GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting, without vote, on the recommendation of the Second Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/174 on 17 December 1985, requesting an update of a 1983 report(12) of the Secretary-General.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation
The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 33/18 of 10 November 1978, by which it accorded observer status to the Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation,

Recalling also its resolution 36/174 of 17 December 1981, in which it recognized the necessity of strengthening co-operation between the United Nations and the Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation, and its resolution 37/132 of 17 December 1982,

1. Requests the Secretary-General, in collaboration with the Secretary-General of the Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation, to update his report on co-operation between the United Nations and the Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit the updated report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, through the Economic and Social Council at its second regular session of 1986.

Other organizational matters

Work programme for 1985-1986

At its 1985 organizational session (New York, 5-8 February and 22 March), the Economic and Social Council considered its draft basic programme of work for 1985-1986, submitted by the Secretary-General,(13) as well as a draft provisional agenda for its first and second regular 1985 sessions and other decisions proposed by its President on behalf of the Bureau of the Council(14) and items and reports for inclusion in its programme of work for 1986.(15)

Following consideration of these documents, the Council adopted decision 1985/101, without vote, on 8 February. Before its adoption, the 1985 basic work programme had been orally revised; among the revisions, a subparagraph was included by which the Council would hold, on 8 or 9 May 1985, a solemn commemorative ceremony in observance of the fortieth anniversary of victory over nazism and fascism in the Second World War, in the light of a 1984 General Assembly resolution(16) (see p. 845).

By other provisions of section I of the decision, the Council approved the basic programme and provisional agenda for its 1985 first and second regular sessions and allocated items to its sessional committees and plenary meetings. It decided to consider at its first regular session any recommendations of the Commission on Transnational Corporations concerning the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Preparations for the Public Hearings on the Activities of Transnational Corporations in South Africa and Namibia. It decided to give priority consideration at its 1985 second regular session to the immediate and longer-term aspects of the critical economic situation in Africa, to consider interregional co-operation to promote and support economic and technical co-operation among developing countries, and to review in depth the report of the UNIDO Industrial Development Board and that of the World Food Council.

In addition, the Council decided: to consider in 1985 the Secretary-General's reports on the work of the Office of the United Nations Disaster Relief Co-ordinator and on implementation of the medium- and long-term recovery and rehabilitation programme in the Sudano-Sahelian region, and thereafter to consider those reports biennially in even-numbered years, and similarly that of the Council of the United Nations University as from 1986; to review at its 1986 organizational session the periodicity of annual reports submitted by the Secretariat to the General Assembly through the Council; to request the Secretary-General, in his reports to the Assembly through the Council, to draw attention to matters requiring Council action, in particular co-ordination questions; and to direct its subsidiary bodies to act on relevant 1984 Assembly resolutions and decisions.

Except for recommendations directly addressed to it, the Council decided not to consider proposals on the reports of the Governing Council of the United Nations Environment Programme, the Commission on Human Settlements and the Intergovernmental Committee on Science and Technology for Development; the same applied to those parts of the UNDP Governing Council report dealing with the United Nations Capital Development Fund, United Nations technical co-operation activities and the United Nations Volunteers programme.

By section II of the decision, the Council took note of a list of questions for inclusion in its 1986 work programme.

The Council held its first regular session in New York from 7 to 31 May and on 20 June, its second regular session at Geneva from 3 to 26 July, and its resumed second regular session in New York on 12 December. The First (Economic) and Second (Social) Committees and the Sessional Working Group of Governmental Experts on the Implementation of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights met during the first session; and the First and Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committees met during the second session.

Agenda of 1985 sessions

On 5 February 1985, the Economic and Social Council adopted the provisional agenda for its organizational session, which contained six items together with background information on each;(17) a Secretariat note added information on a changed venue for the 1985 session of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA), (18) which was the subject of a separate decision (decision 1985/109). At the opening of its first regular session on 7 May, the Council adopted the provisional agenda for that session-listing the same 20 items approved on 8 February by decision 1985/101—as annotated,(19) together with the proposed plan for the organization and schedule of its work,(20) as revised. The schedule of work was further revised on 14 May.(21)

By decision 1985/163, adopted without vote on 31 May, the Council approved the draft provisional agenda for its second regular session—which contained the same 23 items approved by decision 1985/101 and an additional item on elections—together with a suggested organization of work.(22) The agenda (23) as adopted on 3 July at the opening of the session was based on an annotated provisional agenda.(24)

Calendar of meetings

On 19 July, the Council's Third Committee approved the provisional calendar of conferences and meetings for 1986 and 1987,(25) as orally revised, with the exception of four entries on the 1986 calendar which were to be taken up directly in plenary meeting. Those entries concerned a reconvened special session of the Commission on TNCs and sessions of bodies of ECA and the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean; they were subsequently approved by the Council in the light of the recommendations of the First Committee.

On 26 July, acting on the recommendation of its Third Committee, the Council adopted without vote decision 1985/202 approving the calendar of conferences and meetings, as orally corrected, annexed to the Committee's report.(26)

Limitation of documentation

In May 1985,(27) the Secretariat reported on the state of preparedness of documentation for the first regular session of the Economic and Social Council, and in June(28) for its second regular session. The reports were submitted pursuant to 1979 Council resolutions(29) on the limitation of documentation and its circulation in all working languages six weeks in advance of Council sessions and those of its subsidiary bodies.

The reports noted that, to allow adequate time for clearances and editing, documents for the first session should have been submitted by 19 February and circulated by 26 March, and, for the second, by 17 April and circulated by 22 May. A table on the status of documentation annexed to each report showed the documents that failed to make the circulation dates; explanations for the delay were to be provided by the responsible offices.

In July, the Council took action on the question of summary records for its sessional committees and subsidiary bodies (see below).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of its Third Committee, the Economic and Social Council adopted decision 1985/200.

Summary records of sessional committees and subsidiary bodies of the Economic and Social Council

At its 52nd plenary meeting, on 26 July 1985, the Council, recalling its resolutions 1979/69 of 2 August 1979 and 1981/83 of 24 July 1981 and its decision 1983/184 of 29 July 1983, decided to maintain, for a further period of two years, from 1986, the discontinuance of summary records for its sessional committees (First (Economic) Committee, Second (Social) Committee and Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee) and for the following subsidiary bodies:

- Commission for Social Development;
- Commission on the Status of Women;
- Commission on Narcotic Drugs;
- Economic Commission for Europe;
- Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific;
- Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean;
- Economic Commission for Africa;
- Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations;

Committee on Natural Resources;
 Committee for Programme and Co-ordination;
 Commission on Transnational Corporations.

Economic and Social Council decision 1995/200

Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (E/1985/144) without vote, 18 July (meeting 18); draft orally proposed by Chairman, based on Secretarial note (E/1985/L.40); agenda item 23.

Financial implications of resolutions and decisions

In July, the Secretary-General submitted a summary of estimates of programme budget implications of resolutions and decisions adopted by the Economic and Social Council in 1985. The estimated costs for 1984-1985, 1986-1987 and 1988-1989, excluding conference-servicing costs, totalled $2,167,700. This figure was subject to change in the light of a review by the Assembly to determine how much of the costs might be absorbed within appropriations.

By decision 1985/205 of 26 July, the Council took note of the Secretary-General's report.

As later approved by the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, a net addition of $214,300 was made to the 1986-1987 budget to cover several 1985 Council actions having financial implications. This amount had been approved by the Fifth Committee on 2 December 1985 by a recorded vote of 88 to 1, with 4 abstentions, based on a recommendation of ACABQ.(31) In examining the Secretary-General's report revising his initial submission for the budget for as a whole,(32) ACABQ recommended that no action be taken on an amount requested ($167,400) to introduce Portuguese among the official working languages of ECA, pending clarification by the Council and ECA and consideration of the matter by the Assembly in 1986 (see Chapter VIII of this section).

The financial implications of Council resolutions and decisions requiring urgent action and supplementary needs for meetings in 1985 were to be covered by additional appropriations to be sought by the Secretary-General within the framework of the final performance report on the 1984-1985 programme budget, under the terms of a 1983 Assembly resolution(33) on unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; those arising from other Council resolutions and decisions were dealt with separately by the Fifth Committee when it considered the financial implications of Assembly resolutions on the same topics. Conference-servicing costs were also dealt with separately (see ADMINISTRATIVE AND BUDGETARY QUESTIONS, Chapter IV).

Report for 1985

The work of the Economic and Social Council at its organizational session and two regular sessions in 1985 was summarized in its annual report to the General Assembly. (34) Parts of the report were considered by the plenary Assembly, others by the Second, Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural), Fourth, Fifth and Sixth (Legal) Committees.

In December, the Assembly adopted without vote four decisions by which it took note of the chapters of the report, as follows: on 11 December, chapter I, following consideration of the related Sixth Committee report(35) (decision 40/423); on 17 December, chapters I, II, III (sections E to G, J and K), IV, VI, VIII and IX (sects. A, B, D and G to K), following consideration of the relevant Second Committee report(36) (decision 40/431); and on 18 December, chapters I, II, III (sects. F and H), VI (sect. E), VIII and IX (sects. A and B) (decision 40/458), considered in plenary meetings, and chapters I, IV (sects. D, G and J), V (sect. A), VI (sects. C, D and F), VII, VIII and IX (sects. J and L), as recommended by the Fifth Committee(37) (decision 40/462).

Other institutional arrangements

In 1985, the General Assembly for the first time considered and approved a biennial programme of work for the Second Committee, beginning with the biennium 1986-1987, to improve complementarity between the work of the Assembly and that of the Economic and Social Council.

Work programme of the Second Committee

In 1985, a draft biennial programme of work for 1986-1987 for the General Assembly's Second Committee<sup>(1)</sup> was before that Committee for consideration and approval. Submitted pursuant to a 1984 Assembly resolution requesting that such a submission be made each year,<sup>(2)</sup> the proposed work programme took into account the draft resolutions that had been approved or were pending action by the Second Committee during 1985.

The Committee Secretary, in addition to making several oral revisions to the draft to take account of decisions approved by the Committee, noted that later revisions would be made to take account also of any Committee action at the Assembly's resumed session in 1986. As to reports not envisaged in the draft programmes of either the Committee or the Economic and Social Council but requested in a draft proposal, the Secretariat would systematically inform Committee members of such cases to allow them to make an exception if they so desired. It would follow the same procedure with regard to proposals formulated by committees of the Assembly and the Council. Before a decision was taken on a draft resolution requesting a report, the Secretariat would also indicate whether that report could be completed in time for the session concerned.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Second Committee,<sup>(3)</sup> the General Assembly on 17 December 1985 adopted decision 40/436. By that decision, the Assembly approved the Committee's biennial programme of work, annexed to the decision, subject to Second Committee decisions to be adopted at the Assembly's resumed session in 1986 on unfinished work under agenda item 84, entitled "Development and international economic co-operation". The text had been orally proposed by the Second Committee Chairman, as orally amended by Bangladesh to include mention of resumed session decisions.

Also, in section II of resolution 40/243, the Assembly urged intergovernmental bodies reporting to the Second Committee that had not yet adjusted their meeting cycles to conform to that Committee's biennial programme of work to do so as soon as possible.

Trusteeship and decolonization

Chapter I

General questions relating to colonial countries

In 1985, the General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries) observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Assembly's adoption of the Declaration in 1960 by holding an extraordinary plenary session in Tunisia in May, preceded by two regional seminars. The Assembly itself held a special commemorative meeting in October.

In the year which also marked the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations—whose membership grew from 51 to 159 during that period—the Secretary-General stated in his annual report on the work of the Organization that the international community witnessed for the first time in history a world of independent sovereign States and a virtually universal world body. He told the Committee on colonial countries that the emergence, since the Declaration was adopted, of more than 80 million people from a dependent to a sovereign status was a historic achievement, in which the United Nations had played a central role.

In addition to the general question of decolonization, the Committee on colonial countries examined situations in the following individual Territories: Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands (see next chapter); Namibia (see Chapter III of this section); American Samoa, Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, East Timor, Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Guam, Montserrat, Pitcairn Islands, St. Helena, Tokelau, Turks and Caicos Islands, United States Virgin Islands, Western Sahara (see Chapter IV of this section).

In July, the Economic and Social Council reaffirmed the need for assistance by the United Nations system to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements (resolution 1985/59).

In December, the General Assembly, acting on recommendations by the Committee on colonial countries, again called on Member States to assist peoples under colonial rule in their struggle towards self-determination and independence (resolution 40/56), called on all States to terminate any investment in Namibia or loans to South Africa (40/52), requested the United Nations system to withhold from South Africa any form of co-operation and assistance (40/53) and condemned all military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration that were detrimental to the rights and interests of the colonial peoples concerned (decision 40/415). The Assembly also requested the Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of the Declaration (40/57), and called for wider dissemination of information on decolonization (40/58). As regards Non-Self-Governing Territories (NSGTs), the Assembly requested the administering Powers to transmit information as prescribed in the United Nations Charter as well as information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned (resolution 40/51). States were again invited to make offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories (40/55).

Topics related to this chapter. Africa: South Africa and apartheid. Namibia. Other colonial Territories.

The 1960 Declaration on colonial countries

In 1985, the international community observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption by the General Assembly of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(1)</sup>

The right of peoples to self-determination was reaffirmed in a number of communications in 1985, including a note verbale of 11 March from Yemen<sup>(2)</sup> transmitting the final communiqué and resolutions adopted at the Fifteenth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (Sanaa, 18-22 December 1984), and a 1 May letter from Indonesia<sup>(3)</sup> forwarding the Declaration of the Commemorative Meeting in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Asian-African Conference (Bandung, 24 and 25 April 1985).

Committee on colonial countries

The Committee on colonial countries, in addition to holding an extraordinary plenary session in Tunisia from 13 to 17 May (see below), met at United Nations Headquarters on 21 February and from 1 to 15 August.<sup>(4)</sup>

Its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance held 21 meetings as well as a number of informal meetings, between 25 February and 2 August; the Sub-Committee on Small Territories held 20 meetings and additional unofficial meetings, between 20 March and 25 June. Based on their recommendations, the Committee took action on the implementation of the Declaration by international organizations, on foreign interests and military bases impeding implementation of the Declaration in NSGTs, on dissemination of information on decolonization and on reports on the Territories supplied by their administering Powers and by visiting missions of the Committee (see Chapter IV of this section).

By a letter dated 9 January 1985 addressed to the President of the General Assembly,<sup>(5)</sup> Australia stated that the Committee's work had been reduced considerably because of the success of the decolonization process and, given its other commitments within the United Nations system, it had decided to withdraw from the Committee membership (see APPENDIX III).

Twenty-fifth anniversary (1985)

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. In 1985, the Committee on colonial countries observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the 1960 General Assembly Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (1) by holding two regional seminars and an extraordinary plenary session away from Headquarters, in accordance with the programme of activities adopted by the Assembly in 1984, (6)

The seminar for the Asia/Pacific region (Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea, 4-7 March)<sup>(7)</sup> focused on the implementation of the Declaration with respect to the remaining Territories with which the Committee was concerned and the dissemination of information on decolonization. It was attended by the following Committee members: Chile, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Fiji, Sweden, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, the USSR, the United Republic of Tanzania and Yugoslavia. The seminar for the Latin American region (Havana, Cuba, 8-10 April)<sup>(8)</sup> examined activities that might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration, such as those of foreign economic and other interests, and military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration. Committee members attending the seminar were Afghanistan, Bulgaria, China, the Congo, Cuba, India, Indonesia, the Ivory Coast, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia and Venezuela. Other participants in the seminars included some 35 representatives of non-governmental and intergovernmental organizations.

The Committee, at its extraordinary plenary session at Tunis, Tunisia (13-17 May), held a general debate, discussed and adopted a consensus decision on the question of Namibia, and adopted the conclusions and recommendations of the two regional seminars.

On 15 August, the Committee recommended to the Assembly the adoption of a resolution on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration.

Related activities. In pursuance of a 1984 Assembly request,<sup>(9)</sup> the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) undertook a wide range of activities, including organizing a media encounter at Tunis on 10 and 11 May, preceding the extraordinary session, and a journalists' encounter at United Nations Headquarters on 30 August.

In response to a 1984 Assembly resolution,<sup>(6)</sup> arrangements were made by the United Nations Postal Administration for the slogan cancellation, "Decolonization, Freedom, Independence," marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration, to be put into effect from 15 October 1985 until 14 January 1986.

Communications. A number of messages were received by the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries, or by the Secretary-General, on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary.

The Chairman received messages from Afghanistan, India, New Zealand, Sweden and Viet Nam.<sup>(10)</sup> Poland<sup>(11)</sup> transmitted to the Committee the text of a 5 July statement, delivered by the group of Eastern European countries in the Economic and Social Council.

In an October note with a later addendum,<sup>(12)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly messages received from China, Democratic Kampuchea, the German Democratic Republic, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Tunisia, Turkey, the USSR and Yugoslavia, and from the Organization of the Islamic Conference. A message was also received from the General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the USSR<sup>(13)</sup> to participants in the Assembly's commemorative meeting in October (see below). Canada transmitted the text of a resolution, adopted by the seventy-fourth Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Ottawa, 2-7 September),(14) on the contribution of parliaments towards terminating and consolidating the work of decolonization started 40 years earlier by the United Nations.

The Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September)(15) recalled the role the non-aligned movement had played in the struggle against colonialism; noted that most of the newly independent countries in recent decades had opted to join the movement; and demanded the immediate implementation of the Declaration and other relevant United Nations resolutions in the cases of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Micronesia, Namibia, New Caledonia, Puerto Rico, and other Territories.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 October, the General Assembly held a special meeting to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration. Statements were made at the meeting by the Assembly President, the Secretary-General, the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries, the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid, the Acting President of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the chairmen of the regional groups of Member States at the United Nations.

The Assembly President said the Committee's role as a focal point of the international community in support of the peoples under colonial rule had facilitated the emergence of independent States. The Secretary-General stated that, since the adoption of the Declaration in 1960, some 59 former colonial Territories with more than 80 million inhabitants had attained independence and joined the United Nations as sovereign Member States; the Organization had benefited from the principle of universality, from which flowed much of the authority for collective action. The Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries added that some 3 million people remained under colonial rule, over one third of whom lived in Namibia under repression. The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid said the Namibia situation was a classic colonial problem, and attempts to portray it in any other context should be repudiated. The Acting President of the Council for Namibia, asserting that the adoption of the Declaration was a historic step in the development of international law with regard to self-determination, called for rededication of energy to completing the unfinished task, focusing on Namibia.

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/56, proposed by the Committee on colonial countries.

Twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Having held, in the year of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, a special plenary meeting in observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, in which the peoples of the world proclaimed their determination to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Recalling also the relevant provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations.

Recalling its resolutions 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and 35/118 of 11 December 1980, the annex to which contains the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration,

Considering that the process of national liberation is irresistible and irreversible, and recalling that the Declaration solemnly proclaimed the necessity speedily and unconditionally to put an end to colonialism in all its forms and manifestations,

Recognising the significant and commendable role played by the United Nations, since its very inception, in the field of decolonization and noting the emergence, during this period, of about one hundred States into sovereign existence,

Noting with satisfaction, in particular, that during the past twenty-five years a large number of former colonial Territories have achieved independence, mainly through the courageous liberation struggle carried out by the peoples of those countries, led by their national liberation movements, and that many former Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories have exercised their right to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration,

Noting also with satisfaction the important contribution made by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in furthering the aims and objectives of the Declaration with a view to the liberation of peoples from colonial rule,

Noting further with satisfaction the active and important role being played by former colonial Territories, as States Members of the United Nations and members of the other organizations of the United Nations system in the realization of the purposes and principles of the Charter, the preservation of international peace and security, decolonization and the promotion of human progress, as well as the profound impact thereof on contemporary international relations,

Conscious of the fact that the Declaration has played an important role in assisting the peoples under colonial rule and will continue to serve as an inspiration in their efforts to achieve self-determination and independence in accordance with the Charter and in mobilizing world public opinion for the complete elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations,

Deeply concerned at the fact that, twenty-five years after the adoption of the Declaration, colonialism in the world has not yet been totally eradicated, particularly in Namibia,

Strongly condemning the continuing illegal occupation of Namibia and the colonial oppression of its people by the racist régime of Pretoria, which completely disregards the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination and independence,

Reaffirming that all peoples have the right to self-determination and independence and that the subjection of peoples to colonial domination constitutes a denial of fundamental human rights and is a serious impediment to the maintenance of international peace and security and the development of peaceful relations among nations,

Increasingly aware of the importance of economic, social and cultural development and self-reliance of colonial countries and peoples for the attainment and consolidation of genuine independence,

Convinced that the total eradication of racial discrimination, apartheid and violations of the basic human rights of the peoples in the remaining colonial Territories, particularly in Namibia, will be achieved peacefully and most expeditiously by the faithful and complete implementation of the Declaration,

Determined to take effective measures leading to the complete and unconditional elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations without further delay,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of all peoples under colonial rule to self-determination and independence in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

2. Declares that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations, including racism and apartheid, is incompatible with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration and the principles of international law;

3. Expresses its conviction that the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration should provide an opportunity for Member States to rededicate themselves to the principles and objectives enunciated in that document and for concerted efforts to be made to remove the last vestiges of colonialism in all regions of the world;

4. Strongly condemns South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia, its defiance of United Nations resolutions, its brutal repression of the Namibian people, its aggressive activities and acts of destabilization against neighbouring independent African States and its policies of apartheid, as well as its acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability, which constitute a threat to international peace and security;

5. Calls upon Member States, in particular colonial Powers, to take effective steps with a view to the complete, unconditional and speedy eradication of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations and to the faithful and strict observance of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as well as other relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and those of the Security Council;

6. Urges Member States to do their utmost to promote, in the United Nations and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, effective measures for the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in all colonial Territories to which the Declaration applies;

7. Calls upon Member States to render, as a matter of urgency, all moral and material assistance to the peoples under colonial rule in their struggle to exercise their right to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the Charter and the Declaration;

8. Urges the administering Powers and other Member States to ensure that the activities of foreign economic and other interests in colonial Territories do not run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories and do not impede the implementation of the Declaration;

9. Requests Member States to take legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that illegally own and operate enterprises, including transnational corporations, in the international Territory of Namibia in order to put an end to such operations;

10. Urges Member States to discontinue all economic, financial, trade and other relations with the racist minority régime of South Africa in respect of Namibia and to refrain from entering into any relations with South Africa which may lend legitimacy or support to its continued illegal occupation of that Territory;

11. Requests Member States, as well as the organizations of the United Nations system, to ensure that the permanent sovereignty of the colonial Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

12. Reaffirms that all administering Powers are obliged, under the Charter and in accordance with the Declaration, to create economic, social and other conditions in the Territories under their administration which will enable those Territories to achieve genuine independence and economic self-reliance;

13. Requests the administering Powers concerned to adopt the necessary measures to discourage or prevent any systematic influx of immigrants and settlers into the Territories under their administration which might disrupt the demographic composition of those Territories and prevent the genuine exercise of the right to self-determination and independence by their peoples, and to avoid any forced displacement, complete or partial, of the population of colonial Territories;

14. Further requests the administering Powers to preserve the cultural identity, as well as the national unity, of the Territories under their administration and to encourage the full development of the indigenous culture, with a view to facilitating the unfettered exercise of the right to self-determination and independence by the peoples of those Territories;

15. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of all kinds of military bases and installations in colonial Territories could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Powers concerned to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the peoples of the Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter and the Declaration;

16. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in the Territories under their administration;

17. Requests Member States, in particular the administering Powers, to adopt appropriate measures to prevent the recruitment, financing, training and transit of mercenaries in their territories for use against the national liberation movements struggling for freedom and independence from the yoke of colonialism, racism and apartheid;

18. Considers it incumbent upon the United Nations to continue to play an active role in the process of decolonization and to intensify its efforts for the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with a view to the further mobilization of international public opinion in support of complete decolonization;

19. Urges Member States to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

20. Invites the Security Council to continue to give special attention to the situation in and around Namibia and to consider imposing mandatory sanctions against South Africa under Chapter VII of the Charter;

21. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render, or continue to render, within their respective spheres of competence, all possible moral and material assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and to their national liberation movements, to take measures to withhold from the apartheid régime of South Africa any form of collaboration or assistance in the financial, economic and technical fields and to discontinue all support to that régime until the people of Namibia have exercised their right to self-determination and independence in a united Namibia and until apartheid has been eradicated and a non-racial, united and democratic State based on the will of all South African people has been established in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and the Security Council;

22. Invites non-governmental organizations having a special interest in the field of decolonization to intensify their activities in co-operation with the United Nations;

23. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine the full compliance of all States with resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on the question of decolonization, to seek the most suitable ways for the speedy and total application of the Declaration to all Territories to which it applies and to propose to the General Assembly specific measures for the complete implementation of the Declaration in the remaining colonial Territories;

24. Invites all States to co-operate fully with the Special Committee in the complete fulfilment of its mandate.

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 139-0-13 (recorded vote)

Draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23): agenda item 18.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: plenary 36, 96, 97, 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None

Abstaining: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, Portugal, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States asserted that the resolution clung to an outdated presumption that imperialism and colonial domination remained the predominant reality. The United Kingdom considered the resolution as being used to trumpet tendentious propositions about colonialism, and the United States saw it as serving the interests of those who sought to feed old resentments. The Netherlands and the United Kingdom viewed the text as almost equating colonialism with racial discrimination and human rights violations. Along with the Netherlands, which felt that the resolution was grating in its comments on the role played by the colonial Powers, the United States believed that the international community and the peoples of the Territories themselves deserved a large share of the credit for their achievements.

The Netherlands said the text suggested that independence was the only possible outcome of the exercise of the right to self-determination and that the situation in South Africa was colonial in nature. For the United Kingdom, the resolution also deflected attention from other, more pressing, matters, such as the military occupation of a small non-aligned country or the application of self-determination to Namibia. In the view of the United States, some provisions encouraged politicization of the United Nations specialized agencies, asserted principles of sovereignty over resources in Territories contrary to internationally accepted principles and called for action in southern Africa under the Charter contrary to United States policy.

Australia, Austria, Canada, Finland (on behalf of the five Nordic countries) and Portugal had reservations about certain elements. Japan expressed reservations on paragraphs 20 and 21. Italy felt that the commemorative character of the text would have been better served by avoiding some elements, such as those in paragraphs 10, 19, 20 and 21.

In related action, the Assembly, by resolution 40/164 A, drew attention to the conclusions and recommendations adopted by the Committee on colonial countries at its Tunis session and to the need for intensified public-information dissemination activities.

Implementation of the Declaration

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly again called for the implementation of its 1960 Declaration when it adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/57.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples
The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration, and 35/118 of 11 December 1980, the annex to which contains the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration,

Recalling all its previous resolutions concerning the implementation of the Declaration, in particular resolution 39/91 of 14 December 1984, as well as the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Having adopted resolution 40/56 of 2 December 1985 on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Reiterating its conviction that the total eradication of racial discrimination, apartheid and violations of the basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories will be achieved most expeditiously by the faithful and complete implementation of the Declaration, particularly in Namibia, and by the speediest possible complete elimination of the presence of the illegal occupying régime therefrom,

Recalling the consensus on Namibia, adopted by the Special Committee at its extraordinary session held at Tunis from 13 to 17 May 1985 and the relevant provisions of the Declaration and Programme of Action contained in the Final Document adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985,

by the Government of South Africa through its persistent, illegal occupation of the international Territory and its intransigent attitude towards all efforts being made to bring about an internationally acceptable solution to the situation obtaining in the Territory,

Deeply conscious of the urgent need to take all necessary measures to eliminate forthwith the last vestiges of colonialism, particularly in respect of Namibia where desperate attempts by South Africa to perpetuate its illegal occupation have brought untold suffering and bloodshed to the people,

Strongly condemning the policies of those States which, in defiance of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, have continued to collaborate with the Government of South Africa in its domination of the people of Namibia,

Conscious that the success of the national liberation struggle and the resultant international situation have provided the international community with a unique opportunity to make a decisive contribution towards the total elimination of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations in Africa,

Noting with satisfaction the work accomplished by the Special Committee with a view to securing the effective and complete implementation of the Declaration and the other relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Noting also with satisfaction the co-operation and active participation of the administering Powers concerned in the relevant work of the Special Committee, as well as the continued readiness of the Governments concerned to receive United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under their administration,

Keenly aware of the pressing need of the newly independent and emerging States for assistance from the United Nations and its system of organizations in the economic, social and other fields,

1. Reaffirms its resolution 1514(XV) and all other resolutions on decolonization and calls upon the administering Powers, in accordance with those resolutions, to take all necessary steps to enable the dependent peoples of the Territories concerned to exercise fully and without further delay their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

2. Affirms once again that the continuation of colonialism in all its forms and manifestations—including racism, apartheid, those activities of foreign economic and other interests contrary to the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, as well as the violations of the right to self-determination and basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories and continuous policies and practices to suppress legitimate national liberation movements—is incompatible with the Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and poses a serious threat to international peace and security;

3. Reaffirms its determination to take all necessary steps with a view to the complete and speedy eradication of colonialism and to the faithful and strict observance by all States of the relevant provisions of the Charter, the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the guiding principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;

4. Affirms once again its recognition of the legitimacy of the struggle of the peoples under colonial and alien domination to exercise their right to self-determination and independence by all the necessary means at their disposal;

5. Approves the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples covering its work during 1985, including the programme of work envisaged for 1986;

6. Calls upon all States, in particular the administering Powers, as well as the specialized agencies and other organisations of the United Nations system within their respective spheres of competence, to give effect to the recommendations contained in the report of the Special Committee for the speedy implementation of the Declaration contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

7. Condemns the continuing activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration with respect to the colonial Territories, particularly Namibia;

8. Strongly condemns all collaboration, particularly in the nuclear and military fields, with the Government of South Africa and calls upon the States concerned to cease forthwith all such collaboration;

9. Requests all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to withhold assistance of any kind from the Government of South Africa until the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination and independence within a united and integrated Namibia, including Walvis Bay, has been restored, and to refrain from taking any action which might imply recognition of the legitimacy of the illegal occupation of Namibia by that régime;

10. Calls upon the colonial Powers to withdraw immediately and unconditionally their military bases and installations from colonial Territories, to refrain from establishing new ones and not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States;

11. Urges all States, directly and through their action in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, to provide all moral and material assistance to the oppressed people of Namibia and, in respect of the other Territories, requests the administering Powers, in consultation with the Governments of the Territories under their administration, to take steps to enlist and make effective use of all possible assistance, on both a bilateral and a multilateral basis, in the strengthening of the economies of those Territories;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue to seek suitable means for the immediate and full implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) in all Territories that have not yet attained independence and, in particular:

(a) To formulate specific proposals for the elimination of the remaining manifestations of colonialism and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

(b) To make concrete suggestions which could assist the Security Council in considering appropriate measures under the Charter with regard to developments in colonial Territories that are likely to threaten international peace and security;

(c) To continue to examine the compliance of Member States with resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions on decolonization, particularly those relating to Namibia;

(d) To continue to pay special attention to the small Territories, in particular through the dispatch of visiting missions to those Territories whenever the Special Committee deems it appropriate, and to recommend to the General Assembly the most suitable steps to be taken to enable the populations of those Territories to exercise their right to self-determination and independence;

(e) To take all necessary steps to enlist world-wide support among Governments, as well as national and international organizations having a special interest in decolonization, for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration and the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, particularly as concerns the oppressed people of Namibia;

13. Calls upon the administering Powers to continue to co-operate with the Special Committee in the discharge of its mandate and, in particular, to permit the access of visiting missions to the Territories to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants;

14. Requests the Secretary-General and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to provide or continue to provide to the newly independent and emerging States all possible assistance in the economic, social and other fields;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the facilities and services required for the implementation of the present resolution, as well as of the various resolutions and decisions on decolonization adopted by the General Assembly and the Special Committee.

General Assembly resolution 40/57

23-nation draft (A/40/L.21 & Add.1); agenda item 18.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Algeria, Byelorussian SSR, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, India, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Sierra Leone, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 50; plenary 36, 96, 97, 99. Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Thailand, Togo, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Luxembourg, Malawi.

In explanation of vote, Israel and the United States expressed their opposition to singling out countries for selective condemnation; such reference was made in the reports endorsed in the text. The United Kingdom said the language of the text was disobliging, ungenerous and took scant account of the real needs and wishes of dependent peoples. Owing to the inclusion of what it considered to be unnecessarily repetitive and excessively polemical phraseology, Canada could not support the resolution.

Reservations on paragraph 2 were expressed by Australia, which did not believe the existence of NSGTs constituted a threat to international peace and security, and by New Zealand, which declared that the reference to violations of the right to self-determination and basic human rights of the peoples of colonial Territories did not apply to Tokelau, the one remaining NSGT for which New Zealand still had responsibility. Australia, Austria, Finland (on behalf of the five Nordic countries), Japan, the Netherlands and New Zealand expressed reservations on paragraph 4, saying that the United Nations should encourage only peaceful settlement of disputes. Reservations on paragraph 10 were expressed by Ireland, Japan and the Netherlands. Turkey found the draft lacking in balance, as did the Nordic countries, which added that the text should have been restricted to those activities detrimental to the rights of the peoples of NSGTs. Japan also had reservations on paragraphs 5, 6 and 7, and the Netherlands on paragraphs 2, 7 and 8.

In 1985, the Assembly also adopted resolutions on the universal realization of the right of peoples to self-determination (resolution 40/24), and on the importance of the universal realization of that right and of the speedy granting of independence for the effective guarantee and observance of human rights (40/25). In addition, the Assembly declared the use of force in attempts to prevent the implementation of the Declaration as incompatible with the idea of international co-operation for disarmament (40/152 D), and urged Member States to take effective measures for the speedy completion of the implementation of the Declaration (40/158).

Implementation by international organizations

Report of the Secretary-General. By a May report with a later addendum,<sup>(16)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly summaries of information submitted by 14 specialized agencies and institutions associated with the United Nations, in response to several 1984 Assembly requests-on action taken in implementation of the Declaration<sup>(17)</sup> and on action taken or envisaged with regard to Namibia.<sup>(18)</sup>

Those providing information were: International Labour Organisation; the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations; the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO); the World Health Organization; the World Bank; the International Civil Aviation Organization; the Universal Postal Union; the World Intellectual Property Organization; the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development; and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). The International Atomic Energy Agency responded, as did the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Food Programme.

Report of the President of the Economic and Social Council. In a June report,<sup>(19)</sup> the Economic and Social Council President reviewed his continuing consultations with the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries concerning the implementation of the Declaration by the United Nations system. They noted that, according to the Secretary-General's report,<sup>(16)</sup> an increasing number of organizations had extended or formulated programmes of assistance from within their own budgetary resources, in addition to intensifying their collaboration with UNDP as an executing agency. They considered it imperative, however, that efforts be intensified to provide moral and material assistance to the oppressed peoples of Namibia and South Africa.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council adopted by roll-call vote resolution 1985/59, as recommended by its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The Economic and Social Council,

Bearing in mind that 1985 marks the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, as well as the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General and the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council concerning the question of the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations,

Having heard the statements of the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the representative of the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid,

Recalling General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and

Peoples, and all other resolutions adopted by United Nations bodies on this subject, including in particular Assembly resolution 39/43 of 5 December 1984 and Council resolution 1984/55 of 25 July 1984,

Deeply concerned that the objectives of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration have not been fully achieved as regards the peoples under colonial and alien domination, particularly those struggling in Namibia and South Africa under the repressive rule of the racist régime of Pretoria,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system to take all effective measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to assist in the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies,

Noting with deep concern that South Africa presents a serious and continuing threat to international peace and security owing to its practice of apartheid, its illegal occupation of Namibia and its acts of aggression and destabilization against the front-line and neighbouring States,

Recalling Security Council resolution 566(1985) of 19 June 1985, in which the Council, inter alia, condemned the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim Government in Namibia and declared that action to be illegal and null and void,

Reaffirming that the denial of full political and civil rights to the majority of the population of South Africa is the result of the continuation of a colonial situation in that country,

Deeply conscious of the continuing critical need of the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, for concrete assistance from the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations in their struggle for liberation from the illegal occupation of their country by the racist minority régime of South Africa,

Appreciating that progress has been maintained through the continuing efforts of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in the extension of assistance to refugees from southern Africa,

Deeply concerned that the action taken thus far by the organizations and agencies concerned in the provision of assistance generally to the people of Namibia is still far from adequate to meet their urgent and growing needs,

Gravely concerned at the continued collaboration of the International Monetary Fund with the Government of South Africa, in disregard of relevant General Assembly resolutions,

Noting with satisfaction the continuing efforts of the United Nations Development Programme in the extension of assistance to the national liberation movements concerned, and commending the initiative taken by that organization in establishing channels for closer, periodic contacts and consultations between the specialized agencies and United Nations institutions and the Organization of African Unity and the national liberation movements in the formulation of assistance programmes,

Bearing in mind the document on Namibia adopted by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples at its extraordinary session, held at Tunis from 13 to 17 May 1985, and the Declaration and the Programme of Action adopted at Vienna on 7 June 1985 by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings,

1. Takes note of the report of the President of the Economic and Social Council and endorses the observations and suggestions contained therein;

2. Reaffirms that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entails, as a corollary, the extension by the United Nations system of organizations of all the necessary moral and material assistance to the peoples of Namibia and South Africa and their national liberation movements;

3. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and organizations within the United Nations system which have continued to co-operate in varying degrees with the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity in the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies, and urges all the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system, in particular the World Bank and the International Finance Corporation and the International Monetary Fund, to contribute to the full and speedy implementation of the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

4. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system, in the light of the intensification of the liberation struggle in Namibia, to do everything possible as a matter of urgency to render increased assistance to the people of Namibia, in consultation with the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations Council for Namibia, in particular in connection with the Nationhood Programme for Namibia;

5. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system, in view of the deteriorating situation in South Africa and the acts of aggression and destabilization by the apartheid régime against States in the region, to increase their assistance to the front-line and neighbouring States and to the liberation movements in South Africa;

6. Also requests the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system to continue to take, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, all necessary measures to withhold any financial, economic, technical or other assistance from the Government of South Africa until that Government restores to the people of Namibia their inalienable right to self-determination and independence, and to refrain from taking any action which might imply recognition of, or support for, the illegal occupation of Namibia by that régime;

7. Further requests the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council on the apartheid policy of the Government of South Africa, to intensify their support for the oppressed people of South Africa and to take such measures as will totally isolate the apartheid régime and mobilize world public opinion against apartheid;

8. Condemns the persistent non-compliance of the Government of South Africa with United Nations resolutions and decisions, in particular Security Council resolution 435(1978) of 29 September 1978 containing the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, and declares illegal and null and void its installation on 17 June 1985 of a so-called interim Government at Windhoek;

9. Deeply deplores the persistent collaboration of the International Monetary Fund with the Government of South Africa, in disregard of repeated General Assembly resolutions to the contrary, and urgently calls upon the Fund to put an end to such collaboration;

10. Recommends that a separate item on assistance to national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity should be included in the agenda of future high-level meetings of the General Secretariat of the Organization of African Unity and the secretariats of the United Nations and other organizations within the United Nations system, with a view to strengthening further the existing measures for co-ordination of action to ensure the best use of available resources for assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories;

11. Notes with satisfaction the inclusion of Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, in the membership of various agencies and organizations within the United Nations system and urges those which have not yet granted full membership to the United Nations Council for Namibia to do so without delay;

12. Notes with satisfaction also the arrangements made by several specialized agencies and United Nations institutions which enable representatives of the national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity to participate fully as observers in proceedings relating to matters concerning their respective countries, and calls upon those international institutions which have not yet done so to follow that example and make the necessary arrangements without delay, including arrangements to defray the costs of the participation of those representatives;

13. Recommends that all States should intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system of which they are members to ensure the full and effective implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies;

14. Urges those specialized agencies and organizations within the United Nations system which have not already done so to include in the agenda of the regular meetings of their governing bodies a separate item on the progress made and action to be taken by those organizations in their implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of United Nations bodies;

15. Also urges the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations within the United Nations system to formulate, with the active co-operation of the Organization of African Unity, and to submit, as a matter of priority, to their governing and legislative organs concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant United Nations decisions;

16. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution and to the discussions on the subject at the second regular session of 1985 of the Economic and Social Council;

17. Requests the President of the Economic and Social Council to continue consultations on these matters with the Chairman of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid and to report thereon to the Council;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to follow the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the Council at its second regular session of 1986;

19. Decides to keep these questions under continuous review.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1985/59

26 July 1985 Meeting 52 39-1-9 (roll-call vote)

Approved by Third Committee (E/1985/138) by vote (36-1-8), 12 July (meeting 10); 17-nation draft (E/1985/C.3/L.1/Rev.1); agenda item 21.

Sponsors: Algeria, Bangladesh, China, Ethiopia, Ghana, Haiti, India, Indonesia, Lebanon, Malaysia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Yugoslavia.

Roll-call vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Argentina, Bangladesh, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Guinea, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Lebanon, Malaysia, Mexico, Morocco, Nigeria, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Sweden, Thailand, Turkey, Uganda, USSR, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zimbabwe

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Spain, United Kingdom.

Before the draft was approved by the Third Committee, separate votes were taken on the seventh (36 in favour to 2 against, with 7 abstentions) and thirteenth (roll-call vote of 32-2-11) preambular paragraphs, and on operative paragraphs 3 (36-2-7), 6 (36-2-7), 7 (36-2-7) and 9 (roll-call vote of 32 to 3, with 10 abstentions). The USSR had suggested, and subsequently withdrew, a proposal to insert a new fifth preambular paragraph expressing the conviction that colonialism prevented the development of international economic co-operation, hindered the development of dependent peoples and militated against the United Nations ideal of universal peace.

The Council-taking separate votes on paragraphs at the request of the United Kingdom, and roll-call votes on the thirteenth preambular paragraph and on the text as a whole at the request of Zimbabwe-adopted the seventh. preambular paragraph by 31 to 2, with 8 abstentions; the thirteenth preambular paragraph by 31 to 2 (the United Kingdom, the United States), with 12 abstentions; operative paragraph 3 by 31 to 2, with 8 abstentions; paragraph 6 by 33 to 2, with 9 abstentions; paragraph 7 by 36 to 2, with 8 abstentions; paragraph 9 by 35 to 3, with 11 abstentions; and the text as a whole by 39 to 1, with 9 abstentions.

Luxembourg, on behalf of the Western European countries members of the Council, said that, rather than isolating South Africa, means of communication should be maintained to persuade it to reject apartheid; moreover, the independence of IMF should be respected, and the reference to the World Bank was unjustified. Spain said the terms used in the text, and the reference to IMF and the Bank, made it abstain. Canada and the United States did not believe the text represented the best way of eliminating apartheid. Bulgaria, on behalf of the Eastern European countries members of the Council, said the text would have had greater impact if it had condemned and called for an end to assistance by Western countries to Pretoria.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries continued in August 1985(4) to consider the role of the specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies in implementing the 1960 Declaration. It endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance which, among other things, took note of information from the World Bank that it had made no loans to South Africa since 1966 and that all links with regard to previous loans had ended. The Committee also drafted a resolution which it recommended the Assembly adopt.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/53, drafted by the Committee on colonial countries and recommended by the Fourth Committee.

Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples by the specialized agencies and the international institutions associated with the United Nations",

Recalling the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, and the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/118 of 11 December 1980, as well as all other relevant resolutions adopted by the General Assembly on this subject, including in particular resolution 39/43 of 5 December 1984,

Having examined the reports submitted on the item by the Secretary-General, the Economic and Social Council and the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling also its resolutions ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981 and 39/50 of 12 December 1984 on the question of Namibia,

Taking into account the relevant provisions of the Paris Declaration on Namibia and the Programme of Action on Namibia, adopted at the International Conference in Support of the Struggle of the Namibian People for Independence, and the Declaration and Programme of Action contained in the Final Document adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the Political Declaration adopted by the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983, the Final Document of the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on the question of Namibia, held at New Delhi from 19 to 21 April 1985, and other documents of the Co-ordinating Bureau,

Aware that the struggle of the people of Namibia for self-determination and independence is in its crucial stage and has sharply intensified as a consequence of the stepped-up aggression of the illegal colonialist régime of Pretoria against the people of the Territory and the increased general support rendered to that régime by certain Western countries, and the so-called policy of constructive engagement, coupled with efforts to deprive the Namibian people of their hard-won victories in the liberation struggle, and that it is therefore incumbent upon the entire international community decisively to intensify concerted action in support of the people of Namibia and their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization, for the attainment of their goal,

Concerned that the policy of "constructive engagement" with the apartheid régime of South Africa, linked with the economic and military collaboration maintained by some Western countries and Israel with Pretoria, has only encouraged and strengthened the racist régime in its continued illegal occupation and massive militarization and exploitation of Namibia in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations,

Gravely concerned at the continued imperialist and neo-colonialist support for South Africa's oppressive and aggressive policies in Namibia and with respect to independent States in southern Africa, in particular the front-line States, as exemplified by the discussions and resolutions of the Security Council,

Conscious of the worsening of the situation in southern Africa because of South Africa's racist policies of oppression, aggression and occupation, which constitute a clear threat to world peace and security,

Deeply conscious of the continuing critical need of the Namibian people and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, and of the peoples of other colonial Territories for concrete assistance from the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in their struggle for liberation from colonial rule and in their efforts to achieve and consolidate their national independence,

Deeply concerned that, although there has been progress in the extension of assistance to refugees from Namibia, the action taken hitherto by the organizations concerned in providing assistance to the people of the Territory through their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, still remains inadequate to meet the urgent and growing needs of the Namibian people,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to take all the necessary measures, within their respective spheres of competence, to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, particularly those relating to the provision of moral and material assistance, on a priority basis, to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements,

Expressing its firm belief that closer contacts and consultations between the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system on the one hand and the Organization of African Unity and the South West Africa People's Organization on the other will help those agencies and organizations to overcome procedural and other difficulties which have impeded or delayed the implementation of some assistance programmes,

Recalling its resolution 39/50 C of 12 December 1984 requesting all specialized agencies and other organizations and conferences of the United Nations system to grant full membership to the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia,

Expressing its appreciation to the General Secretariat of the Organization of African Unity for the continued co-operation and assistance it has extended to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in connection with the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Expressing its appreciation also to the Governments of the front-line States for the steadfast support extended to the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, in their just and legitimate struggle for the attainment of freedom and independence, despite increased armed attacks by the forces of the racist régime of South Africa, and aware of the particular needs of those Governments for assistance in that connection,

Commending the continued substantial contribution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and the effective support it provides to the liberation movements in educating the populations of colonial Territories concerning self-determination and independence,

Noting the support given by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to the implementation of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 32/9 A of 4 November 1977,

Deploping the continued links with and assistance rendered to South Africa by certain specialized agencies in the financial, economic, technical and other fields in contravention of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, thus enhancing neo-colonialist practices in the system of international relations,

Gravely concerned at the continued collaboration between the International Monetary Fund and the Government of South Africa in disregard of relevant General Assembly resolutions, in particular resolution 37/2 of 21 October 1982,

Mindful of the imperative need to keep under continuous review the activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in the implementation of the various United Nations decisions relating to decolonization,

Bearing in mind the importance of the activities of non-governmental organizations aimed at putting an end to the assistance which is still being rendered to South Africa by some specialized agencies, and taking into account the consultations held by the Special Committee with non-governmental organizations and the relevant conclusions and recommendations on the seminars held by the Special Committee with non-governmental organizations at Port Moresby from 4 to 7 March 1985 and at Havana from 8 to 10 April 1985,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the question;

2. Reaffirms that the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system should continue to be guided by the relevant resolutions of the United Nations in their efforts to contribute, within their spheres of competence, to the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reaffirms also that the recognition by the General Assembly, the Security Council and other United Nations organs of the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples to exercise their right to self-determination and independence entails, as a corollary, the extension by the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of all the necessary moral and material assistance to those peoples and their national liberation movements;

4. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system which have continued to co-operate in varying degrees with the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and urges all the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to accelerate the full and speedy implementation of the relevant provisions of those resolutions;

5. Expresses its concern that the assistance extended thus far by certain specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to the colonial peoples, particularly the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, is far from adequate in relation to the actual needs of the peoples concerned;

6. Requests all specialized agencies and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, to take all necessary measures to withhold from the racist régime of South Africa any form of co-operation and assistance in the financial, economic, technical and other fields and to discontinue all support to that régime until the people of Namibia have exercised fully their inalienable right to self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia and until the inhuman system of apartheid has been totally eradicated;

7. Reiterates its conviction that the specialized agencies and other organizations and bodies of the United Nations system should refrain from taking any action which might imply recognition of, or support for, the legitimacy of the domination of the Territory of Namibia by the racist régime of South Africa;

8. Regrets that the World Bank and also the International Monetary Fund continue to maintain links with the racist régime of Pretoria, as exemplified by the continued participation of South Africa in the work of both agencies, and expresses the view that the two agencies should put an end to all links with the racist régime;

9. Strongly condemns the persistent collaboration between the International Monetary Fund and South Africa in disregard of repeated resolutions to the contrary by the General Assembly, and calls upon the International Monetary Fund to put an end to such collaboration and not to grant any new loans to the racist régime of South Africa;

10. Urges once again the executive heads of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to draw the particular attention of their governing bodies to the present resolution with a view to formulating specific programmes beneficial to the peoples of the colonial Territories, particularly Namibia;

11. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render or continue to render, as a matter of urgency, all possible moral and material assistance to the colonial peoples struggling for liberation from colonial rule, bearing in mind that such assistance should not only meet their immediate needs but also create conditions for development after they have exercised their right to self-determination and independence;

12. Requests once again the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to continue provide all moral and material assistance to the newly independent and emerging States so as to enable them to achieve genuine economic independence;

13. Reiterates its recommendation that the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system should initiate or broaden contacts and co-operation with the colonial peoples and their national liberation movements directly or, where appropriate, through the Organization of African Unity, and review, and introduce greater flexibility in, their procedures with respect to the formulation and preparation of assistance programmes and projects so as to be able to extend the necessary assistance without delay to help the colonial peoples and their national liberation movements in their struggle to exercise their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

14. Recommends that a separate item on assistance to national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity should be included in the agenda of future high-level meetings between the General Secretariat of the Organization of African Unity and the secretariats of the United Nations and other organizations of the United Nations system with a view to strengthening further the existing measures of co-ordination of action to ensure the best use of available resources for assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories;

15. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not already done so to include in the agenda of the regular meetings of their governing bodies a separate item on the progress they have made in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and the other relevant resolutions of the United Nations;

16. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to extend, as a matter of priority, substantial material assistance to the Governments of the front-line States in order to enable them to support more effectively the struggle of the people of Namibia for freedom and independence and to resist the violation of their territorial integrity by the armed forces of the racist régime of South Africa directly or, as in Angola and Mozambique, through puppet traitor groups in the service of Pretoria;

17. Notes with satisfaction the arrangements made by several specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system which enable representatives of the national liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity to participate fully as observers in the proceedings relating to matters concerning their respective countries, and calls upon those agencies and organizations that have not yet done so to follow this example and to make the necessary arrangements without delay;

18. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to assist in accelerating progress in all sectors of the national life of colonial Territories, particularly in the development of their economies;

19. Requests the specialized agencies to abide by Security Council resolution 566(1985) of 19 June 1985, in which the Council condemned the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim Government in Namibia and declared that action to be illegal and null and void;

20. Recommends that all Governments should intensify their efforts in the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system of which they are members to ensure the full and effective implementation of General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) and other relevant resolutions of the United Nations and, in that connection, should accord priority to the question of providing assistance on an emergency basis to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements;

21. Reiterates its proposal, under article III of the Agreement between the United Nations and the International Monetary Fund, for the urgent inclusion in the agenda of the Board of Governors of the Fund of an item dealing with the relationship between the Fund and South Africa, and further reiterates its proposal that, in pursuance of article II of the Agreement, the relevant organs of the United Nations should participate in any meeting of the Board of Governors called by the Fund for the purpose of discussing the item, and urges the Fund to discuss its relationship with South Africa at its annual meeting, in compliance with the above-mentioned Agreement, and to report to the Secretary-General of the United Nations on the action taken;

22. Draws the attention of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in the annex to

General Assembly resolution 35/118, in particular to those provisions calling upon the agencies and organizations to render all possible moral and material assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and to their national liberation movements;

23. Urges the executive heads of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, having regard to the provisions of paragraphs 13 and 22 above, to formulate, with the active co-operation of the Organization of African Unity where appropriate, and to submit, as a matter of priority, to their governing and legislative organs concrete proposals for the full implementation of the relevant United Nations decisions, in particular specific programmes of assistance to the peoples of the colonial Territories and their national liberation movements;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to assist the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in working out appropriate measures for implementing the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and to prepare for submission to the relevant bodies, with the assistance of those agencies and organizations, a report on the action taken in implementation of the relevant resolutions, including the present resolution, since the circulation of his previous report;

25. Request the Economic and Social Council to continue to consider, in consultation with the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, appropriate measures for co-ordination of the policies and activities of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system in implementing the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

26. Requests the specialized agencies to report periodically to the Secretary-General of the United Nations on their implementation of the present resolution;

27. Requests the Special Committee to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

General Assembly resolution 40/53

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 125-3-22 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/885) by recorded vote (119-3-25), 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda items 12 and 111.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11, 12, 15-20; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa, Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe, Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden,

In the Assembly's Fourth Committee, an amendment<sup>(20)</sup> proposed by Israel to delete the words "and Israel" from the eighth preambular paragraph was rejected by a recorded vote of 77 to 40, with 26 abstentions.

In explanation of vote on the amendment, objections to the arbitrary or selective condemnation of certain countries were voiced by Australia, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Greece, Honduras, Japan, the Netherlands, Singapore, the United Kingdom and the United States. Saying that the selective condemnation of Israel had originated from an ally of the USSR, the United States referred to a 1984 report on operational activities of the United Nations system,<sup>(21)</sup> according to which 91 per cent of the total contributions by Member States to the regular budgets of the agencies and organizations of the United Nations system was paid by the Western countries, 8 per cent by the developing countries and 1 per cent by the USSR and the Eastern European countries; it was easy to deduce from those figures which States wished to politicize the activities of the specialized agencies, the United States said. Voting against the amendment, Iran asserted that Israel's collaboration with South Africa constituted a virtual alliance which threatened international peace and security. Oman, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates voted in like manner.

On the text as a whole, serious reservations or objections were expressed by Australia, Canada, France, Sweden (for the five Nordic countries) and the United Kingdom to the draft's disregard of the autonomy, impartiality and universality of the specialized agencies. The Netherlands objected to the criticism levelled against institutions in the twentieth and twenty-first preambular paragraphs and in paragraphs 8 and 9, asserting that such an attempt at politicization struck at the agencies' foundation and diverted them from their main task of assisting member countries in their economic development, a view shared by the United Kingdom. Japan additionally objected to paragraph 6. Ireland also objected to the criticism of IMF and the World Bank, and Italy added that imposing outside restrictions on IMF activities would be detrimental to the economies of all the countries which enjoyed its assistance.

Sweden, speaking for the five Nordic countries, said it deplored the sweeping or inaccurate statements and the inclusion of paragraphs irrelevant to the substance of the resolution. The Netherlands viewed the text as an incoherent, sprawling mass of words. The United Kingdom felt that the resolution—a free-floating contentious text irrelevant to the role of the specialized agencies—exemplified how far the Committee had become detached from reality; the text focused in highly political terms on South Africa and Namibia, and made no reference to other Territories.

Greece and Uruguay, despite certain reservations, voted in favour because the draft recognized the role played by the specialized agencies in promoting decolonization. Honduras regretted the controversial wording. Chile, a member of the Committee on colonial countries, and Colombia, in solidarity with all colonial peoples, supported the text. Sierra Leone said the text was based on specific reports and had resulted from extensive negotiations.

In other 1985 action, the Assembly urged the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system within their respective spheres of competence: to contribute to the speedy implementation of the Declaration and to provide assistance to the newly emerging States (resolution 40/57); and to disseminate information on decolonization (40/58).

Foreign interests impeding implementation of the Declaration

The Committee on colonial countries and the General Assembly reaffirmed in 1985 their concern that the activities of foreign economic, financial and other interests operating in colonial Territories, particularly in southern Africa, obstructed the political independence of indigenous populations.

The Committee drafted a resolution on the activities of foreign interests which it recommended for adoption by the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/52, by recorded vote.

Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Namibia and in all other Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Activities of foreign economic and other interests which are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples in Namibia and in all other Territories under colonial domination and efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa",

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the item,

Taking into consideration the relevant chapters of the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia.

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration, and 35/118 of 11 December 1980, the annex to which contains the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration, as well as all other resolutions of the United Nations relating to the item,

Reaffirming the solemn obligation of the administering Powers under the Charter of the United Nations to promote the political, economic, social and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the Territories under their administration and to protect the human and natural resources of those Territories against abuses,

Reaffirming that any economic or other activity which impedes the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and obstructs efforts aimed at the elimination of colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination in southern Africa and other colonial Territories is in direct violation of the rights of the inhabitants and of the principles of the Charter and all relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that the natural resources of all Territories under colonial and racist domination are the heritage of the peoples of those Territories and that the exploitation and depletion of those resources by foreign economic interests, in particular in Namibia, in association with the occupying régime of South Africa, constitute a direct violation of the rights of the peoples and of the principles of the Charter and all relevant resolutions of the United Nations,

Recalling the relevant provisions of the consensus on Namibia adopted by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples at its extraordinary session held at Tunis from 13 to 17 May 1985,

Bearing in mind the relevant provisions of the Economic Declaration and other documents of the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983, and of the Final Document of the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on the question of Namibia, held at New Delhi from 19 to 21 April 1985,

Taking into account the relevant provisions of the Declaration and Programme of Action contained in the Final Document adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985,

Noting with profound concern that the colonial Powers and certain States, through their activities in the colonial Territories, have continued to disregard United Nations decisions relating to the item and that they have failed to implement, in particular, the relevant provisions of General Assembly resolutions 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970 and 39/42 of 5 December 1984, by which the Assembly called upon the colonial Powers and those Governments that had not yet done so to take legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in colonial Territories, particularly in Africa, which are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises and to prevent new investments that run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories,

Condemning the intensified activities of those foreign economic, financial and other interests which continue to exploit the natural and human resources of the colonial Territories and to accumulate and repatriate huge profits to the detriment of the interests of the inhabitants, particularly in the case of Namibia, thereby impeding the realization by the peoples of the Territories of their legitimate aspirations for self-determination and independence.

Strongly condemning the support which the racist minority régime of South Africa continues to receive from those foreign economic, financial and other interests which are collaborating with the régime in the exploitation of the natural and human resources of the international Territory of Namibia, in the further entrenchment of its illegal racist domination over the Territory and in the strengthening of its system of apartheid,

Strongly condemning the investment of foreign capital in the production of uranium and the collaboration by certain Western and other countries with the racist minority régime of South Africa in the nuclear field which, by providing that régime with nuclear equipment and technology, enables it to develop nuclear and military capabilities and to become a nuclear Power, thereby promoting South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia,

Reaffirming that the natural resources of Namibia, including its marine resources, are the inviolable and incontestable heritage of the Namibian people and that the exploitation of those resources by foreign economic interests under the protection of the illegal colonial administration, in violation of the Charter, of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council and of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 27 September 1974, and in disregard of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, is illegal, contributes to the maintenance of the illegal occupation régime and is a grave threat to the integrity and prosperity of an independent Namibia,

Concerned about the conditions in other colonial Territories, including certain Territories in the Caribbean and the Pacific Ocean regions, where foreign economic, financial and other interests continue to deprive the indigenous populations of their rights over the wealth of their countries, and where the inhabitants of those Territories continue to suffer from a loss of land ownership as a result of the failure of the administering Powers concerned to restrict the sale of land to foreigners, despite the repeated appeals of the General Assembly,

Conscious of the continuing need to mobilize world public opinion against the involvement of foreign economic, financial and other interests in the exploitation of natural and human resources, which impedes the independence of colonial Territories and the elimination of racism, particularly in southern Africa, and emphasizing the importance of action by local authorities, trade unions, religious bodies, academic institutions, mass media, solidarity movements and other non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, in exercising pressure on transnational corporations to refrain from any investment or activity in the Territory of Namibia, in encouraging a policy of systematic divestment of any financial or other interest in corporations doing business with South Africa and in counteracting all forms of collaboration with the occupation régime in Namibia,

1. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the peoples of dependent Territories to self-determination and independence and to the enjoyment of the natural resources of their Territories, as well as their right to dispose of those resources in their best interests;

2. Reiterates that any administering or occupying Power that deprives the colonial peoples of the exercise of their legitimate rights over their natural resources or subordinates the rights and interests of those peoples to foreign economic and financial interests violates the solemn obligations it has assumed under the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Reaffirms that, by their depletive exploitation of natural resources, the continued accumulation and repatriation of huge profits and the use of those profits for the enrichment of foreign settlers and the perpetuation of colonial domination and racial discrimination in the Territories, the activities of foreign economic, financial and other interests operating at present in the colonial Territories, particularly in southern Africa, constitute a major obstacle to political independence and racial equality, as well as to the enjoyment of the natural resources of those Territories by the indigenous inhabitants;

4. Condemns the activities of foreign economic and other interests in the colonial Territories impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV), and the efforts to eliminate colonialism, apartheid and racial discrimination;

5. Condemns the policies of Governments that continue to support or collaborate with those foreign economic and other interests engaged in exploiting the natural and human resources of the Territories, including, in particular, illegally exploiting Namibia's marine resources, violating the political, economic and social rights and interests of the indigenous peoples and thus obstructing the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of those Territories;

6. Strongly condemns the collusion of the Governments of certain Western and other countries with the racist minority régime of South Africa in the nuclear field, and calls upon those and all other Governments to refrain from supplying that régime, directly or indirectly, with installations that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium and other nuclear materials, reactors or military equipment;

7. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to monitor closely the situation in the remaining colonial Territories so as to ensure that all economic activities in those Territories are aimed at strengthening and diversifying their economies in the interests of the indigenous peoples, at promoting the economic and financial viability of those Territories and at speeding their accession to independence, and, in that connection, requests the administering Powers concerned to ensure that the peoples of the Territories under their administration are not exploited for political, military and other purposes detrimental to their interests;

8. Strongly condemns those Western and all other countries, as well as the transnational corporations, which continue their investments in, and supply of armaments and oil and nuclear technology to, the racist régime of South Africa, thus buttressing it and aggravating the threat to world peace;

9. Calls upon all States, in particular certain Western States, to take urgent, effective measures to terminate all collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa in the political, diplomatic, economic, trade, military and nuclear fields and to refrain from entering into other relations with that régime in violation of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations and of the Organization of African Unity;

10. Calls once again upon all Governments that have not yet done so to take legislative, administrative or other measures in respect of their nationals and the bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that own and operate enterprises in colonial Territories, particularly in Africa, which are detrimental to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories, in order to put an end to such enterprises and to prevent new investments that run counter to the interests of the inhabitants of those Territories;

11. Calls upon all States to terminate, or cause to have terminated, any investments in Namibia or loans to the racist minority régime of South Africa and to refrain from any agreements or measures to promote trade or other economic relations with that régime;

12. Requests all States that have not yet done so to take effective measures to end the supply of funds and other forms of assistance, including military supplies and equipment, to the racist minority régime of South Africa, which uses such assistance to repress the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement;

13. Strongly condemns South Africa for its continued exploitation and plundering of the natural resources of Namibia, leading to the rapid depletion of such resources, in complete disregard of the legitimate interests of the Namibian people, for the creation in the Territory of an economic structure dependent essentially upon its mineral resources and for its illegal extension of the territorial sea and its proclamation of an economic zone off the coast of Namibia;

14. Declares that all activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia are illegal under international law and that consequently South Africa and all the foreign economic interests operating in Namibia are liable to pay damages to the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia;

15. Calls upon those oil-producing and oil-exporting countries that have not yet done so to take effective measures against the oil companies concerned so as to terminate the supply of crude oil and petroleum products to the racist régime of South Africa;

16. Reiterates that the exploitation and plundering of the marine and other natural resources of Namibia by South African and other foreign economic interests, including the activities of those transnational corporations which are engaged in the exploitation and export of the Territory's uranium ores and other resources, in violation of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council and of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, are illegal, contribute to the maintenance of the illegal occupation régime and are a grave threat to the integrity and prosperity of an independent Namibia;

17. Condemns the plunder of Namibian uranium, and calls upon the Governments of all States, particularly those whose nationals and corporations are involved in the mining or enrichment of, or traffic in, Namibian uranium, to take all appropriate measures in compliance with the provisions of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, including the practice of requiring negative certificates of origin, to prohibit and prevent State-owned and other corporations, together with their subsidiaries, from dealing in Namibian uranium and from engaging in uranium prospecting activities in Namibia;

18. Requests the Governments of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which operate the Urenco uranium enrichment plant, to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the Treaty of Almelo, which regulates the activities of Urenco;

19. Requests all States to take legislative, administrative and other measures, as appropriate, in order effectively to isolate South Africa politically, economically, militarily and culturally, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981, 36/121 B of 10 December 1981, 37/233 A of 20 December 1982, 38/36 A of 1 December 1983 and 39/50 A of 12 December 1984;

20. Calls once again upon all States to discontinue all economic, financial and trade relations with the racist minority régime of South Africa concerning Namibia and to refrain from entering into any relations with South Africa, purporting to act on behalf of or concerning Namibia, which may lend support to its continued illegal occupation of that Territory;

21. Invites all Governments and organizations of the United Nations system, having regard to the relevant provisions of the Declaration on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, contained in General Assembly resolution 3201(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, and of the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, contained in Assembly resolution 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, to ensure, in particular, that the permanent sovereignty of the colonial Territories over their natural resources is fully respected and safeguarded;

22. Urges the administering Powers concerned to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the inalienable right of the peoples of the colonial Territories to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over their future development, and requests the administering Powers to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the peoples of those Territories;

23. Calls upon the administering Powers concerned to abolish all discriminatory and unjust wage systems and working conditions prevailing in the Territories under their administration and to apply in each Territory a uniform system of wages to all the inhabitants without any discrimination;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to undertake, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, a sustained and broad campaign with a view to informing world public opinion of the facts concerning the pillaging of natural resources in colonial Territories and the exploitation of their indigenous populations by foreign monopolies and, in respect of Namibia, the support they render to the racist minority régime of South Africa;

25. Appeals to mass media, trade unions and other non-governmental organizations, as well as individuals, to co-ordinate and intensify their efforts to mobilize international public opinion against the policy of the apartheid régime of South Africa and to work for the enforcement of economic and other sanctions against that régime and for encouraging a policy of systematic divestment in corporations doing business in South Africa;

26. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to examine this question and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 125-9-16 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/883) by recorded vote (98-9-51), 29 October (meeting 10); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 110. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 2-10; plenary 99.

*Later advised the Secretariat that it had intended to abstain.

Speaking in explanation of vote in the Fourth Committee, a number of countries felt that the draft made an erroneous assumption and a sweeping condemnation that all foreign economic interests were detrimental to the decolonization process.

Portugal deplored the way the topic had been handled for political aims by some. The United Kingdom saw contradictions between the wholesale condemnation of foreign economic involvement in NSGTs and the frequent calls made in other resolutions asking administering Powers to accelerate and expand economic development in dependent Territories; it also asserted that the isolation of South Africa advocated in paragraphs 19 and 20 would prejudice prospects for a negotiated settlement, while causing widespread economic damage. Belgium said the text was unbalanced; it avoided any reference to the satisfactory evolution of many Territories and censured foreign investments as being prejudicial to the interests of the population. Similarly, the Netherlands, objecting to paragraph 3, found it amazing that year after year certain speakers tried to depict the situation in NSGTs as one of unmitigated colonial extortionism when, with the exception of South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia, Secretariat reports left no doubt that the administering Powers continued to promote the interests of the inhabitants.

The Federal Republic of Germany considered foreign investment to be an asset to newly independent States in their efforts to build up economic systems of their own, as did Italy, which believed that NSGTs needed substantial inputs of capital and technology for their economic and social development. France also felt that foreign economic activities could contribute to development.

Denmark, on behalf of the five Nordic countries, and Turkey said the text should have distinguished between various kinds of foreign economic activities. The Nordic countries also had reservations of principle regarding a number of paragraphs which, it felt, failed to take into account Charter provisions concerning the division of competence between the General Assembly and the Security Council. Ireland, while supporting the part of the draft related to foreign economic interests in Namibia, said the text failed to address the complex range of issues confronting the remaining small NSGTs, for which carefully promoted economic development remained an important factor in the independence process. Japan asserted that foreign economic interests could make beneficial contributions to Territories, especially in technology transfer, managerial skills and job opportunities; it considered the new paragraphs added to this year's text to be particularly unfortunate. Canada also felt that transnational corporations could have a beneficial impact on development and technology transfer; it could not support the contention in paragraph 14 that all foreign economic activities in Namibia were illegal under international law.

As a land-locked country, Swaziland had difficulty supporting paragraph 15, as it did not spell out any compensatory alternative for supplying petroleum products to States dependent on South Africa; it could not implement measures to isolate South Africa called for in paragraph 19 without hurting its own fragile economy.

Several countries which voted in favour of the text had reservations about certain aspects. Chile did not support the concept that all foreign economic interests obstructed the Declaration's implementation. Fiji asserted that, if properly regulated, such interests could contribute to development and higher living standards. Australia said that in many NSGTs constructive foreign investment had played a role in economic development and progress towards self-determination; it had misgivings about the paragraphs on southern Africa, particularly Namibia. New Zealand rejected the indiscriminate criticism of administering Powers, and declared that no element in the text had any relevance to New Zealand's administration of Tokelau.

Objections to the naming of countries for criticism, particularly in paragraph 18, were voiced by Chile, Colombia, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Netherlands and Portugal. Italy added that the draft was more extreme than in the past and unfriendly to some Member States.

Afghanistan, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the Syrian Arab Republic, on the other hand, said the text should have condemned Israel and the United States by name. Agreeing that the text should have named all the States co-operating with South Africa, Mongolia felt it also should have included an appeal to the Security Council to impose comprehensive sanctions against the régime, and the USSR added that it should have contained stronger wording against colonialism and neo-colonialism. Bulgaria and the USSR deplored the rejection of the consensus reached in the Committee on colonial countries. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya stated that, on account of the weakness of the resolutions adopted in the past, the situation in Namibia had not improved over the past 39 years.

Military activities in colonial countries

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. Pursuant to a 1984 General Assembly request,(22) the Committee on colonial countries continued to discuss in 1985 military activities and bases in colonial Territories, approving a decision on the topic on 7 August and recommending a draft decision to the Assembly for adoption.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the Assembly adopted decision 40/415, by recorded vote.

Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text:

"1. The General Assembly, having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to an item on the Special Committee's agenda entitled 'Military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration which might be impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples', and recalling its decision 39/412 of 5 December 1984 on this subject, deplores the fact that the colonial Powers concerned have taken no steps to implement the request that the Assembly has repeatedly addressed to them, most recently in paragraph 10 of its resolution 39/91 of 14 December 1984, to withdraw immediately and unconditionally their military bases and installations from colonial Territories and to refrain from establishing new ones.

"2. The General Assembly, in recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and all other United Nations resolutions and decisions relating to military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories, reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and that it is the responsibility of the administering Powers to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the populations of the Territories from exercising their right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration. Furthermore, aware of the presence of military bases and installations of the administering Powers concerned and other countries in those Territories, the Assembly urges the administering Powers concerned to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve those Territories in any offensive acts or interference against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration.

"3. The General Assembly reiterates its condemnation of all military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration that are detrimental to the rights and interests of the colonial peoples concerned, especially their right to self-determination and independence. The Assembly once again calls upon the colonial Powers concerned to terminate such activities and eliminate such military bases in compliance with the relevant resolutions of the Assembly, in particular with paragraph 9 of the Plan of Action for the Full Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in the annex to Assembly resolution 35/118 of 11 December 1980.

"4. The General Assembly declares that the colonial Territories and areas adjacent thereto should not be used for nuclear testing, dumping of nuclear wastes or deployment of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction.

"5. The General Assembly notes with serious concern that, in southern Africa in general and in and around Namibia in particular, a critical situation continues to prevail as a result of South Africa's continued illegal occupation of the Territory and its inhuman repression of the people of South Africa. The racist régime has resorted to desperate measures in order to suppress by force the legitimate aspirations of those peoples and, in its escalating war against them and their national liberation movements, struggling for freedom, justice and independence, the régime has repeatedly committed acts of armed aggression against the neighbouring independent African States, particularly Angola and Botswana, which have caused extensive loss of human lives and destruction of the economic infrastructure.

"6. The General Assembly strongly condemns South Africa for its ever-increasing and large-scale military build-up in Namibia, particularly its massive military offensive launched recently in northern Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians, its forced recruitment and training of Namibians for tribal armies, its use of mercenaries to reinforce its illegal occupation of the Territory and to participate in its attacks against independent African States and its illegal use of Namibian territory for acts of aggression against those States. The Assembly calls upon all States to take effective measures to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries for service in Namibia. It condemns the continued military, nuclear and intelligence collaboration between South Africa and certain countries, which constitutes a violation of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa by the Security Council in its resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977, and which poses a threat to international peace and security. The Assembly urges that the Security Council consider, as a matter of urgency, the report of the Committee established under its resolution 421(1977) of 9 December 1977 and that it should adopt further measures to widen the scope of resolution 418(1977) in order to make it more effective and comprehensive. The Assembly also calls for the scrupulous observance of Security Council resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984 enjoining Member States to refrain from importing armaments from South Africa. The Assembly is particularly mindful in that regard of the relevant resolutions of the Organization of African Unity, the Final Document of the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on the question of Namibia, held at New Delhi from 19 to 21 April 1985, the Final Document adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985, and Security Council resolutions 567(1985) of 20 June 1985 and 568(1985) of 21 June 1985.

"7. The General Assembly demands the urgent dismantling of all military bases in the international Territory of Namibia and calls for the immediate cessation of the war of oppression waged by the racist minority régime against the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative. Reaffirming the legitimacy of the struggle of the people of Namibia to achieve their freedom and independence, the Assembly appeals to all States to render sustained and increased moral and political support, as well as financial, military and other material assistance, to the South West Africa People's Organization to enable it to intensify its struggle for the liberation of Namibia.

"8. The General Assembly considers that the acquisition of nuclear-weapons capability by the racist régime of South Africa, with its infamous record of violence and aggression, constitutes a further effort on its part to terrorize and intimidate independent States in the region into submission while also posing a threat to all mankind. The continuing assistance rendered to the South African régime by certain Western and other countries in the military and nuclear fields belies their stated opposition to the racist practice of the South African régime and makes them willing partners of its hegemonistic and criminal policies. The Assembly condemns the continued nuclear co-operation by certain Western and other countries with South Africa. It calls upon the States concerned to end all such co-operation and, in particular, to halt the supply to South Africa of equipment, technology, nuclear materials and related training, which increases its nuclear capability.

"9. The General Assembly, noting that the militarization of Namibia has led to the forced conscription of Namibians, to a greatly intensified flow of refugees and to a tragic disorganization of the family life of the Na-mbian people, strongly condemns the forcible and wholesale displacement of Namibians from their homes for military and political purposes and the introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians and declares that all measures by the illegal occupation régime to enforce military conscription in Namibia are null and void. In this connection, the Assembly urges all Governments, the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to provide increased material assistance to the thousands of refugees who have been forced by the apartheid régime's oppressive policies in Namibia and South Africa to flee into the neighbouring States.

"10. The General Assembly, in recalling its resolution ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981, by which it strongly urged States to cease forthwith, individually and collectively, all dealings with South Africa in order totally to isolate it politically, economically, militarily and culturally, strongly condemns the continuing collaboration of certain countries with the racist régime in the political, economic, military and nuclear fields. It calls for the termination forthwith of all such collaboration as it undermines international solidarity against the apartheid régime and helps to perpetuate that régime's illegal occupation of Namibia.

"11. The General Assembly deprecates the continued alienation of land in colonial Territories for military installations. While it has been argued that the servicing of such installations creates employment, nevertheless, the large-scale utilization of local economic and manpower resources for this purpose diverts resources that could be more beneficially utilized in promoting the economic development of the Territories concerned and is thus contrary to the interests of their populations.

"12. The General Assembly requests the Secretary-General to continue, through the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, an intensified campaign of publicity with a view to informing world public opinion of the facts concerning the military activities and arrangements in colonial Territories that are impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV).

"13. The General Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue its consideration of the item and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session."

General Assembly decision 40/415

125-10-15 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/883) by recorded vote (95-11-14), 29 October (meeting 10); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 110.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 2-11; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Portugal, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Denmark, Finland, Greece, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Malawi, Netherlands,<sup>b</sup> New Zealand, Norway, Spain, Sweden,

In explanation of vote, a number of countries expressed concern over the procedural irregularity of voting on a draft dealing with a subject that was not among the agenda items allocated to the Fourth Committee. These States included Australia, Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Luxembourg (also on behalf of the European Community member States), New Zealand, Portugal and the United Kingdom. In addition, Canada saw in the text misleading and exaggerated language and unsubstantiated criticisms of individual countries. The United Kingdom felt the decision served only to keep alive the outdated mythology of colonialism by those who were implacably hostile to Western interests. Australia had difficulties with the substance of the text, as did New Zealand, which did not accept the implication that military activities or the presence of military bases in colonial Territories necessarily impeded the decolonization process. Denmark, speaking for the five Nordic countries, had reservations regarding United Nations endorsement of the use of armed struggle and the call for military assistance.

Although voting in favour, Fiji said it was for the inhabitants of the Territories themselves to decide if their right to self-determination was being affected by foreign military installations. Turkey, expressing reservations on references to Western countries and disapproval of express mention of countries when responsibility could not be imputed with certainty, stated that paragraphs 2, 3 and 11 could have been drafted in a more balanced way.

For Viet Nam, the use of the words "could" and "might" in the text cast doubt on the obvious realities—that foreign military installations and activities impeded the implementation of the Declaration and should have been deleted, along with the words "to continue" in paragraph 2. Afghanistan, Czechoslovakia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the Syrian Arab Republic said Israel and the United States should have been mentioned and condemned by name. Mongolia also felt that the text should have made specific reference to Israel, the United States and other Western countries whose military co-operation, particularly in the nuclear field, helped South Africa pursue its genocidal policy; it also believed that those NSGTs being used as beach-heads of imperialism should have been specified by name.

Information dissemination

The Committee on colonial countries considered, on 16 May and 9 August, dissemination of information on decolonization, approving in August the recommendations made by its Sub-Committee on Petitions, Information and Assistance, including recommendations concerning Namibia (see Chapter III of this section).

The Sub-Committee suggested that the Committee encourage NGOs to continue assisting colonial peoples and their national liberation movements and making efforts to counteract the hostile campaign being waged by South Africa and its Western and other allies to depict national liberation movements as terrorist organizations. It also recommended that its Chairman discuss with the presiding officers of the Special Committee against Apartheid and the Council for Namibia the holding of periodic consultations in order to co-ordinate the activities of the three bodies.

Other recommendations included: continuing information dissemination by the United Nations Department of Political Affairs, Trusteeship and Decolonization and by DPI; making the international community aware that United Nations recognition of the legitimacy of the liberation struggle by the people of southern Africa entailed extending moral and material support to them and their national liberation movements; updating and ensuring greater distribution of studies and monographs on decolonization; underlining in DPI activities the high priority the United Nations gave to eradicating colonialism; strengthening co-operation with the pool of non-aligned press agencies; providing feedback reports from United Nations information centres; and requesting DPI to obtain wider coverage by the mass media, particularly in Western Europe and the Americas, which received limited coverage. The Special Committee should appeal to the mass media to regard it as their task to contribute to eliminating the remaining vestiges of colonialism and to render support to colonial peoples. Both Departments were called on to increase their speaking engagements at North American universities on the subject of decolonization, with particular emphasis on Namibia.

Information dissemination efforts during the year included a series of United Nations activities—in co-operation with DPI, assisted by the information centres—in observance of the Week of Solidarity with the Peoples of Namibia and All Other Colonial Territories, as well as those in South Africa, Fighting for Freedom, Independence and Human Rights (May). The Committee, the Special Committee against Apartheid and the Council for Namibia postponed a joint meeting in observance of the Week and Africa Liberation Day, in the light of a series of conferences and meetings being held during 1985 within their respective mandates.

The Committee's continuing co-operation with NGOs included representation by its Chairman at a meeting with NGOs, organized by DPI at United Nations Headquarters (February); media encounters, also organized by DPI (May, August); and NGO participation at the Committee's regional seminars (see also p. 1060).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/58 by recorded vote.

Dissemination of information on decolonization The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations concerning the dissemination of information on decolonization, in particular General Assembly resolution 39/92 of 14 December 1984,

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the aims and purposes of the Declaration and mindful of the continuing pressing need to take all possible steps to acquaint world public opinion with all aspects of the problems of decolonization, with a view to assisting effectively the peoples of the colonial Territories to achieve self-determination, freedom and independence,

Aware of the increasingly important role being played in the widespread dissemination of relevant information by a number of non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization, and noting with satisfaction the intensified efforts of the Special Committee in enlisting the support of those organizations in that regard,

1. Approves the chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the dissemination of information on decolonization and publicity for the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization;

2. Considers it incumbent upon the United Nations to continue to play an active role in the process of self-determination and independence and to intensify its efforts for the widest possible dissemination of information on decolonization, with a view to the further mobilization of international public opinion in support of complete decolonization;

3. Requests the Secretary-General, having regard to the suggestions of the Special Committee, to continue to take concrete measures through all the media at his disposal, including publications, radio and television, to give widespread and continuous publicity to the work of the United Nations in the field of decolonization, and, inter alia:

(a) To continue, in consultation with the Special Committee, to collect, prepare and disseminate basic material, studies and articles relating to the problems of decolonization and, in particular, to continue to publish the periodical Objective: Justice and other publications, special articles and studies, including the Decolonization series, and to select from them appropriate material for wider dissemination by means of reprints in various languages;

(b) To seek the full co-operation of the administering Powers concerned in the discharge of the tasks referred to above;

(c) To intensify the activities of all United Nations information centres;

(d) To maintain a close working relationship with the Organization of African Unity by holding periodic consultations and by systematically exchanging relevant information with that organization;

(e) To enlist, with the close co-operation of United Nations information centres, the support of non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization in the dissemination of the relevant information;

(f) To ensure the availability of the necessary facilities and services to that end;

(g) To report to the Special Committee on the measures taken in implementation of the present resolution;

4. Requests all States, in particular the administering Powers, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations having a special interest in decolonization to undertake or intensify, in co-operation with the Secretary-General and within their respective spheres of competence, the large-scale dissemination of the information referred to in paragraph 2 above;

5. Requests the Special Committee to follow the implementation of the present resolution and report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

General Assembly resolution 40/58

23-nation draft (A/40/L.22 & Add.I); agenda item 18.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Algeria, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Lao, People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Papua New Guinea, Romania, Sierra Leone, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 50; plenary 36, 96, 97, 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In hurt Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands.

In explanation of vote, Israel objected to having been singled out in a discriminatory way, adding that, if such action was justified, the Committee on colonial countries should have published a list of at least 50 Member States from all political and regional groupings that maintained links with South Africa. The United Kingdom asserted that information work in the decolonization area should diminish rather than intensify as the era of decolonization drew to a close. Italy, objecting to unjustified criticism of countries or to references to questions not within the Committee mandate, saw as inappropriate any request to DPI which might result in unfriendly activities towards Member States. In a similar vein, the Netherlands said the Committee recommendations sought to use the Organization's resources for a campaign of unwarranted and selective criticism of one particular group of countries.

Japan expressed reservations on paragraph 1, as did Finland (for the five Nordic countries), which did not approve all the specific parts of the Committee's chapter on information dissemination.

Puerto Rico

The Committee on colonial countries, reviewing the list of Territories to which the 1960 Declaration applied, considered a separate item based on its 24 August 1984 decision<sup>(23)</sup> concerning Puerto Rico.

At meetings held between 12 and 14 August, the Committee heard the representatives of 26 organizations, mainly from Puerto Rico. By a resolution of 14 August, adopted by 11 votes to 1, with 10 abstentions, the Committee reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and the applicability of the principles of the 1960 Declaration to Puerto Rico, expressed the hope that its people might exercise that right without hindrance and requested the Rapporteur to report to the Committee on the implementation of its resolutions on Puerto Rico. The resolution was transmitted to the United States.

Two reports on the topic were submitted by the Committee's Rapporteur: in August,<sup>(24)</sup> dealing with an exchange of communications involving Cuba, the United States, the Committee Chairman and the Rapporteur; and in December,<sup>(25)</sup> a study on recent developments in Puerto Rico, United Nations actions and the views of the parties concerned on the question of Puerto Rico's political status.

In the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries, and forwarded to the Secretary-General by Angola,<sup>(15)</sup> the Ministers noted with interest the Committee's 14 August resolution and reaffirmed their support for the inalienable right of the people of Puerto Rico to self-determination and independence in accordance with the 1960 Declaration.

New Caledonia

By a letter of 21 June,<sup>(26)</sup> Papua New Guinea informed the Secretary-General that the Foreign Ministers of Solomon Islands, Vanuatu and Papua New Guinea met at Vila, Vanuatu, on 3 June to obtain information from the Front de liberation nationale kanak et socialiste (FLNKS) on the Territory's development since the November 1984 Territorial Assembly elections. The four participants refuted the credibility and genuineness of France's efforts to bring independence for New Caledonia, condemned the French military buildup in New Caledonia, and agreed on reinscribing the Territory on the United Nations list of NSGTs.

The sixteenth South Pacific Forum (Rarotonga, Cook Islands, 5 and 6 August), in a 6 August communiqué,<sup>(27)</sup> reaffirmed its support for New Caledonia's early transition to independence, urged the French Government to undertake electoral reforms prior to the act of self-determination scheduled to take place before the end of 1987, and agreed to seek information from the United Nations on the applicability to New Caledonia of the United Nations Charter and the 1960 Declaration, without accepting reinscription at that juncture of New Caledonia on the United Nations NSGTs list.

The Committee agreed on 9 August to continue consideration, in 1986, of the question of the list of Territories to which the Declaration applied.

The September Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (17) expressed their support for self-determination and the early transition to an independent New Caledonia in accordance with the rights and aspirations of the indigenous people, and in a manner which guaranteed the rights and interests of all its inhabitants, and commended the administering Power and the people of New Caledonia for their stated desire for a speedy and peaceful solution.

On 2 October, Papua New Guinea<sup>(28)</sup> transmitted to the Committee Chairman information on New Caledonia describing its historical and political evolution and focusing on the situation of the indigenous Melanesian Kanaks. A FLNKS communiqué on elections held in the Territory on 29 September 1985 was annexed.

Other general questions concerning NSGTs

Scholarships

In a report to the General Assembly covering 1 October 1984 to 30 September 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that the following 33 States had offered to make scholarships available to persons from NSGTs for academic and vocational studies: Austria, Brazil, Bulgaria, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iran, Israel, Italy, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malta, Mexico, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Romania, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, the USSR, the United Arab Emirates, the United States and Yugoslavia. Information about these offers was included in the twenty-fourth edition of the handbook Study Abroad (1983/84, 1984/85, 1985/86), published by UNESCO.

During the period covered, 82 students, mostly not inhabitants of NSGTs, requested information and application forms from the Secretariat. Namibian students were referred to the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia. Some applicants contacted the offering States directly, or were requested to do so in the case of study opportunities in Ghana, Poland, the USSR and the United States.

Several offering States informed the Secretary-General of developments in their facilities: Austria had awarded scholarships in 1984 to two inhabitants of Namibia; Czechoslovakia offered 20 scholarships annually for inhabitants of NSGTs; the Federal Republic of Germany sponsored three students from Namibia, seven post-graduate students and 334 stipendiaries in practical and vocational training; 30 Namibian students completed a four-year course in Malta's trade schools, with another 12 students starting a two-year nursing course; and 154 students from NSGTs studied in the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR. For the 1985/86 academic year, Poland would grant three scholarships; the Sudan, a university scholarship; and Turkey, a scholarship to a Namibian student.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 40/55, without vote.

Offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/45 of 5 December 1984,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on offers by Member States of study and training facilities for inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories, prepared pursuant to General Assembly resolution 845(IX) of 22 November 1954,

Considering that more scholarships should be made available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories in all parts of the world and that steps should be taken to encourage applications from students in those Territories,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Expresses its appreciation to those Member States that have made scholarships available to the inhabitants of Non-Self-Governing Territories;

3. Invites all States to make or continue to make generous offers of study and training facilities to the inhabitants of those Territories that have not yet attained self-government or independence and, wherever possible, to provide travel funds to prospective students;

4. Urges the administering Powers to take effective measures to ensure the widespread and continuous dissemination in the Territories under their administration of information relating to offers of study and training facilities made by States and to provide all the necessary facilities to enable students to avail themselves of such offers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

6. Draws the attention of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 40/55

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/887) without vote, 8 November (meeting 20); 40-nation draft (A/C.4/40/L.6); agenda item 113.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Australia, Bangladesh, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Colombia, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Fiji, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, India, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Madagascar, Mali, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Samoa, Sierra Leone, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Information to the United Nations

States responsible for the administration of Territories which had not attained full self-government continued to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General information on the Territories' economic, social and educational conditions under the terms of Article 73 e in Chapter XI of the United Nations Charter and in accordance with several General Assembly resolutions. In the most recent such resolution, in 1984(2) the Assembly requested the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments. In a September 1985 report(3) the Secretary-General stated that he had received information with respect to the following NSGTs:

New Zealand: Tokelau

United Kingdom: Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands (Malvinas), Gibraltar, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena, Turks and Caicos Islands

United States: American Samoa, Guam, United States Virgin Islands

On 25 February 1985,(4) Portugal informed the Secretary-General that it had nothing to add to the information provided in a 1979 note<sup>(5)</sup> which stated that conditions in East Timor had prevented it from assuming its responsibilities for the Territory's administration. (See also Chapter IV of this section.)

With respect to Western Sahara, the Secretary-General noted in his report that Spain had informed him in 1976<sup>(6)</sup> that, with the termination of its presence in the Territory, it considered itself exempt from any international responsibility in connection with the Territory's administration. (See also Chapter IV of this section.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/51, drafted by the Committee on colonial countries.

Information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Having examined the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations and the action taken by the Committee in respect of that information,

Having also examined the report of the Secretary-General on the question,

Recalling its resolution 1970(XVIII) of 16 December 1963, in which it requested the Special Committee to study the information transmitted to the Secretary-General in accordance with Article 73 e of the Charter and to take such information fully into account in examining the situation with regard to the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Recalling also its resolution 39/41 of 5 December 1984, in which it requested the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under resolution 1970(XVIII),

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the information from Non-Self-Governing Territories transmitted under Article 73 e of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Reaffirms that, in the absence of a decision by the General Assembly itself that a Non-Self-Governing Territory has attained a full measure of self-government in terms of Chapter XI of the Charter, the administering Power concerned should continue to transmit information under Article 73 e of the Charter with respect to that Territory;

3. Requests the administering Powers concerned to transmit, or continue to transmit, to the Secretary-General the information prescribed in Article 73 e of the Charter, as well as the fullest possible information on political and constitutional developments in the Territories concerned, within a maximum period of six months following the expiration of the administrative year in those Territories;

4. Requests the Special Committee to continue to discharge the functions entrusted to it under General Assembly resolution 1970(XVIII), in accordance with established procedures, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session.

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 149-0-3 (recorded Vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/884) by recorded vote (131-0-3), 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 109. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11, 12, 15-20; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua, and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: France, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, the United Kingdom said the draft implied that it was for the Assembly to decide when an NSGT had attained a full measure of self-government, whereas such decisions should be left to the administering Power and the local Government.

Visiting missions

In August, the Committee on colonial countries adopted a resolution on the question of sending visiting missions to Territories,<sup>(7)</sup> stressing the need to dispatch Periodic missions to facilitate full implementation of the 1960 Declaration,<sup>(8)</sup> calling on the administering Powers concerned to continue to co-operate with the United Nations by permitting access to Territories under their administration, and requesting its Chairman to continue consultations with those Powers regarding such missions.

In resolution 40/57 of 2 December (see above), the General Assembly called on the administering Powers to continue to co-operate with the Committee and, in particular, to permit visiting missions to secure first-hand information and ascertain the wishes and aspirations of their inhabitants.

The Assembly also dealt with the topic in individual resolutions on Territories (see Chapter IV of this section).

Chapter II

International Trusteeship System

On behalf of the Security Council, the Trusteeship Council continued during 1985 to supervise the one Trust Territory remaining under the International Trusteeship System—the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, a strategic territory administered by the United States.

The Trusteeship Council considered the Administering Authority's annual report, heard 15 petitioners, and examined five written petitions and three communications regarding the Territory.

The Council held its fifty-second session at United Nations Headquarters from 13 May to 11 July 1985; of its five members (China, France, USSR, United Kingdom, United States), China did not participate.

Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands

Conditions in the Territory

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, designated as a strategic area and administered by the United States in accordance with the Trusteeship Agreement approved by the Security Council in 1947,(1) comprised three archipelagos of more than 2,100 islands and atolls (about 100 of which were inhabited) scattered over some 7.8 million square kilometres of the western Pacific Ocean, north of the Equator. The Territory, collectively known as Micronesia, had an estimated population of 155,900 in 1984.

There were four constitutional Governments within the Territory—the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands, the Northern Mariana Islands and Palau. As a result of referendums, each had its popularly elected legislature and executive head.

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council at its 1985 session adopted its report(2) to the Security Council after considering the annual report for the year ending 30 September 1984 by the United States as the Administering Authority for the Trust Territory.(3) It also had before it a working paper prepared by the Secretariat(4) outlining the conditions in the Trust Territory.

The Trusteeship Council's report, covering the period 19 July 1984 to 11 July 1985, contained conclusions and recommendations—prepared by its Drafting Committee (France and the United Kingdom)(5) on the basis of the Council's discussions and adopted by 3 votes to 1—on questions relating to the Territory's political, economic, social and educational advancement.

In explanation of its negative vote, the USSR asserted that the Micronesian people had not been given an opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination and independence because of their complete economic and political dependence on the Administering Authority; the conclusions served to reaffirm the political and military interests of the United States and justify its policy aimed at annexing Micronesia. France said it was for the people of the Territory to determine their political future, and for the Council to monitor and advise. The United Kingdom said the report reflected the views expressed by the freely elected representatives of the Micronesian people.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The General Assembly's Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries)(6) considered the Trust Territory on 1 and 7 August and adopted conclusions and recommendations made by its Sub-Committee on Small Territories. In its consideration of the question, the Committee had before it a Secretariat working paper on conditions in the Territory.(7)

The Committee recommended the adoption of a draft resolution, by which the Assembly, among other things, would call on the Administering Authority to ensure its representation at Committee meetings on the item and not to impede the Territory's unity or the rights of its people in accordance with the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.(8) The Assembly would reaffirm its conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute an obstacle to implementing the Declaration, recognize that it was ultimately for the people of the Territory to decide their political destiny, and note with regret the lack of co-operation between the Committee and the Trusteeship Council (see p. 1089).

General Assembly consideration. Consideration of the topic was referred to the General Assembly's Fourth Committee. On 8 November, its Chairman suggested, based on consultations with the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries and with concerned delegations, that no action be taken on the draft resolution. That suggestion was adopted without objection.(9) (See also p. 1088.)

Self-determination and independence

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council(2) reaffirmed the right of the Micronesian people to self-determination, including the right to independence, and reiterated that free association was an option compatible with the Trusteeship Agreement, provided that the population concerned had freely accepted it.

The Council noted the calls for termination of that Agreement made by the representatives of the territorial Governments at its 1985 session. It reiterated that it was for the Administering Authority to initiate in due course procedures leading to the termination of the Agreement, and noted that "fixed-term commitments" as regards defence arrangements and economic assistance following the Agreement's termination were not incompatible with self-government.

The Council noted the United States view that, according to the terms of the Palau compact, the approval requirements remained incomplete due to perceived incompatibilities between the compact and Palau's Constitution; it reiterated the view that the United States and Palau might seek a mutually acceptable solution to bring the compact into effect.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries(6) reaffirmed the right of the people of the Territory to self-determination and independence in conformity with the United Nations Charter and the 1960 Declaration,(8) and reiterated that the Administering Authority was responsible for ensuring that the existence of military bases and installations did not hinder the people from exercising that right. The Committee recalled its previous appeals to the Authority that the people of Micronesia be given the fullest opportunity to inform and educate themselves about the options open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence, and expressed the view that such programmes should be extended and reinforced. The Committee recognized that it was ultimately for the Micronesians to decide their political destiny and called on the Administering Authority not to take any action which might impede the unity of the Territory or the rights of the people, in accordance with the Declaration, until those rights were implemented.

Communication. In a 6 August communiqué(10) of the Sixteenth South Pacific Forum (Rarotonga, Cook Islands, 5 and 6 August), heads of Government members of the Forum noted that the peoples of the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands had exercised their right to self-determination in free and fair plebiscites observed by the United Nations; they looked forward to early approval of the termination of the Trusteeship Agreement over those territories, as well as over Palau, by the United States.

Politics and government

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council(2) took note of the view of the Administering Authority that the status of free association as defined in the compacts would involve a considerable degree of autonomy, notably in the area of foreign affairs. It noted that international contacts by the territorial Governments continued to expand, with the approval and encouragement of the Administering Authority, and that activities had been organized in Palau in connection with International Youth Year (1985).

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries(6) noted that the responsibility for administrative matters throughout the Trust Territory was exercised by local authorities but regretted that the High Commissioner of the Territory still maintained the power to suspend certain legislation. The Committee took note of the intention of the Administering Authority to seek speedy termination of the Trusteeship Agreement and recalled that the Authority was duty-bound to transfer all power to the people of the Territory in accordance with the Charter and the 1960 Declaration.(8)

Economic conditions

Trusteeship Council action. The Trusteeship Council(2) noted that economic planning had become the prerogative of the Territory's four constitutional Governments, requested the Administering Authority to encourage establishment of an economic development office for the whole Territory, and welcomed the intergovernmental consultations begun on the initiative of various entities on issues of common interest.

As regards public finance, the Council noted that the Administering Authority had granted for fiscal year 1983/84 a total of $114 million for the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and Palau, in addition to federal categorical grants of some $35 million. It noted with satisfaction that all functions of programme management and financial administration were performed by each Government with the technical assistance of the Administering Authority.

Concerning international trade, the Council believed in the importance of promoting investment, particularly originating from Japan and the United States, and requested the Administering Authority to encourage visits to the Territory by representatives of chambers of commerce and other professional associations with a view to attracting foreign capital.

The Council noted with satisfaction that the Administering Authority recognized the primary importance of agriculture for internal consumption and for export and that it granted aid for studies on forestry and livestock production. Stressing the importance of marine resources development, the Council requested the Administering Authority to protect the Territory's fisheries interests and noted with satisfaction the establishment of the National Fisheries Corporation for fisheries development in each of the Federated States of Micronesia.

Recalling that the creation and maintenance of a communications infrastructure was crucial in development because of the distances separating the archipelagos, the Council urged efforts in that area and called for the improvement of the port infrastructure to promote trade with foreign countries. It noted that marked progress had been made in developing small-scale industries and handicrafts, encouraged the Administering Authority to continue assisting in local industry development, and considered it necessary to encourage the training of a specialized labour force to develop the construction industry.

The Council recalled that the growth of tourism must be based on careful planning so that it was in harmony with the economic progress of the Territory and in keeping with local traditions.

The Council was pleased to note that the land leased in the Northern Mariana Islands for contingency military purposes would, for the time being, be put to productive use by the local people. It also noted that the United States had no plans for establishing military bases on any part of the Trust Territory.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries(6) noted that the Territory was still economically and financially dependent on the Administering Authority and that the structural imbalance in the economy appeared not to have been reduced. It believed that the Administering Authority should increase its economic assistance to the Trust Territory in order to enable its people to achieve maximum economic independence and to reduce the structural imbalance in the economy.

The Committee urged the Authority to continue safeguarding and guaranteeing, in co-operation with the local authorities, the right of the people of Micronesia to own and to dispose freely of the natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development. It added that the rights of the people over the 200-mile exclusive maritime zone should be respected and that they should receive all benefits deriving from it.

Social conditions

operation between it and the territorial Governments in the health field might be feasible in the immediate post-Trusteeship period, if the parties concerned deemed it desirable. It took note of the construction or renovation of health-care facilities in the Territory and urged the Administering Authority to look favourably to the request by the Marshall Islands Government for $700,000 for the improvement of the outer island's dispensary system. The Council expressed concern at the incidence of leprosy in the Territory.

Noting with satisfaction that the Trust Territory Office of Health Services received a family planning grant from the United States and that the United Nations Development Programme and the World Health Organization collaborated in family planning activities, the Council hoped that such support would continue and recommended that assistance be concentrated on the training of experts.

The Council also noted the situation as regards community development, youth issues, housing and the labour force.

Education

The Trusteeship Council(2) noted that, despite significant progress in the past five years in student academic achievement, the overall standard was still lower than that in schools in the United States. At the same time, the Council noted with satisfaction that the United States Congress had authorized funding for the continuation of the Territorial Teacher-Training Assistance Programme for a further five-year period; that an increasing number of Trust Territory students pursued post-secondary education in the United States and elsewhere; and that the Governments of the Federated States of Micronesia, the Marshall Islands and Palau were determined to support "a unified College of Micronesia system", by combining a number of liberal arts, vocational and occupational post-secondary colleges in the three entities.

Claims

The Trusteeship Council(2) noted with concern that the problem of unpaid war claims remained to be settled and that it continued to be a matter of some aggravation in the Trust Territory, particularly in the Northern Mariana Islands. It was pleased with the indication from the Administering Authority that consideration was being given to settling the matter definitively.

Radioactive waste management

The Trusteeship Council(2) was pleased that the Administering Authority, as a signatory to the 1975 Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter (the London Convention), had no plans for dumping nuclear waste anywhere near the Trust Territory. The Council hoped that the Authority would deal severely with any country that had given evidence of having such plans.

By a letter of 18 March 1985,<sup>(11)</sup> Japan informed the Secretary-General that it had no intention of disposing of low-level radioactive wastes in the Pacific Ocean in disregard of the concern expressed by the communities of the region.

Compensation for nuclear testing

The Trusteeship Council<sup>(2)</sup> considered as a major achievement the amicable out-of-court settlement in respect of the clean-up of Bikini, noting that, according to the Administering Authority, the people of Bikini would receive an annual income of over $16,000 per family during the first 15 years of the compact and thereafter would have a trust fund of $65.5 million to address the needs of future generations. The Council further noted that the people of Enewetak would have an average family income of over $11,000 and a trust fund of $13.46 million, and that similar arrangements would be made for the people of Rongelap and Utirik.

The Council noted the reluctance of the Administering Authority to finance a further independent radiological survey of the northern Marshall Islands on the grounds that it had satisfied itself that, with the exception of Bikini, none of the other atolls were seriously affected. While accepting that explanation, the Council asked the Administering Authority to continue monitoring the situation and to respond sympathetically to requests from the Marshall Islands Government for future assistance in radiation matters, particularly as regards medical assistance.

Visiting mission

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL ACTION

The Trusteeship Council<sup>(2)</sup>—by resolution 2179(LII), adopted without objection on 7 June—decided to dispatch in July a periodic visiting mission to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. The Council had last dispatched such a mission in 1982.<sup>(12)</sup> The USSR did not object to the text's adoption on the understanding that the mission would be a periodic mission similar to those previously dispatched to ascertain the situation in the Trust Territory, and that it would not have any additional terms of reference beyond the regular mandate of such missions.

Terms of reference of the United Nations
Visiting Mission to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. 1985

The Trusteeship Council,

Having decided to dispatch a periodic visiting mission to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands in 1985,

Having decided that the Visiting Mission should be composed of members of the Council wishing to participate, except the Administering Authority, which will provide an escort officer,

Having decided that the Visiting Mission should visit the Trust Territory in July 1985,

1. Directs the Visiting Mission to investigate and report as fully as possible on the steps taken in the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands towards the realization of the objectives set forth in Article 76b of the Charter of the United Nations and to pay special attention to the question of the future of the Territory, in the light of the relevant Articles of the Charter and the Trusteeship Agreement;

2. Directs the Visiting Mission to give attention, as may be appropriate in the light of discussion in the Trusteeship Council and of resolutions adopted by it, to issues raised in connection with the annual reports on the administration of the Territory, in the petitions received by the Council concerning the Territory, in the reports of the previous periodic visiting missions to the Territory, in the reports of the visiting missions that have observed plebiscites in the Territory and in the observations of the Administering Authority on those reports;

3. Directs the Visiting Mission to receive petitions, without prejudice to its action in accordance with the rules of procedure of the Council, and to investigate on the spot such of the petitions as, in its opinion, warrant special investigation;

4. Requests the Visiting Mission to submit to the Council as soon as practicable a report on its visit to the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands containing its findings, with such observations, conclusions and recommendations as it may wish to make;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and facilities to assist the Visiting Mission in the performance of its functions.

Trusteeship Council resolution 2179(LII)

7 June 1985 Meeting 1597 Adopted without objection

Draft by France and United Kingdom (T/L1246); agenda item 6.

Report of the Visiting Mission. The Council's 1985 Visiting Mission,<sup>(13)</sup> composed of one representative each from France and the United Kingdom, began its visit to the Trust Territory at Majuro, Marshall Islands, on 16 July and ended it at Koror, Palau, on 3 August.

In its conclusions and recommendations, the Mission recommended that the Trusteeship Agreement be terminated as soon as possible. It noted that, except for the State of Pohnpei (formerly Ponape) and for one opposition party and some individuals elsewhere, there was general support for the compact of free association negotiated with the Administering Authority; it hoped that all parties involved would strive to resolve the difficulties—including the constitutional problem in Palau—that were impeding the early implementation of the compact. It took note of what it called hypothetical anxiety expressed everywhere about a possible negative decision by the Security Council and especially about a negative vote by a permanent member of the Council on a draft resolution recommending termination of the Trusteeship Agreement.

Among other observations, the Mission reported that it was impressed by the standard and flexibility of the judicial system instituted by the Administering Authority. It noted many improvements made since 1982 in infrastructure, such as roads and airports; considered that local inhabitants themselves could contribute more to maintaining existing facilities; and considered unjustified most of the demands made for increased financial help from the United States, which, in the Mission's view, had already made available large sums of money. It added that it was not possible during the visit to investigate fully some of the issues raised, including the development of the outer islands, unemployment and reduction of bureaucracy.

Hearings

Trusteeship Council consideration. Between 15 and 28 May 1985, the Trusteeship Council(2) heard 15 petitioners on various issues concerning the conditions in, and the future status of, the Trust Territory. The petitioners were: Jonathan M. Weisgall, Counsel for the people of Bikini; Douglas Faulkner; Susan Quass, United Methodist Church; Senator Ataji Balos, Kwajalein representative in the Marshall Islands Nitijela (Parliament); Glenn H. Alcalay, National Committee for Radiation Victims; Leslie Tewid, on behalf of the Airai State Governor, the Airai State Council and Airai State (one of the 16 states of Palau); Father William Wood, Focus on Micronesia Coalition; Susanne R. Roff, Minority Rights Group (New York), Inc.; Jovita Nabors, a citizen of the Northern Mariana Islands; Robert R. Solenberger; Roger Clark, International League for Human Rights; Senator Ismael John and David R. Anderson, for the people of Enewetak; and Jose R. Cruz and Pedrus T. Silbanus, Old People's Square Level and Justice Organization of Ponape and Kosrae.

General Assembly consideration. On 30 and 31 October, the General Assembly's Fourth Committee heard statements by Glenn H. Alcalay; Senator Jeton Anjain, Marshall Islands; Glenn Petersen, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Bernard M. Baruch College, New York; J. Roman Bedor, a citizen of Palau; Susan Quass; Susanne R. Roff; and Jose R. Cruz.

In the Fourth Committee, France, the United Kingdom and the United States said it was beyond the competence of the Committee to hear petitioners on the question of the Trust Territory, which was expressly reserved, under Article 83 of the Charter, to the Security Council and the Trusteeship Council. (See also p. 1084.)

Petitions, communications and observations

The Trusteeship Council(2) on 23 May took decisions on three written communications—from Seth

Chaiklin, Jonathan M. Weisgall, and the House of Representatives, Fourth Northern Marianas Commonwealth Legislature—and five written petitions—from Ossie Cruse, Chairman, Pacific Region of the World Council of Indigenous Peoples; Erhart Aten, Governor of Truk, Federated State of Micronesia; the Congress of the Federated States of Micronesia; and the Association of Pacific Island Legislatures (two petitions).

Other aspects of the International Trusteeship system

Fellowships and scholarships

Under a scholarship programme launched by the General Assembly in 1952,(1) 11 Member States had in past years made scholarships available for students from Trust Territories: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Indonesia, Italy, Mexico, Pakistan, Philippines, Poland, Tunisia, USSR, Yugoslavia. In a report to the Trusteeship Council covering the period from 18 May 1984 to 20 May 1985,(2) the Secretary-General stated that he had asked for up-to-date information, receiving a reply from one offering State, the USSR, which said that currently no inhabitant from the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands was studying in the USSR.

In the Council, the USSR said the statements made by Micronesians showed that there was a dearth of highly trained workers and specialists in the Territory. It was unfortunate that the report did not describe the offers of stipends and fellowships or indicate how Micronesians could take advantage of them; since none of the USSR's offers had been accepted, it was clear that information was not reaching the Micronesians.

The High Commissioner of the Trust Territory informed the Council that all offers of training were immediately transmitted to the Governments of the four Micronesian entities for their choice and decision. The Micronesian representatives stated that information on study opportunities was received directly by them or through the Office of the High Commissioner; States offering study/training opportunities included Japan, the Netherlands and Papua New Guinea.

On 23 May, the Council took note of the report without objection.(3)

Information dissemination

A report of the Secretary-General covering the period 1 May 1984 to 30 April 1985(4) described the distribution by the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) of United Nations documents, official records and information materials throughout the Trust Territory. Relevant publications on the activities of the Committee on colonial countries were also distributed. An information officer from the United Nations Information Centre in Tokyo was scheduled to make another visit to the Territory later in 1985 to assess the needs of all interested users of United Nations materials.

The USSR said the Administering Authority had not provided detailed information on the dissemination of information and the Trusteeship Council should urge the Authority and DPI to improve the means of dissemination in the Territory.

On 23 May, the Council,(3) without objection, took note of the Secretary-General's report.

Trusteeship Council

The Trusteeship Council held its fifty-second session in New York from 13 May to 11 July 1985. Following the adoption of its agenda on 13 May,(5) it held 15 meetings between 13 and 28 May; it adopted, on 7 June, the report of its Drafting Committee containing the Council's conclusions and recommendations, and its report to the Security Council on 11 July.(3)

The United States transmitted two letters to the Secretary-General. On 13 September,(6) it requested the convening of a special session of the Trusteeship Council on 15 October to consider recent developments in and affecting the future of the Trust Territory and, in particular, the question of self-determination, along with the report of the 1985 Visiting Mission. On 18 November,(7) it withdrew that request.

Co-operation with the Committee on colonial countries

At its 1985 annual session, the Trusteeship Council(3) again considered together the question of self-government or independence by the Trust Territory and co-operation with the Committee on colonial countries.

During the debate, the USSR stated that the Administering Authority stubbornly ignored the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples(8) and did not provide information on its implementation. There was nothing in Article 83 of the Charter to prevent the General Assembly or any other United Nations organ from following the situation in the Territory.

France, the United Kingdom and the United States said that Article 83, paragraph 1, of the Charter made it clear that all functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas would be exercised by the Security Council. As far as co-operation with the Committee on colonial countries was concerned, the same distinction applied, since the sole remaining Trust Territory was a strategic one.

Co-operation with CERD and the Decade against racial discrimination

In 1985, the Trusteeship Council(3) considered together the question of co-operation with the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD) and the Decade for Action to Combat Racism and Racial Discrimination.

During the discussion, the USSR said that the position taken by the Council's Western members had prevented the Council from co-operating with CERD or participating in activities relating to the Decade; the Council should co-operate with CERD by providing it with all relevant material, including petitioners' statements. The USSR added that the most obvious instance of discrimination was the prolonged nuclear testing programme which had polluted the environment and irreparably harmed the health of the people.

The United Kingdom, joined by the United States, said that under Article 83 of the Charter, the Trusteeship Council reported only to the Security Council; there was no obligation for a major organ to co-operate with a committee. The United Kingdom recalled that in 1984 one of the Micronesian representatives had stated unequivocally that racial discrimination did not exist in the Territory; nothing that the Council heard in 1985 could be remotely equated with racial discrimination. Similarly, France noted the absence of information from any Micronesian source showing any trace of racial discrimination.

The United States said that racial discrimination was unknown in Micronesia, as confirmed by the representatives of the Federated States of Micronesia. The settlement of nuclear claims by the United States on terms favourable to those affected showed that there had been no anti-Micronesian discrimination in that area as charged. As to the Decade, the United States did not consider that the item appropriately belonged on the Council's agenda.

On 28 May, the Council(3) took note, without objection, of the statements made.

Chapter III

Namibia

In 1985, the United Nations continued its efforts to bring about the independence of Namibia, the largest Territory remaining under colonial rule. The United Nations Council for Namibia, the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, held extraordinary plenary meetings at Vienna in June, which culminated in the adoption of a Declaration stating that South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia constituted a threat to international peace and security, and of a Programme of Action urging the Security Council to act decisively to implement its resolutions on Namibia.

The Security Council considered the Namibian question at various times during the year. In May, after consultations, the Council President issued a statement on behalf of the members condemning a decision by South Africa to establish a so-called interim government in Namibia and declaring that any unilateral measures taken by the illegal administration there were null and void. In June, the Council adopted resolution 566(1985), condemning South Africa for its continued illegal occupation of Namibia, for its installation of an interim government in Windhoek which it declared to be illegal, null and void, and for its obstruction of the implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibian independence. It reiterated that Council resolution 435(1978) embodied the only internationally accepted basis for settling the Namibian problem and urged Member States to consider taking voluntary measures against South Africa, which could include the suspension of new investments, re-examination of maritime and aerial relations, prohibition of the sale of krugerrands and restrictions on sports and cultural relations.

In November, South Africa transmitted a request to the Secretary-General to select a system of proportional representation as a framework for elections leading to Namibian independence; the Secretary-General confirmed agreement on the proportional representation system. Later, a draft resolution, which would have provided for comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa, was not adopted because of the negative vote of two permanent members of the Council.

Six resolutions were adopted by the General Assembly on the problem of Namibia in December. By resolution 40/97 A, the Assembly decided that the Council for Namibia should proceed to establish its administration in Namibia in 1986; reaffirmed that the independence of Namibia could be achieved only with the direct participation of the South West Africa People's Organization; and condemned South Africa for the imposition of an interim government and for its military buildup in Namibia. It also demanded the release of all Namibian political prisoners, and urged the Security Council to adopt comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

The Assembly, in resolution 40/97 B, rejected manoeuvres to divert attention from the central issue, the decolonization of Namibia, and called on the Western permanent members of the Security Council to support enforcement measures against South Africa. In resolution 40/97 C, the Assembly decided on the work programme of the Council for Namibia, and, in resolution 40/97 D, requested the Council to increase dissemination of information on Namibia.

Further, it decided, by resolution 40/97 E, to allocate $1.5 million from the regular 1986 United Nations budget to the United Nations Fund for Namibia, and by resolution 40/97 F, to hold a special session on Namibia in 1986.

The Council for Namibia, which in 1974 had enacted a decree aimed at protecting Namibia's natural resources, decided in 1985 to undertake legal action in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies against corporations or individuals exploiting, transporting, processing or purchasing those resources.

The Secretary-General submitted three reports on the question of Namibia during the year. He found that South Africa had not changed its position linking the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola to the implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibian independence. He declared that no progress had been made in the carrying out of resolution 435(1978), which had endorsed the plan.

Assistance to Namibians outside their country continued to be provided by the United Nations, primarily through the Fund for Namibia. In 1985, the Fund spent $7 million; voluntary contributions by States to the Fund totalled $4.5 million. Funding was also provided from the regular United Nations budget, the United Nations Development Programme and specialized agencies. The Fund operated three main programmes—the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, the United Nations Institute for Namibia, and educational, social and relief assistance. The Nationhood Programme and Institute functioned in relation to the future attainment of independence. The assistance programme dealt with the immediate needs of Namibians in connection with their struggle for independence.

Namibia question

Activities of the UN Council for Namibia. During 1985, the United Nations Council for Namibia continued to act as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, the function assigned to it by the General Assembly in 1967.<sup>(1)</sup> To that end, the Assembly endowed the Council with the power to promulgate laws and decrees, as might be necessary for the administration of the Territory and for the protection of the interests of the Namibian people. In its report to the Assembly on the period from 1 September 1984 to 31 August 1985,<sup>(2)</sup> the Council gave its assessment of the situation in Namibia, an account of its activities as Administering Authority and its recommendations for Assembly action. Later 1985 activities were described in its 1986 report.<sup>(3)</sup>

The Council participated in the work of the Security Council on the Namibian question and in that of other United Nations bodies whenever they dealt with the question and related matters. In particular, the Council took part in meetings of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries) and the Special Committee against Apartheid. Similarly, the Council continued to invite those bodies to its own meetings and events. In addition, the Council continued to co-operate with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries by taking part in their meetings and contributing to their declarations and resolutions on Namibia.

In accordance with a 1984 Assembly resolution,<sup>(4)</sup> the Council continued to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) in formulating and implementing its programme of work, while SWAPO participated in the work of the Council, its Steering Committee and other subsidiary bodies. It also continued to consider questions relating to the accession of Namibia to international conventions, covenants and agreements.

Also in response to that resolution, by which the Council had been requested to hold plenary meetings in Western Europe during 1985 and to recommend appropriate action to the Assembly in the light of South Africa's refusal to co-operate in implementing the 1978 United Nations plan for Namibia's independence,<sup>(5)</sup> meetings were held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985.

On 11 June,<sup>(6)</sup> the Council transmitted to the Secretary-General the Final Document of the Vienna meetings, containing a Declaration and Programme of Action. During the meetings, particular attention was given to unilateral actions by South Africa to press ahead with the installation of a so-called interim government in Namibia. It drew attention to the fact that South Africa's action had been condemned by the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on Namibia (New Delhi, India, 19-21 April) and by the President of the Security Council on 3 May. The Council condemned and rejected South Africa's decision to install an interim government and stated categorically that the 1978 Security Council resolution<sup>(5)</sup> remained the only basis for a peaceful settlement.

In the Declaration, the Council reaffirmed the right of the Namibian people to self-determination, freedom and national independence; declared once again that South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia constituted an act of aggression and was a threat to international and regional peace and security; condemned the South African régime for its ruthless repression of the Namibian people, its policy and practice of apartheid and other gross violations of human rights perpetrated against the Namibian people; and reaffirmed its support for SWAPO and its conviction that the armed liberation struggle of the Namibian people was an important factor in their efforts to achieve independence. In addition, the Council rejected and condemned persistent attempts by the United States and South Africa to link Namibian independence with irrelevant issues, such as the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola; and reiterated that there were only two parties to the Namibian conflict—the people of Namibia and South Africa—and that the Namibian question was a decolonization issue to be resolved in accordance with the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(7)</sup>

Under the Programme of Action, the Council, among other things, urged the Security Council to act decisively to implement its resolutions 385(1976),<sup>(8)</sup> 435(1978)<sup>(5)</sup> and 539(1983)<sup>(9)</sup> by taking action against South Africa's manoeuvres and schemes to bypass or undermine the United Nations plan for Namibian independence, and resolved to promote the imposition of mandatory sanctions against South Africa by the Security Council, in order to ensure its compliance with the plan. It said it would continue to carry out high-level consultations with SWAPO, and urged non-governmental organizations (NGOs), particularly trade unions, to campaign in their countries for comprehensive sanctions against South Africa. The Council invited the United Nations and Member States to take cognizance of the fact that 1985 marked the fortieth year of United Nations consideration of the Namibian question and urged that the Namibian cause be highlighted in the context of the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(7)</sup>

As part of its efforts to protect Namibia's interests, the Council had adopted in 1974(10) Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia and embarked on a series of activities to implement it. During 1985, culminating several years of preparation, the Council decided to take legal action in the domestic courts of States against corporations or individuals involved in the exploitation, transport, processing or purchase of Namibia's natural resources, with such legal action to commence in the Netherlands. In its Vienna Programme of Action, the Council stated that it would promote actively the implementation of the Decree through legal action in the domestic courts of States and through political action and consultations intended to put an end to the plunder of Namibia's natural resources.

Another Council function was the dissemination of information on the Namibian question and the mobilization of international public opinion in support of the Namibian people's struggle for independence. The Council held a number of symposia and seminars during 1985, including a Seminar on the Intensification of International Action for the Immediate Independence of Namibia (Brazzaville, Congo, 25-29 March). The Seminar's participants called on States, particularly the Western countries, to stop transnational corporations (TNCs) from plundering Namibian resources, and urged Governments and academic institutions to afford Namibians the opportunity to acquire the skills and experience necessary for the development of an independent Namibia.

A Symposium on the Strengthening of International Solidarity with the Heroic Struggle of the Namibian People, Led by Their Sole and Authentic Representative, SWAPO (Sofia, Bulgaria, 22-26 April), examined the situation in Namibia resulting from the continued illegal occupation by South Africa. It urged the convening of a Security Council meeting to impose comprehensive, mandatory sanctions against South Africa and increased political, diplomatic, military, material and moral support for SWAPO to ensure the earliest possible achievement of independence.

A Symposium on the Immediate Independence of Namibia—a Common Responsibility (Singapore, 6-10 May) declared that more up-to-date information on the Namibian situation should be distributed to people in Asia in languages familiar to the majority and in such a way as to be readily understood by those with little knowledge of the issue.

The Seminar on the Intransigence of the South African Régime with regard to Namibia: Strategies for Hastening the Independence of Namibia (Georgetown, Guyana, 29 July-2 August) recommended that the United Nations assume its full responsibility for Namibia and counter attempts by South Africa, the Federal Republic of Germany, the United Kingdom and the United States to bypass the United Nations.

The Conference on the Intensification of International Action for the Independence of Namibia (New York, 11-13 September)<sup>(11)</sup> brought together parliamentarians/legislators, scholars, prominent personalities, representatives of NGOs and support groups, and members of the mass media from throughout the world. It adopted a Plan for the Intensification of International Action for the Independence of Namibia, in which it called on Governments to grant formal accreditation to SWAPO, and demanded the immediate release of political prisoners held by South Africa and the granting of prisoner-of-war status to Namibian freedom fighters. It also made a series of recommendations with regard to Namibia's natural resources and called for action by NGOs to disseminate accurate information on Namibia.

On 25 May, the Council held its annual meeting to observe Africa Liberation Day and the twenty-second anniversary of OAU. The Council also commemorated Namibia Day on 26 August and, pursuant to a 1976 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(12)</sup> the Week of Solidarity with the People of Namibia and Their Liberation Movement, SWAPO. In observance of the Week of Solidarity (28 October-1 November),<sup>(13)</sup> two special meetings of the Council were held on 28 October; messages of solidarity were received from a number of heads of State or Government, Foreign Ministers, United Nations permanent representatives and various organizations.

The Council represented Namibia throughout the year at meetings of United Nations specialized agencies and other entities. In addition, it undertook the Nationhood Programme (see p. 1130), channelled assistance to the Territory through the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see p. 1127) and formulated policies for the United Nations Institute for Namibia (see p. 1131).

Missions. In accordance with a 1984 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(4)</sup> the Council sent missions of consultation in 1985 to Africa, Asia, and Western Europe,<sup>(2)</sup> covering the following: Saudi Arabia (16-18 March); the Congo, Angola and SWAPO (31 March-5 April); Indonesia and Brunei Darussalam (18 May); and Finland, Sweden, Denmark and Norway (20-30 May). The purpose of the missions was to promote implementation of United Nations resolutions on Namibia and mobilize greater international support for its speedy independence. A high-level Council delegation held consultations with SWAPO leaders (Luanda, Angola, 1 and 2 September)<sup>(3)</sup> and emphasized that the Council's objectives were the same as those of SWAPO; the mission also visited the SWAPO Health and Education Centre at Kwanza Sul, Angola, from 9 to 11 September.<sup>(14)</sup>

The missions urged the Governments visited, pending imposition by the Security Council of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa, to apply sanctions unilaterally and collectively so as to comply with the boycott of South Africa called for by the General Assembly in 1981.<sup>(15)</sup>

In Saudi Arabia, the Government observed that there were strong similarities between the struggles for self-determination and independence waged by the peoples of Namibia and Palestine. It stated that the wide-ranging collaboration in the economic, political, military and nuclear fields between South Africa and Israel was a source of concern to the international community. It assured the mission that it would continue to contribute generously to the United Nations Fund for Namibia.

In the Congo, both the mission and the Government condemned continuing attempts by South Africa to set up puppet political institutions and impose an "internal settlement" in Namibia, defying United Nations decisions. In that context, they rejected the puppet Multi-Party Conference (MPC) as the latest political stratagem devised by South Africa to impose a neo-colonial settlement in Namibia.

In Angola, the Government stated that the burden of the struggle for the liberation of Namibia had been left entirely to the front-line States and to Angola in particular. As a result, more Angolans had lost their lives and more property had been destroyed than during their own struggle for liberation. While in Angola, the mission reviewed developments with SWAPO, whose President proposed that the Council for Namibia take more initiative in disseminating information and mobilizing international public opinion in support of the Namibian cause, particularly in the United States. He suggested that a mission be sent to consult with United States government officials.

The Indonesian Government and the mission stressed that the United Nations plan for Namibian independence, adopted by the Security Council in 1978,<sup>(5)</sup> remained unimplemented because of the so-called policy of linkage expounded by South Africa and the United States. The two parties rejected the linkage between Namibian independence and extraneous issues such as the presence of Cuban troops in Angola. They emphasized that the international community should impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

Brunei Darussalam condemned the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa, and reaffirmed Namibia's legitimate right to struggle for self-determination by all means under SWAPO leadership.

In Finland, the mission outlined specific areas of increased assistance required by the Fund for Namibia. The Finnish Government declared that it was critical to get a consensus in the Security Council for a new United Nations initiative to expedite Namibia's independence, and stressed the importance of creating conditions in which the Council could adopt stronger measures.

The Swedish Government emphasized that foreign exploitation of Namibia's natural resources should be halted, and referred to a 1979 Swedish law extended in 1985 which prohibited further Swedish investment in South Africa and Namibia. Sweden had also declared that imports of uranium from Namibia were unacceptable.

Denmark underlined the importance of isolating the apartheid régime, and stated that it considered the policy of apartheid a threat to international peace and therefore supported binding sanctions by the Security Council.

The mission to Norway expressed concern regarding Norwegian involvement in the sale and transport of oil to South Africa. The Government replied that its policy was not to sell Norwegian oil to South Africa. Regarding its involvement in the transport of oil, the Government had taken limited unilateral measures, with all shipping companies transporting oil to South Africa being required to register with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The Government had also proposed a survey of the shipping companies to evaluate their activities with South Africa. Norway stated that Namibia was a priority area for assistance and promised an increase in its assistance to various projects.

Communications. During 1985, communications on different aspects of the situation in Namibia were addressed by a number of countries and organizations to the Secretary-General and the President of the Security Council.

In a 15 April letter, (16) South Africa transmitted a statement to the Security Council, reaffirming its commitment to the peaceful resolution of regional problems. South Africa trusted that its decision to complete the disengagement process in southern Angola would enhance prospects for peace, and in particular, be conducive to the withdrawal of Cubans from Angola. Such a development would open the way to the peaceful solution of the region's problems, including the question of Namibian independence.

Many countries declared that they considered to be null and void an announcement by South Africa that it intended to set up an interim government in Namibia. Among them were China (22 April), (17) Cuba (22 April), (18) the United Kingdom (22 April), (19) the United States (22 April), (20) France (23 April), (21) Egypt (24 April), (22) the USSR (30 April), (23) the Syrian Arab Republic (6 May), (24) Algeria (7 May), (25) Uruguay (13 May), (26) the Sudan (17 May), (27) Japan (20 May), (28) Mongolia (10 June), (29) Venezuela (13 June), (30) Democratic Kampuchea (17 June), (31) the United Republic of Tanzania (19 June), (32) Spain (20 June), (33) Brazil (20 June), (34) and 21 June (35), Yugoslavia (28 June), (36) Cyprus (5 July), (37) and the Ukrainian SSR (17 September). (38)

Similar views of the South African announcement were expressed by the Council for Namibia (5 June), (39) the Seventy-fourth Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Ottawa, Canada, 2-7 September) (15 October), (40) the heads of Government of Commonwealth States (Nassau, Bahamas, 16-22 October) (28 October), (41) and the thirtieth Plenary Assembly of the World Federation of United Nations Associations (Geneva, 30 September-5 October) (14 November). (42)

On 1 May, (43) Indonesia forwarded the Declaration of the Commemorative Meeting in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Asian-African Conference (Bandung, 24 and 25 April), reiterating solidarity with the struggle of the Namibian people to achieve independence and condemning the South African decision to install a puppet administration in Namibia.

On 2 May, (44) Italy, on behalf of the 10 States members of the European Community (EC), transmitted a declaration on southern Africa adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Ten at the fifty-seventh Ministerial Meeting on European Political Co-operation (Luxembourg, 29 April), declaring null and void the setting up of an interim government in Namibia by South Africa.

Madagascar conveyed on 18 September (45) the text of a resolution adopted by the OAU Council of Ministers (forty-second session, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 10-17 July) which declared South Africa's installation of an interim government in Namibia to be illegal, null and void.

On 19 April (46) and 8 May, (47) India forwarded, respectively, a statement adopted at the inaugural session of the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on Namibia (New Delhi, 19-21 April) and the text of the Meeting's final document, condemning South Africa's decision to install a so-called internal administration in Namibia.

Argentina, on 10 June, (48) transmitted the text of a 24 May communique by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Public Worship, stating that the proposal to grant so-called autonomy to the Territory appeared to be another attempt to halt Namibian independence. It reiterated that the question was one of colonialism, and rejected the attempt to transform it into a matter of East-West confrontation.

The issue of Namibia's natural resources was addressed by the USSR in a 19 August note verbale (49) in which it condemned the continued plundering of those resources by TNCs of Western countries. It regarded their illegal exploitation as a violation of the United Nations Charter and of decisions of United Nations bodies. The USSR supported the General Assembly's appeal to the Security Council for the immediate imposition of mandatory sanctions against South Africa in accordance with the Charter.

Yemen annexed to a 15 October letter (50) the communiqué of the co-ordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 9 October); the Ministers reaffirmed their support of the Namibian people for independence, declared the continuing illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa to be an act of aggression, and rejected any linkage between Namibian independence and the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola.

By a letter of 22 October, (51) Burkina Faso stated that its delegation to the 1985 session of the General Assembly would not participate in ceremonies commemorating the United Nations fortieth anniversary inasmuch as SWAPO and the Palestine Liberation Organization were excluded from them owing to the absence of an invitation to their respective leaders, Sam Nujoma and Yasser Arafat, to take part.

A resolution on the responsibilities of the Pan African News Agency (PANA) and the African press in the struggle against apartheid, adopted by the Conference of African Ministers of Information (first extraordinary session, Cairo, 23-25 November), was transmitted by Egypt on 4 December. (52) The resolution urged African information media and PANA to include as priority objectives the sensitization of African and international public opinion to the struggle of the peoples of South Africa and Namibia for freedom.

Reports of the Secretary-General. In June 1985,(53) the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a report containing an account of developments since his 1983 report(54) on the implementation of Council resolutions 435(1978)(5) and 439(1978)(55) on Namibia. He stated that there had been no change in South Africa's position regarding the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola as a pre-condition for the implementation of resolution 435(1978). Consequently, it was not possible to finalize arrangements to implement the United Nations plan for Namibia. Difficulties had been compounded by South Africa's recent decision to establish an interim government in Namibia. He thought it important that South Africa reconsider the implications of its decision and desist. He urged that South Africa and others in a position to help make a renewed effort to expedite implementation of resolution 435(1978).

Pursuant to a 19 June Security Council resolution (see p. 1097), the Secretary-General submitted a report in September(56) in which he reiterated that no progress had been made in implementing resolution 435(1978) and appealed once again to South Africa to proceed forthwith with its implementation, declaring that continuation of the current impasse did not serve the interest of any party.

In response to two 1984 General Assembly resolutions, one on the situation in Namibia(57) and the other(58) on implementing Council resolution 435(1978), the Secretary-General, in another September report,(59) conveyed to the Assembly replies received from 14 Governments on action taken by them to implement those resolutions.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. A Secretariat working paper,(60) covering developments in Namibia from May 1984 to April 1985, was submitted to the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples. The report considered the illegal occupation of the Territory by South Africa, efforts to achieve a peaceful settlement, the Namibian economy, and social and educational conditions. It stated that South Africa had escalated its suppression of resistance to the occupation, which was characterized by ruthless political repression, racial discrimination and apartheid, gross violations of human rights and economic exploitation. Peace efforts continued by the Security Council, the General Assembly, the Council for Namibia, regional and other intergovernmental bodies and groups. In terms of economic ties, Namibia was almost totally dependent on South Africa. The basic structure of the Namibian economy was typically colonial, almost exclusively tailored to the needs and demands of foreign capital. Virtually the entire output of the economy's primary sectors—mining, farming and fishing—was exported. Discriminatory laws continued to govern health services, education, housing and all other aspects of daily life.

The Committee on colonial countries (Tunis, Tunisia, 13-17 May) adopted by consensus a decision(61) in which it reaffirmed the right of the Namibian people to independence; reiterated that Namibia's accession to independence must be with its territorial integrity intact, including Walvis Bay, the Penguin Islands and other offshore islands; rejected attempts by the United States and South Africa to link Namibian independence with extraneous issues; demanded that South Africa release all Namibian political prisoners; condemned South Africa for its ever-increasing military buildup in Namibia; deplored the continuing collaboration of certain Western and other countries with South Africa; paid tribute to the front-line and other African States for their commitment to Namibian independence; called on the International Monetary Fund to end co-operation with the apartheid régime; and requested the Secretary-General to intensify his efforts to mobilize world public opinion against South Africa's Namibian policy.

The text of the decision was transmitted to the Security Council on 10 June(62) by the Chairman of the Committee. The Chairman drew the Council's attention to those paragraphs which reaffirmed that resolution 435(1978) remained the only basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibian question; called for scrupulous observance of Council resolution 558(1984),(63) enjoining Member States to refrain from importing armaments from South Africa; and recommended that the Council impose forthwith mandatory sanctions against South Africa.

In a 7 August decision,(64) the Committee demanded the dismantling of all military bases in Namibia and cessation of the war against the Namibian people; condemned South Africa for its military buildup in Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians and its use of mercenaries to reinforce its illegal occupation; and urged Governments, specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to increase material assistance to refugees forced to flee from Namibia and South Africa into neighbouring States.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, in a 26 February resolution on the situation in southern Africa,(65) reaffirmed the right of the Namibian people to self-determination, freedom and independence; condemned the continued violations of the human rights of peoples under colonial domination; and declared that the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa continued to constitute an act of aggression against the Namibian people.

Also on 26 February,(66) the Commission condemned South Africa for the military buildup in Namibia, the training of Namibians for tribal armies, the use of mercenaries to suppress the Namibian people, and the torture and other forms of brutality meted out to Namibians and captured SWAPO freedom fighters. In a further 26 February resolution,(67) the Commission renewed its request to the Government of South Africa to allow the Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts to make on-the-spot investigations of living conditions in South African and Namibian prisons and of the treatment of prisoners. (See also p. 860.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1985/59, requested United Nations organizations to withhold assistance to South Africa until it restored self-determination and independence to the Namibian people, and to refrain from any action which might imply recognition of, or support for, the occupation of Namibia. It condemned South Africa's non-compliance with United Nations resolutions and decisions, particularly Security Council resolution 435(1978), and declared illegal, null and void its installation of an interim government in Namibia.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May/June)

On 3 May 1985, following consultations, the Security Council President issued a statement,(68) on behalf of the members of the Council, as follows:

"Members of the Security Council have learned with indignation and grave concern of the decision taken in Pretoria to establish a so-called interim government in illegally occupied Namibia.

"This manoeuvre is contrary to the expressed will of the international community and in defiance of United Nations resolutions and decisions, in particular Security Council resolutions 435(1978) and 439(1978), which declare that any unilateral measures taken by the illegal administration in Namibia in contravention of relevant Council resolutions are null and void.

"The latest action by the illegal occupation régime in Namibia is in disregard of the demands of the Namibian people for self-determination and genuine independence and of the will of the international community. It further complicates the efforts to proceed expeditiously with implementation of resolution 435(1978), which remains the only acceptable basis for a peaceful and internationally recognized settlement of the Namibian question. This once again calls into question South Africa's commitment to the implementation of resolution 435(1978).

"Members of the Council condemn and reject any unilateral action by South Africa leading towards an internal settlement outside resolution 435(1978) as unacceptable, and declare the establishment of the so-called interim government in Namibia to be null and void. They also declare that any further measures taken in pursuance of this action will be without effect. They call upon all States Members of the United Nations and the international community at large to repudiate this action and to refrain from according any recognition to it.

"Members of the Council call upon South Africa to rescind the action taken by it and to co-operate in and facilitate the implementation of the United Nations plan contained in resolution 435(1978), as called for in Council resolution 539(1983).

"Members of the Council reaffirm that the United Nations has primary and direct responsibility over Namibia. It is the intention of the Security Council, in fulfilment of that responsibility, to remain seized of the situation in and relating to Namibia, with a view to ensuring full compliance by South Africa in the expeditious and unconditional implementation of Council resolution 435(1978)."

South Africa responded to the statement in a letter of 4 May,(69) which enclosed a 4 May statement by the South African Foreign Minister, a draft aide-mémoire, and an 18 April statement to the South African Parliament by P. W. Botha, President of South Africa. The Foreign Minister said that South Africa considered the Council President's statement to be ill-founded and without effect; however, it reserved the right to withdraw unilaterally from the Territory at any time that it might so wish. In the aide-mémoire, South Africa declared that it remained committed to the implementation of the international settlement plan for Namibia, provided agreement could be reached on Cuban withdrawal from Angola. The South African Government was aware of its responsibilities in Namibia, which derived from its position that its presence in the Territory was legal and that there was no legally binding decision to the contrary of the International Court of Justice or of the United Nations taken in accordance with the Charter. The South African President told Parliament that MPC had requested the establishment of an internal government, that MPC had never claimed to be the sole representative of the Namibian people and that it was willing to discuss the future of Namibia with other political parties, including SWAPO. South Africa considered that the implementation of the MPC proposals could contribute to Namibian reconciliation and welfare and eventually independence.

The Security Council took up the Namibian question at 12 meetings between 10 and 19 June. It convened in response to requests of 23 May by India,(70) on behalf of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, and by Mozambique,(71) on behalf of the Group of African States.

Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bangladesh, Barbados, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Cameroon, Canada, the Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Guatemala, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Indonesia, Iran, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Kuwait, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Malta, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Seychelles, South Africa, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Turkey, Uganda, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia and Zimbabwe were invited, at their request, to participate without vote in the Council's discussion.

Certain individuals were also invited to address the Council, under rule 39a of its provisional rules of procedure. At the request of Burkino Faso, Egypt and Madagascar, Sam Nujoma,<sup>(72)</sup> SWAPO President, Mfanafuthi J. Makatini,<sup>(73)</sup> representative of the African National Congress of South Africa (ANC), Gora Ebrahim,<sup>(74)</sup> representative of the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania (PAC), and Neo Mnumzana,<sup>(75)</sup> Deputy Chief Representative of ANC, were invited. At the request of the Sudan,<sup>(76)</sup> on behalf of the Arab Group, Clovis Maksoud, Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States, was invited.

Also under rule 39, the Council invited representatives of certain other United Nations bodies to participate: the Acting President of the Council for Namibia, the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid and the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries.

On 19 June, the Security Council adopted resolution 566(1985).

The Security Council,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General,

Having heard the statement by the Acting President of the United Nations Council for Namibia,

Having considered the statement by Mr. Sam Nujoma, President of the South West Africa People's Organization,

Commending the South West Africa People's Organization for its preparedness to co-operate fully with the Secretary-General of the United Nations and his Special Representative, including its expressed readiness to sign and observe a cease-fire agreement with South Africa, in the implementation of the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia as embodied in Security Council resolution 435(1978),

Recalling General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 and 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966,

Recalling and reaffirming its resolutions 269(1969), 276(1970), 301(1971), 385(1976), 431(1978), 432(1978), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983) and 539(1983),

Recalling the statement by the President of the Security Council of 3 May 1985, on behalf of the Council, which, inter alia, declared the establishment of the so-called interim government in Namibia to be null and void,

Gravely concerned at the tension and instability created by the hostile policies of the apartheid régime throughout southern Africa and the mounting threat to the security of the region and its wider implications for international peace and security resulting from that régime's continued utilization of Namibia as a springboard for military attacks against and destabilization of African States in the region,

Reaffirming the legal responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia and the primary responsibility of the Security Council for ensuring the implementation of its resolutions, in particular resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978) which contain the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia.

Noting that 1985 marks the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, as well as the twenty-fifth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and expressing grave concern that the question of Namibia has been with the Organization since its inception and still remains unresolved,

Welcoming the emerging and intensified world-wide campaign of people from all spheres of life against the racist régime of South Africa in a concerted effort to bring about an end to the illegal occupation of Namibia and to apartheid;

1. Condemns South Africa for its continued illegal occupation of Namibia in flagrant defiance of resolutions of the General Assembly and decisions of the Security Council;

2. Reaffirms the legitimacy of the struggle of the Namibian people against the illegal occupation of the racist régime of South Africa and calls upon all States to increase their moral and material assistance to the Namibian people;

3. Further condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim government in Windhoek and declares that this action, taken even while the Security Council has been in session, constitutes a direct affront to the Council and a clear defiance of its resolutions, particularly resolutions 435(1978) and 439(1978);

4. Declares that action to be illegal and null and void and states that no recognition will be accorded to it either by the United Nations or any Member State or to any representative or organ established in pursuance thereof;

5. Demands that the racist régime of South Africa immediately rescind the aforementioned illegal and unilateral action;

6. Further condemns South Africa for its obstruction of the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) by insisting on conditions contrary to the provisions of the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia;

7. Rejects once again South Africa's insistence on linking the independence of Namibia to irrelevant and extraneous issues as incompatible with resolution 435(1978), other decisions of the Security Council and the resolutions of the General Assembly on Namibia, including resolution 1514(XV);

<sup>72</sup>Rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure states: "The Security Council may invite members of the Secretariat or other persons, whom it considers competent for the purpose, to supply it with information or to give other assistance in examining matters within its competence."

8. Declares once again that the independence of Namibia cannot be held hostage to the resolution of issues that are alien to resolution 435(1978);

9. Reiterates that resolution 435(1978), embodying the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, is the only internationally accepted basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibian problem and demands its immediate and unconditional implementation;

10. Affirms that the consultations undertaken by the Secretary-General pursuant to paragraph 5 of resolution 532(1983) have confirmed that all the outstanding issues relevant to resolution 435(1978) have been resolved, except for the choice of the electoral system;

11. Decides to mandate the Secretary-General to resume immediate contact with South Africa with a view to obtaining its choice of the electoral system to be used for the election, under United Nations supervision and control, for the Constituent Assembly, in terms of resolution 435(1978), in order to pave the way for the adoption by the Security Council of the enabling resolution for the implementation of the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia;

12. Demands that South Africa co-operate fully with the Security Council and the Secretary-General in the implementation of the present resolution;

13. Strongly warns South Africa that failure to do so would compel the Security Council to meet forthwith to consider the adoption of appropriate measures under the Charter, including Chapter VII, as additional pressure to ensure South Africa's compliance with the above-mentioned resolutions;

14. Urges States Members of the United Nations that have not done so to consider in the mean time taking appropriate voluntary measures against South Africa, which could include the following:

(a) Suspension of new investments and application of disincentives to that end;

(b) Re-examination of maritime and aerial relations with South Africa;

(c) Prohibition of the sale of krugerrands and all other coins minted in South Africa;

(d) Restrictions on sports and cultural relations;

15. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the implementation of the present resolution not later than the first week of September 1985;

16. Decides to remain seized of the matter and to meet immediately upon receipt of the Secretary-General's report for the purpose of reviewing progress in the implementation of resolution 435(1978) and, in the event of continued obstruction by South Africa, to invoke paragraph 13 of the present resolution.

19 June 1985 Meeting 2595 13-0-2

6-nation draft (S/17284/Rev.2).

Sponsors: Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago. Meeting numbers: SC 2583-2590, 2592-2595

Vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

Against: None.

Abstaining: United Kingdom, United States.

Explaining its abstention, the United Kingdom stated that it could not support any suggestion that armed struggle was to be preferred to negotiations, nor did it think that the Council should tie the hands of Member States or prejudice the outcome of future meetings. The United States said that there were a number of elements in the draft on which it was not in agreement, its central concern being that mandatory sanctions were likely to retard, rather than advance, Namibian independence.

Australia believed that only mandatory economic sanctions could really be effective and remained ready to support their imposition against South Africa in response to its apartheid policies. Noting that the international community was becoming increasingly irritated by South Africa's intransigence on Namibia, France asserted that, if there was no significant movement within 18 months, it would undertake unilateral economic measures against South Africa. The USSR felt that the resolution did not provide for effective measures that could compel South Africa to implement the Council's resolutions on Namibian independence and that South Africa would be brought to see reason only by the adoption of sanctions under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter.

Speaking in the debate, India pointed out that the Council was meeting to consider the Namibian situation after a lapse of almost two years, a sad commentary on the lack of progress towards implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibia's independence. It was characteristic that South Africa should defy international public opinion and the Security Council and continue with plans to install a puppet administration in Namibia. If South Africa persisted in its intransigence, there could be no option but to impose mandatory sanctions.

The Acting President of the Council for Namibia urged the Security Council to act decisively to ensure South Africa's co-operation with resolution 435(1978), without modification or pre-conditions.

South Africa said it would be unrealistic to consider the question of Namibia outside the regional context, and countries in the region should abide by certain ground rules. No State should make its territory available to those wishing to promote violence against other States and no foreign forces should be permitted to intervene in the region; once a country allowed the USSR and its surrogates to establish a presence within its borders, it was difficult to get rid of them. The problems of Angola and Namibia were inextricably linked; however, the Namibian people could not wait indefinitely for the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola. If a firm agreement could be reached in that regard, South Africa would carry out its undertaking to implement the international settlement plan. The proposed arrangement for the internal administration of Namibia should be seen as an interim mechanism, pending agreement on the Territory's independence.

Angola stated that in order to break the deadlock on the Namibian problem, it had put forward a programme for reducing the number of Cuban troops on its territory. Features of that programme included the withdrawal of South African forces from Angola, a declaration by South Africa committing it to implement resolution 435(1978), a cease-fire agreement between South Africa and SWAPO, and the signing, under Security Council auspices, of an international agreement between Angola, South Africa, Cuba and SWAPO, defining each party's obligations to assure Namibian independence and the guarantees necessary to preserve Angolan security and territorial integrity. However, South Africa's attitude continued to be very hostile, an attitude made possible by the support of certain Western Powers which should be held responsible for the situation in southern Africa. Since January 1985, South Africa had been planning an operation aimed at destroying the Malongo oil complex in Angola's Cabinda province (see p. 181). Following the sabotage attempt, there had been increased reconnaissance flights by the South African air force over Angola.

Cuba maintained that the presence of Cuban forces in Angola was not connected with Namibia, that those forces had gone to Angola at the request of its Government to oppose an invasion by the South African army and other acts of aggression. Conditions for bringing about peace were Namibian independence, the end of aid to the counter-revolutionary bands of União Nacional para a Independência Total de Angola (UNITA) and an international guarantee that agreements would be respected.

The insistence on linkage by the United States and South Africa could only be interpreted as an undeclared repudiation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) and of the United Nations plan for Namibian independence, Zambia said. Czechoslovakia, Kuwait, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Poland, the Syrian Arab Republic and Uganda agreed. Malaysia said that there had never been any justification for raising the linkage issue, that it was simply an exercise in raw power. The United States said there was a wide area of international consensus on Namibia. Foremost among the points of agreement was the need to bring the Territory to independence under resolution 435 (1978), a goal to which the United States remained dedicated. It had made its view of South Africa's announced intention to establish an "interim government" absolutely clear—any purported transfer of power to bodies established in Namibia would be null and void; such institutions would have no standing. It was for the Namibian people to choose their own leaders in free and fair elections under United Nations supervision and control. A settlement could be within grasp, given sufficient will by the parties most concerned. Prior to the Security Council's previous meetings on Namibia, only one barrier had remained—South Africa's insistence on the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola—and by late summer of 1984 Cuban troop withdrawal was being discussed within the context of resolution 435(1978). Having been involved for several months in discussions with the two parties aimed at narrowing the gap between their positions, the United States remained convinced that the gap could be bridged, and would continue its efforts to bring the parties together.

A large number of countries called for the implementation of resolution 435(1978) as the only basis for the settlement of the Namibian problem. Among them were Afghanistan, Australia, Bangladesh, Barbados, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Canada, the Congo, Cyprus, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Egypt, Ethiopia, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Haiti, Hungary, Japan, Kenya, Kuwait, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malta, Morocco, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Seychelles, Sri Lanka, the Sudan, Thailand, Turkey, the Ukrainian SSR, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Zambia.

Upholding resolution 435(1978) as the basis for securing Namibian independence at the earliest possible date, the United Kingdom emphasized that the Security Council should not act in a way which jeopardized the plan or which could entail further delay. It had been suggested by some that further efforts at negotiation should be given up; that would be a tragic error.

The United Republic of Tanzania urged the Council to ensure that implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibia commenced.

Algeria warned that South Africa was preparing, commensurate with its intransigence, to impose a so-called internal solution on Namibia and ignore its decolonization. In the view of Australia, Bulgaria, Democratic Yemen, Egypt, the Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Mongolia, Mozambique, Pakistan, Panama, Poland, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom and Zimbabwe, South Africa's attempts to put together the political coalition of MPC and install an "interim government" in Namibia constituted a violation of resolution 435(1978) and were null and void.

Nigeria held that no amount of subterfuge could disguise the fact that Namibia was a classic case of decolonization; Nigeria was amazed at the latitude given South Africa to continue to determine the fate of a Territory over which it ceased to have legal responsibility almost 19 years previously, when the General Assembly had terminated South Africa's mandate over Namibia and assumed direct responsibility for the Territory.<sup>(77)</sup> In Ghana's opinion, action in respect of Namibia should be based on the understanding that South Africa's presence was illegal and an impediment to Namibian freedom. It urged the Council to set in train the plan contained in resolution 435(1978) and to agree on selective economic sanctions.

Nothing short of mandatory sanctions would force South Africa to comply with resolution 435(1978), Pakistan contended. Others favouring sanctions included Afghanistan, Argentina, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, Indonesia, Jamaica, Kenya, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mexico, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, the Ukrainian SSR, the United Arab Emirates and Viet Nam.

Burkina Faso appealed for an end to opposition to binding sanctions. The Council's debate would be significant only if it forged ahead, something it had failed to do in the past. Burkina Faso made its appeal not only to speed Namibia's achievement of independence, but above all so that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>(78)</sup> would no longer be scorned and so that democrats, patriots and revolutionaries would no longer languish in South African gaols.

If South Africa continued in its intransigence, there was no option but to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions, said Yugoslavia.

The events of the previous two years, China stated, had further proved that South Africa was solely responsible for the failure to implement the relevant Security Council resolutions. The Council should promptly take the following actions: demand that South Africa stop its engineering of the "interim government" and implement resolution 435(1978); demand that all Council members, especially the permanent members, make genuine efforts to implement Council resolutions; entrust the Secretary-General with urging South Africa to enter into negotiations with SWAPO; call on all countries to exert greater pressure on South Africa through arms and oil embargoes; and appeal for greater assistance to SWAPO and the front-line States.

The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid asserted that the time had come to repudiate all attempts to negotiate Namibian independence outside the context of the United Nations, to establish a time-frame for independence, to apply mandatory sanctions against South Africa, and to declare that linkage had no validity. The Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries called for the immediate implementation of resolution 435(1978), without modification, qualification or pre-conditions, the imposing of economic sanctions on South Africa and the extension of assistance to the Namibian people.

A number of countries, including Angola, Bulgaria, China, Cuba, Ethiopia, Ghana, Indonesia, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Nicaragua, the Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe, criticized the policy of constructive engagement—quiet diplomacy—which had been advanced as an alternative to sanctions.

Efforts of the Western contact group (Canada, France, Federal Republic of Germany, United Kingdom, United States) to negotiate South Africa's compliance with the independence plan had reached an impasse, according to Nigeria. Canada admitted that the contact group had not succeeded, any more than others had, in bringing independence to Namibia, but said it should not disband because it still had a role to play.

Cameroon said that current events in Namibia posed a grave threat to international peace and security. That threat was a direct consequence of the use of force within Namibia and against neighbouring States and of the continuing pillage of Namibia's natural resources. The risk of local conflicts becoming generalized threatened the very survival of mankind in the nuclear age—an aspect which was particularly relevant, given South Africa's exploitation of Namibian uranium in pursuing its nuclear programme.

Bangladesh reiterated the call to all States, as contained in Decree No. 1(10) to take legislative action to prevent the exploitation, processing, transporting and marketing of Namibian resources. Jamaica stressed that foreign economic interests, including some of the world's largest corporations from South Africa, Western Europe and North America, which had been lured to Namibia by the unusually high profits made available by South Africa's extension to the Territory of the apartheid system, were still actively exploiting Namibia's resources; those activities were a violation of Decree No. 1. Morocco demanded an end to the systematic plundering of Namibian resources in violation of the Decree.

Japan declared that Decree No. 1 had been brought to the attention of all relevant organizations and corporate executives in Japan. It did not maintain diplomatic relations with South Africa or engage in military or nuclear co-operation of any kind with South Africa, prohibited direct investments there, had called on Japanese foreign-exchange banks and their branches abroad to refrain from extending loans to South Africa and had taken measures to enforce restrictions on cultural, educational and sports contacts with it, in accordance with United Nations resolutions.

Years had passed without the implementation of resolution 435(1978) because of resources such as uranium, cobalt, manganese, platinum and other strategic metals which were being plundered in Namibia by United States companies, Iran said.

The USSR maintained that it would be naïve to assume that South Africa alone had been able to sabotage, for many decades, the process of decolonization in Namibia. South Africa could not continue that policy a single day if it did not receive support from its Western protectors, primarily the United States. It was the United States that continued to link Namibian independence with the withdrawal of the Cuban internationalists from Angola. Linkage was a plot to obstruct implementation of resolution 435(1978) and to hamper Angola's sovereign rights, including the right to self-defence. In its attempt to concoct from puppet parties a so-called interim government, South Africa was trying to hold up for decades the granting of independence to Namibia. The USSR supported the immediate adoption of effective measures against South Africa, including sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter.

An attack on Gaborone, the capital of Botswana, by South African commandos (see p. 189) was condemned by Barbados, Botswana, China, the Congo, Guyana, Lesotho, Madagascar, Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, the United Kingdom, the United States and Zimbabwe.

SWAPO's representative urged the Security Council to act decisively to secure the implementation of resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978), and to impose comprehensive sanctions under Chapter VII. Moreover, there was an imperative need for the nations of the world to increase their diplomatic, political, material, financial, humanitarian and military assistance to the struggle of the Namibian people. The United Nations system should continue existing assistance programmes which were currently of direct benefit to Namibians, including the United Nations Institute for Namibia, the Namibia Vocational Training School, the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and various scholarship programmes.

The Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States said South Africa's contempt for Security Council resolutions could not be restrained except by the imposition of credible sanctions under Chapter VII.

The representative of ANC said that the need to decolonize Namibia was as imperative as the need to eradicate apartheid, that it was time to implement without further delay resolution 435(1978), and that the most effective means to bring about compliance was to impose comprehensive sanctions. The representative of PAC said that if Western and other countries were sincere in their opposition to apartheid, they would act immediately to impose mandatory economic sanctions against South Africa.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (November)

In letters of 11 November, India,(79) pursuant to a decision taken at the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September), and Mauritius,(80) on behalf of the African Group, requested an urgent meeting of the Security Council to resume consideration of the Namibian situation.

South Africa transmitted(81) to the Secretary-General a 12 November letter from its Minister for Foreign Affairs stating that, on 6 November, the Government of National Unity in Windhoek had called on South Africa to select a system of proportional representation as a framework for elections leading to Namibian independence. South Africa had no objection to the request. Agreement would have to be reached on how the system would be implemented in practice. A 12 November statement by the Cabinet of the Transitional Government of National Unity was enclosed, declaring that the Security Council had hampered Namibian independence by dismissing that Government as "null and void", that it remained dissatisfied with the United Nations on the issue of impartiality and did not accept its designation of SWAPO as the sole representative of the Namibian people. It requested that representatives of the parties making up the Government of National Unity be permitted to address the Council when it again considered the question of Namibia.

In his 26 November reply to South Africa, the Secretary-General(82) confirmed that, following recent consultations, agreement had been reached on the system of proportional representation for the elections envisaged in resolution 435(1978). He proposed that the earliest possible date be established for a cease-fire and implementation of the resolution.

The Security Council considered the Namibian situation at five meetings between 13 and 15 November.

Cameroon, Canada, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Ghana, Iran, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritius, Senegal, South Africa, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia and Zambia, at their request, were invited to participate in the discussion without the right to vote.

At the request of Burkina Faso, Egypt and Madagascar,(83) Andimba Toivo ja Toivo, Secretary-General of SWAPO, was invited to participate in the discussion under rule 39<sup>b</sup> of the provisional rules of procedure.

Also invited to participate under rule 39, at their request, were the Acting President of the United Nations Council for Namibia, the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries and the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid.

A draft resolution,<sup>(84)</sup> later revised,<sup>(85)</sup> was submitted by Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru and Trinidad and Tobago.

By the revised draft, the Council would have determined that South Africa's refusal to comply with Council and General Assembly resolutions on Namibia constituted a threat to international peace and security, that its illegal occupation of Namibia constituted a breach of international peace, and that the repeated armed attacks perpetrated from Namibia by South Africa against independent States in southern Africa constituted acts of aggression.

The Council would have condemned South Africa for its illegal occupation of Namibia and its refusal to comply with Council and Assembly resolutions; reaffirmed the legitimacy of the Namibians' struggle against illegal occupation; demanded that South Africa dismantle the interim government installed at Windhoek on 17 June 1985; declared that Namibian independence could not be held hostage to extraneous issues such as linkage and that South Africa's refusal to co-operate with the Security Council and the Secretary-General violated the United Nations Charter; and decided, under Chapter VII of the Charter, to impose mandatory selective sanctions against South Africa.

Accordingly, under Article 41, the Council would have adopted enforcement measures, including: oil and arms embargoes; prohibition of new investments in South Africa and Namibia; prohibition of new government and bank loans and credit guarantees; termination of export credit guarantees for exports to South Africa and Namibia; prohibition of importation or enrichment of uranium from Namibia and South Africa; prohibition of supply of technology, equipment and licences for nuclear plants in South Africa, including exchange of nuclear information with it; prohibition of visits to and from South Africa and Namibia by military, security, intelligence and other defence personnel; prohibition of the sale and export of computers capable of being used by the South African army, police and security forces; cessation of funding for trade missions or for participating in exhibitions and trade fairs in South Africa and Namibia; termination of double taxation agreements with South Africa; and prohibition of the sale of krugerrands and other coins minted in South Africa or Namibia.

Further, the Council would have called on States and United Nations specialized agencies to assist in the resolution's implementation; urged States not Members of the United Nations to act in accordance with the resolution; established a Security Council committee to monitor its implementation; called on States and specialized agencies to report to the Secretary-General and on him to report to the Council on its implementation; and decided to remain seized of the matter.

On 15 November, the draft resolution received 12 votes in favour to 2 against (United Kingdom, United States), with 1 abstention (France), and was not adopted, owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council.

The United Kingdom stated before the vote that it opposed the draft because it would have been counter-productive and would have pre-empted the strategy which it had agreed with its Commonwealth partners; it had made clear its readiness to vote for non-mandatory economic measures. A less than unanimous Council could only afford comfort to South Africa. The United States said it would vote against the draft because it would impose mandatory sanctions. Supporting mandatory sanctions would have negated the United States good offices in seeking a negotiated solution.

Explaining its abstention, France said it was concerned with achieving realism and effectiveness, but the draft did not meet those criteria. Its wording did not seem the most appropriate for enabling progress to be made towards solving the Namibian question. However, on its own initiative and within the European Economic Community (EEC), France would continue to exert increased pressure on South Africa.

Peru asserted that the non-aligned countries trusted that the growing awareness of the justice of Namibia's case would soon overcome disagreements and bring about the end of the illegal occupation. Australia supported mandatory sanctions to cause South Africa to accept its international obligations. It wished the Council had achieved unanimity and sent an unambiguous signal to South Africa.

During the debate, South Africa said it regretted that the Council once again had to devote its time to the question of Namibia. The world was full of threats to international peace which should be the subject of Council debate. By comparison with other parts of the world, Namibia was relatively peaceful. The violence which did exist had been initiated by SWAPO, supported and encouraged by the United Nations. Unlike the situation in most African countries, there was a multiplicity of political expression in Namibia. On 12 November 1985, the Government of National Unity in Windhoek had announced its choice of electoral system as proportional representation, a decision to which South Africa had no objection; however, agreement would have to be reached on how the system would work in practice. Although other obstacles to implementation of the settlement plan had been removed, a great deal of work remained on the question of the withdrawal of Cubans from Angola. If the United Nations wished to play a role in the future of Namibia, it would have to demonstrate that it would be able to carry out its functions impartially.

India recalled that during the past 40 years decolonization had swept across Africa and Asia but that Namibia remained a subject nation. South Africa had scornfully defied Council and Assembly resolutions, including those it had itself accepted. It had invoked one pretext after another—firstly the question of United Nations impartiality; then the composition of the United Nations Transition Assistance Group; then the electoral system; and currently the linkage between Cuban troops in Angola and Namibian independence. It was in the context of the establishment in Namibia of an illegal interim administration that resolution 566(1985) had been adopted, warning South Africa that if it did not co-operate the Council would be compelled to consider acting under Chapter VII. India, along with the Non-Aligned Movement, believed that mandatory sanctions would make South Africa pay heed and could bring about peaceful change in southern Africa, with justice for the majority of the people in that unhappy region.

The United Kingdom said that resolution 435(1978) remained the only internationally accepted basis for a settlement and that South Africa must be persuaded there was no future in clinging to the Territory. The United Kingdom welcomed South Africa's decision on the electoral system it preferred, but was disappointed at its uncompromising reiteration of reasons for not implementing a plan that was now complete. Commonwealth heads of Government had agreed in October to adopt a number of economic measures against South Africa and to review progress after six months. The best way of conveying to South Africa a unanimous message of persuasion and pressure would be the adoption by the Council of a resolution consistent with the Commonwealth accord.

Canada expressed the view that the Council had to remind South Africa that its previous commitments to Namibian independence must be honoured. That would best be done by a strong resolution reinforcing measures already recommended. The Federal Republic of Germany supported the United Kingdom's appeal to attach more importance to a common position of the international community than to short-lived voting successes.

A number of countries, including China, Peru, Senegal and Zambia, said South Africa had made clear that it had no intention of withdrawing from Namibia.

The imposition of sanctions was supported by Burkina Faso, Cameroon, China, Cuba, Egypt, the German Democratic Republic, Ghana, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mauritius, Peru, Senegal, the Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Zambia. Egypt felt that the Security Council must use all the means available to ensure that South Africa would implement its resolutions; at stake were the lives of the people of Namibia, struggling for their independence against a racist occupier, and the security and stability of the whole of Africa.

Denmark said the Council should continue to step up the pressure on South Africa to implement resolution 435(1978). That pressure, however, should be brought to bear in unanimity, since it had been shown that a divided Council could not influence South Africa.

Australia had already introduced a number of voluntary measures against South Africa in line with its conviction that the international community had an obligation to demonstrate its opposition to South African policies in a clear and concrete manner. Ghana said South Africa had used all forms of subterfuge in the past to defer action and would not hesitate to indulge in them a few more times. Iran asked for the imposition of comprehensive mandatory sanctions instead of selective sanctions.

It was time to take resolute measures and have the Council adopt sanctions against South Africa which would compel it to liberate Namibia and refrain from attempts to establish its neo-colonialist hegemony throughout southern Africa, according to the USSR.

Suggestions that sanctions would hurt the black people of South Africa or that sanctions had not worked well in the past were rejected by India and Zambia. Cameroon said that if anyone was swayed by the argument that sanctions would hurt the blacks, let them listen to the story of those seeking freedom.

The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid said the prevailing situation inside South Africa itself required sanctions. The argument regarding the non-effectiveness of sanctions was no longer relevant. Those that still postulated such arguments did so only in their selfish interests.

The time was overdue for the Council to impose comprehensive economic sanctions on South Africa, the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries stated. Repeated attempts to bring about an independent Namibia by the exercise of reason, through negotiations, had been ignored and ridiculed by South Africa, as demonstrated by its repeated acts of aggression. The Committee's position was founded on its conviction that the United Nations was in duty bound to do everything possible to terminate South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia.

Any approach to the Namibian problem must take account of certain developments in southern Africa during the past five months, the Acting President of the Council for Namibia declared. The grudging reforms offered to black people showed that South Africa still believed in white superiority. South Africa's occupation of southern Angola to give a boost to UNITA showed its intention to keep southern African States uncertain and afraid and to weaken them through acts of destabilization. Within Namibia, South Africa's efforts to eliminate SWAPO had intensified, as part of a design to crush resistance. Decisiveness had not been the most outstanding characteristic of the Security Council in relation to Namibia. Each passing time-frame had added to the urgent need for firm action by the Council. The Council must, through mandatory sanctions, galvanize the international community to put pressure on the South African régime.

The Secretary-General of SWAPO stated that South Africa's cynicism and delaying tactics had no limit. There had been no change in its position regarding the implementation of resolution 435(1978). As long as South Africa and the United States Administration remained intransigent, there would be no progress. Effective and binding sanctions should be the decision of the hour.

The Security Council, on 20 September in resolution 571(1985), on 7 October in resolution 574(1985) and on 6 December in resolution 577(1985), condemned South Africa for its utilization of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating armed invasions and destabilization of Angola, as well as sustaining its occupation of part of that country.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Six 1985 General Assembly resolutions (40/97 A-F) dealt with Namibia; two of these (40/97 A and B) concerned the situation there.

On 13 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/97 A by recorded vote.

Situation in Namibia resulting from the illegal occupation of the Territory by South Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966, by which it decided to terminate the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and to place the Territory under the direct responsibility of the United Nations,

Recalling, in particular, its resolution 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967, by which it established the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

Recalling further its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia,

Having examined also the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.

Recalling further other resolutions and decisions declaring the illegality of the continued occupation of Namibia by South Africa, in particular Security Council resolution 284(1970) of 29 July 1970 and the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971,

Bearing in mind that 1986 will mark the twentieth anniversary of the termination of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia by the General Assembly on 27 October 1966, and expressing its grave concern that, in the period of time that has elapsed, South Africa has continued its illegal occupation of Namibia in defiance of resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly,

Recalling also its resolutions 3111(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973 and 31/146 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976, by which it, inter alia, recognized the South West Africa People's Organization as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people and granted observer status to it,

Recalling further its resolutions ES-8/2 of 14 September 1981 and 36/121 B of 10 December 1981, by which it called upon States to cease forthwith, individually and collectively, all dealings with South Africa in order totally to isolate it politically, economically, militarily and culturally,

Taking note of Security Council resolution 566(1985) of 19 June 1985, by which the Council condemned the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim government and declared such action to be illegal, null and void,

Noting also the Final Document of the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries on the question of Namibia, held at New Delhi from 19 to 21 April 1985, the consensus on Namibia adopted by the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples at its extraordinary session held at Tunis from 13 to 17 May 1985, the Final Document adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985, the resolution on Namibia adopted by the Organization of African Unity Co-ordinating Committee for the Liberation of Africa at its forty-fourth session, held at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, from 4 to 6 July 1985, and by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its forty-second ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 10 to 17 July 1985, and the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985,

Strongly reiterating that the continuing illegal and colonial occupation of Namibia by South Africa, in defiance of repeated General Assembly and Security Council resolutions, constitutes an act of aggression against the Namibian people and a challenge to the authority of the United Nations, which has direct responsibility for Namibia until independence,

Stressing the solemn responsibility of the international community to take all possible measures in support of the Namibian people in their liberation struggle under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization,

Noting that 1985 marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the creation of the South West Africa People's Organization,

Reaffirming its full support for the armed struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, to achieve self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia, and recognizing that 1986 will mark the twentieth anniversary of the launching of the armed struggle by the South West Africa People's Organization against South Africa's colonial occupation,

Indignant at South Africa's persistent refusal to comply with resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 439(1978) of 13 November 1978, 532(1983) of 31 May 1983, 539(1983) of 28 October 1983 and 566(1985) of 19 June 1985, and at its manoeuvres aimed at perpetuating its illegal occupation of Namibia and its brutal exploitation of the Namibian people,

Deploping South Africa's continued intransigence and insistence on irrelevant and unacceptable pre-conditions to the independence of Namibia, its attempts to bypass the United Nations and its designs aimed at perpetuating its illegal occupation of the Territory through the establishment of puppet political institutions,

Deeply concerned at South Africa's increasing militarization of Namibia, the forced conscription of Namibians, the creation of tribal armies and the use of mercenaries for the repression of the Namibian people and for carrying out aggression against neighbouring States,

Strongly condemning the racist régime of South Africa for developing a nuclear capability for military and aggressive purposes,

Expressing its grave concern at the continued occupation of parts of southern Angola by South African troops, which has been facilitated by support extended to the racist régime and to subversive elements within Angola by certain Western States,

Expressing its strong condemnation of South Africa's use of Namibian territory as a springboard for its continuing acts of aggression against independent African States, particularly Angola and Botswana, which have caused extensive loss of human life and destruction of economic infrastructures,

Reaffirming that the resources of Namibia are the inviolable heritage of the Namibian people and that the exploitation of those resources by foreign economic interests under the protection of the illegal colonial régime of South Africa, in violation of the Charter of the United Nations, of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council, of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 27 September 1974, and in disregard of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, is illegal and encourages the occupation régime to be even more intransigent and defiant,

Taking note of the decision of the United Nations Council for Namibia of 2 May 1985 to initiate legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States against corporations or individuals involved in the exploitation, transport, processing or purchase of Namibia's natural resources, as part of its efforts to give effect to Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia,

Deeply deploring the continued collaboration between certain States and South Africa in the political, military, economic and nuclear fields, in disregard of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council,

Deeply concerned at the continued assistance rendered to the racist Pretoria régime by certain international organizations and institutions, in disregard of the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly,

Indignant at the continuing arbitrary imprisonment and detention of leaders, members and supporters of the South West Africa People's Organization, the killing, torture and murder of innocent Namibians and other inhuman measures by the illegal occupation régime designed to intimidate the Namibian people and to destroy their determination to fulfil their legitimate aspirations for self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia,

Noting with grave concern that the Security Council has been prevented, on account of the vetoes cast by one or more of its Western permanent members, from taking effective action against South Africa in the discharge of its responsibilities under Chapter VII of the Charter,

Commending the efforts of the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the responsibilities entrusted to it under the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

1. Approves the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia;

2. Takes special note of the Final Document containing the Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985;

3. Takes note of the important debate on the question of Namibia, held in the Security Council from 10 to 19 June 1985;

4. Further takes note of Security Council resolution 566(1985) by which the Council, inter alia, condemned South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim government in Namibia and further condemned that régime for its obstruction of the implementation of Council resolution 435(1978) by insisting on conditions contrary to the provisions of the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia as embodied in that resolution;

5. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Namibia to self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and as recognized in General Assembly resolutions 1514(XV) and 2145(XXI) and in subsequent resolutions of the Assembly relating to Namibia, as well as the legitimacy of their struggle by all the means at their disposal, including armed struggle, against the illegal occupation of their territory by South Africa;

6. Strongly condemns the South African régime for its continued illegal occupation of Namibia in defiance of the resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

7. Declares that South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia constitutes an act of aggression against the Namibian people in terms of the Definition of Aggression contained in General Assembly resolution 3314(XXIX) of 14 December 1974, and supports the armed struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, to repel South Africa's aggression and to achieve self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

8. Reiterates that, in accordance with its resolution 2145(XXI), Namibia is the direct responsibility of the United Nations until genuine self-determination and national independence are achieved in the Territory and, for this purpose, reaffirms the mandate given to the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence under resolution 2248(S-V) and subsequent resolutions of the General Assembly;

9. Reaffirms its decision that the United Nations Council for Namibia, in accordance with the mandate conferred upon it by General Assembly resolution 2248(S-V), should proceed to establish its administration in Namibia in 1986;

10. Reaffirms that the South West Africa People's Organization, the national liberation movement of Namibia, is the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people;

11. Further reaffirms that the genuine independence of Namibia can be achieved only with the direct and full participation of the South West Africa People's Organization in all efforts to implement the resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

12. Reaffirms that Security Council resolution 435(1978) remains the only acceptable basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibian question, and calls once again for its immediate and unconditional implementation;

13. Expresses its dismay at the failure to date of the Security Council to discharge effectively its responsibilities for the maintenance of peace and security in southern Africa, owing to the opposition of its Western permanent members;

14. Urges the Security Council to act decisively in fulfilment of the direct responsibility of the United Nations over Namibia and to take, without further delay, appropriate action to ensure that the United Nations plan, as embodied in Council resolution 435(1978), is not undermined or modified in any way and that it is fully respected and implemented;

15. Reiterates its conviction that South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia, its defiance of United Nations resolutions, its brutal repression of the Namibian people, its acts of destabilization and aggression against independent African States and its policies of apartheid constitute a threat to international peace and security;

16. Declares that comprehensive mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations are the most effective measures to ensure South Africa's compliance with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations;

17. Strongly condemns South Africa for the imposition of the so-called interim government in Namibia on 17 June 1985, declares this measure null and void, and affirms that this new manoeuvre clearly shows once again that Pretoria does not have the slightest intention of respecting the United Nations plan, as embodied in Security Council resolution 435(1978), and is seeking, quite to the contrary, to consolidate its illegal hold over the Territory by creating puppet political institutions to serve its own interests;

18. Denounces all fraudulent constitutional and political schemes by which the illegal racist régime of South Africa attempts to perpetuate its colonial domination of Namibia, and, in particular, calls upon the international community to continue to refrain from according any recognition or extending any co-operation to any régime imposed by the illegal South African administration upon the Namibian people in violation of Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983), 539(1983) and 566(1985) and of other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Council;

19. Reaffirms that all such manoeuvres are fraudulent and null and void and that they must be rejected categorically by all States as called for in the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council;

20. Declares that all so-called laws and proclamations issued by the illegal occupation régime in Namibia are illegal, null and void;

21. Strongly urges the Security Council to act decisively against any dilatory manoeuvres and fraudulent schemes of the illegal occupation régime aimed at frustrating the legitimate struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, for self-determination and national liberation;

22. Reiterates that there are only two parties to the conflict in Namibia, namely, the people of Namibia, led by their sole and authentic representative, the South West Africa People's Organization, on the one hand, and the illegal occupation régime of South Africa, on the other;

23. Further reiterates that Member States must exert all efforts to counter any manoeuvres aimed at circumventing the United Nations and undermining its primary responsibility for the decolonization of Namibia;

24. Welcomes and endorses the universal and categorical rejection of the "linkage" advanced by South Africa between the independence of Namibia and irrelevant and extraneous issues, such as the presence of Cuban forces in Angola, and emphasizes unequivocally that such "linkage", in addition to delaying the decolonization process in Namibia, constitutes an interference in the internal affairs of Angola;

25. Welcomes and endorses the world-wide and justified condemnation of the policy of constructive engagement with South Africa as one which, in addition to encouraging South Africa's intransigence and thereby delaying Namibia's independence, has been discredited and made bankrupt by the very actions of the Pretoria régime both within South Africa and in the southern African region as a whole;

26. Expresses its appreciation to the front-line States and the South West Africa People's Organization for their statesmanlike and constructive attitude in the efforts aimed at implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978);

27. Reaffirms its conviction that the solidarity and support of the front-line States for the Namibian cause continues to be a factor of paramount importance in the efforts to bring genuine independence to the Territory;

28. Strongly urges the international community to increase, as a matter of urgency, financial, material, military and political support to the front-line States so as to enable them to resolve their own economic difficulties, which are largely a consequence of Pretoria's policies of aggression and subversion, and to defend themselves better against South Africa's persistent attempts to destabilize them;

29. Requests Member States urgently to extend all necessary assistance to Angola and other front-line States, in order to enable them to strengthen their defence capacity against South Africa's acts of aggression;

30. Commends the South West Africa People's Organization for its continued intensification of the struggle on all fronts, including the armed struggle, and for its commitment to embrace all Namibian patriots in an effort to strengthen further national unity so as to ensure the territorial integrity and sovereignty of a united Namibia, and welcomes the consolidation of unity in action by the patriotic forces in Namibia under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, during the critical phase of their struggle for national and social liberation;

31. Reaffirms its solidarity with, and support for, the South West Africa People's Organization, the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people, and pays tribute to that organization for the sacrifices it has made in the field of battle and also for the spirit of statesmanship, co-operation and far-sightedness it has displayed in the political and diplomatic arena despite the most extreme provocations on the part of the racist Pretoria régime;

32. Calls upon Member States and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to render sustained and increased support, as well as material, financial, military and other assistance, to the South West Africa People's Organization so as to enable it to intensify its struggle for the liberation of Namibia;

33. Urges all Governments and the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental organizations to provide increased material assistance to the thousands of Namibian refugees who have been forced by the apartheid régime's oppressive policies to flee Namibia, especially into the neighbouring front-line States;

34. Solemnly reaffirms that Namibia's accession to independence must be with its territorial integrity intact, including Walvis Bay and the offshore islands, and reiterates that, in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations, in particular Security Council resolution 432(1978) of 27 July 1978 and General Assembly resolutions S-9/2 of 3 May 1978 and 35/227 A of 6 March 1981, any attempt by South Africa to annex them is, therefore, illegal, null and void;

35. Calls upon the Security Council to declare categorically that Walvis Bay is an integral part of Namibia and that the question should not be left as a matter for negotiation between an independent Namibia and South Africa;

36. Strongly condemns South Africa for obstructing the implementation of United Nations resolutions, in particular Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983), 539(1983) and 566(1985), and for its manoeuvres, in contravention of those resolutions, designed to consolidate its colonial and neo-colonial interests at the expense of the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people for genuine self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

37. Strongly condemns the continuing collaboration between South Africa and certain Western countries in the political, economic, diplomatic and financial fields, and expresses its conviction that such collaboration helps to prolong South Africa's domination and control over the people and Territory of Namibia;

38. Deplores, in this context, the establishment and operation by racist South Africa of the so-called Namibia Information Offices in France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America, aimed at legitimizing its puppet institutions in Namibia, in particular the so-called interim government for which the racist régime has been condemned by the Security Council and the international community, and demands their immediate closure;

39. Notes with appreciation the recent measures taken by some States, parliamentarians, institutions and non-governmental organizations in order to exert pressure on the racist régime of South Africa and calls upon them to redouble and intensify their efforts to force the racist régime to comply with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Namibia and South Africa;

40. Calls once again upon all Governments, especially those which have close links with South Africa, to support, in co-operation with the United Nations Council for Namibia, the actions of the United Nations to defend the national rights of the Namibian people until independence and to isolate the racist régime of South Africa;

41. Strongly condemns South Africa for its military buildup in Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians, its proclamation of a so-called security zone in Namibia, its recruitment and training of Namibians for tribal armies, its use of mercenaries to suppress the Namibian people and to carry out its military attacks against independent African States, its threats and acts of subversion and aggression against those States and the forcible displacement of Namibians from their homes;

42. Strongly condemns South Africa for its imposition of military conscription of all Namibian males between seventeen and fifty-five years of age into the occupying colonial army, in yet further sinister attempts to suppress the national liberation struggle of the Namibian people and to force Namibians to kill one another, and declares that all measures taken by racist South Africa by which the illegal occupation régime attempts to enforce military conscription in Namibia are illegal, null and void;

43. Strongly condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its utilization of the international Territory of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating armed invasions, subversion, destabilization and aggression against neighbouring African States;

44. Strongly condemns South Africa, in particular for its persistent acts of aggression and subversion against Angola, including the continued occupation of parts of Angolan territory in gross violation of its sovereignty and territorial integrity, and calls upon South Africa to cease all acts of aggression against Angola and withdraw immediately and unconditionally all its troops from that country;

45. Expresses its grave concern at the acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability by the racist régime of South Africa and declares that such acquisition constitutes a threat to peace and security in Africa while posing a danger to all mankind;

46. Condemns and calls for an immediate end to the continuing military collaboration on the part of certain Western countries with the racist régime of South Africa, and expresses its conviction that such collaboration, in addition to strengthening the aggressive military machinery of the Pretoria régime, thereby constituting a hostile action against the people of Namibia and the front-line States, is also in violation of the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Security Council resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977;

47. Declares that such collaboration encourages the Pretoria régime in its defiance of the international community and obstructs efforts to eliminate apartheid and bring South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia to an end, and calls for the immediate cessation of such collaboration;

48. Calls upon all States to implement fully the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Security Council resolution 418(1977);

49. Calls upon the Security Council to adopt the necessary measures to tighten the arms embargo imposed against South Africa under Council resolution 418(1977) and to ensure strict compliance with the embargo by all States;

50. Further calls upon the Security Council to implement, as a matter of urgency, the recommendations contained in the report of the Security Council Committee established in pursuance of resolution 421(1977);

51. Calls upon all States to comply with Security Council resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984 and to refrain from importing arms, ammunition of all types and military vehicles produced in South Africa;

52. Condemns all collaboration with the Pretoria régime in the nuclear field, and calls upon all States that do so to terminate such collaboration, including refraining from supplying the racist minority régime of South Africa, directly or indirectly, with installations, equipment or material that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium or other nuclear materials or reactors;

53. Reiterates its call upon all States to take legislative and other appropriate measures to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries for service in Namibia;

54. Strongly condemns the illegal occupation régime of South Africa for its massive repression of the people of Namibia and their liberation movement, the South West Africa People's Organization, in an attempt to intimidate and terrorize them into submission;

55. Demand once again that South Africa immediately release all Namibian political prisoners, including all those imprisoned or detained under the so-called internal security laws, martial law or any other arbitrary measures, whether such Namibians have been charged or tried or are being held without charge in Namibia or South Africa;

56. Demands that South Africa account for all "disappeared" Namibians and release any who are still alive, and declares that South Africa shall be liable to compensate the victims, their families and the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia for the losses sustained;

57. Reaffirms that the natural resources of Namibia, including its marine resources, are the inviolable heritage of the Namibian people, and expresses its deep concern at the depletion of these resources, particularly its uranium deposits, as a result of their plunder by South Africa and certain Western and other foreign economic interests, in violation of the pertinent resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia and in disregard of the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971;

58. Endorses the decision by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings, held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985, that it will, in the exercise of its rights under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, proclaim an exclusive economic zone for Namibia, the outer limit of which shall be 200 miles, and states that any action for the implementation of that decision should be taken in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, the representative of the people of Namibia;

59. Declares that all activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia are illegal under international law and that all the foreign economic interests operating in Namibia are liable to pay damages to the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia;

60. Calls upon the United Nations Council for Namibia, in pursuance of the relevant provisions of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, to take the necessary steps to compile statistical information on the wealth illegally extracted from Namibia with a view to assessing the extent of compensation eventually due to an independent Namibia;

61. Strongly condemns the activities of all foreign economic interests operating in Namibia which are illegally exploiting the resources of the Territory, and demands that these interests comply with all the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations by immediately refraining from any new investment or any other activity in Namibia, by withdrawing from the Territory and by putting an end to their co-operation with the illegal South African administration;

62. Declares that, by their incessant exploitation of the human and natural resources of the Territory and their continued accumulation and repatriation of huge profits, the foreign economic, financial and other interests operating in Namibia constitute a major obstacle to its independence;

63. Request once again all Member States, particularly those States whose corporations are engaged in the exploitation of Namibian resources, to take all appropriate measures, including legislative and enforcement action, to ensure the full application of, and compliance by all corporations and individuals within their jurisdiction with, the provisions of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia;

64. Calls upon the Governments of all States, particularly those whose corporations are involved in the mining and processing of Namibian uranium, to take all appropriate measures in compliance with United Nations resolutions and decisions and Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, including the practice of requiring negative certificates of origin, to prohibit State-owned and other corporations, together with their subsidiaries, from dealing in Namibian uranium and from engaging in any uranium-prospecting activities in Namibia;

65. Approves of the decision of the United Nations Council for Namibia of 2 May 1985 to initiate legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States against corporations or individuals involved in the exploitation, transport, processing or purchase of Namibia's natural resources, as part of its efforts to give effect to Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia;

66. Requests the Governments of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, which operate the Urenco uranium-enrichment plant, to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the Treaty of Almelo, which regulates the activities of Urenco;

67. Urges the United Nations Council for Namibia, in its capacity as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, to consider the promulgation of additional legislation in order to protect and promote the interests of the people of Namibia and to implement effectively such legislation;

68. Calls upon all specialized agencies, in particular the International Monetary Fund, to terminate all collaboration with, and assistance to, the racist régime of South Africa, since such assistance serves to augment the military capability of the Pretoria régime, thus enabling it not only to continue the brutal repression in Namibia and South Africa itself, but also to commit aggression against independent neighbouring States;

69. Reiterates its request to all States, pending the imposition of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa, to take legislative, administrative and other measures individually and collectively, as appropriate, in order effectively to isolate South Africa politically, economically, militarily and culturally, in accordance with General Assembly resolutions ES-8/2 and 36/121 B, and its resolution 37/233 A of 20 December 1982;

70. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in its implementation of paragraph 15 of General Assembly resolution ES-8/2 and of the relevant provisions of Assembly resolutions 36/121 B and 37/233 A, to continue to monitor the boycott of South Africa and to submit to the Assembly at its forty-first session a comprehensive report on all contacts between Member States and South Africa containing an analysis of the information received from Member States and other sources on the continuing political, economic, financial and other relations of States and their economic and other interest groups with South Africa and of measures taken by States to terminate all dealings with the racist régime of South Africa;

71. Requests all States to co-operate fully with the United Nations Council for Namibia in the fulfilment of its task concerning the implementation of General Assembly resolutions ES-8/2, 36/121 B and 37/233 A and to report to the Secretary-General by the forty-first session of the Assembly on the measures taken by them in the implementation of those resolutions;

72. Declares that the liberation struggle in Namibia is a conflict of an international character in terms of article 1, paragraph 4, of Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949, and, in this regard, demands that the Conventions and Additional Protocol I be applied by South Africa, and in particular that all captured freedom fighters be accorded prisoner-of-war status as called for by the Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War and the Additional Protocol thereto;

73. Declares that South Africa's defiance of the United Nations, its illegal occupation of the international Territory of Namibia, its war of repression against the Namibian people, its persistent acts of aggression against independent African States, its policies of apartheid and its development of nuclear capability constitute a serious threat to international peace and security;

74. Strongly urges the Security Council, in view of the persistent refusal by the racist régime of South Africa to comply with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on the question of Namibia, particularly Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 539(1983) and 566(1985), and, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations;

75. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978)

The General Assembly,

Indignant at South Africa's persistent refusal to comply with Security Council resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976, 431(1978) of 27 July 1978, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 439(1978) of 13 November 1978, 532(1983) of 31 May 1983, 539(1983) of 28 October 1983 and 566(1985) of 19 June 1985 and at its manoeuvres aimed at gaining international recognition for illegitimate groups which it has installed in Namibia and which are subservient to Pretoria's interests, in order to maintain its policies of domination and exploitation of the people and natural resources of Namibia,

Reaffirming the imperative need to proceed, without further delay, with the implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978) which, together with Council resolution 385(1976), is the only basis for a peaceful settlement of the question of Namibia,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of the Namibian people to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960,

Strongly condemning racist South Africa for its continued illegal occupation of Namibia and its manoeuvres aimed at obstructing the implementation of Security Council resolutions, in particular resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978),

Strongly condemning racist South Africa for its continued denial to the Namibian people of the exercise of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence,

Recalling that the "linkage" insisted upon by South Africa of the independence of Namibia with totally irrelevant and extraneous issues, such as the presence of Cuban forces in Angola, has been rejected by the General Assembly and the Security Council and has been condemned world wide,

Reaffirming that the Cuban forces are in Angola by a sovereign act of the Government of Angola, in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, and that any attempts to link their presence in that country with Namibia's independence constitute a gross and unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of Angola,

Reaffirming that the only parties to the conflict in Namibia are, on the one hand, the Namibian people represented by the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative, and, on the other, the racist régime of South Africa, which illegally occupies the Territory,

Expressing its dismay at the fact that the Security Council has been prevented by its three Western permanent members from adopting effective measures against South Africa in the discharge of its responsibilities for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Recalling its call upon all States, in view of the threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country in accordance with the provisions of the Charter,

Commending the South West Africa People's Organization for its preparedness to co-operate fully with the Secretary-General of the United Nations and his Special Representative, including its expressed readiness to sign and observe a cease-fire agreement with South Africa, in the implementation of the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, as embodied in Security Council resolution 435(1978),

Condemning the racist régime of South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim government in Namibia, in violation of Security Council resolutions 435(1978) and 439(1978),

Expressing grave concern that, forty years after the founding of the United Nations, the question of Namibia, which has been with the Organization since its inception, still remains unresolved,

Expressing grave concern at the lack of progress in implementing Security Council resolution 435(1978), as indicated in the further reports of the Secretary-General dated 29 December 1983, 6 June 1985 and 6 September 1985, concerning the implementation of Security Council resolutions 435(1978) and 439(1978),

Recalling Security Council resolution 566(1985) by which the Council, inter alia, demanded that South Africa co-operate fully with the Security Council and the Secretary-General in the implementation of that resolution and warned that failure to do so would compel the Council to meet forthwith to consider the adoption of appropriate measures under the Charter,

Recalling its request to the Security Council, in view of the persistent refusal by the racist régime of South Africa to comply with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on Namibia, particularly Security Council resolutions, and, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter, in fulfilment of its responsibilities under the Charter and in response to the overwhelming demand of the international community,

1. Strongly condemns South Africa for obstructing the implementation of Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983), 539(1983) and 566(1985) and for its manoeuvres, in contravention of those resolutions, designed to consolidate its colonial and neo-colonial interests at the expense of the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people for genuine self-determination, freedom and national independence in a united Namibia;

2. Reaffirms the direct responsibility of the United Nations for Namibia pending its achievement of genuine self-determination and national independence;

3. Reiterates that Security Council resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978), relating to the United Nations plan for the independence of Namibia, constitute the only internationally accepted basis for a peaceful settlement of the Namibian problem, and demands their immediate and unconditional implementation;

4. Condemns the continuing attempts by racist South Africa to set up puppet political institutions and impose an "internal settlement" in Namibia, in defiance of resolutions and decisions of the United Nations, and, in this context, condemns and rejects the puppet "Multi-Party Conference" as the latest in a series of political stratagems through which Pretoria attempts to impose a neo-colonial settlement in Namibia;

5. Strongly condemns the racist régime for the installation of the so-called interim government in Namibia on 17 June 1985, declares this measure null and void, and calls upon the international community to continue to refrain from according any recognition or extending any co-operation to any régime imposed by the illegal South African administration upon the Namibian people, in violation of Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 439(1978), 532(1983) and 566(1985) and other relevant resolutions of the Council and the General Assembly;

6. Demands that the racist régime of South Africa immediately rescind the aforementioned illegal and unilateral action;

7. Further demands that South Africa urgently comply fully and unconditionally with the resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978) and subsequent resolutions of the Council relating to Namibia;

8. Emphasizes once again that the only parties to the conflict in Namibia are, on the one hand, the Namibian people represented by the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative, and, on the other, the racist régime of South Africa, which illegally occupies the Territory;

9. Rejects all manoeuvres aimed at diverting attention from the central issue of the decolonization of Namibia by introducing East-West confrontation to the detriment of the legitimate aspirations of the Namibian people to self-determination, freedom and national independence;

10. Strongly condemns and rejects the persistent attempts by South Africa to establish a "linkage" or "parallelism" between the independence of Namibia, in accordance with Security Council resolution 435(1978) and any extraneous and irrelevant issues, in particular the presence of Cuban forces in Angola, and emphasizes unequivocally that all such attempts are designed to delay further the independence of Namibia and that they constitute a gross and unwarranted interference in the internal affairs of Angola;

11. Demands that racist South Africa desist from its reprehensible position in order to allow Namibia to attain its long overdue independence;

12. Calls upon all States to condemn and reject any attempt to link the independence of Namibia with extraneous and irrelevant issues;

13. Requests the Security Council to exercise its authority with regard to the implementation of its resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 532(1983), 539(1983) and 566(1985), so as to bring about the independence of Namibia without further delay, and to act decisively against any dilatory manoeuvres and fraudulent schemes of the South African administration in Namibia aimed at frustrating the legitimate struggle of the Namibian people for independence;

14. Strongly condemns the use of the veto by the two Western permanent members of the Security Council on 15 November 1985, as a result of which the Council was prevented from taking effective measures under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations against South Africa, and appeals to them to desist from further misuse of the veto;

15. Strongly urges the Security Council, in view of the persistent refusal by the racist régime of South Africa to comply with the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on the question of Namibia, particularly Security Council resolutions 385(1976), 435(1978), 539(1983) and 566(1985), and, in the light of the serious threat to international peace and security posed by South Africa, to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against that country as provided for in Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations;

16. Calls upon the Western permanent members of the Security Council to support the imposition of enforcement measures by it in order to ensure South Africa's compliance with the resolutions of the Council;

17. Calls upon all States, the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, corporations, institutions, non-governmental organizations and individuals, pending the imposition by the Security Council of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against the racist regime of South Africa under Chapter VII of the Charter, to cease all co-operation with that régime in the political, economic, diplomatic, military, nuclear, cultural, sports and other fields;

18. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 40/97 B

13 December 1985 Meeting 115 130-0-25 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/40/24); agenda item 34.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Nona

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

In explanation of vote, Australia, Finland (for the Nordic countries), Ireland, Luxembourg (for the EC countries, Spain and Portugal) and the Netherlands noted that the drafts contained elements that caused them difficulties, stirred up controversies and side-tracked the Assembly into acrimonious exchanges. Therefore, they would be unable to vote for some of them.

Australia, Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg (for the EC countries, Spain and Portugal) and the Netherlands said they could not support armed struggle as a means of achieving Namibian independence and they were bound under the Charter to seek peaceful solutions to international disputes. They also felt it was inappropriate to characterize SWAPO as the sole, authentic representative of the Namibian people, thereby prejudging elections to be held under resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978).

The United States emphasized that it was unfortunate that the drafts contained numerous instances of name-calling. It felt strongly that the direct, hostile and unjustified references to the United States were contrary to basic Assembly principles of civility, fairness and, above all, accuracy. Such language was detrimental to the goals of the United Nations. It opposed objectionable language which criticized it and another country for exercising the right to veto a draft resolution in the Security Council, which condemned the policy of constructive engagement, rejected linkage and singled out the United States for collaboration with South Africa. Many States throughout the world continued to co-operate with South Africa, especially in trade. The policies pursued by the United States had contributed to limited improvements in the lives of oppressed South Africans; it had no pre-conditions for agreement on Namibian independence and had asserted no theory of linkage.

Australia, Canada and the United Kingdom concurred with the United States view of name-calling and distortion of truth. Belize also rejected name-calling and placing blame.

Declining to cast aspersions on the actions of some countries because they differed from the majority approach, Belgium said it would vote against retention of the wording whose deletion had been requested by the United States (see below). Austria, Chile, Ireland and Turkey did not believe that the selective singling out of certain countries for criticism and condemnation would promote the Assembly's objectives.

The Federal Republic of Germany and the United States said that as members of the Western contact group they would abstain on the drafts. Canada stressed that its intention to abstain was purely procedural, due to its membership in the contact group. Although it had suspended its active participation in the contact group in December 1983, France would abstain, pending implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibia.

Honduras said that the drafts, like those in previous years, had positive elements and other elements on which it had reservations; nevertheless, it would vote in favour of them because it supported Namibian independence. Its favourable votes must not be construed as prejudicing the principle of the peaceful settlement of disputes. It did not believe that Namibia would be brought closer to independence by the selective accusation of certain Member States, and was certain the texts could be improved upon.

While voting for the draft resolutions, Togo said it would abstain in the separate votes on paragraphs in keeping with its position which refused selectively to condemn certain countries for co-operating with South Africa.

Botswana said it would vote for the drafts, even if it had to treat with anxious circumspection the paragraphs seeking the imposition of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against a South Africa to which it was closely linked economically.

Malta said it supported the draft resolutions, but that did not mean it was in accord with every provision; on such an important issue, more effort should have been made to search for drafts that would command universal support.

The draft resolutions and amendments to them required a two-thirds majority, since under Article 18 of the United Nations Charter they were considered an important question. Oral amendments to four paragraphs in the draft that became resolution 40/97 A were proposed. In paragraph 24, a reference to linkage "advanced by the United States" was deleted (by recorded vote of 63 to 55, with 30 abstentions), as was mention of the United States in connection with the pursuit of the policy of constructive engagement in paragraph 25 (59-58-29). Mention of the United States and Israel in paragraph 37 was not retained (58-57-29), nor was a reference to Israel in paragraph 46 (79-47-25).

Oral amendments were also proposed to the text that became resolution 40/97 B. In the sixth preambular paragraph, retention of a reference to the United States was rejected (64-55-29). A paragraph which would have condemned the United States policy of constructive engagement was rejected (59-40-47). A reference to the United States Administration in paragraph 11 was omitted (54-63-29) and paragraph 14 was retained (81-30-34).

Earlier, on 20 September, the Assembly, having decided to consider the Namibian question directly in plenary meetings, decided that hearings of concerned organizations would be held in the Fourth Committee.

In November,<sup>(86)</sup> representatives of the World Peace Council at the United Nations, the Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Organization, the American Committee on Africa, Episcopal Churchpeople for a Free Southern Africa, the National Lawyers Guild, the United States National Committee of the Lutheran World Federation and Professor A. W. Singham, Department of Political Science, Brooklyn College, New York, requested hearings. The Committee granted their requests and heard their statements on 12 November.

The Assembly took note on 18 November in decision 40/409 of the Fourth Committee's report on the hearings.<sup>(87)</sup>

On 12 December, the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee decided, by a recorded vote of 90 to 7, with 11 abstentions, to inform the Assembly that, should it adopt the Council for Namibia's recommendations,<sup>(2)</sup> an additional appropriation of $3,487,300 would be required under the proposed programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium.

Related action was taken by the Assembly in resolution 40/25, by which it reaffirmed the Namibian people's right to self-determination and its condemnation of South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia. It condemned South Africa for its installation of a so-called interim administration at Windhoek and declared it to be null and void, called for the immediate implementation of the declarations and programmes of action on Namibia adopted by international conferences, condemned South Africa for its increasing oppression of Namibians, for the militarization of Namibia and for its attacks on the States in the region, condemned the continued violations of the human rights of peoples under colonial domination, demanded the implementation of a 1981 resolution on Namibia,<sup>(15)</sup> and urged States and United Nations and other international organizations to support SWAPO.

In resolution 40/57, the Assembly requested States to withhold assistance from South Africa until the right of the Namibian people to self-determination had been restored, and, in resolution 40/56, condemned South Africa's brutal repression of the Namibian people and invited the Security Council to continue to give special attention to the Namibian situation. Also, it demanded, in resolution 40/64 B, that South Africa end its illegal occupation of Namibia. Further, in resolution 40/53, it requested United Nations specialized agencies and other bodies to withhold assistance from South Africa and to refrain from any action which might imply recognition of the legitimacy of South Africa's domination of Namibia. In decision 40/415, the Assembly noted that a critical situation continued to exist in southern Africa, particularly around Namibia, and condemned South Africa's increasing military buildup in Namibia.

Work programme of the UN Council for Namibia

On 13 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/97 C by recorded vote.

Programme of work of the United Nations Council for Namibia

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia,

Reaffirming that Namibia is the direct responsibility of the United Nations and that the Namibian people must be enabled to attain self-determination and independence in a united Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966, by which it decided to terminate the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and to place the Territory under the direct responsibility of the United Nations,

Recognizing that 1986 will mark the twentieth anniversary of the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory,

Recalling its resolution 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967, by which it established the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

Taking into consideration the Final Document containing the Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985,

Convinced of the need for continued consultations with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of the programme of work of the United Nations Council for Namibia, as well as in any matter of interest to the Namibian people,

Deeply conscious of the urgent and continuing need to press for the termination of South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia and to put an end to its repression of the Namibian people and its exploitation of the natural resources of the Territory,

1. Approves the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia, including the recommendations contained therein, and decides to make adequate financial provision for their implementation;

2. Expresses its strong support for the efforts of the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the responsibilities entrusted to it, both as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia and as a policy-making organ of the United Nations;

3. Requests all Member States to co-operate fully with the United Nations Council for Namibia in the discharge of the mandate entrusted to it under the provisions of General Assembly resolution 2248(S-V) and subsequent resolutions of the Assembly;

4. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia, in the discharge of its responsibilities as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence, shall:

(a) Continue to mobilize international support in order to press for the speedy withdrawal of the illegal South African administration from Namibia in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations relating to Namibia;

(b) Counter the policies of South Africa against the Namibian people and against the United Nations, as well as against the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

(c) Denounce and seek the rejection by all States of all kinds of schemes through which South Africa attempts to perpetuate its illegal presence in Namibia;

(d) Ensure non-recognition of any administration or entity installed at Windhoek not ensuing from free elections in Namibia conducted under the supervision and control of the United Nations, in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the Security Council, in particular resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976, 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, 439(1978) of 13 November 1978, 532(1983) of 31 May 1983, 539(1983) of 28 October 1983 and 566(1985) of 19 June 1985;

(e) Undertake a concerted effort to counter the attempts to establish a "linkage" or "parallelism" between the independence of Namibia and extraneous issues such as the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola;

5. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall send missions of consultation to Governments in order to co-ordinate efforts for the implementation of resolutions of the United Nations on the question of Namibia and to mobilize support for the Namibian cause;

6. Decides further that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall represent Namibia in United Nations conferences and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, bodies and conferences to ensure that the rights and interests of Namibia shall be adequately protected;

7. Decides that Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, shall participate as a full member in all conferences and meetings organized by the United Nations to which all States or, in the case of regional conferences and meetings, all African States, are invited;

8. Requests all committees and other subsidiary bodies of the General Assembly and of the Economic and Social Council to continue to invite the United Nations Council for Namibia to participate whenever the rights and interests of Namibians are discussed, and to consult closely with the Council before submitting any draft resolution which may involve the rights and interests of Namibians;

9. Reiterates its request to all specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to grant full membership to Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, so that the Council may participate as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia in the work of those agencies, organizations and institutions;

10. Reiterates its request to all specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system that have not yet done so to grant a waiver of the assessment of Namibia during the period in which it is represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia;

11. Again requests all intergovernmental organizations, bodies and conferences to ensure that the rights and interests of Namibia are protected and to invite Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, to participate as a full member, whenever such rights and interests are involved;

12. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in its capacity as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia, to accede to any international conventions, as it may deem appropriate in close consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization;

13. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to promote and secure the implementation of the Final Document adopted at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna;

14. Takes note of the call for action, appeals for action, conclusions and recommendations adopted by the regional symposia and seminars, the Final Document adopted at Vienna and the Plan adopted by the Conference on the Intensification of International Action for the Independence of Namibia, held in New York from 11 to 13 September 1985;

15. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall:

(a) Consult regularly with the leaders of the South West Africa People's Organization by inviting them to New York and by sending high-level missions to the headquarters of that organization, whenever necessary, in order to review the progress of the liberation struggle in Namibia;

(b) Review the progress of the liberation struggle in Namibia in its political, military and social aspects and prepare comprehensive and analytical periodic reports related thereto;

(c) Review the compliance of Member States with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Namibia and, taking into account the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of 21 June 1971, prepare annual reports on the subject with a view to recommending appropriate policies to the General Assembly, in order to counter the support which those States give the illegal South African administration in N a m i b i a ;

(d) Take all measures to ensure the full implementation of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, enacted by the United Nations Council for Namibia on 27 September 1974;

(e) Consider the illegal activities of foreign economic interests, particularly the transnational corporations operating in Namibia, including the exploitation of and trade in Namibian uranium with a view to recommending appropriate policies to the General Assembly, in order to put an end to such activities;

(f) Undertake measures to ensure the closure of the so-called information offices created by the illegal South African occupation régime in certain Western countries for promoting its puppet institutions in Namibia, in violation of the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations on the question of Namibia;

(g) Notify the Governments of States whose corporations, whether public or private, operate in Namibia of the illegality of such operations and urge them to take measures to end such operations;

(h) Consider sending missions of consultation to Governments of States whose corporations have investments in Namibia in order to persuade them to take all possible measures to terminate such investments;

(i) Contact institutions and municipalities to encourage them to divest their investments in Namibia and South Africa;

(j) Contact specialized agencies and other international institutions associated with the United Nations, in particular the International Monetary Fund, with a view to protecting Namibia's interests;

(k) Continue to draw the attention of States, the specialized agencies and private corporations to Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, with a view to ensuring their compliance with the Decree;

(l) Organize international and regional activities, as required, in order to obtain relevant information on all aspects of the situation in and relating to Namibia, in particular the exploitation of the people and resources of Namibia by South African and foreign economic interests, and to expose such activities, with a view to intensifying active support for the Namibian cause;

(m) Prepare and publish reports on the political, economic, military, legal and social situation in and relating to Namibia;

(n) Secure the territorial integrity of Namibia as a unitary State, including Walvis Bay and the offshore islands of Namibia;

16. Decides to make adequate financial provision in the section of the programme budget of the United Nations relating to the United Nations Council for Namibia to finance the office of the South West Africa People's Organization in New York, in order to ensure appropriate representation of the people of Namibia at the United Nations through that organization;

17. Decides to continue to defray the expenses of representatives of the South West Africa People's Organization, whenever the United Nations Council for Namibia so decides;

18. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to continue to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of its programme of work, as well as on all matters of interest to the Namibian people;

19. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to facilitate the participation of the liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity in meetings of the Council away from United Nations Headquarters, whenever such participation is deemed necessary;

20. Decides that an International Conference for the Immediate Independence of Namibia shall be held in Western Europe in 1986, preceding the special session of the General Assembly on the question of Namibia;

21. Requests the Secretary-General to organize the above-mentioned Conference in co-operation with the United Nations Council for Namibia and, in this connection, to appoint, in consultation with the Council, a Secretary-General of the Conference and provide other necessary staff and services for the Conference;

22. Decides that, in order to expedite training of the personnel required for an independent Namibia, qualified Namibians should be given opportunities to develop further their skills in the work of the United Nations Secretariat and the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, and authorizes the United Nations Council for Namibia, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, to take, on an urgent basis, necessary action towards that end;

23. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the President of the United Nations Council for Namibia, to review the personnel requirements and the facilities of all units which service the Council, so that the Council may fully and effectively discharge all tasks and functions arising out of its mandate;

24. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia with the necessary resources in order for it to strengthen, under the guidance of the United Nations Council for Namibia, the assistance programmes and services for Namibians, the implementation of Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia, the preparation of economic and legal studies and the existing activities of dissemination of information undertaken by the Office.

13 December 1985 Meeting 115 147-0-6 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/40/24); agenda item 34.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Nona
Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Concern about the financial implications of the Council for Namibia's work programme was expressed by Australia, Canada, Finland (for the Nordic countries), Luxembourg (for the EC members, Spain and Portugal), the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States. Australia believed that much remained to be done in scaling back the Council's expenditures and making its programmes more cost-effective. Finland regretted that a Council review of its functions and priorities was not sufficiently reflected in its 1986 work programme; money and manpower could be used in a more effective manner. Luxembourg held that more careful scrutiny of the Council's work programme would have made possible financial reductions without impairing its goals. The United Kingdom and the United States deplored proposals to hold both a special Assembly session and an international conference on Namibia at a time of United Nations budgetary restraint.

The Netherlands noted that the 1986 work programme provided for a number of seminars, an international conference in Western Europe, and a special session of the General Assembly on Namibia; since it seemed that those meetings would cover the same terrain, it was hard pressed to find a justification for the lavish expenditure on repetitive activities.

Ireland stated that it voted in favour of the resolution because it supported in general the efforts of the Council to end South Africa's illegal occupation of Namibia; however, it had reservations about the Council's powers in regard to certain issues and also some difficulties about certain Council recommendations.

Information dissemination

During 1985, the Council for Namibia continued to disseminate information to Governments, leading opinion makers, the media, political and academic institutions and NGOs in order to mobilize international public opinion on behalf of Namibian independence.<sup>(2)</sup> The Council worked with the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) and the Department of Conference Services to increase the dissemination of information on Namibia and on specific information projects for the general public.

The Council organized extensive publicity for its symposia, seminars and missions (see p. 1092). It distributed press releases in English and French to the press, delegations and NGOs at Headquarters and to United Nations information centres (UNICs) around the world, and provided material to the pool of non-aligned news agencies.

On the occasion of Namibia Day (26 August) and the Week of Solidarity with the People of Namibia and Their Liberation Movement, SWAPO (week of 27 October),<sup>(3)</sup> coverage was provided in press releases, radio and television, and a special photo exhibit was mounted at Headquarters. For both of those events, most UNICs issued press releases and background papers and organized activities, such as the screening of United Nations films, lectures and round-tables on the role of the United Nations in the liberation of Namibia, essay contests, exhibits of United Nations posters, press conferences and television interviews.

Pamphlets on political developments, social conditions, the military situation and foreign economic interests in Namibia were produced and distributed.

The question of Namibia was featured in several radio programmes, including Perspective, and the anti-apartheid programme series. A series of six programmes, Namibia: Update, was distributed in English, French and Spanish. Screenings of the films Free Namibia and Namibia: A Trust Betrayed were presented by UNICs. A 60-second television spot was produced in commemoration of Namibia Day in Arabic, English, French and Spanish.

The Council organized six journalists' encounters in advance of its symposia, seminars and extraordinary plenary meetings. The encounters took the form of discussions between a Council panel and journalists and broadcasters. They focused on the media's role in generating greater public awareness of the Namibian cause and promoting the implementation of United Nations resolutions on Namibia.

In consultation with SWAPO, the Council made financial contributions to a number of NGOs, including: to the African-American Committee on the United Nations, for its fifth annual conference to develop strategies for black church action for an independent Namibia; to Mouvement anti-apartheid, France, to launch a national campaign on Namibia; to the Namibia Association of Norway, in co-operation with other Nordic NGOs, for a political campaign supporting Namibia; to the Campaign against Racial Exploitation, Australia, for the convening of a conference on Namibia; to the Association of West European Parliamentarians for Action against Apartheid for organizing a seminar on Namibia, apartheid and sanctions against South Africa; to the United States Peace Council, New York, for its educational campaign against apartheid and the illegal occupation of Namibia; and to the Holland Committee on Southern Africa for an international conference and publication of background information on Namibia.

The Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia also continued to provide information on the Namibian situation. It prepared the Namibia Bulletin, a monthly review, and Namibia in the News, a weekly newsletter, and gave briefings to support and student groups and individuals. It also assisted the Council in publishing United Nations booklets and posters on Namibian subjects, distributing a comprehensive economic map of Namibia, acquiring non-United Nations materials on Namibia, and reproducing available films on Namibia.

In the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action (see p. 1091), the Council recognized the relevance of its meetings in Western Europe to mobilizing public opinion for Namibian independence; emphasized the importance of the media in stimulating support for Namibia, particularly in the Western countries; and voiced its determination to keep the Namibian problem in the forefront of international attention. To that end, it would intensify its information programme.

In a decision of 16 May,<sup>(4)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries requested the Secretary-General, in view of the publicity campaign by South Africa to justify its illegal occupation of Namibia, to intensify his efforts to mobilize world public opinion against South Africa's Namibian policy, and in particular to increase the dissemination of information in all parts of the world about the Namibian people's liberation struggle.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/97 D by recorded vote.

Dissemination of information and mobilization of international public opinion in support of Namibia

The General Assembly,

Having examined the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolutions 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966, 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967 and 39/50 A to E of 12 December 1984, as well as all other resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to Namibia, Underlining the fact that, twenty years after the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory, the racist régime of South Africa continues illegally to occupy the Territory in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations,

Underlining that 1986 will mark the twentieth anniversary of the launching of the armed struggle by the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people,

Strongly condemning the racist régime of South Africa for its continued illegal occupation of the international Territory of Namibia twenty years after the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption of direct responsibility by the United Nations for Namibia,

Taking into consideration the Final Document containing the Declaration and Programme of Action, adopted by the United Nations Council for Namibia at its extraordinary plenary meetings held at Vienna from 3 to 7 June 1985,

Taking into consideration also the call for action, appeals for action, conclusions and recommendations adopted by the regional symposia and seminars and the Plan adopted by the Conference on the Intensification of International Action for the Independence of Namibia, held in New York from 11 to 13 September 1985,

Strongly condemning the continued assistance rendered by certain States to South Africa in the political, economic, diplomatic, military, nuclear, cultural, sports and other fields, and expressing its conviction that this assistance should be exposed by the United Nations Council for Namibia by all the means available to it, with a view to bringing an end to such assistance,

Stressing the urgent need to mobilize international public opinion on a continuous basis with a view to assisting effectively the people of Namibia in the achievement of self-determination, freedom and independence in a united Namibia and, in particular, to intensify the world-wide and continuous dissemination of information on the struggle for liberation being waged by the people of Namibia under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative,

Reiterating the importance of publicity as an instrument for furthering the mandate given by the General Assembly to the United Nations Council for Namibia, and mindful of the pressing need for the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat to intensify its efforts to acquaint world public opinion with all aspects of the question of Namibia, in accordance with policy guidelines formulated by the Council,

Recognizing the important role that non-governmental organizations are playing in the dissemination of information on Namibia and in the mobilization of international public opinion in support of the Namibian cause,

1. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in pursuance of its international campaign in support of the struggle of the Namibian people for independence, to continue to consider ways and means of increasing the dissemination of information relating to Namibia and intensifying the international campaign for the imposition of comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat, in all its activities of dissemination of information on the question of Namibia, follows the policy guidelines laid down by the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information, in addition to its responsibilities relating to southern Africa, to assist, as a matter of priority, the United Nations Council for Namibia in the implementation of its programme of dissemination of information in order that the United Nations may intensify its efforts to generate publicity and disseminate information with a view to mobilizing public support for the independence of Namibia, particularly in the Western States;

4. Decides to intensify its international campaign in support of the cause of Namibia and denounce all acts of collaboration with the South African racists in the political, economic, diplomatic, military, nuclear, cultural, sports and other fields and, to this end, requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in co-operation with the Department of Public Information, to include in its programme of dissemination of information for 1986 the following activities:

(a) Preparation and dissemination of publications on the political, economic, military and social consequences of the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa, as well as on legal matters, on the question of the territorial integrity of Namibia and on contacts between Member States and South Africa;

(b) Production and dissemination of radio programmes in the English, French, German and Spanish languages, designed to draw the attention of world public opinion to the current situation in and around Namibia;

(c) Production and dissemination of radio programmes in English and the local languages of Namibia, designed to counter the hostile propaganda of the racist régime of South Africa;

(d) Production of material for publicity through radio and television broadcasts;

(e) Placement of advertisements in newspapers and magazines;

(f) Production and dissemination of posters;

(g) Full utilization of the resources related to press releases, press conferences and press briefings in order to maintain a constant flow of information to the public on all aspects of the question of Namibia;

(h) Production and dissemination of a comprehensive economic map of Namibia;

(i) Production and dissemination of booklets on the activities of the Council, including two booklets on Namibia;

(j) Production and wide dissemination of an up-to-date booklet containing resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council relating to Namibia, together with relevant portions of Assembly resolutions on the activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia and on military activities in Namibia, relevant documents of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and the Organization of African Unity and decisions, declarations and communiqués of the front-line States on Namibia;

(k) Publicity for, and distribution of, an indexed reference book on transnational corporations which plunder the natural and human resources of Namibia, and on the profits extracted from the Territory;

(l) Production and wide dissemination, on a monthly basis, of a bulletin containing analytical and updated information intended to mobilize maximum support for the Namibian cause;

(m) Production and dissemination, on a weekly basis, of an information newsletter containing updated information on developments in and relating to Namibia, in support of the Namibian cause;

(n) Acquisition of books, pamphlets and other materials relating to Namibia for further dissemination;

(o) Organization of media encounters and press conferences on developments relating to Namibia;

(p) Preparation, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, of a list of Namibian political prisoners;

5. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to continue to organize, in co-operation with the Department of Public Information, journalists' encounters prior to the activities of the Council during 1986, in order to mobilize further international public support for the just struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative;

6. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to assist the South West Africa People's Organization in the production, translation into all the official languages of the United Nations and distribution, of material related to Namibia;

7. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to organize, at the conclusion of the International Conference for the Immediate Independence of Namibia, to be held in Western Europe in 1986, a workshop for non-governmental organizations, parliamentarians, trade unionists, academics and media representatives concerned with the question of Namibia, at which the participants will consider their contribution to the implementation of the decisions of the Conference;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to allocate, in consultation with the United Nations Council for Namibia, sales numbers to publications on Namibia selected by the Council;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the United Nations Council for Namibia with the work programme of the Department of Public Information for the year 1986 covering the activities of dissemination of information on Namibia, followed by periodic reports on the programme undertaken, including details of expenses incurred;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to group under a single heading in the section of the proposed programme budget of the United Nations for the biennium 1986-1987 relating to the Department of Public Information, all the activities of the Department relating to the dissemination of information on Namibia and to direct the Department to submit to the United Nations Council for Namibia a detailed report on the utilization of the allocated funds;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information to disseminate in 1986 the list of Namibian political prisoners, in order to intensify international pressure for their immediate and unconditional release;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the Department of Public Information to give the widest possible publicity to, and disseminate information on, the activities undertaken in the context of the twentieth anniversary of the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory and the launching of the armed struggle by the South West Africa People's Organization, the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people;

13. Decides, in the context of the twentieth anniversary of the launching of the armed struggle by the South West Africa People's Organization, the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people, the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory, to request the United Nations Council for Namibia:

(a) To organize, in close consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization and in co-operation with the Department of Public Information, exhibitions on the heroic struggle of the Namibian people for self-determination and genuine national independence;

(b) To undertake activities, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization and in co-operation with non-governmental organizations, to mark those anniversaries;

(c) To organize an international campaign to boycott Namibian and South African products, in co-operation with non-governmental organizations, as part of its efforts to implement Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia;

14. Requests Member States to broadcast programmes on their national radio and television networks and to publish material in their official news media, informing their populations about the situation in and around Namibia and the obligation of Governments and peoples to assist in the struggle of Namibia for independence;

15. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in co-operation with the Department of Public Information and the Department of Conference Services of the Secretariat, to continue to inform and provide information material to leading opinion makers, media leaders, academic institutions, trade unions, cultural organizations, support groups and other concerned persons and non-governmental organizations about the objectives and functions of the United Nations Council for Namibia and the struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, and also to hold consultations with, and seek the co-operation of, those personalities and institutions by inviting them on special occasions to participate in the deliberations of the Council, and to continue to establish for this purpose a regular and expeditious pattern of distribution of information material to political parties, universities, libraries, churches, students, teachers, professional associations and others falling into the general categories enumerated above;

16. Requests all Member States to observe Namibia Day in a befitting manner by giving the widest possible publicity to and dissemination of information on Namibia, including the issuance of special postage stamps for the occasion;

17. Requests the Secretary-General to direct the United Nations Postal Administration to issue a special postage stamp on Namibia, before the end of 1986, in observance of the twentieth anniversary of the termination of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory;

18. Calls upon the United Nations Council for Namibia to enlist the support of non-governmental organizations in its efforts to mobilize international public opinion in support of the liberation struggle of the Namibian people, under the leadership of the South West Africa People's Organization, their sole and authentic representative;

19. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to prepare, update and continually disseminate lists of non-governmental organizations from all over the world, in particular those in the major Western countries, in order to ensure better co-operation and co-ordination among non-governmental organizations working in support of the Namibian cause and against apartheid;

20. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to co-operate closely with relevant intergovernmental organizations, in order to increase the awareness of the international community regarding the twentieth anniversary of the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for Namibia and regarding the continued illegal occupation of that Territory by the racist regime of South Africa;

21. Decides to allocate the sum of $500,000 to be used by the United Nations Council for Namibia for its programme of co-operation with non-governmental organizations, including support to conferences in solidarity with Namibia arranged by those organizations, dissemination of conclusions of such conferences and support to such other activities as will promote the cause of the liberation struggle of the Namibian people, subject to decisions of the Council in each individual case taken in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization.

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/40/24); agenda item 34.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Belgium believed that the size of the information programme was questionable and said it could not support some of the ideas to be transmitted. Ireland said it was forced to abstain because of the implicit endorsement of the armed struggle in paragraphs 12 and 13. The Netherlands felt it was inappropriate to characterize SWAPO as the sole and authentic representative of the Namibian people, thereby prejudging the outcome of the elections to be held under United Nations auspices.

In resolution 40/164 A, the Assembly requested DPI to continue its follow-up programmes implementing the Paris Declaration on Namibia<sup>(88)</sup> and the Vienna Final Document. The Secretary-General was requested to ensure more coherent coverage of and better knowledge about the work of the Council for Namibia, to intensify his efforts to alert world public opinion against the illegal occupation of Namibia and to disseminate as widely as possible information relating to the struggle of the Namibian people.

UN Commissioner for Namibia

Activities of the Commissioner

The Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, through his offices at Headquarters, Gaborone (Botswana), Luanda (Angola) and Lusaka (Zambia), was involved in 1985 in the protection of Namibian interests principally by means of the travel documents programme and by attempts to implement Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia<sup>(89)</sup> (see p. 1124). From 1 September 1984 to 31 August 1985, the offices of the Commissioner issued 456 new travel documents in Africa, North America and Western Europe and renewed 1,346 others. The offices also collected and analysed information relating to Namibia, followed internal political, economic and legal developments in South Africa concerning Namibia, and provided assistance to Namibians through the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see p. 1127).

In response to a 1982 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(90)</sup> the Office published in 1985 a reference book on TNCs operating or investing in Namibia.<sup>(90)</sup> A document was prepared, in accordance with another 1982 resolution,<sup>(91)</sup> on economic planning in an independent Namibia; under that project, several studies were prepared by consultants and a meeting to review them was held in March, followed by an international seminar in July at Lusaka to complete the study, to be published in 1986. Pursuant to the same resolution,<sup>(91)</sup> a demographic study of the Namibian population was carried out, analysing its socio-economic characteristics and making growth projections; a revised version of the study was finalized.

The Luanda Office continued to serve as liaison between SWAPO's provisional headquarters there and the New York Office. It was also responsible for 28 Nationhood Programme projects and eight projects under the United Nations Fund for Namibia. It co-ordinated assistance to SWAPO with other agencies of the United Nations system, and in that context organized three inter-agency meetings to integrate assistance programmes in general and on three projects in particular: the Loudima Namibia Secondary Technical School which was under construction in the Congo; a food, nutrition and education project for the SWAPO Women's Council; and an agricultural development project in SWAPO settlements. It inaugurated the United Nations Vocational Training Centre for Namibia at Cuacra, Angola, for 200 trainees; provided training to 13 Namibians in broadcast journalism and radio-programme production; and obtained scholarships in Portuguese language study from Brazil for 25 SWAPO officials.

The Office at Lusaka operated as a centre for political, administrative and informational activities. It provided assistance and counselling to Namibians in many areas, and also performed consular functions by acting as liaison between Zambian and resident diplomatic missions and Namibians and by issuing travel documents to more than 2,500 Namibians. It served as a contact point with a number of African Governments, helping to place and monitor Namibian trainees in government institutions.

The Gaborone Office kept track of political events in South Africa and Namibia, and provided the New York Office with detailed briefs on developments. It placed four students for diploma courses in agriculture at the Egerton College of Agriculture, Kenya, two students at the Botswana Institute of Administration and Commerce in accountancy and business studies, and one student at the Botswana National Health Institute in pharmacy. It also administered the secondment programme for students on attachment to the Botswana Government for practical training; the number of students increased from 19 in 1984 to 24 in 1985.

Appointment of the Commissioner

On the Secretary-General's recommendation,<sup>(92)</sup> the General Assembly, by decision 40/317 adopted without vote on 17 December 1985, extended the appointment of Brajesh Chandra Mishra as United Nations Commissioner for Namibia for a one-year term beginning on 1 January 1986; he was first appointed in 1982.<sup>(93)</sup>

Political and military aspects

The political and military aspects of the Namibian situation continued to be monitored by the Council for Namibia in 1985. The Council's Standing Committee II submitted reports on the situation in August<sup>(94)</sup> and September.<sup>(95)</sup>

Namibia continued to be occupied by about 100,000 South African troops stationed at 85 to 90 bases. Political repression, racial discrimination, apartheid, other gross human rights violations and economic exploitation characterized the occupation. Numerous cases of disappearances, extrajudicial executions, torture of detainees under interrogation, and collective punishment of entire communities were reported.

In January 1985, South Africa staged a military exercise, code-named "operation iron fist", in northern Namibia. It was carried out by the South African army, backed by tanks and aircraft, 50 kilometres south of Ruacana on the Angolan-Namibian border. According to the Council, the South African military had described the exercise as based on a simulated strike into Angola and stated that its troops had enhanced their preparedness to conduct cross-border operations. The Council condemned the operation, declaring that it further confirmed South Africa's determination to persist with its policies of repression and terror against the Namibian people.

The SWAPO President told the Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of Non-Aligned Countries in April that South Africa had recently imposed martial law over the northern half of Namibia. Access to the area was prohibited without a police permit and a dusk-to-dawn curfew was in place.

Political rallies were held by Namibians on 17 June 1985 to protest South Africa's installation of an interim government and on 25 August to commemorate the nineteenth anniversary of the launching of SWAPO's armed struggle. A unit of South Africa's "special forces" was said to have been used extensively in Windhoek in June to break up the demonstrations.

Attacks by the People's Liberation Army of Namibia (PLAN) on South African troops and installations had increased, and the level of fighting remained high. PLAN combatants successfully attacked enemy convoys, communications equipment, special agents, military bases, road systems and water pipelines. The commanding officer of the South West Africa Territorial Force, created by South Africa, stated on 18 June that some 40,000 South African soldiers were tied down in the northern war sector. According to SWAPO, the number was deliberately understated.

During July, PLAN engaged South African troops on more than 36 occasions. Fighting took place around South African military bases at Oshakati and Eenhana. PLAN attacked the military base at Ruacana in November, causing serious damage.

The South African military acknowledged that during 1985 there had been 123 SWAPO attacks, compared to 96 in 1984. The South African Defence Minister declined to give figures on the number of South African soldiers killed in the Namibian war.

In the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action,<sup>(96)</sup> the Council denounced the South African military buildup in Namibia, stated that the acquisition of a nuclear-weapons capability by South Africa had added another dangerous dimension to a grave situation, condemned South Africa's use of Namibia as a base for aggression against neighbouring States, called on States to adopt measures to prevent the recruitment of mercenaries for service in Namibia, and demanded the release of Namibian political prisoners.

The Committee on colonial countries, on 16 May,<sup>(61)</sup> denounced manoeuvres by South Africa to bring about a sham independence in Namibia through fraudulent political schemes, condemned South Africa for its military buildup in Namibia, its introduction of compulsory military service for Namibians and its forced recruitment of Namibians for tribal armies, and deplored the collaboration of certain Western and other countries with South Africa in the political, economic, military and nuclear fields. The Committee, on 7 August,<sup>(64)</sup> demanded the dismantling of South African military bases in Namibia and immediate cessation of its war of oppression against the Namibian people and declared that South African measures to enforce military conscription in Namibia were null and void.

The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,<sup>(66)</sup> condemned South Africa for the military buildup in Namibia, the recruitment and training of Namibians for tribal armies, the use of mercenaries to suppress the Namibian people, and the torture meted out to the population, particularly captured SWAPO fighters.

By decision 40/415, the General Assembly condemned South Africa for its ever-increasing military buildup in Namibia, demanded the immediate cessation of the war waged by South Africa against the people of Namibia and urged increased assistance to refugees who had been forced to flee to neighbouring States. The Assembly, in resolution 40/53, requested the specialized agencies to abide by Security Council resolution 566(1985), in which the Council condemned South Africa for its installation of an interim government in Windhoek, declaring it null and void, stated that no recognition would be accorded to it by either the United Nations or any Member State, and demanded that South Africa rescind its illegal action.

The Assembly, in resolution 40/97 A, condemned South Africa for its various military actions in Namibia and for its conscription of Namibian males between 17 and 55 years of age, expressed concern at its acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability, called for an end to military collaboration by certain Western countries with South Africa, declared that such collaboration encouraged South Africa in its defiance of the international community, and reiterated its call on States to take measures to prevent the recruitment of mercenaries for Namibia.

Proposed special session of General Assembly

On 13 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/97 F by recorded vote.

Special session of the General Assembly on the question of Namibia

The General Assembly,

Taking into consideration its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 2145(XXI) of 27 October 1966, by which it decided to terminate the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 2248(S-V) of 19 May 1967, by which it established the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia until independence,

Recalling Security Council resolutions relating to Namibia, particularly resolutions 385(1976) of 30 January 1976 and 435(1978) of 29 September 1978, as well as subsequent resolutions relating to Namibia,

Gravely concerned that, twenty years after the termination by the General Assembly of the Mandate of South Africa over Namibia and the assumption by the United Nations of direct responsibility for the Territory, the racist régime of South Africa continues illegally to occupy the Territory in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations,

Indignant at the continued non-implementation of Security Council resolution 435(1978), owing to South Africa's intransigence,

Strongly condemning South Africa for its persistent and arrogant defiance of the resolutions and decisions of the United Nations, Decides to hold a special session on the question of Namibia before its forty-first session, on a date to be determined by the Secretary-General in consultation with the United Nations Council for Namibia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Malawi, United Kingdom, United States.

The United Kingdom stated that the same speeches would be given and the same resolutions adopted, almost word for word, at the special session as at the regular 1986 Assembly session and at an international conference on Namibia to be held in 1986. The special session, which would cost an estimated $769,600, was unnecessary.

The Netherlands was hard pressed to find a justification for a special session when it seemed safe to predict that it would go over terrain already covered. Ireland believed that a special session could perhaps be of assistance in advancing towards an independent Namibia in accordance with the United Nations plan.

Economic and social conditions

Foreign investment

The basic structure of the Namibian economy was typically colonial, almost exclusively tailored to the needs and demands of foreign capital with virtually the entire output of the economy's primary sectors being exported, according to a Secretariat working paper submitted in May 1985<sup>(1)</sup> to the Committee on colonial countries. The three principal industries were mining, farming and fishing, which accounted for more than two thirds of the gross domestic product (GDP), generated more than 90 per cent of exports and engaged more than 80 per cent of all paid employment. In terms of economic ties, Namibia was almost totally dependent on South Africa; close to 90 per cent of its imports and exports came from/went to South Africa.

The plunder of Namibia's natural and human resources continued, with some of the world's largest corporations and financial institutions conducting their operations under licences from South Africa. Four principal TNCs operated in the mining sector: Consolidated Diamond Mines of South West Africa, Ltd. (CDM), a wholly-owned subsidiary of De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.; the Tsumeb Corporation, Ltd. (TCL), which was controlled by Gold Fields of South Africa; the Newmont Mining Corporation of the United States; and Rössing Uranium, Ltd., in which the Rio Tinto Zinc Corporation, Ltd. (RTZ) of the United Kingdom owned the majority equity capital. Those four corporations accounted for about 95 per cent of the Territory's mineral production and exports and held about 80 per cent of its mineral assets.

A number of South African corporations controlled the fishing industry, and Canadian and British firms were involved in marketing another of the Territory's major exports, caracul pelts (a valuable sheep fleece). Other major South African companies included two parastatals: the Iron and Steel Corporation of South Africa, Ltd., and the Industrial Development Corporation of South Africa, Ltd. The operations of the South African corporations were interwoven in a network of intermediate companies, reciprocal shareholdings and overlapping directorates.

Among Western European corporations in the mining, banking and petroleum sectors were Barclays Bank International, Ltd., the British Petroleum Company, Consolidated Gold Fields, Ltd., and RTZ, all of the United Kingdom; Dresdner Bank of the Federal Republic of Germany; and Shell Transport and Trading Company, Ltd., of the Royal Dutch/Shell Group.

Other corporations with operations in the Territory included the Standard Oil Company of California and Texaco, Inc., the Mobil Oil Corporation and the Hudson Bay Company of Canada.

The major banks involved in the Territory were Barclays National Bank and the Standard Bank of South West Africa, both subsidiaries of banking groups operating from the United Kingdom. Bank operations were directed exclusively to the needs of expatriates and South African and other foreign economic interests, and were instrumental in integrating the financial and customs systems of Namibia and South Africa.

Namibia's commercial and manufacturing sectors were similarly dominated by South African and other foreign economic interests. South Africa's intention was to limit industrial opportunity in Namibia in order to perpetuate its dependence on South Africa. The manufacturing sector, comprising fewer than 300 enterprises, accounted for less than 5 per cent of GDP and employed 10 per cent of the work force. Meat canning, the supply of some specialized equipment to the mining industry and some local assembly of imported materials from South Africa were the main activities. South African chains such as Barlows and OK Bazaars were very active in the wholesale and retail traded.<sup>(5)</sup>

A report,<sup>(5)</sup> prepared by the Secretary-General in response to Economic and Social Council resolution 1985/72 and submitted in August 1985 to the Commission on Transnational Corporations, presented an overview of the activities of TNCs in Namibia. It set out the international legal framework in which TNCs operated, summarized their main functions in the Namibian economy, and discussed the support provided by them to South Africa's occupation of Namibia. The report concluded that overall it was difficult to identify any significant positive contribution by TNCs to the development of the Namibian economy. The negative effects, however, were manifest: TNCs operated in violation of international law; they had devoted negligible attention to training and upgrading the skills of their Namibian employees; and few had reinvested any of their profits in the Territory.

The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,<sup>(6)</sup> condemned the continuing activities of foreign economic and other interests which were impeding the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples<sup>(7)</sup> with respect to colonial Territories, particularly Namibia. On the same date,<sup>(6)</sup> the Commission called on Governments that had not done so to take measures in regard to their nationals and bodies corporate under their jurisdiction to stop their trading, manufacturing and investing activities in South Africa and Namibia.

On 16 May,<sup>(7)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries demanded that those States whose TNCs operated in Namibia comply with United Nations resolutions by ending the co-operation of such corporations with South Africa and ensuring the withdrawal of all investments from Namibia. The Committee declared that the activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia were illegal under international law and that such interests would be liable to pay damages to the future lawful Government of an independent Namibia. On 7 August,<sup>(8)</sup> the Committee reaffirmed the illegality of foreign economic interests in Namibia and the liability of those interests to damages.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly also took action relating to the operations of TNCs in Namibia. By resolution 40/56, it requested Member States to take measures in respect of their nationals and bodies corporate under their jurisdiction that illegally operated enterprises, including TNCs, in Namibia in order to end such operations. It urged Member States to refrain from relations with South Africa which might lend legitimacy to its occupation of the Territory. In resolution 40/57, the Assembly condemned the activities of foreign economic and other interests which were impeding the implementation of the Declaration with respect to colonial Territories, particularly Namibia.

The Assembly declared, in resolution 40/97 A, that the activities of foreign economic interests in Namibia were illegal and liable to damages and that by their incessant exploitation of the resources of the Territory and repatriation of huge profits, they constituted a major obstacle to Namibian independence. It called on States, in resolution 40/52, to terminate investments in Namibia and loans to South Africa and to refrain from any agreements with that régime to promote trade.

Natural resources

Mining was by far the largest sector of the Namibian economy, accounting for about half of the country's GDP and about 85 per cent of its exports.<sup>(9)</sup>

Although considerably reduced through exploitation, Namibia continued to possess a wide range of minerals, including large quantities of diamonds, uranium, lead, tin, zinc and copper. Other minerals, including gold, silver, arsenic, cadmium and tantalite, were also available in significant quantities, and it was believed that there were deposits of coal, iron ore and platinum. A natural gas field off the Namibian coast was currently being tested to determine its size.

The most recent mining operation was the Rössing uranium mine controlled by RTZ. Mining rights to the vast uranium deposits at Rössing, approximately 120 miles west of Windhoek and near the coastal town of Swakopmund, were acquired by RTZ in the mid-1960s. The mine reached its planned annual output of 5,000 short tons of uranium oxide in 1979. In reaching that capacity, Rössing became the largest open-cast uranium mine in the world. The identity of Rössing's buyers remained a closely guarded secret. The United Kingdom was the only country which admitted to importing Namibian uranium.

Since 1978, diamond exports had accounted for more than 60 per cent of Namibia's export earnings. The exploitation of Namibia's diamonds was monopolized by CDM, which had been mining Namibia's gem diamond deposits—the most extensive in the world—since 1920. It controlled mining rights in a strip of land along the southern portion of the Namibian coast, 60 miles wide and running for 220 miles from the mouth of the Orange River (Namibia's southern border with South Africa) to a little north of the port of Lüderitz. The date of termination of the rights has been extended to 31 December 2010. In recent years, CDM had been prospecting for diamonds along the north bank of the Orange River and northwards along the Atlantic coast, as well as in mining areas south of Lüderitz. The prospect of undersea diamonds had awakened interest in a dozen little islands off the Namibian coast. The Penguin Islands were said to be sitting among at least 2 million carats of diamonds worth at least $200 million—and probably much more.

Namibia's base metals were of strategic importance to South Africa and a number of Western countries. Its zinc output, in particular, had been important to South Africa's strategy of stockpiling reserves of minerals not available locally. Similarly, the Territory's lead and tin production were vital to various South African industries. The largest producer of base metals in Namibia was TCL, which operated four mines and the Territory's only copper smelter and lead refinery. The TCL mines contained half of the world reserve of germanium, which was estimated at about 1,500 metric tons. TCL was the third or fourth largest producer of germanium oxide, which was used primarily by the electronics industry for various forms of conductors, micro-processing and laser technology and for several military applications.

The Namibian fishing industry included both inshore and deep-sea fishing. Six companies controlled the industry in Namibia and South Africa—Fedfood, Irvin and Johnson, Ovenstone Investments, Willem Barendsz, Kaap-Kunene and the Oceana Fishing Group. They controlled 11 of the 12 pelagic-fish factory licences, 91 per cent of the pelagic fishing quota, all three of the lobster export licences, almost all of the snoek processing trade and 75 per cent of the seal cull. The largest non-South African companies in the inshore fishing industry were Metal Box and Reed International, both of the United Kingdom. All the tins for the fish-canning process were supplied by Metal Box from its factory in South Africa. Only companies which held licences could build fish factories; the licences were exclusively designated by South African authorities.

In accordance with a 1981 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(9)</sup> which decided that the Council for Namibia should take measures to ensure compliance with the provisions of its Decree No. 1 for the Protection of the Natural Resources of Namibia,<sup>(10)</sup> including consideration of legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies, the Council referred the matter to its Standing Committee II. Pursuant to a 1982 Standing Committee recommendation,<sup>(11)</sup> the Commissioner for Namibia arranged for studies on the possibilities of instituting legal proceedings, to be prepared by lawyers from the countries where most of the foreign economic interests were based.

Studies by lawyers from Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States, and observations by the Commissioner, were considered by the Council's Steering Committee on 9 April and 2 May 1985.<sup>(12)</sup>

The Commissioner stated that if legal action was undertaken, it would further the purpose of Decree No. 1; if taken, it would be difficult to maintain the Decree in its current status and it would be necessary to re-define it. After studying the lawyers' reports, the Commissioner concluded that legal action might lead to positive results if undertaken in one or more of the following countries: Belgium, the Netherlands and the United States. In the studies, the lawyers sought precedents, pertaining to other situations of illegal occupation. While citing certain cases from the Second World War, they were unable to find any contemporary cases that were relevant. It appeared that the case of Namibia was sui generis.

The Steering Committee decided to institute legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States and other appropriate bodies against corporations and individuals who were violating Decree No. 1 and that legal proceedings should commence in the Netherlands. The Council considered the implementation of the Decree at its meetings at Vienna in June.<sup>(13)</sup> It decided to promote actively the Decree's implementation in the domestic courts of States and requested the Commissioner to take the necessary steps after consultations with the Council President. In addition, it called on the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom, which operated the Ureenco uranium enrichment plant at Almelo, Netherlands, to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the 1970 Treaty of Almelo, which regulated Ureenco activities, on the grounds that it was illegally obtained. It also stated that the Council would, in the exercise of its rights under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,<sup>(14)</sup> proclaim an exclusive economic zone for Namibia of 200 miles.

On 29 October,<sup>(15)</sup> the Acting President of the Council for Namibia testified in Washington, DC., before the Subcommittee on Africa of the United States House of Representatives Committee on Foreign Affairs in a hearing on Namibia, the exploitation of natural resources and United States policy. The Subcommittee was considering a bill entitled the Namibian Natural Resource Protection Act. The Acting President pointed out that some 33 United States corporations were operating in Namibia. The Council had drawn their attention to the illegal nature of their activities in the Territory and asked to meet with them. Their responses had either been negative or there had been no response. The Acting President said that the Council had decided to initiate legal proceedings in the domestic courts of the Netherlands because of its favourable legal environment; the Netherlands recognized the Council as the legal Administering Authority for the Territory and its authority to legislate on Namibia's behalf. The Council was prepared to consider legal action in other countries in the near future.

The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,<sup>(6)</sup> condemned foreign economic interests which were illegally exploiting Namibia's resources, and demanded that TNCs comply with relevant United Nations resolutions by refraining from any new investment or activities in Namibia, by withdrawing from the Territory and by putting an end to their co-operation with the illegal South African administration.

On 16 May,<sup>(7)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries reaffirmed that Namibia's natural resources were the incontestable heritage of the Namibian people. It noted the rapid depletion of those resources and condemned their illegal exploitation by South Africa and foreign economic interests in disregard of United Nations resolutions, in particular Decree No. 1. The Committee also condemned the exploitation of Namibian uranium by State-owned or State-controlled corporations, which constituted a violation by the Governments involved of binding Security Council resolutions. It requested the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom to have Namibian uranium specifically excluded from the Treaty of Almelo.

The Committee, on the same date,<sup>(8)</sup> condemned South Africa for its continued plundering of Namibia's natural resources, leading to their rapid depletion, in complete disregard of the interests of the Namibian people, and for its illegal extension of the territorial sea and proclamation of an economic zone off the Namibian coast. It reiterated that the plundering of Namibian resources by South Africa and other foreign economic interests was illegal, and called on States to take measures, including the requiring of negative certificates of origin, to prevent State-owned and other corporations from dealing in Namibian uranium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By resolution 40/52, the General Assembly condemned South Africa for its continued exploitation of Namibia's natural resources. It reiterated that the plundering of its marine and other resources, including uranium, was illegal, a contribution to the maintenance of the illegal occupation régime and a threat to the prosperity of an independent Namibia, and called on Governments to prevent State-owned and other corporations from dealing in Namibian uranium. It requested the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom to have Namibian uranium excluded from the Treaty of Almelo.

The Assembly, in resolution 40/97 A, reaffirmed that Namibian resources, including marine resources, were the heritage of the Namibian people, expressed deep concern at their depletion, and endorsed the decision of the Council for Namibia to proclaim an exclusive economic zone for Namibia. Calling on the Council to compile statistical information on the wealth extracted from Namibia to assess the compensation due to an independent Namibia, the Assembly demanded that foreign economic interests withdraw from the Territory and end their co-operation with the illegal South African administration. It again requested Member States to ensure the compliance of corporations and individuals with Decree No. 1, and approved the Council's decision to initiate legal proceedings in the domestic courts of States against those exploiting Namibian resources.

The Assembly, by resolution 40/89 B, demanded that South Africa and other foreign interests end immediately their exploration for and exploitation of uranium resources in Namibia, and by resolution 40/64 A, again called on the Security Council to impose a total ban on nuclear collaboration with South Africa, including embargoes on the imports of South African and Namibian uranium.

Social conditions and the exploitation of labour

The Council for Namibia maintained a constant review of social conditions in Namibia.<sup>(9)</sup> Its Standing Committee II prepared a report on those conditions,<sup>(10)</sup> pursuant to a 1984 General Assembly resolution.<sup>(17)</sup>

The South African régime continued to maintain its illegal presence in Namibia and to apply existing ruthless and repressive laws and proclamations as well as to promulgate new ones, in defiance of Assembly and Security Council resolutions.

Under the Security Districts Proclamation Act imposed by South Africa in March 1985, journalists, foreign visitors and church people who were not residents of six areas covered by the Act could not enter them without South African permits. The districts covered more than half of Namibia, from Windhoek to the northern border with Angola, Botswana and Zambia; more than three quarters of Namibia's population lived there. Shortly after the installation of the interim government in June 1985, South Africa extended several of its laws to the Territory. They included: the Intimidation Act, which dealt with boycotts; the Demonstrations in or near Court Building Prohibition Act, used to suppress protests at political trials; and the Protection of Information Act.

Repressive measures against the Namibian people had been intensified, according to the Council, with acts of cold-blooded killings, systematic torture, abductions, detentions without trial and disappearances of civilians having become widespread. There were no accurate statistics for the number of people who had "disappeared". Among the murder squads that were committing atrocities were the "Koevoet," the "Takkies" and the "Etango". Both the "Takkies" and the "Etango" were cultural organizations used politically to mobilize the masses against SWAPO.

On 17 June, members of the South African occupation army and police force attacked SWAPO supporters in Windhoek as they left a rally against the installation of the interim government. Other attacks on SWAPO political gatherings took place on 4 May, 25 August and 30 September.

Hundreds of Namibians were reported being held without charge or trial, many in a detention camp in the Mariental District south of Windhoek and others in prisons and open-air camps throughout the country. At least 18 camps were believed to exist, with many prisoners being confined in underground cells.

The apartheid system governed conditions of labour in Namibia, with the labour force being divided along racial lines in the types of jobs available, wages earned and the right to organize in trade unions. Black workers were subjected to the notorious contract labour system which, while exploiting them at very low wages, separated males from their families for long periods of time. About 110,000 Namibians, almost half of the black labour force not involved in subsistence agriculture, were migrant workers on short-term contracts. There was no protective labour legislation that had meaning for the majority of workers. Labour practices on white-owned farms were semi-feudal and prison labour was often employed.

Namibians generally did not have financial security in their old age. Where pensions did exist, they were paid on a discriminatory basis according to race. Migrant workers were excluded from pension schemes by the requirement of "continuous service".

Structural inequalities in the earning capacity of blacks and whites were great. In the urban areas, white per capita income was more than 20 times that of blacks and income disparity in rural areas was twice that of the urban areas. Moreover, if the disproportionate access of blacks and whites to public and social services was taken into account, the gap was much wider than the income disparities indicated.

A survey of job categories and wages paid by CDM revealed that the majority of Namibian workers fell into the "unskilled" category, with only a handful at the skilled level and none in middle management or above. Another survey found that fish factory workers were paid less than a third of the official minimum hourly rate. Yet, during the same period, some fishing companies reported that their profits had increased by up to 100 per cent.

In order to guarantee a supply of cheap black labour, severe restrictions were placed on a worker's ability to seek work, to live in a family setting and to organize. Obstacles to effective union organization were overwhelming. The registration of trade unions was required by law, but it was extremely difficult for black unions to register. The National Union of Namibian Workers, founded in 1978 and affiliated with SWAPO, had operated underground since 1980 when South Africa shut down its offices and froze its assets.

Education was compulsory for whites, but not for black or "coloured" children. White children enjoyed a modern and comprehensive educational system, while educational facilities for black children were non-existent in some areas and mediocre at best in others. There were differences in school facilities, classroom practices, teacher-training programmes, teachers' salaries, teacher-pupil ratios and the amount of money spent annually per pupil. South Africa had introduced soldiers as teachers into black classrooms, carrying their arms as a matter of policy. The purpose was not only to intimidate the children, but also to indoctrinate them with propaganda, portraying SWAPO as an insurgent organization against which a counter-insurgency force was necessary to maintain stability.

The health sector was similarly characterized by gross inequalities. Health services for blacks were either rudimentary or virtually non-existent, those available to whites comparable to that of the best of any country. According to available statistics, blacks suffered an infant mortality rate of 163 per 1,000 live births compared with 21 per 1,000 for whites. Life expectancy for blacks ranged from 42 to 52 years, for whites from 68 to 72 years.

Housing provided by the South African régime for black Namibians was poor and insufficient. Temporary and makeshift camps were a common feature of black townships. Sanitary facilities were practically non-existent. Investigations by the local press had revealed that Okahandja, north of Windhoek, contained some of the most appalling camps in the country. Two camps in particular housed about 1,000 persons each in 1983, with new hovels being added daily. Between 7 and 12 people lived in each hovel. One of the camps had four water taps for 150 dwelling units; the other camp had no fresh water. On white-owned farms, accommodation for labourers was at the discretion of the farmer. Many farmers provided little or no accommodation; workers constructed tiny tin shanties. Mining workers lived in rigidly controlled hostels and compounds.

Black women were the most oppressed group in Namibian society. Some were employed in the farming, fishing and packing industries, but most worked at menial jobs as office cleaners or domestic servants. As a rule, they were not allowed to work as contract labourers, and therefore were left behind to a fate of loneliness and destitution when their husbands and sons went away on contract. Reports of rape of black women were of increasing concern. Cases were concentrated in the north and generally involved the South African army.

International assistance

The Council for Namibia, in its Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action, included in its 1985 annual report,<sup>(1)</sup> expressed appreciation to Governments, United Nations specialized agencies and other international organizations that had contributed to the United Nations Fund for Namibia. It urged them to provide increased assistance to the thousands of Namibian refugees who had been forced to flee to neighbouring front-line States, and called on Governments to increase moral and political support, as well as financial, military and other material assistance, to SWAPO and to the Namibian people through SWAPO. The Council appealed to NGOs for intensified support of the liberation struggle. Further, it urged the fullest possible co-operation by all with the Council to facilitate concrete programmes of assistance and to implement projects for the economic and social development of an independent Namibia.

By resolution 40/57, the General Assembly urged States, directly and through the United Nations system, to provide moral and material assistance to the Namibian people. In decision 40/415, it appealed to all States to increase moral and political support and financial, military and other material assistance to SWAPO.

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1985/59, requested United Nations organizations to render increased assistance to the Namibian people, in consultation with OAU and the Council for Namibia, particularly in connection with the Nationhood Programme for Namibia.

UN Fund for Namibia

Activities of the Fund

The United Nations Fund for Namibia was financed mainly through voluntary contributions. The Council for Namibia acted as trustee of the Fund, which was the principal vehicle through which the Council channelled assistance to the Territory. The Fund's activities were concentrated in three programmes—the Nationhood Programme (see p. 1130), the United Nations Institute for Namibia (see p. 1131), and educational, social and relief assistance.

The Nationhood Programme and the Institute were set up with particular reference to the future attainment of independence, the establishment of State machinery and the assumption of administrative responsibilities by Namibians. The assistance programme emphasized the immediate needs of Namibians in their struggle for independence; assistance was administered, to the extent possible, through individual projects and scholarships, and was financed by the Fund's General Account.

During the period from 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> 54 new awards were made and 26 students completed their courses. As of 1 July 1985, 142 students in 11 countries were pursuing studies in a wide variety of fields.

The Fund also provided medical care, social assistance and relief aid. During the period under review, assistance was given to 37 Namibians requiring emergency medical treatment and other humanitarian assistance.

The sum of $100,000 was made available from the Fund for emergency assistance. In addition to each field office of the Commissioner's Office being provided with $5,000 from the emergency funds, $7,000 was used to finance two shipments of textbooks, clothing and other relief goods to Namibian refugee centres in Angola; $20,000 to strengthen agricultural activities in a refugee settlement in Zambia; $9,000 to assist SWAPO's office in New York; $10,000 to repatriate 30 Namibian political prisoners to Luanda; $25,000 for fuel to transport food supplies from Luanda to refugee settlements; $6,000 to provide allowances to 25 Namibian students in Brazil; and $5,000 for a training programme in fleet operations for two Namibians in the United Republic of Tanzania.

Subscriptions to various publications on Namibia and southern Africa, books and library materials were made available to Namibian refugee camps and SWAPO offices. Funds were provided to facilitate the attendance of 25 Namibians at 12 international seminars and conferences.

Fund expenditures in 1985 for the three programmes totalled $6,996,863, as follows: Nationhood Programme, $1,754,244; Institute, $4,067,172; and educational, social and relief assistance, $1,174,447.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/97 E by recorded vote.

United Nations Fund for Namibia

The General Assembly,

Having examined the parts of the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia relating to the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 2679(XXV) of 9 December 1970, by which it established the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling also its resolution 3112(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, by which it appointed the United Nations Council for Namibia trustee of the United Nations Fund for Namibia,

Recalling its resolution 31/153 of 20 December 1976, by which it decided to launch the Nationhood Programme for Namibia,

Recalling further its resolution 34/92 A of 12 December 1979, by which it approved the Charter of the United Nations Institute for Namibia, and its resolution 37/233 E of 20 December 1982, by which it approved amendments to that Charter,

1. Takes note of the relevant parts of the report of the United Nations Council for Namibia;

2. Decides that the United Nations Council for Namibia shall:

(a) Continue to formulate policies of assistance to Namibians and co-ordinate assistance for Namibia provided by the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system;

(b) Continue to act as trustee of the United Nations Fund for Namibia and, in this capacity, administer and manage the Fund;

(c) Continue to provide broad guidelines and formulate principles and policies for the United Nations Institute for Namibia;

(d) Continue to co-ordinate, plan and direct the Nationhood Programme for Namibia in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, with the aim of consolidating all measures of assistance by the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system into a comprehensive assistance programme;

(e) Continue to consult with the South West Africa People's Organization in the formulation and implementation of assistance programmes for Namibians;

(f) Report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the programmes and activities undertaken through the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

3. Decides that the United Nations Fund for Namibia, which comprises the General Account, the United Nations Institute for Namibia Account and the Nationhood Programme Account, shall be the primary source of assistance to Namibians;

4. Expresses its appreciation to all States, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, governmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals that have made contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia to support the activities under the General Account, the activities of the United Nations Institute for Namibia and the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, and calls upon them to increase their assistance to Namibians through those channels;

5. Requests the Secretary-General and the President of the United Nations Council for Namibia to intensify appeals to Governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and individuals for more generous voluntary contributions to the General Account, the Nationhood Programme Account and the United Nations Institute for Namibia Account of the United Nations Fund for Namibia in view of the increased activities undertaken through the Fund and, in this connection, emphasizes the need for contributions in order to increase the number of scholarships awarded to Namibians under the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

6. Invites Governments to appeal once more to their national organizations and institutions for voluntary contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia;

7. Decides to allocate as a temporary measure to the United Nations Fund for Namibia the sum of $1.5 million from the regular budget of the United Nations for 1986;

8. Requests the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, in order to mobilize additional resources, to formulate, in consultation with the South West Africa People's Organization, a programme of assistance to the Namibian people to be undertaken by means of projects co-financed by Governments and non-governmental organizations;

9. Requests the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system, in the light of the urgent need to strengthen the programme of assistance to the Namibian people, to make every effort to expedite the execution of Nationhood Programme for Namibia projects and other projects in favour of Namibians on the basis of procedures which will reflect the role of the United Nations Council for Namibia as the legal Administering Authority for Namibia;

10. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system that have contributed to the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and calls upon them to continue their participation in the Programme by:

(a) Implementing projects approved by the United Nations Council for Namibia;

(b) Planning and initiating new project proposals in co-operation with, and at the request of, the Council;

(c) Allocating funds from their own financial resources for the implementation of the projects approved by the Council;

11. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to continue and intensify its programme of field attachments, enabling Namibians trained under various programmes to gain practical on-the-job experience in Governments and institutions in various countries, particularly in Africa;

12. Appeals to all Governments, specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations and individuals to make generous contributions to the United Nations Fund for Namibia in order to support the field attachment programme and to meet the required needs;

13. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Development Programme for its contribution to the financing and administration of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and the financing of the United Nations Institute for Namibia, and calls upon it to continue to allocate, at the request of the United Nations Council for Namibia, funds from the indicative planning figure for Namibia for the implementation of the projects within the Nationhood Programme and for the United Nations Institute for Namibia;

14. Notes with appreciation the decision by the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme to maintain at least at the same level, on an exceptional basis, the indicative planning figure for Namibia for the 1987-1991 programming cycle;

15. Calls upon the United Nations Development Programme to raise the indicative planning figure for Namibia;

16. Expresses its appreciation for the assistance provided by the United Nations Children's Fund, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the World Food Programme to Namibian refugees, and requests them to expand their assistance in order to provide for the basic needs of the refugees;

17. Expresses its appreciation to those specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system which have waived agency support costs in respect of projects in favour of Namibians, financed from the United Nations Fund for Namibia and other sources, and urges those that have not yet done so to take appropriate steps in this regard;

18. Decides that Namibians shall continue to be eligible for assistance through the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa and the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa;

19. Commends the progress made in the implementation of the pre-independence components of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia and requests the United Nations Council for Namibia to elaborate and consider policies and contingency plans regarding the transitional and post-independence phases of the Programme;

20. Commends the United Nations Institute for Namibia for the effectiveness of its training programmes for Namibians and its research activities on Namibia, which contribute substantially to the struggle for freedom of the Namibian people and to the establishment of an independent State of Namibia;

21. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations and institutions of the United Nations system to co-operate closely with the United Nations Institute for Namibia in strengthening its programme of activities;

22. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, through the United Nations Institute for Namibia, to finalize, publish and disseminate at an early date a comprehensive reference book on Namibia covering all aspects of the question of Namibia as considered by the United Nations since its inception;

23. Notes with appreciation the completion by the United Nations Institute for Namibia, in co-operation with the South West Africa People's Organization, the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia and the United Nations Development Programme, of a comprehensive document on all aspects of economic planning in an independent Namibia, and commends the Secretary-General for providing substantive support through the Office of the Commissioner for the preparation of that document;

24. Requests the United Nations Council for Namibia, in consultation with the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia, to finalize and publish at an early date a demographic study of the Namibian population and a study of its educational needs;

25. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide the Office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia with the necessary resources for the performance of the responsibilities entrusted to it by the United Nations Council for Namibia as the coordinating authority for the implementation of the Nationhood Programme for Namibia, as well as other assistance programmes.

13 December 1985 Meeting 115 148-0-6 (recorded vote)

Draft by Council for Namibia (A/40/24); agenda item 34.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Ireland said that it would as usual vote in favour of the draft, believing that the Fund provided valuable assistance to Namibians who had suffered as a result of South Africa's illegal occupation of their land.

Financing of the Fund

In 1985, 38 States made a total contribution of $4,462,963 to the United Nations Fund for Namibia (see table). Other income included $1 million from the United Nations regular budget as authorized by the General Assembly in 1984.(2) The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) also provided funding and had established an indicative planning figure for Namibia of $7,750,000 for 1982-1986.

Fund-raising missions were organized by the Council for Namibia to Western Europe, visiting Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden from 20 to 30 May and Austria, Belgium, EEC, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the Netherlands from 7 to 14 June.(1) Received at a high political level in all the countries visited, the missions reminded the Governments of the pressing needs of the Namibian people, explained the purposes of the Fund and reviewed the priority projects for which contributions were being sought. The Governments recognized the need to prepare Namibia for independence and expressed their continuing support for the Council's assistance programmes.

The Committee on colonial countries, on 16 May,(3) urgently called on States and the specialized agencies and other United Nations organizations to continue supporting the Fund and all Council assistance programmes.

Nationhood Programme

The projects of the Nationhood Programme, launched by the General Assembly in 1976 to help

Namibia prepare for independence,(4) fell into three categories: pre-independence projects; transitional projects; and post-independence projects. The Programme consisted of two major components—manpower training programmes and surveys and analyses of the Namibian economic and social sectors.

In designing the projects, careful consideration was given to the special conditions under which the Programme was being implemented; assistance to a country under colonial domination required a different approach from that of technical assistance to independent countries. Implementation was made difficult by the unavailability of reliable socio-economic data, and further complicated by the lack of access to the Territory due to the illegal South African occupation. The training aspects of the projects required special attention because of the scarcity of educational opportunities for Namibians under South African rule.

The Council reported(1) that, during 1984 and the first half of 1985, Namibians continued their training in a number of countries and several new training activities were initiated. Six students began pre-engineering studies; 36, training in mining and railways; eight, a course in labour administration; and four, training in management of water development. A second group of 100 students began training at the Vocational Training Centre in Angola, which opened in 1983,(5) and 36 undertook remedial training in Zambia in English language, mathematics, basic sciences and social education.

Also during the reporting period, five students completed training with the Electricity Supply Board of Ireland and 34 completed a remedial course in English, mathematics and basic sciences. In Zambia, 34 disabled persons completed vocational training, two students finished their training with the Central Statistics Office and 11 finished their training at the Kabwe Railway Centre. Two completed training with the Nigerian Railway Corporation.

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1985/59, requested United Nations organizations in the light of the intensification of the liberation struggle to increase assistance to the Namibian people, particularly in connection with the Nationhood Programme.

By resolution 40/97 E, the General Assembly decided that the Council should continue to direct the Nationhood Programme, and requested that United Nations organizations expedite the execution of its projects. Expressing appreciation to those organizations which had contributed to the Programme, it called on them to continue implementing projects approved by the Council, to plan new project proposals and to allocate funds for their implementation. The Assembly also expressed appreciation to UNDP for its contribution to the financing and administration of the Nationhood Programme, and called on it to continue to allocate funds to its projects. It commended the progress made in the implementation of the pre-independence components of the Programme, and requested the Council to elaborate transitional and post-independence policies and contingency plans.

UN Institute for Namibia

The United Nations Institute for Namibia trained middle-level skilled manpower for an independent Namibia and carried out applied research in the various sectors of the Namibian economy. Admission to the Institute was open to all persons of Namibian origin who met the requirements of its Senate, a 16-member administering body. The Institute was financed by the Council for Namibia, with further financial assistance provided by UNDP and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; it operated on an average annual budget of $4 million.

During 1985, 250 new students were admitted—150 in the management and development studies programme, 30 in the teacher-training upgrading programme, 50 in the secretarial programme and 20 in the special programme for magistrates. The Institute's total enrolment was 550.

In January, the sixth group of students (numbering 33) graduated from the Institute with diplomas in management and development studies, bringing the total number of Institute graduates to 407. In addition, the first group of 20 students graduated from the teacher-training upgrading programme and another 16 received certificates in the magistrates' programme.

Research was directed to provide basic documentation for policy formulations by the future Government of an independent Namibia. A number of studies were completed; others were under way, among them, mineral development strategy options, state succession, administrative system, mass participation, trade and monetary policy options, and wage and income policy options. A handbook on Namibia covering various aspects of the question of Namibia was completed.

An Extension Unit of the Institute continued to expand its education programme for Namibians denied education by the South African régime. It served some 40,000 Namibian adults and youths in Zambia and Angola.

Other UN assistance

UN Educational and Training Programme. The Secretary-General, in a report covering the period from 1 October 1984 to 15 October 1985,(6) stated that the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa (see p. 200) had granted 100 new scholarships to Namibians and extended 45. The scholarships did not include awards financed by the United Nations Fund for Namibia.

UNDP activities. In 1985, UNDP provided assistance to SWAPO through three ongoing educational projects and a new health project, according to a report(7) by the UNDP Administrator. The educational projects included assistance to the Namibia Education Centres at Kwanza Sul, Angola, and Nyango, Zambia, and training for the promotion of women's role in development. A project aimed at strengthening health services was discontinued at the end of 1984 and was financially completed in early 1985. A new project, giving support to community health services, was approved in December 1985 for implementation by the UNDP Office for Projects Evaluation.

A formulation mission for a future project of assistance in agricultural development was undertaken in 1985 with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) as the executing agency. The four projects and the mission accounted for $623,100 in UNDP inputs, representing 26 per cent of total expenditures for national liberation movements as a whole.

Agency assistance. United Nations specialized agencies and other organizations continued to provide assistance to colonial countries, including Namibia, according to a May 1985 report(8) by the Secretary-General. Supplementary information was provided in a 1986 report.(9)

Assistance was given by some agencies, including FAO and the International Labour Organisation, through the Nationhood Programme. The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization trained teachers and provided school materials and laboratory and sports equipment to the educational centres operated by SWAPO. It also paid the salaries of support staff at those centres. The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees allocated $3 million in aid to Namibian refugees, covering basic needs, education, health, transport, self-help construction of housing, agriculture and technical support. The World Health Organization made funds available to SWAPO for medical supplies and, as an associate member State, to Namibia itself for health activities and training of health personnel.

Chapter IV

Other colonial Territories

In 1985, the Special Committee on the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries) continued to consider the situation in East Timor and Western Sahara, as well as the dispute between Argentina and the United Kingdom over the Falkland Islands (Malvinas).

In September, the General Assembly deferred consideration of the East Timor question until 1986 (decision 40/402). In November, it requested Argentina and the United Kingdom to initiate negotiations for resolving peacefully and definitively the pending problems between them, including all aspects on the future of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations (resolution 40/21); it also requested the Secretary-General to continue his good offices mission.

Reaffirming that the Western Sahara question was a decolonization issue, the Assembly, in December, again requested Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro to hold direct negotiations for a cease-fire and a referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations (resolution 40/50).

With regard to Gibraltar, the Assembly welcomed two events that took place on 5 February: the initiation between Spain and the United Kingdom of negotiations at Geneva; and the establishment of equality and reciprocity of rights for Spaniards in Gibraltar and Gibraltarians in Spain, together with the free movement of persons, vehicles and goods between Gibraltar and the neighbouring territory (decision 40/413).

In addition, the Assembly took action on the questions of: American Samoa (resolution 40/41), Guam (40/42) and the United States Virgin Islands (40/49), under United States administration; and Anguilla (40/48), Bermuda (40/43), the British Virgin Islands (40/44), the Cayman Islands (40/45), Montserrat (40/46), the Turks and Caicos Islands (40/47) and St. Helena (decision 40/414), under United Kingdom administration. The Assembly took note of the decision of the Committee on colonial countries to send a visiting mission to Tokelau in 1986, at the invitation of New Zealand, the administering Power, and of the people of the Territory (decision 40/411).

Topics related to this chapter. General questions relating to colonial countries.

Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

Communications. During 1985, the Secretary-General received a series of communications from Argentina and the United Kingdom on the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) situation.

Argentina, in a 2 January press release by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Worship,<sup>(1)</sup> stated that, according to international news reports, the United Kingdom had authorized an oil company to explore and prospect for oil in the Malvinas Islands. Argentina declared that it would not recognize any claim to the right to explore for or exploit minerals or hydrocarbons in the Islands, over which it claimed sovereignty. In a reply of 24 January,<sup>(2)</sup> the United Kingdom rejected Argentina's claim of sovereignty, asserted that it continued to be guided in its administration of the Islands by the obligations under Article 73 of the United Nations Charter, and that the Falkland Islands Government's granting of a licence on 19 July 1984 to Firstland Oil and Gas PLC exemplified the exercise by the people of the Falkland Islands of the right freely to dispose of their natural resources.

In a government statement of 18 February,<sup>(3)</sup> Argentina expressed concern at reports that the United Kingdom was planning to reform the Malvinas Islands Constitution; it added that, since the Islands' inhabitants were not differentiated from the occupying Power, nor were they originally based in the territory, the misapplication of the principle of self-determination would only serve to validate an unlawful occupation. The United Kingdom, in a 13 March response,<sup>(4)</sup> said its intention to promulgate a new Constitution for the Falkland Islands to replace the 1948 Constitution, for entry into force at the time of the general election in the autumn of 1985, was consistent with its international obligations under the Charter and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

Referring to the the January exchange of letters, Argentina, on 18 March,<sup>(5)</sup> asserted that the United Kingdom was obligated under Article 33 of the Charter to seek a peaceful settlement of the sovereignty dispute. On 16 May,(6) Argentina's Minister for Foreign Affairs and Worship declared that the opening by the United Kingdom of a strategic airport on the Malvinas Islands, allegedly to promote economic development, represented an escalation in the militarization of the territory; it also rejected as incompatible with the aims of the 1959 Antarctic Treaty the United Kingdom's use of a military and nuclear base, contiguous to the geographical area covered by that agreement, to pursue its objectives in Antarctica.

Responding to the May letter, the United Kingdom stated on 29 May(7) that the new airport had a dual civil and military role. Its construction was necessary to deter aggression and defend the Islands against attack, and the presence of its forces contributed to peace and security in the region. Further, the United Kingdom denied a number of allegations made by Argentina, among them, that there was any North Atlantic Treaty Organization dimension to its involvement in the area; that it had introduced nuclear weapons into the South Atlantic; that the Falkland Islands was within the application of the Antarctic Treaty or that its activities contravened the Treaty's purposes; or that the Charter obligation to the peaceful settlement of disputes required, irrespective of circumstances, recourse to negotiations.

On 31 May,(8) Argentina transmitted the text of a resolution, entitled "Concern at the establishment by the United Kingdom of military installations on the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)", adopted the previous day by the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States. In it, the Permanent Council again appealed to the parties to renew negotiations to solve the sovereignty dispute and other differences, and expressed concern that the establishment by the United Kingdom of military installations on the Islands heightened tension and impeded the resumption of negotiations.

On 8 July,(9) the United Kingdom transmitted a written statement made in its Parliament that day by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, in which he stated that the Government's policy was as follows: that the sovereignty question was not for discussion; that better relations with Argentina could only realistically be achieved by seeking agreement on practical issues; and that, as a step in that direction, it was lifting, with effect from midnight that day, the ban on imports from Argentina which had been in place since April 1982.

In a 10 July press communiqué,(10) Argentina's Minister for Foreign Affairs and Worship welcomed the United Kingdom's announced lifting of the ban on imports from Argentina; declared that the stable political conditions and mutual trust needed for trade relations required dealing with the central issue of sovereignty and eliminating the military threat and the so-called protection zone; invited the United Kingdom to initiate in the coming 60 days negotiations preceded by preparations either through the Secretary-General's good offices or through friendly Powers representing each nation's respective interests; and expressed Argentina's readiness formally to declare cessation of hostilities when the United Kingdom agreed to negotiate.

On 12 July,(11) the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs of the United Kingdom called Argentina's 10 July statement a disappointing response to the lifting of the ban on Argentine imports, adding that the latter's insistence on the sovereignty issue as a pre-condition for better bilateral relations was neither realistic nor constructive.

In a 29 July letter,(12) Argentina charged that on 25 July one of its naval aircraft on a maritime transit control flight was intercepted for 12 minutes by two United Kingdom Phantom aircraft within the 200-mile area of Argentina's jurisdiction and more than 15 miles from the outer limit of the exclusion zone unilaterally set up around the Malvinas by the United Kingdom. In a 2 August response,(13) the United Kingdom said that when an aircraft was detected eight miles beyond the Falkland Islands protection zone, two United Kingdom aircraft were dispatched for inspection. They identified it as an Argentine Electra but made no contact and did not harass it. The three aircraft were flying in international airspace and there was no justification for Argentina to describe this routine operation as blatantly provocative. The United Kingdom added that, as Argentina had not declared a formal cessation of hostilities and continued to purchase sophisticated weaponry, forces had to be maintained at the minimum level necessary to defend the Islands from attack.

Argentina's Minister for Foreign Affairs and Worship, in a 12 September press communiqué,(14) noted that the 60-day period within which Argentina had offered to resume negotiations had ended the previous day. He asserted that the blatant indifference shown by the United Kingdom demonstrated how little importance that country attached to United Nations decisions, and renewed his Government's invitation to embark on comprehensive negotiations on the question. He reiterated Argentina's pledge to safeguard the interests of the Islands' inhabitants, and added that there was thus no remaining justification for the United Kingdom's conduct other than the attempt to perpetuate an anachronistic and illegal colonial situation.

On 18 September,(15) Argentina issued a press release following a meeting—facilitated by the Socialist International secretariat—in Paris that day between the President of Argentina and the leader of the Labour Party (opposition) in the United Kingdom Parliament. Among a number of issues discussed at the meeting, Argentina reported that both sides had expressed the desire that negotiations be initiated to explore the means of resolving the outstanding problems between the two countries, including all aspects of the future of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), taking fully into account the interests of the inhabitants.

Reporting on a 6 October meeting at Madrid, Spain, between the President of Argentina and the leader of the British Liberal Party, Argentina<sup>(16)</sup> said the two sides agreed that the process of achieving a peaceful and negotiated solution to the dispute should include a formal cessation of hostilities and a lifting of the exclusion zone, the restoration of diplomatic and trade relations, and the resumption of negotiations on all issues concerning the future of the Malvinas Islands, including sovereignty.

Other communications. On 12 August,<sup>(17)</sup> Peru transmitted the text of the Lima Declaration, signed on 29 July by the heads of State of Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Panama, Peru and Uruguay, and by the representatives of Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Paraguay and Venezuela. Among other issues, the signatories supported Argentina's sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands and called for immediate resumption of negotiations in accordance with United Nations resolutions.

Canada transmitted in October<sup>(18)</sup> the text of a resolution on decolonization, adopted at the Seventy-fourth Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Ottawa, 2-7 September), in which the participants urged the two Governments concerned to resume negotiations aimed at a peaceful solution to the sovereignty dispute with regard to the Falkland Islands (Malvinas).

Angola transmitted on 5 November<sup>(19)</sup> the text of the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September), in which the Ministers reiterated their support for Argentina's right to have its sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands restituted through negotiation. Urging the United Kingdom to agree to the resumption of negotiations, they asserted that the massive British military and naval presence in the area adversely affected stability there, and that the establishment of military installations on dependent Territories impeded the application of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(20)</sup>

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries considered the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) question on 5, 6 and 9 August, hearing statements by Argentina, the United Kingdom as the administering Power, the Counsellor of the Legislative Council of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), two petitioners and Committee members.

On 9 August,<sup>(21)</sup> the Committee, among other things: expressed regret that the resumption of talks had not taken place due to the United Kingdom's refusal to deal with the sovereignty issue within the framework of comprehensive negotiations; urged the two parties to resume negotiations to solve the sovereignty question; reiterated its support for a renewed good offices mission by the Secretary-General based on 1982,<sup>(22)</sup> 1983<sup>(23)</sup> and 1984<sup>(24)</sup> Assembly resolutions; and decided to keep the question under review, subject to Assembly directives.

Report of the Secretary-General. In November 1985, the Secretary-General, in pursuance of a 1984 Assembly resolution,<sup>(24)</sup> submitted a report on the question,<sup>(25)</sup> based on exchanges of views with the two Governments concerned, including meetings with the President of Argentina and the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom as well as their Foreign Ministers. The Secretary-General reported that their positions remained basically unchanged and that it had not been possible to implement the 1984 Assembly resolution. While deploring the lack of progress towards normalizing the situation in the South Atlantic, the Secretary-General reiterated his readiness to assist in promoting a dialogue leading to a just and lasting settlement of the basic issue involved.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 27 November 1985, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/21 by recorded vote.

Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) and having received the report of the Secretary-General,

Aware of the interest of the international community in the peaceful and definitive settlement by the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland of all their differences, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Taking note of the interest repeatedly expressed by both parties in normalizing their relations,

Convinced that such purpose would be facilitated by a global negotiation between both Governments that will allow them to rebuild mutual confidence on a solid basis and to resolve the pending problems, including all aspects on the future of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas),

1. Requests the Governments of Argentina and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to initiate negotiations with a view to finding the means to resolve peacefully and definitively the pending problems between both countries, including all aspects on the future of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas), in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his renewed mission of good offices in order to assist the parties in complying with the request made in paragraph 1 above, and to take the necessary measures to that end;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report on the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Question of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)".

General Assembly resolution 40/21

27 November 1985 Meeting 95 107-4-41 (recorded vote)

13-nation draft (A/40/L.19 & Add.1); agenda item 23.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

Against: Belize, Oman, Solomon Islands, United Kingdom.

Abstaining: Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Belgium, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Cameroon, Denmark, Egypt, Fiji, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Lebanon, Luxembourg, Malawi, Maldives, Malta, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Portugal, Qatar, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Saudi Arabia, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Thailand, United Arab Emirates.

The Assembly rejected, by recorded votes requested by Argentina, two amendments proposed by the United Kingdom.<sup>(26)</sup> By 60 votes to 38, with 43 abstentions, it rejected a proposal to insert a new second preambular paragraph, by which the Assembly would have reaffirmed the right of all peoples to self-determination and "by virtue of that right they freely determine their political status and freely pursue their economic, social and cultural development". Another proposal, to add the phrase "and the right thereunder of peoples to self-determination" at the end of paragraph 1, was rejected by 57 votes to 36, with 47 abstentions.

Argentina said it did not request inclusion in the draft resolution of references to the principle of territorial integrity or the 1960 Declaration on decolonization; voting in favour of the British amendments would be taking the side of one of the parties to the dispute, while voting against them would not exclude what was advocated in the proposals. The United Kingdom, saying it voted for self-determination and against an unbalanced resolution, declared that it would continue to fulfil its obligations to the people of the Falkland Islands who were at the centre of the issue.

In explanation of vote, Portugal said that, despite the undeniable merits in the draft, particularly with respect to the opportunities afforded for negotiations, it was wary of any text that could be construed in a way that failed to deal adequately with the global aspects stemming from the principle of self-determination. Solomon Islands felt that the lack of reference to the people of the Falkland Islands weakened the good intent of the draft and it regarded elements of the fourth preambular paragraph as an attempt to impose something on the people of the Islands. Papua New Guinea said that another principal party not included in the negotiation process was the people of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas); it would have supported the text if it had included the principle of self-determination. The Federal Republic of Germany and Ireland, which had voted for the amendments because of the importance of self-determination, had abstained on the resolution to reflect their wish not to take a position on the merits of the dispute. Maldives believed that a question involving the future of a people should accommodate the interests of the people concerned.

Belize voted for the amendments to ensure protection of the rights of the people of the Falkland Islands to self-determination. Also supporting the amendments, Samoa believed that the right of self-determination could have been more explicit in the draft, and Fiji added that the call for negotiations should not be at the cost of the fundamental right of the Falkland Islanders to have a say in their own future. Welcoming the conciliatory nature of the draft resolution, Botswana also supported the amendments, saying that the Falkland Islanders were entitled to the right to self-determination.

For Barbados, the phrase "all aspects of the future of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas)" in paragraph 1 seemed to leave the door open for a discussion of both sovereignty and self-determination; however, noting Argentina's position on the non-applicability of self-determination to the case, the acceptance of the proposed amendments would somewhat protect the United Kingdom's position regarding self-determination.

A number of delegations, considering the draft resolution to be constructive, also felt the adoption of the amendments would have further strengthened the text and voted in favour of both the amendments and the draft resolution. Among them, the Sudan thought the amendments would have increased the effectiveness of the text, even though the principle was already contained therein. Malawi accepted the amendments if that helped the two parties to begin negotiating. Egypt said that its votes reflected its conviction of the need to resolve issues by peaceful means. Kuwait asserted that the right to self-determination should be used not to perpetuate colonialism but to enhance the process of decolonization. Lesotho said that, although the amendments touched on the substance of the matter to be negotiated by the parties, it would support them as they concerned principles which could not be ignored in any negotiations.

Many delegations expressed misgivings or opposition to the amendments for fear their incorporation would disrupt the delicate balance in a procedural text, aimed at facilitating the opening of a dialogue between the parties.

Algeria viewed the draft resolution as being confined to defining a procedural framework for negotiations. The Central African Republic and Haiti said the draft did not concern the substance of the problem, put no pre-conditions and did not prejudice the positions of the parties. Japan said the amendments would have altered the basic thrust of the text. For France, the text made it possible to take into account all the relevant positions; express mention of the right to self-determination would in the circumstances have opened up a debate on matters of substance and introduced a destabilizing element into the text. The Syrian Arab Republic said the singling out of the principle of self-determination in the amendments was prejudicial. Ethiopia, which considered the text to be sufficiently conciliatory, felt the amendments introduced one particular element and narrowed the focus of envisaged negotiations as indicated in the fourth preambular paragraph and paragraph 1. Turkey added that the principle of self-determination was far from being the only one relevant to the dispute. The Congo expected the discussions to deal with all aspects of the dispute. Italy, which also believed the dialogue should dwell on all elements of the dispute, said the amendments would introduce into the text an element of predetermination of the solution. Greece felt that the amendments would alter the balance, possibly to the benefit of one party to the conflict; it did not see the vote on the amendments as reflecting positions on the principle of self-determination. Similarly, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya opposed the amendments, notwithstanding its commitment to that principle. Although the Netherlands thought the amendments would have introduced an element not conducive to the resumption of a dialogue, it abstained on the text as it also fell short of achieving that objective.

Austria, Barbados, Chile, Italy, Samoa, Somalia and Trinidad and Tobago understood the reference in the draft to the United Nations Charter to include all the principles and rights embodied in that document. In addition, Sweden expressed regret that a consensus text was not possible.

Austria, the Federal Republic of Germany and Italy welcomed the absence in the draft resolution of reference to controversial elements. The Federal Republic of Germany added that the omission of controversial references to other texts and of an express mention of the sovereignty controversy constituted an important step in the right direction.

Malaysia said the scope of negotiations should not be limited by the effects of the 1982 conflict, and negotiations should resume on the same basis as that followed by the parties before that conflict.

Asserting that Argentina had sovereignty over the Malvinas Islands, Albania said the principle of self-determination, therefore, did not apply to the case. In a similar vein, Mongolia deplored what it called the United Kingdom's policy of preserving by military force the colonial status of the Territory. Iran stated that the principle of self-determination applied to the indigenous population, not to foreigners who had chosen to settle in a land originally under Argentina's sovereignty.

Also on 27 November, the Assembly took note of the report of the Fourth Committee(27) on the question (decision 40/410). The following petitioners had requested hearings(28) and made statements before the Committee on 27 November: John E. Cheek and D. L. Clifton, members of the Falkland Islands Council; Susan Couttes de Maciello and Alexander Jacob Betts, natives of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas); and Raúl Milton McBurney, an Argentine citizen.

East Timor

Communications. On 25 February 1985,(1) Portugal informed the Secretary-General that it had nothing to add to the information it had provided in 1979,(2) as required by Article 73 (e) of the Charter of the United Nations.

On 23 October,(3) Sao Tome and Principe transmitted to the Secretary-General a 20 July statement by Kay Rala Xanana Gusmão, President of the Revolutionary Council of National Resistance (CRRN)—the highest politico-military body of the Frente Revolucionária de Timor Leste Independente (FRETILIN)—and Commander-in-Chief of East Timor National Liberation Armed Forces, declaring the availability of the FRETILIN leadership for consultations within the framework of the 1982 General Assembly resolution on the question of East Timor.(4) Under a peace plan, unanimously adopted by CRRN and attached to the statement, FRETILIN envisaged direct talks among Portugal, Indonesia and CRRN to explore the creation of a multinational peace-keeping force, organization of free and democratic consultations of the Maubere people, and the setting of a date for the transfer of sovereignty. No pre-conditions were set to initiate preliminary talks with the Government of Indonesia for exploring other avenues for a comprehensive settlement of the Timor problem.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. On 5 March 1985, the Chairman of the Commission on Human Rights(5) announced, following discussions in closed session, that the situation in East Timor was no longer under consideration by the Commission under a 1970 Economic and Social Council resolution.(6)

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries(7) considered the East Timor question at four meetings between 1 and 8 August. It had before it a Secretariat working paper which detailed action taken at the United Nations and described the military and human rights situations and economic, social and cultural conditions in the Territory.(8) The Committee heard statements by Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau, Indonesia, Mozambique, Portugal and Sao Tome and Principe. It also granted requests for hearings to, and heard statements by, representatives of three non-governmental organizations and a FRETILIN representative.

Indonesia had told the Committee in February that the colonial status of East Timor had been terminated with its integration into Indonesia on 17 July 1976, and that discussion of the Territory, therefore, violated the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of a sovereign State.

On 8 August, the Committee decided to continue consideration of the question in 1986, subject to Assembly directives.

Report of the Secretary-General. In September, the Secretary-General submitted a progress report to the General Assembly on his efforts to improve the humanitarian situation in East Timor and to promote a comprehensive settlement of the problem.(9) He said that, since his last report to the Assembly in July 1984,(10) he or Under-Secretary-General Rafeuddin Ahmed had held consultations with high-level officials of the Governments concerned, as a result of which Indonesia and Portugal conducted six rounds of substantive talks between November 1984 and August 1985. The talks centred on the questions of repatriating former Portuguese civil servants as well as certain East Timorese expatriates residing in Portugal, religious freedom, protection and preservation of the cultural heritage of the East Timorese people, and economic and social conditions in East Timor.

The Secretary-General stated that the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the Indonesian Red Cross and the United Nations Children's Fund carried out programmes aimed at improving the humanitarian situation of, or providing relief assistance to, the people of East Timor. As a result of discussions between the Indonesian authorities and ICRC, the latter was authorized to conduct a survey to assess the medical and nutritional situation; from 28 May to 16 June 1985, 25 villages in nine sub-districts, encompassing a total population of 41,000 inhabitants, were visited. The findings indicated that, at the time of the survey, the nutritional status and medical conditions were generally satisfactory, but the attention of the Indonesian authorities was drawn to instances where food and medicine shortages might possibly arise in the immediate future.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 20 September, the General Assembly adopted decision 40/402 by which it decided to include the East Timor question in its provisional 1986 agenda. It took this action after the General Committee had recommended that consideration of the item be deferred.(11)

Western Sahara

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. By a resolution of 26 February 1985,(1) the Commission on Human Rights reaffirmed that the question of Western Sahara was one of decolonization which remained to be completed on the basis of the exercise by the people of Western Sahara of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence, and requested the parties to the conflict, Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Rio de Oro (POLISARIO Front), to bring about a cease-fire to create the necessary conditions for a referendum for self-determination, under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the United Nations. It welcomed the efforts of OAU to promote a just and definitive solution to the Western Sahara question in accordance with OAU and United Nations resolutions. It further welcomed the United Nations determination to co-operate with OAU with a view to implementing OAU decisions on the question, particularly that quoted in a 1983 General Assembly resolution on the question.(2)

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries(3) considered the Western Sahara question at three meetings between 1 and 8 August, having before it a Secretariat working paper on developments in the Territory(4) and a document dated 2 August(5) transmitted to the Committee Chairman by Morocco. It heard statements by Afghanistan, Cuba and Iran, in addition to those by a representative of the POLISARIO Front and two other individuals. It decided to continue consideration of the question in 1986, subject to General Assembly directives.

Communications. By a 2 August letter,(5) Morocco transmitted to the Secretary-General the document which had also been transmitted to the Chairman of the Committee on colonial countries. Morocco said the item should be deleted from the Committee's agenda as the decolonization of Western Sahara had been achieved by peaceful means when the General Assembly, in 1975,(6) took note of the tripartite agreement (Mauritania, Morocco, Spain) of November 1975. Algeria, in opposition to that peaceful solution, resorted to the use of mercenaries or to intervention; Algeria's request for direct negotiations with the POLISARIO Front or the admission of the so-called Saharan Arab Democratic Republic to OAU prejudged the results of the future referendum and sought to render it inoperative. In view of the impasse in which OAU found itself, it was up to the United Nations to ensure the holding of a referendum on self-determination in the Territory and the peaceful settlement of the question.

On 5 November,(7) Angola transmitted to the Secretary-General the text of the Final Political Declaration, adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September 1985), in which the Ministers reaffirmed that the problem was one of decolonization which could only be solved when the people of Western Sahara exercised their right to self-determination and independence. The Ministers urged Morocco and POLISARIO to hold direct negotiations with a view to reaching a cease-fire agreement, so as to create the conditions necessary for a referendum of self-determination, under the auspices of OAU and the United Nations, without any administrative or military constraints.

Retort of the Secretary-General. In a September report,(8) submitted to the General Assembly in response to a 1984 resolution,(9) the Secretary-General reviewed a number of contacts he had made with the parties concerned since December 1984.

He reported, among other things, that the Acting Secretary-General of OAU had informed him, in August 1985, of the admission of the Saharan Arab Democratic Republic as an OAU member at the November 1984 session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government and of Morocco's withdrawal from the organization. The Acting Secretary-General had also stated that no progress could be envisaged as long as the 1983 OAU resolution(2) remained unimplemented.

The Secretary-General stated that the question of Western Sahara remained a matter of decolonization in the context of relevant United Nations resolutions, and recalled that all the parties concerned had agreed on the need for a referendum to enable the people of the Territory to exercise their right to self-determination. He expressed concern that the unresolved situation continued to be a source of tension in the subregion, and reiterated his readiness to assist in the search for a peaceful solution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/50 by recorded vote.

Question of Western Sahara

The General Assembly,

Having considered in depth the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling the inalienable right of all peoples to self-determination and independence, in accordance with the principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960 containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 39/40 of 5 December 1984 on the question of Western Sahara,

Having examined the relevant chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the question of Western Sahara,

Recalling resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) on Western Sahara, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its nineteenth ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 6 to 12 June 1983,

1. Reaffirms that the question of Western Sahara is a question of decolonization which remains to be completed on the basis of the exercise by the people of Western Sahara of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence;

2. Reaffirms also that the solution of the question of Western Sahara lies in the implementation of resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity, which establishes ways and means for a just and definitive political solution to the Western Sahara conflict;

3. Again requests, to that end, the two parties to the conflict, the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro, to undertake direct negotiations, in the shortest possible time, with a view to bringing about a cease-fire to create the necessary conditions for a peaceful and fair referendum for self-determination of the people of Western Sahara, a referendum without any administrative or military constraints, under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations;

4. Welcomes the efforts of the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to promote a just and definitive solution of the question of Western Sahara;

5. Invites the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity and the Secretary-General of the United Nations to exert every effort to persuade the two parties to the conflict, the Kingdom of Morocco and the Frente Popular para la Liberación de Saguia el-Hamra y de Río de Oro, to negotiate, in the shortest possible time and in conformity with resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX) and the present resolution, the terms of a cease-fire and the modalities for organizing the said referendum;

6. Reaffirms the determination of the United Nations to co-operate fully with the Organization of African Unity with a view to implementing the relevant decisions of that organization, in particular resolution AHG/Res.104(XIX);

7. Requests the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples to continue to consider the situation in Western Sahara as a matter of priority and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

8. Invites the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity to keep the Secretary-General of the United Nations informed of the progress achieved in the implementation of the decisions of the Organization of African Unity relating to Western Sahara;

9. Invites the Secretary-General to follow the situation in Western Sahara closely with a view to the implementation of the present resolution and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 96-7-39 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/906) by recorded vote (91-6-43), 12 November (meeting 21); 43-nation draft (A/C.4/40/L.2/Rev.1); agenda item 18.

Against: Central African Republic, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, Guatemala, Morocco, Philippines, Zaire.

Abstaining: Belgium, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Canada, Chad, Chile, Denmark, El Salvador, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Guinea, Iceland, Indonesia, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives Nepal, Netherlands, Norway, Pakistan, Paraguay, Portugal, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Following approval of the draft in the Fourth Committee, another draft on the question(10)—submitted by the Central African Republic, the Comoros, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, Guatemala, Morocco, Paraguay and Zaire—was withdrawn. That action followed the Committee's rejection, by a recorded vote of 54 to 27, with 45 abstentions, of Morocco's proposal that the debate on amendments to the draft it had co-sponsored, submitted by Algeria, Burkina Faso, Madagascar and Mozambique, be adjourned.

In making that proposal, Morocco stated that the so-called amendments were, in reality, a new draft identical in content with the 43-nation adopted draft, and were aimed at destroying the operational character of the nine-nation text, cancelling out the Secretary-General's efforts by giving him an impossible mission, and at preventing a just solution to the question. Zaire and Equatorial Guinea supported the motion. Algeria, on the other hand, asserted that Morocco's motion denied sovereign States the right to free expression or to propose amendments. India said acceptance of the motion would alter the Assembly's established position on the terms and conditions for the decolonization of Western Sahara and deny the people of the Territory its legitimate rights and aspirations.

The nine-nation draft would have had the Assembly decide to organize a referendum, beginning in January 1986, to enable the authentic populations of Western Sahara to exercise their right to self-determination. The Secretary-General would have been requested to organize that referendum and, to that end, to undertake consultations with the parties concerned, in co-operation with the OAU Chairman and Secretary-General.

In their proposed amendments to the nine-nation draft, Algeria, Burkina Faso and Mozambique all suggested that references be made to the OAU resolution quoted in a 1983 General Assembly resolution,(2) to that Assembly resolution itself, and to a 1984 Assembly resolution on the question.<sup>(9)</sup> In addition, Mozambique<sup>(11)</sup> proposed including in the preamble a reference to the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples. Burkina Faso<sup>(12)</sup> proposed that the preamble also contain a reference to the 1960 Declaration on Granting Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(13)</sup> Madagascar<sup>(14)</sup> proposed that the Assembly request the United Nations Secretary-General and the current OAU Chairman to organize the referendum, taking into account the OAU resolution. Algeria<sup>(15)</sup> proposed that the Secretary-General, the current OAU Chairman and the OAU Secretary-General hold consultations with Morocco and the POLISARIO Front—named as the parties concerned in OAU and General Assembly resolutions—to prevail on them to negotiate the conditions of a cease-fire with a view to holding the referendum.

The Secretariat had orally informed the Fourth Committee that, as the Secretary-General was currently not in a position to prepare estimates for the programme budget implications of the two drafts, he intended to incur expenditures as might be necessary under unforeseen and extraordinary expenses.

In explanation of vote, Morocco said that, by adopting virtually the same resolution as in 1984, the Committee had opted for ineffective and inapplicable action. Like OAU, it had reached an impasse. While ready to seek compromise and dialogue, Morocco would not surrender its principles and had exhausted all recourses available to it; Morocco formally declared, therefore, that it would no longer participate in any discussion or negotiation on the Territory in the Fourth Committee, the Committee on colonial countries or other meetings of the General Assembly, nor would it consider itself bound by any resolution adopted by the Assembly in its absence.

Algeria found it difficult to see how the people of Western Sahara might express their wishes freely when Morocco continued to refuse to negotiate with their representatives and had decided never to withdraw its troops or administrative authorities from the Territory. In taking such action, Morocco was denying the Saharan people's right to self-determination and independence. The nine-nation draft asked the Assembly to repudiate its consensus resolutions, to review the question as a non-colonial issue and to legitimize procedures that simply accepted fait accompli.

Burundi supported the 43-nation draft, which conformed to OAU and General Assembly resolutions; it considered the nine-nation draft to be completely at odds with the OAU peace plan. Bolivia said that negotiations between Morocco and the representatives of the Saharan people were the only proper framework for peace initiatives in the region. New Zealand interpreted paragraph 5 as inviting the Secretary-General to co-operate in the search for a peaceful solution to the dispute, consistent with the Charter and the principle of self-determination. Austria supported the text for its call for a peaceful settlement through negotiations between all the parties concerned, as did Sweden for its explicit reference to the relevant resolutions.

China, not participating, hoped that the parties concerned would negotiate, with the assistance of the Secretary-General and OAU, and settle the dispute according to the wishes of the people of the Territory. Australia felt that the 43-nation draft deserved support for insisting on the principle of self-determination; however, it would not support any wording that could be construed as prejudging the outcome of a referendum. For Pakistan, the 43-nation draft seemed to predetermine some issues that were better handled through diplomacy, and the nine-nation draft was not sufficiently specific on certain points.

Austria, Finland and Sweden said they had hoped for a consensus text. Support for both drafts was expressed by Australia, Costa Rica, Finland, Pakistan, Spain, the Sudan and Turkey. Costa Rica saw in the two texts alternative proposals for achieving the same goal; it took note of Morocco's promise to respect the results of the January 1986 referendum. The United States, which felt the 43-nation draft was unlikely to advance a settlement of the problem, would have voted for the nine-nation text which represented an advance in Morocco's position; it considered that the positions presented in the two drafts were very close and hoped that the Assembly would see in 1986 a resolution supported jointly by Algeria and Morocco. The Sudan said the nine-nation text in its original form contained a number of positive aspects. France regretted that the parties to the dispute could not agree on a referendum organized without any constraints and under international control, as agreed on by the United Nations and OAU. Finland expressed regret over the non-implementation of 1981 and 1983 OAU resolutions on organizing a referendum. Spain stressed that a solution required the participation of all parties in negotiations, with the assistance of the Secretary-General and OAU.

In November, the Fourth Committee heard the following petitioners at their request:<sup>(16)</sup> Teresa K. Smith, Western Sahara Campaign for Human Rights and Humanitarian Relief, United States; Mansour Omar, POLISARIO Front; Mr. Fofange, Minority Rights Group; Breika Zerouali, spokesman for "the elected representatives of the communities and the parents of persons abducted and illegally held in Algerian territory"; Mr. Biadi-Llah, for the deputies of Saguia el-Horura; Ahmed Rachid, Secretary-General of the Mouvement des originaires du Sahara and representative of the Mouvement de Résistance des Hommes Bleus; Mohamed Taquiollah Maalainine, on behalf of the representatives of Rio de Oro; and Biadillah Mohamed Cheikh, for the deputies of Saguia el-Hamra.

Other Territories

In December 1985, the General Assembly adopted resolutions or decisions on other Territories, most of which were based on drafts suggested by the Committee on colonial countries<sup>(1)</sup> charged with overseeing the implementation of the 1960 Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples.<sup>(2)</sup> As in previous years, the Secretariat provided the Committee with working papers on the situation in the Territories under consideration. The Committee held three sessions during 1985: 21 February, New York; 13-17 May, Tunis, Tunisia; 1-15 August, New York.

In June, Papua New Guinea brought to the attention of the Secretary-General the situation of New Caledonia (see p. 1081).

American Samoa

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted without vote resolution 40/41.

Question of American Samoa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of American Samoa,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to American Samoa, including in particular its resolution 39/31 of 5 December 1984,

Taking into account the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to American Samoa,

Conscious of the need to promote progress towards the full implementation of the Declaration in respect of American Samoa,

Noting with appreciation the continued participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to American Samoa, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory,

Noting that the first live-year economic development plan for the Territory, implemented by the Development Planning Office of the Government of American Samoa, expired at the end of 1984,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Territory, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the dispatch in 1981 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to American Samoa;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of American Samoa to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to American Samoa;

4. Calls upon the Government of the United States of America, as the administering Power, to take all necessary steps, taking into account the rights, interests and wishes of the people of American Samoa as expressed freely in conditions leading to real self-determination, to expedite the process of decolonization of the Territory in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of American Samoa of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

5. Takes note of the elections held on 6 November 1984 and of the fact that the newly elected Governor has stated his intention to recommend legislation establishing clearly the powers and duties of the various government departments in order to avoid conflicts of authority and to ensure sufficient budgetary control;

6. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, to promote the economic and social development of American Samoa, and calls upon the administering Power to intensify its efforts to strengthen and diversify the economy of the Territory and to make it more viable in order to reduce its heavy economic and financial dependence on the United States and to create employment opportunities for the people of the Territory;

7. Expresses the hope that the development planning process initiated by the first five-year development plan will be continued, and urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen and extend the responsibilities of the Development Planning Office;

8. Urges the administering Power to continue to facilitate close relations and co-operation between the peoples of the Territory and the neighbouring island communities and between the territorial Government and the regional institutions in order to enhance further the economic and social welfare of the people of American Samoa;

9. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of American Samoa to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to ensure their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development with a view to creating conditions for a balanced and viable economy;

10. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to American Samoa should be kept under review;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to American Samoa, in consultation with the administering Power, taking into account, in particular, the wishes of the people of the Territory, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Anguilla

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 40/48 without vote.

Question of Anguilla

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Anguilla,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Anguilla, including in particular its resolution 39/39 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will respect the wishes of the people of Anguilla in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting with appreciation the continued participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Anguilla, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory,

Noting that during the period under review the economy of Anguilla remained buoyant,

Noting that, as a result of a comprehensive review of the civil service and police force undertaken during 1984, salaries and allowances were increased,

Welcoming the contribution to the development of the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system operating in Anguilla, and noting the separate illustrative indicative planning figure established for Anguilla by the Programme for the period 1982-1986,

Reiterating the view that the participation of Territories as associate members in organizations of the United Nations system is a part of the overall strategy of accelerating the decolonization process,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of Anguilla, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the dispatch in 1984 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Anguilla;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Anguilla to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Anguilla;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in Anguilla as will enable its people to exercise freely and without interference, from a well-informed standpoint as to the available options, their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of Anguilla themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

6. Calls upon the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy of Anguilla and to increase its assistance to programmes of diversification;

7. Notes that, although the Territory was no longer in need of a grant from the administering Power to balance its recurrent budget for 1984, the Government of the United Kingdom agreed to provide a special grant to clear the deficit accumulated between 1977 and 1983;

8. Urges the administering Power to take effective measures, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard, guarantee and ensure the rights of the people of Anguilla to own and dispose of their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over their future development;

9. Urges the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, the assistance necessary for the increased employment of the local population in the civil service, particularly at senior levels;

10. Reiterates its request to the administering Power, in the light of the observations, conclusions and recommendations of the United Nations Visiting Mission to Anguilla, 1984, to continue to enlist the assistance of the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as other regional and international bodies, in the development and strengthening of the economy of Anguilla;

11. Calls upon the administering Power to continue to facilitate the participation of Anguilla in the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and its subsidiary body, the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee, and in other organizations of the United Nations system, including the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development;

12. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Anguilla at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Bermuda

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly, on 2 December 1985, adopted resolution 40/43 without vote.

Question of Bermuda

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Bermuda,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Bermuda, including in particular its resolution 39/33 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will fully respect the wishes of the people of Bermuda in determining the future constitutional status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory, welcoming the continued co-operation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Bermuda, which contributes to informed consideration of conditions in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of Bermuda, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Bermuda;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Bermuda to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Bermuda;

4. Urges the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, taking into account the rights, interests and wishes of the people of Bermuda expressed freely in conditions leading to real self-determination, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the full and speedy implementation of resolution 1514(XV);

5. Reiterates that it is the obligation of the administering Power to create such conditions in Bermuda as will enable the people of that Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of Bermuda of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of that right;

6. Reaffirms that, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration contained in resolution 1514(XV), it is ultimately for the people of Bermuda themselves to determine their own future political status;

7. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in Bermuda could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter;

8. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference directed against other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

9. Urges once again the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to take all effective measures to guarantee the right of the people of Bermuda to own and dispose of their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over their future development with a view to creating conditions for a balanced and viable economy;

10. Welcomes the role being played in the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme, specifically in programmes of agriculture, forestry and fisheries, and urges the specialized agencies and all other organizations of the United Nations system to continue to pay special attention to the development needs of Bermuda;

11. Urges the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, the assistance necessary for the employment of the local population in the civil service, particularly at senior levels;

12. Emphasizes the desirability of sending a visiting mission to the Territory at the earliest possible opportunity;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to Bermuda at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

British Virgin Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 40/44 without vote.

Question of the British Virgin Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the British Virgin Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the British Virgin Islands, including in particular its resolution 39/34 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will fully respect the wishes of the people of the British Virgin Islands in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting with appreciation the continued active participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the British Virgin Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Reaffirming the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory,

Noting with concern that during the period under review the international economic crisis caused tourism and its supportive services, the mainstay of the economy, to slow down, and taking note that construction activities increased and that the territorial Government, in its continued efforts to broaden the base of the economy, was re-examining its industrialization programme,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the British Virgin Islands, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Welcoming the contribution to the development of the Territory by the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system operating in the Territory, and noting the continued participation of the Territory in the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development, as well as in regional organizations, including in particular the Caribbean Development Bank,

Welcoming also the participation of the Territory as an associate member in the work of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and its subsidiary body, the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee, as well as in various other international and regional organizations,

Recalling the dispatch in 1976 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the British Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the British Virgin Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the British Virgin Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the British Virgin Islands themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

6. Notes the continuing commitment of the territorial Government to the goal of economic diversification, particularly in the areas of agriculture, fisheries and small industries, and reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to intensify its efforts in this regard;

7. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the British Virgin Islands to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to ensure their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

8. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system to intensify measures to accelerate progress in the social and economic life of the Territory;

9. Reiterates its call upon the administering Power to facilitate the further participation of the British Virgin Islands in various international and regional organizations and in other organizations of the United Nations system;

10. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

11. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to the British Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Cayman Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/45 without vote on 2 December 1985.

Question of the Cayman Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Cayman Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Cayman Islands, including in particular its resolution 39/35 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will fully respect the wishes of the people of the Cayman Islands in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting that although the main sectors of the economy of the Cayman Islands, specifically tourism, international finance and real estate, continued to sustain some degree of growth during the period under review, they have been negatively affected by the world economic crisis,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Cayman Islands, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Noting with appreciation the continued contribution of the United Nations Development Programme to the development of the Territory,

Recalling the dispatch in 1977 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Cayman Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the Cayman Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the Cayman Islands;

4. Notes with appreciation the participation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the Cayman Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory, with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration;

5. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to create such conditions in the Cayman Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of the Cayman Islands themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of the Territory, and urges it, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to render continuing support, to the fullest extent possible, to the development of programmes of economic diversification which will benefit the people of the Territory;

8. Takes note of the statement of the administering Power to the effect that, despite the poor quality of the soil in the Territory, a study conducted by the territorial Government in 1984 revealed some possibilities in the field of poultry, agricultural and pastoral farming;

9. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the Territory to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to ensure their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

10. Calls upon the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as regional institutions such as the Caribbean Development Bank, to continue to take all necessary measures to accelerate progress in the social and economic life of the Cayman Islands;

11. Notes with appreciation the continued contribution of the United Nations Development Programme to the development of the Territory;

12. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Cayman Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to the Cayman Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Gibraltar

Communications. During 1985, the Secretary-General received a number of communications regarding an agreement reached by Spain and the United Kingdom at Brussels, Belgium, in November 1984,(3) on the way in which their respective Governments would apply the 1980 Lisbon Declaration on the question of Gibraltar.(4) On 5 February 1985, at Geneva, the two Governments initiated the negotiating process provided for in the Brussels agreement.

In a letter of 30 January 1985,(5) Spain stated that the current location of the Customs and Police Control Administration at La Línea de la Concepción should not be interpreted as Spain's recognition of United Kingdom sovereignty over spaces other than those expressly ceded under article 10 of the Treaty of Utrecht, and that nothing in the 1984 Brussels agreement should be invoked as Spain's recognition of the permanence or continuity in the future of the current status of Gibraltar. The United Kingdom responded on 6 February,(6) by reaffirming its position concerning the sovereignty of the United Kingdom over all parts of Gibraltar and its status.

By a 1 July letter,(7) Spain and the United Kingdom informed the Secretary-General that they had exchanged notes on 13 June as the former country acceded to the European Community (EC). Spain notified the United Kingdom that its accession to EC and the application of EC regulations to the territory of Gibraltar did not alter its position concerning Gibraltar and did not affect the bilateral negotiating process established under the 1984 Brussels agreement. The United Kingdom confirmed that it had placed on record that Spain's accession did not involve any alteration in the United Kingdom's position concerning Gibraltar and did not affect the bilateral negotiating process.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. Taking into account the continuing discussions between the parties concerned, the Committee on colonial countries decided on 9 August to continue considering the item at its 1986 session, subject to any Assembly directives.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 40/413 without vote.

Question of Gibraltar

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, noting that the Governments of Spain and of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland agreed at Brussels on 27 November 1984 on a statement whereby they decided to apply, before 15 February 1985, the Lisbon Declaration of 10 April 1980 in all its parts; noting that this involved, simultaneously, the provision of equality and reciprocity of rights for Spaniards in Gibraltar and Gibraltarians in Spain, the establishment of the free movement of persons, vehicles and goods between Gibraltar and the neighbouring territory and the establishment of a negotiating process; and noting that, as regards this last point, the Brussels statement reads as follows:

“(c) The establishment of a negotiating process aimed at overcoming all the differences between them over Gibraltar and at promoting co-operation on a mutually beneficial basis on economic, cultural, touristic, aviation, military and environment matters. Both sides accept that the issues of sovereignty will be discussed in that process. The British Government will fully maintain its commitment to honour the wishes of the people of Gibraltar as set out in the preamble of the 1969 Constitution”; welcomes the fact that on 5 February 1985 equality and reciprocity of rights were established for Spaniards in Gibraltar and Gibraltarians in Spain, together with the free movement of persons, vehicles and goods between Gibraltar and the neighbouring territory; also welcomes the fact that the two Governments initiated, at Geneva on 5 February 1985, the negotiating process provided for in the Brussels statement and foreseen in the consensus approved by the Assembly on 14 December 1973;(8) and urges both Governments to continue this process with the object of reaching a lasting solution to the problem of Gibraltar in the light of the relevant resolutions of the Assembly and in the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations.”

Guam

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/42 without vote on 2 December 1985.

Question of Guam

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Guam,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Guam, including in particular its resolution 39/32 of 5 December 1984,

Having heard the statement of the representative of the administering Power relating to Guam,

Noting with appreciation the continued active participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Guam, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization towards the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration,

Recalling that a Guam Commission on Self-Determination was appointed in February 1984 to deal with the status question in a manner acceptable to the people of the Territory,

Taking note of the statement by the representative of the administering Power that the Department of Defense had authorized the release of some 2,000 hectares of land previously under its control,

Noting the great potential offered for diversifying and developing the economy of the Territory, for example, commercial fishing and agriculture,

Taking note of the steps taken by the territorial Government, with the support of the administering Power, to develop and promote the language and culture of the Chamorro people, who are the indigenous people of the Territory,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of Guam, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the dispatch in 1979 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Guam;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Guam to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reaffirms its conviction that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the implementation of the Declaration, which fully applies to Guam;

4. Reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of Guam of the possibilities open to them with regard to their right to self-determination, and calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to expedite the process of decolonization strictly in accordance with the expressed wishes of the people of the Territory;

5. Takes note of the statement by the representative of the administering Power that the Guam Commission on Self-Determination, which was appointed in February 1984 to deal with the status question in a manner acceptable to the people of the Territory for submission to the Congress of the United States of America for approval, hopes to hold a local referendum before the end of 1985;

6. Takes note of the statement of the representative of the United States affirming that his Government respects the wish of the Guamanians to control their own destiny both politically and economically;

7. Reaffirms its strong conviction that the presence of military bases and installations in the Territory could constitute a major obstacle to the implementation of the Declaration and that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to ensure that the existence of such bases and installations does not hinder the population of the Territory from exercising its right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations;

8. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures not to involve the Territory in any offensive acts or interference against any other States and to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

9. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power, under the Charter, for the economic and social development of Guam, and, in this connection, calls upon the administering Power to take all necessary steps to strengthen and diversify the economy of the Territory, with a view to reducing the Territory's economic dependence on the administering Power;

10. Reiterates the view that one obstacle to economic development, particularly in the agricultural sector, stems from the fact that large tracts of land are held by the federal authorities, and calls upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the local authorities, to continue the transfer of land to the people of the Territory;

11. Notes that a settlement was reached in 1984 between representatives of former Guamanian landowners and the administering Power under which the former will receive $39.5 million in compensation for land taken over by the United States Government from 1944 to 1963, it being the right of individual claimants not to participate in this settlement and continue to press their own claims;

12. Reiterates its call upon the administering Power to support measures by the territorial Government aimed at removing constraints to growth in the areas of agriculture and commercial fishing and to ensure their development to the fullest extent;

13. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to take effective measures to safeguard and guarantee the right of the people of Guam to their natural resources and to establish and maintain control over their future development, and requests the administering Power to take all necessary steps to protect the property rights of the people of the Territory;

14. Reaffirms the importance of further efforts by the territorial Government, with the support of the administering Power, to develop and promote the language and culture of the Chamorro people, who are the indigenous people of the Territory;

15. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

16. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Guam at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/906) without objection, 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 18. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11-20; plenary 99.

The Fourth Committee received requests for hearings from two organizations,<sup>(9)</sup> and heard a statement on 31 October by Ronald Franquez Teehan, Secretary of the Guam Landowners' Association.

Montserrat

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 40/46 without vote.

Question of Montserrat

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of Montserrat,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to Montserrat, including in particular its resolution 39/36 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will respect the wishes of the people of Montserrat in determining the future political status of the Territory,

Noting the view of the Government of Montserrat that independence was inevitable and desirable and, in that connection, that the territorial Government would prepare programmes of political education by which to increase the people's awareness of the benefits of independence,

Noting with concern that during the period under review the international economic crisis continued to have an adverse effect on the territorial economy and resulted in zero growth in the gross domestic product and a reduction in the rate of growth of employment and incomes,

Welcoming the fact that an increasing number of people from the Territory are being employed in the civil service, particularly at the higher echelon, including the appointment of a national as Chief Medical Officer, and noting the recommendations for salary increases made by the Salaries Commission on public service salaries and conditions,

Welcoming also the contribution to the development of Montserrat by the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system operating in the Territory, and noting the continued participation of the Territory in the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development, as well as in regional organizations such as the Caribbean Community and its associated institutions, including the Caribbean Development Bank,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of Montserrat, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the dispatch in 1975 and 1982 of United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to Montserrat;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Montserrat to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to Montserrat;

4. Notes with appreciation the continued participation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, in the work of the Special Committee in regard to Montserrat, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration;

5. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to create such conditions in Montserrat as will enable its people to exercise freely and without interference, from a well-informed standpoint as to the available options, their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Reaffirms that it is ultimately for the people of Montserrat themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and reiterates its call upon the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to launch programmes to foster an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities available to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and independence;

7. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power to promote the economic and social development of Montserrat and, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to continue to strengthen the economy and to increase its assistance to programmes of diversification in order to promote the economic and financial viability of the Territory;

8. Urges the administering Power to take the necessary measures in co-operation with the territorial Government to restore sustained and balanced growth to the economy of Montserrat and to intensify its assistance in the development of all sectors thereof, which will benefit the people of the Territory;

9. Also urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to take effective measures to safeguard, guarantee and ensure the rights of the people of Montserrat to own and dispose of their natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

10. Urges the administering Power to continue, in co-operation with the territorial Government, the assistance necessary for the employment of the local population in the civil service, particularly at senior levels;

11. Calls upon the United Nations system of organizations, as well as donor Governments and regional organizations, to intensify their efforts to accelerate progress in the economic and social life of the Territory;

12. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

13. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to Montserrat at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Pitcairn

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted decision 40/412 without vote.

Question of Pitcairn

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, takes note of the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland affirming that his Government's policy was one of respect for the very individual life-style that the people of Pitcairn had freely chosen and that the United Kingdom perceived its role as the administering Power as doing what it could to preserve, promote and protect it. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session."

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/906) without objection, 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 18. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11-20; plenary 99.

St. Helena

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly, in December, adopted decision 40/414 by recorded vote.

Question of St. Helena

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and having heard the statement of the representative of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, reaffirmed the inalienable right of the people of St. Helena to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960. The Assembly noted the commitment of the Government of the United Kingdom to respect the wishes of the people of the Territory in relation to their future political status and, in that regard, urged the administering Power, in consultation with the Legislative Council and other representatives of the people of St. Helena, to continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of this Territory and in that connection reaffirmed the importance of promoting an awareness among the people of St. Helena of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination. The Assembly expressed the hope that the administering Power would continue to implement infrastructure and community development projects aimed at improving the general welfare of the community, and to encourage local initiative and enterprise, particularly in the areas of fisheries development, forestry, handicrafts and agriculture. The Assembly reaffirmed that continued development assistance from the administering Power, together with any assistance that the international community might be able to provide, constituted an important means of developing the economic potential of the Territory and of enhancing the capacity of its people to realize fully the goals set forth in the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations. The Assembly noted with concern the presence of military facilities on the dependency of Ascension Island and, in that regard, recalled all United Nations resolutions and decisions concerning military bases and installations in colonial and Non-Self-Governing Territories. Noting the positive attitude of the administering Power with respect to the question of receiving United Nations visiting missions in the Territories under its administration, the Assembly considered that the possibility of dispatching such a mission to St. Helena at an appropriate time should be kept under review. The Assembly requested the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a visiting mission to St. Helena, at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session.

121-2-31 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/906) by recorded vote (112-3-25), 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 18. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11-20; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Belize, Brunei Darussalam,<sup>3</sup> Canada, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Spain, Swaziland, Sweden, Turkey.

The Fourth Committee's approval of the draft followed a decision-by a recorded vote, requested by the United Kingdom, of 77 to 27, with 27 abstentions to retain the fifth sentence of the text referring to the presence of military facilities on the dependency of Ascension Island. The United Kingdom objected to the sentence as inappropriate and prejudiced, adding that the links between Ascension Island and St. Helena were only administrative, and that the Island had had only stationing facilities for transport aircraft since 1942; if those facilities were felt to be a threat to peace and security, that concern should be taken to the Security Council.

Tokelau

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. On 1 August, the Committee on colonial countries(1) accepted the invitation extended to it in April and in May 1985 by New Zealand, the administering Power of Tokelau, to send a visiting mission to the Territory in 1986 for the purpose of making a further firsthand assessment of the situation there and of ascertaining the wishes of the people of the Territory concerning their future status.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly, in December, adopted decision 40/411 without vote.

Question of Tokelau

At its 99th plenary meeting, on 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted the following text as representing the consensus of the members of the Assembly:

"The General Assembly, having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and having heard the statement of the representative of New Zealand with regard to Tokelau, notes with appreciation the willingness of the administering Power to maintain its close co-operation with the United Nation; in the exercise of its responsibility towards Tokelau. The Assembly reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of Tokelau to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in Assembly resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, and reaffirms further that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to keep the people of Tokelau fully informed of that right. In this regard, the Assembly notes that the people of the Territory have expressed the view that, for the time being, they do not wish to review the nature of the existing relationship between Tokelau and New Zealand but that they desire to be given some latitude and some degree of autonomy in decision-making. The Assembly welcomes the assurances of the administering Power that it will continue to be guided solely by the wishes of the people of Tokelau as to the future status of the Territory and that it is committed to responding positively to the expressed desires of the people of Tokelau. The Assembly calls upon the administering Power to continue its programme of fostering awareness among the people of Tokelau of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination and within the context of its efforts to ensure the preservation of the identity and cultural heritage of the people of Tokelau. The Assembly is of the opinion that the administering Power should continue to inform the people of Tokelau of the consideration of their Territory by the United Nations. The Assembly recognizes that the political and economic development of Tokelau is an important element in the process of self-determination. In this connection, the Assembly notes with satisfaction that the General Fono (Council) of Tokelau is assuming greater authority in local political, economic and financial affairs. The Assembly notes with satisfaction that the General Fono has established two additional committees to deal with health and agriculture. The Assembly notes further the continuing efforts of the administering Power to promote the economic development of the Territory and the measures it has taken to safeguard and guarantee the rights of the people of Tokelau to all their natural resources and the benefits derived therefrom. In this regard, the Assembly also notes that the Tokelau public service, with support from the administering Power, is currently investigating ways of improving Tokelau's copra growing and marketing schemes. In particular, the Assembly notes with satisfaction the measures being taken to lessen the Territory's isolation, namely, the upgrading of telecommunications facilities and the study to determine the feasibility of constructing landing strips for aircraft on each of the three atolls, and the efforts to facilitate regular air transport to the Territory. The Assembly is of the opinion that the administering Power should continue to expand its programme of budgetary support and development aid to the Territory. The Assembly notes with appreciation the continuing efforts of the administering Power to make improvements in the fields of public health, public works and education. The Assembly reiterates its expression of appreciation to the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as to the regional organizations, for their assistance to Tokelau and calls upon them to continue providing assistance to the Territory. Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, the Assembly welcomes the invitation from the administering Power, New Zealand, and from the people of the Territory, to send a visiting mission during 1986 and takes note of the related decision of the Special Committee. The Assembly requests the Special Committee to continue to examine the question at its next session and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session."

General Assembly decision 40/411

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fourth Committee (A/40/906) without objection, 8 November (meeting 20); draft by Committee on colonial countries (A/40/23); agenda item 18. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 4th Committee 11-20; plenary 99.

Turks and Caicos Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/47 without vote on 2 December 1985.

Question of the Turks and Caicos Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the Turks and Caicos Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands, including in particular its resolution 39/37 of 5 December 1984,

Noting the stated position of the administering Power that it will fully respect the wishes of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands in determining the future constitutional status of the Territory, and bearing in mind the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them,

Conscious of the need to ensure the full and speedy implementation of the Declaration in respect of the Territory,

Noting with appreciation the participation of the administering Power in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the Turks and Caicos Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the Turks and Caicos Islands, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability and to develop a wider economic base for the Territory,

Noting the statement of the administering Power that an experimental farm has been set up on North Caicos to study agricultural techniques,

Welcoming the continuing contribution of the United Nations Development Programme to the development of the Territory,

Recalling the dispatch in 1980 of two United Nations visiting missions to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the Turks and Caicos Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the obligation of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as the administering Power, to create such conditions in the Turks and Caicos Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in accordance with resolution 1514(XV), as well as other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirms that it is the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter of the United Nations to develop its dependent Territories economically and socially, and urges the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to take the necessary measures to promote the economic and social development of the Turks and Caicos Islands and, in particular, to intensify and expand its programme of assistance in order to accelerate the development of the economic and social infrastructure of the Territory;

6. Emphasizes that greater attention should be paid to diversification of the economy, which will benefit the people of the Territory;

7. Recalls that it is the responsibility of the administering Power, in accordance with the wishes of the people of the Turks and Caicos Islands, to safeguard, guarantee and ensure the inalienable right of the people to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to guarantee their right to own and dispose of those natural resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

8. Takes note of the statement of the administering Power to the effect that the military facility in the Turks and Caicos Islands was closed in 1984, that the territorial Government now has complete control over the disposition of the land vacated by the base and that the land is now being used for various activities which are beneficial to the economy and the people of the Territory;

9. Urges the specialized agencies and other organizations of the United Nations system, as well as such regional institutions as the Caribbean Development Bank, to continue to pay special attention to the development needs of the Turks and Caicos Islands;

10. Requests the administering Power, in consultation with the territorial Government, to continue to provide the assistance necessary for the training of qualified local personnel in the skills essential to the development of various sectors of the economy and the society of the Territory;

11. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

12. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the Turks and Caicos Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

United States Virgin Islands

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 2 December 1985, the General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fourth Committee, adopted resolution 40/49 without vote.

Question of the United States Virgin Islands

The General Assembly,

Having considered the question of the United States Virgin Islands,

Having examined the relevant chapters of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples,

Recalling its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and all other resolutions and decisions of the United Nations relating to the United States Virgin Islands, including in particular its resolution 39/38 of 5 December 1984,

Noting with appreciation the continued active participation of the administering Power and the representative of the territorial Government in the work of the Special Committee in regard to the United States Virgin Islands, thereby enabling it to conduct a more informed and meaningful examination of the situation in the Territory with a view to accelerating the process of decolonization for the purpose of the full implementation of the Declaration,

Taking into account the statement of the representative of the administering Power that the Territory of the United States Virgin Islands enjoys a large measure of self-government through its elected representatives, namely, the Governor, members of the Legislature and the Territory's non-voting delegate to the United States House of Representatives, and noting the recent general elections in the Territory,

Noting with concern that the economy of the Territory was, as described by the Governor, "temporarily depressed", particularly in the tourist, construction and industrial sectors, as well as in the delivery of government services, and noting that the Territory's industrial development programme would suffer a setback as a result of the announced plan of Martin Marietta Alumina, Inc. for the closure of its aluminium plant in the Territory in 1985,

Welcoming the continued participation of the United States Virgin Islands, as an associated member, in the work of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean and its subsidiary bodies, including the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee and noting the participation of a representative of the Territory as a member of the delegation of the administering Power at annual meetings of the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development since 1982,

Noting with satisfaction the statement of the administering Power that it endorsed the policy that representatives of the Territory should participate in forums in which the Territory was the subject of discussion,

Aware of the special circumstances of the geographical location and economic conditions of the United States Virgin Islands, and bearing in mind the necessity of diversifying and strengthening further its economy as a matter of priority in order to promote economic stability,

Recalling the dispatch in 1977 of a United Nations visiting mission to the Territory,

Mindful that United Nations visiting missions provide an effective means of ascertaining the situation in the small Territories, and expressing its satisfaction at the willingness of the administering Power to receive visiting missions in the Territories under its administration,

1. Approves the chapter of the report of the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples relating to the United States Virgin Islands;

2. Reaffirms the inalienable right of the people of the United States Virgin Islands to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, contained in General Assembly resolution 1514(XV);

3. Reiterates the view that such factors as territorial size, geographical location, size of population and limited natural resources should in no way delay the speedy exercise by the people of the Territory of their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with the Declaration, which fully applies to the United States Virgin Islands;

4. Reiterates that it is the responsibility of the administering Power to create such conditions in the United States Virgin Islands as will enable the people of the Territory to exercise freely and without interference their inalienable right to self-determination and independence in conformity with resolution 1514(XV), as well as all other relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

5. Reaffirm that it is ultimately for the people of the United States Virgin Islands themselves to determine their future political status in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration, and, in that connection, reaffirms the importance of fostering an awareness among the people of the Territory of the possibilities open to them in the exercise of their right to self-determination;

6. Notes that the Select Committee, established by the Legislature of the United States Virgin Islands in 1983 to ascertain the views of the people of the Territory on their future status and to make recommendations in that regard, conducted public hearings from March to August 1984 and submitted its report to the Sixteenth Legislature in January 1985;

7. Also notes that the Legislature endorsed the report, which included, inter alia, a recommendation that a referendum on the status issue should be held on 4 November 1986, in conjunction with the next general election, for people of the United States Virgin Islands to choose between a variety of status options including independence, statehood, free association, incorporated territory, status quo or a compact of federal relations;

8. Further notes that the Legislature decided to appoint a new committee to continue the process of public hearings in order to ensure that the people of the United States Virgin Islands were fully aware of the implications of the various status options by the time of the referendum;

9. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the territorial Government, to strengthen the economy of the Territory by taking additional measures of diversification in all fields and developing an adequate infrastructure with a view to reducing the economic dependence of the Territory on the administering Power;

10. Reaffirms the responsibility of the administering Power under the Charter to promote the economic and social development of the United States Virgin Islands;

11. Urges the administering Power, in co-operation with the Government of the United States Virgin Islands, to safeguard the inalienable right of the people of the Territory to the enjoyment of their natural resources by taking effective measures to guarantee their right to own and dispose of those resources and to establish and maintain control of their future development;

12. Urges the administering Power to seek in the Caribbean Group for Co-operation in Economic Development a status for the territorial Government similar to that of other dependent Territories within the Group;

13. Calls upon the administering Power to facilitate further the participation of the United States Virgin Islands in various regional intergovernmental bodies and organizations, particularly in their central organs, and in other organizations of the United Nations system;

14. Urges the administering Power to continue to take all necessary measures to comply fully with the purposes and principles of the Charter, the Declaration and the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly relating to military activities and arrangements by colonial Powers in Territories under their administration;

15. Considers that the possibility of sending a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time should be kept under review;

16. Requests the Special Committee to continue the examination of this question at its next session, including the possible dispatch of a further visiting mission to the United States Virgin Islands at an appropriate time and in consultation with the administering Power, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Chapter I

International Court of Justice

In 1985, the International Court of Justice considered four contentious cases and a request for an advisory opinion.

The General Assembly and the Security Council held elections in December to fill a vacancy created by the resignation in August of a judge whose term would have expired in February 1988 (see APPENDIX III).

In addition, the Assembly took action concerning emoluments, pension scheme and conditions of service for the members of the Court (resolutions 40/257 A-C).

Topics related to this chapter. Americas: Nicaragua situation. United Nations officials: other United Nations officials.

Judicial work of the Court

In 1985, the Court or its Chamber-meeting at The Hague, Netherlands-delivered Judgments in two cases involving continental shelf delimitation (Tunisia/Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Malta), and continued consideration of those concerning responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua (Nicaragua v. United States) and a frontier dispute (Burkina Faso/Mali). In addition, it remained seized of a request for an advisory opinion concerning a judgement of the United Nations Administrative Tribunal.

The 1985 activities of the International Court of Justice (ICJ) were contained in two reports to the General Assembly, covering the periods 1 August 1984 to 31 July 1985(1) and 1 August 1985 to 31 July 1986.(2) By decision 40/406 of 25 October 1985, the Assembly took note of the 1984/85 report.

Continental shelf delimitation between Tunisia and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya

From 13 to 18 June 1985, the Court held six public sittings during which speeches were made on behalf of Tunisia and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on Tunisia's 1984 Application(3) for revision and interpretation of the Court's Judgment of 24 February 1982(4) on the continental shelf delimitation between the parties.

On 10 December, the Court delivered at a public sitting a Judgment,(5) whose operative provisions read as follows:

The Court,

A. Unanimously,

Finds inadmissible the request submitted by the Republic of Tunisia for revision, under Article 61 of the Statute of the Court, of the Judgment given by the Court on 24 February 1982;

B. Unanimously,

(1) Finds admissible the request submitted by the Republic of Tunisia for interpretation, under Article 60 of the Statute of the Court, of the Judgment of 24 February 1982 as far as it relates to the first sector of the delimitation contemplated by that Judgment;

(2) Declares, by way of interpretation of the Judgment of 24 February, 1982, that the meaning and scope of that part of the judgment which relates to the first sector of the delimitation are to be understood according to paragraphs 32 to 39 of the present Judgment;

(3) Finds that the submission of the Republic of Tunisia of 14 June 1985 relating to the first sector of the delimitation cannot be upheld;

C. Unanimously,

Finds that the request of the Republic of Tunisia for the correction of an error is without object and that the Court is therefore not called upon to give a decision thereon;

D. Unanimously,

(1) Finds admissible the request submitted by the Republic of Tunisia for interpretation, under Article 60 of the Statute of the Court, of the Judgment of 24 February 1982 as far as it relates to the "most westerly point of the Gulf of Gabes";

(2) Declares, by way of interpretation of the Judgment of 24 February 1982:

(a) That the reference in paragraph 124 of that Judgment to "approximately 34° 10' 30'' north" is a general indication of the latitude of the point which appeared to the Court to be the most westerly point of the shoreline (low-water mark) of the Gulf of Gabes, it being left to the experts of the Parties to determine the precise co-ordinates of that point; that the latitude of 34° 10' 30'' was therefore not intended to be itself binding on the Parties but was employed for the purpose of clarifying what was decided with binding force in paragraph 133 C (3) of that Judgment;

(b) That the reference in paragraph 133 C (2) of that Judgment to "the most westerly point of the Tunisian coastline between Ras Kaboudia and Ras Ajdir, that is to say, the most westerly point on the shoreline (low-water mark) of the Gulf of Gabes", and the similar reference in paragraph 133 C (3) are to be understood as meaning the point on that shoreline which is furthest to the west on the low-water mark; and

(c) That it will be for the experts of the Parties, making use of all available cartographic documents and, if necessary, carrying out an ad hoc survey in loco, to determine the precise co-ordinates of that point, whether or not it lies within a channel or the mouth of a wadi, and regardless of whether or not such point might be regarded by the experts as marking a change in direction of the coastline;

(3) Finds that the submission of the Republic of Tunisia, "that the most westerly point on the Gulf of Gabes lies on latitude  $34^{\circ} 05' 20''$  N (Carthage)", cannot be upheld;

E. Unanimously,

Finds that, with respect to the submission of the Republic of Tunisia of 14 June 1985, there is at the present time no cause for the Court to order an expert survey for the purpose of ascertaining the precise co-ordinates of the most westerly point of the Gulf of Gabes.

Separate opinions were appended to the Judgment by Judges Ruda, Oda and Schwebel, and by Judge ad hoc Bastid.

Continental shelf delimitation between the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta

In July 1982, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta had instituted proceedings by joint notification to the Court of a Special Agreement in force since March 1982.(6) The Agreement requested the Court to indicate the principles and rules applicable to delimitation of the continental shelf between the parties and the practical method for their application.

The Court considered various aspects of the matter in 1983(7) and 1984,(3) and held public sittings between 4 and 24 February 1985. On 3 June, it delivered at a public sitting a Judgment,(8) whose operative part read as follows:

The Court,

By fourteen votes to three,

Finds that, with reference to the areas of continental shelf between the coasts of the Parties within the limits defined in the present Judgment, namely the meridian  $13^{\circ} 50'$  E and the meridian  $15^{\circ} 10'$  E:

A. The principles and rules of international law applicable for the delimitation, to be effected by agreement in implementation of the present Judgment, of the areas of continental shelf appertaining to the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and to the Republic of Malta respectively are as follows:

(1) The delimitation is to be effected in accordance with equitable principles and taking account of all relevant circumstances, so as to arrive at an equitable result;

(2) The area of continental shelf to be found to appertain to either Party not extending more than 200 miles from the coast of the Party concerned, no criterion for delimitation of shelf areas can be derived from the principle of natural prolongation in the physical sense.

B. The circumstances and factors to be taken into account in achieving an equitable delimitation in the present case are the following:

(1) The general configuration of the coasts of the Parties, their oppositeness, and their relationship to each other within the general geographical context;

(2) The disparity in the lengths of the relevant coasts of the Parties and the distance between them;

(3) The need to avoid in the delimitation any excessive disproportion between the extent of the continental shelf areas appertaining to the coastal State and the length of the relevant part of its coast, measured in the general direction of the coastlines.

C. In consequence, an equitable result may be arrived at by drawing, as a first stage in the process, a median line every point of which is equidistant from the low-water mark of the relevant coast of Malta (excluding the islet of Filfla) and the low-water mark of the relevant coast of Libya, that initial line being then subject to adjustment in the light of the above-mentioned circumstances and factors.

D. The adjustment of the median line referred to in subparagraph C above is to be effected by transposing that line northwards through eighteen minutes of latitude (so that it intersects the meridian  $15^{\circ} 10'$  E at approximately latitude  $34^{\circ} 30'$  N) such transposed line then constituting the delimitation line between the areas of continental shelf appertaining to the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and to the Republic of Malta respectively.

Against: Judges Mosler, Oda and Schwebel.

Judge El-Khani appended a declaration to the Judgment. Vice-President Sette Câmara appended a separate opinion; Judges Ruda and Bedjaoui and Judge ad hoc Jiménez de Aréchaga appended a joint separate opinion Judge Mbaye and Judge ad hoc Valticos each appended separate opinions. Judges Mosler, Oda and Schwebel appended dissenting opinions.

Military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua

On 18 January 1985, the Agent of the United States informed the Court that, notwithstanding the Judgment of 26 November 1984,(9) the United States considered the Court to be without jurisdiction to entertain the dispute concerning responsibility for military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua, that the Nicaraguan Application of 9 April 1984<sup>(10)</sup> instituting proceedings against it was inadmissible and that accordingly it intended not to participate in any further proceedings in connection with the case. On 22 January, the Agent of Nicaragua informed the Court's President that his Government maintained its Application and availed itself of the rights provided for in Article 53 of the Statute of the Court whenever one of the parties did not appear before the Court or failed to defend its case (see APPENDIX II).

By an Order of 22 January 1985,<sup>(11)</sup> the President fixed time-limits for the filing of pleadings on the merits. Nicaragua filed its Memorial (written pleading) within the prescribed time-limit (30 April); the United States did not file a Counter-Memorial within the time-limit (31 May), nor request extension of such time-limit.

From 12 to 20 September, the Court held nine public sittings during which arguments were presented on behalf of Nicaragua, and five witnesses called by that country gave evidence; the United States was not represented.

Frontier dispute

between Burkina Faso and Mali

On 14 March 1985, Burkina Faso and Mali—which had referred to the Court in 1983<sup>(7)</sup> their dispute over the delimitation of part of their land frontier—asked the Court to form a chamber of live members, of whom two would be judges ad hoc chosen by themselves in accordance with Article 31 of the Statute. By an Order of 3 April,<sup>(12)</sup> the Court constituted a live-member Chamber composed of Judges Lachs, Ruda and Bedjaoui and Judges ad hoc François Luchaire, appointed by Burkina Faso, and Georges Michel Abi-Saab, appointed by Mali.

On 29 April, the Chamber held its first public sitting, and the Court President, by an Order of 12 April,<sup>(13)</sup> fixed 3 October as the time-limit for the filing of Memorials by both parties. Each party having filed its Memorial within the time-limit, the Chamber President, by an Order of 3 October,<sup>(14)</sup> fixed 2 April 1986 as the time-limit for the filing of Counter-Memorials.

At the end of 1985, armed incidents were reported in the frontier regions of Burkina Faso and Mali (see p. 198).

Review of a judgement by the UN Administrative Tribunal

In 1985, the Court remained seized of a request for an advisory opinion, received in 1984<sup>(9)</sup> from the General Assembly's Committee on Applications for Review of Administrative Tribunal Judgements, on Vladimir Victorovich Yakimetz v. Secretary-General, involving the staff member's request for further employment after the expiry of his contract with the United Nations.

In accordance with the time-limit, extended to 28 February 1985,<sup>(15)</sup> written statements were submitted by the Governments of Canada, Italy, the USSR and the United States, and by the Secretary-General, who also transmitted a statement on behalf of Mr. Yakimetz.

The Court President fixed 31 May as the time-limit within which States and the Organization having filed statements might submit written comments on the statements presented by others. Following a request by the applicant, to which the Secretary-General saw no objection, and by a decision of the President, the time-limit was extended to 1 July. Written comments were submitted by the United States and by the Secretary-General, who also transmitted Mr. Yakimetz's comments.

Organizational questions

Conditions of service

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in October 1985 a report on conditions of service and compensation for members of ICJ,<sup>(16)</sup> incorporating proposals he had made in 1983,<sup>(17)</sup> but on which Assembly action had been deferred. Also incorporated in the report were the 1984 comments by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ).<sup>(19)</sup>

The Secretary-General's 1985 report consisted of two parts. In part I, he recommended increasing the annual remuneration of ICJ members (from the current level of $82,000 to $85,000), special allowances of the President and the Vice-President when acting as President (from $12,200 to $15,000 per year for the former, and from $76 to $94 daily, or a maximum of $9,400 annually, for the latter), pensions (17.1 per cent increase) and compensation of judges ad hoc (for each day of exercising the functions, equivalent of 1/365th of the annual remuneration received by a Court member).

Part II concerned conditions of service for those judges who maintained a bona fide primary residence at The Hague during their service. As regards children's education allowances, the Secretary-General suggested $4,500 maximum per child per school year for the actual cost of education, in addition to one related travel per year to The Hague if attending school outside the Netherlands. As to expenses incurred in relocating outside the Netherlands after completion of service, he suggested a lump-sum payment equivalent to 18 weeks of annual net base salary, when retiring after a minimum of five consecutive years of service, or the equivalent of 24 weeks, after nine years. He proposed that, in the event of death while in office, survivors should receive a lump-sum payment equivalent to one month of base salary per year of service, subject to a minimum of three months and a maximum of nine months. The Secretary-General estimated the financial implications of his proposals and related ACABQ recommendations at $375,000 for 1986-1987.

In its November 1985 report,(20) ACABQ stated that it had no objection to the Secretary-General's recommendations as regards annual remuneration, and concurred with those relating to increased special allowances for the President of the Court, compensations to judges ad hoc, and conditions of service of ICJ members, provided that the effective date of implementing the proposals was no earlier than 1 January 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, adopted resolutions 40/257 A-C by recorded vote.

A Emoluments

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 31/204 of 22 December 1976 and 35/220 A of 17 December 1980, on the emoluments of the members of the International Court of Justice,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, the annual salary of the members of the International Court of Justice shall be $82,000 with an interim cost-of-living supplement of $3,000;

2. Decides to continue the system of interim cost-of-living supplements introduced pursuant to General Assembly resolution 31/204, paragraph 2, subject to rebasing and modifying the index used for this purpose, in accordance with the suggestion made by the Secretary-General in paragraph 22 of his report;

3. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, the ad hoc judges referred to in Article 31 of the Statute of the International Court of Justice shall receive for each day they exercise their functions, one three-hundred-and-sixty-fifth of the sum of the annual base salary and interim cost-of-living supplement payable at the time to a member of the Court;

4. Decides further that, with effect from 1 January 1986, the President's special allowance shall be $15,000 per year and that the special daily allowance paid to the Vice-President when acting as President shall be $94 per day, up to a maximum of $9,400 per year, and takes note of the statement contained in paragraph 4 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions that such a maximum shall be removed only in extraordinary circumstances.

B Pension scheme

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1562(XV) of 18 December 1960, 1925(XVIII) of 11 December 1963, 2367(XXII) of 19 December 1967, 2890 A (XXVI) of 22 December

1971, 3193 A (XXVIII) of 18 December 1973, 3537 A (XXX) of 17 December 1975 and 38/239 of 20 December 1983, on the pension scheme for the members of the International Court of Justice,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, and notwithstanding any provision to the contrary contained in the Pension Scheme Regulations for members of the International Court of Justice, the annual value of all pensions in course of payment as at 31 December 1985, including the pensions of any members of the Court who retire on or before that date, shall be increased by 17.1 per cent.

C Conditions of service

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/237, section XIV, of 21 December 1982, 38/234, section XVII, of 20 December 1983 and 39/236, section V, of 18 December 1984, on conditions of service and compensation for officials other than Secretariat officials,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, the President and members of the Court who have taken up primary residence in The Hague shall be reimbursed, up to a ceiling of $4,500, for the actual cost of educating their children in respect of each child each year up to the award of the first recognized degree and that provision shall be made for one related travel per year in respect of each child from the place of scholastic attendance, when outside the Netherlands, to The Hague;

2. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, those members of the Court who have taken up and maintained a bona fide primary residence at The Hague for at least five continuous years during service with the Court shall be eligible to receive a lump sum equivalent to eighteen weeks of annual net base salary upon completion of their appointment and resettlement outside the Netherlands and that those members of the Court who have taken up and maintained a bona fide primary residence at The Hague for nine continuous years or more during service with the Court shall receive the equivalent of twenty-four weeks of annual net base salary upon completion of service and relocation outside the Netherlands;

3. Decides that, with effect from 1 January 1986, in the event of the death of a member of the Court during his service, compensation shall be provided to the survivors in the form of a lump-sum payment equivalent to one month of base salary per year of service, subject to a minimum of three months and a maximum of nine months.

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 121/11-15 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1069) by recorded vote 160-14-19 14 December (meeting 65); 5-nation draft (A/C.5/40/L.9); agenda item 116.

Sponsors. Algeria, China, India, Nigeria, Trinidad and Tobago, Financial implications. ACABQ, A/40/7/Add.3.10; S-G, A/C.5/40/3 & Add.1.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Japan, Luxembourg, Portugal, United Kingdom, United States.

The recorded vote in the Fifth Committee was requested by the United States, which explained its vote by stating that the information before the Committee did not justify the increase. Belgium agreed, adding that, although ICJ judges' salary had remained unchanged in dollar terms since January 1981, it had risen in Netherlands guilders by 41 per cent, while the cost of living at The Hague had risen by some 15.2 per cent. Australia could not support the draft in the current climate of budgetary restraint; similarly, Austria and the Federal Republic of Germany considered a monthly salary of $7,000 to be sufficient. Sharing those views, the United Kingdom urged careful management of the limited resources of the United Nations. France added that it could support an increase in the Court's operating cost, but not the emoluments of the judges. New Zealand also pointed to the level of the proposed emoluments as its reason for abstaining in the vote.

Chapter II

Legal aspects of international political relations

More international law affecting virtually all areas of human activity had been codified in the past 40 years than in all the previous ones of recorded history; much of it had been done under the auspices of the General Assembly, the Secretary-General stated in 1985 (see p. 4).

In keeping with that process aimed at promoting friendly relations among States, the Assembly decided in 1985 that work should continue on the legal codification of: non-use of force in international relations (resolution 40/70), offences against the peace and security of mankind (40/69), and an international convention against mercenary activities (40/74). In addition, it requested the Secretary-General to continue preparing a handbook on settling disputes between States peacefully (40/68), agreed to continue identifying and clarifying the elements of good-neighbourliness (decision 40/419), and recommended that work continue on draft articles on the non-navigational uses of international watercourses.

Deep concern over the world-wide escalation of terrorist acts was expressed by both the Security Council and the General Assembly. The Council condemned specific instances, including hijacking and hostage-taking (resolution 579(1985)), and was joined by the Assembly (40/61) in appealing to States that had not done so to become parties to existing international conventions on various aspects of the problem.

Topic related to this chapter. International peace and security.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States

In December 1985, the General Assembly again requested the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization to continue work on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, and asked the Secretary-General to continue preparing a draft handbook on the topic for the Committee's consideration in 1986.

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee, at its March 1985 session,<sup>(1)</sup> continued work on the peaceful settlement of disputes, as called for by the Assembly in 1984,<sup>(2)</sup> in addition to considering two other main items—proposals on rationalizing the existing procedures of the United Nations (see p. 1177) and ways to maintain international peace and security.

An open-ended Working Group of the Committee held nine meetings on the question between 7 and 12 March, at seven of which it examined, paragraph by paragraph, a proposal—submitted in 1983(3) by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania, and considered in 1984(4)—to create a United Nations permanent commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation for settling disputes and preventing conflicts among States. At two meetings (8 and 11 March), the Working Group examined a progress report by the Secretary-General<sup>(5)</sup> on a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, which was being prepared at the Assembly's 1984 request.<sup>(2)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, the General Assembly, on 11 December, adopted resolution 40/68 without vote.

Peaceful settlement of disputes between States
The General Assembly.

Having examined the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes between States",

Recalling its resolution 37/10 of 15 November 1982, by which it approved the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, annexed thereto,

Recalling also its resolutions 38/131 of 19 December 1983 and 39/79 of 13 December 1984,

Deeply concerned at the continuation of conflict situations and the emergence of new sources of disputes and tension in international life, and especially at the growing tendency to resort to force or the threat of force and to intervention in internal affairs, and at the escalation of the arms race, which gravely endanger the independence and security of States as well as international peace and security,

Taking into account the need to exert the utmost effort in order to settle any situations and disputes between States exclusively by peaceful means and to avoid any military actions and hostilities against other States, which can only make more difficult the solution of existing problems,

Considering that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes should represent one of the central concerns for States and for the United Nations, and that efforts for strengthening the process of peaceful settlement of disputes should be continued,

Taking note of the working papers on the establishment of a commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation for the settlement of disputes and the prevention of conflicts among States, submitted by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania,

Taking into account the elaboration by the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization of the outline for the handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and the conclusions thereon,

1. Again urges all States to observe and promote in good faith the provisions of the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes in the settlement of their international disputes;

2. Stresses the need to continue efforts to strengthen the process of the peaceful settlement of disputes through progressive development and codification of international law and through enhancing the effectiveness of the United Nations in this field;

3. Requests the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, during its session in 1986, to continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context:

(a) To continue the consideration of the proposal contained in working papers submitted by Nigeria, the Philippines and Romania;

(b) To examine the report of the Secretary-General on the progress of work on the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue the preparation of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, on the basis of the outline elaborated by the Special Committee and in the light of the views expressed in the course of the discussions in the Sixth Committee and in the Special Committee, and to report to the Special Committee at its session in 1986 on the progress of work, before submitting to it the draft handbook in its final form, with a view to its approval at a later stage;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Peaceful settlement of disputes between States".

General Assembly resolution 40/68

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/999) without vote, 2 December (meeting 50); 27-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.21); agenda item 132.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 37-43, 48, 50; plenary 112.

In related action, the Assembly appealed to States in conflict to settle their disputes by negotiations and other peaceful means (resolution 40/9), and urged them to seek such settlement through more effective use of means provided for in the United Nations Charter (40/158).

Good-neighbourliness between States

In response to a 1984 General Assembly request,(6) the Sixth Committee set up on 25 September 1985 an open-ended sub-committee to identify and clarify the elements of good-neighbourliness.

The Sub-Committee on Good-Neighbourliness,(7) under the chairmanship of a Sixth Committee Vice-Chairman, Roberto Herrera Cáceres (Honduras), held four meetings—on 1, 7, 15 and 19 November—focusing on how to proceed with its work.

Documents before the Sub-Committee included two by Romania—a 1983 working paper suggesting an outline for an international document,(8) and a 1985 proposed structure for discussing the topic. Also before it were a number of reports submitted by the Secretary-General in previous years and in 1985, containing the views and suggestions of Member States on the content of good-neighbourliness and ways to strengthen it; the 1985 report(9) contained the replies of 10 States as well as those of seven intergovernmental organizations related to the United Nations and three United Nations bodies in response to the Assembly's 1984 invitation.(6)

Discussions arose as to whether the Sub-Committee should identify the elements of good-neighbourliness first or focus on the general principles of international law underlying that concept, and whether or not the concept had legal contents. It commenced consideration of areas of co-operation, methods and means, rules of international law of particular relevance, and observance of the principles of international law. In the absence of conclusions, the Chairman noted that the discussion in 1985 had had only a searching and exploratory character.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted decision 40/419 without vote.

Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States

At its 112th plenary meeting, on 11 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, having considered the item entitled "Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States", decided:

(a) To take note of the report of the Sub-Committee on Good-Neighbourliness, set up by the Sixth Committee during the fortieth session;

(b) To continue and complete, on the basis of its resolution 39/78 of 13 December 1984, the task of identifying and clarifying the elements of good-neighbourliness within the framework of a sub-committee of the Sixth Committee, at the forty-first session;

(c) To include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Development and strengthening of good-neighbourliness between States".

General Assembly decision 40/419

Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1011) without vote, 3 December (meeting 51); draft by Romania (A/C.6/40/L.29); agenda item 131.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 3, 21, 49, 51; plenary 112.

In explanation of position, Belgium—on behalf of the 10 States members of the European Community (EC) and of Spain and Portugal—said that, while they had agreed to the text's adoption without vote in a spirit of compromise, some would have liked a separate vote on subparagraph (b).

Non-use of force in international relations

In December 1985, the General Assembly again decided that the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations should continue working towards drafting a world treaty on that principle.

Special Committee consideration. The Special Committee, established in 1977(10) to consider proposals with a view to drafting a world treaty on the non-use of force in international relations, met in New York from 28 January to 22 February 1985.(11)

As in previous years, the 35-member Committee had before it a draft world treaty on the non-use of force, submitted in 1976 by the USSR;(12) a 1979 working paper by Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy and the United Kingdom;(13) a 1981 revised working paper from 10 non-aligned countries (Benin, Cyprus, Egypt, India, Iraq, Morocco, Nepal, Nicaragua, Senegal, Uganda);(14) and the view of the German Democratic Republic, submitted in response to a 1984 Assembly invitation(15) for comments on the drafting of a world treaty, which was subsequently forwarded to the Assembly in August.(16) Also before the Committee was an informal paper by its 1982 Chairman, grouping together the suggestions made at that time.(17)

Different positions again persisted with regard to the desirability of a world treaty; while the States in support of the proposal pointed out that concepts such as "force", "deterrence" and "superiority" should be replaced by ideas of non-use of force, confidence, equality and mutual understanding, opponents of the proposal held that there existed general instruments including the United Nations Charter which left no doubts as to the scope of the principle of non-use of force.

An open-ended Working Group, re-established by the Committee in 1985, held 17 meetings between 5 and 22 February, focusing on an examination of headings contained in the 1982 informal paper—namely, peaceful settlement of disputes; role of the United Nations; manifestations, scope and dimensions of the threat or use of force; legitimate use of force; consequences of the use or threat of force; and disarmament and confidence-building measures. The Working Group's Chairman summarized the work of the Group in 1985 as having succeeded in isolating some concepts on which there was promise of agreement, and its discussion as having been more organized and purposeful than in previous years, thus rising above the inhibiting pressure of lack of general agreement on the mandate of the Special Committee.

On 22 February, the Committee approved the Group's report as well as its own. Since the Committee had not completed its work, it generally recognized the desirability of further considering the question.

Communications. Under the agenda item, Iran, by a letter of 30 May to the Secretary-General,(18) denied its involvement, alleged by the United States, in the kidnapping of United States nationals in Lebanon. Cuba transmitted to the Secretary-General on 1 November(19) its note of protest of the previous day to the United States over what Cuba said was a violation of its airspace by an aircraft belonging to the United States Air Force.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/70 by recorded vote.

Report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 31/9 of 8 November 1976, in which it invited Member States to examine further the draft World Treaty on the Non-Use of Force in International Relations as well as other proposals made during the consideration of the item,

Recalling also its resolution 32/150 of 19 December 1977, by which it established the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations,

Recalling, in particular, its resolutions 33/96 of 16 December 1978, 34/13 of 9 November 1979, 35/50 of 4 December 1980, 36/31 of 13 November 1981, 37/105 of 16 December 1982, 38/133 of 19 December 1983 and 39/81 of 13 December 1984, in which it decided that the Special Committee should continue its work,

Taking note of the statements made by the Chairmen of the Special Committee at its sessions in 1983, 1984, and 1985, based on the informal working paper presented by the Chairman of the Special Committee at its session in 1982,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the work of the session it held in 1985.

Taking into account that the Special Committee has not completed the mandate entrusted to it,

Reaffirming the need for effectiveness in the universal application of the principle of non-use of force in international relations and for assistance by the United Nations in this endeavour,

Taking into account the suggestions of States made during the consideration of the report of the Special Committee on the preparation at the present stage of a declaration on the non-use of force in international relations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall continue its work with the goal of drafting a world treaty on the non-use of force in international relations and, at the earliest possible date, as an intermediate stage, a declaration on the non-use of force in international relations, as well as the peaceful settlement of disputes or such other recommendations as the Committee deems appropriate;

3. Invites the Special Committee, in drafting the declaration, to take into consideration the results of work done in the preparation of the working paper containing the main elements of the principle of non-use of force in international relations, as well as the suggestions submitted to it and the efforts undertaken at its previous sessions;

4. Invites Governments to communicate their comments or suggestions on the question considered by the Special Committee;

5. Requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever it has significance for the outcome of its work;

6. Decides that the Special Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including participation in the meetings of its working group;

7. Requests the Special Committee to concentrate its work in the framework of its working group;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Special Committee with the necessary facilities and services;

9. Invites the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, containing, inter alia, the concrete results achieved through the discussion of the elements referred to in paragraph 3 above;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on Enhancing the Effectiveness of the Principle of Non-Use of Force in International Relations".

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1001) by recorded vote (90-15-11), 2 December (meeting 50); 34-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.14); agenda item 134.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Angola, Benin, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, India, Iraq, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Poland, Romania, Syrian Arab Republic, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen.

Financial implications. 5th Committee, A/40/1015; S-G, A/C.5/40/72, A/C.6/40/L.25. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 56; 6th Committee 8-12, 44, 50; plenary 112.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In Favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Brazil, Chile, Germany, Federal Republic of Ireland, Ivory Coast, New Zealand, Samoa, Spain, Sweden, Turkey.

Explaining its vote, Spain accepted the idea of drafting a declaration, provided that it was not a step towards a world treaty. Brazil stressed that the Special Committee should identify elements that could enhance the effectiveness of the principle of the non-use of force; thought should be given later to the final form in which to present the result of its work. Iran supported the draft, notwithstanding what it called the opportunistic manoeuvre by Iraq in sponsoring the text to achieve political objectives.

Draft Code of Offences against peace and security

In December 1985, the General Assembly requested the International Law Commission (ILC) to continue work on the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind—a topic on which ILC had resumed work in 1982(20) pursuant to a 1981 Assembly invitation.(21) Prepared by ILC in 1954(22) in response to a 1947 Assembly request,(23) the draft Code defined offences which were crimes under international law and for which the responsible individual was to be punished.

ILC consideration. The Commission, at its 1985 session,(24) considered the third report submitted by its Special Rapporteur on the topic, Doudou Thiam (Senegal),(25) containing a draft outline of the future Code, whose scope of application was limited, for the time being, to acts committed by individuals.

The proposed outline, contained in paragraph 43 of the ILC report,(24) consisted of two parts: the first would deal with the scope of the draft articles, the definition of an offence against the peace and security of mankind, and the general principles governing the subject; the second would deal specifically with acts constituting such an offence, including a review of the traditional division of such offences into crimes against peace, war crimes and crimes against humanity. The Special Rapporteur also proposed a number of draft articles, some with alternative texts, on the scope of the articles (article 1), persons covered by the articles (article 2), definition of an offence against the peace and security of mankind (article 3), and acts constituting such an offence (article 4). The proposed article 4 covered acts such as aggression, threats of aggression, intervention, terrorist acts, violation by the State authorities of a treaty designed to ensure international peace and security, and colonial domination.

The Commission, having discussed the proposed draft articles and other related possible offences such as mercenarism and economic aggression, referred the first three articles and part of the fourth to its Drafting Committee; however, the Committee was not able to consider them in 1985 due to lack of time. The Commission decided to resume consideration of the remaining parts of article 4 in 1986 and took note of the Special Rapporteur's intention to devote his 1986 report to war crimes and crimes against humanity and to consider the question of general principles as soon as possible. These actions were contained in paragraphs 99-101 of the 1985 ILC report.(24)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly in September 1985 a report with later addenda,(26) containing comments received from 13 Member States in response to a 1984 Assembly invitation(27) for views on the 1984 conclusions of ILC.(28)

On 11 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/69 by recorded vote.

Draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind

The General Assembly,

Mindful of Article 13, paragraph 1 a, of the Charter of the United Nations, which provides that the General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolution 177(II) of 21 November 1947, by which it directed the International Law Commission to prepare a draft code of offences against the peace and security of mankind,

Having considered the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind prepared by the International Law Commission and submitted to the General Assembly in 1954,

Recalling its belief that the elaboration of a code of offences against the peace and security of mankind could contribute to strengthening international peace and security and thus to promoting and implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling also its resolution 36/106 of 10 December 1981, in which it invited the International Law Commission to resume its work with a view to elaborating the draft Code and to examine it with the required priority in order to review it, taking into account the results achieved by the process of the progressive development of international law,

Bearing in mind that the International Law Commission should fulfil its task on the basis of early elaboration of draft articles thereof,

Having considered chapter II of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-seventh session, in particular paragraph 43 of the report, containing the outline of the future Code proposed by the Special Rapporteur, and paragraphs 99, 100 and 101 of the report containing the conclusions of the Commission,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the subject,

Taking into account the views expressed during the debate on this item at the current session,

Recognizing the importance and urgency of the subject,

1. Invites the International Law Commission to continue its work on the elaboration of the draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind by elaborating an introduction as well as a list of the offences, taking into account the progress made at its thirty-seventh session, as well as the views expressed during the fortieth session of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to seek the views of Member States and intergovernmental organizations regarding the outline of the future Code proposed by the Special Rapporteur and contained in paragraph 43 of the report of the International Law Commission, and the conclusions contained in paragraphs 99, 100 and 101 of the said report;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to include the views received from Member States and intergovernmental organizations in accordance with paragraph 2 above in a report to be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-first session with a view to adopting, at the appropriate time, the necessary decision thereon;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind", to be considered in conjunction with the examination of the report of the International Law Commission.

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 127-6-9 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1000) by recorded vote (98-6-8), 2 December (meeting 50); 28-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L15); agenda item 133.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Benin, Bolivia, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Kenya, Mali, Mongolia, Morocco, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Sudan, Thailand, Tunisia, Uganda, Viet Nam, Zaire, Zambia.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Chile, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, Canada, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Turkey.

The recorded vote in the Committee was requested by Egypt. Several delegations, in explanation of vote, questioned the wisdom of paragraph 4, which kept the topic separate from the agenda item on the ILC report. Along with France and Israel, which voted negatively for that reason, the United Kingdom considered the approach tantamount to exerting political pressure on the Commission, and questioned the validity of identifying specific offences before elaborating general criteria. The United States called the approach irrational and counter-productive, as did Chile, which felt the Commission should be free from pressure when its work needed to be rationalized. Turkey also feared the approach's long-term adverse effect on the ILC work programme. The Federal Republic of Germany considered paragraphs 2 and 3 to be additional shortcomings; Italy and Spain also objected to consulting intergovernmental organizations, referred to in paragraph 2. Agreeing that the ILC report should be considered as a whole, Portugal added that the Commission should study the topic in greater depth in view of the considerable disagreement to which the issue still gave rise. While voting in favour, Australia, Ireland and Norway (speaking also on behalf of Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Sweden) shared the misgivings expressed over paragraph 4.

Draft convention against mercenaries

In 1985, the General Assembly requested the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries to try to complete its mandate and submit a draft convention in 1986.

Work of the Committee against mercenaries. The Ad Hoc Committee held its fifth session in New York from 8 April to 3 May 1985,(29) in pursuance of a 1984 Assembly decision.(30)

As in the past, the Committee re-established two Working Groups: Group A to deal with definition and the convention's scope, and Group B with all other issues relevant to the future convention. In addition to the documents considered at its previous sessions, the Committee had before it a 1984 document it had prepared as a consolidated negotiating basis of a convention;(31) a draft convention proposed earlier in 1985 by Cuba;(32) and a topical summary of the Sixth Committee's 1984 discussion on the question,(33) prepared at the Assembly's request.(30)

The 1985 report of the Ad Hoc Committee incorporated its Working Groups' reports, a report of their joint meeting on a draft article dealing with whether mercenary activities constituted a crime against the peace and security of mankind, and a revised version of the negotiating document. Not having completed its mandate, the Ad Hoc Committee recommended that the Assembly invite it to continue work in 1986 with a view to drafting a convention at the earliest possible date.

The Committee, which had had one vacancy since its inception in 1980,(34) attained full membership in September 1985 with the appointment of Viet Nam as its thirty-fifth member (see APPENDIX III).

In the course of 1985, the Secretary-General received a number of communications with requests that they be circulated under the agenda item on mercenaries. These letters dealt with the situations in Afghanistan (see p. 232) and Central America (see p. 205).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/74 without vote.

Drafting of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need for strict observance of the principles of sovereign equality, political independence, territorial integrity of States and self-determination of peoples, enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and developed in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions, particularly resolutions 2395(XXIII) of 29 November 1968, 2465(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2548(XXIV) of 11 December 1969, 2708(XXV) of 14 December 1970 and 3103(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, and its resolution 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, as well as Security Council resolutions 405(1977) of 14 April 1977, 419(1977) of 24 November 1977, 496(1981) of 15 December 1981 and 507(1982) of 28 May 1982, in which the United Nations denounced the practice of using mercenaries, in particular against developing countries and national liberation movements,

Recalling in particular its resolution 39/84 of 13 December 1984, by which it renewed the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries,

Having considered the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on its fifth session,

Recognizing that the activities of mercenaries are contrary to fundamental principles of international law, such as non-interference in the internal affairs of States, territorial integrity and independence, and seriously impede the process of self-determination of peoples struggling against colonialism, racism and apartheid and all forms of foreign domination,

Bearing in mind the pernicious impact that the activities of mercenaries have on international peace and security,

Considering that the progressive development and codification of the rules of international law on mercenaries would contribute immensely to the implementation of the purposes and principles of the Charter,

Taking account of the fact that, although the Ad Hoc Committee has made some progress, it has not yet fulfilled its mandate,

Reaffirming the need for the elaboration, at the earliest possible date, of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries and the progress made by the Ad Hoc Committee, especially during its fifth session;

2. Decides to renew the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee to enable it to continue its work on the drafting of an international convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries;

3. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee, in the fulfilment of its mandate, to use the draft articles contained in chapter V of its report, entitled "Consolidated negotiating basis of a convention against the recruitment, use, financing and training of mercenaries" as a basis for future negotiation on the text of the proposed international convention;

4. Invites the Ad Hoc Committee to take into account the suggestions and proposals of Member States submitted to the Secretary-General on the subject and the views and comments expressed at the current session of the General Assembly;

5. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including participation in the meetings of its working groups;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Ad Hoc Committee with any assistance and facilities it may require for the performance of its work;

7. Decides that the Ad Hoc Committee shall hold its sixth session for four weeks, from 16 June to 11 July 1986;

8. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to make every effort to complete its mandate at its sixth session and to submit a draft convention to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries".

General Assembly resolution 40/74

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/979 & Corr.1) by consensus, 27 November (meeting 48); 41-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.12/Rev.1); agenda item 137.

Sponsors: Algeria, Angola, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Cameroon, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, Fiji, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guyana, India, Iraq, Jamaica, Kenya, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, Romania, Senegal, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Financial implications. 5th Committee, A/40/1016; S-G. A/C.5/40/75, A/C.6/40/L.23. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 56; 6th Committee 13-17, 44, 48; plenary 112.

In explanation of position, Iran charged that one of the text's sponsors, Iraq, used mercenaries in its military operations against Iran, that many had been captured, and that there had been recent negotiations, through mediation by the Sudan, on repatriating the Sudanese elements recruited by Iraq. Rejecting those allegations, Iraq said the Arabs participating in the war were doing so in order to defend Iraq from the aggression against its territorial integrity.

Denmark (speaking for the Nordic countries) and the United States asserted that the fifth preambular paragraph had far-reaching implications in that, while the crimes or offences of individuals acting on their own behalf were reprehensible, they could not be attributed to States or be regarded as violations of international law. Belgium (for the 10 EC members, Portugal and Spain) agreed, adding that the Ad Hoc Committee should work with the understanding that a convention, to be successful, had to be adopted by consensus.

In other 1985 resolutions, the Assembly called on States to take legislative or other appropriate measures to prevent the recruitment, training and transit of mercenaries in their territories for use against national liberation movements (40/25, 40/56) or in Namibia (40/97 A). It also called on Governments to enact legislation declaring mercenary activities to be punishable offences and prohibiting their nationals from serving as mercenaries, and to report on such legislation to the Secretary-General (40/25).

Prevention of terrorism

Both the Security Council and the General Assembly were deeply disturbed over the increases in acts of terrorism in 1985. The Council, specifically condemning several instances of hijacking and hostage-taking, was joined by the Assembly in urging closer international co-operation to prevent and eliminate the problem. The Assembly also called on all States to observe and implement the 1979 recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on International Terrorism.(35)

Acts of terrorism, which had spread to all parts of the globe, were exceptionally difficult to cope with since they involved desperate acts by desperate people willing to violate law regardless of the risk to their own lives, the Secretary-General said (see p. 10). The most tragic aspect of the problem was the increasing loss of innocent civilian lives, he said, adding that, with some of the necessary international legal instruments already in existence, the essential political conditions were lacking as well as the sense of solidarity and mutual confidence to make those instruments work (see p. 3).

Communications. In the course of 1985, the Secretary-General received a number of communications dealing with situations in Central America, the Mediterranean or the Middle East (see POLITICAL AND SECURITY QUESTIONS, Chapters VI, VIII and IX), with requests that they be circulated under the item on terrorism.

On 22 October,(36) the Syrian Arab Republic requested the President of the General Assembly to circulate under the item its letter of 1 May 1984,(37) listing alleged Israeli terrorist acts since 1937. On 6 November,(38) Israel submitted a record, prepared by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs, of the alleged campaign of terror conducted by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) since its expulsion from Lebanon in 1982, charging that PLO, under Yasser Arafat's leadership since February 1969, had perpetrated some 8,000 acts of terror.

Reports of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to a 1983 Assembly request,(39) the Secretary-General submitted in August 1985 a report, with later addenda,(40) containing the views and other information regarding terrorism received from seven Member States, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), the Universal Postal Union and two other international organizations. Annexed to the report was information on the state, as at 5 August 1985, of signatures of, ratifications of or accessions to a number of international conventions relating to terrorism, including two adopted by the Assembly and for which the Secretary-General served as the depositary: the 1973 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,(41) and the 1979 International Convention against the Taking of Hostages.(42) As at 31 December 1985, those instruments had 66 (see p. 1172) and 29 parties, respectively.(43)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In 1985, four draft resolutions on the topic were submitted to the Sixth Committee—three by delegations, and one by the Sixth Committee Chairman, which the Committee eventually approved.

The three texts submitted by delegations differed from that by the Chairman in a number of respects.

A draft by Cuba(44)—subsequently revised and sponsored also by Angola, Bolivia, Burkina Faso, Colombia, the Congo, Equatorial Guinea, Nicaragua and Peru(45)—would have had the Assembly condemn all terrorism activities, including State terrorism, as a crime against mankind, and call on States to refrain from participating in terrorist acts in other States, or acquiescing in activities within their territory directed towards the commission of such acts.

A draft by Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and the United Kingdom(46) would have had the Assembly: urge States not to permit alleged political motivation or circumstances to obstruct the application of all appropriate law enforcement measures provided for in the relevant conventions to persons committing acts of international terrorism covered by those instruments; further urge States to co-operate in preventing acts of terrorism and in apprehending, prosecuting or extraditing the perpetrators of such acts, and to take measures to prevent violent attacks against all forms of public transport; and encourage ICAO to continue promoting universal acceptance of and strict compliance with the international air security conventions. The draft was subsequently revised,(47) with the United States as an additional sponsor, to include a request to the International Maritime Organization (IMO) to study the problem of terrorism abroad or against ships with a view to making recommendations and to report to the Assembly in 1987.

A draft by Colombia(48) would have had the Assembly request all States to adopt special measures to strengthen co-operation, especially with regard to exchange of information on international criminal activities, extradition and assistance in legal matters.

On the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, the General Assembly, on 9 December, adopted resolution 40/61 without vote.

Measures to prevent international terrorism which endangers or takes innocent human lives or jeopardizes fundamental freedoms and study of the underlying causes of those forms of terrorism and acts of violence which lie in misery, frustration, grievance and despair and which cause some people to sacrifice human lives, including their own, in an attempt to effect radical changes

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3034(XXVII) of 18 December 1972, 31/102 of 15 December 1976, 32/147 of 16 December 1977, 34/145 of 17 December 1979, 36/109 of 10 December 1981 and 38/130 of 19 December 1983,

Recalling also the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, the Definition of Aggression and relevant instruments on international humanitarian law applicable in armed conflict,

Further recalling the existing international conventions relating to various aspects of the problem of international terrorism, inter alia, the Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft, signed at Tokyo on 14 September 1963, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, signed at The Hague on 16 December 1970, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, signed at Montreal on 23 September 1971, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, signed at New York on 14 December 1973, and the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted at New York on 17 December 1979,

Deeply concerned about the world-wide escalation of acts of terrorism in all its forms, which endanger or take innocent human lives, jeopardize fundamental freedoms and seriously impair the dignity of human beings,

Taking note of the deep concern and condemnation of all acts of international terrorism expressed by the Security Council and the Secretary-General,

Convinced of the importance of expanding and improving international co-operation among States, on a bilateral and multilateral basis, which will contribute to the elimination of acts of international terrorism and their underlying causes and to the prevention and elimination of this criminal scourge,

Reaffirming the principle of self-determination of peoples enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming also the inalienable right to self-determination and independence of all peoples under colonial and racist régimes and other forms of alien domination, and upholding the legitimacy of their struggle, in particular the struggle of national liberation movements, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of the necessity of maintaining and safeguarding the basic rights of the individual in accordance with the relevant international human rights instruments and generally accepted international standards,

Convinced of the importance of the observance by States of their obligations under the relevant international conventions to ensure that appropriate law enforcement measures are taken in connection with the offences addressed in those conventions,

Expressing its concern that in recent years terrorism has taken on forms that have an increasingly deleterious effect on international relations, which may jeopardize the very territorial integrity and security of States,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Unequivocally condemns, as criminal, all acts, methods and practices of terrorism wherever and by whomever committed, including those which jeopardize friendly relations among States and their security;

2. Deeply deplores the loss of innocent human lives which results from such acts of terrorism;

3. Also deplores the pernicious impact of acts of international terrorism on relations of co-operation among States, including co-operation for development;

4. Appeals to all States that have not yet done so to consider becoming party to the existing international conventions relating to various aspects of international terrorism;

5. Invites all States to take all appropriate measures at the national level with a view to the speedy and final elimination of the problem of international terrorism, such as the harmonization of domestic legislation with existing international conventions, the fulfilment of assumed international obligations, and the prevention of the preparation and organization in their respective territories of acts directed against other States;

6. Calls upon all States to fulfil their obligations under international law to refrain from organizing, instigating, assisting or participating in terrorist acts in other States, or acquiescing in activities within their territory directed towards the commission of such acts;

7. Urges all States not to allow any circumstances to obstruct the application of appropriate law enforcement measures provided for in the relevant conventions to which they are party to persons who commit acts of international terrorism covered by those conventions;

8. Also urges all States to co-operate with one another more closely, especially through the exchange of relevant information concerning the prevention and combating of terrorism, the apprehension and prosecution or extradition of the perpetrators of such acts, the conclusion of special treaties and/or the incorporation into appropriate bilateral treaties of special clauses, in particular regarding the extradition or prosecution of terrorists;

9. Further urges all States, unilaterally and in co-operation with other States, as well as relevant United Nations organs, to contribute to the progressive elimination of the causes underlying international terrorism and to pay special attention to all situations, including colonialism, racism and situations involving mass and flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms and those involving alien occupation, that may give rise to international terrorism and may endanger international peace and security;

10. Calls upon all States to observe and implement the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee on International Terrorism contained in its report to the General Assembly at its thirty-fourth session;

11. Also calls upon all States to take all appropriate measures, as recommended by the International Civil Aviation Organization and as set forth in relevant international conventions, to prevent terrorist attacks against civil aviation transport and other forms of public transport;

12. Encourages the International Civil Aviation Organization to continue its efforts aimed at promoting universal acceptance of and strict compliance with the international air security conventions;

13. Requests the International Maritime Organization to study the problem of terrorism aboard or against ships with a view to making recommendations on appropriate measures;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to follow up, as appropriate, the implementation of the present resolution and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-second session;

15. Decides to include the item in the provisional agenda of its forty-second session.

General Assembly resolution 40/61

9 December 1985 Meeting 108 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1003) by vote (118-1-2), 6 December (meeting 55); draft by Chairman (A/C.6/40/L.31), orally revised; agenda item 129. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 18-22, 54, 55; plenary 108.

When the Sixth Committee Chairman introduced the draft, Cuba proposed oral amendments to delete from the third preambular paragraph reference to specific conventions, and to include in paragraph 1 reference to State terrorism. A proposal by Colombia—that the Committee take no decision on those proposed amendments—was adopted by 52 votes to 32, with 33 abstentions. Cuba's subsequent proposal that the Committee take no decision on the Chairman's text was rejected by 63 votes to 9, with 38 abstentions. A further proposal by Cuba—that separate votes be taken on the third preambular paragraph and paragraphs 1, 6, 8, 11 and 12 of the draft—was rejected by 54 votes to 27, with 38 abstentions. The Committee then approved the draft by 118 votes to 1, with 2 abstentions.

In explanation of its negative vote on the draft, Cuba stated that the draft had failed to take account of State terrorism as practised, it charged, by the United States, Israel and South Africa. Burkina Faso, also condemning State terrorism, abstained. Iran did not participate in the voting, asserting that while the text rightly recognized the legitimacy of the struggle for national liberation and the right of self-determination, it failed to condemn State terrorism.

Many delegations, voting affirmatively, explained why they supported the text even though considering it not entirely satisfactory.

The USSR was pleased that the text did not equate national liberation movements with international terrorism; it would have preferred an explicit condemnation of State terrorism, the elements of which, it believed, were included in paragraphs 1 and 6. Iraq voted in favour, on the understanding that paragraph 1 did not exclude State terrorism. Algeria and the Syrian Arab Republic regretted that the text did not contain an unequivocal condemnation of State terrorism. Mongolia added that State terrorism was being practised in southern Africa and against States of Central America, and Nicaragua claimed itself to be a victim.

Though not wholly satisfied with the text, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya supported it for its unequivocal condemnation of international terrorism, together with the affirmation of the right of peoples to self-determination and of the legitimacy of the struggle of national liberation movements. Democratic Yemen added that the text recognized that international terrorism could not be considered in isolation from the practices of colonial and racist régimes. Algeria, however, felt that some formulations were obscure and could serve as a pretext for lumping acts of criminal terrorism together with those forming part of the legitimate struggle of national liberation movements; it added that the appeal in paragraph 9 should have invoked the appropriate provisions of the Charter, particularly Chapter VII. The United States, which considered the reaffirmation of the principle of self-determination in the seventh preambular paragraph to be excessive, understood that paragraph 9 did not lay down a pre-condition for other actions called for in the draft; with its reference to human rights, the text was not totally lacking in balance, however. Honduras would have liked a specific reference to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights(49) and to various forms of terrorism, including the kind practised by States against their own nationals; omission in paragraph 2 of an explicit reference to forms of terrorism which jeopardized fundamental freedoms and human rights reflected an inconsistency between the title and the substance of the text.

Many felt that the text, despite certain shortcomings, represented the common will of a vast majority of Member States or was a generally acceptable compromise solution; among them, Benin, Chile, Morocco, the Philippines, the Sudan, Sweden and Yemen. Egypt and Pakistan supported it as an act of solidarity with non-aligned and other developing countries which had worked in good faith to arrive at an acceptable text. Similarly, Japan voted in favour out of respect for the efforts at achieving a consensus. Belgium felt the text represented a generally balanced and realistic compromise, and welcomed the reference to the role of ICAO and IMO. The United Kingdom would have liked to see the text declare that no cause could ever justify international terrorism; it added that the draft had positive features, in particular the provisions contained in paragraphs 1, 4, 6 and 13. While many welcomed the draft's condemnation of all forms of terrorism, the Federal Republic of Germany felt the Committee was about to miss a historic opportunity to rally all Member States in a common approach to one of the most difficult and important problems of the day. For Mexico, the text did not touch on the effects of terrorism on inter-State relations.

France believed that the rule of aut dedere aut judicare referred to in paragraph 8 must be interpreted as implying respect for the principle of timely prosecution of the right of asylum. The USSR considered that paragraph to be important in combating the hijacking of ships and aircraft and attacks on diplomatic and consular missions. Mexico, however, doubted whether the principle of extradition could be effectively applied in the case of international terrorism.

In related action in 1985, the Assembly called on the Secretariat's Department of Public Information to disseminate information concerning United Nations decisions dealing with acts of terrorism in all its forms (resolution 40/164 A).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On three occasions in 1985, the Security Council specifically condemned acts of terrorism, including hijacking and hostage-taking.

It did so on 9 October, when the Council's President, on behalf of its members,(50) welcomed the news of the release of the passengers and the crew of the cruise ship Achille Lauro (see p. 291).

On 18 December, the Council held a meeting, requested two days earlier by the United States because of what it said was the serious situation caused by hostage-taking and abduction,(51) and adopted resolution 579(1985) unanimously.

The Security Council,

Deeply disturbed at the prevalence of incidents of hostage-taking and abduction, several of which are of protracted duration and have included loss of life,

Considering that the taking of hostages and abductions are offences of grave concern to the international community, having severe adverse consequences for the rights of the victims and for the promotion of friendly relations and co-operation among States,

Recalling the statement of 9 October 1985 by the President of the Security Council, resolutely condemning all acts of terrorism, including hostage-taking,

Recalling also resolution 40/61 of 9 December 1985 of the General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted on 17 December 1979, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, adopted on 14 December 1973, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, signed on 23 September 1971, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft, signed on 16 December 1970, and other relevant conventions,

1. Condemns unequivocally all acts of hostage-taking and abduction;

2. Calls for the immediate safe release of all hostages and abducted persons wherever and by whomever they are being held;

3. Affirms the obligation of all States in whose territory hostages or abducted persons are held urgently to take all appropriate measures to secure their safe release and to prevent the commission of acts of hostage-taking and abduction in the future;

4. Appeals to all States that have not yet done so to consider the possibility of becoming parties to the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of Crimes against Internationally Protected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation, the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft and other relevant conventions;

5. Urges the further development of international co-operation among States in devising and adopting effective measures which are in accordance with the rules of international law to facilitate the prevention, prosecution and punishment of all acts of hostage-taking and abduction as manifestations of international terrorism.

Security Council resolution 579(1985)

18 December 1985 Meeting 2637 Adopted unanimously

8-nation draft (S/17686).

Sponsors: Australia, Denmark, Egypt, France, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago, United Kingdom, United States.

On 30 December, following terrorist attacks at the airports at Rome, Italy, and at Vienna, Austria, the President read out the following statement(52) on behalf of the Council members:

"The members of the Security Council strongly condemn the unjustifiable and criminal terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports which caused the taking of innocent human lives.

"They urge that those responsible for these deliberate and indiscriminate killings be brought to trial in accordance with due process of law.

"They call upon all concerned to exercise restraint and to refrain from taking any action inconsistent with their obligations under the Charter of the United Nations and other relevant rules of international law.

"They affirm the statement by the President of the Security Council of 9 October 1985. Security Council resolution 579(1985), and endorse the Secretary-General's statement of 27 December 1985, in which he noted General Assembly resolution 40/61 of 9 December 1985 and expressed the hope that it would be followed by determined efforts by all Governments and authorities concerned, in accordance with established principles of international law, in order that all acts, methods and practices of terrorism may be brought to an end."

Draft articles on non-navigational uses of international watercourses

In 1985, ILC(24) continued work on the law of the non-navigational uses of international watercourses, as recommended by the General Assembly in 1984.(53) It appointed Stephen C. McCaffrey (United States) as new Special Rapporteur on the topic, to fill the post vacated by Jens Evensen (Norway) upon his election to the International Court of Justice, and asked Mr. McCaffrey to prepare a preliminary report.

In that report(54)—the sixth on the topic, including those prepared by three predecessors—the new Special Rapporteur reviewed the Commission's work on the topic to date(55) and said he proposed to follow, for the time being, the general organizational structure provided by the outline proposed by his predecessor in elaborating further draft articles on the topic.(56) He also suggested that the Drafting Committee take up, in 1986, draft articles 1 to 9 (dealing with introductory articles, general principles, rights and duties of watercourse States) which had been referred to it in 1984, while the Commission might address issues of co-operation and management relating to international watercourse systems. Members of the Commission generally supported the Special Rapporteur's intention to build as much as possible on the progress already achieved. It was recognized that the Commission must endeavour, without delay, to reach acceptable solutions to the difficult and sensitive topic, in view of the urgency of fresh-water problems confronting mankind.

In its 1985 resolution (40/75) on the work of ILC, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account government comments, ILC should continue its work on the topic.

Chapter III

States and international law

The United Nations remained concerned, throughout 1985, with protecting diplomats and consular missions, as it received reports of incidents threatening their security and safety Urging States to ensure their security and condemning acts of violence, the General Assembly in December asked the Secretary-General to survey in 1986 the operation of the reporting procedures. (resolution 40/73).

The International Law Commission (see p. 1197) continued work with a view to elaborating legal instruments on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier, jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, international liability for injurious consequences arising from acts not prohibited by international law, and State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts.

Topics related to this chapter. International organizations and international law: host country relations. Other legal questions: International Law Commission.

Diplomatic relations

Protection of diplomats

As at 31 December 1985, the number of parties to the various international instruments relating to the protection of diplomats and diplomatic and consular relations<sup>(1)</sup> was as follows: 145 States were parties to the 1961 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations,<sup>(2)</sup> with Thailand ratifying and Turkey acceding in 1985; 42 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning acquisition of nationality,<sup>(3)</sup> with Thailand ratifying in 1985; and 52 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes.<sup>(3)</sup>

With the Netherlands acceding to the three instruments in 1985, the 1963 Vienna Convention on Consular Relations<sup>(4)</sup> had 110 parties; 33 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the acquisition of nationality;<sup>(5)</sup> and 40 States were parties to the Optional Protocol concerning the compulsory settlement of disputes.<sup>(5)</sup>

tected Persons, including Diplomatic Agents,<sup>(6)</sup> had 66 States parties, Italy having ratified and New Zealand, the Niger, Spain and Switzerland having acceded in 1985.

Report of the Secretary-General. Following a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(7)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted in August 1985 a report with later addenda,<sup>(8)</sup> containing information from States on serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and on action taken to bring offenders to justice.

Austria reported a November 1984 fatal shooting, in Vienna, of the Assistant Director of the United Nations Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs. Belgium reported an April 1985 bombing attack on the North Atlantic Assembly headquarters in Brussels and the resulting damage to the residence of the Counsellor of the Italian Embassy; and the discovery in December 1984 of explosives placed at a building inhabited by the Consul General of Turkey and the Counsellor of the Embassy of Greece.

Canada provided information on a March 1985 incident at the Turkish Embassy in Ottawa, involving serious injury to Turkey's Ambassador, the fatal shooting of a Canadian security guard, and hostage-taking of the Embassy occupants; three individuals apprehended faced trial in 1986. It also reported on the ongoing criminal prosecution or investigation of those involved in two 1982 incidents—the April assassination attempt against a Turkish diplomat and the August assassination of another.

France informed of the charges of complicity in two 1982 cases of murder, of a member of the United States Embassy in January and of a member of the Embassy of Israel in April.

The Federal Republic of Germany rejected charges made by the USSR in connection with certain incidents in 1984.<sup>(9)</sup>

Israel reported two August 1985 incidents—an explosion near its Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand, and the fatal shooting, in Cairo, Egypt, of an Embassy staff member and serious injuries to his wife and a secretary, also reported by Egypt. Kuwait reported the arrest of the suspected perpetrators of a March 1985 fatal shooting of an Iraqi diplomat and his son.

Portugal listed cases occurring there between 1975 and 1983, and Spain provided information on a December 1983 fatal shooting of a Jordanian Embassy employee and wounding of another. Turkey reported several attacks against and injuries to its diplomats in Teheran, Iran, in March 1984; the incident at its Embassy in Ottawa in March 1985 (see above); and the assassination of a Jordanian diplomat in Ankara in July 1985. The United Kingdom reported that six individuals had been convicted in 1985 of the February 1984 kidnapping and murder of a senior official of the Indian High Commission.

The USSR charged a number of countries with failing to provide adequate security protection—Canada for restricting the number of Consulate security staff; Switzerland whose police had forcibly detained a diplomat at Berne in February 1985; Canada and the United States for provocation against Soviet citizens and diplomatic couriers, and for enacting measures affecting the international status of nationals working at the United Nations; and the United Kingdom for not preventing the forced entry and burglary of residences of Embassy officials in London, and instances when its Embassy and other institutions were fired on. Responding to the last charge, the United Kingdom said the only USSR complaint had been made after two small holes were discovered in the windows of Intourist Moscow; forensic evidence suggested they were made by an air-gun or catapult.

Incidents involving the permanent missions to the United Nations in New York were also reported (see also p. 1180). Ghana, Nicaragua and the United Republic of Tanzania reported vandalism against the missions' official cars; responding to the complaint by Ghana, the United States said the incident was found to be a random act of non-political vandalism. Nicaragua also alleged that its diplomats had been harassed and intimidated by United States government officials. The Philippines charged that a diplomat's son had been manhandled and beaten up by New York City transit policemen in October 1984.

Australia, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Malawi, Rwanda, the Sudan and Venezuela informed the Secretary-General that they had no incidents to report. Views on measures to enhance the protection of diplomatic missions and representatives were transmitted by Australia, Austria, Canada, Colombia, Denmark, Ecuador, France, Poland, Portugal, Rwanda, the Sudan, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United Kingdom and Venezuela.

Communications. By a letter of 8 October to the Secretary-General, the USSR demanded the immediate and unconditional release of its four officials kidnapped in Lebanon on 30 September, one of whom was reportedly killed on 2 October; it charged that Israel was responsible for inciting internal strife in Lebanon, of which the USSR citizens had become victims. Calling the charges groundless, Israel declared on 23 October<sup>(11)</sup> that the USSR should realize that its encouraging and legitimizing terrorist acts in Lebanon guaranteed it no immunity.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, the General Assembly, on 11 December 1985, adopted resolution 40/73 without vote.

Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General,

Emphasizing the important role of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as of missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, in the maintenance of international peace and the promotion of friendly relations among States and also the need for enhancing global understanding thereof,

Convinced that respect for the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations, in particular those aimed at ensuring the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, is a basic prerequisite for the normal conduct of relations among States and for the fulfilment of the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned about the continued large number of failures to respect the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, and about the serious threat presented by such violations to the maintenance of normal and peaceful international relations, which are necessary for co-operation among States,

Alarmed by the increase of acts of violence against diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as against representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, which endanger or take innocent lives and seriously impede the normal work of such representatives and officials,

Expressing its sympathy for the victims of illegal acts against diplomatic and consular representatives and missions, as well as against representatives and missions to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations,

Emphasizing the duty of States to take all appropriate steps, as required by international law:

(a) To protect the premises of diplomatic and consular missions, as well as of missions to international intergovernmental organizations,

(b) To prevent any attacks on diplomatic and consular representatives, as well as on representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations,

(c) To apprehend the offenders and to bring them to justice,

Noting that, in spite of the call by the General Assembly at its previous sessions, not all States have yet become parties to the relevant conventions concerning the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Convinced that the reporting procedures established under General Assembly resolution 35/168 of 15 December 1980 and further elaborated in later Assembly resolutions are important steps in the efforts to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives,

Desiring to maintain and further strengthen those reporting procedures,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General;
2. Strongly condemns acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and emphasizes that such acts cannot be justified;

3. Emphasizes the importance of enhanced awareness throughout the world of the necessity of ensuring the protection, security and safety of such missions, representatives and officials, as well as of the role of the United Nations in this regard;

4. Urges States to observe and to implement the principles and rules of international law governing diplomatic and consular relations and, in particular, to take all necessary measures in conformity with their international obligations to ensure effectively the protection, security and safety of all diplomatic and consular missions and representatives officially present in territory under their jurisdiction, including practicable measures to prohibit in their territories illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts against the security and safety of such missions and representatives;

5. Calls upon States to take all necessary measures at the national and international levels to prevent any acts of violence against diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, as well as against missions and representatives to international intergovernmental organizations and officials of such organizations, and, in accordance with national law and international treaties, to prosecute or extradite those who perpetrate such acts;

6. Recommends that States should co-operate closely through, inter alia, contacts between the diplomatic and consular missions and the receiving State, with regard to practical measures designed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives and with regard to exchange of information on the circumstances of all serious violations thereof;

7. Calls upon States that have not yet done so to consider becoming parties to the instruments relevant to the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

8. Calls upon States, in cases where a dispute arises in connection with a violation of the principles and rules of international law concerning the inviolability of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives, to make use of the means for peaceful settlement of disputes including the good offices of the Secretary-General;

9. Requests:

- (a) All States to report to the Secretary-General as promptly as possible serious violations of the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

- (b) The State in which the violation took place—and, to the extent applicable, the State where the alleged offender is present—to report as promptly as possible on measures taken to bring the offender to justice and eventually to communicate, in accordance with its laws, the final outcome of the proceedings against the offender, and on measures adopted with a view to preventing a repetition of such violations;

10. Requests the Secretary-General:

- (a) To circulate to all States, upon receipt, the reports received by him pursuant to paragraph 9 above, unless the reporting State requests otherwise;

- (b) When a serious violation has been reported pursuant to paragraph 9 (a) above, to draw the attention, when appropriate, of the States directly concerned to the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 9 above;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to invite States to inform him of their views with respect to any measures needed to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives;

12. Also requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report containing:

- (a) Information on the state of ratification of, and accessions to, the instruments referred to in paragraph 7 above;

- (b) The reports received and views expressed pursuant to paragraphs 9 and 11 above;

13. Further requests the Secretary-General to prepare and to circulate to all States, by 31 July 1986, a survey of the operation, since their establishment, of the reporting procedures provided for in paragraph 9 above, with a view, in particular, to the strengthening of those procedures;

14. Invites the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session any views he may wish to express on the matters referred to in paragraphs 12 and 13 above;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Consideration of effective measures to enhance the protection, security and safety of diplomatic and consular missions and representatives: report of the Secretary-General".

General Assembly resolution 40/73

Status of diplomatic bags and couriers

In response to a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(12)</sup> the International Law Commission (ILC), at its 1985 session,<sup>(13)</sup> continued preparing draft articles on the status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by diplomatic courier, with a view to elaborating a legal instrument on the topic.

Taking up the sixth report<sup>(14)</sup> of the Special Rapporteur, Alexander Yankov (Bulgaria)—containing a proposed revised version of draft articles 36, 39 and 42, and a new article 37 replacing former draft articles 37 and 38—ILC discussed those and other articles concerned with: inviolability of the diplomatic bag (article 36); exemption from customs inspection, customs duties and all dues and taxes (article 37); protective measures in circumstances preventing the delivery of the diplomatic bag (article 39); obligations of the transit State in case of force majeure or fortuitous event (article 40); non-recognition of States or Governments or absence of diplomatic or consular relations (article 41); and the relation to other conventions and international agreements (article 42). It also discussed a newly proposed draft article 43 (declaration of optional exceptions in regard to designated types of couriers and bags) and revised draft article 23 (later adopted as article 18), and referred all the draft articles to its Drafting Committee.

On the Committee's recommendation, ILC provisionally adopted in 1985 draft articles on the courier's immunity from jurisdiction (article 18), duration of privileges and immunities (article 21), waiver of immunities (article 22), status of the captain of a ship or aircraft entrusted with the diplomatic bag (article 23), identification of the bag (article 24), its contents (article 25), its transmission by postal service or by any mode of transport (article 26) and facilities accorded to the bag (article 27). The Commission also deleted the brackets from paragraph 2 of article 12 (on the diplomatic courier declared persona non grata or not acceptable) and adopted a new commentary thereto.

The articles provisionally adopted in 1985, along with those previously adopted, were transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in September.<sup>(15)</sup>

State immunities, liability and responsibility

In response to the Assembly's 1984 recommendation,<sup>(1)</sup> ILC, at its 1985 session, <sup>(2)</sup> continued work on three aspects of international law concerning States: jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law, and State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts.

In December, the Assembly recommended that, taking into account government comments, ILC should continue its work on those topics (resolution 40/75).

Draft articles on State immunities

In 1985, ILC continued preparing draft articles on the jurisdictional immunities of States and their property, basing its work on the sixth and seventh reports—submitted in 1984<sup>(3)</sup> and 1985,<sup>(4)</sup> respectively—by the Special Rapporteur, Sompong Sucharitkul (Thailand).

The Commission completed consideration of, and provisionally adopted on the recommendation of its Drafting Committee, articles 19 (ships in commercial service) and 20 (arbitration), which were the two remaining articles comprising part III (exceptions to State immunity) in the sixth report.

The seventh report introduced the last two parts (IV and V) of the proposed draft articles. Part IV, on State immunity in respect of property from attachment and execution, dealt with its scope (article 21), State immunity from attachment and execution (article 22), modalities and effect of consent to attachment and execution (article 23) and types of State property permanently immune from attachment and execution (article 24). Part V, on miscellaneous provisions, covered immunities of personal sovereigns and other heads of State (article 25), service of process and judgement in default of appearance (article 26) procedural privileges (article 27) and restriction and extension of immunities and privileges (article 28). Due to lack of time, the Commission decided to consider part V at its 1986 session, and, after considering draft articles 21 to 24, referred them to the Drafting Committee.

In the Commission discussion, it was generally understood that the substance of part IV was related to the conceptual approach, nature, extent and scope of jurisdictional immunity itself, and that the emphasis placed in the seventh report on the significance of consent was essential to that part. Differing views were expressed on how to balance, in part IV, the competing interests involving Governments and private entities operating in international trade, in view of the fact that Governments in developing countries often conducted such trade for development rather than profit-making purposes.

Draft articles on State liability

ILC, at its 1985 session, continued work on international liability for injurious consequences arising out of acts not prohibited by international law.

On the death of the Special Rapporteur on the topic, Robert Q. Quentin-Baxter (New Zealand), the Commission appointed Julio Barboza (Argentina) as successor and requested him to prepare a preliminary report indicating the status of the work to date and his future course of action. However, the Commission was not able to discuss that report(5) in 1985; it would do so in 1986 along with a new report which the Commission hoped the Special Rapporteur might wish to present.

Draft articles on State responsibility

In 1985, ILC continued preparing draft articles on State responsibility for internationally wrongful acts, taking up the sixth report(6) by the Special Rapporteur, Willem Riphagen (Netherlands), containing a revised version of the remaining 12 draft articles (articles 5 to 16) of part II (content, forms and degrees of State responsibility) dealing with the legal consequences of international crimes, including aggression. The report also set out a possible content of part III on implementation of international responsibility and dispute settlement.

Following an exchange of views-in which the proposals made for part III were generally considered acceptable-the Commission referred draft articles 7 to 16 to the Drafting Committee, and adopted provisionally draft article 5 dealing with definitions and certain rights of an injured State.

Chapter IV

International organizations and international law

In its continuing efforts to strengthen the role of the United Nations in maintaining international peace and security, the General Assembly, in 1985 as in previous years, requested the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization to accord priority to that question (resolution 40/78). The Assembly once more deferred consideration of an item on the implementation of United Nations resolutions until its resumed fortieth session in 1986, and of draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences until its forty-first session later that year.

The Assembly, having considered the annual report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country, urged that country, the United States, to continue ensuring effectively the security of the diplomatic missions accredited to the United Nations and their personnel (40/77).

Topics related to this chapter. International peace and security. Legal aspects of international political relations.

Strengthening the role of the United Nations

In 1985, the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization continued consideration of the maintenance of international peace and security, with a view to strengthening the United Nations role in that regard and promoting co-operation among States.

Report of the Secretary-General for 1984/85

On the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, the Secretary-General, in his annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), noted that the United Nations had come under harsh criticism, partly because of the new complexity of the expanded membership and new voting patterns, but also because of instances where division and conflict had been highlighted at the expense of broad areas of agreement and common interest. Despite the tendency to make the United Nations a scapegoat for current problems and to blame it for lack of international authority and responsibility, the Organization remained the best place to avoid the worst and to strive for improvement. In view of the importance, in the nuclear age, of an effective collective system of international peace and security, the Secretary-General urged that Member States reaffirm Charter obligations and direct their collective will to strengthening the United Nations.

Among measures for rationalizing General Assembly procedures, the Secretary-General suggested that Member States intensify pre-session intergovernmental consultation, strive for consensus on major issues and avoid divisive rhetoric. The Security Council might try to overcome such shortcomings as lack of unanimity and collegial spirit, incapacity to approach some problems, and failure to command compliance with its decisions. The Organization's interests might also be better served by developing further the Secretary-General's capacity to serve as an objective third party.

Activities of the Special Committee

The 47-member Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization,<sup>(1)</sup> meeting in New York from 4 to 29 March 1985, continued consideration of the maintenance of international peace and security, in addition to peaceful settlement of disputes between States (see p. 1160) and the rationalization of United Nations procedures, as requested by the General Assembly in 1984.<sup>(2)</sup>

An open-ended Working Group of the Committee devoted 15 meetings between 13 and 25 March to discussion of a revised text<sup>(3)</sup> of the working paper—first submitted in 1984<sup>(4)</sup> by Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, New Zealand and Spain—on prevention and removal by the United Nations of situations which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute. Two Committee meetings were held on 25 March on rationalizing the existing procedures of the United Nations, on which France and the United Kingdom submitted a working paper.<sup>(5)</sup> There was no agreement in the Committee on the future treatment of the topic.

Other activities

Security Council consideration. At a ministerial-level meeting on 26 September 1985 (see also p. 392) commemorating the fortieth anniversary of the Organization, the Security Council exchanged views on "United Nations for a better world and the responsibility of the Security Council in maintaining international peace and security". Speaking on behalf of the Council members, the President stressed that a collegial approach within the Council was desirable in discharging its responsibility as the main instrument for international peace, recognized the contribution made by United Nations peace-keeping forces, and called on United Nations Members to abide by Council decisions. In pledging to continue examining the possibilities for further improvement, the Council took note of the suggestions made in that regard by the Secretary-General in his annual report on the work of the Organization (see above).

JIU report. In December, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a report by the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) entitled "Some reflections on reform of the United Nations." (6) The report analysed problems confronting the United Nations system, called for an examination of its raison d'être and suggested changes aimed at making it more responsive to international issues. It comprised six chapters: the notion and feasibility of reform, managerial or structural shortcomings, the nature and the role of the Organization, pursuit of the three main objectives (peace and security, negotiation of economic problems leading to complementarity among national economic strategies, and an integrated approach to economic and social development), the focus of reflections with a view to reform, and conclusions.

The Inspector believed that the structure of the current system rested on three fallacious notions—that peace could be maintained through an institution, that a sectoral and therefore non-integrated approach could develop the poor countries, and that negotiations among 159 States were possible without a prior definition of agreed negotiating structures. He felt that a great deal of misunderstanding existed on the possible role of a world organization and that the confusion in people's minds on the subject was itself a political phenomenon whose harmful effects could be mitigated by reflection and clarification. The seriousness and the urgency of the problems justified focusing the search in directions so far little explored, leading to the conception of a third-generation world organization, replete with its new structure and notions more in keeping with reality. While it was impossible, in his view, to modify the structures of a political United Nations in the current context, reform should aim at building up an "economic" United Nations alongside the political institution by devising and installing entirely new structures in the development area and in that of the system of negotiations at world level.

The Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, in October 1985, requested its Organizational Committee to prepare draft comments on the JIU report for its consideration in 1986.(7)

Communication. In September, Iraq transmitted to the Secretary-General a study by the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee (see also p. 1200) on strengthening the United Nations role through rationalization of functional modalities with special reference to the General Assembly.(8) The study suggested, among other things, that the Assembly streamline agenda items, ensure better allocation and conduct of work among its Main Committees, and adopt fewer resolutions by avoiding confrontational material and focusing on substantive recommendations or on matters requiring action.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Two draft texts were presented to the General Assembly in 1985 on strengthening the United Nations role, with the Assembly adopting one proposed by 39 countries.

On 11 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted resolution 40/78 without vote.

Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its support for the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 686(VII) of 5 December 1952, 992(X) of 21 November 1955, 2285(XXII) of 5 December 1967, 2552(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2697(XXV) of 11 December 1970, 2968(XXVII) of 14 December 1972 and 3349(XXIX) of 17 December 1974.

Recalling also its resolutions 2925(XXVII) of 27 November 1972, 3073(XXVIII) of 30 November 1973 and 3282(XXIX) of 12 December 1974 on the strengthening of the role of the United Nations,

Recalling especially its resolution 3499(XXX) of 15 December 1975, by which it established the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, and its resolutions 31/28 of 29 November 1976, 32/45 of 8 December 1977, 33/94 of 16 December 1978, 34/147 of 17 December 1979, 35/164 of 15 December 1980, 36/122 of 11 December 1981, 37/114 of 16 December 1982, 38/141 of 19 December 1983 and 39/88 of 13 December 1984,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh, thirty-ninth and fortieth sessions, as well as of the views and comments expressed on them by Member States,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization on the work of the session it held in 1985,

Taking into account the work accomplished on the working paper on the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations which may lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute,

Taking into account the elaboration by the Special Committee of the outline for the handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and the conclusions thereon,

Noting the importance that pre-session consultations among the members of the Special Committee and other interested States may have in facilitating the fulfilment of its task,

Considering that the Special Committee has not yet fulfilled the mandate entrusted to it,

1. Takes note of the report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization;

2. Decides that the Special Committee shall convene its next session from 7 April to 2 May 1986;

3. Requests the Special Committee at its session in 1986:

(a) To accord priority, by devoting more time, to the question of the maintenance of international peace and security in all its aspects in order to strengthen the role of the United Nations, in particular the Security Council, and to enable it to discharge fully its responsibilities under the Charter in this field; this necessitates the examination, inter alia, of the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations which may lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute; the Special Committee will work on all questions with the aim of submitting its conclusions to the General Assembly, in accordance with paragraph 5 below, for the adoption of such recommendations as the Assembly deems appropriate; in doing so, the Special Committee should work expeditiously on the working paper on the prevention and removal of threats to the peace and of situations that may lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, or any revision thereof, as well as other proposals which might be made on that question, with a view to completing its consideration thereof;

(b) To continue its work on the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States and, in this context:

(i) To continue consideration of the proposal contained in the working papers on the establishment of a commission on good offices, mediation and conciliation;

(ii) To examine the progress report of the Secretary-General on the elaboration of the draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States;

4. Requests the Special Committee to keep the question of the rationalization of the procedures of the United Nations under active review;

5. Also requests the Special Committee to be mindful of the importance of reaching general agreement whenever that has significance for the outcome of its work,

6. Urges members of the Special Committee to participate fully in its work in fulfilment of the mandate entrusted to it;

7. Decides that the Special Committee shall accept the participation of observers of Member States, including in the meetings of its working groups;

8. Invites Governments to submit or to bring up to date, if they deem it necessary, their observations and proposals, & accordance with General Assembly resolution 3499(XXX);

9. Request the Secretary-General to render all assistance to the Special Committee;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to continue the preparation of a draft handbook on the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, on the basis of the outline elaborated by the Special Committee and in the light of the views expressed in the course of the discussions in the Sixth Committee and in the Special Committee. and to report to the Special Committee at its session in 1986

on the progress of work, before submitting to it the draft handbook in its final form, with a view to its approval at a later stage;

11. Requests the Special Committee to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

12. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization".

General Assembly resolution 40/78

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1013) without vote, 2 December (meeting 50); 39-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.10), orally revised; agenda item 141.

Sponsors: Argentina, Australia, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Brunei Darussalam, Chile, Cyprus, Egypt, Germany, Federal Republic of, Guyana, Indonesia, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Kenya, Liberia, Malaysia, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, New Zealand, Nigeria, Oman, Papua, New Guinea, Paraguay, Philippines, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, Senegal, Spain, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Financial implications 5th Committee A/40/1017; S-G, A/C.5/40/77, A/C.6/40/L.24. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 56; 6th Committee 37-43, 48, 50; plenary 112.

A second draft on the topic—sponsored by Iran and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya (9)—was not acted on, when the Committee adopted, by recorded vote of 46 to 36, with 29 abstentions, a proposal to that effect made by Belgium on behalf of the 10 members of the European Community. The two-nation draft would have had the Assembly request the Special Committee to consider, among other things, the possibility of eliminating what the sponsors felt were the adverse effects, on the maintenance of international peace and security, of the abuse of the unanimity rule by the Security Council permanent members.

In other 1985 action, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/178 on strengthening the United Nations role in international economic, scientific-technological and social co-operation.

Publication of repertoires of practice

Pursuant to a 1981 General Assembly request(10) that the Secretary-General give priority to updating the supplements to the Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council and the Repertory of Practice of United Nations Organs, volume II of Supplement No. 4 to the Repertory, covering 1 September 1966 to 31 December 1969, was published in French(11) and Spanish,(12) while volume II of Supplement No. 5, covering 1 January 1970 to 31 December 1978, was issued in English.(13)

Implementation of UN resolutions

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on 16 September 1985, decided to include in the agenda of its fortieth session the item on implementation of United Nations resolutions (decision 39/465); however, no consideration was given to the question during the session, and the Assembly decided in December to resume its fortieth session, at a date to be announced, for the purpose of considering nine items and four sub-items, one of which was the implementation of United Nations resolutions (decision 40/470).

Host country relations

The 15-member Committee on Relations with the Host Country continued its work in 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> in response to a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(2)</sup> and at five meetings considered various aspects of relations between the Headquarters diplomatic community and the United States, the host country. Summaries of communications by Member States on the security of their missions were contained in the Committee's report to the Assembly.<sup>(1)</sup>

The USSR complained, in February, of what it called terrorist attempts against its Mission, one of which involved the placing of an explosive device on one of its vehicles; it referred, in June, to continuing acts of hooliganism and disruptive phone calls against the Mission staff. It also complained in February that the wife of a diplomat at the Mission had been arrested in a store on false charges. The United States responded to all the complaints.

In February and May, the Committee examined the new reporting procedure, under the host country's 1983 Foreign Missions Amendments Act, regarding motor vehicle insurance.<sup>(3)</sup> The United States Mission had announced on 15 February 1985 that due to a large number of cases where its citizens had been injured by diplomats with no insurance, the minimum liability insurance coverage requirements had been raised to $300,000. In the Committee, Bulgaria and the USSR considered the new requirements to be discriminatory against diplomats; Seychelles wrote to the Committee Chairman, listing the difficulties the one-person mission from a developing country had encountered in complying with the requirements. At the Committee's request, the compliance deadline was extended to 1 April. The host country's answers to queries from the diplomatic community were annexed to the Committee's report.

The Committee's meeting in September focused on travel restrictions, announced on 29 August by the host country, applicable to United Nations staff members nationals of Afghanistan, the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Iran, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Viet Nam.

The new regulation, effective as of 15 September, required such staff members to make arrangements and obtain prior approval through the United States Foreign Missions Service Bureau for travel outside a 25-mile radius of Columbus Circle, New York City (or beyond the five boroughs of the City in the case of Libyans); the host country also reserved the right to review whether or not proposed travel was an official United Nations assignment. The Secretary-General informed the United States in September that the proposed measures were incompatible with the international obligations assumed by the host country under the United Nations Charter, the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations<sup>(4)</sup>, and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,<sup>(5)</sup> in that they discriminated against international civil servants on the basis of their nationality and constrained his exercise of responsibilities.

Other matters brought to the Committee's attention included Cuba's complaint against the United States use of United Nations premises for what it called a disgraceful political show concerning alleged human rights violations in Cuba,<sup>(6)</sup> and Iraq's complaint of damage inflicted on cars belonging to its diplomats.<sup>(7)</sup>

The United States, answering Cuba's complaint on 4 March,<sup>(8)</sup> said it had held a press conference on 25 February at which it introduced three Cuban former political prisoners, whose testimony Cuba did not refute.

The Committee also considered questions related to entry visas issued by the host country, exemption from taxes, the possibility of establishing a commissary at Headquarters for the diplomatic community, and responsibilities of permanent missions in resolving their financial indebtedness. The United States submitted to the Committee a memorandum on participation by persons enjoying diplomatic status in criminal proceedings.<sup>(9)</sup>

By recommendations approved on 29 November, the Committee, among other things, urged the host country to prevent and punish acts violating the security of missions and safety of their personnel, to seek with the Secretary-General a solution to travel restrictions imposed on Secretariat members of certain nationalities, and to review measures relating to diplomatic vehicles with a view to facilitating the needs of the diplomatic community.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/77 without vote.

Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country,

Recalling Article 105 of the Charter of the United Nations and the Convention on the Privileges and Immunities of the United Nations,

Recalling further that the problems related to the privileges and immunities of all missions accredited to the United Nations, the security of the missions and the safety of their personnel are of great importance and concern to Member States, as well as the primary responsibility of the host country,

Noting with deep concern the continued acts violating the security and the safety of the personnel of those missions accredited to the United Nations,

Recognizing that effective measures should continue to be taken by the competent authorities of the host country, in particular to prevent any acts violating the security of missions and the safety of their personnel,

Having considered the concerns regarding recent legislation of the host country pertaining to the travel of certain members of the Secretariat,

Taking note of the positions of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the host country with regard to the application by the host country of the above-mentioned legislation,

1. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country contained in paragraph 56 of its report;

2. Strongly condemns any terrorist and criminal acts violating the security of missions accredited to the United Nations and the safety of their personnel;

3. Urges the host country to continue to take all necessary measures to ensure effectively the protection, security and safety of the missions accredited to the United Nations and their personnel, including practicable measures to prohibit illegal activities of persons, groups and organizations that encourage, instigate, organize or engage in the perpetration of acts and activities against the security and safety of such missions and representatives;

4. Reiterates that adherence of all Member States to the Agreement between the United Nations and the United States of America regarding the Headquarters of the United Nations and to other relevant agreements is an indispensable condition for the normal functioning of the Organization and permanent missions in New York and underlines the necessity for avoiding any action not consistent with obligations in accordance with the Agreement and international law;

5. Urges the host country and the Secretary-General to seek a solution that is in accord with the Agreement with regard to the recent legislation adopted by the host country;

6. Calls upon countries, especially the host country, to build up public awareness by explaining, through all available means, the importance of the role played by the United Nations and all missions accredited to it in the strengthening of international peace and security;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to remain actively engaged in all aspects of the relations of the United Nations with the host country and to continue to stress the importance of effective measures to avoid acts of terrorism, violence and harassment against the missions and their personnel, as well as the need for any pertinent legislation adopted by the host country to be in accord with the Agreement and its other relevant obligations;

8. Requests the Committee on Relations with the Host Country to continue its work, in conformity with General Assembly resolution 2819(XXVI) of 15 December 1971;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Committee on Relations with the Host Country".

Draft standard rules of procedure for conferences

The General Assembly, which had asked the Secretary-General in 1980(1) to propose draft standard rules of procedure for special conferences of the United Nations, had deferred consideration of the topic since his first report in 1981.(2)

A September 1985 report of the Secretary-General,(3) submitted in pursuance of a 1984 Assembly request,(4) contained comments and observations received as at 1 August from one Government, four specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency; annexed was the text of draft rules, and the addendum contained a consolidated index of all comments received to date.

On 11 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, deferred until its forty-first (1986) session consideration of the Secretary-General's 1985 report and requested a further report in 1986 (decision 40/421).

Chapter V

Treaties and agreements

In 1985, the General Assembly made recommendations for action by the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations, to be held in 1986 (resolution 40/76).

As in previous years, several multilateral treaties, concluded under United Nations auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General. Efforts continued to eliminate the backlog in publishing the United Nations Treaty Series.

Treaties involving international organizations

Pursuant to a 1984 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(1)</sup> preparations were made in 1985 for the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations, scheduled to be held at Vienna, Austria, from 18 February to 21 March 1986. The Conference was to conclude a convention on the topic based on the draft articles adopted by the International Law Commission (ILC) in 1982.<sup>(2)</sup>

At informal consultations<sup>(3)</sup> held between 18 March and 1 May and between 8 and 12 July, participants discussed the organization and methods of work of the Conference along with major issues of substance, including final clauses and settlement of disputes. In addition to preparing the draft rules of procedure, they also recommended that the United Nations should take part in, as well as service, the Conference.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, adopted resolution 40/76 without vote.

Preparation for the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations
The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 37/112 of 16 December 1982, by which it decided that an international convention should be concluded on the basis of the draft articles on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between international organizations adopted by the International Law Commission at its thirty-fourth session,

Recalling also its resolution 39/86 of 13 December 1984, by which it decided that the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations should be held at Vienna from 18 February to 21 March 1986, and referred to the Conference, as the basic proposal for its consideration, the draft articles on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between international organizations adopted by the International Law Commission at its thirty-fourth session,

Recalling further its appeal, in paragraph 8 of resolution 39/86, to participants in the Conference to organize consultations, primarily on the organization and methods of work of the Conference, including rules of procedure, and on major issues of substance, including final clauses and settlement of disputes, prior to the convening of the Conference in order to facilitate a successful conclusion of its work through the promotion of general agreement,

Reiterating the importance of enhancing the process of codification and progressive development of international law at a universal level,

1. Considers that the informal consultations held pursuant to paragraph 8 of resolution 39/86 have proved to be useful in enabling thorough preparation for successful conduct of the United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations;

2. Expresses its satisfaction with the successful outcome of the work of the informal consultations conducted by the co-Chairmen;

3. Decides that, in addition to the organizations referred to in paragraph 2 (e) of resolution 39/86, the United Nations should participate in the Conference;

4. Decides to transmit to the Conference and to recommend that it adopt the draft rules of procedure for the Conference, worked out during the informal consultations and annexed to the present resolution as annex I, taking into account that those draft rules were drafted for the specific use of that Conference in view of its particular nature and the subject-matter to be considered by it;

5. Decides further to transmit to the Conference for its consideration and action, as appropriate, a list of draft articles of the basic proposal, for which substantive consideration is deemed necessary and which are annexed to the present resolution as annex II;

6. Refers to the Conference for its consideration the draft final clauses presented by the co-Chairmen on which an exchange of views was held and which are annexed to the present resolution as annex III.

ANNEX I

United Nations Conference on the Law of Treaties between States and International Organizations or between International Organizations
(Vienna, 18 February-21 March 1986)
Draft rules of procedure

I. Representation and credentials
Composition of delegations

Rule 1

The delegation of each State, Namibia, represented by the United Nations Council for Namibia, and each organization referred to in rule 60 participating in the Conference shall consist of a head of delegation and such other representatives, alternate representatives and advisers as may be required.

Alternates and advisers

Rule 2

The head of delegation may designate an alternate representative or an adviser to act as a representative.

Credentials, corresponding documents and notifications of delegations

Rule 3

1. The credentials of representatives of States, the corresponding documents of the organizations mentioned in rule 60 as well as appropriate notifications, containing the names and titles of the members of each delegation referred to in rule 1 authorizing them to participate in the Conference shall be submitted early to the Executive Secretary of the Conference, and if possible not later than 24 hours after the opening of the Conference. Any subsequent change in the composition of delegations shall also be submitted to the Executive Secretary.

2. The credentials of representatives of States shall be issued by the head of State or Government or by the minister for foreign affairs.

3. The corresponding documents of organizations referred to in rule 60 shall be submitted to the Executive Secretary of the Conference together with a statement on behalf of the organization confirming that such document is issued in accordance with the internal rules and practices of the organization concerned.

Credentials Committee

Rule 4

A Credentials Committee shall be appointed at the beginning of the Conference. It shall consist of nine members from among the representatives of participating States who shall be appointed by the Conference on the proposal of the President. It shall examine the credentials of representatives of States and report to the Conference without delay. The Credentials Committee shall also verify the corresponding documents submitted by representatives of the organizations referred to in rule 60 in accordance with rule 3 and report to the Conference on those documents.

Provisional participation in the Conference

Rule 5

Pending a decision of the Conference on their credentials, representatives of States shall be entitled to participate provisionally in the Conference. Representatives of the organizations referred to in rule 60 shall likewise be entitled to participate provisionally in the Conference pending its decision on whether the documents submitted by them are in conformity with the requirements provided in rule 3.

II. Officers

Elections

Rule 6

The Conference shall elect from among the representatives of participating States the following officers: a President and twenty-two Vice-Presidents, as well as the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole provided for in rule 47 and the Chairman of the Drafting Committee provided for in rule 48. These officers shall be elected on the basis of ensuring the representative character of the General Committee. The Conference may also elect such other officers as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

General powers of the President

Rule 7

1. In addition to exercising the powers conferred upon him elsewhere by these rules, the President shall preside at the plenary meetings of the Conference, declare the opening and closing of each meeting, direct the discussion, ensure observance of these rules, accord the right to speak, promote the achievement of general agreement, put questions to the vote and announce decisions reached by general agreement or taken by vote. The President shall rule on points of order and, subject to these rules, shall have complete control of the proceedings and over the maintenance of order thereat. The President may propose to the Conference the closure of the list of speakers, a limitation on the time to be allowed to speakers and on the number of times each representative may speak on a question, the adjournment or the closure of the debate and the suspension or the adjournment of a meeting.

2. The President, in the exercise of his functions, remains under the authority of the Conference.

Acting President

Rule 8

1. If the President finds it necessary to be absent from a meeting or any part thereof, he shall designate a Vice-President to take his place.

2. A Vice-President acting as President shall have the powers and duties of the President.

Replacement of the President

Rule 9

If the President is unable to perform his functions, a new President shall be elected.

The President shall not vote

Rule 10

The President, or a Vice-President acting as President, shall not vote in the Conference, but may designate another member of his delegation to vote in his place.

III. General Committee

Composition

Rule 11

There shall be a General Committee consisting of twenty-live members which shall comprise the President and Vice-Presidents of the Conference, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole and the Chairman of the Drafting Committee. The President of the Conference, or in his absence one of the Vice-Presidents designated by him, shall serve as Chairman of the General Committee.

Substitute members

Rule 12

If the President or a Vice-President of the Conference is to be absent during a meeting of the General Committee, he may designate a member of his delegation to sit and vote in the Committee. In case of absence, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole shall designate the Vice-Chairman of that Committee as his substitute and the Chairman of the Drafting Committee shall designate a member of the Drafting Committee. When serving on the General Committee, the Vice-

Chairman of the Committee of the Whole or member of the Drafting Committee shall not have the right to vote if he is of the same delegation as another member of the General Committee.

Functions

Rule 13

The General Committee shall assist the President in the general conduct of the business of the Conference and, subject to the decisions of the Conference, shall ensure the co-ordination of its work. It shall also exercise powers conferred upon it by rule 63.

IV. Secretariat Duties of the Secretary-General

Rule 14

1. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall be the Secretary-General of the Conference. He, or his representative, shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the Conference and its committees.

2. The Secretary-General shall appoint an Executive Secretary of the Conference and shall provide and direct the staff required by the Conference and its committees.

Duties of the secretariat

Rule 15

The secretariat of the Conference shall, in accordance with these rules:

- (a) Interpret speeches made at meetings;
- (b) Receive, translate, reproduce and distribute the documents of the Conference;
- (c) Publish and circulate the official documents of the Conference;
- (d) Prepare and circulate records of public meetings;
- (e) Make and arrange for the keeping of sound recordings of meetings;
- (f) Arrange for the custody and preservation of the documents of the Conference in the archives of the United Nations.
- (g) Generally perform all other work that the Conference may require.

Statements by the secretariat

Rule 16

In the exercise of the duties referred to in rules 14 and 15, the Secretary-General or any other member of the staff designated for that purpose may, at any time, make either oral or written statements concerning any question under consideration.

V. Conduct of business Quorum

Rule 17

The President may declare a meeting open and permit the debate to proceed when representatives of at least one third of the States participating in the Conference are present. The presence of representatives of two thirds of the States so participating shall be required for any decision to be taken.

Speeches

Rule 18

1. No one may address the Conference without having previously obtained the permission of the President. Subject to rules 19, 20 and 23 to 25, the President shall call upon speakers in the order in which they signify their desire to speak. The secretariat shall be in charge of drawing up a list of such speakers. The President may call a speaker to order if his remarks are not relevant to the subject under discussion.

2. The Conference may limit the time allowed to each speaker and the number of times each representative may speak on a question. Before a decision is taken, two representatives may speak in favour of, and two against, a proposal to set such limits. When the debate is limited and a speaker exceeds the allotted time, the President shall call him to order without delay.

Precedence

Rule 19

The chairman or rapporteur of a committee, or the representative of a sub-committee or working group, may be accorded precedence for the purpose of explaining the conclusions arrived at by his committee, sub-committee or working group.

Points of order

Rule 20

During the discussion of any matter, a representative of a participating State may at any time raise a point of order, which shall be decided immediately by the President in accordance with these rules. A representative of a participating State may appeal against the ruling of the President. The appeal shall be put to the vote immediately, and the President's ruling shall stand unless overruled by a majority of such representatives present and voting. A representative may not, in raising a point of order, speak on the substance of the matter under discussion.

Closing of the list of speakers

Rule 21

During the course of a debate the President may announce the list of speakers and, with the consent of the Conference, declare the list closed.

Right of reply

Rule 22

1. Notwithstanding rule 21, the President shall accord the right of reply to any delegation that requests it.

2. Replies made pursuant to the present rule shall be made at the end of the last meeting of the day, or at the conclusion of the consideration of the relevant issue if that is sooner.

3. The number of interventions in exercise of the right of reply for any delegation at a given meeting should be limited to two per issue.

4. The first intervention in the exercise of the right of reply, for any delegation on any issue at a given meeting, shall be limited to five minutes and the second intervention shall be limited to three minutes.

Adjournment of debate

Rule 23

During the discussion of any matter, a representative may move the adjournment of the debate on the question under discussion. In addition to the proposer of the motion, two representatives may speak in favour of, and two against, the adjournment, after which the motion shall be put immediately to the vote.

Closure of debate

Rule 24

A representative may at any time move the closure of the debate on the question under discussion, whether or not any other representative has signified his wish to speak. Permission to speak on the closure of the debate shall be accorded only to two speakers opposing the closure, after which the motion shall be put immediately to the vote.

Suspension or adjournment of the meeting

Rule 25

During the discussion of any matter, a representative may move the suspension or the adjournment of the meeting. Such motions shall not be debated, but shall be put immediately to the vote.

Order of motions

Rule 26

Subject to rule 20, the motions indicated below shall have precedence in the following order over all proposals or other motions before the meeting:

- (a) To suspend the meeting;
- (b) To adjourn the meeting;
- (c) To adjourn the debate on the question under discussion;
- (d) To close the debate on the question under discussion.

Basic proposal

Rule 27

The draft articles on the law of treaties between States and international organizations or between international organizations, adopted by the International Law Commission, shall constitute the basic proposal for consideration by the Conference.

Articles of the basic proposal requiring substantive consideration

Rule 28

1. The Conference shall decide which of the draft articles of the basic proposal referred to in rule 27 require substantive consideration. These draft articles shall be referred to the Committee of the Whole and all other draft articles shall be referred directly to the Drafting Committee.

2. After such a decision is taken by the Conference:

- (a) The Committee of the Whole may decide, at the request of a representative, to give substantive consideration to a particular article of the basic proposal that was referred directly to the Drafting Committee;
- (b) The Drafting Committee itself may decide, where necessary, to transfer particular draft articles of the basic proposal to the Committee of the Whole for substantive consideration.

Other proposals and amendments

Rule 29

Other proposals and amendments thereto shall normally be submitted in writing to the Executive Secretary of the Conference, who shall circulate copies to all delegations. As a general rule, no proposal shall be considered at any meeting of the Conference unless copies of it have been circulated to all delegations not later than the day preceding the meeting. The President may, however, permit the consideration of amendments, even though these amendments have not been circulated or have only been circulated on the same day.

Decisions on competence

Rule 30

Subject to rule 20, any motion calling for a decision on the competence of the Conference to discuss any matter or to adopt a proposal submitted to it shall be put to the vote before the matter is discussed or a decision is taken as to the proposal in question.

Withdrawal of proposals and motions

Rule 31

A proposal may be withdrawn by its proposer at any time before voting on it has commenced, provided that it has not been amended. A proposal or a motion that has thus been withdrawn may be reintroduced.

Reconsideration of proposals

Rule 32

When a proposal has been adopted or rejected it may not be reconsidered unless the Conference, by a two-thirds majority of the representatives of participating States present and voting, so decides. Permission to speak on the motion to reconsider shall be accorded only to two speakers from representatives of participating States opposing the motion, after which it shall be put immediately to the vote.

Invitations to technical advisers

Rule 33

The Conference may invite to one or more of its meetings any person whose technical advice it may consider useful for its work.

VI. Decision-taking

Decision-taking rights

Rule 34

Decision-taking rights shall be exercised only by States participating in the Conference. In decision-taking by vote each State represented at the Conference shall have one vote.

Majority required

Rule 35

1. Decisions of the Conference on all matters of substance shall be taken by a two-thirds majority of the representatives present and voting.

2. Decisions of the Conference on matters of procedure shall be taken by a majority of the representatives present and voting.

3. If the question arises whether a matter is one of procedure or of substance, the President shall rule on the question. An appeal against this ruling shall be put to the vote immediately and the President's ruling shall stand unless overruled by a majority of the representatives present and voting.

Meaning of the phrase "representatives present and voting"

Rule 36

For the purposes of these rules, the phrase "representatives present and voting" means representatives present and casting an affirmative or negative vote. Representatives who abstain from voting shall be considered as not voting.

Method of voting

Rule 37

Except as provided in rule 43, the Conference shall normally vote by show of hands or by standing, but any representative may request a roll-call. The roll-call shall be taken in the English alphabetical order of the names of the States participating in the Conference, beginning with the delegation whose name is drawn by lot by the President.

Conduct during voting

Rule 38

The President shall announce the commencement of voting, after which no representative shall be permitted to intervene until the result of the vote has been announced, except on a point of order in connection with the process of voting.

Explanation of vote

Rule 39

Representatives may make brief statements consisting solely of explanation of their votes, before the voting has commenced or after the voting has been completed. The representative of a State sponsoring a proposal or motion shall not speak in explanation of vote thereon, except if it has been amended.

Division of proposals

Rule 40

A representative of a participating State may move that parts of a proposal shall be voted on separately. If objection is made to the request for division, the motion for division shall be voted upon. If the motion for division is carried, those parts of the proposal that are subsequently approved shall be put to the vote as a whole. If all operative parts of the proposal have been rejected, the proposal shall be considered to have been rejected as a whole.

Voting on amendments

Rule 41

When an amendment is moved to a proposal, the amendment shall be voted on first. When two or more amendments are moved to a proposal, the Conference shall first vote on the amendment furthest removed in substance from the original proposal and then on the amendment next furthest removed therefrom, and so on until all the amendments have been put to the vote. Where, however, the adoption of one amendment necessarily implies the rejection of another amendment, the latter amendment shall not be put to the vote. If one or more amendments are adopted, the amended proposal shall then be voted upon. A motion is considered an amendment to a proposal if it merely adds to, deletes from or revises part of the proposal. Unless specified otherwise, the word "proposal" in these rules shall be considered as including amendments.

Voting on proposals

Rule 42

If two or more proposals relate to the same question, the Conference shall, unless it decides otherwise, vote on the proposals in the order in which they have been submitted. The Conference may, after each vote on a proposal, decide whether to vote on the next proposal.

Elections

Rule 43

All elections shall be held by secret ballot unless otherwise decided by the Conference.

Rule 44

1. If, when one person or one delegation of a participating State is to be elected, no candidate obtains in the first ballot a majority of the votes of the representatives present and voting, a second ballot restricted to the two candidates obtaining the largest number of votes shall be taken. If in the second ballot the votes are equally divided, the President shall decide between the candidates by drawing lots.

2. In the case of a tie in the first ballot among three or more candidates obtaining the largest number of votes, a second ballot shall be held. If a tie results among more than two candidates, the number shall be reduced to two by lot and the balloting, restricted to them, shall continue in accordance with the preceding paragraph.

Rule 45

When two or more elective places are to be filled at one time under the same conditions, those candidates, not exceeding the number of such places, obtaining in the first ballot a majority of the votes of the representatives present and voting shall be elected. If the number of candidates obtaining such majority is less than the number of persons or delegations to be elected, there shall be additional ballots to fill the remaining places, the voting being restricted to the candidates obtaining the greatest number of votes in the previous ballot, to a number not more than twice the places remaining to be filled, provided that, after the third inconclusive ballot, votes may be cast for any eligible person or delegation. If three such unrestricted ballots are inconclusive, the next three ballots shall be restricted to candidates who obtained the greatest number of votes in the third of the unrestricted ballots, to a number not more than twice the places remaining to be filled, and the following three ballots thereafter shall be unrestricted, and so on until all the places have been filled.

Equally divided votes

Rule 46

If a vote is equally divided on matters other than elections, the proposal or motion shall be regarded as rejected.

VII. Committees Committee of the Whole

Rule 47

The Conference shall establish a Committee of the Whole, which may set up sub-committees or working groups. The Committee of the Whole shall have as its officers a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Rapporteur.

Drafting Committee

Rule 48

1. The Conference shall establish a Drafting Committee consisting of 15 members representing participating States, including its Chairman who shall be elected by the Conference in accordance with rule 6. The other 14 members of the Committee shall be appointed by the Conference on the proposal of the General Committee. The Rapporteur of the Committee of the Whole participates ex officio, without a vote, in the work of the Drafting Committee.

2. The Drafting Committee shall consider draft articles of the basic proposal referred to it directly pursuant to paragraph 1 of rule 28. It shall also consider any draft articles referred to it by the Committee of the Whole after initial consideration by that Committee. The Drafting Committee shall furthermore prepare drafts and give advice on drafting as requested by the Conference or by the Committee of the Whole. It shall also co-ordinate and review the drafting of all texts adopted and shall report, as appropriate, either to the Conference or to the Committee of the Whole.

Officers

Rule 49

Except as otherwise provided in rule 6, each committee, sub-committee and working group shall elect its own officers from among representatives of participating States.

Quorum

Rule 50

1. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may declare a meeting open and permit the debate to proceed when representatives of at least one quarter of the States participating in the Conference are present. The presence of representatives of a majority of the States so participating shall be required for any decision to be taken.

2. A majority of the representatives on the General, Drafting or Credentials Committees or any sub-committee or working group shall constitute a quorum.

Officers, conduct of business and decision-taking

Rule 51

The rules contained in chapters II, V (except rule 17) and VI above shall be applicable, mutatis mutandis, to the proceedings of committees, sub-committees and working groups, except that:

(a) The Chairmen of the General, Drafting and Credentials Committees and the chairman of any sub-committee or working group may exercise the right to vote;

(b) Decisions of committees, sub-committees and working groups shall be taken by a majority of the representatives of States present and voting, except that the reconsideration of a proposal or an amendment shall require the majority established by rule 32.

VIII. Languages and records

Languages of the Conference

Rule 52

Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish shall be the languages of the Conference.

Interpretation

Rule 53

1. Speeches made in a language of the Conference shall be interpreted into the other such languages.

2. A representative may speak in a language other than a language of the Conference if the delegation concerned provides for interpretation into one such language.

Records and sound recordings of meetings

Rule 54

1. Summary records of the plenary meetings of the Conference and of the meetings of the Committee of the Whole shall be kept in the languages of the Conference. As a general rule, they shall be circulated as soon as possible, simultaneously in all the languages of the Conference, to all representatives, who shall inform the secretariat within five working days after the circulation of the summary record of any changes they wish to have made.

2. The secretariat shall make sound recordings of meetings of the Conference, the Committee of the Whole and the Drafting Committee. Such recordings shall be made of meetings of other committees, sub-committees or working groups when the body concerned so decides.

Languages of official documents

Rule 55

Official documents shall be made available in the languages of the Conference.

IX. Public and private meetings

Plenary meetings and meetings of committees

Rule 56

The plenary meetings of the Conference and the meetings of committees shall be held in public unless the body concerned decides otherwise. All decisions taken by the plenary of the Conference at a private meeting shall be announced at an early public meeting of the plenary.

Meetings of sub-committees or working groups

Rule 57

As a general rule meetings of a sub-committee or working group shall be held in private.

Communiqués on private meetings

Rule 58

At the close of a private meeting, the chairman of the organ concerned may issue a communique to the press through the Executive Secretary.

X. Other participants and observers

Representatives of the United Nations

Council for Namibia

Rule 59

Representatives designated by the United Nations Council for Namibia may participate in the deliberations of the Conference, the Committee of the Whole and other committees, sub-committees or working groups, in accordance with the relevant resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly.

Representatives of the United Nations and of the organizations that have received an invitation from the General Assembly in subparagraph 2 (e) of its resolution 39/86

Rule 60

1. Except as otherwise provided in the present rules, representatives designated by the United Nations or by organizations referred to in subparagraph 2 (e) of General Assembly resolution 39/86, that have traditionally been invited to participate as observers at legal codification conferences convened under the auspices of the United Nations, shall participate in the Conference in the following capacity:

(a) To participate in public and private meetings of the Conference, the Committee of the Whole, sub-committees and working groups, as well as in the process leading to general agreement;

(b) To submit documents for circulation;

(c) To intervene in the debates;

—To exercise the right of reply in accordance with rule 22;

—To explain their positions on any matter on which a decision has been or is to be taken;

(d) To submit substantive proposals, which as such may only be put to the vote subject to rule 63 if a formal request is made by a State to that effect. If the proposal has been circulated in writing, the formal request shall be circulated in the same manner;

(e) To submit procedural motions, including those referred to in rules 23, 24 and 25, which may not be put to the vote unless supported by a State.

2. Representatives of the organizations participating in the Conference in accordance with paragraph 1 of this rule may not:

(a) Object to any procedural motion put forward by a representative of a participating State;

(b) Prevent on their own the achievement of general agreement or participate in any vote.

3. Delegations of the organizations referred to in paragraph 1 shall be seated in alphabetical order following the seating of delegations of States.

Representatives of organisations that have received a standing invitation from the General Assembly to participate in the sessions and the work of all international conferences convened under its auspices in the capacity of observers in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 3237(XXIX) and 31/152
Rule 61

Representatives designated by organizations that have received a standing invitation from the General Assembly in accordance with General Assembly resolutions 3237(XXIX) of 22 November 1974 and 31/152 of 20 December 1976 to participate in the sessions and the work of all international conferences convened under its auspices have the right to participate as observers, without the right to vote, in the deliberations of the Conference, the Committee of the Whole and, as appropriate, other committees, sub-committees or working groups.

Representatives of national liberation movements
Rule 62

Representatives designated by national liberation movements invited to the Conference may participate as observers, without the right to vote, in the deliberations of the Conference, the Committee of the Whole and, as appropriate, other committees, sub-committees or working groups.

XI. Promotion of general agreement Promotion of general agreement

Rule 63

1. The Conference shall, both at the plenary and at the Committee of the Whole stages, make every effort to reach general agreement on matters of substance, particularly on the final results of the work of the Conference, and there shall be no voting on such matters until all efforts to that end have been exhausted.

2. In endeavouring to reach general agreement, all possible means shall be used. The officers of the Conference shall chair as appropriate, co-ordinate and supervise meetings with a view to enhancing the prospects of reaching general agreement.

3. If, in the consideration of any matter of substance, no general agreement appears to be attainable, the President of the Conference shall inform the General Committee that efforts to reach general agreement have failed. The General Committee shall thereupon consider the matter and may recommend that it be decided by a vote, indicating the date of the vote, and place the question before the plenary or the Committee of the Whole as the case may be.

XII. Amendments to the rules of procedure Method of amendment

Rule 64

These rules of procedure may be amended by a decision of the Conference taken by a two-thirds majority of the representatives of participating States present and voting.

DONE AT VIENNA this ... day of ... one thousand nine hundred and eighty-six.

General Assembly resolution 40/76

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/952) without vote, 25 November (meeting 46):
draft by Chairman (A/C.6/40/L.16), orally revised: agenda item 139.

Relations between States and international organizations

In 1985, ILC(5) resumed consideration of the relations between States and international organizations, which it had last studied in 1983.(6) It had before it the second report by the Special Rapporteur on the topic, Leonardo Díaz-González (Venezuela),(7) in which he examined the notion of an international organization and possible approaches to the scope of the future draft articles on the topic, as well as the question of the legal personality of such organizations and the legal powers deriving from it. Also before ILC was a supplementary study(8) prepared, at its request, by the Secretariat on the basis of information received from the legal counsels of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency, on their practice concerning their status, privileges and immunities.

The Commission concluded that the Special Rapporteur might consider submitting in 1986 concrete suggestions on the possible scope of the draft articles, as well as a schematic outline of the subject-matter to be covered by them.

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/75, recommended that ILC continue work on the topic.

Registration and publication of treaties by the United Nations

During 1985, some 503 international agreements and 446 subsequent actions were received by the Secretariat for registration or filing and recording. In addition, there were 310 registrations of formalities concerning agreements for which the Secretary-General performs depositary functions.

The texts of international agreements registered or filed and recorded are published in the United Nations Treaty Series in the original languages, with translations into English and French where necessary. In 1985, the following volumes of the Treaty Series covering treaties registered or filed in 1975, 1976, 1977 and 1978 were issued:

990, 1004, 1005, 1024, 1027, 1032, 1040, 1047, 1050, 1051, 1052, 1056, 1059, 1064, 1065, 1067, 1068, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1073, 1074, 1076, 1083, 1087.

Elimination of the backlog in publication

In November 1985, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his third biennial report(9) on progress made in eliminating, by 1990, the backlog in publishing the United Nations Treaty Series.

The report reviewed the progress made since his last report in 1983(10) and discussed the status of the Treaty Series as well as that of the Cumulative Index and the Monthly Statement of Treaties and International Agreements Registered or Filed and Recorded with the Secretariat. As the plan stood in 1985, no new additional resources were being requested.

On 18 December, the Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report (resolution 40/252, section IX).

Multilateral treaties

Mew multilateral treaties concluded under United Nations auspices

The following treaties, concluded under United Nations auspices, were deposited with the Secretary-General during 1985:(11)

International Convention against Apartheid in Sports, adopted by the General Assembly on 10 December 1985 (resolution 40/64 G)

European Agreement on Main International Railway Lines (AGC), concluded at Geneva on 31 May 1985

Protocol to the 1979 Convention on Long-Range Transboundary Air Pollution on the Reduction of Sulphur Emissions or their Transboundary Fluxes by at least 30 per cent, concluded at Helsinki on 8 July 1985 (see also p. 800)

Regulation No. 63: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of mopeds with regard to noise; Regulation No. 64: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of vehicles equipped with temporary-use spare wheels/tyres, both annexed to the Agreement concerning the Adoption of Uniform Conditions of Approval and Reciprocal Recognition of Approval for Motor Vehicle Equipment and Parts, done at Geneva on 20 March 1958

deposited with the Secretary-General

The number of multilateral treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions stood at 334 at the end of 1985. During the year, 124 signatures were affixed to treaties for which the Secretary-General performed depositary functions and 278 instruments of ratification, accession, acceptance and approval or notifications were transmitted to him. In addition, he received 310 communications from States expressing observations or declarations and reservations made at the time of signature, ratification or accession.

The following multilateral treaties,(11) in respect of which the Secretary-General acts as depositary, came into force during 1985:

Regulation No. 63: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of mopeds with regard to noise; Regulation No. 64: Uniform provisions concerning the approval of vehicles equipped with temporary-use spare wheels/tyres both annexed to the Agreement concerning the Adoption of Uniform Conditions of Approval and Reciprocal Recognition of Approval for Motor Vehicle Equipment and Parts, done at Geneva on 20 March 1958

International Coffee Agreement, 1983, adopted by the International Coffee Council on 16 September 1982

International Tropical Timber Agreement, 1983, concluded at Geneva on 18 November 1983

International Sugar Agreement, 1984, concluded at Geneva on 5 July 1984

Chapter VI

International economic law

Legal aspects of international economic law continued to be examined in 1985 by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) and by the General Assembly's Sixth (Legal) Committee.

In December, the Assembly noted with satisfaction UNCITRAL's adoption of the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration and recommended that all States give it due consideration (resolution 40/72). It also recommended that UNCITRAL continue work on the topics in its work programme (40/71), and decided to consider further, in 1986, legal aspects of the new international economic order (40/67), and, in 1988, action to be taken on a series of draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses (40/65).

Topics related to this chapter. Development policy and international economic co-operation: proposed new international economic order. Industrial development: industrial co-operation contracts.

General aspects

Report of UNCITRAL

At its eighteenth session, held at Vienna, Austria, from 3 to 21 June 1985, UNCITRAL(1) considered a draft model law on international commercial arbitration, means of international payments, and training and assistance programmes. It noted current United Nations activities relating to co-ordination of trade law and legal aspects of technology transfer, and examined legal problems arising from electronic funds transfers.

In addition, the Commission considered a report of its Working Group on International Contract Practices (eighth session, Vienna, 3-13 December 1984), which in 1984(2) it had asked to prepare uniform rules on liability of operators of transport terminals, and two reports(3) of its Working Group on the New International Economic Order (sixth session, Vienna, 10-20 September 1984;(4) seventh session, New York, 8-19 April 1985), which had continued to study a draft legal guide on drawing up international contracts for construction of industrial works.

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in October(5) that on 25 September the Trade and Development Board of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development(6) had considered and taken note of the 1985 UNCITRAL report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/71 without vote.

Report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its eighteenth session,

Recalling that the object of the Commission is the promotion of the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law,

Recalling, in this regard, its resolution 2205(XXI) of 17 December 1966, as well as all its other resolutions relating to the work of the Commission,

Recalling also its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974 and 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975,

Reaffirming its conviction that the progressive harmonization and unification of international trade law, in reducing or removing legal obstacles to the flow of international trade, especially those affecting the developing countries, would significantly contribute to universal economic co-operation among all States on a basis of equality, equity and common interest and to the elimination of discrimination in international trade and, thereby, to the well-being of all peoples,

Having regard for the need to take into account the different social and legal systems in harmonizing and unifying international trade law,

Stressing the value of participation by States at all levels of economic development, including developing countries, in the process of harmonizing and unifying international trade law,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law on the work of its eighteenth session;

2. Commends the Commission for the progress made in its work and for having reached decisions by consensus;

3. Calls upon the Commission to continue to take account of the relevant provisions of the resolutions concerning the new international economic order, as adopted by the General Assembly at its sixth and seventh special sessions, and reaffirms the importance, in particular for developing countries, of the work carried out by the Working Group on the New International Economic Order on a legal guide on the drawing up of international contracts for construction of industrial works;

4. Notes with particular satisfaction the completion and adoption by the Commission of the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration;

5. Welcomes the work of the Commission on the legal implications of automated data processing on the flow of international trade as an activity of vital importance to States at all levels of economic development, including developing countries, and in this connection:

(a) Commends the Commission for its recommendation on the legal value of computer records which, in conjunction with the preparatory report submitted to the Commission by the Secretary-General, aids in clarifying the legal issues;

(b) Calls upon Governments and international organizations to take action, where appropriate, in conformity with the recommendation of the Commission so as to ensure legal security in the context of the widest possible use of automated data processing in international trade;

6. Reaffirms the mandate of the Commission, as the core legal body within the United Nations system in the field of international trade law, to co-ordinate legal activities in this field in order to avoid duplication of effort and to promote efficiency, consistency and coherence in the unification and harmonization of international trade law, and, in this connection, recommends that the Commission, through its secretariat, should continue to maintain close co-operation with the other international organs and organizations, including regional organizations, active in the field of international trade law;

7. Reaffirms also the importance, in particular for the developing countries, of the work of the Commission concerned with training and assistance in the field of international trade law and the desirability for it to sponsor symposia and seminars, in particular those organized on a regional basis, to promote such training and assistance, and, in this connection:

(a) Expresses its appreciation to those Governments, regional organizations and institutions that have collaborated with the secretariat of the Commission in organizing regional seminars and symposia in the field of international trade law;

(b) Welcomes the initiatives being undertaken by the Commission and its secretariat to collaborate with other organizations and institutions in the organization of regional seminars;

(c) Invites Governments, international organizations and institutions to assist the secretariat of the Commission in financing and organizing regional seminars and symposia, in particular in developing countries;

(d) Invites Governments, relevant United Nations organs, organizations, institutions and individuals to make voluntary contributions to allow the resumption of the programme of the Commission for the award of fellowships on a regular basis to candidates from developing countries to enable them to participate in such symposia and seminars;

8. Stresses the importance of bringing into effect the conventions emanating from the work of the Commission for the global unification and harmonization of international trade law;

9. Recommends that the Commission should continue its work on the topics included in its programme of work;

10. Express its appreciation of the important role played by the International Trade Law Branch of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat, as the substantive secretariat of the Commission, in assisting in the implementation of the work programme of the Commission.

Unification of trade law

International commercial arbitration

In June 1985, UNCITRAL(1) adopted the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration, intended for use in modernizing and harmonizing related national laws and practices. The draft text had been prepared by its Working Group on International Contract Practices during five sessions held between 1982 and 1984, and examined by the Commission and its Drafting Group.

The Commission had before it in 1985 two reports of the Secretary-General on the draft text of a model law as completed by the Working Group in 1984:(2) one contained an analytical compilation of comments by Governments and international organizations,(3) and the other an analytical commentary.(4)

The Model Law—the text of which was annexed to the 1985 UNCITRAL report to the Assembly(1)—comprised 36 articles in chapters dealing with general provisions, arbitration agreement, composition of arbitral tribunal, jurisdiction of arbitral tribunal, conduct of arbitral proceedings, making of award and termination of proceedings, recourse against award, and recognition and enforcement of awards.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/72 without vote.

Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the value of arbitration as a method of settling disputes arising in international commercial relations,

Convinced that the establishment of a model law on arbitration that is acceptable to States with different legal, social and economic systems contributes to the development of harmonious international economic relations,

Noting that the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration was adopted by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law at its eighteenth session, after due deliberation and extensive consultation with arbitral institutions and individual experts on international commercial arbitration,

Convinced that the Model Law, together with the Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards and the Arbitration Rules of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law recommended by the General Assembly in its resolution 31/98 of 15 December 1976, significantly contributes to the establishment of a unified legal framework for the fair and efficient settlement of disputes arising in international commercial relations,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the text of the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law, together with the travaux préparatoires from the eighteenth session of the Commission, to Governments and to arbitral institutions and other interested bodies, such as chambers of commerce;

2. Recommends that all States give due consideration to the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration, in view of the desirability of uniformity of the law of arbitral procedures and the specific need s of international commercial arbitration practice.

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/935) by consensus, 14 November (meeting 38); 26-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.7); agenda item 135.

Sponsors: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Canada, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Guyana, Hungary, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Netherlands, Nigeria, Philippines, Senegal, Singapore, Spain, Sweden, United States.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 3-5, 37, 38; plenary 112.

In resolution 40/71 on the report of UNCITRAL, the Assembly also expressed satisfaction at the completion and adoption of the Model Law.

International payments

Draft convention on international bills of exchange and international promissory notes

UNCITRAL's Working Group on International Negotiable Instruments, entrusted with improving the draft convention it had drawn up in 1981(5) on international bills of exchange and international promissory notes, held two sessions in 1985 (thirteenth, New York, 7-18 January;(6) fourteenth, Vienna, 9-20 December(7)) and completed, in December, its deliberations on and revision of the draft convention.

In June, the Commission(1) had agreed that, in the light of the progress made in solving major controversial issues—such as the concepts of holder and protected holder, the effect of forged endorsements and the liability of the transferor by mere delivery or by endorsement—it was reasonable to request the Group to complete consideration of all remaining issues and to submit a draft for UNCITRAL consideration in 1986.

Electronic data processing in international trade

In 1985, UNCITRAL(1) continued consideration of legal problems arising out of the use of electronic data processing in international trade.

It had before it a secretariat report on the legal value of computer records,(8) which noted that there were fewer problems than might have been expected globally in using computer-stored data as evidence in litigation; a more serious legal obstacle to the use of computers and computer-to-computer telecommunications in international trade arose out of requirements that documents be signed or that they be in paper-based form.

The Commission recommended to Governments that they review legal requirements with a view to eliminating obstacles to admission of computer records as evidence in litigation, facilitating the recording and transmission of trade-transaction documents in computer-readable form, and permitting the use of electronic means of authentication on trade-related documents.

As regards preparation of a guide on legal problems arising from electronic funds transfers, UNCITRAL examined in 1985 a report of the Secretary-General(8) containing chapters of the draft guide additional to those considered the previous year,(10) noted a link between the guide and legal security of computer records, and suggested that the guide might include a chapter on evidence. It requested the Secretary-General to send the draft guide to Governments and interested international organizations for comment, and asked the secretariat, in co-operation with the UNCITRAL Study Group on International Payments, to submit to UNCITRAL in 1986 a revised draft for possible adoption.

In resolution 40/71, the Assembly welcomed UNCITRAL's work on the legal implications of automated data processing on the flow of international trade, commended it for its recommendation on the legal value of computer records, and called on Governments and international organizations to act on the recommendation.

Most-favoured-nation clauses

In response to a 1983 General Assembly request,(11) the Secretary-General submitted a report in September 1985(12) containing comments received as at 31 August—from four Member States, two United Nations organs, a specialized agency, the International Atomic Energy Agency and two other international organizations—on the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses adopted by the International Law Commission in 1978,<sup>(13)</sup> on the procedure for completing work on the topic, and on the forum for future discussion.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/65 without vote.

Consideration of the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 33/139 of 19 December 1978 relating to the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirtieth session, in particular section II of that resolution, as well as its resolutions 35/161 of 15 December 1980, 36/111 of 10 December 1981 and 38/127 of 19 December 1983, entitled "Consideration of the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses",

Reaffirming its appreciation of the high quality of the work done by the International Law Commission in elaborating a series of draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses,

Bearing in mind the importance of facilitating international trade and the development of economic co-operation among all States on the basis of equality, mutual advantage and non-discrimination in the establishment of the new international economic order,

Bearing in mind also the complexity of codification or progressive development of the international law on most-favoured-nation clauses at a time of rapid development of new forms of economic co-operation, notably those in favour of developing countries,

Noting from the report of the Secretary-General that a limited number of comments have been received, which seems to indicate that most Member States are not yet in a position to decide how further to proceed in the consideration of the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses,

Considering that sufficient time should be given to Governments for a thorough study of the draft articles and of the questions related to the clauses in order that they may express themselves on the action that should be taken regarding the draft articles,

1. Calls upon Member States, interested organs of the United Nations and interested intergovernmental organizations to review the questions related to the most-favoured-nation clauses and the draft articles thereon so that the General Assembly, at its forty-third session, may decide on the action to be taken on the draft articles;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to reiterate his invitation to Member States and interested organs of the United Nations, as well as interested intergovernmental organizations, to submit or bring up to date, not later than 31 March 1988, any written comments and observations which they deem appropriate on the substance of the draft articles;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite Member States to comment on the most appropriate procedure for completing work on most-favoured-nation clauses and on the forum for future discussion, bearing in mind the suggestions and proposals made in the Sixth

Committee, including the suggestion to establish a working group of the Sixth Committee after one of the existing working groups accomplishes its mandate;

4. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-third session a report containing the comments and observations received pursuant to paragraphs 2 and 3 above with a view to taking a final decision on the procedure to be followed;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-third session the item entitled "Consideration of the draft articles on most-favoured-nation clauses".

General Assembly resolution 40/65

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/977) without vote, 27 November (meeting 48);

7-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L20); agenda item 127.

Sponsors: Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland, Viet Nam.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 46-48; plenary 112.

In explanation of position, Belgium—on behalf of the 10 member States of the European Economic Community as well as of Portugal and Spain—stated that the draft articles as a whole were not completely in harmony with the development of current international trade practices, but they could accept a resolution postponing the study of the problem until such practices were well established.

Training and assistance

In 1985, UNCITRAL continued to co-operate in holding or participating in regional seminars. The UNCITRAL secretariat organized—in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce of Bogotá and the Iberoamerican Association of Chambers of Commerce, and with the support of the secretariat of the Organization of American States—a regional seminar on the work of UNCITRAL and international trade law (Bogotá, Colombia, 22-23 April). It also participated in a regional seminar on the international sale of goods (Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, 11-23 March), organized by the Inter-University Centre of Postgraduate Studies in that city.

In resolution 40/71, the Assembly reaffirmed the importance of training and assistance in international trade law, particularly for developing countries; it invited Governments, international organizations, United Nations bodies and individuals to help finance and organize such seminars, as well as to make contributions to enable resumption of UNCITRAL fellowships for participation in them by candidates from developing countries.

Legal aspects of the new international economic order

The United Nations continued to consider in 1985 the new international economic order (NIEO), with UNCITRAL and the Sixth Committee dealing with the legal aspects.

UNCITRAL consideration. UNCITRAL's Working Group on the New International Economic Order, at its seventh session (New York, 8-19 April),<sup>(1)</sup> continued to discuss the draft legal guide, prepared by the secretariat, on drawing up international contracts for construction of industrial works.

Asking the Working Group to continue its work expeditiously, UNCITRAL<sup>(2)</sup> noted a secretariat suggestion<sup>(3)</sup> that a more detailed examination of the issues involved in procurement and tendering than was possible in the legal guide itself might be valuable. It also took note of the secretariat's intention to submit proposals on enhancing the value of the guide by preparing annexes dealing, for instance, with legal issues related to joint ventures arising in the context of industrial contracts.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The Secretary-General submitted a report in August, with a later addendum,<sup>(4)</sup> containing the views of eight Member States on the 1984 study<sup>(5)</sup> by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research on the progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to NIEO.

The Sixth Committee considered two draft resolutions on the topic. One submitted by Cuba<sup>(6)</sup> would have had the Assembly establish a 20-member ad hoc group of experts, which would meet up to two weeks annually beginning in 1986, to consider States' proposals with a view to preparing a set of norms to facilitate the early initiation of NIEO. Cuba subsequently joined in sponsoring the second draft, later adopted, and withdrew its proposal.

On 11 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/67 by recorded vote.

Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order
The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, the General Assembly is called upon to initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling its resolutions 3201(S-VI) and 3202(S-VI) of 1 May 1974, containing the Declaration and the Programme of Action on the Establishment of a New International Economic Order, 3281(XXIX) of 12 December 1974, containing the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States, 3362(S-VII) of 16 September 1975 on development and international economic co-operation and 35/56 of 5 December 1980, the annex to which contains the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade,

Recalling also its resolutions 34/150 of 17 December 1979 and 35/166 of 15 December 1980, entitled "Consolidation and progressive development of the principles and norms of international economic law relating in particular to the legal aspects of the new international economic order", and its resolutions 36/107 of 10 December 1981, 37/103 of 16 December 1982, 38/128 of 19 December 1983, and 39/75 of 13 December 1984, entitled "Progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order",

Bearing in mind the urgent need to adopt measures to reactivate the process of international economic co-operation and the negotiations undertaken for that purpose, particularly in view of the economic difficulties encountered by the developing countries,

Considering the close link between the establishment of a just and equitable international economic order and the existence of an appropriate legal framework,

Recognising the need for a systematic and progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order,

Aware, however, that the period of time available for consideration of the analytical study submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research has been relatively short and that so far only a limited number of Member States have been able to submit their views and comments thereon pursuant to paragraph 2 of resolution 39/75,

Convinced that a sufficient number of views and comments from Member States would be necessary for a proper consideration of the manner by which further work on the subject may be carried out,

1. Urges Member States that have not done so to submit, not later than 30 June 1986, their views and comments with respect to the study, including proposals concerning further action and procedures to be adopted within the framework of the Sixth Committee with regard to the consideration of the analytical study;

2. Recommends that the consideration of the most appropriate procedure for completing the elaboration of the process of progressive development of the relevant principles and norms of international law, and of the forum which would be entrusted with the task, be undertaken by the General Assembly at its forty-first session, with a view to making a final decision after taking into account all the proposals and suggestions made by Member States on the matter;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "progressive development of the principles and norms of international law relating to the new international economic order".

General Assembly resolution 40/67

11 December 1985 Meeting 112 125-0-19 (recorded vote)

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/978) by vote (76-0-17), 26 November meeting 47; 27-nation draft (A/C.6/40/L.17); agenda item 130.

Sponsors: Barbados, Burkina Faso, Chile, Congo, Cuba, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, India, Jamaica, Kenya, Liberia, Malaysia, Mexico, Morocco, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Romania, Samoa, Senegal, Thailand, Tunisia, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Zaire, Zambia.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States

Asserting in explanation of its abstention that disagreements on substantive issues persisted, the United States said nothing had happened during the preceding year to make the topic more ripe for consideration at the legal level.

In a related action, the Assembly reaffirmed, by resolution 40/71, the importance, particularly for developing countries, of the Working Group's activities on the legal guide.

Chapter VII

Other legal questions

In 1985, the International Law Commission (ILC), at its thirty-seventh session at Geneva from 6 May to 26 July, continued work on the progressive development and codification of international law; the General Assembly recommended in December that it continue work on all the topics in its current programme (resolution 40/75).

The twenty-first session of the International Law Seminar was held at Geneva. Other seminars and training courses were offered in 1985 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law. The Assembly urged all potential donors to make voluntary contributions to the Programme's financing (40/66).

By resolution 40/60, the Assembly welcomed the progress made in strengthening the co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee.

International Law Commission

ILC work programme

The 1985 ILC session (Geneva, 6 May-26 July)(1) was devoted mainly to considering draft articles on the following aspects of international law: draft Code of Offences against the Peace and Security of Mankind (see p. 1163); State responsibility (see p. 1176); status of the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier (see p. 1174); and jurisdictional immunities of States and their property (see p. 1175). It also continued work on relations between States and international organizations (second part of the topic) (see p. 1189) and non-navigational uses of international watercourses (see p. 1170).

The Commission decided to continue work in 1986 on all topics on its current programme, bearing in mind the desirability of achieving maximum progress in preparing draft articles on some topics before the term of its current membership concluded that year. It therefore hoped to complete the first reading of draft articles on the diplomatic courier and the diplomatic bag and on jurisdictional immunities of States, with a possibility of giving similar treatment to parts two and three of the draft articles on State responsibility.

The Secretary-General, in September,(2) transmitted to the General Assembly the draft articles which had been provisionally adopted by ILC in 1985 on State responsibility, status of the diplomatic courier and diplomatic bag not accompanied by courier and jurisdictional immunities of States and their property.

Throughout 1985, ILC continued to co-operate with several other juridical bodies, namely the Arab Commission for International Law, the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee (see p. 1200), the European Committee on Legal Co-operation and the Inter-American Juridical Committee. Such co-operation included ILC representation at meetings of those bodies or their sending observers to the ILC session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Sixth (Legal) Committee, the General Assembly, on 11 December 1985, adopted resolution 40/75 without vote.

Report of the International Law Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-seventh session,

Emphasizing the need for the progressive development of international law and its codification in order to make it a more effective means of implementing the purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and 'In the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and to give increasing importance to its role in relations among States,

Recognizing the importance of referring legal and drafting questions to the Sixth Committee, including topics which might be submitted to the International Law Commission, and of enabling the Sixth Committee and the Commission further to enhance their contributions to the progressive development of international law and its codification,

Recalling the need to keep under review those topics of international law which, given their new or renewed interest for the contemporary international community, may be suitable for progressive development and codification of international law and therefore may be included in the future programme of work of the International Law Commission,

1. Takes note of the report of the International Law Commission on the work of its thirty-seventh session;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the International Law Commission for the work accomplished at that session;

3. Recommends that, taking into account the comments of Governments, whether in writing or expressed orally in debates in the General Assembly, the International Law Commission should continue its work on the topics in its current programme, bearing in mind the clear desirability of achieving as much progress as possible in the preparation of draft articles on specific topics before the conclusion of the term of office of the present membership;

4. Expresses its satisfaction with the conclusions and intentions of the International Law Commission concerning its procedures and methods of work, as reflected in paragraphs 297 to 306 of its report;

5. Reaffirms its previous decisions concerning the increased role of the Codification Division of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and those concerning the documentation of the International Law Commission;

6. Appeals to Governments and, as appropriate, to international organizations to respond as fully and expeditiously as possible to the requests of the International Law Commission for comments, observations and replies to questionnaires and for materials on topics in its programme of work;

7. Reaffirms its wish that the International Law Commission continue to enhance its co-operation with intergovernmental legal bodies whose work is of interest for the progressive development of international law and its codification;

8. Expresses the wish that seminars will continue to be held in conjunction with sessions of the International Law Commission and that an increasing number of participants from developing countries will be given the opportunity to attend those seminars and appeals to States that can do so to make the voluntary contributions that are urgently needed for the holding of the seminars;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to forward to the International Law Commission, for its attention, the records of the debate on the report of the Commission at the fortieth session of the General Assembly and to prepare and distribute a topical summary of the debate.

UN Programme for the teaching and study of international law

International Law Seminar

In accordance with a 1984 General Assembly wish,<sup>(3)</sup> the twenty-first session of the International Law Seminar—for advanced students and junior professors or government officials dealing with international law—was held at Geneva from 3 to 21 June, with 24 participants, all of different nationalities and mostly from developing countries.<sup>(1)</sup> In addition, one holder of a fellowship from the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) and two observers were admitted to the Seminar. Participants followed the work of the 1985 ILC session and heard lectures given by its members and by others. As in the past, none of the costs of the Seminar fell on the United Nations. Argentina, Austria, Denmark, Finland and the Federal Republic of Germany made financial contributions, thus allowing 17 participants from developing countries to receive fellowships. Since the first Seminar in 1965,<sup>(4)</sup> fellowships have been awarded to 230 of the total of 471 participants, representing 113 nationalities.

The Commission<sup>(1)</sup> drew the attention of the international community to the fact that the shortage of funds might make the holding of the 1986 Seminar difficult.

Other activities

A number of additional training courses were offered in 1985 as part of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law.<sup>(5)</sup> Under the annual joint United Nations/UNITAR fellowship programme, 18 middle-grade government legal officers and young international legal experts took courses at The Hague Academy of International Law (Netherlands) and attended seminars organized by UNITAR. Several fellows also received practical training at legal offices of the United Nations and related organizations.

UNITAR reported that no country in Asia and the Pacific had offered to host a regional training and refresher course in international law, scheduled for December 1985; it noted that, in order to hold such courses annually for the benefit of developing countries, it would be necessary to alleviate some of the financial burden on anticipated host countries.

The Secretary-General reported that, in 1985, Japan contributed $10,000 to the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Memorial Fellowship, established in 1981<sup>(6)</sup> for study and research in the law of the sea; that there was adequate income from the fund to award the fellowship; and that the guidelines for its awarding and administration were being sent out to United Nations information centres, universities and others.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 11 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Sixth Committee, adopted resolution 40/66 without vote.

United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law
The General Assembly,

Taking note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law and the recommendations made by the Secretary-General and adopted by the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, which are contained in that report,

Considering that international law should occupy an appropriate place in the teaching of legal disciplines at all universities,

Noting with appreciation the efforts made by States at the bilateral level to provide assistance in the teaching and study of international law,

Convinced, nevertheless, that States and international organizations and institutions should be encouraged to give further support to the Programme and to increase their activities to promote the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, in particular those activities which are of special benefit to persons from developing countries,

Recalling its resolutions 2464(XXIII) of 20 December 1968, 2550(XXIV) of 12 December 1969, 2838(XXVI) of 18 December 1971, 3106(XXVIII) of 12 December 1973, 3502(XXX) of 15 December 1975, 32/146 of 16 December 1977, 36/108 of 10 December 1981 and 38/129 of 19 December 1983, in which it stated that in the conduct of the Programme it was desirable to use as far as possible the resources and facilities made available by Member States, international organizations and others, as well as its resolution 34/144 of 17 December 1979, in which it also expressed the hope that, in appointing lecturers for the seminars to be held within the framework of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, account would be taken of the need to secure representation of major legal systems and balance among various geographical regions,

Noting with regret that the 1985 United Nations Institute for Training and Research regional training and refresher course in international law intended for Asian and Pacific countries could not take place for lack of a host country, and considering the difficulties which the Institute may encounter in finding host countries for the organization of future regional courses,

Noting that the fund of the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea has already become operational,

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General to carry out in 1986 and 1987 the activities specified in his report, including the provision of:

(a) A minimum of fifteen fellowships each in 1986 and 1987, at the request of Governments of developing countries;

(b) A minimum of one scholarship each in 1986 and 1987 under the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea to be financed by the fund of voluntary contributions made specifically for the Fellowship;

(c) Assistance in the form of a travel grant for one participant from each developing country who will be invited to the regional courses to be organised in 1986 and 1987; and to finance the above activities from provisions in the regular budget and also from voluntary financial contributions which would be received as a result of the requests set out in paragraphs 9, 10 and 11 below;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for his constructive efforts to promote training and assistance in international law within the framework of the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law in 1984 and 1985, in particular for the organization of the twentieth and twenty-first sessions of the International Law Seminar, held at Geneva from 4 to 22 May 1984 and from 3 to 21 June 1985, respectively, and the participation of the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat and its Codification Division in the activities related to the conduct of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research;

3. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Institute for Training and Research for its participation in the Programme, particularly in the organization of regional courses and in the conduct of the fellowship programme in international law sponsored jointly by the United Nations and the Institute;

4. Expresses its appreciation to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization for its participation in the Programme, in particular for the efforts it has made to support the teaching of international law;

5. Also expresses its appreciation to the Government of the Republic of Cameroon and to the International Relations Institute of Cameroon for providing host facilities for the regional training and refresher course for African countries held at Yaoundé from 12 to 24 November 1984;

6. Further expresses its appreciation to the Hague Academy of International Law for the valuable contributions it has made to the Programme by enabling international law fellows under the sponsorship of the United Nations and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research to attend its annual international law courses and by providing facilities for seminars organized under the fellowship programme in international law in conjunction with the Academy courses and for its constructive efforts in organizing the regional training and refresher courses held at Brasilia in 1983, at Cairo in 1984 and at Rabat in 1985;

7. Notes with appreciation the contributions made by the Hague Academy of International Law to the teaching, study, dissemination and wider appreciation of international law, and calls upon Member States and interested organizations to give favourable consideration to the appeal of the Academy for a continuation of and, if possible, an increase in their financial contributions in order to enable the Academy to carry on with the above-mentioned activities;

8. Urges all Governments to encourage the inclusion of courses on international law in the programmes of legal studies offered at institutions of higher learning;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to publicize the Programme and periodically to invite Member States, universities, philanthropic foundations and other interested national and international institutions and organizations, as well as individuals, to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme or otherwise to assist in its implementation and possible expansion;

10. Reiterates its request to Member States and to interested organizations and individuals to make voluntary contributions towards the financing of the Programme, in particular for the International Law Seminar and the Hamilton Shirley Amerasinghe Fellowship on the Law of the Sea, and expresses its appreciation to those Member States, institutions and individuals that have made voluntary contributions for this purpose;

11. Urges in particular all Governments to make voluntary contributions with a view to covering the amount of $30,000 needed for the financing of the daily subsistence allowance for up to twenty-five participants in each regional course organized by the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, thus alleviating the burden on prospective host countries and making it possible for the Institute to continue organizing one regional course per year;

12. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its fort-second session on the implementation of the Programme during 1986 and 1987 and, following consultations with the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law, to submit recommendations regarding the execution of the Programme in subsequent years;

13. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-second session the item entitled "United Nations Programme of Assistance in the Teaching, Study, Dissemination and Wider Appreciation of International Law".

General Assembly resolution 40/66

11 December 1985 Meeting 112

Adopted without vote

Approved by Sixth Committee (A/40/1010) without vote 5 December (meeting 53); draft by Chairmen (A/C.6/40/L.30); agenda item 128.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 6th Committee 50, 51, 53; plenary 112.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

In response to the Assembly's 1984 request,(7) the Secretary-General submitted in October 1985 a report(8) on co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee—an organization to which the Assembly had accorded permanent observer status in 1980.(9)

In 1985, the Committee transmitted to the Secretary-General studies it had prepared on the possible wider use of the International Court of Justice in settling legal disputes(10) (see Chapter I of this section) and on strengthening the role of the United Nations through rationalization of functional modalities, with special reference to the General Assembly(11) (see Chapter IV of this section).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/60 without vote.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/38 of 18 November 1981, 37/8 of 29 October 1982, 38/37 of 5 December 1983 and 39/47 of 10 December 1984,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the state of co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee,

Having heard the report of the Secretary-General of the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee on the steps taken by the Committee to ensure continuing, close and effective co-operation between the two organizations,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General;

2. Notes with satisfaction the further progress achieved towards strengthening the existing co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee;

3. Takes note with appreciation of the study on the strengthening of the role of the United Nations prepared by the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, as well as the study on the role of the International Court of Justice and other efforts of the Committee in the continuation of its programme of support to the work of the United Nations in several areas;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report on co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Co-operation between the United Nations and the Asian-African Legal Consultative Committee".

Administrative and budgetary questions

Chapter I

United Nations financing

A United Nations programme budget for 1986-1987 containing appropriations of $1,663,341,500 was adopted by the General Assembly in December 1985 (resolution 40/253 A). This was $54,387,500 above the $1,608,954,000 in final appropriations for 1984-1985, also approved by the Assembly in that same month (40/239 A). Excluding inflation and foreign exchange-rate movements, the real budgetary growth between the two bienniums was calculated at 0.4 per cent.

Most of the budget was to be financed by assessed contributions from Member States. Assembly-approved estimates of income from other sources totalled $294,345,500 for 1984-1985 (resolution 40/239 B) and $317,465,600 for 1986-1987 (40/253 B).

The Committee on Contributions proposed a new scale of assessments for contributions from Member States, which was approved by the Assembly (resolution 40/248). The new scale was for the years 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Following consideration of a report by the Secretary-General on the financial emergency of the Organization, which pointed out that the short-term deficit was expected to exceed $390 million as at 31 December 1985, the Assembly again urged all Member States to meet their financial obligations (resolution 40/241 A).

UN budget

Budget for 1984-1985

Revised appropriations

In December, the General Assembly approved the final budget appropriations for the biennium 1984-1985 in the amount of $1,608,954,000. This was a reduction of $2,597,200 from the amount of $1,611,551,200 which the Assembly had approved in 1984.(1)

Reporting to the Assembly on programme budget performance for the biennium,(2) the Secretary-General noted that there was a net increase of $3,105,400, 0.24 per cent of the net amount voted by the Assembly at its previous session. There had been a decrease of $4,547,900 in expenditure requirements, but this was more than offset by a reduction of $7,653,300 in income.

The details of the expenditure requirements cited by the Secretary-General included increases of $2.9 million resulting from variations in operational rates of exchange and $897,000 in consequence of decisions of policy-making organs; decreases were of the order of a $2.2-million savings due to lower-than-anticipated inflation and $6.2 million in other changes. These "other changes" reflected a number of factors, such as variances between actual and standard salary and common staff costs, and variances between actual and assumed vacancy rates.

The Secretary-General also submitted, in an amendment(3) to the performance report, a separate estimate of the expenditures anticipated to be required for the implementation at New York of the General Service job classification exercise (see p. 1241). This estimate was $1,950,700.

An analysis of the Secretary-General's report by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ)(4) was issued in December 1985. It summarized the information provided by the Secretary-General concerning: expenditures (as above); the changes resulting from rates of exchange and inflation; those resulting from decisions of policy-making organs (including an increase of $1.1 million for servicing the 1985 meetings of the Programme and Budget Committee of the new Industrial Development Board of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and of the Board itself, and a decrease of $1.4 million relating to activities of the political affairs, trusteeship and decolonization bodies; and other changes.

Decreases in the "other changes" category reflected higher-than-anticipated vacancy rates in New York, publishing and travel savings, delays in recruitment and variations between actual costs and standard rates. Increases in this category were the result of salary and common staff costs, temporary assistance, general operating expenses, insurance costs and compensatory payments. The increase related to the budgets for administration and management, UNIDO and the International Court of Justice (ICJ).

ACABQ noted that the reason for the additional net requirement of $3.1 million was the reduction in income. An overall saving had in fact been achieved in the expenditure sections. It recommended that the Assembly approve the revised estimates for 1984-1985.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, the Assembly, on 18 December 1985, adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/239 A, based on the Secretary-General's figures, including $1,950,700 for job classification costs. (Although consideration of the exercise had been postponed, its effective date would remain 1 January 1985; see p. 1241.)

Final budget appropriations for the biennium 1984-1985

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1984-1985:

3. The total net provision made under the various sections of the budget for contractual printing shall be administered as a unit under the direction of the United Nations Publications Board;

4. The appropriations for the regular programme of technical co-operation under section 24, part IV, shall be administered in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, except that the definition of obligations and the period of validity of obligations shall be subject to the following procedures:

(a) Obligations for personal services established in the current biennium shall be valid for the succeeding biennium, provided that appointments of the experts concerned are effected by the end of the current biennium and that the total period to be covered by obligations established for these purposes against the resources of the current biennium shall not exceed twenty-four work-months;

(b) Obligations established in the current biennium for fellowships shall remain valid until liquidated, provided that the fellow has been nominated by the requesting Government and accepted by the Organization and that a formal letter of award has been issued to the requesting Governments;

(c) Obligations in respect of contracts or purchase orders for supplies or equipment recorded in the current biennium will remain valid until payment is effected to the contractor or vendor, unless they are cancelled;

5. In addition to the appropriations voted under paragraph 1 above, an amount of $19,000 is appropriated for each year of the biennium 1984-1985 from the accumulated income of the Library Endowment Fund for the purchase of books, periodicals, maps and library equipment and for such other expenses of the Library at the Palais des Nations as are in accordance with the objects and provisions of the endowment;

6. If savings are realized in the liquidation of obligations for the biennium 1984-1985, such savings up to $3,100,000 and any savings arising out of the appropriation of $1,950,700 for the General Service classification exercise shall be surrendered as if regulations 4.3, 4.4 and 5.2 (d) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations had not been suspended.

General Assembly resolution 40/239 A

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 125-12-10 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1058) by vote (100-4-7) on revised appropriations and revised income estimates together, 16 December (meeting 66); draft prepared by Rapporteur after vote, based on Secretary-General's proposals in performance report (A/C.5/40/50) (Part II)); agenda item 115.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 63-66; plenary 121.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Hungary, Japan, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, France, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Romania, Spain.

The United States, speaking in explanation of its negative vote in the Fifth Committee, observed that the slight decline in expenditures did not suggest that Member States or the Secretariat had exercised budgetary restraint. Instead, they had indulged in a spending spree which had added over $100 million in expenditures. Rather than reduce assessed contributions, the Assembly had decided to add programmes. The United States was concerned at significant instances of over-budgeting, while the performance report belied the Secretariat's argument that no flexibility existed in the budget. Also, Member States had not been provided with adequate reporting on the components of common staff costs, which in many cases were higher despite the $22.4 million increase voted last year.

Belgium said it had abstained because it considered that the performance report in its current form did not provide all the information required by Member States.

Argentina agreed with a suggestion by the Chairman of ACABQ that the Secretary-General's report should include measures to enable the Assembly to consider programme budget performance in both its financial and programme aspects. The Byelorussian SSR expressed similar views.

Income sources

Final income estimates under the United Nations programme budget for 1984-1985, covering income other than that derived from assessments on Member States, were approved by the General Assembly in December 1985 in the amount of $294,345,500. This was a decrease of $7,093,600 from the amount approved at the Assembly's previous session.(5)

This decrease resulted from a drop in income of the Organization's revenue-producing activities, mainly in the sale of postage stamps. This was attributed to the increase in the value of the dollar against the Swiss franc and the Austrian schilling, the withdrawal of speculative interest from the philatelic market and the overly optimistic assumption that a large revenue would be generated by the stamp issue of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly on 18 December 1985 adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/239 B, revising the 1984-1985 income estimates. In both the Fifth Committee and the Assembly, the appropriations and income resolutions were voted on together (see above, under resolution 40/239 A, for recorded vote in the Assembly).

Final income estimates for the biennium 1984-1985

The General Assembly

Resolves that for the biennium 1984-1985:

1. The estimates of income other than assessments on Member States in the amount of $54,542,800 approved by its resolution 39/237 B of 18 December 1984 shall be decreased by $7,093,600 as follows:

Income section	Amount approved by resolution 39/237 B	Increase (decrease)	Final approved estimates
		(US dollars)
PART I. Income from staff assessment
1. Income from staff assessment	246,896,300	931,700	247,828,000
Total, PART I	246,896,300	931,700	247,828,000
PART II. Other income
2. General income	35,617,800	633,000	36,250,800
3. Revenue-producing activities	18,925,000	(8,658,300)	10,266,700
Total, PART II	54,542,800	(8,025,300)	46,517,500
GRAND TOTAL	301,439,100	(7,093,600)	294,345,500

2. The income from staff assessment shall be credited to the Tax Equalization Fund in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955;

3. Direct expenses of the United Nations Postal Administration, services to visitors, catering and related services, garage operations, television services and the sale of publications, not provided for under the budget appropriations, shall be charged against the income derived from those activities.

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 125-12-10 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1058) by vote (100-4-7) on revised appropriations and revised income estimates together, 16 December (meeting 66); draft prepared by Rapporteur after vote, based on Secretary-General's proposals in performance report (A/C.5/40/50 (Part II); agenda item 115. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 63-66; plenary 121.

Budget for 1986-1987

The United Nations programme budget for 1986-1987, in an amount of $1,663,341,500, was adopted by the General Assembly in December 1985. An income estimate of $317,465,600 from sources other than assessments on Member States was also approved. Member States were to be assessed $1,345,875,900.

The Secretary-General initially proposed(6) a budget calling for gross expenditures of $1,742,784,500, of which $327,133,000 was to be financed from income sources other than Members' contributions. Recommendations for reductions of $16,335,700 in expenditures and $969,800 in income estimates were made by ACABQ in its first report on the proposed budget.(7)

Following a general debate in October on the budget and related matters, the Fifth Committee examined the expenditure and income sections, taking also into account revised estimates presented by the Secretary-General subsequent to his initial submission, along with the financial implications of actions taken by the Assembly during the session and ACABQ's recommendations on each of these proposed changes. The result, as recommended by the Fifth Committee and approved by the Assembly, was a gross budget $79,443,000 less than the Secretary-General's initial proposal, with income estimates $9,667,400 below the initial estimate (see below).

The programme content of the budget was reviewed by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC)(8) and its recommendations were incorporated into the programme descriptions contained in the budget document.

The major factor in the reduction from the initial expenditure level was the elimination from the budget of section 17, which had provided for a maintenance budget for UNIDO pending its coming into being as a specialized agency. This had taken place on 21 June 1985, when UNIDO's Constitution had entered into force (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter VI). The net financial result of the conversion was a reduction in the United Nations budget of $68.8 million, the Secretary-General advised the General Assembly.(9) However, he proposed, and ACABQ concurred, that the Fifth Committee recommend to the Assembly a loan of $24 million to UNIDO to meet the initial expenses of the new agency for the calendar year 1986. The Assembly took this action within the provisions of the resolution approving the programme budget for 1986-1987.

Other budget reductions from the initial level proposed by the Secretary-General, in amounts of over $1 million, were the appropriations for political and Security Council affairs and peacekeeping ($3.7 million), the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs ($1.7 million), the regional commissions for Asia and the Pacific, Latin America and the Caribbean, Africa and Western Asia (totalling $14.3 million), the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) ($1.2 million), the United Nations Centre for Human Settlement (Habitat) ($1.5 million), the regular programme of technical co-operation ($7.4 million), administration and management (which included common staff costs) ($15 million) and staff assessment ($4.3 million).

These reductions were more than offset by increases approved by the Fifth Committee. In amounts of more than $1 million these were: political affairs, trusteeship and decolonization activities ($2.8 million), the Economic Commission for Europe (ECE) ($3.3 million), the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) ($8.2 million), the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) ($2.3 million), human rights activities ($1.9 million), ICJ ($2 million), conference servicing ($9.7 million) and construction, improvement and maintenance of premises ($18.2 million).

In his foreword to the programme budget,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General pointed out that its programmatic structure was derived from the objectives and strategies of the medium-term plan for 1984-1989 adopted in 1982.<sup>(10)</sup> He referred to several elements involved in the budget preparation: the establishment of priorities; the review process for determining termination of programme elements; and the exercise of maximum restraint. He also presented an overview of the methodology for preparing the programme budget. The Secretary-General noted that priority concerns had included the problems faced by the least developed countries (LDCs) and the critical situation in sub-Saharan Africa. In consequence, higher than average growth was proposed for the regional commissions.

The Secretary-General suggested that further economies could be achieved if the calendar and pattern of conferences were rationalized by biennial scheduling of meetings, shortening of their duration and selecting as the venue of meetings the headquarters of the unit responsible for substantive servicing.

Finally, the Secretary-General pointed out that his budget proposals represented a real growth of 0.4 per cent over the previous biennium (real growth excludes inflation, foreign exchange-rate movements and non-recurrent expenditures for such matters as special conferences). Also, he added, it should be kept in mind that in terms of the capacity of the Organization to deliver its programme of work, substantial resources were expected to become available from other sources than the regular budget.

Addressing the Fifth Committee, the Secretary-General drew attention to the current financial situation of the United Nations and, in particular, to the detrimental effect that withholding contributions and delaying assessed payments had on the functioning of the Organization. The financing of the Organization's activities, he believed, required agreement on three fundamental points: the level and content of the budget, the scale of assessments and the payment of assessed contributions. Lasting consensus had not been reached on any of those points. He noted that political differences remained concerning the amount of the budget and the content of programmes and he emphasized that increasingly late payment of assessed contributions was serving to aggravate the financial emergency of the Organization.

The Chairman of ACABQ, presenting that body's first report on the 1986-1987 programme budget in October to the Fifth Committee, commented on, among other things, the methodology used in reflecting estimates for non-recurrent items in the budget and stressed the need to re-examine the practice of excluding some non-recurrent items from the proposed budget. Non-recurrent costs were estimated at $83.4 million for 1984-1985 and 1986-1987. The draft programme budget illustrated the complexity of programme budgeting in the United Nations; it did not include full requirements under a number of sections, for which revised estimates would be discussed separately. The Committee had been informed that these revised estimates would increase the overall real growth rate as calculated by the Secretariat from 0.4 per cent to nearly 0.6 per cent.

The Chairman went on to say that a major negative revision of the 1986-1987 estimates would take place with the conversion of UNIDO into a specialized agency (see above). The largest increase could occur as a result of construction projects for two regional commissions at an estimated cost of $58.9 million in 1986-1987. While the strength of the United States dollar had resulted in recent years in negative budget revisions, it was probable that if the September 1985 currency situation continued to the end of the current Assembly session, additional requirements of about $45 million to $50 million would arise.

Programme budget implications during the fortieth session of the General Assembly, and implications of recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission and the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board would also affect the estimates, the ACABQ Chairman said. Furthermore, the financial implications of legislative decisions were so unpredictable that it was impossible to estimate exactly the additional amount the Secretariat might request.

He added that the persistent impression gained from a regular exchange of views with the heads of the agencies in the common system was that of increasing difficulty in obtaining sufficient funds for implementing work programmes, whether under assessed or extrabudgetary contributions. Assessed contributions were barely keeping up with inflation, with no growth for most programmes.

The Chairman of CPC said that in accordance with its mandate his Committee had concentrated on the programme aspects of the proposed budget. However, it had been unable to avoid considering the financial aspects as well, since the two were linked.

Among the most important items on CPC's 1985 agenda were problems relating to cross-organizational programme analysis (COPA). For that reason, particular attention had been paid to future areas for COPA, marine affairs, the general approach to COPA and analysis of the activities of the United Nations system in economic and technical co-operation among developing countries. There was general agreement that such analyses were useful tools which could help the Committee make all United Nations activities more effective.

As far as the choice of subjects for future analysis was concerned, CPC had considered four: environment, science and technology for development, women and development, and transport.

On 26 July 1985, the Economic and Social Council adopted resolution 1985/76, by sections III and IV of which it endorsed the conclusions and recommendations of CPC at its 1985 session, noted improvements in the format of the proposed programme budget for 1986-1987 and reiterated that the medium-term plan constituted the principal policy directive of the United Nations and should continue to serve as the framework for the biennial budget (see p. 10/40). By resolution 40/240 the General Assembly also approved the recommendations of CPC. (See Chapter II of this section.)

On 17 December, the Fifth Committee approved the programme expenditures, taking recorded votes on 30 sections and sub-sections and approving five sections without vote.

A total of 11,174 established posts were approved in conjunction with the final appropriations for expenditure and income sections of the budget. Approved temporary posts numbered 249.

The budget adopted by the Assembly was set out in three resolutions, detailing appropriations (resolution 40/253 A), income estimates (40/253 B) and the financing of 1986 appropriations (40/253 C) (see below). Other resolutions relating to the budget biennium concerned unforeseen costs (40/254) and financing of the Working Capital Fund (40/255).

In addition, by a 12-part resolution (40/252) on questions relating to the proposed programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium, the General Assembly took action on the following items: the Yearbook of the United Nations (see p. 386), a telephone system at United Nations Headquarters (p. 1266), the catering operation at Headquarters (p. 1262), the United Nations Office at Nairobi, Kenya (p. 1262), accommodations at Bangkok (p. 652) and the headquarters of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) at Addis Ababa (p. 642), the venue of the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights in 1988 (p. 879), the inclusion of Portuguese among the official working languages of ECA (p. 640), eliminating the backlog in the publication of the United Nations Treaty Series (p. 1190), the 1986 budget estimates for the United Nations Computing Centre (p. 1264), staffing resources of the News Service of the Department of Political and Security Council Affairs (p. 387) and supporting staff appeals procedures (p. 1251).

In another action, the Assembly, on 18 December 1985, by decision 40/470 suspended its fortieth (1985) session, deciding to resume it at a date to be announced for the purpose of considering several of its agenda items, including the proposed programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium.

Appropriations

The $1,663,341,500 in appropriations approved by the General Assembly under the expenditure sections of the 1986-1987 budget were divided among major areas as follows: common support services, 36.7 per cent; economic, social and humanitarian affairs, 27.8 per cent; staff assessment, 16.5 per cent; political and Security Council affairs and peace-keeping, 5.6 per cent; public information, 4.6 per cent; overall policy-making, direction and co-ordination, 2.8 per cent; buildings and maintenance, 1.8 per cent; international justice and law, 1.6 per cent; trusteeship and decolonization, 1.5 per cent; United Nations bond issue and special grants, 1.1 per cent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The expenditures sections of the 1986-1987 budget, comprising the appropriations for the biennium, were adopted by recorded vote by the Assembly on 18 December, as resolution 40/253 A, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee.

3. The total net provision made under the various sections of the budget for contractual printing shall be administered as a unit under the direction of the United Nations Publications Board;

4. The appropriations for the regular programme of technical co-operation under part IV, section 24, shall be administered in accordance with the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, except that the definition of obligations and the period of validity of obligations shall be subject to the following procedures:

(a) Obligations for personal services established in the current biennium shall be valid for the succeeding biennium, provided that appointments of the experts concerned are effected by the end of the current biennium, and that the total period to be covered by obligations established for these purposes against the resources of the current biennium shall not exceed twenty-four work-months;

(b) Obligations established in the current biennium for fellowships shall remain valid until liquidated, provided that the fellow has been nominated by the requesting Government and accepted by the Organization, and that a formal letter of award has been issued to the requesting Government;

(c) Obligations in respect of contracts or purchase orders for supplies or equipment recorded in the current biennium shall remain valid until payment is effected to the contractor or vendor, unless they are cancelled;

5. In addition to the appropriations voted under paragraph 1 above, an amount of $19,000 is appropriated for each year of the biennium 1986-1987 from accumulated income of the Library Endowment Fund for the purchase of books, periodicals, maps and library equipment and for such other expenses of the Library at the Palais des Nations as are in accordance with the objects and provisions of the endowment;

6. In addition to the appropriations voted under paragraphs 1 and 5 above, an amount of $24 million is specially appropriated for the year 1986 to finance a loan to the United Nations Industrial Development Organization. This amount shall be placed in a special account in order to meet the expenses of the initial operations of the new agency for the calendar year 1986, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 34/96, paragraph 8, of 13 December 1979. The special account will be credited with repayments made by the United Nations Industrial Development Organization.

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 127-10-11 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1069) by recorded vote (83-11-10), 17 December (meeting 70); agenda item 116.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 11, 14-23, 25-28, 30-36, 38-43, 47-52, 56-70; plenary 122.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Israel, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Romania, Spain, United Kingdom.

Explaining its negative vote in the Fifth Committee, the USSR said the total appropriations were excessive; the contributions of Member States were still being spent in a wasteful and ineffective manner and on activities which were not the proper work of the United Nations and frequently contravened the provisions of the Charter. It would not pay for costs related to the United Nations bond issue or for posts or activities which contravened Charter provisions. The Charter did not authorize financing of technical assistance from the regular budget, which should be on a purely voluntary basis. Mongolia said it had abstained on the sections pertaining to technical assistance and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR), considering that financing for such activities should come from voluntary contributions.

The United States said that while the growth in programmes financed from the regular budget was relatively modest, it was still unacceptable at a time when many national budgets were frozen or were declining in nominal or real terms. No real attempt had been made to absorb the effect of exchange-rate fluctuations and inflation and the budget continued to finance programmes which the United States legislature had prohibited. It also objected to the continued add-ons to the budget approved at the current session. Although the budget had much to recommend it, the total resources requested were excessive and the United States had therefore voted against it.

Israel said it had voted against the resolution. It would be absurd, it said, to expect it to support the funding of vicious, politically biased anti-Israel activities with resources that ought to be used to promote the economic and social well-being of developing countries.

The United Kingdom welcomed signs of budgetary restraint, but pointed out that figures submitted by the Secretary-General did not represent the final bill, which included non-recurrent items, in other words, non-optional extras, a trend which should be considered. In that light, the United Kingdom had abstained in the vote.

France also abstained; the method of calculating the rate of real growth was based on an inaccurate distinction between recurrent and non-recurrent expenditure and did not take exchange-rate factors duly into account. More refined instruments were needed to exercise more intelligent control over expenditures, programmes should be scrutinized more closely, priorities must be better defined, budgetary procedures rationalized to ensure better co-ordination and avoid programme duplication, better use must be made of instruments for programme evaluation, and budgetary terminology and format should be improved.

Japan, which abstained, was concerned that the Secretary-General's figures did not reflect real growth because of the way non-recurrent costs had been treated; a more rigorous approach to such costs would be necessary. Japan was disappointed that the new form of statements of programme budget implications had not been used to rationalize priorities and programmatic content. It had reservations with respect to many instances of the transfer of extrabudgetary activities to the regular budget. It was also concerned over the continuing trend towards "grade creep" and excessive upgradings of posts. It joined Italy in expressing concern over the many instances in which ACABQ's recommendations had been set aside.

Italy and the Federal Republic of Germany, also abstaining, criticized continual requests for additional budget appropriations for administrative costs, rising conference servicing costs and activities for which, in the view of the Federal Republic of Germany, there was no proper mandate and which had far-reaching implications. Spain felt that greater efforts should have been made to achieve budget austerity.

Australia said it had voted in favour of the budget in recognition of the Secretary-General's efforts to contain budget growth. Among its concerns were unacceptably high staff-related costs, reclassification of posts, non-essential travel to unnecessary meetings and the fact that the proportion of administrative costs continued to rise at the expense of substantive programmes.

Canada, which also voted in favour, called for a redefinition of the concept of non-recurrent costs in more conventional terms, greater restraint regarding add-ons, and elimination of programmes which had become obsolete or were of marginal usefulness, with redeployment of resources from them to programmes of higher priority.

Iceland, speaking on behalf of the five Nordic countries, expressed concern that the budget simply would not be implemented because of the practice of withholding parts of assessed contributions and because of the poor pattern of payments of those assessments.

Financial implications

The Secretary-General's initial budget proposals called for gross expenditures of $1,742,784,500. The total approved by the Fifth Committee was $1,608,954,000. (Increases and decreases in amounts of over $1 million are described in the section immediately above.)

The Fifth Committee, on 17 December, voted separately, in second reading, on each budget section, as shown in the table below.

NOTES:

1984-1985: Appropriations: Approved by the General Assembly on 18 December 1984 (resolution 39/237 A). Income estimates: Approved by the General Assembly on 18 December 1984 (resolution 39/237 B). Established posts: Number of established (non-temporary) staff posts authorized under the 1984-1985 regular budget.

1986-1987: Initial estimates: Contained in the Secretary-General's proposed programme budget (A/40/6 (vol. I)). Appropriations: Approved by the General Assembly on 18 December 1985 (resolution 40/253 A). Approved income estimates: Approved by the General Assembly on 18 December 1985 (resolution 40/253 B). Established posts: Number of established (non-temporary) staff posts authorized under the 1986-1987 regular budget. Real growth: Percentage increase (or decrease) in appropriations from 1984-1985 to 1986-1987, excluding inflation and non-recurrent items, as calculated by the United Nations Secretariat. Vote: Totals of recorded section-by-section votes (in favour-against-abstaining) in the Fifth Committee during the second reading of the budget and the Committee vote on the appropriations as a whole, 17 December 1985; the vote in the Assembly on the appropriation resolution was 127-10-11. Dashes in the final column indicate subsections not put separately to the vote; "no vote" refers to sections approved without vote.

SOURCE for subsection appropriations (1986-1987), established posts (1984-1985 and 1986-1987) and real growth: A/40/6/Add.1.

The Fifth Committee also approved appropriations covering the financial implications of decisions taken at the current Assembly session. These decisions concerned, among other things: the situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security; the question of Namibia; the international campaign against traffic in drugs; the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development; preparation of a study on the climatic and physical effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter; the situation in Kampuchea; South Africa's apartheid policies; the United Nations Conference for the Promotion of International Co-operation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy; preparation work for bringing the Common Fund for Commodities into operation; the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women; the Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories; the question of Palestine; and a grant to UNITAR.

Financing appropriations for 1986

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly on 18 December 1985 adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/253 C, specifying the amounts to be obtained from each of the major income sources in order to finance appropriations during the first year of the 1986-1987 biennium (see "Appropriations" above). Member States were to be assessed $700,434,350 for 1986, net of staff assessment. Income for the year, other than staff assessment and the income from the repayment of the loan to UNIDO, was set at $18,990,050.

Financing of appropriations for the year 1986

Résolues that for the year 1986:

1. Budget appropriations totalling $US 860,098,850, consisting of $US 831,670,750, being one half of the appropriations approved for the biennium 1986-1987 under paragraph 1 of resolution A above, and $24 million for 1986 only under paragraph 6 of resolution A above, together with revised income other than staff assessment for 1984-1985 decreased by $US 8,025,300, revised appropriations for 1984-1985 decreased by $US 2,597,200, and the reimbursement of $US 1 million being the commitment entered upon in 1984 under the terms of resolution 38/226 A, paragraph 6, of 20 December 1983, shall be financed in accordance with regulations 5.1 and 5.2 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations as follows:

(a) $18,990,050 being half of the estimated income, other than staff assessment and the income from the repayment of the loan to the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, approved for the biennium 1986-1987 under resolution B above;

(b) $841,108,800 being the assessment on Member States in accordance with General Assembly resolution 40/248 of 18 December 1985 on the scale of assessments for the years 1986, 1987 and 1988;

2. There shall be set off against the assessment on Member States, in accordance with the provisions of General Assembly resolution 973(X) of 15 December 1955, their respective share in the Tax Equalization Fund in the total amount of $US 140,674,450 consisting of:

(a) $139,742,750 being half of the estimated income from staff assessment approved for the biennium 1986-1987 under resolution B above;

(b) $931,700 being the increase in the revised income from staff assessment for the biennium 1984-1985.

Unforeseen expenditures

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

As recommended by the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly on 18 December 1985, adopted resolution 40/254 by recorded vote. By this action, it authorized the Secretary-General to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses, under specified limitations. The provisions were substantially the same as in the corresponding resolution for 1984-1985, adopted in 1983,<sup>(1)</sup> except for a small increase in allowable extra costs for ICJ.

Unforeseen and extraordinary expenses for the biennium 1986-1987

The General Assembly

1. Authorizes the Secretary-General, with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and subject to the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and the provisions of paragraph 3 below, to enter into commitments in the biennium 1986-1987 to meet unforeseen and extraordinary expenses arising either during or subsequent to that biennium, provided that the concurrence of the Advisory Committee shall not be necessary for:

(a) Such commitments, not exceeding a total of $US 2 million in any one year of the biennium 1986-1987, as the Secretary-General certifies relate to the maintenance of peace and security;

(b) Such commitments as the President of the International Court of Justice certifies relate to expenses occasioned by:

(i) The designation of ad hoc judges (Statute of the Court, Article 31), not exceeding a total of $250,000;

(ii) The appointment of assessors (Statute, Article 30), or the calling of witnesses and the appointment of experts (Statute, Article 50), not exceeding a total of $75,000;

(iii) The holding of sessions of the Court away from The Hague (Statute, Article 22), not exceeding a total of $100,000;

(c) Such commitments, in an amount not exceeding $300,000, in the biennium 1986-1987, as the Secretary-General certifies are required for interorganizational security measures pursuant to General Assembly resolution 36/235, section IV, of 18 December 1981;

2. Resolves that the Secretary-General shall report to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and to the General Assembly at its forty-first and forty-second sessions all commitments made under the provisions of the present resolution, together with the circumstances relating thereto, and shall submit supplementary estimates to the Assembly in respect of such commitments;

3. Decides that if, as a result of a decision of the Security Council, commitments relating to the maintenance of peace and security should arise in an estimated total exceeding $10 million either before the forty-first session or between the forty-first and forty-second sessions of the General Assembly, a special session of the Assembly shall be convened by the Secretary-General to consider the matter.

Financing the Working Capital Fund

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Establishment of the Working Capital Fund at a level of $100 million during 1986-1987 was authorized by the General Assembly on 18 December 1985 by resolution 40/255, adopted, by recorded vote, as recommended by the Fifth Committee. The provisions of this resolution corresponded to those approved in 1983 for the previous biennium.<sup>(12)</sup> As in the past, the Fund was to be used to finance appropriations pending the receipt of Members' contributions, and to pay unforeseen costs.

Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1986-1987

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The Working Capital Fund shall be established for the biennium 1986-1987 in the amount of $US 100 million;

2. Member States shall make advances to the Working Capital Fund in accordance with the scale adopted by the General Assembly for contributions of Member States to the budget for the year 1986;

3. There shall be set off against this allocation of advances:

(a) Credits to Member States resulting from transfers made in 1959 and 1960 from surplus account to the Working Capital Fund in an adjusted amount of $1,025,092;

(b) Cash advances paid by Member States to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1984-1985 under General Assembly resolution 38/238 of 20 December 1983;

4. Should the credits and advances paid by any Member State to the Working Capital Fund for the biennium 1984-1985 exceed the amount of that Member State's advance under the provisions of paragraph 2 above, the excess shall be set off against the amount of the contributions payable by the Member State in respect of the biennium 1986-1987;

5. The Secretary-General is authorized to advance from the Working Capital Fund:

(a) Such sums as may be necessary to finance budgetary appropriations pending the receipt of contributions; sums so advanced shall be reimbursed as soon as receipts from contributions are available for the purpose;

(b) Such sums as may be necessary to finance commitments which may be duly authorized under the provisions of the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, in particular resolution 40/254 of 18 December 1985 relating to unforeseen and extraordinary expenses; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates for reimbursing the Working Capital Fund;

(c) Such sums as, together with net sums outstanding for the same purpose, do not exceed $200,000, to continue the revolving fund to finance miscellaneous self-liquidating purchases and activities; advances in excess of the total of $200,000 may be made with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(d) With the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, such sums as may be required to finance payments of advance insurance premiums where the period of insurance extends beyond the end of the biennium in which payment is made; the Secretary-General shall make provision in the budget estimates of each biennium, during the life of the related policies, to cover the charges applicable to each biennium;

(e) Such sums as may be necessary to enable the Tax Equalization Fund to meet current commitments pending the accumulation of credits; such advances shall be repaid as soon as credits are available in the Tax Equalization Fund;

6. Should the provision in paragraph 1 above prove inadequate to meet the purposes normally related to the Working Capital Fund, the Secretary-General is authorized to utilize, in the biennium 1986-1987, cash from special funds and accounts in his custody, under the conditions approved in General Assembly resolution 1341(XIII) of 13 December 1958, or the proceeds of loans authorized by the Assembly.

Assessment of contributions

Scale of assessments

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In accordance with a 1984 decision,<sup>(1)</sup> by which the General Assembly had decided to postpone action on the scale of assessments of Members' contributions to the United Nations budget until 1985, the Assembly took up the question at its resumed thirty-ninth session (9-12 April).

Following informal consultations in early 1985 on 1984 recommendations by the Committee on Contributions<sup>(2)</sup> on ways to make Members' assessments more closely reflect their capacity to pay, the Fifth Committee again considered the item in April. On 12 April, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 39/247 B without vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 31/95 A and B of 14 December 1976, 34/6 B of 25 October 1979, 36/231 A of 18 December 1981, 37/125 B of 17 December 1982 and 38/33 of 25 November 1983,

Taking into account the views expressed in the Fifth Committee during the debate on the report of the Committee on Contributions and having considered the report and the recommendations contained therein,

Reconfirming that the real capacity to pay of Member States is the fundamental criterion for determining the scale of assessments,

Deeply concerned, in general, by the persistent serious economic and financial situation in the world and, in particular, by the external indebtedness and other serious economic problems which continue to affect adversely the capacity to pay of developing countries,

Conscious of the problem of Member States whose national income is mostly generated by the export of one or a few products,

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the Committee on Contributions,

1. Decides that, in the preparation of the next scale of assessments:

(a) The ten-year statistical base period should be maintained;

(b) The upper limit of the low per capita income allowance formula shall be raised from $2,100 to $2,200;

(c) In the redistribution of the burden of relief, the Committee on Contributions should apply a limit to the relief burden borne by Member States to take into account their developmental status and developmental requirements;

(d) The individual rates of assessments of the least developed countries should not exceed the present level;

(e) The Committee on Contributions should develop a methodology to take into account the problem of the serious economic and financial situation in the world, in pursuance of the deliberations mentioned in paragraph 54 of its report;

(f) Scheme III, as defined in paragraph 49 of the report of the Committee on Contributions, should be used to limit the variations of individual rates of assessment between successive scales after pertinent modifications in the light of the views expressed by Member States in the Fifth Committee, particularly in respect of rates below the level of 1 per cent;

2. Takes note of the intention of the Committee on Contributions to continue to study and examine subjects indicated in its report, including the study on comparative methods of assessment mentioned in paragraph 66;

3. Requests the Committee on Contributions to examine the conceptual feasibility of supplementing the present methodology so that each Member State may be assigned a relevant base relief gradient on the basis of its national income and, if possible, to report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

4. Also requests the Committee on Contributions to intensify its co-operation with other international organizations engaged in the development and collection of statistics and appeals to Member States to continue to co-operate with the United Nations Statistical Office by submitting national statistics on time;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Committee on Contributions with the facilities it requires to carry out its work, including supplementary assistance if necessary.

General Assembly resolution 39/247 B

12 April 1985 Meeting 107 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/39/844/Add.1) without vote, 11 April (meeting 58); draft by Chairman following informal consultations (A/C.5/39/L.34), orally revised; agenda item 115.

Meeting numbers. GA 39th session: 5th Committee 57, 58; plenary 107.

A number of Members explained that, while they had participated in the consensus, they had objections to certain provisions of the decision. The United States objected to the increase, from $2,100 to $2,200 in the per capita limit for the LDCs discount and the continuation of the 10-year base period. Paragraph 1 implied that developing countries, no matter how prosperous, should not share fully in the costs of providing discounts to LDCs; purported to benefit LDCs without changing any assessments; invited the Committee to devise a scale even more complicated than the current one; and limited the responsiveness of the assessment mechanism to changes in world economic conditions. Paragraph 3 complicated the scale by adding a subsidy based on the total national income. The United States opposed the text's approval and was unable to participate in any decision to do so.

Spain was dissatisfied that the resolution provided for numerous exceptions to the principle of real capacity to pay as the fundamental criterion for determining the scale. Canada felt that the Assembly seemed embarked on a course that increasingly departed from an objective determination of the capacity to pay and said that some subparagraphs of paragraph 1 represented distortions of that principle.

Paragraphs 1 and 3 did not meet the Nordic countries' expectations, said Finland, which spoke on their behalf. Finland was also concerned that the recent discussion of the scale reflected a weakening of support for the United Nations and might jeopardize its credibility.

Egypt, speaking for the members of the Group of 77, said the Group would have preferred, among other things, that the resolution spell out more clearly the economic difficulties facing the world today, especially the developing countries. Further, they felt the current methodology was inadequate to measure the real capacity to pay.

Morocco hoped the Committee on Contributions would find some additional formula which took account of the developing countries' difficulties. Mexico added that the current formula had led to an increase in the shares of the developing countries as a group at a time when their capacity to pay had declined; it was clear that the use of national income and per capita gross national product statistics alone did not adequately reflect Member States' real capacity to pay. Poland said the problem of its over-assessment must be resolved.

Kuwait said the increase in the assessment rates of those countries which shared in the burden of relief was unduly high, and a specific limit must be imposed. The Committee on Contributions must work to avoid excessive variations of individual rates between scales and refine methodology to take account of countries' economic situations.

Singapore endorsed an understanding whereby a distinction must be made between developed and developing countries in apportioning the burden of relief, to take account of the latter countries' development responsibilities. That was why a limit on the burden was being requested for the developing countries, he said.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya felt it was not logical that certain developing countries should be required to bear increases of more than 25 per cent over their apportionment under the previous scale. In Bangladesh's view, the text sought to benefit only LDCs whose economies would show an increase in national income, rather than those with stagnant or declining economies.

Saudia Arabia felt that current methodology unfairly overstated the real capacity to pay of some States while understating that of others. It interpreted paragraph 3 to mean that the study called for must be initiated at the June session of the Committee and, if possible, completed in time for the Assembly session which opened in September.

Report of the Committee on Contributions. The Committee on Contributions held its forty-fifth session in New York from 3 June to 3 July 1985. In its report<sup>(3)</sup> to the Assembly, it set forth a proposed new scale of assessments for the financial years 1986, 1987 and 1988. The Committee also described the methodology it had used in determining the scale, following guidelines approved by the Assembly in April 1985 (see above).

The Committee reported that it had considered proposals to incorporate in the current assessment scale methodology indicators regarding debt, international reserves and terms of trade. Among its conclusions were the following: the data on debt suffered from incomparability and the deficiencies would have to be resolved before a systematic incorporation of that information in the assessment scale would be feasible; a similar problem, as well as one of relevance of data, existed with reference to data on international reserves; nevertheless, the overall problem of indebtedness, particularly for developing countries, must be taken into account in developing a new scale of assessments.

The Committee decided on a pragmatic formula for the 1986-1988 scale, without prejudice to the future position it might adopt on the basis of more comprehensive and systematic information. The formula combined two approaches: to take debt as a ratio of export earnings and to rank countries accordingly; and to rank countries using the ratio of debt to national income. The combined approach used a weighting of 80 for debt/export earnings and 20 for debt/national income. The Committee also dealt with the questions of which countries should benefit, where to establish the cut-off point and the nature of the relief deduction to be made. The final decision was to make deductions of 10, 7.5, 5 and 2.5 per cent of debt from national income according to whether the countries' weighted average ratio exceeded a specified percentage. The Committee further decided that the relief of debt should be deducted from national rather than assessable income, and it took action, as requested by the Assembly, to limit excessive variations of individual rates of assessment between successive scales.

The Committee examined statistical information on national income and related statistics; it reviewed, on a country-by-country basis, data on national income estimates in national currencies, rates of exchange used for conversion and the derivation of national income from other aggregates such as gross domestic product or net material product. It decided to correct data for Argentina, Egypt, Iran, Iraq and Yugoslavia. It also decided to review at its next session what type of exchange rate should be used for countries with a multiple exchange-rate system.

In the proposed new scale of assessments there were 78 Member States assessed at 0.01 per cent, 11 States at 0.02 per cent and five at 0.03 per cent. A total of 94 Member States, or 59 per cent of the membership, were thus assessed at or below 0.03 per cent. The assessment rates of the Group of 77 as a whole increased from 9.34 per cent to 9.67 per cent as a result of the increase in rates of assessment of the member States of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries from the current 3.3 per cent to a proposed 3.63 per cent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, by resolution 40/248 of 18 December adopted the scale of assessments proposed by the Committee on Contributions for the financial years 1986, 1987 and 1988. On the same date, the Assembly also decided, without vote, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, to adopt decision 40/464 by which it agreed to continue in 1986 the negotiations on the methodology for elaborating future scales of assessments. The decision was based on an oral proposal by the Fifth Committee Chairman.

Scale of assessments for the apportionment of the expenses of the United Nations

The General Assembly

Resolves that:

1. The scale of assessments for the contributions of Member States to the United Nations budget for the financial years 1986, 1987 and 1988 shall be as follows:

2. In accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, the scale of assessments given in paragraph 1 above shall be reviewed by the Committee on Contributions in 1988, when a report shall be submitted to the Assembly for consideration at its forty-third session;

3. Notwithstanding the terms of regulation 5.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, the Secretary-General shall be empowered to accept, at his discretion and after consultation with the Chairman of the Committee on Contributions, a portion of the contributions of Member States for the calendar years 1986, 1987 and 1988 in currencies other than United States dollars;

4. In accordance with rule 160 of the rules of procedure of the General Assembly, States which are not Members of the United Nations but which participate in certain of its activities shall be called upon to contribute towards the 1986, 1987 and 1988 expenses of such activities on the basis of the following rates:

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 109-15-27 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1066) by recorded vote (80-13-25), 17 December (meeting 69); draft by Committee on Contributions (A/40/11); agenda item 122. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 4-7, 9-14, 16, 69; plenary 1, 4, 12, 17, 28, 122.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Romania, Rwanda, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Thailand, Togo, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Bahrain, Colombia, Ecuador, Iran, Kuwait, Philippines, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Spain, Syrian Arab Republic, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, United States, Venezuela.

Abstaining: Belgium, Brunei Darussalam, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Netherlands, Norway, Oman, Paraguay, Portugal, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Solomon Islands, Sweden, Trinidad and Tobago, United Kingdom.

Among those Member States voting against the new scale of assessments were many who considered the increases to be unjust, such as Ecuador, Kuwait, Singapore, the Syrian Arab Republic, Turkey and the United Arab Emirates. Colombia believed the scale was inconsistent in its treatment of Member States. Doubts on the data used (Indonesia), on the guidelines (Sweden), or on the methodology (Japan, Singapore, Trinidad and Tobago, United States and Venezuela) were expressed by several States which abstained on or voted against the text.

Japan had reservations on the use of what it said was an over-complicated methodology that relied on non-comparable data, different accounting methods and different exchange-rate systems, and did not adequately reflect the different status of Members. Italy doubted whether the incorporation into the methodology of indicators related to indebtedness was advisable.

Singapore believed that the methodology did not correct distortions in statistics provided by the centrally planned economies which, despite high growth rates, had been given substantial reductions in their contributions, and complained that no distinction was made between developed and developing countries in the distribution of the burden of relief. Algeria also had serious reservations about the relief burden distribution formulas.

Italy, Malaysia, the Philippines and Venezuela considered that the scale did not reflect capacity to pay.

Belgium, on behalf of the 10 European Community members, said the scale was based on a methodology for assessing real capacity to pay that in itself lacked objectivity and technical exactitude.

Bahrain, Brunei Darussalam, Iran, Kuwait, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Oman objected to their assessments, pointing out that their economies depended on a single non-renewable resource. Qatar said it found its increase unacceptable.

Iran said the scale did not reflect the true performances of national economies or make sufficient allowance for adverse economic trends, and no generally applicable procedure had been used to assess the impact of inflation.

Iceland and India looked forward to a comparative study on alternative methodologies at the next session.

Norway regretted the conflicting instructions, inspired more by national self-interest than a sense of responsibility towards the United Nations, that had crept into resolutions on the scale of assessments in recent years.

Among the speakers supporting the resolution were Algeria, Austria, Bangladesh, Brazil, Guatemala, Iraq, Kenya, Mexico, Morocco and Thailand. While expressing some reservations, they generally supported the efforts of the Committee on Contributions and expressed the hope that the Committee would pursue its efforts to improve the methodology and devise a fair and universally acceptable scale of assessments.

Budget contributions in 1985

Of the $858.1 million in contributions for the United Nations regular budget payable at 1 January 1985, $615.7 million had been collected from Member States by 31 December, leaving $242.4 million outstanding (see table, "Status of contributions to the UN regular budget"). Of the amount payable, assessments for 1985, due early in the year, totalled $691.9 million; the remaining $166.2 million related to previous years.

In addition, nine non-member States were assessed a total of $1.4 million for their share of the United Nations activities in which they participated (see table "Assessment of non-member States for 1985 expenses of UN activities in which they participated").

Budget assessments of Members and non-members were in accordance with scales for 1983-1985 approved by the General Assembly in 1982.(4)

The continuing shortfall in collections was again dealt with in 1985 by the Secretary-General in a report<sup>(5)</sup> to the Assembly on the Organization's financial situation (see below).

At the resumption of the Assembly's 1984 session, in April 1985, the Secretary-General, in a letter of 9 April,<sup>(6)</sup> informed the Assembly President that 13 Members—the Central African Republic, Chad, the Comoros, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, the Gambia, Guinea-Bissau, Mauritania, Paraguay, Romania, Saint Lucia, South Africa and Zaire—were more than two years in arrears in the payment of their budget contributions. In addenda of 11 April and 16 September, the Secretary-General reported that Chad, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Paraguay, Romania, Saint Lucia and Zaire had made payments bringing their arrears below the two-year limit to maintain voting privileges, as specified in Article 19 of the United Nations Charter.

When the Assembly opened its regular 1985 session, on 17 September, the Secretary-General reported<sup>(7)</sup> that the Central African Republic, the Comoros, the Gambia, Guinea-Bissau, Mauritania and South Africa were more than two years in arrears. In addenda of 20, 23 and 26 September and 8 October, he reported that all the above Members but South Africa had paid enough to reduce arrears below the two-year limit. South Africa would have had to pay $21,364,300 to remove itself from that category.

This information was conveyed by the President to the Assembly, which took note of it at both its resumed and regular sessions in 1985, without adopting a formal decision.

Financial situation

Financial emergency

On 3 October 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly on the financial situation of the Organization, as requested by the Assembly in 1984.<sup>(2)</sup>

The Secretary-General advised the Assembly that the short-term deficit projected to 31 December 1985 was estimated at $390.7 million, an increase of $28.1 million, or almost 8 per cent, compared with the actual deficit at 31 December 1984. Most of this increase was due to non-payment of assessments on peace-keeping operations; it corresponded to approximately 38 per cent of the total assessed contributions for 1985 for both regular budget activities and peace-keeping activities. Current peace-keeping activities remained in operation only because the troop-contributing Member States continued to bear the full burden of the deficit.

As for the regular budget, the shortfall in payments—amounting to $116.3 million—resulted in an immediate cash shortage in respect of the day-to-day cash needs of the Organization, essentially payroll and payments to vendors. To meet those obligations, the Organization had used the $100 million Working Capital Fund, as well as funds available in the Special Account and, on occasion, had resorted to borrowing temporarily from peace-keeping funds. Funds realized from the suspension of financial regulations requiring unspent appropriations to be returned to Members had also been used for this purpose (see section below).

As at 30 September 1985, the Secretary-General reported, 50 Members had fully paid and 33 Members had partially paid their 1985 assessed contributions. Twenty-two Members had not yet paid for 1985, but were not in arrears for prior years; the remaining 54 Members, about one third of the membership, were in arrears not only for 1985 but for previous years as well.

Eighteen Member States had withheld payment towards certain specific items in the regular budget; projected to 31 December 1985, these withholdings amounted to $99.7 million, virtually equalling the current level of the Working Capital Fund. The Secretary-General also listed withholdings from peace-keeping activities. As for the General Fund cash flow, he said the closing balance in June 1985 was about 40 per cent lower than the comparable amount at the end of June 1984.

The Secretary-General reviewed and analysed eight options to alleviate the financial difficulties, namely: prompt payment of assessed contributions; an increase in the Working Capital Fund; borrowing in the open market; borrowing from Member States; suspension of financial regulations requiring the return of unspent appropriations to Members; application of credits to Members not in arrears; issuance of long-term bonds; and assessment of contributions on a biennial basis. He suggested an increase in the Working Capital Fund from the current level of $100 million to $150 million. In conclusion, he stated that the primary means of resolving the Organization's financial difficulties, and the one which would result in the lowest cost to Member States, would be the prompt payment by every Member, early in the year, of its assessed contributions. Experience in this regard, he added, had been discouraging.

The Secretary-General's report was considered by ACABQ,<sup>(3)</sup> which concurred that the root cause of the financial problem was late payments and withholdings. It was not in favour of an increase in the Working Capital Fund, but: recommended that the Secretary-General report on the actual situation in 1986, after the exclusion from the budget of resources relating to UNIDO.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly on 18 December 1985 adopted resolution 40/241 A, without vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolutions 3049 A (XXVII) of 19 December 1972, 3538 (XXX) of 17 December 1975, 32/104 of 14 December 1977, 35/113 of 10 December 1980, 36/116 B of 10 December 1981, 37/13 of 16 November 1982, 38/228 B of 20 December 1983 and 39/239 B of 18 December 1984,

Mindful of the report of the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations and of the views expressed by Member States thereon at the thirty-second session of the General Assembly,

Reiterating earlier appeals to Member States, without prejudice to their position of principle, to make voluntary contributions to the Special Account referred to in annex V to the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations,

Noting with concern that the short-term deficit of the Organization is expected to exceed $390 million as at 31 December 1985,

Concerned at the increasingly precarious financial situation of peace-keeping operations and, in particular, its adverse impact on developing-country troop contributors,

Noting also with concern that delays and partial payment of assessed contributions continue to create serious cash-flow problems for the Organization,

Considering the possibility that for many Member States administrative considerations, including a calendar difference between the national fiscal year and that of the Organization, may be responsible for the delay in the payment of assessed contributions,

Taking note of the views expressed in the Fifth Committee,

1. Reaffirms its commitment to seek a comprehensive and generally acceptable solution to the financial problems of the United Nations, based on the principle of collective financial responsibility of Member States and in strict compliance with the Charter of the United Nations;

2. Urges all Member States to meet their financial obligations;

3. Renews its appeal to all Member States to make their best efforts to overcome constraints to the prompt payment early each year of full assessed contributions and of advances to the Working Capital Fund;

4. Expresses its appreciation to all Member States which pay their assessed contributions in full within thirty days of the receipt of the Secretary-General's communication, in accordance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

5. Requests the Secretary-General, in addition to his official communications to the permanent representatives of Member States, to approach, as and when appropriate, the Governments of Member States for the purpose of encouraging expeditious payment in full of assessed contributions, in compliance with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

6. Invites Member States also to provide, in response to the Secretary-General's official communication and consistent with regulation 5.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations, information regarding their expected pattern of payments, in order to facilitate the financial planning by the Secretary-General;

7. Requests the Negotiating Committee on the Financial Emergency of the United Nations to keep the financial situation of the Organization under review and to report, as and when appropriate, to the General Assembly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session detailed information relating to the extent, rate of increase and composition of the deficit of the Organization, the pattern of payments of Member States, the cash-flow situation and voluntary contributions received from Member States and other sources pursuant to Assembly resolutions 2053 A (XX) of 15 December 1965 and 3049 A (XXVII) of 19 December 1972;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Financial emergency of the United Nations".

Suspension of financial regulations in respect of budget surpluses

In his report to the General Assembly in October 1985<sup>(1)</sup> on the financial emergency of the Organization (see above), the Secretary-General described the results of suspension of the provisions of financial regulations 4.3, 4.4 and 5.2 (d) (requiring unspent appropriations to be returned to Members). By late 1984, $25.8 million had been realized for the 1980-1981 and 1982-1983 bienniums. It was estimated that the suspension of the regulations would eventually yield a further $17.6 million; however, that amount would only be realized in 1987. The funds realized, he said, were fully utilized to meet the day-to-day cash needs of the Organization. The suspension of the regulations for the 1984-1985 biennium, he concluded, would help to alleviate cash flow difficulties but would not constitute a solution to the fundamental problem.

Commenting on the report, ACABQ<sup>(2)</sup> recommended that the above-mentioned financial regulations be suspended in respect of regular budget surpluses arising at the end of the 1984-1985 biennium.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/241 B, by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the various options to alleviate the financial difficulties of the United Nations, summarized in section IV of the report of the Secretary-General, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

1. Decides to accept the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in paragraph 14 of its report that the provisions of regulations 4.3, 4.4 and 5.2 (d) of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations be suspended in respect of regular budget surpluses arising at the end of the biennium 1984-1985;

2. Recommends that the Secretary-General continue to study various options to alleviate the financial difficulties of the Organization, taking into account the views expressed by Member States at the fortieth session of the General Assembly.

Against: Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United States, Viet Nam.

Abstaining: Japan, Romania.

Later advised the Secretariat that it had intended to vote against.

The German Democratic Republic felt that the resolution should have been deleted; it believed the Committee should not take decisions that might prejudice future discussion of the subject. The USSR said it was opposed to the practice of suspending the Financial Regulations.

Australia said it had voted in favour, but with some reservations; the solutions proposed in the text were no longer adequate and some reference to the need for greater budgetary restraint should have been included.

Issue of special postage stamps

By resolution 40/242 of 18 December 1985, the General Assembly decided, in order to enhance the liquidity of the Organization and alleviate its financial difficulties, to place at the disposal of the Secretary-General one half of the revenue from the issue of a special United Nations postage stamp on the social and economic crisis in Africa and asked him to explore the possibility of other revenue-producing activities (see Chapter IV of this section)

Impact of inflation and monetary instability

In response to a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a study<sup>(5)</sup> of the additional amounts required in the regular budget resulting from inflation and monetary instability over the last four bienniums in the developed countries where United Nations organizations had their headquarters.

The Secretary-General stated that the task of obtaining an estimate had been approached by taking as a starting-point the 1984-1985 revised appropriations for activities in New York, Geneva and Vienna and recalculating them at 1978-1979 exchange rates and price levels.

The result of this exercise indicated that had there been no inflation nor changes in exchange rates since 1978-1979, the net revised appropriations for the biennium 1984-1985 in respect of the three duty stations would have been $771.9 million, rather than $1,064.6 million. The difference of $292.7 million represented an increase of $355.4 million attributable to inflation and a reduction of $62.7 million due to the difference in exchange rates. The Secretary-General added that these calculations were strictly theoretical and such conclusions as might be drawn from them could be no firmer than the assumptions on which the recosting was based.

With respect to the Assembly's 1984 request<sup>(4)</sup> for a comparison of real, net and growth increases and increases due to inflation during the last four bienniums, the Secretary-General said the methodology used in preparing the programme budget did not lend itself to such comparisons. However, he did present a comparison of increases in budget levels with real growth as measured at the revised appropriation stage of each biennium, concluding from that exercise that the actual rate of growth in dollar levels exceeded the rate of real growth by a large margin, as the combined effects of currency fluctuations, inflation and changes in non-recurrent items were greater than the effects of real growth.

On 14 December 1985,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee revised estimates for the programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium based on the latest currency exchange and inflation rates at various duty stations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted, without vote, resolution 40/249.

Impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/240 of 18 December 1984,

1. Jakes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the impact of inflation and monetary instability on the regular budget of the United Nations;

2. Decides to consider this item again at a future session.

Accounts and auditing

Accounts for 1984

The 1984 accounts and financial statements of seven United Nations development and humanitarian assistance programmes were accepted by the General Assembly at its 1985 session along with the audit opinions on those programmes by the United Nations Board of Auditors. The Assembly also concurred with the observations of ACABQ on the subject. These actions were taken with the adoption of resolution 40/238, adopted without vote on 18 December on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, which had also approved the text without vote.

The programmes for which financial reports and audited financial statements were submitted were: the United Nations Development Programme,<sup>(1)</sup> the United Nations Children's Fund,<sup>(2)</sup> the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East,<sup>(3)</sup> UNITAR,<sup>(4)</sup> the voluntary fund administered by UNHCR,<sup>(5)</sup> the United Nations Fund for Population Activities<sup>(6)</sup> and the United Nations Industrial Development Fund.<sup>(7)</sup>

The Board of Auditors made recommendations and observations on various aspects of the financial management of these programmes. ACABQ commented on the Board's recommendations in its report of 16 September<sup>(8)</sup> before they were reviewed by the Fifth Committee. Among the topics considered were procurement practices, project management, inventory control, contractual arrangements for experts and consultants and programme delivery.

Financial reports and audited financial statements, and reports of the Board of Auditors

The General Assembly,

Having considered the financial reports and audited financial statements for the period ended 31 December 1984 of the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the voluntary funds administered by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities and the United Nations Industrial Development Fund, the audit opinions of the Board of Auditors and the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Taking into account the views expressed by delegations during the debate in the Fifth Committee, particularly in support of measures for the efficient and sound financial management and control of the United Nations family of organizations,

1. Accepts the financial reports and audited financial statements and the audit opinions of the Board of Auditors;

2. Concurs with the observations and comments made by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report;

3. Requests the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to continue to pay close attention to the efficiency of the financial procedures and controls, the accounting system and related administrative and management areas in accordance with regulation 12.5 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations;

4. Requests the Board of Auditors to submit to the General Assembly in future, in a separate, concise document, a synthesis of the main observations of common interest as related to paragraph 3 above;

5. Also requests the Board of Auditors and the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions to keep under review the financial reserves held by United Nations organizations reported on to the General Assembly and to report to the Assembly accordingly;

6. Further requests the executive heads of the organizations and programmes concerned within the United Nations system to take such remedial action in areas falling within their competence as may be required by the observations and comments made by the Board of Auditors in its reports and to report thereon to the Board;

7. Renews its invitation to the governing bodies of the organizations concerned to consider each year at their regular sessions the remedial action taken by the respective executive heads in response to the observations and comments made by the Board of Auditors in its reports;

8. Further requests the Board of Auditors to include in its annual reports comments on the measures taken to comply with its previous recommendations.

General Assembly resolution 40/238

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/789) without vote, 15 October (meeting 14); draft by Chairman (A/C.5/40/L.3), orally revised: agenda item 114.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 3-9, 14; plenary 121.

Chapter II

United Nations programmes

Efforts to improve United Nations programme planning, budgeting and evaluation were continued during 1985. The Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) devoted the main part of its 1985 session to an examination of the programme elements of the proposed United Nations programme budget for 1986-1987. CPC also continued its work of analysing, evaluating and reviewing programmes of the Organization. Its recommendations were endorsed by the Economic and Social Council in resolution 1985/76 which, in turn, was endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 40/240.

The Joint Inspection Unit (JIU) presented 13 reports during 1985. The majority of these were thematic. The General Assembly, by resolution 40/259, asked United Nations organs, after considering the JIU reports, to submit to it the results of their review, and asked JIU to evaluate its own activities and to report in 1987.

The annual report on administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the United Nations system, prepared by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ), provided comparative data on the specialized agencies and the United Nations. The data covered regular budgets, net contributions of Member States, established posts, regular budget contributions to technical co-operation activities, extrabudgetary funds, working capital funds, scales of assessment and collection of contributions. By resolution 40/250 the Assembly called for maximum standardization and comparability in the budgetary and administrative practices of all organizations concerned and a greater co-ordination of staff regulations.

Topics related to this chapter. Development policy and international economic co-operation: economic co-operation among developing countries—co-ordination in the United Nations system. Operational activities for development: inter-agency co-operation—programme evaluation; technical co-operation through UNDP—UNDP programme planning; other technical co-operation—Department of Technical Co-operation for Development. Institutional arrangements: co-ordination in the United Nations system. United Nations financing.

Programme planning and budgeting

The proposed programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium was the main item before CPC at its twenty-fifth session, held from 29 April to 1 June 1985 at United Nations Headquarters<sup>(1)</sup> (see also p. 1040).

Other matters discussed included the improvement of the process of programme budgeting, the experience gained in providing statements of programme budget implications to the General Assembly in 1984, co-operation and co-ordination activities between the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, aspects of co-ordination and rationalization of the activities of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), questions relating to decentralization for improving the overall functioning of the Organization, cross-organizational programme analysis (COPA), in-depth evaluation of the drug control programme and the triennial reviews of the implementation of CPC recommendations on the programmes on transnational corporations (TNCs) and on manufactures.

The Committee also took note of a JIU report<sup>(2)</sup> on the question of reporting to the Economic and Social Council (see p. 1045). Consideration of other JIU reports (a 1984 report<sup>(3)</sup> on publications policy and practice in the United Nations system and two 1983 reports<sup>(4)</sup> on field offices of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the evaluation system of UNDP) was deferred for lack of time.

CPC decided to transmit directly to the Economic and Social Council, without discussion, the annual overview report of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC).<sup>(5)</sup> It took similar action on the ACC report<sup>(6)</sup> concerning the establishment of a register of development activities. The Committee noted that it did not discuss these reports owing to the constraints of time. CPC also called for improvement of the work of the joint CPC/ACC meetings (see p. 1042) and requested the Secretary-General to take measures to that end.

In its conclusions and recommendations, CPC agreed that its concern regarding the inadequacy of the length of its sessions should be brought to the attention of the Economic and Social Council when that body considered the calendar of conferences for 1986-1987.

(For details of CPC recommendations and conclusions on the proposed programme budget and on evaluation of programmes, see sections below; see also p. 1206.)

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July 1985, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee endorsed the conclusions and recommendations set forth in CPC's 1985 report in part I of a seven-part resolution (resolution 1985/76), adopted without vote. The Council re-emphasized the importance of the programming and co-ordination functions of CPC, the main subsidiary organ of the Council and the General Assembly for planning, programming and co-ordination. It requested the Secretary-General to secure the follow-up and implementation by United Nations organizations of CPC's conclusions and recommendations, once approved by the Council and/or the Assembly. The Council also welcomed CPC's decision to discuss at its 1986 session the improvement of its work and the duration of its sessions.

Parts II through VII of the resolution were related to other aspects of CPC's work in 1985. Part II dealt with improving the instruments for programming and co-ordination, namely COPAS, in-depth evaluations and triennial reviews of implementation. Part III was concerned with the proposed programme budget for 1986-1987 (see below).

Under part IV, the Council endorsed CPC's conclusions and recommendations on COPAs (see p. 1044) and suggested that CPC should consider the Secretary-General's report on recurrent publications of the United Nations, with a view to identifying duplication and undue overlap (see p. 1262).

The Council, by part V of the resolution, decided to choose at its 1986 organizational session a topic for the next cross-organizational review of the medium-term plans of the organizations of the United Nations system, to be considered at its mid-1987 session.

Part VI dealt with the 1984 JIU report<sup>(2)</sup> on reporting to the Economic and Social Council (see p. 1045); the Council endorsed CPC's recommendation that the Secretary-General report in 1986 on the expert bodies within the United Nations system.

By part VII of the resolution, the Council took note of the annual overview report of ACC for 1984/85,<sup>(3)</sup> asking that body to continue to improve the report and inviting it to proceed with the technical design for the establishment of a register of development activities (see also p. 1039).

The Economic and Social Council also took note of the report on the Joint Meetings of CPC and ACC (see p. 1042), which included conclusions reached concerning co-ordination of relief efforts in Africa and technical co-operation among developing countries, and on which the Council adopted resolution 1985/77.

Taking note of CPC's comments on the proposed programme budget for 1986-1987, the Council, by resolution 1985/78, affirmed the view that the use of consultant services was excessive and asked the Secretary-General to provide CPC with information on the reasons why particular tasks could not be carried out by regular staff.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, adopted without vote resolution 40/240.

Programme planning

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/197 of 20 December 1977, 33/118 of 19 December 1978, 34/224 of 20 December 1979, 35/9 of 3 November 1980, 36/228 of 18 December 1981, 37/234 of 21 December 1982, 38/227 of 20 December 1983 and 39/238 of 18 December 1984,

Having considered the report of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the work of its twenty-fifth session and the first report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987,

Having considered also the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987,

Having considered further chapter VI, sections C and D, of the report of the Economic and Social Council,

Noting also the intensive discussion in the Fifth Committee of the General Assembly on programme planning,

1. Approves those conclusions and recommendations made by the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twenty-fifth session not otherwise decided upon in the context of the consideration by the General Assembly of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987, nor dealt with by the Economic and Social Council in its resolution 1985/78;

2. Endorses Economic and Social Council resolutions 1985/76, 1985/77 and 1985/78 of 26 July 1985;

3. Takes note with satisfaction of the qualitative improvements in the presentation of the programme aspects of the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987, in particular the expansion of programmatic coverage and further refinements in the output citations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to improve the analytical procedure leading to a more transparent presentation of all sections of the programme budget;

5. Reiterates the importance of the programme planning and budgeting cycle and, in that context, the necessity of reinforcing the monitoring and evaluation capacity of the United Nations so as to provide Member States with a basis for more informed decision-making;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, through the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination at its twenty-sixth session, a report on the further experience gained in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 38/227 A, section II, paragraph 7;

7. Decides that the relevant conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, as well as the related portions of its report, should be brought to the attention of its Main Committees for information;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to issue the regulations and rules governing programme planning, the programme aspects of the budget, the monitoring of implementation and the methods of evaluation in the same format as the Financial Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, and to annex to the regulations and rules the text of the resolutions and decisions on programme planning adopted by the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth sessions;

9. Endorses the decision of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination to include in the provisional agenda of its twenty-sixth session an item on the improvement of the work of the Committee under its mandate, inter alia, with a view to its consideration of future programme budgets and medium-term plans, as well as to enhance the instruments of co-ordination, and considers this decision a positive step towards enhancing the effectiveness of the Committee as the main subsidiary organ of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly for planning, programming and co-ordination.

General Assembly resolution 40/240

18 December 1985      Meeting 121      Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1059) without vote, 16 December (meeting 67); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/40/L.18), based on informal consultations; agenda item 117.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 11, 14-23, 25-28, 30-36, 38-43, 47-51, 56-61, 63, 67; plenary 121.

Taking action at its resumed thirty-ninth session on a programme planning item, held over for consideration from December 1984<sup>(7)</sup>, the Assembly on 12 April 1985 adopted without vote decision 39/460. It thereby took note of the information and assurance provided by the Under-Secretary-General for Administration and Management in his statement before the Fifth Committee on 26 October 1984 concerning one of the guidelines for statements to be provided by the Secretary-General on programme implications of draft resolutions. The Under-Secretary-General had stated that in section II, paragraph 7, the word "section" had erroneously been changed to "sections" in the process of editing the Assembly's 1983 resolutions<sup>(8)</sup> on programme planning. He had assured the Committee that, in the interpretation and practical application of the resolution, the Secretariat would respect the wording of the agreed text.

Barbados had introduced the text<sup>(9)</sup> which, it stated, had been formulated in an open-ended contact group, replacing a text recommended by the Fifth Committee.<sup>(10)</sup>

Following adoption of the decision, the United States said that its participation in the consensus should not be taken to imply any agreement with the contents of the Under-Secretary-General's statement, which attempted to construe an agreement among delegations which, in the understanding of the United States, implied the use of the words "relevant sections", not "relevant section". Italy, speaking for the 10 members of the European Community, said they had agreed to the decision in a spirit of compromise but wished to stress their position that the decision did not imply any approval on their part of the interpretation given by the Under-Secretary-General to the relevant provisions of the Assembly's 1983 resolution.

Brazil welcomed the Under-Secretary-General's assurance and trusted that the matter would be treated as a clear mandate for the Secretary-General to act in the way indicated.

Financial Rules of the United Nations

In an October 1984 report<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General issued proposed revisions to the United Nations Financial Rules required as a result of the restructuring of the economic and social sectors of the United Nations under a 1977 General Assembly resolution.<sup>(12)</sup> ACABQ had made a number of suggestions which were reflected in a corrigendum to the Secretary-General's report.

The Assembly's Fifth Committee had recommended, before the Assembly suspended its thirty-ninth (1984) session in December,<sup>(13)</sup> that the Assembly adopt a draft decision taking note of the revisions to the Financial Rules.

At its resumed thirty-ninth session, on 12 April 1985, the Assembly adopted decision 39/461, by which it took note of the amendments to the Financial Rules of the United Nations promulgated by the Secretary-General in his report.

Proposed programme budget for 1986-1987

At its 1985 session, CPC examined in detail the proposed programme budget for 1986-1987. In an introductory statement, the Assistant Secretary-General for Programme Planning and Co-ordination cited improvements in the current budget presentation. Among these were: the presentation for the first time of financial, common and conference services in programmatic terms; an increase in the number of sections in which priorities were designated; the designation of priorities in some areas of common services; more precision in output citations; and an attempt to identify those outputs with at least 50 per cent of their funding from extrabudgetary resources.

The programmatic approach, together with a number of management-enhancing measures, had translated into an overall real growth rate of 0.4 per cent, the Assistant Secretary-General said. However, aggregate growth figures should be considered with caution, since regular budgetary resources represented only a part of the Organization's total resources for the delivery of its output. Overall guidance for the preparation of the proposed programme budget had been provided by the Programme Planning and Budgeting Board.

Committee members expressed satisfaction with the improvements in the format and content of the proposed programme budget, but raised a number of questions. These concerned, among other things, the widespread use of consultants, the proposed reclassification of posts in a number of sections, and what was seen as a disproportionate growth of administrative costs relative to the growth in substantive programme areas.

Other points of concern were the elimination of activities mandated by the General Assembly without prior recourse to that body; the need for proper monitoring of programme performance and the important function of the Central Monitoring Unit in that regard; and the decentralization of activities from central units to the regional commissions.

In its report<sup>(1)</sup> to the General Assembly, CPC made a number of general recommendations on the 1986-1987 budget, as well as specific recommendations on individual budget sections. Among the general recommendations and conclusions were: that the Assembly should reiterate its 1984 request<sup>(14)</sup> to intergovernmental bodies reporting to the Assembly's Second (Economic and Financial) Committee to adjust their cycle of meetings to conform to that Committee's biennial programme of work; that the proposed use of consultant services were excessive and not conducive to an optimum utilization of regular staff resources; and that the Secretary-General should submit a report in 1986 on the results of in-house consultations on the establishment, updating, access to, use and integrity of the mailing lists and registers maintained by the United Nations.

Noting that it had received a proposal to request the Secretary-General to compile information on activities in various fields of human resources development under way or planned by United Nations organs and programmes, CPC decided that, in view of time constraints, it would consider the proposal at its 1986 session.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

By section III of resolution 1985/75, the Economic and Social Council, on 26 July 1985, noted with satisfaction the improvements in the format and timeliness of submission of the proposed programme budget, reaffirmed the importance of monitoring and evaluation in the programme planning and budgeting cycle and urged the Secretary-General to refine further the methods used in those exercises, and reiterated that the medium-term plan should continue to serve as the framework for the formulation of the biennial budget. The Council recognized that the Secretary-General should keep the issue of decentralization under review and report to CPC on the better distribution of responsibilities between global and regional entities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, with the adoption of resolution 40/240 on 18 December, also noted with satisfaction the qualitative improvements in the proposed budget, in particular the expansion of programmatic coverage and further refinements in the output citations. Among other things, it asked the Secretary-General to report in 1986, through CPC, on experience gained in following the guidelines set out by the Assembly in 1983<sup>(8)</sup> in preparing the programmatic implications of draft resolutions it was considering.

Programme evaluation

At its 1985 session, CPC conducted an in-depth evaluation of the drug control programme within the United Nations system (see p. 1014). It recommended, among other things, that the role, function and programme of work of the United Nations Narcotics Laboratory should be reviewed to determine whether certain of its functions should be decentralized to national or regional laboratories. Also, the Division of Narcotic Drugs should be strengthened with additional technical capacity so as to deal more effectively with areas such as drug demand reduction, and it should pay special attention to the countries in which the capacity for national intervention and control was limited or non-existent. The General Assembly, CPC recommended, should again request specialized agencies that had not already done so to develop specific drug control programmes and activities to be undertaken by member Governments.

Examining the triennial review on the TNC programme,<sup>(c)</sup> CPC commended the implementation of recommendations it had made in 1979.<sup>(2)</sup> In connection with this review, the Committee reiterated its position that there should be no hierarchy of mandates and that its recommendations, as approved by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly, should be given equal weight with those of other intergovernmental bodies (see also p. 618).

With respect to the triennial review<sup>(3)</sup> of the mineral resources programme (see p. 677), CPC decided to defer consideration of the Secretary-General's report until 1986. It took up his report<sup>(4)</sup> on the manufactures programme, noting that this was the first triennial review of this activity (see p. 602).

Discussing future areas for COPA, CPC agreed that the areas selected should be of high priority to Member States and should be areas where there might be a need for improved co-ordination and co-operation within the United Nations system (see p. 1044).

In a follow-up to the COPA in the field of marine affairs, CPC took note of information from the Secretary-General<sup>(5)</sup> and recommended that the International Maritime Organization and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) should continue efforts to co-ordinate their work (see p. 681).

CPC then discussed the scope and general approach of the COPA of economic and social research and policy analysis<sup>(6)</sup> which was in preparation. It felt some concern about the manageability of the study, but believed that analysis of the subject was particularly important and accepted the approach proposed. CPC instructed that the analysis should include an examination of the research activities of the United Nations system in relation to legislative mandates, but should not be confused with an evaluation or make suggestions on future orientation of research activities. It should put more emphasis on existing arrangements for co-operation and co-ordination and on areas for improvement in that respect than on apparent duplications in research activities and research products. The analysis should be prepared in a manner that would enable CPC to draw specific conclusions and recommendations.

On the question of a COPA of United Nations activities in the area of economic and technical co-operation among developing countries, CPC considered that the report<sup>(7)</sup> of the Secretary-General on this matter, while comprehensive and containing much useful information, was too optimistic in its conclusions concerning co-ordination of the work of the system in this area. It recommended that the system should give greater attention in its work programmes to the implementation of existing mandates for promoting economic and technical co-operation (see also p. 426).

JIU also issued evaluation reports in 1985, transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General. The first<sup>(8)</sup> was concerned with the status of internal evaluation in organizations of the United Nations system and was the third in a series. The report contained brief summaries of the current status of evaluation in 24 organizations of the system, citing progress and new developments. A summary assessment was made for each organization, together with recommendations for 10 of them. The organizations were: the United Nations, the United Nations Children's Fund, the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements, UNIDO, UNCTAD, the International Trade Centre, UNDP, the United Nations Environment Programme, the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, the World Food Programme, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and all the specialized agencies except the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank affiliates.

The second report<sup>(9)</sup> was the third study of developments, patterns and problems in system-wide evaluation; it reviewed current progress in integrating and using evaluation. It was found that evaluation was being actively used in a more systematic way in almost all organizations of the United Nations system, particularly through built-in self-evaluation, but for in-depth evaluations as well. Central evaluation units remained small despite increased work-loads, spending half their time on in-depth studies and reporting and leaving little time for evaluation system oversight and needed expansion of system coverage. Organizations needed to maintain clear standards to ensure evaluation quality. Long-term development efforts were needed to ensure that timely, relevant information on performance was provided to meet programme decision-making needs organization-wide. It was recommended that organizations expand evaluation coverage and strengthen design, monitoring and training efforts, and provide evaluation quality control, co-operative efforts and adequate central evaluation unit staffing.

Joint Inspection Unit

The 1985 work programme of JIU covered five broad areas of sectoral interest to the system: restructuring of the economic and social sectors, development co-operation; management and co-ordination; personnel; and evaluation. In its August 1985 report<sup>(10)</sup> JIU described how its work programme was drawn up to achieve a degree of balance among sectors and to select studies which were both timely and of importance to the system.

During 1985, JIU issued 13 reports. These reports inspected, reviewed or evaluated selected programmes of the United Nations system. They were issued subsequently as General Assembly or Economic and Social Council documents. The reports were the subject of written comments by the Secretary-General or by ACC and were considered by Main Committees of the Assembly, by the Economic and Social Council, and by the UNDP Governing Council, as appropriate.

Two of the reports concerned specific organizational entities: the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific;<sup>(11)</sup> and the United Nations information centres.<sup>(12)</sup> The other reports were thematic. They dealt with management issues with light of the changing use of computers in United Nations organizations at Geneva<sup>(13)</sup> (see p. 1265); United Nations development system support to the implementation of the Buenos Aires Plan of Action on Technical Co-operation among Developing Countries<sup>(14)</sup> (see p. 490); the United Nations Transport and Communications Decade in Africa<sup>(15)</sup> (see p. 632); contribution of the United Nations system to the conservation and management of cultural and natural heritage in Africa;<sup>(16)</sup> United Nations technical co-operation in the Caribbean<sup>(17)</sup> (see p. 662); problems in implementing the medium-term plan of recruitment (1983-1985) for the United Nations Secretariat;<sup>(18)</sup> a follow-up on staff costs in the United Nations Secretariat;<sup>(19)</sup> reform of the United Nations;<sup>(20)</sup> status of internal evaluation in organizations of the United Nations system<sup>(21)</sup> (see above); evaluation in the United Nations system<sup>(22)</sup> (see above); and a follow-up on organization and methods for official travel in the United Nations.<sup>(23)</sup>

The activities of JIU from 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985 were described in its seventeenth report to the General Assembly;<sup>(24)</sup> the second half of 1985 was covered in its 1985-1986 report.<sup>(25)</sup>

The work programme of JIU for 1985 was transmitted to the General Assembly in February by a note<sup>(26)</sup> of the Secretary-General.

During the year, JIU officers met with the executive heads of several participating organizations in order to intensify relations. Contact was also maintained with ACABQ, the International Civil Aviation Organization, the International Civil Service Commission, the Panel of External Auditors, ACC's Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions and the management and audit units of several secretariats.

In accordance with procedures established by the General Assembly in 1977,<sup>(27)</sup> the Secretary-General provided information in a September 1985 report<sup>(28)</sup> on the status of implementation of past JIU recommendations of interest to the Assembly. The report dealt with recommendations on: the conservation and management of the cultural and natural heritage in Asia and the Pacific;<sup>(29)</sup> management of the Office for Projects Execution of UNDP;<sup>(30)</sup> the Office of Secretariat Services for Economic and Social Matters;<sup>(31)</sup> publications policy and practice in the United Nations system;<sup>(32)</sup> reporting to the Economic and Social Council;<sup>(33)</sup> competitive examinations in the United Nations;<sup>(34)</sup> co-operation between and management of libraries of the United Nations system;<sup>(35)</sup> and common services of United Nations organizations at the Vienna International Centre.<sup>(36)</sup>

At its 1985 session, CPC considered two JIU reports and the comments of the Secretary-General thereon. The 1984 JIU report<sup>(37)</sup> on drug abuse control activities in the United Nations system and the Secretary-General's and executive head's comments<sup>(38)</sup> (see p. 1013) were discussed in connection with the relevant section (section 20) of the proposed programme budget for 1986-1987 and the report<sup>(39)</sup> of the Secretary-General on an in-depth evaluation of the drug control programme (see above, under "Programme evaluation", and p. 1014). The JIU report<sup>(35)</sup> and related comments on reporting to the Economic and Social Council were discussed and subsequently noted, with the suggestion that the Secretary-General should continue his efforts to bring about improvements. Discussion of JIU reports on publications policy and practice in the United Nations system,<sup>(32)</sup> on field offices of UNDP<sup>(40)</sup> and on the evaluation system of UNDP<sup>(41)</sup> was deferred to 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 40/259, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee.

Joint Inspection Unit

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the report of the Joint Inspection Unit on its activities during the period 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985, the work programme of the Unit for 1985 and the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Unit,

Recalling its resolution 39/242 of 18 December 1984,

Convinced that the reports presented by the Joint Inspection Unit should receive adequate attention,

Recalling further the role of the Joint Inspection Unit as contained in article 5 of its statute,

1. Emphasizes that, in carrying out its function, the Joint Inspection Unit shall fully respect the mandates, resolutions and decisions of the General Assembly and of the legislative organs of the other participating organizations;

2. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit, in accordance with its statute, to include in its reports on organizations, whenever appropriate, an evaluation of the programmes and activities of the organizations;

3. Requests the Joint Inspection Unit, in presenting its reports, to observe the established procedures as provided for in article 11, paragraph 2, of its statute;

4. Decides that each report submitted by the Joint Inspection Unit during the year, along with the comments of the Secretary-General, will be considered under the appropriate agenda item of the General Assembly;

5. Invites United Nations organs, after considering reports of the Joint Inspection Unit and the related comments of the Secretary-General, to submit to the General Assembly the results of their review;

6. Invites the Joint Inspection Unit to evaluate the results of its activities and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-second session.

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the UN system

In its annual report to the General Assembly on administrative and budgetary co-ordination in the United Nations system, submitted in October 1985,(1) ACABQ provided comparative data on the specialized agencies and the United Nations. This was in accord with the Assembly's decision of December 1981(2) calling for detailed reports on the budgets of the specialized agencies and IAEA every two years, beginning in 1982; in odd-numbered years reports were confined to tabular material, supplemented as necessary by special topics.

The report contained nine tables providing comparative data on: total amounts of approved regular budgets, including supplementary estimates, 1977-1986; total net contributions of Member States actually payable under approved regular budgets, including supplementary estimates, 1977-1986; established posts, 1984-1986; regular budget contributions to technical co-operation activities, 1984-1986; extrabudgetary funds administered by the United Nations system of organizations, contributions, 1983-1984; extrabudgetary funds administered by the United Nations system or organizations, expenditures, 1983-1984; working capital funds, 1986; scales of assessment applicable in 1986; and collection of contributions, 1984-1985.

ACABQ cited in its report a number of statistics drawn from the tables. Among these: the regular budgets (or budget estimates) of the United Nations, the specialized agencies (excluding the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)) and IAEA amounted in 1986 to $1,731,875,093 of which $1,604,658,577 was to be covered by assessed contributions. Further assessed contributions for the United Nations were likely in 1986 for peace-keeping operations; for the 12-month period through October 1985, the total amount assessed for the purpose was $177 million.

Also, a total of 25,012.5 established posts for 1986 had been authorized or requested under the regular budgets of the United Nations, the specialized agencies (excluding IFAD) and IAEA. This was an increase of 0.5 per cent compared to the 1985 total of 24,881 (excluding IFAD). The breakdown was: United Nations, 11,967 posts; agencies (excluding IFAD) and IAEA 13,045.5 posts.

The United Nations, the agencies and IAEA estimated that their regular programmes of technical co-operation in 1986 would amount to $314,072,000, of which $230,205,000 was to be provided under the regular budget of the World Health Organization. The assessed budgets of the organizations also contributed towards the support costs of projects executed by them on behalf of funding programmes or under trust fund agreements; this sum was estimated at $54.4 million.

ACABQ pointed out that total outstanding contributions as at 30 September 1985 equalled 51.4 per cent of total net contributions of Member States actually payable in respect of 1985, as compared to a corresponding figure of 52.7 per cent as at 30 September 1984.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolutions 40/250 and 40/251.

Administrative and budgetary co-ordination of the United Nations with the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency
The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this subject, in particular resolution 36/229 of 18 December 1981 by which it expressed its concern with the need for effective administrative and budgetary co-ordination within the framework of the United Nations system,

Convinced of the importance of such co-ordination by the organizations of the system,

Realizing the need to avoid duplication of efforts and proliferation of organs for the more effective use of the resources of the United Nations and the specialized agencies,

Concurring with the opinion expressed by the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions in its report on the subject submitted to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session, that co-ordination among the agencies with a view to harmonizing their budgetary practices is of primary importance and that further efforts at standardization and harmonization should be encouraged,

1. Recommends that further efforts be made to achieve the maximum possible standardization and comparability in the budgetary and administrative practices of all organizations concerned;

2. Invites the International Civil Service Commission, in co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board and other appropriate bodies of the United Nations system, taking into account the relevant reports of the Joint Inspection Unit and the opinions expressed thereon in the Fifth Committee, to pursue its efforts to achieve a greater co-ordination of staff regulations;

3. Invites the Secretary-General and the executive heads of the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency to submit to the General Assembly, at its forty-first session, their comments on the matters referred to in this resolution.

Reform of the United Nations system

JIU report. In December 1985,(3) the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the report(4) of the JIU entitled "Some reflections on reform of the United Nations". From an analysis of problems confronting the United Nations system, the report called for an examination of the raison d'être of the institution and suggested changes that would, in the author's opinion, enable the United Nations to address more meaningfully a number of issues of international concern. In this regard the report focused on three areas (including related issues of structure, administration and management): peace and security; negotiation of economic problems leading to complementarity among national economic strategies; and an integrated approach to economic and social development.

The thesis underlying the report, the author pointed out, was that serious thought about a reform of the United Nations system was now indispensable and that it should lead to the conception of a third-generation world organization genuinely in keeping with the needs of the modern world.

In summary, the conclusions of the report—described as "indications for further research"—set forth the following considerations and proposals.

The structures of the current system rested on three fallacious notions: that the maintenance of peace could be achieved through an institution, that the development of the poor countries could be achieved through a sectoral approach and that negotiations among 159 States were possible without a prior definition of agreed negotiation structures.

In the current political context it was unrealistic to believe that sovereign States could deal in common with activities outside the limited sphere where a broad consensus existed. The basic role of a world organization could only be the determined search for a better or different type of consensus which would lead towards the far-off ideals set forth in the Charter. Further reform could not be focused on modifying the structures of a political United Nations; it was not possible to propose other structures that would be an improvement on the Security Council. On the contrary, reform should focus on the transformation of the structures that supported development and on the institution of a genuine world economic forum. The aim would be to build up an "economic United Nations" side by side with the political United Nations.

On one front, the reform should be a total recasting at system level of all structures concerned with development in order to constitute regional or subregional development agencies or enterprises. On the other front, the reform should be to set up a world forum to deal essentially with economic problems. The developing countries should not continue to be left out of the discussion at the negotiating table. Thought should be given to replacing the current dual forums of the Economic and Social Council and UNCTAD by a more restricted council of the type envisaged in the original Charter, which set the Council's membership at 18. If this "economic security council" were to have 23 members, the major States and the main regions of the world could be represented on it. The secretariats of the United Nations and the major agencies could be reorganized under the authority of one or more commissions made up of independent persons of distinction.

The JIU report to the Assembly covering its work for the second half of 1985(5) stated that the majority of the Inspectors had disassociated themselves from the report, with the exception of chapter II ("Managerial shortcomings or structural shortcomings"), as they had, among other reasons, judged the report's main thesis to advocate a remodelling of the mechanisms relating to the forum of negotiations that was inherently political, rather than administrative, in nature. The scope of the report, they believed, thus fell outside both the letter and spirit of the JIU mandate.

Action by ACC. At its October 1985 session, ACC requested(6) its Organizational Committee to prepare draft comments, for consideration at its first 1986 session, on the JIU report on reform of the United Nations.

Chapter III

United Nations officials

The Secretary-General, in his 1985 annual report on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), stated that he had repeatedly emphasized the need to explore all avenues for utilizing resources in the most efficient manner and to provide an equitable role for women in the Secretariat. The management-improvement measures he had initiated were being pursued on a continuing basis.

The General Assembly in 1985 also took action on several personnel questions, such as the status of women in the Secretariat and in the regional commissions, job classification, recruitment, career development and other conditions of service.

Personnel questions were dealt with in several resolutions. The Assembly welcomed continuing efforts to improve the status of women staff members and noted the Secretary-General's decision to reappoint a Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat (resolution 40/258 B). It asked the regional commissions to incorporate women's concerns in their work programmes (40/105). Continuing its efforts to balance the geographical representation of staff, the Assembly asked the Secretary-General to develop and apply a new recruitment plan for 1986-1987 with specific targets for unrepresented and underrepresented countries, as well as to take other recruitment measures to bring States within their desirable ranges of representation (40/258 A). With regard to job classification of the General Service category in New York, the Assembly deferred a decision on the plan being carried out by the Secretary-General but decided, by decision 40/466, that the effective date of the classification exercise would be 1 January 1985.

As in previous years, the General Assembly acted on issues affecting working conditions, salaries and benefits, based on recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC), which in turn consulted the participating intergovernmental organizations in the United Nations system.

In December, the Assembly, by resolution 40/244, approved several recommendations of ICSC, including approval of the range for the margin between the net remuneration (net base salary and post adjustment) of the United Nations and that of the best-paid national civil service, and requested ICSC to develop further the methodology for calculating the margin and re-examine the scope of the education grant. It also asked ICSC to carry out, in co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, a comparative study of the levels of pension benefits and the ratios of pensions to salaries under the United Nations pension scheme and that of the comparator country (40/245). The Assembly also dealt with some aspects of conditions of service of non-Secretariat officials (40/256).

The Economic and Social Council instructed the Secretary-General on the use of consultant services (resolution 1985/78), asking him to report on reasons why particular tasks could not be carried out by existing regular staff. The Assembly deferred until 1986 consideration of the Secretary-General's report on the use of experts, consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups, involving former staff members aged 55 or more (decision 40/456).

The Assembly approved the observations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) on the need to streamline the appeals procedures (resolution 40/252, section XII); requested the Secretary-General to do so and to continue to study the feasibility of establishing an office of Ombudsman (40/258 A); and deferred again its consideration of the feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal for the common system (decision 40/465).

The Secretary-General was asked to provide, in future reports on use of air travel, information on all United Nations expenditures for first class air travel (decision 40/455). Some amendments were made to the Staff Rules (40/468) and Staff Regulations (40/467).

Personnel management

The General Assembly took decisions in 1985 on a number of personnel management problems, on the basis of information provided by the Secretary-General and such bodies as ICSC, ACABQ, the Administrative Committee on Coordination (ACC) and the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU). Written comments were submitted to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee by representatives of United Nations staff, including the Co-ordination Committee for Independent Staff Unions and Associations of the United Nations System (CCISUA) and the Federation of International Civil Servants' Associations (FICSA). The issues were management improvement, staff composition, career development, personnel policies, field staff and privileges and immunities.

On 18 December, the Assembly adopted three resolutions on personnel questions: resolution 40/258 A on the composition of the Secretariat; 40/258 B on improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat; and 40/258 C on respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations.

On the same date, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/244 on the work of ICSC, section IV of which called for strengthening the regulation of the conditions of service of the organizations participating in the United Nations common system.

Staff composition

The Secretary-General, in his annual report<sup>(1)</sup> on the composition of the Secretariat, covering the period 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985, presented information on nationality, sex and type of appointment (contract). On 30 June, he stated, staff members appointed for a year or more numbered 15,278, of whom 11,850 were paid from the regular budget and 3,428 from extrabudgetary sources.

During the reporting year, the Secretary-General said, substantial progress was made towards the achievement of an equitable geographical balance. The proportion of appointments from unrepresented and underrepresented Member States rose to 54.6 per cent of posts subject to geographical distribution.

Three States, formerly unrepresented, were represented: Papua New Guinea, Saint Christopher and Nevis, and Saint Lucia. Ten States were currently within their range. Between mid-1984 and mid-1985, 229 appointments were made to posts subject to geographical distribution. Of these, 125 were of nationals of Member States underrepresented or not represented at the beginning of the reporting year. Of that figure, 45 were successful candidates in national competitive examinations, which continued to be the best way of recruiting from target Member States, the Secretary-General said.

In response to Assembly concerns about the need to increase the representation of developing countries in senior and policy-making posts, the Secretary-General provided tables with data on posts at the D-1 and D-2 levels and above.

The report also described major recruitment measures undertaken. These included the establishment of targets for appointment of women and of nationals of unrepresented or underrepresented Member States, competitive examinations for entry-level candidates and improvement of vacancy announcements.

In another report,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a list showing the name, functional title, nationality and grade of all staff members holding an appointment for one year or more on 30 June 1985.

On another subject, the Secretary-General, who was asked by the Assembly in 1984<sup>(3)</sup> to study ways of applying the population factor as one of the criteria for determining desirable ranges in seeking equitable geographical distribution of staff, indicated some of the problems that might arise from such a procedure.

The population factor was one of three weighted factors used in the construction of desirable ranges in seeking an equitable geographical distribution of staff (the other two factors being membership and contribution). The Secretary-General concluded that any change in the application of the population factor would have to be considered in the context of whatever other changes Member States might propose during a review of the scale of contributions to be undertaken in 1986. Since any significant change in the size of the base figure would affect the size or weight of the other factors and might lead to a change in the minimum desirable ranges, no change should be introduced for calculating the ranges from January 1986, except for changes in the contribution factor resulting from any changes the Assembly might make in the assessed contributions of individual Member States.

ICSC, in its annual report,<sup>(4)</sup> emphasized the importance of appropriate recruitment measures for technical co-operation personnel, stressed the potential benefits of recruitment missions, recommended active participation of senior field staff in the recruitment process, and reiterated the need for adequate training in interviewing techniques for staff involved in the selection process. It agreed to request the organizations in the common system: to harmonize their recruitment efforts, to develop recruitment sources for technical assistance personnel on as wide a geographical basis as possible, to provide forecasts of recruitment requirements, to make full use of national recruitment services and keep them informed of programmes in their countries, to help establish training programmes for the newly established services, and to recommend that their member States consider special measures to facilitate the secondment of their nationals, consider conclusion of agreements on the transfer of pension rights to enable their nationals to move freely between government service and service with the common system, and consider using reimbursable loan agreements for short technical assignments in order to obtain candidates whose career commitments would otherwise preclude service with the system. It also recommended that the organizations make full use of United Nations Volunteers, the associate experts scheme, retired persons and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) to develop their rosters.

JIU, in a report transmitted to the Assembly in September,(5) discussed problems of implementing the medium-term plan of recruitment, 1983-1985, formulated by the Office of Personnel Services (OPS) in 1982. The results of the plan suggested that its major goals—to raise the level of representation of all unrepresented and under-represented countries to the lower limit of their desirable ranges and to improve representation of women—would not be attained.

In its recommendations, JIU suggested that the Assembly might wish to consider reviewing and modifying the existing system of ranges so that the current respective mid-points would become the upper levels, with the lower levels being 10 per cent below but not less than 5.75 posts (recommendation I). The Secretary-General should be asked to take the suggested system of desirable ranges and distribution of all the geographical posts into consideration when preparing the 1986 study of desirable ranges; statistical data should include the number and grade of geographical posts to which each country and each region was entitled (II). OPS should be made directly responsible to the Secretary-General for the implementation of recruitment plans; internal guidelines should explicitly state OPS's authority and thus strengthen it (III). OPS should indicate in its reports the departments that did not comply with the established targets and the reasons therefor (IV), additional efforts should be made to ensure equitable distribution in all departments, offices or units (V) and Governments, especially of unrepresented and underrepresented countries, should be encouraged to be more active in the recruitment process (VI).

Commenting on the JIU report, the Secretary-General considered(6) that the recommendation with respect to the mid-point of each Member State's range and the publication of data by region, country and grade would not be feasible. He indicated his general agreement with recommendations III, IV and V and stated that in large measure they were already being implemented, although, with reference to recommendation IV, he noted that a geographical balance must be approached flexibly to accommodate the particular situation in each department, office and regional commission and their programme needs. He stated that he intended to continue his recruitment efforts vigorously during the period of the next plan to improve both geographical distribution and the number and level of distribution of women.

The staff representatives of the Secretariat, in a document(7) submitted to the Fifth Committee in November, drew attention to the need to develop special recruitment measures in conjunction with more flexible personnel arrangements to facilitate the entry of disabled persons into the international civil service. They urged that specific targets be set for this purpose.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 40/258 A, without vote.

Composition of the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions on personnel questions, in particular resolution 39/245 of 18 December 1984,

Concerned that the targets set in the 1983-1985 medium-term plan of recruitment were not achieved,

Recalling Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, which states that:

"The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible",

1. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to strengthen the role and emphasize the authority of the Office of Personnel Services of the Department of Administration and Management in recruitment and other personnel matters throughout the Secretariat and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to develop and apply a second medium-term plan of recruitment for the period 1986-1987 with specific targets for recruitment from unrepresented and underrepresented countries with a view to bringing all Member States within their desirable ranges and to make special efforts to increase the number of staff recruited from Member States below the mid-point of their desirable ranges in order to bring them towards their mid-point;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to continue to ensure the representation of developing countries and other countries in senior and policy-formulating posts, with due regard to equitable geographical distribution and in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session proposals for the review of the system of desirable ranges with a view to achieving a balanced application of all factors relevant to the calculation of the desirable ranges, including the population factor, taking into account the views of Member States expressed at the current session;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to speed up the recruitment process by setting strict time-limits for the departments and offices concerned to complete the recruitment procedures;

6. Takes note of the proposal of the Secretary-General to introduce, on an experimental basis, a competitive examination at the P-3 level for candidates with the required qualifications and experience and requests him to submit a report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, taking into account the comments of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and the views of Member States expressed at the current session;

7. Further requests the Secretary-General, in his efforts to guarantee to staff members a just and expeditious resolution of disputes and grievances, to streamline the appeals procedures and continue the study on the feasibility of establishing an office of Ombudsman, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

8. Approves the introduction, in accordance with the recommendation of the International Civil Service Commission, of after-service health insurance coverage for former locally recruited staff who participated in the medical expense assistance plan in appendix E to the Staff Rules of the United Nations, on the understanding that the Secretary-General will present to the General Assembly at its forty-first session the financial implications of reformulating the scheme to make it comparable to other health insurance schemes of the common system.

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1067) by consensus (parts A-C together), 17 December (meeting 69); draft by Nigeria (A/C.5/40/L.16, part A), based on informal consultations and orally revised; agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 42, 43, 46, 47, 49-51, 53-55, 57, 59, 62-64, 69; plenary 122.

The Assembly, by resolution 40/20, called on organizations of the United Nations system to ensure that their personnel and recruitment policies provided for equitable representation of Africa at their headquarters and in regional and field operations. In section III of resolution 40/244, the Assembly welcomed ICSC's recommendations on introducing special measures for the recruitment of women (see p. 1238) and those on the development of recruitment sources, including national recruitment services.

International Civil Service Commission

The International Civil Service Commission held two sessions in 1985: its twenty-first in London from 11 to 29 March, and its twenty-second in New York from 8 to 26 July. It examined issues arising from Assembly decisions and resolutions, as well as those stemming from its own statute. Its eleventh annual report(4) covered various aspects of conditions of service in all staff categories, including salaries, post adjustment, health insurance, support for dependent disabled children, conditions of staff in the field and pensionable remuneration.

Several bodies in the United Nations common system, including those of staff representatives, commented on the recommendations and decisions of ICSC.

Two Inspectors of JIU submitted a report, transmitted to the Assembly in September,(8) which was a follow-up report to a 1984 JIU report(9) on staff costs in the United Nations Secretariat. They made recommendations for a review of the system of remuneration for the Professional and higher categories, on defining ICSC's mandate, on revising the methodology for comparison purposes, and on a review of staff activities. The Secretary-General commented on JIU's recommendations in November.(10)

FICSA, in October,(11) expressed concern that on several occasions the Fifth Committee had changed ICSC recommendations or decisions without hearing the staff and other parties concerned; it attached the utmost importance to consultations with representatives of the executive heads and staff. FICSA commented on ICSC views on pensionable remuneration and conditions of service of the Professional and higher categories, special measures for the recruitment of women and the use of competitive examinations.

CCISUA transmitted its comments(12) to the Fifth Committee in November. It was convinced of the need for a core of career service personnel whose conditions of service were stable over time and determined with technical objectivity, free from considerations of politics. It expressed concern at unprecedented attacks in recent discussions on the conditions of service not only on the international civil service but on the organizations and institutions of the international system itself. CCISUA offered its comments on safeguarding acquired rights, pensions and pensionable remuneration, professional remuneration, the education grant, housing, long-service awards, the status of women and conditions in the field. It also commented on JIU's report on staff costs.

The Secretary-General transmitted in November(13) a statement(14) adopted by ACC at a 4 July special session called(15) to discuss and set out its position on personnel questions. It commented on issues considered by ICSC and by the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, in particular the further development of the methodology for defining the comparison elements for determining remuneration, the need to utilize consultative mechanisms and the procedures to be followed when the Assembly disagreed with a recommendation of ICSC or the Board. ACC also presented its views on the JIU report.

The views of the above bodies on the various issues are presented elsewhere in this chapter under the specific subjects.

ACABQ,(16) commenting on the Secretary-General's statement(17) on the administrative and financial implications ($1,110,900) of ICSC's recommendations and decisions, concurred with his stated intention to deal with the additional costs in the context of the budget performance reports for the 1984-1985 biennium, and to reflect the saving ($25,888,200) for 1986-1987 in revised estimates to be presented for recosting that biennium's budget at December 1985 exchange rates and projected inflation rates.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 40/244, without vote.

United Nations common system: report of the International Civil Service Commission

The General Assembly,

Having considered the eleventh annual report of the International Civil Service Commission and other reports related thereto,

Reaffirming the importance of maintaining and developing further a single unified international civil service through the application of common personnel standards, methods and arrangements,

I

1. Takes note of the action taken by the International Civil Service Commission in response to General Assembly resolutions 39/27 of 30 November 1984 and 39/69 of 13 December 1984;

2. Approves the range of 110 to 120, with a desirable mid-point of 115, for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories of the United Nations in New York and that of officials in comparable positions in the United States federal civil service, on the understanding that the margin would be maintained at a level around the desirable mid-point of 115 over a period of time;

3. Requests the Commission:

(a) To develop further the methodology for calculating the margin based on net remuneration, taking into account the views expressed at the current session, and to study the possibility of calculating the margin as specified in paragraph 2 above based on a comparison of net remuneration for both services in New York and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

(b) To further elaborate procedures for the operation of the post adjustment system within the approved range of the margin of net remuneration, which would enable the Commission to maintain the margin at a level around the desirable mid-point of 115 over a period of time, and to report thereon to the Assembly at its forty-first session;

4. Also requests the Commission to continue its studies of the post adjustment system as it relates to United Nations officials posted outside the base city of the system, the effects of exchange-rate fluctuations and the possibility of eliminating post adjustment at the base city of the system, and to report thereon to the General Assembly no later than at its forty-second session;

II

Approves the recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission contained in paragraphs 180 and 181 of its report concerning support by organizations of the United Nations common system for staff with dependent disabled children;

III

1. Welcomes the recommendations of the International Civil Service Commission contained in paragraph 245 of its report concerning the introduction of special measures for the recruitment of women, is cognizant of the contents of paragraphs 246 and 247 of the same report and requests the Commission to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the progress made in this regard;

2. Welcomes further the recommendations of the Commission contained in paragraph 252 of its report concerning the development of recruitment sources, including national recruitment services;

3. Requests the Commission:

(a) To undertake a study of the mobility of Professional staff in the United Nations common system, including the frequency and average length of their assignments at different duty stations;

(b) To re-examine the scope of the education grant in relation to the purpose for which it was originally approved;

4. Also requests the Commission to re-examine the question of the mandatory age of separation from service of staff of organizations of the common system and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

IV

1. Requests the Secretary-General in his capacity as Chairman of the Administrative Committee on Coordination and, through him, the other executive heads of organizations participating in the United Nations common system, to promote endeavours to maintain and strengthen the common system for the regulation and co-ordination of the conditions of service;

2. Also requests the executive heads of participating organizations, through the Secretary-General, to inform their respective governing bodies of the present resolution;

3. Urges Member States to ensure that their representatives in organizations of the United Nations common system are informed about the positions taken by them in the General Assembly on matters relating to the conditions of service;

4. Expresses its concern over actions taken by some of the participating organizations which have led to disparities in the United Nations common system;

5. Requests the International Civil Service Commission to report in detail to the General Assembly at future sessions on the consideration and implementation of the decisions and recommendations of the Commission by organizations of the United Nations common system.

General Assembly resolution 40/244

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1061) without vote, 14 December (meeting 63); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/40/L.7), based on informal consultations and orally revised; agenda item 124.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 29, 30, 37, 38, 42, 44-48, 50, 53, 63; plenary 121.

Status of women in the Secretariat

The Secretary-General reported in November 1985(18) that, while the percentage of Professional women in posts subject to geographical distribution had reached 23.1 per cent by mid-1985, women staff members continued to be confined to the lower salary ranks. As of 30 June, only four of the 26 assistant secretaries-general were female. At the next highest (D-2) level, 3.3 per cent of staff in geographical posts were women. Nearly three out of every four Professional women were found in service-oriented occupations, and their distribution in geographic posts was extremely uneven compared to that of men: 35 per cent were from North America and the Caribbean and 26.7 per cent from Western Europe, while only 3.7 per cent were from Eastern Europe.

As part of an action programme he had established, the Secretary-General decided to set 30 per cent of all Professional appointments (both language and geographical posts) as an overall target for recruitment of women during the 1986-1987 biennium. OPS would be responsible for sub-targets by level and by department to fulfil the overall target. The action programme—covering the areas of recruitment of Professionals, career development in all categories, training, conditions of service and grievance and discrimination issues—had been developed by the Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat, a post established on an experimental basis early in 1985. The first phase of the programme, to be concluded by 30 June 1986, was to lead to concrete policy recommendations, timetables and procedural changes. During the second phase, the following year, the policies and procedures would be implemented and a final report submitted.

In a decision adopted in October,(19) ACC stated that the organizations of the United Nations system were committed to address actively the problem of women's status and to increase their participation in decision-making and substantive programme areas. It asked its Consultative Committee on Administrative Questions (CCAQ) (Personnel and General Administrative Questions) to convene a meeting of senior recruitment staff to recommend measures for inter-agency co-operation in the recruitment of women and to examine measures to facilitate their interorganizational mobility.

The representatives of the Secretariat staff union and associations observed, in a document(7) presented to the Fifth Committee, that the number of appointments and rate of promotion of women had remained stagnant or declined. While women constituted 43.8 per cent of all staff, 82.6 per cent of them were in the General Service and related categories. The current two-tiered structure of the international civil service only exacerbated their unequal opportunities for advancement. Measures should include the establishment of departmental targets for promotion and recruitment and monitoring of the progress achieved.

Reporting in 1985(4) ICSC considered that, while special recruitment measures were essential in effecting any significant change in Professional women's status, their success was largely dependent on the institutional and attitudinal climate of the organizations, which should give priority to recruitment at senior levels, impress on Governments their commitment to employ more women, and work with them to develop recruitment sources. It should be recommended to the organizations that they convene a meeting of their recruitment heads to discuss common prospection procedures and strategies. They should actively explore recruitment sources—i.e. national women's bureaux, university alumnae, NGOs, fellowship recipients, experts and United Nations Volunteers—to broaden their supply of women candidates from unrepresented and under-represented States, and try to expand their supply of candidates for posts in occupations not usually identified with women through contacts with professional associations and universities. The need for professional women in technical co-operation programmes should be stressed. Organizations should introduce sensitizing courses for effecting behavioural change, and ensure that women's concerns were adequately reflected in in-service training programmes. Those that had not done so should be requested to establish a staff/management body to set goals for the advancement of women staff.

Both FICSA(11) and CCISUA(12) welcomed ICSC's proposals for improving the status of women. FICSA observed that recruitment could not be separated from forward-looking social policy and proper career development, with adequate support services, counselling, flexible personnel policy and career planning opportunities all given equal priority, and it urged that the question remain on ICSC's agenda.

The need for women to participate actively in the planning, formulation, decision-making and appraisal processes was also stressed by the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women: Equality, Development and Peace (Nairobi, Kenya, 15-26 July). The Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women, adopted at that Conference (see p. 938), stated that all organizations of the system should take measures to achieve the participation of women on equal terms with men at all levels by the year 2000, by preparing action plans, setting targets and assigning co-ordinators to improve their status. (See also p. 960.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 40/258 B without vote.

Improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat

The General Assembly,

Recalling Article 8 of the Charter of the United Nations, which states:

"The United Nations shall place no restrictions on the eligibility of men and women to participate in any capacity and under conditions of equality in its principal and subsidiary organs",

Further recalling Article 101, paragraph 3, of the Charter of the United Nations, which states:

"The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible",

Recalling article 8 of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, which calls upon States parties to "take all appropriate measures to ensure to women, on equal terms with men and without any discrimination, the opportunity to represent their Governments at the international level and to participate in the work of international organizations",

Reaffirming its relevant resolutions on the need to increase both the overall number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution and the proportion of women at the senior and policy-making levels of the Organization,

Noting the recommendations contained in paragraph 358 of the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women with respect to the recruitment, promotion and career development of women by all bodies and organizations of the United Nations system,

Convinced that women should have equal opportunity to serve the international community at all levels of responsibility and that progress in this regard can only be achieved through commitment at the highest levels of the organizations demonstrated through accountable management practices,

1. Welcomes the continuing efforts of the Secretary-General to improve the status of women in the Secretariat and, in particular, the action programme and work plans set out in the report of the Secretary-General on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, and his providing all necessary assistance for the effective carrying out of all these tasks;

2. Takes note of the Secretary-General's decision to reappoint during the biennium 1986-1987, on a temporary basis, a Co-ordinator for the Improvement of the Status of Women in the Secretariat of the United Nations;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary measures to increase the number of women in posts subject to geographical distribution with a view to achieving, to the extent possible, an overall participation rate of 30 per cent of the total by 1990, without prejudice to the principle of equitable geographical distribution of posts;

4. Reiterates that the functions of the Co-ordinator should not duplicate those of the Office of Personnel Services and stresses that the latter Office shall continue to exercise overall responsibility and implement all directives of the General Assembly and policies of the Secretary-General on personnel matters, including the implementation of all policies on the improvement of the status of women in the Secretariat, in particular the action programme and work plans set out in the report of the Secretary-General;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the progress made in implementing the action programme and relevant resolutions of the General Assembly;

6. Reiterates its request to Member States to continue to support the efforts of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations to increase the proportion of women in the Professional category and above by, inter alia, nominating more women candidates.

General Assembly resolution 40/258 B

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1067) by consensus (parts A-C together), 17 December (meeting 69); draft by Nigeria (A/C.5/40/L.16, part B), based on informal consultations; agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 42, 43, 46, 47, 49-51, 53-55, 57, 59, 62-64, 69; plenary 122.

By section III of resolution 40/244, the Assembly welcomed ICSC's recommendations concerning the introduction of special measures for the recruitment of women and observed that it was cognizant of the recommendations on establishing staff/management bodies to set goals for advancing the status of women and of ICSC's request that organizations report to it in 1986 on progress made on its recommendations.

Women's programme officers posts at regional commissions

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in November 1985,(21) in response to its 1984 request,(22) on his reassessment of the regional commissions' work programmes with a view to incorporating women's concerns in them. Noting that the commissions had carried on a variety of activities to that end, ranging from specific projects to general policy development and implementation, he described the main initiatives taken in each of the five commissions with regard to women's posts. With a view to allocating sufficient budgetary resources to staff to regularize all their senior women's programme officers posts by the end of the United Nations Decade for Women (1976-1985), he had included requests in the 1986-1987 budget for a P-3, P-4 and P-5 post as well as redeployment of a P-5 post for senior women's programme officers in the regional commissions. (See also ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapters VIII and XIX.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 13 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee, adopted resolution 40/105, without vote.

Incorporation of the interests of women in the work programmes of the regional commissions

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/127 of 14 December 1984, in particular the reference to the incorporation of women's concerns in the overall programme of work of each regional commission and to the regularization of senior women's programme officers posts,

Convinced that further efforts are needed to ensure adequate consideration of women's concerns within the regional commissions,

Recognizing the important contribution the senior women's programme officers can make to the integration of women in development at the national and regional levels,

1. Takes due note of the report of the Secretary-General on measures taken by the regional commissions to incorporate women's concerns at all levels in their overall work programmes and to establish senior women's programme officers posts;

2. Expresses deep concern at the inadequate response of the regional commissions to the need to incorporate the interests of women in their economic and social policies and programmes;

3. Stresses that the integration of women in economic development as well as in social development is essential to the well-being of society;

4. Invites the executive secretaries of the five regional commissions to propose to their governing bodies measures for reassessing all individual work programmes in order to incorporate women's concerns at all levels in their overall work programmes for the biennium 1988-1989, taking into account the roles and responsibilities of the regional commissions in developing and implementing the system-wide, medium-term plan for women and development and the Nairobi Forward-looking Strategies for the Advancement of Women;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to take into account the important role of the regional commissions in promoting the advancement of women when formulating the system-wide, medium-term plan for women and development and when implementing the Forward-looking Strategies;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session:

(a) On the progress made in implementing paragraphs 5 and 6 of its resolution 39/127;

(b) On the measures proposed by the live regional commissions to incorporate women's concerns at all levels in their overall work programmes for the biennium 1988-1989, as outlined in paragraph 4 above.

Career development

United Nations organizations continued in 1985 to focus attention on various methods for career development of the staff, such as human resources planning, recruitment policies, promotions, competitive examinations, assessment of training needs and job classification.

ICSC, in its annual report,(4) expressed agreement with the position taken by the organizations on the need for a dynamic staff-training programme, including on-the-job training. It reiterated that job classification could provide the appropriate structure for career development. Career development for General Service and related staff should be organized mainly by occupational groups and career paths established among groups in each organization at each duty station to facilitate horizontal as well as vertical mobility. Career development could be assisted by establishing profiles of staff, adequate performance appraisal, exchange of vacancy notices, recruiting at the lower levels, limited use of personal promotions and filling of higher-level vacancies by promotion within the organization.

In a follow-up status report(23) to his 1984 report(24) on his efforts to establish a new career development system, the Secretary-General informed the Assembly that work on the project had begun in January 1985, focusing on compiling the necessary information and developing the methodology for the design of some of its major components, which he expected to be completed by the end of 1986, and the system itself was expected to come into operation in 1987. Progress had been made defining career paths, standardizing post qualification requirements, utilizing existing data bases, developing a systematic rotation and mobility scheme, identifying training needs and designing a training component, and redesigning the performance evaluation system. This was a major personnel reform project, he concluded, and might take more time than originally scheduled.

Staff representatives, commenting on career development issues,(7) stated that the Secretariat must accept long-term planning, including goals and programmes to strengthen the career staff. There should be sufficient opportunities and an effective career development plan, which were lacking. They noted with alarm that junior Professional posts continued to diminish and grade-creep continued to be one of the few mechanisms for advancement; career possibilities for General Service staff were even more limited, they said. They also felt that further refinements of the competitive examination process were desirable, the most important of which was the co-ordination of the examination system within the context of career development, training and recognition of meritorious service.

With regard to competitive examinations,(4) ICSC was of the opinion that that positive experience of the United Nations deserved more attention, and their extension as a recruitment method to other organizations of the system should be considered, upholding such examinations as a useful and objective tool for recruitment, especially for the junior levels.

The opinion was expressed by FICSA(11) that, while there were some positive elements in competitive examinations for recruitment, they should not be the only deciding factor. As to their use in General Service promotions to the Professional category, the system currently applied needed to be considerably improved and FICSA did not support their use in their current form for that purpose.

Reporting in November(25) on the competitive examination system in the Secretariat, the Secretary-General agreed that they were a fair, effective and successful recruitment mechanism, and for the most part appointments at the P-1 and P-2 levels were currently made on the basis of such examinations. He reported on the results of external and internal examinations and their costs, evaluated their results, and outlined some improvements being made. He recommended that recruitment at the P-3 level through national competitive examinations be introduced on an experimental basis in 1986.

Commenting on the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ(26) said it appeared that the cost per candidate of those recruited at the P-1 and P-2 levels was very high; in view of uncertainties involving format and contents of the examination and what posts might be earmarked, it felt it was premature to extend national examinations to the P-3 level.

The General Assembly, by section III of resolution 40/244, called on ICSC to study the mobility of Professional staff in the common system, including the frequency and average length of their assignments at different duty stations.

Job classification

Classification of posts in the General Service and related categories, begun in 1982, was continued on the basis of the standards established by ICSC in 1983, the Secretary-General reported in December 1985.(27) Work at the first stage was carried out by two OPS classification officers, operating independently, and at the next stage reviewed by a joint staff/management body, the Classification Review Group. The Group submitted recommendations on the classification levels of 3,065 posts, all but 300 of which were accepted by the Assistant Secretary-General for Personnel Services. The matter was further reviewed by the Joint Advisory Committee, the staff/management body at Headquarters, and its findings were approved with some minor modifications. The new arrangement, the report said, represented a major policy change from the principle of rank-in-person to rank-in-post as the basis for classification. Extensive consultations with staff representatives were undertaken on questions of future consequences, such as the impact on career development and promotion procedures.

The Secretary-General stated in the report that provision was included in his initial budget proposals for 1986-1987 for all classifications within the General Service category. The proposed reclassification of 11 posts from General Service to the P-1/P-2 level would require an additional $118,000.

In a related document,(7) staff representatives expressed the view that too little importance had been attached to reconciling job classification to other aspects of administration, such as organizational planning, budgeting and career development.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, acting on a recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted decision 40/466.

Job classification of the General Service and related categories in New York

At its 122nd plenary meeting, on 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, having considered the report of the Secretary-General on job classification of the General Service and related categories in New York, decided:

(a) To defer a decision on job classification of the General Service and related categories in New York;

(b) To consider the question at its forty-first session, or if possible before the session, on the basis of the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and any observations that may be made by the International Civil Service Commission;

(c) To ensure that social justice should be done in the matter;

(d) That the effective date of the implementation of the results of the classification exercise should be 1 January 1985.

General Assembly decision 40/466

Adopted by vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1067), sub-para. (a)-(c) without vote sub-para.

(d) by recorded vote (67-25-7), 14 December (meeting 64); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 123.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 63, 64; plenary 122.

Though the first three subparagraphs were adopted together without vote, a recorded vote was taken on subparagraph (d) of the decision in both the Assembly and the Fifth Committee.

The Assembly adopted it by 103 votes to 22, with 15 abstentions; the Fifth Committee by 67 to 25, with 7 abstentions (the recorded vote was requested by the United States). Before the Assembly adopted subparagraph (a) to (c), it agreed following informal discussions to add the phrase "or if possible before the session" in subparagraph (b).

Among the reasons advanced in the Committee by some of those voting against retroactive implementation were: Belgium, which said all the elements needed for consideration were not known; Bulgaria and New Zealand, which did not want to prejudice a decision on job classification taken in 1986; France, the Federal Republic of Germany and the Netherlands, which desired the views of ACABQ and ICSC first; Italy, which felt that a precedent might be set; and Japan, which did not object to retroactivity but said the financial implications required Fifth Committee approval. Ireland said its negative vote did not reflect its attitude towards the possible retroactive implementation of the exercise. For procedural reasons, Romania voted against, and Turkey voted for, the proposal.

Explaining their votes in favour: Cameroon, Denmark and Jordan said the parameters were known and they wished to support the General Service staff; Algeria felt it would compensate for the fact that the Assembly had not yet taken a decision on the job classification exercise; Canada said the provision would be in the interests of social justice, a point also made by Bangladesh, Cuba, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Madagascar, Peru, Spain and Yemen. Argentina, which abstained, and Barbados, which did not participate in the vote, said the specific date should have been kept separate from the substantive issue. Canada, Cuba and Tunisia said their affirmative votes were not meant to prejudice any decision ACABQ might take.

The General Assembly on 18 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted decision 40/469, without vote; it recalled its request to the Secretary-General in 1984(3) to implement a JIU recommendation calling for a study of the situation of staff in the General Service category, and asked him to report on the study at the Assembly's 1986 session. The decision was also approved without vote in the Fifth Committee, on 17 December, on an oral proposal by Nigeria.

Consideration by the ICSC. Under article 13 of its statute, ICSC was required to establish job classification standards for all categories of staff in fields of work common to several of the organizations in the common system, including jobs in the General Service category.

In 1985, the Commission reviewed a report on the implementation during 1981 to 1983 of its 1980 "Master Standard",<sup>(28)</sup> the first tier of a three-tiered system of job classification standards. The report provided an overall analysis as well as the results and status for each organization. In the absence of statistics reflecting the distribution of different types of work in the common system, ICSC expressed concern that the Common Classification of Occupational Groups, set up to enable the development of such statistics, had not been fully implemented but concluded that the Master Standard was being generally applied throughout the system. It promulgated Tier-II standards for financial management specialists and for public information specialists, noting in the case of the latter, however, the absence of positions at the P-1 level for inclusion in the Standard and stressed the importance of P-1 as an entry level for all occupations.

ICSC decided to promulgate a supplement to the Master Standard to be used when grading the content of project jobs, as well as a job description format to provide guidance in gathering information needed to grade such posts. It provided guidance on methods to be used in developing classification standards for the General Service and related categories at Vienna, agreeing to delay a salary survey scheduled for 1986 to allow for completion of the exercise, and reviewed and approved for promulgation the proposed standard for those categories at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, which had reduced the number of grade levels from nine to seven. It also decided to develop classification standards for the General Service at Baghdad, Iraq, and Santiago, Chile, and postponed consideration of an uncompleted project by CCAQ to develop such standards for small and medium-sized field offices.

Staff representation

The General Assembly in 1984(29) had requested ICSC to take the necessary measures to suspend implementation of a 9.6 per cent increase in the post adjustment index at the base city, New York. The Assembly's request was challenged by Secretariat members in groups of cases brought before both the United Nations Administrative Tribunal and the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation (ILO) in June and July 1985.

In September 1985,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a JIU report on staff costs and on some aspects of the use of human and financial resources in the United Nations Secretariat, a follow-up report to one on that subject it had submitted in 1984.<sup>(30)</sup> It discussed several of the staff associations in the Secretariat, and stated that staff activities involved too many people, who devoted too much of their working time to problems not directly related to the terms of reference of staff bodies. The main thrust of staff activities was directed at getting higher salaries and new financial benefits, and it was not surprising that staff bodies were supported by the Administration, which was equally interested in salaries and other benefits. Demands were cultivated by staff representatives who spread false expectations among the staff, affecting morale, and who also tried to equate staff bodies with trade unions and claimed the right of staff members to strike. Staff bodies were threatening to put the General Assembly and the Secretariat in confrontation by putting pressure on Assembly delegates in order to achieve their goals. Under the circumstances, JIU recommended (recommendation 4) that the Assembly, or a special committee, look into the entire range of staff activities and take a firm position to improve the situation. For this purpose, the Secretary-General should be asked to undertake a comprehensive review of the matter, taking into account the views of all those concerned.

Commenting on the JIU report,(10) the Secretary-General said that its assessment of staff activities lacked balance. He could not accept the observations regarding the relationship between the Administration and the staff on the salary issue, as it was normal for employee representatives to seek improved conditions of service, and said that the Inspectors were unduly harsh in contending that representatives spread false expectations among the staff, affecting morale and efficiency, and that there were no grounds for questioning the propriety of staff members appealing decisions which they considered prejudicial to their interests. He said he would continue periodically to review staff-management relations with the aim of improving the effectiveness of the Organization.

FICSA,(11) in accordance with a 1980 Assembly resolution,(31) and CCISUA(12) submitted documents to the Fifth Committee in which they held that the Inspectors' arguments were based on wrong premises and distorted facts and that no valid conclusions could be drawn from their report and it could not serve as a basis for serious discussion. The staff unions and associations of the Secretariat declared(7) that the unstated objective of the attack was to place restraints on freedom of association and undermine the confidence of Member States in the Secretariat. The Inspectors had criticized the staff for questioning before the Administrative Tribunal the Assembly's request to suspend the post adjustment increase, which was tantamount to saying that legal rights were permissible as long as they were not exercised.

Field staff

In 1985,(4) ICSC continued its study of issues relating to conditions of service of United Nations staff in the field, including the uniform application of allowances and benefits at field locations, the pre-departure allowance and the conditions of service faced by staff in Lebanon. It also received reports from organizations on problems of communications, employment opportunities for spouses and shipment of personal effects.

In regard to payment of pre-departure allowances, ICSC drew to the attention of the system's organizations the irregularity that had occurred in their interpretation of ICSC's decision on such reimbursement. Pre-departure expenses should be reimbursed only upon transfer and upon separation of a staff member from service. Further, ICSC could not agree to review extension of the current scheme to cover locations other than in the field in the context of field conditions. Its secretariat, however, was requested to study and report on the need for pre-departure expenses to be reimbursed at other duty stations outside the context of field issues.

Concerning the situation of staff serving in Lebanon, ICSC recognized that a special situation existed, calling for an ad hoc remedy. Therefore, it decided: staff in the Professional and higher categories as well as other internationally recruited staff in specified duty stations in Lebanon should receive an incentive of $550 per month, at an estimated annual cost of $147,000; General Service staff should receive an incentive equivalent to 20 per cent of their base net salary, at an estimated annual cost of $75,000; the ICSC Chairman should keep the issue under review to determine if a change in service conditions occurred and, as soon as an improvement in conditions occurred, he would decide on an appropriate course of action.

Staff representatives observed(7) that instead of concentrating on purely financial incentives, greater flexibility in granting annual leave, in creating or improving commissary facilities and in using pouch facilities would make service in extremely difficult duty stations easier to bear. In addition, field staff encountered difficulties in finding adequate housing and in paying for their children's education; an immediate rise to age 25 was urged as the age-limit for the allowance for dependent children when they continued in an education programme. Field service should be recognized and rewarded with provisions for accelerated promotion, eligibility for training and counselling, and well-defined career paths.

Certain field conditions had improved over the past several ICSC sessions, according to CCISUA,(12) which had removed some impediments to mobility and recognized the special character of field work, as evidenced by the special arrangements adopted for Lebanon. Housing and educational expenses continued to be a major problem. CCISUA supported the attempt to improve the after-service health insurance scheme for locally recruited staff.

In December, the General Assembly, by resolution 40/244, requested ICSC to continue its studies of the post adjustment system as it related to United Nations officials posted outside the system's base city, the effects of exchange-rate fluctuations and the possibility of eliminating post adjustment at the base city, and to report to the Assembly thereon before its 1987 session.

Travel

In October, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report(32) on implementation of various resolutions regulating the standards of accommodation for air travel. He noted all exceptions made to those rules-including details of, resultant additional costs of, and reasons for such exceptions-and the savings achieved through use of economy and other air fares, for the period from 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985. Although 60 exemptions were granted, total savings during the period were estimated at $298,500.

Representatives of the Secretary-General, meeting with ACABQ, stated that estimated savings had decreased from the 1984 level because of a reduction in travel and the wider use of business class for trips of more than nine hours. In its report(33) to the Assembly, ACABQ expressed the opinion that the practice of reporting hypothetical savings should be discontinued; instead, the report should emphasize the total additional costs incurred by the Organization as a result of exceptions to the current rules. It recommended that future reports on the matter be submitted to it for review, after which it would report to the Assembly as necessary.

The host country announced travel restrictions applicable to United Nations staff members from a number of countries (see p. 1180).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 40/455.

Standards of accommodation for air travel

At its 121st plenary meeting, on 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee:

(a) Took note of the report of the Secretary-General on standards of accommodation for air travel and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions;

(b) Endorsed the recommendation of the Advisory Committee contained in paragraph 2 of its report;

(c) Decided that future annual reports submitted to the General Assembly on this subject should include information on all expenditures by the United Nations for first class air travel.

General Assembly decision 40/455

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1058) without vote, 14 December (meeting 65); draft by United States (A/C.5/40/L.10); agenda item 115.

Staff Rules

In July 1985, the Secretary-General submitted his annual report(34) containing the texts of provisional staff rules and amendments made to the Staff Rules of the United Nations since the previous report in 1984.(35) The changes concerned, among other things, amendments occasioned by granting staff status to language teachers, revising educational reimbursement scales and education grant entitlements, a new policy on the non-resident's allowance, deductions of contributions to a staff representative body, establishment of a Joint Appeals Board at Nairobi and other duty stations, compensation for overtime work, clarifying the meaning of joint staff-management machinery, revised scales of pensionable remuneration and separation payments, and revised salary scales, dependency allowances and language allowances.

In a November addendum(36) to his report, the Secretary-General reported on corrections and editorial improvements to the French text of the Rules to make it more consistent with the English.

On 18 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted without vote decision 40/468, taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General on amendments to the Staff Rules.

Staff Regulations

The Secretary-General in November(36) proposed an amendment to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations to bring the wording of a paragraph into line with fact, replacing the term "annual budget" with "programme budget".

In addition, he proposed that amendments of an editorial nature be made to the French text of the Staff Regulations, which required the authority of the Assembly, to reflect proper terminology or usage.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 40/467.

Amendments to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations

At its 122nd plenary meeting, on 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, having considered the report of the Secretary-General on amendments to the Staff Regulations and Rules, decided:

(a) That the last sentence of paragraph 5 of annex I to the Staff Regulations of the United Nations should be amended to replace the term "annual budget" by the term "programme budget";

(b) That the French text of regulations 3.3 (a), (e) and (f), 6.2, 8.1 (b), 8.2 and paragraphs 7 and 9 and the title of the first table of annex I to the Regulations should be amended as proposed by the Secretary-General to reflect the proper terminology and usage.

General Assembly decision 40/467

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1067) without vote, 17 December (meeting 69); oral proposal by Nigeria; agenda item 123 (c).

Privileges and immunities

In October 1985,(37) the Secretary-General submitted, on behalf of ACC, a report on personnel of organizations in the United Nations system who were under detention or who had been reported missing, and on measures to safeguard staff security and encourage respect for the privileges and immunities of United Nations officials. During the period 1 September 1984 to 31 August 1985, 89 such cases of arrest and detention or disappearance had been reported to the United Nations Security Co-ordinator. In 72 of those cases, the organizations concerned were able to exercise the right of functional protection under international agreements or were successful in obtaining the release of the detainee. Of the remaining 17 cases, 16 related to locally employed members of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East and one to a locally recruited staff member of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Afghanistan. The release or amnesty of detained staff members in Afghanistan, Ethiopia and Lebanon was a positive indication of the seriousness with which Member States had accepted Assembly recommendations. The Secretary-General would continue his efforts to secure full compliance with the relevant international instruments.

A list of staff members currently detained, missing, imprisoned or executed over the past 12 years was presented to the Fifth Committee in November(7) by United Nations staff representatives. They pointed out that a major problem was the growing number of acts of violence against United Nations staff.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/258 C, without vote.

Respect for the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations
The General Assembly,

Recalling Articles 100 and 105 of the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming its previous resolutions, in particular resolution 39/244 of 18 December 1984,

Reiterating the obligation of the staff in the conduct of their duties to observe fully the laws and regulations of Member States,

1. Takes note with concern of the report submitted to the General Assembly by the Secretary-General on behalf of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination;

2. Deplores the increasing number of cases involving the abduction and detention of United Nations officials, experts and military personnel by armed groups and individuals;

3. Calls upon all Member States that currently have United Nations officials under arrest or detention to review these cases and to co-ordinate efforts with the Secretary-General to resolve each case with all due speed;

4. Calls upon the staff of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations to comply with the obligations resulting from the Staff Regulations and Rules of the United Nations, in particular regulation 1.8, and from the equivalent provisions governing the staff of the other agencies;

5. Calls upon the Secretary-General, as chief administrative officer of the United Nations, to continue personally to act as the focal point in promoting and ensuring the observance of the privileges and immunities of officials of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and related organizations, and to take all necessary measures to implement the mandates of the General Assembly as reflected in paragraphs 7 and 8 of resolution 39/244.

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1067) by consensus (parts A-C together), 17 December (meeting 69); draft by Nigeria (A/C.5/40/L.16, part C), based on informal consultations and orally amended by Jordan; agenda item 123. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 42, 43, 46, 47, 49-51, 53-55, 57, 59, 62-64, 69; plenary 122.

Staff costs

Salaries and allowances

Salaries

In 1985, ICSC(1) continued to advise the General Assembly on staff salaries and allowances, and decided, among other things, that the remuneration in New York should continue to remain at its current level of post adjustment and that immediate measures should be taken to ensure equivalence of purchasing power between New York and other duty stations, pending Assembly action. Based on ICSC recommendations, the Assembly, in December, approved the range of 110 to 120, with a desirable mid-point level of around 115, for the margin between the net remuneration of officials in the Professional and higher categories in New York and officials in comparable positions in the comparator service—the United States federal civil service (resolution 40/244, section I). The Commission had reported that the level of the margin currently stood at 121.3.

In addition, the Assembly requested ICSC to develop further the methodology for calculating the margin based on net remuneration; to elaborate procedures for the operation of the post adjustment system within the approved range, which would enable ICSC to maintain the margin at the desirable mid-point level over a period of time; and to continue studying the post adjustment system. ACC(2) was convinced that the Assembly should request ICSC to elaborate without delay a methodology for the objective definition and practical application of the proposed range for the margin under varying circumstances; until that time, it believed that the decision could be taken on the operation of the post adjustment system.

The Commission's recommendations to the Assembly took into account the suggestions made by its subsidiary body, the Advisory Committee on Post Adjustment Questions (tenth session, Vienna, 7-17 May), on such matters as the maintenance of equivalence of purchasing power between New York and other duty stations, the operation of the post adjustment system within a defined margin range, problems relating to duty stations with low or negative post adjustments, separation of the effects of inflation and currency fluctuation within the post adjustment system, and the methodology for cost-of-living surveys.

In other 1985 developments, ICSC reiterated its 1984 recommendation (3) on introducing a long-service step in the salary scale for the Professional category-with updated financial implications of $300,000 per annum-and advised the Assembly that it might wish to make representation to the governing bodies of WHO and ILO, which had introduced such a step, to consider harmonizing practices within the United Nations common system. On a related matter, the Secretary-General(4) informed the Assembly that all organizations were proceeding to implement the ICSC recommendation to grant a long-service step, effective 1 January 1985, to those General Service and other locally recruited staff members who had completed 20 years of service within the common system and five years of service at the top of the grade.

The Commission conducted a survey—at Geneva and London, respectively-of best prevailing conditions of service of the General Service and related categories and recommended a new salary scale for each duty station. After consulting with the other executive heads of agencies with staff at Geneva, the Secretary-General reported in November(4) that he had decided to implement the revised scales there as of 1 April 1985.

In the same report, the Secretary-General also gave estimated financial implications of ICSC-proposed measures relating to net remuneration, health insurance, support of staff with disabled dependants, and conditions of service in the field. ACABQ(5) subsequently commented on the Secretary-General's estimates, without specific recommendations for changes.

In its comments to the Assembly, FICSA(6) proposed re-examination of the post adjustment system, adding that the margin calculation should take into account expatriation, constraints of work, and developments in the comparator civil service. FICSA proposed using the average remuneration at each grade to measure the evolution of the margin between the remuneration of the comparator service and that of the United Nations system. It also proposed that ICSC be asked to reconsider its decision to exclude the difference in length of service from the total compensation comparison, to measure the evolution of the margin on the basis of total compensation, to use average remuneration for each grade instead of step one, and to include expatriate benefits in the total compensation comparison.

Asserting that the only valid measure for comparison was that of total compensation and that the average remuneration should be used as a point of reference, CCISUA(7) declared that the hasty determination of a range amounted to transforming the margin from a reference point to an arbitrary limit and unduly tied the salary and post adjustment systems of the United Nations to the internal policies of the comparator.

JIU report on staff costs. In a follow-up to its 1984 report(3) on staff costs in the United Nations Secretariat, JIU underlined in its 1985 report, transmitted to the General Assembly in September,(8) that its 1984 conclusions and recommendations remained valid. The application of what it termed the inadequate methodology used by ICSC resulted in unjustified costs to Member States. The introduction of a number of elements, such as career difference, for example, tended to narrow the margin artificially. The comparison of the two systems should be based on the net one with total compensation comparison being avoided until it was further developed, if necessary (recommendation 3). The JIU Inspectors suggested that the Assembly establish a special committee to assist ICSC in reviewing objectively all aspects of the United Nations system of remuneration for Professional and higher-level staff (recommendation 1), take a definitive position on the ICSC mandate, confirm the validity of the Noblemaire Principle (whereby salaries in the Professional and higher categories were based on the best-paid national civil service), and define the margin, or range for the margin, and instruct ICSC to act only within the limits of the mandate (recommendation 2). A fourth recommendation concerned staff activities (see p. 1242).

Commenting on the report, the Secretary-General(9) rejected the Inspectors' assertions of a link between the pensionable remuneration of General Service staff and the New York post adjustment index and their comments on the supportive relationship between the Administration and the staff on the salary issue. ICSC asserted that JIU intervention in the policy matters within its province threatened to undermine its authority and introduced elements of uncertainty and confusion of responsibilities with regard to the common system—a view shared by ACC,(2) as well as by CCISUA(7) and FICSA.(6)

Allowances

Following a comprehensive review of after-service health-care coverage, undertaken pursuant to a 1983 Assembly request,(10) ICSC recommended in 1985(1) that after-service health insurance, under a contributory scheme, should be provided to locally recruited General Service staff at field stations covered under appendix E of the Staff Rules of the United Nations (which described a medical expense assistance plan for such staff at designated United Nations offices). It endorsed the principle that eligibility criteria for after-service health insurance should ensure that staff with identical qualifications were eligible under the various organizations' schemes, and expressed the hope that retired staff would be consulted on such schemes, including cost-sharing. Representatives of CCISUA, the Federation of Associations of Former International Civil Servants (FAFICS) and FICSA felt that uniform eligibility criteria for after-service health insurance should be established among all organizations.

As regards another 1983 Assembly request for a study of the issue of mandatory health insurance,(11) ICSC considered that, while health insurance should be mandatory, the exact application of that concept should be left to the organizations to determine.

Assuming that active and former staff members would pay the equivalent of 1.5 per cent of their respective net salary or pension and the organization would pay the remaining part, the Secretary-General estimated(4) that the ICSC recommendation would entail an expenditure of $420,000 for 1986-1987, $340,000 relating to the improved benefit structure for all concerned and $80,000 to the introduction of after-service coverage.

ICSC reaffirmed(1) its view that there was no current need for changing the criteria for application of the education grant and that such grant should continue to be an expatriate benefit. On 18 December, by section III of resolution 40/244, the General Assembly requested the Commission to re-examine the scope of the grant in relation to the purpose for which it was originally approved.

As regards support to staff with dependent disabled children, ICSC made a series of recommendations, including waiving the lower age-limit for the payment of the special education grant for such children, extending to 28 the age-limit in exceptional cases, and reimbursement of expenses relating to special education-grant travel, local transportation costs or rehabilitation equipment, extending the limit for reimbursement of medical expenses. It asked organizations to provide more information to locally recruited field staff concerning disabilities and to assist them in preparing submissions for benefits. On 18 December, the Assembly approved the ICSC recommendations by section II of resolution 40/244.

In March 1985, the Secretary-General(12) issued to staff members a revised administrative instruction concerning new policies implemented on the ICSC recommendations on conditions of service in the field, as they related to the financial incentive for Professionals serving at specified duty stations, home-leave travel and sick-leave entitlements for personnel at duty stations with difficult conditions of life and work, additional education-grant travel, and shipment of personal effects, among other field service-related issues (see p. 1243).

Pensions

In 1985, the principal of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, providing retirement, death, disability and related benefits for staff upon cessation of their services with the United Nations, increased from $3,500,632,266 to $4,122,009,634, with the number of its participants reaching 54,013. Investment income during the year amounted to $595,766,141 ($591,449,433 net). From that amount, the Fund paid $342,043,844 in benefits, including 8,092 retirement benefits amounting to $177,491,059. In addition, it paid 8,115 early and deferred retirement benefits, 2,817 widows'/widowers' benefits, 4,397 children's benefits, 501 disability benefits and 43 secondary dependants' benefits. In the course of the year, it also paid 3,389 withdrawal or other lump-sum settlements.

The 21-member Pension Board (see APPENDIX III), charged with administering the Fund, held its thirty-fourth session from 29 July to 9 August at Montreal, Canada.(13) The Board reviewed the method of calculating the lump-sum commutation of benefits, the questions of imposing ceilings on the amount of such commutations and on the highest level of pensions, and the operation of the two-track pension adjustment system and compensatory and interim measures for participants whose pensionable remuneration had been lowered as at 1 January 1985 through the adoption of the ICSC-recommended scale of pensionable remuneration.(14) The Board discussed the management of the investments (see p. 1250) and the actuarial valuation of the Fund as at 31 December 1984. Among other things, it recommended to the Assembly that the United Nations Industrial Development Organization, which was converted to a specialized agency in the course of 1985 (see p. 591), be admitted to the Fund as of 1 January 1986 in order to ensure continued participation in the Fund by the staff, pending the formal admission process.

Responding to a 1984 Assembly request,(15) ICSC and the Pension Board discussed the methodology for determining pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories and for monitoring the level of such remuneration, and re-examined the adjustment procedure between comprehensive reviews. Views of FICSA,(6) CCISUA(7) and FAFICS were heard in ICSC, which, in view of the state of flux in the retirement scheme of the comparator (United States) civil service, suggested a further review of the methodology, following receipt of the details of the new United States scheme, for report to the Assembly in 1986; it noted that because of the freezing of the New York post adjustment, the adjustment procedure as regards pensionable remuneration in between comprehensive reviews would automatically not be applied in 1986. Bearing in mind the adverse effect on the pension system of freezing pensionable remuneration scales, the Pension Board, nevertheless, accepted the continued suspension of the adjustment procedure in 1986. The Board believed that a review should cover both the methodology recommended by ICSC in 1984 and possible alternative approaches, and that a decision on a benefit adjustment system contained in article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the Fund should follow that on the methodology.

ACABQ(16) concurred with or had no objection to most of the Board's recommendations, among them, increasing the rate of pension contribution to 22.5 per cent (from 21.75 per cent) effective 1 January 1986 for the reason that a delay in reducing the imbalance might require more extensive corrective measures in future. In a statement transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General,(2) ACC also supported the increase in contributions as of 1986, and considered it urgent to institute a system for adjusting pensionable remuneration to avoid undue erosion of benefits and to ensure a continued adequate income for the Fund.

In December, the Secretary-General submitted(17) to the Assembly, at the request of the Secretary-General of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) and the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the text of resolutions on the pension system adopted by those agencies' legislative bodies. ITU, in its resolution, expressed its anxiety about the level of benefits and the Fund's future, hoped the measures to be adopted to restore the actuarial balance would not further reduce the level of benefits, and stressed the importance of introducing equitable interim measures to safeguard acquired rights. UNESCO expressed the hope that the Assembly would adopt the interim measures recommended by ICSC in 1984 and, commenting on a proposal to increase the Board's membership to 33, stated that UNESCO should have three seats. (The Board at its July/August session had invited member organizations to express their views on the composition of the Board so that it might submit recommendations to the Assembly at a future session.)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 40/245, without vote. Sections III through VI were approved without change as proposed by the Pension Board; sections I and II resulted from informal consultations on the Board's recommended text.

Report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/246 of 18 December 1984,

Having considered the report of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board for 1985 to the General Assembly and to the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, chapter II of the report of the International Civil Service Commission and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Welcoming the improvement in the actuarial situation of the Fund as revealed by the valuation as at 31 December 1984,

I

Pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories

1. Takes note of chapter II of the report of the International Civil Service Commission and section III.C.5 of the report of the United Nations joint Staff Pension Board;

2. Requests the International Civil Service Commission, in co-operation with the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, to:

(a) Carry out a comparative study of the levels of pension benefits and the ratios of pensions to salaries under the United Nations pension scheme and that of the comparator country;

(b) Complete its review of the methodology for the determination of pensionable remuneration for the Professional and higher categories, for monitoring the level of pensionable remuneration and for adjustment of pensionable remuneration in between comprehensive reviews, taking into account the margin range established for net remuneration, the views expressed at the current session, including those concerning the evolution of the levels of pensionable remuneration and pensions in recent years and the different characteristics of the two services, and to submit its recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

3. Defers until its forty-first session further consideration of the recommendation of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board regarding amendment of article 54 (b) of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund contained in the Board's report for 1984 and in the mean time extends the suspension of the operation of the adjustment procedure in the said article;

II

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund and review of the pension adjustment system

1. Decides that the maximum retirement benefit payable to a participant at the Under-Secretary-General, Assistant Secretary-General or equivalent level separating on or after 1 April 1986 shall not exceed 60 per cent of the pensionable remuneration for his level applicable on the date of separation, provided, however, that the amount so calculated shall not be less than the maximum benefit payable at the standard annual rate to a participant at the D-2 level retiring on the same date and provided further that a participant who has accrued a higher benefit by 31 March 1986 by virtue of his participation up to that date shall retain his said higher benefit;

2. Decides that the benefit payable to a participant in the Professional or higher categories whose pensionable remuneration was lowered as at 1 January 1985 shall not be less than an amount calculated in accordance with supplementary article C of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, which appears in the annex to the present resolution;

3. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to study further the method of calculating the lump-sum commutation, bearing in mind the views expressed in the Fifth Committee, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

4. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, with a view to eliminating or reducing significantly inequalities of benefits payable to participants who have already separated or will separate in the near future, compared to benefits payable to those who will separate later on, to:

(a) Take steps to implement, if possible with effect from 1 July 1986, such measures as are within its competence;

(b) Recommend to the General Assembly at its forty-first session such additional measures as would require Assembly action;

5. Defers until its forty-first session further consideration of the question of the rate of contribution to the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, and requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to submit to the General Assembly at that session its recommendations on additional economy measures, with a view to eliminating the need for any future increase in the liabilities of Member States;

6. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to review the pension adjustment system and, in particular, to consider lowering the extent by which the local currency equivalent of the United States dollar track could exceed the local track, and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

7. Amends, with effect from 1 January 1986, the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, as set forth in the annex to the present resolution, incorporating any consequential changes in the cross-references in the Regulations, without retroactive effect, except that supplementary article C of the said Regulations shall be applicable with effect from 1 January 1985, pursuant to General Assembly resolution 39/246, section II, paragraph 3, and article 28 (d) shall be applicable with effect from 1 April 1986;

8. Requests the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to examine the question of the rate of contributions that should be payable in respect of the contributory service from 1 April 1986 of the participants affected by the decision in paragraph 1 of the present section, and to make specific recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-first session for the amendment, if necessary, with effect from 1 April 1986, of article 25 of the Regulations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension fund;

III

Composition of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board

Invites the competent organs of the member organizations of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund to review the size and composition of the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, taking into account, where practicable, the views expressed at the current session, and to submit their conclusions to the General Assembly, through the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board, in time to enable the Assembly to take a decision on the matter no later than at its forty-second session;

IV

Admission of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization to membership in the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund
Recalling its resolution 34/96 of 13 December 1979 on transitional arrangements relating to the establishment of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization as a specialized agency,

Decides that the United Nations Industrial Development Organization shall be admitted to membership in the Fund with effect from 1 January 1986, in accordance with article 3 (c) of the Regulations of the Fund;

V

Emergency Fund

Authorizes the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board to supplement the voluntary contributions to the Emergency Fund, for a further period of one year, by an amount not exceeding $100,000;

VI

Administrative expenses

Approves expenses, chargeable directly to the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund, totalling $16,995,700 (net) for the biennium 1986-1987 and additional expenses of $173,300 (net) for 1985 for the administration of the Fund.

ANNEX

Amendments to the Regulations of the United Nations
Joint Staff Pension Fund

Article 28

Retirement benefit

Insert the following text as paragraph (d) and reletter existing paragraphs (d) to (g) as (e) to (h):

“(d) (i) However, except as provided in (ii) below, the benefit otherwise payable at the standard annual rate in accordance with the applicable provisions of (b) or (c) above to a participant at the level of Under-Secretary-General, Assistant Secretary-General or their equivalent level who separates from service on or after 1 April 1986, shall not exceed, as at the time of the participant's separation, the greater of:

“a. 60 per cent of his pensionable remuneration on the date of separation; or

“b. The maximum benefit payable under the same provisions of paragraphs (b) or (c) above to a participant at the level D-2 (top step for the preceding five years) with 35 years of contributory service, separating on the same date as the participant.

“(ii) However, the benefit payable to a participant to whom the provisions of (i) above are applicable shall not be less than the benefit that would have been payable to him at the standard annual rate if he had separated from service on 31 March 1986.”

Article 40

Effect of re-entry into participation

Replace subparagraph (c) (ii) by the following text:

“(ii) Subject to (d) below, a retirement, early retirement or deferred retirement benefit, as the case may be, under article 28, 29 or 30, based on the length of such additional contributory service; provided, however, that such benefit may not be commuted into a lump sum, in whole or in part, and shall not be subject to any minimum provisions.”

Add the following article:

“Supplementary article C

“Transitional measures

“(a) Effective 1 January 1985, notwithstanding the provisions of article 1 (h), the final average remuneration of a participant in the Professional or higher categories who was in contributory service on 31 December 1984, had at least 36 completed calendar months of such service as of that date and whose pensionable remuneration was lowered by the scale of pensionable remuneration effective 1 January 1985, shall be calculated under both article 1 (h) and paragraph (b) of this article, with the participant being entitled to that method of calculation which results in the higher benefit at the standard annual rate.

“(b) (i) The highest final average remuneration to which the participant would have been entitled in accordance with article 1 (h) if he had separated from service on 31 December 1984 or on any later date preceding his actual date of separation shall be applied to his contributory service up to and including the date on which that final average remuneration was first attained in his case; and

“(ii) The final average remuneration calculated in accordance with article 1 (h) shall be applied to his contributory service after such date;

“(iii) The benefit payable at the standard annual rate under the provisions of article 28 (b) or (c) shall be calculated by adding to the benefit based on the contributory service in (i) above the benefit based on the contributory service in (ii) above, subject to article 28 (d) where applicable.

“(c) Nevertheless, and notwithstanding the provisions of article 28 (d), the benefit payable to a participant at the standard annual rate in accordance with paragraph (b) above shall not be less than the benefit to which he would have been entitled if he had separated on the date the highest final average remuneration was first attained in his case.”

General Assembly resolution 40/245

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1057) without vote, 16 December (meeting 67); draft by Vice-Chairman (A/C.5/40/L.15), based on informal consultations: agenda item 125.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 29, 37, 38, 44-46, 48, 50, 53, 67; plenary 121.

In a related action, the Assembly, by section III of resolution 40/244, requested ICSC to re-examine, and report to it in 1986 on, the mandatory retirement age of staff.

Pension Fund investments

The Pension Board, in its annual report to the Assembly.(13) noted that as at 31 March 1985 the market value of the Fund's assets was $3,926 million, with an investment return of 8.1 per cent for the preceding year. Its investment portfolio consisted of 54 per cent in equity, 33 per cent in bonds, 10 per cent in real estate-related investments, and 3 per cent in short-term cash equivalents. Global diversification remained the investment principle, and $1,902 million, or 50 per cent of the Fund's long-term investments, was placed in markets outside the United States; funds were invested in 23 different currencies and in 21 different equity markets. Of the $676 million in development-related investments, 78 per cent had been made through international and regional development institutions.

The Secretary-General, in his annual report(18) on the Pension Fund's investments for the year ended 31 March 1985, noted that over the preceding 35 years the book value of the portfolio had risen from $13 million to $3,502 million, a compound increase of 17.7 per cent a year. By 30 June 1985, development-related investments had reached $744 million, as compared with $636 million a year before. ACABQ(16) had no comments to make on the matter.

On 18 December, the General Assembly, acting without vote on a recommendation of the Fifth Committee, took note of the Secretary-General's report by decision 40/457.

UN Administrative Tribunal

Appeals system for staff

In 1985, ACABQ(1) informed the General Assembly that there was an urgent need to simplify administrative procedures so as to reduce the number, and financial impact, of cases requiring full-scale formal review. It noted Administrative Tribunal decisions in which damages were awarded to applicants not on the merits of their case but because of delays in the administration of justice, failure to observe prescribed procedure and general dissatisfaction with the manner in which an administrative decision had been reached. Each case filed cost the Organization an average of $24,000, not to mention considerable distraction from normal duties, resulting in the diminished ability of the Secretariat to carry out its assigned tasks.

ACABQ recommended that the Secretary-General be asked to analyse the problem and report on specific steps taken or envisaged to remedy it, focusing on simplifying rules and procedures to facilitate the staffs understanding of its rights and obligations, identifying the aspects of staff administration giving rise to an inordinate number of appeals, and streamlining the appeals procedures.

Staff representatives, presenting their views in November,(2) stated that, in view of the increasing number of litigations resulting from the abuse of authority by executive heads and their disregard of personnel directives, the Assembly might consider whether delegation of authority should continue to be given without ensuring that such authority was properly exercised.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted section XII of resolution 40/252, without vote.

Appeals system for staff

[The General Assembly ...]

Approves the observations and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions as contained in paragraphs 67 to 72 of chapter I of its first report on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987.

General Assembly resolution 40/252, section XII

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1069) without objection, 19 November (meeting 41); oral proposal by Chairman; agenda item 116.

Activities of the Tribunal

In 1985, the United Nations Administrative Tribunal met in annual plenary session in New York on 7 November, and held two panel sessions—20 May to 14 June (Geneva) and 14 October to 8 November (New York). As in previous years, it submitted a note to the General Assembly President outlining its activities for the year.(3)

During the year, the Tribunal delivered 18 judgements in cases brought by current or former staff members against the Secretary-General, and one judgement in a case by a staff member of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations against the Secretary of the Joint Staff Pension Board, with respect to claims arising from labour contracts of the international civil service.

It also continued consideration of the harmonization of its statute, rules and practices with those of the ILO Administrative Tribunal, the other of the two existing tribunals of the common system; an informal meeting of the members and secretariats of the two tribunals was envisaged in 1986. Information exchange with the World Bank counterpart was under consideration.

The Assembly's Committee on Applications for Review of Administrative Tribunal Judgements held its twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth sessions in New York, from 28 to 31 January and on 12 and 13 September, respectively.

In its comments to the Assembly, FICSA(4) objected to statements in the 1985 JIU report on staff costs(5) (see pp. 1242 and 1246) critical of the appellate procedures. FICSA said the JIU Inspectors had challenged the staffs right to appeal against decisions affecting them adversely, challenged the independence of the Tribunal, interfered in pending cases, and questioned the nature of the awards of the Tribunal. The Secretary-General, in his comments(6) on the JIU report, said he considered it improper for any individual or organ to address the Tribunal in respect of pending cases, or to question its competence.

Feasibility of establishing a single tribunal

On 18 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the Assembly adopted decision 40/465, by which it decided to defer until its 1986 session consideration of the Secretary-General's report,(7) originally issued in 1984,(8) on the feasibility of establishing a single administrative tribunal for the entire common system. The decision was approved without vote, as it had been in Committee on 14 December, on an oral proposal by the Chairman.

Feasibility of establishing an Ombudsman's office

In a November 1985 report to the General Assembly,<sup>(9)</sup> prepared in response to its 1984 request,<sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General expressed the belief that it was feasible to establish an office of Ombudsman in the United Nations if the Ombudsman was given adequate staff support. While specific proposals would be submitted to the Assembly in 1986, he envisaged the Ombudsman to have access to all levels of the Administration. Noting that the existing panels on discrimination and other grievances provided the staff serving away from headquarters with direct personal access to a mediator, the Secretary-General felt that arrangements should be made to enable those staff members to approach the Ombudsman through a local representative. In making those observations, the Secretary-General discussed the experiences of the offices of Ombudsman already functioning, in UNESCO, WHO, IMF and the World Bank, and experiences of similar panels of part-time ombudsmen or mediators in other units within the United Nations system.

Staff representatives<sup>(2)</sup> believed that the International Court of Justice should select the Ombudsman, who would maintain complete independence and impartiality and be accountable to the Assembly. They reiterated a proposal that a separate office for the administration of justice be created within the Executive Office of the Secretary-General, and, to reduce the backlog of appeals, suggested granting the Administrative Review Unit of the Office of Personnel authority to settle small claims.

On 18 December, the General Assembly, in resolution 40/258 A, requested the Secretary-General, in his efforts to guarantee to staff members a just and expeditious resolution of disputes and grievances, to streamline the appeals procedures and continue to study the feasibility of establishing an office of Ombudsman.

Other UN officials

Conditions of service and compensation

In 1985, the General Assembly took up consideration—which it had deferred in 1983<sup>(1)</sup> and 1984<sup>(2)</sup>—of conditions of service and compensation for the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of ICSC and for the Chairman of ACABQ, taking into account the relevant parts of the 1983 report<sup>(3)</sup> of the Secretary-General and the related 1984 ACABQ report.<sup>(4)</sup> In paragraph 11 of its report, ACABQ had concurred with the Secretary-General's suggestion on reimbursing those officials for the actual cost of educating their children, subject to a ceiling of $4,500 per school year, and providing one related travel per year per child from the place of scholastic attendance outside the country of the duty station to the duty station.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted resolution 40/256 without vote.

Conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 35/221 of 17 December 1980 on the conditions of service and compensation for officials, other than Secretariat officials, serving the General Assembly,<sup>(5)</sup>

Having considered those aspects of the report of the Secretary-General on which action was deferred by the General Assembly at its thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth sessions and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Affirming the principle that the conditions of service for the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the International Civil Service Commission and for the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions shall be separate and distinct from those of officials of the Secretariat of the United Nations,

1. Decides that the annual compensation of the two full-time members of the International Civil Service Commission and of the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and budgetary Questions shall remain at its current level, i.e. $82,056 with an additional allowance of $5,000 for the Chairman of the Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee;

2. Approves the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and budgetary Questions in paragraph 11 of its report with regard to the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the International Civil Service Commission and the Chairman of the Advisory Committee and decides that the other conditions of service for these officials shall remain unchanged;

3. Decides that the compensation and other conditions of service of the full-time members of the International Civil Service Commission and of the Chairman of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions shall next be reviewed at the forty-fifth session of the General Assembly and that, pending such review, the annual compensation shall be adjusted in accordance with the procedure approved in General Assembly resolution 35/221, paragraph 3.

General Assembly resolution 40/256

18 December 1985 Meeting 122 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1069) without vote, 14 December (meeting 65); 8-nation draft (A/C.5/40/L.8); agenda item 116.

Sponsors: Bangladesh, Cameroon, Guinea-Bissau, India, Jamaica, Nigeria, Pakistan, Zambia.

Financial implications: ACABQ A/39/7/Add.1; S-G, A/C.5/38/27.

Also in December, the Assembly, by resolutions 40/257 A-C, took action on conditions of service and compensation for members of the International Court of Justice.

Experts and consultants

The Committee for Programme and Co-ordination, at its April-June 1985 session,(6) reiterated that the use of consultant services proposed for future years was excessive and not conducive to an optimum use of regular staff resources, and again called the Assembly's attention to the issue; it also recommended that the resources allocated for the programming of specific consultant services should be used for those purposes.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July 1985, the Economic and Social Council, on the recommendation of its Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committee, adopted resolution 1985/78, without vote.

Hiring and use of consultant services

The Economic and Social Council,

Taking note of the relevant parts of the general conclusions and recommendations of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the proposed programme budget for the biennium 1986-1987 as contained in its report on its twenty-fifth session,

Affirming that the use of consultant services is excessive and not conducive to an optimum utilization of regular staff resources,

Noting the importance of taking into account the appropriate competence, knowledge and expertise of the consultants,

Noting also the desirability of having as wide a geographical basis as possible in the hiring of consultants,

Recognizing the urgent need to address these and other related concerns regarding the hiring and use of consultant services by the United Nations and to take appropriate action,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to take into careful consideration the comments made on this question by Member States at the twenty-fifth session of the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and at the second regular session of 1985 of the Economic and Social Council;

2. Also requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide adequate information to the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination on the reasons why particular tasks could not be carried out by existing regular staff;

3. Further requests the Secretary-General to submit, through the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination and the Economic and Social Council, a detailed report on this question, including, inter alia, comments on the implementation of the existing guidelines on the hiring and use of consultant services by the United Nations, to the General Assembly at its forty-first session for consideration.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1985/78

26 July 1985 Meeting 52 Adopted without vote

Approved by Third Committee (E/1985/141) without vote, 19 July (meeting 20); draft by Bangladesh (E/1985/C.3/L.6), orally revised; agenda item 19.

Report of the Secretary-General. In a December 1985 report(7) on the use of experts, consultants and participants in ad hoc expert groups, the Secretary-General stated that during 1984 there were 440 cases in which 389 former staff members aged 55 or older were re-engaged throughout the Secretariat at all duty stations.

The interim measure instituted by the Assembly in 1982(8) limiting the annual emolument to $12,000 for United Nations Joint Staff Pension Fund beneficiaries did not affect the re-engagement of former staff members under letters of appointment (contract) exceeding six months, which automatically made them Fund participants again and suspended their benefits. Of the 440 cases, 267 received remuneration of less than $12,000, and 173 received more. The Secretary-General continued to believe that the application of the $12,000 limit to former staff performing language functions was not in the interests of the United Nations as it deprived the Organization of the use of valuable experience.

On 18 December, the General Assembly, by decision 40/456, adopted, without vote, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, decided to defer until its 1986 regular session consideration of the Secretary-General's report.

Chapter IV

Other administrative and management questions

During 1985, in a major step to improve the administrative and financial efficiency of the United Nations, the General Assembly decided to establish a group of high-level intergovernmental experts to conduct a review with a view to identifying measures that might be taken to that end (resolution 40/237). That decision was in addition to a number of other Assembly actions resulting from the yearly review of administrative and management issues relating to conferences and meetings, documentation, premises, information systems, telecommunications and postal administration. Besides authorizing certain subsidiary organs to meet during its 1985 session (decision 40/403), the Assembly approved a draft calendar of meetings for 1986 and 1987, reaffirmed principles governing the scheduling of conferences and meetings, and called for more efficient use of conference-servicing resources and for a review of the question of providing summary records (resolution 40/243). It also urged that, in the interests of efficiency and economy, discussions on unified conference services at the Vienna International Centre be resumed (decision 40/405).

Efforts to co-ordinate and enhance United Nations information systems continued during the year, and implementation of recommendations to modernize library operations, as recommended by the Joint Inspection Unit (JIU), was in progress. Meanwhile, JIU submitted to the Assembly recommendations for the effective management of computers and related new technologies increasingly used by the United Nations system. The Secretary-General reported on his decision against a United Nations-owned communications satellite in favour of leased communications facilities, and the Assembly approved his proposal for a new telephone system at Headquarters (resolution 40/252, section II). It also approved the 1986 budget estimates of the International Computing Centre (40/252, section X).

The Assembly took note of the new catering arrangements at Headquarters and the virtual completion of the construction of additional United Nations offices and conference facilities at Nairobi, Kenya (40/252, sections III and IV). It also decided on the disposition of revenues from the sale of a special postage stamp on the social and economic crisis in Africa (40/242).

Review of UN administrative and financial matters

In 1985, at a special session held in October by the General Assembly to commemorate the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, Member States took the opportunity to take stock of the Organization's past performance and potentialities and to propose improvements (see p. 403). Among the proposals put forward was a text introduced by Japan on behalf of 12 sponsors and adopted by the Assembly as resolution 40/237, recommending the establishment of an 18-member group of high-level intergovernmental experts to identify measures to improve the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations.

Also during the year, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a JIU report containing some reflections on reform of the United Nations (see p. 1231).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/237 without vote.

Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations
The General Assembly,

Recalling the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recognizing that the Organization is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members,

Mindful of the vital role of the United Nations in the maintenance of international peace and security and in the promotion of development and international co-operation,

Convinced that the improvement of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations could help it to attain the purposes and implement the principles of the Charter,

Considering the unanimous support for the United Nations, expressed by heads of State or Government or their special envoys and by the representatives of Member States during the commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations,

Noting that all participants stressed the need to promote confidence in the United Nations and enhance the political will of Member States to render more positive support to the Organization,

Reaffirming the necessity of securing, in the employment of the Secretariat staff, the highest standards of efficiency, competence and integrity, and the importance of recruiting the staff based on the principle of equitable geographical distribution.

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the Secretary-General, as the chief administrative officer of the Organization, to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Secretariat,

Bearing in mind the work of the relevant subsidiary organs of the General Assembly,

Taking fully into account the views expressed during the fortieth session,

1. Expresses its conviction that an overall increase in efficiency would further enhance the capacity of the United Nations to attain the purposes and implement the principles of the Charter of the United Nations:

2. Decides to establish a Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations with a term of one year, to carry out in full accordance with the principles and provisions of the Charter the following tasks:

(a) To conduct a thorough review of the administrative and financial matters of the United Nations, with a view to identifying measures for further improving the efficiency of its administrative and financial functioning, which would contribute to strengthening its effectiveness in dealing with political, economic and social issues;

(b) To submit to the General Assembly, before the opening of its forty-first session, a report containing the observations and recommendations of the Group;

3. Requests the President of the General Assembly, in consultation with the regional groups, to appoint as soon as possible the members of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts with due regard to equitable geographical distribution;

4. Decides that the Group will consist of eighteen members, and requests the Secretary-General to convene a meeting of the Group as soon as possible to enable it to elect its officers;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to provide the Group with the necessary staff and services;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide full assistance to the Group, in particular by submitting his views and providing information necessary to conduct the review;

7. Invites the relevant subsidiary organs of the General Assembly to submit to the Group, through their chairmen, information and comments on matters pertaining to their work;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Review of the efficiency of the administrative and financial functioning of the United Nations: report of the Group of High-level Intergovernmental Experts to Review the Efficiency of the Administrative and Financial Functioning of the United Nations".

Among the States explaining their positions, Brazil felt that the text tended to imply that the United Nations capacity to attain the purposes of the Charter and implement its principles depended on the increased efficiency of its administrative and financial functioning. If the United Nations lacked effectiveness, Brazil stated, it was due not to management's shortcomings but rather to the conflicting and sometimes irreconcilable goals and policies of Member States. In Peru's opinion, the momentum for improvement should come from Members' own efforts and determination rather than from outside, and should be aimed at making the Organization not only more efficient but also more equitable, independent and democratic.

Mexico said it failed to see the link between improved administrative and financial efficiency and full compliance with Charter purposes and principles; what was required was the political will to go beyond rhetoric and take action. Also, Mexico said, the Group should be unanimous in its recommendations, none of which should jeopardize the principle of equal sovereignty of States, and the independence and effectiveness of the United Nations should in no way be undermined by pressure, financial or otherwise. The factors responsible for the Organization's problems, Democratic Yemen said, were the lack of political will to arrive at solutions and failure to heed resolutions.

Singapore agreed with Democratic Yemen, but stressed that since the text's intent was to improve efficiency, and since such improvement could only help to rebuild United Nations prestige and credibility, it supported the resolution and called on other small States to do likewise. Solomon Islands saw the resolution as a move towards greater efficiency, economy and achievement, in view of what it said were rising personnel costs and increasing numbers of conferences and seminars, among the ever-growing expenditures.

The Syrian Arab Republic said it would have preferred the Group's mandate to be more clearly defined; it was imperative to appoint the Group on an equitable geographic and political basis, with a fair representation of the Group of 77 developing countries.

Argentina believed that the resolution's purpose would not be achieved without the full agreement and co-operation of all Members. Burundi, speaking for the African Group, noted that the resolution had been submitted in a difficult context, where problems believed to be uniquely financial and administrative could ultimately lead to extreme politicization. Burundi emphasized that all studies mandated by the resolution should be in strict accord with Charter principles and that any reform should take account of the principle of sovereign equality of States.

Cuba, along with Mexico, Saudi Arabia and Uruguay, shared the understanding that the Group's work would focus exclusively on administrative and financial matters.

Conferences and meetings

In 1985, the 22-member Committee on Conferences convened in New York for an organizational meeting on 11 February and for a substantive session from 26 to 30 August.<sup>(1)</sup> At the organizational meeting, the Committee decided on its programme of work for 1985-1986 and adopted a biennial approach to its work in compliance with General Assembly resolutions of 1983<sup>(2)</sup> and 1984.<sup>(3)</sup> Accordingly, in 1985 the Committee concentrated on matters relating to the pattern of conferences and the efficient use of conference-servicing resources, deferring to 1986 matters relating to the control and limitation of documentation.

The Committee recommended Assembly consideration of a draft resolution on the pattern of conferences and a draft calendar of conferences and meetings for 1986-1987 (see below).

Calendar of meetings

Pursuant to a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> the Committee on Conferences<sup>(1)</sup> in 1985 studied in depth the existing provisions relating to the pattern of conferences. It took into account the modifications it had proposed in 1983<sup>(5)</sup> intended to update the basic conference-servicing provisions adopted by the Assembly in 1976.<sup>(6)</sup> It examined the related questions of improved utilization of conference-servicing resources and the frequency of planning missions for meetings or conferences held away from United Nations Headquarters (see p. 1259).

The Committee considered a Secretariat report on current procedures for implementing that provision of a 1979 Assembly decision<sup>(7)</sup> stating that no subsidiary organ of the Assembly should be permitted to meet at Headquarters during a regular Assembly session, unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly. The report noted that a number of requests for exceptions were received each year, for which detailed substantive reasons were not normally given. It was agreed that the Chairman, having received a request for an exception to that provision, which should contain details of why the meeting was necessary, would circulate it to Committee members; on the basis of their replies, and if necessary a Committee decision, he would advise the Assembly President.

In addition, the Committee reviewed its own procedures for examining proposals with conference-servicing implications put forward at Assembly sessions, as required by a 1980 Assembly resolution.<sup>(8)</sup> It agreed to examine any such proposal before action on it was taken by the Main Committee concerned, to allow timely submission of the resulting observations to that Main Committee, as well as to the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) and to the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee for their consideration.

Following extensive consultations, the Committee reached consensus on a draft resolution containing proposals to serve as a framework for more accurate forecasting of conference-servicing needs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/243 on 18 December 1985: section I, by recorded vote, and the resolution as a whole, without vote.

Pattern of conferences

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1202(XII) of 13 December 1957, 1851(XVII) of 19 December 1962, 1987(XVIII) of 17 December 1963, 2116(XX) of 21 December 1965, 2239(XXI) of 20 December 1966, 2361(XXII) of 19 December 1967, 2478(XXIII) of 21 December 1968, 2609(XXIV) of 16 December 1969, 2693(XXV) of 11 December 1970, 2834(XXVI) of 17 December 1971, 2960(XXVII) of 13 December 1972, 3350(XXIX) and 3351(XXIX) of 18 December 1974, 3491(XXX) of 15 December 1975, 31/140, section I, of 17 December 1976, 38/32 C of 25 November 1983 and 39/68 C of 13 December 1984,

I

Having considered the report of the Committee on Conferences,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Committee on Conferences;

2. Approves the draft calendar of conferences and meetings of the United Nations for the biennium 1986-1987 as submitted by the Committee on Conferences;

3. Authorizes the Committee on Conferences to make any adjustments in the calendar of conferences and meetings for the biennium 1986-1987 that may become necessary as a result of action and decisions taken by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

4. Reaffirms the general principle that, in drawing up the schedule of conferences and meetings, United Nations bodies shall plan to meet at their respective established headquarters, with the following exceptions:

(a) The regular sessions of the Governing Council of the United Nations Development Programme shall be held alternately at United Nations Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Geneva;

(b) The sessions of the International Law Commission shall be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva;

(c) The sessions of the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law may be held, subject to the provision in General Assembly resolution 2205(XXI), section II, paragraph 6, of 17 December 1966, alternately at United Nations Headquarters and at the United Nations Office at Vienna;

(d) The second regular session of the Economic and Social Council may be held at the United Nations Office at Geneva provided that the closing date falls at least six weeks before the opening of the regular session of the General Assembly;

(e) The functional commissions of the Economic and Social Council shall meet at their established headquarters unless the Council designates another place to achieve a more rational pattern of the work programme, taking into account any recommendation of the commission concerned and in consultation with the Secretary-General;

(f) The regular sessions of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific, the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean, the Economic Commission for Africa and the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia, as well as meetings of their subsidiary bodies, may be held away from their headquarters when the commission concerned so decides, subject, in the case of regular sessions of the commissions, to the approval of the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly;

(g) The International Civil Service Commission shall hold its regular annual session at United Nations Headquarters and, if more than one session is required in any one year, may accept an invitation from one of its participating organizations to hold its other session or sessions at the headquarters of that particular organization;

(h) The sessions of the Legal Sub-Committee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space shall be held alternately at United Nations Headquarters and the United Nations Office at Geneva;

(i) The Conference on Disarmament shall meet at the United Nations Office at Geneva;

5. Decides that United Nations bodies may hold sessions away from their established headquarters when a Government issuing an invitation for a session to be held within its territory has agreed to defray, after consultation with the Secretary-General as to their nature and possible extent, the actual additional costs directly or indirectly involved;

6. Reaffirms its instruction to all its subsidiary organs to complete their reports for the following session of the General Assembly no later than 1 September and, where necessary, to report to the Assembly in addenda to the reports of the organs concerned any activity undertaken after the adoption of such reports;

7. Decides that no subsidiary organ of the General Assembly may meet at United Nations Headquarters during a regular session of the Assembly unless explicitly authorized by the Assembly;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to provide interpretation services for informal meetings on an ad hoc basis in accordance with established practice;

9. Authorizes the Secretary-General to apply maximum overprogramming of meetings whenever possible to achieve better utilization of conference resources;

10. Requests the Committee on Conferences and the Secretary-General to take account of the following principles in drawing up the draft calendar of conferences and meetings:

(a) The biennial calendar of conferences and meetings approved by the General Assembly shall govern the meetings programme during the period concerned;

(b) All United Nations meetings shall be conducted within the resources allocated by the General Assembly for that purpose;

(c) Between sessions of the General Assembly, departures from the calendar may, in special or unusual circumstances, be approved by the Committee on Conferences provided that changes affecting the subsequent year of the biennium shall be approved by the Assembly;

(d) Subsidiary organs of the General Assembly shall not, without the approval of the Assembly, create new standing bodies or ad hoc sessional or inter-sessional bodies that require additional resources, and other principal organs of the United Nations should make similar decisions with regard to their respective subsidiary bodies, if they have not already done so;

(e) An adequate interval of time, to be determined by the body concerned, shall be allowed between sessions of a body to permit Member States to derive maximum benefit from the activities and to provide sufficient time for the preparation of future activities;

(f) United Nations bodies shall meet at their respective established headquarters, subject to the exceptions to this principle approved by the General Assembly;

(g) The capacity of the documentation services of the Secretariat to process and issue in time the documentation required for the sessions of all scheduled organs should be taken into account;

(h) No more than one special conference of the United Nations shall be convened at the same time;

(i) In any given year, no more than five special conferences should be convened, unless the General Assembly specifically decides otherwise;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the most rational and effective use of all United Nations conference centres and facilities;

12. Requests the Committee on Conferences to continue its periodic examination of the rules governing conference planning;

II

1. Urges all United Nations bodies to increase their efforts to ensure that their requests for conference-servicing resources correspond accurately to their requirements;

2. Further urges those bodies to plan their work well in advance in order to make full use of the conference-servicing resources allocated to them and so that any unused conference-servicing resources can be reassigned to ensure their most effective utilization;

3. Requests subsidiary organs of the General Assembly to include in their reports to the Assembly a statement on the progress made in response to the relevant provisions of Assembly resolution 39/68 B of 13 December 1984 on the rational and efficient utilization of conference-servicing resources;

4. Urges intergovernmental bodies reporting to the Second Committee of the General Assembly that have not yet adjusted their meeting cycles to conform to that Committee's biennial programme of work to do so as soon as possible;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to review the composition and frequency of planning missions for meetings and conferences held away from Headquarters, in particular those sent to cities where United Nations conference facilities already exist;

6. Also requests the Secretary-General to report to the Committee on Conferences at its substantive session of 1986 on the results of that review concerning planning missions sent in 1985 and, as far as possible, in 1986;

III

1. Decides that the Committee on Conferences should review the question of the provision of summary records at its substantive session in 1986;

2. Also decides that the present experimental arrangements for summary records, established by the General Assembly in its resolution 37/14 C of 16 November 1982, should remain in effect until the Assembly, upon the recommendation of the Committee on Conferences, takes further action.

General Assembly resolution 40/243

18 December 1985 Meeting 121

Adopted without vote

Sect. I, 131-1-17 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/847) without vote, 1 November (meeting 24); draft by Committee on Conferences (A/40/32); agenda item 121.

Financial implications. 5th Committee, A/40/974; S-G, A/C.5/40/34.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 9, 10, 14, 15, 17, 18, 22, 24, 52; plenary 121.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belize, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, United Kingdom.

Before the Fifth Committee approved the text, an oral amendment was proposed by the United States to delete subparagraph 4 (f) of section I. The United States view was that meetings of regional commissions away from their headquarters were not an efficient use of resources, which could be better spent on their development programmes. The amendment was rejected by a recorded vote of 81 to 2, with 23 abstentions. Argentina stated that meeting away from headquarters, a long-standing practice, helped to spread awareness of United Nations economic and social activities and allow commissions to observe conditions in developing countries at first hand.

Citing other exceptions to the general rule, Austria believed the whole issue of the meeting cycle of the commissions should have been given proper consideration in the Committee on Conferences. Canada, Cuba, Belgium (speaking for the 10 members of the European Economic Community), New Zealand and Sweden felt that the subparagraph should be interpreted in the light of paragraph 5, which stipulated that no additional costs to the United Nations should be incurred by any departure from the general rule. Japan considered it essential to review the application of existing rules on a continuing basis, particularly in relation to the availability of conference facilities.

A related oral amendment by the United States to the calendar of conferences—to change the venue of the 1986 session of the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean from Mexico City to Santiago, the subject of Economic and Social Council decision 1985/188—was rejected by a recorded vote of 83 to 7, with 15 abstentions. Austria, Italy and Liberia said they could not support the United States amendment because conference facilities at Santiago did not appear to be adequate. France, the Netherlands and New Zealand said that what was really at issue was the question of additional costs incurred when commission sessions were held away from the headquarters, and they could therefore not support the amendment.

A USSR oral proposal was also rejected—by a recorded vote of 72 to 31, with 1 abstention—which would have left the venue of the March 1986 session of the International Civil Service Commission (ICSC) to be determined, rather than to be held at Nairobi; if a participating organization, i.e. a specialized agency, did not invite ICSC to meet at its headquarters, it should meet in New York, the USSR said. Algeria felt that challenging the consensus reached in the Committee on Conferences would not be constructive. Nigeria said ICSC had accepted an invitation from the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), which it interpreted to be a participating organization as referred to in paragraph 4 (g), so there was no basis for the Soviet amendment.

Calendar for 1985

Between 11 February and 27 June, and during its August session, the Committee on Conferences<sup>(1)</sup> considered seven requests for departures from the approved calendar of conferences and meetings for 1985,<sup>(9)</sup> as amended by subsequent resolutions and decisions of the 1984 General Assembly session and decisions of the Economic and Social Council at its 1985 organizational (February) session.<sup>(10)</sup> Six of those requests were approved by the Committee: the addition of the Conference on the Emergency Situation in Africa; a change in venue for the Board of Trustees of the United Nations Voluntary Fund for Victims of Torture; a resumed session of the Commission on the Status of Women acting as the Preparatory Body for the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women; a change of dates and venue of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies; extension of the session of the General Conference of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO); and holding meetings of the Committee on Negotiations with Intergovernmental Agencies during the Assembly session.

The Committee did not approve a request for a change of venue, from New York to Geneva, of the Preparatory Committee for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development.

The Committee later informed the Assembly President, by letters of 12,<sup>(11)</sup> 17<sup>(12)</sup> and 19

September(13) and 26 November,(14) of a number of requests from subsidiary organs to meet in New York during the 1985 Assembly session in order to fulfil their mandates. The Committee did not object, on the understanding that the meetings requested would be accommodated as facilities and services became available so as not to disrupt Assembly activities. The meetings, including those requested in the first two letters as endorsed by the General Committee in September,(15) were authorized by the Assembly decision below.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendations of the General Committee and the Committee on Conferences, the General Assembly adopted without vote decision 40/403.

Meetings of subsidiary organs during the fortieth session

At its 3rd and 96th plenary meetings, on 20 September and 29 November 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendations of the Committee on Conferences and of the General Committee, decided that the following subsidiary organs should be authorized to hold meetings during the fortieth session:

- (a) Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean;
- (b) Advisory Committee on the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa;
- (c) Committee of Trustees of the United Nations Fund for South Africa;
- (d) Committee on Relations with the Host Country;
- (e) Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;
- (f) Committee on the Review and Appraisal of the Implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade;
- (g) Special Committee against Apartheid;
- (h) Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories;
- (i) United Nations Council for Namibia;
- (j) Working Group on the Financing of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

General Assembly decision 40/403

Adopted without vote

Approved by General Committee (A/40/250) without vote, 18 September (meeting 1); proposals by Committee on Conferences (A/40/663, A/40/940); agenda item 8.

Calendar for 1986-1987

At its August session, the Committee on Conferences recommended for General Assembly approval a draft calendar of conferences and meetings for the biennium 1986-1987, drawn up as at 30 August 1985 and annexed to the Committee's report.(1) The Assembly in December approved the draft calendar-by section I of resolution 40/243 on the pattern of conferences—and authorized the Committee to make any adjustments that might become necessary as a result of Assembly decisions at its current session.

During consideration by the Fifth Committee of the draft calendar and draft resolution, two oral amendments to the calendar were proposed, one by the USSR and the other by the United States. Both were rejected by recorded vote (see p. 1258).

Referring to item 61 of the calendar for 1986, Cameroon said its offer to host the 1986 session of the Economic Commission for Africa (ECA) at Yaoundé was to enable ECA members to witness at first hand the problems confronting the region as exemplified by Cameroon, and should not be regarded as a precedent.

Israel said that, had separate votes been taken on items, it would have voted against inclusion of the three entries in each of the draft calendars for 1986 and 1987 for meetings of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People.

Conference and meeting services

In response to a 1984 General Assembly request,(3) the Committee on Conferences(1) resumed in 1985 its examination of the effective use of conference resources, including the shortening of sessions. The discussion, based on a Secretariat report containing statistics of 1984 meetings of United Nations organs in New York and at Geneva, encompassed the sources of wastage, namely, cancellations and the late starting and early ending of meetings, and the continuing policy of overprogramming, which entailed a measure of underutilization. Consideration was given to proposals that the Committee negotiate for a reduction of services for subsidiary organs that had made insufficient use of them in the past and that it ask those that had not utilized 75 per cent or more of their allocations in the preceding three years to consider whether all their allocations for 1986 were necessary.

The Committee also considered the matter of planning missions undertaken prior to meetings or conferences to be held away from Headquarters. It examined for this purpose a Secretariat paper on missions undertaken in 1984, indicating the criteria used to determine their need as well as data on their composition, destination and cost.

The measures recommended by the Committee for the improved use of conference-servicing resources and for the further review of planning missions were adopted by the Assembly on 18 December as embodied in section II of resolution 40/243.

Earlier, on 14 December, the Fifth Committee, having considered the Secretary-General's consolidated statement(16) of programme budget implications of conference-servicing costs for the proposed 1986-1987 budget (see Chapter I of this section) and the related ACABQ recommendation,(17) approved by a recorded vote of 71 to 12, with 12 abstentions, additional appropriations of $3,400,000 for such costs in 1986. Of that amount, $3 million was for Headquarters and $400,000 for Geneva, reduced from $4,448,200 and $711,000, respectively, which had been requested by the Secretary-General.

In the opinion of ACABQ, there was no need to act on the request for $601,700 for Vienna; the amount was provisional, pending experience in operating interim conference-servicing arrangements agreed upon between the United Nations and UNIDO (see below). Additional appropriations could be considered in 1986.

Also in December, by decision 40/421, the Assembly deferred to its 1986 session consideration of the Secretary-General's report on draft standard rules of procedure for United Nations conferences (see p. 1181).

Unified conference services at the Vienna International Centre

In a September 1985 report,(18) the Secretary-General proposed a number of budgetary transfers and related administrative adjustments in the proposed 1986-1987 budget, aimed at pooling the conference-servicing resources at the Vienna International Centre into a unified conference service under the administrative responsibility of the United Nations. The report was submitted in response to two Assembly actions: one calling for such a service,(9) based on a recommendation of the Committee on Conferences; the other,(19) on a JIU recommendation endorsed by ACABQ.(20) These actions were taken in anticipation of the conversion of UNIDO to a specialized agency (see p. 591).

Under existing arrangements, conference services at Vienna were provided to United Nations entities sharing the Centre, including UNIDO, in translation, terminology, references, meetings planning and servicing, editorial and documents control, publications and distribution, and interpretation. These services were under UNIDO management and administration, in keeping with Department of Conference Services (DCS) guidelines. The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) maintained a separate conference service, but informal co-operative arrangements were in force with some of its servicing units: printing and reproduction services were charged directly to the user; capital costs were shared in proportion to services received in the preceding year. In addition, DCS maintained a limited in-session reproduction capacity.

JIU recommendation 5 had called for: continuing the existing UNIDO/United Nations joint conference service after UNIDO became a specialized agency; formalizing the co-operative arrangements with IAEA; and pooling the other IAEA conference-servicing units into a single conference structure after application of the principles and criteria for future common services set forth by JIU in 1984.(20) In addition, the Secretary-General saw advantage in linking the Vienna conference service with its counterpart services in New York and Geneva through the world-wide communications network under United Nations control.

The Secretary-General's proposals for a unified conference service included the transfer of some $12.8 million budgeted under UNIDO and Administrative services, Vienna, to section 29 of the budget (Conference services, Vienna); redeployment of some $1.6 million of that amount for the conversion of temporary-assistance interpreter posts into established posts; and additional appropriations totalling $66,700 to upgrade posts to bring the level of the proposed service to a division.

The Secretary-General stated that a draft of his report had been submitted to UNIDO and IAEA for review. While the IAEA comments had been taken into account, UNIDO had expressed strong reservations about the immediate establishment of the proposed unified service.

Commenting on the Secretary-General's report, ACABQ(21) noted that, in the absence of an agreed approach by the parties involved, it appeared doubtful that the Secretary-General's proposals could be implemented as they stood. Affirming its continued belief in the idea of unified conference services at Vienna for both economy and efficiency, it recommended that the Assembly request the Secretary-General urgently to resume discussions with UNIDO to resolve outstanding differences in time for a further report at the Assembly's current session.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted decision 40/405.

Unified conference services and other joint services for the United Nations organizations at the Vienna International Centre

At its 19th plenary meeting, on 2 October 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, recalling section IV of its resolution 39/242 of 18 December 1984, and mindful of the desirability of unified conference services and other joint services at Vienna:

(a) Requested the Secretary-General, on an urgent basis, to resume discussions on unified conference services and other joint services with the Director-General of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization with a view to resolving outstanding differences in time for a further report to be submitted to the Assembly later at its fortieth session;

(b) Requested the Secretary-General to communicate to the relevant bodies of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization its concern that no action should be taken by that organization that would either preclude further discussions by the Secretary-General and the Director-General on unified conference services and other joint services or prejudice the outcome of such discussions.

General Assembly decision 40/405

Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/695) without objection, 1 October (meeting 5); draft by ACABQ (A/40/684), orally modified; agenda items 119, 120.

Pursuant to the foregoing decision, consultations took place at Vienna, from 14 to 16 October, between senior officials of the United Nations, UNIDO and IAEA. No agreement was reached on the need to proceed at once with setting up a unified conference service. It was agreed, however, that the conference-servicing requirements and facilities of the three Vienna-based organizations be analysed systematically in a comprehensive study, to be carried out jointly by them for submission to policy-making organs in 1987 so that conclusions could be reflected in the organizations' 1988-1989 budgets. In the interim, the United Nations would continue to provide translators and supporting staff to UNIDO, and UNIDO would operate a translation/documents service jointly servicing the United Nations and UNIDO. A joint UNIDO/United Nations meetings and interpretation service, to be operated by the United Nations, would be set up, consisting of the current Meetings Planning Unit and four interpreters and an additional 16 interpreter posts. IAEA indicated its interest in a common interpreters service.

The Secretary-General set out these arrangements in a November 1985 report,<sup>(22)</sup> in which he reiterated that a unified conference service, under United Nations responsibility, would provide maximum economy and efficiency to Member States.

Documents and publications

Publications policy

In May 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> the Committee for Programme and Co-ordination (CPC) deferred to its 1986 session consideration of a 1984 JIU report on publications policy and practice in the United Nations system,<sup>(2)</sup> together with the related comments of the Secretary-General, the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) and ACABQ.

A follow-up notice on the JIU recommendations was included in the Secretary-General's report to the General Assembly in September 1985<sup>(3)</sup> on implementation of JIU recommendations on various topics. The Secretary-General stated that implementation of the recommendations to improve both the approach to sales and free distribution and the information available to management had taken place, was under way or was under discussion by the Publications Board, the interdepartmental Secretariat body which established publications policy and monitored its implementation. The question of the relevancy of recurrent publications, recommended for examination by intergovernmental bodies, was the subject of a report currently before CPC (see below).

The matter of setting up publications committees at main office locations and in large author departments for quality control would be pursued; an alternative proposed by JIU was deemed impractical—to entrust that task to a single publications director. The other recommendations on improving quality were under discussion by the Publications Board, as well as by the Inter-agency Meeting on Language Arrangements, Documentation and Publications, which was also studying the recommendations on co-operation and consultation among organizations concerning information gathering, publications preparation and distribution, publications quality and appeal in relation to target readerships, future programmes and new production technologies.

The Secretary-General noted that the recommendations to reduce the quantity of published material were addressed to governing bodies and, to a large extent, duplicated earlier proposals.

As to the recommendations on making publications more effective in disseminating knowledge of the United Nations system and on integrating certain Department of Public Information audio-visual productions with United Nations publications, ways of realizing the first were being studied and the second being implemented within existing resources.

In March 1985, revised guidelines were issued on the Organization's policy towards copyrighting, granting permission to reproduce or translate its publications and documents or extracts therefrom, and using material copyrighted in the name of others in United Nations publications or documents.<sup>(4)</sup>

Documents limitation

In 1985, two categories of documentation—summary records and recurrent publications—were reviewed in an effort to keep their production within reasonable limits. The policies laid down by the General Assembly on the control and limitation of documentation were set forth by the Secretary-General in a note of 9 May,<sup>(5)</sup> which took account of policy decisions adopted by the Assembly from 1958 to 1984.

The Assembly in 1984 had requested<sup>(6)</sup> the Committee on Conferences to examine further the relative suitability of summary records as currently prepared and of the abbreviated summary records prepared experimentally. Thus in 1985, the Committee reported,<sup>(7)</sup> it had asked United Nations organs entitled to such records for their views on the matter. In the expectation of receiving more replies than it had at the time of its August session, the Committee decided to pursue the matter in 1986.

Responding to a CPC request that all recurrent publications of the United Nations should be examined in the light of the criteria set out by the Assembly in 1983,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report<sup>(9)</sup> in April 1985 on the results of such an examination. The data, annexed to the report, included a list of all recurrent publications by title, when it was first published, periodicity, average preparation time, justification, number of copies and sales record. The report was to assist CPC in its examination of such publications for the proposed 1986-1987 budget. The report noted that no recurrent publication had yet been recommended for termination.

It was also noted that one of the criteria, namely, whether a publication contributed to promoting the Organization's principles and purposes, was not susceptible of a judgement based on quantifiable data; such a judgement fell within the competence of the author department or CPC. Whether a publication met the criteria of usefulness to the end-user, of filling a need, or of offering a high standard of analysis or data required reactions from end-users. Consequently, and in connection with a JIU recommendation to obtain feedback,<sup>(2)</sup> reader surveys had been undertaken by several author departments, including regional commissions. Such surveys were encouraged, not only by the Publications Board but also as a standard element of the Organization's internal evaluation system.

Owing to constraints of time, CPC on 25 May 1985<sup>(1)</sup> deferred consideration of the Secretary-General's report to 1986. The Economic and Social Council, by section IV of resolution 1985/76 of 26 July, suggested that the report be considered in the context of CPC's discussion of the cross-organizational programme analysis of economic and social research and policy analysis (see p. 1044), with a view to identifying duplication and undue overlaps.

Headquarters

Catering

On 31 March 1985, at the expiration of the contract for the catering operation at United Nations Headquarters, the financial arrangements for the operation were revised to provide that the contractor operate the facilities for a one-year period for its own account, beginning on 1 April 1985. Traditionally, the catering operation had been financed by the United Nations but managed by the contractor for the account of the United Nations; consequently, fluctuations in expenses and variations in sales had a direct, and often adverse, impact on the United Nations.

In an October report,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that close monitoring revealed no discernible difference in the quality of services. He also stated that proposals for a new three-year contract, beginning on 1 April 1986, were being solicited.

Acting on the recommendation of ACABQ<sup>(2)</sup> and the Fifth Committee,<sup>(3)</sup> the General Assembly, on 18 December 1985, took note of the Secretary-General's report. The action was recorded in section III of resolution 40/252, adopted without vote.

Telephone system

In 1985, the Secretary-General proposed to acquire a new telephone system at United Nations Headquarters that, in the long term, would be cost effective (for details, including General Assembly action, see p. 1266).

Addis Ababa and Bangkok

In 1985, the Secretary-General submitted two reports concerning the headquarters premises of the Economic Commission for Africa at Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. One report<sup>(4)</sup> gave the status of the construction of additional conference facilities, approved by the General Assembly in 1984;<sup>(5)</sup> the other<sup>(6)</sup> set forth proposals for modification, refurbishing and repair of the existing main conference room, as well as for building maintenance.

The Secretary-General also submitted a progress report<sup>(7)</sup> on the construction project to expand the conference facilities of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific at Bangkok, Thailand, also approved in 1984.<sup>(8)</sup>

(For details, including Assembly action, see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter VIII.)

Nairobi

Construction

A final progress report—the last of those submitted by the Secretary-General in accordance with a 1980 request of the General Assembly(9)—was submitted in October 1985(10) on the construction and office space requirements for the United Nations Office at Nairobi. According to the report, the United Nations complex (Gigiri complex) was virtually completed. The remaining task of supervising the completion of two underground water-storage tanks, the installation of the closed-circuit television surveillance systems and the construction of a fire-engine house was transferred on 30 September 1985 to the Common Services Unit (see below). It was estimated that all outstanding items would be completed by the end of the year.

Additional to the original construction project, a number of items were approved from within existing resources: one office block; the visitors' and tours' pavilion; furniture for the coffee lounges; film projectors, spotlights and loudspeakers for the main conference rooms; electronic voting systems; landscaping and fence reinforcements; upgrading of the interpretation booths and equipment; security-checking and television surveillance equipment; a fire-engine; a mini-van; three patrol cars; and spare parts for electrical and mechanical equipment.

Of the $27,078,200 that had been appropriated, a balance of $401,200 remained unencumbered as at 31 July 1985. The Secretary-General proposed to use it for the rehabilitation of oxidation ponds, generators, zoning and metering of the conference and cafeteria lighting systems, renovation of bridge links, road repairs, lobby improvements and other miscellaneous items. On their completion, expected before the end of 1986, he would close the Nairobi construction account. The balance and its disposition were noted by ACABQ.(11)

On 18 December 1985, acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee,(3) the General Assembly took note of the Secretary-General's report; the decision became section IV of resolution 40/252.

Common services

As proposed by the Secretary-General in 1983,(12) the United Nations Common Services Unit (UNCS) at Nairobi was set up on 1 July 1984 to provide a number of common services—utilities, security, local transportation of staff and management of buildings and grounds—to the United Nations offices at the Gigiri complex. Those offices included UNEP headquarters and the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (UNCHS), as well as the regional offices of the United Nations Children's Fund, the International Civil Aviation Organization, and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization which moved to the premises on 25 October 1985.

When the original estimates were prepared, only six months' experience had been gained in maintaining the new Gigiri complex and a review of its maintenance and operations requirements had been undertaken too late to be reflected in the 1986-1987 budget. Consequently, ACABQ(13) recommended an amount of $3,243,700 for common services (a maintenance level) pending revised estimates based on the review.

The revised estimates, submitted by the Secretary-General on 14 October 1985,(14) totalled $4,446,400. Approval of that amount would require an additional appropriation of $1,202,700.

The report on estimates indicated that the rental rate of $66 per square metre arrived at in 1984(15) had been accepted by all tenants, resulting in an estimated rental income of $2,119,800. A reduced rental rate remained applicable to UNEP. Discussions had been held to determine whether certain services performed by UNEP and UNCHS could become joint services to be entrusted to UNCS.

ACABQ(11) recommended a $242,400 reduction in the Secretary-General's estimates, proposing $133,800 ($52,200 less) for a P-3 engineer post, six new temporary local-level posts and common staff costs; $364,400 ($100,000 less) for equipment rental and maintenance, including transportation; $110,000 ($36,600 less) for miscellaneous services; and $200,000 ($53,600 less) for furniture and equipment. This reduced the revised estimates from $4,446,400 to $4,204,000. Given the $3,243,700 already appropriated, the total required was $960,300.

This appropriation was part of the revised estimates under section 28 (Administration and management) of the proposed 1986-1987 budget approved in first reading by the Fifth Committee(3) on 20 November 1985 by a recorded vote of 79 to 9, with 17 abstentions.

Vienna

In 1985, the General Assembly considered proposals by the Secretary-General for unifying the conference services at the Vienna International Centre (see p. 1260).

Information systems, computers and telecommunication

Co-ordination of information systems

In 1985, the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination reported(1) on continuing efforts to improve the co-ordination and compatibility of United Nations information systems through its Advisory Committee for the Co-ordination of Information Systems (ACCIS). For the short term, those efforts concentrated on three specific projects: setting up a register of United Nations development activities; preparing a telecommunications map and formulating standards for documents transmission; and compiling an inventory of accessible data bases and conducting a survey of dissemination policies.

At ACC's request, ACCIS convened a special session on 14 and 15 January to consider the final design, scope and problems of the Register of Development Activities for presentation to CPC. Called for in 1982 by the Economic and Social Council<sup>(2)</sup> and the General Assembly,<sup>(3)</sup> the proposal for the Register was formulated by an ACCIS technical panel and presented to ACC in 1984.<sup>(4)</sup> The special session estimated the cost to each organization participating in the Register and the cost of merging all information in a central processing unit and making it available to end-users, identified as governmental units of member States and planning, programming and operational units of United Nations organizations.

On 25 May, following introduction of ACC's report on the Register,<sup>(5)</sup> CPC decided to transmit it to the Economic and Social Council. The Council took note of it on 26 July by section VII of resolution 1985/76, and invited ACC to proceed with the technical design for the establishment and operation of the Register and to submit to CPC a progress report, including information on cost, funding, assessment of usefulness and agency participation.

At its third session (Geneva, 23 and 24 September),<sup>(6)</sup> ACCIS, in addition to reviewing further work on the Register, examined a report on the outcome of an experiment in the use of commercial communication systems to interconnect United Nations offices at Geneva, Nairobi, New York, Paris, Rome, Tokyo, Vienna and the offices of the regional commissions. Undertaken by its technical panel on computer-based communication services, the experiment raised the question of transmission standards, which the panel was to pursue, along with its task of preparing a telecommunications map showing existing telecommunications links (including telex), especially with developing countries. In connection with the development of a telecommunications network for the United Nations system, ACCIS welcomed the decision of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) to study the question of the use of such a common network by the United Nations and interested specialized agencies.

ACCIS also considered the question of access to information about United Nations serial publications, currently maintained in the central data base operated by the International Serials Data System (ISDS) in Paris—a world-wide network responsible for the creation and maintenance of a register of world serial publications—but not directly accessible by end-users. ACCIS agreed to serve as the channel for requests for such information and, for that purpose, would maintain a subfile of United Nations serials at ISDS. The question of access to information on serials in machine-readable form was to be examined by the technical panel on data base access, which had also been entrusted with compiling an inventory of publicly available data bases and of current practice and policy on their availability, including access by member States, and with formulating guidelines governing access to data bases within the United Nations system.

In January, ACCIS published the Directory of United Nations Data Bases and Information Systems, listing over 600 selected data bases, information systems and information services operated by 38 organizations. It also continued publication of the bimonthly ACCIS Newsletter.

ACCIS regrouped its work for 1986-1987 under three subprogrammes: information resources of the United Nations system; tools for improving system-wide information infrastructure; and basic co-ordination services. An item on a clearing-house on office information management was added.

On 29 October,<sup>(7)</sup> ACC revised the structure of ACCIS by designating the chairmen of its technical panels ex officio members of the Steering Committee and inviting that Committee to appoint a vice-chairman for ACCIS.

Other activities. The United Nations continued during 1985 to operate several information systems concerned with special aspects of development. These included the Industrial and Technological Information Bank of UNIDO and the International Referral System for sources of environmental information of UNEP (see pp. 608 and 800).

Budget of the International Computing Centre

In October 1985,<sup>(8)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Fifth Committee the 1986 budget estimates for the International Computing Centre (ICC) at Geneva, as reviewed by the United Nations and 13 other participating organizations and programmes using and financing ICC services. The United Nations share was $1,420,000 against a total of $5,365,500.

In recommending acceptance of the estimated amount, ACABQ<sup>(9)</sup> noted that its recommendation had no impact on the resources already approved by the Fifth Committee under the relevant section of the proposed 1986-1987 programme budget in respect of United Nations usage of ICC.

On 18 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee,<sup>(10)</sup> the General Assembly approved, by section X of resolution 40/252, the ICC budget estimates for 1986.

Library operations

In his annual report on implementation of JIU recommendations,(11) the Secretary-General stated that, with respect to the 1984 recommendations concerning library operations in the United Nations system,(12) measures for management improvement and new technology (recommendations 2 and 3) were being introduced at the Dag Hammarskjöld Library at Headquarters. Pending determination by ACC of the feasibility of establishing an inter-library panel by the system's organizations (recommendation 1), specific areas delineated as possible foci of a practical, co-operative work programme for the panel had been undertaken by the Library, including development of a common indexing vocabulary and bibliographic control over system-wide documentation, training of library staff, microform programmes and closer working relationships with international library organizations.

Within its limited resources, the United Nations Library at Geneva, as a first step towards modernizing its facilities (recommendation 4), had begun to enter into the United Nations Bibliographic Information System (UNBIS)—the computer catalogue of the Dag Hammarskjöld Library—documents produced at Geneva; entry of monographs and articles received would follow. Further modernization, however, required additional resources.

Computer use

In July 1985, the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly a JIU report(13) on management issues involved in the changing use of computers in organizations of the United Nations system at Geneva. JIU stated that the policy framework developed over the past 20 years for the system-wide computer and information system activities had three interrelated aims: to promote effective international information exchange, especially for development co-operation; to develop co-ordinated or at least compatible system-wide information systems; and to use computerized systems to improve operations.

In this context, JIU surveyed the applications, initiatives, opportunities and problems encountered in the use of new computer technologies in eight major areas: substantive data bases, substantive analysis, technical co-operation, communication, records management and archives, word processing, printing and publications, and administrative and management systems. Limited to 17 United Nations entities at Geneva, the survey found a sharp increase in computer use (from four computers in 1977 to 427 in mid-1984 and from 132 computer terminals to 1,867 in the same period) and computerized systems throughout the substantive, administrative and support activities of the organizations surveyed, against a background of extremely rapid and continuing changes in office technology.

JIU outlined eight recommendations, calling for each organization to set up a central mechanism (a unit, committee or individual) at a sufficiently high level and with adequate management and technical expertise, for planning and controlling of overall information systems development; to require periodic reports on systems development policy, specific services improved, processes streamlined and savings achieved; to develop and maintain a well-rounded computer training programme; and, in recruiting, to require a high degree of skill in both computer and management systems (recommendations 1, 2, 4 and 5).

It was also recommended that ACCIS set up an informal inter-agency computer working group at Geneva to share information on computerized systems development and explore opportunities for co-operation (recommendation 3). The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the International Trade Centre UNCTAD/GATT should strengthen the professional staffing of their computer units (recommendation 6). It was suggested that the Secretary-General ensure a clear-cut process for overall United Nations information systems development, reassess the adequacy and centralized-decentralized balance of management services and computer systems staffing in major duty stations, and determine the staffing needs of the Management Systems Service at Geneva, based on a survey of user requirements (recommendation 7). ACC was to develop and present to ITU a proposal to extend to the specialized agencies the telecommunications arrangements currently granted only to the United Nations (recommendation 8).

Telecommunication

Communications satellite

In keeping with a Committee on Information-recommendation approved in 1984,(14) the Secretary-General, in April 1985,(15) presented to the Committee a report on the acquisition by the United Nations of its own communications satellite. The report was requested in the light of the Secretary-General's 1984 proposals to enhance the United Nations communications system.(16) The proposals provided for interconnecting the main United Nations offices and certain subsidiary offices with reliable multi-purpose telecommunication circuits for exclusive United Nations use 24 hours daily. The network would include United Nations-owned earth stations operating on leased satellite circuits primarily for use by peace-keeping missions.

As approved by the Assembly, the proposals were in the process of being implemented and were expected to become operational, on a staggered basis, during the second half of 1985. A complementary upgrading of communications facilities at Headquarters was also taking place (see below).

The report stated that, given the heavy cost, as well as the legal and technical difficulties inherent in a United Nations-owned and -operated satellite system, the Secretary-General had decided, for the time being at least, on the use of leased communications circuitry, combined with arrangements for using existing satellite facilities.

The enhanced system would serve as the framework on which an even more comprehensive one would eventually be built. As the regional telecommunications centres matured and procedures developed, regional systems might be extended. Direct, exclusive-use circuitry could be established between the United Nations information centres and the appropriate regional communications hub, facilitating information exchange and rapid information dissemination.

Following examination of the Secretary-General's report, the Committee recommended<sup>(17)</sup> to the Assembly that the Secretary-General's assessment be noted and that the acquisition of a United Nations-owned communications satellite be re-examined, should circumstances permit. The attention of the pertinent United Nations organs should be drawn to the 1984 findings of ITU against such acquisition,<sup>(18)</sup> especially as concerned the problem, given the heavy satellite traffic and absence of proper orbital locations, of positioning a United Nations satellite in the geostationary orbit.

Telephone system

In a September 1985 report,<sup>(19)</sup> the Secretary-General proposed to purchase a new telephone system at United Nations Headquarters. The proposal was born out of developments in the United States telephone industry, in particular the break-up on 1 January 1984 of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which had made it financially and operationally advantageous to own, rather than to lease, telephones and related circuits and switching equipment. Seventeen companies in seven different countries had been invited to submit proposals for consideration by the United Nations.

The proposal called for the acquisition of a digital Private Automated Branch Exchange, a switching system capable of servicing 7,500 telephone lines, to be located at Headquarters. The purchase would include internal lines, instruments and other equipment that were currently being rented. However, 1,000 outside lines would continue to be rented to handle incoming and outgoing calls. Savings would result not only from the lower cost of toll calls but, more significantly, from a reduction in the number of rented circuits and telephones.

The Secretary-General proposed that the acquisition be financed through a lease/purchase agreement over 60 months at a cost of $9,438,000, paid in five annual payments starting in 1987, covering principal and interest. Annually, $100,000 would be required for normal costs related to office moves. At the end of the one-year warranty period, a maintenance and installation contract would annually cost $535,000.

The total cost of the system over its expected 13-year life was estimated at $28,130,000; that of purchasing and operating it (including rented circuits) over the five-year acquisition period, $14,862,500—resulting in savings, respectively, of $32,409,000 and $4,022,900 over costs that would be incurred if the existing system were maintained. For 1986, costs would be $3,255,000; for 1987, they would be $2,626,800—a total requirement of $5,881,800 for the 1986-1987 biennium.

ACABQ(20) said it was clear that significant savings would result. Assured that the system would be adequate for the foreseeable future, was currently available and did not depend on further new technology ACABQ accepted the proposal and reduced by $8,400 the amount already appropriated in the 1986-1987 budget for telephone rental and installation. The Fifth Committee<sup>(10)</sup> approved this reduced appropriation, along with other associated revised estimates under the same budget section 28, on 20 November 1985, by a recorded vote of 79 to 9, with 17 abstentions, and, without objection, recommended Assembly approval of the Secretary-General's proposal for the acquisition of a telephone system at Headquarters, as detailed in his report.

Acting without vote on that recommendation, the Assembly on 18 December approved the proposal, embodied in section II of resolution 40/252.

UN Postal Administration

In 1985, gross revenue of the United Nations Postal Administration from the sale of philatelic items at United Nations Headquarters and at overseas offices totalled more than $5.5 million. Revenue from the sale of stamps for philatelic purposes was retained by the United Nations; that from stamps used for postage from Headquarters was retained by the United States Postal Service under an agreement between the United Nations and the United States. Similarly, revenue from stamps used for postage from the United Nations Office at Geneva and from the Vienna International Centre was retained by the Swiss and Austrian postal authorities, respectively, in accordance with agreements between the Organization and Switzerland and Austria.

Five commemorative stamp issues, three souvenir sheets, two souvenir cards, six definitive stamps, three postal cards and one pre-stamped envelope were released during the year.

The first issue, on the "ILO—Turin Centre", was released on 1 February in denominations of 23 United States cents, 0.80 and 1.20 Swiss francs (SwF), and 7.50 Austrian schillings (S), together with a souvenir card.

The second issue, on the theme of "United Nations University—Research, Training, Knowledge", was released on 15 March, in denominations of 50 cents, SwF 0.50 and 0.80, and S 8.50.

The third issue, marking the "40th Anniversary of the United Nations", was released on 26 June in denominations of 22 and 45 cents, SwF 0.50 and 0.70, and S 6.50 and 8.50. Three souvenir sheets, in denominations of 67 cents, SwF 1.20 and S 15, were also released.

The fourth issue was a group of 16 stamps in the commemorative "Flag Series"—the sixth group in that series, released on 20 September in denominations of 22 cents each.

The fifth and final issue, on the theme of "Child Survival", was released on 22 November, in denominations of 22 and 33 cents, SwF 0.50 and 1.20, and S 4.50 and 6. A souvenir card accompanied the issue.

On 10 May, six definitives were issued in denominations of 22 cents and $3, SwF 0.20 and 1.20, and S 4.50 and 15. A 22-cent pre-stamped envelope was issued on the same date, along with postal cards at SwF 0.50 and 0.70, and S 4.

First-day covers for the various issues in 1985 were serviced in the numbers indicated below:

ILO—Turin Centre	310,924
United Nations University	279,074
40th Anniversary of the United Nations	873,063
Flag Series	1,774,193
Child Survival	664,151
Definitives:
22 cents and $3	88,613
SwF 0.20 and 1.20	103,165
S 4.50 and 15	142,687
22-cent envelope	28,600
SwF 0.50 postal card	34,700
SwF 0.70 postal card	34,700
S 4 postal card	53,450

Special postage stamps

In response to a 1984 General Assembly resolution,(1) the Secretary-General reported on the project of issuing special postage stamps on the critical social and economic crisis in Africa. This was part of an overall analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations.(2)

The Secretary-General stated that a special postage stamp on the crisis had been approved and was scheduled for issuance on 31 January 1986. Total gross sales were estimated at $1.2 million, or $600,000 net after deduction of expenses. As stipulated by the same resolution,(1) one half of the net revenue would be earmarked for implementing the objectives set forth in the Declaration on the Critical Economic Situation in Africa;(3) the other half would be placed in a United Nations special account.

ACABQ took note of this information when it reviewed the Secretary-General's analysis as a whole.(4)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting without vote on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/242 on 18 December 1985.

Issue of special postage stamps

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the analysis of the financial situation of the United Nations and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its resolution 39/239 A of 18 December 1984,

Recognizing that, pending a comprehensive settlement of the differences which have given rise to the financial emergency of the Organization, partial or interim steps could enhance the liquidity of the Organization and alleviate its financial difficulties to some extent,

Noting with satisfaction that the project on the issue of special postage stamps on the social and economic crisis in Africa is well under way,

1. Decides, in accordance with its resolution 39/239 A, to place one half of the revenue earned therefrom at the disposal of the Secretary-General for the implementation of objectives as detailed in the Declaration on the Critical Economic Situation in Africa, adopted by the General Assembly on 3 December 1984, and to place the remaining half in a special account;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary steps to economize on the operational expenses of the project on the issue of special postage stamps with a view to increasing the net revenue and to submit a financial report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to explore the possibility of having recourse to other feasible revenue-producing activities that could be undertaken by the United Nations.

General Assembly resolution 40/242

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 Adopted without vote

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/1060) without vote, 16 December (meeting 67); 32-nation draft (A/C.5/40/L.14); agenda item 118.

PART TWO

Intergovernmental organizations related to the United Nations

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA)

In 1985, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) continued its activities to increase the contributions of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity all over the world and to ensure that its assistance was not used for military purposes. Emphasis continued to be placed on safeguards, the safety of nuclear power stations, nuclear fuel-cycle services and the management of nuclear wastes, and on the provision of technical assistance to member States, especially developing countries.

At the end of 1985, 129 non-nuclear-weapon States were parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons<sup>a</sup> (Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT)) (Belize, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Guinea, Kiribati and Seychelles having become parties during the year). Three nuclear-weapon States were also parties. On 10 June, the safeguards agreement relating to the offer by the USSR to place some of its peaceful nuclear installations under IAEA safeguards entered into force. In September, China announced that it was willing to place some of its civilian installations under IAEA safeguards at an appropriate time.

The Agency's efforts to increase nuclear safety and radiation protection were concentrated on developing radiation protection guidelines and helping member States to apply them. In addition, IAEA continued to provide a forum for the exchange of scientific information and to support research on radiation protection.

The development phase of the Nuclear Safety Standards (NUSS) programme was completed, and emphasis switched to implementing the 60 NUSS documents. The International Nuclear Safety Advisory Group held its first two meetings.

The Agency also continued to contribute to preparations for the United Nations Conference for the Promotion of International Co-operation in the Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy, scheduled for 1987.

The twenty-ninth session of the IAEA General Conference was held at Vienna, Austria, from 23 to 27 September. The Conference again demanded that South Africa immediately submit all its nuclear installations and facilities to Agency safeguards, and it called on member States which had not done so to end all nuclear co-operation with South Africa and to stop purchasing Namibian uranium. On the consequences of the 1981 Israeli military attack on an Iraqi nuclear research reactor,<sup>b</sup> the Conference took note of Israel's statement that it would not attack nuclear facilities devoted to peaceful purposes, and called on Israel to place all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards. The Conference also approved the appointment by the Board of Governors of Hans Blix (Sweden) as IAEA Director General for a further four-year term beginning on 1 December 1985.

The Board met four times during 1985, once in February and June and twice in September at Vienna.

The membership of IAEA remained at 112 throughout 1985.

Agency safeguards responsibilities

As at 31 December 1985, 129 non-nuclear-weapon States and three nuclear-weapon States (USSR, United Kingdom, United States) had become party to NPT. There were 163 safeguards agreements in force with 96 States. Safeguards were applied in four nuclear-weapon States (France, USSR, United Kingdom, United States), pursuant to voluntary-offer agreements or to safeguards transfer agreements. Safeguards were also applied in 41 non-nuclear-weapon States under agreements concluded pursuant to NPT or to NPT and the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco), and in one non-nuclear-weapon State pursuant to the Tlatelolco Treaty. During 1985, an amendment to an existing safeguards agreement with Spain entered into force, enabling Spain to place under IAEA safeguards any new peaceful nuclear facility it might acquire.

Safeguards under other agreements were in force with nine non-nuclear-weapon States not party to either NPT or the Tlatelolco Treaty—Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, India, Israel, Pakistan, South Africa and Spain. Safeguards were applied in eight of those States, as well as in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and Viet Nam (both party to NPT).

At the end of 1985, safeguards applied by IAEA in non-nuclear-weapon States covered material in 172 power reactors, 177 research reactors and critical assemblies, 6 conversion, 37 fuel fabrication, 6 reprocessing and 5 enrichment plants, and 486 other installations.

Technical assistance

During 1985, technical assistance in the form of expert services, equipment, fellowships and training courses was provided to 81 countries and regions. A total of 615 fellows underwent individual training, and 926 participants attended 60 training courses and study tours. A total of 121 technical officers provided support to 833 ongoing projects and undertook 418 assignments. Net expenditure on technical assistance reached $33.7 million.

Income to the IAEA Technical Assistance and Co-operation Fund (TACF), derived from voluntary contributions of member States and additional income, reached $25.2 million (a 13 per cent increase over 1984). Extrabudgetary funds exceeded $7.4 million, decreasing for the second consecutive year. UNDP and in-kind resources at IAEA's disposal increased to $2.6 million and $2.8 million respectively.

Programme emphasis varied from region to region. Agriculture was the leading sector for Africa and Latin America, and also for the programme as a whole. Industry and hydrology ranked first in Asia and the Pacific, nuclear safety in Europe and nuclear materials prospecting in the Middle East.

The contribution of developing countries to the technical co-operation programme continued to grow, with these countries providing 13.2 per cent of TACF resources. They provided 33 fellowships (worth $263,100) and 570 of the 1,483 experts and lecturers at IAEA training courses. Thirty-nine of the 60 training courses and 109 of the 638 places of study were in developing countries.

Nuclear power

At the end of 1985, there were 374 nuclear power plants in operation, with a total capacity of some 250,000 megawatts (electrical), accounting for 15 per cent of the world's electricity generation. Thirty-two new plants came on line during the year, which was marked by the start-up of the Super Phénix in France, of THTR-300 (thorium high temperature reactor) in the Federal Republic of Germany, and of India's fast breeder test reactor.

IAEA continued to help strengthen nuclear power planning in developing member States, through advisory missions, training courses and guidebooks. An Agency seminar attended by some 80 participants from 29 member States (including 18 developing countries) discussed the financing of nuclear power programmes; the participants concluded that IAEA could play a useful role by providing commercial lenders with objective information on the technical viability of nuclear power, and that the Agency's involvement in financial feasibility studies would carry considerable weight with lenders and export credit agencies.

Three interregional training courses in nuclear power planning were held (in Argentina and the United States). Regarding manpower and infrastructure, training activities continued to focus on the organization of courses at training centres in member States, emphasizing management tools and methods in the planning, construction and operational phases of projects. A seminar and three national courses on project management were held (in the Republic of Korea and Yugoslavia) to initiate continuous training in that subject. In the area of quality assurance and control, IAEA organized two interregional courses (in Argentina and the Federal Republic of Germany) and national courses for Iran, the Republic of Korea, Turkey and Yugoslavia.

The Agency continued to collect and disseminate information on nuclear technology and the technical aspects of nuclear power plants, and to publish guidebooks, reports and manuals.

Environment

In 1985, IAEA continued to carry out its waste management programme. Concerning handling, treatment, conditioning and storage of radioactive wastes, a research co-ordination meeting was held on the performance of solidified high-level waste forms and engineered barriers under repository conditions. A training course on radioactive waste management was held at Saclay, France, and a code of practice on that topic was issued.

An advisory group reviewed international standards and criteria for the underground disposal of high-level wastes. The code of practice on the management of wastes from the mining and milling of uranium and thorium ores was revised, and the revised texts sent to member States for comment.

In the area of disposal of radioactive waste at sea, a group of senior experts in radiation protection and waste management reached a consensus on principles for the exemption of radiation sources and practices from regulatory control. Preparations were made to publish a document on the subject in 1986.

Among material published in 1985 on environmental aspects of nuclear energy were the sixteenth annual edition of waste management research abstracts, five reports on the technology of waste handling, treatment and storage, a report on decontaminating nuclear facilities, some 30 reports on underground disposal of radioactive waste, and two reports relating to the disposal of radioactive material at sea.

Nuclear safety

In 1985, with the 60 documents in the NUSS series of safety codes and guides for nuclear power plants completed, activities aimed at helping member States to implement the NUSS documents—for example, by organizing training courses or producing supporting manuals—were intensified.

Activities relating to nuclear installation safety emphasized operational aspects. Among such activities were missions of operational safety review teams (OSART) to Brazil, France, Pakistan and the Philippines. Created in 1983, the OSART programme aims at further enhancing the safety of nuclear power plants. Each team carries out a thorough evaluation of the safety strengths and weaknesses of a given plant, and exchanges experience with the plant managers. France was the first industrialized country to receive an OSART mission, of which two types exist: missions to developing countries to provide an operational safety review service, and missions to industrialized countries to train review participants from developing countries.

Research reactor safety missions reviewed seven installations in Egypt, Pakistan, Turkey, Viet Nam and Yugoslavia.

A meeting was held in September in collaboration with the Nuclear Energy Agency of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to review lessons from significant incidents reported to IAEA's incident reporting system, which by the end of 1985 was receiving input from 22 countries.

Under the Agency's radiation protection programme, work continued on the elaboration of guidelines for implementing the system of dose limitation set forth in the revised Basic Safety Standards for Radiation Protection; guidelines were elaborated for the design of radiation protection systems, for operational radiation protection and for radiation monitoring. The proceedings of the 1984 IAEA/WHO symposium on the assessment of radioactive contamination in man were published.

Radiation protection services were provided to five countries with developing nuclear programmes. Missions visited Jordan, Kenya and Mali to advise on the establishment of national radiation protection services, and Algeria, Bolivia, Morocco and Tunisia in connection with technical assistance projects.

Safety information was disseminated world-wide through publications and various training courses; 89 technical co-operation projects concerning radiation protection were handled and 18 missions visited developing member States; fellowships in radiation protection were arranged for 62 persons from developing countries. The sixth international training course on the physical protection of nuclear facilities and materials, held at Albuquerque, United States, was attended by 25 participants from 17 member States.

Nuclear information

The International Nuclear Information System, with 74 participating countries and 14 international organizations, had enlarged its bibliographic data base on nuclear literature to 966,500 records by the end of 1985.

To commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the journal Nuclear Fusion, IAEA produced a special issue reviewing the major nuclear fusion activities over the previous 25 years.

Life sciences

In collaboration with WHO and other international organizations, IAEA continued to render assistance to member States—particularly to developing ones—with the application of nuclear techniques in medicine, biology and health-related environmental research. It also continued to promote greater reliability and accuracy in radiation dosimetry for medical and industrial purposes.

An international symposium on nuclear medicine and medical applications of nuclear techniques in developing countries was held at Vienna in co-operation with WHO. An Agency seminar held in Kenya reviewed current nuclear techniques for the radiation sterilization of local medical supplies in developing countries of Africa and the Middle East.

Co-ordinated research programmes carried out by IAEA dealt with optimizing nuclear medicine procedures for the diagnosis and treatment of thyroid disorders; the quality control of assays of thyroid-related hormones; quality control of liver imaging procedures; maintenance of nuclear instruments in Asia and the Pacific and in Latin America; quality control of nuclear medicine equipment; promotion of nuclear techniques for radiation-sterilization of tissue grafts for clinical use in Asia and the Pacific; application of nuclear techniques in immunoprophylaxis and in the diagnosis of parasitic diseases; the evaluation of the use of monoclonal antibodies in radioimmunoassays as a means of achieving improvements in the diagnosis of schistosomiasis, malaria and filariasis; nuclear-related techniques in occupational health studies; and toxic elements in foodstuffs. Research co-ordination meetings evaluated the results of research programmes on radiation-induced chromosomal aberrations as a biological monitor in accidental over-exposure situations; on the radiation treatment of sewage sludge for disinfection and safe reutilization; on dietary intakes of nutritionally important trace elements; and on the relationship between hair mineral concentrations and internal body burdens.

Training provided by IAEA included a train-the-trainers course on radioimmunoassay held in China, with 16 trainees from South-East Asia; workshops on the quality control of nuclear medicine instruments held in Chile, Indonesia and Mexico; a regional dosimetry calibration workshop conducted at the Agency's Dosimetry Laboratory with the co-operation of the Hungarian Office of Measures; study tours on dosimetry in the Federal Republic of Germany, Hungary, Sweden and USSR; and a training course on neutron activation analysis held in India.

An IAEA/WHO technical co-operation project on the use of brachytherapy in treating cancer of the cervix continued; a third training/demonstration course held in Egypt was attended by specialists from Egypt, Kenya and the Sudan.

Physical sciences and laboratories

The Agency continued to promote exchange of information and to assist member States with the application of nuclear techniques in experimental physics, analytical and radiation chemistry, non-destructive testing, radiation processing, industrial process control, geology, mining and hydrology.

In the area of industrial applications of nuclear technology, co-ordinated research programmes were initiated on the radiation-induced modification of polymers for industrial and medical applications, and on the radiation-induced degradation of organic materials in nuclear environments. A research co-ordination meeting on nuclear techniques in mineral exploration, mining and processing showed that a significant degree of co-operation had been achieved among the countries participating in the co-ordinated research programme. Research programmes on the development of a new technology for technetium-99m generator systems and the development of new, more specific radiopharmaceuticals continued. As part of its efforts to promote the transfer of nuclear technologies employed in industry and chemistry, the Agency supported 116 technical co-operation projects in 44 countries.

Within the isotope hydrology programme, IAEA supported 41 technical co-operation projects in 34 countries; these projects dealt with the use of isotope techniques in solving hydrological problems in the development of water resources, water pollution, geothermal studies and sediment dynamics.

Four co-ordinated research programmes on isotope hydrology continued—one in the Far East financed by Australia, two in Latin America financed by the Federal Republic of Germany and Italy, and one covering eight countries in different parts of the world.

A regional seminar on the use of isotope techniques in arid and semi-arid lands, held at Adana, Turkey, was attended by 64 participants from 18 Middle East and North African countries.

The Agency continued to provide nuclear and atomic data services to member States and to coordinate the activities of a world-wide network of data centres. During 1985, it received more than 700 requests from 45 member States for experimental and evaluated data, data processing computer codes and publications.

In the framework of efforts to promote the transfer of nuclear data technology to developing member States, the Agency held an interregional training course on basic and applied nuclear physics. It continued to provide equipment, fellowships and experts for an interregional project on nuclear data techniques and instrumentation designed to train nuclear scientists in developing countries, and, at IAEA headquarters, it provided to three fellows from developing countries training in nuclear data compilation and computer processing.

The International Centre for Theoretical Physics (Trieste, Italy), jointly operated by IAEA and UNESCO, continued to address physics problems both of immediate practical relevance and of a more fundamental nature through colleges, workshops and other activities relating to physical processes and mathematical modelling. Over 2,500 scientists visited the Centre during 1985, staying for a total of almost 2,100 man-months; 60 per cent were from developing countries, and they accounted for 80 per cent of the total man-months. Under its associate membership scheme, the Centre welcomed 123 associates from 58 developing countries. Approximately 300 researchers from federal institutes in 50 developing countries visited the Centre.

The main areas of research and training-for-research in 1985 were physics and energy, fundamental physics, physics and technology, physics of the environment and of natural resources, physics and development, and mathematics. A summer workshop on high-energy physics and cosmology was attended by 144 researchers, 100 of whom were from developing countries. During the same period, a research workshop on condensed matter was attended by 243 scientists. A conference on south-south and south-north co-operation in science, hosted by the Centre and organized by the Third World Academy of Sciences, was opened by the United Nations Secretary-General and attended by nearly 200 scientists.

The IAEA Laboratory at Seibersdorf, Austria, continued to provide practical support to the Agency's agricultural biotechnology, life sciences, physical sciences and safeguards programmes. It also continued to promote the transfer of advanced techniques to developing member States through co-ordinated research, assistance with technical co-operation projects, and the training of young scientists and technicians. Agricultural work focused on fertilizers, plant breeding, animal production and pest control. Medical programmes included studies of trace elements in the human body. The Safeguards Analytical Laboratory analysed nuclear fuel-cycle samples collected by IAEA safeguards inspectors.

The International Laboratory of Marine Radioactivity in Monaco, with the collaboration of UNEP and UNESCO, continued to carry out research related to radiation protection aspects of waste management in the marine environment. These included provision of technical support for marine radioactivity monitoring and investigations, data collection for evaluating radiological impacts of radio-nuclide releases into the marine environment and participation in international marine pollution monitoring and research.

Food and agriculture

Under a joint programme with FAO, IAEA continued to help developing member States to improve their agriculture and food production through the application of isotopes, ionizing radiation and related techniques. The establishment of the International Consultative Group on Food Irradiation and the world-wide interest in irradiation for food preservation led to a further increase in related activities, especially the organization of advisory group and task force meetings on the various problems impeding the widespread commercial use of the process.

Assistance to member States continued through 150 technical co-operation projects and 423 research contracts and agreements. Projects on insect eradication in Egypt, Nigeria and Peru continued.

Secretariat

At the end of 1985, the IAEA secretariat had 1,942 staff members—715 in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 79 countries), 1,091 in the General Service category and 136 in the Maintenance and Operatives Service category.

Budget

The regular budget total for 1986 was $118,756,000, of which $108,972,179 was to be financed from contributions made by member States on the basis of the 1986 scale of assessment, $4,458,000 from income from work for others and $5,325,821 from other miscellaneous income. The target for voluntary contributions to the IAEA technical assistance and co-operation programme in 1985 was set at $26 million; at the end of the year, member States had pledged $23,255,051 in support of the programme. During 1985, a total of $14,598,893 was offered in extrabudgetary contributions from member States, the United Nations and other international organizations.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS

(For period October 1985-September 1986)

OFFICERS

Chairman: Artati Sudirdjo (Indonesia).

Vice-Chairmen: Bo Aler (Sweden), Mieczyslaw Sowinski (Poland).

MEMBERS

Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, Ecuador, Egypt, Finland, France, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Guatemala, India, Indonesia, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Malaysia, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Norway, Pakistan, Peru, Poland, Republic of Korea, Sweden, Sudan, USSR, United Kingdom, United States.

MAIN COMMITTEES OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS

ADMINISTRATIVE AND BUDGETARY COMMITTEE

Participation in the Administrative and Budgetary Committee is open to all members of the Board of Governors.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE COMMITTEE

Chapter II

International Labour Organisation (ILO)

In 1985, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) continued activities in its six major programme areas: promotion of policies to create employment and satisfy basic human needs; development of human resources; improvement of working and living conditions and environment; promotion of social security; strengthening of industrial relations and tripartite (government/employer/worker) co-operation; and the advancement of human rights in the social and labour fields. The main instruments of action continued to be standard-setting, technical co-operation activities, research and publishing.

At year's end, ILO membership stood at 150, Viet Nam having withdrawn on 1 June.

Meetings

The seventy-first session of the International Labour Conference, held at Geneva from 7 to 27 June 1985, was attended by some 2,000 delegates and advisers from 141 countries. The Conference had before it the annual report of the ILO Governing Body, the report of the Director-General, focusing on industrial relations and tripartism, and the twenty-first special report on the effect of apartheid on labour and employment in South Africa.

The Conference adopted International Labour Conventions and Recommendations on occupational health services and on labour statistics. It held a first discussion on safety in the use of asbestos with a view to adopting instruments on that subject in 1986.

A tripartite Conference committee again examined the application of ILO Conventions and Recommendations by member States, and reviewed the application of ILO standards concerning labour inspection.

After considering equal employment opportunities and treatment for men and women, the Conference called on member States to overcome discrimination against women. Resolutions were also adopted on the most urgent problems of Africa, particularly food security, on statistics of productivity, and on safety in the use of dangerous substances and processes in industry.

The Inland Transport Committee (eleventh session, Geneva, 23-31 January) adopted two sets of conclusions: one on the working and social conditions of boatmen in domestic and international inland navigation, including legal protection and repatriation, as well as occupational safety and health in connection with the application of new technologies; and the other on occupational safety and health in road transport. The Committee also adopted 10 resolutions relating to different aspects of the transport industry and to future ILO activities.

The Advisory Committee on Technology (first session, Geneva, 15-19 April) noted that ILO was mandated to analyse the social dimensions of technology and to contribute to international initiatives, such as the proposed United Nations global information network (see p. 709). The Committee agreed that ILO should continue its work on new technologies and on blending them with traditional ones.

The Advisory Committee on Salaried Employees and Professional Workers (ninth session, Geneva, 17-25 April) adopted conclusions on problems specific to employees in commerce and offices—employment; working hours; temporary, part-time and home work; and remuneration—and on occupational hazards and diseases. Resolutions adopted by the Committee concerned the rights of salaried inventors and authors; personnel information systems and data privacy; freedom of association for professional and managerial staff; multinational enterprises in commerce; integration of young diploma-holders into various professions; the attention given within ILO to certain occupational groups; and future ILO work relating to salaried employees and professional workers.

Achievement of full employment and improvement of working conditions were the main themes of the Forestry and Wood Industries Committee (first session, Geneva, 18-26 September); its four resolutions were on freedom of association, pollution, multinational enterprises and future activities.

A Joint Meeting on Employment and Conditions of Work in Health and Medical Services (Geneva, 8-15 October) adopted conclusions on employment, labour-management relations, remuneration, ethical problems, working hours, and occupational health and safety. It also adopted resolutions on ILO activities in health and medical services, freedom of association and the right to collective bargaining, and equal rights and opportunities.

At the Third Tripartite Technical Meeting for the Leather and Footwear Industry (Geneva, 4-12 December), two sets of conclusions were adopted: one on manpower development, training and retraining; and the other on the impact of structural and technological changes on employment and income. The Meeting also adopted a series of resolutions on the rights of young workers, women workers and working mothers, occupational health and safety, the observance of international labour standards, working conditions and the right to organize and bargain collectively.

The Tenth Asian Regional Conference (Jakarta, Indonesia, 4-13 December), attended by some 300 delegates and advisers from 30 countries, discussed Asia's response to economic recession and adopted conclusions on vocational training, rehabilitation of the disabled, and standards. The Conference called for the combating of restrictive trade practices, improved productivity, preventing industrial accidents and promoting trade union rights.

Working environment

The 1976 International Programme for the Improvement of Working Conditions and Environment (PIACT) continued to encourage and assist member States in promoting occupational safety and health and improving general working conditions. Among key points in a 1984 ILO Conference resolution was the need for tripartite involvement in policy formulation and implementation.

PIACT sought to improve working conditions in sectors often falling outside the scope of legislation and other traditional protective measures. An innovative training package on working conditions and productivity in small enterprises was tested in courses held in India and the Philippines. Other activities included national seminars in Argentina on working conditions and environment problems in various industries; an advisory mission to Algeria to discuss future co-operation; support for national employers' programmes in Argentina, Malaysia, Pakistan and the Philippines, and, in collaboration with the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), for regional employers' programmes in Africa and the Caribbean; and major projects by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in Indonesia and Thailand.

Several activities were rapidly organized in response to industrial accidents at Bhopal, India, and elsewhere. A mission was undertaken to advise the Indian Government on the establishment of a major accident hazard control system. An Asian Regional Workshop on Major Hazards and Their Control in Industry was held at Bombay in November. A Tripartite Ad Hoc Meeting of Consultants on Methods of Prevention of Major Hazards in Industry (Geneva, 15-21 October) made recommendations on training, information dissemination, the preparation of a manual and a code of practice on the prevention of major hazards, and the creation of a list of international consultants to advise Governments, employers and workers.

Training activities included the production of video films for training rural workers and the completion of a training manual on better working conditions and environment, prepared in collaboration with the Swedish Joint Industrial Safety Council. Technical contributions were made to training courses and seminars in China, India, Madagascar, Malawi, the Niger and Tunisia.

Technical co-operation projects completed in 1985 provided assistance to institutions in Algeria, India and United Republic of Tanzania. Other projects were in progress in Greece, India, Indonesia, Iran, Poland, Singapore and Thailand.

Collaboration with the World Health Organization (WHO) and other United Nations agencies regarding working health continued, and included participation in the UNEP/WHO/ILO International Programme on Chemical Safety as well as close IAEA/WHO/ILO co-operation concerning the protection of workers against ionizing radiations.

In 1985, the International Occupational Safety and Health Information Centre added two national centres to its network, bringing the total to 50.

Information dissemination activities were stepped up. The Clearing-House for the Dissemination of Information on Conditions of Work published two issues of Condition of Work: A Cumulative Digest, containing fact sheets on laws and practices relating to the introduction of new technology, and bibliographies on home work and child labour.

World Employment Programme

The World Employment Programme (WEP), through action-oriented research, technical advisory services and other field activities, addressed the employment and development problems of such underprivileged groups as the rural poor and workers of the rapidly growing urban informal sector. Guided by the Declaration of Principles and Programme of Action adopted at the 1976 World Employment Conference, WEP continued to account for approximately one third of ILO technical co-operation activities, mainly in special works programmes, manpower and employment planning, labour market information, appropriate technology, rural development, women workers, refugees and population. Advisory missions at the country and regional levels remained important programme elements. The WEP regional employment teams in Africa, Asia and Latin America continued to carry out much of the Programme's activities, providing advisory services and training courses to a large number of countries.

Field activities

In 1985, ILO spent over $90 million on technical co-operation activities (an increase of about 8.3 per cent over 1984) to promote employment, develop human resources and social institutions, and improve living and working conditions.

Most of this expenditure ($38.9 million) continued to be financed by UNDP. The ILO regular programme provided $10.6 million, while expenditure funded from multi-bilateral arrangements and other special programmes increased to $35.5 million. Activities financed by the United Nations Fund for Population Activities (UNFPA) accounted for $5.3 million.

A breakdown of expenditure on technical co-operation by activity and source of funds, and by country, territory, region or organization, is shown in the tables below.

Educational activities

In 1985 vocational training remained the largest single component of the ILO technical co-operation programme. Approximately 65 projects in urban areas and 40 in rural areas were operational during the year, while some 20 projects were completed. Major vocational training projects were concluded in the Dominican Republic, Honduras, Nigeria and Thailand. New projects included those started in Madagascar, the Netherlands Antilles, the Niger and the Sudan.

The International Institute for Labour Studies at Geneva, an ILO centre for advanced labour and social studies, held its twentieth international internship course on active labour policy development from 22 April to 7 June. Attended by 21 participants from 15 countries in Africa, the Americas and Europe, the course dealt with economic changes and developments in labour matters; technological, demographic and educational aspects of labour policy; comparative industrial relations; the role of ILO in formulating and implementing labour policy; human rights; and the environment and labour policy.

The Institute organized at Geneva from 7 to 11 October a seminar on labour-management relations and social security in the European Community for 30 participants from the Colegios Oficiales de Graduados Sociales, members of the General Council of Madrid, Spain.

The Institute, in collaboration with Brazil, organized from 14 to 31 October at Brasilia a course for participants from seven Portuguese-speaking countries on the major issues concerning labour (employment, training, working conditions, industrial relations, international labour standards).

In collaboration with the All-Union Trade Union Council and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research, the Institute organized at Baku, USSR, from 21 to 31 October a workshop on the participation of women in rural development, which brought together 20 participants from English-speaking Africa, Asia and the West Indies.

In 1985, the ILO International Centre for Advanced Technical and Vocational Training at Turin, Italy, conducted 81 courses and seminars attended by 1,578 participants from 137 countries, and administered, executed and monitored 613 individual fellowships in 68 countries.

Increased demand came for the training of trainers and managers, particularly in the small enterprises, energy, rural development and transport sectors. Management courses and seminars represented 25 per cent of the Centre's total activity.

Seminars and workshops implemented either partly or wholly in the field included: management of agricultural co-operatives (New Delhi, India, on behalf of Italy's multi-bilateral programme); low-cost audio-visual aids (Thailand, in collaboration with the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung); training methodology for instructors from meteorological training centres (Buenos Aires, Argentina, carried out at the request of the World Meteorological Organization); production of low-cost visual aids (Morocco, in collaboration with the Friedrich Ebert Stiftung); supervisory development of harbours (India, in collaboration with ILO Maritime Services); management of welfare facilities for women workers in Africa (Zimbabwe, organized within the framework of PIACT); technical and pedagogical upgrading (Spain, on behalf of its Ministry of Labour); and a seminar for trainers in the energy/power sector (Bangkok, Thailand, in collaboration with the ILO Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific).

Publications

Published ILO research covered a wide range of topical social and labour questions. New volumes issued in 1985 included: The Cost of Social Security, eleventh international inquiry, 1978-1980; Directory of African Technology Institutions; Employment and Poverty in a Troubled World; How to Read a Balance Sheet (second revised edition); ILO Thesaurus: Labour, Employment and Training Terminology (third edition); Improving Working Conditions in Small Enterprises in Developing Asia; Introduction to Working Conditions and Environment; Management Self-Development, a guide for managers, organizations and institutions; Occupational Hazards from Non-Ionising Electromagnetic Radiation; Rehabilitation Approaches to Drug and Alcohol Dependence; Safety and Health in Coal Mines, an ILO code of practice; Small-Scale Paper-Making; Technological Change: The Tripartite Response, 1982-85; Technology and Employment in Industry: A Case-Study Approach (third revised and enlarged edition); The Trade Union Situation and Industrial Relations in Spain; The Trade Union Situation and Industrial Relations in Yugoslavia; Visual Display Units: Job Content and Stress in Office Work; Women Workers in Multinational Enterprises in Developing Countries; and Working Women in Socialist Countries: The Fertility Connection.

The second volume of World Labour Report was published, surveying the main labour issues in the world; the forty-fifth (1985) issue of the Year Book of Labour Statistics also appeared. Regular periodicals and technical series included the bimonthly International Labour Review, the quarterly Social and Labour Bulletin and the biannual Legislative Series.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total number of full-time staff under permanent, fixed-term and short-term appointments at ILO headquarters and elsewhere was 2,838. Of these, 1,357 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 116 nationalities) and 1,481 were in the General Service or Maintenance categories. Of the Professional staff, 588 were assigned to technical co-operation projects.

Chapter III

Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)

The twenty-third biennial session of the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) was held at Rome, Italy, from 9 to 28 November 1985 and marked FAO's fortieth anniversary.

The Conference reviewed the world food situation and noted that cereal production was expected to reach a record level in 1985, and that cereal stocks, forecast at 21 per cent of expected consumption, provided an adequate safeguard for world food security. However, it expressed concern regarding unduly low commodity prices and continuing widespread undernutrition in Africa. The region had experienced an annual decline in per capita food and agricultural production of nearly 2 per cent in the early 1980s, largely as a consequence of drought. Despite rising food imports, per capita supplies had steadily declined. The Conference drew the attention of the international community to the need for a long-term development effort in Africa, although emergency aid would still be necessary.

The Conference noted that the recent economic and agricultural situation had also been discouraging in Latin America and the Caribbean since the early 1980s. Per capita incomes had declined in the region, debt-service ratios had reached more than 40 per cent of export earnings and inflation rates had soared. Agricultural production per capita and exports had also fallen. In the Near East, declining agricultural production in some countries, combined with a rising demand for food, had led to greatly increased food imports. Progress had been achieved in China and the Far East with annual agricultural production increasing by between 7 and 8 per cent and by nearly 4 per cent, respectively, in the early 1980s.

The Conference approved a World Food Security Compact, which reaffirmed the objectives of world food security (increased production, stability of supplies and adequate access to food by all), called for action to achieve those objectives, and provided a clearly defined moral commitment for action by Governments, non-governmental organizations and individuals.

The Conference stressed the importance of the protection and conservation of forests and grasslands in temperate and tropical regions and the need for government intervention to prevent the blind exploitation of land leading to their destruction. In addition, an International Code of Conduct on the Distribution and Use of Pesticides was adopted.

On 11 November, the Conference admitted two new members to FAO—Cook Islands and Solomon Islands—bringing its membership to 158. Lassaad Ben Osman was appointed Independent Chairman of the FAO Council—FAO's governing body between sessions of the Conference—for a two-year term.

Funding

FAO funds come from three main sources: contributions by member nations, national trust funds and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

The regular programme, financed by members according to a scale of contributions set by the Conference, supports field work and enables FAO to advise Governments, to provide a neutral forum for discussing issues related to food and agriculture and to provide the international farming community with information.

In 1985, slightly less than half the expenditure under FAO field programmes was funded by UNDP. National trust funds provided a similar share of that expenditure, while just under 10 per cent was provided by FAO's regular programme budget through the Technical Co-operation Programme, which allows FAO to respond quickly to unforeseen demands for emergency assistance and for training, investment project preparation and specialized advice.

UNDP funding rose to $120 million in 1985 from $110 million in 1984. Programme growth, however, was sustained by trust fund financing, both bilateral and unilateral, which, since 1983, had exceeded that of UNDP. Total FAO field programme expenditure rose by about 5 per cent in 1985.

Activities in 1985

Agricultural Rehabilitation Programme for Africa. Three successive years of drought in sub-Saharan Africa had produced the worst food crisis in the history of the continent; countless people died of starvation and 150 million were still considered to be at serious risk at the end of 1985. Cereal production in 1984 was more than 20 per cent below the average for the five years before 1982 and, even before the drought struck, one in every five Africans was dependent on imported grain.

Despite rain in most areas, there was an acute shortage of seed and food stocks at all points in the marketing chain were depleted.

Early in 1985, the FAO Director-General launched the Agricultural Rehabilitation Programme for Africa (ARPA), the aim of which was to rebuild African agriculture following the drought. A special donors' meeting was held at Rome on 29 March 1985 to mobilize international funding for ARPA. In addition, FAO reallocated $22.5 million (including $15 million of savings) from the regular programme budget.

ARPA, which initially covered 229 projects in 21 countries and totalled $216 million, comprised 260 projects in 25 countries, amounting to $245 million, by the end of the year. The projects—crop production and protection, irrigation and water supply, loss prevention, storage and processing, extension and training, livestock and pastures, fisheries and forestry—were all designed to produce concrete results within three years.

Agricultural development. As part of its effort to assist developing countries to improve their capacity to feed their people and to promote agricultural development generally, FAO allocated 6 per cent of regular programme and 16 per cent of field programme expenditures to research-related work. At any given time, more than 250 field projects with significant research components were under way. Countries were assisted to formulate research policies, set priorities, strengthen agricultural research institutions, and promote closer links between research and extension. During 1985, review and programming missions were sent to Burundi, Chad, Egypt, Guinea, Iraq, Liberia, Mali, Mauritania, the Niger, Panama and Sao Tome and Principe. Training courses in management and administration for research directors were held in Cameroon, Colombia and Nepal.

The field programme also included more than 150 projects with substantial planning components in 1985. FAO continued to respond to requests from member nations for assistance in formulating new laws, international agreements and the terms of foreign participation in exploiting resources. For example, Ethiopia was helped to prepare comprehensive regulations for the rational management of water resources, legal consultancies were provided to Guyana, Samoa and Tonga, and the Sudan received assistance on land-use planning legislation. In addition, an FAO study on drafting land use legislation for developing countries was completed.

In the area of appropriate farm-power development, FAO in 1985 helped more than a dozen countries to develop agricultural mechanization strategies. The assistance covered all aspects of agricultural mechanization, from basic hand-tools, through animal draught power and equipment, to mechanical power technology.

In an effort to promote economic and technical co-operation among developing countries, FAO in 1985 sponsored a consultation at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, which led to the formation of an Association of Agricultural Development Planners to provide for continuing exchanges of experience. In Latin America and the Caribbean, the members of the Organization of Eastern Caribbean States exchanged expertise on training in fisheries law and administration and, in Trinidad and Tobago, FAO conducted a training programme in the use of audio-visual communications for watershed management, which expertise was shared with other nations of the region. FAO also assisted Turkey in promoting technical co-operation with other countries of the Near East and North Africa in forest road network planning and construction, wood-based industries, leather technology, and artificial insemination and dairy cattle-breeding management.

In 1985, the FAO Investment Centre, which assisted developing countries to attract investment for agricultural development, helped to formulate 47 investment projects which were approved by international financing institutions, for total investments of $1,747 million; $931 million of that amount was in external loans, the balance being provided by the recipient Governments.

Rural development. As the lead agency in the United Nations system for rural development, FAO supported the Declaration of Principles and the Programme of Action adopted by the 1979 World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development (WCARRD).<sup>a</sup> In 1985, it organized follow-up meetings for member Governments in Africa and Asia and the Pacific, and inter-agency consultations on rural development in the Near East and Latin America and the Caribbean. Two, inter-agency WCARRD follow-up missions were also organized—to Costa Rica and Uganda—to review past development strategies, identify shortcomings and recommend policy changes to help alleviate rural poverty. The relationship between rural poverty and land tenure was a particular focus during the year, with activities including a round table on trends in land ownership and use rights in Africa (Nairobi, Kenya), and an expert consultation on the socio-economic implications of fragmented holdings in the Near East (Baghdad, Iraq). Extension services in more than 70 countries received assistance, with FAO concentrating on improving the effectiveness of extension and training in serving the needs of rural groups that had been neglected in the past, especially small-scale farmers, women, young people and the disabled.

Improving nutrition among rural populations was an important part of FAO's overall rural development activities in 1985. National-level analyses of nutritional requirements for different household members based on their activities were undertaken in the Ivory Coast and Rwanda. The results confirmed that women, with their multiple roles as farmers and home-makers, had special nutritional requirements which must not be overlooked in rural development strategies.

During the year, 15 national workshops and seminars on nutrition training and education were held in Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, Asia and the Pacific, and the Near East.

FAO also participated in the 10-year strategy against vitamin-A deficiency and nutritional blindness, launched by the World Health Organization in October 1985 (see Chapter V of this section).

Food security. The World Food Security Compact, proposed by the FAO Director-General in 1984,<sup>b</sup> was approved by the FAO Conference in November 1985 (see above).

Throughout 1985, the FAO Global Information and Early Warning System for Food and Agriculture monitored developments in food demand and supply at global and national levels. On the basis of recommendations of an expert consultation on supplies of food and food aid requirements held in March, and in view of continued food shortages in many African countries, the System stepped up its monitoring activities and issued special monthly reports covering crop information and the provision of emergency food aid. In addition, crop-assessment missions were sent to a number of drought-stricken African countries,

The FAO Food Security Assistance Scheme (FSAS) increased its emphasis on training and technical assistance for national grain boards, and on establishing early warning systems as part of national food security programmes. Total FSAS trust fund contributions amounted to $6.1 million, compared with $5.8 million in 1984.

At its April 1985 session, the FAO Committee on World Food Security considered ways to improve the contribution of food aid to food security, and agreed on measures to improve delivery of supplies in emergencies and on using food aid for development.

Land and water management. Following the 1984 publication of FAO's global study on land resources for populations of the future,<sup>c</sup> a modified methodology for national application, which permitted the use of detailed inputs on irrigation, erosion hazards and the potential for animal production, as well as cultural and socio-economic factors, was used in a pilot project in Kenya. In total, more than 20 countries began national follow-up studies using that approach, including Bangladesh,

Ethiopia, Malaysia, Mozambique, the Philippines and Thailand. Through its Interdepartmental Group for Land-use Planning, FAO began to develop a geographic information system to link its 47 land-use related data bases, and feasibility studies were begun on incorporating a mapping computer into the system.

Because past work on water resource management in the developing world had centred on large-scale irrigation and drainage systems which had often been poorly managed and maintained, FAO concentrated on training in the improved use of water resources and the development of small-scale irrigation infrastructure. The reuse of irrigation waste water gained importance as a water management technique. A project in Egypt demonstrated that cotton and wheat could be irrigated with waste water without decreasing production, by storing run-off water, mixing it with fresh water and reusing it for irrigation.

Crops. Cereals and food legumes, which supplied the largest share of the world's total calories, continued to be a primary focus of FAO activities in increasing food and agricultural production during 1985. Africa again received the largest share of FAO assistance.

More emphasis was placed on demonstrations at the farm level to familiarize farmers with improved production methods and to use their knowledge of local conditions to develop appropriate technologies. For example, improved techniques for cultivating wheat and legumes were demonstrated on farms in Kenya and the United Republic of Tanzania. Projects were also under way in Ethiopia to assist small-scale farmers in the use of improved varieties of wheat and barley, and in Morocco to teach agricultural extension workers to organize on-farm demonstrations of better wheat-planting methods.

As part of its work in rice-the world's most important staple food and the mainstay of the diet of more than 50 per cent of the total population-FAO shared technical expertise in rice improvements through the International Rice Commission, developing integrated farming systems such as rice with fish, rice with small animals and rice with mushrooms, improving pest-control techniques and increasing the productivity of small-scale farmers.

During the year, FAO operated more than 120 projects with a significant horticulture component. Horticultural crops could ensure readily available food supplies, improve diets that were poor or incomplete because of domination by a single staple food, and provide a valuable source of income. In East Africa, a regional project was under way to identify traditional fruits and vegetables that could be improved with limited supplies of inputs. In Rwanda and Senegal, projects were attempting to intensify the propagation of improved varieties of sweet potato, cassava, okra and amaranth, and small-scale farmers in Djibouti were increasing vegetable production in newly irrigated areas.

Although oil-palms made a major contribution to edible oil supplies in the developing world, both production and processing practices were often inefficient and could result in losses up to 40 per cent of potential production. With FAO assistance, 10 of the most important palm-oil-producing countries in Africa met (Abidjan, Ivory Coast, March) to establish the African Oil Palm Development Association.

In Vanuatu, where cyclones severely damaged coconut plantations in January 1985, an FAO project helped to replant the coconut groves, using improved varieties.

In 1985, FAO formulated 40 projects to improve seed production, many of them in the 24 countries included in ARPA. By the end of the year, more than half of the projects were being implemented. In the Gambia, a project helped the Government to improve production of ground-nut, barley, sorghum and millet seed, while Botswana was provided with almost 300 tonnes of seed to ensure adequate planting in the autumn season. In addition, 18 seed project formulation missions were organized for other countries and 60,000 seed samples were dispatched to 85 countries. Seven regional and nine national seminars and workshops to provide training in improved seed production were held in 1985, with a total of nearly 400 participants.

FAO's Fertilizer Programme assisted 19 developing countries—12 in Africa, 6 in Asia and the Pacific, and 1 in Latin America and the Caribbean—to increase crop production, particularly food crops grown by small-scale farmers, through effective use of mineral fertilizers and organic materials. Contracts for research on integrated plant nutrition systems, combining the application of mineral and organic fertilizers, were awarded to national institutions in India and Indonesia.

To encourage small-scale farmers to make better use of fertilizers, FAO started a system of block demonstrations. Voluntary groups of farmers received intensive assistance in implementing new techniques in order to show their effectiveness to others. In Bangladesh, farmers participating in such demonstrations achieved an average paddy yield of 6.7 tonnes a hectare, as against the national average of 2.4 tonnes.

FAO plant protection activities centred on weed management and control, and the reduction of damage caused by pests and diseases through the use of efficient and environmentally sound practices. In Ethiopia and the Gambia, a new planting technique was introduced which significantly reduced damage caused by the parasite Striga and other weeds. Millet yields on test plots were 50 to 100 per cent higher than average, and the technique was expected to produce progressively higher yields as weed growth was further reduced, an important result for 17 African countries where Striga reduced yields of maize, millet and sorghum crops by as much as 40 per cent.

While the return of the rains to Africa in 1985 signalled an easing of one crisis, it brought another in the form of serious army-worm outbreaks, which were reported from Yemen to Zimbabwe. FAO provided spraying equipment, pesticide and training in the control of the pest to eight countries in the region.

During the year, FAO also helped control locust outbreaks in Botswana, Brazil, Trinidad and the United Republic of Tanzania, and grasshopper infestations in Mali and Mauritania.

Through the International Board for Plant Genetic Resources, jointly sponsored by FAO, UNDP and the World Bank, FAO continued to collect, evaluate and conserve plant genetic resources. In 1985, the Board provided laboratory equipment to 23 gene banks in 19 countries and produced a set of standards to assist countries in upgrading national gene banks. Technical and financial support was provided to gene banks under construction at Beijing, China, and Karadj, Iran.

Livestock. In 1985, special attention was given to improved production of small animals, such as chickens, ducks, goats and rabbits, whose short reproductive cycles and dietary adaptability made them ideal for rearing in the rapidly changing and often harsh conditions of the developing world. In Tunisia, an FAO project introduced a new cross-breed of goat whose milk yield was 40 per cent above that of indigenous breeds. In addition, the project gave one goat to each primary school in the area to familiarize children with their care.

FAO also continued to help increase the productivity of larger animals for both meat and milk. Through the International Meat Development Scheme, livestock evaluation missions visited Cameroon and Guinea-Bissau to prepare projects for international funding. The FAO Dairy Training Programme, funded by Denmark and Finland, trained over 1,000 people in interregional, regional and national seminars held throughout the developing world.

FAO was also active in promoting the use of crop residues and agro-industrial by-products for animal feed, for example by solidifying molasses from sugar refining in West Africa into easily transportable feed blocks. The molasses available annually in the four West African sugar-producing countries could supply 1.4 million head of cattle for three months, enough to carry them through the dry season.

In the area of animal health, preparatory work was completed in 1985 on the African rinderpest campaign, due to start in 1986. Five subregional training courses, on diagnosis, vaccine production and quality control, and the repair of equipment, brought together specialists from 28 countries. A manual for rinderpest campaign workers and two films on rinderpest recognition and control were produced. Latin America and the Caribbean were entirely free of African swine-fever in 1985 as a result of regional assistance and 21 emergency projects provided by FAO. An FAO project funded by Italy continued to support measures to protect against reintroduction.

As part of its work to conserve genetic resources, FAO built up regional data banks on animal genetic types to assist breeding experiments and preserve endangered species. In 1985, pilot projects were completed in Africa, Asia and Latin America. In June, an expert consultation brought together animal geneticists to develop a standard format and methodology for collecting and recording animal genetic characteristics. In addition, possible locations for regional data banks were identified for funding by international financing institutions; the data banks would complement efforts to establish gene banks complete with cryogenic storage facilities.

Fisheries. During 1985, 240 FAO projects in fisheries development were under way at global, regional and national levels, with priority being given to improving the lot of small-scale fishermen. Projects included: an island-by-island study in Cape Verde to identify the special needs of small-scale fishermen and to be used as a guide in formulating a wide range of fisheries development projects; a follow-up project in Mauritania to assist inshore fishermen to improve artisanal boat-building; and, in Haiti, an investigation of the potential production of artisanal fishermen, completed in February 1985, which led to a training project.

Aquaculture (fish farming) development was one of five programmes of action adopted by the 1984 World Conference on Fisheries Management and Development.<sup>d</sup> Activities in 1985 included a regional training course in aquaculture development (Bouaké, Ivory Coast); projects in Barbados and Morocco to help establish fish culture programmes and train local staff; and a weed control programme in Egypt.

Agreement was reached in 1985 between FAO and Sweden on a programme to integrate aquaculture into rural development. The first project was to develop aquaculture in Zambia in conjunction with an existing rural development programme, whereby villagers would be assisted to construct small fish-ponds to supplement other farming activities.

Forests. FAO declared 1985 the International Year of the Forest to highlight the importance of forestry resources to agricultural production and to rally support for their conservation and management. The choice of 1985 was particularly appropriate since it coincided with the Ninth World Forestry Congress, held at Mexico City in July, with the theme of forest resources in the integral development of society.

FAO's short-term objectives for the Year were: to focus world attention on the need for forest conservation and protection; to raise political and public awareness; to draw attention to factors threatening forest resources; and to mobilize people to participate in forest-oriented activities during 1985. World Food Day (16 October) featured the role of forestry development in food security as one of its main themes.

As part of an integrated approach to forest assessment, FAO began mapping the tree and shrub vegetation of Africa. Existing national maps were updated and complemented by the use of Landsat images. A comprehensive framework for classifying Asian vegetation was devised as the first step towards widening the study to include tropical Asia in 1986.

The first of eight manuals on watershed management was published in 1985. When completed, the series would cover watershed survey and planning, slope treatment measures, revegetation and soil treatment measures, roadway protection, landslide prevention, gully control, torrent control and water harvesting.

Although an estimated 11 million hectares of tropical forest land was deforested each year, almost twice as much land in arid and semi-arid regions was rendered useless by the advance of the desert. In June, FAO organized a meeting on desertification control in arid-zone forestry (Saltillo, Mexico). Thirty experts from 21 countries collaborated on the development of a strategy to increase the use of trees and woody vegetation in arid zones, both to stop the advance of the desert and to help provide desperately needed fuel, fodder, food and income.

The conservation of forest genetic resources was cited as an area of primary importance by the FAO Commission on Plant Genetic Resources (Rome, March). As part of its effort to co-ordinate a global programme of forest genetic resource conservation, FAO helped to establish a network of national centres to rescue seeds from arid-zone forests and conserve their qualities before the trees were destroyed by land-use pressure.

Special relief operations. The FAO Office for Special Relief Operations (OSRO), which responded to requests for emergency assistance, mainly through the provision of agricultural inputs, veterinary and feed supplies, small tools and equipment, as well as transport and storage facilities, continued to be the focal point of the FAO/World Food Programme (WFP) Task Force on Africa. Projects were under way in 17 African countries and accounted for more than 70 per cent of OSRO's total budget of $8.7 million for 1985.

OSRO projects were also in operation in Viet Nam, where typhoons destroyed more than 400,000 hectares of cultivated land, swept away 50,000 homes and destroyed long stretches of road and railway; they provided vegetable seeds to permit the immediate resumption of production and bridge the food gap until the next rice harvest. In Nicaragua, where irregular rainfall resulted in widespread failure of maize and bean crops, an OSRO project supplied 250 tonnes of bean seeds.

Information. The Fifth World Food Survey, released in 1985, provided a comprehensive picture of the world food and nutritional situation as it changed in the 1960s and 1970s, and its causes and policy implications. The Survey noted that although the percentage of undernourished people in the world declined in the 1970s for the first time in four decades, the total number of the hungry continued to increase. Among interventions considered by the Survey to integrate nutritional considerations into agricultural and rural development programmes were improved income distribution, food subsidies, direct nutritional intervention programmes and nutritional education.

Other global-level analyses published in 1985 included a study on agricultural price policies, commodity studies on the world market situation and outlook for tomato products, and a compendium of prices of hides, skins and derived products. A statistical baseline study of African countries affected by drought, prepared in connection with ARPA, was expanded to cover all of Africa.

As part of its effort to help developing countries to develop their own statistical capabilities and infrastructures, FAO in 1985 established national demonstration and training centres in Chile and the Sudan. A workshop on improving statistics on women in agriculture (Rome, October) trained statisticians from 11 countries in how to introduce gender breakdowns in agricultural surveys.

In addition, more than 150 technical manuals were published in 1985.

World Food Programme. During 1985, WFP, which was created in 1963 to channel food surpluses to developing countries, had a total of 366 projects valued at $3,570 million under way in 91 countries. It provided more than 1.4 million tonnes of food aid to Africa alone, almost one third the total amount delivered. In sub-Saharan Africa, more than $2,270 million in development assistance was committed to help build long-term stability and sustainable increases in food and agricultural production.

In other parts of the world, food aid was provided to over 2 million refugees in Pakistan and $58 million in food was committed to Bangladesh to support projects to build rural roads and waterworks. In Latin America, food was used in a number of countries to help small-scale farmers in co-operative rural development projects and to improve dairy development.

Secretariat

At the end of 1985, the number of staff employed by FAO at its headquarters was 3,459, of whom 1,257 were in the Professional and higher categories. Field project personnel and those in regional and country offices numbered 3,492, 1,835 in the Professional and higher categories and 1,657 in the General Service category. Of the 328 associate experts working with the FAO, 36 were at headquarters and 292 in the field or regional and country offices. In addition, WFP employed 138 Professional and higher category staff and 192 General Service personnel at headquarters and 208 staff in the field.

Budget

The November 1985 session of the FAO Conference approved a budget of $4.37 million for 1986-1987.

Chapter IV

United Nations Educational,
Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) continued throughout 1985 its activities aimed at promoting co-operation among nations through education, natural and social sciences, culture and communication.

After the withdrawal of Singapore and the United Kingdom on 31 December 1985, membership of UNESCO decreased to 158.

The twenty-third session of the UNESCO General Conference was held at Sofia, Bulgaria, from 8 October to 9 November. It was attended by 1,646 delegates from 154 member States, and by representatives from an associate member, two non-member States, liberation movements, United Nations bodies, and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), for a total of 1,872 participants.

Education

In 1985 UNESCO continued to focus on education for development. Its major programmes were on: education for all; the formulation and application of education policies; and education, training and society.

Under the programme on education for all, a project in Latin America and the Caribbean continued. Attempting to eradicate illiteracy in the region by the year 2000, activities were aimed at implementing a plan of action adopted in 1984 by an intergovernmental regional committee for this project. With regard to the Regional Programme for the Eradication of Illiteracy in Africa, efforts centred on establishing inter-ministerial bodies and on preparing national plans linking adult literacy with the universalization and renewal of primary education.

The fourth International Conference on Adult Education (Paris, 19-29 March) was attended by 341 participants and observers from 122 member States, eight international organizations and 59 NGOs. Progress made since the third such Conference (Tokyo, 1972)<sup>3</sup> was assessed, and the many functions of adult education were set out in nine recommendations.

UNESCO provided support for the training of some 200 specialists from 12 countries on interaction between adult education and work, and awarded travel grants to 125 officials responsible for workers' co-operative and trade union education in 52 member States. Some 18,000 copies of the quarterly newsletter Adult Education-Information Notes were distributed in the six official languages.

Regarding education in rural areas, training activities in educational strategies and approaches to educational innovations, science and technology teaching, low-cost educational materials and in-service training involved over 200 participants from 60 countries, including 15 least developed countries. These were complemented by technical missions to assist member States in revising educational content and methods and identifying innovative measures for educational reform in rural areas. In view of the need to include teacher training courses in higher agricultural education institutions, training was provided to 135 specialists from 59 countries. Seminars on improving higher agricultural education were organized in Africa, the Arab States, Asia and the Pacific, Europe, and Latin America and the Caribbean, involving 178 participants from 64 countries.

Activities for disabled persons included organizing mobile teams to train educators and parents in Asia and the Pacific, advisory support to 30 member States, technical support to a subregional project for special education in eastern and southern Africa, and organization of meetings in Chile, China, Costa Rica, Ecuador, India, Italy and Jordan.

Action to promote equality of educational opportunity for girls and women included assistance to six member States on educational and vocational guidance, support to activities in various member States in the field of literacy for women, and the launching of an international survey on the representation at the professional level of women in higher education. Other activities in favour of particular groups aimed at migrant workers, refugees and national liberation movements.

Under the programme on the formulation and application of educational policies, the fifth Regional Conference of Ministers of Education and Those Responsible for Economic Planning in Asia and the Pacific (Bangkok, Thailand, 4-11 March) reviewed the development of education in the region and discussed priorities for educational development. It adopted a declaration and 29 recommendations focusing on improving the quality of education at both formal and non-formal levels, the specific needs of the Pacific States, and regional co-operation. The Conference was immediately followed by the third session of the Advisory Committee on Regional Co-operation in Education in Asia and the Pacific, which elaborated further measures to implement the recommendations.

Training activities in this area included 25 national training courses held with the assistance of the International Institute for Educational Planning, and 10 clusters of training materials published in English, French and Spanish. UNESCO also organized 30 advisory missions to assist member States in preparing sector studies and educational projects. Other activities sought to promote educational sciences.

Under the programme on education, training and society, 100 specialists from Africa and Asia and the Pacific received in-service training in the application of evaluation techniques to programmes designed to integrate productive work into the general education process; advisory services provided to seven member States sought to improve the introduction of productive work in secondary schools. An interregional symposium for Africa and Asia (Nairobi, Kenya, May), attended by 20 participants, made recommendations on the content, methods and programmes of training for teachers of national languages and mother tongues. Various activities were aimed at improving the teaching of science and technology, promoting physical education and sport, and integrating training and research activities.

Natural sciences

UNESCO continued contributing to international co-operation in science and technology for development during the year. Over 3,000 specialists, mainly from developing countries, were trained in basic sciences, informatics and biotechnology, in collaboration with national universities and institutions and NGOs. The education of engineers and technicians continued to receive high priority, as did activities relating to new and renewable sources of energy, with emphasis on the development of learning packages in both areas.

The importance of informatics for development, and the imbalance in equipment and informatics application between developed and developing countries, led UNESCO to launch an Intergovernmental Informatics Programme, with the goals of accelerating the training of specialists, facilitating the introduction of informatics in education, encouraging research in and through informatics, and helping in the production of software for education and research. During the 1984-1985 biennium, about 1,200 specialists from 67 member States were involved in informatics training activities, and some 20 research and training pilot projects were implemented.

Two new networks were launched, the International Network of Centres for Computer Applications and the International Network on Earthquake Engineering, with the objective of increasing international co-operation in research and training and offering assistance to developing countries.

The second Conference of Ministers Responsible for the Application of Science and Technology to Development in Latin America and the Caribbean (Brasilia, Brazil, 20-26 August) was attended by 420 delegates from 25 countries, observers from two countries, and representatives from United Nations bodies and NGOs. It adopted recommendations aimed at harnessing local scientific and technological resources for the development of the region, especially in the rural areas.

The International Geological Correlation Programme, involving some 4,000 scientists from 130 countries, continued to stimulate international collaboration in the earth sciences through its 47 research projects in 116 countries. The geology for development project continued to focus on studying pre-Cambrian Africa, and multidisciplinary regional projects were begun to analyse the geological structure and mineral potential of the continent. The programme on geological applications of remote sensing continued stimulating research on geological interpretation of data from second-generation space-borne sensors, with its two projects focusing on areas of Africa and Latin America. Activities concerning natural hazards included a project on assessment and mitigation of earthquake risk in the Arab region. Missions were sent to various areas affected by natural hazards, including one to the Nevado del Ruiz volcano (Colombia), which subsequently erupted disastrously.

Under the Man and the Biosphere programme, implementation began of the Biosphere Reserve Action Plan, adopted in 1984 to expand the network of biosphere reserves and maintain research and training activities. Syntheses were produced of the results of pilot research projects, such as the integrated projects on arid lands 'based in Kenya and Tunisia. New comparative studies on tropical soil biology and fertility and on responses of savannahs to stress were launched in 1985, in co-operation with the International Union of Biological Sciences.

The International Hydrological Programme entered its twenty-first year of operation, with some 10,000 specialists world-wide contributing to its 61 projects. Twenty-eight post-graduate courses and numerous short courses, seminars and symposia were sponsored, often jointly with scientific NGOs. Pilot projects on the rational use and conservation of water resources in rural areas were under way in some 10 Arab countries, in the Sahel States of Africa and in Latin America.

The Intergovernmental Oceanographic Commission continued its programmes, which included ocean dynamics and climate, ocean science in relation to living and non-living resources, marine pollution research and monitoring, ocean mapping, ocean observation and warning systems, and marine data and information exchange.

UNESCO activities in marine sciences in 1985 enabled some 400 specialists to increase their knowledge in this field. An interregional project on research and training with a view to the integrated management of coastal systems received extrabudgetary resources, making it possible to execute various pilot projects concerning coral reefs, mangrove areas, coastal lagoons and coastal ecosystems.

Other activities dealt with urban systems and urbanization, the natural heritage, and environmental education and information.

Social sciences

In 1985, UNESCO continued emphasizing the development of social and human sciences.

To achieve greater decentralization, a regional social science unit, attached to the Regional Centre for Higher Education, was established in Latin America and the Caribbean. In collaboration with the social science networks of the region, the unit launched five regional research projects and organized four specialized meetings and two training courses.

A meeting on philosophy teaching and research in Latin America and the Caribbean (Lima, Peru, 24-28 June) was attended by 13 experts from the region. Round tables on the philosophers Al-Ghazali and Maimonides were held in December at UNESCO headquarters. The organization continued to provide financial support for the publication of the journal Diogenes.

The major thrust of population activities was to provide technical support to 35 national projects, mainly in training, research and planning of communication strategies. In this connection, UNESCO collaborated with regional broadcasting organizations, such as the Asia-Pacific Institute for Broadcasting Development, the Arab States Broadcasting Union and the Asociación Interamericana de Radiodifusión. Other activities dealt with the socio-economic aspects of migration, both internal and international.

Activities for youth continued to promote the development of sport, particularly for youth in rural areas; to expand voluntary work among young people; and to examine the circumstances, in particular youth unemployment, which led young people to become socially deprived. The World Congress on Youth, organized in co-operation with the Spanish Government (Barcelona, 8-15 July), brought together 608 participants and observers from 120 member States and 96 NGOs. Discussion focused on: youth, education and work; youth and cultural development; and young people, mutual understanding and international co-operation. The Congress adopted the Barcelona Statement, to serve as a framework for future action.

On the issues of prejudice, intolerance, racism and apartheid activities included meetings and studies on the phenomenon of slavery and slave trade, analysis of South African radio broadcasting, particularly programmes for neighbouring African States, a study on the access of Africans to research and advanced training in South Africa, and research on national social policies and immigration.

UNESCO continued to analyse human rights violations and the conditions for peace. With the collaboration of the International Peace Research Institute (Oslo, Norway), an international symposium was held in October on the different interpretations of the causes and consequences of conflicts. Volumes IV (1983) and V (1984) of the UNESCO Yearbook on Peace and Conflict Studies were published. The 1985 UNESCO Prize for Peace Education was awarded to General Indarjit Rikhye (India) and the Georg Eckert Institute for International Research on School Textbooks (Federal Republic of Germany). Support was given to various institutions to train young professors and researchers on human rights.

The status of women programme included studies and dissemination of information on the role of women in society, efforts to incorporate women's concerns in development planning, and activities to enhance the role of women in the media. An international advisory group of experts met in Paris (25-28 June) to assist UNESCO in its efforts to improve the status of women.

Culture

Implementation of international campaigns for the safeguarding of cultural heritage was pursued throughout 1985. Two new campaigns were launched: one to safeguard the ancient monuments and sites of Paharpur Vihara and Bagerhat (Bangladesh), the other for the restoration of the architectural heritage of Guatemala. Activities were carried out in each of the 29 international campaigns in progress; preparation for nine others was undertaken.

The World Heritage Committee, established under the 1972 Convention concerning the Protection of the World Cultural and Natural Heritage, held its ninth session (Paris, 2-6 December). It inscribed 30 additional sites on the World Heritage List, thus raising to 216 the number of cultural and natural properties (situated in 55 countries) protected by the Convention, to which 88 States were parties at the end of 1985. Efforts continued to promote public awareness of the Convention's objectives and to encourage contributions to the World Heritage Fund, which supports training activities and restoration work on World Heritage sites.

Studies continued on African, Latin American, Caribbean, Arab, Asian, European and Arctic cultures. Four volumes of the General History of Africa were published in English, three volumes in French and Spanish, two in Portuguese and one in Arabic. Literary works from Africa, Asia and Latin America were translated and published in the UNESCO Collection of Representative Works, and in the European series the Nordic countries received increasing attention. The quarterly Museum was produced in English, French, Russian and Spanish with a circulation of 17,000 copies. The fifteenth UNESCO travelling exhibition, on Slavonic art, accompanied by a video production, was mounted. Five records in the UNESCO collection of traditional music were issued.

Regarding artistic creativity, a meeting was held in Budapest, Hungary, on the recognition and protection of young talent in cinema, dance and music. An international consultation attended by 20 member States (Venice, Italy, 24-26 June) analysed the role of major art exhibitions and international events to promote contemporary art. International experimental workshops studied the urban extension of historic centres, and the industrial design of medical equipment and hospital premises. The UNESCO/International Music Council Prize for Music was awarded to Paul Collaer (Belgium), Witold Lutoslawski (Poland) and Olivier Messiaen (France).

Communications

In 1985, UNESCO continued its efforts to improve the national and international flow of information, primarily by strengthening developing countries' communication infrastructure, training of communication personnel, production of communication equipment and improvement of media content. It also continued to study the role of communication in society, in particular the socio-cultural impact of new technologies. Under this programme, a series of comparative research studies were carried out, and a geographically-based planning consultation was held in India, covering Africa, the Arab States and Asia and the Pacific.

Further consultations were held on a new world information and communication order (see p. 373), seen as an evolving and continuing process, as well as on plurality in information, the contribution of the media to international understanding, human rights and peace, and the watch-dog role of the press. A summary of previous work on the right to communicate was prepared to help define the emphasis of future activities on that theme.

The Intergovernmental Council of the International Programme for the Development of Communication (IPDC) (sixth session, Paris, 4-11 March) approved financial contributions to 38 projects for communication development. During this session, the first IPDC-UNESCO Prize for Rural Communication, set up in 1984,<sup>b</sup> was awarded to the Kheda Communication Project of India. IPDC continued to support regional news agencies, regional broadcasting unions and media training. Advisory missions were organized to assist in preparing national plans for the development of community radio, news agencies, television and regional newspapers, and in the formulation of national book and communications policies.

Training programmes and materials on communications continued to expand, with the participation of national, regional and subregional institutions. More than 2,500 persons received initial or further training. A special project, PACBROAD, was launched to provide radio production training to Pacific island broadcasters. Support was provided to the establishment or reinforcement of more than 30 local newspapers in Africa. Community radio stations were set up in Burundi, Ghana, Maldives, Sri Lanka and Tonga. Community video was assisted in Nepal and in Trinidad and Tobago.

Assistance was provided to a number of Latin American countries to organize national reading campaigns using the media. Workshops were held in the Dominican Republic and in Africa on the production of reading materials. Other activities included: seminars on children's books (Arab Gulf States) and on young people's reading habits (Vienna, Austria); the launching of a regional programme for publications in Braille in Latin America; and an innovative study in China to explore problems in distributing reading material to new literates in rural areas. Training in the book profession, emphasizing management, production, editing and design, was provided to some 300 trainees.

General Information Programme

The General Information Programme continued to provide assistance to member States on scientific and technical information, documentation, libraries and archives. It also aimed at strengthening national capabilities for handling information through the development of telecommunication technologies and information systems.

The Programme continued promoting development of library and information services and systems; integrated library and information services were put into operation through two national projects. The Regional Network for the Exchange of Information and Experience in Science and Technology in Asia and the Pacific developed considerably, with 17 member States and 80 associated centres co-operating within the system at the end of 1985. A meeting on resource-sharing in southern and central Africa was convened in the United Republic of Tanzania to identify to what extent the countries of that region could assist each other in acquiring, processing and distributing information. Other activities included training courses, production and dissemination of technical publications and periodicals, and projects aimed at introducing modern technologies and establishing data bases.

Action for development

Activities continued under the programme on principles, methods and strategies of action for development. In 1984-1985, 1,396 fellowships and 293 study grants were awarded. Of these, 716 were in education, 360 in natural sciences, 147 in general information, 113 in communications, 62 in culture and 61 in social and human sciences. In addition, 312 conventional-type fellowships were awarded and training opportunities made available to 464 candidates, enabling them to take part in courses and seminars organized by NGOs, training and research institutions and foundations, making maximum use of training facilities in developing countries.

Two agreements to execute pilot projects were signed. The first was concluded with the French National Commission for UNESCO to extend cultural relations between nationals of developing countries who had emigrated to industrialized countries of Western Europe and the populations of the host countries. The second, concluded with the Congo, dealt with the development of its Mayombé region.

Other activities included training seminars, development studies and publication of technical reports. Meetings of experts examined the role of families in development in Africa (Bujumbura, Burundi, 21-25 January), social and cultural dimensions of development in integrated planning (Paris, 22-26 April), women's concerns and development planning (San Marino, 1-4 July), youth unemployment (Paris, 18-20 September), and analysis of development planning methods (Nairobi, 2-6 December).

Technical assistance

Participation Programme

At 31 December 1985, allocations approved by the Director-General under the UNESCO Participation Programme, through which member States and organizations participate in technical assistance activities, amounted to $14,712,904.

The amounts (in United States dollars) by sector and by region were as follows:

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the number of full-time staff employed by UNESCO on permanent, fixed-term and short-term appointments was 3,171 drawn from 135 nationalities. Of these, 1,234 were in the Professional or higher categories and 1,937 were in the General Service and Maintenance Worker categories.

Of the Professional staff, 379 were serving in the field, as were 437 General Service and Maintenance Worker staff.

Budget

The 1985 session of the UNESCO General Conference approved a budget of $307,223,000 for 1986-1987. However, after the withdrawal from the organization of two member States, the Executive Board adjusted the budget to $289,339,000. The level of the Working Capital Fund was fixed at $15,000,000 and the total assessment on member States (after reducing miscellaneous income) at $255,850,980. Amounts allocated (in thousands of United States dollars) are shown in the table below:

UNESCO REGULAR BUDGET		Amount
Programme operations and services		209,305
Programme support services		28,607
General policy and direction		25,516
Common services		24,410
General administrative services		24,128
Appropriation reserve		15,610
Capital expenditure		1,055
Negative provision for currency fluctuation		(39,291)
Total		289,339

*This amount was subsequently increased to a positive provision of $1,814,227 after savings of $2,337,647 and a supplementary appropriation of $38,768,000.

Chapter V

World Health Organization (WHO)

The thirty-eighth World Health Assembly met at Geneva from 6 to 20 May 1985 and endorsed a zero-growth programme budget for the 1986-1987 biennium. With the addition of extrabudgetary funds, the World Health Organization (WHO) would have almost $1 billion to support health activities in its member States. The proportion to be allocated to country and regional activities was to rise to 70 per cent in 1986-1987, and the introduction of regional programme budget policies was endorsed, to ensure that the focus was kept on mainstream health activities to foster the attainment of health for all by the year 2000, as set out in the 1982 plan of action.<sup>a</sup>

The Health Assembly decided that emergency health relief to drought- and famine-stricken African countries should be linked to co-operation in their long-term health and socio-economic development. It also decided to strengthen WHO's co-operation with countries collaborating among themselves for health development, to increase the involvement of non-governmental organizations in health-for-all strategies, and to support the development of health-for-all leaders within the health sector and outside it. The Assembly also considered the topics of women, health and development; the epidemiological situation with regard to malaria; and the prevention of disability, including deafness.

Brunei Darussalam on 25 March 1985 became a WHO member, bringing its membership to 166 and one associate member.

Co-ordination with other organizations

WHO continued to participate in the emergency assistance being provided by the United Nations system, particularly in the critical situation in Africa, and it concentrated increasingly on promoting the preparedness and capacity of member States to cope with health emergencies and natural disasters. In connection with International Youth Year (see p. 978), the theme of World Health Day (7 April) was "Healthy Youth: Our Best Resource". Attention focused on the health needs of young people and on the mobilization and active participation of youth in promoting primary health care.

Health system infrastructure

In November a WHO consultative group assessed the current status of the organization of health systems in countries and the support being provided by WHO, and identified priority areas and activities requiring concerted action. Strengthening overall national health system organization to implement primary health care was one of the main subjects discussed by the UNICEF/WHO Joint Committee on Health Policy at its twenty-fifth session, in January. An interregional meeting (Ottawa, Canada, June) on developing and strengthening logistic support to primary health care stressed the need to plan the development and maintenance of health facilities and also the need for hospital support at the primary health care level. A first interregional meeting on community involvement in health development took place at Brioni, Yugoslavia, in June.

Health promotion and care

General health protection

Progress reviews were made in preparation for the July World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women (see p. 937). Discussion of the Director-General's report on women, health and development in WHO governing bodies led to the provision of a framework for WHO's implementation of the forward-looking strategies that emerged from the Conference for the advancement of women in 1986-2000.

The prevention and management of malnutrition continued to be accorded highest priority, with particular reference in 1985 to vitamin-A deficiency and related blindness. In the area of accident prevention, attention was given to falls of elderly people, burn injuries, spinal cord injuries, accidents in domestic settings, traffic safety, and accidents and violent deaths among adolescents. The first global liaison meeting on accident and injury prevention was convened at Geneva, whose target-to be evaluated annually-was for as many countries as possible to have introduced and enforced legislation related to the wearing of seat-belts in motor vehicles by the year 2000.

Health of specific population groups

A November WHO interregional meeting at Geneva reiterated that maternal mortality and morbidity were found to be related to the organization of services for appropriate referral, quality of care and its supervision, and the integration of primary health care with traditional community perceptions and attitudes towards pregnancy and delivery care. In many parts of the world, maternal mortality rates were 200 to 500 times higher than in more privileged countries. WHO emphasized research, development and evaluation of appropriate technologies for use by traditional birth attendants, such as risk profiles and delivery kits. The report was published of a symposium on fetal diagnosis of congenital disorders, with descriptions of such diagnostic approaches as amniocentesis, fetoscopy, ultrasound examination, and cytogenetic or biochemical analysis of chorionic villi.

To examine the nature and magnitude of child abuse in the context of the role of the family, child labour, sexual abuse and child prostitution, vagrant children and children in war, an international conference was convened at Berne, Switzerland, in December under the joint sponsorship of WHO and the Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences. Workshops were held with participants from four regions in 1985 as a means of analysing and meeting the reproductive health needs of adolescents.

The Special Programme of Research, Development and Research Training in Human Reproduction responded to member States' requests by studying the feasibility, in national contexts, of integrating family planning within maternal and child health services. In 1985 three projects were successfully completed: in the Republic of Korea, on the effectiveness of integrated programmes when co-ordinated by nurse midwives; in Bangladesh, on the important role of village practitioners in expanding family planning services and in promoting the use of contraceptive methods; and in Chile, on continuing the use of intra-uterine devices and oral contraceptives.

Mid-year reports to WHO indicated unusually high prevalence rates for occupational and work-related diseases, which were frequently found to be superimposed on existing serious health problems such as malnutrition and parasitic diseases, thus confirming the rationale for WHO's stress on developing workers' health programmes within the health services infrastructure. The first International Conference on the Health Hazards and Biological Effects of Welding Fumes and Gases (Copenhagen, Denmark, February) was organized jointly by the Commission of the European Communities, WHO, the Danish Welding Institute and the International Agency for Research on Cancer. The Conference considered experimental and epidemiological studies of the effects of welding fumes and gases and made recommendations on the reduction of exposure and the development of monitoring, educational and health assessment programmes.

Environmental health

For the approaching mid-point of the 1981-1990 International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation

Decade on 31 December 1985, the Executive Board reviewed WHO's programme and evaluated progress towards adequate water supply and sanitation. The second and third volumes of the WHO Guidelines for Drinking-water Quality were published in 1985, and considerable activity followed on the part of member States to put drinking-water standards into effect and to take the requisite surveillance and corrective measures.

Against the background of innumerable individual cases of poisoning and industrial accidents endangering communities, the Fourth General Meeting of the World Federation of Associations of Clinical Toxicology Centres and Poison Control Centres, convened in October at WHO headquarters jointly by the Commission of the European Communities and the UNEP/ILO/WHO International Programme on Chemical Safety, concluded that harmonization of data on poisoning and the standard of services provided by poison centres could be enhanced through greater international collaboration. National workshops and regional courses continued to be organized, based on WHO guidelines, on the assessment of pollution sources and environmental health impact assessment.

By the end of 1985, the first edition of the Codex Alimentarius (standards and codes of hygienic and technological practice defined by a joint FAO/WHO Commission) was completed with the publication of additional volumes. Jointly with FAO, WHO also continued to support the work of expert groups on pesticide residues and collaborated with member States in the FAO/WHO food contamination monitoring programme, a health-related activity of UNEP's Global Environmental Monitoring System.

Diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative technology

In line with increasing interest in the assessment of health technology and with a view to developing and using appropriate technologies, a global programme for appropriate medical health care technology was established in July at the Danish Hospital Institute, a WHO collaborating centre.

WHO purchased 40 X-ray machines for its basic radiological system, to be installed in 10 countries in the Eastern Mediterranean region. Three copiously illustrated manuals were either published or prepared for publication in Arabic, English, French and Spanish, on radiographic interpretation for general practitioners, and darkroom and radiographic techniques.

At a conference convened by WHO (Nairobi, Kenya, November), 92 experts from Governments and national regulatory authorities, industry, and organizations of patients and consumers, as well as teachers and providers of health care, reached agreement on making the world-wide use of drugs more rational. The responsibility of Governments and the importance of the essential drug concept were affirmed, and WHO's support and leadership role was delineated.

Disease prevention and control

Immunization

Data available in July showed that thanks to the Expanded Programme on Immunization, of which UNICEF was a major supporter, 40 per cent of children in the developing countries (excluding China) had received the full course of DPT (diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus) and poliomyelitis vaccines, compared with 5 per cent when the Programme was launched in 1974. Immunization against those diseases and measles and tuberculosis was saving the lives of about 800,000 infants yearly.

Malaria

The overall world malaria situation in 1985 showed no real general improvement. Of the total world population, 48 per cent (2,266 million people) lived in areas where malaria risk persisted but organized control was being pursued, and 8 per cent (398 million) were living in areas (mainly in tropical Africa) where malaria endemicity remained basically unchanged. About 95 million clinical cases occurred each year with 240 million people becoming infected.

Other parasitic diseases

After 10 years of the Onchocerciasis (river blindness) Control Programme in the Volta River basin region, the disease had been brought under control in 90 per cent of the area by the use of insecticides to control the blackfly population responsible for transmission.

Diarrhoeal diseases

The second International Conference on Oral Rehydration Therapy was held in Washington, D.C., in December 1985 under the joint sponsorship of the United States Agency for International Development, WHO and UNICEF. Participants from 90 countries learned of the progress made since the first conference three years earlier. In Bangladesh, for example, 2.6 million leaflets describing oral rehydration—a method of preventing dehydration caused by diarrhoea—were distributed through the primary school system. A 1985 evaluation showed that about 88 per cent of primary school children were involved with the follow-up activity.

Acute respiratory infections

Ten health systems research projects on the feasibility and impact on mortality of strategies for the control of acute respiratory infections and 11 etiological and epidemiological research projects had been continued or initiated in 1985. These activities had given encouraging preliminary results. A project in the United Republic of Tanzania, for example, showed that one year after implementing intervention strategies a 19.5 per cent overall reduction of mortality in children under 5 years of age was observed by comparison with a control area.

Zoonoses

The Joint FAO/WHO Expert Committee on Brucellosis (sixth meeting, Geneva, November) made recommendations in the context of health for all to guide communities in controlling and where possible eliminating brucellosis from domestic animals, protecting people and treating them when protection failed.

Sexually transmitted diseases

WHO developed training modules to enable a large number of health care personnel to carry out control activities in regard to sexually transmitted diseases, and closer collaboration in research was undertaken to economize scarce resources, accelerate the development of better and simpler diagnostic tools, and identify an immunizing agent against syphilis and the endemic treponematoses. To co-ordinate global surveillance activities and to assess the international health implications of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS), consultations, meetings and workshops were organized and a network of collaborating centres was established by WHO following an April international conference on AIDS held at Atlanta, Georgia, under joint United States/WHO sponsorship.

Cancer

WHO developed a method for setting priorities for cancer control programmes by providing a structure and terminology for comparisons of cost effectiveness. A November meeting reviewed the approaches and impediments to reducing mortality from cervical cancer (about 500,000 new cases each year), and formulated strategies to encourage early detection, adequate cytological services and appropriate therapy. Data for 1960-1980 on cancer mortality from 28 countries, representing 75 per cent of the population of the developed world, showed an increase of 19 per cent in cancer deaths among males and a decrease of 2 per cent among females. A dramatic rise in mortality was registered for lung cancer (76 per cent for men and 135 per cent for women).

Other non-communicable diseases

The annual meeting in Moscow in June/July of the principal investigators in WHO's Country-wide Integrated Programme for the Prevention of Non-Communicable Diseases decided that greater emphasis should be placed on nutrition and reviewed a draft manual containing guidelines on monitoring and evaluation.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total number of full-time staff employed by WHO stood at 4,477 on permanent and fixed-term contracts. Of these, 1,438 staff members, drawn from 124 nationalities, were in the Professional and higher categories, and 3,039 were in the General Service category. Of the total number of staff, 108 were in posts financed by UNDP, UNEP, UNFPA and the United Nations Fund for Drug Abuse Control.

Budget

The thirty-sixth (1983) World Health Assembly had approved an effective budget of $520.1 million for 1984-1985.<sup>b</sup>

The thirty-eighth Assembly approved a working budget of $554 million for the 1986-1987 biennium, divided into allocations for WHO's work programme as follows: health system infrastructure, 32.6 per cent; health promotion and care, 18.5 per cent; disease prevention and control, 15.5 per cent; programme support, 21.8 per cent; and direction, co-ordination and management, 11.6 per cent.

Chapter VI

International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank)

During the fiscal year 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) and its affiliate, the International Development Association (IDA), continued to help developing countries to raise their standards of living by channelling financial resources to them from developed countries.

Lending commitments by the Bank, credit approvals from IDA, and investment commitments by a second affiliate, the International Finance Corporation (IFC), amounted to $15,324 million—a decline of $894 million from the previous fiscal year.

Membership in the Bank rose to 149 in 1985, with the admission of Tonga on 13 September.

Lending operations

In fiscal year 1985, the World Bank made 131 loans amounting to $11,358.3 million to 44 countries, a decline of $589 million from fiscal 1984. This brought the cumulative total of loan commitments by the Bank since its inception in 1946 to $112,921.8 million.

WORLD BANK LOANS APPROVED BY REGION/COUNTRY AND PURPOSE 1 JULY 1984-30 JUNE 1985 (in millions of US dollars)

Agriculture and rural development

In its continued commitment to agriculture and rural development, the Bank made 34 loans in fiscal 1985 amounting to $2,389.6 million to 22 countries. Indonesia received $501.7 million, of which $160 million helped support the planning of transmigration and other development programmes in the Other Islands, promote the welfare of transmigrants and other local people through better physical planning of settlements and improve the quality and economic viability of the transmigration programme. Turkey received $300 million to finance a portion of the imported inputs, capital goods, training and consultant services needed to support the Government's agricultural-sector adjustment programme. Of $250 million provided to the Philippines, $150 million went to support the Government's short-term economic stabilization programme and a medium-term programme of agricultural policy and institutional reform.

Development finance companies

The Bank made six loans totalling $506.1 million in fiscal 1985 to assist development finance companies in six countries. The Republic of Korea received $222 million to support ongoing financial reforms and to provide credit to cover foreign-exchange costs of industrial equipment imported by private firms seeking to acquire, build, modernize or replace productive assets. Mexico received $105 million for a second mining-development project which would finance evaluation exploration, mine development and mine exploitation, strengthen the capabilities of the major institutions supporting small and medium-scale mining enterprises and improve co-ordination. A loan of $90 million was made to development finance companies in Colombia to channel term financing towards efficient investment projects in the industrial sector and to assist the Government in strengthening ongoing financial-sector reforms.

Education

During fiscal 1985, the Bank granted nine loans totalling $514.9 million for education projects in eight countries. Indonesia received two loans totalling $225 million to assist in the training of its own university teachers and researchers through the development of new graduate-level programmes and to raise the quality of general secondary education. A loan of $81 million went to Mexico to support the National Agency for Professional Technical Education in implementing the second phase of its technical-training programme for skilled workers and technicians. Brazil received $72 million to finance the foreign-exchange costs in 1984-1986 of its programme for support of science and technology development.

Energy

Twenty-three energy projects—in oil, gas, coal and power—were assisted in 15 countries during fiscal 1985 at a cost of $3,365.3 million. Four loans totalling $974 million were made to India, of which $300 million helped meet the electricity demand in the western region of the country by installing two 500-megawatt generating units at the Chandrapur thermal power plant in Maharashtra State. Brazil received two loans totalling $712 million, of which $400 million assisted the Government to reverse the financial deterioration of the power sector by constructing transmission facilities included in the 1985-1992 transmission-expansion programmes of two major electricity companies. Pakistan received four loans totalling $433 million; $178 million supported the Government's reforms in the energy sector and assisted in the implementation of its core energy-investment programme for 1986/87.

Industry

The Bank made seven loans for the industrial sector amounting to $635 million during fiscal 1985. The largest loans included $300 million to India for the establishment of a gas-based petrochemical-manufacturing facility near Bombay; $73 million (out of a total of $122.5 million) to Hungary to increase and diversify the production of fine chemicals, particularly pharmaceuticals, thus increasing the country's foreign-exchange earnings; and $97 million to China for the rehabilitation and modernization of selected fertilizer facilities.

Non-project

Three non-project loans totalling $435 million were made during the fiscal year. Colombia received $300 million to support the first phase of its trade-policy reforms, Costa Rica received $80 million to support its structural adjustment and economic recovery programme, and Jamaica received $55 million as a third loan in support of its programme of structural adjustment aimed at achieving export development and economic deregulation.

Population, health and nutrition

Five loans amounting to $160.9 million were made to four countries in fiscal 1985. Indonesia received two loans totalling $85 million, of which $46 million helped to support a population project aimed at strengthening the activities of the National Family Planning Co-ordinating Board and assisting the Ministry of Population and Environment. A loan of $34 million was granted to Nigeria to expand and improve the delivery of primary health and family-planning services, including immunization, in Sokoto State. In Morocco, $28.4 million assisted the Ministry of Public Health in shifting emphasis from an urban-based, hospital-oriented health system to a more cost-effective system of primary care.

Small-scale enterprises

Five loans totalling $553.1 million were granted for small-scale enterprises during fiscal year 1985. Brazil received $300 million for a development-banking project which would provide funds for larger, privately controlled industrial enterprises to export, expand or reorient production for export and for small and medium-sized enterprises. The Republic of Korea received $111 million to provide credit, technical assistance and training, tailored to the needs of small and medium-sized industries. Malaysia received $52.1 million to help develop small-scale enterprises by increasing the availability of institutional credit and by expanding and improving technical assistance.

Technical assistance

During fiscal 1985, five countries received loans for technical assistance amounting to $44.5 million. Nigeria received $13 million to help improve the quality and reliability of its management-information system, upgrade its statistical system and introduce methods to monitor the progress of public-sector activities. A loan of $11 million to Chile helped improve its ability to guide the economy by improving economic policy execution. Jamaica received $9 million to help the Government implement, monitor and sustain its structural adjustment effort.

The largest element of technical assistance continued to be that financed as a component of loans for other purposes. During the year, these technical assistance components totalled $1,148.4 million in 203 operations, compared with $1,093.2 million in the same number of operations in fiscal 1984. Among the larger amounts of technical assistance financed as components of Bank loans were $143.9 million of a $160 million transmigration loan to Indonesia, and $13.6 million of a $56 million agricultural loan to Chile.

The Bank continued to serve as executing agency for projects financed by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). At the end of fiscal 1985, the number of projects in progress stood at 123 for a total allocation of $174.7 million. Among the larger new UNDP-financed projects were feasibility and engineering studies for agricultural and transportation projects in Bangladesh, a study of alternative modes of vocational training in eight Arab States, and preparation of an investment project to strengthen economic management in Papua New Guinea.

The Bank's technical co-operation was extended to Arab oil-producing developing countries in Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, on a reimbursable basis when the annual programme exceeded one staff-year of Bank input and on a non-reimbursable basis in response to ad hoc requests for programmes requiring less than one staff-year. In fiscal 1985, about 34 staff-years of reimbursable technical assistance were provided by the Bank, some 94 per cent to Saudi Arabia. The Bank also provided non-reimbursable technical assistance to Kuwait for manpower planning and to the United Arab Emirates for an education-sector survey.

Telecommunications

The Bank made three loans for telecommunications projects totalling $59.6 million in fiscal 1985. Kenya received $32.6 million to expand and modernize existing telecommunications infrastructure. A loan of $23 million went to Oman to expand local, domestic long-distance and international telephone facilities as well as to provide first-time telephone service to about 37 rural communities. The Philippines received $4 million to promote and support the sound regulatory, institutional and financial development of the telecommunications sector.

Transportation

Eighteen loans totalling $1,866.9 million were made to 16 countries during fiscal 1985 for the development of transportation systems. Mexico received two loans totalling $322 million, of which $300 million financed investment and operational and financial improvements to the railway system. Of two loans to China totalling $277.6 million, $235 million was for upgrading and electrifying more than 600 kilometres of railway lines, and for modernizing a passenger-coach factory. A loan of $200 million was granted to India to upgrade major highways in six states. Other loans were for rail, port and highway improvement.

Urban development

In fiscal 1985, six countries received loans totalling $204.6 million for urban projects. Chile received $80 million to support a programme in the Ministry of Housing and Urbanism through a package of policy improvements, housing construction, studies and technical assistance. A loan of $53 million was made to the Republic of Korea to improve traffic and transport conditions in Seoul.

Water supply and sewerage

Seven loans totalling $622.8 million were made to six countries in fiscal 1985 for water supply and sewerage. Algeria received $262 million to help expand water production and distribution levels required by some 2.1 million inhabitants of Oran and Constantine. Two loans totalling $147.5 million were granted to Colombia, $129 million of which supported a project which would continue the Bank's efforts to provide essential water-supply and sewerage infrastructure for Bogota. Water service for about 5 million people in Seoul would be improved and capacity to serve 1.1 million more by 1991 would be provided through a $95 million loan to the Republic of Korea.

Economic Development Institute

Fiscal 1985 was the first year of the Economic Development Institute's (EDI) five-year plan designed to strengthen its work on development policy issues and place more emphasis on national economic management, sectors, public enterprises and projects. To promote these objectives, EDI organized a wide range of senior policy seminars, mostly for Africa. Training courses and seminars emphasized policy issues and efforts were initiated to produce more training materials dealing with such issues.

Of 82 courses and seminars held (17 in the United States and 65 elsewhere), 49 were direct training for senior and middle-level officials. Some 2,800 participants-about 45 per cent from smaller or poorer countries-benefited from EDI training.

New courses and seminars were given on education-sector management, population and development, agriculture-sector planning and agricultural marketing, mostly for sub-Saharan Africa. Other new direct training efforts were on food policy, entrepreneurial development, and management of city growth, technology and technical assistance.

Concerted efforts were made to increase the quantity, and improve the quality, of EDI's training materials. In fiscal 1985, EDI produced in final form 30 course notes, 20 case-studies, seven comprehensive collections of readings, five seminar papers and 16 audio-visual modules (mostly on water and sanitation).

In addition to organizing joint activities with training institutions in developing countries, EDI also supported them by contributing staff for courses and seminars organized and directed by them and by advising them on their planning, financing and administration. Substantial assistance in planning was provided in fiscal 1985 to agencies in Indonesia, Morocco and Nigeria. The first major EDI-led review of an overseas training institution, the Eastern and Southern African Management Institute, was completed; its recommendations were used as the basis for management improvements and the provision of external aid.

The EDI programme of seminars for trainers in developing-country institutions was growing rapidly, concentrating on Asia and Latin America. In fiscal 1985, 18 such seminars, including several case-writing workshops, were given in a variety of sectors.

Co-financing by national and international aid agencies for programmes directed or co-directed by EDI had grown from about $900,000 in fiscal 1983 to nearly $2.5 million in fiscal 1985. These funds were for regional and world-wide training activities; for national programmes, the training components of Bank loans were expected to become an increasingly important source of finance. A vocational training loan to Morocco, for example, contained funds for a major training programme developed with EDI assistance.

Co-financing

Despite a difficult market environment which continued to limit the availability of co-financing with export-credit agencies and commercial banks, the flow of funds to developing countries was maintained through co-financing with the World Bank. The Bank's contribution during fiscal 1985 amounted to $4,749.3 million for 104 projects, an increase of more than $100 million over fiscal 1984. Of this total, co-financing with official development agencies remained by far the largest source—$2,453.5 million in 87 projects. This form of co-financing provided development-oriented lending, highly concessional terms and long maturities. During fiscal 1985, private co-financing amounted to $922 million for live projects.

In sub-Saharan Africa, where increased financial support was needed to support policy reforms, about half the funds committed to the Special Facility for sub-Saharan Africa took the form of special joint financing, thus providing a substantial supplement to the flows provided by direct contributors.

Special Action Programme

The Special Action Programme (SAP), initiated as the Special Assistance Programme in February 1983<sup>a</sup> for a two-year period, was intended to strengthen the Bank's ability to assist developing countries to adjust to the current economic environment. It was composed of financial measures, combined with policy advice.

In March 1985, the Executive Directors assessed the progress achieved and agreed that SAP had been highly successful. Some effects of SAP were readily quantifiable: for instance, incremental disbursements to 44 countries during the period fiscal 1984-1986 were estimated at about $4.5 billion, almost double the estimate made when SAP was launched. The Executive Directors also agreed to a recommendation not to extend SAP formally.

Financing activities

During fiscal 1985, the World Bank borrowed the equivalent of $11,085.8 million, consisting of new medium- and long-term borrowings plus incremental short-term discount-rate and Central Bank Facility borrowings outstanding on 30 June 1985. The total was made up of $3,486.8 million in United States dollars, $2,090.4 million in Japanese yen, $1,952.7 million in Swiss francs, $1,659.3 million in deutsche mark, $758.8 million in Netherlands guilders, $364.5 million in pounds sterling, $304.4 million in Canadian dollars, $221 million in European currency units, $83.6 million in Austrian schillings, $51.2 million in Italian lire, $50.5 million in Belgian francs, $29.4 million in Norwegian kroner, $17.4 million in Danish kroner and $15.8 million in Luxembourg francs.

Of the 121 medium- and long-term borrowing operations conducted by the Bank, 100 were in the private sector and accounted for $8,513 million, or 77 per cent of the total funds borrowed. The other medium- and long-term issues, totalling $1,863 million, or 17 per cent of the funds raised, were placed with official sources. Short-term borrowings outstanding as at 30 June amounted to $3,458 million.

As at 30 June 1985, the Bank's outstanding obligations totalled $50,319 million—an increase of $5,290 million over fiscal 1984—denominated in 20 different currencies and currency units.

During fiscal 1985, the Bank continued to engage in currency swaps as a means of increasing its access to low nominal-cost currencies. It executed 50 currency-swap transactions aggregating $1,360 million—$887 into Swiss francs, $268 into deutsche mark, $96 million into Netherlands guilders and $109 million into Japanese yen.

Capitalization

For the fiscal year ending 30 June 1985, the value of the Bank's capital stock was expressed on the basis of the special drawing right (SDR) in terms of United States dollars as computed by the International Monetary Fund on 28 June, when the value of the SDR was set at $0.998281. The subscribed capital of the Bank, as at 30 June, totalled SDR 58,948 million, an increase of SDR 4,633 million from fiscal 1984.

Income, expenditures and reserves

The Bank's gross revenues, generated primarily from loans and investments, increased by $874 million or 19 per cent, to a total of $5,529 million in fiscal 1985. Net income was a record $1,137 million; the 90 per cent increase over the preceding year was primarily a result of high returns on the Bank's liquidity and low borrowing costs.

Expenditures totalled $4,392 million, up 8.3 per cent from the previous fiscal year. Administrative costs amounted to $355 million, up by $25 million.

The Bank's General Reserve amounted to $3,727 million at the end of fiscal 1985.

Secretariat

As at 30 June 1985, the staff of the World Bank numbered 5,866, of whom 2,920 were staff in the Professional or higher categories, drawn from 112 nationalities.

<sup>a</sup>YUN 1983, p. 1259.

Chapter VII

International Finance Corporation (IFC)

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), established in 1956 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), is a multilateral development institution that promotes private investment and assists private enterprises in its developing member countries. Its capital resources are provided by its 127 member States—including 106 developing countries—which collectively determine its policies and activities.

During the fiscal year ending 30 June 1985, the first year of IFC's current five-year programme, the IFC Board of Directors approved 75 investments in 38 developing countries and one regional project in Africa, totalling $937.2 million. Of that amount, $609.3 million was to be invested for IFC's own account and $327.9 million would be syndicated, or sold, to other investors. Compared to the 1984 fiscal year, the total approved investments increased by $241.6 million, from $695.6 million, and investments net of syndications rose $218.3 million, from $391 million. Of the total dollar amount, $875.9 million was for loans and $61.3 million for equity or equity-like investments. Of the latter, $7.4 million was approved for the exercise-of-rights issues by firms in which IFC already had equity investments. Four of the loans, which totalled $37.3 million, involved the restructuring of existing obligations.

IFC estimated that the total capital costs of projects it would help to finance would be more than $2,767.6 million. In other words, for every dollar invested by IFC for its own account, others would invest about $3.50.

All loans reflected market rates. The typical United States fixed-rate loan was priced at 13.25 per cent for a period of seven to eight years with a grace period of four years. The maturities of IFC loans, set to conform to the nature and needs of each project, ranged from eight to 12 years.

During the year, IFC invested in China for the first time. It also approved investments in five countries in which it had not invested during the previous three years. Thirty-three investments, with a total value of $258.9 million, were located in countries with a per capita income below $805. Early in the fiscal year, at the request of IFC's management, the Board of Directors approved the use of lending at variable rates. During the year, more than 20 per cent of the loans were priced at variable rates, with 34 per cent of United States dollar-denominated loans so priced.

Supplementing its loans, equity and equity-like instruments, IFC also provided a broad range of other financial services, including underwritings, guarantees and stand-by arrangements. Up to one third of the staff effort was expended for technical assistance activities. These services were generally provided free of charge. However, to bring itself in line with market practices, IFC began to charge fees for special service activities; such fees generated about $2.6 million in income for IFC during fiscal year 1985.

Equity from a special line of financing established with Saudi Arabia in 1983 was called upon to help fill a financing gap in two projects: a battery-manufacturing business in Yemen and an oil palm plantation in the Philippines.

The Corporation continued aggressively to seek out commercial banks and other financial institutions to join in loan syndications and parallel financing. During the year, some $327.9 million in loans by IFC was syndicated with 36 such institutions, in line with the IFC objective of placing about one third of its loans in the international financial markets. Included among the year's activities was a $50-million underwriting for a Latin American export finance bank for which IFC, together with the Goldman Sachs International Corporation, was the leading underwriter. This medium-term floating-rate note issue was the first for a Latin American private-sector firm, since the debt crisis began in 1982, involving new money from international capital markets.

The Board of Directors had approved in 1984 a five-year financial and operational plan covering the fiscal years 1985 to 1989. The programme, dependent on a proposed $650-million capital increase, targeted an annual growth rate of about 7 per cent in both the number and the dollar volume in real terms of projects approved by the Board. Thus, during the five years covered, IFC expected to undertake more than 400 new investments and commit about $4,000 million of its own funds (or $7,300 million inclusive of syndications to commercial financial institutions) in business ventures with total capital costs exceeding $30 billion. During 1985, IFC achieved the objectives established for the first year of the programme.

The five-year programme set out a number of new initiatives, responding to the priority needs of developing member countries. These included corporate restructuring assistance provided to about 30 companies to restructure their operations to reflect economic policy adjustments made by their Governments. In four cases completed in 1985, IFC provided $40.3 million in loans and quasi-equity investments. Concerning African initiatives, IFC during the year approved $60.4 million in financing for 15 projects in sub-Saharan Africa. In May 1985, after informal discussions in a number of African capitals, it entered into a funding agreement with the United Nations Development Programme to study the possibility of establishing an African Project Development Facility to help African entrepreneurs develop new business ventures. IFC also began discussions with private companies and public agencies on the creation of an African Management Services Facility, which would contribute experienced management to African enterprises. With regard to energy, IFC diversified its activities in oil and gas exploration and development, particularly encouraging independent oil companies to expand activities in developing countries. One oil exploration project in Colombia and two energy development projects in Chile and Pakistan were approved. Concerning financial markets and institutional development, IFC expanded into a number of new areas, helping to establish an insurance company in Indonesia, underwriting a Eurodollar bond issue, providing a line of equity to an intermediary on an agency basis and setting up new investment banks with the participation of similar developing-country institutions. It also promoted the formation of national and multi-country equity investment trusts to encourage equity flows.

While continuing to borrow most of its funds from the World Bank, IFC for the first time supplemented them by borrowing from private capital markets. By the end of May 1985, it had carried out two $50-million fixed-rate borrowings at favourable rates. Later in the year, it raised $29 million through a private placement. In June 1984, the Board of Directors had approved for submission to the Board of Governors a resolution proposing to increase IFC's authorized shares from 650,000 to 1,300,000. During the 1985 fiscal year, 104 member countries, representing 70.6 per cent of the total voting shares and 82 per cent of the membership, ratified the resolution. It was expected that the 75 per cent of the voting shares required for ratification would be reached early in fiscal year 1986.

During the 1985 fiscal year, Mozambique and Hungary joined the IFC, bringing its membership to 127.

Chapter VIII

International Development Association (IDA)

Established in 1960 as an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank), the International Development Association (IDA) promotes economic development primarily in the poorer developing countries. It provides assistance for the same purposes as the Bank but on easier terms. Though legally and financially distinct from the Bank, IDA shares the same staff.

The funds used by IDA—called credits to distinguish them from World Bank loans—come mostly from subscriptions in convertible currencies from members, general replenishments from its more industrialized and developed members, and transfers from the Bank's net earnings.

IDA assistance during fiscal year 1985 (1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985) concentrated on the very poor countries—those with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $791 (in 1983 dollars). More than 50 countries were eligible under that criterion. Credits are interest-free, with a service charge, to cover administrative costs, of 0.75 per cent on disbursed and 0.5 per cent on undisbursed balances. After an initial grace period of 10 years, the credits are then repayable over 50 years.

Unlike the Bank, which may lend to public and private entities with government guarantees, IDA lends only to Governments. In the case of revenue-producing projects, IDA credits are re-lent by the Governments on terms reflecting the local cost of capital. Therefore, IDA terms assist Governments to finance economic development without distorting the local credit structure.

At the end of fiscal 1985, IDA resources totalled $33,295 million.

The bulk of IDA funds for lending is provided by its Part I (industrial) member countries and several Part II (developing) countries under a series of replenishment agreements. The IDA Deputies met (Seoul, Republic of Korea, October 1985) to review the role of IDA and its future direction in the context of a mid-term review, to be undertaken in 1986, of the seventh replenishment of its resources;<sup>a</sup> they discussed the marked deterioration in the economies of the poorest countries, especially in Africa. At the same time, the planned lending by IDA to the poorest countries had been sharply curtailed because of the lower volume of resources made available under the seventh replenishment as compared with the sixth. As a result, investments in those countries in infrastructure, social sectors and productive activity were deferred, with a resulting adverse impact on long-term growth and the living standards of the poor. These concerns added urgency to the negotiations for the eighth replenishment and led to a commitment by the Deputies to complete the negotiations by the time of the 1986 annual meetings.

Membership of IDA rose to 134 in 1985 after the admission of Hungary on 29 April and Tonga on 23 October.

Special Facility for sub-Saharan Africa

During fiscal year 1985, the World Bank published a report on the problems of, and prospects for, sustained development in sub-Saharan Africa, and proposed a joint programme of action designed to address the long-term constraints on development in the region. The report called for the creation of a special assistance facility in support of reform programmes undertaken by African Governments.

A recent review by the Bank showed that there were 21 countries where structural reforms were ongoing or where there were reasonable prospects that such programmes could be put in place in the next two years. For those 21 countries, net disbursements of official assistance declined from $5.4 billion a year during 1980-1982 to $4.5 billion in 1983. In the absence of special action, they were expected to decline further to about $3.7 billion a year during 1985-1987. Programmes of structural adjustment and economic reform could not be effective given such a declining rate of external finance. The Special Facility, therefore, represented a crucial component of the joint programme of action.

In May 1985, the Bank's Executive Directors authorized IDA to act as administrator of, and to accept contributions to, the Facility. This action followed an agreement, reached on 1 February, between 14 countries and the Bank to mobilize additional resources of over $1.1 billion, to be committed over a three-year period, in special Facility operations. As of 30 June 1985, resources expected for such operations totalled more than $1.2 billion.

Funds from the Special Facility were to be used to provide credits to IDA-eligible countries in sub-Saharan Africa that had undertaken, or were committed to undertake, appropriate medium-term programmes of policy reform. The credits, which were to be made on IDA terms, would help finance quick-disbursing lending operations in support of structural and sectoral adjustment, rehabilitation and emergency reconstruction. All operations would be approved and administered by Bank staff, and would be subject to approval by IDA's Executive Directors.

Lending operations (credits)

By 30 June 1985, IDA had made cumulative net commitments totalling $36,682.1 million. Commitments in fiscal 1985 amounted to $3,028.1 million, of which $1,390.1 million went to seven countries in South Asia and $711.5 million to 15 countries in eastern and southern Africa. India was the largest borrower with six credits amounting to $672.9 million, followed by China with five credits ($442.3 million) and Bangladesh with four ($266 million).

Agriculture and rural development

As in previous years, in fiscal 1985 credits for agriculture and rural development accounted for the largest amount of IDA lending—44.9 per cent. Forty-one credits worth $1,359.7 million were committed in 25 countries.

Of credits totalling $534.9 million made to India, $165 million assisted in the expansion and improvement of social forestry activities in several states. China received four credits amounting to $187.3 million, of which $75 million helped increase the production of crops and other agricultural products in west-central Anhui province by developing rural infrastructure and agricultural support services and improving the planning and management of irrigation and flood-control schemes.

Other credits went to agricultural research and development, agro-industry, irrigation and drainage, fisheries, forestry, livestock, training and technical assistance.

Development finance companies

IDA extended five credits totalling $59.3 million in fiscal 1985 to assist development finance companies. A credit of $40 million went to Madagascar to support policy reforms designed to enhance the efficiency and productivity of the industrial sector and to increase the capacity of selected industrial enterprises to produce basic consumption goods for the domestic market and for export.

Other credits helped finance investments in small and medium-scale industrial enterprises, training and technical assistance in Cape Verde, Mauritania, Samoa and Yemen.

Education

Ten countries received credits totalling $412.9 million for education projects during fiscal 1985.

China received $145 million to promote policy and institutional changes in the engineering and economic/finance education subsector in some 35 universities. A $78-million credit to Bangladesh supported a long-term investment programme in primary education.

Other credits were committed to improve access to, and the quality of, primary and secondary education, teacher-training programmes, curriculum development and educational materials.

Energy

Nine countries received credits totalling $216.4 million for energy-related projects in fiscal 1985.

A credit of $110 million supported the Bangladesh Oil and Gas Corporation in its efforts to expand gas supplies and strengthen its management capability. Uganda was granted two credits totalling $33.9 million to rehabilitate turbo-generator units, strengthen and upgrade transmission lines, provide financial-policy and institutional assistance to the Uganda Electricity Board and technical assistance to the new Energy Department and to support government efforts to attract oil companies to explore for hydrocarbons.

Industry

A credit of $9 million was extended to Bhutan for the construction of a calcium-carbide plant, which was expected to enhance the country's ability to generate foreign-exchange earnings for economic development.

Non-project

IDA committed $194.2 million for seven non-project credits during fiscal year 1985. Ghana received $60 million to finance imports for the primary-production sectors of agriculture, mining, manufacturing and transportation in support of the Government's economic recovery programme. A $45-million credit to Mozambique helped support priority economic-rehabilitation needs within the context of the Government's economic action programme for 1984-1986. Bangladesh received $30 million to assist in the rehabilitation of flood-damaged facilities.

Population, health and nutrition

Two countries received credits totalling $30.1 million for projects in population, health and nutrition. A credit of $26.6 million was granted to Burkina Faso to improve the quality and accessibility of health and family planning services for over 50 per cent of the population and to immunize about 60 per cent of children through the age of four against major childhood communicable diseases. Lesotho received $3.5 million for a project aimed at strengthening the organization and management of the Ministry of Health and manpower development and training, as well as improving health care coverage and family planning services.

Small-scale enterprises

Nepal was extended a credit of $7.5 million to finance private industrial enterprises through the Nepal Industrial Development Corporation, for the establishment of an import-export facility, and for studies on industrial and export incentives and tourism promotion.

Technical assistance

Credits totalling $67.2 million were awarded to 10 countries for technical assistance in fiscal year 1985. The United Republic of Tanzania received $10 million for its programme to revise policies and institutional arrangements in the agricultural sector by providing the capacity to analyse policy alternatives and to monitor and supervise parastatal performance. A $9.5-million credit was granted to Guinea to improve its economic management through a three-year, first-phase programme of technical assistance and staff training focused on macro-economic management, investment choice and procurement, and control of public finance and external debt. Zaire's Ministry of Primary and Secondary Education received $9 million to improve its planning, management and administrative capability in order to provide enhanced education services.

Other technical assistance credits were for macro-economic management, public investment programming, budget preparation and execution and public finance management and statistics.

Telecommunications

Two credits totalling $62 million were granted for telecommunications projects. Ethiopia received $40 million for a sixth project comprising the capital investment part of the Ethiopian Telecommunications Authority's development programme for 1984-1988, which was designed to increase the availability of services and to improve service quality. A credit of $22 million financed a fourth project in Nepal to strengthen the Nepal Telecommunications Corporation, expand local telephone facilities in Kathmandu and other urban areas and provide first-time telephone service to some 90 rural communities.

Transportation

IDA granted 10 credits totalling $271.8 million for transportation projects during fiscal 1985.

A credit of $55 million to Zaire financed a sixth highway project to consolidate the country-wide bridge, road and ferry rehabilitation and maintenance programmes and strengthen the administration and training capabilities of the agency in charge of the main road network. Nepal received $47.5 million to complete an all-weather, east-west highway. A credit of $40 million supported a three-year rehabilitation/maintenance programme for Ghana's trunk roads, a bridge rehabilitation programme, a three-year pilot feeder-road programme and the rehabilitation of 105 kilometres of the Accra-Kumasi highway. China received $30 million towards a first highway project to improve the quality of future construction works, increase the cost-effectiveness of highway investments, support a highway research programme and provide for training. The United Republic of Tanzania received $27 million to assist in the rehabilitation and modernization of the port of Dar es Salaam, and to provide technical assistance and training for the Tanzania Harbours Authority.

Urban development

In fiscal 1985, four credits totalling $180 million were granted for urban development. India received $138 million for land infrastructure servicing and slum upgrading to benefit half a million people in the Bombay metropolitan region. A $22-million credit to Ghana strengthened the institutions responsible for infrastructure maintenance and urban services in Accra and removed transport bottle-necks there. A credit of $15 million to Malawi helped to reorient future housing development towards a market-based system. Djibouti received $5 million to help upgrade low-income areas.

Water supply and sewerage

Six countries received credits totalling $158 million for water supply and sewerage in fiscal 1985. Of that amount, $80 million went to China to provide water-supply facilities and develop and strengthen systems, institutions and technology; safe drinking-water would be provided to some 6 million people in five provinces and Beijing. A $28-million credit went to Uganda to help finance the rehabilitation of the water-supply and sanitation facilities in seven major towns. Madagascar received $15 million to restore essential facilities damaged by a cyclone in April 1984, support institutional arrangements for the co-ordination of reconstruction efforts and develop measures to minimize the potential damage from natural disasters.

Chapter IX

International Monetary Fund (IMF)

The world economy during 1985 presented a mixed picture. Inflation receded further, world output increased at a moderate pace and interest rates declined significantly. At the same time, the slow-down in industrial countries-particularly in the United States-was sharper than expected, world trade was sluggish, protectionist pressures intensified, real primary commodity prices declined steeply, and the developing world experienced a set-back in its efforts to achieve growth with adjustment.

The 3 per cent rate of growth recorded for world output in 1985 represented a considerable slow-down from the 4.5 per cent rate of the previous year. The slow-down in the growth of industrial countries' output led to a marked deceleration in the growth of world trade and, in combination with plentiful supplies, a sharp fall in real primary product prices. As a result, the export earnings of developing countries stagnated and their debt ratios, which had begun to recede in 1984, rose again in 1985 to reach record levels.

In the second half of the year, steps were taken to address these imbalances to reduce the risks and uncertainties in global economic prospects. An agreement reached in New York on 22 September among the Group of Five (France, Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, United Kingdom, United States) set forth their policy intentions to achieve increased and more balanced growth as well as exchange rate relationships that better reflected underlying economic fundamentals. Studies of the functioning of the international monetary system, conducted by the Group of 10 (industrial countries) and the Group of 24 (developing countries), recognized that the role of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in the system would be conditioned by members' views of how the system was expected to evolve. Both groups agreed that surveillance of exchange rate policies was central to the role of IMF and that it should be strengthened. However, the reports differed on other issues: while the Group of 10 urged that IMF should keep its lending in line with its quota resources, ensure effective conditionality and step up its co-operation with the World Bank, the Group of 24 called for an increase in special drawing right (SDR) allocations, a liberalization of the conditions attached to IMF-supported economic programmes, and greater voting power in IMF for developing countries. The reports were discussed at the twenty-fifth meeting of the Interim Committee of the Boards of Governors of the International Monetary Fund (Seoul, Republic of Korea, 6 and 7 October).

The debt situation and strategy

An important aspect of the Fund's activities was the handling of international debt problems. The aggregate current account deficit of the capital importing developing countries was reduced from about $100 billion in 1981 to some $25 billion in 1984/85. On the whole, external debt was serviced and principal restructured in an orderly fashion, while total external payments arrears were reduced in 1985 for the first time in recent years. Notwithstanding the progress that had been achieved by 1985, developing countries remained vulnerable to a number of developments in the world economy-a slow-down in world trade, low oil and commodity prices, declining commercial bank financing and greater protectionism in industrial countries. In some heavily indebted countries, income per capita remained below pre-1982 levels.

In response to these difficulties, the United States Secretary of the Treasury, James A. Baker III, at the annual meetings of the World Bank and IMF (Seoul, Republic of Korea, October 1985) proposed an initiative to reinforce the debt strategy in ways that would permit debtor countries to achieve both growth and balance-of-payments viability. The initiative-known as the Baker Plan-was endorsed by the IMF Managing Director and the World Bank President in a joint statement issued in December 1985.

IMF-World Bank collaboration

In 1985, IMF and the World Bank continued to strengthen their collaboration. Bank staff participated in IMF missions to 17 countries, while IMF staff participated in Bank missions on 18 occasions. There were 44 instances of parallel or overlapping IMF and Bank missions.

For many countries where structural reforms were important, their economic programmes were supported by both IMF arrangements and World Bank loans. IMF-Bank collaboration to mobilize commercial bank financing became particularly close and was an element in five of nine commercial bank loan packages concluded or agreed to in 1985.

Access to IMF resources

An important aspect of membership in IMF is the access of members to its resources. Under the Fund's policy of enlarged access, in operation since 1981 and subject to annual review since 1983, a member with a stand-by or extended arrangement with IMF was permitted to obtain, subject to certain conditions, a larger amount of resources from the Fund relative to its quota, and for longer periods, than could be obtained from IMF ordinary resources. The bulk of the resources for the enlarged access policy were made available under medium-term borrowing arrangements with members that had strong balance-of-payments positions, principally Saudi Arabia.

In that context, the Fund's short-term borrowing arrangements for SDR 3 billion with the Bank for International Settlements (BIS), Japan and the National Bank of Belgium were extended effective 26 April 1985. The extensions were to hold until 31 December 1985 in the cases of BIS and Japan and until 28 February 1986 in the case of the National Bank of Belgium.

On 9 December 1985, the IMF Executive Board resolved that the enlarged access policy should be continued in 1986, with modest reductions in access limits. Access would be subject to annual limits of 90 or 110 per cent of quota (previously 95 or 115 per cent), three-year limits of 270 or 330 per cent of quota (previously 280 or 345 per cent), and cumulative limits of 400 or 440 per cent of quota (previously 408 or 450 per cent), depending on the seriousness of a member's balance-of-payments needs and the strength of its adjustment efforts.

Other IMF facilities

In October 1985, the Interim Committee of the IMF Board of Governors agreed to permit the SDR 2.7 billion in expected receipts from loan repayments during 1985-1991 to a Trust Fund established in 1976<sup>a</sup> to be used to provide concessional balance-of-payments assistance to low-income developing countries. The Fund was terminated in 1981 and its responsibilities confined to the receipt and disposition of interest and loan repayments through a special disbursement account.

On 3 May 1985, the IMF Executive Board reviewed its 1981 decision<sup>b</sup> allowing the compensatory financing facility to be used to compensate for temporary increases in cereal import costs. The decision was extended for another four years, with a provision that it be reviewed by the Executive Board not later than 13 May 1987.

Financial assistance

The level of financial assistance by the Fund declined to SDR 4 billion in 1985 from SDR 7.3 billion in 1984. The decline followed three years of high levels of assistance in response to the needs of some heavily indebted member countries. To some extent, it also reflected the progress made by several countries to strengthen their external positions. All purchases in 1985 were made by developing countries. Reserve tranche drawings—which were not included in purchases and were not subject to conditionality or repurchase requirements—fell in 1985 to SDR 200 million from SDR 800 million in 1984.

As of 31 December 1985, there were 29 stand-by arrangements (typically made over a one-year period) and three extended arrangements (usually made over three years), with an aggregate approved value of SDR 9.9 billion and an undrawn balance of SDR 4.7 billion. Purchases made in support of economic adjustment programmes under stand-by and extended arrangements accounted for 78 per cent of total drawings in 1985, compared with 88 per cent in 1984.

SDR activity

Total transfers of SDRs increased to SDR 15.9 billion in 1985 from SDR 15.7 billion in 1984. As a result of transferring SDR 6.4 billion to its members and receiving SDR 4.5 billion from them, IMF saw its SDR holdings decline by SDR 1.9 billion. SDR transfers among members and official institutions authorized to hold SDRs declined to SDR 5 billion in 1985 from SDR 5.8 billion in 1984. This reflected a decline in the volume of transactions "by agreement"—voluntary transfers of SDRs in exchange for currencies—to SDR 2.6 billion from SDR 3 billion the previous year, and of transactions "with designation" to SDR 1.9 billion from SDR 2.3 billion in 1984. Under transactions with designation, participants with sufficiently strong international financial positions were designated by IMF to exchange their usable currencies for SDRs of participants in need of balance-of-payments assistance.

Although the volume of total SDR acquisitions by members against payment of foreign exchange increased to a record level of SDR 4.2 billion in 1985, transactions by agreement registered a lower volume due to the increase in the amount of SDRs that members acquired from IMF to pay charges (SDR 1.6 billion in 1985, compared with SDR 450 million in 1984). For the third consecutive year, transactions by agreement exceeded transactions with designation.

Policy on arrears

Owing to difficulties that many member countries faced in meeting their payment obligations, IMF experienced some prolonged delays in repayments during 1984 and 1985. Accordingly, the Executive Board in March 1985 decided to exclude from the Fund's current income the charges receivable from members that were overdue by six months or more. As a result, IMF incurred a net deficit of SDR 30 billion in the financial year ended 30 April 1985, after a net surplus of SDR 73 billion in 1983/84.

In addition to the change in its accounting procedures, IMF adopted several related decisions during the year, as part of an overall policy with respect to members in protracted arrears. In February, it was decided that a member's right to purchase under stand-by and extended arrangements would be suspended when it had overdue financial obligations to the Fund.

Publications

Publications issued by IMF in 1985 included the Annual Report of the Executive Board, the Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions, Balance of Payments Statistics (monthly and Yearbook), Direction of Trade Statistics (monthly and Yearbook), Government Finance Statistics Yearbook, International Financial Statistics (monthly, Yearbook and two supplements) and the World Economic Outlook.

Periodicals included the quarterlies Staff Papers and Finance and Development (published jointly with the World Bank), the IMF Survey (published 23 times a year) and the monthly IMF Memorandum. Also published were explanatory pamphlets on the workings of IMF and papers on subjects of interest to the international financial community.

Membership

During 1985, membership of IMF rose to 149 with the admission of Tonga on 13 September.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total full-time staff of IMF—including permanent, fixed-term and temporary employees—was 1,780, drawn from 102 nationalities.

Chapter X

International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO)

The International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) facilitates the safety, regularity and efficiency of civil air transport. As an intergovernmental regulatory organization in international civil aviation, its objectives are set down in annexes to the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago, United States, 1944) which prescribe standards, recommended practices and procedures for facilitating civil aviation operations.

ICAO estimated total traffic of the world's scheduled airlines to be over 166 billion tonne-kilometres during 1985, an increase of 5.2 per cent over 1984. The airlines carried over 890 million passengers at a load factor of 66 per cent, 1 percentage point above 1984. Air freight remained at around 39 billion tonne-kilometres and airmail traffic at around 4.3 billion tonne-kilometres.

During the year, the ICAO Council held three regular sessions. It also convened a two-day extraordinary session at the request of Iran, following a notification by Iraq that it was not responsible for the safety of international flights operating within Iranian airspace. The Council urged the parties involved to assure the safety and regularity of international civil aviation along designated international air traffic service routes.

During 1985, membership of ICAO rose to 156 with the admission of Brunei Darussalam on 3 January, the Comoros on 14 February and Solomon Islands on 11 May.

Activities in 1985

Air navigation

During 1985, ICAO's efforts in air navigation continued to be directed towards updating and implementing ICAO Specifications and Regional Plans. The Specifications consisted of International Standards and Recommended Practices contained in 17 technical annexes to the Chicago Convention, and of Procedures for Air Navigation Services (PANS) contained in three PANS documents. Regional Plans set forth air navigation facilities and services required for international air navigation in the nine ICAO regions.

The Specifications in seven annexes and in one PANS document were amended. Amendments were also made to Regional Plans.

Seven air navigation meetings covering a wide range of subjects recommended changes to ICAO Specifications. To facilitate the implementation of the provisions of annexes and PANS, ICAO made available guidance material in the form of new and revised technical manuals and circulars.

ICAO regional offices assisted States in implementing Regional Plans. Their work was supplemented by that of experts sent to advise on installing new facilities and services and on operating existing ones.

During the year, special attention was given to: aircraft airworthiness and operations; environmental protection; transport of dangerous goods; helicopter operations; accident investigation and prevention; personnel licensing and training; aviation medicine; aerodromes; telecommunications; rules of the air and air traffic services; search and rescue; meteorology; aeronautical charts and information services; audio-visual training aids; and safeguarding international civil aviation against acts of unlawful interference.

Air transport

ICAO continued in 1985 its programmes of economic studies, collecting and publishing air transport statistics, and promoting greater facilitation in international air transport.

The Third Air Transport Conference (Montreal, Canada, 22 October-7 November) approved 23 recommendations on various aspects of regulatory policies governing scheduled and non-scheduled services, unilateral measures affecting international air transport, the role of Governments in the tariff field, rules and conditions associated with international tariffs and tariff enforcement.

The panel on route facility costs (Montreal, June/July) completed its work on a manual on route air navigation facility economics and considered developments concerning implementation of the World Area Forecast System. Workshops were held on airport and route facility economics (Bangkok, Thailand, September), aviation forecasting and economic planning (Mexico City, November), and statistics (Dakar, Senegal, December). A facilitation area meeting discussed problems in eastern and southern Africa (Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, November).

ICAO publications in 1985 included a study of air passenger and freight transport development in Africa, the regular series of digests of civil aviation statistics, the yearbook on world civil aviation statistics, a second edition of the definition of a scheduled international air service, a revised edition of the manual on air traffic forecasting, a study of regional differences in fares, rates and costs for international air transport in 1983 and a survey of international air transport fares and rates in 1984.

ICAO continued to co-operate closely with other international organizations such as the International Air Transport Association, the Airport Associations Co-ordinating Council, the Customs Co-operation Council, the World Tourism Organization and the Universal Postal Union. It also continued to provide secretariat services to three independent regional civil aviation bodies—the African Civil Aviation Commission, the European Civil Aviation Conference and the Latin American Civil Aviation Commission.

Following a 1982 conference to amend the 1956 Danish and Icelandic joint financing agreements for air navigation services in Greenland and the Faeroe Islands, and in Iceland, the two agreements as amended were provisionally applied from 1 January 1983. By the end of 1985, the protocols of amendment had been accepted by 13 countries.

Legal matters

The Legal Committee did not meet in 1985. However, the ICAO secretariat submitted to the Council in March a preliminary study which had been requested the previous year in connection with a draft instrument on the interception of civil aircraft.<sup>a</sup> The Council concluded that no new rules should be drafted relating to the aftermath of the landing of an intercepted aircraft pending the entry into force of an amendment (article 3 bis), embodied in a Protocol, to the Chicago Convention which reaffirmed the principle that every State must refrain from resorting to the use of weapons against civil aircraft in flight. In December, the Council decided that the item should remain on the general work programme of the Legal Committee with the understanding that no work should be undertaken pending the entry into force of article 3 bis.

Also in December, the Council had before it two reports which were to be referred to the Legal Committee for consideration: one on the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea—implications, if any, for the application of the Chicago Convention, its annexes and other international air law instruments; and the other on liability of air traffic control agencies. The Council also considered a model clause on aviation security for bilateral air agreements, prepared by the ICAO secretariat, and decided to send it to States and international organizations for their comments.

The Committee on Unlawful Interference with International Civil Aviation and Its Facilities held 12 meetings in 1985. It continued reviewing proposals to amend Specifications on security-safeguarding international civil aviation against acts of unlawful interference. On 19 December, on the recommendation of the Committee, the ICAO Council adopted an amendment to the Specifications in question.

In addition, the Committee considered proposals for a new comprehensive work programme as well as recommendations for a formal review of its terms of reference to enable it to play a more effective role in assisting the Council in matters pertaining to aviation security. Its recommendations were approved by the Council on 3 December.

The Committee also studied proposals for a consolidation of all ICAO Assembly resolutions in force pertaining to aviation security. On 16 December, the Council approved the text of a consolidated statement proposed by the Committee and decided to present it to the 1986 session of the Assembly for approval.

The following conventions and protocols on international air law concluded under ICAO auspices were ratified or adhered to during 1985:

Convention on International Recognition of Rights in Aircraft (Geneva, 1948)

Grenada, Uruguay

Convention on Offences and Certain Other Acts Committed on Board Aircraft (Tokyo, 1963)

Antigua and Barbuda, Malaysia

Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Seizure of Aircraft (The Hague, 1970)

Antigua and Barbuda, Malaysia

Protocol to Amend the Convention for the Unification Of Certain Rules relating to International Carriage by Air signed at Warsaw on 22 October 1929, as amended by the Protocol done at The Hague on 28 September 1955 (Guatemala City, 1971) (not in force)

Italy

Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts against the Safety of Civil Aviation (Montreal, 1971)

Technical assistance

During 1985, ICAO provided technical assistance to 89 States; in 52 of these, there were resident missions consisting of one or more experts. In addition to resident expertise, assistance was provided in the form of equipment, fellowships and scholarships and through short missions by experts.

Ten new large-scale projects, each costing more than $500,000, for which ICAO was to be the executing agency, were approved by the Administrator of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). Three large-scale projects were financed under trust fund assistance.

ICAO employed 597 experts (some in two or more programmes) from 50 countries during all or part of 1985, 386 on assignments under UNDP and 218 on trust fund projects (including seven under the associate experts programme). There were also 29 United Nations Volunteers. The number of experts in the field at the end of 1985 was 282, compared with 331 at the end of 1984.

A total of 1,177 fellowships were awarded in 1985 (1,106 in 1984), of which 1,135 were implemented.

Equipment purchases and sub-contracts continued to represent a substantial proportion of the technical assistance programme. Forty-three Governments or organizations had registered with ICAO under the Civil Aviation Purchasing Service. The total for equipment and sub-contracts committed during 1985 amounted to some $13 million.

The following countries and Territories were aided:

Africa: Angola, Benin, Botswana, Burundi, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Ivory Coast, Kenya, Lesotho, Liberia, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mozambique, Niger, Nigeria, Rwanda, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Swaziland, Togo, Uganda, United Republic of Tanzania, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Americas: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bolivia, Brazil, Cayman Islands, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Honduras, Netherlands Antilles, Panama, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago, Turks and Caicos Islands, Uruguay, Venezuela.

Asia/Pacific: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Brunei, Burma, China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Indonesia, Kiribati, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Vietnam.

Europe, Mediterranean and Middle East: Algeria, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Egypt, Greece, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Morocco, Oman, Poland, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Yemen.

Included in the above were the following, aided under trust fund arrangements: Argentina, Bolivia, Brunei, Cape Verde, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jordan, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Nigeria, Peru, Saudi Arabia, Trinidad and Tobago, Venezuela, Yemen.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total number of staff members employed in the ICAO secretariat stood at 875: 320 in the Professional and higher categories drawn from 73 nationalities, and 555 in the General Service and related categories. Of the total, 215 persons were employed in regional offices. In addition, there were 249 in the Professional category serving as technical experts on UNDP field projects.

Budget

Revised appropriations for the 1985 financial year totalled $39,179,000. Modifications were approved by the ICAO Council and are reflected below (in United States dollars):

	Appropriations	Revised appropriations	Actual obligations
Meetings	318,000	323,000	322,061
Secretariat	27,600,000	29,006,700	29,006,617

Chapter XI

Universal Postal Union (UPU)

The Universal Postal Union (UPU), established at Berne, Switzerland, in 1874 for the reciprocal exchange of postal services between nations, is one of the oldest international intergovernmental organizations. Its aim is to promote the organization and improvement of postal services and to further the development of international collaboration in this sphere. It also participates in various forms of postal technical assistance requested by its member States.

In 1985, UPU membership rose to 168 following the admission of Brunei Darussalam on 15 January.

Activities of UPU organs

Universal Postal Congress

The Universal Postal Congress, composed of all member States, is the supreme legislative authority of UPU and normally meets every five years. The most recent Congress (the nineteenth) took place at Hamburg, Federal Republic of Germany, in 1984 and the twentieth was scheduled to meet at Washington, DC., in 1989.

The work of the Congress consists mainly of examining and revising the Acts of the Union based on proposals submitted by member States, the Executive Council or the Consultative Council for Postal Studies, and of making administrative arrangements for UPU activities. The Acts in force since 1 July 1981 were those of the 1979 Rio de Janeiro (Brazil) Congress. The Acts of the 1984 Hamburg Congress were to enter into force in 1986.

Executive Council

At its 1985 session, held at Berne from 22 April to 3 May, the 40-member Executive Council—which carries out the work of UPU between Congress sessions by maintaining close contact with postal administrations, exercising control over the International Bureau (the UPU secretariat), promoting technical assistance and working with the United Nations and other organizations—considered administrative matters and examined studies concerning international mail referred to it by the 1984 Congress.

Among other questions reviewed by the Council were: a decision to reconstitute the CCC-UPU (Customs Co-operation Council-Universal Postal Union) Contact Committee; rate-fixing for letter-post items; transit charges and terminal dues; basic airmail conveyance rates; maximizing air conveyance of mail; land and sea rates for parcel post; and customs treatment of postal items.

Consultative Council for Postal Studies

The 35-member Consultative Council for Postal Studies continued in 1985 its studies of various technical, economic and operational problems affecting postal administrations of UPU member States, including matters of particular interest to new and developing countries.

The annual meeting of the Council (Berne, 7-17 October) dealt mainly with the launching of studies on the 1984-1989 work programme and the implementation of selected means of action. Activities were also initiated in connection with the 1984 Declaration of Hamburg, which stressed that UPU must "actively participate in strengthening the international postal service as a whole and in improving the standard and speed of international mail circulation and postal exchanges". During the year, work continued on preparing the fifth edition of the Multilingual Vocabulary of the International Postal Service. The Council also dealt with technical co-operation, international high-speed mail and computers in the postal service.

International Bureau

Under the general supervision of the Government of the Swiss Confederation, the International Bureau—the UPU secretariat—continued to serve the postal administrations of member States as an organ for liaison, information and consultation.

During 1985, the Bureau was responsible for collecting, co-ordinating, publishing and disseminating international postal service information. At the request of postal administrations, it also conducted inquiries and acted as a clearing-house for settling certain accounts between them.

As at 31 December 1985, the number of permanent and temporary staff members, employed by the UPU secretariat was 141-59 in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 48 countries) and 82 in the General Service category. Also, as French remained the sole official UPU language, 16 officials were employed in the Arabic, English, Portuguese, Russian and Spanish translation services.

Technical co-operation

The year 1985 marked the end of the five-year period for which the 1979 Congress had set policy

States could finance assistance themselves by funds on deposit.

Under UPU's self-financing system, contributions are payable in advance by member States based on the following year's budget. At its 1985 session, the Executive Council approved a budget of $24,743,000 Swiss francs for 1986 (see table).

Income	Amount (in Swiss francs)
Contributions from member States	21,381,360
Taken from reserve funds	1,000,000
Contribution allocated by UNDP for support of technical co-operation projects	1,315,200
Sale of publications	467,000
Other	579,440
Total	24,743,000*
Expenditure
staff	19,517,100
Overheads	5,225,900
Total	24,743,000*

Regional and interregional programmes concerning postal services were carried out under UNDP in Africa, Asia and the Pacific, the Caribbean and Latin America.

Each member State chooses its class of contribution, on a scale of 0.5 to 50 units. For 1986, the Executive Council fixed the amount of the contributory unit at 21, 840 Swiss francs on the basis of a total of 979 units. The following table gives assessments by class of contribution:

	ASSESSMENTS
CLASS OF CONTRIBUTION	Swiss francs	US dollar equivalent*
50 units	1,092,000	522,500
40 units	-	-
35 units	-	-
25 units	546,000	261,250
20 units	-	-
15 units	327,600	156,750
10 units	218,400	104,500
5 units	109,200	52,250
3 units	65,520	31,350
1 unit	21,840	10,450
0.5 unit	10,920	5,225

Assistance was also provided through the UPU Special Fund and the regular budget. Total expenditures from these two sources in 1985 amounted to approximately $995,000. In addition, 14 countries provided training fellowships and donated postal materials or equipment to postal administrations in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Chapter XII

International Telecommunication Union (ITU)

As at 31 December 1985, 160 countries were members of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU). There were no new admissions during 1985.

Administrative Council

The fortieth session of the Administrative Council of ITU was held from 1 to 17 July 1985 at ITU headquarters, Geneva. It reviewed administrative and financial matters, considered the report of the Independent Commission for World-wide Telecommunications Development, and decided to establish, within the framework of ITU, a Centre for Telecommunications Development at Geneva. The Council also constituted a group of experts to work on the separation of the existing ITU Convention into two separate instruments: a Constitution containing the provisions of fundamental character; and a Convention comprising the other provisions which by definition might require periodic revision.

Administrative radio conferences

The first session of the World Administrative Radio Conference (WARC) on the use of the geostationary-satellite orbit and the planning of space services utilizing it (Geneva, 8 August-15 September 1985) adopted, for submission to its second (1988) session, a technical report covering in-service networks of fixed-satellite services, planning, guidelines for regulatory procedures for space services and frequency bands, inter-service sharing considerations, feeder links and satellite sound-broadcasting systems for individual reception. It also established guidelines for inter-session work to be carried by the ITU technical secretariats.

A Regional Administrative Radio Conference for services in certain parts of the MF (medium frequency) band in Region 1 (Africa and Europe) (Geneva, 25 February-15 March) adopted a regional agreement incorporating frequency assignment plans for stations of the maritime mobile service and of the aeronautical radio-navigation service (radio-beacons).

Another Regional Administrative Radio Conference (Geneva, 4-13 March) adopted a regional agreement for radio-beacons in the European maritime area in the frequency band 283.5-315 kilohertz.

Two other Regional Administrative Radio Conferences were held during 1985: one for the African broadcasting area (Geneva, 12 and 13 August), to abrogate certain parts of the 1963 Geneva Agreement on Very High Frequency (VHF)/Ultra-High Frequency (UHF) Broadcasting;<sup>a</sup> and the other for the European broadcasting area (Geneva, 12 and 13 August), to revise certain parts of the 1961 Stockholm Broadcasting Agreement.<sup>b</sup>

International consultative committees

During 1985, the International Radio Consultative Committee (CCIR) made important progress in the study of television and sound broadcasting topics, fixed satellite systems and mobile communications. Meetings of 13 final study groups were held (Geneva, 16 September-20 November) to prepare proposals for the sixteenth (1986) CCIR plenary assembly. The meetings, which were attended by 1,079 participants from 47 countries, many for more than one study group, resulted in 875 new or revised texts for presentation to the assembly. CCIR also prepared the technical bases for Regional Administrative Radio Conferences for the Americas and Africa, to be held in 1986, and completed inter-session technical studies for the WARC on high frequency (HF) broadcasting, the next session of which was planned for 1987.

The International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT) held the first series of meetings of the new study period which began after the 1984 CCITT plenary assembly.<sup>c</sup> The CCITT secretariat focused its activities mainly on preparing recommendations to appear in the CCITT book (Red Book), published in 1985.

International Frequency Registration Board

The major activities of the International Frequency Registration Board (IFRB) during 1985 included completion of work resulting from the 1979 WARC, and follow-up action on decisions of the 1984 Regional Administrative Conference for FM (frequency modulation) sound broadcasting in VHF bands in Region 1 and in certain countries in Region 3 (Asia and Australasia), and on decisions of the first (1984) session of the WARC for HF broadcasting. IFRB also organized international monitoring programmes and prepared and participated in the 1985 WARC on the geostationary-satellite orbit (see above).

Other IFRB activities included the examination and recording in the Master International Frequency Register of frequency assignment notices received from member countries, and follow-up actions to the following conferences: the 1961 European VHF/UHF Broadcasting Conference; the 1963 African VHF/UHF Broadcasting Conference; the 1975 Regional (Regions 1 and 3) Administrative LF(low frequency)/MF Broadcasting Conference; the 1981 Regional (Region 2—the Americas) Administrative Radio Conference for MF sound broadcasting; the 1983 WARC for mobile services; the 1983 Regional (Region 2) Administrative Radio Conference for planning the broadcasting satellite service; and the 1984 Regional (Region 1 and certain countries of Region 3) Administrative Radio Conference for FM sound broadcasting in the frequency band 87.5-108 megahertz.

Technical co-operation

In 1985, the rate of implementation of ITU technical assistance activities showed a slight but consistent upturn, as the volume of resources available to the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the major contributor to ITU technical co-operation activities, levelled out. Under ITU programmes of technical co-operation in developing countries, 584 expert missions were carried out, 834 fellows were trained abroad and equipment valued at $7,212,617 was delivered, mainly to telecommunication training centres. Total assistance amounted to some $26.3 million.

The following countries and territories were aided:

Africa: Algeria, Angola, Benin, Burundi, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Djibouti, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Gambia, Guinea, Ivory Coast, Lesotho, Madagascar, Malawi, Mauritania, Morocco, Mozambique, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Somalia, Sudan, Swaziland, Togo, Tunisia, Uganda, Zaire, Zimbabwe.

The Americas: Bermuda, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Netherlands Antilles, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, Uruguay

Asia and the Pacific: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Burma, China, India, Indonesia, Iran, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Mongolia, Nepal, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, Republic of Korea, Samoa, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Tokelau, Tonga, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, Vanuatu.

Europe and the Middle East: Albania, Bulgaria, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Greece, Hungary, Jordan, Kuwait, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Yemen.

The main objectives of ITU technical co-operation continued to be: promoting development of regional telecommunications networks in Africa, the Americas, Asia, the Pacific, the Middle East and the Mediterranean Basin; strengthening telecommunication technical and administrative services in developing countries; and vocational training.

ITU continued to promote development of regional telecommunication networks and their integration into the world-wide telecommunication system, in accordance with objectives established by the World Plan Committee and regional plan committees.

The Pan-African Telecommunications Network (PANAFTEL), with its basic structure designed to interconnect countries without transit beyond the continent, made steady progress in 1985. Most of the network was installed, with the sole exception of the Central African subregion. UNDP financed two regional projects for PANAFTEL, one for its continued implementation and operation, and the other for its maintenance. Action was taken at the regional level to encourage countries to adopt national plans for the improvement of maintenance; by the end of 1985, some 25 countries were participating in that common effort.

Co-ordination activities continued during 1985 on a project for a Regional African Satellite Communication System for the development of Africa. Action was taken towards undertaking a feasibility study on the implementation of a regional telecommunication satellite system. An Inter-Agency Co-ordination Committee, with overall responsibility for the project, drew up a structure for the study and identified sources of financing.

In the Americas, several projects were under way during the year to strengthen national telecommunication technical and administrative services. While there was no ITU-executed project aimed at the development of a regional network, ITU continued to foster the development of the network by supporting national and regional organizations responsible for such activities. Technical meetings were held with the Association of Telecommunication Organizations of the Andean Subregional Agreement on a project for an Andean satellite, and activities were initiated with the Caribbean Association of National Telecommunications Organizations.

Activities related to developing a regional telecommunication network in Asia and the Pacific were mostly pursued by the countries on a bilateral basis. However, during 1985, ITU provided assistance to countries in planning and development activities, as well as in improving operation of existing networks through a number of UNDP-funded projects. Through a regional project, ITU assisted least developed countries (LDCs) of the region to upgrade their telecommunication services in rural areas. Progress was achieved in computer-aided network planning, installation of pilot radio-relay systems and rural concentrator equipment and preparing master plans for telecommunication development. As part of a UNDP/ITU regional project on transit and transport for LDCs, ITU provided equipment to upgrade maritime communication services in Maldives.

Assistance to countries in the South Pacific was provided through a regional project, which aimed to provide reliable telecommunication services for the island countries in the area. Technical backstopping was also provided to a number of investment projects funded by the European Economic Community, two of which were completed, resulting in the commissioning of satellite earth stations in Kiribati and Papua New Guinea.

Activities in Europe, the Middle East and the Mediterranean Basin continued at the regional level, under the MEDARABTEL and European regional projects, and the GULFVISION project. The third phase of the MEDARABTEL project was extended for six months, until the end of 1986, with a new activity to co-ordinate network operation in the MEDARABTEL region. Main achievements included a microwave field survey carried out on the Sudanese part of the Egypt-Sudan microwave link and the convening of the Fourth Consultative Meeting on Submarine Cables. In 1985, two ARABSAT satellites were launched which covered the whole Arab world. The GULFVISION project provided assistance through a study on television/radio propagation in the Gulf area, the results of which would enable the countries of the region to make the best use of the allocated bands for television and sound/FM broadcasting services.

The main objective of the European regional project was to provide the economic sectors of the countries concerned with a more effective international telecommunications infrastructure through the introduction of new and appropriate technologies as well as modern tools and methods for management and operations. In Albania, assistance continued under a pilot project on telecommunications development. The contract for the Albanian portion of the Albania-Greece microwave link was signed by ITU at the end of 1985.

Training activities

Under the course development in telecommunications project in 1985, 172 people attended training development workshops, and more than 150 new courses were made available. By year's end, some 425 courses were available and some 450 projects were under development. Japan contributed to the project with a gift of 15 micro-computers and associated peripherals and software.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total staff of ITU numbered 742 officials (excluding staff on short-term contracts). Of these, nine were elected officials, 578 had permanent contracts and 155 had fixed-term contracts; 63 nationalities were represented in those posts subject to geographical distribution.

Budget

The following budget for 1985 was adopted by the Administrative Council in 1984:

	Amount fin Swiss francs/		Amount (in Swiss francs)
Contribution by members and private operating agencies	95,958,000	Technical cooperation	10,175,000
Contribution by UNDP for technical co-operation administrative expenses	10,175,000	Publications	13,665,000
Sales of publications	13,665,000	Total	120,133,000
Miscellaneous	335,000
Total	120,133,000
Expenditure
Administrative Council	768,000
Common headquarters expenditure	79,496,000
Conferences and meetings	15,144,000
Miscellaneous	885,000
Total general expenses	96,293,000

Each member of ITU chooses the class of contribution in which it wishes to be included and pays in advance its annual contributory share to the budget on the basis of the budgetary provision (see Annex I below).

As at the end of 1985, the total of units for members was 393. The contributory unit for 1985 was 221.400 Swiss francs: the unit for 1986 was to be 232,200 Swiss francs.

Chapter XIII

World Meteorological Organization (WMO)

The membership of the World Meteorological Organization (WMO) increased to 159, comprising 154 States and live Territories, when Solomon Islands was admitted on 5 June 1985.

During the year, WMO carried out its activities in accordance with the programmes and budget adopted in 1983 for the period 1984-1987 by its highest body, the World Meteorological Congress, which meets at least once every four years. The 36-member Executive Council meets annually to supervise the implementation of programmes and regulations.

Activities in 1985

World Weather Watch

The World Weather Watch (www), the basic programme of WMO, continued to provide in 1985 global observational data and processed information required by member States for operational and research purposes. Its essential elements were the Global Data-Processing System (GDPS), which provided for processing, storage and retrieval of data and made available processed information; the Global Observing System (GOS), which obtained observational data; and the Global Telecommunication System (GTS), which offered telecommunication facilities for rapid collection, exchange and distribution of observational data and processed information.

During 1985, the main activities of GOS continued under its two sub-systems, one surface-based and the other space-based, which were directed to improving the operations of GOS at the global, regional and national levels. The surface-based sub-system provided conventional basic data from observational networks of stations on land and sea, as well as aircraft meteorological observations. Within the space-based sub-system, meteorological satellites in both near-polar-orbiting and geostationary systems took direct observations. Those satellite systems made a major contribution to operations and research in meteorology, hydrology and other environmental activities by providing additional data on vertical profiles of temperature and humidity; temperature of sea, land and cloud-top surfaces; wind field derived from cloud displacement; cloud amounts; and snow and ice cover.

With regard to GDPS, a number of WWW data-processing centres installed new-generation electronic computers, improving their capability to analyse and forecast products to be exchanged globally and regionally. Those products were used to prepare routine weather forecasts as well as severe-weather warnings by various national meteorological services. GTS comprised more than 280 point-to-point circuits in addition to radio broadcasts and satellite dissemination systems. In 1985, progress was achieved in its operation by the introduction of medium-speed transmission techniques and by upgrading a number of radio circuits to satellite/cable circuits.

Ocean affairs

Marine meteorology continued to receive close attention in 1985, as the demand for marine meteorological information increased. The Commission for Marine Meteorology took action on a number of issues, including ways of improving data coverage of the world's oceans, using the latest advances in marine telecommunications, satellite systems and automation techniques, and maintenance of high standards of marine meteorological services. The Commission continued work on implementation of the WMO Wave Programme, development of a guide to applications of marine climatology, training seminars on marine meteorological services for developing countries, development of a digital sea-ice data bank, and preparation of the Marine Meteorology Programme, part of the Second wmo Long-Term Plan. Operational oceanographic data exchanged through GTS were extensively used for both operational and research purposes, such as climate studies.

Aviation

In June, the Executive Council expressed strong support for an expanded Aviation Meteorology Programme and took measures to strengthen its activities. A revision of the WMO Technical Regulations, where they applied to services for aviation, was undertaken in view of their importance for implementing the World Area Forecast System. A number of activities were further developed within the wmo Aeronautical Meteorology Programme to help member States establish and operate aeronautical meteorological services required to ensure safety, efficiency and economy of air navigation.

Tropical Cyclone Programme

Efforts begun in 1980 to strengthen the WMO Tropical Cyclone Programme continued with work on a number of projects for transfer of technology and provision of advice to countries on improving their protective systems. At the regional level, progress was made in five tropical cyclone basins on improving or formulating tropical cyclone operational plans. Those plans provided for effective forecasting and warning systems through regional co-ordination and co-operation, including clearly defined sharing of responsibilities for the various components. Substantial progress was made in improving those warning systems and related community preparedness measures, such as the application of information from meteorological satellites, the establishment of flood forecasting systems and the training of personnel.

World Climate Programme

The World Climate Programme, established in 1979, continued to aid nations in applying climate information to human activities, to improve the knowledge of climate processes and to warn nations of man-made changes that might affect the well-being of humanity. To meet those objectives, the responsibilities were divided among four components: the World Climate Applications Programme (WCAP), the World Climate Data Programme (WCDP), the World Climate Impact Studies Programme (WCIP) and the World Climate Research Programme (WCRP).

Within (WCAP, attention continued to be given to the priority areas of food, water and energy, along with work in urban climate and human health. As in previous years, the main effort in agrometeorology was directed towards assistance to agrometeorological services in developing countries to strengthen their capability to provide comprehensive services to agriculture. To this end, short- and medium-term agrometeorological missions of experts were provided to developing countries. The WMO Commission for Climatology, meeting in December 1985, allocated to its working groups and rapporteurs the responsibility for data management, statistical methods in the application of climatological data, energy, urban and building climatology, air pollution, human biometeorology, tourism and recreation, transport and economic planning, climatological maps and aspects of education and training.

The primary objective of WCDP was to ensure the timely availability of reliable climate data, in an acceptable format, to support climate application impact studies and research.

Activities under WCIP were carried out by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP), in co-operation with WMO, on reducing the vulnerability of food systems to climate, assessing the impact of man-induced climatic changes and improving the methodology for climate impact studies.

In October 1985, WMO, UNEP and the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) sponsored an International Conference on the Assessment of the Role of Carbon Dioxide and of Other Greenhouse Gases in Climate Variations and Associated Impacts. The Conference concluded that the increase in "greenhouse" gases would probably produce global temperature increases during the first half of the next century. An International Scientific Advisory Group on Greenhouse Gases was set up to maintain a continuous assessment.

WCRP was conducted jointly by WMO and ICSU to determine the extent to which climate could be predicted and the extent of man's influence on climate. Research initially focused on three areas: the physical basis and feasibility of predicting short-term climate anomalies (on a time scale of one to three months); interannual variability, particularly resulting from interaction with the tropical oceans (on a time scale of a few years); and long-term climate and climate trends (on a time scale of 10 to 100 years).

Research and development

The WMO Research and Development Programme involved research activities on the possibilities of predicting environmental conditions important to the well-being of humanity. The activities included weather prediction research and tropical meteorology. The responsibility for promoting and co-ordinating such activities lay with the WMO Commission for Atmospheric Sciences (CAS). The second session of the CAS Working Group on Short- and Medium-range Weather prediction Research (Belgrade, Yugoslavia, August) examined the work done so far and the future strategy for implementing such research. Special efforts were made to ensure the transfer of methodology and experience in weather prediction to all WMO members in an effective and economic way. As requested by the Executive Council, a thorough review of all aspects of the annual progress reports on numerical weather Prediction was undertaken. The report for 1984, the twelfth in a series, was compiled and distributed.

In tropical meteorology, continued efforts were made to implement the components of the WMO Tropical Meteorology Programme. The CAS Working Group on Tropical Meteorology reviewed the status of 12 specific priority projects within the programme and gave guidance on further implementation, including the organization of workshops. Under the tropical cyclone component, an International Workshop on Tropical Cyclones (Bangkok, Thailand, 25 November-5 December), with 80 specialists, researchers and forecasters, examined forecasting and research trends of tropical cyclones. Under the monsoon component, the WMO/CAS Project on Long-term Asian Summer Monsoon Studies continued to be implemented, with activity centres in the India Meteorological Department (New Delhi) and the Malaysian Meteorological Service (Kuala Lumpur) functioning during 1985. Both centres intensified research on numerical modelling of the monsoon. The New Delhi centre hosted the first WMO Regional Workshop on the Asian Summer Monsoon (4-8 November).

Progress was also made on other long-term projects: a multi-level numerical model for the tropics (India and Japan serving as activity centres); radiation flux studies in the tropics with pilot studies conducted in Australia and India; and moisture budget studies and their agricultural application, with the activity centre at Niamey, Niger.

In the environment field, WMO activities focused on the Environmental Pollution Monitoring and Research Programme. Under its Background Air Pollution Monitoring Network (BAPMON), a total of 95 countries were operating and/or preparing 17 baselines, 22 continental stations and 172 regional stations. Collaboration continued with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) laboratories in Monaco and Vienna and with WMO data centres in Czechoslovakia and the United States. WMO co-sponsored a Symposium on Integrated Global Monitoring of the State of the Biosphere, held at Tashkent, USSR, at which assessing and forecasting the state of all environmental compartments of the biosphere were discussed. The WMO-led Working Group on the Interchange of Pollutants between the Atmosphere and the Oceans of the Group of Experts on the Scientific Aspects of Marine Pollution reported on the transport and deposit of contaminants (mainly heavy metals) into the Mediterranean, with recommendations for monitoring and transport modelling within a pilot project to start in 1986 under the Long-term Programme for Pollution Monitoring and Research in the Mediterranean.

The major effort within WMO on atmospheric ozone resided in its Global Ozone Research and Monitoring Project. The project aimed at improving the world-wide ground-based data collecting network for ozone (the Global Ozone Observing System), studying the distribution and changes of non-CO<sub>2</sub> "greenhouse" gases and participating in the ongoing efforts to assess ozone change. Atmospheric CO<sub>2</sub> was monitored by WMO under a separate programme. WMO co-ordinated, organized or otherwise participated in international assessments of the state of the ozone layer in co-operation with other international and national agencies.

The main objectives of the WMO Cloud Physics and Weather Modification Programme were to promote sound scientific foundations for weather modification based on cloud physics, and other investigations, and to provide the rationale underlying all aspects of weather modification. WMO continued to provide advice on weather modification to member States and to other international organizations.

Hydrology and water resources development

The Hydrology and Water Resources Programme promoted world-wide co-operation in the evaluation of water resources and assisted in their development through the co-ordination of hydrological networks and services, including data collection and processing, forecasting and warnings, and supply of meteorological and hydrological data for design purposes. The three components of the programme were: the Operational Hydrology Programme; applications and services to water resources; and co-operation with water-related programmes of other international organizations.

The Operational Hydrology Programme, which provided the framework for all scientific and technical aspects of the activities in hydrology, comprised: the measurement of basic hydrological elements from networks of stations, and the collection, transmission, storage, retrieval and publication of basic hydrological data; hydrological forecasting; and improvement of relevant techniques in network design, standardization of instruments and methods of observation, data transmission and processing, supply of meteorological data for design purposes and hydrological forecasting. The emphasis of the programme fell on its Hydrological Operational Multipurpose Subprogramme, the aims of which were to provide an international and systematic framework of the integration of techniques and procedures for collecting and processing hydrological data. A large part of the activities in hydrology and water resources was carried out through the Commission for Hydrology, which meets quadrennially (it last met at Geneva, August/September 1984), operating through working groups of experts. For implementation of the Programme during the period 1984-1987, it established three working groups composed of 18 rapporteurs and appointed 10 individual rapporteurs.

A programme on applications and services to water resources included technical support for water-related activities such as the Tropical Cyclone Programme and the World Climate Programme. The hydrological activities under the former programme focused on completion of the hydrological component of the Typhoon Operational Experiment. Under the World Climate Programme, studies continued with respect to climate variability and its impact on water-resource systems.

Education and training

Progress in the Education and Training Programme was maintained throughout the year. The main activities were the awarding of fellowships; the strengthening of regional meteorological training centres; the organization and co-sponsorship of courses, seminars and workshops; the preparation of training publications and other training aids; surveys of training needs; provision of advice and information on education and training; and collaboration with other organizations.

More than 780 participants, mainly from developing countries, benefited from training events organized by WMO. Under fellowship funds from various sources administered by WMO in 1985, a total of 536 fellows were being trained; of that number, 312 completed training and 224 would continue in 1986. Eighteen training events were organized during 1985 in regional or national training institutions of 16 member countries. The topics covered different areas of meteorology and operational hydrology and were tailored to meet the express needs of countries. In addition, WMO co-sponsored or jointly supported 17 training events in 1985 along with other organizations and agencies within and outside the United Nations system, universities and education and training institutions in member countries.

Technical co-operation

The Technical Co-operation Programme continued to form one of the major activities in 1985. Assistance was provided through the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the Voluntary Co-operation Programme (VCP), funds-in-trust arrangements and the regular WMO budget. Under UNDP, assistance was provided in 1985 to 89 countries at a value of $13.5 million, compared to $11.8 million for 1984. Developing countries received aid to develop their meteorological and hydrological services and to train personnel at all levels, by means of experts or fellowships for training abroad and support for training seminars. Advice was given in fields ranging from specialized subjects, such as the interpretation and utilization of satellite data, to general advice on the establishment, organization and operation of national meteorological and hydrological services. With water resources of vital importance to developing countries, assistance in that field was also provided. In 1985, under UNDP sectoral support in meteorology and operational hydrology, missions to 14 countries were undertaken at the request of UNDP resident representatives or government authorities to provide advice on the requirements for and application of meteorological information in various sectors of the national economy.

VCP was maintained by voluntary contributions of members, either in the form of equipment and services or cash. Support in 1985 was given mainly to the Global Observing System element of WWW, and for establishing or updating automatic picture transmission/weather facsimile and upper-air stations. Many long-term fellowships for training of meteorological personnel were also awarded. The total value of the aid provided under VCP for 1985 was approximately $6.5 million.

Under the regular budget of WMO, 38 fellowships were awarded in 1985, and financial support was also provided for participants in special training courses, technical conferences and study tours. Seven trust fund projects were being implemented in 1985; four were funded by the countries receiving the assistance and three by other countries. Thirteen United Nations Volunteers served in WMO-executed projects during the year. One of the pressing problems of the meteorological and hydrological services of developing countries was the need for qualified personnel. Under the Technical Co-operation Programme, 536 fellows received meteorological or hydrological training—211 under UNDP, 207 under VCP, 85 under the regular budget and 33 under trust funds.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the total number of full-time staff employed by WMO (excluding 52 professionals on technical assistance projects) on permanent and fixed-term contracts stood at 295. Of these, 137 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 49 nationalities) and 158 in the General Service and related categories.

Budget

The year 1985 was the second year of the ninth financial period (1984-1987), for which the Ninth (1983) WMO Congress established a maximum expenditure of $77.5 million. It had authorized additional expenditures for increases in salaries and allowances consequent upon similar increases approved by the United Nations. Also, additional expenditures of no more than $500,000 were authorized, to provide for circumstances such as losses from changes in currency exchange rates and to meet unforeseen programme activities of an urgent character.

The regular budget for 1985 amounted to $19,480,000. The 1985 budget for technical co-operation activities, financed from overhead allocations and other extrabudgetary sources, amounted to an additional $2,339,400.

At its June 1985 session, the Executive Council approved a regular budget of $18,028,000 for 1986. To that amount, supplementary estimates of $5,641,500 were added later in the year.

Chapter XIV

International Maritime Organization (IMO)

In 1985, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) held the fourteenth regular session of its biennial Assembly from 11 to 21 November at its headquarters in London. The Assembly re-elected Chandrika Prasad Srivastava as IMO Secretary-General for a fourth consecutive four-year term, beginning on 1 January 1986. The 28 resolutions adopted by the Assembly aimed at preventing marine pollution and improving maritime safety, and included one calling for better security in port and on board ships. The Assembly also adopted the budget and work programme of IMO for 1986-1987 and approved the long-term work plan of the organization up to 1992. It also established a technical co-operation fund of $1.2 million, the interest to be used for IMO's technical co-operation activities.

Membership of IMO as at 31 December 1985 remained at 127 and one associate member.

Activities in 1985

At its June session, the IMO Council, the organization's governing body between Assembly sessions, chose Shen Zhaoqi (China) as the winner of the International Maritime Prize for 1984. The Prize is awarded annually to the individual or organization judged to have made the most significant contribution to IMO's work and objectives.

The theme for World Maritime Day, which was celebrated at IMO headquarters on 26 September, was "Maritime search and rescue".

World Maritime University

Members of the inaugural class of the World Maritime University—68 students from 39 countries—graduated from their two-year course on 9 July 1985. The University was established under the auspices of IMO in 1983 at Malmö, Sweden, to provide advanced training for senior personnel, mainly from developing countries, involved in maritime administration, technical management of shipping companies and maritime education. On 10 December, the second class—70 students from 48 countries—also graduated from the University.

On 7 October, the Dalian Marine College in China became the first official branch of the University. It was envisaged that other colleges around the world would also be recognized as branches and would offer specialized short-term courses developed and operated under the University's guidance.

Search and rescue

The International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue (SAR), 1979, entered into force on 22 June 1985. The Convention facilitates co-operation between Governments and between those participating in SAR operations at sea by establishing an international SAR plan.

Prevention of pollution

Meeting at IMO headquarters (23-27 September), the contracting parties to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter (London Dumping Convention) adopted a resolution on environmental hazards caused by disposal at sea of persistent plastics and other synthetic materials. Another resolution called for suspension of all dumping at sea of low-level radioactive wastes to permit time for further consideration of issues which would provide a broader basis for an informed judgement of proposals to amend the Convention's annexes.

Amendments to annex II of the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from ships, 1973, as modified by the 1978 Protocol (MARPOL 73/78), were adopted by the Marine Environment Protection Committee in December 1985. The amendments, dealing with noxious liquid substances carried in bulk, took into account technological changes made since 1973 and made the annex's implementation easier and more effective. It was agreed that the amendments were to enter into force on 7 April 1987 under MARPOL's "tacit acceptance" procedure and that the implementation of the annex would be deferred from 2 October 1986 (three years after MARPOL's entry into force) to 7 April 1987.

Amendments to the International Bulk Chemical Code and the Bulk Chemical Code were also adopted by the Committee in December 1985. The amendments, extending coverage of the two Codes to pollution as well as safety aspects, were to enter into force on 7 April 1987.

Liability for maritime claims

The conditions for entry into force of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims, 1976, were fulfilled on 1 November 1985. The Convention, raising the amount of compensation available for loss of life, personal injury or property damage (including damage to other ships or harbour works), was to enter into force on 1 December 1986.

Publications

Among publications issued by IMO during 1985 were: Medical First Aid Guide; the 1984 amendments to MARPOL 73/78;<sup>a</sup> Code of safe Practice for Diving Systems; IMO/ILO Guidelines for Packing Cargo in Freight Containers or Vehicles; Proceedings of the IMO/UNDP International Seminar on Reception Facilities for Wastes, Testing and Evaluation of Life-Saving Appliances; and Fire Test Procedures.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the IMO secretariat employed 251 full-time staff members (excluding those on technical assistance projects). Of these, 87 were in the Professional and higher categories and 164 were in the General Service and related categories. There were 27 Professional and 10 General Service staff employed on technical assistance projects.

Budget

In November 1985, the IMO Assembly adopted a budget of $30,059,000 for the 1986-1987 biennium, with $14,480,000 allocated to 1986 and $15,579,000 to 1987.

Chapter XV

World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO)

During 1985, membership of the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) increased to 112 with the admission of Angola (15 April), Nicaragua (5 May) and Bangladesh (11 May). The number of States party to the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property rose to 97 with the admission of Mongolia. The number of States party to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works remained at 76. Barbados became party to the Nice Agreement concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purposes of the Registration of Marks, raising membership of the Nice Union to 33. Barbados and Italy deposited their instruments of accession to the Patent Co-operation Treaty (PCT), bringing PCT Union membership to 39. At the end of the year, total membership in WIPO and its various Unions, taken together, was 127.

Seventeen intergovernmental Unions in the two main fields of intellectual property were administered by WIPO in 1985. They were founded on the multilateral treaties, conventions and agreements listed below in order of adoption:

Industrial property: Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property; Madrid Agreement for the Repression of False or Deceptive Indications of Source on Goods; Madrid Agreement concerning the International Registration of Marks; The Hague Agreement concerning the International Deposit of Industrial Designs; Nice Agreement concerning the International Classification of Goods and Services for the Purposes of the Registration of Marks; Lisbon Agreement for the Protection of Appellations of Origin and Their International Registration; Locarno Agreement establishing an International Classification for Industrial Designs; Patent Co-operation Treaty; Strasbourg Agreement concerning the International Patent Classification (IPC); Trademark Registration Treaty; Vienna Agreement establishing an International Classification of the Figurative Elements of Marks; Budapest Treaty on the International Recognition of the Deposit of Micro-organisms for the Purposes of Patent Procedure; Nairobi Treaty on the Protection of the Olympic Symbol.

Copyright and neighbouring rights: Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works; Rome Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations; Geneva Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Brussels Convention relating to the Distribution of Programme-Carrying Signals Transmitted by Satellite.

At the sixteenth series of meetings, held at Geneva in September/October 1985, the governing bodies of WIPO and the Unions administered by it approved reports on activities and the programme and budget for 1986-1987.

The WIPO General Assembly unanimously appointed Arpad Bogsch as the Director General of WIPO for a further period of six years.

Activities in 1985

Development co-operation activities

During 1985, WIPO co-operated with most developing countries and with intergovernmental organizations in their development projects relating to intellectual property, by providing assistance in the preparation of legislation, or establishment or modernization of national or regional institutions, including patent documentation and information services.

Two WIPO permanent programmes, supervised by intergovernmental permanent committees, provided the framework for development co-operation relating to industrial property and to copyright and neighbouring rights.

Regarding industrial property, WIPO organized a workshop on patents in the service of development (Harare, Zimbabwe), a high-level policy planning meeting on industrial property in Africa (Lomé, Togo), a national industrial property seminar (Baghdad, Iraq), a high-level workshop on industrial property in the Arab countries (Geneva), a regional workshop on invention development and innovation (Manila, Philippines), a regional workshop on licensing and other industrial property transfer arrangements (Bombay, India), an interregional seminar on industrial strategy and the patent system (Seoul, Republic of Korea), a high-level meeting of government officials of South Pacific countries to consider co-operation in industrial property (Suva, Fiji), a meeting for the English-speaking Caribbean countries, Haiti and Suriname to consider co-operation in industrial property (Bridgetown, Barbados), a workshop on classification, search and examination of patent applications in chemistry for the Andean countries (Caracas, Venezuela), an Ibero-American meeting on the establishment of an international patent documentation centre in the Spanish language (Madrid, Spain), a meeting of vice-ministers and a meeting of heads of industrial property offices of the Central American isthmus countries (Guatemala City) and a symposium on industrial property for judges of the same countries (San José, Costa Rica), a national workshop on patent documents as a source of technological information (Havana and Cienfuegos, Cuba), and a meeting of directors of industrial property offices of Argentina, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay (Asuncion, Paraguay).

Medals and prizes for inventors and promoters of innovation were awarded by WIPO at national and international exhibitions or contests and special ceremonies held in Belgium, Bulgaria, China, India, the Ivory Coast, Japan, Paraguay, the Philippines, the Republic of Korea, Switzerland, Uruguay, the USSR and Zaire.

Continuing a programme started in 1975, 410 state-of-the-art search reports on technology disclosed in patent documents and related literature were provided to developing countries free of charge under agreements concluded between WIPO and contributing industrial property offices in developed countries. Most of the reports were prepared by the patent offices of Australia, Austria, Finland, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, Sweden and the USSR.

Development co-operation activities in copyright and neighbouring rights included training courses at Brasilia, Brazil, and Nanjing, China; a seminar for Central American and Caribbean States, at Mexico City, and seminars at Cairo, Egypt, and Cotonou, Benin; and a workshop at Zomba, Malawi.

WIPO training programmes continued to grow, with 239 fellowships granted in 1985 to nationals of 83 developing countries in industrial property and 60 fellowships to nationals from 48 developing countries in copyright, in addition to individuals recommended by various organizations. In the industrial property sector, 22 countries-including seven developing countries-three intergovernmental organizations and two non-governmental organizations provided individual and group training. Concerning copyright, 12 countries (seven developing) and one national organization provided such training.

Industrial property

The first consultative meeting on the revision of the Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property took place at Geneva in June 1985, to revise the Convention by introducing new provisions and changing existing ones to meet the needs of developing countries more effectively. The proposed changes included giving full recognition to inventors' certificates, a form of protection existing in several socialist countries.

At Geneva in July, an expert committee discussed harmonizing certain provisions in laws to protect inventions.

Another expert committee met at Geneva in February and December to advise on proposals contained in a memorandum drawn up by the International Bureau-the WIPO secretariat-on a possible treaty on the international registration of marks. The memorandum highlighted the limited territorial scope of the Madrid Agreement on the subject, the reasons for its lack of attractiveness for member States of the Paris Union not party to the Agreement, and the need to seek solutions acceptable to the greatest number of countries and to devise a simple, inexpensive system for users. The memorandum also set out likely differences between the Madrid Agreement and a new treaty which would coexist with it. It was decided that the International Bureau would draw up a detailed outline of a new treaty and would study its financial aspects and links with regional systems.

The Bureau published the text of the first version of a draft treaty on protecting intellectual property in respect of integrated circuits (popularly called "microchips"). It also published Industrial Property Protection of Biotechnological Inventions which analysed several related basic issues.

Work continued on updating IPC and other classifications concerning industrial designs or registration of trade and service marks.

During 1985, 7,305 international applications were filed under PCT in 28 receiving offices. The PCT Gazette was published fortnightly and special issues were put out in March and December to consolidate general information. The total number of registrations of marks under the Madrid Agreement was 8,961. To that figure should be added 4,736 renewals under the Agreement's Nice and Stockholm Acts. Registrations and renewals therefore totalled 13,697, compared to 13,043 in 1984. The total number of changes recorded in the International Register of Marks was 15,610, as compared with 17,501 in 1984.

Copyright and neighbouring rights

Activities in copyright and neighbouring rights included the convening, jointly with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, of a group of experts on the copyright aspects of protecting computer software (Geneva, February/March), an expert group on the copyright aspects of direct broadcasting by satellite (Paris, March), and a committee of governmental experts on model provisions for national laws on publishing contracts for literary works (Paris, December). Two other meetings were held in Paris-the Executive Committee of the Berne Union and the Intergovernmental Committee of the International Convention for the Protection of Performers, Producers of Phonograms and Broadcasting Organizations.

Publications

The International Bureau continued to issue regularly the following publications, in various languages: Copyright, Industrial Property, International Designs Bulletin, Les Marques internationales, WIPO Newsletter, PCT Gazette, Les Appellations d'origine, Intellectual Property in Asia and the Pacific, Industrial Property Laws and Treaties and Copyright Laws and Treaties.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, WIPO employed 288 full-time staff members. Of those, 99 were in the Professional and higher categories (drawn from 40 member States) and 189 were in the General Service category. In addition, 91 experts were employed by WIPO on technical assistance projects during the year

Budget

The principal sources of the WIPO budget—approximately 87 million Swiss francs for the 1984-1985 biennium—are ordinary and special contributions from member States and income derived from international registration services (primarily under PCT and the Madrid Agreement).

Ordinary contributions are paid on the basis of a class-and-unit system by members of the Paris, Berne, Nice, Locarno, IPC and Vienna Unions and by WIPO member States not belonging to any of the Unions.

States members of the six Unions are placed in seven classes (I to VII) to determine the amounts of their ordinary contributions. WIPO States not members of any of the Unions are placed in three classes (A, B or C) for the same purpose. States in Class I or A pay the highest contributions of their group and those in Class VII or C the lowest. The class in which a State is placed is decided solely by the State and the rights of each are the same, irrespective of the class.

The contribution class for each member State of WIPO and of the Paris or Berne Unions, together with the amount of the ordinary contribution of each State, is given in Annex I below (the class indicated for the Paris Union also applies to the Nice, Locarno, IPC and Vienna Unions). Members of one or more Unions do not pay separate contributions to WIPO; the Unions themselves contribute towards the costs of WIPO's International Bureau and programme of legal-technical assistance.

The amounts of ordinary contributions payable for 1986 are given in the table below.

Chapter XVI

International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD)

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) completed its eighth year of operations in 1985, during which it continued to provide concessional assistance for financing agricultural projects in developing countries. The Fund aimed at increasing food production, reducing malnutrition and alleviating rural poverty. It concentrated on low-income, food-deficit countries, which received most of IFAD's lending, and on the poorest farmers, aiming at providing them with the necessary production means and institutional support. Particular emphasis was given to: simplifying project design; restoring agricultural capacity to sub-Saharan countries; and ways of reducing the costs of technical assistance, project administration and recurrent expenditures. IFAD also gave special attention to the issues of women in development, co-operation with non-governmental organizations and the environment.

The IFAD Executive Board held three regular sessions in 1985 (April, September, December), approving 17 projects and 23 technical assistance grants, and deferring the ninth session of the Governing Council, made up of the entire membership, until January 1986. The Board convened a special session in May, at which it endorsed a proposal for an IFAD Special Programme for sub-Saharan African countries affected by drought and desertification. The seventh and eighth (suspended) meetings of members of the consultation on the second replenishment of IFAD's resources were held in February/March and May, respectively. All meetings were held at Rome, Italy.

Membership of IFAD remained at 139 countries. Of these, 20 were in Category I (developed countries), 12 in Category II (oil-exporting developing countries) and 107 in Category III (other developing countries).

Since 1979, approved loans have been denominated in special drawing rights (SDRs), an international unit of account. Dollar figures in this chapter are based on the SDR/United States dollar conversion rate at 31 December 1985 (SDR 1 = $1.09842). However, approximate amounts in United States dollars for loans approved since 1979 have been based on the SDR/United States dollar exchange rate at the time of loan negotiations.

Following approval of the 17 new projects in 1985, the total assistance provided by the Fund to some 87 member countries since 1978 amounted to SDR 1,897.3 million, of which SDR 1,808.7 million was committed for 177 projects and SDR 88.6 million for technical assistance grants.

Of the 177 loans provided since 1978, 63 were for projects in Africa, 48 in Asia, 33 in Latin America and the Caribbean, and 33 in the Near East and North Africa. Most loans (67.3 per cent) were made on highly concessional terms, with a service charge of 1 per cent per annum, a 50-year maturity period and a 10-year grace period. Another 26.2 per cent of the loans were made available on intermediate terms (at 4 per cent, 20 years maturity and a live-year grace period) and the remaining 6.5 per cent on ordinary terms (8 per cent, 15-18 years maturity and a three-year grace period). The Fund paid particular attention to the needs of the poorest countries: 67.3 per cent of all loans in the period 1978-1985 went to 55 countries with a per capita income below $300 in 1976 prices, or about $520 in 1985 prices.

Resources

Initial resources and contributions to the first replenishment had brought to IFAD about $2.1 billion to cover operations from 1978-1983. Because of delay in concluding negotiations on the second replenishment of resources, the first had to be stretched over four years (1981-1984) instead of three years. As the 1985 consultations on the second replenishment produced no agreement, because one important member was unable to join in the consensus, it was decided to suspend the consultations until January 1986.

Under these circumstances, IFAD adopted in 1985 a number of extraordinary measures to raise additional resources. It launched the Special Programme for sub-Saharan Africa, with a three-year target of voluntary contributions of $300 million. Under an agreement with the Belgian Government in regard to the Survival Fund for the Third World,<sup>a</sup> it mobilized $8.25 million for three projects in Ethiopia, Kenya and Somalia. After a call for advance contributions to the second replenishment, IFAD received $66 million in pledges and $46 million in payments from 61 member countries during 1985. Members' contributions to the first replenishment stood at $947,827,233 at 31 December 1985 (see ANNEX I, below).

Investments

At the end of 1985, IFAD liquid assets totalled $668.5 million. Of this amount, $22.2 million was held on demand deposit and $354.2 million (53 per cent) was held on deposit with, or in obligations issued by, commercial banks, while the balance of $292.1 million was in bonds or similar securities issued or guaranteed by member Governments. While the maximum maturity for any of these investments was live years, the average length of the investment portfolio was 35.7 months.

During the year, IFAD increased the percentage of its portfolio of bonds and similar obligations issued by member developing countries. As of 31 December 1985, the Fund had a total of $244.8 million or 35.6 per cent of total liquid assets deposited with banks of developing countries or in bonds or similar securities issued by developing country Governments and international development institutions.

The downward trend of interest rates on most major currencies which began in late 1984 continued through 1985. Consequently, the average rate of return for 1985 was approximately 9.68 per cent versus 11.06 per cent for 1984.

Activities in 1985

The 17 new loans approved by IFAD in 1985 totalled SDR 126.3 million ($138.9 million), while the 23 technical assistance grants came to SDR 10.6 million (about $11.7 million), bringing the total financial assistance provided in 1985 to SDR 136.9 million ($150.6 million), a 38 per cent reduction over 1984 in real terms. Difficulties in resource mobilization forced the Fund to cut back loans, and 1985 represented the lowest level of operations in its history.

In the face of these constraints, IFAD sought to reduce the size of loans (without affecting the quality or leverage of the project) and to mobilize more resources from co-financing agencies. Thirteen of the projects approved in 1985 were initiated by IFAD and 4 by other donors. The Fund's share in total project cost was 21.2 per cent, while those of external donors and recipients were 49 and 29.8 per cent respectively. IFAD effectiveness in mobilizing resources was reflected in its lower share in total project cost in 1985 as compared with the average for 1978-1985 (28 per cent).

In 1985, six projects were approved for Africa, involving loans of SDR 49.8 million, and dealing with agricultural development, rehabilitation of drought-affected areas, small-scale irrigation and smallholder food crops.

The four projects approved for Asia, for SDR 38.7 million, emphasized agricultural development, livestock development, agricultural credit and rural development. For Latin America and the Caribbean, a small farmers development project and one for agricultural credit, for SDR 7.7 million, were approved.

The five projects approved in the Near East and North Africa were for artisanal fisheries development, livestock health services, agricultural development, agricultural extension and rainfed agricultural development, and involved loans of SDR 30.9 million.

The Fund continued to support agricultural research, project preparation and training. In 1985, support for agricultural research programmes of international and regional centres totalled $6.9 million; IFAD financed 13 research programmes, including two new programmes at the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture at Ibadan, Nigeria, and at the International Irrigation Management Institute at Kandy, Sri Lanka.

The Fund continued its special programming missions, which analysed in depth carefully selected member countries and aimed at directing financial assistance to the most needy of the rural poor. The three missions launched in 1985 went to Angola, Bhutan and Bolivia.

The tables on p. 1367 indicate the projects and technical assistance grants approved in 1985.

Income and expenditure

Total revenue for 1985 was $78.7 million, consisting of $66 million of investment income and $12.7 million from interest and service charges on loans. Total expenses for the year amounted to $20.7 million, compared with a budget of $26.2 million. The excess of revenue over expenses for the year was $58 million.

Secretariat

At the end of December 1985, the IFAD secretariat totalled 174, of whom 82 were executive or technical staff (Professional category and above)-drawn from 44 countries-and 92 were support staff (General Service category).

Chapter XVII

Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)

The United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment, held at Havana, Cuba, between November 1947 and March 1948, drew up a charter for an International Trade Organization (ITO) and established an Interim Commission for the International Trade Organization (ICITO). Since the charter itself was never accepted, ITO was not established. However, while drawing up the charter, the Preparatory Committee's members negotiated on tariffs among themselves, and also drew up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The Agreement—a multilateral treaty embodying reciprocal rights and obligations—is the only multilateral instrument that lays down agreed rules for international trade. It entered into force on 1 January 1948 with 23 contracting parties. Since then, ICITO has provided the GATT secretariat.

As at 31 December 1985, the number of contracting parties to GATT stood at 90. One other country, Tunisia, had acceded provisionally. The contracting parties conducted about 85 per cent of all international trade while 31 other countries applied the rules of GATT.

Multilateral trade negotiations

The multilateral work programme pursued within GATT during 1985 had two distinct strands—the continuation of work resulting from the conclusion of the Tokyo Round of multilateral trade negotiations in 1979,<sup>a</sup> and the work programme set out by the 1982 GATT Ministerial Meeting.<sup>b</sup> These programmes were undertaken amidst intensified discussions and debates by contracting parties on the question of holding a new round of multilateral trade negotiations.

Implementation of the Tokyo Round agreements

The agreements of the Tokyo Round, the seventh “round” of multilateral trade negotiations in the 38-year history of GATT, provided an improved framework for the conduct of world trade and were adopted as an integral part of the rules of GATT.

Tariff negotiations during the Tokyo Round resulted in agreement on import duty reductions to be effected in eight annual cuts by the industrialized countries. On 1 January 1985, the sixth of such cuts was made. By the end of the year, tariff cuts negotiated under this Round, for both industrial and agricultural goods, covered trade worth some $300 billion.

In 1985, the GATT Committee on Tariff Concessions continued compiling tariff schedules in loose-leaf form to allow an easier reference to changes made during rounds of tariff negotiations. By the end of the year, 37 out of a total of 62 national tariff schedules were available in this form. The Committee was also concerned with the upcoming implementation of the new Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding System developed by the Customs Co-operation Council at Brussels, Belgium. The System, which would facilitate the analysis of trade statistics and monitor and protect the value of tariff concessions, would serve as a single standard for the classification of traded goods. The introduction of the System presented GATT with the need for negotiations where the change from current nomenclatures disturbed the balance of concessions already negotiated in tariff rounds and other past negotiations.

The Committee on Subsidies and Countervailing Measures continued to oversee the implementation of a code providing a mechanism for international surveillance and dispute settlement and aiming to ensure that the use of subsidies by any signatory did not harm the trading interests of others. It considered panel reports on complaints by the United States on alleged subsidies by the European Communities (EC) on exports of wheat flour and pasta products, and by EC concerning a section of a 1984 United States Trade and Tariff Act relating to countervailing and anti-dumping action on imported wine. It also established a panel to rule on the wine industry complaint.

The Committee on Anti-Dumping Practices continued to examine national laws and legislation. (“Dumped” goods were broadly defined as imports which were sold at prices below those charged by the producer in his domestic market.) During the year, the Committee adopted a number of recommendations by the Ad Hoc Group on the Implementation of the Anti-Dumping Code.

The Committee on Government Procurement continued to examine laws, procedures and regulations and made further progress in renegotiating the Agreement on Government Procurement. It reviewed the follow-up of a 1984 panel report on a United States complaint against EC practices relating to the treatment of value-added taxes.<sup>c</sup> It also published a practical guide to the Agreement intended for the business community. A Working Party on Computer Procurement submitted its recommendations to the Committee at the end of the year.

Implementation of the Agreement on Technical Barriers to Trade—commonly known as the “Standards Code”—is monitored by the Committee on Technical Barriers to Trade. In 1985, it released a list of products covered by notifications under the Agreement for the use of national standards bodies. It also discussed technical questions relating to testing and inspection procedures.

As recommended by the Committee on Trade in Civil Aircraft, a further 32 categories of products were, as of 1 January 1985, added to the duty-free coverage of the Agreement on Trade in Civil Aircraft, and the Committee discussed the measures taken by member Governments to implement this extension of the Agreement. Attention was also given to the question of export credits for civil aircraft sales.

Throughout the year, the International Meat Council, which oversees the Arrangement regarding Bovine Meat, continued to discuss and analyse the bovine meat market situation. The 26 signatories to this Arrangement—one of two multilateral agreements relating to trade in agricultural products negotiated during the Tokyo Round (the other covered dairy products)—accounted for some 90 per cent of the world's exports of fresh, chilled and frozen beef and veal (excluding intra-EC trade) and about 60 per cent of both world imports and world production.

In May 1985, the International Dairy Products Council, supervisor of the International Dairy Arrangement, adopted decisions, in the aftermath of EC's sales of “old” butter,<sup>d</sup> aimed at contributing to greater stability in dairy markets by reducing excess supplies and stimulating demand in response to lower prices. A report on the world market for dairy products was published in December.

Work also continued during the year in committees overseeing the agreements on customs valuation and import licensing.

Ministerial work programme

GATT continued in 1985 to implement the multilateral work programme set out by the 1982 GATT Ministerial Meeting. The ministerial declaration had called for efforts to achieve a comprehensive understanding on safeguards—the right of GATT contracting parties to impose temporary trade restrictions on imports which seriously injured a domestic industry or threatened to do so. Consultations held during the year revealed some convergence of views on a number of safeguard issues, and the contracting parties called on the Safeguards Committee to continue its work.

The Committee on Trade in Agriculture, established by the Ministerial Meeting, continued considering its 184 recommendations to achieve greater liberalization of trade in agriculture.<sup>e</sup> In November 1985, the contracting parties decided that the Committee should pursue its examination of all the approaches referred to in the recommendations and of the way they could be elaborated as a basis for possible future negotiations.

The Committee on Trade and Development held further consultations with a number of countries to review their trading policies in relation to Part IV of the General Agreement dealing with special treatment for developing countries. Consultations covering trade in tropical products and barriers affecting the trading prospects of the least developed countries were also continued. The Committee undertook a review of the operation of the “Enabling Clause”—which provides the legal basis in GATT for preferences to developing countries, as in the case of the GSP (generalized system of preferences) programmes—and on prospects for increasing trade between developed and developing countries.

Other aspects of the ministerial work programme included the examination of quantitative restrictions and other non-tariff measures with a view to eliminating those not in conformity with GATT, and a review of the adequacy and effectiveness of the Tokyo Round agreements and obstacles to their acceptance by non-signatories.

Other GATT activities

Contracting parties session

The year 1985 was marked by discussions aimed at strengthening the trading system and restoring the credibility of trade rules. It was a sign to the outside world—especially the business community—that the 90 contracting parties were moving together to overcome problems facing world trade and use the opportunities that negotiations could offer for growth and development.

In November 1985, at a session held at the senior official level, GATT contracting parties reviewed progress made in implementing the 1982 ministerial work programme and dealt with questions relating to changes in the trading environment. They decided—as they had already discussed earlier at a special session held from 30 September to 2 October—to establish a preparatory committee to determine the objectives, subject-matter and participation in a new round of multilateral trade negotiations. The preparatory committee was to begin its work in January 1986 under the chairmanship of the GATT Director-General.

Council of Representatives

The Council of Representatives, GATT's highest body between sessions of the contracting parties, held two meetings in 1985 to review developments in the trading system. Three new dispute panels were set up during the year and several reports were adopted or considered further.

Consultative Group of Eighteen

At its three meetings held in 1985, the Consultative Group of Eighteen—a high-level forum for discussing problems facing international trade—considered practical steps which could be taken to further trade liberalization and enhance the integrity of the trading system. These discussions were closely linked with the decision taken later in the year by the contracting parties to begin preparations for a new round of multilateral trade negotiations.

Balance-of-payments restrictions

During 1985, the GATT Committee on Balance-of-Payments Import Restrictions held full consultations with Colombia, Israel and Portugal. Consultations under a simplified procedure took place with Brazil, Egypt, Ghana, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Tunisia and Turkey.

Textiles Arrangement

The Arrangement regarding International Trade in Textiles, known as the Multifibre Arrangement (MFA), regulating most of the $15 billion worth of textiles and clothing which MFA member countries in the developing world exported to those in the developed world, was extended a second time in 1981 until 31 July 1986. By the end of 1985, the Protocol extending MFA had been accepted by 43 signatories representing 52 countries. In 1985, the Textiles Committee conducted its fourth annual review of the current extension and discussed the question of renewing the Arrangement. It also stressed the need for more liberal treatment of textiles and clothing in line with the objectives of trade liberalization to which the proposed round of multilateral trade negotiations was addressed.

Technical assistance

In 1985, the GATT secretariat's 'Technical Co-operation Division organized missions to, or seminars in, the following developing countries: Cameroon, China (twice), Costa Rica, Haiti, Jamaica, Malaysia, Republic of Korea, Thailand, Turkey (twice) and Uruguay. GATT officials also participated in seminars sponsored by regional organizations.

Training programme

The year 1985 marked the thirtieth anniversary of the GATT commercial policy training courses. From 1955 to the end of 1985, a total of 954 officials from 112 countries and 10 regional organizations had attended courses. A course in French and one in English were given in 1985.

International Trade Centre

Established by GATT in 1964, and jointly operated by GATT and the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development since 1968, the International Trade Centre continued to provide trade information and trade promotion advisory services to developing countries. The Centre's work was directed at assisting developing countries to formulate and implement trade promotion programmes and activities and to become self-reliant. The value of its technical co-operation programme in 1985 was estimated at $15.1 million.

Publications

Publications issued in 1985 included the annual volumes of GATT Activities, International Trade and Basic Instruments and Selected Documents, and the newsletter GATT Focus, issued six times a year. Also published was The World Market for Dairy Products (1985) in book form.

Secretariat

As at 31 December 1985, the GATT secretariat employed 295 staff members—130 in the Professional and higher categories and 165 in the General Service category. They were drawn from 44 nationalities.

Financial arrangements

Member countries of GATT contribute to the budget in accordance with a scale assessed on the basis of each country's share in the total trade of the contracting parties and associated Governments. The budget for 1985 was 57,540,000 Swiss francs. The scale of contributions for 1985 is given below. (The United Nations rate of exchange for December 1985 was SwF 2.09 = $US 1.00.)

<sup>1</sup>Egypt and Syria, both of which became Members of the United Nations on 24 October 1945, joined together following a plebiscite held in those countries on 21 February 1958—to form the United Arab Republic. On 13 October 1961, Syria, having resumed its status as an independent State, also resumed its separate membership in the United Nations; it changed its name to the Syrian Arab Republic on 14 September 1971. The United Arab Republic continued as a Member of the United Nations and reverted to the name of Egypt on 2 September 1971.

<sup>2</sup>On 20 January 1965, Indonesia informed the Secretary-General that it had decided to withdraw from the United Nations. On 19 September 1966, it notified him of its decision to resume participation in United Nations activities. On 28 September 1966, the General Assembly took note of that decision and the President invited the representatives of Indonesia to take their seats in the Assembly.

<sup>3</sup>On 6 November 1985, Côte d'Ivoire requested that its name no longer be translated into different languages (see p. 392). However, for ease of reference, "Ivory Coast" has been used throughout this volume.

<sup>4</sup>On 16 September 1963, Sabah (North Borneo), Sarawak and Singapore joined with the Federation of Malaya (which became a United Nations Member on 17 September 1957) to form Malaysia. On 9 August 1965, Singapore became an independent State and on 21 September 1965 it became a Member of the United Nations.

<sup>5</sup>Tanganyika was admitted to the United Nations on 14 December 1961, and Zanzibar on 16 December 1963. Following ratification, on 26 April 1964, of the Articles of Union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, the two States became represented as a single Member: the United Republic of Tanganyika and Zanzibar; it changed its name to the United Republic of Tanzania on 1 November 1964.

Charter of the United Nations and Statute of the International Court of Justice

Charter of the United Nations

NOTE: The Charter of the United Nations was signed on 26 June 1945, in San Francisco, at the conclusion of the United Nations Conference on International Organization, and came into force on 24 October 1945. The Statute of the International Court of Justice is an integral part of the Charter.

Amendments to Articles 23, 27 and 61 of the Charter were adopted by the General Assembly on 17 December 1963 and came into force on 31 August 1965. A further amendment to Article 61 was adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1971, and came into force on 24 September 1973. An amendment to Article 109, adopted by the General Assembly on 20 December 1965, came into force on 12 June 1968.

The amendment to Article 23 enlarges the membership of the Security Council from 11 to 15. The amended Article 27 provides that decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven) and on all other matters by an affirmative vote of nine members (formerly seven). including the concurring votes of the five permanent members of the Security Council.

The amendment to Article 61, which entered into force on 31 August 1965, enlarged the membership of the Economic and Social Council from 18 to 27. The subsequent amendment to that Article, which entered into force on 24 September 1973, further increased the membership of the Council from 27 to 54.

The amendment to Article 109, which relates to the first paragraph of that Article, provides that a General Conference of Member States for the purpose of reviewing the Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members (formerly seven) of the Security Council. Paragraph 3 of Article 109, which deals with the consideration of a possible review conference during the tenth regular session of the General Assembly, has been retained in its original form in its reference to a "vote of any seven members of the Security Council", the paragraph having been acted upon in 1955 by the General Assembly, at its tenth regular session, and by the Security Council.

WE THE PEOPLES OF THE UNITED NATIONS DETERMINED

to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

AND FOR THESE ENDS

to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours, and to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security, and to ensure, by the acceptance of principles and the institution of methods, that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest, and to employ international machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples,

HAVE RESOLVED TO COMBINE OUR EFFORTS TO ACCOMPLISH THESE AIMS

Accordingly, our respective Governments, through representatives assembled in the city of San Francisco, who have exhibited their full powers found to be in good and due form, have agreed to the present Charter of the United Nations and do hereby establish an international organisation to be known as the United Nations.

Chapter I PURPOSES AND PRINCIPLES

Article 1

The Purposes of the United Nations are:

1. To maintain international peace and security, and to that end: to take effective collective measures for the prevention and removal of threats to the peace, and for the suppression of acts of aggression or other breaches of the peace, and to bring about by peaceful means, and in conformity with the principles of justice and international law, adjustment or settlement of international disputes or situations which might lead to a breach of the peace;
2. To develop friendly relations among nations based on respect for the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples, and to take other appropriate measures to strengthen universal peace;
3. To achieve international co-operation in solving international problems of an economic, social, cultural, or humanitarian character, and in promoting and encouraging respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion; and
4. To be a centre for harmonising the actions of nations in the attainment of these common ends

Article 2

The Organisation and its Members, in pursuit of the Purposes stated in Article 1, shall act in accordance with the following Principles

1. The Organisation is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.
2. All Members, in order to ensure to all of them the rights and benefits resulting from membership, shall fulfil in good faith the obligations assumed by them in accordance with the present Charter.

3. All Members shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered.

4. All Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations

5. All Members shall give the United Nations every assistance in any action it takes in accordance with the present Charter, and shall refrain from giving assistance to any state against which the United Nations is taking preventive or enforcement action.

6. The Organisation shall ensure that states which are not Members of the United Nations act in accordance with these Principles so far as may be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security.

7. Nothing contained in the present Charter shall authorize the United Nations to intervene in matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of any state or shall require the Members to submit such matters to settlement under the present Charter; but this principle shall not prejudice the application of enforcement measures under Chapter VII.

Chapter II MEMBERSHIP

Article 3

The original Members of the United Nations shall be the states which, having participated in the United Nations Conference on international Organisation at San Francisco, or having previously signed the Declaration by United Nations of 1 January 1942, sign the present Charter and ratify it in accordance with Article 110.

Article 4

1. Membership in the United Nations is open to all other peace loving states which accept the obligations contained in the present Charter and, in the judgment of the Organization, are able and willing to carry out these obligations.

2. The admission of any such state to membership in the United Nations will be effected by a decision of the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

A Member of the United Nations against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. The exercise of these rights and privileges may be restored by the Security Council.

Article 6

A Member of the United Nations which has persistently violated the Principles contained in the present Charter may be expelled from the Organisation by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Chapter III ORGANS

Article 7

1. There are established as the principal organs of the United Nations: a General Assembly, a Security Council, an Economic and Social Council, a Trusteeship Council, an international Court of Justice, and a Secretariat.

2. Such subsidiary organs as may be found necessary may be established in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 8

Chapter IV THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Composition

Article 9

1. The General Assembly shall consist of all the Members of the United Nations

2. Each Member shall have not more than five representatives in the General Assembly.

Functions and powers

Article 10

The General Assembly may discuss any questions or any matters within the scope of the present Charter or relating to the powers and functions of any organs provided for in the present Charter, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations to the Members of the United Nations or to the Security Council or to both on any such questions or matters

Article 11

1. The General Assembly may consider the general principles of co-operation in the maintenance of international peace and security, including the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments, and may make recommendations with regard to such principles to the Members or to the Security Council or to both.

2. The General Assembly may discuss any questions relating to the maintenance of international peace and security brought before it by any Member of the United Nations, or by the Security Council, or by a state which is not a Member of the United Nations in accordance with Article 35, paragraph 2, and, except as provided in Article 12, may make recommendations with regard to any such questions to the state or states concerned or to the Security Council or to both. Any such question on which action is necessary shall be referred to the Security Council by the General Assembly either before or after discussion.

3. The General Assembly may call the attention of the Security Council to situations which are likely to endanger international peace and security

4. The powers of the General Assembly set forth in this Article shall not limit the general scope of Article 10.

Article 12

1. While the Security Council is exercising in respect of any dispute or situation the functions assigned to it in the present Charter, the General Assembly shall not make any recommendation with regard to that dispute or situation unless the Security Council so requests.

2. The Secretary-General, with the consent of the Security Council, shall notify the General Assembly at each session of any matters relative to the maintenance of international peace and security which are being dealt with by the Security Council and shall similarly notify the General Assembly, or the Members of the United Nations if the General Assembly is not in session, immediately the Security Council ceases to deal with such matters.

Article 13

1. The General Assembly shall initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of:

- a. promoting international cooperation in the political field and encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification;
- b. promoting international cooperation in the economic, social, cultural, educational, and health fields, and assisting in the realization of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion.

2. The further responsibilities, functions and powers of the General Assembly with respect to matters mentioned in paragraph 1(b) above are set forth in Chapters IX and X.

Article 14

Subject to the provisions of Article 12, the General Assembly may recommend measures for the peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origin, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare or friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the provisions of the present Charter setting forth the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

Article 15

1. The General Assembly shall receive and consider annual and special reports from the Security Council; these reports shall include an account of the measures that the Security Council has decided upon or taken to maintain international peace and security.

2. The General Assembly shall receive and consider reports from the other organs of the United Nations.

Article 16

The General Assembly shall perform such functions with respect to the international trusteeship system as are assigned to it under Chapters XII and XIII, including the approval of the trusteeship agreements for areas not designated as strategic.

Article 17

1. The General Assembly shall consider and approve the budget of the Organization.

2. The expenses of the Organization shall be borne by the Members as apportioned by the General Assembly.

3. The General Assembly shall consider and approve any financial and budgetary arrangements with specialized agencies referred to in Article 57 and shall examine the administrative budgets of such specialized agencies with a view to making recommendations to the agencies concerned.

Voting

Article 18

1. Each member of the General Assembly shall have one vote.

2. Decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the members present and voting. These questions shall include: recommendations with respect to the maintenance of international peace and security, the election of the non-permanent members of the Security Council, the election of the members of the Economic and Social Council, the election of members of the Trusteeship Council in accordance with paragraph 1*b* of Article 86, the admission of new Members to the United Nations, the suspension of the rights and privileges of membership, the expulsion of Members, questions relating to the operation of the trusteeship system, and budgetary questions.

3. Decisions on other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority, shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Article 19

A Member of the United Nations which is in arrears in the payment of its financial contributions to the Organization shall have no vote in the General Assembly if the amount of its arrears equals or exceeds the amount of the contributions due from it for the preceding two full years. The General Assembly may, nevertheless, permit such a Member to vote if it is satisfied that the failure to pay is due to conditions beyond the control of the Member.

Procedure

Article 20

The General Assembly shall meet in regular annual sessions and in such special sessions as occasion may require. Special sessions shall be convoked by the Secretary-General at the request of the Security Council or of a majority of the Members of the United Nations.

Article 21

The General Assembly shall adopt its own rules of procedure. It shall elect its President for each session.

Article 22

The General Assembly may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions.

Chapter V

THE SECURITY COUNCIL

1. The Security Council shall consist of fifteen Members of the United Nations. The Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America shall be permanent members of the Security Council. The General Assembly shall elect ten other Members of the United Nations to be non-permanent members of the Security Council, due regard being specially paid, in the first instance to the contribution of Members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the Organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution.

2. The non-permanent members of the Security Council shall be elected for a term of two years. In the first election of the non-permanent members after the increase of the membership of the Security Council from eleven to fifteen, two of the four additional members shall be chosen for a term of one year. A retiring member shall not be eligible for immediate re-election.

3. Each member of the Security Council shall have one representative.

Functions and powers

Article 24

1. In order to ensure prompt and effective action by the United Nations, its Members confer on the Security Council primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, and agree that in carrying out its duties under this responsibility the Security Council acts on their behalf.

2. In discharging these duties the Security Council shall act in accordance with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations. The specific powers granted to the Security Council for the discharge of these duties are laid down in Chapters VI, VII, VIM, and XII.

3. The Security Council shall submit annual and, when necessary, special reports to the General Assembly for its consideration.

Article 25

The Members of the United Nations agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council in accordance with the present Charter.

Article 26

In order to promote the establishment and maintenance of international peace and security with the least diversion for armaments of the world's human and economic resources, the Security Council shall be responsible for formulating, with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee referred to in Article 47, plans to be submitted to the Members of the United Nations for the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

(The text of Article 23 before it was amended read as follows:

1. The Security Council shall consist of eleven Members of the United Nations. ## Procedure

Article 28

1. The Security Council shall be so organized as to be able to function continuously. Each member of the Security Council shall for this purpose be represented at all times at the seat of the Organization.
2. The Security Council shall hold periodic meetings at which each of its members may, if it so desires, be represented by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative.
3. The Security Council may hold meetings at such places other than the seat of the Organization as in its judgment will best facilitate its work.

Article 29

The Security Council may establish such subsidiary organs as it deems necessary for the performance of its functions

Article 30

The Security Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of Selecting its President.

Article 31

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council whenever the latter considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected.

Article 32

Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council or any state which is not a Member of the United Nations, if it is a party to a dispute under consideration by the Security Council, shall be invited to participate, without vote, in the discussion relating to the dispute. The Security Council shall lay down such conditions as it deems just for the participation of a state which is not a Member of the United Nations

Chapter VI

PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES

Article 33

1. The parties to any dispute, the continuance of which is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and Security, shall, first of all, seek a solution by negotiation, enquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements, or other peaceful means of their own choice.
2. The Security Council shall, when it deems necessary, call upon the parties to settle their dispute by such means.

Article 34

The Security Council may investigate any dispute or any situation which might lead to international friction or give rise to a dispute, in order to determine whether the continuance of the dispute or situation is likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 35

1. Any Member of the United Nations may bring any dispute, or any situation of the nature referred to in Article 34, to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly.
2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may bring to the attention of the Security Council or of the General Assembly any dispute to which it is a party if it accepts in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the present Charter.

3. The proceedings of the General Assembly in respect of matters brought to its attention under this Article will be subject to the provisions of Articles 11 and 12.

Article 36

1. The Security Council may, at any stage of a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 or of a situation of like nature, recommend appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment.
2. The Security Council should take into consideration any procedures for the Settlement of the dispute which have already been adopted by the parties..
3. In making recommendations under this Article the Security Council should also take into consideration that legal disputes should as a general rule be referred by the parties to the International Court of Justice in accordance with the provisions of the Statute of the Court.

Article 37

1. Should the parties to a dispute of the nature referred to in Article 33 fail to settle it by the means indicated in that Article, they shall refer it to the Security Council.
2. If the Security Council deems that the continuance of the dispute is in fact likely to endanger the maintenance of international peace and security, it shall decide whether to take action under Article 36 or to recommend such terms of settlement as it may consider appropriate.

Article 38

Without prejudice to the provisions of Articles 33 to 37, the Security Council may, if all the parties to any dispute so request, make recommendations to the parties with a view to a pacific settlement of the dispute.

Chapter VII

ACTION WITH RESPECT TO THREATS TO THE PEACE, BREACHES OF THE PEACE, AND ACTS OF AGGRESSION

Article 39

The Security Council shall determine the existence of any threat to the peace, breach of the peace, or act of aggression and shall make recommendations, or decide what measures shall be taken in accordance with Articles 41 and 42, to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Article 40

In order to prevent an aggravation of the situation, the Security Council may, before making the recommendations or deciding upon the measures provided for in Article 39, call upon the parties concerned to comply with such provisional measures as it deems necessary or desirable. Such provisional measures shall be without prejudice to the rights, claims, or position of the parties concerned. The Security Council shall duly take account of failure to comply with such provisional measures.

Article 41

The Security Council may decide what measures not involving the use of armed force are to be employed to give affect to its decisions, and it may call upon the Members of the United Nations to apply such measures These may include complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

1. Each member of the Security Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Security Council on procedural matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members.
3. Decisions of the Security Council on all other matters shall be made by an affirmative vote of seven members including the concurring votes of the permanent members; provided that, in decisions under Chapter VI, and under paragraph 3 of Article 52, a party to a dispute shall abstain from voting.)

Article 42

Should the Security Council consider that measures provided for in Article 41 would be inadequate or have proved to be inadequate, it may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security. Such action may include demonstrations, blockade, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of Members of the United Nations.

Article 43

1. All Members of the United Nations, in order to contribute to the maintenance of international peace and security, undertake to make available to the Security Council, on its call and in accordance with a special agreement or agreements, armed forces, assistance, and facilities, including rights of passage, necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

2. Such agreement or agreements shall govern the numbers and types of forces, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided.

3. The agreement or agreements shall be negotiated as soon as possible on the initiative of the Security Council. They shall be concluded between the Security Council and Members or between the Security Council and groups of Members and shall be subject to ratification by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

Article 44

When the Security Council has decided to use force it shall, before calling upon a Member not represented on it to provide armed forces in fulfilment of the obligations assumed under Article 43, invite that Member, if the Member so desires, to participate in the decisions of the Security Council concerning the employment of contingents of that Member's armed forces.

Article 45

In order to enable the United Nations to take urgent military measures, Members shall hold immediately available national air-force contingents for combined international enforcement action. The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents and plans for their combined action shall be determined, within the limits laid down in the special agreement or agreements referred to in Article 43, by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 46

Plans for the application of armed force shall be made by the Security Council with the assistance of the Military Staff Committee.

Article 47

1. There shall be established a Military Staff Committee to advise and assist the Security Council on all questions relating to the Security Council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, the regulation of armaments, and possible disarmament.

2. The Military Staff Committee shall consist of the Chiefs of Staff of the permanent members of the Security Council or their representatives. Any Member of the United Nations not permanently represented on the Committee shall be invited by the Committee to be associated with it when the efficient discharge of the Committee's responsibilities requires the participation of that Member in its work.

3. The Military Staff Committee shall be responsible under the Security Council for the strategic direction of any armed forces placed at the disposal of the Security Council. Questions relating to the command of such forces shall be worked out subsequently.

4. The Military Staff Committee, with the authorisation of the Security Council and after consultation with appropriate regional agencies, may establish regional subcommittees.

Article 48

1. The action required to carry out the decisions of the Security Council for the maintenance of international peace and security shall be taken by all the Members of the United Nations or by some of them, as the Security Council may determine.

2. Such decisions shall be carried out by the Members of the United Nations directly and through their action in the appropriate international agencies of which they are members.

Article 49

The Members of the United Nations shall join in affording mutual assistance in carrying out the measures decided upon by the Security Council.

Article 50

if preventive or enforcement measures against any state are taken by the Security Council, any other state, whether a Member of the United Nations or not, which finds itself confronted with special economic problems arising from the carrying out of those measures shall have the right to consult the Security Council with regard to a solution of those problems.

Article 51

Nothing in the present Charter shall impair the inherent right of individual or collective self-defence if an armed attack occurs against a Member of the United Nations, until the Security Council has taken measures necessary to maintain international peace and security. Measures taken by Members in the exercise of this right of self-defence shall be immediately reported to the Security Council and shall not in any way affect the authority and responsibility of the Security Council under the present Charter to take at any time such action as it deems necessary in order to maintain or restore international peace and security.

Chapter VIII

REGIONAL ARRANGEMENTS

Article 52

1. Nothing in the present Charter precludes the existence of regional arrangements or agencies for dealing with such matters relating to the maintenance of international peace and security as are appropriate for regional action, provided that such arrangements or agencies and their activities are consistent with the Purposes and Principles of the United Nations.

2. The Members of the United Nations entering into such arrangements or constituting such agencies shall make every effort to achieve pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies before referring them to the Security Council.

3. The Security Council shall encourage the development of pacific settlement of local disputes through such regional arrangements or by such regional agencies either on the initiative of the states concerned or by reference from the Security Council.

4. This Article in no way impairs the application of Articles 34 and 35.

Article 53

1. The Security Council shall, where appropriate, utilize such regional arrangements or agencies for enforcement action under its authority. But no enforcement action shall be taken under regional arrangements or by regional agencies without the authorisation of the Security Council, with the exception of measures against any enemy state, as defined in paragraph 2 of this Article, provided for pursuant to Article 107 or in regional arrangements directed against renewal of aggressive policy on the part of any such state, until such time as the Organisation may, on request of the Governments concerned, be charged with the responsibility for preventing further aggression by such a state.

2. The term enemy state as used in paragraph 1 of this Article applies to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory of the present Charter.

Article 54

‘The Security Council shall at all times be kept fully informed of activities undertaken or in contemplation under regional arrangements or by regional agencies for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Chapter IX

Chapter XI

DECLARATION REGARDING

NON-SELF-GOVERNING TERRITORIES

Article 73

Members of the United Nations which have or assume responsibilities for the administration of territories whose peoples have not yet attained a full measure of self-government recognize the principle that the interests of the inhabitants of these territories are paramount, and accept as a sacred trust the obligation to promote to the utmost, within the system of international peace and security established by the present Charter, the well-being of the inhabitants of these territories and, to this end:

- a. to ensure, with due respect for the culture of the peoples concerned, their political, economic, social, and educational advancement, their just treatment, and their protection against abuses;
- b. to develop self-government, to take due account of the political aspirations of the peoples, and to assist them in the progressive development of their free political institutions, according to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and their varying stages of advancement;
- c. to further international peace and security;
- d. to promote constructive measures of development, to encourage research, and to co-operate with one another and, when and where appropriate, with specialized international bodies with a view to the practical achievement of the social, economic, and scientific purposes set forth in this Article; and
- e. to transmit regularly to the Secretary-General for information purposes, subject to such limitation as security and constitutional considerations may require, statistical and other information of a technical nature relating to economic, social, and educational conditions in the territories for which they are respectively responsible other than those territories to which Chapters XII and XIII apply.

Article 74

Members of the United Nations also agree that their policy in respect of the territories to which this Chapter applies, no less than in respect of their metropolitan areas, must be based on the general principle of good-neighbourliness, due account being taken of the interests and well-being of the rest of the world, in social, economic, and commercial matters.

Chapter XII

INTERNATIONAL TRUSTEESHIP SYSTEM

Article 75

The United Nations shall establish under its authority an international trusteeship system for the administration and supervision of such territories as may be placed thereunder by subsequent individual agreements. These territories are hereinafter referred to as trust territories.

Article 76

The basic objectives of the trusteeship system, in accordance with the Purposes of the United Nations laid down in Article 1 of the present Charter, shall be:

- a. to further international peace and security;
  - b. to promote the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of the trust territories, end their progressive development towards self-government or independence as may be appropriate to the particular circumstances of each territory and its peoples and the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, and as may be provided by the terms of each trusteeship agreement;
  - c. to encourage respect for human rights and for fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language, or religion, and to encourage recognition of the interdependence of the peoples of the world; and
- to ensure equal treatment in social, economic, and commercial matters for all Members of the United Nations and their nationals, and also equal treatment for the latter in the administration of justice, without prejudice to the attainment of the foregoing objectives and subject to the provisions of Article 80.

Article 77

1. The trusteeship system shall apply to such territories in the following categories as may be placed thereunder by means of trusteeship agreements:

- a. territories now held under mandate;
- b. territories which may be detached from enemy states as a result of the Second World War; and
- c. territories voluntarily placed under the system by states responsible for their administration.

2. It will be a matter for subsequent agreement as to which territories in the foregoing categories will be brought under the trusteeship system and upon what terms.

Article 78

The trusteeship system shall not apply to territories which have become Members of the United Nations, relationship among which shall be based on respect for the principle of sovereign equality.

Article 79

The terms of trusteeship for each territory to be placed under the trusteeship system, including any alteration or amendment, shall be agreed upon by the states directly concerned, including the mandatory power in the case of territories held under mandate by a Member of the United Nations, and shall be approved as provided for in Articles 83 and 85.

Article 80

1. Except as may be agreed upon in individual trusteeship agreements, made under Articles 77, 79, and 81, placing each territory under the trusteeship system, and until such agreements have been concluded, nothing in this Chapter shall be construed in or of itself to alter in any manner the rights whatsoever of any states or any peoples or the terms of existing international instruments to which Members of the United Nations may respectively be parties

2. Paragraph 1 of this Article shall not be interpreted as giving grounds for delay or postponement of the negotiation and conclusion of agreements for placing mandated and other territories under the trusteeship system as provided for in Article 77.

Article 81

The trusteeship agreement shall in each case include the terms under which the trust territory will be administered and designate the authority which will exercise the administration of the trust territory. Such authority, hereinafter called the administering authority, may be one or more states or the Organization itself.

Article 82

There may be designated, in any trusteeship agreement, a strategic area or areas which may include part or all of the trust territory to which the agreement applies, without prejudice to any special agreement or agreements made under Article 43.

Article 83

1. All functions of the United Nations relating to strategic areas, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendments shall be exercised by the Security Council.

2. The basic objectives set forth in Article 76 shall be applicable to the people of each strategic area.

3. The Security Council shall, subject to the provisions of the trusteeship agreements and without prejudice to security considerations, avail itself of the assistance of the Trusteeship Council to perform those functions of the United Nations under the trusteeship system relating to political, economic, social, and educational matters in the strategic areas

Article 84

It shall be the duty of the administering authority to ensure that the trust territory shall play its part in the maintenance of international peace and security. To this end the administering authority may make use of volunteer forces, facilities, and assistance from the trust territory in carrying out the obligations towards the Security Council undertaken in this regard by the administering authority, as well as for local defence and the maintenance of law and order within the trust territory.

Article 85

1. The functions of the United Nations with regard to trusteeship agreements for all areas not designated as strategic, including the approval of the terms of the trusteeship agreements and of their alteration or amendment, shall be exercised by the General Assembly.

2. The Trusteeship Council, operating under the authority of the General Assembly, shall assist the General Assembly in carrying out these functions

Chapter XIII

THE TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

Composition

Article 86

1. The Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following Members of the United Nations:

- a. those Members administering trust territories;
- b. such of those Members mentioned by name in Article 23 as are not administering trust territories; and
- c. as many other Members elected for three-year terms by the General Assembly as may be necessary to ensure that the total number of members of the Trusteeship Council is equally divided between those Members of the United Nations which administer trust territories and those which do not.

2. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall designate one specially qualified person to represent it therein.

Functions and powers

Article 87

The General Assembly and, under its authority, the Trusteeship Council, in carrying out their functions, may:

- a. consider reports submitted by the administering authority;
- b. accept petitions and examine them in consultation with the administering authority;
- c. provide for periodic visits to the respective trust territories at times agreed upon with the administering authority; and
- d. take these and other actions in conformity with the terms of the trusteeship agreements

Article 88

The Trusteeship Council shall formulate a questionnaire on the political, economic, social, and educational advancement of the inhabitants of each trust territory, and the administering authority for each trust territory within the competence of the General Assembly shall make an annual report to the General Assembly upon the basis of such questionnaire.

Voting

Article 89

1. Each member of the Trusteeship Council shall have one vote.
2. Decisions of the Trusteeship Council shall be made by a majority of the members present and voting.

Procedure

Article 90

1. The Trusteeship Council shall adopt its own rules of procedure, including the method of selecting its President.
2. The Trusteeship Council shall meet as required in accordance with its rules, which shall include provision for the convening of meetings on the request of a majority of its members.

Article 91

The Trusteeship Council shall, when appropriate, avail itself of the assistance of the Economic and Social Council and of the specialised agencies in regard to matters with which they are respectively concerned.

Chapter XIV

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

Article 92

The International Court of Justice shall be the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It shall function in accordance with the annexed Statute, which is based upon the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and forms an integral part of the present Charter.

Article 93

1. All Members of the United Nations are ipso facto parties to the Statute of the International Court of Justice

2. A state which is not a Member of the United Nations may become a party to the Statute of the International Court of Justice on conditions to be determined in each case by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 94

1. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to comply with the decision of the International Court of Justice in any case to which it is a party.

2. If any party to a case fails to perform the obligations incumbent upon it under a judgment rendered by the Court, the other party may have recourse to the Security Council, which may, if it deems necessary, make recommendations or decide upon measures to be taken to give effect to the judgment.

Article 95

Nothing in the present Charter shall prevent Members of the United Nations from entrusting the solution of their differences to other tribunals by virtue of agreements already in existence or which may be concluded in the future.

Article 96

1. The General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question.

2. Other organs of the United Nations and specialised agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities

THE SECRETARIAT

Article 97

The Secretariat shall comprise a Secretary-General and such staff as the Organization may require. The Secretary-General shall be appointed by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. He shall be the chief administrative officer of the Organization.

Article 98

The Secretary-General shall act in that capacity in all meetings of the General Assembly, of the Security Council, of the Economic and Social Council, and of the Trusteeship Council, and shall perform such other functions as are entrusted to him by these organs. The Secretary-General shall make an annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization.

Article 99

The Secretary-General may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security.

Article 100

1. In the performance of their duties the Secretary-General and the staff shall not seek or receive instructions from any government or from any other authority external to the Organization. They shall refrain from any action which might reflect on their position as international officials responsible only to the Organization.

2. Each Member of the United Nations undertakes to respect the exclusively international character of the responsibilities of the Secretary-General and the staff and not to seek to influence them in the discharge of their responsibilities.

Article 101

1. The staff shall be appointed by the Secretary-General under regulations established by the General Assembly.

2. Appropriate staffs shall be permanently assigned to the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, and, as required, to other organs of the United Nations. These staffs shall form a part of the Secretariat.

3. The paramount consideration in the employment of the staff and in the determination of the conditions of service shall be the necessity of securing the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity. Due regard shall be paid to the importance of recruiting the staff on as wide a geographical basis as possible.

Chapter XVI
MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Article 102

1. Every treaty and every international agreement entered into by any Member of the United Nations after the present Charter comes into force shall as soon as possible be registered with the Secretariat and published by it.

2. No party to any such treaty or international agreement which has not been registered in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 1 of this Article may invoke that treaty or agreement before any organ of the United Nations.

Article 103

In the event of a conflict between the obligations of the Members of the United Nations under the present Charter and their obligations under any other international agreement, their obligations under the present Charter shall prevail.

Article 104

The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such legal capacity as may be necessary for the exercise of its functions and the fulfilment of its purposes.

Article 105

1. The Organization shall enjoy in the territory of each of its Members such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the fulfilment of its purposes.

2. Representatives of the Members of the United Nations and officials of the Organization shall similarly enjoy such privileges and immunities as are necessary for the independent exercise of their functions in connexion with the Organization.

3. The General Assembly may make recommendations with a view to determining the details of the application of paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article or may propose conventions to the Members of the United Nations for this purpose.

Chapter XVII
TRANSITIONAL SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS

Article 106

Pending the coming into force of such special agreements referred to in Article 43 as in the opinion of the Security Council enable it to begin the exercise of its responsibilities under Article 42, the parties to the Four-Nation Declaration, signed at Moscow, 30 October 1943, and France, shall, in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 5 of that Declaration, consult with one another and as occasion requires with other Members of the United Nations with a view to such joint action on behalf of the Organization as may be necessary for the purpose of maintaining international peace and security.

Article 107

Nothing in the present Charter shall invalidate or preclude action, in relation to any state which during the Second World War has been an enemy of any signatory to the present Charter, taken or authorized as a result of that war by the Governments having responsibility for such action.

Chapter XVIII
AMENDMENTS

Article 108

Amendments to the present Charter shall come into force for all Members of the United Nations when they have been adopted by a vote of two thirds of the members of the General Assembly and ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations, including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

Article 109<sup>4</sup>

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any nine members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be

<sup>4</sup>Amended text of Article 109 which came into force on 12 June 1968. (The text of Article 109 before it was amended read as follows:

1. A General Conference of the Members of the United Nations for the purpose of reviewing the present Charter may be held at a date and place to be fixed by a two-thirds vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council. Each Member of the United Nations shall have one vote in the conference.

2. Any alteration of the present Charter recommended by a two-thirds vote of the conference shall take effect when ratified in accordance with their respective constitutional processes by two thirds of the Members of the United Nations including all the permanent members of the Security Council.

3. If such a conference has not been held before the tenth annual session of the General Assembly following the coming into force of the present Charter, the proposal to call such a conference shall be placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.)

placed on the agenda of that session of the General Assembly, and the conference shall be held if so decided by a majority vote of the members of the General Assembly and by a vote of any seven members of the Security Council.

Chapter XIX RATIFICATION AND SIGNATURE

Article 110

1. The present Charter shall be ratified by the signatory states in accordance with their respective constitutional processes

2. The ratifications shall be deposited with the Government of the United States of America, which shall notify all the signatory states of each deposit as well as the Secretary-General of the Organization when he has been appointed.

3. The present Charter shall come into force upon the deposit of ratifications by the Republic of China, France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the United States of America, and by a majority of the other signatory states. A protocol of the ratifications deposited shall thereupon be drawn up by the Government of the United States of America which shall communicate copies thereof to all the signatory states

4. The states signatory to the present Charter which ratify it after it has come into force will become original Members of the United Nations on the date of the deposit of their respective ratifications

Article 111

The present Charter, of which the Chinese, French, Russian, English, and Spanish texts are equally authentic, shall remain deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States of America. Duly certified copies thereof shall be transmitted by that Government to the Governments of the other signatory states.

IN FAITH WHEREOF the representatives of the Governments of the United Nations have signed the present Charter.

DONE at the city of San Francisco the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

Statute of the International Court of Justice

Article 1

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE established by the Charter of the United Nations as the principal judicial organ of the United Nations shall be constituted and shall function in accordance with the provisions of the present Statute.

Chapter I ORGANIZATION OF THE COURT

Article 2

The Court shall be composed of a body of independent judges, elected regardless of their nationality from among persons of high moral character, who possess the qualifications required in their respective countries for appointment to the highest judicial offices, or are jurists of recognized competence in international law.

Article 3

1. The Court shall consist of fifteen members, no two of whom may be nationals of the same state
2. A person who for the purposes of membership in the Court could be regarded as a national of more than one state shall be deemed to be a national of the one in which he ordinarily exercises civil and political rights

Article 4

1. The members of the Court shall be elected by the General Assembly and by the Security Council from a list of persons nominated by the national groups in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, in accordance with the following provisions

2. In the case of Members of the United Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, candidates shall be nominated by national groups appointed for this purpose by their governments under the same conditions as those prescribed for members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration by Article 44 of the Convention of The Hague of 1907 for the pacific settlement of international disputes

3. The conditions under which a state which is a party to the present Statute but is not a Member of the United Nations may participate in electing the members of the Court shall, in the absence of a special agreement, be laid down by the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council.

Article 5

1. At least three months before the date of the election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a written request to the members of the Permanent Court of Arbitration belonging to the states which are parties to the present Statute, and to the members of the national groups appointed under Article 4, paragraph 2, inviting them to undertake, within a given time, by national groups, the nomination of persons in a position to accept the duties of a member of the court.

2. No group may nominate more than four persons, not more than two of whom shall be of their own nationality. In no case may the number of candidates nominated by a group be more than double the number of seats to be filled.

Article 6

Before making these nominations, each national group is recommended to consult its highest court of justice, its legal faculties and schools of law, and its national academies and national sections of international academies devoted to the study of law.

Article 7

1. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all the persons thus nominated. Save as provided in Article 12, paragraph 2, these shall be the only persons eligible.
2. The Secretary-General shall submit this list to the General Assembly and to the Security Council.

Article 8

The General Assembly and the Security Council shall proceed independently of one another to elect the members of the Court.

Article 9

At every election, the electors shall bear in mind not only that the persons to be elected should individually possess the qualifications required, but also that in the body as a whole the representation of the main forms of civilization and of the principal legal systems of the world should be assured.

Article 10

1. Those candidates who obtain an absolute majority of votes in the General Assembly and in the Security Council shall be considered as elected.

2. Any vote of the Security Council, whether for the election of judges or for the appointment of members of the conference envisaged in Article 12, shall be taken without any distinction between permanent and non-permanent members of the Security Council.

3. In the event of more than one national of the same state obtaining an absolute majority of the votes both of the General Assembly and of the Security Council, the eldest of these only shall be considered as elected.

Article 11

If, after the first meeting held for the purpose of the election, one or more seats remain to be filled, a second and, if necessary, a third meeting shall take place.

Article 12

1. If, after the third meeting, one or more seats still remain unfilled, a joint conference consisting of six members, three appointed by the General Assembly and three by the Security Council, may be formed at any time at the request of either the General Assembly or the Security Council, for the purpose of choosing by the vote of an absolute majority one name for each seat still vacant, to submit to the General Assembly and the Security Council for their respective acceptance.

2. If the joint conference is unanimously agreed upon any person who fulfils the required conditions, he may be included in its list, even though he was not included in the list of nominations referred to in Article 7.

3. If the joint conference is satisfied that it will not be successful in procuring an election, those members of the Court who have already been elected shall, within a period to be fixed by the Security Council, proceed to fill the vacant seats by selection from among those candidates who have obtained votes either in the General Assembly or in the Security Council.

4. In the event of an equality of votes among the judges, the eldest judge shall have a casting vote.

Article 13

1. The members of the Court shall be elected for nine years and may be re-elected; provided, however, that of the judges elected at the first election, the terms of five judges shall expire at the end of three years and the terms of five more judges shall expire at the end of six years.

2. The judges whose terms are to expire at the end of the above-mentioned initial periods of three and six years shall be chosen by lot to be drawn by the Secretary-General immediately after the first election has been completed.

3. The members of the Court shall continue to discharge their duties until their places have been filled. Though replaced, they shall finish any cases which they may have begun.

4. In the case of the resignation of a member of the Court, the resignation shall be addressed to the President of the Court for transmission to the Secretary-General. This last notification makes the place vacant.

Article 14

Vacancies shall be filled by the same method as that laid down for the first election, subject to the following provision: the Secretary-General shall, within one month of the occurrence of the vacancy, proceed to issue the invitations provided for in Article 5, and the date of the election shall be fixed by the Security Council.

Article 15

A member of the Court elected to replace a member whose term of office has not expired shall hold office for the remainder of his predecessor's term.

Article 16

1. No member of the Court may exercise any political or administrative function, or engage in any other occupation of a professional nature.

2. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the court.

Article 17

1. No member of the Court may act as agent, counsel, or advocate in any case.

2. No member may participate in the decision of any case in which he has previously taken part as agent, counsel, or advocate for one of the parties, or as a member of a national or international court, or of a commission of enquiry, or in any other capacity.

3. Any doubt on this point shall be settled by the decision of the court.

Article 18

1. No member of the Court can be dismissed unless, in the unanimous opinion of the other members, he has ceased to fulfil the required conditions.

2. Formal notification thereof shall be made to the Secretary-General by the Registrar.

3. This notification makes the place vacant.

Article 19

The members of the Court, when engaged on the business of the Court, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities.

Article 20

Every member of the Court shall, before taking up his duties, make a solemn declaration in open court that he will exercise his powers impartially and conscientiously.

Article 21

1. The Court shall elect its President and Vice-President for three years; they may be reelected.

2. The Court shall appoint its Registrar and may provide for the appointment of such other officers as may be necessary.

Article 22

1. The seat of the Court shall be established at The Hague. This, however, shall not prevent the Court from sitting and exercising its functions elsewhere whenever the Court considers it desirable.

2. The President and the Registrar shall reside at the seat of the Court.

Article 23

1. The Court shall remain permanently in session, except during the judicial vacations, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court.

2. Members of the Court are entitled to periodic leave, the dates and duration of which shall be fixed by the Court, having in mind the distance between The Hague and the home of each judge.

3. Members of the Court shall be bound, unless they are on leave or prevented from attending by illness or other serious reasons duly explained to the President, to hold themselves permanently at the disposal of the Court.

Article 24

1. If, for some special reason, a member of the Court considers that he should not take part in the decision of a particular case, he shall so inform the President.

2. If the President considers that for some special reason one of the members of the Court should not sit in a particular case, he shall give him notice accordingly.

3. If in any such case the member of the Court and the President disagree, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 25

1. The full Court shall sit except when it is expressly provided otherwise in the present Statute.

2. Subject to the condition that the number of judges available to constitute the Court is not thereby reduced below eleven, the Rules of the Court may provide for allowing one or more judges, according to circumstances and in rotation, to be dispensed from sitting.

3. A quorum of nine judges shall suffice to constitute the Court.

Article 26

1. The Court may from time to time form one or more chambers, composed of three or more judges as the Court may determine, for dealing with particular categories of cases; for example, labour cases and cases relating to transit and communications.

2. The Court may at any time form a chamber for dealing with a particular case. The number of judges to constitute such a chamber shall be determined by the Court with the approval of the parties.

3. Cases shall be heard and determined by the chambers provided for in this Article if the parties so request.

Article 27

A judgment given by any of the chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 shall be considered as rendered by the Court.

Article 28

The chambers provided for in Articles 26 and 29 may, with the consent of the parties, sit and exercise their functions elsewhere than at The Hague.

Article 29

With a view to the speedy dispatch of business, the Court shall form annually a chamber composed of five judges which, at the request of the parties, may hear and determine cases by summary procedure. In addition, two judges shall be selected for the purpose of replacing judges who find it impossible to sit.

Article 30

1. The Court shall frame rules for carrying out its functions. In particular, it shall lay down rules of procedure.
2. The Rules of the Court may provide for assessors to sit with the Court or with any of its chambers, without the right to vote.

Article 31

1. Judges of the nationality of each of the parties shall retain their right to sit in the case before the Court.
2. If the Court includes upon the Bench a judge of the nationality of one of the parties, any other party may choose a person to sit as judge. Such person shall be chosen preferably from among those persons who have been nominated as candidates as provided in Articles 4 and 5.
3. If the Court includes upon the Bench no judge of the nationality of the parties, each of these parties may proceed to choose a judge as provided in paragraph 2 of this Article.
4. The provisions of this Article shall apply to the case of Articles 26 and 29. In such cases, the President shall request one or, if necessary, two of the members of the Court forming the chamber to give place to the members of the Court of the nationality of the parties concerned, and, failing such, or if they are unable to be present, to the judges specially chosen by the parties.
5. Should there be several parties in the same interest, they shall, for the purpose of the preceding provisions, be reckoned as one party only. Any doubt upon this point shall be settled by the decision of the Court.
6. Judges chosen as laid down in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of this Article shall fulfil the conditions required by Articles 2, 17 (paragraph 2), 20, and 24 of the present Statute. They shall take part in the decision on terms of complete equality with their colleagues.

Article 32

1. Each member of the Court shall receive an annual salary.
2. The President shall receive a special annual allowance.
3. The Vice-President shall receive a special allowance for every day on which he acts as President.
4. The judges chosen under Article 31, other than members of the Court, shall receive compensation for each day on which they exercise their functions.
5. These salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be fixed by the General Assembly. They may not be decreased during the term of office.
6. The salary of the Registrar shall be fixed by the General Assembly on the proposal of the Court.
7. Regulations made by the General Assembly shall fix the conditions under which retirement pensions may be given to members of the Court and to the Registrar, and the conditions under which members of the Court and the Registrar shall have their travelling expenses refunded.
8. The above salaries, allowances, and compensation shall be free of all taxation.

Article 33

The expenses of the Court shall be borne by the United Nations in such a manner as shall be decided by the General Assembly.

Chapter II

COMPETENCE OF THE COURT

Article 34

1. Only states may be parties in cases before the Court.
2. The Court, subject to and in conformity with its Rules, may request of public international organizations information relevant to cases before it, and shall receive such information presented by such organizations on their own initiative.

3. Whenever the construction of the constituent instrument of a public international organization or of an international convention adopted thereunder is in question in a case before the Court, the Registrar shall so notify the public international organization concerned and shall communicate to it copies of all the written proceedings.

Article 35

1. The Court shall be open to the States parties to the present Statute.
2. The conditions under which the Court shall be open to other states shall, subject to the special provisions contained in treaties in force, be laid down by the Security Council, but in no case shall such conditions place the parties in a position of inequality before the Court.
3. When a state which is not a Member of the United Nations is a party to a case, the Court shall fix the amount which that party is to contribute towards the expenses of the Court. This provision shall not apply if such state is bearing a share of the expenses of the Court.

Article 36

1. The jurisdiction of the Court comprises all cases which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force.
2. The states parties to the present Statute may at any time declare that they recognize as compulsory ipso facto and without special agreement, in relation to any other state accepting the same obligation, the jurisdiction of the Court in all legal disputes concerning:
  - a. the interpretation of a treaty;
  - b. any question of international law;
  - c. the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation;
  - d. the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation.
3. The declarations referred to above may be made unconditionally or on condition of reciprocity on the part of several or certain states, or for a certain time.
4. Such declarations shall be deposited with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the parties to the Statute and to the Registrar of the Court.
5. Declarations made under Article 36 of the Statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice and which, are still in force shall be deemed, as between the parties to the present Statute, to be acceptances of the compulsory jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice for the period which they still have to run and in accordance with their terms.
6. In the event of a dispute as to whether the Court has jurisdiction, the matter shall be settled by the decision of the Court.

Article 37

Whenever a treaty or convention in force provides for reference of a matter to a tribunal to have been instituted by the League of Nations, or to the Permanent Court of International Justice, the matter shall, as between the parties to the present Statute, be referred to the International Court of Justice.

Article 38

1. The Court, whose function is to decide in accordance with international law such disputes as are submitted to it, shall apply:
  - a. international conventions, whether general or particular, establishing rules expressly recognized by the contesting states;
  - b. international custom, as evidence of a general practice accepted as law;
  - c. the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations;
  - d. subject to the provisions of Article 59, judicial decisions and the teachings of the most highly qualified publicists of the various nations, as subsidiary means for the determination of rules of law.
2. This provision shall not prejudice the power of the Court to decide a case ex aequo et bono, if the parties agree thereto.

Chapter III

PROCEDURE

Article 39

1. The official languages of the Court shall be French and English. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in French, the judgment shall be delivered in French. If the parties agree that the case shall be conducted in English, the judgment shall be delivered in English.

2. In the absence of an agreement as to which language shall be employed, each party may, in the pleadings, use the language which it prefers; the decision of the Court shall be given in French and English. In this case the Court shall at the same time determine which of the two texts shall be considered as authoritative

3. The Court shall, at the request of any party, authorize a language other than French or English to be used by that party.

Article 40

1. Cases are brought before the Court, as the case may be, either by the notification of the special agreement or by a written application addressed to the Registrar. In either case the subject of the dispute and the parties shall be indicated.

2. The Registrar shall forthwith communicate the application to all concerned.

3. He shall also notify the Members of the United Nations through the Secretary-General, and also any other states entitled to appear before the Court.

Article 41

1. The Court shall have the power to indicate, if it considers that circumstances so require, any provisional measures which ought to be taken to preserve the respective rights of either party.

2. Pending the final decision, notice of the measures suggested shall forthwith be given to the parties and to the Security Council.

Article 42

1. The parties shall be represented by agents.
2. They may have the assistance of counsel or advocates before the Court.

3. The agents, counsel, and advocates of parties before the Court shall enjoy the privileges and immunities necessary to the independent exercise of their duties.

Article 43

1. The procedure shall consist of two parts: written and oral.
2. The written proceedings shall consist of the communication to the Court and to the parties of memorials, counter-memorials and, if necessary, replies; also all papers and documents in support.

3. These communications shall be made through the Registrar, in the order and within the time fixed by the Court.

4. A certified copy of every document produced by one party shall be communicated to the other party.

5. The oral proceedings shall consist of the hearing by the Court of witnesses, experts, agents, counsel, and advocates

Article 44

1. For the service of all notices upon persons other than the agents, counsel, and advocates, the Court shall apply direct to the government of the State upon whose territory the notice has to be served.

2. The same provision shall apply whenever steps are to be taken to procure evidence on the spot.

Article 45

The hearing shall be under the control of the President or, if he is unable to preside, of the Vice-President; if neither is able to preside, the senior judge present shall preside.

Article 46

The hearing in Court shall be public, unless the Court shall decide otherwise, or unless the parties demand that the public be not admitted.

Article 47

1. Minutes shall be made at each hearing and signed by the Registrar and the President.

2. These minutes alone shall be authentic.

Article 48

The Court shall make orders for the conduct of the case, shall decide the form and time in which each party must conclude its arguments, and make all arrangements connected with the taking of evidence.

Article 43

The Court may, even before the hearing begins, call upon the agents to produce any document or to supply any explanations. Formal note shall be taken of any refusal.

Article 50

The Court may, at any time, entrust any individual, body, bureau, commission, or other organization that it may select, with the task of carrying out an enquiry or giving an expert opinion.

Article 51

During the hearing any relevant questions are to be put to the witnesses and experts under the conditions laid down by the Court in the rules of procedure referred to in Article 30.

Article 52

After the Court has received the proofs and evidence within the time specified for the purpose, it may refuse to accept any further oral or written evidence that one party may desire to present unless the other side consents.

Article 53

1. Whenever one of the parties does not appear before the Court, or fails to defend its case, the other party may call upon the Court to decide in favour of its claim.

2. The Court must, before doing so, satisfy itself, not only that it has jurisdiction in accordance with Articles 36 and 37, but also that the claim is well founded in fact and law.

Article 54

1. When, subject to the control of the Court, the agents, counsel, and advocates have completed their presentation of the case, the President shall declare the hearing closed.

2. The Court shall withdraw to consider the judgment.

3. The deliberations of the Court shall take place in private and remain secret.

Article 55

1. All questions shall be decided by a majority of the judges present.
2. In the event of an equality of votes, the President or the judge who acts in his place shall have a casting vote.

Article 56

1. The judgment shall state the reasons on which it is based.
2. It shall contain the names of the judges who have taken part in the decision.

Article 57

If the judgment does not represent in whole or in part the unanimous opinion of the judges, any judge shall be entitled to deliver a separate opinion.

Article 58

The judgment shall be signed by the President and by the Registrar. It shall be read in open court, due notice having been given to the agents.

Article 59

The decision of the Court has no binding force except between the parties and in respect of that particular case.

Article 60

The judgment is final and without appeal. In the event of dispute as to the meaning or scope of the judgment, the Court shall construe it upon the request of any party.

Article 61

1. An application for revision of a judgment may be made only when it is based upon the discovery of some fact of such a nature as to be a decisive factor, which fact was, when the judgment was given, unknown to the Court and also to the party claiming revision, always provided that such ignorance was not due to negligence.

2. The proceedings for revision shall be opened by a judgment of the Court expressly recording the existence of the new fact, recognising that it has such a character as to lay the case open to revision, and declaring the application admissible on this ground.

3. The Court may require previous compliance with the terms of the judgment before it admits proceedings in revision.

4. The application for revision must be made at latest within six months of the discovery of the new fact.

5. No application for revision may be made after the lapse of ten years from the date of the judgment.

Article 62

1. Should a state consider that it has an interest of a legal nature which may be affected by the decision in the case, it may submit a request to the Court to be permitted to intervene.

2. It shall be for the Court to decide upon this request.

Article 63

1. Whenever the construction of a convention to which states other than those concerned in the case are parties is in question, the Registrar shall notify all such states forthwith.

2. Every state so notified has the right to intervene in the proceedings; but if it uses this right, the construction given by the judgment will be equally binding upon it.

Article 64

Unless otherwise decided by the Court, each party shall bear its own costs.

Chapter IV

ADVISORY OPINIONS

Article 65

1. The Court may give an advisory opinion on any legal question at the request of whatever body may be authorised by or in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations to make such a request.

2. Questions upon which the advisory opinion of the Court is asked shall be laid before the Court by means of a written request containing an exact statement of the question upon which an opinion is required, and accompanied by all documents likely to throw light upon the question.

Article 66

1. The Registrar shall forthwith give notice of the request for an advisory opinion to all states entitled to appear before the Court.

2. The Registrar shall also, by means of a special and direct communication, notify any state entitled to appear before the Court or international organization considered by the Court, or, should it not be sitting, by the President, as likely to be able to furnish information on the question, that the Court will be prepared to receive, within a time limit to be fixed by the President, written statements, or to hear, at a public sitting to be held for the purpose, oral statements relating to the question.

3. Should any such state entitled to appear before the Court have failed to receive the special communication referred to in paragraph 2 of this Article, such state may express a desire to submit a written statement or to be heard; and the Court will decide.

4. States and organizations having presented written or oral statements or both shall be permitted to comment on the statements made by other states or organisations in the form, to the extent, and within the time limits which the Court, or, should it not be sitting, the President, shall decide in each particular case. Accordingly, the Registrar shall in due time communicate any such written statements to states and organisations having submitted similar statements,

Article 67

The Court shall deliver its advisory opinions in open court, notice having been given to the Secretary-General and to the representatives of Members of the United Nations, of other states and of international organisations immediately concerned.

Article 68

In the exercise of its advisory functions the Court shall further be guided by the provisions of the present Statute which apply in contentious cases to the extent to which it recognises them to be applicable.

Chapter V

AMENDMENT

Article 69

Amendments to the present Statute shall be (effected by the same procedure as is provided by the Charter of the United Nations for amendments to that Charter, subject however to any provisions which the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council may adopt concerning the participation of states which are parties to the present Statute but are not Members of the United Nations

Article 70

The Court shall have power to propose such, amendments to the present Statute as it may deem necessary, through written communications to the Secretary-General, for consideration in conformity with the provisions of Article 69.

Trusteeship Council

Article 86 of the United Nations Charter lays down that the Trusteeship Council shall consist of the following:

Members of the United Nations administering Trust Territories;
Permanent members of the Security Council which do not administer Trust Territories;

As many other members elected for a three-year term by the General Assembly as will ensure that the membership of the Council is equally divided between United Nations Members which administer Trust Territories and those which do not.<sup>a</sup>

MEMBERS

Of these, 8,766 were in the Professional and higher categories and 17,241 were in the General Service, Manual Worker and Field Service categories. Of the same total, 23,618 were regular staff serving at Headquarters or other established offices and 2,389 were assigned as project personnel to technical co-operation projects. In addition, UNRWA had some 16,700 local area staff.

Appendix IV

Agenda of United Nations principal organs in 1985

This appendix lists the items on the agenda of the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council during 1985. For the Assembly and the Economic and Social Council, the column headed "Allocation" indicates the assignment of each item to plenary meetings or committees

Agenda item titles have been shortened by omitting mention of reports following the subject of the item. Thus, "Question of Cyprus: report of the Secretary-General" has been shortened to "Question of Cyprus". Where the subject-matter of the item is not apparent from its title, the subject is identified in square brackets; this is not part of the title.
