requests the Working Group to continue to work at the forty-seventh session in accordance with its mandate and methods of work;

2. Also expresses its appreciation to States and international organizations and institutions that have undertaken activities in implementation of the programme for the first term (1990-1992) of the Decade, including sponsoring conferences on various subjects of international law;

Invites all States and international organizations and institutions referred to in the programme to provide, update or supplement information on activities they have undertaken in implementation of the programme, as appropriate, to the Secretary-General, as well as to submit their views on possible activities for the next term of the Decade;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit, on the basis of such information, a report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the implementation of the programme, together with views on possible activities for the next term of the Decade;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-seventh session the item entitled "United Nations Decade of International Law".

International Law Commission

ILC (forty-third session, Geneva, 29 April-19 July)<sup>(1)</sup> continued its work on the progressive development and codification of international law, completing a five-year cycle of membership.

Finally adopting a draft set of articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, ILC recommended to the General Assembly that it should convene an international conference of plenipotentiaries to consider the draft articles and to conclude a convention on that topic. In addition, it provisionally adopted complete sets of draft articles on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses. The Commission decided that the latter draft should be transmitted, through the Secretary-General, to Governments for their comments and observations and that it should be requested that such comments and observations be submitted to him by 1 January 1993. In September,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the draft articles provisionally adopted by ILC in 1991 on all three topics.

The Commission also took up proceedings in which State immunity could not be invoked, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law and relations between States and international organizations (second part of the topic) (see PART FIVE, Chapter III). State responsibility was not discussed due to lack of time (see PART FIVE, Chapter II).

The Commission held 48 public meetings; in addition its Drafting Committee held 55 meetings, the Enlarged Bureau of the Commission, two, and the Bureau's Planning Group, six.

ILC continued in 1991 to cooperate with the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee, the European Committee on Legal Cooperation and the Inter-American Juridical Committee. Members of the Commission participated in a seminar on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind and the establishment of an international criminal jurisdiction (Talloires, France, 20 May), and in meetings of the Committee on Arms Control and Disarmament Law of the International Law Association (Geneva, 7 and 8 July).

An election of members of the Commission was held by the Assembly in November (see APPENDIX III).

In accordance with a General Assembly request, the Secretariat prepared for ILC's attention a topical summary of the Assembly's Sixth Committee discussion in 1991<sup>(3)</sup> on the ILC report for the corresponding year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/54 without vote.

Report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-third session

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-third session,

Emphasizing the need for the progressive development of international law and its codification in order to make it a more effective means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and to give increased importance to its role in relations among States,

Recognising the importance of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics that might be submitted to the International Law Commission, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission further to enhance their contribution to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the international community, may be suitable for the progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

Recognizing the role of the International Law Commission in the fulfilment of the objectives of the United Nations Decade of International Law,

Taking note with appreciation of the section of the report of the International Law Commission concerning the question of the possible establishment of an international criminal jurisdiction and noting also the debate in the Sixth Committee pertaining to this topic,

Considering that experience has demonstrated the usefulness of structuring the debate on the report of the International Law Commission in the Sixth Committee in such a manner that conditions are provided for concentrated attention on each of the main topics dealt with in the report, and that this process is facilitated when the Commission indicates specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments are of particular interest for the continuation of its work,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its forty-third session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at that session, in particular for the completion of the final draft articles on jurisdictional immunities of States and their property and the provisional draft articles on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses and on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind;

3. Invites the International Law Commission, within the framework of the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind, to consider further and analyse the issues raised in its report on the work of its forty-second session<sup>a</sup> concerning the question of an international criminal jurisdiction, including proposals for the establishment of an international criminal court or other international criminal trial mechanism in order to enable the General Assembly to provide guidance on the matter;

4. Recommends that, taking into account the comments of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission should continue its work on the topics in its current programme;

5. Expresses its appreciation for the efforts of the International Law Commission to improve its procedures and methods of work:

6. Requests the International Law Commission:

(a) To consider thoroughly:

(i) The planning of its activities and programme for the term of office of its members, bearing in mind the desirability of achieving as much progress as possible in the preparation of draft articles on specific topics;

(ii) Its methods of work in all their aspects, including the possibility of dividing its annual session into two parts, bearing in mind that the staggering of the consideration of some topics might contribute, inter alia, to a more effective consideration of its report in the Sixth Committee;

(b) To continue to pay special attention to indicating in its annual report, for each topic, those specific issues on which expressions of views by Governments, either in the Sixth Committee or in written form, would be of particular interest for the continuation of its work;

7. Takes note of the comments of the Commission on the question of the duration of its session, as presented in paragraph 338 of its report, and expresses the view that the requirements of the work for the progressive development of international law and its codification and the magnitude and complexity of the subjects on the agenda of the Commission make it desirable that the usual duration of its sessions be maintained;

8. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the summary records and other documentation of the International Law Commission;

9. Draws the attention of Governments to the importance, for the International Law Commission, of having their views on the draft articles on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses and on the draft Code of Crimes against the Peace and Security of Mankind, adopted on first reading by the Commission, and urges them to present in writing their comments and observations by 1 January 1993, as requested by the Commission;

10. Once again expresses the wish that seminars will continue to be held in conjunction with the sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants from developing countries will be given the opportunity to attend those seminars, appeals to States that can do so to make the voluntary contributions that are urgently needed for the holding of the seminars, and expresses the hope that every effort will continue to be made by the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to provide the seminars with adequate services, including interpretation, as required;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly, together with such written statements as delegations may circulate in conjunction with their oral statements, and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate;

12. Recommends the continuation of efforts to improve the ways in which the report of the International Law Commission is considered in the Sixth Committee, with a view to providing effective guidance for the Commission in its work,

13. Also recommends that the debate on the report of the International Law Commission at the forty-seventh session of the General Assembly commence on 26 October 1992.

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

International Law Seminar

The twenty-seventh session of the International Law Seminar-for postgraduate students of international law and young professors or government officials dealing with international law-was held (Geneva, 3-21 June 1991), with 20 participants of different nationalities, mostly from developing countries; five United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) fellows also attended the session. The participants also attended ILC meetings and lectures. Austria, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Ireland, Morocco, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom made voluntary financial contributions and awarded full fellowships to 13 participants and a partial fellowship to one in 1991. Since the first seminar in 1964, fellowships had been awarded to 308 of the 596 participants, representing 146 nationalities.

The General Assembly appealed for voluntary contributions to the seminars in resolutions 46/54 and 46/50.

Other activities

A number of additional training courses were offered in 1991 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law.<sup>(4)</sup> Under the annual joint United Nations-UNITAR fellowship programme, 18 middle-grade governmental legal officers and young teachers of international law attended courses for six weeks at The Hague Academy of International Law (Netherlands), as well as seminars organized by UNITAR. Some fellows also participated in the International Law Seminar in Geneva (see above), while others received practical training at legal offices of the United Nations and related organizations.

In accordance with a General Assembly request of 1989,<sup>(5)</sup> UNITAR organized a two-week regional training and refresher course in international law for the region of southern Africa (Windhoek, Namibia, 12-22 February). Twenty-nine participants from Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Malawi, Namibia, Swaziland, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe attended.

In response to Assembly requests of 1989<sup>(5)</sup> and 1990,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General recommended, if new funds became available,<sup>(4)</sup> that all ongoing activities be continued and expanded. New activities should be undertaken only if the overall level of appropriations or voluntary contributions from States made them possible. As to the UNITAR fellowship programme, he suggested that it be continued during the 1992-1993 biennium with a minimum of 15 fellowships each year to be awarded under the United Nations regular budget. Additional fellowships might be awarded from the Trust Fund of the Programme of Assistance, subject to voluntary contributions received. He advised caution in allocating sums from the Trust Fund to finance administration and other expenses of the Programme and urged maximum use of existing resources of the Organization.

In October, the Secretary-General, in a note to the Sixth Committee,<sup>(7)</sup> made suggestions based on past practice on procedures for appointing the new membership of the Advisory Committee on the Programme for the period 1 January 1992 to 31 December 1995. The Advisory Committee held its twenty-sixth session on 28 October 1991.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/50 without vote.

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 13 of its resolution 44/28 of 4 December 1989 and paragraph 1 of chapter IV of the annex to its resolution 45/40 of 28 November 1990,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law and the guidelines and recommendations on future implementation of the Programme within the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law, which were adopted by the Advisory Committee on the Programme and are contained in section III of that report,

Bearing in mind that the encouragement of the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law is one of the main objectives of the United Nations Decade of International Law, as declared in its resolution 44/23 of 17 November 1989 and further expanded in section IV of the programme for activities for the first term (1990-1992) of the Decade, which is contained in the annex of resolution 45/40,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Noting with appreciation the efforts made by States at the bilateral level to provide assistance in the teaching and study of international law,

Convinced, nevertheless, that States and international organizations and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme and increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Reaffirming its resolutions 2464 (XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2550 (XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2838 (XXVI) of 18 December 1971, 3106 (XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, 3502 (XXX) of 15 December 1975, 32/146 of 16 December 1977, 36/108 of 10 December 1981 and 38/129 of 19 December 1983, in which it stated or recalled that in the conduct of the Programme it was desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international organizations and others, as well as its resolutions 34/144 of 17 December 1979, 40/66 of 11 December 1985, 42/148 of 7 December 1987 and 44/28 of 4 December 1989 in which it expressed or reaffirmed the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programme in international law, sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, account would be taken of the need to secure representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

1. Approves the guidelines and recommendations contained in section III of the report of the Secretary-General, and adopted by the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, in particular those designed to achieve the best possible results in the administration of the Programme within a policy of maximum financial restraint;

2. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out in 1992 and 1993 the activities specified in his report, including the provision of:

(a) A minimum of fifteen fellowships each in 1992 and 1993, at the request of Governments of developing countries;

(b) A minimum of one scholarship each in 1992 and 1993 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, subject to the availability of new voluntary contributions made specifically to the fellowship fund;

(c) Assistance in the form of a travel grant for one participant from each developing country, who will be invited to the regional courses to be organized in 1992 and 1993; and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget, when appropriate, as well as from voluntary financial contributions earmarked for each of the activities concerned, which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 14, 15 and 16 below;

3. Expresses its appreciations to the Secretary-General for his constructive efforts to promote training and assistance in international law within the framework of the Programme in 1990 and 1991, in particular for the organization of the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh ses-

Affairs of the Secretariat and its Codification Division in the conduct of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, as well as for the activities related to the award of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to consider the relative advantages of using available resources and voluntary contributions on regional, subregional or national courses as against courses organized within the United Nations system;

5. Welcomes, in particular, the joint efforts described in the report of the Secretary-General, and undertaken by the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs and its secretariat of the Programme as well as by the International Court of Justice to publish in a single volume in all official languages of the Organization, and within the existing overall level of appropriations, the summaries of the Judgments and advisory opinions of the Court (1949-1990) as provided by the Registry of the Court, and to update this publication in subsequent years;

6. Invites interested States to consider the option of financing the translation and publication of the Judgments of the Court;

7. Welcomes the efforts undertaken by the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat to bring up to date the United Nations Treaty Series and the United Nations Juridical Yearbook;

8. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for its participation in the Programme, particularly for its efforts in the organization of regional courses and in the administration of the fellowship programme in international law jointly sponsored and conducted by the United Nations and the Institute;

9. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for its participation in the Programme, and in particular for the publication of International Law: Achievements and Prospects, which constitutes an important effort to support the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and notes that as reflected in the report of the Secretary-General, it may be expected that any request to translate and publish this work in Spanish or any other language would have greater chances of being favourably examined were it to be made on a regional basis;

10. Also expresses its appreciation to the Government of Namibia for its willingness to co-sponsor the regional training and refresher course of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for southern African countries, held at Windhoek from 12 to 22 February 1991;

11. Further expresses its appreciation to the Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contributions it has made to the Programme by enabling international law fellows under the sponsorship of the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to attend its annual international law courses and by providing facilities for seminars organized under the fellowship programme in international law in conjunction with the Academy courses;

12. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by the Hague Academy of International Law to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of, and, if possible an increase in their financial contributions in order to enable the Academy to carry on with the above-mentioned activities, in particular the summer courses, regional courses and programmes of the Centre for Studies and Research in International Law and International Relations;

13. Urges all States, and relevant international organizations, whether regional or universal, to make all possible efforts to implement the goals and carry out the activities contemplated in section IV of the programme for the activities for the first term (1990-1992) of the United Nations Decade of International Law, dealing with the encouragement of the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law and contained in the annex to its resolution 45/40;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

15. Reiterates its request to Member States and to interested organizations and individuals to make voluntary contributions, inter alia, for the International Law Seminar, for the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and for the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals which have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

16. Urges in particular all Governments to make voluntary contributions with a view to covering the amount needed for the financing of the daily subsistence allowance for up to twenty-five participants in each regional course organized by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible for the Institute to continue to organize the regional courses;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session on the implementation of the Programme during 1992 and 1993 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme in subsequent years;

18. Decide to appoint twenty-five Member States, six from Africa, five from Asia, three from Eastern Europe, five from Latin America and the Caribbean, and six from Western Europe and other States, as members of the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, for a period of four years beginning on 1 January 1992;<sup>a</sup>

19. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-eighth session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law".

<sup>a</sup> The States members of the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law are the following: Bangladesh, Colombia, Cuba, Cyprus, Ethiopia, France, Germany, Ghana, India, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Italy, Kenya, Malaysia, Mexico, Netherlands, Nigeria, Romania, Sudan, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukraine, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, United Republic of Tanzania, United States of America and Uruguay.

International economic law

In 1991, legal aspects of international economic law continued to be considered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

Report of UNCITRAL

The twenty-fourth session of UNCITRAL, (Vienna, 10-28 June 1991)<sup>(1)</sup> focused on a draft Model Law on International Credit Transfers, which was adopted by its Working Group on International Payments. The Commission also discussed procurement, guarantees and stand-by letters of credit, international counter trade, legal problems of electronic data interchange, coordination of work, status of conventions, training and assistance, and relevant General Assembly resolutions and other business (see below).

The Commission agreed with a Secretariat proposal<sup>(2)</sup> to organize, as a first step in preparing a programme of activities for the United Nations Decade of International Law that was specifically related to international trade law, a Congress on International Trade Law to be held in the context of its twenty-fifth (1992) session.

UNCITRAL'S report was forwarded for comments to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development.

In response to a General Assembly request of 1990,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary General reported in September 1991<sup>(4)</sup> on possible ways of assisting developing countries that were members of the Commission so that they might attend UNCITRAL meetings. The Secretary-General concluded that expenditures for reimbursement of travel expenses for some members of the Commission, if approved by the Assembly, could be met either from the regular budget of the United Nations or from voluntary contributions. He stated that if the Assembly decided on the latter, it might wish to establish a trust fund to which Member States would be invited to make voluntary contributions. Cost estimates for travel expenses were included in an annex to the report.

An election of members of the Commission was held by the Assembly in November (see APPENDIX III).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted two resolutions on the report of UNCITRAL. &so- lution 46/56 A was adopted without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade, as well as its resolutions 43/166 of 9 December 1988, 44/33 of 4 December 1989 and 45/42 of 28 November 1990,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would significantly contribute to universal economic cooperation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-fourth session,

Mindful of the valuable contribution to be rendered by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law within the framework of the United Nations Decade of International Law, particularly as regards the dissemination of international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciations of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its twenty-fourth session;

2. Takes note of the successful conclusion of the United Nations Conference on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade, held at Vienna from 2 to 9 April 1991, which has resulted in the adoption of the United Nations Convention on the Liability of Operators of Transport Terminals in International Trade;<sup>a</sup>

3. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to coordinate legal activities in this field in order to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law and, in this connection, recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, should continue to maintain close cooperation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

4. calls upon the Commission to continue to take account, as appropriate, of the relevant provisions of the resolutions concerning the new international economic order, as adopted by the General Assembly at its sixth and seventh special sessions;

5. Reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and assistance in the field of international trade law and the desirability for it to sponsor seminars and symposia to provide such training and assistance, and, in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to the Commission for organizing the symposium on international trade law, held in conjunction with the twenty-fourth session of the

Commission, and the regional seminar on international trade law, held at Douala, Cameroon, in January 1991, and to the Governments whose contributions enabled the symposium and the seminar to take place;

(b) Invites Governments, the relevant United Nations organs, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to the trust fund for the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law symposia and, where appropriate, to the financing of special projects, and otherwise to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries, and in the award of fellowships to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such seminars and symposia;

6. Commend the Commission on its decision to organize, as a first step in the preparation of its programme of activities for the United Nations Decade of International Law, a Congress on International Trade Law during the last week of the twenty-fifth session of the Commission, to be held in New York from 4 to 22 May 1992, and expresses the hope that all States and interested international organizations will take the opportunity to send appropriate delegates to the Congress to consider accomplishments achieved in the progressive unification and harmonization of international trade law during the past twenty-five years and the practical needs that can be foreseen for the future;

7. Repeats its invitations to those States which have not yet done so to consider signing, ratifying or acceding to the conventions elaborated under the auspices of the Commission.

General Assembly resolution 46/56 A

9 December 1991 Meeting 67 Adopted without vote

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 6th Committee 4-6, 21, 41; plenary 67.

Resolution 46/56 B was also adopted without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, by which it created the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law with a mandate to further the progressive harmonization and unification of the law of international trade and in that respect to bear in mind the interests of all peoples, in particular those of developing countries, in the extensive development of international trade,

Reaffirming the provision in resolution 2205(XXI) that the representatives of members on the Commission shall be appointed by Member States in so far as possible from among persons of eminence in the field of the law of international trade,

Recalling its resolution 3108(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, by which it expanded the membership of the Commission to thirty-six States, to include nine African States, seven Asian States, five Eastern European States, six Latin American States and nine Western European and other States, so that it would be representative of the various geographic regions and the principal legal and economic systems of the world,

Concerned about the relatively low incidence of expert representation from developing countries at sessions of the Commission and particularly of its working groups during recent years, due in part to inadequate resources to finance the travel of such experts,

Convinced that the fulfilment of the mandate of the Commission, in particular the preparation of universally acceptable legal texts, requires the active participation of representatives from all regions and the various legal and economic systems in an equitable manner, and that representatives need to have special expertise in the field of international trade law, in view of the complex and technical nature of the work of the Commission and its working groups,

Bearing in mind the arrangements on reimbursement of travel expenses that exist for certain United Nations bodies, pursuant to section IX of resolution 43/217 of 21 December 1988,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on possible ways of assisting developing countries to attend meetings of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law;

2. Requests the Fifth Committee, in order to ensure full participation by all Member States, to consider granting travel assistance, within existing resources, to the least developed countries that are members of the Commission, as well as, on an exceptional basis, to other developing countries that are members of the Commission at their request, in consultation with the Secretary-General, to enable them to participate in the sessions of the Commission and its working groups;

3. Recommends that the Commission rationalize the organization of its work and consider, in particular, the holding of consecutive meetings of its working groups;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

International trade law

Unification of trade law

International credit transfers

In considering 17 articles of the draft Model Law on International Credit Transfers as adopted by the Working Group on International Payments, the Commission<sup>(1)</sup> had before it, in 1991, reports of the Working Group of its twenty-first<sup>(5)</sup> and twenty-second sessions, two reports by the Secretary-General, one containing a compilation of comments by Governments and international organizations on the draft Model Law,<sup>(7)</sup> and the other a commentary on the draft Model Law indicating the history of the provisions and its relationship to other provisions.<sup>(8)</sup>

The Commission stated that the draft text was in general favourably received and regarded as an excellent basis for its deliberations. The text of articles 1 to 15 discussed by the Commission was referred to the Drafting Group. The Commission noted that it had not completed its consideration of the draft Model Law and thus had placed it on its 1992 agenda.

Guarantees and stand-by letters of credit

The Commission had before it the reports of its Working Group on International Contract Practices from its fourteenth<sup>(9)</sup> and fifteenth<sup>(10)</sup> sessions. It noted that the Working Group had examined draft articles 1 to 7 of the uniform law prepared by the Secretariat and other issues on the matter including: amendment, transfer, expiry, and obligations of guarantor; fraud and other objections to payment, injunctions and other court measures; and conflict of laws and jurisdiction. UNCITRAL noted that the Working Group had requested the Secretariat to prepare a revised draft of articles 1 to 7 of the uniform law, and a first set of draft articles with possible variants on the other issues considered. It further noted that, when discussing the appropriateness of including provisions on conflicts of law and jurisdiction in the uniform law, the Working Group had requested the Secretariat to consult with the Hague Conference on Private International Law on possible methods of cooperation in that field.

international counter trade

The Commission took note of the progress made in preparing a legal guide on counter trade. The Secretariat reported to UNCITRAL that, in addition to draft chapter VII on the fulfilment of counter-trade commitment,<sup>(11)</sup> the following chapters would be before the Working Group on International Payments: participation of third parties (VIII); restrictions on resale of goods (X); liquidated damages and penalty clauses (XI); failure to complete counter trade transaction (XIII); choice of law (XIV); and settlement of disputes (XV).

Coordination of work

The Commission had before it a note by the Secretariat on the activities of international organizations relating to the harmonization and unification of international trade law.<sup>(12)</sup> The note reported on the progress of the Secretariat's efforts to collect information on the extent to which multilateral and bilateral development organizations might be involved in activities which aimed to modernize commercial law in developing countries.

Training and assistance

UNCITRAL continued to cooperate and participate in seminars and symposia on international trade law. In 1991, the Commission co-sponsored a series of seminars in the member States (Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua) of the Comisión Centroamericana de Transporte Marítimo on the United Nations Convention on the Carriage of Goods by Sea, 1978, (the Hamburg Rules),<sup>(13)</sup> a regional seminar on international trade law (Douala, Cameroon, 14-18 January), and a subregional seminar on international trade law (Quito, Ecuador, 19-21 February). In cooperation with the South Pacific Forum a seminar was organized on trade law (Suva, Fiji, 21-25 October).

In resolution 46/56 A, the General Assembly reaffirmed the importance, in particular for developing countries, of such training and assistance and called for contributions to the trust fund for UNCITRAL to finance seminars and symposia.

Legal aspects of the new international economic order

In 1991, legal aspects of the new international economic order continued to be dealt with by UNCITRAL and the Sixth Committee of the General Assembly.

UNCITRAL consideration. The UNCITRAL Working Group on the New International Economic Order, at its thirteenth session (Vienna, 15-26 July),<sup>(14)</sup> reviewed draft articles 28 to 42 of the Model Law on Procurement. It requested the Secretariat to prepare a report on suspension of procurement proceedings to aid it in its further consideration of article 41. At its fourteenth session (Vienna, 2-13 December),<sup>(15)</sup> the Working Group again discussed articles 1 to 27, and 28 to 42 of the Model Law.

Report of the Secretary-General. A report of the Secretary-General in August with a later addendum,(@) submitted in response to a General Assembly request of 1989,<sup>(17)</sup> contained views and comments received from seven Member States on a 1984 UNITAR study on the codification and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order.<sup>(18)</sup>

On 9 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 46/52 by recorded vote.

Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the General Assembly is called upon to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic cooperation and 35/56 of 5 December 1980, the annex to which contains the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recalling also its resolutions 34/150 of 17 December 1979 and 35/166 of 15 December 1980, entitled "Consolidation and progressive development of the principles and norms of international economic law relating in particular to the legal aspects of the new international economic order", and its resolutions 36/107 of 10 December 1981, 37/103 of 16 December 1982, 38/128 of 19 December 1983, 39/75 of 13 December 1984, 40/67 of 11 December 1985, 41/73 of 3 December 1986, 42/149 of 7 December 1987, 43/162 of 9 December 1988 and 44/30 of 4 December 1989, entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order",

Bearing in mind the urgent need to adopt measures to reactivate the process of international economic cooperation and the negotiations undertaken for that purpose particularly in view of the economic difficulties encountered by the developing countries,

Considering the close link that exists between the establishment of a just and equitable international economic order and the existence of an appropriate legal framework,

Bearing in mind that the analytical study submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research can constitute a valuable source of information, in common with the relevant resolutions adopted on this question by various United Nations organs,

1. Considers that the impact on developing countries of the current international economic situation should be examined;

2. Notes with appreciation the views and comments submitted by Governments pursuant to resolutions 40/67, 41/73, 42/149, 43/162 and 44/30;

3. Decides to establish a working group of the Sixth Committee to develop the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order;

4. Calls upon the Secretary-General to request Member States and competent international organizations to formulate their comments, in particular on the principles which they think might be given priority attention by the working group, and to include their comments in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-eighth session the item entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

Administrative and budgetary questions

Chapter I

United Nations financing and programming

The General Assembly adopted a number of resolutions in 1991 relating to the financing of the United Nations. In December, a budget totalling $2,402,578,800 gross ($2,389,234,900 net) was agreed on to cover operational expenses of the Organization for the next two years (46/186 A). At the same time, the Assembly approved final income estimates for the 1992-1993 biennium of $449,213,300, and specified that $1,228,519,850 of the upcoming biennial appropriations be set aside for 1992 alone (46/186 B and C). A number of questions relating to the 1992-1993 programme budget were also addressed by the Assembly (46/185 A, B and C).

The Secretary-General informed the Assembly that the financial crisis of the United Nations continued unabated throughout the year. A number of Member States had withheld their annual assessments to the budget of the Organization, which, under the Charter of the United Nations they were obligated to pay in full and on time. A number of peace-keeping operations over the past four years had placed even further strains on the situation.

Of the $1,365.7 million in contributions to the United Nations regular budget payable as at 1 January 1991 (including payments for the current and prior years), $926.3 million had been collected from Member States as of 31 December, leaving $439.9 million outstanding.

In 1991, the Secretary-General outlined a number of proposals aimed at easing the problem. However, he repeatedly stressed that prompt and full payment of assessments was vital to achieving a long-term solution.

A machine scale of assessments, a method to determine the amount of payments due to the regular budget from each Member State, was agreed by the Assembly for 1992, 1993 and 1994, as prepared by the Committee on Contributions (46/221 A). Using the capacity to pay as the main criterion for determining the scale, the Committee's calculations took into account data on national income, population and monetary exchange rates of Member States for the period 1980-1989. Information was also used regarding the external debt of countries eligible for debt relief adjustment.

The Committee on Contributions was requested to continue improving the methodology for future scales, paying special attention to the scheme of limits (used to minimize wide fluctuations between successive scales), the application of the price-adjusted rate of currency exchange, and the current 10-year base period used for statistical averages (46/221 B, C and D).

A net increase to the 1990-1991 programme budget of $15 million was also adopted by the Assembly, bringing the total net requirements for that biennium to $1,767,318,300. The increase consisted of $33,902,400 more in expenditures, which was offset by an $18,902,400 rise in income. The Secretary-General was authorized to enter into commitments for an additional $13,867,100, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (46/184).

The Assembly established the Working Capital Fund for 1992-1993 at the level of $100 million. As in past years, it was to be used by the United Nations to finance appropriations pending receipt of assessed contributions and to pay unforeseen costs (46/188).

The accounts and financial statements for either the year or the biennium ending 31 December 1990 for six United Nations development and humanitarian assistance programmes were accepted by the General Assembly in 1991, along with the audit opinions of the United Nations Board of Auditors (46/183).

In addition, the Assembly adopted resolutions related to programme planning (46/189), unforeseen expenses (46/187) and the rationalization of the work of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee. Decisions were taken on subjects related to accounting standards for the Organization and its specialized agencies (46/445), the Joint Inspection Unit (46/446), the report of the Economic and Social Council (46/447), the effects of inflation on the budget of the Organization (46/451), the review of the efficiency of the United Nations (46/467), and revised estimates for the 1990-1991 budget (46/452).

In June 1991, the Assembly adopted a resolution during its resumed forty-fifth session relating to the administrative and budgetary aspects of financing United Nations peace-keeping operations (45/258).

United Nations financing

Financial situation

The failure of a number of Member States to pay their assessed contributions in full and on time over the past several years had made bankruptcy a very real possibility for the Organization, the Secretary-General stated in a report of 24 October on the financial situation of the United Nations.<sup>(1)</sup> Despite several warnings and repeated appeals for payment by the Secretary-General, only a small fraction of the Organization's membership had fulfilled their monetary obligations by the end of September.

As of 30 September, $723.5 million was owed to the regular budget in unpaid assessed contributions, the report stated. Of that, $389.9 million was due for the current year, while $333.6 million was still due for 1990 and prior years. With respect to peace-keeping operations, unpaid assessed contributions amounted to $518.2 million at the same date. Together, the amount in arrears totalled $1,241.7 million at the end of the third quarter of 1991.

To meet operating expenses, the Secretary-General had drawn about $236 million from the cash reserves of the Organization over the year. When those reserves were depleted in August, he was then obliged to borrow from the few peace-keeping funds which had cash in excess of their immediate requirements. That money was used to cover the operating expenses of both the regular budget and other new peace-keeping operations.

In September, an urgent appeal by the Secretary-General to Member States resulted in contributions that allowed for repayment to the peace-keeping funds and also met the operating expenses of the regular budget through the end of November.

This lack of sufficient resources had created a dangerous situation, the Secretary-General told the General Assembly in a report of 19 November.<sup>(2)</sup> The Organization's membership had continued to expand the United Nations responsibilities; however, those responsibilities could not be fulfilled without the proper funding. It was no longer feasible nor sensible, he said, to employ the stopgap measures that had been used in recent years to avoid financial disaster.

The pattern of contribution payments had deteriorated steadily over the last few years, the Secretary-General stated. For example, only 57 States had paid their regular budget contributions in full as of 30 September 1991, compared to 60 in 1990 and 64 in 1989. Also, 61 owed more than their current year's assessment at the end of the 1991 third quarter, while 56 were in that category in 1990 and 50 in 1989.

The growing number of peace-keeping operations had contributed to yet another facet to the financial problem, the Secretary-General said. It was becoming increasingly difficult to obtain sufficient contributions to keep them funded adequately.

At the time of the report, there were seven such operations financed by assessed contributions: the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF), the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL), the United Nations Angola Verification Mission (UNAVEM II), the United Nations Observer Group in Central America (ONUCA), the United Nations Iraq-Kuwait Observation Mission (UNIKOM), the United Nations Mission for the Referendum in Western Sahara (MINURSO) and the United Nations Observer Group in El Salvador (ONUSAL). Three completed operations still showed outstanding contributions totalling $4.7 million: the United Nations Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group (UNHMOG), the United Nations Angola Verification Mission (UNAVEM I) and the United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG).

It was estimated that by the end of the year $205 million would be owed to Member States that had contributed tips to peace-keeping operations, since the United Nations had entered into agreements to reimburse those countries for their services. Thus, Members that participated militarily continued to bear the burden of the shortfalls in payments for the operations financed by assessments.

The Secretary-General also stressed that his report on the financial situation of peace-keeping operations did not include the projected requirements for the United Nations Advance Mission in Cambodia (UNAMIC), which was estimated to cost about $19 million for the first six months, nor for the operation following the Advance Mission.

Several measures to relieve the situation, beyond the prompt and full payment of assessments, were proposed by the Secretary-General. He suggested that the United Nations begin charging interest at commercial rates to those Members that did not pay their contributions within 60 days after issuance of a letter of assessment. In addition, the financial regulation calling for the return of budgetary surpluses to Member States at the end of a financial period should be suspended. The Working Capital Fund, established in 1946 to provide the Secretary-General with sufficient financial liquidity,<sup>(3)</sup> should be increased from $100 million to $250 million as of 1 January 1992. The Secretary-General also suggested that he be authorized to seek commercial loans when all other forms of internal borrowing were exhausted.

Another proposal called for a separate reserve fund of $50 million to be set up as of 1 January 1992 to act as a working capital fund for peace-keeping operations. The initial money for that fund would come from the residual balances of UNTAG ($30 million) and UNHMOG ($20 million).

As a solution to the problem of financing peace-keeping activities, particularly when the United Nations needed to act quickly, the Secretary-General proposed establishing a United Nations Peace Endowment Fund with a target level of $1 billion. Once that level was met, the proceeds from the fund's investments would be used to help cover operational costs. Thirty per cent of the target level, or $300 million, should be made available in 1992, approx-tioned to Member States in accordance with the special scale of assessment applied to peace-keeping operations. Voluntary contributions would also be sought for the fund from Governments, public and private organizations and individuals.

Similarly, to enable the Organization to respond quickly to humanitarian and disaster emergencies, a Humanitarian Revolving Fund with an initial balance of $50 million should be set up by the Assembly. Monies could be used pending receipt of pledged contributions, and the fund would be replenished as collections were made in response to appeals.

In a December report,<sup>(4)</sup> the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) stated that the proposals made by the Secretary-General to alleviate the Organization's cash-flow problems were long range in view and did not address the immediate situation. Commenting on his suggestions, ACABQ said that it was indeed time to consider charging interest on overdue assessments. However, a detailed plan of such a system, plus a full study of why the problem existed, should be conducted before such a plan was put into effect.

The Assembly would need to make a policy decision related to establishing a Peace Endowment Fund and a Humanitarian Revolving Fund before the questions of its level and operational procedures could be reported on, ACABQ added. With respect to commercial borrowing, ACABQ continued to stand by its belief that such action would be imprudent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 23 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided to defer action on the agenda items related to the current financial crisis of the United Nations and the financial emergency of the Organization until the resumed forty-sixth session of the Assembly.

Financing of peace-keeping operations

At the resumption of its forty-fifth session in June 1991, the General Assembly took up the question of the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations. In doing so, it examined several reports on the matter that had been submitted by the Secretary-General during 1990.

A review of the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States was submitted by the Secretary-General in December 1990,<sup>(5)</sup> pursuant to a request made by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(6)</sup> The standard rates that had first been set in October 1973 were revised in 1977 and again in 1980. The rates had been calculated to ensure that no troop-contributing Government received payments greater than overall costs. They were designed to reimburse all troop-contributing States for at least that portion of the cost which was paid to troops as actual overseas allowances.

At the time the current rates were established in 1980, troop-contributing States absorbed an average of 45.9 per cent of the total costs of pay and allowances, the report said, but by 1988 the average absorption factor had decreased to 23.3 per cent. If the earlier percentage were to be retained, a relative increase in rates of 4 per cent was currently necessary.

In September 1990, the Secretary-General submitted a report<sup>(7)</sup> on the establishment of a peace-keeping operations support account, as had been requested by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(8)</sup> Such an account would cover the costs of "overload posts"—posts that supplemented the provisions under the regular budget for managerial, legal, technical and administrative support and backstopping of good offices and peace-keeping operations.

Under the proposal, all future budgets of good offices and peace-keeping operations which were financed outside the regular budget would set aside a fixed percentage rate of their civilian component costs. That money would be used to cover salaries, common staff costs and travel expenses of overload posts. The funds would be kept in a separate ongoing account, against which temporary posts would then be established.

In order to set up the support account as of 1991, the Secretary-General suggested that each of the budgets of the current peace-keeping operations provide an amount equal to the average ratio in 1990 of the cost of overload posts against the cost of the civilian establishment in each mission area. UNTAG would be excluded from the exercise. Such a fund was estimated to total about $7 million gross ($5.6 million net) at 1991 rates.

In its comments on the matter, ACABQ recommended that the Assembly approve the establishment of the support account.<sup>(9)</sup>

The feasibility and cost-effectiveness of a reserve stock of equipment and supply items for peace-keeping operations were examined in an October report<sup>(10)</sup> of the Secretary-General, as requested by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(8)</sup> About $15 million would be needed to acquire commonly used equipment and supplies for two regular infantry battalions (each consisting of up to 700 all ranks) and their support elements, in a traditional peace-keeping force environment. Such a stock would enable rapid deployment and start-up of the various components of newly established operations in their mission areas.

ACABQ responded that the establishment of a reserve stock might prove beneficial.<sup>(9)</sup> It believed that, in many instances, the stock's requirements could be met from the disposition of UNTAG property. The Secretary-General was also urged to identify other possibilities for acquiring the necessary equipment through voluntary contributions, and to report his findings to ACABQ in 1991.

The Secretary-General also submitted a report in September 1990 on the use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations,<sup>(11)</sup> which had been requested by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(12)</sup> The Secretary-General proposed that civilian personnel provided by Governments be treated in the same manner as military personnel. Individual or small groups of civilians would thus receive travel costs and a daily subsistence allowance from the United Nations; their basic salary and any allowances paid by the contributing Governments would not be reimbursed by the Organization. For larger groups of civilian personnel (e.g., medical units, maintenance units, etc.), contributing Governments would be reimbursed the standard rates for troop costs.

In its comments on the report, ACABQ suggested that the policy of payment to civilian personnel be kept under review, taking into account the operational requirements of the forthcoming peace-keeping operations.<sup>(9)</sup>

On 3 May 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 45/258 without vote.

Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 44/192 of 21 December 1989 on the administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations,

Recalling also its resolution 44/49 of 8 December 1989 on the comprehensive review of the whole question of peace-keeping operations in all their aspects,

Recalling further its resolution 45/75 of 11 December 1990, particularly paragraph 13 thereof, on the composition of peace-keeping operations,

Having considered with appreciation the reports of the Secretary-General on the review of the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States, the support account for peace-keeping operations, the feasibility and cost-effectiveness of a reserve stock of equipment and supply items for United Nations peace-keeping activities, the use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Bearing in mind the views expressed by Member States on those reports at its forty-fifth session,

Noting the significant increase in United Nations peace-keeping activities and the resulting increased demands on the human, material and financial resources of the Organization and Member States,

Reiterating its great concern at the extremely difficult financial situation of some of the existing peace-keeping operations and at the heavy burden on troop-contributing States,

Re-emphasizing the need to ensure a sound financial and administrative basis for peace-keeping operations,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide peace-keeping operations with the necessary financial resources, especially those essential for the start-up of such operations, to enable them to fulfil their mandates in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

1. Continues to urge all Member States to make every possible effort to ensure payment of their assessed contributions to peace-keeping operations in full and on time, in accordance with their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Affirms the importance of administering peace-keeping operations with the maximum of efficiency and economy;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to improve coordination within the peace-keeping-related units in the Secretariat in order to enhance the efficiency of peace-keeping operations and to ensure better communication with States in order to assist the latter in responding promptly to the financial and administrative requirements of the operations, particularly those of the start-up phase;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to make every possible effort to broaden the participation of countries in United Nations peace-keeping operations;

5. Takes note of the observations made by the Secretary-General on the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States, and the related comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

6. Decides that, as an interim measure, the standard rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States shall be increased by 4 per cent beginning 1 July 1991;

7. Invites States contributing personnel (civilian and military), equipment and services that can afford to do so to consider the possibility of providing them, in whole or in part, on a voluntary basis;

8. Invites States to make voluntary contributions to the United Nations peace-keeping operations both in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General, to be administered, as appropriate, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 44/192 A;

9. Takes note of the observations and proposals of the Secretary-General on the technical guidelines relating to the use and operation of the support account for peace-keeping operations, and approves its establishment effective 1 January 1990, subject to the observations of the Advisory Committee;

10. Also takes note of the proposals of the Secretary-General to establish a reserve stock of commonly used equipment and supply items for United Nations peace-keeping operations, and concurs with the views of the Advisory Committee in this regard;

11. Endorses the proposals made by the Secretary-General on the use of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations, taking into account the comments of the Advisory Committee, subject to the policy and criteria of payment to such personnel and the reimbursement to the contributing States being kept under review as recommended by the Advisory Committee;

12. Reiterates its concurrence with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee that standard administrative procedures to govern the provision of civilian personnel in peace-keeping operations should be established, consistent with existing rules and practices and taking into consideration the practical and legal concerns and the experience gained in the newly established peace-keeping operations;

13. Requests the Secretary-General and the Advisory Committee to report to the General Assembly, as appropriate, on the presentation of data by troop-contributing States on the rates of reimbursement, the support account for peace-keeping operations, the reserve stock of commonly used equipment and supply items and the use of civilians in peace-keeping operations;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to review the present practices and approaches regarding the calculation of expenditures incurred by the United Nations in the conduct of peace-keeping operations, including the financial arrangements of the Organization with Governments in respect of such calculations, and to report thereon, with recommendations for possible improvements, to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-sixth session the item entitled "Administrative and budgetary aspects of the financing of the United Nations peace-keeping operations".

Efficiency review

The greatest challenge facing the Secretariat was the need to respond effectively to ever-increasing demands and new mandates while simultaneously operating in a constrained budgetary environment, the Secretary-General said in a report of November 1991 on efficiency improvements being made in the Organization.<sup>(13)</sup>

The report documented the progress being made in several areas of the United Nations system, including human resources, conference services, the use of technology, workload analysis and the economic, social and humanitarian sectors.

To handle effectively the growing number of peace-keeping operations, many of which were becoming longer in duration and more complex, the Secretary-General had established a senior-level monitoring and planning group. In that regard, the Secretary-General had recommended appointing a high-level official to assist him in dealing with emergency operations in Africa. Also, reviews on the organizational structure were being initiated in the Centre for Human Rights and in the economic commissions for Africa, Europe and Asia and the Pacific. In addition, a number of operational offices involved in humanitarian assistance were strengthening their emergency capacity.

Also in November, the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Assembly on the extra-budgetary resources of the United Nations.<sup>(14)</sup> As a result of decisions taken over the years, the regular budget accounted for only a portion of the expenses of the Organization, while the balance was being financed from extrabudgetary funds. The latter consisted of both assessed contributions (such as those for peace-keeping operations) and voluntary contributions.

Tracing the development of this trend, the Secretary-General said that the current practice was for peace-keeping activities to be financed through ad hoc arrangements. As for the financing of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), core activities were paid for through the regular budget, while emergency operations were covered by voluntary funding. In addition, it had become common practice to finance the bulk of technical cooperation activities from voluntary contributions.

The trend had raised the question of whether such contributions influenced the collective membership in setting priorities for a specific budgetary period, because in fact extrabudgetary voluntary funds were used to supplement regular budget resources for activities to which one or more Governments attached particular importance. Another question that had arisen was whether having voluntary funds for activities properly belonging to the regular budget should be the basis for reducing the regular budget supporting those activities.

While voluntary contributions were important to the overall financing of the Organization, the Secretary-General pointed out that both their amounts and their timeliness were often unpredictable, as was the ability to forecast them accurately. Also, the source of the funding might restrict ways in which the money could be used.

In July, a follow-up report of the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) on the Management Advisory Service of the United Nations was submitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General.<sup>(15)</sup> JIU said that the Service no longer functioned as an independent entity, as had been originally envisaged at its inception in 1977. It proposed a number of changes aimed at revitalizing the Service, which included: authorizing the re-establishment of four professional posts at the senior level, ensuring that the Service submit a biennial programme of work to the Under-Secretary-General for Administration and Management and to ACABQ prior to its inclusion in the biennial programme budget, and having the Service submit a biennial report on its work to the Assembly.

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, by decision 46/467, deferred consideration of the workload analysis techniques and the extra-budgetary resources until the resumption of its forty-sixth session.

UN budget

Budget for 1990-1991

In a December 1991 report,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General summarized the financial results of the 1990-1991 biennium. On the basis of that report and oral comments by ACABQ,<sup>(2)</sup> the Assembly in December approved a net increase of $15 million to the 1990-1991 programme budget. This brought the total net requirements for that biennium to $1,767,318,300. The increase consisted of $33,902,400 more in expenditures, which was offset by a rise in income of $18,902,400.

Originally, the Secretary-General had shown in his report that the increase represented an increase of 1.65 per cent ($28,867,100) over the amount approved for the biennium by the Assembly in 1990.<sup>(3)</sup> That increase comprised additional expenditures of $47,769,500, which were partly offset by the increase in income.

The bulk of the increase was due to salary and other staff costs amounting to $46,457,800, the Secretary-General said. There was a projected decrease in expenditure of $10,091,700 related to more favourable dollar exchange rates during 1991; however, those savings were entirely eclipsed by high inflation that raised expenses to $10,133,600. Of the approved increase, $7.6 million related to a 9.9 per cent rise in salaries for the General Service staff at Geneva. Further contributing factors included post adjustments in Nairobi, Kenya, that were higher than anticipated, plus the effects of a General Service salary survey in Bangkok, Thailand.

An additional $5,991,700 was needed in order to implement decisions by policy-making organs. Commitments for that purpose had been made under the terms of a 1989 Assembly resolution on unforeseen expenditures for the biennium 1990-1991.<sup>(4)</sup> Also, under the heading of "other changes", $41,735,100 more was required, including $20 million for a projected increase in staff assessment and $7.5 million in higher costs for Field Service posts. Those increases were the direct result of new salary scales and of the mobility and hardship allowance approved by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(5)</sup>

A total of approximately $4.8 million was required for expenses related to the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA). A $3.1 million shortfall was projected in the cost of after-service health insurance coverage.

In an oral report given in December, the Chairman of ACABQ recommended that the Assembly appropriate a net amount of $15 million and that it authorize the Secretary-General to enter into commitments for the remaining $13,867,100, subject to the prior concurrence of ACABQ.<sup>(2)</sup>

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolutions 46/184 A and C. It adopted resolution 46/184 A without vote.

1990-1991 income sources

An increase in revenue of $18,902,400, reported by the Secretary-General in a December 1991 report,<sup>(*)</sup> consisted of a rise in staff assessment plus higher income than expected from revenue-producing activities such as the sale of publications and philatelic items. That increase had been partially offset by an additional expenditure of $3.1 million, representing the cost of the first phase of the renovation of the Headquarters basement, the Chairman of ACABQ said in his December oral report.<sup>(2)</sup>

Revised estimates for 1990-1991

On 20 December, the Assembly, by decision 46/452, deferred action on the proposed renovation of the first basement concourse of the Secretariat building at Headquarters until a later stage. The first phase of the renovation had been estimated at a cost of $3.1 million.

Budget for 1992-1993

Appropriations for the United Nations programme budget for 1992-1993 totalling $2,402,578,800 gross ($2,389,234,900 net) were adopted by the General Assembly in December 1991. Income estimates totalling $449, 213, 300 from sources other than assessments on Member States were also approved. Member States were to be assessed $1,953,365,500 for the biennium.

The Assembly based its action on three separate components. First, the Secretary-General in September submitted his proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993,<sup>(6)</sup> requesting funds totalling $2,362,977,700. In December, the Fifth Committee took actions based on recommendations from ACABQ that reduced the proposed expenditures to $2,355,680,500.<sup>(7)</sup> Due to the changes in inflation and currency exchange rates reported by the Secretary-General in December,<sup>(8)</sup> that figure was finally revised upward to $2,402,578,800.

The budget documents were presented to the Assembly through the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) and ACABQ, which made their recommendations following an item-by-item examination of the programme budget proposals. Each budget revision was examined by ACABQ.

The original resources requested for 1992-1993 reflected an increase of $228,905,600 over the revised appropriation for the biennium 1990-1991, the Secretary-General said. This would translate into a real growth rate of 0.9 per cent. The amount included provisions to add 81 more posts to the staffing table of the Organization for the biennium, at a cost of $9,196,400.

The proposed 1992-1993 programme budget was divided into 11 separate parts, 10 of which largely corresponded to the 10 major programmes of the 1992-1997 medium-term plan.<sup>(9)</sup> Those parts contained a total of 36 budget expenditure sections.

The two parts of the proposed programme budget that had received the highest rates of real growth were human rights and humanitarian affairs (4.3 per cent), and political affairs (1.9 per cent). Individual sections within those parts that were slated for a rate of real growth above 2 per cent were: development and international economic cooperation (16.5 per cent); human rights (10.9 per cent); political and General Assembly affairs and Secretariat services (5.4 per cent); international drug control (4.9 per cent); the United Nations Environment Programme (4.5 per cent); the International Court of Justice (3.9 per cent); disaster relief (3.2 per cent); The United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (3 per cent); ECA (2.7 per cent); and protection of and assistance to refugees (2.2 per cent).

A negative real growth rate was proposed for three sections: legal activities (-0.7 per cent); the Centre for Science and Technology for Development (-0.6 per cent); and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) (-0.5 per cent).

Also included in the proposed programme budget were projections that $3,083,632,600 would be the expected level of extrabudgetary resources during 1992-1993. This represented a nominal increase of 4.7 per cent over the estimated level for 1990-1991.

Appropriations

The $2,389,234,900 in appropriations approved by the General Assembly under the expenditure sections of the 1992-1993 budget was distributed among the 11 parts of the programme budget as follows: common support services, 36.6 per cent; international cooperation for development, 13.9 per cent; staff assessment, 13.8 per cent; regional cooperation for development, 11.8 per cent; political affairs, 5.7 per cent; capital expenditure, 4.4 per cent; public affairs, 4.3 per cent; human rights and humanitarian affairs, 4 per cent; international justice and law, 2.1 per cent; special expenses, 1.9 per cent; and overall policy-making, direction and coordination, 1.5 per cent.

Overall, staff costs represented 61.8 per cent of the budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the expenditures sections of the 1992-1993 budget, comprising the appropriations for the biennium, were adopted without vote by the General Assembly on 20 December 1991 as resolution 46/186 A.

Questions on the 1992-1993 programme budget

In December, the General Assembly adopted omnibus resolutions on questions related to the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993 (resolutions 46/185 A-C). The Assembly took into consideration the input and comments of CPC<sup>(10)</sup> and ACABQ.<sup>(11)</sup>

The resolutions included 42 separate sections covering individual areas of the proposed budget. Several of the questions in the resolutions are discussed in PART SIX, Chapters II and III.

In resolution 46/185 C, the Assembly dealt with various sections of the proposed programme budget, addressing specific issues in each. Under the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs, the proposed programme budget provided for $1,432,300 under the regular budget for preparing the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development. In a note submitted to the Assembly in November 1991,<sup>(12)</sup> the Secretary-General outlined the administrative and financial arrangements for the Conference, which had been decided on in principle by the Economic and Social Council in 1989.<sup>(13)</sup>

In a note on conference servicing of intergovernmental bodies convened at Nairobi,<sup>(14)</sup> the Secretary-General requested that $150,000 be added to the 1992-1993 regular budget to pay for conference service staff covering meetings of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP). He also recommended an additional appropriation of $73,000 for processing the pre-session documentation in Chinese for the meetings of the Commission on Human Settlements.

The Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in November<sup>(15)</sup> a report on the organization of editorial services at Headquarters, as suggested by CPC in May (see PART SIX, Chapter III).

Economic Commission for Africa

In a November 1990 report<sup>(16)</sup> on the functioning of the Multinational Programming and Operational Centres (MULPOCs) of ECA, the Secretary-General outlined the main features of the five existing centres located in Cameroon, Morocco, the Niger, Rwanda and Zambia. As part of ECA, the function of the centres was to promote subregional economic cooperation and integration.

There was a consensus among member States of the region that MULPOCs had been successful in supporting institution-building efforts, the report stated; however, the initial objectives set out for the centres had not been adequately met. As the lack of resources was at the core of MULPOCs' troubles, the Secretary-General recommended that eight Professional and 10 General Service posts be added to the staff resources at the centres. The cost of the posts, to be included in the 1992-1993 proposed programme budget, was estimated at $902,300.

In its comments on the question, ACABQ reported that it had requested and received from the Secretary-General a more complete staffing table for the centres.<sup>(11)</sup>

The report of a review team on the development issues and policies programme of ECA was submitted by the Secretary-General to the Economic and Social Council through CPC in April 1991,<sup>(17)</sup> as requested by CPC in 1990. The report examined the principal mandates of the programme and summarized findings of previous evaluations of the MULPOCs and the Pan-African Documentation and Information System (PADIS). It also discussed the effects of extrabudgetary resources on ECA programmes.

MULPOCS had failed to establish a strong professional presence in the subregions of Africa, the report stated, mainly because the available expertise often did not match the priorities of the member States, while funding for MULPOCS had been grossly inadequate. To rectify the situation, the Secretary-General recommended that MULPOCs become part of the process of decentralizing activities and resources of all ECA programmes with subregional activities, through greater subregional cooperation coordinated with country priorities and strategies. Furthermore, he said, the programmes' strategies needed to be reworked and they should be provided with adequate resources.

In November, the Secretary-General submitted a note to the Assembly on the self-evaluation capacity of ECA.<sup>(18)</sup> He stated that this capacity required improvement, but that the functions could be performed by the Programme Planning and Coordination Office pending that action. A report on strengthening self-evaluation within ECA would be submitted to the Assembly in 1992.

1. Recalls its resolution 45/255 of 21 December 1990, by which it established provisionally the level of the contingency fund of the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993 at a level of 0.75 per cent of the preliminary estimate of 2,462,400,000 dollars, that is, 19 million dollars:

2. 'Takes note of the adjustment made by the Secretary-General to the preliminary estimates from 2,462,400,000 dollars to 2,366,300,000 dollars, and decides that the revised level of the contingency fund stands at 18 million dollars;

Underutilized balances

ACABQ noted in its report on the 1992-1993 proposed programme budget<sup>(11)</sup> that $21.5 million remained in the budget base for 1992-1993, carried over from previous bienniums as underutilized balances. Under those circumstances, it said, every effort should be made to absorb any additional costs that might arise that were not subject to the procedures for the use of the contingency fund. Efforts should also be made to apply more flexibility in transferring funds between sections of the budget.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section III of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

Underutilized balances

1. Endorses as an ad hoc measure the reduction of 13,343,900 United States dollars recommended by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the basis of underutilized balances;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to bear in mind that the across-the-board reductions under each section resulting from the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on the underutilized balances are indicative and to consider, in implementing these recommendations, the requirements of programmes and services of the various units in the Secretariat;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to use the first performance report on the programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993 to reflect his proposed transfers of resources among sections of the programme budget, in accordance with the existing financial regulations and rules and the recommendations of the Advisory Committee contained in the relevant part of paragraph 22 of its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993;

Programme budget

In its October report,<sup>(10)</sup> CPC noted that the proposed programme budget had been prepared within the existing structures of the Organization. In the view of CPC, it needed to include further specific administrative and budgetary measures to enhance the cost-effectiveness and efficiency of the Organization. In addition, the proposed programme budget contained in different sections activities with similar objectives. In that regard, more effort should be made to rationalize its presentation.

In regard to extrabudgetary resources, ACABQ reiterated a request it had made in 1989 that the Secretary-General develop a more accurate and timely way to forecast the level of those resources.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section IV of resolution 446/185 B without vote.

[The General Assembly ...]

Activities in the proposed programme budget

1. Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination contained in paragraphs 31 to 33 and 52 of its report

2. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake a review of the possible consolidation of administrative functions in the various units of the Secretariat and to submit proposals thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to review the distribution of resources between substantive central departments and offices and the regional commissions, taking into account the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions 32/197 of 20 December 1977 and 41/213 of 19 December 1986, and to reflect his recommendations in the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995;

4. Notes that the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993 does not provide a list of activities that, in the judgement of the Secretary-General, can be discontinued, and requests the Secretary-General, in the implementation of the programme budget, to take into account measures that may improve the cost-effectiveness and efficiency of the Organization, thereby enhancing its capacity and flexibility to respond effectively to needs and mandates;

5. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to develop workload standards and other management techniques, particularly in the context of the preparation of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1994-1995;

6. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on priority-setting contained in paragraphs 45 to 47 of its report, notes that the broad priority on the economic development of developing countries pertains to a large number of sections of the programme budget, and stresses the importance of ensuring adequate resources for the implementation of mandated activities under each section of the programme budget;

7. Notes that objectives of the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997 and specific mandates of the General Assembly are not always fully reflected in the programme narratives and activities of some sections of the proposed programme budget, and requests the Secretary-General fully to take into account the views expressed by Member States in implementing the programme budget and in proposing revisions to the medium-term plan;

8. Also notes the growing role of extrabudgetary resources in the implementation of the programmes of the Organization, the progress achieved in the presentation of these resources in the programme budget, the impact of voluntary contributions on a number of sub-programmes in the economic and social fields and the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraphs 71 and 72 of its report with regard to the need for greater transparency, and decides to keep this question under constant review;

9. Further notes that the estimates in the proposed programme budget do not reflect the possible consequences for the activities financed from the regular budget of the decisions taken by the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme on new successor arrangements, recognizes that for sections of the programme budget, such as those pertaining to the Department of Technical Cooperation for Development and the regional commissions, these new arrangements are likely to affect the projected level of resources in 1993 and perhaps in 1992, and invites the Secretary-General to keep the situation under constant review and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, in the most appropriate form;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to review the costs of services provided by the United Nations to activities financed from extrabudgetary resources and to provide an analysis of appropriate sources of funding for these costs, taking into account relevant intergovernmental decisions and resolutions and existing practices in this regard;

11. Also requests the Secretary-General to work in close collaboration with the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme in the preparation of the report and to take into account paragraph 37 of decision 91/46 of 21 June 1991 of the Governing Council of the Programme;

12. Requests that the two reports be reviewed by the Advisory Committee;

1992-1993 programme budget

CPC held its thirty-first session in New York from 13 May to 12 June 1991. During the session, it conducted an in-depth examination of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993 and submitted its findings in a report of 31 October.<sup>(10)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section I of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

The General Assembly ...

Endorses the conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993, contained in paragraphs 11 to 391 of its report on the work of its thirty-first session, including general considerations, overall resource requirements, priorities, methodology and format;

Methodology of the programme budget

In its October report,<sup>(10)</sup> CPC made several recommendations regarding the methodology used to arrive at the programme budget. It said that the Secretary-General should convene an ad hoc technical seminar to review questions on the methodology, and that the budget format should be restructured in order to provide more information on its programmatic content. CPC also recommended the establishment of a system of accountability for programme managers, plus a clear formulation of programme objectives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section VIII of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

Seminar on the methodology for the preparation of the programme budget

1. Endorses the recommendation of the Committee for Programme and Coordination contained in paragraph 49 of its report, on the convening by the Secretary-General of an ad hoc technical seminar to review the question of the methodology used for the preparation of the programme budget, and recommends that this seminar take place during the first part of 1992;

2. Also endorses the recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Coordination, contained in paragraphs 53, 400 and 401 of its report, concerning the submission of a prototype of a new budget format, through the Committee for Programme and Coordination and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

Financing of the Working Capital Fund

The General Assembly in December 1991 established the Working Capital Fund for the 1992-1993 biennium at the level of $100 million. The provisions of the authorizing resolution (see below) corresponded to those approved in 1989 for the previous biennium.<sup>(20)</sup> As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations pending receipt of assessed contributions and to pay unforeseen costs.

In his November report on the financial situation of the Organization,<sup>(21)</sup> the Secretary-General requested that the Fund be increased from $100 million to $250 million. He pointed out that the level of the Fund had originally been considered in relation to total appropriations. At its current level, the Fund equalled less than one month of regular budget requirements. The difficulty in collecting assessments had contributed to the Secretary-General's belief that the Fund should be increased. Setting the level at $250 million would be equivalent to about 25 per cent of the net annual level of the regular budget, or approximately three months' requirement.

Increasing the level of the Fund could not be viewed as even a partial solution to the financial difficulties of the United Nations. ACABQ had stated in a December 1990 report on the financial crisis of the Organization.<sup>(22)</sup> Moreover, implementing such an increase prior to correcting the problem could exacerbate the situation, since the outstanding obligations of certain Member States might even increase as a result. ACABQ therefore recommended that a decision to increase the level of the Fund only be taken when Member States fully honoured their financial obligations to the Organization; it was that principle of payment which constituted the underpinning of the financial health of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 46/188 without vote.

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1992-1993

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 1992-1993 in the amount of 100 million United States dollars;

2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 1992;

3. There shall be set off against this allocation of advances:

(a) Credits to Member States resulting from transfers made in 1959 and 1960 from surplus account to the Working Capital Fund in an adjusted amount of 1,025,092 dollars;

(b) Cash advances paid by Member States to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1990-1991 under General Assembly resolution 44/204 of 21 December 1989;

4. Should the credits and advances paid by any Member State to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1990-1991 exceed the amount of that Member State's advance under the provisions of paragraph 2 above, the excess shall be set off against the amount of the contributions payable by the Member State in respect of the biennium 1992-1993;

5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:

(a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for the purpose;

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments which may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 46/187 of 20 December 1991 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as may be necessary to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities, which, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed 200,000 dollars; advances in excess of the total of 200,000 dollars may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund,

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 above prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 1992-1993, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 1341(XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

Contributions

Scale of assessments

The fifty-first session of the Committee on Contributions, held in New York from 3 to 28 June 1991,<sup>(1)</sup> decided on a machine scale of assessments for a period to be determined by the General Assembly, as had been requested by the Assembly in 1990.<sup>(2)</sup> The machine scale was the method or formula to be applied in determining the level of contribution of each Member State, based on its capacity to pay.

The Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia and the Republic of Korea joined the United Nations as Member States on 17 September 1991. The Committee recommended that they contribute at the rate of one ninth of 0.05, 0.06, 0.11, 0.13, 0.01, 0.01 and 0.69 per cent, respectively, for their portion of the year of admission. The contributions of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Korea would be adjusted by one ninth of the flat fee paid for their participation in United Nations activities as a non-member State for 1991.

Scale preparation

The Committee, following its mandate to make the capacity to pay the main criterion for determining the scale,<sup>(3)</sup> applied various factors in calculating assessments, including national income, population, external debt and monetary exchange rates for the period 1980-1989. Data were provided by the United Nations Statistical Office and information from the World Bank was used regarding the external debt of countries eligible for debt relief adjustment.

Other components of the methodology of the scale included: the low per capita income allowance formula, reducing the national income on the basis of two parameters—an upper per capita income limit of $2,600 and the relief gradient of 85 per cent; a 0.01 per cent floor rate and a 25 per cent ceiling rate; and a scheme of limits to avoid excessive variation of an individual Member's rate between successive scales. The rates for the least developed countries would not exceed 0.01 per cent.

The upper per capita income limit used in formulating the lower income allowance was raised by the Committee from $2,200 for 1989-1991 to $2,600, pursuant to a 1990 request by the Assembly to examine the appropriate level of adjustment for that limit.<sup>(4)</sup> Those countries with per capita income below the upper per capita limit benefited from having their national income figures reduced prior to being calculated into the scale. The reduction equalled 85 per cent of the percentage difference between the country's per capita income and the upper per capita limit.

The Fifth Committee was advised by the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions that the rate used to exchange national income figures of each Member State into United States dollars was provided by the International Monetary Fund (IMF). However, the Committee also selectively employed the price-adjusted rate of exchange (PARE) to identify countries whose rate activity over time did not reflect domestic price changes. As Afghanistan, Iraq, Iran, Lebanon, Nicaragua, Peru and Uganda were shown as having extreme distortions of 40 per cent or more in their rates of exchange, PARE was used in determining their assessments.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 46/221 A without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recognising the obligations of Member States, under Article 17 of the Charter of the United Nations, to bear the expenses of the Organization as apportioned by the General Assembly

1. Resolves that the scale of assessments for the contributions of Member States to the regular budget of the United Nations for the years 1992, 1993 and 1994 shall be as follows, unless a new scale is approved earlier by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Committee on Contributions, should the Committee, in accordance with its mandate and the rules of procedure of the Assembly, so recommend, on the basis of substantial changes in relative capacity to pay, taking into account, as appropriate, representations made by Member States and/or its ongoing work on methodology as requested in resolution 46/221 B below:

<sup>a</sup>The assessment rates of the Republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania are to be determined by the Committee on Contributions during its fifty-second session, taking into account the results of the study of the International Monetary Fund in progress. The assessment rates will be deducted from the assessment rate of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of 9.41 per cent and will be retroactive for the assessments of the three Member States for the purposes of paragraph 2 (b) below for 1991 and for the duration of the scale.

2. Resolves also that:

(a) In accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the scale of assessments given in paragraph 1 above shall be reviewed by the Committee on Contributions in 1994, or earlier as specified in paragraph 1 above, when a report shall be submitted to the Assembly for consideration at its forty-ninth session;

(b) For their year of admission, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republics of Korea and the Marshall Islands, which became Members of the United Nations on 17 September 1991, shall contribute at the rate of one ninth of 0.05, 0.01, 0.69 and 0.01 per cent, respectively. For their year of admission, the Republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which also became States Members of the United Nations on 17 September 1991, shall contribute at the rate of one ninth of the rates to be determined by the Committee on Contributions during its fifty-second session. The contributions of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Korea shall be adjusted by one ninth of the flat fee paid for the participation in United Nations activities as non-member States for 1991. The contributions of the new Member States shall be taken into account as miscellaneous income under regulation 5.2 (c) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

(c) The contributions of the new Member States for 1991 and 1992 shall be applied to the same basis of assessment as for other Member States, except that, in the case of appropriations or apportionments approved by the General Assembly for the financing of peace-keeping operations, the contributions of those States, as determined by the group of contributors to which they may be assigned by the Assembly, shall be calculated in proportion to the calendar year;

(d) The advances of the new Member States to the Working Capital Fund, under regulation 5.8 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, shall be calculated by the application of the rates of assessment in effect for 1992 to the authorized level of the Fund;

the advances of the Federated States of Micronesia and the Republic of the Marshall Islands to the Working Capital Fund shall be added to the Fund pending the incorporation of the rates of assessment of these new Member States in a 100.00 per cent scale;

(e) Notwithstanding the terms of regulation 5.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, the Secretary-General shall be empowered to accept, at his discretion and after consultation with the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions, a portion of the contributions of Member States for the calendar years 1992, 1993 and 1994 in currencies other than United States dollars;

(f) In accordance with regulation 5.9 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, States which are not members of the United Nations but which participate in certain of its activities shall be called upon to contribute towards the 1992, 1993 and 1994 expenses of the Organization on the basis of the following rates:

Non-member State	Per cent
Holy See	0.01
Monaco	0.01
Nauru	0.01
San Mark	0.01
Switzerland	1.16

Future scale adjustments

The Committee on Contributions also continued work on improving the methodology for future scales, as requested by the Assembly in 1990.<sup>(4)</sup> In doing so, it concentrated on examining the statistical base period, the scheme of limits and PARE. All three elements were interrelated, the Committee noted, and there was little room to improve each individual factor as long as the ceiling (another type of limit) was omitted from consideration.

Some Committee members noted that an increasingly difficult climate had surrounded the Member States' discussion of the scale in recent years. Many Members had sought to have their assessments reduced, and this was attributed to the fact that rates of assessment were based exclusively on the capacity to pay. It was time to consider a much wider framework so that Governments would view their contributions positively, taking into account the benefits of membership.

Ultimately, the Committee decided that it was too early in the examination process to recommend any clear changes to, abolition or preservation of the current scheme of limits. In view of the conflicting results from various modified versions of the scheme of limits, some members said there was no viable alternative to the current scheme, save the voluntary redistribution of 551 points from major beneficiaries to those who had been most disadvantaged by it, as called for by the Assembly in 1990.<sup>(4)</sup> The Committee noted that the progressive application of the scheme of limits over a three-year scale period could lead to the phasing out of the scheme of limits over one or two three-year scale periods. The Committee reported that Japan would offer part of the benefit it would receive from the scheme of limits, namely 24 points, to help reduce overly distortive and detrimental effects experienced by other Member States.

Until recently, several countries with centrally planned economies could not support PARE. That situation had changed in some of those countries, but in others the application of PARE still faced difficulties. However, incremental progress had been made in the implementation of PARE for use in preparing the scale. The Committee decided to continue to examine the matter and to report to the Assembly on its future work as appropriate.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted three resolutions on the topic. Resolution 46/221 B was adopted without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling all its previous resolutions on the scale of assessments, in particular resolutions 39/247 B of 12 April 1985, 43/223 B of 21 December 1988 and 45/256 A and C of 21 December 1990,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Contributions,

Taking note of the views expressed in the Fifth Committee during the forty-sixth session,

Bearing in mind the difficult economic situation faced by many Member States, in particular the developing countries and, among them, the least developed countries,

Recalling that there is a need to keep under review the relationship between each of the elements and factors of the methodology,

Recognising that shorter statistical base periods better reflect the capacity to pay of Member States at the time of payment,

Considering that long statistical base periods even out the fluctuation in individual rates of assessment resulting from abrupt or short-lived economic changes,

Also considering that a close relationship exists between the length of the statistical base period and the scheme of limits,

Recalling that the General Assembly requested the Committee on Contributions in its resolution 45/256 A, paragraph 4 (a), to continue its work on the scheme of limits, with a view to reducing speedily any of its excessive distorting effects,

Recognizing the importance of the uniform exchange rates in the conversion of national income in local currency into United States dollars,

Recalling the need to base ad hoc adjustments to the machine scale of assessments on the criteria endorsed by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/256 A, paragraph 3,

1. Reaffirms that:

(a) The capacity of Member States to pay is the fundamental criterion for determining the scale of assessments;

(b) The scale of assessments should be determined on the basis of reliable, verifiable and comparable data;

(c) The methodology for determining the scale of assessments should be simplified as far as possible with a view to making it more transparent and stable over time;

2. Considers, in principle, in accordance with paragraph 1 above, that:

(a) The scheme of limits should be phased out;

(b) The low per capita income allowance formula should be an integral and automatic adjustment mechanism;

(c) Debt adjustment should be on the basis of reliable and verifiable data;

3. Requests the Committee on Contributions, in the context of its ongoing work to review methodology, to provide commentary, analysis and, as appropriate, recommendations on possible changes of the current methodology on the basis of the following elements, and to provide illustrative scales thereon and to report accordingly to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session:

(a) Ten-year statistical base period;

(b) Uniform exchange rates in accordance with these criteria:

(i) Exchange rates obtained from the International Monetary Fund for all Member States which are members of the Fund;

(ii) Exchange rates based on technical advice of the International Monetary Fund for States which are not members of the Fund;

(iii) United Nations operational rates for Member States for which criteria (i) and (ii) are not applicable;

(iv) The Committee on Contributions should provide detailed explanations for exchange rates not based on any of the criteria listed under (i) to (iii) above;

(c) Debt-adjusted income as proposed by the Committee on Contributions in paragraph 39 of its report to the General Assembly at its forty-fifth session;

(d) A low per capita income allowance formula with a per capita income limit of the average world per capita income with a gradient of 100 per cent;

(e) A floor rate of 0.01 per cent and a ceiling rate of 25.00 per cent;

(f) A method for phasing out the scheme of limits over two three-year scale periods which would also include provisions to avoid, to the extent possible, the allocation of additional points as a result thereof to developing countries;

4. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to examine ways and means to minimize, to the extent possible, the allocation of additional points to developing countries which were benefiting from the application of the scheme of limits, in the first six years of the post-transition period;

5. Decides that individual rates for the least developed countries should not exceed their present level, namely 0.01 per cent;

6. Requests the Committee on Contributions to use the criteria approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/256 A, paragraph 3, for the ad hoc adjustment of the machine scale and to provide detailed information on all decisions made in this regard, it being recognized that the continued existence of the ad hoc adjustment process depends on the availability of points provided voluntarily by Member States;

7. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to continue its work on the improvement of the methodology for the preparation of future scales of assessments, in particular with regard to:

(a) The application of price-adjusted rates of exchange;

(b) Alternative income concepts;

(c) The possible use of factors that take account of the situation of countries with economic characteristics such as those outlined in General Assembly resolution 43/223 B, paragraph 3;

(d) Man-made disasters;

(e) Problems of refugee host countries.

and to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on its work in all these areas;

8. Further requests the Committee on Contributions to include in its reports to the General Assembly full and detailed information on the considerations underlying its decisions and recommendations;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Committee on Contributions with the facilities it requires to carry out its work, including supplementary assistance, if necessary.

The General Assembly

1. Requests the Committee on Contributions to explore, as appropriate, means by which the existing methodology might be improved, taking into account the views expressed by delegations in the Fifth Committee, and to report on their quantifiability to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

2. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to present alternative methodologies and to comment upon a model scale using a statistical base period of ten years, which would be arrived at by distributing average national income weighted by per capita national income, and whose calculation would be followed by the application of the existing floor and ceiling rates to be examined at the forty-seventh session, and further requests the Committee to consider, as appropriate, the question of transition from the current to an alternative methodology over a period of time in the event the General Assembly was to make such a decision.

Budget contributions in 1991

Of the $1,365,667,018 in contributions to the United Nations regular budget payable as at 1 January 1991, $926,283,073 had been collected from Member States as of 31 December, leaving $439,383,945 outstanding.<sup>(5)</sup> Total assessments for 1991, due earlier in the year, amounted to $962,684,125, while $64,304,798 was related to previous years.

In addition, 11 non-member States were assessed a total of $3,359,423 for their share of 1991 United Nations activities in which they participated. Of the contributions payable to the Organization by non-member States for 1991 and prior years, totalling $4,106,850, $3,724,732 had been collected as at 31 December 1991, while $382,018 was outstanding.

On 17 September,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the President of the General Assembly that six Member States—the Central African Republic, the Congo, the Dominican Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Sierra Leone and South Africa—were over two years in arrears in the payment of their budget contributions. Four more letters from the Secretary-General dated 8 October,<sup>(7)</sup> 10 October,<sup>(8)</sup> 5 November<sup>(9)</sup> and 12 November<sup>(10)</sup> showed that the necessary payments had been made by the Congo, Sierra Leone, the Central African Republic and the Dominican Republic, respectively. As a result, those four Members had reduced their arrears below the amount required and had regained their right to vote in the Assembly.

Inflation and currency fluctuation

In 1988, the Assembly had reaffirmed the need for a solution to the problem of controlling the effects of inflation and currency fluctuation on the budget of the Organization.<sup>(11)</sup> It had agreed with the concept arrived at by ACABQ regarding the establishment of a reserve fund to cover additional requirements due to currency fluctuations, non-staff costs, inflation and statutory cost increases for staff. The Secretary-General was requested to formulate an operating procedure for such a fund.

On 20 December 1991, by decision 46/451, ACABQ was requested by the Assembly to resume consideration of the issue and report to the Assembly at its forty-seventh (1992) session. Pending a solution to the problem, the fluctuations and inflation rates would continue to be dealt with under the relevant provisions of the Financial Regulations and Rules of the Organization, as called for by the Assembly in 1986.<sup>(12)</sup>

Accounts and auditing

The accounts and financial statements for either the year or the biennium ending 31 December 1990 for six United Nations development and humanitarian assistance programmes were accepted by the General Assembly in 1991, along with the opinions of the United Nations Board of Auditors. The Assembly also endorsed the observations of the Board and of ACABQ.

The Board's principal findings and conclusions for remedial actions were transmitted to the Assembly in July 1991 by the Secretary-General.<sup>(1)</sup> In the same month, he submitted the Board's report on the implementation of previous recommendations,<sup>(*)</sup> as had been requested by the Assembly in 1990.<sup>(3)</sup>

The programmes for which financial reports and audited financial statements were submitted were: the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA),<sup>(4)</sup> the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR),<sup>(5)</sup> the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR),<sup>(6)</sup> the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP),<sup>(7)</sup> the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA),<sup>(8)</sup> and the International Trade Centre (ITC).<sup>(9)</sup> UNDP and UNFPA received qualified opinions from the Board on their financial statements. Among the topics considered were budgetary control, cash management, technical cooperation and control systems.

ACABQ commented on the recommendations of the Board in October 1991.<sup>(10)</sup>

With regard to UNFPA, the Board emphasized that there were still no adequate procedures in place to obtain the audited statements of UNFPA's executing agencies in time for the the audit of its overall financial statements.<sup>(8)</sup> In the case of UNDP, it had either not signed or had signed deficient Standard Basic Agreements with its project-executing agencies; consequently, there was no way to audit how the funds supplied to the executing agencies had been spent.

Certain large financial obligations accrued during 1986-1987 had been left unliquidated by the end of 1988-1989 and remained outstanding, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly in September.<sup>(11)</sup> Notwithstanding the financial regulations, those charges had been transferred to accounts payable, rather than cancelling them. According to the Board, it was done because new procedures had made it impossible to seek budgetary authorization in a new biennium to replace a lapsed obligation from a previous one. Therefore, in order to meet those obligations and not abandon projects midway, a number of credits from the previous biennium were converted into accounts payable for the succeeding biennium.

The Secretary-General proposed two possible ways that would allow for long-term obligations to be continually charged against the budget for the financial period in which they were approved. Under the first proposal, separate accounts would be set up for projects that were specified as being ongoing and multi-year in nature. Thus, account balances could be carried forward into succeeding bienniums until a project's completion. The second proposal would have the Assembly recognize that certain contracts could not be fully liquidated within the 12-month period following the biennium in which they were authorized. In those cases, the Secretary-General would present them to the Assembly in his first performance report of the biennium in progress. The Assembly could in turn authorize the selective waiving of the appropriate financial regulation.

In its comments on the report of the Secretary-General, ACABQ said that no sufficient analysis had been given as to why those legal and valid obligations could not be discharged within the set time allotted.<sup>(12)</sup> Until a detailed analysis was provided, ACABQ could not support the Secretary-General's proposals.

United Nations programmes

In 1991, the United Nations continued its efforts to improve the planning, budgeting, monitoring and evaluation of its programmes, as requested by the General Assembly. The programmes were outlined by the Assembly in the medium-term plan for 1992-1997.

Programme planning

Reports of the Secretary-General. When the medium-term plan for 1992-1997 was adopted by the Assembly in 1990,<sup>(1)</sup> it included a provision for the reformulation in 1991 of the narrative for Programme 21: public administration and finance. Accordingly, the Secretary-General submitted proposals for changes in August 1991.<sup>(2)</sup>

Another report examining the current methodology for monitoring programme performance, plus suggestions for its improvement, was submitted by the Secretary-General to the Assembly in May<sup>(3)</sup> as requested in 1990.<sup>(1)</sup> The first objective of the monitoring exercise was to report to Member States on the degree of implementation of the activities of the programme budget, the report said, and secondly to show what changes had occurred in the programmes during their implementation, from the time of their approval by the Assembly.

The results of the programme activities, called "outputs" in the annex to the Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, included specific and measurable products such as publications, servicing of meetings and translating services. Other types of outputs included products (such as advisory services) that were less measurable. Still other activities did not produce a material output, but involved the use of the Organization's resources. Those activities included, for example, supporting good offices, intergovernmental negotiations and the promotion of legal instruments. All the activities of the Organization for the 1992-1993 proposed programme budget were regrouped into eight major categories: international cooperation; parliamentary services; published material; information material and services; operational activities; conference services; administrative support; and coordination, harmonization and liaison.

In order to obtain a comprehensive implementation report on all of the diverse categories listed above, the Secretary-General recommended that four separate measuring formats be used. The first would examine outputs that had been specifically prescribed in the programme budget, such as reports and publications. A second would correspond to activities such as promotion of legal instruments or external relations, which were described in the programme budget in general terms rather than as specific outputs. Operational activities would be the subject of the third type of reporting, and the fourth type would cover conference services and administrative support using workload indicators. Such a reporting process would reflect the diversity of the activities of the Organization, the Secretary-General stated, and the results would include an analysis of the changes that affected the implementation of the work programme.

The Secretary-General submitted a report in May reviewing the procedures used in producing programme budget implications statements, and the operation of the contingency fund,<sup>(4)</sup> in response to a request made by the Assembly in 1989.<sup>(5)</sup> The Assembly had requested him to extend progressively the provision of programme budget implication statements to all subsidiary bodies of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council.

The contingency fund, created to accommodate additional expenditures related to each biennium, was established by the Assembly in 1986.<sup>(6)</sup> The fund's level was set at a percentage of the overall biennial budget and covered expenditures arising from mandates not included in the programme budget. For both the 1990-1991 and 1992-1993 bienniums, the funds were set at 0.75 per cent of the overall programme budgets. The operation of the fund had gone smoothly since its inception, the Secretary-General said. Nevertheless, the pointed to the need for full compliance with the agreed procedures for preparation of each of the revised statements of the fund, as had been stressed by ACABQ, in 1990.

As to programme budget implications, the total number of such statements had not changed significantly, the Secretary-General noted. Due to several obstacles, it was not feasible to extend such statements to all subsidiary bodies of the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council.

CPC action. CPC, which held its thirty-first session at Headquarters from 13 May to 12 June<sup>(7)</sup> conducted an in-depth examination of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993. It also considered the JIU report on the practices aimed at a more geographical distribution of the sources of procurement for technical cooperation projects and the comments thereon from the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC). In its comments on the report, ACABQ, noted that none of the CPC recommendations would require any additional appropriations.<sup>(8)</sup>

ACC action. The annual overview report of ACC was made available to the Assembly in April<sup>(9)</sup>. The report dealt with actions taken by ACC regarding major substantive issues (including several economic development programmes), programme issues, and financial, administrative and personnel issues. In an addendum on programmes and resources of the United Nations system, ACC presented three tables. The first summarized resources of the system by organization and by sector of the ACC programme classification. The second set out programme objectives and resources of the system by organization in each of the sectors of the programme classification. In the third table, programme objectives and resources by organization and by area were provided for three areas of special concern—environment, drug abuse control, and women and development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 46/189 without vote.

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 41/213 of 19 December 1986, 42/211 of 21 December 1987, 43/219 of 21 December 1988, 44/194 and 44/200 B of 21 December 1989 and 45/253 of 21 December 1990, and taking note of Economic and Social Council resolution 1991/67 of 26 July 1991,

Having considered the oral report of the Chairman of the Fifth Committee on the review by the Second Committee of reformulated programme 21 of the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997,

Having considered also the report of the Committee for Programme and Coordination on the work of its thirty-first session and the relevant parts of the report of the Economic and Social Council for 1991,

Having considered further the relevant parts of the first report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General on the methodology for monitoring and reporting the programme performance of the United Nations and on the review of the procedures for the provision of statements of programme budget implications and for the use and operation of the contingency fund,

Taking into account the comments and observations made in the Fifth Committee concerning programme planning,

I

Medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997

Approves programme 21, (Public administration and finance), as reformulated by the Secretary-General, of the medium-term plan for the period 1992-1997;

II

Consultations with intergovernmental bodies during the planning, programming and budgeting process

1. Notes with concern that, for most sections of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1992-1993, programmes of work had not been reviewed by intergovernmental bodies;

2. ### Rationalization of work

Due to the increased workload of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the General Assembly in December decided to adopt a biennial approach to its work. Several items would continue to be examined on an annual basis, others would be considered in either odd or even years, and still others, such as the scale of assessments, would be examined as required on an ad hoc basis. The Assembly also approved the programmes of work for 1992 and 1993.

Report of the Economic and Social Council

The Assembly, on 20 December by decision 46/447, took note of three chapters or parts thereof of the report of the Economic and Social Council relating to matters calling for action by the Assembly, revitalization of the Council, and coordination and programme and related questions.

Joint Inspection Unit

In October, the Joint Inspection Unit, a subsidiary organ of the organizations within the United Nations system, submitted to the General Assembly a report on its activities for the period 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991.<sup>(10)</sup> The main purpose of JIU was to enhance the administrative and financial efficiency of the organization. JIU submitted its work programme to the Assembly in February.<sup>(11)</sup> It focused its activities and report on specific recommendations made by the Assembly during its 1990 session.<sup>(12)</sup> Those recommendations included taking a more selective approach in preparing its work programme and giving greater attention to management, budgetary and administrative issues.

JIU suggested that in order to enhance its performance, it should be strengthened with additional personnel, an increase in its travel budget and the purchase of computer work stations. JIU commented on the status of implementation of recommendations it had made in six separate reports published since 1988 on: United Nations programme performance; evaluation of rural development activities in three African least developed countries; public information networks; geographical distribution of sources of procurement for technical cooperation projects; the optical disk system; and the late issuance of comments by executive heads on JIU reports.

In addition, JIU supplied summaries of recommendations it had published during the period, including those on: extrabudgetary resources; the African Institute for Economic Development and Planning; technical cooperation and the use of national professional project personnel; the environmental focus of projects financed by UNDP; the rotation of staff within the United Nations; the Management Advisory Service; and transport operations of UNICEF.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, by decision 46/446, acknowledged the receipt of the report and the work programme of JIU. It requested that executive heads of programmes strictly observe the time-limits for commenting on reports of JIU, and that ACABQ examine the functioning of JIU.

Administrative and budgetary coordination

In 1990, the Assembly had requested that an interim study be conducted on the need to develop accounting standards for use throughout the United Nations system.<sup>(1)</sup> In response, the Secretary-General submitted a report on the subject in September 1991, as prepared by the Panel of External Auditors.<sup>(2)</sup> The Panel stated that currently there were no accounting standards common to the United Nations system. This had led to differences in matters such as the consistent treatment of material transactions and in the levels of their disclosure. It had caused Member States and other users of accounts, including potential donors, difficulties in the interpretation of the financial statements.

The Panel recommended that such accounting standards be formed using certain of the standards already in use by the International Accounting Standards Committee. It suggested the use of those already cited in 1986 by the ACC Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions as appropriate for use in the United Nations system.

There was an urgent need to adopt a set of common accounting standards for the Organization, ACABQ said in its comments on the report of the Secretary-General.<sup>(3)</sup> The agencies within ACC should give priority to the matter and conclude discussions on it before the end of the Assembly's next session. If the agencies failed to reach an agreement, the United Nations should commission the Panel of External Auditors to prepare a study on the matter.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the Assembly, by decision 46/445, requested the Secretary-General to hire a consultant from within the existing available funds of the Organization to propose a set of accounting standards for common applicability to the United Nations system, and to report on the matter at the forty-seventh (1992) session of the Assembly.

Chapter II

United Nations officials

In 1991, the Secretary-General continued his efforts to improve staff distribution with regard to nationality and gender, as well as to improve the status of women in the Secretariat. Although there was a slight rise in the percentage of women in senior-level positions, the situation was far from encouraging. Both the Economic and Social Council (resolution 1991/17) and the General Assembly (resolution 46/100) urged the Secretary-General to accord greater priority to the recruitment and promotion of women.

The International Civil Service Commission, the independent technical body responsible to the Assembly for the regulation and coordination of conditions of service for staff of the United Nations common system, made several recommendations to the Assembly, including a revised scale of salaries, as well as pensionable remuneration and the comparator civil service. The Assembly acted on those recommendations in resolution 46/19. Based on recommendations of the Pension Board, the Assembly, by resolution 46/192, approved certain changes in the pension adjustment system, including determination of the base amounts, cost-of-living differential factors, and disability and survivors' benefits. Increases in the emoluments of top-echelon officials such as honoraria, representation allowance and remuneration for members of the Joint Inspection Unit, were recommended by the Secretary-General; the Assembly, however, deferred their consideration.

The high number of cases of arrest and detention of United Nations staff remained, according to a report of the Secretary-General on behalf of the Administrative Committee on Coordination. Other violations of privileges and immunities of United Nations officials were also noted.

Despite the continued trend towards a substantial increase in the number of cases before the Administrative Review Unit and the Headquarters Joint Appeals Board, the reformed system of administration of justice in the Secretariat worked reasonably well.

An evaluation of the system of staff and representative travel was recommended by the Assembly.

As the Assembly retained on its agenda the item on personnel questions for discussion at its resumed forty-sixth session in 1992, several of the above issues were not considered in 1991.

Personnel management

Staff composition

In August 1991, the Secretary-General presented his annual report to the General Assembly on the composition of the United Nations Secretariat by nationality, gender and type of appointment for the period 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991.<sup>(1)</sup> The total number of staff of the United Nations Secretariat as at 30 June was 13,973, of whom 9,625 were paid from the regular budget and 4,348 from extrabudgetary sources.

Staff in the Professional category and above numbered 3,810; staff in the General Service and related categories numbered 9,064; and project personnel numbered 1,099.

On 30 June 1991, there were 9 unrepresented and 24 underrepresented Member States, as compared with 11 unrepresented and 19 underrepresented ones on 1 July 1990. Changes in Member States' representation not only resulted from the appointments and separations from service of staff, but also from the adjustments of the desirable ranges resulting from a change in the number of posts subject to geographical distribution or from variations in the assessed contribution of individual States or in their population, as well as from changes in the status of some staff members.

During the reporting period, 57 women were appointed to posts subject to geographical distribution, representing 33.5 per cent of the appointments made, compared with 63, or 31.2 per cent, made during the previous period.

Desirable ranges

In accordance with a 1990 General Assembly request,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted in August 1991 a report<sup>(3)</sup> on alternative options for desirable ranges of geographical distribution of the staff of the Secretariat through the formulation of recruitment policies. He offered 11 alternative mathematical methods for distributing posts; eight of them showed various shifts in the relative weight of the three factors of membership, population and contribution, while two of the remaining three were calculated at the request of Member States during the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary)

Committee debates at the 1990 session. In one of those options, the weight of the membership factor was raised from 40 to 47 per cent and that of the population factor from 5 to 6 per cent, which would achieve full parity between both factors. In another option, the weight of the membership factor remained unchanged while that of the population factor was increased to 7.2 per cent and that of the contribution factor reduced to 52.8 per cent. In a third option, as in the other options, the population factor was increased to 7 per cent.

The Secretary-General believed that the existing system took into account the main criteria necessary to ensure an equitable distribution among Member States: membership, population and contribution. He concluded that the true nature of the problem did not lie with the methodology but with the relative weight to be given to the various factors, and that any major adjustments could be undertaken only on the basis of further guidance by the Assembly.

Status of women in the Secretariat

Pursuant to a 1990 General Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report<sup>(5)</sup> on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat in which he discussed the situation and developments during the period from July 1990 to June 1991.

According to the report, the situation was far from encouraging. During the reporting period, the percentage of women in the United Nations Secretariat rose by almost 1 per cent, from 28.3 in the previous period to 29.2. In terms of posts at the D-1 level and above, the percentage rose from 7.2 to 8.6 per cent. There were 759 women out of a total of 2,600 Secretariat staff in posts subject to geographical distribution.

In March 1991, the Secretary-General had approved a recommendation of the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat on the filling of posts both internally and externally in departments and offices of the Secretariat where the representation of women fell short of the established targets. This new measure required that in departments and offices with less than 35 per cent women overall, and in those with less than 25 per cent women at senior levels, vacancies be filled by a female candidate when there was one or more female candidates who met the requirements.

Meeting the new target of 35 per cent of women overall by 1995, established under a 1990 Assembly resolution,<sup>(4)</sup> would require the recruitment of a substantial number of women each year, particularly at the higher levels. The Secretary-General stressed that, to that end, the continuing support of Member States was required. He further requested their cooperation in assisting the Secretariat in identifying qualified women. As a follow-up to the Secretary-General's initiative, the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Resources Management organized a meeting in May 1991 with the Chairpersons of the regional groups. Individual meetings with members of the Asian and Latin American and Caribbean Groups were held later.

In 1990,<sup>(6)</sup> the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) had made several recommendations to improve the status of women in United Nations organizations, among them to: intensify efforts to increase the number of women at the P-5 level and above, in decision-making and policy-shaping posts, and of women consultants and technical advisers; facilitate employment of staff members' spouses; establish clear targets and monitor their implementation; and consider establishing outreach training programmes. ICSC further decided to form a tripartite working group on the status of women in both the General Service and Professional categories to identify problems and help devise strategies for implementation of its recommendations.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 May 1991, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/17 without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, in particular paragraphs 306, 315, 356 and 358, in which importance is attached to the appointment of women in the Secretariat at senior decision-making and managerial levels,

Recalling also the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and other bodies that have been adopted since Assembly resolution 2715(XXV) of 15 December 1970,

Recalling further the report of the Secretary-General on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat,

Noting that the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat has submitted its report to the Secretary-General,

Noting with satisfaction that the question of the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat continues to be an item on the agenda of the Administrative Committee on Coordination,

Taking note of the relevant chapter of the report of the International Civil Service Commission,

Noting with concern that the goal of an overall participation rate for women of 30 per cent by 1990 in posts subject to geographical distribution was not achieved and that their representation in senior policy-level and decision-making posts did not improve,

Noting the new goal of achieving by 1995 an overall participation rate of 35 per cent of all posts subject to geographical distribution, and of increasing the number of women in senior policy-level and decision-making posts,

1. Urges the Secretary-General to accord greater priority to increasing the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution, particularly in senior policy-level and decision-making posts, in order to achieve an overall participation rate of 35 per cent by 1995, taking into consideration the need to increase the representation of women from the developing countries and those countries with a low representation of women;

2. Also urges the Secretary-General to accord priority to increasing to 25 per cent, by 1995, the participation rate for women in posts at the D-1 level and above, within the overall participation rate for women of 35 per cent in posts subject to geographical distribution, taking into consideration the need to increase the representation of women from the developing countries and those countries with a low representation of women;

3. Welcomes the request of the General Assembly, in resolutions 45/125 of 14 December 1990 and 45/239/C of 21 December 1990, that the Secretary-General develop an action programme for the advancement of women in the Secretariat for the period 1991-1995, incorporating, as necessary, the unfulfilled points of the 1985-1990 action programme and taking into account the recommendations of the Steering Committee for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat, as appropriate, and the special measures to implement them;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to include in the action programme for the advancement of women in the Secretariat for the period 1991-1995 (a) a comprehensive evaluation and analysis of the main obstacles to the improvement of the status of women in the Organization; (b) proposed measures to overcome the underrepresentation of women from certain Member States; and (c) a detailed programme of activities, including monitoring procedures and a timetable for their completion;

5. Also requests the Secretary-General, within existing resources, to ensure that adequate machinery, with the authority of enforcement and the responsibility of accountability, and including a senior-level official devoted to implementation of the action programme, is maintained and, to the extent possible, strengthened during the course of the action programme for the period 1991-1995;

6. Requests Member States to continue to support the efforts of the United Nations, including the regional commissions, and of the specialized agencies and related organizations to increase the participation of women in the Professional category and above by, inter alia, nominating more women candidates, especially for senior policy-level and decision-making posts, by encouraging women to apply for vacant posts and by creating national rosters of women candidates to be shared with the Secretariat and the executive bodies of the specialized agencies and related organizations;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that his annual report on progress achieved, updated as appropriate, includes strategies and modalities for implementing the action programme and the relevant mandates adopted by the General Assembly and the Council, and to submit the report to the Commission on the Status of Women at its thirty-sixth session and to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session, as well as to those bodies that have administrative, budgetary and personnel responsibilities for the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat.

Staffing table changes

In its annual report<sup>(7)</sup> to the General Assembly, the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) noted changes in the staffing table of the Organization proposed by the Secretary-General and that the programmatic justifications for these changes were of uneven quality in the various sections of the budget. It also noted that the procedures and norms currently used to evaluate the workload and other needs of the Secretariat's various units, to justify the creation, suppression, reclassification, conversion and redeployment of posts, needed further refinement. It recommended that the Assembly designate competent bodies of the Organization to consider the question in order to develop simpler, more transparent and more rational procedures and norms, and to report to the Assembly at its 1992 session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section II of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

Secondment from government service

In September 1991,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report on secondment from government service, in accordance with a 1990 General Assembly resolution<sup>(9)</sup> by which the Assembly had affirmed that secondment was not in conflict with the Charter of the United Nations. It had endorsed the Secretary-General's basic approach regarding secondment, as set out in a 1990 report,<sup>(10)</sup> and requested him to review the procedures for future secondment and to submit appropriate amendments to the Staff Regulations in 1991.

The Secretary-General recalled judgement No. 482 of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal which affected the formalities required for secondment, such as complex written agreements between Government, United Nations and staff member, rather than, as had been the practice, an exchange of correspondence between the United Nations and the Government concerned and a notation of the secondment in the letter of appointment.

On an interim basis, the Secretary-General said he had adopted measures to ensure that the formalities required by the Tribunal were met. As those formalities tended to be rather cumbersome and at times difficult to implement given divergent national laws, he considered it desirable to establish a simpler procedure, namely, a notation in the letter of appointment signed by the staff member, and he intended to obtain documentation as to the existence of a valid secondment. A draft resolution annexed to the Secretary-General's report proposed the necessary legislative changes.

The Secretary-General observed that recent developments affected the long-standing practice of replacing in a particular post staff from Member States whose nationals served primarily under secondment by staff of the same nationality. There had been a substantial increase in the number of staff on career appointment from countries whose nationals used to serve almost exclusively on fixed-term contracts and the recent admission to membership of a number of States made it necessary to revise downward the desirable ranges. Also, the Assembly might wish to consider whether that exceptional procedure should cease and all posts be filled through the normal recruitment and placement procedures.

The Secretary-General stated that he would continue to consider all the interests of the Organization, securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity and ensuring equitable geographical representation.

Rotation of staff

In July 1991,<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted a JIU report on the rotation of staff within the United Nations, prepared in response to a request by one of the regional commissions to examine how best an equitable rotation system could be established. Chapter I provided the rationale for the study and the methods used; chapter II discussed the need for rotation and the problems encountered, such as inadequate incentives compounded by the lack of an official rotation policy; chapter III reviewed rotation between duty stations and occupation groups and its impact on career development, emphasizing that to the extent possible rotation should be linked to career development and posts earmarked for rotation; and chapter IV discussed United Nations organizations which had special policies on staff mobility and rotation, such as the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). In chapter V, the Inspector concluded that a formal personnel policy that included a high mobility factor, similar to the policies of those organizations, should be established. To that effect and to help expedite the process of a staff rotation plan being prepared by the Secretariat, he made five recommendations on which the Secretary-General commented in November.

Overall, the Secretary-General noted that the JIU report highlighted a number of important issues, some of which were already in the Secretariat's plans of action. He pointed out, however, that there were significant differences between the Secretariat's requirements and those of the three organizations mentioned, and that relatively few Secretariat jobs were interchangeable.

With regard to JIU's statement that the distribution of staff among regional commissions and Headquarters in certain occupations was inequitable, the Secretary-General said the regional commissions' mandates were exclusively in the area of promoting socio-economic development and regional economic cooperation which required occupational groups already widely dispersed and had only minimal need for others. Rotation was appropriate where functions were interchangeable, he added; however, it was not appropriate where the function requirements were highly specialized or location-specific.

According to the Secretary-General, the JIU report omitted mention of the Secretariat's mobility and hardship allowance which had become effective on 1 July 1990, as it omitted mention of various special entitlements for staff serving at hardship duty stations. Also, the report would have benefited from a fuller examination of the financial implications of a comprehensive rotation policy versus the current incentive-based system. It did not explore the obstacles to mobility between members of the common system, although movement between organizations might be the only route available for certain occupational groups. Further, it was the Administration's intention to integrate the concept of staff mobility into a comprehensive career development system of all staff, which was being developed by the Office of Human Resources Management.

Concluding, the Secretary-General said that if well conceived and implemented with consistency, rotation could be a powerful tool for staff motivation; however, rigidity should be avoided and the work in progress was aimed at setting up a system with built-in flexibility.

Budget-related staffing issues relating to the General Service category

At its August 1991 session, ICSC recalled a 1990 Assembly request<sup>(12)</sup> that the methodology for the conduct of salary surveys of the General Service and related categories be reviewed and that the findings be presented to the Assembly in 1992.<sup>(6)</sup> Pursuant to that request, the Commission decided to request its secretariat to consult with representatives of the administration and staff and to prepare a preliminary document that would enable it to provide policy guidance to a formal working group to be convened after the thirty-fifth session in 1991, which would then report to the Commission's thirty-sixth session. ICSC also decided to complete its review of the methodology for headquarters duty stations in 1992 and to address that of non-headquarters duty stations in 1993.

In the context of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993, the General Assembly adopted in 1991 a resolution on budget-related staffing issues. It invited the Secretary-General to take into account a request included in a 1990 Assembly resolution that he adjust the salaries of the General Service category in New York to levels consistent with the best prevailing rates of remuneration as determined by ICSC.

Staff rules and regulations

In March 1991,<sup>(13)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, made to incorporate changes in the maximum admissible levels of expenses incurred under the education grant, as approved by the General Assembly in 1990.<sup>(12)</sup> Additional changes to the Staff Regulations-concerning education grant, allowance for disabled children, home leave entitlements at hardship duty stations, establishment of additional steps at levels P-2 to P-5, abolition of the current post adjustment schedules and of separate schedules of separation payments, and revised salary rates for Under-Secretaries-General and Assistant Secretaries-General-were required to accommodate previously approved recommendations, he had reported earlier, in July 1990.<sup>(14)</sup>

In September, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report<sup>(15)</sup> containing the texts of provisional amendments made to the Staff Rules of the United Nations. The changes-applicable to all staff except technical cooperation project personnel, staff members specifically engaged for conferences and other short-term service-concerned education grants, the definition of children's dependency status, assignment grants, scales of pensionable remuneration, and scales of salaries and allowances regarding disabled children's allowance.

Also in September, the Secretary-General proposed an amendment to the regulations on education grant travel, and a revised text for the provision regarding salary increments for the P-2 to P-5 levels.

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission held two sessions in 1991: its thirty-third from 11 to 29 March in Paris, and its thirty-fourth from 5 to 23 August in New York. The Commission examined issues derived from General Assembly decisions and resolutions as well as from its own statute. A summary of its deliberations, recommendations and decisions was provided in its seventeenth annual report<sup>(16)</sup> on which the Assembly acted in resolution 46/191. The total financial implications of the Commission's 1991 decisions and recommendations relevant to the United Nations common system were around $25 million for 1992.

Review of the functioning of ICSC

In July 1991,<sup>(17)</sup> the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) submitted a report on a review of the functioning of ICSC, in accordance with a 1989<sup>(18)</sup> General Assembly request. In preparing its report, ACC consulted with staff representatives and took into account views of ICSC members expressed individually.

Overall, ICSC had functioned well and its statute was a healthy instrument, ACC said; nevertheless, over the past 15 years, much criticism had been voiced, which centred on a number of broad issues: increasing politicization, ICSC's lack of appreciation of the differences between organizations of the common system, an overburdened work programme, and an increasingly regulatory approach to personnel issues.

While ICSC was, by its statute, a subsidiary organ of the General Assembly, it was unique in that its decisions and recommendations directly affected the work of all organizations of the common system. Yet the Commission had given the impression of ignoring differences between those organizations, ACC stated, and there was also the common complaint that its work programme needed more order and coherence, with more attention to priority issues.

Many problems in the way in which ICSC functioned stemmed from the Fifth Committee's perceived interference in its functioning. In recent years, there had been little communication between them, ACC felt.

Major structural reforms and suggested alternative structures, including a tripartite structure along the lines of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, with equal representation of the Assembly and the other legislative bodies, the executive heads and the staff, would call for a completely revised set of legislative instruments and even possibly for amendments to the Agreement between the United Nations and the organizations participating in the common system concerning coordination in personnel matters.

ACC made 13 recommendations on various aspects of ICSC's work, which, in its view, did not require a change in the Commission's statute. Its recommendations should also be seen against the backdrop of the development of staff/management relations; there had been marked strides in the process of negotiating the conditions of service of public officials in national civil services, which were reflected in a number of international instruments adopted by the International Labour Organisation (ILO). There had been, however, little or no reflection of these processes in the way in which ICSC or the Fifth Committee set out to determine the conditions of service of staff in the common system. Moreover, the consultative partnership between the Commission, the organizations and the staff-carefully elaborated in ICSC's statute-had been, in the view of many, reduced to a procedural formality.

With regard to the selection process for ICSC members, ACC recommended: that it enter into discussions with the Fifth Committee to delink ICSC appointments from those of other United Nations bodies (recommendation 1); the creation of tripartite search committee group which would develop a roster of candidates for appointment to ICSC (recommendations 2 and 10); the development of a profile of qualification requirements, including reference to the need for a range of experience between members (recommendation 3); and the revision of the cycle of appointments to four members in each of the first three years of a four-year cycle and to three members in the last year of the cycle (recommendation 4).

Concerning the interrelationship between ACC, ICSC and the General Assembly, it was recommended that: ACC provide comments on ICSC's annual report and those comments be presented to the Assembly and other legislative bodies together with the annual report (recommendation 5); ACC and staff representatives address the Fifth Committee in connection with ICSC's report, with the former explaining how the measures proposed by ICSC would be financed (recommendation 6); ACC and staff representatives participate fully in the informal Fifth Committee consultations on the ICSC report and, in the event of a change in an ICSC recommendation, ICSC, ACC and staff representatives be invited to provide their view;; (recommendation 7); and that increased contact between ICSC and all organizations be encouraged (recommendation 8). More visits by and secondment of ICSC members to organizations and agencies should be encouraged, as should the secondment of staff from organizations to ICSC (recommendation 11).

Regarding the organization and management of ICSC, the Assembly was invited to endorse ACC's recommendations relating to balancing the Commission's work programme, the creation of a steering committee, the division of work between sessions, the mandate of the Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions (ACPAQ), and the setting of long- and medium-term priorities (recommendation 9). ACC further recommended a review of the organization of the ICSC secretariat in the light of new programme directives and technological change, with consideration to be given to increasing the use of external sources, including consulting companies, universities and experts from Member States (recommendation 12). Finally, it recommended clarification with regard to the respective roles of the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Executive Secretary (recommendation 13).

ICSC welcomed the review as constructive, noting that it indicated that, overall, the Commission had functioned relatively well and its statute was a healthy instrument. While not fully concurring with the analysis of problems and the recommendations by ACC, ICSC agreed that improvements in the personnel policy-making process had been and should continue to be made. The Commission noted, however, that since it did not function alone, the other interested parties-the Member States, the representatives of the organizations and the staff-had a role to play in assisting it in carrying out its mandate. Over the past several years, it had introduced a number of changes in its working methods, including an improved reporting format, opening its decision-taking sessions to its interlocutors, and the establishment of working groups on important technical issues.

Responding to the organizations' criticism, ICSC rejected all allegations of politicization, affirming that its recommendations and decisions had always been based on sound technical considerations and noting that it was often those decisions on which its interlocutors disagreed that were termed "political". With respect to its perceived lack of appreciation for the differences among organizations, ICSC felt that, in the past, the organizations could have done more to bring their specific problems directly to its attention.

As to workload, the Commission agreed that workload management was one of its most pressing problems. It did not believe, however, that the ACC proposals would assist it in resolving the problem. In line with its desire to maximize its efficiency and streamline its working methods, the Commission decided that it would concentrate its attention only on major policy issues and delegate authority to the Chairman for minor policy matters not requiring the entire Commission's attention. Other measures considered included streamlining ICSC's agendas, rationalizing the assignments of topics between sessions, and holding briefing sessions to familiarize its members with the changing complexities of the more technical issues before them.

In conclusion, ICSC attached great importance to maintaining the cohesiveness and unity of the common system. It recognized its own responsibility of contributing to the strengthening of the common system by demonstrating an understanding of the organizations' constraints in carrying out its recommendations and decisions and by exhibiting flexibility, where possible, towards their differing needs. The Commission also underscored the role of its interlocutors in improving its functioning and the notion of joint accountability, since it could function only as effectively as was made possible by the interested parties.

Commenting on each of ACC's recommendations, it stated, with reference to recommendation 1, that its statute provided for equitable geographical distribution which had always been respected; questions raised about the validity of the appointment process of ICSC members rested with ACC and the General Assembly. Concerning recommendation 2, ICSC said it would complicate the task of both ACC and the Assembly without ensuring a mechanism that would enhance candidates' independence and objectivity. As to recommendation 3, the Commission said attempts to clarify or develop further qualification requirements for its members, for which clear guidance existed in its statute, could result in limiting the latter's scope. Recommendation 4 would require a statutory change and, since the existing cycle of appointments had worked well, it was difficult to see the potential benefit or improvement resulting from such a change.

ICSC fully endorsed recommendation 5. With regard to recommendation 6, it noted that ACC representation before the Fifth Committee was a matter for the Assembly to decide; ICSC had always kept in mind its responsibility concerning the provisions of rule 33 of its rules of procedure and had included financial implications in its report.

Concerning recommendation 7, ICSC noted that, at the informal consultations of the Fifth Committee, ACC had been represented by the Secretary of the Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (CCAQ), while some organizations had participated as observers. The Commission was convinced of the usefulness of its secretariat's full participation, together with the secretary of the informal consultations, as a matter of both principle and substance. With respect to a modification by the Assembly of an ICSC recommendation, it reiterated its position expressed in 1990 that in matters of substance, such a change should be referred back to it for consideration; at such time, both ACC and staff representatives would have an opportunity to comment.

ICSC supported recommendation 8, which, it said, it had itself encouraged over the years. Commenting on recommendation 9, it welcomed the attention drawn to its work programme, which in recent years had become unwieldy, emphasizing compensation issues at the expense of other personnel policy matters. Regarding the proposed creation of a steering committee to assign priorities and plan ICSC's work programme, the Commission saw no need to formalize a process already in place. It expressed opposition to a division into technical and policy groups and to the assignment of "portfolios" related to members' expertise, on the grounds that such a reorganization of its working methods would not enhance its efficiency or facilitate better understanding of the more technical issues which required an open debate among all members. The Commission was open, however, to exploring other ways of streamlining its working methods, such as dividing its session by issues and holding preliminary discussions on the more substantive issues that required lengthy debate; another approach would be to present in budgetary years a report for information purposes on which the Assembly would be invited to give guidance as appropriate, and in non-budgetary years a report on issues that required Assembly action. With respect to the proposed streamlining of ACPAQ ICSC recalled that it planned to review its terms of reference and update them when necessary. Currently, ACPAQ had not exceeded those terms and no review was therefore required; ACPAQ had been created in order to ensure highly technical and independent expertise which could not be replaced by a technical subcommittee or consultant.

Concerning recommendation 10, ICSC expressed full confidence in the independence and integrity of its secretariat, which it said had always been selected in accordance with the procedures set forth in its statute, and saw no need to depart from the current appointment process. It supported recommendation 11 as long as its financial and human resource implications were borne in mind. Regarding recommendation 12, the Commission recalled its intention to conduct a management review of the organization of its secretariat.

As to recommendation 13, ICSC was satisfied with the description of the roles of the officials mentioned as covered by its statute; it concurred with ACC that it would be inadvisable and perhaps detrimental to attempt to define those roles in a more restrictive way.

Finally, the Commission noted that, although ACC had made no formal recommendation on the location of its secretariat, the matter had been extensively discussed. It recalled that a change in location entailed a change in the statute, a matter on which all ICSC members expressed reservations and to which most were opposed. The Commission considered that the location of the secretariat and its Chairman and Vice-Chairman in New York did not affect its ability to serve the common system and its staff world-wide; it was also felt that proximity to the headquarters of a larger number of organizations could enhance understanding.

ICSC also considered a document prepared by the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations (FICSA) and agreed with ACC that it would not be appropriate to pursue FICSA's proposals for direct negotiations of conditions of service. The notion of direct negotiations was, by definition, incompatible with the concept of an independent, impartial, technical body such as ICSC, and, as far back as 1988, the Assembly had opposed FICSA's proposal, which was not only contrary to ICSC's statute but also not in accordance with the Staff Rules and Regulations.

Invites the executive heads of the organizations of the common system to consult the Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board before putting proposals relating to conditions of service of staff to their respective governing bodies, in order to avoid action inconsistent with the statute of the Commission and the regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as accepted by the organizations;

8. Reiterates its appeal to the organizations of the United Nations common system to refrain from seeking to establish for their staff, whether by provisions in their staff regulations or by other means, additional entitlements and benefits, as such actions would be detrimental to the common system under which all staff should receive equal treatment, irrespective of their employing organizations;

9. Urges the governing bodies of the organizations of the common system to respect fully decisions taken by the General Assembly, on the recommendations of the Commission and the Pension Board, in respect of the conditions of service of the staff;

10. Invites the Commission and the Pension Board to make appropriate recommendations for enhancing respect for and adherence to the common system of salaries, allowances and conditions of service by all governing bodies;

Staff assessment rates for General Service and related categories

1. Approves, for the General Service and related categories of staff and with effect from 1 January 1992, the scale of staff assessment rates contained in annex I to volume I of the report of the International Civil Service Commission and the modalities for its implementation as contained in paragraph 88 of volume I of the report;

2. Also approves, with effect from 1 January 1992, the amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, as set forth in annex I, paragraph 2, to the present resolution, to replace the present scale of staff assessment for the General Service and related categories;

IV

Margin considerations

Recalling that in section I, paragraph 2, of its resolution 40/244 of 18 December 1985, it approved a range of 110 to 120, with a desirable mid-point of 115, for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained around the desirable mid-point over a period of time,

Recalling also that in section I.C, paragraph 5, of its resolution 44/198, it requested the International Civil Service Commission to monitor the annual net remuneration margin over the five-year period beginning in calendar year 1990 with a view to ensuring, to the extent possible, that by the end of that period the average of the successive annual margins is around the desirable mid-point of 115,

Recalling further that in section VII of its resolution 45/241 of 21 December 1990, it requested the Commission to continue to monitor the evolution of the margin and also the impact of the potential changes in the United States federal civil service pay levels, as a result of the implementation of the Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act of 1990, and to submit recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session, with a view to avoiding a prolonged freeze of post adjustment within the five-year period from the calendar year 1990,

Taking note of the recommendations of the Commission as contained in paragraph 116 of volume I of its report and of the views expressed thereon by the Administrative Committee on Coordination and by Member States in the Fifth Committee,

Taking note also of the information provided by the Commission in respect of the anticipated effects of the implementation of the Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act of 1990 on pay levels in the comparator civil service and hence on the margin,

1. Decides, without prejudice to previous decisions on the averaging of the margin around the mid-point over a five-year period, that any post adjustment increase in New York which may become due until 1994 may be implemented to the extent that it is compatible with the upper limit of the margin;

2. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to continue to monitor further implementation of the comparator's Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act of 1990, including the impact of its locality pay provisions in 1994, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session, in order to enable the Assembly to address the issue of the average margin over a five-year period around the desirable mid-point of 115;

3. Endorses the procedure proposed for the management of the post adjustment system within the current margin range as contained in paragraph 109 (b) of volume I of the report of the Commission;

V

The base/floor scale

Recalling section I.E. of its resolution 44/198, by which it introduced a mobility and hardship allowance, with effect from 1 July 1990,

Recalling also section I.H. of the same resolution, by which it approved the establishment of a floor net salary scale, with effect from the same date, by reference to the corresponding base net salary levels of officials in comparable positions serving at the base city of the comparator civil service,

Recalling further its request to the International Civil Service Commission to report to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session on the operation of the mobility and hardship allowance and the assignment grant, and taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee on this matter, in particular on the link between the floor net salary scale and the mobility and hardship allowance,

1. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to include in its report, to be presented to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, a cost-benefit analysis of the operation of the mobility and hardship allowance, as well as an assessment of the personnel management benefits and details of savings achieved in other administrative costs with the introduction of the current arrangements;

2. Approves, with effect from 1 March 1992, the revised scale of gross and net salaries for staff in the Professional and higher categories contained in annex II to the present resolution and the consequential amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations, as reflected in annex I, paragraph 1, to the present resolution;

VI

Comparator

Reaffirming that the Noblemaire principle should continue to serve as the basis of comparison between United Nations common system emoluments and those of the highest-paid civil service,

Recalling that in section I.B. of its resolution 44/198, the General Assembly requested the International Civil Service Commission to propose at its forty-sixth session a methodology for carrying out checks every five years to determine which is the highest-paid civil service.

1. Endorses the conclusions of the International Civil Service Commission in respect of a methodology for conducting checks to determine the highest-paid civil service, as contained in annex V to volume I of its report, and requests that the development and application of this methodology be carried out as economically as possible;

2. Invites the Commission to analyse, in conjunction with the information requested in section IV, paragraph 2, of the present resolution, the potential consequences of the Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act of 1990 on the pay levels of the current comparator, the United States federal civil service, providing in the analysis full details of all the special pay systems which have been introduced by the comparator civil service, and report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-ninth session;

3. Requests the Commission to seek the views of the General Assembly on this matter after the completion of phase I of the methodology;

VII

Conditions of service of Assistant Secretaries-General and Under-Secretaries-General

Recalling section V of its resolution 45/241 by which it requested the International Civil Service Commission to reconsider, in a comprehensive manner, the remuneration of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system at the Assistant Secretary-General, Under-Secretary-General and equivalent levels,

Taking note of the recommendations of the Commission as contained in paragraph 173 of volume I of its report,

Noting that proposals are being advanced for the restructuring of the Secretariat and that the Secretary-General intends to conduct a review of representation allowances, honorariums and related matters,

Taking note of the views expressed by the Administrative Committee on Coordination, the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and Members States in the Fifth Committee on this question,

Decides to defer until its forty-seventh session a decision on the recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission regarding the conditions of service of staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system at the Assistant Secretary-General, Under-Secretary-General and equivalent levels;

VIII

Personnel policy considerations

Recalling its request in section XII of its resolution 45/241 that the International Civil Service Commission resume active consideration of the substantive areas covered under articles 13 and 14 of the statute of the Commission,

Recalling also the views contained in its resolutions 43/226 and 44/198 in the area of motivation and productivity of staff, including recognition of outstanding performance,

Stressing the importance of the Commission actively pursuing its mandate in respect of personnel policy and, in particular, of motivating the staff of the organizations of the United Nations common system,

Invites the International Civil Service Commission to pursue, as a matter of priority, its review of merit systems and performance appraisal in the common system as a vehicle for enhancing productivity and cost-effectiveness;

IX

Work programme

1. Takes note of the revisions which it has been necessary for the International Civil Service Commission to make to its work programme in connection with reports requested by the General Assembly:

(a) On the measurement of the housing element in the remuneration package;

(b) In respect of the establishment of a pilot project to simulate the operation of the proposals of the Commission in a limited number of field duty stations where valid housing comparisons were difficult or impossible;

(c) In respect of a revised rental subsidy scheme;

(d) Regarding the granting of expatriate entitlements to staff members living in their home countries while stationed at duty stations located in another country;

(e) In respect of the methodology for the determination of dependency allowances;

2. Requests the Commission to submit these reports at the earliest opportunity;

3. Also requests the Commission to include in its work programme a review of the differences between United Nations and United States net remuneration at individual grade levels and to report to the General Assembly at the earliest opportunity;

X

General Service salary survey methodology

Recalling section XIII, paragraph 4, of its resolution 45/241, in which it noted that the International Civil Service Commission would review in 1991 the methodology for the conduct of salary surveys of the General Service and related categories at headquarters duty stations, and requested the Commission to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session,

Recalling also section XIV of the same resolution, in which it requested the Commission to consider the relativities between the terms and conditions of service of staff in the Professional and higher categories and those in other categories, as well as the broader question of the recruitment and retention of staff,

Taking note of the results and related implications of the surveys of best prevailing conditions of service at Geneva and Vienna for the General Service and related categories of staff, as carried out by the Commission under article 12 of its statute,

Taking note also of the decision of the Commission to complete in 1992 its review of the methodology for conducting surveys of best prevailing conditions of employment for the General Service and related categories of staff at headquarters locations,

Requests the International Civil Service Commission speedily to conclude these reviews and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session.

20 December 1991 Meeting 79 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/46/808) without vote, 18 December (meeting 55); draft by Mexico elaborated following informal consultations (A/C.5/46/L. 13); agenda item 116.

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 5th Committee 34,38-43,55; plenary 74.

Privileges and immunities

Pursuant to a 1990 General Assembly request,<sup>(19)</sup> the Secretary-General, on behalf of and with the approval of ACC, submitted in October 1991 a report<sup>(20)</sup> on respect for the privileges and immunities of United Nations officials and those of related organizations. The Secretary-General reported that during the period from 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991, the number of new cases of arrest and detention of officials continued to be very high, most of them (160) relating to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). United Nations officials continued to experience difficulties in obtaining information on pending cases. As in previous years, the United Nations Security Coordinator acted, on behalf of the Secretary-General, as the focal point in ensuring inter-agency cooperation on security matters.

The Secretary-General also noted restrictions on official and private travel by host countries and unauthorized taxation. To explore measures to strengthen the United Nations response to cases of violation of staff members' privileges and immunities and proposals to enhance their safety and security, an ad hoc inter-agency meeting was convened at Geneva (10-13 June). The meeting stressed the importance of coordinated action and emphasized the importance of instituting appropriate measures to ensure that organizations could fulfil their obligations towards detained staff in respect of their health and right to medical care. The meeting reaffirmed the need to maintain a legal link with detained or arrested staff members through continued renewal of their contract until the matter was legally resolved.

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, by decision 46/468, retained on its agenda for discussion at its resumed session in 1992 the item on personnel questions, which also pertained to privileges and immunities.

Staff costs

In 1991, ICSC continued to advise the General Assembly on staff salaries and allowances and, in its report<sup>(1)</sup> made recommendations regarding pensionable remuneration for ungraded officials, General Service and related categories of staff and for staff in the Professional and higher categories.

The Commission continued to monitor the evolution of the margin and the impact on it of the potential changes in United States federal civil service pay levels resulting from the implementation of the Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act (FEPCA) of 1990, which had granted across-the-board salary increases on the General Schedule and related statutory pay schedules and for the Senior Executive Service. These increases were reflected in a net remuneration margin of 118.9 for the period 1 January to 31 December 1991. In order to avoid a prolonged freeze of remuneration that it considered would have undesirable consequences not only in New York but also at other duty stations, ICSC requested the Assembly to rescind its 1989 decision <sup>(2)</sup> requiring management of the margin over a five-year period so that the average margin would be around the mid-point, which would have the impact of a freeze. Noting that the locality pay provisions of FEPCA would be effected in 1994, the Commission further recommended a partial post adjustment increase for New York.

Further, the Commission recommended to the Assembly that the current base/floor salary scale be increased, through consolidation of post adjustment classes, by 8.6 per cent, bearing in mind that it would report in 1992 on the operation of the new mobility/hardship scheme. The Commission noted that the financial implications for 1992 were estimated at some $5.9 million.

In order to identify the highest-paid national civil service, ICSC recommended a two-phased methodology for conducting checks every five years, which included, inter alia, the identification and evaluation of both cash and any significant non-cash compensation of potential comparators, and the quantification of retirement, health, life/accident and other relevant non-cash schemes.

Following a review of the conditions of service of Assistant Secretaries-General (ASGs)/Under-Secretaries-General (USGs), the Commission recommended approximate working equivalents for those levels, as direct equivalencies could not be firmly established. It further recommended an increase in net remuneration levels in a range of 7 to 11 per cent, with the specific level to be determined by the Assembly. Revised housing arrangements were recommended, whereby executive heads would be authorized to exercise discretion to approve subsidy arrangements to USGs and ASGs, as were new arrangements under which eligible officials would receive a maximum rental subsidy amounting to 75 per cent of the threshold rent, replacing the current arrangements whereby a limit was placed on the maximum allowable rent for calculating rental subsidies.

The recommendations were acted on by the Assembly in resolution 46/191.

ACC adopted a statement commenting on ICSC's recommendations and staff-related issues; the statement was transmitted to the Fifth Committee by a November note of the Secretary-General. <sup>(3)</sup> Also transmitted for the Committee's consideration were the views of the Coordinating Committee for Independent Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System (CCISUA), <sup>(4)</sup> and those of FICSA. <sup>(5)</sup>

Emoluments of top-echelon officials

Honoraria

In an October 1991 report <sup>(6)</sup> on honoraria payable to members of organs and subsidiary organs of the United Nations, the Secretary-General proposed a 25 per cent increase in the rates of honoraria in cases that the General Assembly had already authorized on an exceptional basis, namely, the International Law Commission, the International Narcotics Control Board, the United Nations Administrative Tribunal, the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Committee on the Rights of the Child. Should the proposal be adopted, additional appropriations of $173,250 for the 1992-1993 biennium would be required.

On 20 December 1991, by resolution 46/185 A, section V, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided to defer consideration of the report until its 1992 session. A similar deferral was also recommended by ACABQ. <sup>(7)</sup>

Representation allowance

In accordance with a 1990 General Assembly request, (s) ICSC undertook in 1991 a comprehensive review of the conditions of service of ASGs and USGs (see above). It made specific recommendations on levels of remuneration and pay comparability vis-à-vis the United States federal civil service, housing arrangements and pensionable remuneration.

However, with respect to representation allowances, the Commission concluded that they were not susceptible to common system treatment and would best be handled by executive heads under guidance from the governing bodies of their respective organizations. In response to that conclusion, the Secretary-General submitted in November a report <sup>(9)</sup> in which he reviewed the history and levels of such allowances and proposed a staggered increase over the period 1992-1996, as follows: the annual amounts would be established at 50 per cent of monthly net remuneration in 1992, 60 per cent in 1993, 70 per cent in 1994, 80 per cent in 1995 and 100 per cent in 1996. To implement the proposed increase, additional requirements of $218,000 for 1992-1993 would be needed.

On 20 December 1991, by resolution 46/185 A, section VI, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided to defer consideration of the report until its 1992 session.

Remuneration of JIU members

In an April 1991 report <sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General noted that a 1990 restructuring of the salary scale for staff in the Professional and higher categories included an increase in the number of steps from four to six at the Director, or D-2, level. He believed that the intent of an earlier JIU statute was to place members of JIU on the highest step of the D-2 level, and therefore proposed that the new level of remuneration for Inspectors be established at the newly created step VI. Additional requirements related to the difference in net compensation between step IV and step VI would amount to $51,600 for 1991.

On 3 May 1991, by decision 45/456, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report to its forty-sixth session.

Pensions

During the year, the number of participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund increased from 58,263 to 60,183. On 31 December 1991, there were 32,294 periodic benefits in award: 10,797 retirement benefits, 5,691 early retirement benefits, 5,469 deferred retirement benefits, 4,331 widows' and widowers' benefits, 5,336 children's benefits, 616 disability benefits and 54 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, 3,488 lump-sum withdrawal and other settlements were paid.

During the same period, the principal of the Fund increased to $9,304,981,285 from $8,478,108,817.

The investment income of the Fund during the year amounted to $757,128,377, comprising $557,538,058 in interest and dividends and $199,590,319 in net profit on sales of investments. After deduction of investment management costs amounting to $12,083,011, net investment income was $745,045,366.

The Fund was administered by the 33-member United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, which held two sessions in 1991: its forty-second (special) session in Washington, D.C. (19-22 February), and its forty-third in Paris (16-25 July).

The major items dealt with by the Board were: the twenty-first actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1990; changes in the pension adjustment system, namely, the development of a long-term approach to the determination of initial local currency pensions, which the General Assembly had requested in 1990;<sup>(11)</sup> the comprehensive review of the pensionable remuneration and consequent pensions of staff in the General Service and related categories, undertaken by ICSC in cooperation with the Board; the review of the methodology for determining pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials, which the Assembly, also in 1990, had requested ICSC to undertake, in cooperation with the Board; the administrative expenses of the Fund; and the composition of the Board and the periodicity of its sessions.

The Board also examined, among other things, the management of the Fund's investments (see below), the financial statements and schedules for the year ended 31 December 1990, the interest rate applicable to the lump-sum commutation of periodic benefits, and the actuarial implications of extending the maximum number of years of creditable contributory service.

In accordance with article 4 of the Regulations, the Board appointed a Standing Committee to act on its behalf when it was not in session.

ACABQ submitted its comments on the reports of the Board and of the Secretary-General on the Fund's investments (see below) in November.<sup>(12)</sup> Earlier, in July,<sup>(13)</sup> it expressed concurrence in the provisional application of changes in the pension scheme regulations for members of the International Court of Justice.

Pension Fund investments

The assets of the Pension Fund represented a market value of $9.338 billion as at 31 March 1991, an increase of $780 million (or 9.11 per cent) over the previous year and $848 million above the book value. Total investment return for the year ended 31 March 1991 was 8.9 per cent which, after adjusting for inflation, represented a "real" rate of return of 3.8 per cent.

The Fund remained one of the most diversified pension funds in the world. Investments were held in 33 different currencies and 42 countries; 55 per cent of its assets were invested in currencies other than the United States dollar, the Fund's unit of account. Of the Fund's investments, 64 per cent were in markets outside the United States.

Equities constituted 39 per cent of the assets as of 31 March 1991, down from 40 per cent for the previous year; 43 per cent of these were in United States equities and 57 per cent in other equity markets. The bond proportion was unchanged at 39 per cent, with United States dollar-denominated bonds accounting for 38 per cent and other currency bonds 62 per cent. In order to preserve the Fund's principal, the defensive policy adopted in the mid- 1980s was continued but changed slightly. It consisted of taking profits in selected securities that appeared overvalued and placing the related proceeds in securities with potential for future application. Short-term investments and reserves, i.e., cash and fixed-income investments with maturity dates of less than one year, were increased to 12 per cent from 9 per cent a year earlier.

In order to preserve the Fund's capital, realize profits and respond to market and currency movements, short-term shifts were made within the long-term guideline ranges. The proportion of investments in North American currencies decreased to 53 per cent from 54 per cent a year earlier.

As at 30 June 1991, the book value of the Fund's development-related investments amounted to $1,435.2 million, up from $1,277.2 million in the previous year, an increase of 12.4 per cent. Investments in development institutions amounted to $1,137.2 million compared with $1,036.6 million, an increase of 9.7 per cent. Direct investments in specific developing countries increased by 23.9 per cent, from $240.6 million to $298 million. Direct investments and those through regional development institutions in Africa increased by 23.6 per cent, to $144.7 million from $117.1 million; in Latin America by 29.6 per cent, to $316.3 million from $244.1 million; and in Asia by 26.3 per cent, to $397.1 million from $314.3 million. The combined development-related assets as at 30 June 1991 represented 16.9 per cent of the total book value of the Fund.

In an October report on the Fund's investments,<sup>(14)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that, considering the volatility of the financial markets, fluctuations of exchange rates and the slow-down in economic expansion, the investment return of 8.9 per cent was satisfactory. The defensive strategy of taking profits where appropriate and the diversification policy of increasing investments in markets and instruments that performed better contributed to the Fund's satisfactory performance.

The Secretary-General considered the policy of diversification and careful selection of investment instruments, including consistent investigation of opportunities in developing countries, to be the best way to achieve the goal of preserving the Fund's principal and enhancing its investment return over the medium and long term. He said he would continue to discharge his fiduciary responsibilities through investment decisions that adhered to the principles of sound investment management and accorded with the criteria, policies and values embodied in General Assembly resolutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 46/192 without vote.

United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 45/242 of 21 December 1990 and 45/268 of 28 June 1991,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 1991 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, chapter III of volume I of the report of the International Civil Service Commission, the report of the Secretary-General on the investments of the Fund, and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

I

Actuarial situation of the United Nations

Joint Staff Pension Fund

Recalling section I of its resolution 44/199 of 21 December 1989, in which it approved measures to restore the actuarial balance of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund over the long term,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the significant reduction in the actuarial imbalance from 3.71 to 0.57 per cent of pensionable remuneration, reflected in the valuation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund as at 31 December 1990;

2. Takes note of the decision of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to retain the current 6.5 per cent interest rate for lump-sum commutations and of its intention to review that rate in 1993, in the light of the results of the actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1992;

3. Takes note also of the observations of the Board concerning the maximum number of years of creditable contributory service in the Fund, in paragraphs 40 to 53 of its report, and of its intention to review this matter again in 1993 in the light of the results of the actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1992;

Pensionable remuneration and pensions of staff in the General Service and related categories

Recalling that the Standing Committee of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, acting on behalf of the Board, informed the General Assembly at its forty-third session, in paragraph 75 of the report of the Board, of its conclusion that a comprehensive review of the methodology for determining the pensionable remuneration and consequent pensions of staff in the General Service and related categories should be undertaken,

Also recalling that in section III of its resolution 45/242, the General Assembly took note of the intention of the International Civil Service Commission to undertake in 1991, in full cooperation with the Board, such a comprehensive review and requested that recommendations thereon should be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session,

Noting that the Commission and the Board considered a number of methodological alternatives, but had not found it possible to submit specific recommendations to the General Assembly at its current session,

Taking note of the divergent views reflected in the reports of the Commission and the Board, on whether the current methodology gives rise to inconsistencies and problems and on the merits of the alternative methodologies examined,

Appreciating the complexities and the importance of the issues involved for all parties concerned, that is, staff, administrations and Member States,

Noting the positions in the Commission that the current arrangements have given rise to inconsistencies and anomalies and that therefore retention of the current methodology without change is not a viable option,

1. Concur with the conclusions of the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board that further studies are required of possible alternative methodologies in order to determine the most equitable solution for all parties concerned, including in particular studies of the feasibility of determining pensionable remuneration and/or pensions by reference to the local practices of employers used in General Service salary surveys, of the use of the income replacement approach followed in determining the pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories, and of the use of local taxes to derive the pensionable remuneration from the net pensionable salaries;

2. Endorses the phased approach to the comprehensive review and the timetable for its completion set out in paragraph 84 of volume I of the report of the Commission;

3. Concurs with the observation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, in paragraph 14 of its report, that the recommendations of the Commission and the Board should aim to eliminate current anomalies in the system and that the further studies should be completed within the proposed time-frame;

4. Requests the Commission and the Board in their further studies to take into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, including in particular those related to the administrative and financial implications of determining pensions in accordance with local practices of employers used in the General Service salary surveys, and to the alternative of reflecting local conditions in the determination of the pensionable remuneration through the application of local tax rates to gross up net pensionable salaries;

Pensionable remuneration and pensions of ungraded officials

Recalling section II of its resolution 45/242, in which it expressed the belief that a common system approach should be used for the determination of the pensionable remuneration and pensions of all participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, including ungraded officials,

Having considered the views of the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the methodology for determining the pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials, including the executive heads of member organizations who are participants in the Fund, as set out in paragraphs 51 to 71 of volume I of the report of the Commission, and paragraphs 110 to 132 of the report of the Board.

1. Reiterates its concern at the divergent practices that have emerged since 1984 in respect of the pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials and in particular of the executive heads of member organizations who are participants in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund;

2. Concurs with the observation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions contained in paragraph 26 of its report, that the methodology for determining the pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials should be considered with a view to eliminating the inconsistencies in the amounts of pensionable remuneration of certain of these officials;

3. Endorses the recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission that officials appointed or elected to ungraded posts who become participants in the Fund should have their pensionable remuneration determined in accordance with the methodology set out in paragraph 64 of volume I of the report of the Commission, with the modification indicated in paragraph 66 thereof;

4. Also endorses the recommendation of the Commission that the pensionable remuneration of such officials should be adjusted between comprehensive reviews in accordance with the procedure applicable for adjustment of the scale of pensionable remuneration of staff in the Professional and higher categories, as set out in article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the Fund;

5. Urges the governing bodies of the other member organizations of the Fund to adopt the methodology and adjustment procedure recommended by the Commission for determining the pensionable remuneration of their ungraded officials who become participants in the Fund, and to inform the General Assembly, the Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board of the action taken in this regard;

6. Also urges the governing bodies of the other member organizations of the Fund to review the current levels of pensionable remuneration of their ungraded officials who are participants in the Fund, with a view to eliminating the divergencies from the levels established on the basis of the above methodology, taking into account the need to protect acquired rights derived from earlier decisions by the governing bodies concerned;

7. Requests the Board to consider again, at its next regular session, amendments to the Regulations of the Fund to incorporate provisions governing the pensionable remuneration of ungraded officials and to extend the provisions placing a limit on the highest levels of pensions to cover all participants in the Fund, including ungraded officials, and to submit recommendations thereon to the General Assembly;

8. Takes note of the views of the Commission, as set out in paragraphs 70 and 71 of volume I of its report, that, in the event that the governing body of a member organization decides that its elected officials should not be participants in the Fund, the alternative pension arrangements should be determined by that governing body taking into account the terms of office and the desirability of establishing some comparability in the pension arrangements applicable to such officials;

9. Requests the Commission to recommend guidelines for determining the pension arrangements for ungraded officials who do not become participants in the Fund, so as to ensure system-wide comparability, as well as appropriate monitoring procedures, and to submit recommendations thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session and to the governing bodies of the other organizations of the United Nations common system;

IV

Changes in the pension adjustment system

Recalling its request, contained in section IV, paragraph 5, of its resolution 45/242 and reaffirmed in paragraph 5 of its resolution 45/268, that the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board give priority to the development of a long-term approach to the determination of initial local currency pensions,

Also recalling section IV, paragraph 6, of its resolution 45/242 in which it invited the governing bodies of the other member organizations of The United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund to refrain from seeking to establish additional pension entitlements for their staff, as well as paragraph 6 of its resolution 45/268, in which it reiterated that position,

1. Takes note of section III. F of the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on the pension adjustment system, in particular on the longer-term modifications of that system considered by the Board for determining the initial local currency pensions, in the light of the expiration on 31 March 1992 of the transitional measure approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/242;

2. Also takes note of the observations of the Board, in paragraphs 180 and 181 of its report, on the implications of the resolution adopted by the Administrative Council of the International Telecommunication Union on a pension purchasing power protection insurance plan for the staff of the Union;

3. Approves the longer-term modification of the pension adjustment system and its effective dates, as recommended by the Board in paragraphs 175 and 176 of its report, and the consequential changes in the pension adjustment system, as set out in annex I to the present resolution;

4. Notes the intention of the Board to monitor closely the actual costs of the modification of the pension adjustment system approved herein;

5. Endorses the views of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, as set out in paragraphs 22 and 23 of its report, that the Board should, on the basis of experience with the actual costs, determine whether any fine-tuning of the modification is warranted in order to limit the costs and that the guidelines set forth in General Assembly resolution 31/196 of 22 December 1976 should continue to be taken into account so as to ensure that changes in the pension adjustment system do not require increases in the financial liabilities of Member States;

6. Requests the Board at its next regular session to continue to consider economy measures, taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, and including in particular a change of the "120 per cent cap" provision under the two-track pension adjustment system given the increased protection provided by the modification of the system approved herein;

V

Composition of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

1. Takes note of the observations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, in section III.G of its report, on its composition and on the periodicity of its regular sessions;

2. Also takes note of the recommendation that no change be made in the composition of the Board at the present time, and requests the Board to keep this matter under review and to submit a further report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

3. Further takes note of the decision of the Board to hold its regular sessions henceforth on a biennial basis;

VI

Amendment to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund

1. Approves, with effect from 1 January 1992, an amendment to article 14 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set out in annex II to the present resolution, to provide for reporting by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the Fund at least once every two years, rather than annually, in the light of the decision of the Board to hold its regular sessions henceforth on a biennial basis;

2. Requests that the activities of the Standing Committee of the Board should be reported to the General Assembly in years when the Board does not meet only if the Standing Committee judges that action by the Assembly is required;

VII

Emergency Fund

2. Approves expenses, chargeable directly to the Fund, totalling 40,403,600 dollars net for the biennium 1992-1993, and an increase in expenses of 2,116,100 dollars net for the biennium 1990-1991, for the administration of the Fund;

IX

Other matters

Takes note of the other matters discussed in the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board;

X

General Assembly resolution 46/192

20 December 1991 Meeting 79 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/46/816) without vote, 18 December (meeting 551: draft by Mexico (A/C.5/46/L.14) following informal consultations; agenda, item 115.

Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 5th Committee 34, 38-43, 55; plenary 79.

UN common system and pension system

At the resumed forty-fifth session of the General Assembly, Australia, Canada, Japan, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States requested that the agenda items on the United Nations common system and pension system be reopened to consider the impact of a proposal by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) to implement unilaterally a pension purchasing power protection insurance plan, as well as the decision of the ITU Secretary-General to grant a special post allowance to the agency's Professional staff. ITU's proposals were transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in June.<sup>(15)</sup> Explaining its action in the Assembly's Fifth Committee, ITU said that the Board's decision to establish a floor ratio for the rate of exchange, with effect from 1 January 1988, had somewhat stabilized the situation, but expiration of that measure in 1990 had led to a resurgence of instability and uncertainty and ITU had had to ensure that the real pensions of its staff would not fall below those of their counterparts in New York. The pension purchasing power protection insurance plan had been prepared but not implemented, since the ITU Administrative Council still hoped that the Fifth Committee and the Pension Board would act to correct the situation.

Subsequent to the ITU proposals, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) decided to establish a voluntary thrift benefit fund for its employees which would also provide benefits for its staff over and above those provided to other staff members employed in the common system. According to ILO, the fund, in the amount of $4.8 million, was being financed by interest accrued on the terminal benefits fund; the endowment would be limited to officials in service at the time of approval and, since the scheme was voluntary, it was not part of the statutory conditions of service and would not be financed by ILO itself, which would have no responsibility for its future viability.

Canada, on behalf of the States that had requested a reopening of the agenda items, recalled that the Assembly, in 1990, <sup>(16)</sup> had called on the Pension Board, as a matter of priority, to make recommendations for a long-term approach to the issue of the initial local currency pensions, which underlay ILO and ITU concerns, and had endorsed transitional measures where appropriate. In the light of the work in progress on those matters, it was regrettable that ITU had elected to take unilateral action.

Addressing the issue, ICSC expressed its concern at ILO's decision to establish a voluntary thrift benefit fund and concluded that the decision should concern only staff members who were affected by the change effective 17 February 1991, i.e., excluding staff members joining after that date. With regard to ITU's decision to implement unilaterally a pension purchasing power protection insurance plan, the Commission noted that the Pension Board had dealt with the matter under its mandate. The Commission expressed deep regret at ITU's action to grant a special post allowance, affirming that that did not constitute a precedent, and invited United Nations organizations to consult and to cooperate fully with it on all matters falling within its mandate.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 28 June 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 45/268 without vote.

United Nations common system and United Nations pension system

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 3357(XXIX) of 18 December 1974, by which it approved the statute of the International Civil Service Commission,

Recalling also the importance of ensuring that the governing bodies of the organizations of the United Nations common system take common positions with regard to matters of concern for the system,

Reaffirming the central role of the International Civil Service Commission in the regulation and coordination of conditions of service, including pensionable remuneration of all graded and ungraded staff of the United Nations common system, and the mandate of the Commission relating to the establishment of conditions of entitlement to benefits under article 11 of its statute,

Recalling section IV of its resolution 44/199 of 21 December 1989, by which it endorsed the conclusions of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board as set out in paragraphs 115 and 116 of its report, that the proposal of the International Telecommunication Union should be studied as one possible long-term approach to the adjustment of pensions in local currency terms and that the Union should not proceed with the implementation of its proposal, as that would weaken the United Nations common system,

Noting that, in accordance with its resolution 45/242 of 21 December 1990, the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board has given priority to the development of a long-term approach to the determination of initial local currency pensions in order to submit recommendations on appropriate changes in the pension adjustment system to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session,

Concerned about the potential impact on the United Nations common system and the United Nations pension system of the decision taken by the International Labour Conference of the International Labour Organisation at its seventy-eighth session to proceed with its proposal to establish a voluntary thrift benefit fund and of the decision of the Administrative Council of the International Telecommunication Union at its forty-sixth session to implement unilaterally a pension purchasing power protection insurance plan, as well as of the decision of the Secretary-General of the Union to grant a special post allowance to headquarters staff at the Professional and Director levels,

Taking account of the statements made in the Fifth Committee at its 63rd meeting,

1. Expresses deep concern and regret at the actions taken unilaterally by the International Telecommunication Union and the International Labour Organisation without due regard for their obligations under the United Nations common system;

2. Reaffirms that the conditions of service of the staff in the United Nations common system should be determined in accordance with principles aimed at the development of a single unified international civil service through the application of common personnel standards, methods and arrangements;

3. Emphasizes the obligations of all organizations of the United Nations common system to consult and cooperate fully with the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board on matters relating to conditions of service and pensions;

4. Requests the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to examine the basis for the decisions taken by the International Labour Organisation and the International Labour Organisation and their implications for the common system, within the context of their respective relevant work programmes, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

5. Reiterates the request for the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to place the highest priority on ensuring that the reports requested by the General Assembly in its resolution 45/241 of 21 December 1990 on the United Nations common system and in its resolution 45/242 on the United Nations pension system are available for full consideration by the Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

6. Reiterates its appeal to the organizations of the United Nations common system to refrain from seeking to establish for their staff, whether by provisions in their staff regulations or by other means, additional entitlements and benefits, as such actions would be detrimental to the United Nations common system under which all staff should receive equal treatment, irrespective of their employing organizations;

7. Requests the Secretary-General, in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination, to urge all the executive heads of the organizations of the United Nations common system to cooperate fully with the International Civil Service Commission in the discharge of its responsibilities under article 1 of its statute.

28 June 1991 Meeting 79 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/45/1031) without vote. 27 June (meeting 64); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/45/L.33), orally revised: agenda items 127 & 128.

Meeting numbers. GA 45th session: 5th Committee 63, 64; plenary 79.

In resolution 46/191, the Assembly deplored ITU's and ILO's decisions and stressed that their actions should not be invoked as precedents.

Administration of justice

In a September 1991 report<sup>(1)</sup> on the administration of justice in the Secretariat, the Secretary-General reviewed the formal and informal mechanisms for dealing with staff grievances and appeals, the disciplinary process and developments during the year. He stated that the trend towards a substantial increase in the number of requests for review of administrative decisions was maintained; requests between 1 January and 30 July 1991 numbered 138. There also continued to be an increase in the number of cases submitted to the Headquarters Joint Appeals Board, with 68 appeals having been filed during the first eight months of 1991, 28 per cent more than in the previous year.

Despite the increased case-load, the disposition of cases accelerated. Time for completion of an appeal was reduced to an average of five months in 1991, compared with six months in 1990, down from an average of two years prior to implementation of the 1987 reform programme.<sup>(2)</sup> With regard to the number of pending cases in Geneva, the backlog situation worsened in 1991, while the Nairobi and Vienna Boards, which had very small case-loads, functioned without any major problems.

In March, the Headquarters Joint Appeals Board adopted comprehensive rules of procedure and guidelines and, in May, the Secretary-General appointed a new Board, with an increase in the voluntary membership to 90, thereby distributing responsibility more broadly. For the first time, a gender balance was achieved, as well as enhanced geographical representation.

The Secretary-General continued to accept unanimous Joint Appeals Board recommendations except where major questions of law or principle were impinged upon. During the first eight months of 1991, he took final decisions on 42 reports on appeals from the Boards at Headquarters, Geneva and Nairobi. In 29 cases, he accepted the recommendations in full; in 10 cases, he accepted them in part; and in 4 cases, he rejected the recommendations.

The Panel on Discrimination and Other Grievances handled 99 cases during the period under review.

In compliance with a 1990 General Assembly request<sup>(3)</sup> that a well-functioning disciplinary system be established, an administrative instruction was issued in August 1991,<sup>(4)</sup> which for the first time provided guidelines and instructions on the application of chapter X of the Staff Rules for initial investigation, fact-finding and Joint Disciplinary Committee stages. The instruction also established an expeditious procedure for the constitution of ad hoc joint disciplinary committees and ensured that the basic requirements of due process were afforded to staff members against whom misconduct was alleged. During the first three months since its inception, the ad hoc committee considered and finalized 29 cases, mainly concerning tax fraud allegations. The reform programme he had instituted with regard to administrative justice was working reasonably well, the Secretary-General stated in conclusion.

The United Nations Administrative Tribunal, according to its annual note to the Assembly,<sup>(5)</sup> delivered 45 judgements during the year in cases brought by staff members against the Secretary-General or the executive heads of other United Nations organizations to resolve disputes involving terms of appointment and related rules and regulations.

On 20 December, by decision 46/468, the General Assembly retained on its agenda the item of personnel questions under which the Secretary-General reported, for consideration at a later date.

Travel

Standards of accommodation for air travel

In response to a 1989 General Assembly request,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in 1991 a report<sup>(2)</sup> on standards of accommodation for air travel which, he said, were governed by a 1987 Assembly resolution.<sup>(3)</sup> Under that resolution, it was provided that all individuals-with the exception of the Secretary-General and the heads of delegations of the least developed countries to the regular and special sessions of the Assembly-whose travel was financed by the United Nations and who had been previously entitled to first-class accommodation, would be required to travel at the class immediately below, but that exceptions to allow first-class travel may be authorized by the Secretary-General on a case-by-case basis. Those exceptions, the Secretary-General said, generally fell into four categories: a medical condition, unavailability of the normal standard of accommodation, where the traveller was considered an eminent person donating his or her services to the United Nations, and where a staff member, after completing a full day of work, was required to travel through the night in order to resume work immediately on arrival. During the period from 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991, the Secretary-General authorized 100 such exceptions at a cost of $100,477, compared with 109 exceptions in the previous period at a cost of $95,956.

In his report, the Secretary-General also proposed that, due to the deterioration of economy-class service and burdensome pre-departure and post-arrival requirements, two and one half hours be added to the scheduled flying time when determining the duration of a journey, making an upgrade to the next class of service available after six and one half hours instead of the current nine hours. He estimated the financial imlications at some $930,000 for 1992-1993.

After considering the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ in December,<sup>(4)</sup> recommended that he prepare a more comprehensive study to enable the Assembly to evaluate the entire system of staff and representative travel and that no decision be taken at the 1991 Assembly session.

On 20 December, by decision 46/450, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report, endorsed the comments of ACABQ and requested the Secretary-General to submit a review/evaluation of the current system, together with specific proposals, to it at its 1992 session.

Chapter III

Other administrative and management questions

During 1991, the Committee on Conferences examined ways in which the use of conference resources could be made more effective within the United Nations system. It also considered a study on the improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and improved organization of work, the possibility of central planning and coordination of all organizational aspects of conference servicing, the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council for 1992-1993 and the procedures with regard to inter-sessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences.

In December, the General Assembly approved the calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the 1992-1993 biennium (resolution 46/190).

Action was taken by the Assembly on a number of questions related to the 1992-1993 programme budget (46/185 A and B), including budget estimates for the International Computing Centre at Geneva; translation and interpretation services for the Economic Commission for Africa; administration and unified conference services at the United Nations offices at Vienna; the construction of conference facilities at Bangkok, Thailand, and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; publications policy; the workload of committees; and implementation of technological innovations. An agreement on the establishment of a new United Nations Information Centre at Windhoek, Namibia, was signed in August.

The need for access of Member States to United Nations informatics systems was underscored in an Economic and Social Council resolution (1991/70), by which the Secretary-General was also requested to study the problem and outline a solution.

Conferences and meetings

In 1991, the Committee on Conferences examined the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the 1992-1993 biennium. It considered requests for additions or changes to the approved 1991 calendar,<sup>(1)</sup> as well as requests to meet during the General Assembly session. Among the other topics examined by the Committee related to the calendar of conferences were improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and improved organization of work, including the possibility of central planning and coordination of all organizational aspects of conference servicing; consideration of the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of subsidiary organs of the Economic and Social Council for 1992-1993; and the procedures with regard to inter-sessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences.

Other matters dealt with in the Committee's September report<sup>(2)</sup> were improved coordination of conferences, meetings of organs and programmes not funded from the regular United Nations budget, review of the Department of Conference Services' programme performance and application of new technology to conference services.

The Committee held an organizational meeting on 6 March and met on 12 June to review the provisional calendar of Economic and Social Council conferences and meetings for 1992 and 1993. A substantive meeting was held from 19 to 22 August.

Mandate of the Committee on Conferences

In 1988, the General Assembly had decided to retain the Committee on Conferences as a permanent subsidiary organ with broader responsibilities, including the ability to examine ways in which to improve the efficiency and cost-effectiveness of the use of conference-servicing resources.<sup>(3)</sup> Thus, in 1991, as in past years, the Committee recommended measures to promote the efficiency of the Secretariat with regard to the planning and servicing of meetings and conferences and the provision of documentation, as well as the efficiency with which intergovernmental bodies utilized the conference-servicing resources available to them. It also continued to perform its primary task, which was to present to the Assembly, through the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, a draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the coming year or biennium.

Calendar for 1991

At its organizational meeting in March, the Committee decided that proposed changes to the calendar that did not have programme budget implications could be dealt with by the Secretariat in consultation with the Bureau of the Committee. Several such requests were made for 1991.

In December 1990, the Committee approved a request to schedule a session of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal from 11 February to 1 March 1991 in accordance with the Tribunal's statute, which stated that extraordinary sessions might be convened when the number or urgency of cases required it.

At the request of the Bureau of the Economic and Social Council, the Committee considered a proposal by the Secretary-General to hold the thirty-fourth session of the Commission on Narcotic Drugs from 29 April to 9 May at Vienna, instead of 30 January to 8 February. The Committee did not object to the proposal, on the understanding that it would not give rise to any implications for the regular budget.

The Committee agreed that the Commission on Transnational Corporations could suspend its seventeenth session and hold informal consultations on 6 May, to be followed by a resumed session on 7 May. It did this on the understanding that the meetings would be scheduled when conference services were available in order to obviate the need for any additional expenditures.

A request to schedule a meeting of the Standing Committee for Programme Matters of the United Nations Development Programme from 6 to 10 May in New York was approved by the Committee, on the understanding that no additional appropriations would be involved.

In April, the Committee was informed that the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People had decided to hold the 1991 North American Regional Non-Governmental Organizations Symposium from 28 to 30 June at Montreal, Canada, instead of from 26 to 28 June in New York, in accordance with a 1990 resolution.<sup>(4)</sup> This was approved on the understanding that the additional costs of holding the meeting away from Headquarters would be met from within the 1990-1991 programme budget.

Requests for extensions of the sessions of the Committee for Programme and Coordination (CPC) and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) were approved, on the understanding that all additional meetings would be serviced from available conference-servicing resources.

A request from the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for a special session from 9 to 11 September was approved by the Committee, on the condition that it would not give rise to implications for the regular budget of the Organization.

Calendar for 1992-1993

During a meeting on 21 August, the Committee approved the draft calendar of conferences and meetings for 1992-1993, as orally amended. The draft took full account of the decisions taken at the second regular session of the Economic and Social Council in July, and of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the Assembly.

Two major phenomena affected the 1992-1993 draft calendar: the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, scheduled for 1 to 12 June 1992, and the changes resulting from the May 1991 Assembly resolution 45/264 on restructuring and revitalization in the economic, social and related fields (see PART THREE, Chapter XVIII).

During its discussion, the Committee said there was a lack of information on the actions and decisions taken by the Economic and Social Council during its consideration of the draft calendar. Also, relatively few of the specific proposals had been incorporated into the draft. For example, the question of biennialization, which could enhance the efficiency of the calendar, did not appear to have been considered by the Council.

The Committee observed that the Assembly should be advised to request the Trusteeship Council to review its meeting requirements to take account of the number of times it actually met. It recommended to the Assembly that it adopt the 1992-1993 draft calendar and that it request the Economic and Social Council to reconsider biennializing the meetings of its subsidiary organs. Also, the Secretariat was requested to research the options available for graphic presentation of the calendar of conferences.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 46/190 without vote.

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences,

Recalling its relevant resolutions, including resolutions 43/222 B of 21 December 1988, 44/196 A of 21 December 1989 and 45/238 A of 21 December 1990,

Taking note of the comments made by Member States in the Fifth Committee during the forty-sixth session of the General Assembly,

Noting the role of the Committee on Conferences with regard to inter-sessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and meetings,

Noting also that the objective in continuing the study and analysis of utilization rates is to bring about a more effective disposition of conference-servicing resources,

Recognising that improvements in the utilization of conference-servicing resources have been recorded and that further improvements could be achieved, including in the precision of planning the use of conference-servicing resources,

Reading paragraph 23 of the first report of the General Committee, as approved by the General Assembly, which requires that Main Committees review the number of special conferences of the United Nations already proposed and scheduled in their respective fields of activity prior to deciding upon the scheduling of new and additional conferences and that there should be an overall limit of five special conferences in a given year.

Keeping in mind its resolutions 33/56 of 14 December 1978, 36/117 B of 10 December 1981 and 45/238 B of 21 December 1990, which request the Secretary-General to take appropriate measures to ensure that pre-session documents for meetings are distributed no less than six weeks before the meetings, simultaneously in all official languages of the organs of the United Nations, and to circulate eight weeks before the opening of a session of an intergovernmental body, with the annotated agenda of the session, a report on the state of preparation at that time of all the documents in all languages required for the session,

Recalling the proposal of the Secretary-General at the forty-fourth session of the General Assembly to undertake a fresh outside look at the Department of Conference Services of the Secretariat during the biennium 1990-1991, as well as the relevant decisions of the Assembly in this regard,

Noting with concern that the rule concerning the issuance of documents in all official languages six weeks before the meetings has not been observed in many organs of the United Nations,

1. Approves the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the biennium 1992-1993 as submitted by the Committee on Conferences;

2. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make adjustments in the calendar of conferences and meetings for 1992 that may become necessary as a result of action and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its forty-sixth session;

3. Calls upon the Committee on Conferences and the Secretariat to analyse alternative scheduling arrangements for the substantive session of the Economic and Social Council and the ramifications of possible adjustments to the dates as currently scheduled for 1993, bearing in mind the provision of General Assembly resolution 45/264 of 13 May 1991 which stipulates that the substantive session should take place between May and July;

4. Takes note of the guidelines adopted by the Committee on Conferences with regard to inter-sessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and meetings;

5. Invites the Economic and Social Council to consider formalizing its procedures with regard to inter-sessional departures from the approved calendar of conferences and meetings, by granting authority to the Committee on Conferences to act on its behalf when it is not in session and consulting the Committee whenever it is seized with such requests;

6. Requests the Economic and Social Council to consider proposals on the biennialization of meetings or agenda items of its subsidiary bodies where appropriate, taking fully into account the ongoing restructuring and revitalization process envisaged in General Assembly resolution 45/264 and the views expressed by the subsidiary bodies;

7. Recalls that no subsidiary organ of the General Assembly may meet at Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly, and requests subsidiary organs to re-evaluate their reporting cycles with a view to completing annual work programmes, where possible, prior to the start of regular sessions of the Assembly;

8. Requests the Committee on Conferences to examine, in the light of the approved calendars of conferences and meetings, particularly that for the biennium 1992-1993, trends in meeting and documentation requirements, as well as the related workload of the Secretariat, on the basis of the relevant statistics and projections covering the period from 1984 to 1993 to be submitted by the Secretary-General, and to report its findings to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

9. Requests the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences and the Secretary-General to maintain their contacts with United Nations organs, bringing to their attention ways to ensure the most efficient and effective use of conference services allocated to those organs, including, inter alia, the convening of meetings in a timely manner, rationalizing, to the extent possible, their meeting requirements, as well as monitoring the timely issuance and availability of documentation;

10. Requests the Committee on Conferences to consider, within its mandate, measures to improve the overall efficiency and effectiveness of the use of conference-servicing resources;

11. Requests all subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council to undertake informal consultations on a regular basis for the purpose of improving the utilization of their conference-servicing resources;

12. Requests the Chairmen of the subsidiary bodies mentioned in paragraph 11 above to report the results of the consultations to the Chairman of the Committee on Conferences, and the Secretary-General to submit a comprehensive analysis of replies received to the Committee on Conferences;

13. Requests the Committee on Conferences, in consultation with the organs concerned, to examine the cases where the utilization factor is lower than the established benchmark figure for at least three sessions, with a view to reporting on problems and factors that have given rise to such a situation, and to make appropriate recommendations in order to achieve the optimum utilization of conference-servicing resources;

14. Invites the Trusteeship Council to review its meeting requirements;

15. Welcomes the decision of the Committee on Conferences to incorporate an availability index on pre-session documentation into the experimental methodology on the utilization of conference-servicing resources, and requests the Committee on Conferences, in continuing its analysis of the experimental methodology, to consider additional elements proposed in the Fifth Committee, including a review of the benchmark figure up to 85 per cent and the separate presentation of data on time lost due to the late starting and the early ending of meetings;

16. Requests the Secretariat, in order to promote increased utilization of conference resources available, to schedule meetings consecutively within one three-hour meeting period, as appropriate;

17. Invites the Committee on Conferences, in close consultation with the Secretariat and taking into account views expressed in the Fifth Committee, to strengthen its efforts in the coordinated planning of conference-servicing resources, including an examination of the current situation, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session and as appropriate at subsequent sessions, through the Committee on Conferences and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, a consolidated statement relating to the number and costs of scheduled special conferences, bearing in mind the annual limit of five as set out in Assembly resolution 40/243 of 18 December 1985 and endorsed in Assembly resolution 41/213 of 19 December 1986;

19. Requests the Committee on Conferences to continue to monitor the meetings services provided to organs and programmes not funded from the regular budget and to consider the impact of their scheduling on the calendar of conferences and meetings;

20. Invites the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme and the Executive Board of the United Nations Children's Fund to review their meeting and documentation requirements, in the light of their significant financial implications, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, through the Committee on Conferences;

21. Requests the Secretary-General, in the context of the systematic and progressive replacement and upgrading of the equipment in the conference rooms, to make proposals to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, taking advantage of the experience gained by other organizations of the United Nations system, on the usefulness and feasibility of installing an appropriate signalling system to enable systematically each speaker, as well as the Chairman and participants, whenever a speech time-limit is established in accordance with rule 72 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, to monitor the time left before actually breaking the time-limit;

22. Notes that investments in new technologies are essential for optimum use of all resources, and in view of the heavy capital outlay and recurrent costs, requests the Secretary-General to continue to take appropriate measures to maximize the compatibility and cost-effectiveness of the new technologies to be introduced throughout the United Nations system;

23. Urges that the applications of new technologies should, to the extent possible, be introduced evenly throughout all United Nations conference centres;

24. Urges the Secretary-General to take necessary measures to ensure that pre-session documents for meetings are distributed no less than six weeks before the meetings, unless there is a specific decision to the contrary, simultaneously in all official languages of the organs of the United Nations, and to circulate eight weeks before the opening of a session of an intergovernmental body, with the annotated agenda of the session, a report on the exact state of preparation at that time of all the documents in all languages required for the session;

Requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a task force composed of appropriate Secretariat units and with supplementary assistance of experts from outside the United Nations, as appropriate, to be coordinated by the Management Advisory Service and financed through existing resources of the Department of Conference Services, to review the organizational structure, technological innovations and working methods of the Department, taking into account previous studies, with a view to enhancing efficiency and effectiveness, and to report his recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session, through the Committee on Conferences and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

27. Takes note of the comprehensive programme of work and biennialization of work programme adopted by the Committee on Conferences, taking into account its responsibilities as established by the General Assembly;

Calls upon the Committee on Conferences to continue to explore ways and means for a more effective implementation of its terms of reference and the relevant recommendations contained in the report of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations as approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 41/213;

29. Decides to consider at its forty-seventh session the desirability and possibility of biennializing this item of the agenda in the context of the ongoing efforts to improve the work of the Fifth Committee by, inter alia, biennializing items of its agenda.

Committee and commission workload

In its comments on the proposed 1992-1993 programme budget,<sup>(5)</sup> ACABQ discussed the issue of the increasing workload of various committees and commissions within the United Nations. The work of some of them had increased dramatically: for example, during every second year when the biennial budgets were being adopted, ACABQ had, in recent years, been meeting for up to eight months. ACABQ suggested that the Secretary-General examine this trend and report his findings to the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December 1991, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section VII of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

[The General Assembly . . .]

Workload of committees and commissions

1. Endorse the views contained in paragraph 85 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake a review, taking into account all aspects of the implications resulting from the increasing trend on workload of the various committees and commissions, and to submit a report, with appropriate proposals, to the General Assembly at its forty-seventh session;

3. Recognises that the working methods of the Advisory Committee are within its competence, and invites the Committee to report its decisions and recommendations, as appropriate, to the General Assembly;

General Assembly resolution 46/165 B, section VII

20 December 1991 Meeting 79 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/46/830) without vote (draft resolution as a whole, A/C.5/46/L.18), 19 December (meeting 56); agenda item 107.

Conferences and meeting services

In July 1991,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report on the improved utilization of conference-servicing resources at the United Nations, pursuant to a 1990 Assembly request.<sup>(7)</sup> It contained statistics showing the planned and actual utilization of conference resources allocated to a limited sample of bodies that had been meeting for several years in New York, Geneva and Vienna.

The total number of sessions held in 1990 by the bodies under review-including treaty bodies-was 43 and the accumulated utilization factor was 3,375, resulting in an average utilization factor of 78 per cent. The utilization target set by the Committee in 1983 was 75 per cent.

The General Committee, in its September 1991 report on the organization of the forty-sixth session of the Assembly,<sup>(8)</sup> drew attention to a 1979 decision<sup>(9)</sup> recommending that the Assembly instruct the Main Committees to review the number of special conferences already scheduled in their respective fields before scheduling new special conferences. It also referred to a recommendation made in 1986 by the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations (Group of 18)<sup>(10)</sup> and endorsed by the Assembly the same year<sup>(11)</sup> that no more than five special conferences should take place in a given year, with no more than one such conference convened at the same time. The Committee also pointed to the Group of 18's recommendation that whenever the Assembly accepted an invitation from a Member State to hold a conference away from Headquarters, the additional cost should be borne in full by that country.

Translation and interpretation services for ECA

In 1990,<sup>(12)</sup> the Assembly had requested that the Secretary-General take action to revive the training programme for translators/precis-writers in all official languages of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA). Towards that end, the Secretary-General submitted a report in October 1991<sup>(13)</sup> recommending that a programme be set up in 1992 on a contractual basis with existing African training institutions.

The training programme would be offered to five persons a year for each of the three ECA official languages: Arabic, English and French. The cost of the programme, estimated at $710,700, was included in the 1992-1993 proposed programme budget under the section for ECA. Regarding interpretation services, the current use of freelance interpreters for ECA meetings and conferences had proved both cost-effective and flexible, and should therefore be maintained while the matter was kept under review.

In its comments on the report,<sup>(14)</sup> ACABQ voiced approval of the cost estimates for the translator training programme, and suggested that measures be taken to solve the problem of persistently high vacancy rates at the ECA translation unit. It also recommended that freelance interpreters no longer be used for ECA meetings and that a permanent arrangement be made instead.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section III of resolution 46/185 A without vote.

[The General Assembly. . .]

Review of translation and interpretation services for all official languages in the Economic Commission for Africa

Approves the proposals contained in the note by the Secretary-General and the observations made by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report;

20 December 1991 Meeting 79 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/46/830) without vote, 26 November (meeting 42); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 107. Meeting numbers. GA 46th session: 5th Committee 41, 42; plenary 79.

Conference servicing of intergovernmental bodies at Nairobi

In the context of its review of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993,<sup>(15)</sup> CPC recommended that the General Assembly consider, on the advice of ACABQ, the practice of including in section 17, on the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), conference-servicing costs related to the intergovernmental bodies of UNEP. At the same time, the Committee requested the Secretary-General to submit a report on conference servicing of the United Nations intergovernmental bodies convened at Nairobi, Kenya, i.e., the Governing Council of UNEP and its Committee of Permanent Representatives and the Commission on Human Settlements and its Committee of Permanent Representatives to the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat).

In accordance with that request, the Secretary-General in November submitted a note<sup>(16)</sup> examining the current conference-servicing arrangements which, he said, provided for a sufficient degree of flexibility for both UNEP and Habitat in the planning and servicing of meetings of their intergovernmental bodies. Nevertheless, the possibility of a joint conference-servicing establishment at Nairobi and possibly at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, would be kept under review; if circumstances suggested that different arrangements could lead to improved efficiency and economy, relevant proposals would be submitted to the Assembly.

Concerning the UNEP Committee of Permanent Representatives, the Secretary-General noted that a review of existing arrangements for servicing similar bodies at Habitat, the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP), the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) indicated that conference-servicing costs were being accommodated from within their budgets. However, should the Assembly concur with the 1989 UNEP Governing Council decision<sup>(17)</sup> to extend full conference servicing to its Committee of Permanent Representatives, provision would need to be made under budget section 17.

Based on the relevant Governing Council decisions and on the assumption that the Committee would meet four times a year for a one-day session, with conference services provided in all six official United Nations languages, the estimated cost (at 1991 rates) would be $614,400 for the biennium, on the basis of a cost of $76,800 per one-day session.

The Secretary-General proposed that roughly 25 per cent of that amount, i.e., $150,000, be included under section 17 and that the balance be financed from the Environment Fund.

Regarding the requirements for pre-session documentation in Chinese for the Commission on Human Settlements, estimated at $73,000 for the biennium, he suggested that they be included under section 19, on Habitat, of the proposed programme budget.

ACABQ<sup>(18)</sup> concurred with the Secretary-General's approach with regard to the overall issue of conference servicing related to intergovernmental bodies convened at Nairobi and requested that it be apprised of any developments.

With regard to the proposal to finance meetings of the Committee of Permanent Representatives of UNEP, ACABQ regretted that no statement of programme budget implications had been submitted to the Governing Council prior to its 1989 decision. It also pointed out that the costs for servicing similar bodies at Habitat, ESCAP, ECE and ESCWA were not separately indicated and that no specific provision was made in their budgets for the meetings of their respective intergovernmental bodies.

ACABQ did not object in principle to financing 25 per cent of the Committee of Permanent Representatives of UNEP under budget section 17; however, it recommended that any additional appropriation be reported in the context of the first performance report for 1992-1993. It made the same recommendation with regard to the requirements for pre-session documentation in Chinese for the Commission on Human Settlements, stating that, in the future, the cost of these services should be included in the total conference requirements under the relevant sections of the programme budget.

The Assembly, in section XI of resolution 46/185 C, endorsed ACABQ'S recommendations and stressed that interpretation services should be available for all official United Nations languages. It requested the Secretary-General to report on possible additional financial requirements under the budget section on UNEP in the context of the first performance report for 1992-1993.

Unified conference and interpretation services at Vienna

Developments towards establishing one conference service at Vienna for the United Nations, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and possibly the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) were discussed by the Secretary-General in a November 1991 report,<sup>(19)</sup> pursuant to a 1990 General Assembly resolution.<sup>(20)</sup>

The Assembly, in 1989,<sup>(21)</sup> had endorsed the Secretary-General's view that a unified conference-service operation for the United Nations organizations at the Vienna International Centre under United Nations auspices would provide the most effective and ultimately least costly arrangement.

Consultations were held during 1990 and 1991, but no agreement was reached on the possible establishment of a unified or common conference service. However, both IAEA and UNIDO accepted the proposed rearrangement of interpretation services as of 1 January 1992, after which the United Nations Office at Vienna (UNOV) would be responsible for meeting the interpretation requirements of all three organizations at the Centre as a common service, subject to reimbursement in accordance with agreed cost-sharing procedures. With regard to translation and related documentation requirements, however, IAEA continued to maintain its position that those needs were too specialized to be considered for similar common-service arrangements.

UNIDO<sup>(22)</sup> expressed readiness to continue consultations with UNOV on conference-servicing arrangements so that a final decision could be reached in 1993; until such a decision was taken, the current arrangements, under which an organizational unit in each of the two organizations provided specific conference services, should be maintained. In view of that position, the Secretary-General proposed to continue in 1992 to seek UNIDO's agreement on a unified conference service.

ACABQ<sup>(23)</sup> recommended that the current joint service arrangement continue in 1992. In making that recommendation, it stated its intention to submit to the Assembly in 1992 detailed observations and recommendations with due regard to efficiency and economy, bearing in mind Member States' contributions to both the United Nations and UNIDO. The Committee said it would take into account any developments resulting from further consultations among the parties concerned.

ACABQ further recommended approval of the initial cost estimate of $32,672,800 for conference and library services at Vienna, as contained in the Secretary-General's proposed programme budget. In making that recommendation, it emphasized that the 1993 portion of the appropriation should be regarded as provisional, i.e., requirements for 1993 and any related proposals for new posts would be discussed by the Committee in the context of its detailed review of conference-service arrangements at Vienna.

In an oral report to the Fifth Committee on 17 December, ACABQ recommended approval of a further $803,800, as the original estimates had not contained the provisions needed to give effect to the agreement between the Organization and IAEA on interpretation services.

Documents and publications

Documents limitation

In June 1991, the Secretary-General published an updated version of a document setting forth the policies laid down by the General Assembly regarding the control and limitation of documentation, as had been requested by the Assembly in 1969.<sup>(1)</sup> The note, which enumerated policy decisions adopted by the Assembly over the years, most recently in 1990,<sup>(2)</sup> was distributed to all Member States.<sup>(3)</sup>

These decisions applied, for the most part, to the documentation of the Assembly and its subsidiary bodies. However, the Assembly also invited United Nations organs, in particular the Economic and Social Council and subsidiary bodies, to apply the same policies to their documentation. They had, in general, accepted the policies laid down by the Assembly, with such further instructions as their circumstances required.

The note included specific recommendations made for the control and limitation of meeting records, reports and studies of subsidiary organs and of the Secretary-General, annexes and supplements to the official records, documentation for treaty bodies and special conferences and statements of programme budget implications. Annexed to the note were a list of meeting record entitlements and I-revised guidelines for format and contents of reports of subsidiary organs of the Assembly, as well as guidelines for the control and limitation of documentation for special conferences.

Under a mandate given to it by the Assembly in 1990,<sup>(2)</sup> the Committee on Conferences kept under review the question of documentation control and limitation, including the late issuance of documents; length, format and content of reports of subsidiary organs of the Assembly; and the provision of summary records for those organs. The Committee was to report on the matter in 1992.

Organization of editorial services

During the review by CPC of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993,<sup>(4)</sup> a number of delegations questioned the rationale for the dispersion of editorial functions, both within the Office for Political and General Assembly Affairs and Secretariat Services and between that Office and the Department of Conference Services. CPC therefore recommended that the Secretary-General keep the question of the organization of editorial services under review and report to the Assembly on the matter.

Pursuant to that recommendation, the Secretary-General presented a report in November<sup>(5)</sup> detailing the functions of editors in the United Nations, the organization of editorial services, editorial staffing and workload at Headquarters and the use of new technologies (see below) in editorial units.

The Secretary-General concluded that, given the varying nature of editorial functions and the schedule within which they must be performed, the current organization of editorial services appeared to make the most efficient and effective use of the limited staff resources available. The establishment of a common set of editorial policies and practices applied consistently throughout the Secretariat and measures to ensure that editors were recruited and trained on the basis of uniform standards served to maintain a high quality of editorial services. Measures to be undertaken during the 1992-1997 medium-term plan period to strengthen the editorial services as a whole included the issuance of a revised Editorial Manual and further application of advanced technologies.

Nevertheless, the Secretary-General said, the growing volume of editorial requirements was creating serious backlogs in official records, proceedings of special conferences and publications. Concerning pre- and in-session documentation, since the establishment of separate editorial services for the General Assembly in the 1960s, the number of items on the agenda for each session had increased dramatically, with a corresponding growth in their volume. The in-session documentation workload for the Assembly was currently very heavy and, since documents often had to be processed overnight, the responsibilities for editing in-session documentation were divided among all three editorial units.

The Secretary-General proposed to keep under review the question of whether additional resources would be needed to meet editorial requirements. In view of the repeated expressions of intergovernmental concern about the effectiveness of and the rationale for current arrangements, he would also review the question of whether the advantages of those arrangements continued to outweigh the advantages that might accrue from consolidating editorial services under the Department of Conference Services. The review would also encompass the role of the editorial units in major author departments and whether or not they promoted the efficient use of editorial resources through closer interaction with authors.

Printing and publications policy

A total of $11,375,800 for external printing and binding was requested by the Secretary-General for the 1992-1993 programme budget. ACABQ, in its first report on the proposed budget,<sup>(6)</sup> recommended a $2 million (at 1992-1993 rates) reduction in the resources requested for that purpose, or a reduction of $1,878,500 if the recommendation was not applied to certain regional commissions.

ACABQ further noted that while some external printing related to areas in which in-house capacity did not exist and was sometimes necessary to meet short deadlines, an optical disk system, which would allow users to retrieve electronically and print those documents they required, should minimize the problem. It also noted that some of the equipment requested by the Secretary-General in his budget submission would permit the internal processing of publications currently processed externally.

The Advisory Committee was of the view that while the need for external printing and processing services continued in some instances, the proportion of internal printing (estimated at 62.8 per cent of total printing for 1988-1989) should increase.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section VI of resolution 46/185 B without vote.

Publications policy

1. Notes that, in a number of sections of the proposed programme budget, notably of parts IV, V, VI, VII and VIII, there seems to be a large number of publications and an unclear distinction between publications requested by intergovernmental bodies and technical publications produced on the initiative of the Secretariat;

2. Also notes that the quality and relevance of publications appear to be uneven and that the policies for pricing and distribution of United Nations publications need to be further refined;

3. Endorses the recommendations contained in paragraphs 27 and 32.16 to 32.19 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, and emphasizes the need for the Secretariat to utilize better internal printing facilities with a view to reducing the overall cost of printing;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to review the overall publications policy of the Organization, including its technical aspects and possible coordination at the level of the system, and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-eighth session;

UN premises

Conference facilities at Addis Ababa and Bangkok

A report of the Secretary-General on the construction of additional conference facilities at Addis Ababa and Bangkok was submitted to the Fifth Committee in October 1991.<sup>(1)</sup> The report summarized the work already done and the progress expected in the future for the two facilities, construction of which originally had been approved by the Assembly in 1984.<sup>(2)</sup>

The Secretary-General reported that a contract calling for construction of the Addis Ababa facilities to be completed in April 1994 was signed on 22 February; work on the site commenced in May. However, because of various problems related to the availability and transportation of materials and labour, the Secretary-General considered it premature to project a definitive schedule for completion. He planned to provide a more detailed revision to the project timetable in 1992.

Pending a more detailed review of the construction timetable and costs following the restoration of normal conditions in the area, the Secretary-General did not revise the total project cost, estimated at $107,576,900,<sup>(3)</sup> based on November 1990 exchange rates. He further proposed to retain the $57,414,900 required for 1992-1993 requested in the programme budget for the biennium.

Reporting on the project in Bangkok, the Secretary-General stated that it was resumed in 1988 on the basis of the scope of facilities originally approved and as reflected in previously completed plans and specifications. Construction began in May 1989 and was expected to be completed in November/December 1991 followed by commissioning in January-March 1992. However, due to a shortage of construction labour and other factors, it appeared likely that the main construction would not be completed until at least September/October 1992, followed by final testing, furnishing and commissioning of the building during October-December 1992.

While total estimated expenditures through the end of the 1990-1991 biennium were projected at $20,290,000, total appropriations amounted to $39,714,100, leaving a balance of $4,463,600 against the original schedule of appropriations; accordingly, that amount was requested under the proposed 1992-1993 programme budget. Should the Assembly concur with his proposal to utilize $4,362,300 in interest earned on the appropriations for the project, that amount plus the appropriation requested in the 1992-1993 budget would be sufficient to cover all anticipated costs, the Secretary-General said.

ACABQ stated that some of the factors mentioned by the Secretary-General, i.e., an alternative piling design, could partially offset the total estimated cost of the project at Addis Ababa; others, however, such as the use of a larger site supervision team for a longer period and the force majeure situation claimed by the contractor would give rise to higher costs. The Advisory Committee requested that it be informed of such costs as they arose and before financial commitments were made. It also requested a progress report on the project in early 1992, which was to include information on any events affecting the overall estimate and more detailed information on the request for a new digital telephone system, with preliminary cost estimates.

Concerning the Bangkok project, ACABQ did not object to the use of interest income up to $3,825,000 to finance additional work, it did not concur, however, with the use of interest income to provide $535,000 in additional administrative, consultant and site supervision costs. The Committee recommended that the Assembly authorize it to decide, on the basis of additional information, whether interest income could be used to finance some or all of those additional costs. The Committee also said it trusted that the Secretary-General would keep the Assembly informed better and in a more timely fashion on the details of potential additional costs of other construction projects.

On 20 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted section IV of resolution 46/185 A without vote.

Administrative and common services at Vienna

Administrative and common-services arrangements between UNOV, UNIDO and IAEA were reviewed by the Secretary-General in a November 1991 report.(5) Negotiations were under way, he said, but no conclusive results had been attained regarding the allocation of common services among the three Vienna-based organizations or the related cost-sharing arrangements.

Joint administrative and conference services (see above) were established with UNIDO at the beginning of 1986. For administrative services to be rendered to the United Nations in 1992-1993, UNIDO requested significantly increased reimbursement.

Therefore, and in line with two 1990 General Assembly resolutions(6) which, inter alia, emphasized the need for a speedy and substantial strengthening of administrative and budgetary functions and structures of UNOV, the Secretary-General proposed to establish separate and independent personnel, financial and general services at Vienna as of 1 January 1992. As a transitional measure, he proposed retaining joint arrangements with UNIDO in the areas of finance and general services during the first six months. The Secretary-General's revised estimates of $38,563,200 under section 33F of the proposed programme budget for 1992-1993 reflected those proposals, as well as administrative strengthening related to his proposal for separate conference-servicing arrangements (see above).

ACABQ(7) noted that the establishment of separate personnel, financial and general services at Vienna would entail the establishment of 29 new posts (4 Professional and 25 General Service), the reclassification of 2 P-5 posts to the D-I level and various redeployments. It would also require the establishment of related computer systems and give rise to other common-services requirements.

Pending a more detailed review of the proposals so as to ascertain whether all were justified, ACABQ recommended that the initial estimate of $35,124,500 be maintained.

United Nations Information Centre at Windhoek

A report on the establishment of a United Nations Information Centre at Windhoek, Namibia, was submitted to the Assembly in October 1991.(8) The Secretary-General's report stated that, pursuant to a 1990 Assembly request,(9) a host country agreement was signed in August by representatives of the Government of Namibia and the United Nations on the establishment of such a centre, which was expected to become operational before the end of 1991. By decision 46/449 of 20 December, the Assembly took note of the report.

Information systems and computers

Technological innovations

In 1991, the Secretary-General submitted three reports to the General Assembly relating to the use and implementation of various technologies in the Organization.

The first, requested by the Assembly in 1989,(1) covered the status of technological innovations in the United Nations.(2) It demonstrated how the current computing infrastructure-comprising equipment, software, data communications networks and computer support staff-had been enhanced during the reporting period.

It was expected that nearly 3,000 personal computers would have been installed at Headquarters by the end of 1991, representing an increase of 1,400 units during 1990-1991. The number of microcomputers was expected to increase to 4,000 in the following biennium, at the end of which the integrated management information system (IMIS) project was scheduled to become operational. The report also discussed major software enhancements, plans for data communications and local area networks and mainframe computer usage.

Pursuant to another request made in 1989,(1) the Secretary-General submitted a report, also in September 1991,(3) on the status of the Organization's telecommunications activities.

In October,(4) he presented a report on the optical disk storage and retrieval system, as requested by the Assembly in 1990.(5) The system was intended to provide efficient storage of United Nations documents, on-line access and retrieval of such documents by local and remote computer workstations and high-speed transmission of documents to remote users within the Organization.

Phase I of the optical disk system was under way and was slated for completion by the end of March 1992. That phase consisted of installing document servers and a limited number of retrieval workstations in New York and Geneva. During phase II, in 1992-1993, the system would be extended to a greater number of Secretariat and remote users.

The Secretary-General requested that $1,886,900 be allocated for phase II in the 1992-1993 programme budget; expenditures for phase III, 1994-1995, were projected at $6.1 million. During that phase, the system was to be expanded to include UNOV, the regional commissions, Nairobi and other selected duty stations, and to provide world-wide access to Member States and other users of United Nations parliamentary documents.

The third progress report on the IMIS project was submitted by the Secretary-General in November.(6) The project had received approval from the Assembly in 1988,(7) to be implemented over a three-and-one-half-year period at a cost not to exceed $28 million. IMIS was developed to replace the many independent systems currently in place at the United Nations which were no longer capable of providing the support needed by management.

In its comments on the reports discussed above,(8) ACABQ noted that the extent of coordination in the design and implementation of each system was not indicated by the Secretary-General. In that regard, the current monitoring mechanism-the Technological Innovations Board-should be strengthened. In view of the close interrelationship among the projects described, ACABQ recommended that one comprehensive report be submitted on the status of all technological innovations and that it also include details on the long-term information strategy of the Organization.

Comments by the Administrative Committee on Coordination on a 1989 report of the Joint Inspection Unit concerning optical disk technology at the United Nations(9) were transmitted by a February 1991 note of the Secretary-General.(10)

The Committee on Conferences, in its September report,(11) discussed a Secretariat paper on the application of new technologies, such as mainframe, minicomputer and microcomputer applications and telecommunications, as they related to various aspects of conference servicing, including meetings planning, interpretation, documentation control, editing, translation, text processing, printing and reproduction, distribution, storage and retrieval of documents and library services.

The Committee found that there had been an uneven application of technologies throughout the system in such areas as computer-assisted translation. The Organization could take fuller advantage of savings if efforts were concentrated at locations where labour costs were relatively high. A Secretariat representative explained that productivity gains would be realized only after systems were fully installed. For example, in text processing, where the systems were fully operational, significant productivity gains had been reflected in increased workload standards.

The Committee concluded that new technologies should be introduced evenly throughout the United Nations. It requested that future Secretariat reports include an assessment of the extent to which new technology assisted in compliance with the six-week rule for issuance of pre-session documentation.

In a November report(12) on the organization of editorial services at Headquarters (see above), the Secretary-General said that all editorial units made at least limited use of new technologies related to text-processing and facsimile equipment. Also, electronic mail techniques were used increasingly to transmit documents and messages both internally and externally. Editorial units were included in the computer network established for the computer-based Documents Recording, Information and Tracking System to facilitate their workload planning, control and monitoring.

Access of Member States to UN informatics systems

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1991/70 without vote.

The need to harmonize and improve United Nations informatics systems for optimal utilization and accessibility by all States

The Economic and Social Council,

Noting the vital importance of informatics in promoting and accelerating development,

Considering it imperative that States Members of the United Nations and observers have easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access to the growing computerized databases and information systems and services of the United Nations,

Regretting that Member States lack such access to existing United Nations informatics systems at present,

Stressing the need for representatives of all States to be actively associated with United Nations bodies, such as the International Computing Centre, dealing with informatics within the United Nations system,

Bearing in mind the ongoing discussions on the reform of the General Assembly,

Requests the Secretary-General to prepare, within existing resources and in consultation with representatives of States, a study analysing the causes of the present situation with respect to United Nations informatics systems and providing an outline of a rapid solution to the problem, leading to easy, economical, uncomplicated and unhindered access to United Nations computerized databases and information systems and services, which are of great importance to all States, in particular to the developing countries, and to report thereon to the Council at its regular session of 1992.

International Computing Centre

The 1992 budget estimates of the International Computing Centre at Geneva were submitted by the Secretary-General in September 1991.(13) The report also included the actual funding of the Centre for 1990 and its estimated funding for 1991.

ICC was established in 1971 as a provider of data-processing, text-processing and related telecommunications services for all United Nations organizations wishing to participate in its activities. At the time of the report, the United Nations and 19 other organizations and programmes participated.

For 1992, requirements of ICC were estimated at $13,053,600, as compared to $10,515,500 in 1991. The five organizations/programmes that were projected to utilize the Centre the most were, in order of money to be spent, the United Nations, the World Health Organization, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the World Food Programme and the World Intellectual Property Organization; together, they provided 84 per cent of the funding for ICC's operations. The United Nations share for its use of the Centre in 1992 amounted to $2,864,200.

According to the Secretary-General's report, the functions of the end-user services unit would be emphasized to make the Centre more service-oriented. Due to the evolving pattern among ICC participants of placing some of their computer applications at the departmental level for reasons of economy and effectiveness, there would be a need for departmental networks to be connected to ICC. The Centre was also expected to expand its activities in the area of workstations and local area network technology.

UN Postal Administration

In 1991, gross revenue of the United Nations Postal Administration (UNPA) from the sale of philatelic items at United Nations Headquarters and at overseas offices totalled more than $12.5 million. Revenue from the sale of stamps for philatelic purposes was retained by the United Nations. Under the terms of an agreement between the United Nations and the United States, revenue from the sale of United States dollar-denominated stamps used for postage from Headquarters was reimbursed to the United States Postal Service. Similarly, postal agreements between the United Nations and the Governments of Switzerland and Austria required that revenue derived from the sale of Swiss franc-denominated stamps and Austrian schilling-denominated stamps for postage be reimbursed to the Swiss and Austrian postal authorities, respectively.

Six commemorative stamp issues, six definitive stamps, two souvenir cards, six maximum cards and three pictorial postcards were released by UNPA during the year.

The first commemorative issue, released on 15 March in denominations of 30 United States cents, 0.90 Swiss francs (SwF) and 5 Austrian schillings (S), was on the theme "For a Better Environment". A souvenir card, three maximum cards and three pictorial post cards accompanied that issue.

On 10 May, a set of six commemorative stamps was released to commemorate "Namibia: A New Nation-A Trust Fulfilled". The stamps carried denominations of 30 and 50 cents, SwF 0.70 and 0.90 and S 6 and 9.50. Four definitive stamps in denominations of $2.00, SwF 0.80 and 1.50 and S 20 were issued on the same date.

The third commemorative issue, carrying the slogan "Rights of the Child", was released on 14 June in denominations of 30 and 70 cents, SwF 0.80 and 1.10 and S 7 and 9. For the very first time, the designs were obtained through competitions held at the United Nations International Schools in New York, Geneva and Vienna. A souvenir card accompanied the issue.

The "Banning of Chemical Weapons" was the theme of the fourth commemorative issue. Released on 11 September, the six stamps came in denominations of 30 and 90 cents, SwF 0.80 and 1.40 and S 5 and 10. On the same date, two definitive stamps of 30 and 50 cents were issued.

The "40th Anniversary of the United Nations Postal Administration" was commemorated on 24 October with a set of six stamps in denominations of 30 and 40 cents, SwF 0.50 and 1.60 and S 5 and 8. Three maximum cards were issued on the same theme.

On 20 November, the third set of five in the human rights stamp series was released. The stamps, in denominations of 30 and 50 cents, SwF 0.50 and 0.90 and S 4.50 and 7, illustrated Articles 13 to 18 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights.(1)

Chapter I

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 1991, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued to foster peaceful uses of nuclear energy and the exchange of scientific and technical information, to establish and administer safeguards, to provide technical assistance to its member States and to establish health and safety standards.

The Security Council, by resolution 687(1991), requested IAEA to carry out immediate on-site inspections of Iraq's nuclear capabilities and to develop and carry out a plan for the destruction, removal or rendering harmless of all nuclear weapons and nuclear-weapons-usable materials, any subsystems or components, or any research, development, support or manufacturing facilities related thereto. On the basis of the on-site inspections in Iraq, the IAEA Board of Governors was, for the first time, obliged to declare that a member State was failing to comply with its safeguards obligations. (For details of IAEA's activities in Iraq, see PART TWO, Chapter III.)

The Board of Governors of IAEA, at its thirty-fifth General Conference (Vienna, 16-20 September), drafted a resolution calling on the Board of Governors and the Director General to continue to maintain and strengthen the effectiveness and efficiency of the safeguards system in accordance with the Agency's statute. The Board of Governors considered the issues of special inspections, safeguards in nuclear-weapon States and in the design of facilities, and universal reporting of exports of nuclear material.

The IAEA General Conference also adopted several resolutions to strengthen international cooperation in nuclear safety and radiological protection and the sharing of safety-related information including those on the application of IAEA safeguards in the Middle East, on Iraq's non-compliance with its safeguards obligations, on Israeli nuclear capabilities and threat, on South Africa's nuclear capabilities and on the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material, which entered into force in 1987.<sup>a</sup>

IAEA membership remained at 112 in 1991 (see Annex I).

Nuclear safety and radiation protection

The International Chernobyl Project, which was undertaken in 1990 in response to a request from the USSR, was completed in 1991. The project, overseen by an international advisory committee under the coordination of IAEA, was concerned with persons residing in the contaminated areas since the 1986 accident at the Chernobyl nuclear powerplant in the Ukrainian SSR. The committee concluded that although the populations examined suffered significant health disorders, none could be attributed directly to radiation. It was noted, though, that the accident continued to have considerable psychological consequences. A substantial increase in the incidence of leukaemia, cancer or hereditary defects was not indicated, but, because of limitations in the investigative and statistical methods used in the project, the possibility of some slight increase in the incidence of cancers could not be excluded, nor could the development of an increased number of cancer cases after a longer latency period.

A joint study by IAEA, the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Commission of the European Communities (CEC) on atmospheric transport model evaluation was completed, utilizing the Chernobyl accident source term and environmental measurements made by European countries following the accident. Two project definition meetings were held at the Chernobyl Centre for International Research (CHECIR) at Zeleny Myss. A research team from the Republic of Korea began studies on decontamination at CHECIR, and several groups of interested scientists from four member States visited the region to get acquainted with on-site research possibilities. CEC initiated some six major research projects for implementation within CHECIR.

Following the political changes in Eastern Europe in 1991, attention centred on the safety of Soviet-designed reactors. An international assessment carried out by IAEA confirmed that neither the design nor the operation of first-generation pressurized-water reactors (WWER-440/230s) conformed to best international safety practices. Newer reactors operating in Eastern Europe (WWER-440/213s and WWER-1000s) were also the object of international concern and scrutiny. As for the Chernobyl-type reactors, proposals for their comprehensive assessment emerged at year's end.

In response to requests for assistance from countries operating WWER-440/230s, an international project was established within IAEA to evaluate them as a complement to ongoing national, bilateral and multilateral activities. Safety review and Assessment of Safety Significant Events Team missions were carried out in 1991 to all four sites with operating WWER-440/230 plants; i.e., Bohunice Units 1 and 2 (Czechoslovakia), Kozloduy Units 1-4 (Bulgaria), Novovoronezh Units 3 and 4 and Kola Units 1 and 2 (USSR). Additional missions to Kozloduy and Bohunice reviewed seismic safety. As a result of the WWER-440/230 project, some 100 safety issues relating to plant design and operation were identified, 60 per cent of which were judged to require immediate attention. A comprehensive report with technical findings was issued.

An IAEA International Conference on the Safety of Nuclear Power: Strategy for the Future (Vienna, September 1991) called for new, vigorous actions to enhance nuclear safety and initiated efforts to promote the establishment of an international nuclear safety convention. The Conference's conclusions were endorsed by the thirty-fifth IAEA General Conference. Subsequently, the Director General set up a working group to begin preparations for drafting the convention.

Other highlights in the area of nuclear safety during the year were the formalization of the safety culture concept in INSAG-4, a publication of the International Nuclear Safety Advisory Group, and the widespread acceptance of the International Nuclear Event Scale (INES) for communicating to the public the significance of nuclear events. In 1991, INES disseminated information on some 100 events. Three events had on-site radiological impacts-radioactive releases or overexposure of personnel.

In 1991, China joined the Agency's Incident Reporting System with observer status, making a total of 26 participating member States. By year's end, the system's database contained 1,220 records. One hundred and thirty-nine reports were received during the year.

IAEA's operational safety review programme (OSART) for nuclear power plants included three types of missions: pre-OSART missions for plants under construction or at the commissioning stage, OSART missions for plants in operation and Technical Exchange Team (TEXT) missions focusing on selected topics. During the year, IAEA carried out four OSART missions and two TEXT missions, as well as four safety review missions. Five follow-up visits were made to three plants in operation, one under construction and one at the pre-commissioning stage.

The IAEA Radiation Protection Advisory Team missions carried out so far in about 60 developing member States revealed that at least 50 of them did not have adequate radiation protection infrastructures and that 38 had no radiation protection law in force and no regulations or codes of practice for specific applications of radiation sources. IAEA continued to give priority to providing assistance to developing countries in establishing solid national legal frameworks and effective regulatory mechanisms and manpower development programmes to strengthen their radiation protection infrastructures. In 1991, the advisory team's missions visited Hong Kong, Niger, Paraguay and Sierra Leone for the first time.

Nuclear power

A total of 496 nuclear powerplants were operating or being built around the world in 1991, based on data reported to the IAEA Power Reactor Information System. During 1991, four nuclear power plants were connected to electricity grids in Bulgaria, China, France and Japan, bringing the world's total number of operating reactors to 420. In addition, 76 reactors were being constructed in 16 countries.

The proportion of electricity produced by nuclear plants remained high during the year in France (72.7 per cent), Belgium (59.3 per cent), Sweden (51.6 per cent), Hungary (48.4 per cent), and Republic of Korea (47.5 per cent). Thirteen countries relied on nuclear powerplants to supply at least a quarter of their total electricity needs.

World-wide in 1991, total nuclear power generation amounted to more than 2,009 terawatt-hours of electricity, more than the world's total electricity generation of 1,908 terawatt-hours from all sources in 1958. Cumulative world-wide operating experience from civil nuclear reactors at the end of 1991 was over 6,000 years.

The Agency provided technical support for energy, electricity and nuclear power planning studies in Egypt, Malaysia, Peru and Romania. IAEA's methodologies were widely used for energy, electricity and nuclear power planning. Cooperative efforts with the World Bank and other international organizations were initiated in 1991 for completion in 1992, including the application of the Agency's energy and power evaluation programme in CEC regional studies and the use of certain models in an electricity expansion planning computer package, adapted to the particular needs of Latin American countries.

The thirty-fourth (1990) session of the General Conference had requested IAEA to assess the costs of potable water production with various sizes of nuclear desalination plants at selected promising sites and to compare them with the costs of desalination by other means. A number of North African countries-Algeria, Egypt, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Morocco and Tunisia-requested IAEA to assist them in carrying out a feasibility study on nuclear desalination for selected sites in the region. Questionnaires were sent to relevant member States to obtain economic and technical data on desalination by means of nuclear energy and fossil energy, and the data were discussed during an advisory group meeting in Vienna. Regional meetings were convened in the North African countries.

Nuclear fuel cycle

Uranium production outside the centrally planned economies in 1991 declined further by about 2,000 tonnes to 28,000 tonnes in response to unfavourable market conditions. Nine countries produced nearly 95 per cent of the total, and eight countries contributed the remaining 5 per cent. Reactor-related uranium requirements in 1991 were about 44,500 tonnes. The resulting under-production came to some 16,500 tonnes, which was covered by material held in stocks and inventories and by imports from China and the USSR.

More than 300 leading energy experts from 38 countries and 21 international organizations took part in a senior expert symposium on electricity and the environment (May, Helsinki, Finland) organized jointly by IAEA and 10 other international organizations. The symposium provided a comprehensive assessment of the environmental and health issues and technical and economic factors involved in supplying electricity. It concluded that the global demand for electricity would continue to increase, subject only to constraints on economic growth. Improving efficiency from generation to end use could contribute significantly to reducing emissions and other environmental impacts, but efficiency improvements would not eliminate the need for new electrical facilities.

The results of comparative risk assessments of the different energy systems indicated that, under routine operating conditions, nuclear power and renewable energy systems tended to be at the lower end of the spectrum of health risk, and energy systems based on coal and oil were at the higher end. In spite of such assessments, however, the safety of nuclear power and its acceptability continued to be questioned.

Radioactive waste management

The thirty-fifth General Conference adopted the Code of Practice on the International Transboundary Movement of Radioactive Waste and requested the Director General to monitor implementation by member States. Subsequently, member States were requested to inform the secretariat whether they had adopted legislation on the transboundary movement of radioactive waste and, if so, whether it was in accordance with the Code of Practice. Some 30 member States replied that they had adopted such legislation and/or the relevant procedures applicable, though mostly within national boundaries, and that they were generally in accordance with the principles in the Code. Some Members referred to regional agreements concluded on the matter.

In March 1991, a summary of "international collective opinion" was presented by high-level experts of CEC, the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development and IAEA. The opinion was a landmark statement regarding the status of the scientific evaluation of radioactive waste repositories and confirmed that safety assessment methods were available to evaluate adequately the potential long-term radiological impacts of a radioactive waste disposal system on people and the environment.

The Agency initiated a five-year project to improve safe management of spent radiation sources used in medicine, industry and research. Under the project's action plan, international experts were to convene national and regional training courses and conduct field missions to assist authorities in identifying, collecting, conditioning and properly storing spent radiation sources. Those efforts were directed at developing countries, where needs were considered most urgent.

In line with ongoing efforts to improve the assistance offered to member States, IAEA's waste management programme incorporated practical demonstrations of techniques for immobilizing low-level wastes into its waste management training courses, providing a bridge between theoretical knowledge and practical implementation.

Four regular Waste Management Advisory Programme missions were conducted in developing member States in 1991, in addition to one special mission to Hong Kong. The programme provided advice and technical assistance on specific waste management issues and problems.

IAEA continued to fulfil its role as adviser on radiological matters to the London Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping and Other Matter (London Dumping Convention). The Convention, at its 1991 meeting, continued the 1983 voluntary moratorium on the dumping of radioactive waste into the sea until the results of an intergovernmental panel of experts on the disposal of radioactive waste at sea were made available in 1993, at which time a decision would be taken on the issue. It appeared that the voluntary moratorium would be replaced by a prohibition on the dumping of all types of radioactive waste into the sea.

Food and agriculture

Under a joint programme with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), IAEA continued to assist developing member States in improving their agriculture and food production through the application of isotopes, ionizing radiation and related techniques, especially biotechnology. More than 250 technical cooperation projects were carried out in more than 60 developing member States. IAEA's activities in soil fertility, irrigation and crop production focused in 1991 on coordinated research programmes in the use of nuclear and isotopic techniques to improve crop production in salt-affected soils, increasing and stabilizing plant productivity in semi-arid and subhumid soils of the tropics and subtropics, management of nitrogen fixation by trees for enhancing soil fertility and soil conservation in fragile tropical soils, and the use of nuclear and related techniques in assessing irrigation schedules of field crops to increase the effective use of water in irrigation projects.

IAEA/FAO insect and pest eradication projects concentrated on the Mediterranean fruit fly in the western portion of North Africa, the tsetse fly in Africa (Kenya, Nigeria, Zanzibar), the new world screwworm in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and moths and caterpillars in Malaysia.

In its study of agrochemicals and residues, the Agency made the important discovery that DDT dissipated 4 to 30 times faster in tropical regions than in temperate regions, meaning that in tropical environments in developing countries DDT might be used as an economical, readily available and safe aid to agricultural production.

The International Consultative Group on Food Irradiation (ICGFI) continued to provide information and advice to FAO, IAEA and WHO and their member States on the safety of the irradiation process and of irradiated foods, techno-economic feasibility, training, regulatory control of food irradiation and public information. The ICGFI Network for Training on Food Irradiation, which took over the functions of the previous International Facility for Food Irradiation Technology, held several training courses and workshops. Three additional irradiators became available for processing food and other products during 1991: a commercial cobalt-60 irradiator at Isigny-sur-Mer, France; a large demonstration cobalt-60 irradiator in Hanoi, Viet Nam; and a pilot electron accelerator in Wlochy, Poland, bringing the total number of irradiation facilities available for food processing to 50.

Life sciences

Assistance continued to be given to member States-especially to developing countries-on the application of nuclear techniques in medicine (in vivo and in vitro nuclear medicine), applied radiation biology and radiotherapy, radiation dosimetry and nutritional and health-related environmental studies. Many of those activities were carried out in cooperation with WHO.

The IAEA/WHO network of secondary standard dosimetry laboratories included 64 laboratories in 51 member States and 25 affiliated members. Another four laboratories which had been fully supported were not yet members of the network. Dose intercomparison and assurance services continued, as did support for technology transfer.

A global database on human daily dietary intakes of nutritionally important trace elements was completed and the results prepared for publication in a report of the WHO/FAO/IAEA Expert Consultation on Trace Elements in Human Nutrition.

Physical and earth sciences

The Agency continued to promote the exchange of information on the physical and earth sciences and to assist countries with the application of nuclear techniques in experimental physics, analytical and radiation chemistry, non-destructive testing, radiation processing, industrial process control, geology, mining and hydrology.

The International Centre for Theoretical Physics (Trieste, Italy) continued its research in fundamental physics, condensed matter physics, mathematics, physics and energy, physics and the environment, and applied physics and high technology. Some 4,000 scientists took part in the activities of the Centre and in the programme for training at laboratories in Italy.

Environmental protection

The Agency conducted advisory missions on nuclear techniques in environmental monitoring and research in Chile, Costa Rica, Kenya and Mexico.

The chemistry unit of the Agency's laboratory at Seibersdorf, Austria, continued to assist in the World Meteorological Organization's (WMO's) Background Air Pollution Monitoring Network by acting as a sample collection, data acquisition and distribution centre.

The programme of monitoring environmental and food samples for accidentally released radionuclides, initiated in 1986 in response to the accident at Chernobyl, continued. Support was provided for 11 ongoing technical cooperation projects. A new analytical method for determining the presence of strontium-90 was developed, and more than 200 environmental samples were analyzed for radionuclides, uranium and plutonium.

The IAEA Marine Environment Laboratory (Monaco) continued its collaboration with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to provide comprehensive technical support for the assessment of regional and global marine pollution. During the year, 33 technical missions were conducted in 20 countries in the Mediterranean, Persian Gulf, wider Caribbean and Black Sea regions; reference methods and materials were produced; two world-wide intercomparison exercises were conducted; and 35 technical staff from 15 countries were trained in pollutant measurement techniques. The laboratory played an integral role in the United Nations Interagency Plan of Action in the Gulf, which was initiated immediately after the cessation of armed conflict in the region. By October 1991, staff of the Marine Environment Laboratory had conducted sampling missions to Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

As in previous years, the Agency operated an instrument maintenance service for institutions in Mediterranean and African countries and, for the first time, a service training course was given for instrument users from three Mediterranean countries. Work on a programme for assessing and controlling marine pollution in the wider Caribbean region was completed in September. Efforts were then focused on the Black Sea, where initial technical missions in cooperation with UNEP, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the World Bank revealed an urgent need for concerted international action to stem catastrophic degradation of the marine environment.

The Agency continued to analyse the isotopic composition of precipitation samples from the IAEA-WMO global network. The statistical elaboration of the existing database was completed, and the database was ready for publication in 1991.

The groundwater resources of several arid and semi-arid zones were studied to assess recharge origin and groundwater dynamics. Investigations were performed in Cameroon, Chile, Egypt, Jordan, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Niger, Peru, Senegal, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, United Arab Emirates, and Yemen. Apart from the usual occurrence of fossil groundwater-groundwater which has been recharged during humid climatic conditions-the isotopic studies have permitted the determination of evaporative losses (Niger), identification of recharge from surface waters (Chile, Egypt, Peru, Sudan) and interconnections between aquifers (Morocco). In the Aswan High Dam region of Egypt, the area of infiltration of the lake water was defined.

In Viet Nam, a study of the aquifer system in the Mekong Delta using artificial tracers was completed, and similar studies had progressed in Bolivia, Brazil, Costa Rica, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Mauritius, Nicaragua and Zimbabwe. Most of the Latin American studies were performed under IAEA'S Regional Co-operative Agreement for Latin America.

In the central Amazon, infiltration experiments with isotopic tracers showed a difference in water balance between native rain forest and deforested areas. A special report summarizing isotope-aided studies of the Brazilian Amazon was prepared for publication.

Technical cooperation

During 1991, a total of 1,301 projects were operational of which 229 were completed, and 41 national training courses were held. A total of 2,351 persons received training abroad, including scientific visits, and 2,306 expert/lecturer assignments were undertaken. Recovering from the drop which occurred in 1990, new resources for technical cooperation available in 1991 amounted to $49.1 million. The Technical Assistance and Cooperation Fund accounted for 79.2 per cent of all resources, extrabudgetary funds increased to 14.3 per cent of resources, assistance in kind contributed 3.4 per cent of resources and UNDP's share declined to 3.1 per cent. Based on disbursements from all funds in 1991, emphasis remained on food and agriculture (20.4 per cent) and physical and chemical sciences (18.6 per cent). Activities in radiation protection and safety of nuclear installations ranked third, with a combined share of 16.9 per cent of all disbursements.

By region, the leading sectors were agriculture for Africa and Asia and the Pacific, physical and chemical sciences for Europe, and industry and earth sciences for Latin America and the Middle East.

Agency safeguards responsibilities

In 1991, the secretariat, in carrying out the IAEA safeguards obligations, did not detect the diversion of a significant amount of safeguarded nuclear material-nor the misuse of facilities, equipment or non-nuclear material subject to safeguards under certain agreements-for the manufacture of any nuclear weapon or explosive device, for any other military purpose or for purposes unknown.

Inspection activities carried out pursuant to Security Council Resolution 687(1991) revealed that Iraq had not complied with the obligations under its safeguards agreement to declare certain nuclear activities and place all relevant nuclear material under safeguards. (For details of IAEA'S activities in Iraq, see PART TWO, Chapter III.)

At the end of 1991, there were 180 safeguards agreements in force with 105 States (and with Taiwan, China). A unilateral submission agreement with Pakistan entered into force in September, and safeguards agreements pursuant to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons<sup>b</sup> (NPT) entered into force with the signatures of Tuvalu and South Africa. Lithuania, South Africa, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe acceded to NPT, bringing the total number of States parties to the Treaty at the end of 1991 to 146.

Argentina and Brazil established a Common System of Accounting and Control of Nuclear Materials, and a Brazilian-Argentine Agency for Accounting and Control of Nuclear Materials (ABACC) which administered and implemented the nuclear accounting and control system. A comprehensive safeguards agreement was negotiated between Argentina and Brazil, the Brazilian-Argentine Agency and IAEA, covering all nuclear materials in all nuclear activities carried out within the territories of the two States. The agreement, which was compatible with the 1967 Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco), was signed in December.

During 1991, safeguards were applied in 41 States under agreements pursuant to NPT or to NPT and the Treaty of Tlatelolco, in one State under an agreement pursuant to the Tlatelolco Treaty and in 10 States under bi- or trilateral agreements. Safeguards activities pursuant to NPT in Iraq were subsumed by activities carried out pursuant to Security Council resolution 687(1991). IAEA also applied safeguards to nuclear installations in Taiwan, China. As at 31 December 1991, safeguards agreements were in force with 88 States pursuant to NPT. For 48 non-nuclear-weapon States party to NPT there was still no safeguards agreement in force in accordance with Article III.4 of the Treaty. As far as IAEA was aware, only two of those States had significant nuclear activities. Safeguards were being applied in those States pursuant to other agreements pending the entry into force of a safeguards agreement pursuant to NPT. NPT safeguards agreements were concluded with the 11 signatories of the South Pacific Nuclear Free Zone Treaty (Rarotonga Treaty),<sup>c</sup> and safeguards were applied in one of those States pursuant to such an agreement. Nineteen of the 23 Latin American States party to the Treaty of Tlatelolco had concluded agreements with the Agency pursuant to that Treaty, and 16 of those agreements were in force. Two States with territories in the zone of application of the Treaty of Tlatelolco also had concluded similar agreements.

By the end of 1991, 475 nuclear facilities were under safeguards or contained safeguarded nuclear material, eight of which were in nuclear-weapon States; there were also 303 locations outside facilities containing small amounts of safeguarded material and two safeguarded non-nuclear installations.

In 1991, a total of 2,145 inspections were performed; seals were applied to nuclear material or

IAEA safeguards equipment was detached and subsequently verified at headquarters in 24,300 cases; 3,300 surveillance films and 1,065 video tapes were reviewed, and 1,090 plutonium and uranium samples were analysed.

Nuclear information

The International Nuclear Information System (INIS), with 80 States and 16 international organizations participating, had a bibliographic database on nuclear literature totalling 1,539,972 records by year's end.

The INIS Clearinghouse distributed about 460,000 microfiches, representing over 23 million printed pages of literature. By the end of the year, the collection of documents approached 255,000 (nearly 330,000 microfiches).

Secretariat

At the end of 1991, IAEA secretariat had a total number of staff members of 2,193, with 835 in the Professional and higher categories, 1,220 in the General Service category and 138 in the Maintenance and Operatives Service category. Among the 612 staff members in posts subject to geographical distribution, 77 nationalities were represented. See Annex II for a listing of IAEA officers.

Budget

The regular budget for 1991 was $192,393,000, of which $177,514,000 was to be financed from contributions by member States on the basis of the 1991 scale of assessment; $6,700,000 was to be funded from the 1988 cash surplus, $4,533,000 from income from reimbursable work for others, and $3,646,000 from other miscellaneous income. Because one large contributor failed to pay its contribution in 1991, the financial situation deteriorated for the first time to the point that a large number of activities could not be carried out and had to be deferred to the following year, as required by IAEA's financial regulations.

The target for voluntary contributions to the Technical Assistance and Cooperation Fund in 1991 was $49 million. At the end of 1991, $38,423,983 had been pledged by member States.

Albania, Latvia, Lithuania and the Republic of Korea joined ILO, bringing total membership to 152 (see Annex I).

Meetings

The seventy-eighth session of the International Labour Conference (Geneva, 5-25 June 1991) was attended by some 2,000 and advisers from 140 countries. The Conference had before it the annual report of the ILO Governing Body, the report of the Director-General, focusing on the informal sector, and the twenty-seventh special report on the effect of apartheid on labour and employment in South Africa.

The Conference adopted a new Convention and Recommendation on working conditions in hotels, restaurants and similar establishments. It held a first discussion on protection of workers' claims in the event of the insolvency of their employer, with a view to adopting standards in 1992.

A general discussion focused on ways of maximizing the potential of new agricultural technology for reducing poverty, raising incomes and creating employment. A special sitting discussed the Director-General's report on the situation of workers of the occupied Arab territories.

A tripartite Conference committee again examined the application of ILO Conventions and Recommendations by member States, and reviewed the application of ILO standards on human resources development and paid educational leave.

The Conference adopted the ILO budget for 1992-1993 amounting to $405.7 million, giving priority to human rights, employment, equality, child labour and the environment.

Some 250 delegates from 31 countries met in the Eleventh Asian Regional Conference (Bangkok, Thailand, 26 November-2 December). The Conference adopted conclusions on the design of structural adjustment programs that would achieve economic growth with minimal social cost, and measures to improve occupational safety and health. Resolutions covered promotion of freedom of association and protection of migrant workers.

Among industrial meetings held during the year were: the Forestry and Wood Industries Committee (second session, Geneva, 17-25 April), dealing with technological change and occupational safety and health; the Joint Committee for Postal and Telecommunications Services (second session, Geneva, 8-16 May), focusing on technological change and working time; the Textiles Committee (twelfth session, Geneva, 25 September-2 October), which examined working conditions and training; and the Food and Drink Industries Committee (second session, Geneva, 4-12 December), dealing with industrial relations and training. A Tripartite Symposium on Structural Adjustment, Employment and Training in Latin America and the Caribbean was held (Caracas, Venezuela, 12-16 August).

International standards

During 1991, ILO activities concerning Conventions and Recommendations consisted of standard setting and supervision of standards.

Standard setting

In 1991, the International Labour Conference adopted the Working Conditions (Hotels and Restaurants) Convention (No. 172) and Recommendation (No. 179), 1991.

A number of Conventions entered into force during 1991, having received the requisite number of ratifications: Accommodation of Crews (Supplementary Provisions) Convention, 1970 (No. 133), on 27 August 1991;<sup>a</sup> Repatriation of Seafarers Convention (Revised), 1987 (No. 166), on 3 July 1991;<sup>b</sup> Safety and Health in Construction Convention, 1988 (No. 167), on 11 January 1991; Employment Promotion and Protection against Unemployment Convention, 1988 (No. 168), on 17 October 1991; and Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention, 1989 (No. 169), on 5 September 1991.

During 1991, 58 ratifications of ILO Conventions by 29 member States were registered, bringing the total number of ratifications at 31 December 1991 to 5,562.

Supervision of standards

The Committee of Experts on the Application of Conventions and Recommendations met in March to carry out its supervisory functions regarding compliance by member States with their obligations under the ILO Constitution and international labour standards. The Committee examined the application of the Employment Policy Convention, 1964 (No. 122),<sup>c</sup> noting that the growth previously reported had not continued and growth had slowed, while inflation and unemployment showed signs of increasing. Developing countries were trapped in a vicious circle of stagnation, recession, inflation, unemployment and poverty. However, education and training policies related to employment and general development policies were being promoted by many Governments. The Committee continued to follow closely the application of the Employment Policy Convention in Eastern and Central European countries engaged in the transition to a market economy.

In addition to supervising the implementation of ratified Conventions, each year the Committee carried out a general survey of the application by all member States of selected international labour standards, whether or not they had been ratified by all countries. In 1991, it dealt with the application of the Paid Educational Leave Convention (No. 140) and Recommendation (No. 148), 1974<sup>d</sup> and the Human Resources Development Convention (No. 142) and Recommendation (No. 150), 1975.<sup>e</sup>

The Governing Body's Committee on Freedom of Association, which examined complaints of violations of freedom of association received from employers' and workers' organizations, met three times during 1991. The Governing Body dealt mostly with complaints alleging violations of trade union rights. A Fact-finding and Conciliation Commission on Freedom of Association was established to examine a complaint against South Africa.

A number of special procedures were pursued during 1991 to examine complaints and representations under various articles of the ILO Constitution. Complaints under article 26 were examined concerning the application of ratified Conventions by Nicaragua and Sweden, and representations under article 24 were examined concerning Czechoslovakia, Iraq, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

World Employment Programme

The World Employment Programme (WEP) assisted and encouraged ILO member States to adopt and implement active policies promoting full, productive and freely chosen employment and reducing poverty. Through its action-oriented research, technical advisory services, national projects and the work of its regional teams in Africa, Asia and Latin America, WEP focused on the longer-term development problems of the rural areas and the rapidly growing urban informal sector. In response to the economic crises and the growth in open unemployment during the 1980s, WEP had entered into an ongoing dialogue with social partners and other international agencies on the social dimension of adjustment, and was devoting a major part of its policy analysis and advice to achieving greater equity in structural adjustment programmes. WEP paid particular attention to the problems of adjustment in the former centrally planned economies, especially on issues related to the labour markets. Among the areas covered were employment and poverty monitoring; direct employment creation and income generation for vulnerable groups; linkages between macro- and micro-economic interventions; technological change; environment; and labour market problems.

Working environment

The International Programme for the Improvement of Working Conditions and Environment continued to assist countries in promoting occupational safety and health and improving general working conditions.

Technical cooperation activities in 15 countries included 26 projects dealing with strengthening safety and health inspection services and institutions, as well as development of planning and training capacities and information systems.

Codes of practice were published on safety and health in construction and in opencast mines, as well as on prevention of major industrial accidents. A guide on safety and health in the use of agrochemicals also was published.

Information dissemination continued through the International Occupational Safety and Health Information Centre, by means of on-line compact disks and microcomputer databases.

Concerning conditions of work and welfare facilities, technical cooperation activities aimed at improving working conditions and productivity in small and medium-sized enterprises; preventing and reducing alcohol and drug problems in the workplace; and improving the welfare and working conditions of women. Groundwork on a new programme of assistance to member States in the area of child labour resulted in an International Programme on the Elimination of Child Labour. The Programme was designed for a period of four to five years and was funded by an annual contribution of $6 million from Germany.

Issues of the Conditions of Work Digest were published on child labour and on the protection of workers' personal data, as was a new issue of Research Projects on Conditions of Work.

Field activities

In 1991, total expenditure on operational activities, under all sources of funds, stood at nearly $170 million (an increase of 11.6 per cent over 1990). The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) continued to remain the largest single source of external funding for ILO ($81.6 million).

Trust funds and multi-bilateral sources provided 35 per cent of total expenditure (nearly $60 million). The ILO regular budget expenditure stood at $16.1 million and accounted for 9.5 per cent. The United Nations Population Fund provided some 7 per cent ($12.5 million).

The three leading programmes in terms of annual expenditure were the employment and development programme, incurring nearly $51 million, comprising primarily projects in support of infrastructure and rural works, and employment planning and population. A newly created department for enterprise and cooperative development incurred nearly $30.5 million, mostly in vocational training. Other significant activities were undertaken under the sectoral activities programme ($11.1 million); industrial relations and labour administration ($7.4 million); and working conditions and environment ($5.8 million). Activities in support of workers' and employers' organizations incurred $7.3 million and $1.2 million, respectively.

Educational activities

In its vocational training programmes, ILO continued to emphasize the primacy of skills development, closely linked to opportunities for wage and salary employment or self-employment. In 1991, in addition to focusing on the special needs of the disadvantaged, ILO paid particular attention to the problems of retraining those displaced or threatened by economic stabilization and industrial restructuring, especially older workers and employees in the public sector. Reflecting the main trends in UNDP financing of technical assistance, ILO strengthened its capacity in the areas of training, policy analysis and the formulation of coherent programmes of support to national skills development efforts. In the context of the growth of nationally executed technical cooperation activities, ILO provided training and advisory services to member States on the planning and management of technical assistance. Emphasis was placed on the reform of public vocational training systems to achieve greater flexibility and responsiveness to technological change and local labour market needs. In that connection, the ILO regional vocational training centres played an important role in maintaining a dialogue with national authorities on the scope and direction of public training policy in the light of structural change and in the face of intensifying resource constraints. Research activities undertaken by the regional centres were coordinated with the analytical work undertaken by the ILO headquarters units to ensure maximum impact; ILO also participated in organizations such as the Donors to African Education group, which aimed at achieving greater coherence and coordination among various donors supporting education and training assistance to developing countries. In 1991, technical cooperation expenditure for vocational training, vocational rehabilitation and training policies reached $31 million, or about 20 per cent of total ILO technical cooperation expenditure.

The International Institute for Labour Studies at Geneva, the ILO centre for education and research, held its twenty-sixth international internship course on active labour policy development (Geneva, 8 May-7 June 1991). Attended by 24 participants from 22 countries in Africa, Asia, Europe, the Middle East, and Latin America and the Caribbean, the course dealt with a wide range of social policy issues, including international labour standards, human rights, rural development, the informal sector, industrial reorganization and labour policies, labour markets and their functioning, labour-management relations and participation, women workers, the impact of new technologies on employment and working conditions, and environment and development.

The Institute, together with the ILO Bureau of Statistics, organized an advanced training course on labour statistics for French-speaking African countries, at ILO's International Training Centre at Turin, Italy, in February/March 1991. Twenty-three participants from 16 countries attended. In September, the Institute organized a round table on social institutions for economic reform in Central and Eastern Europe, in collaboration with the Research Institute of Labour (Budapest, Hungary) and with the support of the Hungarian Ministry of Labour. The meeting was based on the perception that the social concomitants of economic change could not be addressed in a reactive fashion, and that the identification and development of appropriate social institutions were essential to channel and sustain long-term economic transformation in Central and Eastern Europe. Sixty participants from academic, practitioner and policy-making circles of Eastern and Western Europe and North America attended the meeting. The papers and proceedings were to be published in an issue of Labour and Society.

At the request of ILO, the Institute organized a special commemorative symposium on David Morse and ILO, on 27 February 1991, to set the work of the first post-war Director-General of ILO in the historical perspective of the subsequent development of the organization.

The main activities of the new industrial organization programme were related to trends of industrial reorganization, the role of labour institutions in that process, industrial districts and the development of small-scale industry in developing countries in the context of new patterns of industrial organization.

Under the labour market programme, activities focused on promoting networks of individuals and institutions engaged in work on labour market issues, further development of techniques of analysis in the labour market field and development of educational activities derived from research.

In 1991, four issues of the Institute's journal Labour and Society were published in English and French, of which three were thematic, devoted to industrial districts and local economic regeneration, the structuring of economic and social deprivation and labour markets in industrial countries, and social institutions for economic reforms in Central and Eastern Europe.

Publications

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, the total number of full-time staff under permanent, fixed-term and short-term appointments at ILO headquarters and elsewhere was 3,345. Of these, 1,433 were in the Professional and higher categories and 1,912 were in the General Service or Maintenance categories. Of the Professional staff, 652 were assigned to technical cooperation projects.

Budget

The International Labour Conference in June 1989 adopted a budget of $330.44 million for the 1990-1991 biennium, which, at the exchange rate of 1.75 Swiss francs to the United States dollar, amounted to 578,270,000 Swiss francs. For the first time, a combined system of Swiss franc assessments and forward purchasing of the biennium's dollar requirements was introduced.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The twenty-sixth biennial session of the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) (Rome, Italy, 9-27 November 1991) approved FAO's programme of work and budget for 1992-1993 and adopted resolutions on various aspects of food, agriculture and rural development.

Major themes of the 1991 Conference were the world food and agriculture situation, the environment and sustainable development, and people's participation in rural development.

The Conference noted that world food and agricultural production in 1991 was expected to fall below the previous year's level, representing the first global decline since 1983. This was attributed to a marked reduction in cereal and soybean crops, with only a modest expansion of livestock production in North America; sharply reduced wheat crops in Australia; unfavourable weather affecting summer crops in China, where agricultural production was estimated to have fallen by 2 per cent and cereals nearly 3 per cent below the previous year's harvest; and a further decline of about 9 per cent in agricultural production in the USSR.

The Conference adopted a Plan of Action for People's Participation in Rural Development to encourage institution-building and grass-roots decision-making in development. The Plan called for increased public awareness and the introduction of legislation and reforms to intensify cooperation between Governments and people's organizations. It recommended the free association of rural people in organizations of their choice and appealed for efforts to decentralize public administration and decision-making. The Plan advocated national policies to promote more equitable access to resources and services for the rural population, especially the poor, and legal protection, equal rights and full membership in people's organizations for women and other disadvantaged groups.

The Conference considered the Plan of Action for the Integration of Women into Agricultural and Rural Development, which called for women's increased access to income, credit, education and decision-making. Since the Plan's approval at the 1989 Conference, FAO had made efforts to include women's interests in its fieldwork and hire more women professionals.

The Conference reviewed the implementation of the 1985 International Code of Conduct on the Distribution and Use of Pesticides and progress on the Prior Informed Consent (PIC) Clause, by which the Code was amended and which was expected to become fully instrumental in January 1992. As of that date, each valid notification of a ban or severe restriction of a pesticide by a participating Government would trigger the PIC procedure, implementation of which was to be monitored jointly with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP). A joint FAO/UNEP expert group continued to monitor progress in PIC implementation.

The Conference reviewed the second progress report on implementation of the FAO Strategy for Fisheries Management and Development, endorsed by an FAO conference in 1984.<sup>a</sup> It noted with satisfaction that the fisheries sector continued to make increasing contributions towards the achievement of food security; it pointed out, however, that despite those positive trends, many countries still faced constraints to expanding fisheries output.

The Conference underlined the importance of training and transfer of appropriate technologies. It agreed that environment and sustainability in fisheries, integrated coastal area management, removal of trade barriers and development of national research capacities, among other issues, should be given greater emphasis. It urged further assistance to developing countries, particularly in Africa, to expand their marine and inland fisheries and aquaculture, the latter becoming more and more important in meeting rising food demands.

The Conference admitted four new members: Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and the European Economic Community (EEC), bringing total membership of FAO to 161 (see Annex I). EEC became the first regional economic integration organization to become a member of an intergovernmental organization; it was to participate in FAO meetings within its competence and vote on behalf of its members. Puerto Rico entered FAO in 1991 as an associate member. A request for admission from South Africa was deferred until the next (1993) Conference. The Conference elected the chairman and members of the Council (see Annex II).

Programming priorities

The Conference endorsed the following priority areas targeted for increased funding: environment and sustainable development; biological diversity, including plant genetic resources; agricultural data development; women in development; policy advice; the joint FAO/World Health Organization International Conference on Nutrition (1992); forestry; strengthening of FAO country representations; and increased cooperation with other international organizations and non-governmental organizations.

Activities in 1991

Food emergencies and rehabilitation

Serious food shortages affected numerous African countries in 1991. In Ethiopia, the disruption of relief activities caused by political upheaval further deteriorated an already fragile food supply situation, creating risks of starvation in certain regions. The food aid needs for Somali and Sudanese refugees and returnees in Ethiopia amounted to 240,000 tonnes; pledges covered 80 per cent, but only 70,000 tonnes were received by mid-year.

In the Sudan, the food situation remained precarious. Food grain prices increased steadily on local markets and were beyond the purchasing power of some 7 million people. Logistical problems hampered the movement of relief assistance. In southern Sudan, delivery problems were exacerbated by the influx of numerous Ethiopian refugees. The overall national cereal deficit was estimated at 1.1 million tonnes as at June 1991. Somalia also continued to face a precarious food situation which was aggravated by civil strife. Food stocks were depleted in urban areas and malnutrition was widespread. Rural areas faced severe food shortages, with certain districts registering deaths from starvation. In Mozambique, a poor harvest significantly raised the food aid requirements for 1991/92, while logistic difficulties caused by damaged infrastructure and ongoing civil strife limited the movement of farm produce.

Other African countries facing shortfalls in food supplies during the 1990/91 marketing year and requiring exceptional or emergency assistance included Angola, Burkina Faso, Chad, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritania, the Niger, Sierra Leone, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire and Zambia.

Bangladesh was struck by a cyclone in April 1991 (see PART THREE, Chapter III), resulting in the loss of an estimated 247,000 tonnes of cereal crops. Although rehabilitation requirements were significant, the immediate needs of the cyclone victims were adequately covered by an ongoing emergency programme. The overall food supply situation at the national level remained satisfactory following an above-average cereal harvest in 1990.

Serious food shortages persisted in Iraq. Food rationing continued at a level well below the minimum required to avert malnutrition, and stocks of cereals were virtually exhausted by mid-year. Prices of most basic commodities were well beyond the purchasing power of large sections of the population. Many of the 1.8 million Iraqi Kurds who left their homes in late March 1991 to seek refuge in Iran and Turkey and along the border areas were still suffering from inadequate supplies of food, water and other relief items.

Other countries in Asia requiring exceptional or emergency assistance included Afghanistan, Cambodia, Jordan, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon and Mongolia.

In Latin America, the food supply situation was tight in Peru, reflecting the previous year's reduced cereal harvest and lower cereal imports in 1991. The situation was particularly difficult for large sections of the population whose access to basic food had been affected by ongoing austerity measures. In Nicaragua, the food supply situation remained insecure as the result of a poor cereal harvest the preceding year and the country's difficult financial situation which reduced its capacity to import. In Haiti, a fragile food supply situation persisted as a result of the previous year's drought.

In the former USSR, the food supply situation deteriorated sharply during 1991 and was expected to continue to do so, particularly among vulnerable groups, as a consequence of rapid inflation, disintegration of the distribution system and price liberalization. In Europe, the food supply situation remained precarious in Albania.

The Screwworm Emergency Centre for North Africa (SECNA) was set up in June 1990 as an international, inter-agency programme, executed by FAO, to eradicate the livestock pest from the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya where an outbreak began in 1988. The new world screwworm (Cochliomyia hominivorax) feeds on the flesh of warm-blooded animals. After a successful pilot project using sterile screwworm flies, which mate with wild flies and eventually reduce the target population, no new cases were reported as of September 1991. SECNA officials were hopeful that the screwworm could be declared eradicated by mid-1992, providing that no new outbreaks occurred.

Field programmes

FAO provided developing countries with technical advice through its field programmes in all areas of food and agriculture, fisheries, forestry and rural development. In 1991, 2,690 field projects were under way for a total value of some $386.9 million. They were funded through trust funds (from Governments and international funding sources) (some $188.3 million or 48.7 per cent), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) (some $159.3 million or 41.2 per cent) and the technical cooperation programme from FAO's regular budget ($39.3 million or 10.1 per cent).

During the year, international financing institutions approved some $2,309 million in funding for agricultural and rural development projects, which were prepared with the assistance of FAO's Investment Centre. The Centre gained approval for 40 projects in 1991, representing $3,860.6 million.

Rural development

All of FAO's multisectoral activities contributed in some way to rural development. From improving crop production to developing alternative sources of income and from advising on national policies to support for research, the organization worked towards raising the level of nutrition and the standard of living of rural populations.

The Agricultural Services Division (AGS) continued to promote farming systems analysis, which was the integrated assessment of all the components affecting farming households: from crop and livestock production to the availability of health services and the quality of the environment. Land evaluation and soil conservation received additional focus in farming systems planning. Activities related to farm household-environmental economics were introduced and training materials were published on integrating land evaluation into farming systems analysis. AGS organized several workshops on the improved use of micro-level data in policy formulation and assessment. National experts in nine countries prepared farm data handbooks for the major agro-ecological zones for use by rural development planners and extension agents.

FAO assisted rural financial institutions, including cooperatives. It was developing and promoting MicroBanker software, a package designed to limit service costs in savings and loans operations for low-income borrowers; by the end of 1991, more than 70 banks and bank branches in Nepal, the Philippines, Sri Lanka and Thailand were using MicroBanker. Other AGS activities included improving agricultural engineering and farm mechanization; developing post-harvest systems; strengthening agro-industries, especially for small farmers; applying biotechnology to traditional processing technologies; and expanding markets and strengthening rural financing.

FAO rural development activities helped developing countries exercise more effective policy-making by providing policy advice, technical assistance and training. Policy-making areas of major concern included agricultural prices, marketing, processing, credit, fiscal and monetary policies, trade and exchange rates, food security and monitoring the impact of food and agricultural policies.

Crops

World cereals output in 1991 was down sharply from the record of 1990, with a decrease of 91 million tonnes (4.6 per cent) compared to the previous year. The forecast for world cereal stocks at the end of the 1991/92 season was the lowest since 1983/84 and, at 17 per cent of consumption, stocks fell to the minimum that FAO considered necessary to safeguard world food security.

Of concern to many developing countries was the continuing collapse in international prices of major tropical products. Compared to the average 1990 levels, the declines by August 1991 were nearly 12 per cent for coffee, 10 per cent for cocoa, 22 per cent for tea and 24 per cent for sugar. Therefore, many FAO projects were directed at helping to improve crop production. Among them, a computerized expert system was introduced in Egypt to counteract the shortfall in extension manpower, offering farmers information support for a number of important crops, such as cucumbers and citrus.

FAO assisted Guyana in overhauling its national seed programme. Existing facilities and know-how were studied extensively and recommendations were made for strengthening research and production capabilities. Training courses were held for farmers and extension workers and plans were drawn up to maximize institutional and technical support in seed production, distribution, certification and conservation.

Under its Prevention of Food Losses Special Action Programme, FAO carried out some 32 projects geared to helping small farmers in developing countries prevent post-harvest food losses resulting from pest attack or poor storage and handling, which could lead to a 30 per cent or more decline in production. Most projects involved grain crops, but increasing emphasis was being placed on perishable crops such as roots and tubers. Other FAO projects were undertaken in the areas of agro-industries, marketing and rural finance.

Livestock

In addition to the campaign for the eradication of the screwworm (see above), FAO embarked on a wide-ranging programme aimed at improving livestock production and its contribution to rural incomes and food security. A major concern to livestock producers in Africa and some parts of western Asia was rinderpest, which FAO helped control through vaccines and information campaigns.

Field work in 1991 included livestock development in Yemen to increase the productivity of indigenous breeds of sheep and goats through improved research, extension and health services. Under a project in the Gambia, carried out in collaboration with UNDP and the Government, FAO helped to develop sheep and goat production and improve animal health.

Other activities included veterinary services development; production of the Animal Health Yearbook, a reference book on over 135 infectious diseases; prevention of parasitic and vector-borne disease; control of non-infectious and of reproductive diseases; dairy development; improved tropical animal feeds; animal breed preservation and development; improved animal husbandry; and animal product processing.

Fisheries

During the year, FAO expanded its activities in aquaculture and inland fisheries. Programmes were launched to control fish diseases and improve fish nutrition, increasing emphasis being placed on integrating fish culture into general agricultural practices.

FAO produced field guides, catalogues of species and other material essential to an economic activity involving thousands of fish species. A global database, SPECIESDAB, was expanded and plans were launched to collaborate with the International Centre for Living Aquatic Resources Management (Manila, Philippines) in developing a complementary database, FISHBASE.

FAO developed microcomputer software to help developing countries assess fish stocks. It prepared manuals and associated software for estimating and managing fish populations and on aspects such as bio-economic modelling, size and age frequency population analysis, trawl survey analysis and models incorporating spatial and geographic components.

During 1991, FAO was involved in numerous projects in fisheries policy and management. A national fishery sector plan was completed in Kenya with FAO assistance; migrant fishermen in West Africa were the major focus of another project; training courses on fisheries management were held in Asia; and major studies were made of the living aquatic resources of the Amazon Basin and of large-scale pelagic drift-net fishing. Other projects concerned the safety of small fishing craft, improved fishing gear, and training in quality control and marketing.

Forestry

FAO co-sponsored with France the Tenth World Forestry Congress (Paris, 17-26 September). Under the central theme of "Trees for life", World Food Day '91 focused on the multiple roles of trees as providers of food, fodder, fuel and income and their important contribution to agricultural production.

Work progressed on the 1990 Global Forest Resources Assessment, scheduled for completion by mid-1992. A Second Interim Report on the State of Tropical Forests was published. Studies were carried out on boreal forests and on the management of tropical forests for both production purposes and the conservation of genetic resources.

FAO's many forestry projects, ranging from wood energy development in Asia to watershed management in Iran, focused increasingly on environmental issues, both in the humid tropics and in arid and semi-arid zones.

During the year, FAO launched an emergency technical cooperation project on the aphid Cinara cupressi, which threatened cypress plantations and cedar forests in eastern and southern Africa. A subregional workshop was held on exotic aphid pests in conifers.

Dry-land tree formations and management, particularly in the Sahelian region, the Sudan and southern Africa, were studied, as was wildlife conservation. International forestry research, forest industries, technology and trade and non-wood forest projects were other areas of activity.

Environment

The FAO/Netherlands Conference on Agriculture and the Environment ('s-Hertogenbosch, Netherlands, 15-19 April 1991) focused on sustainable agricultural and rural development (SARD) and the technical and policy-making steps needed to realize the aims of SARD. Three areas were considered essential: food security; rural employment and income generation, including the eradication of poverty; and natural resource conservation and environmental protection. The Conference's Declaration and Agenda for Action called for changes in agricultural practices in order to bring about SARD.

As part of FAO's activities, an increasing number of requests for environmental assessments were handled during 1991. An FAO study of 38 sub-Saharan countries found alarming rates of soil-nutrient depletion, with depletion rates in eastern Africa almost twice as high as previously reported. Productivity could only be sustained if erosion losses were brought under control and soil fertility improved through sound soil-management practices.

Under other projects, FAO helped to formulate Indonesia's national water policy and provided other countries with policy advice in the protection and sustainable management of water and land resources.

The conservation and use of plant and animal genetic resources received renewed support from the FAO Conference. The organization's Seed Exchange and Information Centre distributed seed samples for trial and evaluation to more than 70 developing countries. A primary objective of the Centre's programme was to make horticultural seeds more available to small farming communities, hospitals, refugee camps, women's cooperatives and schooling programmes.

Nuclear techniques

The food preservation section of the Joint FAO/International Atomic Energy Agency Division of Nuclear Techniques in Food and Agriculture made headway with research on using irradiation to treat fresh fruit and vegetables, thereby protecting them from the fruit fly and other quarantine pests. Such research was especially important in helping developing countries meet strict export-import standards and reduce their reliance on refrigeration.

Other joint activities included a multidisciplinary study of the effects of changing land-use on the ecology and climate of the Brazilian Amazon, whereby stable isotopes of carbon, nitrogen and sulphur were used to trace the flow of energy through aquatic food chains; tests of diagnostic kits in the detection of trypanosomiasis; testing of sera in rinderpest control; a world-wide study on camel productivity; control campaigns against the new world screwworm, the Mediterranean fruit fly, and several moth and caterpillar crop pests; and improved pesticides use. Hundreds of seminars and exchange programmes for scientists from developing countries were sponsored.

Technical cooperation among developing countries

Activities intensified under the technical cooperation among developing countries (TCDC) programme in 1991. FAO promoted regional cooperation, sponsoring seminars and offering technical advice. TCDC projects ranged from regional credit schemes to improved plant nutrition, biotechnology, soil conservation, integrated pest management, reforestation, fisheries management and agro-industries. The major focus continued to be research and setting up regional information exchange networks.

Fourteen countries participated in the Asian regional cooperative programme designed to establish a cooperative network for research and development of food legumes and coarse grains in the tropics and subtropics of the region, while stimulating the transfer of technology and promoting its adoption by farmers.

Another TCDC project facilitated collaboration between India and three African countries—Lesotho, Uganda and the United Republic of Tanzania—in training agricultural bank staff in rural financing.

Information

FAO compiled and published hundreds of information booklets, technical papers and reference materials during the year. Major periodicals included FAO In ... (annual report); Ceres (general topic bi-monthly); Unasylva (forestry quarterly); World Animal Review (quarterly); State of Food and Agriculture (annual); Quarterly Bulletin of Statistics; FAO Production Yearbook, FAO Yearbooks on trade, fertilizers, forest products, fishery statistics and animal health; the Commodity Review and Outlook; Plant Protection Bulletin (quarterly); and Rural Development (annual).

Grass-roots publications, training manuals, film strips and radio and video programmes were produced, covering a wide array of topics from improved farming techniques to animal husbandry, aquaculture and soil conservation. To reach the millions of small farmers and extension workers who could not use the organization's official languages (Arabic, Chinese, English, French and Spanish), FAO encouraged the adaptation, translation and distribution of its publications in local languages.

FAO produced the second edition of the multilingual thesaurus, AGROVOC, containing some 14,714 terms. The English, French and Spanish versions were maintained by FAO, while others were prepared by individual countries (Germany, Italy) or groups of countries (Brazil/Portugal, Arabic-speaking countries). More than 200 institutions contributed to AGROVOC, all of them participants in the FAO International Information System for the Agricultural Sciences and Technology (AGRIS) and the Current Agricultural Research Information System databases. AGROVOC was to be available on CD-ROM with the 1992 version of AGRIS.

Budget

The FAO Conference in 1991 approved a working budget for the 1992-1993 biennium of $645.6 million, representing a net decrease of 4.6 per cent compared to 1990-1991. The budget was approved by consensus after a commitment was made by the United States to pay its assessment in full and to clear its arrears which, at the time of the Conference, amounted to $116 million. The Conference noted that the negative budget growth should be considered exceptional and should not set a precedent for the future.

Secretariat

At the end of 1991, the number of staff employed at FAO headquarters was 3,221, of whom 1,204 were in the Professional and higher categories (see Annex III). Field project personnel and those in regional and country offices numbered 3,179: 1,383 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,796 in the General Service category. Of the 371 associate Professional officers working with FAO, 75 were at headquarters and 296 were in the field or regional and country offices.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational,
Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in 1991 continued its activities of promoting cooperation among nations in the educational, scientific, cultural and communication spheres. The twenty-sixth annual session of UNESCO's governing body, the General Conference, was held at the Organization's headquarters in Paris (15 October-7 November).

The General Conference approved the budget for the 1992-1993 biennium in the amount of $444,704,000 under the regular budget and an estimated $274,875,500 in extrabudgetary funds. It also amended Article V of the Constitution such that the Executive Board shall consist of member States instead of individual persons with effect from the end of the twenty-seventh session of the General Conference (1993). The Executive Board also took steps to improve and streamline its work, considerably shortening its sessions.

In 1991, the membership of UNESCO increased to 163 with the admission of Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Tuvalu. (For membership of UNESCO and its Executive Board, see Annexes I and II.)

Education

In 1991, UNESCO's major programmes focused on education for all (EFA), the formulation and application of educational policies, and education training and society. Special attention was given to the follow-up of the World Conference on EFA held at Jomtien, Thailand, in 1990. UNESCO reinforced its assistance to member States in an effort to diagnose basic learning needs, set national EFA objectives and devise new strategies to eradicate illiteracy. EFA national round-tables, held in about 50 States, helped to mobilize support for basic education. The International Consultative Forum on EFA met at headquarters in Paris (4-6 December) to assess national and international progress reports.

An International Conference on Quality of EFA was held (Manila, Philippines, 19-21 November) with the participation of 400 people from 26 countries and 12 international organizations.

An International Conference on the Education Needs of the Victims of Apartheid in South Africa was organized with the Special Committee against Apartheid and the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa

(Paris, 25-27 June). About 120 participants and observers took part, among them South African experts in education and human resources, representatives of non-racial South African educational organizations and United Nations specialized agencies. Conference participants adopted the Paris Statement on international educational assistance for victims of apartheid.

At the sixth Conference of Ministers of Education (Dakar, Senegal, July), strategies were devised to promote literacy teaching and basic education for development, and priorities and guidelines were set for international, regional and subregional cooperation.

A new initiative, UNITWIN, was launched in 1991 to foster inter-university cooperation. Among other things, the programme was designed to support the establishment of a number of UNESCO chairs at various universities, some 10 of which were created in 1991. UNITWIN's emphasis was on postgraduate studies, fellowships and exchange of personnel, improvement of the planning and management of higher education and support for university and scientific libraries.

In promoting interdisciplinary programmes on preventative education in the areas of health, drug abuse and acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), UNESCO continued to participate in inter-institutional agreements, including those with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the World Health Organization. Fourteen projects were implemented by UNESCO in 1991, and the agency organized or contributed to 10 internal conferences on AIDS, 22 meetings on drug abuse, and 8 workshops on health education.

Action to promote the access of girls to science and technology education continued in 1991. UNESCO collaborated with the University of the Philippines in developing suitable teaching materials, and also supported the Sixth World Conference on Girls and Science and Technology and Women in Science and Technology in the Asia Region.

Natural sciences

During the year, UNESCO worked to elaborate strategies for the management of science and technology systems in various regions of the world. It supported the Club of Rome in its preparation of a report on mobilizing science and technology to meet global challenges and worked with the International Council for Science Policy Studies in assembling a study on science and technology in developing countries-strategies for the 1990s.

Several training programmes and workshops were organized on the regional and international levels. The Fifth Course on Science and Technology Planning in Latin America (Havana, Cuba, March), was attended by specialists from 15 Latin American countries.

The UNESCO International Scientific Council for Science and Technology Policy Development, established in 1988, held its second session (Paris, 4-6 March). The Council made 11 recommendations and called on UNESCO to strengthen its scientific and technological culture subprogramme and to retain the ethical component in its science, technology and society programme.

The Intergovernmental Programme on Man and the Biosphere continued to encourage interdisciplinary research and training in resource management by promoting better understanding of the biophysical, socio-economic and cultural factors involved in sustainable development. This was done through a series of international research networks and 300 biosphere reserves in 75 countries.

The International Geological Correlation Programme, with 92 established national committees, continued to foster international collaboration in the earth sciences through 56 research projects in 22 countries. The geology for development project focused on applied regional geological studies and on job training related to environmentally sound and sustainable socio-economic development. Particular attention was given to the transfer of new technologies-such as computerized information handling and remote sensing analysis-to developing countries. Under the programme, several activities were conducted in connection with the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction (see PART THREE, Chapter III), including the establishment and reinforcement of hazard-monitoring network systems and post-disaster investigations.

In 1991, the oceanographic and marine scientific activities of UNESCO were combined into one office, with the Secretary of UNESCO's Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) as the Director. In the light of recommendations made at the 1990 Second World Climate Conference, the Global Ocean Observing System, jointly sponsored by IOC and the World Meteorological Organization was further developed. The office also focused on ocean dynamics and climate, ocean science in relation to living and non-living resources, marine pollution research and monitoring, ocean mapping, ocean observation and warning systems and marine data and information exchange.

The fourth phase of the International Hydrological Programme continued, with scientific seminars and symposia on hydrological research in a changing environment (including the possibility of climate change); interface process between atmospheres, land and water systems; changes of water quality; regional hydrology; methodologies for water resources assessments; mapping and information systems in water resources; urban hydrology; and integrated water resources development.

In addition, UNESCO continued to participate actively in preparations for the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, to be held in 1992 (see PART THREE, Chapter VIII).

Social and Human Sciences

In 1991, the First European Conference on the Social Sciences (Santander, Spain, 24-28 June) brought together for the first time social scientists from Western and Eastern Europe. The establishment of an intergovernmental programme in the social sciences was proposed, and UNESCO's General Conference decided to conduct a feasibility study for the programme during the 1992-1993 period.

At an international forum on sustainable development (Paris, 23-25 September), the complex relationship between development processes, human resources and environmental preservation was examined, and the role of women and businesses-the main players in the transition to sustainable development-was highlighted.

UNESCO contributed to the education of specialized groups such as police officers, military personnel and lawyers in human rights and peace. It organized, in collaboration with the International Federation of Senior Police Officers, an informal consultation to examine the state of human rights teaching in police academies around the world (Paris, 5 June).

UNESCO's programme to promote equality and help improve the status of women continued. The Third Festival of Fez (Morocco) was organized around the theme of creativity and Arab women (9-16 June), and an international meeting of experts was convened in the United States to analyse the 1949 United Nations Convention for the Suppression of the Traffic in Persons and of the Exploitation of the Prostitution of Others.<sup>a</sup>

Under its programmes dealing with the elimination of apartheid, UNESCO helped to organize a workshop on human rights issues for post-apartheid South Africa (Banjul, Gambia, 18-21 June) and an informal working group to discuss the access of Africans to science and technology (Lusaka, Zambia, 17-19 September).

An international seminar on gender studies (Moscow, November) brought together more than 400 participants to review issues related to family relations, demographic trends and women's participation in economic life and politics.

Culture

In November, the General Conference of UNESCO requested its Director-General to establish a World Commission on Culture and Development, comprising a Chairman and 12 other members sitting in a personal capacity, to prepare a report on culture and development and proposals for both urgent and long-term action to meet cultural needs in the context of development. The initiative was endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 46/158.

Through a joint effort with Czechoslovakia, an international forum on culture and democracy was held (Prague, 4-6 September) to discuss the interaction of democratic, economic and cultural changes.

The secretariat of the World Decade for Cultural Development (1988-1997) (see PART THREE, Chapter XII), observed under UNESCO auspices, launched an international programme for cultural development, proclaimed a World Day for Cultural Development (21 May) and began preparing for a mid-term review of the Decade's achievements. It was decided that from 1991 on, a specific theme would be designated for each of the remaining years around which activities would be centred.

The World Heritage Committee, established under the 1972 Convention on the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage, held its fifteenth session (Carthage, Tunisia, 9-13 December). The Committee added 40 sites to the World Heritage List, raising to 358 the number of cultural and natural properties protected under the Convention. At year's end, 123 States had become party to the Convention. Because of the armed conflict in Yugoslavia, the old town of Dubrovnik was placed on the list of world heritage sites in danger. UNESCO was requested to coordinate international aid to protect and restore the site of Angkor, Cambodia.

UNESCO participated in a symposium on cultural heritage organized by the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe (CSCE) (Cracow, Poland, 29-31 May) and in the Media Save Art 91 meeting initiated by the International Centre for the Study of the Preservation and Restoration of Cultural Property (ICCROM) in Rome (17-22 June).

Cultural studies on Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Caribbean and the Islamic world continued throughout the year. Volume VII of the General History of Africa was published in both Arabic and Portuguese, as were abridged editions of Volume I in Hausa and Volume IV in French. Volumes I and II of the History of the Civilizations of Central Asia were sent to press.

UNESCO's programme for the promotion of books and reading provided training to more than 100 specialists in publishing management, editing and book distribution. Support continued to be provided to the programme for the co-publication of children's books in Asia and the Pacific, to three such regional programmes in Africa, to two (including one in Braille) in Latin America and to a newly created programme in the Caribbean. A number of studies on the economic factors affecting books and reading were carried out as part of the New African Book Strategy, and a network of organizations to coordinate book development and promotion of reading was established in Asia and the Pacific.

The Intergovernmental Copyright Committee, established under the Universal Copyright Convention, held its ninth session (Paris, 17-21 June), and the Intergovernmental Committee of the International Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations held its thirteenth session (Paris, 19-21 June).

A variety of activities to promote cinema, television, fine arts and the status of the artist were organized in all regions of the world. Studies on the social and working conditions of performing artists in Europe and in Asia and the Pacific were published, as was a methodological guide to collecting data on crafts.

The UNESCO International Music Council Prize was awarded to the composers J. Chailley (France) and Tooru Takemitsu (Japan) and to the Gaudeamus Foundation in Amsterdam. Also, at a concert held at the Sorbonne in honour of the 200th anniversary of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's birth, soprano Elisabeth Schwarzkopf (Germany) was awarded the UNESCO Mozart Gold Medal. The Organization also continued to publish and co-publish art albums and recordings in the UNESCO collection of traditional music.

Communication

In accordance with the new communication strategy forged by the General Conference in 1989, UNESCO, together with the United Nations and with financial assistance from UNDP and non-governmental and professional organizations, held a seminar on independence and pluralism of the press in Africa (Windhoek, Namibia, 29 April-3 May). Some 100 journalists and media organizations prepared a series of operational projects for reinforcing freedom of the press in Africa.

UNESCO held the second international meeting of heads of regional communications training centres for communication development (Paris, 12-14 June), at which 60 participants helped prepare a long-term strategy for training professional communicators. In the series of reports and papers on mass communication, two additional documents were published, entitled "Import/Export: International Flow of Television Fiction" and "New Communication Technologies: Research Trends".

At its twelfth session (11-18 February), the International Programme for the Development of Communication approved 31 projects totalling $2,463,000, in the fields of communication training, assistance to news agencies, rural newspapers, press institutes, and radio and television stations. Assistance was provided to subregional news agencies in Central, West-Central, and South-East Africa and to national news agency development projects in Algeria, Burundi, the Cook Islands, Djibouti, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji and the Lao People's Democratic Republic. Radio and television production facilities were strengthened in Antigua and Barbuda, Bolivia, Botswana, the Comoros, Cuba and the Philippines.

After three years in operation, the Pacific Training of Journalists and Development of the Printed Media project was reported to have helped train more than 300 journalists, assisted in the development of several newspapers and published a three-volume training handbook, the News Manual.

The General Information Programme-UNESCO's convergence point for activities that create information, documentation and library and archives services in member States-continued to assist particularly the developing countries in increasing their capacity to gather, organize, disseminate and utilize information.

National seminars on the formulation of information policies took place in Burundi, Kenya, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Rwanda and Senegal, while information resource sharing among West African countries was discussed at a regional seminar (Lagos, Nigeria, 20-23 February). An interregional Euro-Arab technical seminar on information systems and services (Granada, Spain, 25-29 November), attended by specialists from 14 Arab and 10 European States, provided a forum for exchanging ideas on current and future cooperation.

The UNESCO Network of Associated Libraries, established in 1990 to promote intercultural dialogue, comprised 50 libraries from all geographical regions by the end of 1991. Rural libraries and information services were established in Malawi, Nigeria, the Philippines, Sierra Leone, Thailand and Uganda, and a model community information database was set up for Latin America and the Caribbean. A study on the role of national libraries in the new information environment, training modules on library interlending and document supply and guidelines for public libraries involved in literacy work were produced. A secretariat and the International Executive Committee for the Alexandria Library Project were established, as well as six committees-four in the United States, one in Norway and one in the United Kingdom-of the Friends of the Alexandria Library, created by professional organizations to support the project.

Many activities aimed at developing human resources in the field of informatics were supported by UNESCO during 1991. Assistance was provided for training courses and study grants in 14 member States (Albania, Algeria, Burundi, Cameroon, Cuba, China, Egypt, Ghana, Kenya, Morocco, Tanzania, Tunisia, Ukraine and Uganda). Support continued to be extended to the postgraduate informatics courses at the University of Lagos in Nigeria and the University of Nairobi in Kenya. The Institut Africain d'Informatique (Libreville, Gabon), established with UNDP funding, received students from 11 countries in the region.

Particular emphasis continued to be placed on the shaping of regional informatics strategies. Following the INFORMAFRICA seminar held in Lomé, Togo, in 1990, a proposal for a Regional Informatics Network for Africa linking computer centres and academic institutions was submitted to extrabudgetary funding sources. The establishment of similar informatics networks in Europe, Asia and the Arab States was also pursued. At the twelfth Conference of Latin American Informatics Authorities (Valencia, Spain, 24-30 November), a plan of action was adopted to elaborate a global informatics strategy for Latin America.

At the fifth session (26-27 March) of the Bureau of the Intergovernmental Informatics Programme (IIP), the IIP label was awarded to 45 projects in 22 member States relating to training and the use of informatics techniques for education and training; software production; development of informatics infrastructures; basic and applied research; and informatics policies and strategies..

Development cooperation

Efforts were made in 1991 to heighten UNESCO's contribution to international development cooperation through extrabudgetary operational activities. Assistance was provided to member States in the form of equipment for operational projects; sponsorship and administration of fellowships, grants and study tours; and coordination of emergency assistance. In addition, special emphasis was placed on helping member States to elaborate their own national development priorities and strategies, design sectoral and intersectoral development policies and programme and build national capacity for sector policy analysis. The work was undertaken in close cooperation with UNDP, which covered 80 per cent of the project costs.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, UNESCO had a full-time staff of 2,771, made up of 1,027 in the Professional or higher categories, drawn from 127 nationalities, and 1,744 in the General Service.

Budget

The General Conference of UNESCO, at its 1989 session, had approved a budget of $378,788,000 for the 1990-1991 biennium. The level of the working capital fund was fixed at $15,000,000, and the total assessment on member States (after deducting miscellaneous income) was $364,853,000.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

The World Health Assembly, the governing body of the World Health Organization (WHO), at its forty-fourth annual session (Geneva, 6-16 May 1991), approved an effective working budget level of $734.9 million for the 1992-1993 biennium. In discussing WHO's policy for the biennium, the Assembly endorsed five priority areas identified by the WHO Director-General: the health of man in a changing environment; proper food and nutrition for a healthy life; integrated disease control as part of overall health care and human development; dissemination of information for advocacy and for educational, managerial and scientific purposes; and intensified health development action in, and support to, countries most in need.

The Assembly adopted resolutions calling for the elimination of leprosy and dracunculiasis (Guinea-worm disease) as public health problems by the year 2000. It urged renewed action against tuberculosis, cholera and acute respiratory infections. Increased efforts were pledged for emergency relief, the health of refugees, the urban crisis, the development of new vaccines for children and matters specifically linking women, health and development. The theme of the technical discussions held during the Assembly was "Strategies for health for all in the face of rapid urbanization". The Assembly endorsed the Guiding Principles on Human Organ Transplantation, developed through an international project involving external experts and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations (NGOs.) (For details of WHO's activities on human organ transplantation, including the text of the Guiding Principles, see Human Organ Transplantation: a Report on Developments under the Auspices of WHO (1987-1991), published by WHO, Geneva.)

During 1991, the membership of WHO rose to 170, with one associate member, with the admission of Latvia, Lithuania, the Marshall Islands and Micronesia as members, and Tokelau as an associate member (see Annex I).

Strategy for health for all

In 1991, a major activity was the development of mechanisms, procedures and tools to support member States in carrying out an evaluation of the implementation of their national strategies for health for all, and to facilitate the preparation of global and regional reports for submission in 1992.

In South-East Asia, an intercountry consultation on health of the underprivileged recommended a new strategy to release the creative abilities of people for health action. In Indonesia, books on challenges for the attainment of health for all by the year 2000 were published in the national language. In Europe, a review of Finland's health-for-all policy was carried out by an international group of experts.

WHO continued to initiate and support activities aimed at creating a nucleus of leaders at the national level to provide greater impetus to the changes required as countries implemented strategies for health for all through primary health care. A working group on health-for-all leadership development (Geneva, June) reviewed the impact of the WHO leadership initiative since its inception in 1986.<sup>a</sup> The group found that the concept had been important in motivating and coordinating activities associated with the human development aspects of primary health care, but that much remained to be done, since leadership development varied greatly between countries and regions. In South-East Asia, national workshops and seminars on leadership development for health for all were held in Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Myanmar, Nepal, Sri Lanka and Thailand. Efforts to build up coregroups of facilitators at the national level led to the organization of an intercountry workshop (Jordan, July). A seminar on policy analyses and leadership development in human resources for health (Cyprus, October/November) considered the range of roles and individual skills required for effective policy-making leadership. The second nine-month leadership development programme in international health began in August to prepare potential leaders to play a leading role in national health development and in efforts to achieve health for all.

WHO co-sponsored, with the Department of Public Health of the Saitama Prefectural Government in Japan, a public health summit (Omiya, September) to consider the need for changes in public health services to reflect emerging trends in the social, political and economic sectors, and to take account of the link between health and socio-economic development. A wide range of recommendations for action were condensed in the Saitama Declaration: a call for new public health action.

Health system infrastructure

Health systems development and research

The Consultative Group on Primary Health Care Development (Geneva, November) made recommendations to strengthen the role of health systems research in primary health care.

An international newsletter, Bridge, linking the producers and users of health systems research and clinical epidemiology, was published with support from the Rockefeller Foundation (New York) and in collaboration with the International Clinical Epidemiology Network (Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, United States) and the Foundation for Health Services Research (Washington, D.C.). The newsletter was published three times a year in Arabic, English and Spanish.

Under the project on health systems research for southern Africa, administered jointly by WHO, the Netherlands Ministry for Development Cooperation and the Royal Tropical Institute (Amsterdam, Netherlands), the institutional basis for health systems research in 15 countries was strengthened. The third intercountry workshop on the project (Lesotho, April) made recommendations to strengthen further the infrastructure and institutional arrangements in the participating countries and elaborated strategies for transferring acquired experience and expertise to other countries and regions.

Primary health care systems

A consultation on organizing and financing health care reform in countries of Central and Eastern Europe (Geneva, April) discussed public- and private-sector responsibilities, alternative payment systems for health care providers and social insurance models of health financing. An interregional meeting on the balance of public and private sectors in national health systems and the role of ministries of health (Mexico, July) emphasized that any policy changes should be envisaged in the perspective of the national health system and the health-for-all strategy and that WHO could support ministries by documenting experiences and disseminating findings. A study group (Geneva, December) evaluated the impact of recent changes in financing health systems and recommended strategies for WHO and countries to ensure that such changes led to improved delivery and utilization of services. A guide on improved planning and management of district health systems, Towards a Healthy District, was published.

In collaboration with the Government of Ghana, WHO organized an international forum with over 200 participants from 37 countries on "Health: a conditionality for economic development-breaking the cycle of poverty and inequity" (Accra, 4-6 December), as part of an effort to include the most vulnerable in planning for economic and social development. The forum adopted the Accra Initiative, in the form of a Declaration and Agenda for Action, which was to be forwarded to the World Health Assembly, to the Economic and Social Council and through it to the General Assembly in 1992. The Initiative called for health objectives to be among the goals of economic policies and development strategies.

Health manpower

A consultation on human resources management and policy analysis (Washington, D.C., March) listed key factors for defining national and regional policies in human resources utilization. A major conference on the university and the health of the population (Havana, Cuba, June) discussed the role of the university in health care and practice. An informal consultation (Cuernavaca, Mexico, July) studied the possible combining of public and private financing for human resources, and an interregional workshop on nursing informatics (Washington, D.C., October/November) met to improve nurses' knowledge of information technology. In South-East Asia, an intercountry consultation (Bangkok, Thailand, June) followed up recommendations on the development of research in nursing, and a consultative meeting (Jakarta, Indonesia, October) developed guidelines to review legislation on human resources for health. In Africa, a meeting (Brazzaville, Congo, November) dealt with the social relevance and quality of medical education, while a workshop on nursing leadership for health and development (Kadoma, Zimbabwe, November) was held to assist in creating a critical mass of leaders in nursing.

Public information and education for health

Jointly with the Nordic countries and in association with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), WHO organized the Third International Conference on Health Promotion: Supportive Environments for Health (Sundsvall, Sweden, June), stressing the interrelated aspects of health and environment. Subsequently, the Sundsvall Statement on Supportive Environments for Health was circulated to all member States. WHO also co-sponsored the Fourteenth World Conference on Health Education, organized by the International Union for Health Education (Helsinki, Finland, June).

The WHO/United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization/United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) Consultation on Strategies for Implementing Comprehensive Health Education Promotion Programmes (Geneva, November) discussed the state of comprehensive school health education in primary and secondary schools.

Group sessions and panel discussions on school health education were organized at the Seventh International Conference on AIDS (Florence, Italy, June) and during the World Conference on Health Education (Helsinki, June). National and intercountry training workshops (Colombo, Sri Lanka, August; Cairo, Egypt, November) were held to stimulate involvement of the media in health education, especially for the prevention of AIDS.

The observance of special days helped to ensure that health messages were heard, focusing attention on specific health themes. World Health Day 1991 (7 April) was observed under the theme "Should disaster strike-be prepared!". World No Tobacco Day (31 May) stressed the importance of smoke-free public places and transport, and World AIDS Day (1 December) was observed with the message "Sharing the challenge". The first World Diabetes Day (27 June) called attention to the many health consequences of the disease. A major teleconference on AIDS was organized in the Americas in March.

Health promotion and care

Support to national activities used an approach which integrated women's concerns in programmes, focusing on promoting the health of women, women's leadership and their participation as providers of health care and improving women's status to enhance their contribution to health and socio-economic development. The Special Programme of Research, Development and Research Training in Human Reproduction, in collaboration with the International Women's Health Coalition, organized a meeting (Geneva, February) on women's perspectives on the introduction of fertility regulation technologies. A technical working group was convened in 1991 to draft guidelines on preventing and treating severe anaemia during pregnancy.

In the area of food and nutrition, WHO and UNICEF convened an international conference (Montreal, October), co-sponsored by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the World Bank, the United States Agency for International Development and the Canadian International Development Agency, on ending hidden hunger-a policy conference on micronutrient malnutrition. The conference aimed at strengthening the international commitment to eliminate or reduce iodine, vitamin-A and iron deficiencies.

A joint WHO/UNICEF statement on breast-feeding, Protecting, Promoting and Supporting Breast-feeding: the Special Role of Maternity Services, published by WHO, became the focus of an initiative on "baby-friendly" hospitals, launched by WHO and UNICEF at a meeting of the International Pediatric Association (Ankara, Turkey, June).

Heads of WHO collaborating centres on accident and injury prevention met (Paris, October) to advise on programme orientation. The meeting called for better integration of safety policies and communication of intersectoral requirements to WHO policy organs, so that coherent principles and policies could be formulated.

The first International Conference on Safe Communities and a second two-part seminar on development of safe communities (Stockholm, Sweden, June) decided to undertake a review of existing community programmes for injury prevention and to prepare an assessment for the second (1992) conference.

Health of specific population groups

To tackle the range of problems affecting mothers and children, WHO's activities were restructured to focus on maternal health and safe motherhood; child health and development; perinatal and neonatal care; and family planning and population.

As to adolescent health, WHO co-sponsored with the International Children's Centre a congress of the International Association for Adolescent Health (Montreux, Switzerland, July), featuring a WHO special session on young people's perception of health and health care. A meeting was held with the International Youth Foundation (Battle Creek, Michigan, United States) (Geneva, November) to review the results of a global search that had provided evidence of hundreds of successful programmes or projects promoting healthy adolescent development. Principles and factors of importance were identified for effective programming, replication of successful projects and research and evaluation.

An international workshop on the impact of the environment on reproductive health (Copenhagen, September/October) was organized in collaboration with Denmark, the Commission of the European Communities (CEC) and the United States National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. Support was provided to a conference on bioethics in human reproduction research in the Muslim world (Cairo, December).

A conference on clean air at work (Luxembourg, September) was co-sponsored by CEC and WHO. The thirteenth Asian conference on occupational health and third conference of the South-East Asian Ergonomics Society (Bangkok, November), sponsored by WHO, discussed the planning and management of occupational health services. A WHO expert committee on health promotion in the workplace: alcohol and drug abuse (Geneva, November) considered possible courses of action.

A WHO study group on ageing and working capacity (Helsinki, December) discussed matters such as encouraging the continued integration of the older segments of society into everyday activities.

Protection and promotion of mental health

Some 80 countries had formulated national mental health programmes, and in a number of countries (Brazil, Chile, China, Cyprus, Dominican Republic, Oman, Philippines, Tunisia, Uruguay) national coordinating groups or similar bodies met to evaluate progress and plan programmes. Regional coordinating groups were convened in the Americas, South-East Asia, and the Eastern Mediterranean and Western Pacific regions. A meeting (Amsterdam, April) to define possibilities for collaboration to review mental health care in Eastern Europe was organized. A special programme to assist Eastern and Central European countries was drawn up. A conference (Amsterdam, April) reviewed mental health care in European cities, and data banks were set up to help evaluate community services in urban areas.

Programmes for psychosocial stimulation of children in their first years of life were reviewed and a meeting of experts held (Lisbon, November) to decide how WHO should adapt and promote programmes that were culturally relevant. A meeting on enhancement of psychosocial competencies in children and adolescents (Geneva, May) discussed ways of introducing life-skills programmes in schools and other educational settings, and a network of centres was established to work on the task. A task force on mental health promotion and education was set up in Europe, and a national workshop on child mental health was held (Nanjing, China, June).

In 1991, WHO set up an Abuse Trends Linkage Alerting System to bring together health-related data from a variety of sources as a means of mobilizing efforts to reduce the demand for dependence-producing substances. An inter-regional meeting on alcohol (Tokyo, April) proposed the setting up of a new alcohol abuse programme to deal with alcohol-related problems at the primary health care level. The United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs accepted the recommendations of the twenty-seventh (1990) meeting of the WHO Expert Committee on Drug Dependence. WHO and the United Nations cooperated with member States to strengthen the WHO training programme on regulatory control and laboratory testing.

Environmental health

A report of the WHO Expert Committee on Environmental Health in Urban Development, WHO Technical Report Series No. 807, identified measures to correct and avoid health problems. The report served as a resource for the urbanization panel of the WHO Commission on Health and Environment and for two seminars on urban health (Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, February; Osaka, Japan, September). The Assembly adopted a resolution urging that a balance be maintained between urban populations and infrastructure, that attention be given to family planning and that priority be given to strengthening urban health services at the community level.

Support was provided for urban solid wastes management seminars convened by WHO regional offices for the Eastern Mediterranean (August) and South-East Asia (October), and for environmental and health impact assessment seminars organized at Aberdeen University (United Kingdom, July) and the Centre for Environmental Health Activities (Amman, Jordan, November).

WHO participated in the organization of an international conference to draw up a strategy for supportive environments for health (Sundsvall, Sweden, June). Follow-up activities included extensive promotion of the strategy, dissemination of the conference statement and report and the production of a handbook on methods to create supportive environments.

Under a UNEP/WHO programme for the application of guidelines on the environmental health aspects of housing and urban planning, six guidelines were produced in several languages on topics such as identification of needs and priorities with regard to housing and urban development; urbanization and child health; insect and rodent control; access to life-saving emergency services; and surface-water drainage. The use of the guidelines was being promoted in municipal workshops in all regions.

An FAO/WHO conference on food standards, chemicals in food and food trade (Rome, March) reviewed the work of the FAO/WHO Expert Committee on Food Additives and the FAO/WHO meetings on pesticide residues, and proposed future areas of work.

Training courses in water quality surveillance and control were held (USSR, October).

An agreement was signed on 15 July 1991 with the USSR to establish an international programme on the health effects resulting from the 1986 nuclear powerplant accident at Chernobyl.

Diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative technology

Efforts focused on improving surgical and anaesthetic services at district hospitals in developing countries, and on establishing systems of continuing education and supervision of medical officers who lacked formal training in surgery, with workshops held to that end (Sri Lanka, August; Lao People's Democratic Republic, November; Myanmar, December).

The International Federation of Surgical Colleges held its thirty-fourth Congress (Stockholm, August), at which WHO discussed surgery for the elderly.

WHO collaborated with the International Atomic Energy Agency in a seminar for Europe, the Middle East and Africa on radiation dosimetry (Leuven, Belgium, September). It participated in the first Regional Congress on Radiological and Nuclear Safety (Buenos Aires, Argentina, October). In collaboration with other international organizations, WHO began revising the Basic Safety Standards for Radiation Protection and the five-volume Manual on Radiation Protection in Hospitals and General Practice.

Participants from 70 countries attended the sixth biennial WHO-sponsored International Conference of Drug Regulatory Authorities (Ottawa, Canada, October). A proposed standard international acupuncture nomenclature was published, and a seminar on plants and health was held (Robe, Japan, August) following the Assembly's adoption in 1991 of a resolution urging cooperation between providers of traditional medicine and modern health care.

By the end of 1991, 64 member States had operational essential-drugs programmes, 28 were developing programmes and 69 had formulated national drug policies. Despite those gains, approximately half the world's population still lacked access to the most needed essential drugs. The monthly WHO Pharmaceuticals Newsletter and the quarterly WHO Drug Information were published.

A forum for exchange of information regarding rehabilitation was provided through intercountry workshops (Guangzhou, China, June; New Delhi, India, September; Suva, Fiji, November). An interregional consultation on disability (Geneva, July/August), attended by regional advisers on rehabilitation, contributed to the analysis of the global status of rehabilitation.

Disease prevention and control

Immunization

In 1991, for the first time, more than 80 per cent of infants in the first year of life received a third dose of combined diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus vaccine and poliomyelitis vaccine. Progress was also made in improving supplies and logistics for immunization activities. There was substantial cooperation in support of immunization programmes between WHO and a wide range of organizations, including United Nations specialized agencies, UNDP, Rotary International, bilateral development agencies and NGOs. Within WHO, collaboration was directed towards neonatal tetanus prevention, vitamin-A supplementation, preparing training manuals and providing training in logistics.

Other WHO activities included the provision of guidance on disinfection of aircraft, the drafting of a new manual on vector control in airports and seaports, evaluation of pesticide application equipment through collaborating centres, preparation of a comprehensive practical manual of vector control methods for fieldworkers and participation in teaching at international workshops on various aspects of vector control.

Malaria

Malaria remained one of the world's major health problems, with over 40 per cent of the population exposed to varying degrees of risk. Tropical Africa was believed to account for most of the clinical cases and practically all the parasite carriers in the world. The first interregional meeting in Africa on malaria control took place (Brazzaville, Congo, October).

National malaria control programmes in Burundi, China, Colombia, Ecuador, India, Mozambique, Myanmar, Nepal, Paraguay, Peru, Rwanda, Uganda and Viet Nam were reviewed, with emphasis on the need to integrate diagnosis and treatment in the general health services.

An epidemic control team was established at WHO headquarters in 1991 and had responded to requests from Burundi, Ethiopia and Namibia to evaluate the situation and cooperate with ministries of health in drawing up national control programmes. It also led to assessment missions to northern Pakistan and southern Afghanistan.

WHO cooperated with countries in strengthening their capacity for training staff for planning, implementing and evaluating malaria control programmes. Belgium cooperated in the launching of a course in French in Burundi, while courses in Burkina Faso and Thailand continued, with the support of France and Italy, respectively.

Other parasitic diseases

The WHO Expert Committee on the Control of Schistosomiasis, a disease endemic in 74 member States, confirmed its eradication in Montserrat in November. Control programmes against Chagas disease continued in Brazil and Argentina, where the seropositivity rate in infants fell from 5.5 per cent to zero. In the onchocerciasis control programme in West Africa, where vector control operations had ceased in much of the original area, community-wide ivermectin treatment in hyperendemic zones continued, involving more than 500,000 treatments. Following the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade (1981-1990) and through national eradication programmes, annual incidence of dracunculiasis had dropped considerably and was estimated at less than 3 million. India and Pakistan were on the verge of eradicating the disease and most of the endemic countries in Africa had set a national goal of interrupting local transmission by the end of 1995.

Diarrhoeal diseases

In 1991, cholera spread to Latin America for the first time in the century and extensive and catastrophic outbreaks recurred in Africa. More deaths were reported during 1991 than in the previous five years combined. To coordinate WHO's emergency response to the epidemics, a global task force on cholera control was set up in April.

At least 11 intercountry and numerous country meetings were conducted in Africa, Latin America and the Eastern Mediterranean to draw up national cholera control plans and coordinate technical and financial resources. Increased efforts were made to stimulate the local production of oral rehydration salts in order to meet the additional demands, and emergency supplies for treating cholera, including donations from pharmaceutical companies, were provided to Bangladesh, Benin, Cameroon, Chad, Liberia, Mali, the Niger, Nigeria, Peru and Togo, as well as to the displaced Kurdish populations in Iran and Turkey.

Leprosy

An International Conference on Epidemiology of Leprosy (Jakarta, Indonesia, June) adopted standard indicators for monitoring incidence. A working group on leprosy had been set up, which was expected to meet annually from 1991 to review strategies for eliminating the disease. The group recommended the continued application of multi-drug therapy; training of leprosy control personnel in management; health systems research towards solving operational problems; disability prevention activities as part of leprosy control; community-based rehabilitation through intersectoral collaboration; and strengthening recording and reporting systems.

AIDS

At the end of 1991, WHO estimated that more than a million cases of acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS) and some 8 million to 10 million human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) infections had occurred in adults, as well as over 1.5 million cases of AIDS in children and newborn infants. Also at year's end, all WHO member States had a national AIDS programme, and of the 169 countries or areas collaborating with WHO 131 had formulated short-term and 125 medium-term plans for their AIDS programme. Resource mobilization efforts to guarantee the sustainability of the programmes had resulted in pledges of some $440 million, including funds channelled through the WHO Trust Fund for the Global Programme on AIDS and those from multi-bilateral and bilateral sources.

At a meeting convened by WHO and UNDP in June, representatives of 18 pharmaceutical companies resolved to collaborate with WHO to develop and make available safe and effective vaccines and drugs against HIV infection and AIDS.

WHO had promoted multisectoral action with other agencies in the United Nations system against the spread of AIDS, collaborating with UNDP in mobilizing external resources for national AIDS programmes and in other areas under the WHO/UNDP Alliance to combat AIDS. It collaborated with the World Bank in studies on the likely effectiveness and cost of interventions to prevent HIV transmissions and provide care for HIV-infected persons and AIDS sufferers.

Cancer

The WHO global programme on cancer dealt with cancer control, including primary prevention, early detection and treatment and palliative care, and research on epidemiology, aetiology, prevention and the mechanisms of carcinogenesis. Support in setting up national cancer programmes was given to Chile, Cuba, India (Karnataka and Kerala), Indonesia, Pakistan, the Philippines, Singapore and Spain (Catalonia). A manual on ways to establish national cancer control programmes was produced, together with a set of fact sheets, covering primary prevention, early diagnosis, therapy and palliative care.

Thirty per cent of cancer world-wide was associated with tobacco use, either smoking or chewing. Various national programmes included anti-tobacco measures such as education, legislation and taxation, and the establishment of multidisciplinary ministerial committees.

Cardiovascular diseases

The WHO programme on multinational monitoring of trends and determinants of cardiovascular diseases recommended that its methodology and organization be used as the basis for developing health information technology in developing countries to promote cardiovascular disease prevention and control programmes.

A protocol for a pilot study on hypertension patient education was approved at a meeting (Geneva, May) and work later began on the study. A WHO Expert Committee on Rehabilitation after Cardiovascular Diseases, with Special Emphasis on Developing Countries (Geneva, October), considered future trends in patient education, the role of primary care physicians and ways of preparing them for the task.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, the total number of full-time staff employed by WHO stood at 4,694 on permanent and fixed-term contracts. Of these, 1,569 staff members, drawn from 138 nationalities, were in the Professional and higher categories, and 3,125 were in the General Service category. Of the total number, 61 were in posts financed by UNDP, UNEP, the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control and the United Nations Population Fund.

Budget

The forty-fourth (1991) World Health Assembly approved an effective working budget of $734,936,000 for the 1992-1993 biennium.

Chapter VI

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

During the fiscal year 1 July 1990 to 30 June 1991, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) and its affiliate, the International Development Association (IDA), continued to provide economic assistance to developing countries in order to raise their living standards. In fiscal 1991, the Bank adopted a comprehensive long-term strategy to address the protracted challenge of poverty reduction. The strategy-designed to make sure that the poor gained from growth and contributed to it-would ensure that all assistance programmes undertaken by the Bank were specifically geared to reducing poverty. The first part of the strategy encouraged broadly based economic growth through the productive use of abundant labour on the developing countries, while the second required investment in social services, especially basic education and health, family planning and nutrition, to improve living conditions and increase the capacity of the poor to respond to income-earning opportunities arising from economic growth.

Total commitments by the Bank, credit approvals from IDA and investment commitments from a second affiliate, the International Finance Corporation, totalled $25,532 million.

Membership in the Bank rose to 156 in 1991 with the admission of Mongolia on 14 February and Albania on 16 October (see Annex I).

Lending operations

In the fiscal year ending 30 June 1991, the World Bank made 126 loans to 42 countries amounting to $16,392.1 million, an increase of $1,212.5 million from fiscal 1990. This brought the cumulative total of loan commitments by the Bank since its inception in 1946 to $203,053.9 million.

Agriculture and rural development

The Bank made 22 loans to 15 countries in fiscal 1991 for agriculture and rural development totalling $1,913.1 million. Mexico received $750 million, of which $400 million was to help support its objectives of increasing the rate of growth in agriculture, raising productivity and improving the efficiency of the agricultural sector, and alleviating the poverty of the most vulnerable population groups through targeted food programmes. Of $354.2 million provided to the Philippines, $158 million was for an environment and natural resources sector-adjustment programme, which sought to preserve or re-establish the remaining biological diversity of the Philippines. Of two loans made to China totalling $222.2 million, $147.1 million was to assist in improving and expanding irrigation schemes to permit greater productivity on low- and medium-yield areas in the North China plain and thus increase farm incomes and production of staple foods and cash crops.

Development finance companies

Seven countries received $1,695 million to assist their development finance companies. Of two loans to Poland totalling $480 million, $280 million was to support its efforts to develop and implement a broad privatization programme of State-owned enterprises and to implement restructuring across a major share of its industry. Brazil received $300 million to support efforts by the National Bank for Social and Economic Development to reorient its focus to the private sector and reduce its exposure to the public sector, reduce credit segmentation and strengthen credit policies and procedures. A loan of $300 million to Mexico was to provide assistance in implementing trade and customs reforms and in assisting the Banco Nacional de Comercio Exterior to play a more efficient role in trade financing.

Education

Fifteen loans totalling $1,515.5 million were made to 13 countries for education projects. Brazil received $395 million, of which $245 million was to finance programmes to improve learning and reduce drop-out and repetition rates among low-income children in primary and pre-primary schools in Greater São Paulo. A loan of $200 million to the Philippines was to support a programme to reduce the elementary school drop-out rate among children of poor families and expand literacy training for out-of-school youths and adults who lacked functional literacy. Mexico received $152 million to improve the quality, efficiency and relevance of the National System for Vocational and Technical Education by upgrading the quality of high-level skills training and middle-level technician training.

Energy

Ten countries received assistance for 13 energy projects totalling $2,759 million during fiscal 1991. Of $650 million provided to India, $450 million was aimed at eliminating the flaring of 12 million cubic metres of gas a day in the Bombay High oil field, thus increasing indigenous oil production by about 4 million tonnes a year. Poland received $340 million to finance the comprehensive restructuring of the energy sector and the commercialization and privatization of restructured enterprises and of petroleum exploration and production activities. Turkey received $300 million to support the restructuring of the Turkish Electricity Authority and partially to finance the foreign exchange costs of four years of its least-cost investment programme. Yugoslavia received $300 million to finance the construction of a mine and powerplant to meet the growth in demand for electricity in Serbia.

Industry

During fiscal 1991, 10 countries received 12 loans amounting to $1,767.1 million for the industrial sector. Of two loans to India totalling $369 million, $245 million was to finance the expansion and modernization of the plastics-production capacity of the Indian Petrochemical Corporation and improve the efficiency and quality of downstream plastics products. Algeria received $350 million to support a programme of reforms in the financial and industrial sectors during the transition from a centrally planned to a market economy. Of $300 million provided to Turkey, $200 million was to finance viable private investments in export-oriented activities.

Non-project

The Bank made 10 non-project loans to 10 countries totalling $1,940 million. A loan of $450 million was granted to Czechoslovakia to support the first phase of its rapid transition to a market economy and Poland received $300 million to support its economic transformation programme, which combined stabilization and structural change, including a radical liberalization of the trade regime, as well as of pricing policies. A loan of $300 million was made to Egypt to assist its economic reform and structural adjustment programme, which focused on macroeconomic stabilization, structural adjustment to stimulate medium- and long-term growth and the acceleration of social policies to minimize the effects of economic reforms on the poor.

Population, health and nutrition

Ten countries received 11 loans totalling $647 million for population, health and nutrition programmes. Mexico received a loan of $180 million to strengthen and expand health care services, including targeted nutrition assistance to some 13 million uninsured poor people in the country's four poorest states and in the Federal district. A loan of $104 million to Indonesia was to help the Government intensify its efforts to lower fertility and maternal mortality rates during the 1990s. Venezuela received $100 million to support an increase in prenatal and postnatal health and nutrition service coverage, preventive health care for children under six years of age and expansion of the coverage of formal and informal preschool education.

Public sector management

Three countries received three loans totalling $636 million for public sector management. Colombia was given $304 million to improve public enterprise management by establishing a performance planning and evaluation system and introducing efficiency improvements in resource allocation. A $300 million loan to Argentina was to assist the Government to privatize or restructure public enterprises in the telecommunications, railways and hydrocarbon sectors. Thailand received $32 million to help improve its overall tax-collection system and increase its efficiency, effectiveness and equity through a project that included all hardware and related data-entry processing equipment, software, training and technical assistance.

Small-scale enterprises

The Bank extended three loans totalling $166 million to assist small-scale enterprises in three countries. Of these loans, the largest was $125 million to Indonesia to support ongoing efforts by Bank Rakyat Indonesia to strengthen and expand its financially viable Unit Desa system—the only nationwide network that met the needs of both small borrowers and savers. Pakistan received $26 million to be channelled to micro-enterprises through private leasing companies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to demonstrate that financial innovations and initiatives in the private sector could be sustained, and that micro-entrepreneurs of both sexes could be credit-worthy even when subjected to market prices and practices. A loan of $15 million to the Philippines was to finance the investment and working capital needs of some 4,200 firms in cottage industries.

Technical assistance

Five countries received six technical assistance loans amounting to $284.5 million. Romania received $180 million to make foreign exchange available for importing essential spare parts and equipment in order to sustain output performance which was threatened by serious foreign exchange constraints and dislocations during the transition from a planned to a market economy. Argentina was granted two loans of $23 million each to help strengthen the administrative and technical capabilities of the national administration to carry out its public-sector reform programme and to strengthen the institutional and regulatory framework for sectors in which public enterprises operated. A $30 million loan was extended to Indonesia to enhance its project evaluation capacity, particularly in areas that cut across sectors that could not be addressed by existing project activities.

Telecommunications

Two loans totalling $270 million were made for telecommunications projects. Hungary received $150 million to finance the physical expansion and modernization of the Hungarian Telecommunications Company with institutional strengthening through technical assistance and training. Poland was granted $120 million to strengthen and expand the national trunk network, as well as to carry out improvements in the international and local networks.

Transportation

The Bank made nine loans totalling $915.9 million to nine countries in the area of transportation systems. A loan of $300 million was made to Turkey to improve state and provincial roads. Morocco received $132 million to modernize existing facilities at the ports of Casablanca and Mohammedia, and the Philippines received $125 million to minimize the adverse economic effects of a July 1990 earthquake through the reconstruction of essential infrastructure and other facilities.

Urban development

Nine countries received 10 loans totalling $1,077.1 million for urban projects. Iran received $250 million to finance the medium- and long-term recovery of the agriculture and housing sectors, after a June 1990 earthquake. Of two loans totalling $241.3 million to Indonesia, $180.3 million was for improving the quality of urban infrastructure investments and service delivery on the part of 45 local governments in Bali and East Java. Argentina received $200 million to provide financial support and incentives to provinces to undertake their own adjustment programmes.

Water supply and sewerage

The Bank made five loans totalling $806 million to five countries for water supply and sewerage projects. Mexico received $300 million to support a programme designed to improve the quality and quantity of water supply and sanitation services, promote sound pricing policies, reduce the need for government funding and improve environmental conditions throughout the country. Nigeria received $256 million to finance water-supply rehabilitation subprojects, comprising rehabilitation of existing facilities, leakage-detection and repair programmes and institutional strengthening at the state level. Argentina received a loan of $100 million to promote greater water supply and sewerage sector efficiency and financial viability, expand service coverage, improve sector services while protecting the environment and encourage private sector participation. Indonesia received $100 million to provide urban infrastructure, with emphasis on increasing the access of households to water supply and solid-waste and sanitation services.

Economic Development Institute

The fiscal 1991 training programme of the Economic Development Institute (EDI) directly reflected issues of poverty reduction, human resource development, concern for the environment, debt and adjustment, public sector management and private sector development.

A detailed three-year poverty-related training programme, involving as many as 40 distinct activities, was prepared for submission to potential funding sources. EDI also undertook a number of training programmes that directly addressed the issue of recognizing and increasing the contribution of women to development. In partnership with Japan, EDI began a three-year programme of regional and country workshops on collaboration among Governments, NGOs and international agencies. The programme was designed as a joint learning process, with EDI organizing workshops and seminars in which participants could review projects on which NGOs and Governments had collaborated successfully, assess roles of NGOs in participatory planning and policy development, review policy and operational aspects of collaboration and draft action guidelines and recommendations.

The rapid pace of economic liberalization in Eastern Europe had created quicker-than-expected demands for new EDI courses and seminars. Those activities dealt with the subregion's immediate problems of economic liberalization-inflation and stabilization, financial sector reform and privatization. Other activities included courses concerned with concepts of market economics, housing and transport policy and management of State-owned enterprises.

Of the 102 training activities held, 27 of them took place in the area of development management. Well over half of all activities were policy-oriented seminars that addressed issues of macroeconomic management or sector management. Some 25 per cent of the activities were senior policy seminars, 10 per cent were for training of trainers at EDI partner institutions and about 5 per cent were technical or project analysis activities.

The growth of co-financing had made possible the large increase in EDI activities and also generated important secondary benefits by establishing closer contacts with a wide range of bilateral and multilateral aid agencies and with training institutes in industrial countries. It had also provided access to additional sources of teaching materials and speakers, drawn from EDI's financing partners.

Co-financing

The Bank's contribution to co-financed operations during fiscal 1991 amounted to $7,778 million for 126 projects, a decline of $544 million from fiscal 1990. The largest source of co-financing continued to be official bilateral and multilateral development institutions, which together accounted for $7,057 million, down from $9,307 million in fiscal 1990. The decline was attributable primarily to a slow-down in operations as a result of the hostilities in the Persian Gulf and delay in certain large co-financed operations because of prolonged negotiations on debt issues and other difficult policy matters.

The Bank's Executive Board approved one transaction under the expanded co-financing operations programme, which was intended to support eligible Bank borrowers seeking to gain access to capital markets through public issues and private placements, and to improve their access to medium-term credit facilities. A Bank guarantee was used to support a 10-year, fixed-rate Eurodollar bond issue for $200 million by the State Development Institute of Hungary.

The second phase of the special programme of assistance for sub-Saharan Africa, designed to support adjustment programmes in low-income, debt-distressed countries of that region, was launched in October 1990. In fiscal 1991, the fourth year of this multidonor programme, $1.8 billion was provided to eligible countries in the form of co-financing of IDA adjustment operations, as well as coordinated financing.

Financing activities

Total borrowings in medium- and long-term loans by the Bank in fiscal 1991 amounted to the equivalent of $10,883.4 million, made up of $4,219 million in United States dollars, $1,657 million in Japanese yen, $1,490 million in Swiss francs, $909 million in deutsche mark and $2,608 million in Australian dollars, Canadian dollars, French francs, Hong Kong dollars, Italian lire, Netherlands guilders, New Zealand dollars, pounds sterling, Spanish pesetas and Swedish kronor. This excluded refinancings of $5,367 million of short-term debt.

After swaps, almost all of the year's borrowings were in the so-called core currencies of the Bank's loan pool, that is, in United States dollars, Japanese yen and the deutsche mark group (including Swiss francs).

Capitalization

Effective 30 June 1987,<sup>a</sup> the Bank's capital stock was expressed in the special drawing right (SDR) introduced by the International Monetary Fund as it was valued in terms of United States dollars immediately before the introduction of the basket method (the value based on a basket of 16 major currencies) of valuing the SDR on 1 July 1974 (SDR 1 = US$ 1.20635).

The subscribed capital of the Bank, as at 30 June 1991, was $139,120 million, or 80 per cent of authorized capital of $174,740 million.

Income, expenditures and reserves

The Bank's gross revenues, generated primarily from loans and investments, increased by $1,135 million or 13 per cent, to a total of $9,723 million in fiscal 1991. Net income was $1,200 million, an increase of $154 million over fiscal 1990.

Expenditures totalled $8,460 million, an increase of 15 per cent over the previous fiscal year. Administrative costs amounted to $574 million, an increase of $66 million over fiscal 1990.

As at 30 June 1991, the staff of the World Bank numbered 5,900, of whom 3,776 were staff in the Professional or higher categories, drawn from 125 nationalities (see also Annex II).

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), established in 1956, furthers economic growth in developing member countries by promoting private sector investments. IFC is a member of the World Bank Group, which also includes the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), the International Development Association and the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency. However, IFC operates independently with its own Articles of Agreement, shareholders, management, staff and financial structure. Its share capital is provided by its member countries, which collectively also determine its policies and activities. In addition, it raises most of the funds for its lending activities through bond issues in the international financial markets and from returns on profitable investments.

IFC shares full project risks with its partners, enabling it to play an important role in mobilizing additional project funding from other investors and lenders, either through co-financing or loan syndications, underwritings and guarantees. In addition to project finance and resource mobilization, IFC provides advisory services and technical assistance to private businesses and Governments in developing countries in order to create an environment hospitable to private investment.

During the fiscal year ending 30 June 1991, IFC approved loans and investments totalling $1.5 billion from its own account, in addition to $1.3 billion in loan syndications and $33 million in underwritings, for 152 projects in a broad range of sectors and industries, including banking and financial services, tourism, mining, petrochemicals, electricity, oil and gas exploration and development, telecommunications, agrobusiness, and general manufacturing. The projects approved had total costs of $10.7 billion.

The Corporation disbursed $1.2 billion in loans, equity, and quasi-equity investments during the year. The disbursed portfolio grew by 20 per cent over the fiscal year to $4,300 million at 30 June 1991.

IFC's net income for the year reached $166 million, representing a return on its net worth of 8.4 per cent. It made five successful borrowings in international financial markets, raising a total of $598 million. In view of its triple-A rating, IFC was able to raise those funds at highly favourable rates.

During the 1991 fiscal year, Algeria, the Central African Republic, Czechoslovakia, Mongolia, Namibia and Romania joined IFC, bringing its membership to 141 countries (see Annex I). To support the expansion of its operations and increase its presence in Africa, Central and Eastern Europe, and Latin America, IFC opened regional missions in Cameroon and Zimbabwe as well as resident missions in Brazil, Czechoslovakia and Hungary. It also created a new position-Capital Markets Regional Representative for Central and Eastern Europe-based in Prague, Czechoslovakia. It further reorganized its investment structure to create new departments specifically for Europe, the Middle East and North Africa.

Regional projects

In fiscal 1991 IFC approved 152 projects located in 46 countries.

Sub-Saharan Africa

In sub-Saharan Africa, IFC's strategy was to support the "supply response" to structural adjustment programmes. In fiscal 1991, IFC approved 42 projects in 17 countries in the region; as at 30 June, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 133 companies in 31 countries.

Large and medium-sized enterprises were assisted in Gabon, Ghana, Mozambique, Nigeria, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire and Zimbabwe. The larger projects backed by IFC in sub-Saharan Africa were concentrated in natural-resource based industries and tourism.

Through its Africa Enterprise Fund (AEF), launched in fiscal 1989, IFC provided direct financing in the range of $100,000 to $750,000 to small enterprises for projects costing between $250,000 and $5 million. In fiscal 1991, IFC approved total financing of $11 million-$9 million in loans and $-2 million in equity and quasi-equity investments-for 20 AEF projects in 11 countries. Those projects were in sectors such as agroindustry and food processing; tourism; manufacturing; health services; and capital markets. In addition, financial intermediaries throughout the region received credit and agency lines from IFC for on-lending to small and medium-sized enterprises.

The Africa Project Development Facility established by IFC, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the African Development Bank (AfDB), provided technical assistance to entrepreneurs in sub-Saharan Africa. To alleviate the shortage of well-trained and experienced managers in sub-Saharan Africa, IFC had launched the African Management Services Company in fiscal 1989, also in collaboration with UNDP and AfDB.

IFC's capital market projects included approval of financing for eight financial institutions in the region, including Botswana's first housing finance company, an investment bank and a discount house in Ghana, and a venture capital company in Zimbabwe. It also approved an equity investment in Madagascar's biggest commercial bank, which was being privatized. In addition, AEF participated in the capital increases of the Bank of Africa in Benin and in Mali and approved a second investment in a venture capital company in Madagascar. Also in the financial sector, IFC extended a $10 million credit line to the Nigerian American Merchant Bank for onlending to medium-sized Nigerian enterprises to finance fixed assets and working capital. Through multi-country loan facilities established with Crédit Lyonnais and Banque Nationale de Paris of France, IFC planned to make medium-term loans in hard currency available to small and medium-sized enterprises in Gabon, Guinea, Madagascar, Mauritius and Togo. IFC approved a $5 million equity investment in the Commonwealth Equity Fund, a lo-year closed-end investment fund that would invest nearly $60 million in the smaller emerging markets of developing Commonwealth countries. In Africa, the fund would invest in Botswana, Ghana, Kenya, Mauritius, Nigeria and Zimbabwe.

The Foreign Investment Advisory Service (FIAS) advised Kenya, Lesotho and Madagascar on strategies to promote foreign direct investment (FDI). It helped Mozambique develop a plan to encourage FDI through debt-equity swaps and Guinea-Bissau and Malawi to develop new investment policy statements, following the identification of regulatory obstacles to FDI in those countries. In Burkina Faso and the Congo, FIAS carried out diagnostic reviews of the investment climate, focusing on the legal and regulatory framework. It was involved, on an ongoing basis, in preparing films and related educational materials based on its 1989 Conference on Promotion of Foreign Investment in Sub-Saharan Africa.

To handle expanded activities, IFC opened regional missions in Cameroon and Zimbabwe, in addition to its existing regional missions in Côte D'Ivoire and Kenya and resident mission in Nigeria

Asia

In fiscal 1991, IFC approved 39 projects in 9 countries in Asia; as at 30 June 1991, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 132 companies in 12 countries in the region.

Large and medium-sized enterprises were assisted in Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Pakistan, the Philippines and Thailand. IFC loans supported the expansion of cotton yarn mills, food processing facilities, a cement company, the merchant fleet of a shipping company and an ammonia-urea plant. It also approved financing for a petrochemical complex, a thermal power plant, a nickel refinery, and a cotton and synthetic fibre spinning mill.

Under capital markets projects, IFC structured, placed and underwrote a landmark convertible bond issue that raised $125 million in the international financial markets for an Indonesian industrial conglomerate. It also established funds in Indonesia, Malaysia and Thailand to promote venture capital investment in small and medium-sized domestic companies. It approved a $20 million loan, of which $15 million was syndicated for a leasing company in Indonesia, and approved an investment in a joint-venture leasing company in Thailand. A number of onlending mechanisms were approved during the year, including a $20 million guarantee facility for the Philippine Commercial International Bank to make long-term loans in local currency to private domestic companies. Also approved was an agency credit line to Thailand's Bank of Asia to provide term loans to medium-sized enterprises. Multi-country loan facilities with Crédit Lyonnais and Banque Nationale de Paris would provide medium-term lending in foreign exchange to small and medium-sized companies in Indonesia, the Philippines and Thailand. In India, IFC helped to finance the expansion of the Housing Development Finance Corporation by participating in a rights issue and arranging a $100 million loan, of which $60 million was to be syndicated on a best-efforts basis with commercial banks. IFC helped privatize and restructure the Capital Development and Investment Corporation, Sri Lanka's leading institutional equity and quasi-equity financier. It also approved an investment in the Commonwealth Equity Fund, which would invest nearly $60 million in small or emerging markets in the developing Commonwealth countries. In Asia, the Fund planned to invest in Bangladesh, India, Malaysia, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea and Sri Lanka.

FIAS was active in a number of countries in East and South Asia, including Bangladesh, Indonesia, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, Sri Lanka, Thailand and Viet Nam.

During fiscal 1991, staff visited IFC's seven member countries in the South Pacific (Fiji, Kiribati, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Vanuatu) to promote the South Pacific Project Facility (SPPF) and develop ideas for businesses. SPPF had about 30 projects in its pipeline. In June, it opened an office in Sydney, Australia, to set up collaborative relationships with organizations in the Pacific Island countries and attract project proposals. It had already entered into discussions with organizations in Fiji and Papua New Guinea.

Europe

IFC approved 15 projects in 5 countries in Europe in fiscal 1991; as at 30 June 1991, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 71 companies in 6 countries in the region.

Concerning large and medium-sized enterprises, IFC approved loans to Hungary, Turkey and Yugoslavia for automobile manufacturing, printing and publishing, crystal exportation, textile operations and a dairy enterprise. IFC also approved financing for a German-Turkish venture that would manufacture water and space-heating equipment.

Under capital markets projects, with a consortium of foreign and local banks, IFC was helping to establish a joint-venture commercial bank in Poland that would provide a broad range of banking and other financial services to foreign and local enterprises operating there. In Hungary, IFC approved a $26 million agency credit facility to Budapest Bank for onlending to small and medium-sized enterprises. It also approved financing for an insurance company and Hungary's first investment bank. IFC and Oesterreichische Laenderbank of Austria established a $50 million multi-country loan facility, with each providing $25 million, to finance medium-scale enterprises in Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland. In Turkey, IFC syndicated a second backstop facility for the Eurocommercial Paper programme of one of the country's leading banks.

At the beginning of the fiscal year, IFC created a new investment department covering only Europe to meet increased demand and better serve its newest member countries in the region. It opened resident missions in Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland in response to growing opportunities for private sector initiatives. It also had a resident mission in Turkey, the country with the biggest share of IFC's European loan and equity portfolio. Because of the demand for assistance with capital market development, IFC created the new position of Capital Markets Regional Representative for Central and Eastern Europe (Prague, Czechoslovakia). IFC's Vienna office served as a promotional base for other countries in the region.

The Polish Business Advisory Service was established in Warsaw in fiscal 1991 to provide technical assistance to Polish entrepreneurs in preparing business plans and investment proposals, as well as in project implementation. It would also provide operational support and promote the training and use of local business consultants. Funding of some $25 million for the first five years was to be raised from other multilateral and bilateral sources.

In response to increased demand for specialized expertise in corporate restructuring and privatization, the Corporate Finance Services Department had been established in 1990 to provide fee-based advisory services in those areas. During fiscal year 1991, the Department undertook nine advisory assignments in Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland, Portugal and Yugoslavia.

FIAS carried out a diagnostic study in Romania to identify the major impediments to the inward flow of FDI. In Hungary, it reviewed aspects of the system for attracting and regulating FDI, and in Czechoslovakia, it focused on two major aspects of the domestic environment for FDI—the legal framework and foreign investment agencies.

Latin America and the Caribbean

IFC's strategy in Latin America included helping companies adjust to heightened competition resulting from trade liberalization, domestic deregulation and privatization. In fiscal 1991, IFC approved 45 projects in 11 countries; as at 30 June, its committed portfolio included loans and investments for 163 companies in 23 countries in the region.

Concerning large and medium-sized enterprises, IFC assisted Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Mexico and Venezuela with financing for a hydroelectric plant, modernization of a bread producing facility, a new float glass plant, a cellular telephone system, a cement producer, a diversified chemicals company, a diversified petrochemicals group, port facilities expansion and oil and gas exploration projects. Mexican companies accounted for the largest share of IFC's loan and equity portfolio in the region.

As to capital markets projects, IFC approved a $60 million joint investment-banking operation with a leading private Brazilian bank to provide financing in the form of convertible loans. IFC underwrote and placed part of the $72 million Mexico Equity and Income Fund. It approved several credit lines, including a $10 million credit line to Banco Bice in Chile, a $10 million credit line to Banco de Crédito Argentino, and an $8 million agency credit line to Banco Roberts, both in Argentina. A $20 million credit line was extended to a Venezuelan finance company. A multi-country loan facility established with Crédit Lyonnais of France would make loans in foreign currency to small and medium-sized companies in Chile and Venezuela. IFC also approved an investment in the Commonwealth Equity Fund to invest in the Commonwealth developing countries. In the Caribbean, the Fund would invest in Barbados, Jamaica, and Trinidad and Tobago.

In fiscal year 1991, FIAS launched its programme in the region. It sponsored a UNDP-supported conference on investment policy issues in Central American and Caribbean countries. It completed a project in Venezuela to help structure an investment promotion agency and undertook projects in Honduras and Uruguay to identify policies affecting FDI flows.

Middle East and North Africa

IFC's financing activities in the Middle East and North Africa focused on foreign exchange earning projects; companies being privatized; and companies producing goods for regional markets. It approved eight projects in four countries in the region in fiscal 1991; as at 30 June, the Corporation's committed portfolio included loans and investments for 40 companies in 7 countries.

IFC approved loans to large and medium-sized enterprises in Egypt, Mauritania and Tunisia for the financing of a paper mill, the privatization, expansion and modernization of a textile plant, and the construction and operation of a gold extraction and processing plant.

In terms of capital markets projects, IFC approved an equity investment of $2.5 million in the Egyptian Tourism Investment Company and intermediated a currency swap for an Egyptian producer of steel reinforcing bars. It approved a multi-country loan facility with Banque Nationale de Paris, making foreign exchange lending available to small and medium-sized companies in Morocco and Tunisia.

FIAS completed a diagnostic study of the foreign investment climate in Egypt that identified the main impediments to an increase in the flow of FDI. It also reviewed the investment climate in Morocco, emphasizing the promotional efforts and institutional arrangements affecting FDI. In Tunisia, it was engaged in a project dealing with institutional development and promotional strategy relating to FDI; a similar project was completed in Saudi Arabia.

Financial operations

Fiscal year 1991 was another year of solid financial growth for IFC. Its net income of $166 million, was the second highest in its history. Income from its loan and equity portfolios, as well as from liquid assets, was higher than in the previous year and service fees increased as IFC continued to expand its advisory services. The Corporation's total operating income in fiscal 1991 amounted to $695 million, with income from IFC's loan portfolio comprising $348 million and income from equities comprising $145 million of that amount. However, there was also an increase in operating expenses, which came to $529 million in fiscal 1991.

Capital and retained earnings

On 28 June 1991, the IFC Board of Directors approved a resolution recommending a capital increase of $1 billion, which the Board of Governors was also expected to approve.

During fiscal 1991, member countries paid in total capital of $72 million, including $58 million towards a capital increase approved in December 1985. At 30 June 1991, total paid-in capital reached $1.1 billion, and retained earnings came to $958 million, bringing the Corporation's net worth to $2.1 billion.

Secretariat

At the end of the fiscal year, IFC had a total staff of 656, drawn from 84 countries, including 65 developing countries.

Officials and offices of the IFC are listed in Annex II.

NOTE: For further details on IFC activities, see International Finance Corporation 1991 Annual Report, published by the agency.

Chapter VIII

International Development Association (IDA)

The International Development Association (IDA), established in 1960 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), provides assistance for the same purposes as the Bank, but primarily to the poorer developing countries and on easier terms. During 1991, IDA's assistance concentrated on countries with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $580 (in 1989 dollars).

The funds used by IDA-called credits to distinguish them from World Bank loans-come mostly from subscriptions, general replenishments from its more industrialized and developed members and transfers from the Bank's net earnings. Credits are made only to Governments, have 10-year grace periods and 35- or 40-year maturities and are interest-free.

During the year, IDA approved 103 credits amounting to 4.55 billion special drawing rights (SDR).

Fiscal year 1991 marked the beginning of the commitment period of the ninth replenishment of IDA resources (IDA-9). Donor contributions to IDA-9, amounting to SDR 11.7 billion, were to finance commitments to IDA borrowers in fiscal years 1991-1993. The replenishment became effective on 23 January 1991, when Instruments of Commitments-the formal notification of participation in the replenishment-received from donors reached 80 per cent of the total contributions to IDA-9 from contributing members.

Prior to the replenishment's effectiveness, credit approvals were financed through commitment authority provided under the Advance Contribution Scheme. That Scheme became operational on 19 July 1990, when IDA received Instruments of Commitments from 10 donors (Canada, Denmark, France, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Republic of Korea, South Africa, Sweden, Yugoslavia) whose contributions aggregated 20 per cent of the IDA-9 total. During the course of the fiscal year, IDA received Instruments of Commitments from Australia, Austria, Brazil, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Kuwait, Luxembourg, Mexico, Poland, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States.

In 1991, membership of IDA rose to 140 following the admission of Mongolia on 14 February and Albania on 16 October (see Annex I).

Lending operations (credits)

By 30 June 1991, IDA had made cumulative commitments totalling $64,515.3 million. Commitments in fiscal 1991 totalled $6,293.3 million, of which $2,907.9 million went to eight countries in Asia and $2,731.3 million went to 28 countries in Africa. China was the largest borrower with nine credits totalling $977.8 million, followed by India, with seven credits ($937.4 million) and Bangladesh with six ($459.7 million).

Agriculture and rural development

In fiscal 1991, 21 countries received credits totalling $1,794.2 million for agriculture and rural development. China received $561.9 million, of which $200 million was for onlending to farmers, collectives, State farms and enterprises through the Agricultural Bank of China and its affiliated rural credit cooperatives, to create some 90,000 full-time jobs. Of three credits amounting to $392.8 million granted to India, $170 million was for reconstruction operations following a cyclone in May 1990 and for strengthening institutional capabilities in cyclone preparedness and mitigation. Bangladesh received $164 million, of which $75 million went to help farmers to increase their investments in low-cost minor irrigation equipment sold by private dealers.

Development finance companies

IDA granted three credits totalling $156.8 million to assist development finance companies. A credit of $67.3 million was extended to Kenya to supplement a financial sector adjustment credit approved in fiscal 1989. Malawi received $39.2 million, of which $32 million went to assist the Government in further improving the investment environment and strengthening institutions engaged in term finance and investment promotion. Lesotho received a credit of $21 million to promote private foreign and indigenous investment in the industrial and agro-industrial sectors.

Education

Credits totalling $736.2 million for education projects were received by 11 countries during fiscal 1991. India received $307.1 million to expand capacity in the polytechnic system and improve its quality and efficiency, thereby providing the industrial sector with engineering technicians qualitioned in the areas of civil, mechanical, electrical, computer and electronics technologies. A credit of $131.2 million to China was for continued support to improve scientific training and research. Nigeria received $120 million to improve the country's under-financed and inefficiently managed primary education system, by providing books and upgrading curricula, ensuring sustainable financing and increasing enrolments.

Energy

In fiscal 1991, eight countries received credits totalling $315.2 million for energy-related projects. A credit of $125 million to Uganda supported the rehabilitation of the ongoing second power project to prevent bottlenecks, which would otherwise hinder economic development, by providing urgently needed least-cost capacity additions to the country's power generation, transmission and distribution facilities. Bangladesh received $67.2 million to assist it in pursuing an economic and least-cost household-energy and commercial-energy supply strategy through the substitution of liquefied petroleum gas for imported kerosene and commercial fuel-wood. The United Republic of Tanzania received $44 million to improve the availability of petroleum products throughout the country by enhancing the efficiency and effectiveness of the petroleum industry.

Industry

IDA extended three credits totalling $215.9 million for industrial projects. Sri Lanka received $120 million to support the phased implementation of the Government's programme for reform of public manufacturing enterprises. A credit of $64.33 million was made to China to implement, in three diverse locations, an innovative programme of upgrading levels of technology and management in rural, non-State enterprises. India received $31.6 million to identify and implement a cost-effective programme for industrial pollution monitoring, control and abatement.

Non-project

Fourteen countries received $881.9 million to finance non-project credits. Of $237.2 million extended to Zambia, $210 million was to finance imports in support of the country's economic adjustment programme. Ghana received $128.3 million, of which $120 million was to support the Government's efforts to promote private investment and sustained development. Kenya received $100 million to support the Government's strategy to diversify and expand non-traditional exports.

Population, health and nutrition

During fiscal 1991, IDA granted credits totalling $920.6 million to assist population, health and nutrition projects in 18 countries. Bangladesh received $180 million to support its efforts to reach the qualitative and quantitative population and health targets laid out in its fourth five-year plan. A credit of $96 million went to India to reduce malnutrition among children, as well as lower infant mortality rates and the incidence of low birth weight. Nigeria received $78.5 million to strengthen the institutional framework and expand the basis for undertaking a large-scale, intersectoral national population programme over the coming decades in fulfilment of its population policy goals.

Public-sector management

Two supplementary credits totalling $5.7 million were granted for public-sector management in fiscal 1991. Mauritania received $4 million, and Madagascar $1.7 million, to supplement public-enterprise sector adjustment credits approved in fiscal 1990 and fiscal 1988, respectively.

Small-scale enterprises

An IDA credit of $45 million was extended to Sri Lanka to fund in part term loans to productive enterprises for new investments, balancing, modernizing or rehabilitation, thus providing support to new and growing private sector operations.

Technical assistance

Six countries received technical assistance credits totalling $82.2 million in fiscal 1991. Angola received $23 million to strengthen its capacity to formulate and implement, over both the medium and short term, sound economic policies and investment projects. A credit of $21 million was granted to Zambia to support the development of new copper mines by private investors and of non-copper mining sector exports. Ghana received $15 million to improve the analytical and administrative capacity of the country's core economic management agencies.

Telecommunications

During fiscal 1991, two credits amounting to $69.8 million were granted for telecommunications projects. Sri Lanka received $57 million to support sectoral reform through the establishment of a new, commercially oriented autonomous operating entity-Sri Lanka Telecom-and through improvements in sector efficiency. Rwanda received $12.8 million to support institutional reform and training, and provision of key maintenance equipment for telecommunications, as well as buildings and equipment to improve postal services.

Transportation

IDA granted 10 credits for transportation projects totalling $472.1 million during fiscal 1991.

Ghana received $96 million to finance road and railway rehabilitation and to strengthen the country's transport sector institutions. A credit of $76 million was granted to the United Republic of Tanzania to help rehabilitate infrastructural assets, replace obsolete and uneconomical operational assets and provide limited new investments consistent with the prospects for traffic growth. Senegal received $65 million to restore the country's transport sector by modernizing administration, restructuring its parastatals and halting the decay of transport infrastructure for road, rail, maritime and air services.

Urban development

Seven credits totalling $178.3 million were granted for urban development in fiscal 1991. China received $89 million to introduce a wide range of improvements in planning, management and design techniques based on conditions relevant to the country. A credit of $28.7 million to Uganda was granted to improve living conditions and alleviate poverty in Kampala by restoring key infrastructure services and related maintenance activities. Two credits of $20 million each were extended to Burkina Faso and the Niger. The credit to Burkina Faso was to finance urban infrastructure upgrading and rehabilitation, while the credit to the Niger was to support a programme of public facility and infrastructure rehabilitation. Both credits would at least temporarily create new employment opportunities in urban areas.

Water supply and sewerage

In fiscal 1991, live countries received credits totalling $419.4 million for water supply and sewerage. A credit of $136.7 million was granted to Pakistan to improve rural productivity and health through a project that would finance the rehabilitation or construction of community-managed rural water supply and sanitation infrastructure. India received $109.9 million to expand access to rural water supply systems, health education and environmentally sound sanitation facilities. China received $77.8 million to assist a long-term investment programme aimed at addressing the shortages and poor quality of water supply, as well as shortcomings in urban transport.

Chapter IX

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

During fiscal year 1991 (1 May 1990 to 30 April 1991), the International Monetary Fund (IMF) assisted member countries to cope with the impact of events in the Persian Gulf and related developments in world oil prices, restructuring in Eastern Europe and reunification in Germany, as well as the continuing debt crisis of the developing countries.

During the year, IMF continued to fulfil its mandate for surveillance of the international monetary system, particularly of the exchange-rate policies of its member States, by examining each member's policies and performance and through regular discussions of the world economic outlook. The scope of surveillance had broadened in response to changes in the domestic and external environment of members and to recognition of the impact structural developments might have on the economic performance of countries concerned. The focus of IMF surveillance was also changing, with the growing liberalization of centrally planned economies and their integration into the international market and the movement towards economic integration of member countries.

IMF held regular consultations with each member country, which allowed it to appraise the country's overall economic situation and policies, discuss policy options and make recommendations. During 1991, IMF reversed a five-year downward trend, by increasing the number of consultations to 119, covering 74 per cent of the membership, compared with 108 consultations involving 69 per cent in 1990.

At the end of 1991, IMF membership increased to 156 with the admission of Albania and Mongolia (see Annex I).

IMF facilities and policies

The Fund's financial support assisted member countries to regain a viable balance of payments combined with economic growth and exchange-rate stability. The facilities and policies through which it provided such support differed, depending on the nature of the macroeconomic and structural problems to be addressed and the terms and degree of conditionality attached to them.

Stand-by arrangements, typically covering periods of one to two years, focused on specific macroeconomic policies, such as exchange-rate and interest-rate policies, aimed at overcoming balance-of-payments difficulties. Extended arrangements, which supported medium-term programmes generally running for three years, were available to overcome more intractable balance-of-payments difficulties, attributable to structural as well as macroeconomic problems.

IMF's enlarged access policy was used to increase the resources available under stand-by and extended arrangements for programmes needing substantial Fund support. Access to the Fund's general resources under the enlarged access policy had been subject to annual limits of 90 or 110 per cent of quota, three-year limits of 270 or 330 per cent of quota and cumulative limits of 400 or 440 per cent of quota. However, the lower annual, three-year and cumulative limits were temporarily suspended until the end of 1991. In fiscal 1991, the IMF Executive Board decided that once borrowed resources had been fully used, ordinary resources would be substituted to meet commitments of borrowed resources under the enlarged access policy. That decision would expire on 30 June 1992, or when the quota increases under the Ninth (March 1987-June 1990) General Review of Quotas became effective, whichever was earlier.

The structural adjustment facility (SAF), launched in 1986,<sup>a</sup> continued to provide resources on concessional terms to support medium-term macroeconomic and structural adjustments in low-income countries facing protracted balance-of-payments problems. The enhanced structural adjustment facility (ESAF), established in 1987<sup>b</sup> and operational since 1988, was similar to SAF in objective, conditions for eligibility and programme features, but differed in scope and strength of structural policies, terms of access levels, monitoring procedures and sources of funding. The IMF Executive Board agreed to support a fourth annual ESAF arrangement, provided it was approved before November 1992 and resources were available.

The compensatory and contingency financing facility (CCFF) provided resources to member countries to cover temporary export shortfalls and excesses in cereal and oil import costs arising from events beyond their control and provided arrangements for member countries to maintain the momentum of adjustment in the face of adverse external shocks, such as declines in export prices or increases in import prices and fluctuations in interest rates.

Under the buffer stock financing facility, IMF provided resources to help finance members' contributions to approved buffer stocks of commodities.

Financial assistance

Much of the Fund's financial support in fiscal 1991 assisted member countries to cope with the impact of events resulting from the crisis in the Persian Gulf. Soon after the crisis developed, IMF acted to provide greater access to its resources under stand-by and extended arrangements, to augment and extend financing under ESAF and to introduce a temporary oil import element to CCFF to compensate for the sharp, unexpected increase in oil and natural gas import costs.

The number of IMF arrangements in effect increased to 50 at the end of 1991, compared with 43 at the end of 1990. As at 31 December 1991, there were 22 stand-by arrangements (Algeria, Argentina, Bulgaria, Cameroon, Congo, Costa Rica, Côte d'Ivoire, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Gabon, Honduras, India, Jamaica, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Romania, Uruguay); 5 extended arrangements (Hungary, Mexico, Poland, Tunisia, Venezuela); 6 SAF arrangements (Benin, Burkino Faso, Comoros, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe); and 17 ESAF arrangements (Bangladesh, Bolivia, Burundi, Ghana, Guinea, Guyana, Kenya, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritania, Mozambique, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Togo, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania).

During 1991, IMF credit outstanding in the General Resources Account measured in special drawing rights (SDRs)-the Fund's unit of account-increased sharply to SDR 7.4 billion, compared with SDR 4.3 billion at the end of 1990. Purchases, or drawings, on IMF's resources included SDR 2.6 billion under stand-by arrangements, SDR 1.9 billion under extended arrangements and SDR 3 billion under CCFF. Purchases exceeded repurchases, or repayments, which amounted to SDR 4.7 billion, compared to SDR 5.9 billion in 1990. Loan disbursements under SAF totalled SDR 177.1 million and under ESAF SDR 604.8 million in 1991. At the end of the year, SAF resources outstanding amounted to SDR 1.9 billion, while ESAF resources outstanding totalled SDR 1.3 billion.

In response to the rise in the number of countries seeking support from IMF and the increased demand for Fund resources, its Board of Governors authorized a 50 per cent increase in the size of the Fund, bringing total Fund quotas in fiscal 1991 from SDR 90.1 billion to SDR 135.2 billion. However, the increase would come into effect only after the ratification of the Third Amendment of the Fund's Articles of Agreement by three fifths of the Fund's members, having 85 per cent of the voting power. As at 31 July 1991, 37 members accounting for 30.6 per cent of the total voting power had accepted the proposed amendment.

Liquidity

As at 30 April 1991, the Fund's usable ordinary resources totalled SDR 40.1 billion, compared with SDR 41.2 billion the previous fiscal year. The decline was a reflection of an excess of purchases (drawings) over repurchases (repayments) and the exclusion of one currency from the operational budget.

The Fund borrowed from official sources to supplement its resources and to finance members' purchases under the enlarged access policy. The total amount of borrowed resources drawn during fiscal 1991 amounted to SDR 2 billion, compared with SDR 1 billion in fiscal 1990. The IMF Executive Board decided that once borrowed resources had been exhausted, ordinary resources would be substituted to meet commitments in financing purchases made under the enlarged access policy. That decision applied only to arrangements that had been approved before the date on which the increases in quotas under the Ninth General Review of Quotas became effective or 31 December 1991, whichever was earlier.

All credit lines available to finance enlarged access had been utilized by the end of December 1991. When a delay in quota increases became apparent, the Board extended its decision on the substitution of ordinary for borrowed resources to 30 June 1992.

SDR activity

The SDR valuation basket was revised effective 1 January 1991. The initial weights for the live currencies used in the previous basket (deutsche mark, French franc, Japanese yen, pound sterling, United States dollar) were revised and would remain in effect until 31 December 1995.

Total transfers of SDRs fell to SDR 14.8 billion in fiscal 1991 from SDR 16.8 billion in fiscal 1990, reflecting a large decline in transfers among members and official institutions authorized to hold SDRs from SDR 7.8 billion to SDR 6.3 billion, and a moderate fall in transfers between IMF and its member countries from SDR 9.1 billion to SDR 8.5 billion. Transfers from IMF through its General Resources Account to members making purchases in support of their economic programmes decreased by about 10 per cent to SDR 4.2 billion in fiscal 1991. Receipts of SDRs by the General Resources Account, which consisted mainly of payments of charges on members' use of IMF resources, declined slightly, from SDR 4.4 billion to SDR 4.3 billion.

Policy on arrears

Overdue financial obligations to IMF continued to be a serious concern in 1991, although their increase and the rate of growth were the lowest since 1983. Total overdue obligations rose from SDR 3.3 billion at the end of fiscal year 1990 to SDR 3.4 billion in 1991. However, the number of members in arrears to IMF by six months or more decreased from 11 to 9. No members were declared ineligible to use the general resources of the Fund and two members, previously declared ineligible, settled their accounts and regained eligibility.

In its efforts to resolve the problem of overdue obligations, IMF continued to implement a strategy introduced in early 1990 consisting of preventive measures, involving increased efforts to ensure that all members using IMF resources would be able to meet their obligations when they fell due: remedial and deterrent measures, including a tightening of the timing of procedures for dealing with members in arrears, as well as the possible use of suspension of voting and related rights once the Third Amendment of the Articles of Agreement became effective (see above); and intensified collaboration, involving IMF-monitored programmes that permitted a member with protracted arrears to establish a credible track record of performance against future drawings when eligibility was regained.

Throughout the year, cooperation between IMF, the World Bank and regional development banks intensified to resolve overdue financial obligations.

Technical assistance and training

Demand for IMF's technical assistance services increased steadily with requests coming from many countries in the process of moving towards a market-based economy, including members in Eastern Europe and other countries transforming their economies (Algeria, Angola, Benin, Cape Verde, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mozambique and Viet Nam). Technical assistance programmes in those countries focused on establishing central banks and banking systems; regulatory frameworks; fiscal institutions, such as tax administration and tax policies, budgetary practices and social security schemes; and statistical databases.

The Fund's technical assistance was given through advisory visits, formal training and advice extended in the course of other staff contacts with authorities of member countries. Assistance focused on improving macroeconomic management through training economic policy officials, enhancing the quality of economic statistical data, helping to reform tax systems and tax administration and developing and improving the operations of central banking and financial systems.

Resources for the Fund's technical assistance services were supplemented through a 1989 agreement under which the Fund served as an executing agency for United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) assistance and a technical assistance account established in March 1990 and funded by Japan. As at 30 April 1991, UNDP-funded projects in 24 countries totalling $14 million had been approved.

Training of officials from Fund member countries was provided by the IMF Institute through courses and seminars at IMF headquarters and abroad. During fiscal 1991, the IMF Institute gave 13 courses and 3 seminars at headquarters, including a seminar on centrally planned economies in transition. The Institute conducted 18 seminars overseas for government officials. While most were held in developing countries outside Europe, five took place in Eastern Europe and emphasized techniques of macroeconomic management in market economies.

IMF-World Bank collaboration

The Executive Boards of IMF and the World Bank reviewed progress and agreed on many areas of collaboration. The Fund's primary responsibility was macroeconomic policies and related policy instruments and institutions, whereas the Bank's primary responsibility lay in structural reforms and policies for effective allocation of resources to public and private sectors. In addition, the Fund and the Bank collaborated in providing financial and technical support to the Eastern European countries and coordinated their responses to the Persian Gulf crisis. Other areas of collaboration included assisting countries to remain current in their financial obligations and eliminate arrears, and consulting on debt strategy and coordinating their support of debt-reduction and debt-service-reduction packages.

Publications

Publications issued by IMF in 1991 included the Annual Report of the Executive Board, the Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions, the World Economic Outlook, International Capital Markets: Developments and Prospects and Multilateral Official Debt Rescheduling: Recent Experience. Statistical publications included International Financial Statistics (monthly and Yearbook), Balance of Payments Statistics Yearbook and Government Finance Statistics Yearbook.

Periodicals included the quarterlies Staff Papers and Finance and Development (published jointly with the World Bank), and the IMF Survey (published 23 times a year).

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, the total full-time staff of IMF-including permanent, fixed-term and temporary employees-was 1,963, drawn from 115 nationalities.

Chapter X

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) facilitates the safety and efficiency of civil air transport. As an intergovernmental regulatory organization, its objectives are set down in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago, United States, 1944), which prescribe standards, recommended practices and procedures for facilitating civil aviation operations.

In 1991, scheduled traffic of the world's airlines fell to some 227 billion tonne-kilometres, the first year of decline since airline statistics were first recorded by ICAO in 1945. The airlines carried more than 1.1 billion passengers, 3.5 per cent less than in 1990. As the number of seats offered decreased by a lower rate than passengers carried, the estimated passenger load factor declined from 68 to 66 per cent. Air freight decreased by 4 per cent to 56.5 billion tonne-kilometres. Airmail traffic also decreased by 4 per cent.

During the year, the ICAC Council held three regular sessions. In June, it approved the establishment of the Asia/Pacific Air Navigation Planning and Implementation Regional Group to ensure the continuous and coherent development of the Asia and Pacific regional plans and to propose action aimed at solving air navigation problems. The Group's first meeting was to be held in April 1992. In December, the Council adopted the ICAO Code of Conduct for the Regulation and Operation of Computer Reservation Systems as the recommended basis for Contracting States to regulate the operations of computer reservation systems in their territories.

In 1991, membership of ICAO rose to 164 with the admission of Albania, Belize and Namibia. (See Annex I for complete membership.)

Activities in 1991

Air navigation

During 1991, ICAO's main efforts in air navigation continued to be directed towards updating and implementing ICAO specifications and regional plans. The specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 18 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention and Procedures for Air Navigation Services. To promote their uniform application, ICAO made available guidance material consisting of new and revised technical manuals and ICAO circulars. Regional plans set forth air navigation facilities and services required for international air navigation in the nine ICAO regions. ICAO's regional offices assisted States in implementing regional plans. Their efforts were supplemented by experts sent to advise States on installing new facilities and services and operating existing ones.

Eight air navigation meetings covering a wide range of subjects recommended changes to ICAO specifications. Among them, the Tenth Air Navigation Conference (Montreal, Canada, 5-20 September) was convened to endorse a global satellite-based communication, navigation and surveillance system, which would enhance air traffic management and alleviate the shortcomings of the ground-based line-of-sight systems. The new system was to result in improved flight safety, more efficient use of airspace, reduced congestion and more cost-effective operations by airlines. The second meeting of the Committee on Aviation Environmental Protection (Montreal, 2-13 December) resulted in recommendations to the ICAO Council that would significantly increase the stringency of nitrogen oxide emission standards for future aircraft engines. The proposal came in response to major concerns over global warming, climate change and depletion of the earth's ozone layer.

During the year, special attention was given to accident investigation and prevention, aerodromes, bird strikes to aircraft, audiovisual training aids, aviation medicine, aircraft airworthiness, future air navigation systems, flight safety and human factors, security in aircraft design, meteorology, personnel licensing and training, rules of the air and air traffic services, search and rescue and units of measurement.

Air transport

ICAO in 1991 continued its programmes of regulatory and economic studies, economic research, analysis and forecasting, air carrier tariffs, collection and publication of air transport statistics, airport and route facility management and promotion of greater facilitation in international air transport.

The conference on Airport and Route Facility Management (Montreal, 29 October-9 November) adopted 31 recommendations aimed at improving the financial situation of airports and route facilities and managing them in an equitable and economical manner so as to make them more self-sufficient and less dependent on public funds. The Technical Advisory Group on Machine Readable Travel Documents (Montreal, 9-12 July) completed its work on the development of machine readable visa specifications and began to develop machine readable crew documentation. A Facilitation Area Meeting (Montevideo, Uruguay, 21-25 October) discussed a wide range of facilitation problems in Latin America and the Caribbean. The Pacific Area Traffic Forecasting Group (Bangkok, Thailand, 28 October-1 November) began its work of developing traffic forecasts to assist in the planning of air navigation systems in the area. Workshops were held on statistics (Dakar, Senegal, 15-19 April; Santiago, Chile 27-31 May); forecasting and economic planning (Dakar, 22-26 April; Santiago, 3-7 June); airport and route facility management (Bangkok, 18-22 March); and air transport regulatory policy (Nairobi, Kenya, 2-6 December).

ICAO continued to cooperate closely with other international organizations such as the International Air Transport Association, the International Federation of Air Line Pilots' Associations, the Airports Association Council International, the Customs Cooperation Council, the World Tourism Organization, the International Organization for Standardization, the International Maritime Organization and the Universal Postal Union. It also continued to provide secretariat services to three independent regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

Following a 1982 conference to amend the 1956 Danish and Icelandic joint financing agreements for air navigation services in Greenland and the Faroe Islands and in Iceland, the two agreements as amended were provisionally applied from 1 January 1983. By the end of 1991, the protocols of amendments had been accepted by all 22 Governments that were party to the agreements.

Legal matters

The International Conference on Air Law (Montreal, 12 February-1 March) met to consider the draft articles prepared by the twenty-seventh session (27 March-12 April 1991) of the Legal Committee on the marking of plastic and sheet explosives for the purpose of detection. The Conference adopted by consensus and without vote the Convention on the Marking of Plastic Explosives for the Purpose of Detection, which by year's end had been signed by 45 States, and one State had submitted an instrument of approval (see below).

On 14 June, the ICAO Council considered the general work programme established by the Legal Committee in 1990 and approved by the Council on 16 November 1990. The Council agreed to amend the general work programme to include the following items in priority order: institutional and legal aspects of future air navigation systems; legal aspects of global air-ground communications; the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea<sup>a</sup>-implications, if any, for the application of the Chicago Convention, its annexes and other international air law instruments; liability of air traffic control agencies; action to expedite ratification of Montreal Protocols 3 and 4 of the Warsaw System; and study of the instruments of the Warsaw System.

The following conventions and protocols on international air law concluded under ICAO auspices were ratified or adhered to by the additional member States listed below during 1991:

Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules Relating to International Carriage by Air (Warsaw, 1929)

Technical assistance

During 1991, ICAO's technical cooperation programmes were financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), trust funds and the associate experts programme. Total 1991 expenditures for all technical cooperation programmes amounted to $45,790,507, compared with $54,673,902 in 1990.

ICAO had resident missions in 51 countries during all or part of the year and gave assistance to 87 others in the form of fellowships, visits from experts assigned to intercountry projects or subcontractual arrangements.

ICAO engaged 442 experts from 52 countries during all or part of 1991, 344 on assignment under UNDP and 103 on trust fund projects (including seven under the associate experts programme). The number of experts in the field at the end of 1991 was 183.

A total of 1,446 fellowships were awarded in 1991, of which 1,360 were implemented.

Equipment purchases and subcontracts continued to represent a substantial portion of the technical cooperation programme. In addition to UNDP and trust fund projects, 64 Governments or organizations were registered with ICAO under its Civil Aviation Purchasing Services at the end of 1991. The total for equipment and subcontracts committed during 1991 amounted to $9.8 million.

The following were recipients of UNDP country projects that were executed by ICAO.

As at 31 December 1991, the number of staff members employed at the ICAO secretariat stood at 777 persons: 312 in the professional and higher categories and 467 in the general service and related categories. Of those, 201 were employed in regional offices: 88 in professional or higher posts and 113 general service positions. Altogether, 83 countries were represented. (See Annex II for ICAO officers.)

Chapter XI

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

The Universal Postal Union (UPU), established in 1874 at Berne, Switzerland, serves to exchange postal services among nations. It promotes the organization and improvement of postal services and development of international collaboration in this area. At the request of its members, it participates in various forms of postal technical assistance.

In 1991, UPU membership remained unchanged at 168 (see Annex I).

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, the supreme legislative authority of UPU composed of all member States, normally meets every five years. The most recent Congress, the twentieth, took place at Washington, D.C., in 1989, and the twenty-first was scheduled to meet at Seoul, Republic of Korea, in 1994.

The work of the Congress consists mainly of examining and revising the acts of the Union based on proposals submitted by member States, the Executive Council or the Consultative Council for Postal Studies (CCPS), and of making administrative arrangements for UPU activities. The acts in force since 1 January 1991 were those of the 1989 Washington Congress.

Executive Council

At its 1991 session (Berne, Switzerland, 22 April-18 May), the Executive Council-which carries out the work of UPU between Congress sessions- considered administrative matters and examined studies concerning international mail referred to it by the 1989 Congress.

Among other questions reviewed by the Council were customs treatment of postal items; marking of goods that should not be exposed to radiographic control or opened; use of symbol literature for the blind; pricing and remuneration of letter post; air conveyance and quality control; postal financial services; technical cooperation; and a number of items concerning parcel post, including land and sea rates.

The Council held an extraordinary session (Berne, Switzerland, 25-26 October) to discuss problems caused by the imminent creation of a joint venture among five postal administrations grouped in a holding company and a private courier. It decided to set up a group of experts to carry out a study to review options for dealing with such initiatives, with the International Bureau representing the interests of all concerned UPU member countries.

Consultative Council for Postal Studies

The annual meeting of CCPS (Berne, Switzerland, 14-24 October 1991) dealt mainly with the results of its studies on various technical and operational problems affecting postal administrations of UPU member States. Considerable progress was made in implementing the Washington General Action Plan, adopted at the 1989 Congress to serve as a master plan for the bodies of the Union and for postal administrations during the period 1990-1994.

During 1991, six symposia were held on key CCPS activities, such as postal development, electronic mail, building the postal business, mail circulation standards and quality control, postal security and express mail services.

The work of the Electronic Transmission Standards Group aimed at establishing a world-wide postal electronic data transmission network and included, among other priorities, a more detailed assessment of the volume of data to be conveyed over such a network, the experimental interchange of messages and the adoption of the standards to be used.

Postal security issues continued to be brought to the forefront on the basis of proposals put forth by the Postal Security Action Group of UPU and endorsed by CCPS.

International Bureau

Under the general supervision of the Executive Council, the International Bureau-the UPU secretariat-continued to serve the postal administrations of member States as an organ for liaison, information and consultation.

During 1991, the Bureau collected, coordinated, published and disseminated international postal service information. At the request of postal administrations, it also conducted inquiries and acted as a clearing-house for settling certain accounts between them.

As at 31 December 1991, the number of permanent and temporary staff members employed by the UPU secretariat was 145, of whom 59 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 43 countries) and 86 in the General Service category. Also, as French remained the sole official UPU language, 14 officials were employed in the Arabic, English, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish translation services.

Technical cooperation

During 1991, technical cooperation provided by UPU was financed for the most part by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP); UNDP/UPU project expenditures amounted to $2.7 million. Assistance was also provided through the UPU Special Fund (voluntary contributions in cash and kind from member States) and the regular budget for a total of some $2.2 million. One hundred and fifty-eight experts and consultants undertook missions and 459 fellowships were awarded. Equipment valued at $500,000 was furnished.

UPU appointed six regional advisers in 1991 (two in Africa, one in Latin America and the Caribbean, two in Asia and the Pacific and one in the Arab countries), who conducted programming and follow-up missions in 60 countries in support of governmental authorities and UNDP resident representatives. For European countries, consultants were recruited. More than 35 technical assistance projects were drafted or revised, most of which were submitted for UNDP financing.

Budget

Under UPU's self-financing system, contributions were payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. At its 1990 session, the Executive Council approved the 1991 budget of 26,163,930 Swiss francs, to be financed by contributions from member States. At its 1991 session, the Executive Council approved the 1992 budget at a total of 27,622,265 Swiss francs, to be financed by member States.

NOTE: For details of UPU activities, see Report on the Work of the Union, 1991, published by UPU.

Chapter XII

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

In 1991, the Administrative Council of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) held its forty-sixth annual session from 27 May to 7 June. The Council adopted a budget for 1992 totalling SwF 144,145,000, or $196,037,200 (as at 31 December, $US 1.00 = SwF 1.36). That total included the regular budget for the Union, the Technical Cooperation special accounts and the supplementary publications budget. The Council also considered the reports on the activities of the Union and reviewed a number of financial and administrative matters. It discussed the final report of the High Level Committee (HLC) established to review the structure and functioning of ITU, endorsed some of its recommendations, and transmitted them to the Secretary-General.

The Council decided to convene an additional Plenipotentiary Conference, to be held in Geneva in 1992. In preparation for the Conference, the Council established a drafting group of experts who would elaborate draft texts for the revision of the Nice Constitution and Convention, based on the recommendations of the HLC report. In addition, the Council decided to close the Centre for Telecommunications Development by the end of 1991 and integrate its functions into the structure of the Telecommunications Development Bureau (BDT).

During 1991, the membership of ITU rose from 164 to 166, with Lithuania and Latvia becoming members effective 12 October and 11 November, respectively. On 24 December, the rights and obligations of the former USSR were assumed by the Russian Federation (see Annex I).

International consultative committee

During 1991, the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR) completed its first year of work under the new arrangements adopted at the seventeenth Plenary Assembly (1990). Preparations for the World Administrative Radio Conference in 1992 (WARC-92) were completed in March 1991. CCIR's Ad Hoc Group for Strategic Review and Planning met with the Working Group of the Plenary on Study Group Structure to consider HLC recommendations related to future CIR work.

Seventy-eight new or revised recommendations on fixed satellite and radio relay services were approved. Other working parties and task groups prepared 179 draft recommendations for consideration in 1992.

International Frequency Registration Board

The major activities of the International Frequency Registration Board (IFRB) included: maintenance of the Master International Frequency Register, the International Frequency List and related service documents; examination of 71,403 frequency assignment notices submitted by administrations; and preparation and publication of four Tentative High Frequency Broadcasting schedules for 1991 and 1992.

IFRB also applied a special frequency selection coordination procedure for world-wide frequencies in the aeronautical mobile service for two administrations representing nine channels, and applied a procedure of coordination for frequency assignment notices relating to narrow-band direct printing telegraph and data transmission systems for eleven administrations. The Board completed the programme of work for the development, implementation and testing of the improved HFBC Planning System, and produced a report to help administrations in preparation for the World Administrative Radio Conference.

Other IFRB activities included: providing special assistance to administrations in frequency management matters. It dealt with 36 cases of harmful interference and issued four summaries of monitoring information. Two special monitoring programmes were initiated: one for monitoring HF bands allocated to broadcasting services and the other for Mobil-Satellite services in the band 406-406.1 MHz. IFRB organized three regional frequency management seminars in collaboration with the Telecommunications Development Bureau (Kericho, Kenya, 6-11 May; Athens, Greece, 9-13 September; and Praia, Cape Verde, 28 October-1 November).

Technical cooperation

In 1991, under ITU's various programmes of technical cooperation in developing countries, 419 expert missions were carried out. Also, 1,593 fellows were undergoing training, and equipment valued at $6,465,677 was delivered, mainly to telecommunication training centres. A total of 173 projects representing $32,036,574 were under implementation during the year.

The following countries and Territories were aided:

Africa: As part of the development of a regional telecommunication network, a communications network called PANAFTTEL was established to enable African countries to communicate directly with one another without transiting through switching centres located outside the continent. As of year-end 1991, PANAFTTEL radio-relay systems on routes totalling some 40,000 kilometres in length had either been or were in the process of being installed. To complement these transmission routes, 39 international telephone switching centres had been or were being installed. Also, nearly 8,000 kilometres of submarine cables had been installed, as had been earth stations for satellite communications in 42 out of the 45 countries participating in the project.

ITU also assisted in strengthening national technical and administrative services. Requests from administrations were generally met through UNDP/ITU technical assistance programmes. The nature of activities varied widely. Among other countries, assistance was rendered to: Benin and the Niger for the evaluation of tenders; Burkina Faso for a tariff study; Burundi for rural telecommunications and the introduction of new services; Cameroon for installation and acceptance testing of telecommunications equipment; Gabon for training of experts for the national telecommunications school; Ghana for the preparation of training programmes with financing from the World Bank; Guinea-Bissau for training in power plant and local networks; Mauritania for a master plan for telecommunications development; and Rwanda for a pre-investment study on the introduction of a national television station and for the setting up of a rural telecommunication network financed by the Swiss Government.

The Americas. The main projects, mostly financed through funds-in-trust, aimed at strengthening national telecommunication technical and administrative service and focused on training, planning, research and development, and management. They included: a national telecommunications master plan for new technologies and new services and introduction of computer technologies for frequency management in Bolivia; research and development for the design of telecommunication technology equipment in Brazil; equipment for national broadcasting in Guyana; technological strengthening of a digital telephone exchange and technical/logistical support for the extension of the Lima telephone network in Peru; and improvement of training and distance learning at the Resource Centre in Venezuela. The area representatives, with guidance from the Field Operations Department, carried out 50 missions, formulated some 20 new projects, and supervised 36 projects. About 87 per cent of those projects were government-funded.

Asia and the Pacific. In the area of regional telecommunication networks development, the work of the ITU focused on the expansion of networks, modernization of services, adoption of improved maintenance practices and computer-aided management techniques. At the intercountry level, projects included: networking of test and development centres; telecommunications software training; a cellular radio telephone systems application, in which assistance to members of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN) on cellular radio network design and operation were given; and technical training and advisory assistance in sound and TV broadcasting.

The main projects for strengthening national telecommunication technical and administrative services were funded primarily through UNDP. Projects were also set up in a number of individual countries. They included: the development of human resources for telecommunications in Bangladesh; assistance in establishing a rural telecommunications network for the Telecommunications Company of Iran; assistance to Nepal in setting up quality control management in telecommunications products; and strengthening of the training capability of the Pakistan Telecommunication Corporation.

Europe and the Middle East. An evaluation of the activities of the project TELDEV (Coordination of Telecommunication Development in least developed countries in the Arab Region and Ethiopia) was carried out. It recommended that the telecommunication facilities of the region be strengthened, particularly that of the training centre in Sana'a, Yemen, and the establishment of national telecommunication back-up centres for operation and maintenance. Regarding the EUROTTELDEV (European Telecommunications Development II), two steering committee meetings were held in 1991, which resulted in the approval of new detailed work plans for each network. Other regional and national projects included: the completion of all activities related to the Telecommunication Applied Research Centre in Albania; the startup of activities for a new preparatory assistance project in Poland; and the remaining telecommunication development activities in Yemen, which were aligned with those of the former Yemen Arab Republic after unification in May 1990.

Centre for Telecommunications Development

The Centre for Telecommunications Development (CTD) organized seminars in 1991 on frequency management (Kenya); optical fibre technology (Singapore); rural telecommunications (Germany); accounting, auditing and economic aspects (Germany); new services (Japan); and cellular radio (Japan). Missions were conducted to Bangladesh, Costa Rica, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the Dominican Republic, Gabon, Maldives, Morocco, Myanmar, Nepal, Panama, the Sudan, Suriname, Tonga, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, the United Republic of Tanzania and Ukraine. After a decision of the 1991 Administrative Council to integrate the Centre into BDT, no new activities were initiated. The Centre terminated its activities on 31 December.

Publications

Publications issued by ITU in 1991 were either trilingual or separate English, French and Spanish editions. Selected publications were also issued in Arabic. Among those publications were:

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, 736 officials (excluding staff on short-term contracts and project staff) were employed by ITU either at its headquarters or in the field. Of those, nine were elected officials, 593 had permanent contracts and 133 had fixed-term contracts. Seventy-two nationalities were represented in those posts subject to geographical distribution (see Annex II).

Budget

Under the revised budget for 1991, ITU's income totalled SwF 134,297,800 or $182,645,008 (based on an exchange rate as at 31 December 1991 of $US 1.00 = SwF 1.36). Regular budget expenditure for the year amounted to SwF 135,224,329 or $183,905,088. In addition, SwF 6,940,100, or $9,438,536, were programmed for technical cooperation special accounts, and SwF 10,126,500, or $13,772,040, for the supplementary publications budget.

Chapter XIII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

In 1991, the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) carried out its activities in accordance with the programmes and budget adopted in 1987 for the period 1988-1991 by its highest governing body, the World Meteorological Congress, which meets at least once every four years.

The Congress held its eleventh session (Geneva, 1-23 May 1991) and adopted the programme and budget of the organization for the period 1992-1995. It reappointed G. O. P. Obasi (Nigeria) as the WMO Secretary-General for a four-year term beginning on 1 January 1992.

The Congress adopted the third WMO long-term plan for 1992-2001, reflecting the importance of major new issues relating to climate change and the environment. It adopted a new Public Weather Services Programme and the WMO Plan of Action for the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction (1990-2000). The Congress established the Global Climate Observing System, sponsored initially by WMO, the International Council of Scientific Unions, the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the United Nations Environment Programme.

The 36-member Executive Council meets annually to supervise the implementation of programmes and regulations and in 1991 it held its forty-third session (Geneva, 24-29 May).

The membership of WMO as at 31 December 1991 remained at 155 States and 5 Territories (see Annex I).

World Weather Watch

The World Weather Watch (WWW), the basic programme of WMO, continued to provide in 1991 global observational data and processed information required by members for operational and research purposes. Its essential elements were the Global Observing System (GOS), whereby observational data were obtained; the Global Telecommunication System (GTS), which offered telecommunication facilities for the rapid collection, exchange and distribution of observational data and processed information; and the Global Data-Processing System (GDPS), which provided for the processing, storage and retrieval of observational data and made available processed information.

World Weather Watch implementation

In 1991, milestones were reached in three major implementation support activities: the Aircraft-to-Satellite Data Relay (ASDAR), the Composite Observing System for North America (COSNA) and Operational WWW Systems Evaluation (OWSE)-Africa.

The ASDAR system reached maturity when certification was obtained in early 1991 from the United Kingdom and the United States for the use of ASDAR on B-747 and DC-10 aircraft. At the end of 1991, four units were in service, each providing approximately 100 reports daily, including profiles on landing and take-off.

Following the successful completion of the OWSE-North Atlantic in 1988-1989, a coordinating group for COSNA was established. Major achievements in 1991 were: additional studies agreed to by the scientific evaluation group of the coordinating group for COSNA; a major report on ways to make substantial improvements to the North Atlantic observing network; and the Automated Shipboard Aerological Programme attained full deployment of 13 units for the North Atlantic.

Implementation of Phase I of OWSE-Africa was completed in 1991. In total, some 68 data-collection platforms (DCPs) and 13 DCP receiving stations systems were installed in 13 countries in Africa and St. Helena. However, the equipment was either totally destroyed or out of service for long periods because of internal turmoil in four member countries.

Instruments and Methods of Observation Programme

The Commission for Instruments and Methods of Observation (CIMO) conducted surveys of data and accuracy requirements and investigated the capability of instruments to help WMO members produce adequate measurements of sufficiently high quality to meet their national requirements and those of WMO programmes.

At an expert group meeting on operational accuracy requirements (Geneva, 3-6 June), agreement was reached on common accuracy specifications for general WMO operational use. Those specifications enhanced the standardization of techniques and methods of observation, resulting in more cost-effective equipment.

During the year, a large number of meetings of CIMO working and expert groups were organized dealing with in situ and remote-sensing techniques, such as standards of operational meteorological and related measurements; inter-comparisons and evaluations; establishment of international calibration standards; guidance material on new developments and automation; operational, including maintenance, aspects and calibration methods; automatic and non-real-time quality control; technology transfer and specialized training.

Tropical Cyclone Programme

Support for the development of early warning systems for tropical cyclones was provided by the WMO Tropical Cyclone Programme (TCP). TCP also supported programmes for strengthening the response to warnings, public awareness and other aspects of disaster preparedness and prevention.

Research was carried out on typhoon movement, anomalous typhoon tracks, recurvature, westward movement and interaction with large-scale atmospheric patterns. Over 40 papers were submitted to the Technical Conference on SPECTRUM (Guangzhou, China, 25-29 November 1991), where researchers and operational forecasters discussed scientific studies, progress made and results so far obtained.

Environmental emergencies

In the wake of the nuclear powerplant accident at Chernobyl, Ukrainian SSR, in 19986, WMO, in cooperation with the International Atomic Energy Agency and other international organizations, was setting up an early notification scheme and data-exchange mechanisms to be used in cases of environmental emergencies, including the use of GTS and GDPS for the real-time exchange of messages and observational data, as well as for the provision of analysis and forecast products needed for emergency assessment purposes.

In the framework of the United Nations inter-agency action plan to assess the environmental effects of the oil fires in Kuwait, where more than 600 oil wells had been set ablaze as a result of the hostilities in the Persian Gulf, WMO assumed responsibility for the atmospheric component, providing scientific information and advice on the state and behaviour of the global atmosphere.

Among other things, WMO was involved in re-establishing the basic observing and telecommunications systems of the Kuwait Meteorological Service and in coordinating efforts to produce short-term forecasts of atmospheric transport and dispersion of pollutants so as to evaluate the scope of the disaster.

World Climate Programme

In 1991, the Congress renamed three of the four components of the World Climate Programme (WCP) in order to highlight certain aspects: the World Climate Data Programme became the World Climate Data and Monitoring Programme (WCDMP); the World Climate Applications Programme was renamed the World Climate Applications and Services Programme (WCASP); and the World Climate Impact Studies Programme became the World Climate Impact Assessment and Response Strategies Programme (WCIRP). The World Climate Research Programme (WCRP) remained unchanged.

WCDMP aimed at upgrading climate data management systems, providing information on the status of the climate system and developing climate databases. The Commission for Climatology (CCI) working group on climate data (Geneva, 11-15 November) reviewed WCDMP projects. The 1991 Congress continued its strong support of the climate computing (CLICOM) project and noted that systems were operational in nearly 100 countries, and planned in 20 others. The publication CLICOM News served as a medium for exchange of ideas and information between WMO members. Under the Climate System Monitoring (CSM) Project, which received substantial support from UNEP, the monthly WMO Climate System Monitoring Bulletin and the biennial Global Climate System Review continued to be published. An expert meeting (Geneva, 7 and 8 November) proposed improvements to tracking and distribution of climate system monitoring data and products.

Priority activities within WCASP continued to relate to food production, water-resource management and energy. Promotion of the use of climate information in the areas of food and water was closely coordinated with the Agricultural Meteorology and the Hydrology and Water Resources Programmes (see below). Concerning energy meteorology, over 40 climatologists/meteorologists and energy engineers participated in a regional training seminar (Kathmandu, Nepal, 11-23 March). Progress was made in implementing a regional project for Europe on meteorological information for development of renewable energy, the objective of which was to establish the climatological databases required for the development of energy systems, including renewable energy sources. Activities under the project included expert missions, seminars and a training workshop. WMO was one of the organizers of a symposium on electricity and the environment (Helsinki, Finland, 13-17 May), which assessed the impact of various forms of electricity production on human health and the environment. Activities in urban climatology focused on the Tropical Urban Climate Experiment and on a related conference to be held in 1993 to review ongoing studies of the impact of climate, its variation and change on urban areas as well as the potential impact of urban activities on climate on local, regional and global scales. A report on a non-parametric framework for long-range streamflow forecasting and a bibliography of urban climate (1981-1988) were published as technical documents.

Main activities under the WCRP component, for which UNEP was responsible, related to the application of climate impact assessment methods, and to the greenhouse gas/climate change issue. Seminars were held on impact assessment methodologies and on reducing societal vulnerability to drought. Studies of the El Niño/Southern Oscillation and of the effects of sea-level rise in South-East Asia were pursued. A climate impact assessment case-study was carried out in Viet Nam and an International Conference on Global Warming and Sustainable Development was held (Bangkok, Thailand, June). A meeting of the Scientific Advisory Committee for WCRP (Budapest, Hungary, October) drew up detailed proposals for activities in 1992 and 1993.

WCRP, undertaken jointly by WMO and the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU), organized a range of research activities directed at understanding the basic physical processes determining climate, including interactions between the different components of the climate system (atmosphere, ocean, land surface and cryosphere), and refining the models required for predicting climate variations and quantifying climate change related to the increase in atmospheric concentrations of greenhouse gases. In 1991, consideration was given to a WCRP climate variability and prediction research programme, intended to lay down a framework for studies of climate prediction and variability on time-scales from a few months to a few decades, and the Arctic climate system study to investigate, model and eventually predict the circulation of the Arctic Ocean, the volume of sea ice, the freshwater budget of the Arctic region and the exchange of fresh water with the global ocean.

Progress in the Global Energy and Water Cycle Experiment (GEWEX) was made in elaborating the scientific plan for the GEWEX Continental-scale International Project, aimed at reproducing the hydrology of a continent-size river basin (the Mississippi) with daily precipitation and evaporation estimates as main inputs. Progress was also made towards implementing the Baseline Surface Radiation Network which provided high quality measurements of surface radiation fluxes in contrasting climatic zones, together with co-located surface and upper-air meteorological data.

The Advisory Committee on Climate Applications and Data (ACCAD) was re-established by the Executive Council with expanded terms of reference. At its first session (Geneva, 19 and 20 November), ACCAD emphasized the need to continue encouraging the free exchange of climate data and to give due attention, along with climate change impact assessments, to applications of knowledge of current climate.

Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme

The 1991 Congress changed the name of the Research and Development Programme to the Atmospheric Research and Environment Programme, to highlight activities relating to environmental issues.

The Programme consisted of four major components: the Global Atmosphere Watch (GAW); Weather Prediction Research; Tropical Meteorology Research; and Physics and Chemistry of Clouds and Weather Modification Research. Development of these activities was the responsibility of the Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS).

Activities under GAW centred on establishing Background Air Pollution Monitoring Network (BAP-MON) stations for global measurements and on issues concerning the Global Ozone Observing System. Close links were maintained with the Economic Commission for Europe European Monitoring and Evaluation Programme particularly regarding its workshop on analysis of measurements and model results with emphasis on NO<sub>x</sub>/VOC/oxidants (Halifax, Canada, 16-20 September). Among the most important meetings held were those relating to further developing GAW and the Steering Group of the WMO-led Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Pollution Working Group 32 on Global Change and Air/Sea Exchange of Chemicals (Norwich, United Kingdom, 22-26 July).

Under Weather Prediction Research, a training workshop on the interpretation of numerical weather prediction (NWP) products in terms of local weather phenomena and their verification was organized (Wageningen, Netherlands, 29 July-9 August) to enhance the quality of weather forecasts. A meeting of the Steering Group on Mediterranean Cyclone Studies (Sofia, Bulgaria, 25-28 March) covered not only prediction and other traditional topics, but also their application to the long-range transport of pollutants and favourable conditions for weather modification. The International Centre for Theoretical Physics/International Centre for Science/ WMO International Conference on Long-range Weather Forecasting Research (Trieste, Italy, 8-12 April) was convened to review progress made in NWP modelling and in understanding the mechanisms controlling atmospheric circulation variability; exchange research results and their applications; and identify key problems requiring further research.

Various Tropical Meteorology Research activities were developed, based on field experiments carried out in 1990 by the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP)/WMO Typhoon Committee, the USSR and the United States, to study tropical cyclones in the North-West Pacific. A major outcome of the West African Monsoon Experiment (WAMEX) was the publication of the WAMEX Atlas. The continuing efforts of the Activity Centres for Asia/Africa Monsoon studies and other research activities were reported on and discussed at the Third Regional Workshop on the Asian/African Monsoon (Puna, India, 4-8 February). National research studies in tropical meteorology, with focus on cold-front intrusion into low-latitude and tropical rain-producing systems, were compiled and published. A workshop on interaction between tropical and mid-latitude weather systems (Reading, United Kingdom, 16-20 December) discussed interactive phenomena on various time and space scales.

Provision of information and advice formed a significant part of the Physics and Chemistry of Clouds and Weather Modification Research. The 1989 Register of National Weather Modification Experiments was prepared and an expert mission travelled to the Syrian Arab Republic to assess the possibility of conducting a precipitation enhancement project there. A meeting of experts on the role of clouds in the chemistry, transport, transformation and deposition of pollutants (Obninsk, USSR, 30 September-4 October) considered aspects of interaction between clouds and pollution.

In 1991, the wmo Technical Library acquired some 2,180 publications, most of which were gifts or exchanges. It answered 2,310 enquiries and loaned 1,300 publications to readers.

Applications of Meteorology Programme

The wmo Applications of Meteorology Programme focused on agricultural, aeronautical and marine meteorology. Beginning in 1992, as decided by the Congress in 1991, the Programme would also include a public weather services component.

Agricultural meteorology

The tenth session of the Commission for Agricultural Meteorology (Florence, Italy, 2-13 December) discussed, among other things, climate change and agriculture, environmentally friendly activities, combating locusts and drought and desertification. The Commission approved texts of additional chapters, annexes and appendices for the Guide to Agricultural Meteorological Practices. At three regional workshops on the preparation of practical agrometeorological information (Algiers, Algeria, 20-29 April.; Aleppo, Syrian Arab Republic, 6-17 October; Niamey, Niger, 7-18 October), participants worked with CLICOM and INSTAT software, the latter being an interactive statistics package especially adapted for agroclimatological information. Participants at an international workshop on soil-water balance in the Sudano-Sahelian zone (Niamey, 18-23 February) proposed specific measures to help achieve the goal of soil-water balance to assist farmers in improving agricultural production. A workshop on the use of meteorological information in forest-fire management (Rabat, Morocco, 25-30 November) dealt with conditions in the western Mediterranean region. Seminars on the application of meteorological data for effective planning and management of water for sustainable irrigated crop production (Jakarta, Indonesia, 25 November-7 December; Ankara, Turkey, 2-13 December) provided practical training for meteorologists, hydrometeorologists, agrometeorologists, hydrologists and other officials involved in water-resource management and planning on the calculation of water requirements of crops using meteorological data and irrigation management and scheduling. Collaboration with the Joint Research Centre of the European Community continued on the use of agrometeorological models to monitor crop production and to provide crop forecasts. A number of publications were issued, including a trilingual Glossary of Agrometeorological Terms; a practical manual on meteorological information to combat agents of sticky cotton; case-studies of meteorology and desert locust control; a guide for the INSTAT software package (French, Spanish); and the Proceedings of the Symposium Meteorology and Crop Protection. Since March 1991, a monthly Drought M&R Bulletin was issued by the Drought Monitoring Centres (DMCs) established in Nairobi, Kenya, and Harare, Zimbabwe, under a joint United Nations Development Programme/WMO regional project. A meeting of experts/scientists on DMC activities (Harare, 9 and 10 August) reviewed the Bulletin.

Aeronautical Meteorology

As interest in automated air reporting continued to increase, the Aeronautical Meteorology Programme-aimed at assisting members in planning, establishing and operating aeronautical services required to ensure the safety, efficiency and economy of air navigation-was carried out in close cooperation with the International Civil Aviation Organization and other international organizations.

During the year, three major training events took place. A seminar on aeronautical forecasting, briefing and documentation (Singapore, 21-25 October) emphasized broadening knowledge of aeronautical forecasting and improving standardization procedures for pre-flight meteorological information. A regional seminar on weather hazardous to air navigation in South-East Asia (Hanoi, Viet Nam, 28 October-1 November) helped participants increase their knowledge of weather hazards, learn new techniques in forecasting, remote sensing, centralization and automation and use the new aeronautical meteorological codes. A training seminar on new forecasting techniques in aeronautical meteorology (18 November-20 December) visited Lesotho, Malawi, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe with a view to strengthening aeronautical meteorological services by ensuring better qualified forecasters.

Marine meteorology

In 1991, the Integrated Global Ocean Services System (IGOSS) entered a new phase with the production of the first IGOS Products Bulletin; the sixth session of the Joint Committee of WMO and the Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission (IOC) for IGOS took place (Geneva, 18-27 November); and IOC launched the Global Ocean Observing System (GOOS) in cooperation with WMO. A joint IOC/WMO seminar/workshop on IGOS products demonstrated the feasibility of undertaking synoptic analyses of the physical state of the oceans on virtually a global basis.

Other activities were directed towards providing services to the marine user community and the operation of a variety of marine observing, data collection and processing system components. In the area of ocean observations, 1991 saw the completion of a project to quantitatively assess the quality of ships; meteorological reports for climate study purposes; the development of new data handling and quality control procedures for drifting buoy data; and the initiation of a global digital sea-ice databank.

Hydrology and water resources

The Hydrology and Water Resources Programme (HWRP) continued to assist and support the activities of bodies responsible for operational hydrology. The International Glossary of Hydrology, published jointly with UNESCO in 1974, was updated in 1991. It contained some 1,800 words, terms and definitions in English, French, Russian and Spanish, and was revised with a view to publishing another edition in 1992 that was also to contain words and terms important in water resources.

Collection of river flow data continued at the Global Runoff Data Centre at the Federal Institute of Hydrology (Koblenz, Germany). At the end of 1991, the Centre's database contained records for 2,930 stations from 131 countries. The data were to be used for developing and verifying global models of atmospheric circulation and for other purposes. A regional postgraduate diploma course in hydrology was launched in September at the WMO Regional Meteorological Training Centre in Nairobi for 14 postgraduate students from nine African countries. The Delft International Course for Hydrologists, organized annually by the International Institute for Hydraulic and Environmental Engineering (Delft, Netherlands) for students from developing countries, covered a wide range of subjects from the hydrological uses of aerial photographs to the design of wells. WMO, the World Health Organization (WHO) and UNEP convened a meeting of experts (Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, 26-30 August) to assess information needs for water quality assessment and management, as part of the preparatory process leading to the 1992 International Conference on Water and the Environment.

The 1991 Congress renamed the Hydrological Operational Multipurpose Subprogramme the Hydrological Operational Multipurpose System (HOMS) and decided that it should be a permanent feature of the Operational Hydrology Programme, with increased emphasis on water quality and environmental aspects. HOMS continued to provide technological support to the hydrological services of WMO members. The WMO/UNESCO Report on Water Resources Assessment Progress in the Implementation of the Mar del Plata Action Plan and a Strategy for the 1990s, containing a series of regional in-depth assessments undertaken under the aegis of the United Nations Intersecretariat Group for Water Resources, was published in 1991. The following reports were prepared: progress on water-resource assessment (WMO/UNESCO); agricultural water use (the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations); water quality issues (WHO); and economic aspects (United Nations). WMO cooperated in the World Bank/UNDP Sub-Saharan Africa Hydrological Assessment Project which focused on the state of hydrological services in that region.

At the regional level, support continued to be provided to the working groups on hydrology of the regional associations responsible for implementing HWRP. The six groups were composed of some 150 experts and 55 rapporteurs. One of many regional activities was a training seminar on secondary data processing for WMO members in South, North and Central America (Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, 22-26 April) covering theory and practical applications. The seminar concluded by adopting a number of recommendations aimed at improving secondary data processing and analysis.

Under the aegis of the United Nations Inter-Agency Task Force for International Cooperation to Address and Mitigate the Consequences of the Accident at the Chernobyl Nuclear Power Plant (see PART THREE, Chapter III), established in March 1991, wmo continued to contribute to efforts on an international response system for nuclear accidents. In addition, wmo prepared an operational hydrology report, Hydrological Aspects of Accidental Pollution of Water Bodies, which provided guidance to hydrological services and water authorities on how to minimize the impact of accidental pollution.

Education and training

Three education and training meetings sponsored by wmo and hosted by the Atmospheric Environment Service took place at Toronto, Canada: a symposium on methods of meteorological education and training including the use of new relevant technologies (19-23 August); a meeting of directors or principals of Regional Meteorological Training Centres (RMTCS) (24 August); and the second meeting of the standing conference of heads of training institutions of national meteorological services (26 August).

The Executive Council Panel of Experts on Education and Training held its fourteenth session (Geneva, 9-13 December) and discussed many aspects of scientific and technical education and training in meteorology and operational hydrology.

Under fellowship funds from various sources administered by wmo in 1991, a total of 80 long-term and 228 short-term fellowships were awarded. Assistance was also provided to 708 participants in 26 training events organized by wmo in 23 different member countries. Wmo also co-sponsored or jointly supported 26 training events which were organized by members or national institutions.

The wmo Training Library continued to strengthen and expand its holdings, mainly in the area of audiovisual training aids to meet the increasing needs of wmo members. The Library made available 211 videos and 43 slide sets, totalling more than 5,000 individual slides, in response to requests from members, training institutions and wmo/UNDP projects.

Technical cooperation

In 1991, under the wmo Technical Cooperation Programme, assistance was provided to some 130 wmo member countries at a value of $32.5 million, financed from UNDP (48 per cent), the wmo Voluntary Cooperation Programme (24 per cent), trust funds (24 per cent) and wmo's regular budget (4 per cent).

Emergency assistance fund

The 1991 Congress decided to establish an emergency assistance fund-the wmo Natural Disaster Assistance Fund for Meteorological and Hydrological Services-to assist members in restoring their meteorological and hydrological observing networks, data-collection and processing facilities and international data exchange, in areas where natural disasters had destroyed or severely disabled the meteorological and/or hydrological infrastructure. The Executive Council established the rules and procedures for the operation of the Fund, as well as its financial rules.

Following the establishment of the Fund, Bangladesh requested help to restore its meteorological observing facilities that had been destroyed by a tropical cyclone in April 1991. China donated instruments for 10 synoptic stations and related telecommunication equipment, Finland provided funds for the re-establishment of an upper-air station and the United Kingdom made available surface weather observing instruments and telecommunication equipment.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, the total number of full-time staff employed by wmo (excluding 20 professionals on technical assistance projects) on permanent and fixed-term contracts stood at 229. Of these, 107 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 66 nationalities) and 122 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

The year 1991 was the last year of the tenth financial period (1988-1991), for which the Tenth (1987) Congress of wmo had established a maximum expenditure of 170,000,000 Swiss francs (SwF). As at 31 December 1991, wmo's accumulated cash deficit amounted to SwF 1,781,678, which was SwF 7,940,672 less than the deficit carried forward from the ninth financial period (1984-1987). Of the assessed contributions totalling SwF 48,743,441 for the year, SwF 11,980,678 remained unpaid; total unpaid contributions due from members stood at SwF 16,322,541.

Regular budget expenditure during the 1990-1991 biennium was SwF 95,941,000. In addition, there were extrabudgetary activities in respect of technical cooperation projects. Wmo also administered several trust funds and special accounts financed by various members and international organizations.

Chapter XIV

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 1991, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) held the seventeenth session of its biennial Assembly (London, 28 October-8 November), at which it adopted a number of resolutions, 38 of which dealt with maritime safety. The 135-member Assembly adopted the 1992-1993 IMO budget and approved the work programme for that period. It elected a new 32-member IMO Council-the organization's governing body between Assembly sessions (see Annex II).

To help restore the organization's financial stability, the Assembly approved a change to the system of apportioning expenses among member States. Previously, 90 per cent of a member State's contribution was based on its shipping tonnage and the remaining 10 per cent was related to the level of its United Nations contribution. The Assembly agreed that the 90-to-10 proportion should be changed to 12.5 to 87.5. The effect was that contributions paid by some countries-especially developing countries-were reduced by as much as 30 per cent, while the contributions of some of the richer countries increased. The Assembly agreed that IMO's financial framework would be reviewed in four years.

Resolutions adopted by the Assembly included three submitted by the IMO Secretary-General relating to maritime safety. One of them, which dealt with the safety of ships carrying solid bulk cargoes, expressed concern at the continued loss of such ships and listed a number of actions to be taken by IMO, Governments, classification societies, shipowners, shipmasters and others. The second was intended to improve regional cooperation in the control of ships and discharges by port States, and the third was aimed at improving international coordination in matters relating to dangerous goods and hazardous substances.

The Assembly revised guidelines adopted in 1989 for the management and safe operation of ships and for pollution prevention and adopted procedures for the control of on-board operational requirements relating to safety and pollution. It adopted a number of new codes, including a Code of Safe Practice for Cargo Stowage and Securing; a Code of Safe Practice for Ships Carrying Timber Deck Cargoes, replacing a code adopted in 1973;<sup>a</sup> and a Code on Alarms and Indicators.

The largest group of resolutions concerned the entry into force on 1 February 1992 of the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System (GMDSS). Those resolutions were intended to help Governments and others implement the GMDSS as effectively as possible.

Resolutions dealing with marine pollution encouraged the development of new tanker designs to reduce the amount of oil pollution resulting from accidents, listed various measures to be taken to reduce air pollution from ships, and established target dates for reducing or eliminating pollution by substances such as chlorofluorocarbons, halogenated hydrocarbons, exhaust gases and volatile organic compounds.

Guidelines for the designation of Special Areas under the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships, 1973, as modified by the 1978 Protocol (MARPOL 73/78), and the identification of Particularly Sensitive Sea Areas were adopted.

Another resolution emphasized IMO's role in environmental matters and recommended that the IMO Secretary-General ensure the active participation of the secretariat in the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (1992).

The Assembly agreed to amend the IMO Convention and institutionalize the Facilitation Committee by raising it to the same status as other bodies such as the Maritime Safety Committee. The Committee's task was to reduce formalities hindering international maritime trade.

IMO membership rose to 135 with the acceptance of the IMO Convention by Luxembourg (see Annex I).

Two treaties designed to combat terrorism and other unlawful acts against shipping fulfilled requirements on 2 December for entry into force-the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 1988, and Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf. Both instruments were to enter into force on 1 March 1992.

Activities in 1991

In September, the International Maritime Prize for 1990 was presented to Captain Zenon N. Sdougos (Greece). The Prize is awarded annually to the individual or organization judged to have done the most to further the aims of IMO.

The theme for World Maritime Day, which was celebrated at IMO headquarters on 26 September, was "Passenger and crew safety on board ship".

World Maritime University

On 1 December, the eighth graduation ceremony of the World Maritime University, Malmö, Sweden, took place. Ninety maritime specialists from 45 countries finished the two-year course. The University was established in 1983 under the auspices of IMO to provide advanced training for personnel, mainly from developing countries, in maritime administration, technical management of shipping companies and maritime education. The University had prepared some 690 senior personnel since its inception.

Prevention of pollution

Persian Gulf oil spill

A special coordination centre was established by IMO at the end of January 1991 to help combat the major oil spill threatening the coasts of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, a result of the hostilities in the Persian Gulf.

The action was taken in accordance with the 1990 International Convention on Oil Pollution Preparedness, Response and Cooperation, adopted at a conference convened by IMO in November 1990. A resolution adopted at that conference called on IMO to implement the Convention immediately. A number of member States offered assistance in the establishment of the centre.

On 1 March 1991, the IMO Secretary-General announced the establishment of the Persian Gulf Oil Pollution Disaster Fund. The purpose of the Fund was to facilitate the fielding of equipment and services to catalyse efforts by coastal States to respond to the disaster. The countries which contributed to the Fund were: Canada ($Can 0.025 million), Denmark ($0.15 million and services in kind), China (equipment), Commission of European Communities (1 million European currency units), Germany (equipment), Japan ($1.5 million), Luxembourg (40 million Luxembourg francs), Netherlands (1.25 million Netherlands guilders), Switzerland (0.3 million Swiss francs), United Kingdom (1 million pounds sterling).

On 10 April, the Fund was used for the first time to pay for clean-up operations on the beaches of Karan Island off the coast of Saudi Arabia, which was used as a breeding ground for endangered species of turtles and sea birds.

During the remainder of the year, clean-up operations were carried out at a number of other sites along the southern coast of the Persian Gulf.

MARPOL 73/78

On 18 February, the North Sea became a special area under annex V of MARPOL 73/78 (concerning pollution of the seas by garbage from ships). The term "special areas" was used to refer to seas which were especially vulnerable to pollution, usually because they were almost enclosed by land or were environmentally sensitive. In those areas, controls on dumping were much stricter than elsewhere. Such areas previously designated included the Mediterranean, Baltic, Black and Red Seas, the Gulf area and the Gulf of Aden. The Great Barrier Reef, off the eastern coast of Australia, had also been identified as a particularly sensitive area which, for ecological, socio-economic or scientific reasons, needed special protection through IMO action and which might be vulnerable to damage by maritime activities.

In 1991, the United States deposited its instrument of acceptance of annex III of the Convention, bringing the number of countries accepting the annex to 45, covering 53 per cent of world tonnage. The annex dealt with pollution of the seas by harmful substances carried in packaged form, including freight containers, portable tanks or road and rail tank wagons. The entry into force of annex III was scheduled to take place on 1 July 1992.

Prevention of pollution

In July, the Marine Environment Protection Committee agreed to initiate a study on the effectiveness of different tanker designs in preventing oil pollution. The purpose of the study was to compare various options, including double hulls and the mid-height deck design. The study was proposed by representatives of the International Association of Independent Tanker Owners, the International Chamber of Shipping and the Oil Companies International Marine Forum. The three organizations agreed that the cost of the study would be paid by the industry.

The Committee also prepared draft amendments to MARPOL 73/78 for circulation to member Governments and contracting parties, the intention being that they would be considered for adoption at the Committee's next session in March 1992. The amendments involved the introduction of two new regulations in annex I of the Convention, one dealing with new tankers and the other with existing ones.

Ship security and safety of life at sea

SOLAS Convention

The International Convention, for the Safety of Life at Sea, 1974 (SOLAS Convention), was amended in May 1991 by the Maritime Safety Committee. The amendments adopted included: chapter II-2 (fire protection aspects); chapter III (emergency training and drills); chapter V (pilot transfer aspects); and chapter VI (carriage of cargoes). The amendments to chapter VI extended its coverage from grain alone to all other cargoes with the exception of liquids and gases carried in bulk.

A new International Grain Code was adopted and made mandatory under SOLAS. Two new codes were approved-Code of Safe Practice for Ships Carrying Timber Deck Cargoes and Code of Safe Practice for Solid Bulk Cargoes-and references made to them in a revised chapter VI. The amendments were expected to enter into force on 1 January 1994 under the Convention's tacit acceptance procedures.

International Convention for Safe Containers

The International Convention for Safe Containers, 1972, was amended by the Maritime Safety Committee in May 1991. The amendments included the addition of a new chapter V to annex I dealing with the approval of modified containers. The amendments were to enter into force on 1 January 1993.

Standards of training

certification and watchkeeping for seafarers

Amendments to the International Convention on Standards of Training Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers, 1978, were adopted by the Maritime Safety Committee in May 1991 and were expected to enter into force on 1 December 1992. They dealt with the implementation of GMDSS, which was to be phased in between 1992 and 1999.

Terrorism and other unlawful acts

On 2 December, the requirements for entry into force of two treaties to combat terrorism and other unlawful acts against shipping were fulfilled. The Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Maritime Navigation, 1988, and Protocol for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Fixed Platforms Located on the Continental Shelf were to enter into force on 1 March 1992.

Chapter XV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

In 1991, the World Intellectual Property Organization's (WIPO) General Assembly, its governing body and the Unions administered by it held their twenty-second session at Geneva (23 September-2 October). The number of States parties to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property rose to 103 with the accession of Chile, the Gambia and Swaziland. The number of States parties to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works rose to 90 with the accession of Ecuador, Ghana, Guinea-Bissau, Malawi, Paraguay and Zambia. Argentina and Spain became parties to the Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations, bringing the number of contracting States to 37. Greece became party to the Brussels Convention Relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite, bringing the number of contracting States to 14. At the end of the year, the number of States parties to the Convention establishing WIPO and to the various treaties administered by WIPO was 135.

The 17 treaties in the two main fields of intellectual property administered by WIPO in 1991 are listed below in order of year of adoption:

Industrial property: Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property; Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source on Goods; Madrid Agreement Concerning the International Registration of Marks; The Hague Agreement Concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs; Nice Agreement Concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purposes of the Registration of Marks; Lisbon Agreement for the Protection of Appellations of Origin and Their International Registration; Locarno Agreement Establishing an International Classification for Industrial Designs; Patent Cooperation Treaty; Strasbourg Agreement Concerning the International Patent Classification; Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Microorganisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure; Nairobi Treaty on the Protection of the Olympic Symbol; Vienna Agreement Establishing an International Classification of the Figurative Elements of Marks.

Copyright and neighbouring rights: Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations; Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Brussels Convention Relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite; Treaty on the International Registration of Audiovisual Works.

During 1991, the membership of WIPO increased to 127 with the accession of Namibia and San Marino (see Annex I). (For WIPO's governing body see Annex II.)

Activities in 1991

Development cooperation

During 1991, WIPO experienced a high level of demand for assistance to developing countries. In spite of a decline in extrabudgetary funds from the United Nations Development Programme, WIPO responded to the demands of developing countries for training in the effective administration and use of the intellectual property system. About 75 courses, workshops and seminars, most of them in developing countries, were organized providing information about industrial property, copyright, search and examination, computerization of office administration, use of computerized patent information databases (including CD-ROM technology), legal and economic aspects of industrial property, collection and distribution of copyright royalties and promotion of technological inventiveness. In addition, 85 study visits to both industrialized and developing countries were organized for officials of developing countries. In all, 39 developing countries, 18 industrialized countries and 13 intergovernmental organizations hosted such events or organized them jointly with WIPO. More than 5,000 men and women representing government, the private sector and intergovernmental organizations from some 100 developing countries participated.

Appropriate national legislation is necessary to ensure that a country is able to make effective use of the intellectual property system. WIPO continued in 1991 to emphasize the advice and assistance it provides to assist developing countries to improve their legislation. WIPO both drafted laws and regulations dealing with one or more aspects of intellectual property and commented on drafts prepared by Governments. Some 35 countries benefited from such advice and assistance.

WIPO offered advice on drafting legislative provisions to establish institutional arrangements to benefit inventors, authors and other creators and organized seminars to discuss policy measures designed to support their endeavours. WIPO also continued its Gold Medal Award scheme for exceptional work by inventors and creators.

One hundred and ten missions to some 80 developing countries provided advice to government authorities on the upgrading of administrative procedures, computerization, the provision of patent information services and the setting up of organizations for the collective administration of rights under copyright law.

There was continuing demand for WIPO's state-of-the-art search service for developing countries. Approximately 440 search reports and 2,600 copies of patent documents were supplied to 44 requesting Governments and institutions in developing countries during 1991.

In September, the governing bodies of WIPO adopted the programme and budget for the 1992-1993 biennium, which foresaw a greater volume of activity in the field of development cooperation, particularly to promote the accession of developing countries to WIPO-administered treaties, to computerize the services of industrial property offices and the operations involved in administering authors' rights in developing countries (including the introduction of CD-ROM technology), to develop the teaching of intellectual property law in developing countries and to facilitate the participation of developing countries in WIPO-organized meetings. The budgetary allocations for development cooperation activities were increased by 29.4 per cent, from about 5.45 million Swiss francs in 1990-1991 to about 7.05 million Swiss francs in 1992-1993.

Setting of norms and standards

The first part of the Diplomatic Conference for the Conclusion of a Treaty Supplementing the Paris Convention as far as Patents are Concerned (Patent Law Treaty) (The Hague, Netherlands, June) discussed the drafts of the proposed Patent Law Treaty and its accompanying Regulations. Eighty-eight member States of the Paris Union were represented at the Conference, as were five non-member States, six intergovernmental organizations and 33 non-governmental organizations.

Discussions at the first session of the Committee of Experts on a Possible Protocol to the Berne Convention (Geneva, November) were based on the first part of a WIPO memorandum on questions concerning a possible Protocol to the Berne Convention. Those questions related to certain categories of protected works: computer programs, databases, expert systems and other artificial intelligence systems and computer-produced works, as well as the rights of producers of sound recordings. Fifty-six States, five intergovernmental organizations and 39 non-governmental organizations participated in the meetings.

The third session of the Committee of Experts on the Settlement of Intellectual Property Disputes between States (Geneva, September) examined provisions of a draft treaty on the matter and recommended that WIPO prepare a draft treaty for discussion by the Committee at its next session. Forty-five States, four intergovernmental organizations and four non-governmental organizations participated.

WIPO organized a World-wide Symposium on the Intellectual Property Aspects of Artificial Intelligence (Stanford, United States, March). Participants examined the various categories of artificial intelligence and their main fields of application from the viewpoint of the possible intellectual property implications.

A Symposium on the International Protection of Geographical Indications (Wiesbaden, Germany, October), attended by more than 100 participants from 35 countries dealt with various aspects of the protection of geographical indications against misuse and with suitable measures to implement protection, such as international registration. The discussions centred on both natural produce and industrial goods.

Industrial property

The WIPO Permanent Committee on Industrial Property Information (Geneva, September) endorsed the Director-General's statement that the most important matters for international cooperation in the patent information field up to the year 2000 should continue to be the storage of the full text, including drawings, of all patent documents on optical disks or other devices capable of storing such texts in an extremely compact and easily accessible form; the further development of highly automated and computerized retrieval systems in which retrieval is based not only on classification but also on words, combinations of words, chemical formulae and other elements; and the harmonization of the searching methods of all industrial property offices and commercial databases so that each of them can, with permission and subject to payment, search the databases of the others.

The Committee decided that it should, in the 1992-1993 biennium, address the special problems of developing countries arising from the fast-developing trends in automation, particularly the supply of patent documents and bibliographic search systems on CD-ROM

International registration activities

Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). In 1991, the number of record copies of international applications received by WIPO amounted to 22,247, or 16.1 per cent more than in 1990. The average number of PCT contracting States designated per international application was 23. The international applications thus replaced some 511,680 national applications.

With the aim of further simplifying and modernizing the use of the PCT system, the Assembly of the PCT Union adopted amendments to the PCT Regulations in July which will enter into force on 1 July 1992. Also, a computer-assisted system for the processing of international applications had been developed and was expected to be operational in March 1992. WIPO continued its development of the document imaging and computer-assisted publication system, which was scheduled for implementation in mid-1993.

Madrid Agreement. In 1991, WIPO received 20,791 international trademark registrations and renewals under the Madrid Agreement, representing a decrease of 5.5 per cent in relation to the 1990 figure. This decrease was probably due mainly to the economic situation in member countries. As the average number of countries covered by each international registration was 8.3, the international registrations in 1991 replaced some 201,671 national registrations. The other activities under the Madrid system, namely refusals and changes, decreased by 3.2 per cent compared with 1990.

The Working Group on the Application of the Madrid Protocol met twice in 1991 to make further improvements to the draft of the Regulations of the Madrid system. Once the Madrid Protocol of 1989 entered into force, the Regulations would cover the procedures under both the Protocol and the Madrid Agreement currently in force and ensure the harmonious coexistence of the two texts. The Working Group was to meet in 1992 to examine drafts of the official forms to be used under the Regulations.

The publication subsystem of the International Marks Numbered and Optically Stored (MINOS) system, which aims to put the archives of all international trademark registrations on optical disks, began operation in 1991. The scanning of new international trademarks for the purpose of storing them on optical disks was started, and work continued on the Read-Only Memory of Madrid Archives Information (ROMARIN) project, consisting of a series of CD-ROMs containing all the data in the International Register, including images. This project-to be completed in 1993-would enable member States of the Madrid Union to have equal and easy access to the data in the Register, as each received a CD-ROM workstation in 1991.

Hague Agreement. In 1991, the number of industrial design deposits, renewals and prolongations received by WIPO was 4,364, representing an increase of 1.7 per cent over the 1990 figure.

Contribution arrears

In October 1991, the governing bodies approved the creation, to take effect from 1 January 1992, of two new contribution classes, which would benefit about 50 developing countries with low assessments in the United Nations system of contributions. Their contributions would be reduced by either 50 or 75 per cent, depending on their classification. The governing bodies also decided that the amount of contributions in arrears of any least-developed country for years preceding 1990 would be entered in a special 'frozen' account; payment of the arrears would not be demanded, although some payments would be expected and encouraged.

Central and Eastern Europe

During the year WIPO contributed, in an advisory capacity, to the legislative changes that took place or were being planned in Central and Eastern European countries in the intellectual property field. On 1 July the new Patent Law of the Soviet Union entered into force. WIPO and the European patent Office (EPO) jointly organized a symposium on patent protection in a market economy (Budapest, Hungary, November) for the Governments and private sectors of Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland and the member States of EPO. WIPO also organized a national symposium on intellectual property with the Government of Romania (Bucharest, May).

The new Soviet Law on Trademarks and Service Marks was adopted on 3 July. In Hungary, laws dealing with unfair competition, utility models and microelectronic semiconductor products were adopted. Romania passed a new patent law, and Czechoslovakia passed a law on the protection of topographies of semiconductor products. All these countries sought the advice of WIPO when drafting their new laws.

European patent office

WIPO's cooperation with EPO was further developed during 1991, notably in the joint exploitation of such new technologies as CD-ROMs for the storage, retrieval and management of patent information and in the promotion of the use of CD-ROMs and related hardware in developing countries. In February the two organizations jointly established a set of guidelines for developing countries on the use of CD-ROM technology for patent information.

UN Conference on Environment and Development

Regular working contacts were started in the first half of 1991 between WIPO and the secretariat of the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development (UNCED).

WIPO and UNCED jointly organized a meeting of experts (Geneva, October) which discussed and clarified legal and technical aspects of intellectual property issues relating to the transfer of technology that had a bearing on environmental protection as part of the preparations for UNCED, to be held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in 1992.

Secretariat

As at 1 January 1991, WIPO employed 402 staff members. Of these, 126 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 55 States) and 276 were in the General Service category. In addition, 115 expert missions were undertaken by WIPO consultants for technical assistance projects during the year.

Budget

The principal sources of the WIPO budget—approximately $128,824,000 for the 1990-1991 biennium—are ordinary and special contributions from member States and income derived from international registration services (primarily under the PCT and Madrid Agreement), Contributions are paid on the basis of a class-and-unit system by members of the Paris, Berne, International Patent Classification, Nice, Locarno and Vienna Unions and by WIPO member States not belonging to any of the Unions. Expenditures for 1990-1991 were $101,978,000.

NOTE: For further information regarding the agency, see Governing Bodies of WIPO and the Unions Administered by WIPO published by WIPO.

Chapter XVI

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) continued to provide concessional assistance for financing agricultural projects in developing countries. During the year, countries receiving IFAD assistance increased to 94. The fund aimed at increasing food production, reducing malnutrition and alleviating rural poverty. It continued to concentrate on low-income, food-deficit countries which received most of IFAD's lending, and on providing the poorest farmers with the necessary production means and institutional support. Particular emphasis was given to restoring the agricultural capacity of sub-Saharan African countries. IFAD also paid special attention to the issues of women in development (for which four donor Governments had provided special funding of $1.12 million by 1991), cooperation with non-governmental organizations and the environment.

Membership of IFAD rose to 145 with the admission of Namibia. Of the current member countries, 22 were in Category I (developed countries), 12 in Category II (oil-exporting developing countries) and 111 in Category III (other developing countries).

The fourteenth session of the Governing Council of IFAD (Rome, 29-30 May) adopted a budget for 1991 of $49.8 million plus a contingency of $1.4 million. It approved by acclamation the reclassification of the membership of Portugal from that of a member of Category III to that of a member of Category I. In other action, the council elected Argentina and Pakistan as new members of the Executive Board, and Mexico and Turkey as new alternate members for the period ending January 1994. It also approved an arrangement under which Luxembourg would replace Belgium as alternate member of the Executive Board from the end of the fifteenth session of the Governing Council in January 1992 until the end of the sixteenth session in January 1993.

The Governing Council decided to establish a second phase of the Special Programme for Sub-Saharan African Countries Affected by Drought and Desertification (SPA) and appealed to all members in a position to do so to contribute generously to the second phase for three years, bearing in mind the level of resources mobilized for the first phase and its successful implementation. In that respect, the council authorized the Executive Board and the President of IFAD to begin operations and to implement the second phase in accordance with the basic framework as amended.

The IFAD Executive Board held three regular sessions in 1991 (April, September and December), approving 23 loans for 22 projects, including two loans under SPA. At each of its regular sessions, the Board reviewed a number of operational matters, including IFAD's Evolving Approaches to Environmentally Sustainable Rural Poverty Alleviation, its Strategy for the Economic Advancement of Poor Rural Women and its Evolving Policy towards Grant Financing of Agricultural Research.

In financial matters, the Board reviewed reports on the management of IFAD's Investment Portfolio, approved a transfer of $5 million to the General Reserve for 1991 and approved the fourteenth drawdown of members' contributions in 1991 in two tranches of a maximum of $186 million.

The Board approved a programme of work at a level of special drawing rights (SDRs) 235 million for loans, grants and project-related activities and services to member States under the Regular Programme in 1992, and endorsed a budget of $53 million, plus a contingency of $0.9 million. It also approved the programme of work and estimated administrative expenditures of SPA for 1992 of SDR 40 million and $5.57 million respectively, including a contingency of $150,000.

Resources

Member States pledged $567.4 million in the third replenishment of resources for a period of two and a half years with effect from January 1990. As at the end of 1991, members' contributions over the 14 years of IFAD's operations totalled $3.03 billion.

Contributions and firm pledges to the first phase of SPA, which came into effect in May 1986, exceeded the three-year (1988-1989) target of $300 million as at 31 January 1991. However, subsequent appreciation of the United States dollar reduced these contributions and pledges to a total of $253 million. Pledges to the second phase totalled $88.56 million as at 31 December 1991.

Activities in 1991

The 23 new loans for 22 projects approved by IFAD in 1991 totalled SDR 200.3 million ($275.5 million), including two loans amounting to SDR 22.4 million ($30.7 million) made available from SPA resources. The 23 technical assistance grants amounted to SDR 3.9 million ($5.5 million) including five grants of SDR 0.7 million ($1 million) from the Special Programme. The total financial assistance provided in 1991 amounted to SDR 204.9 million ($280.9 million), as compared to SDR 237.5 million ($322.5 million) in 1990.

All of the 22 projects approved were IFAD-initiated, with 87 per cent of them attracting co-financing from other donors, as compared to 70.5 per cent over the 1985-1990 period.

During the year, 10 projects for 10 countries of the African region were approved, for a lending total of SDR 85.6 million ($116.5 million) under the Regular and Special Programmes combined. The projects dealt with agricultural and rural development rehabilitation of drought-affected areas, including assistance to nomadic pastoralists, livestock development and artisanal fisheries. Countries receiving the loans included Benin, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Madagascar, the Niger, Senegal and Zambia.

The six projects approved for five countries in Asia, involving SDR 72.9 million ($101.4 million), emphasized credit for smallholders and the landless, especially women, and livestock and small-scale fisheries development. The projects were approved for Bangladesh (two), China, India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka.

The five projects approved for Latin America and the Caribbean obtained loans of SDR 33.1 million ($45.8 million), and aimed to meet the credit needs of small farmers in poor regions. The five projects were approved for Guatemala, Jamaica, Peru, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, and Venezuela.

For the Near East and North Africa, one project in Tunisia was approved under the Regular and Special Programmes, involving SDR 8.7 million ($11.9 million). It aimed at halting pasture, forest and water resources degradation through a self-help approach encouraging the establishment of community groups and herders associations and their participation in planning and implementation activities.

In 1991, three new technical grants were approved together with continued support for 24 ongoing research programmes.

The fund continued its special programming missions, 44 of which were undertaken in 1991 and which focused on creating a policy dialogue with Governments on the general framework for smallholder development, developing country strategies as a guide to the Fund's investment allocation, and identifying special projects and programmes. Two of the missions, to Iran and Uganda, dealt specifically with addressing poverty alleviation through stimulation of the rural sector. Another mission, to Namibia, dealt with long-term issues, while other missions visited Burkina Faso, Haiti, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Nicaragua, Pakistan, the Philippines, Senegal, the Sudan and Tunisia.

Income and expenditure

Total revenue under the Regular Programme for 1991 was $129.1 million, consisting of $95.7 million of investment income, including gains of $3.1 million resulting from active portfolio management and $33.4 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total operational and administrative expenses for the year amounted to $44.6 million (including an exchange gain on operations of $0.8 million), compared with a budget, before contingency, of $46.3 million. The excess of revenue for the year was $84.5 million.

Total revenue under SPA for 1991 was $14.4 million, consisting of $13.9 million of investment income, including gains from active portfolio management and $0.5 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total expenses for the year amounted to $3.1 million, compared with a budget, before contingency, of $3.5 million. The excess of revenue for the year was $11.3 million.

Secretariat

At the end of December 1991, the IFAD secretariat totalled 239 staff, of whom 96 were in the Professional and higher categories-drawn from 52 nationalities-and 143 in the General Service category

Chapter XVII

United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO)

In 1991, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) continued its activities in the areas of industrial operations, strategies and promotion. In addition, its special programmes calling for multidisciplinary or interdepartmental approaches were designed to support industrial growth and restructuring and included the Industrial Development Decade for Africa, assistance to the least developed countries (LDCs), industrial cooperation among developing countries, integration of women in industrial development, cooperation with industrial enterprises and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), environment and private sector development.

A greater commitment by the international community to Third-World industrialization was stressed at the fourth session of the General Conference, which took place at Vienna from 18 to 22 November. Attended by 132 countries and some 600 delegates, the Conference looked ahead to new possibilities for mobilizing increased resources for industrialization in the wake of the end of the Cold War and dealt with topics including industrialization of LDCs, new concepts and approaches for cooperation in industrial development, mobilization of financial resources and the 1992-1993 programmes and budget.

As at 31 December 1991, 154 States were members of UNIDO (see Annex I).

Industrial strategies and operations

A total of 1,927 technical assistance projects valued at $147.5 million were implemented or under implementation in 1991. Asia and the Pacific received 29.3 per cent; Africa (including the African Arab States), 37.1 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 2.6 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 6.5 per cent; and Europe, 3.3 per cent. Interregional and global projects accounted for 21.2 per cent.

Major emphasis continued to be placed on the analysis and formulation of the UNIDO perspective on global industrialization, in particular with the publication of Industry and Development: Global Report. The publication, issued to member States prior to the General Conference in November, contained an analysis of the industrial performance, policy and prospects for major regions of the world. Policy-oriented documents were also prepared for the Conference on external debt and industrial development and on the mobilization of financial resources for industrial development.

implementation of industrial operations

Agro-industries. Technical cooperation expenditures in 1991 under the heading of agro-industries amounted to $12.6 million. Some 55 per cent of the total implementation was financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). A total of 147 projects were implemented or under implementation: Africa accounted for 50.1 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 32 per cent; Latin America and Caribbean, 12.1 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 1.6 per cent; global and interregional, 3.1 per cent; and Europe, 1.1 per cent.

Projects related to agro-based industries continued to focus on the production of value-added agro-based products. In order to assist States to conform with new market standards, especially in the food sector, quality control and the application of modern production technologies were given high priority. Special emphasis was also given to the rehabilitation and modernization of existing plants as well as to the relocation and sizing of production units on the basis of the actual market demand and commercial profitability.

Chemical industries. Expenditures for technical cooperation in the chemical industry sector totalled $34 million, with 53 per cent being financed from UNDP resources. Projects numbered 337 that were either implemented or under implementation. Of the total expenditure, Africa accounted for 39.3 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 46.9 per cent; Latin America and Caribbean, 3.6 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 1.3 per cent; global and interregional, 7.3 per cent; and Europe, 1.6 per cent.

Because of the increased trend towards national execution, which was particularly marked in 1991, and the end of the UNDP programming cycle which slowed down the approval of projects, significantly fewer projects were approved than anticipated. In order to offset the negative impact of a changing UNDP policy, staff undertook numerous non-UNDP missions and participated in programmes under national execution. As a result of these efforts, some 200 project proposals were developed during the 1990-1991 biennium with a total value of $100 million and an average project value of $500,000.

Metallurgical industries. In 1991, technical cooperation expenditures in metallurgical industries amounted to $7.5 million, with 76 per cent financed from UNDP resources. Projects implemented or under implementation totalled 123. Of those, Africa accounted for 25 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 56.2 per cent; Latin America and Caribbean, 5.7 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 0.5 per cent; global and interregional, 6.1 per cent; and Europe, 6.5 per cent.

Projects were directed towards improving efficiency of operation and maintenance and the manufacture of spare part inputs, with emphasis on small- and medium-scale industry. Another focus was the local production of essential raw materials required for the domestic market and export.

Engineering industries. Expenditures for engineering industry projects amounted to $15.5 million. Funds for about 71 per cent of that came from UNDP, and special trust-fund arrangements became more frequent. Implemented or under implementation were 204 projects. Of those, Africa accounted for 47 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 36.4 per cent; Latin America and Caribbean, 2.9 per cent; global and interregional, 9.6 per cent; and Europe, 4.1 per cent.

Emphasis was placed on the more technologically advanced projects, especially those dealing with electronics and electrical engineering. The main areas of technical cooperation were: the application of appropriate techniques to rural industrialization; integration of electro-mechanical and electronic aspects in subsectoral development; metalworks and machine tools; development of equipment in the energy sector; advancement of manufacturing value added through process technology and packaging techniques; repair and maintenance; and the introduction of application of advanced technologies.

Industrial planning. Under this heading, a total of 117 projects were implemented or under implementation, with technical cooperation expenditures amounting to 9.1 million, of which 73 per cent was financed from UNDP resources. Of that expenditure, Africa accounted for 65.7 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 18.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 6.9 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 6.9 per cent; global/interregional, 1.6 per cent; and Europe, 0.5 per cent.

Work was marked by a trend towards support in the formulation of strategies and policies for the restructuring and modernization of the industrial sector, particularly in Eastern Europe and Latin America.

Institutional infrastructure. Expenditures in the area of institutional infrastructure totalled $19 million in 1991. Of that, 85 per cent was funded from UNDP resources. A total of 232 projects were implemented or under implementation. Africa accounted for 45.8 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 27.4 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 13.8 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 4.7 per cent; global/interregional, 5.3 per cent; and Europe, 3 per cent.

In response to the growing demand from developing countries, technical cooperation was carried out through a multidisciplinary programme approach and was consolidated into two main areas: industrial institutions and small- and medium-scale industries. UNIDO also provided technical assistance in infrastructure for standardization, metrology and quality systems. It assisted in promoting industrial subcontracting and provided advisory services to Governments in privatization.

Industrial management and rehabilitation. Technical cooperation expenditures in this sector amounted to $7.1 million, with 71 per cent coming from UNDP resources. A total of 96 projects were implemented or under implementation. Of the total expenditures, Africa accounted for 44.2 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 25.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 13.4 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 5.6 per cent; global/interregional, 0.1 per cent; and Europe, 11.5 per cent.

The programme was characterized by more emphasis on assistance in the commercialization of industry, direct assistance to the private sector, and the transfer of commercially dedicated management technologies, such as design for manufacture, total quality control, manufacturing resource planning, group technology and value engineering.

Feasibility studies. A total of $6.1 million was spent on feasibility studies in 1991. Some 36 per cent of the total implementation was financed from UNDP resources, and 112 projects at different stages of implementation were undertaken. In terms of expenditures, Africa accounted for 47.7 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 7.2 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 1.1 per cent; the Arab States (excluding those in Africa), 15.1 per cent; global/interregional, 26.8 per cent; and Europe, 2.1 per cent.

Work in this field and related pre-investment activities were marked by a trend towards modernization analyses of existing industries and evaluation of measures to strengthen industrial enterprises scheduled for privatization.

Industrial human resource development. Expenditures for fellowship and other training components in all technical cooperation projects implemented by UNIDO in 1991 amounted to $17.6 million, as compared to $23.2 million in 1990. Of that, $11.9 million was spent on fellowships and study tours and $5.7 million on group training activities and meetings. Technical cooperation expenditure under the heading of training that received substantive back-stopping from the Industrial Human Resource Development Branch amounted to $3 million. About 29.4 per cent of this was financed from UNDP resources. A total of 146 projects were implemented. Africa accounted for 27.6 per cent; Asia and the Pacific, 39.6 per cent; Latin America and the Caribbean, 3.3 per cent; the Arab States (excluding African Arab States), 1.6 per cent; global/in-terregional, 22 per cent; and Europe, 5.9 per cent.

Activities were negatively affected by limited financial resources, but were marked by a steady emphasis on the multiplier effect through training of trainers and the closer linkage of industrial human resource development to the transfer and development of technology.

Industrial promotion

In 1991, industrial promotion activities focused on reinforcing links in the areas of consultations, the development and transfer of technology and industrial investment. Efforts centred on strengthening intersectoral linkages and inter-divisional cooperation within the System of Consultations and the follow-up activities to each consultation through the further development of contacts with international organizations and NGOs.

System of Consultations. The UNIDO System of Consultations, a mechanism for achieving the goals set out in the Lima Declaration and Plan of Action on Industrial Development and Cooperation,<sup>a</sup> principally restructuring world industry and increasing the share of developing countries in world production, held four consultations during 1991. They were: the Second Consultation on the Wood and Wood Products Industry (Vienna, 21-25 January); the Fourth Consultation on the Capital Goods Industry with Emphasis on Machine Tools (Prague, Czechoslovakia, 16-20 September); the Second Consultation on the Building Materials Industry (Athens, Greece, 4-8 November); and the Regional Consultation on the Fisheries Industry in Asia for the Pacific Island Countries (Vienna, 2-6 December).

As follow-up to earlier consultations, the following were held in 1991: a workshop on maintenance management in the industrial sector (Conakry, Guinea, 15-17 October); a workshop on technological cooperation among developing countries for the development of pharmaceutical-related ancillary industries (Amman, Jordan, 4-6 November); a global preparatory meeting for the regional consultation on the Petrochemical Industry in the Arab Countries (Karachi, Pakistan, 10-13 December); a workshop on appropriate strategies for fertilizer technology and development (Lahore, Pakistan, 29 April-3 May); and a workshop on the Asian sugar cane industry with emphasis on sugar cane diversification (Islamabad, Pakistan, 5-9 May).

Development and transfer of technology. A wide variety of programmes were carried out for the development and transfer of technology during 1991. Among them was the publication of the first four issues of a new Monitor on marine industrial technology, in addition to the existing quarterly Monitors on genetic engineering and biotechnology, microelectronics and new materials, and the UNIDO Newsletter. In the field of informatics, development of the Regional Network for Microelectronics for Latin America and the Caribbean continued, with the participation of 15 countries.

Activities on new and renewable energy technologies were strengthened. They included the development of a project for the promotion of low-cost photovoltaic technology for rural energy demand, a market survey for photovoltaics in developing countries, and the preparation of a feasibility study for a centre on solar energy research and application.

Assistance continued to be provided to developing countries in the acquisition and negotiation of technology. In response to the heavy demand for UNIDO training courses on technology transfer, negotiation and contracting, five workshops were held during the year: Moscow, March; Lagos, Nigeria, April; Dakar, Senegal, September; Lagos, October; and Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, November.

Industrial investment programme. A reorganization of the industrial investment programme resulted in its steady expansion during 1991 and a marked increase in new requests for assistance from developing countries. The programme continued to emphasize the regional focus, the design of integrated technical cooperation programmes for the mobilization of investment resources, the development of bankable projects (particularly concerning marketing) and related training.

Second industrial Development Decade for Africa (1990-2000)

A major feature of the work of UNIDO was the preparation of the programme for the Second Industrial Development Decade for Africa (IDDA), proclaimed by the General Assembly in 1989.<sup>b</sup> The programme, which consists of 50 national and four subregional programmes, was adopted by the Conference of African Ministers of Industry at its tenth meeting (Dakar, July) and subsequently adopted by the General Conference of UNIDO in November.

Continued assistance was provided to African countries and intergovernmental organizations in 1991 in the areas of technical cooperation and supplementary activities. Under the latter component, the main achievement was the support provided to

37 African countries to help elaborate their national programmes in the context of the Second IDDA. Under the technical cooperation component, 37 projects were approved during 1990-1991, valued at $4.69 million. The projects were mainly in the areas of agro-industries and agro-related industries. Emphasis was also placed on the mobilization of financial and technical support for the Decade.

In addition, UNIDO initiated consultations with the World Bank and UNDP in order to secure the coordination of the programme for the Second IDDA with the structural adjustment programmes and the national long-term perspective studies, as well as the intercountry programmes for both the fifth and sixth UNDP programming cycles.

Assistance to LDCs

An intensified effort to respond to the 1990 Paris Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the 1990s marked the beginning of 1991. Studies on industrialization problems in LDCs were prepared and subsequently examined by experts from 42 LDCs during a workshop held at Vienna in August. A symposium on the industrialization of LDCs, held in conjunction with the UNIDO General Conference, finalized an industrial action programme that defined the role of UNIDO in its assistance strategy and the commitment of LDCs in their industrialization efforts.

A focus of the current operational activities was the promotion and enhancement of the private sector, with special emphasis on support actions leading to the development of a dynamic small- and medium-scale industrial sector. For the African LDCs, the main issues of technical cooperation activities related to the maintenance and rehabilitation of industrial production equipment, the development of new technologies, human resource development and the upgrading of national capabilities, valorization of natural resources, export promotion through products quality improvement and standardization, the creation of export processing zones and strategic management of the industrial sector.

Industrial cooperation among developing countries

The UNIDO programme in support of economic and technical cooperation among developing countries (ECDC/TCDC) was given new direction in 1991 by the General Conference, which adopted a framework for a UNIDO-wide programme in the 1990s, whose 12 objectives anchored TCDC programming and project development in the priorities of the medium-term plan. Activities under the regional/subregional programme to promote industrial joint ventures among enterprises were also completed. In particular, an umbrella project covering cooperation among Arab Maghreb Union members in engineering, pharmaceuticals, textiles and leather, informatics and electronics, and agro-based industries was submitted for funding by UNDP.

Four technical workshops took place in 1991, on enterprise-to-enterprise cooperation meetings on machine tools (Fez, Morocco); process technology of petrochemical industries (Cairo, Egypt); agricultural machinery (Beijing, China); and agro-based industries (Izmir, Turkey).

Integration of women in industrial development

In 1991, the programme on the integration of women in industrial development continued to emphasize measures aimed at ensuring that women were increasingly considered as contributors and beneficiaries of UNIDO activities. The reference tile on the consideration of women in project design, management and evaluation was completed. An expert on women in industry was added to the Human Resource Study Unit of the Regional and Country Studies Branch of UNIDO. Likewise, experts on women in development were added to programming and industrial sector review missions. Cooperation with organizations of the United Nations system, such as the United Nations Development Fund for Women and the International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women, was also intensified, as was cooperation with national and international NGOs dealing with women in development.

Environment

During the year, UNIDO made significant efforts to incorporate environmental concerns into its activities. Under one environmental subprogramme, training continued to aim at further enabling UNIDO staff members to provide industry-related assistance with regard to the environment. Current activities were strengthened and new ones created under a subprogramme on assistance to developing countries in formulating industry-related environmental policies and legislation. Technical cooperation under the subprogrammes on promotion of clean technologies and on pollution abatement increased considerably.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, 1,386 staff members served at headquarters; 464 were in the Professional and higher categories and 922 in the General Service and related categories. Seven hundred and twenty-one staff members were women—96 Professionals and 625 in other grades. UNIDO was represented in developing countries by 40 UNIDO Country Directors, who worked with resident coordinators of UNDP.

Technical cooperation

Technical cooperation for the benefit of the developing countries continued to be the main activity of UNIDO, with the value of net approvals of projects amounting to $130.4 million in 1991, as compared to 162.7 million in 1990. Activities were largely financed by UNDP indicative planning figures. Other sources of financing included the UNDP Special Industrial Services programme (set up to respond to specific short-term, unforeseen requests of an urgent nature relating to industrial development), trust funds and self-financing arrangements, the Industrial Development Fund (IDF) and other funds, such as the United Nations International Drug Control Programme.

Budget

At its third session in 1989, the General Conference had approved the regular budget for the biennium 1990-1991 at a level of $180,481,500, to be financed from assessed contributions from member States, in both United States dollars and Austrian schillings. On the basis of an exchange rate of $1.00 = AS 12.90, member States were assessed $23,506,800 plus AS 1,718,425,770 (total equivalent of $156,718,100) for the biennium. Sources of finance were the member States-either directly through their assessed contributions and voluntary contributions to IDF and trust funds-or indirectly via voluntary programmes such as UNDP. NGos, including enterprises being assisted on a self-financing basis, may also contribute to IDF and trust funds.

Chapter XVIII

Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment (Havana, Cuba, November 1947–March 1948) drew up a charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) and established an Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO). The charter was never accepted and ITO was never established. While drawing up the charter, members of the Preparatory Committee negotiated tariffs among themselves and drew up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), which entered into force on 1 January 1948 with 23 Contracting Parties. Since then, ICITO has provided the GATT secretariat.

GATT is a multilateral instrument that sets out reciprocal rights and obligations for international trade. The governing body of GATT, the Session of Contracting Parties, usually meets once a year; its forty-seventh session was held on 3–4 December at Geneva.

During 1991, the number of Contracting Parties to GATT rose to 103 with the addition of El Salvador, Guatemala and Macau (see Annex I). The Contracting Parties accounted for about 90 per cent of all international trade; 28 other countries to whose territories GATT had been applied before their independence maintained a de facto application of GATT pending final decisions as to their future commercial policy. In addition, a number of countries, including some in Central and Eastern Europe, had expressed interest in GATT membership, and some had adopted GATT-based guidelines for their evolving trade regimes.

Multilateral trade negotiations

Uruguay Round

The Uruguay Round was launched in September 1986<sup>a</sup> at Punta del Este, Uruguay, when it was agreed to begin negotiations to further liberalize and expand world trade and to ensure that the multilateral trading system was capable of meeting the commercial realities and challenges of the future. Although originally scheduled to conclude by 1990, the negotiations continued into 1991.

In February, participants agreed on the basis for restarting negotiations after the partial failure of the Brussels (Belgium) Ministerial meeting in December 1990. The key to the resumption of negotiations was an agreement on the objectives of the agriculture negotiations in which participants undertook to achieve specific binding commitments in the following areas: domestic support, market access and export competition, and to reach an agreement on sanitary and phytosanitary issues.

In addition, the work programme was rationalized and regrouped into 7 areas of negotiation from the 15 envisaged in the 1986 Punta del Este declaration. They were agriculture; textiles and clothing; services; rule-making (including subsidies, anti-dumping, safeguards, rules of origin, preshipment inspection, GATT rules, multilateral trade negotiation (MTN) agreements and trade-related investment measures); trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights; dispute settlement and institutions; and market access (including tariffs, non-tariff measures (NTMs) and tropical products). The participants agreed on a new group structure based on those work areas and decided on chairmen. Following intensive negotiations, a Draft Final Act of the Uruguay Round was agreed upon on 20 December, with only a few areas reflecting the arbitration of individual chairmen where compromise had not been reached. The text set out some 28 specific agreements representing the potential results of the Uruguay Round in all areas except those relating to market access for goods and initial commitments in services.

Agriculture. The draft text on agriculture had four elements: a basic agreement and a supplemental agreement on the modalities for establishing specific binding commitments under a farm trade reform programme, a decision on the application of sanitary and phytosanitary measures, and a declaration on measures to assist developing countries that were net importers of food. The draft contained a list of export subsidies subject to reduction commitments. Those reductions would take place between 1993 and 1999 and would amount to 36 per cent in terms of budgetary outlays and 24 per cent in terms of quantities of subsidized exports. The least-developed countries would be exempt from all reduction commitments.

Textiles and clothing. The aim of these negotiations was to secure the eventual integration of the textiles and clothing sector—where trade was currently subject to bilateral quotas negotiated under the Multifibre Arrangement (MFA)—into GATT on the basis of strengthened GATT rules and disciplines. Assuming implementation of Uruguay commitments on 1 January 1993, each party 'would integrate into GATT specific products which accounted for not less than 12 per cent of its total volume of imports in 1990. Discussion continued on the possible integration of a further 4 per cent at the outset. Further integrations would take place in 1996, 2000 and 2003.

Services. A framework agreement on services was developed prior to the Brussels meeting in 1990; however, it was clarified, modified and completed through an intensive series of consultations in 1991. The Services Agreement, which formed part of the draft Final Act, consisted of three parts: a series of basic obligations which applied to all prospective parties; national schedules of commitments containing specific further national obligations which would be the subject of a continuing process of liberalization; and a number of annexes addressing the special situations of individual service sectors.

Rule-making. Although rule-making accounted for a large part of the Uruguay Round, much of the material before the rule-making group in 1991 had been agreed to and required only minor adjustments. The key areas of activity were anti-dumping, subsidies and countervailing measures, and, to a lesser extent, safeguards, the GATT balance-of-payments provisions and trade-related investment measures.

Trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights. While the 1990 draft document for the Uruguay Round included a comprehensive agreement on trade-related aspects of intellectual property rights, some sections had not been agreed on. The draft agreement recognized that widely varying standards in the protection and enforcement of those rights and the lack of a multilateral framework of principles, rules and disciplines dealing with international trade in counterfeit goods had been a growing source of tension in international economic relations. It therefore addressed the applicability of basic GATT principles and those of relevant international intellectual property agreements, the provision of adequate intellectual property rights and effective enforcement measures for those rights, multilateral dispute settlement and transitional arrangements.

Dispute settlement. The dispute settlement system of GATT had already been strengthened and streamlined as a result of reforms agreed upon at the Mid-Term Review Ministerial Meeting held in Montreal (Canada) in December 1989, with the understanding that a more comprehensive version of the system would be elaborated. The Understanding on GATT Articles XXII and XXIII that formed part of the draft Final Act covered every aspect of dispute settlement procedures, emphasizing the importance of consultations. The majority of cases not settled through consultations would be heard by GATT panels, procedures for which were set out in the draft Understanding.

Market access. Previously handled by several specific negotiating groups, the market access group brought together tariffs, NTMs, natural resource-based products and tropical products. The report of the group's chairman was submitted to the Trade Negotiating Committee in December. It noted that some major trading partners expected to exceed the tariff reduction target with substantial reductions covering high tariffs, tariff peaks and tariff-escalation situations. Negotiations aimed at eliminating tariffs on unprocessed tropical products and substantially reducing them on semi-processed tropical products were proceeding. Also, liberalization commitments were being negotiated by many developing countries, and general efforts were being made to eliminate or reduce NTMs. The group agreed to a work programme which was expected to lead to completion of the negotiations in March 1992.

implementation of the Tokyo Round agreements

The Tokyo Round (1973-1979) had concluded with a major package of tariff concessions, a series of new agreements on NTMs and an improved legal framework for GATT. Various committees, established at the conclusion of the Tokyo Round, continued to supervise tariff schedules, administer the new agreements and provide a forum for discussing related issues.

Between 1 July 1990 and 30 June 1991, the Committee on Anti-Dumping Practices was notified of 175 investigations initiated by parties to the Tokyo Round Agreement on Anti-Dumping Practices, up from 96 during the corresponding period the year before. Eleven of the 26 parties reported initiating actions during the period under review: the United States (52), Australia (46), Poland (24), European Communities (15), Mexico (13), Canada (12), New Zealand (6), Brazil (2), the Republic of Korea (2), Sweden (2) and Finland (1).

Between 1 July 1990 and 30 June 1991, 5 of the 24 signatories of the subsidies code reported the initiation of countervailing duty investigations to the Committee on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures: Australia (10), United States (8), Chile (2), Canada (1) and New Zealand (1). During the year, the Committee established three dispute-settlement panels to examine an exchange-rate insurance scheme implemented by Germany and applied to Deutsche Airbus; the United States countervailing measures on imports of Norwegian fresh and chilled Atlantic salmon; and United States measures affecting the export of softwood lumber from Canada.

During 1991, the Committee on Government Procurement continued negotiations aimed at improving and broadening the Agreement on Government Procurement, which had been at a stalemate. Informal working groups discussed questions of balance; the inclusion of government entities on a regional and local level and certain entities in the telecommunications, transport, energy and water management sectors; and the inclusion of services under the Agreement. The Committee established two panels in 1991, one on a dispute between the European Communities and the United States on procurement of a sonar mapping system by the United States National Science Foundation and the other on a dispute between the United States and Norway on the Trondheim (Norway) Toll Collection System.

During 1991, the Committee on Technical Barriers to Trade followed the debate on trade and the environment in the GATT Council. It discussed the need to ensure that standardization work at the national, regional and international level would advance the objectives of GATT and those of the International Standards Organization and the International Electrotechnical Commission.

During the year, the Committee on Customs Valuation studied the implementation of the customs valuation code by Australia, Cyprus and Malawi, and concluded examination of the amendments concerning the Republic of Korea's legislation.

Also during 1991, the Committee on Tariff Concessions pursued activities related to the introduction of the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System. In addition, the Committees on Import Licensing and Civil Aircraft and the International Meat and International Dairy Councils pursued their work programmes during the year.

Other GATT activities

Regular session of Contracting Parties

The Contracting Parties held their forty-seventh regular session on 3 and 4 December 1991. They received the annual reports of the Council of Representatives, the Committee on Trade and Development and other GATT bodies.

Council of Representatives

The Council of Representatives, GATT's highest body to meet between sessions of the Contracting Parties, became increasingly involved in trade-dispute-settlement issues during 1991. It established 4 dispute-settlement panels, as compared to 1 in 1990, bringing the number of active panels to 11. The 1991 panels examined countervailing duties imposed by the United States on Canadian pork; import, distribution and sale of certain alcoholic drinks by provincial marketing agencies in Canada (complaint by United States); United States restrictions on imports of tuna from Mexico; United States most-favoured-nation treatment of non-rubber footwear from Brazil; and United States measures relating to alcoholic and malt beverages. Six panels related to the Tokyo Round agreements on subsidies and anti-dumping procedures.

The disappointing record of implementation of panel recommendations since the start of the Uruguay Round was discussed by the Council. No additional implementation cases were added during the year to the 11 outstanding. However, the lack of progress meant that for more than two thirds of the panel reports adopted since the Uruguay Round began and which required domestic action to implement the recommendations, the Contracting Party that had received the recommendations had either postponed compliance or had not taken satisfactory action.

On 8 October, the Council reactivated the 1971 Group on Environmental Measures and International Trade, which examined trade provisions contained in existing multilateral environmental agreements, the multilateral transparency of national environmental regulations which were likely to have trade effects, and the trade effects of new packaging and labelling requirements aimed at protecting the environment.

In addition, on 12 November, the Council adopted the report of a working party that had examined the Canada-United States Free-Trade Agreement.

Trade and development

The Committee on Trade and Development reviewed and discussed trade issues of interest to developing countries. During its 1991 meetings in June and October, it reviewed developments in international trade and in the Uruguay Round, implementation of the provisions for differential and more favourable treatment of developing countries in trade policy, technical cooperation with developing countries in the context of the Uruguay Round, the link between trade and finance and the questions of credit and recognition for autonomous trade liberalization measures. The Sub-Committee on Trade of the Least-Developed Countries met in October to discuss the special concerns and problems of those countries in GATT, particularly as they related to the Uruguay Round.

Balance-of-payments restrictions

On 19 March, the Committee on Balance-of-Payments Restrictions held full consultations with Yugoslavia. Consultations under simplified procedures took place with Nigeria, the Philippines, Tunisia and Turkey on liberalization of trade and exchange restrictions. The Committee held consultations with Czechoslovakia regarding the country's introduction of a temporary surcharge on imports, which had become necessary due to the country's sharp deterioration in its balance-of-payments situation.

Four countries—Argentina, Brazil, Colombia and Peru—ended their use of GATT balance-of-payments provisions, bringing to seven the number of contracting parties that had done so since the launching of the Uruguay Round.

Textiles arrangement

Members of MFA accounted for most of the world's exports and imports of textiles and clothing. Under MFA, which became effective in January 1974, industrial countries negotiated quotas on imports of textiles and clothing from developing countries. The MFA's safeguard procedures permitted the introduction of restraints on textile imports in case of market disruption.

In July, the Textiles Committee decided to maintain MFA in force for an additional 17 months—from 1 August 1991 to 31 December 1992—the fourth such extension of the Arrangement. This was done with the expectation that the Uruguay Round, under which the textile and clothing sector would be integrated into GATT, would come into force on 1 January 1993. MFA membership rose to 41 in July, when Fiji was accepted as a signatory.

Technical cooperation

The Technical Cooperation Division continued to provide assistance to developing countries in all areas of GATT's work and to implement a programme aimed at facilitating more effective participation of developing countries in the Uruguay Round.

The Division organized 16 country missions and seminars in developing countries. In addition, two subregional workshops on tariff negotiations were held in September—in Dakar (Senegal) (for French-speaking African countries) and in Nairobi (Kenya) (for English-speaking African countries). In the same month, a specialized seminar on GATT and negotiations on maritime transport services was held in Abidjan (Côte d'Ivoire) for West and Central African countries, and a three-day briefing was given for African and least-developed countries on the latest developments of the Uruguay Round. In October, the second training course on GATT dispute-settlement procedures and practices was organized.

Training programme

From 1955 to the end of 1991, a total of 1,219 officials from 114 countries and 10 regional organizations had attended GATT commercial training courses. The principal aim of the courses was to help the participants to achieve a deeper understanding of trade policy matters and to acquire an up-to-date knowledge of GATT, its work and that of other international economic organizations, and to familiarize them with matters relating to the negotiations in the Uruguay Round. Two regular courses were organized, one in English and one in French.

The first Special Trade Policy Course, created to assist Central and East European countries with integration into the multilateral trade system, took place at Geneva from 27 May to 26 July. The course, financed by Switzerland, was designed for officials from Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Romania, the former Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

International Trade Centre

Established by GATT in 1964, the International Trade Centre (ITC) is a joint subsidiary organ of GATT and the United Nations, the latter acting through the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development. GATT and the United Nations contributed equally to the ITC regular budget, which totalled $16.6 million in 1991. The Centre's technical cooperation activities with developing countries in trade promotion amounted to $33.6 million during the year. Some 115 national, 60 regional and 120 interregional ITC projects were under implementation in 1991.

Publications

Publications issued in 1991 included the annual volumes of International Trade Report 1991, volumes I and II; three issues of Trade Policy Review, covering Europe, Hungary and Indonesia; and the newsletter GATT Focus, issued 10 times annually. Also published were The World Market Dairy Products and International Markets for Meat 1991/92.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1991, the GATT secretariat employed 440 staff members (including temporary posts connected with the Uruguay Round negotiations)—195 in the Professional and higher categories and 245 in the General Service category (see Annex II).

Budget

Member countries of GATT contributed to the budget in accordance with a scale assessed on the basis of each country's share in the total trade of the contracting parties and associated Governments. The budget for 1991 was SwF 78,724,802, or $107,065,731. (The United Nations rate of exchange in December was SwF 1.36 = $US 1.00.)

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971, and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven), including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organisation to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;

2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;

3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and

6. The Organization shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP
