Foreword

IT has been said that a fact is the sweetest dream labour knows. The Yearbook of the United Nations, a summary of the actions of the world Organization within a single year, is a book of facts. It is also a book of dreams; not vacuous or ephemeral ones but practical visions for a secure life in a world of freedom with justice, where human dignity is honoured, where economic and social progress are sustainable, where natural and human resources are not squandered on weapons, and where peoples fulfil their determination, in the words of the United Nations Charter, “to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbours”.

The Yearbook is also a reflection of labour in pursuit of the dream of a world at harmony with itself. It is the record of multilateral efforts to deal with the pressing concerns of our times, such as disarmament, human rights, the settlement of regional conflicts, economic and social development, international trade, the environment, drug abuse control, adequate shelter and health care, humanitarian assistance for refugees and disaster relief.

In 1985, the United Nations commemorated the fortieth anniversary of its founding. In looking back over four decades of activity, there was general agreement that the world body was an essential instrument through which the international community could make a collective effort to solve common problems.

As nations return to the precepts of multilateralism, and interest in the United Nations rekindles, the Yearbook of the United Nations continues to be an invaluable reference work.

About the 1985 edition of the Yearbook

The 1985 YEARBOOK OF THE UNITED NATIONS has been designed as a reference tool for use by all who might need readily available information on a particular activity of the United Nations system. It covers, during a calendar year, the main activities of the United Nations (Part One) and those of each related organization in the United Nations system (Part Two).

The book is subject-oriented. Part One, containing 50 chapters, is divided into five major sections: political and security questions, economic and social questions, trusteeship and decolonization, legal questions, and administrative and budgetary questions.

Each chapter is divided into a hierarchy of topics. The assignment of headings implies no editorial judgement about the relative importance of a topic.

Structure and scope of articles

Presented under each topical heading is a summary of pertinent United Nations activities, including those of inter-governmental and expert bodies, major reports, Secretariat activities, and the views of States in written communications. The 1985 edition also gives the position of those States explaining their votes in the principal organs of the Organization. Such explanations are generally given when a recorded vote was taken. At the end of each chapter or subchapter is a list of REFERENCES, linked by numerical indicators to the text. These references indicate document symbols, previous Yearbook volumes supplying additional information, and previous resolutions and/or decisions by the principal United Nations organs. The Yearbook covers the following:

Activities of United Nations bodies. All resolutions, decisions and other major activities of the principal organs and, where applicable, those of subsidiary bodies are either reproduced or summarized in the respective articles. The texts of all resolutions adopted by the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council, with information on their adoption, are reproduced under the relevant topic. Where mention is made of other resolutions and decisions, highlighted in bold-face type, the full text or summary can be found by using the INDEX OF RESOLUTIONS AND DECISIONS at the end of this volume.

Major reports. Most 1985 reports of the Secretary-General, along with selected reports from other United Nations sources such as seminars and working groups, are summarized briefly. The document symbols of all reports cited appear in the REFERENCES.

Secretariat activities. The operational activities of the United Nations for development and humanitarian assistance are described under the relevant topics. For all major activities financed outside the United Nations regular budget, information is given on contributions by individual countries and on expenditures. Financial data are generally obtained from the audited accounts prepared for each fund, and cover the 1985 calendar year unless otherwise specified.

Views of States. Written communications sent to the United Nations by Member States and circulated as documents of the principal organs have been summarized under the most relevant topic.

All substantive debates in the Security Council have been analysed and their main points can be found under the pertinent topic(s). Users wishing details on the position of individual States in the principal organs of the United Nations or any of their main/sessional committees should refer to the meeting numbers to be found at the end of the summaries of procedural action following resolution/decision texts.

Related intergovernmental organizations. Part Two of the Yearbook describes the 1985 activities of each specialized agency, the International Atomic Energy Agency and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, based on information prepared by them. Included are data on budgets, contributions by member States, and principal officials.

Texts

The Yearbook reproduces the texts of all resolutions and decisions of a substantive nature adopted in 1985 by the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council and the Trusteeship Council. These texts are followed by the procedural details giving: date of adoption, meeting number and vote totals (in favour-against-abstaining); information on their approval by a sessional or subsidiary body prior to final adoption, with document symbols of drafts, approved amendments and committee reports; and a list of sponsors. Also given are the document symbols of any financial implications and all relevant meeting numbers of the General Assembly's Main Committees. Details of any recorded or roll-call vote on the resolution/decision as a whole also follow the text. The texts of resolutions and decisions of a purely procedural nature are not reproduced, but are summarized and their numbers given in bold type.

Terminology

Formal titles of bodies, organizational units, conventions, declarations and officials are given in full on first mention in an article or sequence of articles. They are also used in resolution/decision texts, and in the SUBJECT INDEX under the key word of the title. Short titles may be used in subsequent references; they have no official standing.

How to find information in the Yearbook

The 1985 edition has been designed to enable the user to locate information on United Nations activities in a number of ways.

By subject: Broad subjects may be located in the table of contents on pages vii-xiv. Each chapter opens with an introduction highlighting the main developments. Where a main topic is subdivided, shorter introductions may precede such subchapters. Cross-references give chapters for related information. The SUBJECT INDEX may be used to locate individual topics and specific references to the bodies dealing with each.

By body: Although the Yearbook is oriented by subject rather than by body, surveys of the work of many bodies appear under the topic of their main concern. For the principal organs, APPENDIX IV gives the 1985 agenda for each session. The members, officers, and date and place of sessions of each body are given in APPENDIX III. The SUBJECT INDEX lists bodies by the key word(s) of their formal title: "Apartheid, Special Committee against".

By resolution and decision number: A numerical list of all resolutions and substantive decisions adopted in 1985 by the principal organs, with page numbers for their text, appears in the final pages of this volume.

Resolution/decision texts appear in an article together with the circumstances of their adoption. Summaries of relevant provisions of other resolutions or decisions may also be added where applicable.

Other information: The 1985 report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization is reproduced, beginning on page 3. A list of Member States, with their dates of admission to the United Nations, comprises APPENDIX I. The Charter of the United Nations, including the Statute of the International Court of Justice, is in APPENDIX II. An INDEX OF NAMES follows the SUBJECT INDEX.

EXPLANATORY NOTE ON DOCUMENTS

References at the end of each article in Part One of this volume give the symbols of the main documents issued in 1985 on the topic, arranged in the order in which they are referred to in the text. The following is a guide to the principal document symbols:

A/- refers to documents of the General Assembly, numbered in separate series by session. Thus, A/40/- refers to documents issued for consideration at the fortieth session, beginning with A/40/1. Documents of special and emergency special sessions are identified as A/S - and A/ES -, followed by the session number.

A/C. - refers to documents of six of the Assembly's Main Committees, e.g. A/C.1/- is a document of the First Committee, A/C.6/-, a document of the Sixth Committee. The symbol for documents of the seventh Main Committee, the Special Political Committee, is A/SPC/-. A/BUR/- refers to documents of the General Committee. A/AC.- documents are those of the Assembly's ad hoc bodies and A/CN.-, of its commissions; e.g. A/AC.105/- identifies documents of the Assembly's Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space, A/CN.4/-, of its International Law Commission. Assembly resolutions and decisions since the thirty-first (1976) session have been identified by two arabic numerals: the first indicates the session of adoption; the second, the sequential number in the series. Resolutions are numbered consecutively from 1 at each session. Decisions of regular sessions are numbered consecutively, from 301 for those concerned with elections and appointments, and from 401 for all other decisions. Decisions of special and emergency special sessions are numbered consecutively, from 11 for those concerned with elections and appointments, and from 21 for all other decisions.

E/- refers to documents of the Economic and Social Council, numbered in separate series by year. Thus, E/1985/- refers to documents issued for consideration by the Council at its 1985 sessions, beginning with E/1985/1. E/AC.-, E/C.- and E/CN.-, followed by identifying numbers, refer to documents of the Council's subsidiary ad hoc bodies, committees and commissions. For example, E/C.1/-, E/C.2/- and E/C.3/- refer to documents of the Council's sessional committees, namely, the First (Economic), Second (Social) and Third (Programme and Co-ordination) Committees, respectively; E/CN.5/- refers to documents of the Council's Commission for Social Development, E/CN.7/-, to documents of its Committee on Natural Resources. E/ICEF/- documents are those of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Symbols for the Council's resolutions and decisions, since 1978, consist of two arabic numerals: the first indicates the year of adoption and the second, the sequential number in the series. There are two series: one for resolutions, beginning with 1 (resolution 1985/1); and one for decisions, beginning, since 1983, with 101 (decision 1985/101).

S/- refers to documents of the Security Council. Its resolutions are identified by consecutive numbers followed by the year of adoption in parentheses, beginning with resolution 1(1946).

T/- refers to documents of the Trusteeship Council. Its resolutions are numbered consecutively, with the session at which they were adopted indicated by Roman numerals, e.g. resolution 2179(LII) of the fifty-second session. The Council's decisions are not numbered. ST/-, followed by symbols representing the issuing department or office, refers to documents of the United Nations Secretariat.

Documents of certain bodies bear special symbols, including the following:

ACC/-	Administrative Committee on Co-ordination
CD/-	Conference on Disarmament
CERD/-	International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination
DC/-	Disarmament Commission
DP/-	United Nations Development Programme
HS/-	Commission on Human Settlements
ID/-	United Nations Industrial Development Organization
ITC/-	International Trade Centre
LOS/PCN/-	Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea
TD/-	United Nations Conference on Trade and Development
UNEP/-	United Nations Environment Programme
UNITAR/-	United Nations Institute for Training and Research

Many documents of the regional commissions bear special symbols. These are sometimes preceded by the following:

E/CEPAL/-	Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean
E/CN.14/-
E/ECA/-	Economic Commission for Africa
E/ECE/-	Economic Commission for Europe
E/ECWA/-	Economic Commission for Western Asia*
E/ESCAP/-	Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific

"L" in a symbol refers to documents of limited distribution. Such as draft resolution; "CONE." to documents of a conference; "INF." to those of general information. Summary records are designated by "SR.", verbatim records by "PV.", each followed by the meeting number.

United Nations sales publications each carry a sales number with the following components separated by periods: a capital letter indicating the language(s) of the publication; two arabic numerals indicating the year; a Roman numeral indicating the subject category; a capital letter indicating a subdivision of the category, if any; and an arabic numeral indicating the number of the publication within the category. Examples: E.85.V.7; E/F/R.85.II.E.8; E.85.IX.3.

*ECWA, on 26 July 1985, became ESCWA (Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia).

Report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization

Following is the text of the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization, submitted to the General Assembly and dated 4 September 1985. The Assembly took note of the report on 9 December 1985 when it adopted decision 40/417.

We face today a world of almost infinite promise which is also a world of potentially terminal danger. The choice between these alternatives is ours. The question is whether the Governments and peoples of the world are capable, without the spur of further disasters, of together making the right choice; for the choice and its implementation will, in many important ways, have to be collective. I believe that the United Nations and the way in which its Members decide to use it is—and will be—an essential element in this historic choice. The question I shall consider in my annual report on this fortieth anniversary of our Organization is, therefore, not so much the future of the United Nations as the future of humanity and of our planet and the role of the United Nations in that future.

The world which confronts us would certainly surprise the statesmen who produced the Charter of the United Nations 40 years ago. In those 40 years vast and fundamental changes have occurred in the map of our world and our scientific understanding of it, in international relations, in the nature of war and in the way we live. We are all, in one way or another, engaged in a search for new landmarks, better systems and effective adjustments.

We are living in a time of flux and uncertainty. This situation becomes particularly clear when the world is suddenly faced with a desperate problem, be it a new conflict, a great humanitarian disaster or the temporary paralysis caused by a premeditated act of violence.

There can be no question that, at the global level, between the poles of the massive and sophisticated nuclear weaponry of the major Powers and the desperation of the underprivileged or the dispossessed, there often lies a great vacuum of legitimacy and respected authority. Our most urgent challenge is to fill that vacuum through determined efforts to build a working international political system in which all participate—a system which will not only guarantee survival and order, but will make our planet run more evenly in the interests of all of its inhabitants.

It seems to me important to examine the concept of international authority, a concept which remains elusive in the present world. The only authority that existed in international affairs before the founding of the League of Nations and its successor, the United Nations, was the actual power of the strongest States or Empires. It was mainly the abuse of this power which led to two world wars in this century. It was to replace this state of affairs that the United Nations was founded. The founding of the United Nations, President Roosevelt stated after the Crimean Conference, “spells—and it ought to spell—the end of the system of unilateral action, exclusive alliances, and spheres of influence, and balances of power, and all the other expedients which have been tried for centuries and have always failed”.

What has happened since falls far short of that vision. It is certainly true that the two world wars, and the immense changes of the past 40 years, have clearly shown that the world cannot return to its old ways and that the system set forth in the Charter is a logical answer to the question of the maintenance of international peace and security and the joint promotion of economic development and social progress in the actual circumstances of our time. But the fact is that we have so far failed to achieve the political conditions, and in particular the requisite relationships among the most powerful States, in which this noble concept can be made to function for the benefit of all.

An illustration of this issue is the current difficulty in addressing the problem of terrorism. Much of the public discussion of this problem seems to assume that there are no existing international conventions on the subject. I need only mention here the three conventions adopted under the auspices of the International Civil Aviation Organization and the International Convention against the Taking of Hostages, adopted by the General Assembly in 1979, as providing at least some legal framework for much more effective action in combating hijacking and hostage-taking. The difficulty that does arise is the incapacity, or the unwillingness, of Governments to implement these conventions in specific cases. Once again the essential political conditions, the sense of solidarity and mutual confidence, that could make international instruments work is largely lacking.

The best place where those conditions could be cultivated and a sense of international solidarity developed is the United Nations. Indeed, that was one of the main original purposes of the Organization. Only when the minimum positive conditions exist in the relations between States will the concept of international authority begin to assume its rightful place in human affairs.

The United Nations cannot—and was not intended to—solve all the problems of the international community, but it is the best place to avoid the worst and to strive for improvement. And it has made a good start—far better, in fact, than is often recognized. Let me briefly substantiate this assertion.

After 40 years we have, for the first time in history, a virtually universal world Organization. We have, also for the first time in history, a world of independent sovereign States. Although there have been all too many conflicts since 1945, we have so far escaped a third world war and have perhaps learned more than we realize about techniques and expedients for avoiding such a terminal disaster. We have achieved unprecedented economic growth and social progress, in which developing countries have shared, although not yet in sufficient measure. We are making collective efforts to respond to the new generation of global problems which mostly stem from the need to protect the planet and its resources while providing for all of its people. There is a greater international responsiveness to humanitarian challenges wherever they occur. The protection of human rights, for all the violations that still persist, is becoming a world-wide concern. More international law affecting virtually all areas of human activity has been codified in the past 40 years than in all the previous years of recorded history. Much of it has been done under the auspices of the General Assembly.

The world is still, admittedly, a very imperfect, insecure, unjust, dangerous and, in all too many regions, impoverished place, but in the achievements I have mentioned above—and in many others—we have a foundation to build on. It is mainly up to Governments to decide if they wish to co-operate in building on this foundation a useful, coherent, effective institution, or whether they choose the alternative that may sometimes seem easier in the short run, each taking its own short-sighted and self-interested course. In that case, the promising foundations, established with so much thought and hard work, will end up surmounted by a rambling, contentious slum, the breeding ground of endless new troubles and disasters. Surely the first alternative is the one which must be chosen.

There are two basic functions which make the United Nations an essential enterprise. The first is to provide an instrument through which a collective effort can be made to meet emergencies and deal with current problems. These vary from international conflicts, through disputes among States, to humanitarian emergencies and sudden economic and social crises affecting millions of people.

The second function is of a more long-term nature and is related to the complex phase of political and economic development in which our world now finds itself. Throughout history there has been a natural political progression from small groups to larger ones—from family to tribe, to town, to city, to province, to nation state. This progression has taken place more or less spontaneously at different times in different regions, as economic life has become more complex, specialized and interdependent. Thus we have arrived at a world which is almost entirely composed of nation states. The sovereign independent State is the largest political entity and the main unit of the structure of the United Nations.

There are now, however, a number of problems and realities with which only a larger unity can effectively deal and where the requisite security or common interest can only be achieved through a collective effort of sovereign States. Many of these problems lend themselves best to subregional or regional co-operation in groups of nations with common interests, but many others already transcend the regional dimension. We have, whether we like it or not, created a world which is in many respects one world. On some major problems affecting all humanity we have reached a global stage where interdependence is a fact of life.

A basic role of the United Nations, therefore, is to serve as the foundation on which to build the international system of the future, a system fully recognizing national sovereignty but also recognizing that some of our present realities and concerns call urgently for something more.

Anyone who contemplates the prospects for the future of humanity must conclude that the two functions to which I have referred will become increasingly urgent, perhaps even indispensable to survival. In the 40 years since 1945 the population of the world has more than doubled. In the next 15 years it will increase by one third. Some of the strains and stresses in the world community will certainly stem from the pressure on institutions and resources resulting from this population explosion.

But we must also consider the many precarious balances of the claims and ambitions of nations: the unresolved disputes we carry with us into the future; the many smouldering conflicts of ideas, beliefs and interests in this world; the dizzy pace of the technological revolution both in production and in weapons; the widening gulf between abundance and absolute poverty; the web of economic ties which locks all parts of the world together; and the steadily increasing danger of deep harm to the biosphere on which life depends. Such a list—and it could easily be made longer—makes it clear that international co-operation, however complex and difficult to organize, is not a choice for the nations of the world, but a necessity.

However, if the United Nations is fully to play the role I have indicated in the development of the international system, it has to become a more effective institution. I should like to discuss this problem in the context of the principal responsibilities laid down in the Charter.

In terms of its first basic function of meeting emergencies and dealing with current problems, the maintenance of international peace and security is the primary purpose of the United Nations. In the minds of the writers of the Charter it was closely linked with progress in arms limitation and disarmament. Indeed, Article 26 of the Charter gives the Security Council a leading role in the establishment of a system for the regulation of armaments.

Forty years ago, with the lessons of the disastrous period leading up to the Second World War still vividly in mind, it was concluded that the old idea of achieving national security through a competitive armaments race led only to increasing general insecurity. That concept was therefore to be replaced by a collective system of international peace and security, involving in particular the most powerful nations, which would play a key role in the United Nations Security Council. In carrying out its duties the Security Council would, if necessary, and with the support of its members, use the whole range of measures set out in Chapters VI and VII of the Charter. With such a system in place and respected, it was believed that arms limitation and disarmament would naturally follow.

This noble and logical concept has not been realized for many practical and political reasons, not least the lack of that unanimity of the permanent members which was to have been its main driving force. How has the United Nations reacted to the problems posed by the absence of the key prerequisite of its system of international peace and security?

Obviously where international peace is concerned, the ultimate priority is the avoidance of a global conflagration. That is, of course, a main concern of the nuclear Powers themselves, but great dangers remain for all. These include accident, misapprehension or an unexpected concatenation of events involving the nuclear Powers in a way which they cannot evade. This latter situation could most likely develop from the escalation of a regional conflict.

If this brief analysis is valid, insurance against nuclear war requires measures to slow down the onrush of events in such a way as to allow Governments not to take irrevocable decisions and to gain time by substituting deliberation for force. Such expedients also include formulas which allow Governments to change policies that are bound to lead to confrontation. They include stabilizing mechanisms and negotiating processes by which crucial conflicts, if they cannot be resolved, can at least be contained and prevented from escalating. In the case of regional conflicts, especially in sensitive areas, forms of conflict control are often desirable. And overall, a central forum where opposing views can be freely expressed and third-party assistance is available is an important part of keeping the peace.

The Security Council has time and again slowed the onrush of events, gained time for vital changes in direction, produced face-saving mechanisms and substituted talk for violent action. It has striven for cease-fires and truces to prepare the way for negotiation. It has set important guidelines for the solution of complex problems and provided, with the co-operation of the Secretary-General, all manner of forms of conciliation, mediation, good offices, fact-finding, truce observation and quiet diplomacy. It has managed often to isolate regional conflicts from the area of confrontation of the nuclear Powers. It has provided a repository for the most dangerous of problems even though it could not solve them. It has frequently provided the framework for important combinations of bilateral and multilateral effort. It has acted as a safety net, a last resort to be used by Governments as the alternative to falling into the abyss of unconfined war. Finally, in the absence of the political conditions in which Chapter VII could be used, a system of conflict control has been pioneered, now known as peace-keeping, which has shown considerable promise and effectiveness in 13 separate operations.

Succeeding Secretaries-General have been intensively involved in all these efforts, and the role of the Secretary-General in peace and security matters has developed accordingly. I shall be dealing with this subject later on in relation to the future.

In a changeable and often unfavourable international climate, I believe the Council's record in its primary task stands up better and is a good deal more central and relevant than is sometimes recognized. Of course it is in no way up to the expectations of a chastened but hopeful world 40 years ago, and it does not include a full and effective use of the range of actions suggested by the Charter. But in the unfavourable political conditions in which the Security Council has mostly had to operate, it represents a considerable effort to find alternative ways for the maintenance of peace.

There is no denying that in the present circumstances the peace and security system of the United Nations has many weaknesses and many shortcomings. It suffers from lack of unanimity and collegial spirit in the Security Council. It suffers from a lack of respect for, and failure to co-operate with, the Council's decisions. It often suffers from a reluctance to pre-empt, or even to foresee, dangerous situations and to use the powers of the Council at a stage when problems might be more susceptible of treatment. It suffers from the Council's incapacity to approach some problems at all. But I maintain that in the real conditions of international life these 40 years—as opposed to various rhetorical versions of the same events—the Security Council has played an essential and often central role in providing stability and limiting conflict.

The question is how to enhance that role and bring the Council closer to the position prescribed for it in the Charter. It would obviously be extremely desirable to see that change in relationships among the permanent members that above all might restore the Council to the position it was originally intended to occupy. But surely, in the mean while, there are ways in which the Council could improve its capacity along the lines on which it has been working for many years.

In my previous annual reports, and especially in the report for 1982, I have made a number of suggestions on this score. I shall not repeat such suggestions here, although I hope that Governments will see fit to act on some of them. On the occasion of the fortieth anniversary, however, I shall make a simpler set of suggestions.

First, I would suggest that a determined and conscious effort be made by members of the Security Council, and especially the permanent members, to use their membership to make the Council more the guardian of peace it was set up to be and less the battleground on which to fight out political and ideological differences which are not directly relevant to the issue under discussion—in other words, to give matters of international peace and security priority over bilateral differences.

Secondly, I suggest that the Security Council should, in the near future, make a deliberate and concerted effort to solve one or two of the major problems before it by making fuller use of the measures available to it under the Charter.

Thirdly, the membership as a whole might reaffirm Charter obligations, especially those relating to the non-use of force or the threat of force, the peaceful settlement of disputes, resort to the mechanism set out in the Charter for the settlement of disputes and respect for the decisions of the Security Council.

In the present circumstances these suggestions may to some seem simplistic. But in our nuclear age there is nothing more dangerous than failing to make the collective system of international peace and security work. The United Nations is in no way a super-State. It is an organization of sovereign independent States. The Organization has no sovereignty of its own. Sovereignty remains entirely vested in the individual Member States unless they decide otherwise. The Organization's function, and hence that of the Secretary-General, is therefore to harmonize, to encourage and to initiate. But the implementation, the drive, must come from the Members. When this drive does come, it can achieve remarkable results. I would like to see this drive, this collective will, directed to the key function of the United Nations, the maintenance of international peace and security. Next year, 1986, has been designated the International Year of Peace. Let us try to make this designation a call for serious reflection and action.

Without collective determination and the acknowledgement of a minimum common interest in survival, there can be no meaningful progress in disarmament. International insecurity and the arms race, with the fear of its possible extension to new areas, create a relentless vicious spiral. Where the arms race is concerned, it cannot be sufficiently emphasized that the quest for advantage is illusory. In the nuclear era it also places all people at risk and puts in doubt the lives of future generations.

Governments have to find the courage to take the first steps. We should recall the vision that led to such advances as the Partial Test-Ban Treaty some 20 years ago. Today, a clear and vital signal of humanity's willingness to confront the nuclear challenge would be through agreement on a comprehensive test-ban treaty. Impeding as it would the ceaseless technological refinement of nuclear weapons, its adoption would help to break the sequence that threatens our very existence. There are other areas deserving of urgent attention—nuclear-weapon-free zones, for example.

While the fear of nuclear weapons is pervasive because of their potentially global devastating effects, it is conventional weapons that every day claim countless lives. Those who engage in and fuel the arms trade bear a particularly heavy responsibility. The conventional arms race, moreover, squanders precious economic resources. We must push for practical measures for multilateral disarmament, including regional plans, bearing in mind the link between disarmament and development.

Bilateral negotiations between the great Powers are clearly of crucial importance to the future of all peoples as well as their own. In this connection, I am sure that we all share the profound hope that the forthcoming meeting between the leaders of the Soviet Union and the United States will contribute to a reduction of tension and to progress on disarmament, as well as on other important matters.

At the same time, I wish to emphasize that the United Nations can and must contribute to progress in disarmament. The Conference on Disarmament affords a unique multilateral arena for discussions on arms limitation and disarmament. Indeed the Organization has a comprehensive responsibility for restraining dangerous trends in this field—for example, in regard to chemical weapons.

I believe that the Organization's ability to assist in verification and compliance arrangements should also be actively explored. The International Atomic Energy Agency has unique experience in monitoring non-proliferation compliance and ensuring the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. This expertise could be built on and expanded to provide a monitoring capability for nuclear-arms agreements. Suggestions have also been made, and should be further considered, for the United Nations to verify compliance through seismic stations, through on-site inspection or through satellite observation.

Many of the greatest hopes of mankind focus on economic and social progress, which must remain a primary goal of the United Nations system. Much progress has been made in the past 40 years, but many worries and uncertainties now prevail about risks of stagnation or even regression in some parts of the world.

There is no denying that for some time now the world economy has been functioning in an uneven and unsatisfactory way. In industrial countries the wave of high technology promises great affluence but also causes overcapacity, obsolescence and unemployment. Many developing countries, apart from basic problems of development, are crippled by their debt burdens which have been compounded by the rise in international interest rates. But all these difficulties, which are these days often euphemistically described as adjustment problems, seem to be part of one great process of global adjustment which is made rather more difficult by the inclination of many countries to resort to protectionism or unilateral exchange rate policies to solve their own problems at the expense of other countries.

It was this kind of short-sighted economic nationalism that brought the world economy to a collapse in the 1930s. This was why, along with the foundation of the United Nations, a great effort was made to set up a system of specialized organizations in the areas of money, finance and trade.

The deliberations in the United Nations on world economic affairs are seldom conducted among those who are ultimately responsible for these issues within their own Governments. Finance ministries and central banks are represented in other international forums, such as the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, whose functions are exclusively the consideration of economic, financial and monetary issues.

And yet it has become increasingly clear in recent years that economic, financial, monetary and trade issues are so interrelated and are of such profound political and social importance that they can only be dealt with effectively as part of a wider political process. In the case of international development this was recognized in the creation of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development as well as the call for a new international economic order, but it is now true of an even broader range of issues. This development must be reflected in the approach of the United Nations and in the nature of governmental representation in it if the efforts on problems which affect virtually all humanity are to be relevant and well conceived.

The need for international co-operation in economic affairs more and more cuts across traditional sectoral boundaries as represented nationally by different ministries and internationally by different specialized agencies. What is required in many cases is a more effective and pragmatic use of the United Nations as a forum for integrating practical effort. This in no sense detracts from the importance of the work of the specialized agencies—on the contrary, it should enhance their effectiveness and relevance. A parallel co-ordinating effort is necessary at the national level. There is a need for governmental ministries to act in concert with each other towards agreed objectives, if the international system is to perform effectively.

The Economic and Social Council should have a useful function to serve in exploring new needs and opportunities for joint international action. An effort is being made by its members to make the Council more effective, and by the Secretariat to enhance the quality of support. While some progress has been made, much remains to be done if the Council is to fulfil the great task allotted to it in the Charter and to indicate with clarity the directions and the spirit in which we should all act together.

We are facing economic changes of such magnitude and complexity that no country can adjust to them in isolation. We see this, for example, in attempts to protect domestic jobs from import competition, which result in the exporting of unemployment. What is clearly required is a wider vision and more dynamic understanding of the global nature of the problems we are facing. Such a vision has to be based on the open recognition of interdependence and the practical necessity of a fair sharing of burdens and of the accommodation of others. The ultimate rewards of such a system, for example, fuller use of resources, less unemployment and greater economic efficiency and social justice, would be immense. Unfortunately, the difficulty of getting such an approach generally accepted is also immense.

The international debt situation is particularly alarming. Many of the debtor countries are now again facing very weak export markets. Commodity prices are lower in real terms than they have been since the 1930s and are still declining. But interest rates remain high, and there seems to be no tendency for new lending to resume; if anything, the opposite. To adjust to the drying-up of bank lending, many debtor countries are cutting their imports, their living standards and their development programmes to the point where social, and even political, consequences have become extremely serious. Furthermore, the loss of markets weakens the fragile recovery in the industrial countries.

There is a strong mutual interest in resolving the debt crisis. However, the debt problem illustrates the inconsistencies which short-circuit attempts to move in a positive direction. While efforts are being made to reschedule debts over longer periods to alleviate the burdens, elsewhere protectionist measures are being taken which nullify those efforts. I see a strong need for a joint, comprehensive and speedy examination of all aspects of this situation, including the political ones.

The promotion of better understanding of world economic and social problems is an essential task of the United Nations and other international agencies. There are some encouraging experiences in this field. The series of conferences on global problems sponsored by the United Nations over the past 15 years has certainly been an innovation in raising knowledge and consciousness of problems and trying to develop a concerted approach to them. Current international efforts to come to grips with the problems of Africa also show a willingness to apply the skill and resources of the international community to a particular series of problems.

In the economic as in the political sphere, we are faced with the necessity of making our institutions relevant and effective in the realities of our time. We have to learn to manage our increasing economic interdependence. This is an enormous and daunting task. But the failure to face up to it can have results in terms of economic and social decline and chaos, which, in their own way and in the circumstances of our time, can be just as serious and debilitating as a failure to evolve a collective system of international peace and security in a nuclear age.

Today international co-operation is recognized as indispensable even in matters where not long ago it was thought to be Utopian. In social and economic development, the achievements of United Nations programmes and agencies are universally recognized. The force of necessity has made the United Nations system a global source of advice and assistance, co-operation and co-ordination in all areas where Governments, whatever their philosophical differences, have to act together.

It is ironic that, as we enter a phase in history in which the practical necessity of co-operative internationalism is so patent, there should, in some quarters at least, be a retreat from it. Questioning of international organizations striving to create greater order in the world polity and economy is widespread, and the United Nations is the subject of especially heavy criticism. We need to examine this phenomenon and try to understand it. Surely the fortieth anniversary is a good time to take a collective look at this problem and the role of Member States in addressing it.

There is no question that the difficulties of making the United Nations work to their satisfaction have an important bearing on the attitude of some Governments towards the Organization. Certainly the new complexity of the expanded membership and new voting patterns, as well as instances where division and conflict have been highlighted at the expense of broad areas of agreement and common interest, have had an impact. In these circumstances there has been a tendency to make the United Nations a scapegoat for current problems and confusions and to see it as the symbol of a lack of international authority and responsibility, rather than as an instrument for co-operation in addressing the current problems of a newly global society.

It is the General Assembly, the main representative organ of the United Nations, which inevitably carries the weight of much of the criticism of the United Nations. Only in the General Assembly can the world be seen in its full variety, and it is there that differences and conflicts are highlighted in a particularly dramatic way. The General Assembly, when all is said and done, is the first approximation of a town meeting of the world. Far less well known is the painstaking work carried on within the framework of the Assembly in codifying international law and standards of behaviour and in focusing and maintaining attention on vital issues.

Many efforts have been made over the years to reform the General Assembly and to streamline and rationalize its procedures. The truth is that the Assembly represents the universality of the membership and has a very broad and diverse agenda. It is therefore difficult to streamline it without losing its main point. There are certainly, however, ways in which the performance of the General Assembly could be progressively improved.

It seems to me that essential steps in improving the political process in the General Assembly should include a much greater degree of intergovernmental consultation before each session, and a determined attempt to hammer out consensus on important issues and to avoid divisive rhetoric. Otherwise the quality of the political process in the General Assembly will deteriorate.

The responsibilities and duties which are inherent in the functions of the Secretary-General or are delegated to him represent a high challenge. The functions of the Secretary-General and the Secretariat have evolved to a notable extent in the first 40 years of the Organization. Both are based on the concept of independent and objective international service.

I wish only to make one observation about the evolution of the Secretary-Generalship and its relation to the overall development of international institutions. While greatly appreciative of the co-operation and understanding extended to the Secretary-General and the trust bestowed on him, I am sometimes concerned that the delegation of responsibility to the Secretary-General may, in certain instances, have the effect of diminishing the effort that is expected of Member States under the Charter. This will not serve the effective development of the United Nations as a political institution.

That being said, I nevertheless believe that it would be in the interests of the Organization as a whole if the Secretary-General's capacity to serve as an objective third party were to be further developed. There is much, of course, to be said for quiet diplomacy, but sometimes more is required. I am thinking in particular of a wider and earlier use of fact-finding and observation. I am also thinking of the need to survey more regularly and systematically the world-wide state of international peace and security—a task in which the Security Council and the Secretary-General should be jointly involved. The best radar in the world is not reliable or effective unless it makes systematic surveys of the surrounding space. The same applies, it seems to me, to the task of maintaining international peace.

The basic elements of the international civil service—independence from national pressures, efficiency, competence and integrity—must remain the guiding tenets of the Secretariat. Their validity has been proven over the years, especially in critical and controversial situations. The Secretariat must continually strive to be the dependable arm required to implement the evolving needs of the Organization.

I am, however, concerned with the question of what policies and methods can best achieve the standards of efficiency and integrity which are required for the international civil service. The development of such a service using personnel from well-over 100 Member States is no easy task. I am certainly not satisfied that we have in all cases found the right solutions, the right rules or the most effective organization for the Secretariat. I am in favour of pursuing our efforts to improve the existing administrative, personnel and budgetary practices of the United Nations. However, I believe that the best results can, and should, be achieved within the framework of the Secretary-General's authority under Chapter XV of the Charter. This is essential both for proper management and in the interests of the Organization as a whole.

I have repeatedly emphasized the need for the Secretariat to explore all avenues for utilizing the Organization's resources in the most efficient manner, and to provide an equitable role for women in the Secretariat. I have initiated a series of management-improving measures, and this is a process that will be pursued on a continuing basis. It is particularly essential, in times of change, constantly to evaluate and reassess programmes and structures and to institute such reforms as may be required.

In the preparation of my proposals for the current and forthcoming biennial programme budgets, I have endeavoured to reassure all Member States of my commitment to achieve the delivery of programmes entrusted to the Secretariat in the most cost-effective way possible. I am bound, however, to express my deep concern at the practice of certain Member States of selectively withholding their duly assessed contributions. This can only have a most detrimental effect on the future viability of our Organization.

In thinking of the future of the Organization, one is struck by the fact that the United Nations is almost unique among political institutions in having little direct contact with its basic constituency, "the peoples of the United Nations" who address us in the first words of the Charter. This is a delicate matter, since the independent national sovereignty of Member States is a primary prerequisite of the Charter.

Nevertheless the United Nations deals with more and more issues which are important internationally and also have strong domestic implications. Only the support of national domestic constituencies in each Member State can assure the necessary follow-up which will lead to effective action on such issues. Here a far greater involvement with non-governmental organizations in the broadest sense of the term could go a long way towards a solution. We have had an indication of their enormous direct value and influence in a series of global conferences as well as in the remarkable world-wide efforts by voluntary agencies, entertainers and others in support of relief in Africa and elsewhere.

We also need to encourage the concept of practical international service in a manner broader and more systematic than has yet been the case. In particular more effort should be made to devise ways of engaging young people directly in matters of concern to the world community.

I have, in a series of other reports to the General Assembly and the Security Council, commented in detail on the major political issues with which the United Nations is concerned, in many of which the Secretary-General has particular responsibilities. I shall not, therefore, repeat myself here nor deal with the specific situations covered by those reports.

I should like, however, to mention certain other great issues of our time which have an important bearing on the future. Perhaps the broadest and most complex of these issues is the question of human rights, which affects everyone.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted nearly 37 years ago, must be counted as one of the great achievements of the United Nations. The Declaration and the Covenants and conventions that grew out of it provided the world, for the first time, with an international code of human rights which establishes as norms of international law the way in which the State must treat individuals. Specific mechanisms have also been established by the United Nations to monitor compliance with these agreements, and we are increasingly providing advisory services and technical assistance to Governments in the field of human rights.

Yet we must recognize that, despite these advances, there is a continuing need to keep a close watch over the way the rights and freedoms of the individual are respected by States. Massive violations of human rights continue to take place, often of tragic proportions. Many States have not yet ratified the relevant international conventions, nor brought their laws or institutions into conformity with the international standards proclaimed by the United Nations. Persecution for political, religious or racial reasons continues. Minorities and indigenous populations are often inadequately protected. There are also instances in which the co-operation of Governments with the United Nations and its organs leaves much to be desired.

Let us in this fortieth anniversary year rededicate ourselves, jointly and individually, to the task of achieving the unimpeded application of the Universal Declaration and the International Covenants. To this end, I appeal to those States that have not yet ratified the Covenants to do so. I appeal to all States to support, strengthen and take part in the procedures which have been established to examine violations of human rights, and assure their protection.

A particularly important aspect of human rights is racial discrimination, which should have no place in any form in our society and which represents the most dangerous of social and political poisons. In one particular and extreme instance, the policy of apartheid in South Africa, the unwillingness to undertake timely, remedial measures has now produced an ominous and violent situation, on which the Security Council has recently pronounced itself. I need hardly reiterate my strongly held views on the abhorrent system of apartheid and the massive human tragedy which has resulted from it. I hope that, even at this very late hour, steps can be taken and contacts established which may avert the worst. I feel obliged to add here that the failure to bring Namibia to independence through the United Nations Plan is, together with apartheid, a fundamental reason for the tension and suffering in southern Africa.

An immense and widespread social evil is the burgeoning problem of narcotic drugs, which ruins the lives of uncounted millions of individuals, and even undermines the integrity and stability of Governments. In large areas of the world the plague of drug abuse and illicit trafficking, fuelled by the immense profits which they generate, has reached an emergency stage. As this problem increases in magnitude, despite the growing efforts of Governments to deal with it, even more attention must be given to improving the co-ordination of efforts so that an effective range of strategies may be developed to meet the new challenges posed. Clearly, the drug problem can no longer be regarded as a merely social, and largely domestic, concern.

It is against this background that I have proposed that the first global conference should be convened to deal with all aspects of drug abuse and illicit trafficking. I trust that such a conference would be action-oriented. It should serve to raise the level of world-wide awareness of the escalating problems of drug abuse, mobilize the full potential of the United Nations system, and result in a programme of action at the international, regional and national levels. The moment has arrived for the international community to expand its efforts in a global undertaking to meet this deadly peril.

Acts of terrorism have now spread to virtually all parts of the globe. They are exceptionally difficult to cope with since they involve desperate acts by desperate people willing to violate national and international law regardless of the risk to their own lives. The most tragic aspect of this problem is the increasing loss of innocent civilian lives, which I have repeatedly condemned. As indicated earlier, some of the necessary international legal instruments are in place, and it is time for concerted efforts to be made by Governments to implement them. In this context, Governments may wish to consider what further measures of international co-operation could be effectively devised.

I believe that in concerting an international response to great common problems we may also begin to develop the kind of social and political solidarity and mutual confidence which will eventually serve well in the more traditional field of political problems. Several encouraging examples of such responses do exist, and I want to recall some of them very briefly:

International efforts for the relief of refugees and their voluntary return or resettlement represent one of the most practical expressions of international solidarity;

The steps taken to create more adequate food security for all countries have brought us forward in the struggle to free the world from hunger;

The great endeavour to bring immunization to all children in the world by 1990 now seems capable of realization if there is a will to make the final effort. I urge the leaders of the world to give full support to this vital and universal enterprise with the potential for saving countless young lives.

In these fields and many others the range of the possible has steadily widened as international co-operation has taken its place as a permanent element in the governance of the world.

In another important instance, the World Conference of the United Nations Decade for Women, which was held at Nairobi to review the achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women, completed its work with greater success than some had anticipated and, to my satisfaction, adopted by consensus an important set of propositions for the future. Evidently, the enormous importance of the subject finally carried the day. It is hard as yet to judge the full significance and impact of this dynamic and widely representative gathering. One thing is certain: the full and equal participation of women in all aspects of human endeavour, which throughout history has been obscured and suppressed, has assumed an importance and a vitality which can give an irresistible momentum to the various practical efforts by which the Nairobi Conference must be followed up. I hope it will also add a healthy new dimension to political thinking and action world-wide.

I have previously mentioned international responsiveness to human disasters. Although the African continent today attracts our most urgent attention, the international community was slow to respond to the initial alarms signalling the drought-induced crises that were affecting several African nations. For many thousands of people, it responded too late.

But for the vast majority of the 30 million Africans who have suffered from the most widespread, devastating drought in memory, a unique partnership between the Governments of affected African countries and the international community has brought life and hope. This partnership has managed to arrest a disaster of unprecedented proportions that would otherwise have occurred and has almost certainly saved several million lives. The United Nations has played, and will in various ways continue to play, a central—indeed indispensable—role in this great example of international humanitarian co-operation.

Millions of Africans still face a difficult and uncertain future, a future which could be more hopeful if the partnership that has been forged in response to Africa's emergency needs is maintained through the critically important recovery period now at hand. We must be prepared to plan and carry through sustained development assistance programmes designed to prevent the recurrence of such tragedies and deal with their fundamental causes.

In our journey of 40 years we have had many experiences, some encouraging, others frustrating, and many that have been deeply enlightening. We have taken on many activities and some excess baggage. In looking forward let us decide which activities are really useful and what baggage we can well do without.

Let us remember that we have created the means to destroy ourselves, and that a great effort of will and intelligence is going to be needed to build a system which will effectively preserve peace and which will work in the interests of all the peoples of this Earth. Let us look at the future as an opportunity, not as a potential disaster. Let us remember all the things we have in common as human beings, all the marvels that the human mind has created and all the splendid diversity of our world.

Let us above all, on this occasion, look at the United Nations as its founders looked at it, as the practical hope for the future and not merely as the unhappy bearer of the burdens of the past. We must be realistic about our difficulties and the dangers that we face. But let us also resolve to find the ways by which, together, we can surmount them.

Chapter I

Disarmament

The General Assembly, at its 1985 regular session, adopted a record number of 66 resolutions on arms limitation and disarmament, reflecting, in most part, the persisting differences of approach to substantive issues. While preparatory work began earlier in the year for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, scheduled for mid-1986, the Assembly decided that it would, in that year, set the date of its third special session on disarmament and establish a United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa. Further, it requested the Secretary-General to prepare two studies—one on climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter, and the other, an update on economic and social consequences of the arms race and of military expenditures.

The Conference on Disarmament—the 40-nation negotiating body at Geneva—continued working towards a future chemical-weapons convention, prevention of an arms race in outer space, nuclear-war prevention and related issues, and a ban on radiological weapons. The United Nations Disarmament Commission, a deliberative body composed of all United Nations Member States, considered three new substantive items—review of the role of the United Nations in disarmament, curbing the naval arms race, and review and appraisal of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade.

Among other developments, the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons took place in August/September at Geneva. Outside the United Nations framework, the USSR and the United States began, at Geneva in March, bilateral negotiations on both strategic and intermediate-range space and nuclear arms; and the heads of the respective Governments, at a November summit meeting, agreed to accelerate the work. The South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty, prepared by the South Pacific Forum, was opened for signature.

Comprehensive approaches to disarmament

The commitment to general and complete disarmament was reaffirmed in 1985 by all Member States, which acknowledged, at the same time, that tangible measures towards that aim had been at best partial and modest.

In addition to following up on the recommendations adopted at the two disarmament special sessions in 1978 and 1982, the General Assembly examined the general question of disarmament and international security, and the progress made in implementing the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade. The Assembly requested the Disarmament Commission to continue its review, begun in 1985, of the United Nations role in disarmament, and its consideration of naval arms reduction. Further, it urged the Conference on Disarmament to continue consideration of measures to prevent an arms race on the sea-bed, and to submit, in 1986, a draft comprehensive programme of disarmament.

Different approaches persisted in 1985 on a proposal to hold a world disarmament conference. Studies were completed by two governmental expert groups—one on the naval arms race, naval forces and naval arms systems, and the other on concepts of security.

Report of the Secretary-General. In his 1985 annual report to the General Assembly on the work of the Organization (see p. 3), the Secretary-General emphasized that, in the nuclear age, the quest for military advantage not only was illusory but also endangered the entire human race and its future, and that only collective determination and the acknowledgement of a minimum common interest in survival could lead to progress in disarmament. He expressed hope that the bilateral talks between the USSR and the United States would contribute to such progress, called for agreement on a comprehensive test-ban treaty, and urged exploration of the United Nations ability to assist in verification and compliance arrangements, including the possibility of expanding the expertise of the International Atomic Energy Agency to provide a monitoring capability for nuclear-arms agreements. Noting that, against the looming fear of global nuclear devastation, it was conventional weapons that daily claimed countless lives, the Secretary-General called for practical measures for multilateral disarmament, including regional plans, bearing also in mind the link between disarmament and development.

Communications. In 1985, the Secretary-General received several communications, from countries in groups or individually, calling for arms control and disarmament.

In a declaration transmitted by Bulgaria,<sup>(1)</sup> the Political Consultative Committee of the States parties to the 1955 Warsaw Treaty of Friendship, Co-operation and Mutual Assistance (Sofia, 22 and 23 October) called for, among other things, reducing nuclear weapons and eliminating chemical weapons in Europe and freezing, at the 1 January 1986 level, the armed forces of the USSR and the United States, including those outside their national territories.

On 9 May,<sup>(2)</sup> Czechoslovakia transmitted a statement delivered to the Disarmament Commission by a group of Eastern European socialist countries and Mongolia, calling for practical results in that body on the fortieth anniversary of the victory over nazism and fascism.

The United Kingdom transmitted a communiqué issued by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the North Atlantic Council (Brussels, Belgium, 12 and 13 December),<sup>(3)</sup> in which they expressed their commitment to substantive progress in arms control, based on the criteria of strengthened stability, equitable and significant reductions, and effective verification, and expressed their concern over chemical weapons.

Indonesia transmitted the Declaration of the Commemorative Meeting in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Asian-African Conference (Bandung, 24 and 25 April),<sup>(4)</sup> in which the participants, among other things, expressed concern at the accelerated arms race and the escalation of global military expenditures, and urged the nuclear-weapon States to cease all nuclear-weapon tests and production and to negotiate on nuclear disarmament.

In the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September),<sup>(5)</sup> transmitted by Angola on 5 November, the participants called for a wide range of disarmament measures and underlined the central role and primary responsibility of the United Nations regarding disarmament.

On 14 October,<sup>(6)</sup> Togo transmitted two documents adopted at the Ministerial Regional Conference on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa (Lomé, 13-16 August)—the Lomé Declaration on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa, and a Programme of Action for Peace, Security and Co-operation in Africa. The Declaration noted that the current security requirements of African States imposed extremely heavy burdens to the detriment of their social and economic development.

Romania transmitted two appeals for peace and disarmament: a 29 March appeal<sup>(7)</sup> by its Grand National Assembly to the legislative bodies of the USSR, the United States, all European countries and Canada; and a 23 May appeal<sup>(8)</sup> from its Socialist Democracy and Unity Front to the peoples of Europe, Canada and the United States.

On 24 June,<sup>(9)</sup> China transmitted extracts of speeches made that month by the Chairman of its Central Military Commission and by the General Secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee, stressing China's opposition to the arms race and announcing reductions in its armed forces by 1 million men. On 21 October,<sup>(10)</sup> China transmitted to the Chairman of the General Assembly's First Committee proposals for measures to promote disarmament and reduce the danger of war, focusing on nuclear and conventional disarmament, outer space and chemical weapons.

The USSR transmitted several statements by the General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, among them a 13 November statement<sup>(11)</sup> to a delegation of the Nobel Prize winners' congress, in which reference was made to disarmament issues, including an arms race in outer space and chemical weapons; and a 27 November statement on domestic and foreign policy,<sup>(12)</sup> at a Supreme Soviet session, in which he appraised the results and significance of the USSR-United States summit meeting at Geneva.

Some communications submitted under the item on general and complete disarmament also dealt with specific conflicts or with the Assembly's annual review of its 1970 Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security (see p. 116).

Follow-up to the General Assembly's special sessions on disarmament

In 1985, the General Assembly adopted 27 resolutions and one decision under the two agenda items concerning follow-up to its two special sessions devoted to disarmament: the first held in 1978 as the Assembly's tenth special session,<sup>(13)</sup> and the second held in 1982 as the twelfth special session.<sup>(14)</sup> At the 1978 session, the Assembly had adopted a Final Document,<sup>(15)</sup> and in 1982, a Concluding Document.<sup>(16)</sup>

This section deals with resolutions concerning: the Disarmament Commission (40/152 F); the Conference on Disarmament (40/152 M); implementation of the recommendations of the tenth special session (40/152 J and N); international co-operation for disarmament (40/152 I); implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade (40/152 L); verification (40/152 O); and the convening of a third special session on disarmament (40/151 I). Others dealing with various specific issues are discussed elsewhere in the chapter.

Disarmament Commission

The Disarmament Commission, composed of all United Nations Member States, at its 1985 session in New York, held 17 plenary meetings between 6 and 31 May.<sup>(17)</sup> It also met on 2 December to organize its work and elect officers for 1986.

Its agenda included items on aspects of the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament; reduction of military budgets; and South Africa's nuclear capability. It also considered three new substantive items—review of the role of the United Nations in disarmament, curbing the naval arms race, and review and appraisal of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade.<sup>(18)</sup>

The Commission established a Committee of the Whole, which in turn set up a contact group to deal with aspects of the arms race and elaboration of a general approach to disarmament negotiations. In addition, a working group was established for each of the other agenda items, except for the naval arms race and review of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, to which the Commission devoted two plenary meetings each. Work on substantive items, other than on the review of the Declaration's implementation, remained inconclusive, and the groups recommended that the Commission either pursue its efforts to reach agreement or refer the questions concerned to the General Assembly's 1985 session. Details on the Commission's discussion of these questions can be found elsewhere in this chapter.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/152 F without vote.

In addition, the Assembly instructed the Commission on certain topics, among them: South Africa's nuclear capability (40/89 B), reduction of military budgets (40/91 A), the naval arms race (40/94 F and I), review of the United Nations role in disarmament (40/94 O), and implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade (40/152 L).

Conference on Disarmament

In 1985, the Conference on Disarmament, the 40-member multilateral negotiating body, met at Geneva from 5 February to 23 April and from 11 June to 30 August. (19) Holding 48 formal plenary meetings and 29 informal meetings, it considered a nuclear-test ban, cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, prevention of nuclear war, chemical weapons, prevention of an arms race in outer space, security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States, radiological weapons, and the proposed comprehensive programme of disarmament.

The Conference re-established ad hoc committees—on chemical weapons, on 7 February; radiological weapons, on 14 March; and security assurances to non-nuclear-weapon States, on 1 August—and established, on 29 March, a new subsidiary body on preventing an arms race in outer space. On 7 February, the Conference President noted that no subsidiary body need be re-established on the comprehensive programme of disarmament, on which work would begin at an appropriate time.

As regards the possibility of increasing its membership by four additional States, the Conference decided to continue consultations with a view to reporting its decision to the General Assembly in 1986. Consideration of its improved and effective functioning, to which one informal meeting was devoted in 1985, was to continue in 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted two resolutions on the work of the Conference on Disarmament: one on its report (40/152 M) and the other on participation in its work by non-members (40/152 J).

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 M by recorded vote.

Report of the Conference on Disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 34/83 B of 11 December 1979, 35/152 J of 12 December 1980, 36/92 F of 9 December 1981, 37/78 G of 9 December 1982, 38/183 I of 20 December 1983 and 39/148 N of 17 December 1984,

Recalling also the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, and the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral negotiating body on disarmament, should play the central role in substantive negotiations on priority questions of disarmament and on the implementation of the Programme of Action set forth in section III of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session,

Reaffirming that the establishment of ad hoc committees offers the best available machinery for the conduct of multilateral negotiations on items on the agenda of the Conference on Disarmament and contributes to the strengthening of the negotiating role of the Conference,

Expressing its satisfaction at the establishment within the Conference on Disarmament of an Ad Hoc Committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Deploring the fact that, despite the repeated requests of the General Assembly and the expressed wish of the great majority of members of the Conference on Disarmament, the establishment of an ad hoc committee on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and on nuclear disarmament was once again prevented during the 1985 session of the Conference,

Deploring also the fact that the Conference on Disarmament has not been enabled to set up ad hoc committees under item 1 of its agenda, entitled "Nuclear-test ban", and on the prevention of nuclear war,

Noting that some progress has been made in the negotiations on the elaboration of a draft convention on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction,

1. Expresses its deep concern and disappointment that the Conference on Disarmament has not been enabled, this year either, to reach concrete agreements on any disarmament issues to which the United Nations has assigned greatest priority and urgency and which have been under consideration for a number of years;

2. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to intensify its work, to further its mandate more earnestly through negotiations and to adopt concrete measures on the specific priority issues of disarmament on its agenda, in particular those relating to nuclear disarmament;

3. Once again urges the Conference on Disarmament to continue or to undertake, during its 1986 session, substantive negotiations on the priority questions of disarmament on its agenda, in accordance with the provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly and other resolutions of the Assembly on those questions;

4. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to provide the existing ad hoc committees, including the Ad Hoc Committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space, with appropriate negotiating mandates and to establish, as a matter of urgency, the ad hoc committees under item 1 of its agenda, entitled "Nuclear-test ban", on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament and on the prevention of nuclear war;

5. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to undertake, without further delay, negotiations with a view to elaborating a draft treaty on a nuclear-test ban;

6. Also urges the Conference on Disarmament to intensify further its work on the elaboration of a draft convention on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction;

7. Once again calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to organize its work in such a way as to concentrate most of its attention and time on substantive negotiations on priority issues of disarmament;

8. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to submit a report on its work to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Report of the Conference on Disarmament".

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 133-2-18 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/877/Add.1) by recorded vote (116-2-17), 18 November (meeting 40); 28-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.57), orally revised; agenda item 65 (b).

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom.

In the First Committee, Ireland orally proposed—and subsequently withdrew after an oral revision had been made by the draft's sponsors—amending the reference to a draft treaty in paragraph 5 from the original wording of "nuclear-weapon test ban" to "complete cessation of nuclear-test explosions".

Several States explained their abstention in the vote. The Netherlands held that the draft lacked impartiality and showed little respect for the rule of consensus by which the Conference operated and, by implication, for positions held by some delegations. The United Kingdom regretted that the sponsors had not sought to negotiate the draft's language to arrive at a consensus. While agreeing with a number of points covered in the text, Denmark found the procedure proposed for achieving nuclear disarmament hardly realistic, and Australia believed that the Geneva bilateral negotiations should be given a chance to succeed, before the Conference on Disarmament considered establishing an ad hoc committee on nuclear disarmament.

Brazil, one of the draft's sponsors, believed that Member States should not try to solve the substantive problems of the scope of a nuclear-test-ban treaty by Assembly resolutions; efforts should focus on negotiations of a treaty banning ongoing nuclear-weapon tests rather than curbing tests which were not currently carried out.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 J by recorded vote.

Implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the tenth special session

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/148 L of 17 December 1984,

Noting with concern that the problem identified in the above-mentioned resolution has not been alleviated,

Firmly convinced that all States have a vital interest in the success of disarmament negotiations,

Bearing in mind paragraph 28 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it affirmed that all States have the duty to contribute to the efforts in the field of disarmament and that all States have the right to participate in disarmament negotiations,

Recalling further its resolution 38/183 F of 20 December 1983, in which it called upon the Governments of all States to contribute substantially, inter alia, to halting and reversing the arms race, particularly in the nuclear field, and thus to reducing the danger of nuclear war,

1. Reiterates once more the right of all States not members of the Conference on Disarmament to participate in the work of the plenary sessions of the Conference on substantive questions;

2. Urges States members of the Conference on Disarmament not to misuse the rules of procedure of the Conference so as to prevent States not members from participating in the work of the Conference.

Abstaining: Austria, Belgium, Burma, Canada, Ethiopia, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, India, Iran, Italy, Luxembourg, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Pakistan, Paraguay, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

The recorded vote in the Committee was requested by the United States.

Iraq, introducing the draft, stated that the previous year's resolution with the same thrust<sup>(20)</sup> had not been implemented and that the right to speak or reply had been denied at the Conference's 1985 session because one member objected.

The United Kingdom wished to see all States participate in the disarmament process, but considered—as did Sweden—that participation in the Conference should be decided by that body based on its rules of procedure. Iran recalled that the Conference was a negotiating forum rather than a deliberative body.

France cautioned that paragraph 2 could be interpreted as an invitation to Conference members to reject its rules concerning adoption of decisions, and added that it would have preferred the Assembly to have expressed the hope that the Conference would respond favourably to non-members' requests to speak.

In 1985, the Assembly adopted a number of other resolutions concerning the Conference on Disarmament. It called on the Conference to take up specific topics, such as: cessation of nuclear-weapon test explosions (40/80 A), a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty (40/81), strengthening the security of non-nuclear-weapon States (40/85, 40/86), an arms race in outer space (40/87), banning nuclear-weapon tests (40/88), new types of weapons of mass destruction (40/90), chemical weapons (40/92 A-C), radiological weapons (40/94 D), a convention banning the use of nuclear weapons (40/151 F), non-use of nuclear weapons and prevention of nuclear war (40/152 A), nuclear weapons in all aspects (40/152 C), a comprehensive programme of disarmament (40/152 D), prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon (40/152 H), implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade (40/152 L), implementation of the recommendations of the tenth special Session (40/152 N), cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament (40/152 P) and the prevention of nuclear war (40/152 Q).

Implementation of the recommendations of the 1978 special session

The General Assembly adopted 17 resolutions and one decision in 1985 relating to the implementation of the recommendations and decisions adopted in 1978 at its tenth special session<sup>(13)</sup>—the first devoted to disarmament. They dealt with the non-use of nuclear weapons and prevention of nuclear war (40/152 A); bilateral nuclear-arms and space-arms negotiations (40/152 B); nuclear weapons in all aspects (40/152 C); a comprehensive programme of disarmament (40/152 D); Disarmament Week (40/152 E); the Disarmament Commission's report (40/152 F); climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter (40/152 G); prohibiting the nuclear neutron weapon (40/152 H), international co-operation for disarmament (40/152 I), implementing the 1978 special session's recommendations (40/152 J and N); United Nations disarmament studies (40/152 K); review and appraisal of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade (40/152 L); the Conference on Disarmament's report (40/152 M); verification (40/152 O); cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament (40/152 P); and prevention of nuclear war (40/152 Q). The decision (40/428) dealt with the work of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies.

In November, the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly a note<sup>(21)</sup> containing information received from the German Democratic Republic and the USSR, which had responded to an invitation in a 1984 Assembly resolution,<sup>(22)</sup> on implementation of the recommendations and decisions adopted at the 1978 special session, to supply information concerning disarmament and arms limitation negotiations outside the framework of the United Nations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly adopted on 16 December, on the recommendation of the First Committee, resolution 40/152 N by recorded vote.

Implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the tenth special session

The General Assembly,

Having reviewed the implementation of the recommendations and decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament, as well as the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament,

Recalling its resolutions S-10/2 of 30 June 1978, 34/83 C of 11 December 1979, 35/46 of 3 December 1980, 35/152 E of 12 December 1980, 36/92 M of 9 December 1981, 37/78 F of 9 December 1982, 38/183 H of 20 December 1983 and 39/148 O of 17 December 1984 and its decision S-12/24 of 10 July 1982,

Deeply concerned that no concrete results regarding the implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the tenth special session have been realized in the course of more than seven years since that session, that in the mean time the arms race, particularly in its nuclear aspect, has gained in intensity, that there has been further deployment of nuclear weapons in some parts of the world, that annual global military expenditures are estimated to have reached the staggering figure of $1,000 billion, that mankind is faced with a real danger of spreading the arms race into outer space, that urgent measures to prevent nuclear war and for disarmament have not been adopted and that continued colonial domination and foreign occupation, open threats, pressures and military intervention against independent States and violations of the fundamental principles of the Charter of the United Nations have taken place, posing the most serious threat to international peace and security,

Convinced that the renewed escalation of the nuclear-arms race, in both the quantitative and the qualitative dimensions, as well as reliance on nuclear deterrence and on the use of nuclear weapons, has heightened the risk of the outbreak of nuclear war and led to greater insecurity and instability in international relations,

Further convinced that international peace and security can only be ensured through general and complete disarmament under effective international control and that one of the most urgent tasks is to halt and reverse the arms race and to undertake concrete measures of disarmament, particularly nuclear disarmament, and that, in this respect, the nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States have the primary responsibility,

Believing that the preservation of the existing bilateral, regional and global system of arms limitation and disarmament agreements and the strict observance of such agreements by their parties are important elements of disarmament efforts at all levels,

Noting with great concern that no real progress in disarmament negotiations has been achieved in the course of several years, which has rendered the current international situation even more dangerous and insecure,

Expressing the desire that the launching of negotiations between the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics would produce agreements on preventing an arms race in outer space and on significant reductions in their strategic and intermediate-range nuclear-weapon systems, as well as that the results of these negotiations would lead to a relaxation of tension in their mutual relations and in the world at large,

Considering that bilateral negotiations should not in any way diminish the urgent need to initiate and pursue multilateral negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament and on the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Stressing that it is more than ever imperative in the present circumstances to give a new impetus to negotiations on disarmament, in particular nuclear disarmament, at all levels and to achieve genuine progress in the immediate future and that all States should refrain from any actions which have or may have negative effects on the outcome of disarmament negotiations,

Reaffirming that the United Nations has a central role and primary responsibility in the sphere of disarmament,

Stressing that the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, which was unanimously and categorically reaffirmed by all Member States at the twelfth special session as the comprehensive basis for efforts towards halting and reversing the arms race, retains all its validity and that the objectives and measures contained therein still represent one of the most important and urgent goals to be achieved,

1. Expresses its grave concern over the acceleration and intensification of the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race, which threaten international peace and security and increase the danger of nuclear war;

2. Calls upon all States, in particular nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, to take urgent measures in order to promote international security on the basis of disarmament, to halt and reverse the arms race and to launch a process of genuine disarmament;

3. Invites all States, particularly nuclear-weapon States and especially those among them which possess the most important nuclear arsenals, to take urgent measures with a view to implementing the recommendations and decisions contained in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, as well as to fulfilling the priority tasks set forth in the Programme of Action contained in section III of the Final Document;

4. Calls upon great Powers to pursue their negotiations in a constructive and accommodating spirit and taking into account the interest of the entire international community in order to halt the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race, and to achieve disarmament;

5. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to proceed urgently to negotiations on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament and on the prevention of nuclear war, to undertake and intensify negotiations on the prevention of an arms race in outer space and to elaborate drafts of treaties on a nuclear-weapon-test ban and on a complete and effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction;

6. Calls upon the Disarmament Commission to intensify its work in accordance with its mandate and to continue improving its work with a view to making concrete recommendations on specific items on its agenda;

7. Invites all States engaged in disarmament and arms limitation negotiations outside the framework of the United Nations to keep the General Assembly and the Conference on Disarmament informed on the status and/or results of such negotiations, in conformity with the relevant provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the tenth special session".

Norway voted against the draft as it objected to the fourth preambular paragraph. Similarly, Denmark, not sharing the security perception endorsed in that paragraph, would have voted against the paragraph, had a separate vote been taken; it voted in favour of the text as a whole, however, since it subscribed to the draft's main thrust.

France, abstaining in the Committee and subsequently voting against in the plenary Assembly, concluded that it could not support a text challenging nuclear deterrence, which formed part of its defence and security policy.

Implementation of the recommendations of the 1982 special session

In 1985, the Assembly adopted nine resolutions concerning the implementation of the Concluding Document<sup>(16)</sup> of its 1982 second special session devoted to disarmament. They were on: disarmament and international security (40/151 A), the World Disarmament Campaign (40/151 B and D), a nuclear-arms freeze (40/151 C), a nuclear-weapons freeze (40/151 E), a convention banning the use of nuclear weapons (40/151 F), a United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa (40/151 G), the United Nations disarmament fellowship programme (40/151 H) and a third special session on disarmament (40/151 I).

Third special session

The Assembly, which had agreed in 1984 to set the date in 1985 for its third special session on disarmament,<sup>(23)</sup> postponed its decision on the date for another year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/151 I without vote.

Convening of the third special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the decision adopted at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, concerning the convening of the third special session devoted to disarmament,

Recalling its resolution 38/73 I of 15 December 1983, in which it decided that the third special session devoted to disarmament should be held not later than 1988,

Recalling also its resolution 39/63 I of 12 December 1984,

Desiring to contribute to the furthering and broadening of positive processes initiated through the laying down of the foundations of an international disarmament strategy at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament,

Decides to set, at its forty-first session, the date of the third special session of the General Assembly devoted to disarmament and to establish the Preparatory Committee for the third special session.

International co-operation for disarmament

As it had done annually since 1981,<sup>(24)</sup> the General Assembly, in 1985, again called for implementation of its 1979 Declaration on International Co-operation for Disarmament.<sup>(25)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the Assembly, as recommended by the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 I by recorded vote.

International co-operation for disarmament

The General Assembly,

Stressing again the urgent need for an active and sustained effort to expedite the implementation of the recommendations and decisions unanimously adopted at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament, as contained in the Final Document of that session and confirmed in the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament,

Recalling the Declaration on International Co-operation for Disarmament of 11 December 1979 and its resolutions 36/92 D of 9 December 1981, 37/78 B of 9 December 1982, 38/183 F of 20 December 1983 and 39/148 M of 17 December 1984,

Stressing the vital importance of eliminating the danger of a nuclear war, halting the arms race and attaining disarmament, particularly in the nuclear field, for the preservation of peace and the strengthening of international security.

Deeply concerned over the continued nuclear-arms race, the initiation of a quantitatively and qualitatively more dangerous round of that race and the danger of the extension of the arms race to outer space, which has an immediate negative impact on the development of the international situation and international relations and which will destabilize the situation and lead to a multiple increase of the danger of a nuclear conflict,

Bearing in mind the vital interest of all States in the adoption of concrete effective disarmament measures which would release considerable financial and material resources to be used for the economic and social development of all States, in particular developing countries,

Stressing the topicality of the Delhi Declaration issued on 28 January 1985 by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations,<sup>(26)</sup>

Considering the increased activity of peace and anti-war movements in the struggle for peace, against the arms race and for disarmament,

Convinced of the need to strengthen constructive international co-operation based on the political goodwill of States for successful negotiations on disarmament, in accordance with the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the duty of States to co-operate for the preservation of international peace and security, as set forth in the Charter of the United Nations and confirmed in the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations, of 24 October 1970, the obligation to co-operate actively and constructively for the attainment of the aims of disarmament being an indispensable part of that duty,

Stressing that, within the framework of international co-operation for the attainment of the aims of disarmament, it is necessary to avert nuclear war by means of preventing an arms race in outer space and halting it on Earth, and limiting and reducing nuclear armaments up to the complete elimination of nuclear weapons everywhere on the basis of the principle of equal security,

Underlining the need to halt both qualitative improvement and quantitative buildup of nuclear weapons so as to take the first step towards their radical reduction,

Believing that the two nuclear-weapon States which possess the most important nuclear arsenals should take the lead and show a good example in curbing the arms race and preventing its spread to outer space,

Stressing that proposals, relatively simple in their execution and at the same time effective, and agreements aimed at eliminating the use or the threat of use of force, be it on a world-wide or regional scale, would contribute considerably to that end,

Bearing in mind that the United Nations bears primary responsibility and plays a central role in unifying efforts to maintain and to develop active co-operation among States in order to resolve disarmament issues,

1. Calls upon all States, in implementing the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, to make active use of the principles and ideas contained in the Declaration on International Co-operation for Disarmament by actively participating in disarmament negotiations, with a view to achieving concrete results, and by conducting them on the basis of the principles of reciprocity, equality, undiminished security and the non-use of force in international relations, and to refrain at the same time from developing new channels of the arms race;

2. Stresses the importance of strengthening the effectiveness of the United Nations in fulfilling its responsibility for maintaining international peace and security in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Emphasizes the necessity of refraining from war propaganda, in particular from propaganda for a nuclear war—global or limited—and from the elaboration and dissemination of any doctrines and concepts endangering international peace and justifying the unleashing of nuclear war, which lead to deterioration of the international situation and to further intensification of the arms race and which are detrimental to the generally recognized necessity of international co-operation for disarmament;

4. Declares that the use of force in international relations as well as in attempts to prevent the full implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples constitutes a phenomenon incompatible with the idea of international co-operation for disarmament;

5. Expresses the firm conviction that for effective international co-operation for the attainment of the aims of disarmament it is inevitable that the policy of States, primarily of those which dispose of nuclear weapons, be directed to averting a nuclear war;

6. Demands that the arms race not be extended into other spheres of human activity, such as outer space, that should be used for peaceful purposes, exclusively for the benefit of mankind;

7. Appeals to States which are members of military groupings to promote, on the basis of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session and in the spirit of international co-operation for disarmament, the gradual mutual limitation of military activities of these groupings, thus creating conditions for their dissolution;

8. Calls upon all Member States to continue to cultivate and disseminate, particularly in connection with the World Disarmament Campaign, launched by the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the ideas of international co-operation for disarmament, in particular through their educational systems, mass media and cultural policies;

9. Calls upon the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to continue to consider, in order further to mobilize world public opinion on behalf of disarmament, measures aimed at strengthening the ideas of international co-operation for disarmament through research, education, information, communication and culture;

10. Calls upon the Governments of all States to contribute substantially, while observing the principle of undiminished security, to halting and reversing the arms race, particularly in the nuclear field, and thus to reducing the danger of nuclear war.

Under the same agenda item, a draft resolution by the German Democratic Republic, on obligations of States to contribute to effective disarmament negotiations,<sup>(27)</sup> was submitted to the First Committee and subsequently withdrawn. The draft would have had the Assembly express the conviction that all States, particularly the nuclear-weapon ones and other militarily significant States, had the foremost obligation to conduct serious negotiations based on equality, reciprocity and undiminished security to halt and reverse the arms race.

Implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade

Disarmament Commission consideration. The 1980 General Assembly Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade<sup>(18)</sup> had stipulated that the Assembly would review and appraise, through the Disarmament Commission in 1985, progress in implementing the measures identified in that document. In that connection, the Commission had before it a working paper submitted by India and Nigeria,<sup>(28)</sup> which suggested that, since the Decade's goals were far from being achieved, the Commission should call on the Assembly to urge States to reaffirm their commitment to the Decade's objectives. Eighteen Governments and the 10 States members of the European Community (EC)<sup>(29)</sup> submitted their views in response to a 1984 Assembly request.<sup>(30)</sup>

Following two plenary meetings on the topic, the Commission adopted on 29 May, and annexed to its annual report to the Assembly,<sup>(17)</sup> a summary of its review of the Declaration, as prepared by its Chairman based on consultations among interested delegations. It was noted that no substantial progress had been made even on highest-priority disarmament questions and that the threat to humanity's survival had not diminished since the beginning of the Decade. The Commission recommended that the Assembly call on all States, particularly the nuclear-weapon ones, to reaffirm their commitment to attaining the ultimate objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 L without vote.

Review and appraisal of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, by which it adopted the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade,

Recalling also its resolution 39/148 Q of 17 December 1984, by which it decided to review and appraise at its fortieth session, in 1985, the implementation of the Declaration,

Noting with concern that half-way through the Second Disarmament Decade its goals are far from being achieved and that no substantial progress has been made even on items of highest priority,

Alarmed at the continued escalation of the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race,

Also alarmed at the recent findings of the possible consequences of a nuclear war under present circumstances, as documented by competent scientists,

Deeply concerned at the continued dissipation of ever-increasing human and material resources on the arms race,

Taking note of the views of Member States and suggestions made by them on the implementation of the Declaration,

Taking note with satisfaction of the part of the report of the Disarmament Commission on the item entitled "Review and appraisal of the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade: preliminary assessment and suggestions to ensure progress",

Welcoming the bilateral negotiations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America in accordance with the joint statement issued by the two Governments on 8 January 1985,

1. Decides to adopt the relevant part of the report of the Disarmament Commission,

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to accelerate the implementation of the activities elaborated in the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, as enumerated in the report of the Disarmament Commission,

3. Calls upon all States, particularly the nuclear-weapon States:

(a) To reaffirm their commitment to the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade;

(b) To reaffirm their commitment to the attainment of the ultimate objective of general and complete disarmament under effective international control;

(c) To adopt concrete and practical measures for preventing the outbreak of war, in particular nuclear war;

(d) To take appropriate steps to halt and reverse the nuclear-arms race with a view to improving the international climate and enhancing the efficacy of disarmament negotiations;

(e) To exert greater efforts in the implementation of the World Disarmament Campaign;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report annually to the General Assembly on the implementation of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade.

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/877/Add.1) without vote, 14 November (meeting 37); 11-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.55), orally revised; agenda item 65 (n).

Compliance and verification

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted two resolutions relating to compliance—compliance with arms limitation and disarmament agreements (40/94 L) and verification of compliance (40/152 O). (See also p. 100 for a listing and status of ratification of existing disarmament agreements.)

On 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/94 L by recorded vote.

Compliance with arms limitation and disarmament agreements

The General Assembly,

Conscious of the abiding concern of all Member States for preserving respect for rights and obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law,

Convinced that observance of the Charter of the United Nations, relevant treaties and other sources of international law is essential for the strengthening of international security,

Mindful in particular of the fundamental importance of full implementation and strict observance of agreements on arms limitation and disarmament if individual nations and the international community are to derive enhanced security from them,

Stressing that any violation of such agreements not only adversely affects the security of States parties but can also create security risks for other States relying on the constraints and commitments stipulated in those agreements,

Stressing further that any weakening of confidence in such agreements diminishes their contribution to global or regional stability and to further disarmament and arms limitation efforts and undermines the credibility and effectiveness of the international legal system,

Believing that compliance with arms limitation and disarmament agreements by States parties is, therefore, a matter of interest and concern to the international community, and noting the role that the United Nations could play in that regard,

1. Urges all States parties to arms limitation and disarmament agreements to implement and comply with the entirety of the provisions subscribed to;

2. Calls upon all Member States to give serious consideration to the implications of non-compliance with those obligations for international security and stability, as well as for the prospects for further progress in the field of disarmament;

3. Appeals to all Member States to support efforts aimed at the resolution of non-compliance questions, with a view towards encouraging strict observance of the provisions subscribed to and maintaining or restoring the integrity of arms limitation or disarmament agreements;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to provide Member States with assistance that may be necessary in this regard.

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 131-0-16 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (99-0-23), 19 November (meeting 42); 9-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.66/Rev.1); agenda item 68.

Sponsors: Costa Rica, Denmark, France, Greece, Iceland, Italy, New Zealand, Norway, United States.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana,<sup>a</sup> Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Algeria, Benin, Burkina Faso, Cuba, Cyprus, Egypt, Ethiopia, India, Indonesia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Sri Lanka, Uganda, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia.

Egypt asserted that separate consideration of the compliance question was undesirable and redundant, given the existence of paragraphs on compliance in all disarmament agreements—a view shared by others abstaining, among them, India, Indonesia, Nigeria, Sri Lanka and Yugoslavia. India believed that treating compliance as a separate issue could impede progress in concluding disarmament agreements, and Yugoslavia felt such an approach could be used to derail negotiations whenever it suited one side or the other. Sweden, voting in favour, asserted that compliance should not become a politically controversial issue of a general character.

Sri Lanka observed that the text would enable the Assembly to discuss cases of non-compliance, when treaty compliance was a matter for the parties concerned to legislate. Indonesia said obligation to comply with agreements or treaties to which a country had become a party of its own volition was self-evident; it added that widening the scope of the non-compliance issue outside the parties to the agreement or treaty, as called for in paragraph 3, would not achieve the paragraph's purported objective. Nigeria and Sweden believed that possible concern about non-compliance should be dealt with on a case-by-case basis and directly in the context of the obligations in question. Egypt, Sri Lanka and Sweden also urged the nuclear-weapon States to demonstrate their commitment to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons.<sup>(31)</sup>

The USSR, while supporting the proposal in general, condemned what it called the practice of using the compliance question as a pretext for breaking off ongoing negotiations or for postponing the entry into force of international agreements; it also condemned unfounded assertions of non-compliance as a means of covering up negative attitude to arms limitation and disarmament agreements. Brazil said its positive vote was made possible by the sponsors' willingness to accommodate certain suggestions which, it believed, had improved the text. Morocco and Venezuela understood that the draft embraced both bilateral and multilateral treaties.

In the plenary Assembly, Mexico explained its affirmative vote by saying that the validity and pertinence of a series of provisions in the text were irrefutable; it had abstained in the First Committee simply to emphasize the irony it saw in the fact that the draft had been introduced by the United States which, it said, had for a number of years voted against Assembly resolutions on disarmament agreements such as those dealing with halting all nuclear-weapon tests.

On 16 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 O without vote.

Verification in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Conscious of the urgent need to reach agreements on arms limitation and disarmament measures capable of contributing to the maintenance of peace and security,

Convinced that, if such measures are to be effective, they must be fair and balanced, acceptable to all parties, their substance must be clear and compliance with them must be evident,

Reaffirming its conviction, as expressed in paragraph 91 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, adopted by consensus at that session, its first special session devoted to disarmament, that in order to facilitate the conclusion and effective implementation of disarmament agreements and to create confidence, States should accept appropriate provisions for verification in such agreements,

Reiterating its view that:

(a) Disarmament and arms limitation agreements should provide for adequate measures of verification satisfactory to all parties concerned in order to create the necessary confidence and to ensure that they are being observed by all parties,

(b) The form and modalities of the verification to be provided for in any specific agreement depend upon and should be determined by the purposes, scope and nature of the agreement,

(c) Agreements should provide for the participation of parties directly or through the United Nations system in the verification process,

(d) Where appropriate, a combination of several methods of verification as well as other compliance procedures should be employed,

Recalling that:

(a) In the context of international disarmament negotiations, the problem of verification should be further examined and adequate methods and procedures in this field should be considered,

(b) Every effort should be made to develop appropriate methods and procedures that are non-discriminatory and that do not unduly interfere with the internal affairs of other States or jeopardize their economic and social development,

Believing that verification techniques should be developed as an objective means of determining compliance with agreements and appropriately taken into account in the course of disarmament negotiations,

1. Calls upon Member States to intensify their efforts towards achieving agreements on balanced, mutually acceptable, verifiable and effective arms limitation and disarmament measures;

2. Invites all Member States, bearing in mind the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, to communicate to the Secretary-General, not later than 15 April 1986, their views and suggestions on verification principles, procedures and techniques for promoting the inclusion of adequate verification in arms limitation and disarmament agreements and on the role of the United Nations in the field of verification;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare and submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report containing the views and suggestions of Member States;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Verification in all its aspects" under the item entitled "Review of the implementation of the recommendations and decisions adopted by the General Assembly at its tenth special session: implementation of the recommendations and decisions of the tenth special session".

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/877/Add.1) without vote, 22 Number (meeting 47); 11-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.62/Rev.1); agenda item 65.

Sponsors: Australia, Belgium, Cameroon, Canada, Costa Rica, Germany, Federal Republic of Italy, Japan, New Zealand, Turkey, United Kingdom.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 34, 47; plenary 117.

In explanation of position, the USSR stated its readiness to supplement national technical measures, when necessary, with additional mutually agreed measures, including international verification. It stressed that the essential point of any agreement was the actual means of limiting and reducing the arms themselves; verification abstracted from specific steps to limit arms was senseless. Czechoslovakia opposed attempts to deal with verification separately from disarmament or as a pre-condition for negotiations.

Brazil understood the expression "fair and balanced, acceptable to all parties" in the text to mean that verification measures included in specific disarmament agreements must be universal and non-discriminatory among the parties to such agreements. India, Mexico and Yugoslavia stressed that there could be no verification in the abstract and that verification had to be related to individual disarmament agreements. India, accordingly, was unable to understand the need to restate the obvious in a general way and believed that the verification aspect was being exploited to frustrate progress on disarmament negotiations. Mexico believed that there was no perfect verification, but in most cases imperfect verification was preferable to none at all; its participation in the consensus should not be construed as a change in its position that verification should not be used as a pretext to prevent the conclusion of disarmament agreements.

In related action, the Assembly called on all States to comply with and implement all provisions of disarmament and arms limitation agreements and to negotiate for the conclusion of additional treaties and conventions (resolution 40/94 N).

General and complete disarmament

As requested by the General Assembly in 1984,<sup>(32)</sup> the Disarmament Commission began in 1985 a comprehensive review of the United Nations role in disarmament, and the Assembly agreed that the work should continue (resolution 40/94 O). It also called for achieving the principles and priorities for disarmament as agreed in the 1978 Final Document<sup>(15)</sup> (40/94 N), and called again on the Security Council to initiate procedures, under the United Nations Charter, for halting the arms race (40/151 A).

The Assembly reaffirmed the need to start negotiations on naval arms reduction and requested the Disarmament Commission to continue consideration of that question as a matter of priority (40/94 I); it also asked the Conference on Disarmament to continue consideration of further measures to prevent an arms race on the sea-bed (40/94 J).

Studies were completed in 1985 by two groups of governmental experts—one on the naval arms race, naval forces and naval arms systems (40/94 F) and the other on concepts of security (40/94 E).

Those who engaged in and fuelled the arms trade bore a heavy responsibility for the daily loss of countless lives, the Secretary-General emphasized (see p. 8).

Disarmament Commission activities. The contact group of the Committee of the Whole, set up by the Commission<sup>(17)</sup> to deal with a two-tiered agenda item—on various aspects of the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, and elaboration of a general approach to negotiations on nuclear and conventional disarmament—held four meetings between 15 and 24 May, basing its work on the 1984 compilation of proposals for recommendations on the topic.<sup>(33)</sup> It also considered two working papers submitted in 1985—one by the German Democratic Republic and the other by Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey and the United Kingdom. Again unable to agree on a consensus on a complete set of recommendations, the Group suggested that the Commission continue its efforts to reach agreed formulations on recommendations on the topic.

UN role in disarmament

Disarmament Commission consideration. Responding to a 1984 General Assembly request<sup>(32)</sup> that the Disarmament Commission carry out a comprehensive review of the United Nations role in disarmament, the Commission established, on 17 May 1985,<sup>(17)</sup> Working Group III to consider the topic. In connection with its work, the Group had before it views on strengthening the Organization's role, submitted in response to the Assembly's invitation, by 22 individual States and jointly by the 10 EC members.<sup>(34)</sup>

The Working Group held seven formal and additional informal meetings between 21 and 28 May under the chairmanship of Paul Bamela Engo (Cameroon). It examined the Chairman's paper on topics for appropriate recommendations, which was subsequently annexed to the Commission's 1985 report to the Assembly.<sup>(17)</sup> Unable to conclude the discussions for lack of time, the Group recommended that the work be continued as a priority in 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 O without vote.

Review of the role of the United Nations in the field of disarmament

The General Assembly,
Recalling its resolution 39/151 G of 17 December 1984,
Bearing in mind that the primary purpose of the United Nations is to maintain international peace and security,

Reaffirming its conviction that genuine and lasting peace can be created only through the effective implementation of the security system provided for in the Charter of the United Nations and the speedy and substantial reduction of arms and armed forces, by international agreement and mutual example, leading ultimately to general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Reaffirming further that the United Nations, in accordance with its Charter, has a central role and primary responsibility in the sphere of disarmament,

Regretting that, especially in recent years, no substantive progress has been made in the field of disarmament,

Recognizing the need for the United Nations, in discharging its central role and primary responsibility in the sphere of disarmament, to play a more active role in the field of disarmament in accordance with its primary purpose under the Charter to maintain international peace and security,

Taking into account the part of the report of the Disarmament Commission relating to this question,

1. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue its consideration of the role of the United Nations in the field of disarmament as a matter of priority at its next substantive session, in 1986, with a view to the elaboration of concrete recommendations and proposals, as appropriate, taking into account, inter alia, the views and suggestions of Member States as well as the aforementioned documents on the subject;

2. Requests further the Disarmament Commission to submit its report on the subject, including findings, recommendations and proposals, as appropriate, to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Review of the role of the United Nations in the field of disarmament: report of the Disarmament Commission".

General Assembly resolution 40/94 O

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) without vote, 14 November (meeting 37); 44-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.72); agenda item 68 (g).

Sponsors: Australia, Bahamas, Belgium, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guyana, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Liberia, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mali, Mauritius, Oman, Rwanda, Samoa, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Sudan, Suriname, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Zaire, Zambia. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 36, 37; plenary 113.

Disarmament and international security

Various ways of maintaining international peace and security remained a priority for the United Nations in 1985 (see also Chapter IV of this section).

In December 1985, the General Assembly declared the urgent need for achieving the principles and priorities for disarmament as agreed in the 1978 Final Document<sup>(15)</sup> (resolution 40/94 N), and reiterated its 1984 call to the Security Council<sup>(35)</sup> to initiate due procedures, in accordance with the United Nations Charter, for halting the arms race (40/151 A).

In February 1985,<sup>(36)</sup> the Secretary-General had drawn the Council's attention to the Assembly's 1984 call.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/94 N by recorded vote. Paragraph 24 of the 1978 Final Document,<sup>(15)</sup> mentioned in the resolution's preamble, called for measures that would help create favourable conditions for adopting additional disarmament measures and relaxing international tension.

Disarmament and the maintenance of international peace and security

The General Assembly,

Recognizing the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations,

Solemnly reaffirming the common recognition of Member States of the unique importance of the United Nations and the Charter of the United Nations through which they are all committed "to practice tolerance and live together in peace" and "to unite our strength to maintain international peace and security", as well as "to ensure... that armed force shall not be used, save in the common interest",

Further determined to implement the provisions of the Charter to ensure the maintenance of international peace and security, in particular the common commitments of Member States to "settle international disputes by peaceful means" and to "refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State",

Affirming the critical relationship described in the Charter between the maintenance of international peace and security and the principles governing disarmament and the regulation of armaments,

Reaffirming that the promotion of fundamental human rights, the equal rights of nations large and small and the promotion of social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom remain irreducible goals of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned that the arms race directly threatens the right of people to better standards of life and economic and social advancement,

Recognizing once again the validity of, and reaffirming the commitment of Member States to, the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Noting that disarmament and arms limitation is necessarily a matter for negotiation and carefully worked out agreements which take account of all the concerns of all participating Governments,

Reaffirming the statement contained in paragraph 13 of the Final Document that genuine and lasting peace can be created only through the effective implementation of the security system provided for in the Charter and the speedy and substantial reduction of arms and armed forces, leading ultimately to general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Taking into account the existence of negotiations in multilateral, regional and bilateral forums,

Convinced of the need for all States to work to achieve general and complete disarmament, including the conclusion of arms limitation and disarmament agreements wherever feasible,

Further convinced that adequate verification is an essential ingredient if confidence is to be placed in arms limitation or disarmament measures,

Mindful of the provisions of paragraph 24 of the Final Document,

1. Declares the urgent need for effective measures to ensure achievement of the principles and priorities for disarmament as agreed upon by consensus at the tenth special session of the General Assembly, to be supported by the following objectives:

- (a) Avoidance of war, in particular nuclear war;
- (b) Cessation of existing armed conflicts and military threats of all kinds;
- (c) Cessation of the arms race in all its manifestations:
  - (i) In nuclear weapons and other weapons of mass destruction, as well as conventional weapons;
  - (ii) In qualitative as well as quantitative terms;
  - (iii) On the regional as well as global scale;
- (d) Prevention of an arms race in space;
- (e) Deep reductions in nuclear arsenals ultimately leading to the complete elimination of nuclear weapons under effective, legally binding and verifiable arrangements;
- (f) The prevention of proliferation of nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices;
- (g) Elimination of chemical weapons and effective, legally binding and verifiable measures against the development, production, stockpiling and use of biological or chemical weapons;
- (h) Reduction in arms of all types by all States to levels consistent with their right of self-defence as recognized by Article 51 of the Charter of the United Nations;
- (i) The exercise of responsibility by exporters of weapons and suppression of the clandestine or illegal traffic in weapons;
- (j) Application of the physical and intellectual resources of humankind for peaceful purposes;

2. Calls upon all States to conduct their relations and to refrain from the use or threat of force in accordance with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations;

3. Calls upon all States to undertake measures specifically designed to build confidence in order to contribute to the creation of favourable conditions for the adoption of additional disarmament measures and to further relaxation of international tension;

4. Calls upon all States faithfully to comply with and implement all provisions of multilateral, regional and bilateral disarmament and arms limitation agreements to which they are a party and to negotiate in good faith for the conclusion of additional treaties and conventions, multilateral, regional or bilateral as appropriate, taking into account the need for strict observance of an acceptable balance of mutual responsibilities and obligations for nuclear and non-nuclear-weapon States;

5. Also calls upon all States, including those with significant military arsenals as well as those which have special responsibilities as recognized by consensus in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, to exercise their responsibilities regarding disarmament and arms limitation in good faith and according to the provisions of the Final Document, in order to facilitate the achievement of meaningful disarmament and arms limitation measures.

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (80-0-50), 22 November (meeting 47); 6-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L70/Rev.2); agenda item 68.

Sponsors: Australia, Bolivia, Cameroon, Fiji, Greece, Samoa.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Portugal, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Yemen, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bangladesh, Benin, Bhutan, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Byelorussian SSR, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ecuador, Egypt, France, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Jamaica, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mexico, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Poland, Romania, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United States, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zimbabwe.

In explanation of vote, India said the text was a disturbing attempt at reversing the achievement of the 1978 special session, which, it said, had shifted the international community's focus from the amorphous dialectical interdependence of disarmament and international security to disarmament per se; thus paragraph 1 placed on the same level such vital issues as preventing nuclear war and ceasing the nuclear-arms race with other less important objectives. Indonesia similarly feared that the text would undermine the 1978 Final Document<sup>(15)</sup> and added, as regards the eighth preambular paragraph, that disarmament agreements must take account of the concerns of all countries, not just those of the participating Governments. The USSR felt that the text did not contain a number of important ideas it had proposed.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, changing its affirmative vote in the Committee to an abstention in the plenary Assembly, said it did so in view of the special circumstances prevailing in Africa and the Middle East, caused by the presence of what it called two racist régimes.

On 16 December, the Assembly, also on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/151 A by recorded vote.

Disarmament and international security

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned over the continuing escalation of the arms race, particularly in nuclear weapons,

Considering that resolution 39/63 K of 12 December 1984 calls upon the Security Council to give consideration to the escalating arms race—particularly the nuclear-arms race—with a view to initiating due procedures, in accordance with Article 26 of the Charter of the United Nations, for bringing it to a halt,

Having regard to the existing reality that the Security Council has not yet given any consideration to the question of the escalating arms race, as provided for in the aforesaid resolution,

1. Calls upon the Security Council, and particularly its permanent members, to initiate due procedures in conformity with the provisions of the aforesaid resolution;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

The Assembly also adopted three resolutions (40/156 A-C) on the question of Antarctica.

Study on concepts of security

The Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study of Concepts of Security, established following a 1983 Assembly request,<sup>(37)</sup> completed its work and submitted the study to the Secretary-General in July 1985.<sup>(38)</sup>

The Group—13 experts from Algeria, Argentina, Australia, China, the German Democratic Republic, India, the Philippines, Romania, Sweden, Uganda, the USSR, Venezuela and Yugoslavia—which had held one session in 1984,<sup>(39)</sup> held three sessions in New York in 1985 (7-18 January, 8-19 April and 8-19 July) under the chairmanship of Anders Ferm (Sweden) and adopted the study by consensus.

The study contained five chapters: introduction, overview of security concepts, problems and threats in international security, measures to promote international peace and security, and conclusions and recommendations. It defined security as a condition in which States considered that there was no danger of military attack, political pressure or economic coercion, so that they were able to pursue freely their own development and progress. Noting the universal threat posed by the nuclear-arms race, the Group recognized that all nations had not only the right to defend their own security but also the responsibility to ensure that national policies did not jeopardize global security. It stressed that nations should move towards common security, and recommended actions towards: renewed disarmament efforts to reduce the risk of war, in particular nuclear war; maintenance of the rule of law in international relations through the strict observance of the United Nations Charter and effective application of the collective security concept; decolonization and elimination of apartheid and political and economic co-operation for development and security.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/94 E without vote.

Comprehensive study of concepts of security The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/188 H of 20 December 1983, by which it requested the Secretary-General to carry out, with the assistance of qualified governmental experts, a comprehensive study of concepts of security,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General transmitting the study undertaken by the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study of Concepts of Security,

1. Takes note of the comprehensive study on concepts of security;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General and to the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study of Concepts of Security, which assisted him in the preparation of the study;

3. Commends the study and its conclusions to the attention of all Member States;

4. Invites all Member States to inform the Secretary-General, no later than 30 April 1986, of their views regarding the study;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the reproduction of the study as a United Nations publication and to give it the widest possible distribution;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare for the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report containing the views of Member States received regarding the study.

General Assembly resolution 40/94 E

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) without vote, 14 November (meeting 37); 17-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.29); agenda item 68 (c).

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 37; plenary 113.

In explanation of position, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan and the USSR stated that they had certain reservations about the study and would communicate their full views later. The Federal Republic of Germany added that it considered the Group's membership to have been insufficiently balanced.

Study on deterrence

In pursuance of a 1984 General Assembly decision,(40) the Secretary-General appointed a group of governmental experts—from Argentina, Egypt, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, India, Sweden, the USSR and the United States—to carry out a study on "Deterrence: its implications for disarmament and the arms race, negotiated arms reductions and international security and other related matters". The eight-member Group held two sessions in 1985—29 April to 3 May in New York, and 7 to 18 October at Geneva—under the chairmanship of K. Subrahmanyam (India). At its first session, it agreed on an outline for the draft study and exchanged views on specific points that should be reflected in each chapter; at the second, it considered individual contributions and outlined its future work. Its third and final session was scheduled for March 1986 in New York.

Naval arms race

Proposed negotiations

Disarmament Commission consideration. The Disarmament Commission(17) devoted two plenary meetings in 1985 to the question of curbing the naval arms race, having before it a working paper by Bulgaria, the German Democratic Republic and the USSR,(41) listing a number of areas the Commission might consider with a view to negotiating on naval disarmament. In response to a 1984 Assembly resolution,(42) 15 Governments submitted, in 1985, their views regarding the holding of negotiations aimed at limiting and reducing naval armaments.(43)

Divergent views on the topic were expressed in the Commission. Some delegations called for paving the way for negotiations, while others deemed it inappropriate to consider the question in view of what they felt was the imbalanced nature of the 1984 resolution(42) and in advance of the finalization of the study being prepared by the Secretary-General (see p. 30). Some further expressed their concern at the nuclear aspect of the naval arms race. In the absence of a consensus, the Commission decided to refer the question to the Assembly.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 I by recorded vote.

Curbing the naval arms race: limitation and reduction of naval armaments and extension of confidence-building measures to seas and oceans

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 38/188 F of 20 December 1983 and 39/151 I of 17 December 1984,

Convinced that all channels of the arms race, in particular the nuclear-arms race, should be effectively covered by the efforts to halt and reverse it,

Disturbed by the growing threat to peace, international security and global stability posed by the continuing escalation of the naval arms race,

Alarmed by the even more frequent use of naval fleets or other naval formations for demonstrations or use of force and as an instrument to exert pressure against sovereign States, especially developing countries, to interfere in their internal affairs, to commit acts of armed aggression and intervention and to preserve the remnants of the colonial system,

Aware that the growing presence of naval fleets and the intensification of the naval activities of some States in conflict areas or far from their own shores increase tensions in those areas and could adversely affect the security of the international sea lanes there, the freedom of navigation and the exploitation of maritime resources,

Firmly convinced that the undertaking of urgent steps to curb military confrontation at sea would be a significant contribution to preventing war, especially nuclear war, and to strengthening peace and international security,

Aware of the numerous initiatives and concrete proposals to undertake effective measures aimed at limiting naval activities, limiting and reducing naval armaments and extending confidence-building measures to seas and oceans,

Convinced that such measures should be worked out and implemented with due regard to the principle of not harming the legitimate security interests of any State concerned,

Stressing once again the importance of relevant measures of a regional character, such as the implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace and the transformation of the Mediterranean into a zone of peace, security and co-operation,

Reaffirming once again that seas and oceans, being of vital importance to mankind, should be used exclusively for peaceful purposes in accordance with the régime established by the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General(44) and other documents, submitted in pursuance of resolutions 38/188 F and 39/151 I, which contain the replies of Member States, including a major naval Power, on the modalities for negotiations, as well as various specific ideas and new proposals for joint measures on curbing the naval arms race and naval activities,

Noting with satisfaction that the prevailing view expressed in these replies strongly favours an early commencement of negotiations aimed at curbing the naval arms race and naval activities, strengthening confidence and security at sea and reducing naval armaments,

Taking note of the study on the naval arms race<sup>(45)</sup> carried out by the Secretary-General with the assistance of the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study on the Naval Arms Race, Naval Forces and Naval Arms Systems,

Considering that the discussion on the subject that has taken place at the 1985 substantive session of the Disarmament Commission constitutes a valuable initial step in the common search for ways and means which could ensure proper conditions for more detailed and thorough consideration of the issue of curbing the naval arms race, with a view to holding appropriate negotiations,

1. Appeals once again to all Member States, in particular to nuclear-weapon States and other major naval Powers, to refrain from enlarging their naval presence and activities in areas of conflict or tension, or far from their own shores;

2. Reaffirms once again its recognition of the urgent need to start negotiations with the participation of the major naval Powers, in particular the nuclear-weapon States, and other interested States on the limitation of naval activities, the limitation and reduction of naval armaments and the extension of confidence-building measures to seas and oceans, especially to areas with the busiest international sea lanes or to regions where the probability of conflict situations is high;

3. Invites Member States, particularly the major naval Powers, including the nuclear-weapon States, to consider the possibility of holding direct consultations, bilateral and/or multilateral, with a view to preparing the opening at an early date of such negotiations;

4. Also invites Member States, especially those that have not yet done so, to communicate to the Secretary-General not later than April 1986 their views concerning the modalities for holding the multilateral negotiations referred to above, including the possibilities for holding them at the Conference on Disarmament at Geneva;

5. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue the consideration of this question as a matter of priority in an appropriate subsidiary body, taking due account of the proposals made and the views expressed on the subject-matter contained in the replies of Member States to the Secretary-General, in the verbatim records of the Disarmament Commission, in the working papers and the study on the naval arms race, as well as of future initiatives, with a view to submitting its recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Curbing the naval arms race: limitation and reduction of naval armaments and extension of confidence-building measures to seas and oceans".

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (56-19-56), 18 November (meeting 40); 8-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.46/Rev.1); agenda item 68 (i).

Sponsors: Bulgaria, Democratic Yemen, German Democratic Republic, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Poland, Syrian Arab Republic, Viet Nam.

Meeting numbers GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-33, 40; plenary 113.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bahrain, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Belorussian SSR, Cape Verde, Chad,<sup>2</sup> Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, El Salvador, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Mali, Malta, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, Seychelles, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Togo, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Democratic Kampuchea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Malaysia, Maldives, Mauritania, Mauritius, Nepal, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Sweden, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Vanuatu.

The United Kingdom considered the initiative flawed and irrelevant, and asserted that the USSR had unilaterally proposed limiting naval deployments only in areas used extensively by Western navies. Pointing, as did the United Kingdom, to the existing geographical disparities between major naval Powers, the Netherlands believed the text to be superfluous in view of a draft resolution on the naval arms study (see below), and that some notions in the preamble and paragraphs 1 and 2 were an insufficient basis for fruitful consideration of the issues in the Conference on Disarmament.

India, also explaining its vote on the naval arms study (see below), stated that detaching the naval arms race from the wider issues of the nuclear-arms race and of general and complete disarmament distorted established priorities regarding disarmament. Colombia supported the curbing of the naval arms race, but could not accept many of the text's formulations.

Benin stressed that African States had not been pressured to vote in favour. Democratic Yemen felt the United Kingdom was crying over the loss of its historical colonialism. Argentina supported the request for the nuclear-weapon States to refrain from increasing their naval activities in areas of conflict or tension or far from their own shores, such as in the South Atlantic. The USSR said the draft was non-discriminatory and rightly expressed alarm at the use of naval forces to exert pressure against sovereign States.

Experts' study

In July 1985, the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study on the Naval Arms Race, Naval Forces and Naval Arms Systems—which had held two sessions in 1984(44) and two in 1985 since it was set up in response to a 1983 General Assembly request<sup>(46)</sup>—completed and adopted its study by consensus, which the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in September.<sup>(45)</sup> The Group—seven experts from China, France, Gabon, Indonesia, the Netherlands, Peru and Sweden—held its third and fourth sessions in New York, from 4 to 15 March and from 17 to 26 July 1985, under the chairmanship of Ali Alatas (Indonesia).

The study comprised eight chapters: general background and setting, development of naval capabilities, naval forces and naval arms systems, applications and uses of naval capabilities, maritime legal context, implications for security and the peaceful uses of the seas, possible measures of disarmament and confidence-building, and summary and conclusions. It examined, as possible disarmament and confidence-building measures, restraints—of quantitative, qualitative or technological, geographic and/or mission nature—as well as verification, and modernization of the laws of sea warfare. Noting that some 71 per cent of the earth's surface was sea and over two thirds of the world's human population lived within 300 kilometres of a sea coast, the Group noted the need for more effective internationally accepted ocean-management policies, and warned that the widened national responsibilities under the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea(47) should not be misused to justify expanding and utilizing naval force.

After summarizing their findings, the experts identified two basic objectives for action: achieving, by negotiation, measures of naval arms limitation and reduction—both nuclear and conventional—in the overall context of halting and reversing the arms race in general; and exploring ways in which naval organization, capabilities and experience might contribute to establishing improved ocean-management policies for the peaceful uses of the world's seas.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 F by recorded vote.

Study on the naval arms race

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/188 G of 20 December 1983, by which it requested the Secretary-General, with the assistance of qualified governmental experts, to carry out a comprehensive study on the naval arms race,

Reaffirming its concern about the naval buildup and the development of naval arms systems,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General transmitting the study carried out by the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study on the Naval Arms Race, Naval Forces and Naval Arms Systems,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the study on the naval arms race;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General and to the Group of Governmental Experts to Carry Out a Comprehensive Study on the Naval Arms Race,

Naval Forces and Naval Arms Systems which assisted him in the preparation of the study;

3. Commends the study and its conclusions to the attention of all Member States;

4. Invites all Member States to inform the Secretary-General, no later than 5 April 1986, of their views concerning the study;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the reproduction of the study as a United Nations publication and to give it the widest possible distribution;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare for the Disarmament Commission at its substantive session in May 1986 a compilation of the views received from Member States regarding this issue;

7. Requests the Disarmament Commission to consider, at its forthcoming session in 1986, the issues contained in the study on the naval arms race, both its substantive content and its conclusions, taking into account all other relevant present and future proposals, with a view to facilitating the identification of possible measures in the field of naval arms reductions and disarmament, pursued within the framework of progress towards general and complete disarmament, as well as confidence-building measures in this field, and to report on its deliberations and recommendations to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Naval armaments and disarmament".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 146-1-3 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (131-1-3), 18 November (meeting 40); 14-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L36); agenda item 68 (b).

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Leo People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lasotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao, Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States

Abstaining: Grenada, India, Saint Christopher and Nevis.

Explaining its vote, the United States asserted that any study that focused on naval forces in isolation, ignoring the geographical factors and threats which made maritime forces necessary in the first place, would be skewed against those nations and groups of States with vital maritime interests to defend; referring the study to the Commission, it added, diverted that body's attention from more appropriate pursuits. India explained its vote in conjunction with the text that became resolution 40/94 I (see p. 30).

The USSR said the study, while reflecting many of its proposals, contained unbalanced arguments, unjustified attempts to blame the USSR, and inaccurate statistics; the study having been completed, it was unwarranted further to delay negotiations on curbing naval armaments. Bulgaria expressed reservations regarding some of the study's conclusions. The United Kingdom, while not sharing all the views expressed on the topic, believed that the resolution, supported by a broadly-based group of countries, offered a reasonable basis for the Commission's work. Argentina said the study confirmed the views of those who had wanted the subject of the naval arms race to be dealt with.

Prevention of an arms race on the sea-bed

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. In its 1985 consideration of further disarmament measures for preventing an arms race on the sea-bed, the Conference on Disarmament<sup>(19)</sup> heard the view that the scope of the Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Sea-Bed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof<sup>(48)</sup> should be broadened, that its provisions governing procedures for verification and compliance should be improved and that access to information on relevant technological developments should be facilitated. It was also stated that the continuing deployment of nuclear weapons throughout the seas threatened all coastal States and it was, therefore, necessary to begin negotiations on the question. The Treaty, which had entered into force in May 1972, had 75 parties as at the end of 1985. The delegation of one of the three depositary States—the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States—considered the Treaty to be fulfilling its objectives, while another depositary State expressed readiness to negotiate on the full demilitarization of the sea-bed.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/94 J without vote, as recommended by the First Committee.

Further measures in the field of disarmament for the prevention of an arms race on the sea-bed, the ocean floor and in the subsoil thereof

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/188 B of 20 December 1983, in which it reiterated its hope for the widest possible adherence to the Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Sea-Bed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof, called again upon all States to refrain from any action which might lead to the extension of the arms race to the sea-bed and ocean floor, and also requested the Conference on Disarmament to proceed promptly with consideration of further measures in the field of disarmament for the prevention of an arms race on the sea-bed, the ocean floor and in the subsoil thereof,

Taking note of the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament on its consideration of further measures in the field of disarmament for the prevention of an arms race on the sea-bed, the ocean floor and in the subsoil thereof,

Noting that the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea had concluded and that the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea was opened for signature on 10 December 1982,

Emphasizing the interest of all States, including specifically the interest of developing countries, in the progress of the exploration and use of the sea-bed and the ocean floor and its resources for peaceful purposes,

Requests the Conference on Disarmament, in consultation with the States parties to the Treaty on the Prohibition of the Emplacement of Nuclear Weapons and Other Weapons of Mass Destruction on the Sea-Bed and the Ocean Floor and in the Subsoil Thereof, taking into account existing proposals and any relevant technological developments, to continue its consideration of further measures in the field of disarmament for the prevention of an arms race on the sea-bed, the ocean floor and in the subsoil thereof.

Proposed world disarmament conference

The General Assembly continued discussion in 1985, as it had done annually since 1971, of the proposal for convening a world disarmament conference—an idea it first endorsed in 1965<sup>(49)</sup>—but made no further progress, as the basic positions of nuclear-weapon States remained largely unchanged.

In December, the Assembly renewed the mandate of the 40-member Ad Hoc Committee on the World Disarmament Conference (resolution 40/154).

Ad Hoc Committee consideration. The Ad Hoc Committee on the World Disarmament Conference held two sessions in New York in 1985: four meetings each between 22 and 25 April and between 15 and 19 July. Its annual report to the Assembly<sup>(50)</sup> contained the updated views of the five nuclear-weapon States regarding the holding of such a conference. The Committee, which had been discussing the question since it first met in 1974,<sup>(51)</sup> also informed the Assembly that, through its Chairman, it had maintained close contact with those States so as to remain currently informed of their attitudes.

According to the report, the USSR continued to support the convening of a conference and expressed readiness to promote the adoption of a decision on preparations for it, including the dates.

China remained ready to support the idea, if the majority of Member States favoured a conference to discuss how the two super-Powers should take the lead in drastically reducing their armaments.

In view of the continuing deadlock on the question, France said it had no objection to the Ad Hoc Committee's studying the possibility of spacing its meetings. The United Kingdom maintained that, in the current international climate, no useful purpose would be served by preparing for a conference and doubted the usefulness of further Committee meetings. That view continued to be expressed by the United States, which again felt it premature to convene a conference, in view of insufficient political agreement on the conditions for, and on the disarmament issues central to, such a conference.

In its conclusions, the Ad Hoc Committee reiterated that the idea of a world disarmament conference had wide support, though with varying degrees of emphasis and differences regarding conditions and aspects related to its convening, including the deteriorating international situation; and that no consensus on convening a conference under current conditions had been reached among the nuclear-weapon States, whose participation was widely deemed essential. It suggested that the Assembly might renew the Committee's mandate and request it to maintain close contact with the nuclear-weapon and all other States and to consider any comments and observations which might be made to the Committee.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/154 without vote, thereby renewing the Ad Hoc Committee's mandate.

World Disarmament Conference

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2833(XXVI) of 16 December 1971, 2930(XXVII) of 29 November 1972, 3183(XXVIII) of 18 December 1973, 3260(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3469(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/190 of 21 December 1976, 32/89 of 12 December 1977, 33/69 of 14 December 1978, 34/81 of 11 December 1979, 35/151 of 12 December 1980, 36/91 of 9 December 1981, 37/97 of 13 December 1982, 38/186 of 20 December 1983 and 39/150 of 17 December 1984,

Reiterating its conviction that all the peoples of the world have a vital interest in the success of disarmament negotiations and that all States should be in a position to contribute to the adoption of measures for the achievement of this goal,

Stressing anew its conviction that a world disarmament conference, adequately prepared and convened at an appropriate time, could provide the realization of such an aim and that the co-operation of all nuclear-weapon Powers would considerably facilitate its attainment,

Taking note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the World Disarmament Conference,

Recalling that, in paragraph 122 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it decided that, at the earliest appropriate time, a world disarmament conference should be convened with universal participation and with adequate preparation,

Recalling also that, in paragraph 23 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, the General Assembly considered it pertinent also to recall that in paragraph 122 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session it had stated that at the earliest appropriate time a world disarmament conference should be convened with universal participation and with adequate preparation,

1. Notes with satisfaction that, in paragraph 14 of its report to the General Assembly, the Ad Hoc Committee on the World Disarmament Conference stated the following:

"Having regard for the important requirements of a world disarmament conference to be convened at the earliest appropriate time, with universal participation and with adequate preparation, the General Assembly should take up the question at its fortieth session for further consideration, bearing in mind the relevant provisions of resolution 36/91, adopted by consensus, in particular paragraph 1 of that resolution, and resolution 39/150, also adopted by consensus";

2. Renews the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee;

3. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to continue to maintain close contact with the representatives of the nuclear-weapon States in order to remain currently informed of their positions, as well as with all other States, and to consider any relevant comments and observations which might be made to the Committee, especially bearing in mind paragraph 122 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly;

4. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "World Disarmament Conference".

Proposed comprehensive programme of disarmament

Little progress was made in 1985 in the Conference on Disarmament(19) towards agreeing on a comprehensive programme of disarmament. Envisaged in paragraph 109 of the Final Document(15) of the General Assembly's first (1978) special session devoted to disarmament, the proposed programme had been considered annually since 1980—by the Committee on Disarmament until 1984, when it was renamed the Conference on Disarmament, and by the latter since 1984. In December 1985, the Assembly urged the Conference to continue its work in 1986 with the firm intention of submitting a draft programme to the Assembly later that year (resolution 40/152 D).

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. In 1985, the Ad Hoc Committee on the Comprehensive Programme of Disarmament, of the Conference on Disarmament, (19) held 25 meetings between 7 March and 15 August under the chairmanship of Alfonso García Robles (Mexico). It based its work on a text reduced by the 1983 Ad Hoc Working Group (52) and discussed for the first time, a draft introduction, which the Committee's Chairman (in his capacity as the Working Group's Chairman) had proposed at the second (1982) disarmament special session. It also had before it a draft text of the programme proposed by France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States, along with nine other new proposals, submitted, respectively, by Argentina (two), France (two), Morocco, the USSR, the United States, Yugoslavia and a group of socialist countries on various aspects of the programme. Contact groups were established to elaborate sections of the programme dealing with measures and stages of implementation and with machinery and procedures. In addition, consultations were held among concerned delegations to reconcile differences on other points.

Despite intensive efforts, progress remained modest. While it was possible to agree on some texts, others reflected points of difference or remained pending; it was understood that delegations could not take final positions until agreement was reached on outstanding points of difficulty and until the document was complete. The Ad Hoc Committee concluded that work should resume and conclude in 1986 with a view to enabling the Conference to submit a draft programme to the Assembly that year.

In comparison with the corresponding 1983 text, the new version of the draft programme contained a number of changes, mostly additions concerning questions such as the nuclear-test ban, USSR-United States negotiations on nuclear and space arms, conventional weapons and armed forces in Europe, prevention of an arms race in outer space, zones of peace in the Indian Ocean and the Mediterranean regions, verification problems, and the programme's machinery and procedures.

The Ad Hoc Committee's report was adopted by the Conference on 29 August as part of its report to the Assembly. (19)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/152 D without vote.

Comprehensive programme of disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling that in paragraph 109 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the Assembly called for the elaboration of a comprehensive programme of disarmament encompassing all measures thought to be advisable in order to ensure that the goal of general and complete disarmament under effective international control becomes a reality in a world in which international peace and security prevail and in which the new international economic order is strengthened and consolidated,

Recalling also its resolution 38/183 K of 20 December 1983, in which it urged the Conference on Disarmament, as soon as it considered that the circumstances were propitious for that purpose, to renew its work on the elaboration of the comprehensive programme of disarmament previously requested, to submit to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session a progress report on the matter and to submit to the Assembly, not later than at its forty-first session, a complete draft of such a programme,

Recalling further its resolution 39/148 I of 17 December 1984, in which it urged that all efforts be made so that the Conference on Disarmament might resume its work on the elaboration of the comprehensive programme of disarmament early in its 1985 session with a view to submitting to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a complete draft of such a programme,

Having examined the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Comprehensive Programme of Disarmament concerning its work during the 1985 session of the Conference on Disarmament, which is an integral part of the report of the Conference,

1. Notes that in its report the Ad Hoc Committee on the Comprehensive Programme of Disarmament stated that during the 1985 session, despite intensive efforts, only modest progress was achieved;

2. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to resume the work on the elaboration of the comprehensive programme of disarmament at the beginning of its 1986 session with the firm intention of concluding that task and submitting to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a complete draft of the programme;

3. Decides to include on the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Comprehensive programme of disarmament: report of the Conference on Disarmament".

Nuclear disarmament

The Disarmament Commission, the Conference on Disarmament and the General Assembly continued to discuss in 1985 proposals for nuclear-war prevention, without reaching a consensus on how to deal with the issue at the multilateral level. As in the past, the Assembly called for efforts aimed at freezing or banning nuclear weapons, prohibiting nuclear-weapons testing, and strengthening the security of non-nuclear-weapon States, while supporting the call for nuclear non-proliferation through the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones.

The Assembly adopted more than two dozen resolutions in 1985 on nuclear questions, including two on bilateral negotiations (40/18 and 40/152 B) that began earlier in the year between the USSR and the United States on strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons. It also recommended that States parties to the 1963 Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water<sup>(1)</sup> consult among themselves on the advisability of converting that Treaty into a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty (40/80 B), and requested that the climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter, be studied (40/152 G).

Throughout 1985, the Secretary-General received communications calling for nuclear disarmament and other general disarmament measures (see p. 14). He also received letters referring specifically to the negotiations on reducing nuclear weapons, begun in January 1985 between the USSR and the United States (see p. 45).

The Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT),<sup>(2)</sup> meeting at Geneva in mid-1985, confirmed the continuing validity of the fundamental aims of the Treaty.

Prevention of nuclear war

In the light of little progress achieved in 1985 in the Conference on Disarmament on the issue of nuclear-war prevention and non-use of nuclear weapons, the General Assembly reiterated its request that the Conference negotiate with a view to agreeing on practical measures to prevent nuclear war (resolution 40/152 Q) and on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons (40/151 F), and to consider elaborating an international legal instrument laying down the obligation of non-first-use of nuclear weapons (40/152 A).

The 1985 Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War.

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. In 1985, the Conference on Disarmament<sup>(3)</sup> had before it working papers submitted by Australia, listing the responsibilities of nuclear-weapon States and those of all States with respect to preventing nuclear war; the Federal Republic of Germany, suggesting issues for consideration; and Romania, specifying topics to facilitate negotiations.

As again requested by the Assembly in 1984,<sup>(4)</sup> the Conference held consultations on an appropriate organizational arrangement to deal with the item, including proposals for setting up a subsidiary body, but no agreement could be reached. On 30 July, the group of 21 (the non-aligned and neutral States within the Conference—Algeria, Argentina, Brazil, Burma, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, India, Indonesia, Iran, Kenya, Mexico, Morocco, Nigeria, Pakistan, Peru, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire) put forward a draft mandate for an ad hoc committee, which would consider all proposals on preventing nuclear war. The draft mandate was supported by the group of socialist countries and by China. The Western delegations, however, stated that they were not in a position to associate themselves with a consensus on the proposed mandate.

Disarmament Commission consideration. Eliminating the danger of nuclear war was considered by the Disarmament Commission in 1985 in conjunction with a general approach to negotiations on nuclear and conventional disarmament (see p. 25).

Report of the Secretary-General. In response to a 1984 Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted—to the Conference in June 1985(5) and to the Assembly in August(6)—a report on suitable steps to expedite effective action for preventing nuclear war. In addition to the replies received from 35 Governments containing their views on such steps, the report contained an introduction summarizing the relevant paragraphs of the 1978 Final Document of the Assembly's tenth special session(7) and the views held on the question, respectively, by non-aligned and neutral, socialist, and Western countries, as well as by China; the report also included a survey of relevant developments since 1961. It concluded that removing the threat of nuclear war was the highest-priority task facing the international community, and that the most effective guarantee against the danger of nuclear war was nuclear disarmament which would eventually lead to agreements on eliminating nuclear weapons under effective international control.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the Assembly adopted two resolutions—40/152 A and Q—on nuclear-war prevention and non-use of nuclear weapons. It also again took up the question of a proposed convention to prohibit nuclear-weapon use (see p. 38).

Two other proposals on preventing nuclear war were withdrawn at the request of their sponsors. A draft by Cyprus(8) would have had the Assembly outlaw nuclear weapons and prohibit their future development or production. The other draft, on preventing war in the nuclear age, sponsored by Canada, Denmark, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, Norway, Portugal, Turkey and the United Kingdom,(9) was a follow-up to another Western-country text submitted and withdrawn in 1984.(10) It covered renunciation of force, restraint, balanced disarmament measures and confidence-building, and added the importance of regional efforts at peace-keeping. It would also have had the Assembly reject policies aimed at achieving military superiority in the place of balance, stability and undiminished security for all States; and declare that a nuclear war could not be won and that a conventional war might involve the risk of escalation to nuclear war.

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/152 A by recorded vote.

Non-use of nuclear weapons and prevention of nuclear war

The General Assembly,

Alarmed by the threat to the survival of mankind posed by the existence of nuclear weapons and the continuing arms race, in particular in the nuclear field,

Recalling that, in accordance with paragraph 20 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, effective measures of nuclear disarmament and the prevention of nuclear war have the highest priority,

Recalling also that this commitment was reaffirmed by the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament,

Bearing in mind its relevant resolutions on this subject,

Reaffirming that the most effective guarantee against the danger of nuclear war and the use of nuclear weapons is nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and which would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming also that the nuclear-weapon States have the primary responsibility for nuclear disarmament and for undertaking measures aimed at preventing the outbreak of nuclear war, inter alia, by establishing corresponding norms regulating relations between them,

Commemorating the fortieth anniversary of the end of the Second World War, the most destructive and bloody war in the history of mankind, and also commemorating the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations,

Reaffirming its conviction that removing the threat of a world war—a nuclear war—is the most acute and urgent task of the present time,

Convinced that the renunciation of the first use of nuclear weapons is a most important and urgent measure for the prevention of nuclear war, and taking note of the broad, positive international reaction to the concept of non-first use of nuclear weapons,

1. Considers that the solemn declarations by two nuclear-weapon States made or reiterated at the twelfth special session of the General Assembly, concerning their respective obligations not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, offer an important avenue to decrease the danger of nuclear war;

2. Expresses the hope that those nuclear-weapon States that have not yet done so would consider making similar declarations with respect to not being the first to use nuclear weapons;

3. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider under its relevant agenda item, inter alia, the elaboration of an international instrument of a legally binding character laying down the obligation not to be the first to use nuclear weapons;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Non-use of nuclear weapons and prevention of nuclear war".

Abstaining: Austria, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Paraguay.

Explaining its vote, Norway, while fully supportive of efforts to reduce the importance of and dependence on nuclear weapons, viewed the draft as directed at the defensive strategy of the alliance to which it belonged.

Austria stressed that an obligation of non-first-use, to be credible, had to lead to a modification of military doctrines and structures, and it had to be verifiable; an agreement on non-first-use of nuclear weapons would be realistic only if the nuclear Powers ensured stability by reaching an understanding on conventional weapons.

Finland stressed that nuclear weapons should never be used under any circumstances. Similarly, Indonesia maintained that all use, not only first use, must be prohibited. Asserting that what was required was improved compliance with existing prohibitions and the obligation under the United Nations Charter for peaceful settlement of disputes, Sweden said that an international instrument by which the nuclear-weapon States would pledge non-first-use should deal exclusively with that concept without bringing in any further elements. Ireland continued to have some reservations it had voiced previously, and emphasized that the nuclear-weapon Powers needed to consider seriously what methods or agreements they might work out to provide against first use.

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 Q by recorded vote.

Prevention of nuclear war

The General Assembly,

Alarmed by the threat to the survival of mankind posed by the existence of nuclear weapons and the continuing nuclear-arms race,

Deeply concerned by an increased danger of nuclear war as a result of the intensification of the nuclear-arms race and the serious deterioration of the international situation,

Conscious that removal of the threat of nuclear war is the most acute and urgent task of the present day,

Reiterating that it is the shared responsibility of all Member States to save succeeding generations from the scourge of another world war, which would inevitably be a nuclear war,

Recalling the provisions of paragraphs 47 to 50 and 56 to 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, regarding the procedures designed to secure the avoidance of nuclear war,

Recalling also that at the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983, it was stated that nuclear weapons were more than weapons of war, they were instruments of mass annihilation, and that at the Conference of Ministers of Foreign Affairs of Non-Aligned Countries held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985, it was stated that measures for the prevention of nuclear war and for nuclear disarmament must take into account the security interests of nuclear-weapon and non-nuclear-weapon States alike and ensure that the survival of mankind is not endangered,

Recalling further its resolutions 36/81 B of 9 December 1981, 37/78 I of 9 December 1982, 38/183 G of 20 December 1983 and, in particular, its resolution 39/148 P of 17 December 1984, in which it expressed its conviction that, in view of the urgency of this matter and the inadequacy or insufficiency of existing measures, it is necessary to devise suitable steps to expedite effective action for the prevention of nuclear war, and again requested the Conference on Disarmament to undertake, as a matter of the highest priority, negotiations with a view to achieving agreement on appropriate and practical measures for the prevention of nuclear war,

Having considered the report of the Conference on Disarmament on its 1985 session,

Noting with grave concern that the Conference on Disarmament was once again unable to start negotiations on the question during its 1985 session,

Taking into account the deliberations on this item at its fortieth session,

Convinced that the prevention of nuclear war and the reduction of the risk of nuclear war are matters of the highest priority and of vital interest to all peoples of the world,

Also convinced that the prevention of nuclear war is a problem too important to be left to the nuclear-weapon States alone,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Notes with regret that, despite the fact that the Conference on Disarmament has discussed the question of the prevention of nuclear war for several years, it has been unable even to establish a subsidiary body to consider appropriate and practical measures to prevent it;

2. Reiterates its conviction that, in view of the urgency of this matter and the inadequacy or insufficiency of existing measures, it is necessary to devise suitable steps to expedite effective action for the prevention of nuclear war;

3. Again requests the Conference on Disarmament to undertake, as a matter of the highest priority, negotiations with a view to achieving agreement on appropriate and practical measures for the prevention of nuclear war and to establish for that purpose an ad hoc committee on the subject at the beginning of its 1986 session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Prevention of nuclear war".

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey.

In explanation of vote, the United Kingdom said the call for negotiations in the Conference on nuclear-war prevention overlooked the fact that a number of practical measures had already been taken in that regard; respect for the Charter's provisions was the best way to prevent all war.

Proposed convention

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/151 F on a proposed convention prohibiting the use of nuclear weapons. A draft convention, as annexed to a 1982(11) Assembly resolution and resubmitted in 1983(12) and 1984,(13) was again annexed to the resolution, as a basis for negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament.

Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Alarmed by the threat to the survival of mankind and to the life-sustaining system posed by nuclear weapons and by their use, inherent in concepts of deterrence,

Conscious of an increased danger of nuclear war as a result of the intensification of the nuclear-arms race and the serious deterioration of the international situation,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament is essential for the prevention of nuclear war and for the strengthening of international peace and security,

Further convinced that a prohibition of the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons would be a step towards the complete elimination of nuclear weapons leading to general and complete disarmament under strict and effective international control,

Recalling that, in paragraph 58 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it is stated that all States should actively participate in efforts to bring about conditions in international relations among States in which a code of peaceful conduct of nations in international affairs could be agreed upon and that would preclude the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming that the use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations and a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 1653(XVI) of 24 November 1961, 33/71 B of 14 December 1978, 34/83 G of 11 December 1979, 35/152 D of 12 December 1980 and 36/92 I of 9 December 1981,

Noting with regret that the Conference on Disarmament, during its session in 1985, was not able to undertake negotiations with a view to achieving agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances, taking as a basis the text annexed to General Assembly resolution 39/63 H of 12 December 1984,

1. Reiterates its request to the Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations, as a matter of priority, in order to achieve agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances, taking as a basis the text of the draft Convention on the Prohibition of the Use of Nuclear Weapons annexed to the present resolution;

2. Further requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the results of those negotiations.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States

Abstaining: Austria, Greece, Grenada, Ireland, Israel, Japan.

In explanation of vote, Greece said it believed the Conference on Disarmament was the place where a draft convention should be drawn up. Sweden expressed reservations as to the draft resolution's interpretation, in the sixth preambular paragraph, of the United Nations Charter; it added that if the use of nuclear weapons violated the Charter, there would be no obvious need for another international legal instrument in that respect.

Climatic effects of nuclear war

In December 1985, the General Assembly requested the Secretary-General, with the help of experts, to study the climatic and potential physical effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter (resolution 40/152 G).

Report of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to the Assembly's 1984 request, (14) the Secretary-General submitted in September 1985 a report containing excerpts of all national and international scientific studies, published before 31 July, on the climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter. (15) The report had eight chapters, dealing with introduction; background; methodology, baseline cases and models, and their critique; fires and effects of smoke; dust and soot; chemical changes in the atmosphere; effects and consequences on atmosphere and climate—nuclear winter; and conclusions of various studies. An appendix contained a selective bibliography.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, on the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 G by recorded vote.

Climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter

The General Assembly,

Recalling that in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, after referring specifically to "the threat to the very survival of mankind" posed by the existence of nuclear weapons, it declared, in paragraph 18, that removing the threat of a world war—a nuclear war—is the most acute and urgent task of the present day,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General transmitting the compilation, requested in General Assembly resolution 39/148 F of 17 December 1984, of appropriate excerpts of all national and international scientific studies on the climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter, published so far,

Noting that the conclusions of some of those studies confirm that nuclear winter and other climatic effects of nuclear war pose an unprecedented peril to all nations, even those far removed from the nuclear explosions, which would add immeasurably to the previously known dangers of nuclear war, without excluding the possibility of all the Earth being transformed into a darkened, frozen planet, where conditions would be conducive to mass extinction,

Noting also that from those conclusions and from various sections of the studies themselves it clearly follows that international efforts to carry out further systematic research are necessary,

1. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for the compilation of excerpts of scientific studies on the climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter, prepared in accordance with the request made in its resolution 39/148 F;

2. Requests the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a group of consultant experts* chosen by him, bearing in mind the advisability of wide geographical representation and of their qualifications in a broad range of scientific fields, to carry out a study on the climatic and potential physical effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter, which will examine, inter alia, its socio-economic consequences and would take into account the Secretary-General's report and the source documents from which the compilation was prepared, together with any other relevant scientific studies;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to transmit the study to the General Assembly in due time for consideration at its forty-second session, in 1987;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-second session an item entitled: "Climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter: report of the Secretary-General".

*Subsequently referred to as the Group of Consultant Experts to Carry Out a Study on the Climatic and Potential Physical Effects of Nuclear War, including Nuclear Winter.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Turkey, United Kingdom.

The United States in explaining its vote believed that the issue merited intensive study by highly qualified scientists, shielded from an emotionally and politically charged atmosphere—which, it felt, would be impossible in the study proposed in the draft; further, the text had financial implications.

The United Kingdom, also concerned about the study's cost, said it would duplicate work done elsewhere, that the international community should devote its full attention to ways of ensuring that a nuclear war would not take place, and that it had doubts about the terms of reference, especially the socio-economic aspect, of the study.

Japan felt it would be more appropriate to have that part of the draft which was basically a technical matter subjected to full scientific consideration rather than have the Assembly directly and hastily involve itself.

Nuclear-arms limitation and disarmament

In November and again in December 1985, the General Assembly expressed support for the bilateral negotiations, begun earlier in the year between the USSR and the United States, on strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons (resolutions 40/18 and 40/152 B). In addition, the Assembly called on the Conference on Disarmament: to begin multilateral negotiations on, and elaborate practical measures for, the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament (40/152 C and P), to discuss the question of adequately verified cessation and prohibition of the production of fissionable material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices (40/94 G), and to initiate negotiations with a view to concluding a convention banning the nuclear neutron weapon (40/152 H).

The Secretary-General also stressed the crucial importance to all peoples of the bilateral talks between the two super-Powers (see p. 8).

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. The Conference on Disarmament(3) again considered in 1985, but failed to agree on, the possibility of establishing a subsidiary body to negotiate on nuclear disarmament. Two formal proposals made in 1984(16) concerning a mandate for such a body were reiterated, respectively, by a group of socialist States members of the Conference and by the group of 21. The former had envisaged a committee to begin elaborating practical measures for the cessation of the arms race and for nuclear disarmament, while the latter had suggested that the proposed body elaborate on paragraph 50 of the 1978 Final Document,(7) dealing with multilateral agreements and adequate verification measures, and identify substantive issues for multilateral negotiations. The Western States, however, remained unconvinced of the merit of creating a subsidiary body.

Disarmament Commission consideration. As in previous years, the Disarmament Commission(17) considered, under a two-tiered agenda item, various aspects of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament in order to expedite negotiations aimed at eliminating the dangers of nuclear war; and a general approach to negotiations on nuclear and conventional disarmament in accordance with priorities established at the Assembly's 1978 special session(7) see p. 25).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the Assembly adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/152 C, as recommended by the First Committee.

Nuclear weapons in all aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling that at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, it expressed its profound preoccupation over the danger of war, in particular nuclear war, the prevention of which remains the most acute and urgent task of the present day,

Reaffirming that nuclear weapons pose the most serious threat to mankind and its survival and that it is therefore essential to proceed with nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming also that all nuclear-weapon States, in particular those which possess the most important nuclear arsenals, bear a special responsibility for the fulfilment of the task of achieving the goals of nuclear disarmament,

Stressing again that existing arsenals of nuclear weapons alone are more than sufficient to destroy all life on Earth, and bearing in mind the devastating results which nuclear war would have on belligerents and non-belligerents alike,

Recalling that at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament, it decided that effective measures of nuclear disarmament and the prevention of nuclear war had the highest priority and that it was essential to halt and reverse the nuclear-arms race in all its aspects in order to avert the danger of war involving nuclear weapons,

Stressing that any expectation of winning a nuclear war is senseless and that such a war would inevitably lead to the destruction of nations, to enormous devastation and to catastrophic consequences for civilization and life itself on Earth,

Convinced of the necessity of rejecting any military doctrine and concept that might lead to the unleashing of a nuclear war and might impede measures to halt the nuclear-arms race,

Stressing the urgent need for a halt to the nuclear-arms race as a step on the road to nuclear disarmament,

Stressing again that priority in disarmament negotiations should be given to nuclear weapons, and referring to paragraphs 49 and 54 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Recalling its relevant resolutions on this subject,

Welcoming the negotiations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America on a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms—both strategic and intermediate-range—aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on Earth,

Noting the belief expressed by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America that ultimately their negotiations, just as efforts in general to limit and reduce arms, should lead to the complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere,

Welcoming the Delhi Declaration issued on 28 January 1985 by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations, as well as the positive response this Declaration has met with in many States,

Taking note of the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985, in which is stressed, inter alia, the urgent need to initiate multilateral negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament,

Taking note also of the relevant deliberations of the Disarmament Commission in 1985 with regard to item 4 of its agenda, as contained in its report,

Noting that the Conference on Disarmament, at its 1985 session, discussed the question of the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, including the establishment of an ad hoc committee for negotiations on that question,

Regretting, however, that the Conference on Disarmament was unable to reach agreement on the establishment of an ad hoc committee for the purpose of undertaking multilateral negotiations on the question of the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament,

Considering that efforts will continue to be made in order to enable the Conference on Disarmament to fulfil its negotiating role with regard to the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, and that for this purpose all members of the Conference should display a constructive approach to such negotiations, bearing in mind the high priority they have accorded to this question in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session,

Convinced that the Conference on Disarmament is the most suitable forum for the preparation and conduct of multilateral negotiations on nuclear disarmament,

1. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to proceed without delay to negotiations on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament and especially to begin the elaboration of practical measures for the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and for nuclear disarmament in accordance with paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, including a nuclear-disarmament programme, and to establish for this purpose an ad hoc committee;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament: report of the Conference on Disarmament".

The Bahamas said it had abstained on a number of other draft resolutions because of their redundancy; while in agreement with many aspects of those proposals, it was disappointed that the similar elements could not be extracted and combined into a positive whole. Finland said that because it concurred with the draft's main thrust of ending the nuclear-arms race, it cast an affirmative vote despite reservations about certain parts of the preamble.

Also on 16 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 P by recorded vote.

Cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, in paragraph 11 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, the Assembly stated that the nuclear-arms race, far from contributing to the strengthening of the security of all States, on the contrary weakens it and increases the danger of the outbreak of a nuclear war and that existing arsenals of nuclear weapons are more than sufficient to destroy all life on Earth,

Recalling also, that, in paragraph 47 of the Final Document, the Assembly expressed the belief that nuclear weapons pose the greatest danger to mankind and to the survival of civilization, that it is essential to halt and reverse the nuclear-arms race in all its aspects in order to avert the danger of war involving nuclear weapons, and that the ultimate goal in this context is the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

Noting that, in the Political Declaration adopted by the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983, it was stated that the renewed escalation of the nuclear-arms race, as well as reliance on doctrines of nuclear deterrence, had heightened the risk of the outbreak of nuclear war and led to greater insecurity and instability in international relations, and that it was also stated that nuclear weapons were more than weapons of war, that such weapons were instruments of mass annihilation,

Noting further that, in the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985, it was stated that doctrines of nuclear deterrence, far from contributing to the maintenance of international peace and security, lay at the root of the continuing escalation in quantitative and qualitative development of nuclear weapons,

Believing that all nations have a vital interest in negotiations on nuclear disarmament because the existence of nuclear weapons in the arsenals of a handful of States directly and fundamentally jeopardizes the vital security interests of both nuclear and non-nuclear-weapon States alike,

Considering that it is necessary to halt all testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and their delivery systems as a first step in the process which should lead to the achievement of substantial reductions in nuclear forces, and welcoming in this context the Joint Declaration issued on 22 May 1984 by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations, which was reaffirmed in the Delhi Declaration issued by those States on 28 January 1985,

Convinced of the imperative need to take constructive action towards halting and reversing the nuclear-arms race,

1. Takes note of the initiation of bilateral negotiations on nuclear and space arms and affirms that such negotiations in no way diminish the urgent need to initiate multilateral negotiations in the Conference on Disarmament on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament;

2. Believes that efforts should be intensified with a view to initiating, as a matter of the highest priority, multilateral negotiations in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly;

3. Again request the Conference on Disarmament to establish an ad hoc committee at the beginning of its 1986 session to elaborate on paragraph 50 of the Final Document and to submit recommendations to the Conference as to how it could best initiate multilateral negotiations of agreements, with adequate measures of verification, in appropriate stages for:

(a) Cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems;

(b) Cessation of the production of all types of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery, and of the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes;

(c) Substantial reduction in existing nuclear weapons with a view to their ultimate elimination;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on its consideration of this subject;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament".

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Bahamas, Denmark, Grenada, Japan, Sierra Leone, Spain.

In explanation of vote, France stated that the text ran directly counter to a doctrine which was at the root of its security and defence policy. The United Kingdom believed that bilateral negotiations between the two major Powers—possessing the greatest military capability in space and some 95 per cent of the world's nuclear weapons—offered the most realistic hope of halting the nuclear-arms race and initiating the process of reducing nuclear armaments; it added that multilateral negotiations on the subject in the Conference on Disarmament would be unrealistic and premature, and could prove harmful to the prospects for the bilateral negotiations.

China regretted the text's failure to mention the special responsibility to be shouldered by the countries with the largest nuclear arsenals.

Prohibition of nuclear weapons

In 1985, the General Assembly requested the Conference on Disarmament to pursue consideration of adequately verified cessation and prohibition of the production of fissionable material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices (resolution 40/94 G). In addition, for the fifth consecutive year, the Assembly requested the Conference to start without delay negotiations aimed at concluding a convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling, deployment and use of nuclear neutron weapons, also known as enhanced radiation weapons (40/152 H).

Fissionable material

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 G by recorded vote.

Prohibition of the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 33/91 H of 16 December 1978, 34/87 D of 11 December 1979, 35/156 H of 12 December 1980, 36/97 G of 9 December 1981, 37/99 E of 13 December 1982, 38/188 E of 20 December 1983 and 39/151 H of 17 December 1984, in which it requested the Committee on Disarmament, at an appropriate stage of the implementation of the Programme of Action set forth in section III of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and of its work on the item entitled "Nuclear weapons in all aspects", to consider urgently the question of adequately verified cessation and prohibition of the production of fissionable material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices and to keep the Assembly informed of the progress of that consideration,

Noting that the agenda of the Conference on Disarmament for 1985 included the item entitled "Nuclear weapons in all aspects" and that the programme of work of the Conference for both parts of its session held in 1985 contained the item entitled "Cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament",

Recalling the proposals and statements made in the Conference on Disarmament on those items,

Considering that the cessation of production of fissionable material for weapons purposes and the progressive conversion and transfer of stocks to peaceful uses would be a significant step towards halting and reversing the nuclear-arms race,

Considering that the prohibition of the production of fissionable material for nuclear weapons and other explosive devices also would be an important measure in facilitating the prevention of the proliferation of nuclear weapons and explosive devices,

Requests the Conference on Disarmament, at an appropriate stage of its work on the item entitled "Nuclear weapons in all aspects", to pursue its consideration of the question of adequately verified cessation and prohibition of the production of fissionable material for nuclear weapons and other nuclear explosive devices and to keep the General Assembly informed of the progress of that consideration.

Against: France.

Abstaining: Argentina, Brazil, China, India, Saint Christopher and Nevis United Kingdom, United States.

France, which had abstained in the First Committee, cast a negative vote in the plenary Assembly, stating that the prohibition of the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes could be conceived of realistically only within the context of an effective process of nuclear disarmament, and not as a pre-condition for such a process. Argentina shared that view, as did the USSR, which added that it supported the draft on the understanding that "its work" in the operative paragraph referred to practical negotiations in the Conference. For India, the draft embodied a one-sided approach inconsistent with that of the 1978 Final Document,(7) notably its paragraph 50.

The Assembly, in resolution 40/151 E, called on all nuclear-weapon States to agree to a freeze on nuclear weapons, which would, among other things, provide for a simultaneous total stoppage of any further production of nuclear weapons and a complete cut-off in the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes.

Nuclear neutron weapon

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 H by recorded vote, on the recommendation of the First Committee.

Prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 50 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated that the achievement of nuclear disarmament will require urgent negotiation of agreements, inter alia, for the cessation of the qualitative improvement and development of nuclear-weapon systems, which is especially emphasized in paragraph 50 (a) of that Document,

Recalling also that in paragraph 50 of the Final Document it is also underlined that in the course of negotiations consideration can be given to mutual and agreed limitation or prohibition, without prejudice to the security of any State, of any types of nuclear armaments,

Stressing that the development and production of the nuclear neutron weapon is a dangerous consequence of the continuing qualitative arms race in the field of nuclear weapons, especially through the qualitative improvement and development of new nuclear warheads by enhancing specific characteristics of nuclear weapons,

Reaffirming its relevant resolutions on the prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon,

Sharing the world-wide concern expressed by Member States, as well as by non-governmental organizations, about the continued and expanded production and introduction of the nuclear neutron weapon in military arsenals, which escalates the nuclear-arms race and significantly lowers the threshold of nuclear war,

Aware of the inhuman effects of that weapon, which constitutes a grave threat, particularly to the unprotected civilian population,

Noting the consideration by the Conference on Disarmament at its 1985 session of issues connected with the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, as well as the prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon,

Regretting that the Conference on Disarmament was prevented from reaching agreement on the commencement of negotiations on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament, including the prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon, in an appropriate organizational framework,

1. Reaffirms its request to the Conference on Disarmament to start without delay negotiations within an appropriate organizational framework, with a view to concluding a convention on the prohibition of the development, production, stockpiling, deployment and use of nuclear neutron weapons as an organic element of negotiations, as envisaged in paragraph 50 of the Final

Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Conference on Disarmament all documents relating to the consideration of this question by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

3. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to submit a report on this question to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Prohibition of the nuclear neutron weapon".

USSR—United States negotiations

In accordance with an agreement reached in January 1985, the USSR and the United States began, at Geneva in March, new bilateral negotiations on strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons. The heads of the respective Governments, at a summit meeting at Geneva from 19 to 21 November, agreed to accelerate the work.

The Assembly adopted two resolutions wishing success in the bilateral talks—one in November, as proposed by a group of non-aligned countries (40/18), and the other in December, based on a draft by Western and other countries (40/152 B). In other action, the Assembly made numerous calls to the two States to address various specific aspects of nuclear disarmament (see under related subject headings).

Communications. A number of 1985 communications addressed to the Secretary-General were on the USSR-United States talks. On 30 January, (18) Argentina, Greece, India, Mexico, Sweden and the United Republic of Tanzania transmitted the 28 January Delhi Declaration by the leaders of the six countries, welcoming the 8 January agreement between the USSR and the United States to negotiate on strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons and calling for a halt to all nuclear-weapons testing and for the early conclusion of a comprehensive test-ban treaty. In February, the German Democratic Republic(19) and Mongolia(20) expressed support for the Declaration. In connection with the November Geneva summit meeting, the six leaders, by a joint message of 24 October,(21) called on the USSR and the United States to suspend all nuclear tests for a 12-month period and offered their assistance in verifying compliance with the proposed moratorium. In response, the General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the USSR, on 6 November,(22) reiterated his country's willingness to extend its unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions, begun on 6 August (see p. 47), beyond 1 January 1986 if the United States joined in it, and to conclude a treaty prohibiting all nuclear-weapon tests indefinitely.

Hopes for the bilateral summit's success were expressed by Brazil, which on 18 November(23) transmitted the messages its President had sent to the heads of the two Governments, and by Uganda in a 20 November Foreign Ministry communiqué.(24)

By a letter of 16 December,(25) the USSR and the United States forwarded their 21 November joint statement, issued at Geneva, in which their leaders emphasized the importance of preventing wars between them and agreed to accelerate arms control and disarmament negotiations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 18 November, adopted resolution 40/18 by recorded vote.

Bilateral nuclear-arms negotiations

The General Assembly,

Noting the agreement between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America to begin negotiations on "a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms—both strategic and intermediate-range—" with the objective "to work out effective agreements aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on Earth", which negotiations ultimately "should lead to the complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere",

Deeply concerned by the fact that humanity is confronted today with an unprecedented threat to its survival arising from the massive and competitive accumulation of the most destructive weapons ever produced, especially nuclear weapons more than sufficient to destroy all life on Earth,

Conscious that such a situation is all the more difficult to justify if one takes into account that there already exists an international consensus that a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought,

1. Expresses its hope that the forthcoming meeting between the two leaders of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America will give a decisive impetus to their current bilateral negotiations so that these negotiations produce early and effective agreements on the halting of the nuclear-arms race with its negative effects on international security as well as on social and economic development, reduction of their nuclear arsenals, prevention of an arms race in outer space and the use of outer space for peaceful purposes;

2. Invites the two negotiating parties to keep the General Assembly duly informed of the progress of their negotiations;

3. Reaffirms that in these negotiations the vital interests of all peoples, including those of the two negotiating parties, are at stake;

4. Further reaffirms that bilateral negotiations do not in any way diminish the urgent need to initiate and pursue multilateral negotiations on the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and nuclear disarmament and on the prevention of an arms race in outer space;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to convey this resolution to the leaders of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America before their meeting at Geneva on 19 and 20 November 1985.

Approved by First Committee (A/40/877) by recorded vote (117-0-16), 14 November (meeting 38); 20-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.60); agenda item 65 (i).

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Bolivia, Botswana, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Greece, Guyana, Hungary, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Jordan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, New Zealand, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Samoa, Senegal, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Portugal, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

The United States could not support the text as agreement could not be reached on language neither promoting nor prejudicing the viewpoints of anyone, including the participants in the Geneva meeting.

Abstaining in the Committee, France stated that it had difficulties with paragraph 4; it asserted that the Geneva talks, important as they were, could not by themselves solve all the problems; further, it was inappropriate for the Assembly to appear to be giving a general mandate to the two parties.

The Netherlands abstained to express its disappointment over the failure to reach a consensus on an important issue.

Canada, which supported the text's overall thrust, thought it was imperfect and that paragraph 4, in particular, was susceptible to different interpretations; its vote did not indicate support of immediate negotiations on outer space in the Conference on Disarmament. The USSR agreed that bilateral and multilateral negotiations should complement one another.

Albania did not participate in the voting, saying the illusion that humanity's problems would be solved by agreements between the two super-Powers was fraught with grave consequences.

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 B by recorded vote.

Bilateral nuclear-arms and space-arms negotiations

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 38/183 P of 20 December 1983 and 39/148 B of 17 December 1984,

Welcoming warmly the resumption on 12 March 1985 of the bilateral negotiations at Geneva between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America,

Noting that in their joint statement of 8 January 1985 the two Governments agreed that the subject of these negotiations is a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms—both strategic and intermediate-range—with all these questions considered and resolved in their interrelationship,

Noting that the agreed objective of these negotiations is to work out effective agreements aimed at preventing an arms race in space and terminating it on Earth, at limiting and reducing nuclear arms and at strengthening strategic stability,

Noting also that the two sides believe that ultimately these negotiations, just as efforts in general to limit and reduce arms, should lead to the complete elimination of nuclear weapons everywhere,

Noting further that both the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America have expressed their readiness to keep the other States Members of the United Nations duly informed of progress in their bilateral negotiations, in accordance with paragraph 114 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Convinced that, through negotiations pursued in a spirit of flexibility and with full account taken of the security interests of all States, it is possible to reach agreement,

Firmly convinced that an early agreement in these negotiations, in accordance with the principle of undiminished security at the lowest possible level of armaments, would be of crucial importance for the strengthening of international peace and security,

1. Calls upon the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Government of the United States of America to spare no effort in seeking the attainment of their agreed objective in the negotiations, in accordance with the security interests of all States and the universal desire for progress towards disarmament;

2. Urges the Governments of the two States concerned to work actively towards the achievement of that objective in order to enable the negotiations to make substantial progress;

3. Expresses its firmest possible encouragement and support for these negotiations and their successful conclusion.

Prior to approving the text as a whole, the First Committee approved—by a recorded vote of 61 to 24, with 23 abstentions—a three-nation amendment which deleted from paragraph 2, after “to work actively”, the phrase “and without pre-conditions”. Voting against the amendment, the United Kingdom said the draft's sponsors felt that the amendment would give the impression that the Committee favoured imposing pre-conditions on the progress of negotiations. The United States shared that misgiving, while France feared that prior conditions might complicate, or lead to failure in, the negotiations. For Nigeria, however, the phrase's deletion facilitated its support of the text.

Six countries explained their abstentions on the amended text. The USSR said it distorted the actual state of affairs, for instance in the second preambular paragraph, by describing the bilateral negotiations as having been resumed, rather than commenced as a new round as mentioned in the USSR-United States agreement of November 1984;(26) the draft also referred to the 1983 and 1984 Assembly resolutions which it had opposed.

For the same reasons, the Ukrainian SSR would have opposed the first and second preambular paragraphs had they been voted on separately. Hungary also pointed out that it had voted against some resolutions mentioned in the preamble, which, it added, had been overtaken by events since then. Yugoslavia felt that the text expressed the view of only one group of countries. Mexico said the amended text—which was not more acceptable, only less unacceptable, than the unamended version—remained unbalanced and did not help the negotiating Powers in any way. Sri Lanka was unconvinced of what it regarded as the extravagant hopes reflected in the text, in the light of the record of the previous three rounds of bilateral negotiations. That view was shared by Argentina, which added that the text reflected neither the way in which multilateral mechanisms could participate in disarmament negotiations nor the role of the United Nations in them.

France stressed that the bilateral talks could deal only with the weapons of the two parties concerned and could not take into account the nuclear forces of third parties; it added that the total elimination of nuclear weapons would be accomplished only through general and complete disarmament.

The Assembly's call on major Powers to pursue their negotiations on arms limitation and disarmament were repeated in a number of 1985 resolutions, notably, 40/152 N and P.

Cessation of nuclear-weapon tests

In December 1985, the General Assembly adopted three resolutions in which it called again on the Conference on Disarmament to negotiate on a nuclear-weapon test-ban treaty (40/80 A, 40/81, 40/88) and to establish an ad hoc committee to that end. By another resolution, the Assembly recommended that States parties to the 1963 Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water,<sup>(1)</sup> also known as the partial test-ban treaty, consult among themselves as to the advisability and most appropriate method of converting that Treaty into a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty (40/80 B).

Outside the United Nations framework, the USSR announced, on 29 July, its unilateral decision to halt all nuclear explosions from 6 August 1985 until 1 January 1986. Also on 29 July, the United States announced that it had invited Soviet experts to visit a test site with the equipment they deemed necessary to measure the yield of a test.

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. In 1985, the Conference on Disarmament,<sup>(3)</sup> which had again been asked by the Assembly in 1984<sup>(27)</sup> to proceed to negotiations on a nuclear-weapon test-ban treaty, failed to agree on the mandate of an ad hoc committee on the topic.

In addition to previous proposals, updated by the group of 21<sup>(28)</sup> and by the socialist States,<sup>(29)</sup> for an ad hoc committee to initiate the multilateral negotiation of a treaty, the Conference received in 1985 a proposal by Brazil<sup>(30)</sup> urging it to establish a subsidiary body. Bulgaria and the German Democratic Republic<sup>(31)</sup> submitted a joint working paper proposing a list of subjects for consideration by an ad hoc committee, while a draft programme of work for a subsidiary body<sup>(32)</sup> was suggested by Australia, Belgium, Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States.

In the Conference, the Western countries held that a subsidiary body should resume its substantive examination of specific issues—such as verification, compliance and scope of a future treaty—with a view to negotiating a treaty, adding that, in a spirit of flexibility, it had proposed a revised broader mandate to enable practical work to continue. The group of 21, on the other hand, asserted that the limited mandate it had agreed for a subsidiary body in 1982 and 1983 had become outdated.

The USSR transmitted its views on the test ban, including a statement by its General Secretary<sup>(33)</sup> on its announcement of a unilateral moratorium starting on 6 August 1985.

Working papers on seismic monitoring were submitted to the Conference in 1985 by: the Federal Republic of Germany—one on an international monitoring and verification system based on current technology, without awaiting the conclusion of a comprehensive test-ban treaty or other contractual arrangements,<sup>(34)</sup> and the other on a system design for improving the seismic monitoring and verification capabilities of a comprehensive nuclear-test ban;<sup>(35)</sup> by Japan,<sup>(36)</sup> on measures for, and estimated costs of, realizing an international seismic data exchange system; and by the United Kingdom,<sup>(37)</sup> on the possibility of establishing, and likely capabilities of, a global monitoring network. Norway, a non-member of the Conference, submitted the report of a workshop (Oslo, 4-7 June) it had sponsored on seismological verification of a comprehensive test ban, which was attended by 84 participants from 41 countries.<sup>(38)</sup>

The Ad Hoc Group of Scientific Experts to Consider International Co-operative Measures to Detect and Identify Seismic Events held its nineteenth (25-29 March)<sup>(39)</sup> and twentieth (15-19 July)<sup>(40)</sup> sessions at Geneva under the chairmanship of Ola Dahlman (Sweden), submitting progress reports on each session.

Communications. Nuclear-weapon tests were the subject of several 1985 communications to the Secretary-General. By letters dated 30 July<sup>(41)</sup> and 15 August,<sup>(42)</sup> the USSR transmitted statements made by its General Secretary on that country's decision to proclaim a unilateral moratorium on nuclear-weapon tests from 6 August 1985 to 1 January 1986, and his call to the United States to do likewise; provided the United States did so, the moratorium would remain in effect, he stated. On 26 December,(43) the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya welcomed the USSR decision and expressed concern over the danger posed by continued tests.

On 19 September,(44) Papua New Guinea forwarded the South Pacific Forum communiqué (Rarotonga, Cook Islands, 5 and 6 August) (see also p. 58), in which the Forum reaffirmed its opposition to French nuclear testing at Mururoa Atoll and to the dumping of radioactive waste in the oceans of the region.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In addition to the four draft texts relating to the cessation of nuclear-weapon tests and a test-ban treaty (see below), a draft on notification of nuclear tests(45) was submitted to the First Committee. Sponsored by Australia, Fiji, Ireland, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Samoa and Sweden, the draft would have had the Assembly call on States concerned to provide data to the Secretary-General within one week of each nuclear explosion, and express its conviction that such a full and open accounting would help improve independent monitoring capabilities and thereby facilitate the early conclusion of a verifiable comprehensive test-ban treaty. Since the sponsors subsequently ascertained that other considerations had to be addressed before the procedure could be implemented, they requested that no action be taken on the text.

On 12 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted four resolutions concerning a nuclear-test-ban treaty, on the recommendation of the First Committee, where several delegations explained in single statements their votes on two or more texts (see p. 53).

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/80 A by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind that the complete cessation of nuclear-weapon tests, which has been examined for more than twenty-five years and on which the General Assembly has adopted nearly fifty resolutions, is a basic objective of the United Nations in the sphere of disarmament, to the attainment of which it has repeatedly assigned the highest priority,

Stressing that on eight different occasions it has condemned such tests in the strongest terms and that, since 1974, it has stated its conviction that the continuance of nuclear-weapon testing will intensify the arms race, thus increasing the danger of nuclear war,

Reiterating the assertion made in several previous resolutions that, whatever may be the differences on the question of verification, there is no valid reason for delaying the conclusion of an agreement on a comprehensive test ban,

Recalling that as early as 1972 the Secretary-General declared that all the technical and scientific aspects of the problem have been so fully explored that only a political decision is now necessary in order to achieve final agreement, that when the existing means of verification are taken into account it is difficult to understand further delay in achieving agreement on an underground-test ban, and that the potential risks of continuing underground nuclear-weapon tests would far outweigh any possible risks from ending such tests,

Recalling also that the Secretary-General, addressing a plenary meeting of the General Assembly on 12 December 1984, after appealing for a renewed effort towards a comprehensive test-ban treaty, emphasized that no single multilateral agreement could have a greater effect on limiting the further refinement of nuclear weapons and that a comprehensive test-ban treaty is the litmus test of the real willingness to pursue nuclear disarmament,

Taking into account that the three nuclear-weapon States which act as depositaries of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water undertook in article I of that Treaty to conclude a treaty resulting in the permanent banning of all nuclear-test explosions, including all those explosions underground, and that such an undertaking was reiterated in 1968 in the preamble to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, article VI of which further embodies their solemn and legally binding commitment to take effective measures relating to the cessation of the nuclear-arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament,

Bearing in mind that the same three nuclear-weapon States, in the report they submitted on 30 July 1980 to the Committee on Disarmament after four years of trilateral negotiations, stated, inter alia, that they were "mindful of the great value for all mankind that the prohibition of all nuclear-weapon test explosions in all environments will have" as well as "conscious of the important responsibility placed upon them to find solutions to the remaining problems", adding furthermore that they were "determined to exert their best efforts and necessary will and persistence to bring the negotiations to an early and successful conclusion",

Noting that the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, in its Final Declaration adopted on 21 September 1985, called upon the nuclear-weapon States parties to the Treaty to resume trilateral negotiations in 1985 and called upon all the nuclear-weapon States to participate in the urgent negotiation and conclusion of a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty, as a matter of the highest priority, in the Conference on Disarmament,

Bearing in mind that the multilateral negotiation of such a treaty in the Conference on Disarmament must cover all the various interrelated problems which it will be necessary to solve in order that the Conference may transmit a complete draft treaty to the General Assembly,

1. Reiterates once again its grave concern that nuclear-weapon tests have not yet stopped, in spite of the wishes of the overwhelming majority of Member States;

2. Reaffirm its conviction that a treaty to achieve the prohibition of all nuclear-test explosions by all States for all time is a matter of the highest priority;

3. Reaffirms also its conviction that such a treaty would constitute a contribution of the utmost importance to the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and that the commencement of negotiations on such a treaty is an indispensable element of the obligations of States parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons under article VI of that Treaty;

4. Urges once more the three depositary Powers of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water and of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons to abide strictly by their undertakings to seek to achieve the early discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time and to expedite negotiations to this end;

5. Appeals to all States members of the Conference on Disarmament, in particular to the three depositary Powers of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water and of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, to promote the establishment by the Conference at the beginning of its 1986 session of an ad hoc committee to carry out the multilateral negotiation of a treaty on the complete cessation of nuclear-test explosions;

6. Recommends to the Conference on Disarmament that it instruct such an ad hoc committee to establish two working groups which will deal, respectively, with the following interrelated questions:

(a) Working Group I—Structure and scope of the treaty;

(b) Working Group II—Compliance and verification;

7. Calls upon the States depositaries of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water and the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, by virtue of their special responsibilities under those two Treaties and as a provisional measure, to bring to a halt without delay all nuclear-test explosions, either through a trilaterally agreed moratorium or through three unilateral moratoria, for which they would then proceed to negotiate the establishment of appropriate means of verification;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Cessation of all nuclear-test explosions".

In explanation of its negative vote, France, which had abstained in the First Committee, said the cessation of tests formed part of, and was not a precondition to, the process of nuclear disarmament.

Brazil said the draft implied a judgement of NPT,(2) with which it did not agree, nor did the text distinguish between nuclear explosions for peaceful purposes and nuclear-weapon explosions. For Canada, the draft called for a moratorium without any acceptable verification measures and seemed to ignore the necessity of all five major nuclear-weapon States participating in the work towards a comprehensive test ban. Similarly, New Zealand could not understand why the draft's call was directed only to the three nuclear-weapon States and not to China and France as well.

The USSR said the envisaged treaty should contain provisions preventing the circumvention of a comprehensive ban by means of nuclear explosions for peaceful purposes.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/80 B, also by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the determination, proclaimed since 1963 in the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water, to seek to achieve the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time and to continue negotiations to this end,

Bearing also in mind that in 1968 the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons recalled such determination and included in its article VI an undertaking by each of its parties to pursue negotiations in good faith on effective measures relating to cessation of the nuclear-arms race at an early date,

Recalling that in its resolution 2028(XX) of 19 November 1965, adopted unanimously, it had stressed that one of the basic principles on which the treaty to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons should be based was that such treaty, which was then to be negotiated, should embody an acceptable balance of mutual responsibilities and obligations of the nuclear and non-nuclear Powers,

Recalling also that the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, in its Final Declaration adopted by consensus on 21 September 1985, expressed its deep regret that a comprehensive multilateral nuclear-test-ban treaty had not been concluded so far and called for the urgent negotiation and conclusion of such a treaty as a matter of the highest priority,

Noting that article II of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water provides a procedure for the consideration and eventual adoption of amendments to the Treaty by a conference of its parties, Recommends that States parties to the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water carry out urgent consultations among themselves as to the advisability and most appropriate method of taking advantage of the provisions of its article II for the conversion of the partial nuclear-test-ban treaty into a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty.

Abstaining: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Samoa, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, Zambia.

France, a non-party to the Treaties mentioned in the text, asserted that a test ban must be realized in the framework of a nuclear disarmament process, the prerequisite for which remained reductions in the arsenals of the two major Powers. The United Kingdom declared that it did not support a meeting of States parties for the purposes put forward in the text.

Australia and New Zealand did not feel the draft promised the best way to achieve a negotiated, verifiable comprehensive test-ban treaty. Australia added that the problem was not finding an appropriate treaty format for a comprehensive test ban but overcoming the outstanding verification problem and the national security policy objections of the nuclear-weapon and some other States. Argentina said the live nuclear Powers would not be represented in the mechanism envisaged in the proposal.

The USSR said it supported strengthening the 1963 Treaty, and hoped that China and France would join in a nuclear-weapon test ban.

The United States could not support the texts that became resolutions 40/80 A and B for what it felt was their erroneous implication that the Third Review Conference of the parties to NPT (see p. 56) had reached consensus on a call for immediate negotiations on a comprehensive test ban.

Also on 12 December, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/88.

Implementation of General Assembly resolution 39/60 on the immediate cessation and prohibition of nuclear-weapon tests

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned about the intensification of the nuclear-arms race and the growing threat of nuclear war,

Recalling that over the past three decades the need for cessation and prohibition of nuclear-weapon testing has been in the focus of attention of the General Assembly,

Reaffirming its conviction that the conclusion of a multilateral treaty on the prohibition of nuclear-weapon tests by all States would constitute an indispensable element for the success of efforts to halt and reverse the nuclear-arms race and the qualitative improvement of nuclear weapons, and to prevent the expansion of existing nuclear arsenals and the spread of nuclear weapons to additional countries, thus contributing to the achievement of the final goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons under appropriate verification,

Stressing once again that the elaboration of such a treaty is the task of the highest priority and should not be made dependent on the attainment of any other measure in the field of disarmament,

Welcoming the proposals contained in the Delhi Declaration issued on 28 January 1985 by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations—Argentina, Greece, India, Mexico, Sweden and the United Republic of Tanzania—and their joint message of 24 October 1985 addressed to the leaders of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics,

Recalling its previous resolutions on this subject, in particular resolutions 39/52 and 39/60 of 12 December 1984, by which it called for a moratorium or moratoria on all nuclear-test explosions and for the negotiation of a treaty for the prohibition of all nuclear-weapon tests,

Deeply deploring that the Conference on Disarmament has been unable to carry out negotiations with a view to reaching agreement on such a treaty,

1. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to proceed promptly to negotiations on all aspects of this matter, including adequate measures of verification, with the aim of preparing without delay a draft treaty that would effectively ban all test explosions of nuclear weapons by all States everywhere and would contain provisions, acceptable to all, preventing the circumvention of this ban by means of nuclear explosions for peaceful purposes;

2. Resolutely urges all States, and especially all nuclear-weapon States, to exert maximum efforts and exercise political will for the elaboration and conclusion without delay of such a treaty;

3. Welcomes the unilateral cessation by one major nuclear-weapon State of all its nuclear explosions, effective 6 August 1985, as well as the proposal for the suspension of all nuclear tests for a period of 12 months, with the possibility of its extension, contained in the joint message of 24 October 1985 addressed to the leaders of the United States of America and the Union of Soviet

Socialist Republics by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations;

4. Expresses its hope that all other nuclear-weapon States will also consider joining in such a moratorium;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Implementation of General Assembly resolution 40/88 on the immediate cessation and prohibition of nuclear-weapon tests".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 120-3-29 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/944) by recorded vote (107-3-26), 21 November (meeting 45); 13-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.42); agenda item 58.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, China, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Haiti, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Portugal, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Spain, Turkey.

France said it did not accept the appeal in the text to all nuclear-weapon States to join in a test moratorium, because such a measure would help enshrine the qualitative and quantitative advantages currently held by the two main nuclear Powers. Stating that some agreement on verification must precede negotiations, the United Kingdom said an unverifiable ban or moratorium would be worse than useless.

Brazil regretted that the text highlighted views which it considered were not directly pertinent to the actual negotiation of a ban. Canada had reservations about the value of a declaratory, unverifiable moratorium. New Zealand saw contradiction in paragraphs 1 and 5, and stressed that an unverified moratorium could not substitute for a properly verifiable and legally binding treaty.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/81 by recorded vote on 12 December.

Urgent need for a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty

The General Assembly,

Convinced of the urgent need for a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty capable of attracting the widest possible international support and adherence,

Reaffirming its conviction that an end to all nuclear testing by all States in all environments for all time would be a major step towards ending the qualitative improvement, development and proliferation of nuclear weapons, a means of relieving the deep apprehension concerning the harmful consequences of radioactive contamination for the health of present and future generations and a measure of the utmost importance in bringing the nuclear-arms race to an end,

Recalling that the parties to the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water undertook not to carry out any nuclear-weapon-test explosion, or any other nuclear explosion, in the environments covered by that Treaty, and that in that Treaty the parties expressed their determination to continue negotiations to achieve the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time,

Recalling also that the parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons recalled the determination expressed by the parties to the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapon Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and under Water in its preamble to seek to achieve the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time and to continue negotiations to that end, declaring their intention to achieve at the earliest possible date the cessation of the nuclear-arms race and to undertake effective measures in the direction of nuclear disarmament,

Noting that in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, regret was expressed that a comprehensive multilateral nuclear-test-ban treaty banning all nuclear tests by all States in all environments for all time had not been concluded and that all nuclear-weapon States were called on to participate in the urgent negotiation and conclusion of such a treaty, as a matter of the highest priority, in the Conference on Disarmament,

Recalling further its previous resolutions on this subject,

Taking into account that part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to consideration of the item entitled "Nuclear-test ban" during its session in 1985,

Also taking into account relevant proposals and initiatives put forward in the Conference on Disarmament during its session in 1985 and other proposals and actions advanced in 1985 concerning efforts to promote an end to nuclear testing,

Expressing its profound regret that, in spite of strenuous efforts, the Conference on Disarmament was unable to reach agreement on the re-establishment at its session in 1985 of an ad hoc committee under item 1 of its agenda, entitled "Nuclear-test ban",

Recognizing the important role of the Conference on Disarmament in the negotiation of a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty,

Recognizing the importance to such a treaty of the work on a global seismic detection network, assigned by the Conference on Disarmament to the Ad Hoc Group of Scientific Experts to Consider International Co-operative Measures to Detect and Identify Seismic Events,

Recalling paragraph 31 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, relating to verification of disarmament and arms control agreements, which stated that the form and modalities of the verification to be provided for in any specific agreement depend on, and should be determined by, the purposes, scope and nature of the agreement,

1. Reiterates its profound concern that, despite the express wishes of the majority of Member States, nuclear testing continues;

2. Reaffirms its conviction that a treaty to achieve the prohibition of all nuclear-test explosions by all States in all environments for all time is a matter of greatest importance;

3. Expresses the conviction that such a treaty would constitute a vital element for the success of efforts to halt and reverse the nuclear-arms race and the qualitative improvement of nuclear weapons and to prevent the expansion of existing nuclear arsenals and the spread of nuclear weapons to additional countries;

4. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to establish at the beginning of its session in 1986 an ad hoc committee under item 1 of its agenda, entitled "Nuclear-test ban", to begin negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty in accordance with the following programme of work:

- (a) Scope:
  - (i) Comprehensive ban on nuclear explosions in all environments;
  - (ii) Question of nuclear explosions for peaceful purposes;
- (b) Verification:
  - (i) Central importance of verification of a comprehensive test ban;
  - (ii) Factors affecting verification needs;
  - (iii) Means for monitoring compliance:
    - a. National technical means;
    - b. International seismic monitoring network:
      - i. Determination of capabilities for monitoring compliance;
      - ii. Steps for establishment and improvement;
    - iii. Institutional, administrative and financial arrangements for establishment, testing and operation;
    - iv. Relationship to an effective verification system;
  - c. Other means, including an international atmospheric radioactivity monitoring network;
  - d. On-site inspection;
- (iv) Specific verification problems and their solutions, including:
  - a. Monitoring large land masses;
  - b. Methods of possible evasion;
  - c. Chemical explosions;
- (c) Compliance:
  - (i) Procedures and mechanisms for consultation and co-operation;
  - (ii) Co-ordinating body, e.g. committee of experts;
  - (iii) Consultative committee;
  - (iv) Series of actions triggered by suspicion or violation, including complaints procedures;
- 5. Further urges the Conference on Disarmament:
  - (a) To take immediate steps for the establishment, with the widest possible participation, of an international seismic monitoring network to determine the capabilities of such a network for monitoring and verifying compliance with a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty, taking into account the work performed by the Ad Hoc Group of Scientific Experts to Consider International Co-operative Measures to Detect and Identify Seismic Events;

(b) To initiate detailed investigation of other measures to monitor and verify compliance with such a treaty, including an international network to monitor atmospheric radioactivity;

6. Urges all members of the Conference on Disarmament, in particular the nuclear-weapon States, to co-operate within the Conference in fulfilling these tasks as called for, inter alia, in the Final Declaration of the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

7. Calls upon the Conference on Disarmament to report on progress to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Urgent need for a comprehensive nuclear-test-ban treaty".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 116-4-29 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/942) by recorded vote (103-3-32), 21 November (meeting 45): 20-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.73); agenda item 51.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Algeria, Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Ghana,<sup>a</sup> Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire.

Against: France, Grenada, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Angola, Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, China, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Hungary, India, Israel, Italy, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Mexico, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Poland, Portugal, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Zambia.

Prior to adopting the text as a whole, the Assembly adopted paragraph 4 by a recorded vote of 84 to 4 (France, Grenada, United Kingdom, United States), with 55 abstentions; it also adopted paragraph 5 by a recorded vote, requested by the USSR, of 94 to 12 (including the Eastern European States except Romania), with 35 abstentions. The First Committee had approved paragraphs 4 and 5 by recorded votes, respectively, of 70 to 3 (France, United Kingdom, United States), with 60 abstentions, and of 80 to 12 (including the Eastern European States except Romania), with 40 abstentions.

In explanation of vote, the propriety of the Assembly's dictating a programme of work to the Conference on Disarmament was questioned by many, among them Brazil, Bulgaria, France, India, Italy, Morocco, the USSR and Venezuela. Brazil felt the programme could prejudice the scope and outcome of the negotiations, and would depart from the guidelines on the topic set forth in the 1978 Final Document. Bulgaria feared that the programme, unbalanced in its view, could set back negotiations for a number of years. France further reiterated its position regarding a test ban outside a nuclear disarmament process, and India emphasized that the text did not support its approach of principle in the matter. Italy believed that progress towards a ban could be better accomplished through a gradual approach based on comprehensive consideration of the issue in its proper perspective. The USSR felt the programme placed excessive stress on the verification issue, and Venezuela added that the programme would force the ad hoc committee into focusing on issues relating to scope and verification. The United Kingdom observed that the work programme for an ad hoc committee which a group of Western and other States had submitted to the Conference on Disarmament in 1985 remained on the table.

Argentina approved the negotiating mandate on the nuclear-weapon test ban given to the Conference, but remained unconvinced that the Assembly should make a detailed statement on technical aspects of the topic. In Canada's view, the draft not only outlined a realistic and detailed programme of work but also highlighted the importance of establishing an international seismic monitoring network; it added that, while it shared the broad objective of the text, it was not entirely satisfied that the proposed way of achieving that objective was realistic.

As regards paragraph 5, Bulgaria and the USSR said they voted negatively as they could not support setting up verification mechanisms apart from or prior to the conclusion of a treaty. Bulgaria considered such mechanisms superfluous in the absence of a treaty, and added that an over-emphasis on verification could prolong negotiations while tests continued unabated. Venezuela shared those views. The United States supported the development and improvement of a seismic monitoring network and the efforts of the Ad Hoc Group of Scientific Experts.

Speaking on the series of resolutions, Australia said it could not support the texts that became resolutions 40/80 A and 40/88, viewing them to be limited in scope and not providing for the development of adequate means of compliance verification. Zambia had no choice but to abstain on the texts that became resolutions 40/80 A, 40/80 B and 40/81 because of their reference to NPT, to which it was not a party. Similarly,

Burma, a non-party to NPT, dissociated itself from the reference to that Treaty in paragraph 3 of resolution 40/80 A, while welcoming the prospect it detected in all four texts for the commencement of negotiations. Denmark also supported the gist of the four drafts, but considered more realistic the one it had sponsored (40/81).

Proposed nuclear-weapon freeze

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly adopted, on the recommendation of the First Committee, three resolutions (40/151 C, 40/151 E and 40/94 H) calling for a freeze on nuclear armaments. A number of States explained in single statements their positions on these texts (see p. 56).

The Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/151 C by recorded vote.

Nuclear-arms freeze

The General Assembly,

Recalling that in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, adopted in 1978 and unanimously and categorically reaffirmed in 1982 during the twelfth special session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, the Assembly expressed deep concern over the threat to the very survival of mankind posed by the existence of nuclear weapons and the continuing arms race,

Recalling also that, on those occasions, it pointed out that existing arsenals of nuclear weapons are more than sufficient to destroy all life on Earth and stressed that mankind is therefore confronted with a choice: halt the arms race and proceed to disarmament, or face annihilation,

Noting that in the Political Declarations adopted by the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983 and the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985, it was stated that the renewed escalation in the nuclear-arms race, both in its quantitative and qualitative dimensions, as well as reliance on doctrines of nuclear deterrence, had heightened the risk of the outbreak of nuclear war and led to greater insecurity and instability in international relations, Bearing in mind that in their Joint Declaration, issued on 22 May 1984, the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations, coming from five different continents, urged the nuclear-weapon States as a necessary first step to halt all testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and their delivery systems, and that in the Delhi Declaration issued on 28 January 1985 they reiterated: "A halt to the nuclear arms race is at the present moment imperative. Only thus can it be ensured that nuclear arsenals do not grow while negotiations proceed.",

Believing that it is a matter of the utmost urgency to stop any further increase in the awesome arsenals of the two major nuclear-weapon States, which already have ample retaliatory power and a frightening overkill capacity.

Welcoming the start of negotiations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America on a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms—both strategic and intermediate-range—with all these questions considered and resolved in their interrelationship,

Considering that a nuclear-arms freeze, while not an end in itself, would constitute the most effective first step to prevent the continued increase and qualitative improvement of existing nuclear weaponry during the period when the negotiations take place,

Firmly convinced that at present the conditions are most propitious for such a freeze, since the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America are now equivalent in nuclear military power and it seems evident that there exists between them an overall rough parity,

Conscious that the application of the systems of surveillance, verification and control already agreed upon in some previous cases would be sufficient to provide a reasonable guarantee of faithful compliance with the undertakings derived from the freeze,

Convinced that it would be to the benefit of all other States possessing nuclear weapons to follow the example of the two major nuclear-weapon States,

1. Urges once more the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America, as the two major nuclear-weapon States, to proclaim, either through simultaneous unilateral declarations or through a joint declaration, an immediate nuclear-arms freeze, which would be a first step towards the comprehensive programme of disarmament and whose structure and scope would be the following:

(a) It would embrace:

- (i) A comprehensive test ban of nuclear weapons and of their delivery vehicles;
- (ii) The complete cessation of the manufacture of nuclear weapons and of their delivery vehicles;
- (iii) A ban on all further deployment of nuclear weapons and of their delivery vehicles;
- (iv) The complete cessation of the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes;

(b) It would be subject to appropriate measures and procedures of verification, such as those that have already been agreed by the parties in the case of the SALT I and SALT II treaties, and those agreed upon in principle by them during the preparatory trilateral negotiations on the comprehensive test ban held at Geneva;

(c) It would be of an initial five-year duration, subject to prolongation when other nuclear-weapon States join in such a freeze, as the General Assembly urges them to do;

2. Requests the above-mentioned two major nuclear-weapon States to submit a joint report or two separate reports to the General Assembly, prior to the opening of its forty-first session, on the implementation of the present resolution;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Implementation of General Assembly resolution 40/151 C on a nuclear-arms freeze".

General Assembly resolution 40/151 C

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 131-10-8 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/946) by recorded vote (111-11-6), 20 November (meeting 43); 8-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.18); agenda item 61 (c).

Sponsors: Ecuador, Indonesia, Mexico, Pakistan, Peru, Romania, Sweden, Uruguay. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 43; plenary 117.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Belgium, Canada, France, Israel, Italy, Japan, Portugal, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Bahamas, China, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Spain.

*Later advised the Secretariat it had intended to vote against.

The Netherlands asserted that the declaratory approach to the freeze concept fell short of meeting verification needs, and that only negotiations could lead to acceptable solutions to the verification issues.

Norway did not believe that reliance on nuclear deterrence had heightened the risk of nuclear war; its vote should not be considered as criticism of the countries which were implementing the decisions of NATO, whose defensive strategy it supported. New Zealand said a nuclear-arms freeze should be based on a balance of deterrence at the lowest possible level of nuclear arsenals, encompass a comprehensive test-ban treaty, and be accompanied by negotiations to reduce drastically nuclear arms leading to their complete elimination, and that it must be balanced, mutual and verifiable. Sharing those views, Australia said nuclear deterrence was the only option currently available to avoid serious nuclear instability and conflict, although it should be regarded as only an interim step leading to the goal of complete disarmament.

The USSR said it had proposed to the United States, among other things, to freeze nuclear weapons at current levels and limit their modernization, and to halt testing and deployment of new types of such weapons.

On 16 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/151 E by recorded vote.

Freeze on nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/100 A of 13 December 1982, 38/73 B of 15 December 1983 and 39/63 G of 12 December 1984 concerning a freeze on nuclear weapons,

Convinced that in this nuclear age lasting world peace can be based only on the attainment of the goal of general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Further convinced that the highest priority objectives in the field of disarmament have to be nuclear disarmament and the elimination of all weapons of mass destruction,

Recognizing the urgent need to halt the arms race, particularly in nuclear weapons,

Recognizing further the urgent need for a negotiated reduction of nuclear-weapon stockpiles leading to their complete elimination,

Noting with deep concern that nuclear-weapon States have not so far taken any action in response to the call made in resolutions 37/100 A, 38/73 B and 39/63 G,

1. Once again calls upon all nuclear-weapon States to agree to a freeze on nuclear weapons, which would, inter alia, provide for a simultaneous total stoppage of any further production of nuclear weapons and a complete cut-off in the production of fissionable material for weapons purposes;

2. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Freeze on nuclear weapons".

Approved by First Committee (A/40/946) by recorded vote (110-12-), 20 November (meeting 43); draft by India (A/C.1/40/L.25); agenda item 61 (e).

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Belgium, Canada, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Portugal, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States. Abstaining: Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, China, Grenada, Iceland, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Spain.

The Netherlands said the text ignored aspects of verification and its scope was imprecise and arbitrary.

Honduras expressed reservations, stating that a reduction and eventual elimination of nuclear arsenals, rather than a freeze, would produce the results mentioned in the preamble. The USSR said the last preambular paragraph did not reflect accurately its unilateral moratorium on nuclear explosions and on the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/94 H by recorded vote on 12 December.

Nuclear-weapon freeze

The General Assembly,

Expressing its deep alarm over the continuation and intensification of the nuclear-arms race, which seriously increases the threat of nuclear war,

Taking into account the great responsibility of nuclear-weapon States for the preservation of universal peace and the prevention of nuclear war,

Recalling its previous resolutions calling for a nuclear-weapon freeze both in quantitative and in qualitative terms,

Recalling also that on several occasions it has expressed the firm conviction that at present the conditions are most propitious for such a freeze,

Convinced that a nuclear-weapon freeze would raise the level of trust among States, ease international tension and diminish the threat of nuclear war,

Convinced also that compliance with the obligations of the freeze could be verified by national technical means as well as through some additional verification measures based on co-operation, taking into account previous nuclear-arms limitation negotiations,

Noting the wide support for the Joint Declaration issued on 22 May 1984 and the Delhi Declaration issued on 28 January 1985, by the heads of State or Government of six States Members of the United Nations, which contained an appeal to the nuclear-weapon States to halt testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and their means of delivery,

Deeply regretting that some nuclear Powers have not responded positively to its relevant appeals or to appeals and proposals by other States made repeatedly during the last three years,

1. Reaffirms its appeal to all nuclear-weapon States to freeze, from a specific date, their nuclear arsenals on a global scale and under appropriate verification as a first step to their reduction with the view to their complete elimination;

2. Urges once again the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America, which possess the largest nuclear arsenals, to freeze, in the first place and simultaneously, their nuclear weapons on a bilateral basis by way of example to the other nuclear-weapon States;

3. Strongly believes that all the other nuclear-weapon States should subsequently and as soon as possible freeze their nuclear weapons.

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (101-17-8), 20 November (meeting 43); 13-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.44); agenda item 68.

A number of delegations explained in single statements their positions on the texts which became resolutions 40/151 C, 40/151 E and 40/94 H.

France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan and the Netherlands asserted that a nuclear-weapon freeze under current circumstances would establish the advantage of one party over another and sanction a destabilizing imbalance, especially in Europe.

The Federal Republic of Germany added that a freeze left existing nuclear arsenals in place, so that the threat emanating from them would endure; efforts should focus rather on a disarmament process leading to a much lower level of armaments and military forces, taking into account the requirement of undiminished security for all States in accordance with paragraph 29 of the 1978 Final Document.<sup>(7)</sup> Stating that the surest path to nuclear-arms reductions should begin with the two super-Powers' defining and establishing a satisfactory military balance and proceeding with negotiations, France said a freeze would be difficult to verify and the negotiations necessary to ensure conditions for verification would be as complex as verification of actual reductions; further, to the extent that it could benefit a given Power, a freeze would risk reducing that Power's interest in negotiations and in reducing its weaponry. Japan questioned the practicability and meaningfulness of the three proposals, saying that realistic disarmament should be predicated on the balance of military strength and on deterrence. Referring to the text which became resolution 40/94 H, the Netherlands said it failed to define the scope of the requested freeze, thus leaving its implications unclear. Also speaking on that text and the one that became resolution 40/151 E, Norway saw no important changes compared with previous years.

Abstaining on all three texts, China reiterated that the two Powers with the largest nuclear arsenals should discharge their special responsibility by halting the testing, improvement and production of nuclear weapons, and by drastically reducing their arsenals; other nuclear-weapon States should subsequently follow suit. The Bahamas was disappointed that the similar elements of the three drafts could not be combined into one comprehensive proposal.

Bulgaria considered a freeze to be fully realistic and practical, and stated that verification of compliance posed no problem, given the presence of political will.

Nuclear non-proliferation

NPT Review Conference

The Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT)<sup>(2)</sup> was held at Geneva from 27 August to 21 September 1985, with the following 86 States parties participating: Afghanistan, Australia, Austria, Bangladesh, Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Holy See, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Maldives, Malta, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Nauru, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Republic of Korea, Romania, Rwanda, San Marino, Senegal, Seychelles, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Sweden, Switzerland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, USSR, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zaire.<sup>(46)</sup>

Three signatories (Colombia, Kuwait, Yemen) participated without taking part in decision-making, and another 10 States attended as observers (Algeria, Argentina, Bahrain, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, Israel, Pakistan, Spain, United Republic of Tanzania). Also attending as observers were the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America, the League of Arab States, the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Organization of American States, as well as the Palestine Liberation Organization. The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the United Nations were also represented, as were 48 non-governmental organizations.

The Review Conference adopted by consensus a Final Document,<sup>(46)</sup> containing a Final Declaration comprising a solemn preambular statement and a detailed article-by-article review of the operation of the Treaty and recommendations. The Final Document also contained a Declaration and two draft resolutions on a nuclear-test-ban moratorium and a nuclear-arms freeze submitted to the Conference, but not pressed to a vote, by the group of non-aligned and neutral States; a third draft by the group, on a comprehensive nuclear-test ban, was incorporated in essence in the Conference Final Declaration. In addition, the Final Document contained statements by Iran and Iraq, the latter having asked the Conference to discuss attacks against peaceful nuclear facilities.

The Treaty, which opened for signature on 1 July 1968 and entered into force on 5 March 1970 upon ratification by 40 non-nuclear-weapon States, had 132 States parties as at 31 December 1985, including the three nuclear-weapon States depositaries of the Treaty—the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States. The other nuclear-weapon States, China and France, had not signed the Treaty. Previous quinquennial review conferences had been held in 1975(47) and 1980.(48)

The Preparatory Committee for the Conference, which had held two sessions in 1984,(49) held a final session at Geneva from 22 April to 1 May 1985 to discuss substantive and organizational matters, focusing on the Conference's final documentation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 7 November, Mexico transmitted to the Chairman of the General Assembly's First Committee the texts of the Final Declaration adopted by the Review Conference and of the Declaration and two draft resolutions submitted to the Conference by the group of non-aligned and neutral States.(50)

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/94 M by recorded vote.

Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 38/74 of 15 December 1983, in which, inter alia, it noted that in the Final Document of the Second Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons, held at Geneva from 11 August to 7 September 1980, the Conference had proposed to the depositary Governments that a third conference to review the operation of the Treaty be convened in 1985 and that there appeared to be a consensus among the parties that the Third Review Conference should be held at Geneva in August/September of that year,

Recalling that States parties to the Treaty met at Geneva from 27 August to 21 September 1985 to review the operation of the Treaty with a view to assuring that the purposes of the preamble and the provisions of the Treaty were being realized,

Notes with satisfaction that on 21 September 1985, the Third Review Conference of the Parties to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons adopted by consensus a Final Declaration.

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 138-0-11 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) by recorded vote (119-0-11), 19 November (meeting 42); 48-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.67); agenda item 68.

Sponsors: Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Belgium, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Ecuador, Egypt, Ethiopia, Finland, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Hungary, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Kenya, Luxembourg, Malaysia, Mexico, Mongolia, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Romania, Samoa, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Swaziland, Sweden, Turkey, USSR, United Kingdom, United States, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zimbabwe.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Argentina, Brazil, Burma, Cuba, France, India, Israel, Niger, Spain, United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia.

Nine States non-parties to the Treaty explained their abstentions. Burma, France, the Niger, Spain and Zambia said their votes were determined by the fact that they were not parties. France said that, by abstaining rather than not participating in the vote, it intended to make clear its reservations about a number of points in the Final Declaration; it added, as did the Niger, that a document adopted at a review conference among the signatories to a Treaty did not apply to non-signatories.

Brazil continued to believe that effective means to prevent nuclear-weapons proliferation must be based on the 1965 Assembly resolution on the topic,(51) and emphasized that disarmament agreements must not be used to legitimize exclusive possession, or to condone vertical or geographical proliferation, of nuclear weapons by the existing nuclear-weapon Powers. India declared that the nuclear-weapon States had failed to comply with their commitments to halt and reverse vertical proliferation and to conclude a comprehensive test-ban treaty, that their concern was limited to preventing horizontal proliferation of nuclear weapons, and that the discriminatory nature of NPT was not highlighted at the Third Review Conference. While also supporting the principle of non-proliferation, Israel had serious reservations regarding what it considered politically motivated and unfounded references to Israel, and rejected specific references singling it out in the Final Document. Cuba asserted that the hostile policy of the United States and its illegal occupation of part of Cuban territory impeded Cuba's adherence to the Treaty.

Sweden urged the nuclear-weapon States parties to demonstrate their commitment to NPT's article VI, under which each party was to negotiate effective measures for halting the nuclear-arms race and for achieving nuclear disarmament.

Nuclear-weapon-free zones

As in previous years, the international community continued to discuss the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in Africa, the Middle East and South Asia, as well as implementation of a treaty establishing such a zone in Latin America. References were also made to informal proposals for such zones in the Balkans and northern and central Europe. The South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty, prepared by the South Pacific Forum, was opened for signature in 1985 (see below).

Among a number of resolutions on nuclear-weapon-free zones, the Assembly took note with regret that the Group of Governmental Experts on Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones, set up in 1982 to update a 1975 expert study on the topic, could not complete that task (resolution 40/94 B).

Communications. By a note verbale of 11 March 1985 to the Secretary-General,<sup>(52)</sup> Yemen transmitted documents adopted at the Fifteenth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers (Sanaa, 18-22 December 1984), among them a number of resolutions, calling on all States to respond positively to the proposals for establishing nuclear-weapon-free zones in Africa, the Middle East and South Asia, and welcoming the decision of the States members of the Association of South-East Asian Nations to work towards realizing the sub-region as a nuclear-free zone.

On 19 September,<sup>(44)</sup> Papua New Guinea transmitted to the Secretary-General the South Pacific Forum communiqué (Rarotonga, Cook Islands, 5 and 6 August), in which the Forum announced that it had opened for signature the South Pacific Nuclear-Free Zone Treaty and that Australia, Cook Islands, Fiji, Kiribati, New Zealand, Niue, Samoa and Tuvalu had signed it on that occasion. The Treaty prohibited the use, testing or stationing of nuclear explosive devices, or ocean dumping of nuclear wastes, in the South Pacific. There were three protocols to the Treaty: the first invited France, the United Kingdom and the United States to apply key provisions of the Treaty to their South Pacific territories, while the other two invited the five major nuclear-weapon States not to use or threaten to use such weapons against the Treaty's parties and not to test nuclear explosive devices within the zone. In addition to the Treaty's signatories (see above), the Forum in 1985 was made up of Nauru, Papua New Guinea, Solomon Islands, Tonga and Vanuatu, with the Federated States of Micronesia as an observer.

Study by group of experts

The 21-member Group of Governmental Experts on Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones, set up in accordance with a 1982 General Assembly resolution<sup>(53)</sup> to review and supplement a 1975 expert study on the topic,<sup>(54)</sup> held one session in 1985 (21 January-8 February) in an attempt to complete its study for submission to the Assembly. The Group had been given a one-year extension of its mandate in 1984,<sup>(55)</sup> when it was unable to conclude its work that year.

In a 9 February 1985 letter annexed to the Secretary-General's report to the Assembly,<sup>(56)</sup> the Group's Chairman, Klaus Tornudd (Finland), stated that the Group had made considerable progress, but had been unable to agree on the study as a whole and, in particular, on its conclusions. The Group transmitted to the Secretary-General the draft text of the study as it stood at the closure of its final session, with paragraphs still under discussion indicated in brackets together with proposed alternative or additional text.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 B without vote.

Study of the question of nuclear-weapon-free zones in all its aspects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 37/99 F of 13 December 1982, in which it decided that a study should be undertaken to review and supplement the Comprehensive Study of the Question of Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones in All Its Aspects in the light of information and experience accumulated since 1975,

Recalling also that it requested the Secretary-General, with the assistance of an ad hoc group of qualified governmental experts, to carry out the study and to submit it to the General Assembly at its thirty-ninth session,

Recalling further its resolution 39/151 B of 17 December 1984, in which it took note of the report of the Secretary-General to the effect that the Group of Governmental Experts on Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones had not been able to conclude the study within the time available and requested therefore the Secretary-General to continue the study and to submit the report to the General Assembly at its fortieth session,

Reaffirming its resolutions 3472 A (XXX) of 11 December 1975 and 31/70 of 10 December 1976, in which it expressed its conviction that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones could contribute to the security of members of such zones, to the prevention of proliferation of nuclear weapons and to the goals of general and complete disarmament,

Having received the report of the Secretary-General, to which is annexed a letter from the Chairman of the Group of Governmental Experts on Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones,

Appreciating the efforts made by the Group of Governmental Experts,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General and regrets that the Group of Governmental Experts on Nuclear-Weapon-Free Zones was unable to complete the study;

2. Conveys its thanks to the Secretary-General, the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency and the Secretary-General of the Agency for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America for the assistance they have given for the preparation of the study.

General Assembly resolution 40/94 B

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) without vote, 18 November (meeting 41); draft by Finland (A/C.1/40/L.3/Rev.1); agenda item 68 (d).

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 41; plenary 113.

In explanation of position, Brazil said it had joined the consensus, hoping that the study would be completed in the near future based on all the views expressed. France outlined what it saw as the two main reasons for the difficulties encountered: the impossibility of transporting the experience of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco) to other regions, and the attempt by the Group to draw up a general theory of denuclearized zones.

Africa

In 1985, the General Assembly had on its agenda, as it had had annually since 1964, the question of implementing the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa,(57) adopted in 1964 by OAU. In addition to a resolution on implementing the Declaration (40/89 A), the Assembly, in 1985 as in previous years, adopted a text on the nuclear capability of South Africa (40/89 B).

Throughout 1985, South Africa's military and nuclear relations with other States were kept under consideration by various other United Nations bodies (see p. 141).

Consideration by the Disarmament Commission. As in the past, the Disarmament Commission(17) established in 1985 Working Group II to consider, in response to a 1984 Assembly request,(58) South Africa's nuclear capability. Under the chairmanship of Davidson L. Hepburn (Bahamas), the Group held seven meetings as well as informal consultations between 13 and 24 May, using as a basis for discussion its 1984 working paper.(59) Unable to agree on draft conclusions and recommendations on the issue, the Group recommended that the Commission refer the question to the Assembly later in 1985.

Reports by the Secretary-General. In February 1985,(60) the Secretary-General drew the Security Council's attention to the Assembly's 1984 resolution(58) on South Africa's nuclear capability, in which the Assembly requested the Council to take action aimed at, among other things, prohibiting all forms of nuclear collaboration with South Africa. In an August report,(61) prepared in accordance with the same resolution,(58) the Secretary-General stated that he had followed South Africa's nuclear activities closely but had received no information to add to his 1984 report on the question.(59)

Communications. Among communications relating to the topic, the Assembly had before it the Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the Ministerial Regional Conference on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa (Lomé, Togo, 13-16 August),(62) by which the Conference expressed concern over the continued development of South Africa's nuclear-weapon capability, called for a legal instrument that would define Africa as a nuclear-free zone, and expressed concern over what it called continued military and nuclear collaboration between South Africa and certain Western countries and Israel. Such collaboration was condemned in the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September).(63)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the Assembly adopted two resolutions relating to the denuclearization of Africa—40/89 A, on implementation of the 1964 Declaration, and 40/89 B, on the nuclear capability of South Africa—on the recommendation of the First Committee.

A number of States explained in single statements their positions on the texts that became resolutions 40/89 A and B, while others made general explanations on several of the texts on nuclear-weapon-free zones (see p. 62).

Resolution 40/89 A was adopted by recorded vote on 12 December.

Implementation of the Declaration

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its first ordinary session, held at Cairo from 17 to 21 July 1964,

Recalling its resolution 1652(XVI) of 24 November 1961, its earliest on the subject, as well as its resolutions 2033(XX) of 3 December 1965, 31/69 of 10 December 1976, 32/81 of 12 December 1977, 33/63 of 14 December 1978, 34/76 A of 11 December 1979, 35/146 B of 12 December 1980, 36/86 B of 9 December 1981, 37/74 A of 9 December 1982, 38/181 A of 20 December 1983 and 39/61 A of 12 December 1984, in which it called upon all States to consider and respect the continent of Africa and its surrounding areas as a nuclear-weapon-free zone,

Recalling that in its resolution 33/63 it vigorously condemned any overt or covert attempt by South Africa to introduce nuclear weapons into the continent of Africa and demanded that South Africa refrain forthwith from conducting any nuclear explosion in the continent or elsewhere.

Taking note of the report of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research entitled "South Africa's nuclear capability", (59) undertaken in co-operation with the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat and in consultation with the Organization of African Unity, as well as the report of the Disarmament Commission,

Expressing regret that despite the threat South Africa's nuclear capability constitutes to international peace and security and, in particular, to the realization of the objective of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa, the Disarmament Commission has, once again, in 1985, failed to reach a consensus on this important item on its agenda,

1. Strongly renews its call upon all States to consider and respect the continent of Africa and its surrounding areas as a nuclear-weapon-free zone;

2. Reaffirms that the implementation of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity would be an important measure to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons and to promote international peace and security;

3. Expresses once again its grave alarm at South Africa's possession and continued development of nuclear-weapon capability;

4. Condemns South Africa's continued pursuit of a nuclear capability and all forms of nuclear collaboration by any State, corporation, institution or individual with the racist régime that enable it to frustrate the objective of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa, which seeks to keep Africa free from nuclear weapons;

5. Calls upon all States, corporations, institutions and individuals to desist from further collaboration with the racist régime that may enable it to frustrate the objective of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa;

6. Demand once again that the racist régime of South Africa refrain from manufacturing, testing, deploying, transporting, storing, using or threatening to use nuclear weapons;

7. Appeals to all States that have the means to do so to monitor South Africa's research on and development and production of nuclear weapons, and to publicize any information in that regard;

8. Demands once again that South Africa submit forthwith all its nuclear installations and facilities to inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to render all necessary assistance that the Organization of African Unity may seek towards the implementation of its solemn Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Implementation of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa".

Against: None.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Israel, Malawi, United Kingdom, United States.

While voting in favour, the Federal Republic of Germany said it gave the strictest possible interpretation to the clause "surrounding areas" because of its continued difficulties with the text's ambiguous definition of the confines of the future zone. Japan said it did not fully agree with the assertions contained in some paragraphs which, it felt, lacked conclusive evidence. Norway, speaking also on behalf of Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Sweden, expressed reservations on certain formulations in the draft, particularly paragraph 7. Italy wished to record its specific reservations on the last preambular paragraph and on paragraphs 1 and 3.

Also on 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/89 B by recorded vote.

Nuclear capability of South Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 34/76 B of 11 December 1979, 35/146 A of 12 December 1980, 36/86 A of 9 December 1981, 37/74 B of 9 December 1982, 38/181 B of 20 December 1983 and 39/61 B of 12 December 1984,

Bearing in mind the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its first ordinary session, held at Cairo from 17 to 21 July 1964,

Recalling that, in paragraph 12 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, it noted that the accumulation of armaments and the acquisition of armaments technology by racist régimes, as well as their possible acquisition of nuclear weapons, presented a challenging and increasingly dangerous obstacle to the world community, faced with the urgent need to disarm,

Recalling also that in its resolution 33/63 of 14 December 1978, it vigorously condemned any overt or covert attempt by South Africa to introduce nuclear weapons into the continent of Africa and demanded that South Africa refrain forthwith from conducting any nuclear explosion in the continent or elsewhere,

Taking note of resolution GC(XXIX)/RES/442 on South Africa's nuclear capabilities, adopted on 27

September 1985 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency during its twenty-ninth regular session,

Having taken note of the report of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research entitled "South Africa's nuclear capability",<sup>(59)</sup> undertaken in co-operation with the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat and in consultation with the Organization of African Unity,

Expressing regret that despite the threat South Africa's nuclear capability constitutes to international peace and security and, in particular, to the realization of the objective of the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa, the Disarmament Commission has, once again, in 1985, failed to reach a consensus on this important item on its agenda,

Gravely concerned that South Africa, in flagrant violation of the principles of international law and the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, has continued its acts of aggression and subversion against the peoples of the independent States of southern Africa,

Strongly condemning the continued military occupation by South African troops of parts of the territory of Angola in violation of its national sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity, and urging the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of South African troops from Angolan soil,

Expressing its grave disappointment that, despite repeated appeals by the international community, certain Western States and Israel have continued to collaborate with the racist régime of South Africa in the military and nuclear fields and that some of the same Western States have, by a ready recourse to the use of the veto, consistently frustrated every effort in the Security Council to deal decisively with the question of South Africa,

Recalling its decision taken at the tenth special session that the Security Council should take appropriate effective steps to prevent the frustration of the implementation of the decision of the Organization of African Unity for the denuclearization of Africa,

Stressing the need to preserve peace and security in Africa by ensuring that the continent is a nuclear-weapon-free zone,

1. Condemns the massive buildup of South Africa's military machine, in particular its frenzied acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability for repressive and aggressive purposes and as an instrument of blackmail;

2. Expresses its full support for the African States faced with the danger of South Africa's nuclear capability;

3. Reaffirms that the acquisition of nuclear-weapon capability by the racist régime constitutes a very grave danger to international peace and security and, in particular, jeopardizes the security of African States and increases the danger of the proliferation of nuclear weapons;

4. Condemns all forms of nuclear collaboration by any State, corporation, institution or individual with the racist régime of South Africa, in particular the decision by some Member States to grant licences to several corporations in their territories to provide equipment and technical and maintenance services for nuclear installations in South Africa;

5. Demands that South Africa and all other foreign interests put an immediate end to the exploration for and exploitation of uranium resources in Namibia;

6. Calls upon all States, corporations, institutions and individuals to terminate forthwith all forms of military and nuclear collaboration with the racist régime;

7. Requests the Disarmament Commission to consider as a matter of priority during its session in 1986 South Africa's nuclear capability, taking into account, inter alia, the findings of the report of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research on South Africa's nuclear capability;

8. Requests the Security Council, for the purposes of disarmament and to fulfil its obligations and responsibility, to take enforcement measures to prevent any racist régime from acquiring arms or arms technology;

9. Further requests the Security Council to conclude expeditiously its consideration of the recommendations of its Committee established by resolution 421(1977) concerning the question of South Africa, with a view to blocking the existing loopholes in the arms embargo so as to render it more effective, and prohibiting, in particular, all forms of co-operation and collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa in the nuclear field;

10. Demands once again that South Africa submit forthwith all its nuclear installations and facilities to inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency;

11. Requests the Secretary-General to follow very closely South Africa's evolution in the nuclear field and to report thereon to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 135-4-14 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/931) by recorded vote (117-4-12), 18 November (meeting 41); draft by Mauritius, for African Group (A/C.1/40/L.40); agenda item 59.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 35, 41; plenary 113.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: France, Israel, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Haiti, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Paraguay, Portugal.

Israel declared that it had no nuclear collaboration with South Africa, as did the United Kingdom which added that the right of all States to the peaceful uses of nuclear energy should not be limited in individual cases for political reasons.

Australia, France and the Netherlands objected to the call on the Security Council to take enforcement measures, saying it was not in keeping with the provisions of the United Nations Charter regarding allocation of responsibilities among the main organs. Norway—speaking for the Nordic States—expressed similar reservations, and added that they objected, as did Australia, to the singling out of individual or groups of countries for condemnation. The Netherlands, which agreed that the arms embargo should be strengthened, asserted that the language in paragraph 1 was in sharp contrast to the 1984 report by the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research(59) which, it said, provided no new information regarding South Africa's capability to manufacture nuclear weapons. Italy said it would have voted against the tenth preambular paragraph, had there been a separate vote.

A number of delegations spoke, in single statements, on the texts that became resolutions 40/89 A and B. Albania said its affirmative votes for them, and the text on Israeli nuclear armament (see p. 65), were in keeping with its support of the struggle of the peoples of the regions against South Africa and against Israel, without prejudice to its stand regarding establishing zones of peace or nuclear-weapon-free zones. Brazil said it went along with a consensus on both texts, taking into account the specific features of the African continent. France concurred with the basic aims of the drafts, but objected that they did not distinguish between peaceful and military uses of nuclear energy.

The United States gave a general explanation of vote on several of the drafts on nuclear-weapon-free zones. It supported the concept of such zones as a non-proliferation measure when consistent with a number of criteria: among others, zonal arrangements should provide for adequate verification and compliance, uphold existing security arrangements, prohibit parties from developing any nuclear explosive device, honour the exercise of rights recognized under international law, and preclude the conduct of any nuclear explosions. Japan also reiterated that the arrangement should be based on the initiatives of the countries in the region and freely agreed upon by all concerned, including a nuclear-weapon State as the case might be; it also considered it desirable that all the countries in the region adhere to NET. The USSR stated that the creation of such a zone should be in keeping with international law, in particular the principle of freedom of navigation on the high seas.

The question of nuclear weapons and South Africa was also dealt with by the Assembly in resolutions 40/56, 40/64 A, 40/64 E, 40/64 I and 40/158. The Assembly also condemned military and nuclear collaboration with South Africa in several resolutions, among them 40/52, 40/57, 40/97 A and 40/97 D, and in decision 40/415.

Latin America

Since the signature and ratification of Additional Protocol II of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco) by five nuclear-weapon States by 1979,(64) only one item concerning that Treaty remained on the General Assembly's agenda: the signature and ratification of Additional Protocol I, concerning the application of the Treaty to territories in the region for which outside States had de jure or de facto responsibility, such as the colonial Powers.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/79 by recorded vote.

Implementation of General Assembly resolution 39/51 concerning the signature and ratification of Additional Protocol I of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco)

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 2286(XXII) of 5 December 1967, 3262(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3473(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 32/76 of 12 December 1977, S-10/2 of 30 June 1978, 33/58 of 14 December 1978, 34/71 of 11 December 1979, 35/143 of 12 December 1980, 36/83 of 9 December 1981, 37/71 of 9 December 1982 and 38/61 of 15 December 1983 concerning the signature and ratification of Additional Protocol I of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco),

Taking into account that within the zone of application of that Treaty, to which twenty-three sovereign States are already parties, there are some territories which, in spite of not being sovereign political entities, are nevertheless in a position to receive the benefits deriving from the Treaty through its Additional Protocol I, to which the four States that de jure or de facto are internationally responsible for those territories may become parties,

Considering that it would not be fair if the peoples of some of those territories were deprived of such benefits without being given the opportunity to express their opinion in this connection,

Recalling that three of the States to whom Additional Protocol I is opened—the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the kingdom of the Netherlands and the United States of America—became parties to the Protocol in 1969, 1971 and 1981, respectively,

1. Deplores that the signature of Additional Protocol I by France, which took place on 2 March 1979, has not yet been followed by the corresponding ratification, notwithstanding the time already elapsed and the pressing invitations which the General Assembly has addressed to it;

2. Once more urges France not to delay any further such ratification, which has been requested so many times and which appears all the more advisable, since it is the only one of the four States to which the Protocol is open that is not yet party to it;

3. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Implementation of General Assembly resolution 40/79 concerning the signature and ratification of Additional Protocol I of the Treaty for the Prohibition of Nuclear Weapons in Latin America (Treaty of Tlatelolco)".

General Assembly resolution 40/79

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 139-0-7 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/919) by recorded vote (126-0-7), 18 November (meeting 41); 18-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.61); agenda item 49.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic Of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Argentina, Central African Republic, Cuba, France, Guyana, Ivory Coast, Mali.

France could not accept being singled out when some countries in the Treaty's area of application had not signed, ratified or adhered to the instrument, and said it would take an appropriate decision in due course, taking into account the status of ratification of the Treaty itself. Cuba said it chose to use whatever means appropriate to defend its territory, since the only nuclear Power on the continent maintained a climate of threat and pressure in the zone and occupied part of Cuban territory with a naval base.

In the plenary Assembly, Peru explained that it did not sponsor the 1985 text for reasons involving full compliance with the stipulation set forth in article 28, paragraph 1, of the Treaty; it reiterated its understanding that since Additional Protocol I was silent on the question of reservations it permitted their being entered—as distinct from Protocol II which explicitly prohibited them—but that a reservation could in no way contravene the object and purpose of the Treaty.

Middle East

In response to a 1984 Assembly request,(65) the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in July 1985 a report, with a later addendum,(66) containing the views received from 10 Member States—seven States of the region, as well as China, France and the USSR—on establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East.

Israel, in a 13 June letter,(67) reiterated its serious reservations as to the ways and means for establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, adding that the modalities that had led to the conclusion of the Treaty of Tlatelolco should serve as a model; the 1984 Assembly resolution,(65) it stated, had omitted mention of the direct negotiating process between the States of the region, without which a zonal arrangement was unlikely.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/82 without vote.

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3263(XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3474(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/71 of 10 December 1976, 32/82 of 12 December 1977, 33/64 of 14 December 1978, 34/77 of 11 December 1979, 35/147 of 12 December 1980, 36/87 of 9 December 1981, 37/75 of 9 December 1982, 38/64 of 15 December 1983 and 39/54 of 12 December 1984 on the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Recalling also the recommendations for the establishment of such a zone in the Middle East consistent with paragraphs 60 to 63, and in particular paragraph 63 (d), of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly,

Emphasizing the basic provisions of the above-mentioned resolutions, which call upon all parties directly concerned to consider taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East and, pending and during the establishment of such a zone, to declare solemnly that they will refrain, on a reciprocal basis, from producing, acquiring or in any other way possessing nuclear weapons and nuclear explosive devices and from permitting the stationing of nuclear weapons on their territory by any third party, to agree to place all their nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards and to declare their support for the establishment of the zone and deposit such declarations with the Security Council for consideration, as appropriate,

Reaffirming the inalienable right of all States to acquire and develop nuclear energy for peaceful purposes,

Emphasizing further the need for appropriate measures on the question of the prohibition of military attacks on nuclear facilities,

Bearing in mind the consensus reached by the General Assembly at its thirty-fifth session that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East would greatly enhance international peace and security.

Desirous to build on that consensus so that substantial progress can be made towards establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Emphasizing the essential role of the United Nations in the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Urges all parties directly concerned to consider seriously taking the practical and urgent steps required for the implementation of the proposal to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and, as a means of promoting this objective, invites the countries concerned to adhere to the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons;

2. Calls upon all countries of the region that have not done so, pending the establishment of the zone, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Invites those countries, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East, to declare their support for establishing such a zone, consistent with the relevant paragraph of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to deposit those declarations with the Security Council;

4. Further invites those countries, pending the establishment of the zone, not to develop, produce, test or otherwise acquire nuclear weapons or permit the stationing on their territories, or territories under their control, of nuclear weapons or nuclear explosive devices;

5. Invites the nuclear-weapon States and all other States to render their assistance in the establishment of the zone and at the same time to refrain from any action that runs counter to both the letter and spirit of the present resolution;

6. Extend its thanks to the Secretary-General for his report containing the views of parties concerned regarding the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East;

7. Takes note of the above-mentioned report;

8. Requests those parties that have not yet communicated their views to the Secretary-General to do so;

9. Welcomes any further comments from those parties that have already communicated their views to the Secretary-General;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

11. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region of the Middle East".

General Assembly resolution 40/82

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/905) without vote, 14 November (meeting 37); draft by Egypt (A/C.140/L.5); agenda item 52.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 36, 37; plenary 113.

A number of delegations spoke in explanation of position.

Iraq declared that the stockpiling of nuclear weapons by Israel prevented the establishment of a zone in the region, and that repetition of armed attacks against peaceful nuclear facilities should be prevented. The Syrian Arab Republic said Israel should be obliged to place its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards and to accede to NPT; it asserted that the Treaty of Tlatelolco came into being under circumstances different from those prevailing in the Middle East, where Israel occupied certain territories and violated the rights of the Arab Palestinian people. Israel said the zone's establishment should be based on arrangements directly and freely arrived at among the States of the region.

Argentina and India said their joining the consensus on the text was without prejudice to their stance on NPT and the application of full-scale IAEA safeguards, with India also pointing to what it called the inefficacy of partial measures in nuclear disarmament. Brazil stated that the creation of a zone should not be related to adherence to NPT which, it felt, was not only discriminatory and unbalanced, but had allowed nuclear proliferation by nuclear-weapon States to proceed unchecked; it added that the particular situation and characteristics of the region deserved a specific approach, and noted that the text had the support of the States directly concerned. Argentina said that specific circumstances in a region might justify proposals being addressed to and accepted by the countries of the region, but such proposals might not prove to be as timely or appropriate for other regions or countries.

Israeli nuclear armament

In February 1985,(68) the Secretary-General drew the Security Council's attention to those paragraphs of a 1984 General Assembly resolution(69) in which it requested the Council to ensure that Israel placed all its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards, and to investigate Israel's nuclear activities and the collaboration of other parties in those activities.

On 16 May,(70) the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya informed the Council President of what it said was Israel's deployment, with United States support, of nuclear missiles in the Golan Heights and the Negev Desert.

UNIDIR report. In August 1985, the Secretary-General transmitted to the Assembly a study on Israeli nuclear armament,(71) prepared by the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR) in pursuance of a 1984 Assembly resolution.(69) Prepared in co-operation with the United Nations Department for Disarmament Affairs and in consultation with the League of Arab States and OAU, the study comprised four chapters: introduction, United Nations concern with the question, Israel's nuclear development, and summary. The chapter on Israel's nuclear development dealt with research activities and with nuclear weapon potential in the context of availability of nuclear explosive materials, the capability to design and produce nuclear explosives, and the available means of delivery of those weapons.

The report concluded that the publicly available information used for the study confirmed the assessment and conclusions in the 1981 report by an expert group on the topic;(72) the 1981 findings, reproduced in the 1985 study, were that the quantity and quality of available reliable information on the subject was such that it was difficult to draw definitive conclusions, but that Israel had the capability to manufacture nuclear weapons. The 1985 study also pointed out that Israel had not acceded to requests from the Security Council and the General Assembly to place all its nuclear activities under international safeguards.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/93 by recorded vote.

Israeli nuclear armament

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind its previous resolutions on Israeli nuclear armament, the latest of which is 39/147 of 17 December 1984,

Recalling resolution 39/54 of 12 December 1984, in which, inter alia, it called upon all countries of the Middle East, pending the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the Middle East, to agree to place all their nuclear activities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Recalling further Security Council resolution 487(1981) of 19 June 1981 in which, inter alia, the Council called upon Israel urgently to place its nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards,

Noting with grave concern Israel's persistent refusal to commit itself not to manufacture or acquire nuclear weapons, despite repeated calls by the General Assembly, the Security Council and the International Atomic Energy Agency, and to place its nuclear facilities under Agency safeguards,

Aware of the grave consequences that endanger international peace and security as a result of Israel's development and acquisition of nuclear weapons and Israel's collaboration with South Africa to develop nuclear weapons and their delivery systems,

1. Takes note of the report of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research on this question;

2. Reiterates its condemnation of Israel's refusal to renounce any possession of nuclear weapons;

3. Requests once more the Security Council to take urgent and effective measures to ensure that Israel complies with Security Council resolution 487(1981) and places all its nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

4. Reiterates its request to the Security Council to investigate Israel's nuclear activities and the collaboration of other States, parties and institutions in these activities;

5. Calls upon all States and organizations that have not yet done so to discontinue co-operating with and giving assistance to Israel in the nuclear field;

6. Reaffirms its condemnation of the continuing nuclear collaboration between Israel and South Africa;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to follow closely Israeli nuclear activities and to report thereon as appropriate to the General Assembly.

General Assembly resolution 40/93

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 101-247 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/933) by recorded vote (92-2-40), 18 November (meeting 41); 24-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.63); agenda item 64.

Sponsors: Afghanistan, Algeria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malaysia, Mali, Mauritania, Morocco, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, United Arab Emirates, Yemen.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, China, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iraq, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Israel, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Bolivia, Burma, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Portugal, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, Uruguay, Zaïre.

The Assembly adopted, by separate recorded votes, paragraph 4 by 91 to 24, with 28 abstentions, and paragraph 5 by 89 to 22, with 32 abstentions. The First Committee had likewise approved those paragraphs: paragraph 4 by 85 to 23, with 19 abstentions, and paragraph 5 by 86 to 23, with 19 abstentions.

In explanation of vote, Israel, reiterating that it would not be the first to introduce nuclear weapons into the Middle East, said that: it had been singled out for investigation from among all the countries which were advanced in nuclear technology and non-parties to NPT and that no country could accept to be told how best to serve the cause of non-proliferation; the expert team had been enjoined to consult with the League of Arab States; paragraph 4 called for applying one standard to Israel and not to other non-NPT States; paragraph 5 was an attempt by the sponsors to make Member States and organizations downgrade relations with Israel; it had no nuclear collaboration with South Africa; and the United Nations should challenge the sponsors to take up negotiations for the creation of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region. Similarly, the United States characterized the text as discriminatory, adding that it would welcome a balanced resolution calling for all non-nuclear-weapon States which had not done so to place their nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards.

Australia felt that the Security Council was being asked to take action beyond its competence, that paragraph 5 could have implications for Israel's rights and privileges of IAEA membership, and that, in its view, the assumption of the continuing collaboration between Israel and South Africa had not been substantiated. Brazil abstained in the votes on the paragraphs because it believed the actions requested of the Council went beyond its constitutional powers.

In related 1985 action, the Assembly took up the question of armed Israeli aggression against Iraqi nuclear installations (resolution 40/6), and condemned nuclear collaboration between Israel and South Africa (40/168 A).

South Asia

In a July 1985 report,(73) the Secretary-General stated that he had been in contact with the States of South Asia with regard to the Assembly's 1984 request(74) that he assist in promoting a nuclear-weapon-free zone in the region, but that there had been no request by the States concerned for his assistance. In the course of those contacts, a view had been expressed that he should continue to be available for that purpose.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/83 by recorded vote.

Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3265 B (XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3476 B (XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/73 of 10 December 1976, 32/83 of 12 December 1977, 33/65 of 14 December 1978, 34/78 of 11 December 1979, 35/148 of 12 December 1980, 36/88 of 9 December 1981, 37/76 of 9 December 1982, 38/65 of 15 December 1983 and 39/55 of 12 December 1984 concerning the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia,

Reiterating its conviction that the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones in various regions of the world is one of the measures which can contribute most effectively to the objectives of non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and general and complete disarmament,

Believing that the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia, as in other regions, will strengthen the security of the States of the region against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the declaration issued at the highest level by Governments of South Asian States reaffirming their undertaking not to acquire or manufacture nuclear weapons and to devote their nuclear programmes exclusively to the economic and social advancement of their peoples,

Recalling that in the above-mentioned resolutions it called upon the States of the South Asian region, and such other neighbouring non-nuclear-weapon States as might be interested, to make all possible efforts to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia and to refrain, in the mean time, from any action contrary to this objective,

Further recalling that, in its resolution 3265 B (XXIX), it requested the Secretary-General to convene a meeting for the purpose of the consultations mentioned therein and to render such assistance as might be required to promote the efforts for the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia,

Bearing in mind the provisions of paragraphs 60 to 63 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly regarding the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones, including in the region of South Asia,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Reaffirms its endorsement, in principle, of the concept of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia;

2. Urges once again the States of South Asia, and such other neighbouring non-nuclear-weapon States as may be interested, to continue to make all possible efforts to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia and to refrain, in the mean time, from any action contrary to this objective;

3. Calls upon those nuclear-weapon States that have not done so to respond positively to this proposal and to extend the necessary co-operation in the efforts to establish a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to render such assistance as may be required to promote the efforts for the establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia and to report on the subject to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Establishment of a nuclear-weapon-free zone in South Asia".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 104-3-41 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/916) by recorded vote (90-3-40), 18 November (meeting 41); draft by Pakistan (A/C.1/40/L.10); agenda item 53.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 41; plenary 113.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Antigua and Barbuda, Australia, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros Democratic Kampuchea, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Finland, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Swaziland, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yemen, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Bhutan, India, Mauritius.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Benin, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Byelorussian SSR, Cape Verde, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Ethiopia, Fiji, France, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Italy, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Madagascar, Mongolia, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Norway, Poland, Suriname, Sweden, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia.

India said no consensus existed among the region's States for establishing a nuclear-weapon-free zone, and that, in areas immediately adjacent to the proposed zone, nuclear weapons existed and continued to proliferate both on land and at sea.

Brazil abstained as in the past because the proposal failed to attract unanimous support in the region. Denmark and Sweden spoke in like manner as did Indonesia, which added that the proposal should be initiated by the States in the region, based on voluntary participation, with all arrangements being freely arrived at.

Also stressing the importance of full consent and co-operation, Bangladesh hoped that consultations would be held to define the limits of the zone and to deal with other related issues, and Sri Lanka emphasized the need to take into account the region's inherent characteristics, adding that no model of such a zone anywhere else could be transplanted. Japan also reiterated its view on a number of conditions required for the zone's success (see p. 62).

Strengthening the security of non-nuclear-weapon States

Little progress was made in 1985 in reaching agreements on effective international assurances for non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons—arrangements also known as negative security assurances. The General Assembly adopted two resolutions in December (40/85 and 40/86), reflecting differing approaches to the question and calling for the resumption of discussion on the issue in the Conference on Disarmament in 1986.

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. The Conference on Disarmament(3) again considered negative security assurances, from 8 to 12 April and from 29 July to 2 August 1985. In addition, an Ad Hoc Committee, re-established on 1 August to deal with the item, held three meetings between 12 and 22 August under the chairmanship of Mansur Ahmad (Pakistan). Because of the time constraint imposed by the Committee's late establishment, the Chairman held consultations on the most efficacious way to deal with the question, concluding that the nuclear-weapon States' previous positions remained unchanged. Most delegations expressed readiness to engage in substantive discussion, while some considered such action futile in the absence of a nuclear disarmament process; others felt some progress might have been possible had the Ad Hoc Committee been established earlier.

The Committee recommended that the Conference continue exploring ways to overcome the difficulties.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted two resolutions on negative security assurances.

On 12 December, it adopted resolution 40/86 by recorded vote.

Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Bearing in mind the need to ally the legitimate concern of the States of the world with regard to ensuring lasting security for their peoples,

Convinced that nuclear weapons pose the greatest threat to mankind and to the survival of civilization,

Deeply concerned at the continuing escalation of the arms race, in particular the nuclear-arms race, and the possibility of the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Convinced that nuclear disarmament and the complete elimination of nuclear weapons are essential to remove the danger of nuclear war,

Taking into account the principle of the non-use of force or threat of force enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations,

Deeply concerned about the possibility of the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Recognizing that the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of non-nuclear-weapon States need to be safeguarded against the use or threat of use of force, including the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures to assure the non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can constitute a positive contribution to the prevention of the spread of nuclear weapons,

Recalling its resolutions 3261 G (XXIX) of 9 December 1974 and 31/189 C of 21 December 1976,

Bearing in mind paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Desirous of promoting the implementation of the relevant provisions of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session,

Recalling its resolutions 33/72 B of 14 December 1978, 34/85 of 11 December 1979, 35/155 of 12 December 1980, 36/95 of 9 December 1981, 37/81 of 9 December 1982, 38/68 of 15 December 1983 and 39/58 of 12 December 1984,

Further recalling paragraph 12 of the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second Disarmament Decade, contained in the annex to its resolution 35/46 of 3 December 1980, which states, inter alia, that all efforts should be exerted by the Committee on Disarmament urgently to negotiate with a view to reaching agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Noting the in-depth negotiations undertaken in the Conference on Disarmament and its Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons, with a view to reaching agreement on this item,

Noting the proposals submitted under this item in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention,

Taking note of the decision of the Seventh Conference of Heads of State or Government of Non-Aligned Countries, held at New Delhi from 7 to 12 March 1983, as well as the relevant recommendations of the Organization of the Islamic Conference reiterated in the Final Communiqué of the Fifteenth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers, held at Sanaa from 18 to 22 December 1984, calling upon the Conference on Disarmament to reach an urgent agreement on an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Further noting the support expressed in the Conference on Disarmament and in the General Assembly for the elaboration of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, as well as the difficulties pointed out in evolving a common approach acceptable to all,

1. Reaffirms the urgent need to reach agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

2. Notes with satisfaction that in the Conference on Disarmament there is no objection, in principle, to the idea of an international convention to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, although the difficulties as regards evolving a common approach acceptable to all have also been pointed out;

3. Appeals to all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, to demonstrate the political will necessary to reach agreement on a common approach and, in particular, on a common formula which could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

4. Recommends that further intensive efforts should be devoted to the search for such a common approach or common formula and that the various alternative approaches, including in particular those considered in the Conference on Disarmament, should be further explored in order to overcome the difficulties;

5. Recommends that the Conference on Disarmament should actively continue negotiations with a view to reaching early agreement and concluding effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons, taking into account the widespread support for the conclusion of an international convention and giving consideration to any other proposals designed to secure the same objective;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 142-0-6 (recorded vote)

Against: None.

Abstaining: Argentina, Brazil, Grenada, India, Saint Christopher and Nevis, United States.

Japan said it had voted in favour—despite reservations about a specific modality of assurances mentioned in paragraphs 2, 3 and 5—because the text reflected better than the other one (see below) the work of the Conference on Disarmament and because it expected continued efforts in the Ad Hoc Committee in line with the common approach referred to in the text. Sweden supported the draft for giving consideration to proposals not confined to an international convention.

Other States explained their abstentions in conjunction with the other text on negative security assurances (see p. 69).

Also on 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/85 by recorded vote.

Conclusion of an international convention on the strengthening of the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons

The General Assembly,

Convinced of the need to take effective measures for the strengthening of the security of States and prompted by the desire shared by all nations to eliminate war and prevent nuclear conflagration,

Taking into account the principle of non-use of force or threat of force enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and reaffirmed in a number of United Nations declarations and resolutions,

Considering that, until nuclear disarmament is achieved on a universal basis, it is imperative for the international community to develop effective measures to ensure the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons from any quarter,

Recognizing that effective measures to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons can constitute a positive contribution to the prevention of the spread of such weapons,

Noting with satisfaction the determination of non-nuclear-weapon States in various parts of the world to prevent nuclear weapons from being introduced into their territories and to ensure the complete absence of such weapons in their respective regions, including through the establishment of nuclear-weapon-free zones on the basis of arrangements freely arrived at among the States of the region concerned, and being anxious to encourage and contribute to the attainment of this objective,

Concerned at the continuing escalation of the arms race, in particular the nuclear-arms race having entered a qualitatively new stage, and the possibility of the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons and the danger of nuclear war,

Desirous of promoting the implementation of paragraph 59 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it urged the nuclear-weapon States to pursue efforts to conclude, as appropriate, effective arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Recalling its numerous resolutions on this subject as well as the relevant part of the special report of the Committee on Disarmament submitted to the General Assembly at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament,

Noting that the Conference on Disarmament considered in 1985 the item entitled "Effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons", and the work done by its Ad Hoc Committee on this item, as reflected in the report of the Conference on Disarmament,

Noting further that this consideration revealed that an overwhelming number of delegations, including those of the nuclear-weapon States, stressed the importance of that item and their readiness to engage in a substantive dialogue on the issue,

Recalling the proposals submitted on this subject to the General Assembly and in the Conference on Disarmament, including the drafts of an international convention, and the widespread international support for the conclusion of such a convention,

Further recalling that the idea of interim arrangements as a first step towards the conclusion of such a convention has also been considered in the Conference on Disarmament,

Welcoming once again the solemn declarations made by some nuclear-weapon States concerning non-first use of nuclear weapons, and convinced that, if all nuclear-weapon States were to assume obligations not to be the first to use nuclear weapons, that would be tantamount in practice to banning the use of nuclear weapons against all States, including all non-nuclear-weapon States,

Considering that the non-nuclear-weapon States having no nuclear weapons on their territories have every right to receive reliable international legal guarantees against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons,

Being aware that unconditional guarantees by all nuclear-weapon States not to use or threaten to use nuclear weapons under any circumstances against the non-nuclear-weapon States having no nuclear weapons on their territories should constitute an integral element of a mandatory system of norms regulating the relations between the nuclear-weapon States, which bear the primary responsibility for preventing a nuclear war, thus sparing mankind from its devastating consequences,

1. Reaffirms once again the urgent need to reach agreement on effective international arrangements to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons and to find a common approach acceptable to all, which could be included in an international instrument of a legally binding character;

2. Considers that the Conference on Disarmament should continue to explore ways and means of overcoming the difficulties encountered in carrying out negotiations on this question;

3. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to continue active consideration on this subject, including through re-establishment of the Ad Hoc Committee on Effective International Arrangements to Assure Non-Nuclear-Weapon States against the Use or Threat of Use of Nuclear Weapons as soon as practicable, at its 1986 session, with a view to concluding an international instrument of a legally binding character to assure non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons;

4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Conclusion of effective international arrangements on the strengthening of the security of non-nuclear-weapon States against the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 101-19-25 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/929) by recorded vote (83-19-17), November (meeting 41); 10-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.34); agenda item 55.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Hungary, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritius Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname Swaziland, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia.

Against: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Brazil, Burma, China, Colombia, Democratic Kampuchea, Greece, Grenada, Haiti, Honduras India, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Paraguay, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Sweden, Uruguay.

France asserted that the text gave a distorted view of the assurances by linking the granting of negative assurances and nuclear-weapon deployment on the territory of the State concerned, and by proposing that such assurances be included in a mandatory system that would govern relations between nuclear-weapon States, rather than be given by each nuclear-weapon State on an individual basis. In particular, France deplored the demand for non-deployment, which, it believed, had impeded the harmonization of the various formulae for negative security guarantees since 1978. Japan considered the text unbalanced and lacking in objectivity, in that the preambular part contained one-sided assertions and the reference in the operative part to specific modalities of assurances prejudged the work of the Conference on Disarmament.

Sweden abstained because the idea of an international convention seemed to imply the imposition of obligations on non-nuclear-weapon States beyond their declared choice to be and to stay nuclear-weapon free.

Argentina, Brazil and India explained, in single statements, their abstentions on the two drafts on negative security assurances. Argentina continued to have reservations about the value and credibility of negative assurances which, it added, would be achieved only through nuclear disarmament and the elimination of nuclear weapons. Sharing that view, India considered it futile for the non-nuclear-weapon States to expect assurances from the nuclear Powers while the latter continued to predicate their security policies on nuclear-weapon use. Brazil also stated that no progress could be made in multilateral consideration of the topic as long as the nuclear Powers continued to approach it from the narrow point of view of their own security perceptions; with but one exception, unilateral declarations of assurances contained qualifications and conditions, thus rendering them instruments of the interests of the nuclear-weapon Powers themselves.

In 1985, a safeguards agreement between the USSR and IAEA entered into force in June and the first inspections under that agreement were carried out in August. In September, China announced its intention to place some of its civilian nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards.

Prohibition or restriction of other weapons

Chemical and biological weapons

In 1985, the General Assembly again adopted three resolutions (40/92 A-C), reflecting the persisting differences in approach to an envisaged convention banning chemical and bacteriological (biological) weapons, but all urging the Conference on Disarmament to intensify its negotiations on a convention.

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. The Conference on Disarmament(1) continued negotiations on a convention banning chemical and biological weapons, from 25 March to 5 April and from 15 to 26 July 1985.

A number of new documents on verification problems were submitted by Australia, the German Democratic Republic, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, Spain, the United Kingdom and Yugoslavia, as well as by Finland and Norway, non-members of the Conference. In addition, China submitted a document on destroying chemical weapons, France on eliminating chemical-weapons stocks, the United Kingdom on the structure of an envisaged organization for implementing a convention, and Sweden on a comprehensive approach for elaborating regimes for chemicals in a convention. The USSR submitted a TASS statement on the approval by the United States Congress of appropriations for binary chemical-weapons production.

The Conference President received communications from Iran on the alleged use of chemical weapons in its conflict with Iraq (see Chapter VII of this section), and one requesting the distribution in the Conference of the 1984 report of the specialists appointed to investigate Iran's allegations of chemical-weapons use.(2)

As agreed in 1984,(3) the Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons, established that year by the Conference on Disarmament, resumed work from 14 January to 1 February 1985 to discuss, among other things, the issues of permitted activities and verification on challenge.

At its 1985 session, the Conference re-established on 7 February the Ad Hoc Committee, which, under the chairmanship of St Stanislaw Turbanski (Poland), held 12 meetings between 27 February and 19 August; in addition, the Chairman held a number of informal consultations. The Committee set up three working groups on the envisaged convention: Working Group A, on scope, definitions, non-production and permitted activities; Working Group B, on elimination of stocks and production facilities; and Working Group C, on compliance. The prohibition of chemical-weapons use and the problem of herbicides were considered in open-ended consultations. Some progress was made in those groups in formulating certain aspects of the convention, including those covering plans for eliminating chemical weapons; on the other hand, some controversial questions remained unresolved, such as verification by challenge, definition of some basic concepts, eliminating the existing stocks and production facilities, and the so-called permitted activities.

The report of the Ad Hoc Committee—later incorporated into that of the Conference<sup>(1)</sup> to the General Assembly—appended a preliminary structure of a convention, indicating the stage reached in the negotiations during the 1985 session, and the reports of the working groups and of the Chairman of the open-ended consultations. The basic structure of the convention, as formulated in 1984,<sup>(3)</sup> was retained by the Committee.

The Conference accepted the recommendations of the Ad Hoc Committee to use the appendices, together with other existing and future Conference documents, in elaborating the convention. It also agreed that the Ad Hoc Committee resume work under the current mandate for a session of limited duration in January 1986, that the Chairman hold informal consultations on specific issues in preparation for the resumed session, and that the Ad Hoc Committee be re-established with its 1985 mandate before the end of the second week of the Conference's 1986 session.

Communications. In 1985, the United Nations received a number of communications on various aspects of the question of chemical weapons, some of which also dealt with general and complete disarmament (see p. 14). In addition, the Secretary-General received a series of communications from Iran on the alleged use of chemical weapons by Iraq in their ongoing conflict (see Chapter VII of this section).

On 20 September,<sup>(4)</sup> Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic transmitted identical letters that their heads of Government had sent on 12 September to their counterpart in the Federal Republic of Germany, officially proposing that they jointly establish a chemical-weapon-free zone in Europe. On 25 October,<sup>(5)</sup> the Federal Republic of Germany transmitted the identical replies it had sent on 27 September to the two countries, suggesting that all concerned enter into talks within the framework of the Conference on Disarmament on a treaty for a world-wide ban on chemical weapons. On 20 November,<sup>(6)</sup> the two countries transmitted their 8 November letters to the Federal Republic of Germany, proposing that, parallel to the latter's September proposal, representatives of their Foreign Ministries should hold consultations.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted three resolutions (40/92 A-C)—one (40/92 B) without vote—on prohibiting chemical and bacteriological weapons. Some States explained in single statements their positions on the three texts (see p. 73).

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/92 A by recorded vote.

Prohibition of chemical and bacteriological weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling paragraph 75 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, which states that the complete and effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and their destruction represents one of the most urgent measures of disarmament,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and to their destruction,

Convinced of the need for the earliest conclusion of a convention on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction, which would significantly contribute to general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Stressing the continuing importance of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed sixty years ago at Geneva,

Determined, for the sake of all mankind, to exclude completely the possibility of the use of chemical weapons, through the earliest conclusion and implementation of a convention on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all types of chemical weapons and on their destruction, thereby complementing the obligations assumed under the Geneva Protocol of 17 June 1925,

Taking into consideration the work of the Conference on Disarmament during its session in 1985 regarding the prohibition of chemical weapons and, in particular, highly appreciating the work of its Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons,

Expressing profound concern at recent decisions on the production of binary chemical weapons, as well as at their intended deployment,

Deeming it desirable for States to refrain from taking any action that could delay or further complicate negotiations and to display a constructive approach to such negotiations and the political will to reach an early agreement on the chemical weapons convention,

Aware that the qualitative improvement and development of chemical weapons complicate ongoing negotiations on the prohibition of chemical weapons,

Taking note of proposals on the creation of chemical-weapon-free zones aimed at facilitating the complete prohibition of chemical weapons and at contributing to the achievement of stable regional and international security,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of the speediest elaboration and conclusion of a convention on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction;

2. Appeals to all States to facilitate in every possible way the conclusion of such a convention;

3. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to intensify the negotiations in the Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons with a view to achieving accord on a chemical weapons convention at the earliest possible date and, for this purpose, to intensify the drafting process of such a convention for submission to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

4. Reaffirms its call to all States to conduct serious negotiations in good faith and to refrain from any action that could impede negotiations on the prohibition of chemical weapons and specifically to refrain from the production and deployment of binary and other new types of chemical weapons, as well as from stationing chemical weapons on the territory of other States;

5. Calls upon all States that have not yet done so to become parties to the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17 June 1925.

General Assembly resolution 40/92 A

Approved by First Committee (A/40/932) by recorded vote (81-13-38), 15 November (meeting 39); 12-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.15/Rev.1); agenda item 63.

Against: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States

Abstaining: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burma, Canada, Central African Republic, Chile, China, Comoros, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Finland, Gabon, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Ireland, Israel, Ivory Coast, Japan, Mauritania, Morocco, New Zealand, Paraguay, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Sweden, Uruguay.

Later advised the Secretariat it had intended to abstain.

In explanation of vote, the Netherlands, viewing the draft as superfluous in view of the consensus adoption of resolution 40/92 B (see below), said the text criticized the intended resumption of chemical-weapons production by the United States which, it said, had unilaterally observed a freeze for over 15 years while the USSR continued to stockpile such weapons.

Australia, Brazil, Jamaica and Pakistan considered the draft deficient in that it singled out one particular kind of chemical weapon, and did not believe that the concept of chemical-weapon-free zones would facilitate the negotiation of a convention. Further, Australia felt that negotiating an equitable and verifiable treaty establishing such a zone would be no less difficult than negotiating a comprehensive ban on chemical weapons.

Cuba welcomed the proposals to create a chemical-weapon-free zone in Europe, but believed that in the case of Latin America and the Caribbean account would have to be taken of extra-regional nearby countries, which had colonial Territories in the region and which possessed chemical weapons.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/92 B without vote.

Chemical and bacteriological (biological) weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its previous resolutions relating to the complete and effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and to their destruction,

Reaffirming the urgent necessity of strict observance by all States of the principles and objectives of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17 June 1925, and of the adherence by all States to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, signed in London, Moscow and Washington, on 10 April 1972,

Having considered the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament on chemical weapons, in particular the report of its Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons,

Convinced of the necessity that all efforts be exerted for the continuation and successful conclusion of negotiations on the prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction,

1. Takes note of the work of the Conference on Disarmament during its session in 1985 regarding the prohibition of chemical weapons and, in particular, appreciates the work of its Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons on that question and the progress recorded in its report;

2. Expresses again its regret and concern that an agreement on the complete and effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of all chemical weapons and on their destruction has not yet been elaborated;

3. Urges again the Conference on Disarmament, as a matter of high priority, to intensify, during its session in 1986, the negotiations on such a convention and to reinforce further its efforts, inter alia, by increasing the time during the year that it devotes to such negotiations, taking into account all existing proposals and future initiatives, with a view to the final elaboration of a convention at the earliest possible date, and to re-establish its Ad Hoc Committee on Chemical Weapons for this purpose with the 1985 mandate;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the results of its negotiations.

General Assembly resolution 40/92 B

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/92 C by recorded vote.

Chemical and bacteriological (biological) weapons

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the urgent necessity of strict observance by all States of the principles and objectives of the Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare, signed at Geneva on 17 June 1925, and of the adherence by all States to the Convention on the Prohibition of the Development, Production and Stockpiling of Bacteriological (Biological) and Toxin Weapons and on Their Destruction, signed in London, Moscow and Washington, on 10 April 1972,

Noting with concern reports that chemical weapons have been used, as well as indications of their emergence in an increasing number of national arsenals,

Expressing concern at the increasing risk that chemical weapons may be resorted to again,

Noting international efforts to strengthen relevant international prohibitions, including efforts to develop appropriate fact-finding mechanisms,

Recalling its resolution 39/65 A of 12 December 1984,

Rededicating its efforts to protect mankind from chemical and biological warfare,

1. Reaffirms the need for strict observance of existing international obligations regarding prohibitions on chemical and biological weapons and condemns all actions that contravene those obligations;

2. Welcomes the ongoing efforts to ensure the most effective prohibitions possible on chemical and biological weapons;

3. Urges the Conference on Disarmament to accelerate its negotiations on a multilateral convention on the complete and effective prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of chemical weapons and on their destruction;

4. Calls upon all States, pending the conclusion of such a comprehensive ban, to co-operate in efforts to prevent the use of chemical weapons.

Democratic Yemen held that the text reflected a one-sided view and would not be conducive to achieving the common goal. The USSR believed that the text would create additional obstacles to eliminating chemical weapons, by inventing artificial issues about setting up verification machinery outside the Geneva multilateral negotiations, and would be tantamount to revising the 1925 Protocol. Asserting that it had been a victim of unprecedented chemical warfare from 1960 to 1971, involving nearly 100,000 tons of various chemical agents, Viet Nam said all efforts should focus on the ongoing negotiations on a convention, a position shared by the Lao People's Democratic Republic, which stated that its negative vote was in line with its previous stand.

Yugoslavia felt that the draft constituted a continuation of the action it had not supported in 1984; it called for the establishment of an effective system of verification of compliance.

Speaking in support of all three texts on a chemical-weapons ban, Bangladesh said it did so even though it considered some parts to contain one-sided and contradictory positions. Voting in like manner, Romania believed that a unilateral or common undertaking to renounce the development and production of new chemical weapons and their deployment on the territories of other countries would have a positive impact on the successful conclusion of negotiations. Venezuela declared that such abhorrent weapons of mass destruction should be totally eliminated.

New weapons of mass destruction, including radiological weapons

As in the past, no tangible progress was achieved in 1985, due to divergent approaches, on prohibiting the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction.

In December, the General Assembly requested the Conference on Disarmament, with the assistance of a periodically convened group of experts, to keep the question under constant review with a view to recommending specific negotiations on the identified types of such weapons (resolution 40/90). As regards radiological weapons, the Conference was requested to continue, and conclude promptly, its negotiations on prohibiting such weapons (40/94 D).

Earlier in 1985, in February,(7) the Secretary-General had drawn the Security Council's attention to the Assembly's 1984 call(8) to the Council's permanent members and other militarily significant States to declare their refusal to create new types of weapons of mass destruction, as a first step towards concluding a comprehensive agreement on the topic.

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. The Conference on Disarmament(1) considered the item "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons" from 15 to 19 April and from 5 to 9 August 1985. It re-established, on 14 March, an Ad Hoc Committee on Radiological Weapons with a view to reaching agreement on a convention prohibiting the development, production, stockpiling and use of such weapons. At the same time, the question of new types and systems of weapons of mass destruction continued to be considered in plenary and informal meetings.

The Ad Hoc Committee held 16 meetings between 19 April and 16 August, under the chairmanship of Richard Butler (Australia), who also held a number of informal consultations. As in the past, it continued examining questions relating to "traditional" radiological weapons and those relating to prohibition of attacks against nuclear facilities. Among the documents before the Committee in 1985 were a compendium, submitted by Canada, of Conference verbatim records and working papers on radiological weapons, and a paper by a group of socialist States, on prohibition of radiological weapons and of attacks against nuclear facilities.

The Committee discussed the Chairman's suggestions for elements of a draft treaty; a compilation of draft provisions, subsequently prepared by him and annexed to the report, reflected the state of deliberations on the two major questions. The Committee recommended that it be re-established at the beginning of the Conference's 1986 session and that the annex to its report be considered as a basis for further work. On 29 August, the Conference adopted the report of the Ad Hoc Committee as part of its own report to the General Assembly.

As regards the question of new types and systems of weapons of mass destruction, the Eastern European and a number of other States supported a proposal made in the Conference plenary by the USSR, aimed at starting negotiations on the prohibition of any new kind of weapon of mass destruction immediately after it had been identified, and the simultaneous introduction of a moratorium on its development; the proposal also stipulated that the Conference on Disarmament, with the assistance of a group of experts periodically convened, should keep the question under review in order to make recommendations on issues that required concrete negotiations.

Western and other States maintained that since no new types of weapons of mass destruction had been identified or were expected to emerge imminently, the Conference could continue to hold informal meetings from time to time, with the participation of experts as appropriate, in order to monitor the situation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted two resolutions aimed at banning new weapons of mass destruction.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/90 by recorded vote.

Prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 3479(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/74 of 10 December 1976, 32/84 A of 12 December 1977, 33/66 B of 14 December 1978, 34/79 of 11 December 1979, 35/149 of 12 December 1980, 36/89 of 9 December 1981, 37/77 A of 9 December 1982, 38/182 of 20 December 1983 and 39/62 of 12 December 1984 concerning the prohibition of new types of weapons of mass destruction,

Bearing in mind the provisions of paragraph 39 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, according to which qualitative and quantitative disarmament measures are both important for halting the arms race and efforts to that end must include negotiations on the limitation and cessation of the qualitative improvement of armaments, especially weapons of mass destruction, and the development of new means of warfare,

Recalling the decision contained in paragraph 77 of the Final Document to the effect that, in order to help to prevent a qualitative arms race and so that scientific and technological achievements might ultimately be used solely for peaceful purposes, effective measures should be taken to prevent the emergence of new types of weapons of mass destruction based on new scientific principles and achievements, and that efforts aiming at the prohibition of such new types and new systems of weapons of mass destruction should be appropriately pursued.

Expressing once again its firm belief, in the light of the decisions adopted at the tenth special session, in the importance of concluding an agreement or agreements to prevent the use of scientific and technological progress for the development of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons,

Noting that in the course of its session in 1985 the Conference on Disarmament considered the item entitled "New types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons; radiological weapons",

Convinced that all ways and means should be utilized to prevent the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons,

Taking into consideration the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to this question,

1. Reaffirms the necessity of prohibiting the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons;

2. Requests the Conference on Disarmament, in the light of its existing priorities, to keep constantly under review, with the assistance of a periodically convened group of experts, the question of the prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons with a view to making, when necessary, recommendations on undertaking specific negotiations on the identified types of such weapons;

3. Calls upon all States to contribute, immediately following the identification of any new type of weapon of mass destruction, to the commencement of negotiations on its prohibition with the simultaneous introduction of a moratorium on its practical development;

4. Once again urges all States to refrain from any action that could adversely affect the efforts aimed at the prevention of the emergence of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons;

5. Calls again upon all States to undertake efforts to ensure that ultimately scientific and technological achievements may be used solely for peaceful purposes;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Conference on Disarmament all documents relating to the consideration of this item by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

7. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to submit a report on the results achieved to the General Assembly for consideration at its forty-first session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Prohibition of the development and manufacture of new types of weapons of mass destruction and new systems of such weapons: report of the Conference on Disarmament".

Approved by First Committee (A/40/945) by recorded vote (106-1-23), 19 November (meeting 42); 24-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.33); agenda item 60.

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ivory Coast, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, China, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom.

In explaining the abstentions of the 10 EC members, Portugal and Spain, the Netherlands stated, on their behalf, that only when the possibility of the manufacture of weapons of mass destruction based on new scientific principles had been clearly established would it be possible to enter into negotiations aimed at an adequately verifiable prohibition of them. They believed that a consensus resolution could have been possible if the draft had not specified the procedural form by which the Conference on Disarmament should acquire expert assistance; further, they considered that setting up such an expert group would be premature, since it would have no real work to do in the existing situation.

The Assembly adopted resolution 40/94 D without vote.

Prohibition of the development, production, stockpiling and use of radiological weapons
The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/151 J of 17 December 1984,

1. Takes note of that part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament on the question of radiological weapons, in particular the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Radiological Weapons;

2. Takes note also of the recommendation of the Conference on Disarmament that the Ad Hoc Committee on Radiological Weapons should be re-established at the beginning of its 1986 session and that the annex to the report of the Ad Hoc Committee should be considered as a basis for further work;

3. Recognizes that the work accomplished by the Ad Hoc Committee on Radiological Weapons in 1985 made a further contribution to the solution of the issues entrusted to it;

4. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to continue its negotiations on the subject with a view to a prompt conclusion of its work, taking into account all proposals presented to the Conference to this end, the result of which should be submitted to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

5. Also requests that the Secretary-General transmit to the Conference on Disarmament all relevant documents relating to the discussion of all aspects of the issue by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Prohibition of the development, production, stockpiling and use of radiological weapons".

Conventional weapons

While fear of nuclear weapons was pervasive because of their potential for global devastation, it was conventional weapons that daily claimed countless lives, the Secretary-General stressed (see p. 6).

In December 1985, the General Assembly endorsed recent regional and subregional initiatives directed towards limiting armaments and reducing military expenditures, and requested the Secretary-General to provide Governments so requesting with technical services and assistance in regional conventional-disarmament measures (resolution 40/94 A). Inviting further comments on the 1984 expert study on conventional disarmament,(9) the Assembly decided to include, for the first time, an item on conventional disarmament in its 1986 agenda (40/94 C). In addition, the Assembly called for wider adherence to the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, and its three Protocols(10) (40/84).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 A by recorded vote.

Conventional disarmament on a regional scale

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming the determination to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war that is expressed in the Preamble to the Charter of the United Nations,

Again recognizing the urgent need for the harmonizing of political wills in order to promote initiatives aimed at reducing expenditure on armaments so that the resources thus released can be devoted to the social and economic development of all peoples,

Recalling paragraph 2 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is stated, inter alia, that the nuclear and conventional arms buildup threatens to stall the efforts aimed at reaching the goals of development, to become an obstacle on the road of achieving the new international economic order and to hinder the solution of other vital problems facing mankind,

Recalling further paragraphs 45 and 46 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session, in which it declared, inter alia, that priorities in disarmament negotiations should be: nuclear weapons; other weapons of mass destruction, including chemical weapons; conventional weapons, including any which may be deemed to be excessively injurious or to have indiscriminate effects; and reduction of armed forces; and that nothing should preclude States from conducting negotiations on all priority items concurrently,

Recognizing that unilateral measures to limit or reduce armaments can make a contribution to the attainment of disarmament,

Recalling its resolution 37/100 F of 13 December 1982 on regional disarmament, in which it stressed, inter alia, the importance of the regional measures already adopted, as well as of efforts of a regional nature undertaken in the field of nuclear and conventional disarmament,

Recalling also its resolutions 38/73 J of 15 December 1983 and 39/63 F of 12 December 1984 on regional disarmament,

1. Urges Governments, where the regional situation so permits and on the initiative of the States concerned, to consider and adopt appropriate measures at the regional level with a view to strengthening peace and security at a lower level of forces through the limitation and reduction of armed forces and conventional weapons, under strict and effective international control, taking into account the need of States to protect their security, bearing in mind the inherent right of self-defence enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and without prejudice to the principle of equal rights and of the self-determination of peoples, in conformity with the Charter, and taking into account the need to ensure balance in each phase and to avoid impairing the security of any State;

2. Expresses its most firm support for recent unilateral measures, adopted by some Governments, which are intended to limit conventional armaments and reduce military expenditures and which contribute to the creation of an atmosphere favourable to the realization of conventional disarmament on a regional scale;

3. Endorses most emphatically the recent regional and subregional initiatives directed towards the conclusion of agreements to limit armaments and reduce military expenditures;

4. Reaffirms the primary responsibility of the militarily significant States, especially the nuclear-weapon States, for halting and reversing the arms race, and the priority assigned to nuclear disarmament in the context of the advances towards general and complete disarmament;

5. Requests all States to facilitate progress towards regional disarmament by strictly honouring their commitment to refrain from the threat or use of force and to contribute to the creation of an atmosphere favourable to the realization of conventional disarmament on a regional scale;

6. Urges also countries which are suppliers of conventional weapons to co-operate with regional efforts;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to provide interested Governments, upon request, with such technical services and assistance as may be useful in measures of conventional disarmament on a regional scale and also requests him to submit a report on the situation with regard to this matter to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Conventional disarmament on a regional scale".

General Assembly resolution 40/94 A

India felt that the text's main thrust was considerably at variance with the 1978 Final Document:(11) neither the global perspective of paragraph 81 of the Document, which envisaged limiting and gradually reducing conventional weapons within the framework of progress towards general and complete disarmament, nor the priority assigned to nuclear disarmament in paragraph 55 was reflected adequately. While agreeing that conventional armaments imposed a burden on the economies of developing countries, Cuba said that, in its case, the scope of regional measures to attain security through limiting armed forces and conventional weapons would have to be broader than merely the Caribbean region, because of what it described as the United States policy of hostility towards Cuba. Similarly, the Lao People's Democratic Republic did not feel that the regional approach was acceptable in areas where nuclear-weapon States carried out policies hostile to their neighbours. Viet Nam was alarmed at attempts to take advantage of the legitimate concern over conventional weapons to divert attention from the prevention of nuclear war. In the plenary Assembly, Ethiopia stated that the resolution would shift the focus of attention from the primary goal of nuclear disarmament, and that it did not take into account the situation of countries which were vulnerable to attacks by South Africa.

Venezuela considered the twice-revised text to be an important supplement to efforts to contain the arms race in areas such as nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction. Belgium considered the draft to be a significant initiative in the regional approach to disarmament, based on the 1984 Assembly resolution on the topic.(12) Australia did not agree that unilateral disarmament measures were effective in halting the arms race, but supported the text because of the need to halt and reverse the conventional arms race, and because of the text's emphasis on limiting conventional arms transfers and reducing military budgets and on the role of regional initiatives in realizing conventional disarmament on a regional scale.

Follow-up on the 1984 study

In an August 1985 report, with a later addendum,(13) the Secretary-General transmitted to the General Assembly the replies received from 23 Member States in response to its 1984 request(14) for views on the 1984 expert study(9) on all aspects of the conventional arms race and on disarmament relating to conventional weapons and armed forces.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/94 C without vote, as recommended by the First Committee.

Study on conventional disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/151 C of 17 December 1984, in which the Secretary-General was requested to prepare a report for the General Assembly at its fortieth session containing the views of Member States received regarding the study on all aspects of the conventional arms race and on disarmament relating to conventional weapons and armed forces,

Further recalling paragraph 81 and other relevant paragraphs of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which the importance also of conventional disarmament measures is stressed,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization in which it is stated that "while the fear of nuclear weapons is pervasive because of their potentially global devastating effect, it is conventional weapons that every day claim countless lives", and further that "the conventional arms race, moreover, squanders precious economic resources",

Bearing in mind the immense drain on human, economic and technological resources caused by the conventional arms race,

Further noting the link between disarmament and development and the forthcoming International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General containing the views received from Member States regarding the Study on Conventional Disarmament,

1. Appeals to all Member States to make the widest use of the Study and its conclusions and recommendations;
2. Invites Member States that have not yet informed the Secretary-General of their views regarding the Study to do so no later than 31 May 1986;
3. Requests the Secretary-General to prepare a report for the General Assembly at its forty-first session containing further views of Member States received regarding the Study;
4. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Conventional disarmament".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/976) without vote, 14 November (meeting 38); draft by Denmark (A/C.1/40/L.14); agenda item 68 (e).

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 35, 38; plenary 113.

Ratification of the 1980 Convention and Protocols

The Secretary-General, as depositary of the 1980 Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, and its three Protocols,<sup>(10)</sup> reported to the General Assembly on the status of ratification as at 31 July 1985.<sup>(15)</sup>

The Convention and Protocols, which had entered into force in December 1983,<sup>(16)</sup> provided new rules of protection from injury or attack by means of incendiary weapons, land-mines, booby traps and other devices, as well as fragments that cannot be easily detected in the human body by X-rays.

As at 31 December 1985, there were 25 States parties to the Convention, Pakistan having ratified it during the year.<sup>(17)</sup> Those States had also accepted the three Protocols dealing with non-detectable fragments; mines, booby traps and other devices; and incendiary weapons.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/84 without vote.

Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 32/152 of 19 December 1977, 35/153 of 12 December 1980, 36/93 of 9 December 1981, 37/79 of 9 December 1982, 38/66 of 15 December 1983 and 39/56 of 12 December 1984,

Recalling with satisfaction the adoption, on 10 October 1980, of the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, together with the Protocol on Non-Detectable Fragments (Protocol I), the Protocol on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Mines, Booby Traps and Other Devices (Protocol II) and the Protocol on

Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Incendiary Weapons (Protocol III),

Reaffirming its conviction that general agreement on the prohibition or restriction of use of specific conventional weapons would significantly reduce the suffering of civilian populations and of combatants,

Taking note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General,

1. Notes with satisfaction that an increasing number of States have either signed, ratified, accepted or acceded to the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects, which was opened for signature in New York on 10 April 1981;

2. Further notes with satisfaction that, consequent upon the fulfilment of the conditions set out in article 5 of the Convention, the Convention and the three Protocols annexed thereto entered into force on 2 December 1983;

3. Urges all States that have not yet done so to exert their best endeavours to become parties to the Convention and the Protocols annexed thereto as early as possible, so as ultimately to obtain universality of adherence;

4. Notes that, under article 8 of the Convention, conferences may be convened to consider amendments to the Convention or any of the annexed Protocols, to consider additional protocols relating to other categories of conventional weapons not covered by the existing annexed Protocols, or to review the scope and operation of the Convention and the Protocols annexed thereto and to consider any proposal for amendments to the Convention or to the existing Protocols and any proposals for additional protocols relating to other categories of conventional weapons not covered by the existing Protocols;

5. Requests the Secretary-General as depositary of the Convention and its three annexed Protocols to inform the General Assembly from time to time of the state of adherence to the Convention and its Protocols;

6. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects".

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/943) without vote, 14 November (meeting 37); 19-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.32); agenda item 54.

Sponsors: Austria, Belgium, Cuba, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, German Democratic Republic, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Mongolia, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nigeria, Norway, Sweden, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 37; plenary 113.

The United States explained that it did not consider the text's approval as prejudging any State's decision regarding adherence or ratification of the Convention, and that its support of the consensus was not indicative of any such decision by the United States.

Arms race in outer space

With the initiation, in 1985, of bilateral negotiations between the USSR and the United States (see p. 44) on nuclear and space arms, the Assembly urged them to negotiate in a constructive spirit, and asked all Member States for their views on the possibility of enhancing international co-operation in preventing an arms race in, and promoting the peaceful uses of, outer space, including the desirability of establishing machinery for that purpose (resolution 40/87). (See also Chapter II of this section.)

Consideration by the Conference on Disarmament. In 1985, the Conference on Disarmament<sup>(1)</sup> considered the item on prevention of an arms race in outer space, from 4 to 15 March and from 1 to 5 July. An Ad Hoc Committee, established on 29 March in Pursuance of a 1984 General Assembly request,<sup>(18)</sup> held 20 meetings between 24 June and 26 August under the chairmanship of Saad Alfaragi (Egypt) to examine relevant issues through substantive and general consideration.

The documents before the Conference included two submissions by Canada—a two-volume compendium of verbatim records and working papers on the item submitted to the Conference, and a survey of international law relevant to arms control and outer space; one by China outlining its basic position; a working paper by a group of socialist countries; a document by the United Kingdom on international agreements applicable or relevant to outer space; and two submissions from the USSR—the comments, published on 6 July, of its General Secretary to the Union of Concerned Scientists, and documents connected with its proposal entitled “The basic directions and principles of international co-operation in the peaceful exploration of outer space under conditions of its non-militarization” (see below).

Different views persisted on the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee. The group of 21 maintained that the initial stage of substantive and general consideration of the issues should end with the 1985 session of the Committee, and that negotiations should begin in 1986 to conclude an agreement or agreements on the topic. Similarly, the socialist States advocated re-establishing the Committee in 1986 with a mandate enabling it to start negotiations on concrete practical measures. Other delegations held that the 1985 mandate was realistic and should not expire at the end of the current session if the Committee had not completed the kind of exploratory work envisaged in it. Still others expressed the need for further consultations to examine the matter.

On 29 August, the Conference adopted the report of the Ad Hoc Committee as part of its own report to the General Assembly.

Consideration by the Committee on outer space. In accordance with a 1984 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(19)</sup> the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (New York, 17-28 June 1985)<sup>(20)</sup> discussed as a priority ways of maintaining outer space for peaceful purposes. However, as in previous years, divergent views persisted on the competence of the Committee, as against the Conference on Disarmament, in addressing issues of arms control in outer space.

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/162, again requested the Committee to consider the subject as a priority and urged all States to help prevent an arms race in outer space.

UNIDIR study. As decided in 1984 by the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies acting as the Board of Trustees of UNIDIR, the Institute began in 1985 its study on the limitation of military uses of outer space, by establishing a group of experts from Argentina, Brazil, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, India, Poland, the USSR and the United States to guide its preparation. Two sessions were held during the year (22-24 April and 9-13 December), with the initial draft of the study being considered in detail at the second; the study was to be published in 1986 after consideration by the Board.

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/87, invited Member States to submit their views on the study no later than 1 April 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In addition to an agenda item on the report of the Conference on Disarmament<sup>(1)</sup> as it related to preventing an arms race in outer space, the General Assembly took up in 1985 a new item proposed by the USSR, on international co-operation in the peaceful exploitation of outer space under conditions of its non-militarization.

In submitting that request by a 15 August letter,<sup>(21)</sup> the USSR stated that there was a growing possibility of outer space becoming a source of great military danger due to plans to develop and deploy what it termed “space strike weapons”. A draft resolution, appended to the letter, would have had the Assembly convene not later than 1987 an international conference to consider all aspects of international co-operation in the peaceful exploitation and use of outer space and of establishing a world space organization. Details of the USSR’s proposals were provided in what it called main lines and principles, annexed to the letter, and which were again submitted to the First Committee on 9 October,<sup>(22)</sup> and to the Special Political Committee on 13 November.<sup>(23)</sup>

Taken up in the First Committee, the draft was subsequently revised<sup>(24)</sup> to delete specifics regarding the conference, and instead would have had the Assembly call on States to examine the possibility of holding such a conference at a proper stage, and request the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space to study the proposal.

At the request of the sponsor, no action was taken on the draft resolution, and the General Assembly, by decision 40/424 of 12 December, took note of the report of the First Committee<sup>(25)</sup> on its consideration of the USSR-proposed agenda item.

Along with the USSR proposal, three other draft resolutions-submitted to the First Committee, respectively, by China, a group of Western countries and Poland-were also not put to a vote at the request of the sponsors.

The draft by China,<sup>(26)</sup> on prevention of an arms race in outer space, would have had the Assembly request the Conference on Disarmament to initiate negotiations without delay for concluding an agreement(s) on prohibiting and destroying all outer-space weapon systems. It also would have had the Assembly urge the USSR and the United States to negotiate on preventing an arms race in outer space and to keep the Conference informed of progress.

Also entitled the prevention of an arms race in outer space, the proposal by Belgium, Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway and the United Kingdom<sup>(27)</sup> would have had the Assembly stress the importance of continued substantive work in the Conference as well as of upholding the relevant existing treaties, and welcome the initiation of bilateral negotiations between the USSR and the United States on strategic and intermediate-range space and nuclear arms.

The draft by Poland,<sup>(28)</sup> on a study of the various consequences of the militarization of outer space, would have had the Assembly request the Secretary-General to prepare a comprehensive study-based on accessible material, with the assistance of eminent consultant experts of various nationalities appointed by him-to be submitted by 1 July 1987. The Secretary-General subsequently submitted a statement of the draft's financial implications.<sup>(29)</sup>

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted, by recorded vote, a 22-nation draft as resolution 40/87.

Prevention of an arms race in outer space
The General Assembly,

Inspired by the great prospects opening up before mankind as a result of man's entry into outer space,

Recognizing the common interest of all mankind in the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Reaffirming that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be carried out for the benefit and in the interest of all countries, irrespective of their degree of economic or scientific development, and shall be the province of all mankind,

Reaffirming Further the will of all States that the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, shall be for peaceful purposes,

Recalling that the States parties to the Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies,<sup>(30)</sup> have undertaken, in article III, to carry on activities in the exploration and use of outer space, including the Moon and other celestial bodies, in accordance with international law and the Charter of the United Nations, in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international co-operation and understanding,

Reaffirming, in particular, article IV of the above-mentioned Treaty, which stipulates that States parties to the Treaty undertake not to place in orbit around the Earth any objects carrying nuclear weapons or any other kinds of weapons of mass destruction, install such weapons on celestial bodies or station such weapons in outer space in any other manner,

Reaffirming also paragraph 80 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, in which it is stated that, in order to prevent an arms race in outer space, further measures should be taken and appropriate international negotiations held in accordance with the spirit of the Treaty,

Recalling its resolutions 36/97 C and 36/99 of 9 December 1981, as well as resolutions 37/83 of 9 December 1982, 37/99 D of 13 December 1982, 38/70 of 15 December 1983 and 39/59 of 12 December 1984,

Gravely concerned at the danger posed to all mankind by an arms race in outer space and in particular by the impending threat of the exacerbation of the current state of insecurity by developments that could further undermine international peace and security, retard the pursuit of general and complete disarmament, and risk creating obstacles to the development of international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space,

Mindful of the widespread interest expressed by Member States in the course of the negotiations on and following the adoption of the above-mentioned Treaty in ensuring that the exploration and use of outer space should be for peaceful purposes, and taking note of proposals submitted to the General Assembly at its tenth special session and at its regular sessions and to the Conference on Disarmament,

Noting the grave concern expressed by the Second United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space at the extension of an arms race into outer space and the recommendations made to the competent organs of the United Nations, in particular the General Assembly, and also to the Committee on Disarmament,*

Convinced that further measures are needed for the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Recognizing that, in the context of multilateral negotiations for preventing an arms race in outer space, bilateral negotiations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America could make a significant contribution to such an objective, in accordance with paragraph 27 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session,

Noting with satisfaction that bilateral negotiations between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America have begun in 1985, on a complex of questions concerning space and nuclear arms, both strategic and intermediate-range, and in their interrelationship, with the declared objective of working out effective agreements aimed, inter alia, at preventing an arms race in outer space,

Anxious that concrete results should emerge from these negotiations as soon as possible, as was urged in resolution 39/59,

Taking note of the part of the report of the Conference on Disarmament relating to this question,

Welcoming the establishment of an Ad Hoc Committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space during the 1985 session of the Conference on Disarmament, in the exercise of the negotiating responsibilities of this sole multilateral negotiating body on disarmament, to examine, as a first step at this stage, issues relevant to the prevention of an arms race in outer space,

Mindful that consensus had not yet been reached in the Conference on Disarmament on concrete proposals for re-establishing the ad hoc committee on this question during the 1986 session of the Conference on Disarmament,

1. Recalls the obligation of all States to refrain from the threat or use of force in their space activities;

2. Reaffirms that general and complete disarmament under effective international control warrants that outer space shall be used exclusively for peaceful purposes and that it shall not become an arena for an arms race;

3. Emphasizes that further measures with appropriate and effective provisions for verification to prevent an arms race in outer space should be adopted by the international community;

4. Calls upon all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, to contribute actively to the objective of the peaceful use of outer space and to take immediate measures to prevent an arms race in outer space in the interest of maintaining international peace and security and promoting international co-operation and understanding;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to invite Member States to submit their views on the possibility of enhancing international co-operation in the field of preventing an arms race in outer space and the peaceful uses of outer space, including the desirability of establishing relevant machinery for that purpose, and to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

6. Reiterates that the Conference on Disarmament, as the single multilateral disarmament negotiating forum, has the primary role in the negotiation of a multilateral agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

7. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to consider as a matter of priority the question of preventing an arms race in outer space;

8. Also requests the Conference on Disarmament to intensify its consideration of the question of the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects, taking into account all relevant proposals including those presented in the Ad Hoc Committee on the prevention of an arms race in outer space at the 1985 session of the Conference and at the fortieth session of the General Assembly;

9. Further requests the Conference on Disarmament to re-establish an ad hoc committee with an adequate mandate at the beginning of its session in 1986, with a view to undertaking negotiations for the conclusion of an agreement or agreements, as appropriate, on the prevention of an arms race in outer space in all its aspects;

10. Urges the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America to pursue intensively their bilateral negotiations in a constructive spirit aimed at reaching early agreement for preventing an arms race in outer space, and to advise the Conference on Disarmament periodically of the progress of their bilateral sessions so as to facilitate its work;

11. Calls upon all States, especially those with major space capabilities, to refrain, in their activities relating to outer space, from actions contrary to the observance of the relevant existing treaties or to the objective of preventing an arms race in outer space;

12. Invites Member States to transmit to the Secretary-General, not later than 1 April 1986, their views on the scope and content of the study being undertaken by the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research on disarmament problems relating to outer space and the consequences of extending the arms race into outer space, and requests the Secretary-General to convey the views of the Member States to the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies for consideration in order to enable it, in its capacity of Board of Trustees of the Institute, to give the Institute such possible guidance with respect to the elaboration of its study as it may derive from those views;

13. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to report on its consideration of this subject to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit to the Conference on Disarmament all documents relating to the consideration of this subject by the General Assembly at its fortieth session;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Prevention of an arms race in outer space".

*The Committee on Disarmament was redesignated the Conference on Disarmament as from 7 February 1984.

12 December 1985 Meeting 113 151-0-2 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/964) by recorded vote (131-0-1), 22 November (meeting 47); 22-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.68/Rev.1); agenda item 57.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 35, 47; plenary 113.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, German Democratic Republic, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: None

Abstaining: Grenada, United States.

The Assembly adopted paragraphs 5 and 9 by recorded votes, respectively, of 123 to 2 (Grenada, United States), with 21 abstentions, and 136 to 2 (Grenada, United States), with 11 abstentions. The First Committee had also approved those paragraphs by recorded votes of 105 to 1 (United States), with 21 abstentions, and 118 to 1 (United States), with 11 abstentions, respectively.

Explaining its opposition to the two paragraphs and its abstention on the text as a whole, the United States felt it inappropriate for the First Committee to consider the peaceful uses of outer space, because such action denigrated the functions of the Special Political Committee—where it believed the item belonged—the Committee on outer space, and a 25-year tradition of consensus in the United Nations on matters relating to co-operation in that area; further, it felt that paragraph 5 had been included to give some recognition to subjects associated with the new USSR-proposed agenda item (see p. 79), and that the language of paragraph 9 lacked balance, in contrast to that of the Western draft which, it felt, had avoided intervening in the internal consultations and decision-making of the Conference on Disarmament and was consistent with the conclusions of that body's Ad Hoc Committee at its 1985 session.

Several other delegations explained their support for the text as a whole and their abstentions on the paragraphs. Australia and Canada, voicing objections to paragraph 5, felt that maintaining the current institutional division of labour, whereby the Committee on outer space focused on peaceful co-operation and the Conference on Disarmament on arms-control measures, was the best way of ensuring that those issues remained separate. Sharing that view and the United States objections to paragraphs 5 and 9, Italy—speaking also on behalf of Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Turkey and the United Kingdom—expressed support for maintaining in the Conference on Disarmament an approach which, they believed, had already produced useful work. France, abstaining on the paragraphs for similar reasons, also considered it essential that the Ad Hoc Committee continue its work with a mandate similar to that of 1985, and announced a $30,000 contribution towards the financing of the UNIDIR study mentioned in paragraph 12.

In other 1985 action, the Assembly, in resolution 40/152 E, again expressed concern at the danger of the arms race extending into outer space.

Other disarmament issues

In the continuing debate on measures to reduce military budgets and expenditures and to reallocate the resources thus released for economic and social development, the General Assembly, in 1985, requested the Disarmament Commission to finalize the governing principles for freezing and reducing military expenditures (resolution 40/91 A); requested the Secretary-General to update a 1982 report on economic and social consequences of the arms race and military expenditures (40/150); and stressed the importance of a better information flow on military capabilities (40/94 K). Also in 1985, the Group of Experts on the Reduction of Military Budgets completed its report (40/91 B), while the Group of Governmental Experts on Military Research and Development was unable to do likewise.

As preparatory work began for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, the Assembly decided that the Conference should meet in Paris from 15 July to 2 August 1986 (40/155).

In another development, the Assembly requested the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean to complete preparatory work during 1986 for the long-envisioned Conference on the Indian Ocean (40/153).

Reduction of military budgets

In 1985, at a time when estimated global military expenditures hovered around $1 trillion, the General Assembly requested the Disarmament Commission to finalize in 1986 the principles that should govern the actions of States in freezing and reducing military expenditures (resolution 40/91 A); and invited them to comment on an expert report on reducing military budgets (40/191 B).

Disarmament Commission consideration. In May 1985, the Disarmament Commission(1) again considered two aspects of reducing military budgets: harmonizing views on their gradual, agreed reduction and reallocating resources being used for military purposes to economic and social development; and examining and identifying ways to achieve agreements to freeze, reduce or otherwise restrain military expenditures in a balanced manner.

Working Group I, re-established by the Commission to consider the question for the fifth consecutive year, held eight meetings between 10 and 24 May under the chairmanship of Gheorghe Tinca (Romania), who also held informal consultations. The Group based its discussions on a 1984 working paper, (2) containing a synopsis of the texts on principles that should govern the actions of States in freezing and reducing military expenditures. While the Group broadened the area of agreement on many principles, there were still divergences of views on others; following the discussion, the Group annexed to its report a new working paper, reflecting the latest stage of its work.

On 29 May, the Commission adopted by consensus the Working Group's report, in which it was suggested that the Commission finalize the principles in 1986, and that the Assembly urge all Member States, in particular the most heavily armed, to co-operate in reaching agreements to freeze, reduce or otherwise restrain military expenditures.

Communications. On 12 August, Peru transmitted to the Secretary-General the 29 July Lima Declaration signed by 20 Latin American and Caribbean countries on the occasion of Peru's presidential inauguration,(3) in which they condemned the arms race as a threat to international peace and security and a further obstacle to development, and considered as timely the balanced reduction of military expenditures and the allocation of greater resources for development. In addition, Peru submitted to the President of the Conference on Disarmament a proposal, made by its new President in his 28 July inaugural address, for a regional agreement on reducing arms expenditure and freezing arms acquisitions.(4)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the First Committee's recommendation, the General Assembly, on 12 December, adopted resolution 40/91 A without vote.

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned about the ever-spiralling arms race and growing military expenditures, which constitute a heavy burden for the economies of all nations and have extremely harmful effects on world peace and security,

Reaffirming once again the provisions of paragraph 89 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, according to which the gradual reduction of military budgets on a mutually agreed basis, for example, in absolute figures or in terms of percentage, particularly by nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, would contribute to curbing the arms race and would increase the possibilities for the reallocation of resources now being used for military purposes to economic and social development, particularly for the benefit of the developing countries,

Convinced that the freezing and reduction of military budgets would have favourable consequences on the world economic and financial situation and might facilitate efforts made to increase international assistance for the developing countries,

Recalling that at its twelfth special session, the second special session devoted to disarmament, all Member States unanimously and categorically reaffirmed the validity of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session, as well as their solemn commitment to it,

Recalling also that, in the Declaration of the 1980s as the Second United Nations Disarmament Decade, it is provided that during this period renewed efforts should be made to reach agreement on the reduction of military expenditures and the reallocation of resources thus saved to economic and social development, especially for the benefit of developing countries,

Recalling further the provisions of its resolution 34/83 F of 11 December 1979, subsequently reaffirmed in its resolutions 35/142 A of 12 December 1980, 36/82 A of 9 December 1981, 37/95 A of 13 December 1982, 38/184 A of 20 December 1983 and 39/64 A of 12 December 1984, in which it considered that a new impetus should be given to the endeavours to achieve agreements to freeze, reduce or otherwise restrain, in a balanced manner, military expenditure, including adequate measures of verification satisfactory to all parties concerned,

Aware of the various proposals submitted by Member States and of the activities carried out so far within the framework of the United Nations in the field of the reduction of military budgets,

Considering that the identification and elaboration of the principles that should govern further actions of States in freezing and reducing military budgets and the other current activities within the framework of the United Nations related to the question of the reduction of military budgets should be regarded as having the fundamental objective of reaching international agreements on the reduction of military expenditures,

Taking note of the report of the Disarmament Commission on the work accomplished during its session in 1985 on the item entitled "Reduction of military budgets",

1. Declares again its conviction that it is possible to achieve international agreements on the reduction of military budgets without prejudice to the right of all States to undiminished security, self-defence and sovereignty;

2. Appeals to all States, in particular to the most heavily armed States, pending the conclusion of agreements on the reduction of military expenditures, to exercise self-restraint in their military expenditures with a view to reallocating the funds thus saved to economic and social development, particularly for the benefit of developing countries;

3. Reaffirms that the human and material resources released through the reduction of military expenditures could be reallocated for economic and social development, particularly for the benefit of the developing countries;

4. Requests the Disarmament Commission to continue the consideration of the item entitled "Reduction of military budgets" and, in this context, to finalize, at its substantive session in 1986, the principles that should govern the actions of States in the field of freezing and reduction of military expenditures on the basis of the working paper annexed to its report, as well as other proposals and ideas on the subject;

5. Draws anew the attention of Member States to the fact that the identification and elaboration of the principles which should govern further actions of States in freezing and reducing military budgets could contribute to harmonizing the views of States and creating confidence among them conducive to international agreements on the reduction of military budgets;

6. Urges all Member States, in particular the most heavily armed States, to reinforce their readiness to co-operate in a constructive manner with a view to reaching agreements to freeze, reduce or otherwise restrain military expenditures;

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Reduction of military budgets".

While joining in the consensus, India held that the onus of reductions lay almost exclusively with the few militarily significant States, which, it said, accounted for 80 per cent of global military expenditure.

Report of the Group of Experts

In August 1985, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly a report prepared by the Group of Experts on the Reduction of Military Budgets.<sup>(5)</sup> The Group-experts appointed in 1983 in pursuance of a 1982 Assembly request,<sup>(6)</sup> from Indonesia, Italy, Nigeria, Peru, Romania, Sweden and the United States-held six sessions beginning in March 1983, including two in 1985 (19 February--9 March and 10-14 June), under the chairmanship of Hans Christian Cars (Sweden). Australia, Austria, Finland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, the United Kingdom and the United States participated in the exercise, in response to the Secretary-General's invitation to States for their voluntary co-operation.

In its report, which covered the construction of military price indexes and purchasing-power parities for comparison of military expenditures, the Group concluded, among other things, that the construction of useful instruments for comparing military expenditures was feasible, given a sufficient availability of statistics. It recommended that all Member States be invited to express their views on the report, including the prospects of wider participation, in particular by countries with different budgeting and accounting systems and at very different levels of economic development, and to suggest further measures for promoting and facilitating international agreements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In addition to the expert report, the Secretary-General submitted to the Assembly in May 1985, with later addenda, his annual report on military expenditures in standardized form reported by 24 States.<sup>(7)</sup> As in previous years, a majority of the responding States had used the standard reporting instrument, consisting of a matrix designed to show how much each force group (such as land, naval and air forces) spent in each resource category (such as personnel, procurement and operations).

On 12 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/91 B by recorded vote, as recommended by the First Committee.

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned about the arms race and present tendencies to increase further the rate of growth of military expenditures, the deplorable waste of human and economic resources and the potentially harmful effects on world peace and security,

Considering that a gradual reduction of military expenditures on a mutually agreed basis would be a measure that would contribute to curbing the arms race and would increase the possibilities of reallocating resources now being used for military purposes to economic and social development, particularly for the benefit of the developing countries,

Convinced that such reductions could and should be carried out on a mutually agreed basis without detriment to the national security of any country,

Reaffirming its conviction that provisions for defining, reporting, comparing and verifying military expenditures will have to be basic elements of any international agreement to reduce such expenditures,

Recalling that an international system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures has been introduced in pursuance of General Assembly resolution 35/142 B of 12 December 1980, and that national reports on military expenditures have been received from a number of Member States belonging to different geographic regions and having different budgeting and accounting systems,

Considering that a wider participation in the reporting system of States from different geographic regions and representing different budgeting systems would promote its further refinement and would, by contributing to greater openness in military matters, increase confidence between States,

Emphasizing that the above-mentioned activities and initiatives, as well as other ongoing activities within the United Nations related to the reduction of military budgets, have the objective of facilitating future negotiations aimed at the conclusion of international agreements on the reduction of military expenditures,

Recalling its resolution 37/95 B of 13 December 1982, in which it requested the Secretary-General, with the assistance of a group of qualified experts and with the voluntary co-operation of States, to undertake the task of constructing price indices and purchasing-power parities for the military expenditures of participating States,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General containing the report of the Group of Experts on the Reduction of Military Budgets,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Group of Experts on the Reduction of Military Budgets;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General and to the Group of Experts that assisted him in the preparation of the report;

3. Commends the report and its conclusions and recommendations to the attention of all Member States;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to make the necessary arrangements for the reproduction of the report as a United Nations publication;

5. Invites all Member States to submit to the Secretary-General, no later than 15 April 1986, their views regarding the report and to suggest further measures with a view to facilitating future international agreements to reduce military expenditures;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to submit a report containing the views of Member States received concerning this issue to the General Assembly at its forty-first session;

7. Also takes note with appreciation of the report of the Secretary-General containing the replies received in 1985 from Member States in the framework of the above-mentioned reporting system;

8. Stresses the need to increase the number of reporting States with a view to the broadest possible participation from different geographic regions and representing different budgeting systems;

9. Reiterates its recommendation that all Member States should report annually, by 30 April, to the Secretary-General, using the reporting instrument, their military expenditures for the latest fiscal year for which data are available;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Reduction of military budgets".

Explaining its vote, the USSR, which considered the text a diversion from the actual task of reducing military expenditures, recalled the 1984(8) and 1985 (see p. 14) proposals by the Warsaw Treaty States members for achieving practical agreement with NATO counterparts on, among other things, freezing nuclear expenditures, or for the USSR and the United States to freeze their military budgets.

Brazil said there had been a marked decline in arms expenditures in South America, in contrast to those of nuclear-weapon States; the text, however, did not reflect the fact that those Powers and their allies had to first reduce their own military budgets. In a similar vein, India said that in the absence of political will on the part of those Powers, exercises such as the one recommended might not only prove futile but also divert attention from nuclear disarmament.

Information on military matters

In December 1985, the General Assembly urged all States to facilitate the flow of information on military capabilities, stating that such action could contribute to the building of confidence among States and to the halting and reversal of the arms race.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/94 K by recorded vote.

Objective information on military matters

The General Assembly,

Noting that misperceptions of the military capabilities and the intentions of potential adversaries, which could be caused, inter alia, by a lack of objective information, could induce States to undertake armaments programmes leading to the acceleration of the arms race, in particular the nuclear-arms race, and to heightened international tensions,

Recalling paragraph 105 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, which encourages Member States to ensure a better flow of information with regard to the various aspects of disarmament to avoid dissemination of false and tendentious information concerning armaments and to concentrate on the danger of escalation of the arms race and on the need for general and complete disarmament under effective international control,

Recognizing that the adoption of practical, confidence-building measures on a global, regional or subregional level would greatly contribute to a reduction in international tension,

Aware that objective information on the military capabilities, in particular of nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, could contribute to the building of confidence among States and to the conclusion of concrete disarmament agreements, and thereby help to halt and reverse the arms race,

Recalling its resolutions 37/99 G of 13 December 1982 and 38/188 C of 20 December 1983,

Aware of the existence, under the auspices of the United Nations, of an international system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, and that annual reports on military expenditures are now being received from an increasing number of States,

1. Expresses its conviction that a better flow of objective information on military capabilities could help relieve international tension and contribute to the building of confidence among States on a global, regional or subregional level and to the conclusion of concrete disarmament agreements;

2. Urges all States, in particular nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, to consider implementing additional measures based on the principles of openness and transparency such as, for example, the international system for the standardized reporting of military expenditures, with the aim of facilitating the availability of objective information on, as well as objective assessment of, military capabilities;

3. Invites all Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General before 30 April 1986 the measures they have adopted to contribute to greater openness in military matters in general and in particular to improve the flow of objective information on military capabilities;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "Objective information on military matters".

In favour: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brunei Darussalam, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Colombia, Comoros, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Kenya, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Luxembourg, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, United States, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Abstaining: Algeria, Benin, Brazil, Burkina Faso, Burma, China, Congo, Cyprus, Ethiopia, Ghana, India, Iran, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, United Republic of Tanzania.

The USSR asserted that no flow of disarmament information nor any survey on comparing military data could replace real efforts to limit the arms race; information exchange, it added, should take place along with concrete disarmament measures and not in isolation or as a pre-condition for the holding of negotiations. Sharing those views, Bulgaria felt that the text exaggerated the importance of information. Yugoslavia spoke in similar vein and added that one should not overestimate the effects of a lack of objective information on the acceleration of the arms race, as it felt the text did. Brazil felt that the text was based on concepts pertaining to the climate of confrontation and suspicion between the two super-Powers and their respective military alliances and would not contribute to the adoption of real disarmament measures.

Military research and development

The Group of Governmental Experts on Military Research and Development, which had been given an extra year by the General Assembly in 1984(9) to complete a study due that year, failed to agree on a report in 1985.

Established by the Secretary-General in 1983(10) in response to a 1982 Assembly request,(11) the Group-experts from Argentina, China, Czechoslovakia, Egypt, France, the German Democratic Republic, Ghana, India, Japan, Peru, Sweden, the USSR, the United Kingdom and the United States-was to prepare a comprehensive study covering the scope, role and direction of the military use of research and development, the mechanisms involved, its role in the arms race, and its impact on arms limitation and disarmament, with a view to preventing a qualitative arms race and to ensuring that scientific and technological achievements might ultimately be used solely for peaceful purposes. It had held two sessions in 1983 and three in 1984.

In a 10 May 1985 letter annexed to the Secretary-General's report to the Assembly,(12) the Group's Chairman, Rolf Björnerstedt (Sweden), stated that the Group, meeting from 22 April to 4 May 1985, could not reach consensus on the draft report due to one outstanding sentence. The basic problem of an imbalance in the availability of official information and data concerning military use of research and development, the Chairman stated, stemmed from existing differences of opinion regarding the need to provide such information, and that basic difficulty proved in the end to be insurmountable. After the Chairman's letter was received, the Secretary-General stated, further ways had been explored to reach a solution but they had not led to generally acceptable results.

Sweden told the First Committee that the success of expert studies depended on the co-operation of all Governments and experts involved; the draft report on military research and development contained a wealth of information, and there was every reason for the United Nations to return to that crucial subject.

Disarmament and development

Preparations began in 1985 for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, which the General Assembly had decided in 1984(13) to convene in order to review the implications of that relationship and consider ways of releasing additional resources, through disarmament measures, for development purposes.

In December, the Assembly took note of the work of the Conference's Preparatory Committee(14) and decided that the Conference would be held in Paris from 15 July to 2 August 1986 (resolution 40/155).

Reports of the Secretary-General. In his August 1985 report to the Assembly on the overall socioeconomic perspective of the world economy to the year 2000(15) (see p. 415), the Secretary-General stated that the arms race had major economic and social consequences, in that military expenditures used up large amounts of real resources (such as skilled labour, industrial capacity and essential raw materials) and deprived the civilian economy of much-needed expertise. He noted that world-wide military expenditures had almost doubled between 1960 and 1980, growing at an average annual rate of about 3.2 per cent and reaching $649 billion (in 1980 prices) in 1984. It was estimated that in 1980 about 50 million people, or over 4 per cent of the world's working population, were engaged in producing military goods and services. The Secretary-General asserted that the pursuit of disarmament measures would result in global gains, including increases in world gross national product and in capital stocks.

In addition, the Assembly had before it an October report of the Secretary-General,(16) containing information received from 12 Member States, and from within the United Nations system, on measures they had taken in accordance with the recommendations of a 1981 expert study on the relationship between disarmament and development.(17)

Conference preparations

Work of the Preparatory Committee. The Preparatory Committee for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development (New York, 29 July-9 August 1985)(14) held 11 meetings, including five informal open-ended meetings, to formulate recommendations on the provisional agenda, procedure, place, date and duration of the Conference.

The Committee adopted by consensus, and submitted to the Assembly, a number of recommendations, among them, that the Conference be held for three weeks in June/July 1986 in Paris—in response to France's indication of preparedness to host it; and that the Assembly renew the Committee's mandate and authorize it to hold one more session to make substantive preparations, with the possibility of its deciding to convene, if necessary, a resumed session immediately before the Conference. Other recommendations included that a Conference Secretary-General be named as early as possible, and that a panel of eminent personalities in the disarmament field, drawn from different regions and covering a wide range of views, might be convened to contribute to the preparatory process.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, on the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/155 without vote.

Relationship between disarmament and development

7. Decides that the second session of the Preparatory Committee shall be held in New York from 1 to 11 April 1986 and that, if necessary, a third session shall be held in New York in June, taking into account all relevant factors, including the need for minimizing costs and for adequate representation;

On 17 December, the Secretary-General reported on further preparations for the Conference.<sup>(18)</sup> He announced the appointment of Jan Martenson (Sweden), Under-Secretary-General for Disarmament Affairs, as the Conference Secretary-General; proposed the convening of the panel of eminent persons from 16 to 18 April 1986, in New York, and discussed the preparation of documentation for the Conference.

Economic and social consequences of the arms race

In 1985, the General Assembly took up an item on the economic and social consequences of the arms race and its extremely harmful effects on world peace and security, as agreed in 1982,<sup>(19)</sup> and called for the updating of the 1982 report entitled Economic and Social Consequences of the Arms Race and of Military Expenditures,<sup>(20)</sup> which, in turn, had updated a 1977 report on the topic.<sup>(21)</sup>

Among communications the Secretary-General received in 1985 was a 28 May letter from Czechoslovakia on behalf of a group of socialist countries, transmitting a declaration on the situation in the International Labour Organisation, criticizing various aspects of its activities, including the role in disarmament matters (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XXIV).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/150 by recorded vote.

Economic and social consequences of the armaments race and its extremely harmful effects on world peace and security
The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Economic and social consequences of the armaments race and its extremely harmful effects on world peace and security",

Recalling its resolutions 2667(XXV) of 7 December 1970, 2831(XXVI) of 16 December 1971, 3075(XXVIII) of 6 December 1973, 32/75 of 12 December 1977, 35/141 of 12 December 1980 and 37/70 of 9 December 1982,

Deeply concerned that the arms race, particularly in nuclear armaments and military expenditures, has continued to increase at an alarming speed, absorbing enormous material and human resources, which represents a heavy burden for the peoples of all countries and constitutes a grave danger for world peace and security,

Convinced that, as disarmament is a matter of universal concern, there is a pressing need for all Governments and peoples to be informed about and be aware of the problems created by the armaments race and of the need for disarmament, and that the United Nations has a central role in this connection,

Recalling also paragraph 93 (c) of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, in which it is provided that the Secretary-General shall periodically submit reports to the Assembly on the economic and social consequences of the armament race and its extremely harmful effects on world peace and security,

Noting that, since the preparation of the updated report of the Secretary-General entitled Economic and Social Consequences of the Arms Race and of Military Expenditures, new developments have taken place in the fields covered by the report that are of particular relevance in the present economic and political conditions of the world,

Considering that the elaboration of such reports should be viewed as a measure aimed at building confidence among States,

Recalling further its resolution 39/160 of 17 December 1984, in which it decided to convene an International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development, at which inevitably the issue of the economic and social consequences of the arms race and of military expenditures would be discussed,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to bring up to date, with the assistance of a group of qualified consultant experts* appointed by him and making appropriate use of the capabilities of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research in a consultant capacity, the report entitled Economic and Social Consequences of the Arms Race and of Military Expenditures, taking into account the significant developments that have taken place since the preparation of that report;

2. Invites all Governments to extend to the Secretary-General their support and full co-operation so as to ensure that the study will be carried out in the most effective way;

3. Calls upon the specialized agencies, other international organizations and institutions as well as non-governmental organizations to co-operate with the Secretary-General, upon his request, in the preparation of the report;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to submit the report to the General Assembly at its forty-second session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-second session the item entitled "Economic and social consequences of the armaments race and its extremely harmful effects on world peace and security".

*Subsequently referred to as the Group of Consultant Experts on the Economic and Social Consequences of the Arms Race and of Military Expenditures.

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 139-1-7 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/915) by recorded vote (126-1-6), 19 November (meeting 42); 21-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.30); agenda item 48.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Luxembourg, Netherlands, United Kingdom.

Explaining its vote, the United States said it did not believe another report was warranted, in terms of developments since the last report in 1982 or of the cost estimate for a new report, involving an additional appropriation of $150,000 to the proposed 1986-1987 programme budget.

France and the United Kingdom also expressed misgivings about the financial implications. France added that implementing the recommendation in paragraph 1 would duplicate the preparatory work for the International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development (see p. 87). The United Kingdom believed it would have been preferable to delay commissioning the report until the Assembly's forty-first (1986) session, when the documentation and the results of the Conference could be used to avoid possible duplication and limit costs.

Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace

In 1985, the General Assembly requested the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean to complete preparatory work for the Conference on the Indian Ocean during 1986 in order to enable its convening at Colombo, Sri Lanka, at an early date and no later than 1988 (resolution 40/153).

Activities of the Committee on the Indian Ocean. The Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean, established by the General Assembly in 1972<sup>(22)</sup> to study practical measures for achieving the objectives of the 1971 Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace,<sup>(23)</sup> held three sessions in 1985 (New York, 28 January-8 February, 25 March-4 April, 1-12 July), with two additional meetings on 19 November and 5 December.<sup>(24)</sup>

In the course of 30 formal and a number of informal meetings, the Committee discussed the Conference's provisional agenda, rules of procedure, participation, stages, level of representation and draft final document. In July, it set up an open-ended working group to identify, expand and facilitate agreement on substantive issues relating to the establishment of a zone of peace, with a view to recommending to the Ad Hoc Committee elements which might be taken into account during the subsequent preparation of a draft final document of the Conference.

Two divergent views persisted on the convening of the Conference. Most non-aligned and Eastern European States maintained that the Committee should proceed expeditiously with its preparatory work in order to facilitate the opening of the Conference in the first half of 1986. The Western States, on the other hand, stressed the need, prior to convening a Conference, for a clearer understanding of some fundamental issues, such as the scope and definition of the zone-of-peace concept, and for improving the political and security climate in the region.

On 12 July, the Committee adopted by consensus parts I and II of its report; part III, containing a draft resolution prepared by an open-ended working group for consideration by the Assembly, and the report as a whole were similarly adopted on 5 December. The draft resolution, as approved by the Committee, differed in a number of ways from a draft text submitted in July by Sri Lanka on behalf of the non-aligned members of the Committee.(25) The non-aligned text would have had the Assembly request the Ad Hoc Committee to complete preparatory work in the early part of 1986, thus facilitating the convening of the Conference at Colombo thereafter at the earliest date in the first half of 1986.

Communications. Bulgaria(26) transmitted to the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee, on 8 February, a 23 May 1984 letter from its Foreign Minister to the Secretary-General, giving Bulgaria's views on limitation of naval activities and naval armaments.

In a Political Declaration, the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September)(27) asserted that the convening of the Conference on the Indian Ocean had been inordinately delayed due to the unhelpful attitude of some States, and pledged their continued efforts to ensure that it would be held at Colombo during the first half of 1986. Regret that the Conference had not been convened was also expressed by Seychelles, in a resolution adopted by its People's Progressive Front (sixth annual congress, Victoria, Mahé, 27 and 28 September).(28)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly adopted without vote resolution 40/153, the draft of which had been recommended by the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean and approved by the First Committee.

Implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, contained in its resolution 2832(XXVI) of 16 December 1971, and recalling also its resolutions 2992(XXVII) of 15 December 1972, 3080(XXVIII) of 6 December 1973, 3259 A (XXIX) of 9 December 1974, 3468(XXX) of 11 December 1975, 31/88 of 14 December 1976, 32/86 of 12 December 1977, S-10/2 of 30 June 1978, 33/68 of 14 December 1978, 34/80 A and B of 11 December 1979, 35/150 of 12 December 1980, 36/90 of 9 December 1981, 37/96 of 13 December 1982, 38/185 of 20 December 1983 and 39/149 of 17 December 1984, and other relevant resolutions,

Recalling further the report of the Meeting of the Littoral and Hinterland States of the Indian Ocean,

Reaffirming its conviction that concrete action for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace would be a substantial contribution to the strengthening of international peace and security,

Recalling its decision, taken at its thirty-fourth session in resolution 34/80 B, to convene a Conference on the Indian Ocean at Colombo during 1981,

Recalling also its decision to make every effort, in consideration of the political and security climate in the Indian Ocean area and progress made in the harmonization of views, to finalize, in accordance with its normal methods of work, all preparations for the Conference, including the dates for its convening,

Recalling further its decision, taken at its thirty-ninth session in resolution 39/149, concerning the convening of the Conference in the first half of 1986,

Recalling the exchange of views in the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean in 1985,

Noting the exchange of views on the adverse political and security climate in the region,

Noting further the various documents before the Ad Hoc Committee,

Convinced that the continued military presence of the great Powers in the Indian Ocean area, conceived in the context of their confrontation, gives urgency to the need to take practical steps for the early achievement of the objectives of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace,

Considering that any other foreign military presence in the area, whenever it is contrary to the objectives of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace and the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, gives greater urgency to the need to take practical steps towards the early achievement of the objectives of the Declaration,

Considering further that the creation of a zone of peace requires co-operation and agreement among the States of the region to ensure conditions of peace and security within the area, as envisaged in the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, and respect for the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the littoral and hinterland States,

Calling for the renewal of genuinely constructive efforts through the exercise of the political will necessary for the achievement of the objectives of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace,

Deeply concerned at the danger posed by the grave and ominous developments in the area and the resulting sharp deterioration of peace, security and stability which particularly seriously affect the littoral and hinterland States, as well as international peace and security.

Convinced that the continued deterioration of the political and security climate in the Indian Ocean area is an important consideration bearing on the question of the urgent convening of the Conference and that the easing of tension in the area would enhance the prospect of success being achieved by the Conference,

1. Takes note of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Indian Ocean and the exchange of views in the Committee;

2. Emphasizes its decision to convene the Conference on the Indian Ocean at Colombo as a necessary step for the implementation of the Declaration of the Indian Ocean as a Zone of Peace, adopted in 1971;

3. Notes that the Ad Hoc Committee has been unable, during 1985, to complete preparatory work relating to the convening of the Conference on the Indian Ocean and urges the Committee to continue its work with vigour and determination;

4. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee, taking into account the political and security climate in the region, to complete preparatory work relating to the Conference on the Indian Ocean during 1986 in order to enable the opening of the Conference at Colombo at an early date soon thereafter, but not later than 1988, to be decided by the Committee in consultation with the host country;

5. Emphasizes that the Conference called for in its resolution 34/80 B and subsequent resolutions and the establishment and maintenance of the Indian Ocean as a zone of peace require the full and active participation and co-operation of all the permanent members of the Security Council, the major maritime users and the littoral and hinterland States;

6. Decides that preparatory work would comprise organizational matters and substantive issues, including the provisional agenda for the Conference, rules of procedure, participation, stages of the Conference, level of representation, documentation, consideration of appropriate arrangements for any international agreements that may ultimately be reached for the maintenance of the Indian Ocean as a zone of peace and the preparation of the draft final document of the Conference;

7. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee at the same time to seek the necessary harmonization of views on remaining relevant issues;

8. Requests the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee to consult the Secretary-General, at the appropriate time, on the establishment of a secretariat for the Conference;

9. Renews the mandate of the Ad Hoc Committee as defined in the relevant resolutions, and requests the Committee to intensify its work with regard to the implementation of its mandate;

10. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to hold three preparatory sessions in 1986 of a duration of two weeks each, for completion of the preparatory work;

11. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to submit to the Conference a report on its preparatory work;

12. Requests the Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee to continue his consultations on the participation in the work of the Committee by States Members of the United Nations that are not members of the Committee, with the aim of resolving this matter at the earliest possible date;

13. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a full report on the implementation of the present resolution;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to render all necessary assistance to the Ad Hoc Committee, including the provision of summary records, in recognition of its preparatory function.

General Assembly resolution 40/153

Approved by First Committee (A/40/1018) without vote, 6 December (meeting 62); draft by Committee on Indian Ocean (A/40/29); agenda item 66.

Speaking as co-ordinator of the Ad Hoc Committee's non-aligned group of countries, Sri Lanka stressed the importance of paragraphs 4 and 5, and said that the approval of the text assured the active participation in the Conference of the permanent members of the Security Council along with the major maritime users; that the group had resigned itself to another postponement of the Conference in order to maintain consensus and to ensure the participation of all concerned; and that it was its understanding that, once the preparatory work was completed in 1986, convening the Conference in 1987 would not be precluded. Sharing the last point, the USSR considered unsatisfactory the formulations relating to the Conference's convening and its timetable. Bulgaria said it was disappointed that the lack of political will of one group of countries impeded the achievement of mutually acceptable agreement on all issues related to the Conference.

Canada, expressing its commitment to the idea of a Conference, asserted, however, that few of the items in paragraph 6 had been debated fully and openly, and that little of significance had been achieved in the Ad Hoc Committee.

Information and studies

As the World Disarmament Campaign entered its fourth year in 1985, the General Assembly reaffirmed the importance of following the priorities set in its 1978 Final Document (resolution 40/151 D). For 1986, it decided to establish the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa (40/151 G) and to hold, as in 1985, a pledging conference for the Campaign (40/151 B); and recommended that all States observe Disarmament Week in 1986 in close connection with the celebration of the International Year of Peace (40/152 E).

The Assembly also expanded the assistance to Member States under the United Nations disarmament fellowships programme to include training and advisory services (40/151 H). With several United Nations disarmament studies under way in 1985, including some by the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR), the Assembly reaffirmed their value and invited proposals from Member States for improving the Organization's work in that area (40/152 K).

World Disarmament Campaign

Entering its fourth year of implementation, the World Disarmament Campaign—launched by the General Assembly on 7 June 1982, at the start of its second special session devoted to disarmament(1)—continued to inform, educate and generate public understanding and support for the disarmament objectives of the United Nations.

Report of the Secretary-General. In an October 1985 report,(2) submitted in response to a 1984 Assembly request, (3) the Secretary-General discussed various 1985 activities by the United Nations system to promote the Campaign's objectives, including diversified production of information materials; interpersonal communication, seminars and training; special events; a publicity programme; and the roles played by United Nations information centres and other field offices.

The 1985 programme for the Campaign included a regional conference for Africa (Cairo, Egypt, 9-14 February), where 26 African countries were represented, and a subregional conference for constituencies of the Campaign in the Nordic countries (Jönköping, Sweden, 15-19 April). The United Nations Department for Disarmament Affairs and UNIDIR jointly organized, in co-operation with OAU, a Meeting of Experts on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa (Lomé, Togo, 11 and 12 August). The Department also co-operated with the Inter-Parliamentary Union in a symposium on disarmament relating to conventional weapons (Mexico City, 28-31 May).

Among other activities, the Department published a quarterly newsletter of the Campaign.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/151 D by recorded vote.

World Disarmament Campaign: actions and activities

The General Assembly,

Aware of the growing public concern at the dangers of the arms race, particularly the nuclear-arms race, and its negative social and economic consequences,

Noting with satisfaction the successful implementation of the World Disarmament Campaign and its positive impact on the mobilization on a large scale of world public opinion on behalf of peace and disarmament,

Recalling its resolutions 36/92 J of 9 December 1981, 37/100 H of 13 December 1982, 38/73 F of 15 December 1983 and 39/63 A of 12 December 1984,

Welcoming the voluntary contributions made to the World Disarmament Campaign Voluntary Trust Fund to carry out the objectives of the Campaign,

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General on the progress and implementation of the programme of activities of the World Disarmament Campaign,

Convinced that the United Nations system, Member States, with respect for their sovereign rights, and other bodies, in particular non-governmental organizations, all have their role to play in achieving the objectives of the Campaign,

Taking into account the great number of various activities carried out within the framework of the Campaign, including actions for collecting signatures in support of measures to prevent nuclear war, to curb the arms race and for disarmament,

1. Reaffirms the usefulness of further carrying out actions and activities that are an important manifestation of the will of world public opinion and contribute effectively to the achievement of the objectives of the World Disarmament Campaign and thus to the creation of a favourable climate for making progress in the field of disarmament with a view to achieving the goal of general and complete disarmament under effective international control;

2. Urges the Governments of all States, especially the nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, in formulating their policies in the field of disarmament, to take into account the main demands of the mass peace and disarmament movements, in particular, with regard to the prevention of nuclear war and curbing the nuclear-arms race;

3. Reaffirms the importance of carrying out the Campaign in accordance with the priorities in the field of disarmament established in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, taking into account that the adoption of effective measures for nuclear disarmament and the prevention of nuclear war has the highest priority;

4. Recommends that, in carrying out the Campaign, due regard should be given to the proclamation by the General Assembly of 1986 as the International Year of Peace, as well as to other important dates and anniversaries related to international peace and security, with a view to intensifying the actions and activities in support of effective measures to prevent nuclear war, to curb the arms race and for disarmament;

5. Invites once again Member States to co-operate with the United Nations to ensure a better flow of accurate information with regard to the various aspects of disarmament, as well as actions and activities of the world public in support of peace and disarmament, and to avoid dissemination of false and tendentious information;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in implementing the programme of activities of the Campaign, to give wider publicity to the work of the General Assembly in the field of disarmament, paying due attention, in particular, to the proposals of Member States and the action taken thereon;

7. Also requests the Secretary-General to report annually to the General Assembly on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution.

Japan found the text's overall tone to be more alarmist and emotional than others on the same subject. The United Kingdom found the concept in paragraph 5 repugnant, as it could not accept that anyone had the right to decide what was accurate and suppress what was judged false and tendentious.

In related action, the Assembly declared that the Campaign should give full consideration to the mass media's role as the most effective way to promote understanding, confidence and co-operation conducive to peace and disarmament; it asked the United Nations Department of Public Information to assist in furthering the objectives of the Campaign and Disarmament Week (resolution 40/164 A).

Financing

The Third United Nations Pledging Conference for the World Disarmament Campaign was held at United Nations Headquarters on 31 October, during the 1985 Disarmament Week, with 58 delegations participating.

Either during the Conference or in the course of the year, the following pledges were made: Australia ($A 50,000, of which $A 20,000 was earmarked for UNIDIR), Austria ($10,000), Canada ($Can 100,000, of which $50,000 was earmarked for production and more global distribution of The United Nations Disarmament Yearbook, $40,000 for UNIDIR research on verification, and $10,000 for the International Year of Peace (1986) Voluntary Trust Fund), China (60,000 yuan renminbi), Denmark (50,000 kroner), German Democratic Republic (100,000 marks), Greece ($10,000), Indonesia ($5,000), Kuwait ($5,000), Norway ($10,000) and Sweden (100,000 kronor). Cameroon (1,000,000 CFA francs), Senegal ($1,000) and Togo (25,000,000 CFA francs) announced that their pledges were earmarked for the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa (see below), for which a Trust Fund was established after the Third Pledging Conference.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/151 B by recorded vote.

World Disarmament Campaign

The General Assembly,

Recalling that in paragraph 15 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, it declared that it was essential that not only Governments but also the peoples of the world recognize and understand the dangers in the present situation and stressed the importance of mobilizing world public opinion on behalf of disarmament,

Recalling also its resolutions 35/152 I of 12 December 1980, 36/92 C of 9 December 1981, 37/100 I of 13 December 1982, 38/73 D of 15 December 1983 and 39/63 D of 12 December 1984, as well as the reports of the Secretary-General of 17 September 1981, 11 June 1982, 3 November 1982, 30 August 1983 and 4 October 1985,

Having examined the report of the Secretary-General of 4 October 1985 on the implementation of the programme of activities of the World Disarmament Campaign by the United Nations system during 1985 and the activities contemplated for 1986, as well as its main financial aspects,

Having also examined the part of the report of the Secretary-General of 15 October 1985 dealing with the activities of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies relating to the implementation of the World Disarmament Campaign, as well as the Final Act of the 1985 United Nations Pledging Conference for the Campaign, held on 31 October 1985,

1. Commends the manner in which, as described in the above-mentioned reports, the World Disarmament Campaign has been geared by the Secretary-General in order to guarantee "the widest possible dissemination of information and unimpeded access for all sectors of the public to a broad range of information and opinions on questions of arms limitation and disarmament and the dangers relating to all aspects of the arms race and war, in particular nuclear war";

2. Recalls that, as was also agreed by consensus in the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, it is likewise an essential requisite for the universality of the World Disarmament Campaign that it receive "the co-operation and participation of all States";

3. Endorses once more the statement made by the Secretary-General on the occasion of the 1984 United Nations Pledging Conference for the World Disarmament Campaign to the effect that such co-operation implies that adequate funds be made available and that consequently the criterion of universality also applies to pledges, since a campaign without world-wide participation and funding will have difficulty in reflecting this principle in its implementation;

4. Reiterates its regret that most of the States that have the largest military expenditures have not so far made any financial contribution to the World Disarmament Campaign;

5. Decides that at its forty-first session there should be a fourth United Nations Pledging Conference for the World Disarmament Campaign, and expresses the hope that on that occasion all those Member States that have not yet announced any voluntary contribution will do so;

6. Reiterates its recommendation that the voluntary contributions made by Member States to the World Disarmament Campaign Voluntary Trust Fund should not be earmarked for specific activities inasmuch as it is most desirable that the Secretary-General enjoy full freedom to take the decisions he deems fit within the framework of the Campaign previously approved by the General Assembly and in exercise of the powers vested in him in connection with the Campaign;

7. Notes with appreciation that the Secretary-General has given permanent character to his instructions to the United Nations information centres and regional commissions to give wide publicity to the World Disarmament Campaign and, whenever necessary, to adapt, as far as possible, United Nations information materials to local languages;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report covering both the implementation of the programme of activities of the World Disarmament Campaign by the United Nations system during 1986 and the programme of activities contemplated by the system for 1987;

9. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "World Disarmament Campaign".

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 139-0-11 (recorded vote)

Approved by First Committee (A/40/946) by recorded vote (125-0-11), 15 November (meeting 39); 10-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.17); agenda item 61 (a).

Against: Nona

Abstaining: Belgium, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

The recorded vote in the First Committee was requested by the United States. In explanation of vote, Canada, while agreeing in principle with paragraph 6, felt that earmarking funds might be warranted where activities particularly interested Member States.

The Federal Republic of Germany said the text again failed to confirm the principles of universality and voluntariness which underlay the Campaign. France, pointing out that it had contributed $1 million to UNIDIR since its founding, considered it inappropriate to accuse certain States of lack of support. Similarly, the United Kingdom stated that part of its contribution—of over $200 million during the current financial year—to the United Nations regular budget would be used for the Campaign, and it had also devoted substantial sums to its own disarmament information activities.

Establishment of a regional centre in Africa

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in November 1985(4) that, following the Assembly's 1984 request<sup>(5)</sup> that he assist Member States in establishing regional and institutional arrangements for implementing the Campaign, he had concluded consultations on a specific request received from OAU States members.

The OAU Assembly of Heads of State and Government (twenty-first ordinary session, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 18-20 July) and the OAU Ministerial Regional Conference on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa (Lomé, 13-16 August) had requested the United Nations Secretary-General to create a regional centre in Africa for peace and disarmament in order to promote co-ordination and harmonization of the research, study, documentation and information activities of the region on peace, security, disarmament and development, in co-operation with related United Nations institutions. In so doing, OAU had welcomed Togo's offer to host the proposed centre and to provide, at no cost, office space for it.

The Secretary-General proposed that the centre be established initially under the Department for Disarmament Affairs, within the framework of the World Disarmament Campaign. He pointed out that, because existing resources were limited, voluntary contributions were needed for staff and basic operating and administrative costs.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/151 G without vote, thus establishing the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa as of 1 January 1986.

United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/63 J of 12 December 1984 in which it requested the Secretary-General to provide assistance to such Member States in the regions concerned as may request it with a view to establishing regional and institutional arrangements for the implementation of the World Disarmament Campaign, on the basis of existing resources and of voluntary contributions that Member States may make to that end,

Bearing in mind resolution AHG/Res.138(XXI) adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its twenty-first ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 18 to 20 July 1985, in which the African leaders requested the Secretary-General of the United Nations to take the necessary measures to establish a regional office in Africa to promote the objectives of peace, disarmament and development in the region,

Reaffirming its resolutions 37/100 F of 13 December 1982, 38/73 J of 15 December 1983 and 39/63 F of 12 December 1984 on regional disarmament,

Taking into account the Lomé Declaration and Programme of Action adopted at the Ministerial Regional Conference on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa, held at Lomé from 13 to 16 August 1985 under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity.

Taking into account the report of the Secretary-General entitled "United Nations regional centre for peace and disarmament in Africa",

1. Decides to establish as at 1 January 1986, within the framework of the Secretariat, the United Nations Regional Centre for Peace and Disarmament in Africa on the basis of existing resources and of voluntary contributions that Member States may make to that end;

2. Decides further that the Centre shall provide, upon request, substantive support for initiatives and other efforts of Member States of the African region towards the realization of measures of peace, arms limitation and disarmament in the region, in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity, as well as co-ordinate the implementation of regional activities in Africa under the World Disarmament Campaign;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to take the necessary administrative measures to ensure the establishment and functioning of the Centre;

4. Invites Member States to make voluntary contributions to the Centre;

5. requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 40/151 G

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/946) without vote, 15 November (meeting 39); draft by Mauritius, for African Group (A/C.1/40/L.39); agenda item 61.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 35, 39; plenary 117.

The Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the United Kingdom and the United States, while welcoming the goals of the Centre, expressed reservations about its funding, stating their understanding that it would be financed from existing resources and voluntary contributions and not place burdens on the United Nations regular budget. Should that not be the case, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom reserved the right to re-examine their positions; they both regarded the Centre's creation as a singular event that would not result in a world network of disarmament centres. The United States said that if in later years requests were made for funds from the regular budget, it would not expect to be able to support them.

Disarmament Week

Disarmament Week—observed annually since it was proclaimed by the General Assembly in 1978(6) to start on United Nations Day, 24 October—was observed at United Nations Headquarters on 31 October 1985 at a special meeting of the Assembly's First Committee, where statements were made by the Assembly President, the Secretary-General and representatives of regional groups. It was also observed at the United Nations Office at Geneva in the context of the fortieth anniversary of the Organization.

In his message, the President called for renewed efforts to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons, urged support for regional efforts to reduce conventional weapons, and stressed the primary responsibility and central role of the United Nations in disarmament.

The Secretary-General stated that disarmament endeavours and a search for better international relations—based on common interest rather than on fear and arms competition—must be sustained with a force and conviction that neither partial successes nor temporary set-backs could diminish.

In September, the Secretary-General submitted a report to the Assembly(7) containing information supplied by 14 Governments, the United Nations system and international non-governmental organizations on their activities to promote the objectives of Disarmament Week.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, on the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/152 E by recorded vote.

Disarmament Week

The General Assembly,

Gravely concerned over the escalating arms race, especially the nuclear-arms race, which represents a serious threat to the very existence of mankind,

Stressing the vital importance of eliminating the threat of a nuclear war, ending the nuclear-arms race and bringing about disarmament for the maintenance of world peace,

Emphasizing anew the urgent need for and the importance of wide and continued mobilization of world public opinion in support of halting and reversing the arms race, especially the nuclear-arms race, in all its aspects,

Mindful of the world-wide mass anti-war and anti-nuclear movement,

Recognizing the important role of the mass media in mobilizing world public opinion in support of disarmament,

Noting with satisfaction the broad and active support by Governments and international and national organizations of the decision taken by the General Assembly at its tenth special session, the first special session devoted to disarmament, regarding the proclamation of the week starting 24 October, the day of the foundation of the United Nations, as a week devoted to fostering the objectives of disarmament,

Recalling the recommendations concerning the World Disarmament Campaign contained in annex V to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, in particular the recommendation that Disarmament Week should continue to be widely observed,

Recalling also its resolutions 33/71 D of 14 December 1978, 34/83 I of 11 December 1979, 37/78 D of 9 December 1982, 38/183 L of 20 December 1983 and 39/148 J of 17 December 1984,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General on the follow-up measures undertaken by governmental and non-governmental organizations in holding Disarmament Week;

2. Expresses its appreciation to all States and international and national governmental and non-governmental organizations for their energetic support of and active participation in Disarmament Week, in particular in holding the 1985 Disarmament Week in close connection with the celebrations of the fortieth anniversary of the end of the Second World War and of the foundation of the United Nations and the International Youth Year;

3. Expresses serious concern over the continued escalation of the arms race, especially the nuclear-arms race, and the imminent danger of its extension into outer space, which gravely jeopardizes international peace and security and increases the danger of outbreak of a nuclear war;

4. Stresses the important role of the mass media in acquainting the world public with the aims of Disarmament Week and measures undertaken within its framework;

5. Recommends to all States that they observe Disarmament Week in 1986 in close connection with the celebration of the International Year of Peace;

6. Invites all States, in carrying out appropriate measures at the local level on the occasion of Disarmament Week, to take into account the elements of the model programme for Disarmament Week, prepared by the Secretary-General;

7. Invites the relevant specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency to intensify activities, within their areas of competence, to disseminate information on the consequences of the arms race, especially the nuclear-arms race, and requests them to inform the Secretary-General accordingly;

8. Also invites international non-governmental organizations to take an active part in Disarmament Week and to inform the Secretary-General of the activities undertaken;

9. Further invites the Secretary-General to use the United Nations mass media as widely as possible to promote better understanding among the world public of disarmament problems and the objectives of Disarmament Week;

10. Requests Governments to continue, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 33/71 D, to inform the Secretary-General of activities undertaken to promote the objectives of Disarmament Week;

11. Requests the Secretary-General, in accordance with paragraph 4 of resolution 33/71 D, to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a report on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution.

Against: None.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Paraguay, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States.

Australia, France and the Federal Republic of Germany objected to paragraph 7, stating that the United Nations should not invite the specialized agencies to conduct activities outside their competence. Australia added that the role of mass media was to transmit, without restriction, views on disarmament issues to ensure that individuals and groups had the freest possible access to a wide range of opinions and factual material.

Japan, which had expressed concern on the 1984 text for its alarmist overtones, said if the negative trend continued it would be forced to change its vote in the future.

UN fellowship programme

The Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly in October(8) that the 1985 United Nations programme of fellowships on disarmament had started at Geneva during the June-August session of the Conference on Disarmament and was scheduled to end in New York by 30 November after the First Committee concluded consideration of its disarmament items. Twenty-five fellows from as many countries participated in the programme, which consisted of lectures, seminars, research, observing the Conference and the First Committee, and a visit to IAEA at Vienna. The fellows also visited Bulgaria, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, Sweden and the United States, at the invitation of those Governments.

Since its establishment by the Assembly in 1978 at the first special session on disarmament,(6) the programme had trained 155 public officials from 88 countries in developing expertise relating to disarmament.

The Secretary-General also reported that, in pursuance of a 1984 Assembly resolution,(9) he had established a Steering Board, chaired by the Co-ordinator of the disarmament fellowship programme and composed of senior officers of the Department for Disarmament Affairs, to evaluate the fellows' research papers; outstanding papers were to appear in a new series of annual publications. In further response to the 1984 Assembly invitation for proposals regarding training, the Secretary-General suggested that courses might be offered at the regional or subregional level to benefit government officials.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly, on 16 December, adopted resolution 40/151 H by recorded vote.

United Nations programme of fellowships on disarmament

The General Assembly,

Recalling its decision, contained in paragraph 108 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the first special session devoted to disarmament, to establish a programme of fellowships on disarmament, as well as its decisions contained in annex IV to the Concluding Document of the Twelfth Special Session of the General Assembly, the second special session devoted to disarmament, in which it decided, inter alia, to continue the programme and to increase the number of fellowships from twenty to twenty-five as from 1983,

Recalling also its resolution 39/63 B of 12 December 1984,

Noting with satisfaction that the programme has already trained one hundred and fifty-five public officials from eighty-eight countries, most of whom are now in positions of responsibility in the field of disarmament within their Governments or permanent missions to the United Nations, or representing their Governments at international disarmament meetings,

Recognizing that the programme of studies and activities as outlined in the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations programme of fellowships on disarmament has continued to expand and intensify,

Taking account of the fact that in recent years developing countries have shown increased interest in disarmament items, which has been reflected in the initiatives taken by them,

Considering that the forms of assistance available to Member States, particularly developing countries, under the United Nations programme of fellowships on disarmament can be further expanded by way of advisory services and training programmes arranged for participants in various countries on request, in view of the increasing and specific needs of Member States,

1. Takes note with satisfaction of the report of the Secretary-General and the view that the expansion of the programme of fellowships has brought with it higher responsibilities, including planning, implementation, co-ordination, servicing, follow-up work and supervision of all activities relating to the programme;

2. Further takes note of the view of the Secretary-General on the possibilities for additional services;

3. Decides to expand the forms of assistance available to Member States under the United Nations programme of fellowships on disarmament to include training programmes and advisory services in the field of disarmament and security, all the programmes to be consolidated under the Department for Disarmament Affairs of the Secretariat, at the appropriate level, bearing in mind the savings that can be made within the existing overall budgetary appropriations for the programme of fellowships; such advisory services should include the organization of training courses at the regional or subregional level, in co-operation with the Governments and/or intergovernmental organizations concerned for the benefit of government officials whose duties involve the implementation of arms limitation and disarmament measures, as well as the promotion of disarmament efforts;

4. Further decides that the Secretary-General should make provision for advisory services in the field of disarmament on the basis of requests received from Governments and/or governmental organizations in accordance with the following policies:

(a) The kind of service to be rendered to Governments and/or governmental organizations shall be determined by the Governments and/or organizations concerned in consultation with the Secretary-General;

(6) The amount of service and the conditions under which it is to be rendered shall be decided by the Secretary-General, with due regard to the needs of States, in particular the developing countries, and in conformity with the principle that the requesting Governments and/or governmental organizations shall be expected to assume responsibility for a considerable part of the expenses connected with the services rendered, either by making a contribution in cash, or by providing supporting staff services and defraying the local costs of carrying out the programme;

(c) The service shall be applicable to any subject in the field of disarmament;

5. Expresses its appreciation to the Governments of Bulgaria, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, Sweden and the United States of America for inviting fellows to their countries in 1985 to study selected activities in the field of disarmament, thereby contributing to the fulfilment of the overall objectives of the programme;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the operations of the programme of fellowships and on the implementation of the provisions of the present resolution and to develop modalities for implementation of the training programmes and advisory services.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Grenada.

Explaining its vote, the United States said that, despite its support for the programme, it opposed increased spending; it wished that consultations had taken place earlier, in order to enable it to join in a consensus.

The USSR said its vote should not be interpreted as approving the proposed additional appropriations of $63,700 for 1986-1987. Japan and the United Kingdom said their votes were without prejudice to the report which the Secretary-General was being asked to prepare on the matter. Japan added that the proposals for expanding the programme had not been sufficiently discussed beforehand, and the United Kingdom felt that the resources required for preparing the report should be found within the initially proposed appropriations. France interpreted paragraph 3 to mean that the programme would be administered within the existing structures, without creating new posts.

Disarmament research

Disarmament studies

In 1985, the General Assembly initiated two new studies—one on climatic and potential physical effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter (see p. 39), and the other on the economic and social consequences of the arms race and of military expenditures (see p. 88). Work began, as requested by the Assembly based on the 1984 recommendation of the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies,<sup>(10)</sup> on a study on deterrence and its implications for disarmament and the arms race, negotiated arms reductions and international security and other related matters (see p. 29).

Chairmen of the expert groups entrusted with studies—one on the military use of research and development (see p. 86) and the other on nuclear-weapon-free zones (see p. 58)—reported to the Secretary-General that the groups had concluded their work without reaching agreement on their final reports.

In the course of the year, three studies—on the concepts of security (see p. 28), on the naval arms race (see p. 30) and on the reduction of military budgets (see p. 84)—were concluded, as was a compilation, by the Secretary-General, of national and international scientific studies on the climatic effects of nuclear war, including nuclear winter (see p. 39).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/152 K without vote.

United Nations disarmament studies

The General Assembly,

Recalling that, in paragraph 96 of the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, the Assembly stated that:

“Taking further steps in the field of disarmament and other measures aimed at promoting international peace and security would be facilitated by carrying out studies by the Secretary-General in this field with appropriate assistance from governmental or consultant experts.”,

Recalling also the relevant parts of the United Nations study on the institutional arrangements relating to the process of disarmament,

Aware that a number of United Nations studies have been concluded satisfactorily in the field of disarmament, and that the reports on them presented to the General Assembly have contributed significantly to the clarification of certain issues,

Noting that, even where diverse views have been reflected, the final reports elaborated by United Nations expert groups so far have stimulated wider-ranging discussions on a variety of issues,

Noting the recent non-completion of final reports on two studies, despite renewal of the mandate in both cases by the General Assembly,

Noting the discussions that have taken place in the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies,

Believing that a thorough appraisal of the subject, including the methods of work to be adopted by United Nations expert groups, could enhance the value and relevance of United Nations studies in the field of disarmament,

1. Reaffirms the value of United Nations studies, prepared with appropriate assistance from governmental or consultant experts, as a useful means by which important issues in the field of arms limitation and disarmament can be addressed in a comprehensive and detailed manner;

2. Invites Member States to communicate to the Secretary-General, by 1 April 1986, their views and proposals on how the work of the United Nations in the field of disarmament studies can be further improved;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to transmit the replies of Member States to the General Assembly at its forty-first session and to the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General to invite the Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies to prepare a comprehensive report on these matters for submission to the General Assembly at its forty-second session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session an item entitled "United Nations disarmament studies".

General Assembly resolution 40/152 K

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/877/Add.1) without vote, 19 November (meeting 42); 2-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.52/Rev.1); agenda item 65 (d).

Sponsors: France, United Kingdom.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 3-32, 34, 42; plenary 117.

In explanation of position, Bulgaria said the preparation of studies should not become an end in itself or divert attention from practical measures. Sweden said that given the great variety of subjects in United Nations disarmament studies, it was difficult to see general guidelines serving any meaningful purpose; it understood that the text was not intended to limit Governments in taking new initiatives on such studies.

Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies

The 24-member Advisory Board on Disarmament Studies—established in 1978(11) to advise the Secretary-General on various aspects of United Nations studies on disarmament and arms limitation—held its twelfth session from 6 to 10 May in New York and its thirteenth from 23 to 27 September at Geneva.(12)

The Board discussed the United Nations studies on disarmament, implementation of the World Disarmament Campaign and the current disarmament situation, focusing on nuclear winter (see p. 39). Following examination of a Secretariat paper on experience gained from the completion of 22 disarmament studies since 1979, the Board reaffirmed that, while it could not censor study proposals by Member States, it should be in a position to examine them before submission to the Assembly and to advise on matters such as possible directions or scope, priorities and approaches, if so requested by the initiators of proposals.

In its capacity as the Board of Trustees of UNIDIR (see also below), the Advisory Board also examined UNIDIR's budget estimates and proposed 1986 work programme. In so doing, the Board noted that the comments and recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions, which it was required to take into account in considering budgetary matters, would not be available before the commencement of the regular 1986 Assembly session. Under the circumstances, the Board was obliged to seek Assembly authorization to reschedule and hold the second of its biannual sessions at Headquarters at a time when subsidiary bodies were not normally allowed to meet.

UN Institute for Disarmament Research

The Director of UNIDIR, in his report approved by the Advisory Board and transmitted to the Assembly by the Secretary-General in October,(13) stated that the Assembly's adoption in 1984(14) of the UNIDIR statute had created better conditions for the further development of the Institute, but that the growing complexity of tasks before it required further strengthening of its scientific capacity and resources.

In the period covered by the report (September 1984-August 1985), the Institute carried out a number of disarmament activities. Among its publications was a reference book aimed as a guide to basic disarmament information sources<sup>(15)</sup> for non-experts. It also completed a study on Israeli nuclear armament, in response to a 1984 Assembly request<sup>(16)</sup> (see p. 64). Among ongoing studies or projects were those concerning disarmament and outer space (see also p. 79), international law of disarmament, international nuclear commerce and the NPT régime, verification, subjective factors in disarmament, arms transfer dependence, security of States and lowering of the levels of armament, and security and prospects for disarmament in Europe.

Parties and signatories to disarmament agreements

In August 1985, the Secretary-General submitted to the General Assembly his annual report on the status of multilateral disarmament agreements,<sup>(17)</sup> based on information received from the States depositories of those agreements. Listing the parties to and signatories of agreements as at 31 July 1985, the report also contained similar information on the Convention on the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques, the Agreement Governing the Activities of States on the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, and the Convention on Prohibitions or Restrictions on the Use of Certain Conventional Weapons Which May Be Deemed to Be Excessively Injurious or to Have Indiscriminate Effects (see p. 78), of which the Secretary-General was the depositary.

As at 31 December 1985, the following numbers of States had become parties to the multilateral agreements covered in the Secretary-General's report (listed in chronological order, with the years in which they were initially signed or opened for signature).<sup>(18)</sup>

(Geneva) Protocol for the Prohibition of the Use in War of Asphyxiating, Poisonous or Other Gases, and of Bacteriological Methods of Warfare (1925): 107 parties
The Antarctic Treaty (1959): 32 parties

Chapter II

Peaceful uses of outer space

Issues concerning international co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space continued to be discussed in 1985 by the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (Committee on outer space), by its two sub-committees—the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee and the Legal Sub-Committee—and by the General Assembly.

The Committee on outer space held its twenty-eighth session in New York from 17 to 28 June 1985. Its recommendations were endorsed in December by the Assembly (resolution 40/162), which also urged States to prevent an arms race in outer space, and invited those not parties to international treaties governing the use of outer space to ratify them.

Topics related to this chapter. Disarmament: arms race in outer space. Other administrative and management questions: communications satellite. International Telecommunication Union.

Science, technology and law

Space science and technology

The Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee of the Committee on outer space held its twenty-second session in New York from 11 to 22 February 1985.(1) It recommended approval of the 1986 United Nations Programme on Space Applications, reviewed the co-ordination of space activities in the United Nations system, and noted the urgency of implementing the recommendations of the Second (1982) United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space (UNISPACE-82),(2) as emphasized in 1984 by the General Assembly.(3) It again considered the use of nuclear power sources in outer space and related safety requirements, examined technical aspects of the geostationary orbit, and reviewed progress in remote sensing of the Earth by satellites and space transportation systems.

The Sub-Committee's recommendations were acted upon by the Committee on outer space in June.(4) The Committee also decided to grant, at their request, permanent observer status to the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization (INTELSAT) and to the International System and Organization of Space Communications (INTERSPUTNIK).

UN Programme on Space Applications

As part of the United Nations Programme on Space Applications, in 1985 training courses, seminars and workshops were given, fellowships were awarded and technical advisory missions were carried out.(5)

Two international training courses were conducted. The tenth United Nations/Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO) international training course (Rome, Italy, and Feldafing, Federal Republic of Germany, 6-31 May) examined the application of remote sensing to monitoring of forest land. Held in co-operation with the host Governments, it was attended by 20 senior technical personnel from 18 countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America. The course focused on aerial and satellite sensor systems, forest monitoring, detection of changes in forest conditions, forest management, data bases and geographic information systems.

The second international training course on remote-sensing applications to operational agrometeorology and hydrology (Nairobi, Kenya, 16 April-2 May) was attended by 25 senior technical personnel from 19 countries in Africa and Western Asia. Jointly organized by the United Nations, the World Meteorological Organization, the European Space Agency (ESA) and FAO and co-sponsored by Sweden, the course included presentations on the fundamentals of remote sensing using aerial and space platforms, the use of various sensors, and the methodologies of image interpretation.

An international seminar on satellite communications, co-sponsored by the USSR (Moscow, 20-31 May), was attended by 24 senior technical personnel from 20 countries. Presentations focused on the development of satellite communication systems in the USSR, satellite television distribution systems and other satellite communications topics.

Three workshops were held in co-operation with the respective Governments. A workshop in Bulgaria (Sofia, 29 April-10 May) dealt with remote-sensing instrumentation, data acquisition and analysis, and was attended by 23 senior technical personnel from 18 countries. In China (Beijing, 21-29 October), a workshop on advances in space science and technology and its applications was attended by 57 high-level scientists and technicians from 16 countries and four international organizations. A workshop in India (Ahmedabad, 4-8 November) on space science and technology and its applications in educational systems was attended by 48 high-level national planners of space-related activities, education administrators and educators from technical institutions and universities; they were from 11 countries and three international organizations.

To promote co-operation in space science and technology among developed and developing countries, the Programme co-sponsored with ESA and the Pan-African Telecommunication Union two symposia for decision-makers on space telecommunications in Africa (Lomé, Togo, 18-22 March; Harare, Zimbabwe, 14-18 October).

A technical advisory service mission, dealing with space-applications-related activities, was carried out in Malaysia, Pakistan and the Syrian Arab Republic, in response to their requests. Assistance was also provided to the development of a remote-sensing programme at the University of Ife, Ile-Ife, Nigeria; a three-day workshop and a three-week national training course were held.

Two one-year fellowships in microwave technology were offered by Austria at the Technical University of Graz. Ten fellowships, each for six years, were offered by the USSR for studies in geodesy, cartography, aerial photography and aerial photogeodesy at the Moscow Engineering Institute for Geodesy, Cartography and Air Photography. Three one-year fellowships were offered by ESA at the European Space Research and Technology Centre, Noordwijk, Netherlands; the European Space Research Institute, Frascati, Italy; and the European Space Operations Centre, Darmstadt, Federal Republic of Germany. Ten long-range fellowships in remote-sensing technology were offered by Brazil at the Instituto de Pesquisas Espaciais, São José dos Campos, São Paulo.

Based on responses received from Member States and their agencies, a directory of education, training, research and fellowship opportunities in space science and technology was published, and was to be updated every three years.

An evaluation of the effectiveness of the 1983 Programme was carried out in 1985, based on 65 replies to a questionnaire sent in June to 169 individuals who had taken part in 1983 seminars and training courses. The replies indicated that a high percentage of the respondents had continued to work in aspects of remote sensing, meteorology and communications. The majority's subsequent activities in research and development and in the initiation of regional and international co-operation indicated that they had gained through the seminars a measure of relevant knowledge.

In his report on implementing the recommendations of UNISPACE-82 (see p. 103), the Secretary-

General(6) listed activities (training courses, workshops, seminars, fellowships, meetings of experts, advisory missions) carried out in 1984 and 1985 under the Programme.

Responding to questions by the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee, the Expert on Space Applications pointed out in April(7) that the Programme's long-range activities focused on space science disciplines that met developing countries' specific requests. Technical advisory services were undertaken based on various criteria, such as the possibility for funding or the promotion of regional co-operation. The costs of Programme activities amounted to allocations of $202,800 from the 1984-1985 regular budget. A budget proposal of $207,700 had been submitted for 1986-1987.

Voluntary contributions in cash and kind to the Programme were received in 1985 from Austria, Brazil, Chile, Cyprus, the Dominican Republic and Pakistan.(8)

The Committee on outer space endorsed the Programme for 1986 as proposed by the Expert on Space Applications(8) and recommended by the Sub-Committee. The Assembly also endorsed it in resolution 40/162. Among activities planned for 1986 were a long-range fellowship programme for in-depth training, technical advisory services and provision of space information to Member States, training courses and meetings of experts, and the promotion of increased co-operation in space science and technology.

Co-ordination in the UN system

Noting the progress in co-ordinating programmes on space activities among organizations within the United Nations system, the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee stressed the need for effective consultation to avoid duplication of activities.(1) The Committee on outer space(4) stated that the reports submitted by United Nations bodies, specialized agencies and other organizations had helped the Committee and its subsidiary bodies to fulfil their role as a focal point for international co-operation, especially in the practical applications of space science and technology in developing countries.

The seventh Inter-Agency Meeting on Outer Space Activities (Paris, 30 September-2 October),(10) convened by the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, felt that the co-ordinating machinery had worked satisfactorily and that there were no major questions to be addressed. It examined a draft report of the Secretary-General on co-ordination of outer space activities for 1986 and 1987 and future years, prepared at the request of the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee and subsequently submitted to the Committee on outer space in October 1985.(11) The report listed United Nations outer space activities, which comprised remote sensing, communications, meteorology, air navigation and maritime communications. Planned activities ranged from education and training to expert services, survey missions and information dissemination. The Meeting recommended that the next such Meeting be held in the latter part of 1986.

Implementation of the recommendations of the 1982 Conference on outer space

Action to carry out the recommendations made by UNISPACE-82(2) continued. The draft final versions of three studies, recommended by that conference and conducted by the United Nations with the assistance of expert groups in 1984,(12) were considered by the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee in 1985. The studies concerned assistance to countries in studying their remote-sensing needs and assessing appropriate systems for meeting such needs;(13) the feasibility of obtaining closer spacing of satellites in the geostationary orbit;(14) and the feasibility of using direct broadcasting satellites for educational purposes and of internationally or regionally owned space segments.(15)

After considering the draft final studies, the Sub-Committee(1) forwarded them, with comments and amendments proposed by Member States,(16) to its parent Committee. It also noted the activities under way to establish an international space information service. It urged Member States to provide additional voluntary contributions to implement the UNISPACE-82 recommendations, and reaffirmed that the United Nations, in implementing them, should continue to seek the support of the United Nations Development Programme and other international funding institutions.

The Committee on outer space(4) recommended that the three studies and the related comments be called to the attention of Member States, specialized agencies and other United Nations bodies. It also recommended that the Sub-Committee consider carrying out further studies on projects of international space co-operation.

In his September report on implementing the UNISPACE-82 recommendations,(6) submitted pursuant to the General Assembly's 1984 request,(3) the Secretary-General summarized inter-agency co-operation and described action carried out and planned under the Programme on Space Applications (see p. 101).

Two other studies were carried out and submitted to the Committee on outer space in 1985: the Committee on Space Research (COSPAR) of the International Council of Scientific Unions considered the environmental effects of space activities(17) and the International Astronautical

Federation (IAF) studied the implications to international co-operation of large-scale space systems.(18)

Remote sensing of the Earth by satellites

The Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee(1) continued considering remote sensing of the Earth by satellites, stating that it should be carried out taking into account the fundamental need to provide assistance to developing countries. Regarding a list of remote-sensing applications(19) being compiled by the Secretariat, the Sub-Committee restated that its updating should be continued and that more Member States should provide information.

The Committee on outer space(4) endorsed those views, and agreed that the Sub-Committee should continue to give the item priority in 1986.

Nuclear power sources and safety in spacecraft

The use of nuclear devices as sources of power for spacecraft was given further consideration by the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee, which adopted the report of its Working Group on the subject.(1)

The Group (fifth session, New York, 11-15 February) reviewed working papers by Canada, the Federal Republic of Germany, Indonesia, Poland and Sweden and reaffirmed its previous conclusions, particularly those of 1983.(20) It discussed criteria for safe use of nuclear power sources; method, form and frequency of notification; emergency procedures in case of unplanned re-entry of those sources; and accumulation of radioactive material dispersed in the upper atmosphere as a consequence of such re-entry. Some delegations felt that the working papers were of great use, that important work remained to be carried out, and that the Group should be reconvened in 1986. Others noted that the Group's session was ineffective because it used an insignificant part of the time allocated to its meetings and carried out its work only by presenting papers without a scientific discussion; accordingly, there was no need to continue the Group's work.

After similar views were expressed in the Committee on outer space,(4) the Committee endorsed the Sub-Committee's view that in future work on nuclear power sources in space more attention should be given to the needs of developing countries, and endorsed its recommendation that the item be kept as a priority in 1986.

Space transportation

Progress made in space transportation systems was considered by the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee,(1) which noted space activities by China, India, Japan, the USSR, the United States and ESA. The Committee on outer space(4) endorsed a Sub-Committee decision that it continue considering those systems in 1986.

Technical aspects of the geostationary orbit

The Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee(1) continued to examine the physical nature and technical attributes of the geostationary orbit, in which satellites for communications and other purposes maintain a position some 36,000 kilometres above a selected location on the Equator. The Sub-Committee noted the preparatory work being done by the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) to establish scientific and technical criteria on the use of the orbit for the World Administrative Radio Conferences (WARCs) of 1985 (see PART TWO, Chapter XII) and 1988. The Sub-Committee recommended that it examine the question again in 1986, a recommendation endorsed by the Committee on outer space.(4)

Other questions

The Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee(1) recommended that at its 1986 session, in addition to the items examined above, it should consider life sciences, including space medicine; that COSPAR and IAF be invited to submit reports and arrange a presentation on progress in the geosphere-biosphere programme; and that a theme be fixed well in advance for special attention at each meeting of the Sub-Committee. COSPAR and IAF might be invited to arrange a symposium on the selected theme, during the first week of the Sub-Committee's session.

The Committee on outer space(4) endorsed those recommendations, noted a proposal that the Sub-Committee's 1986 theme be remote sensing for developing countries, and called for informal consultations to select that theme by consensus. In December, these suggestions were endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 40/162.

The Committee also took note of a working paper,(21) submitted by Australia, Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan, the Netherlands, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States, on its revitalization. Among the paper's proposals was the establishment of an informal open-ended working group to review the organization and work methods of the Committee and its Sub-Committees to make them as effective as possible. The paper also suggested adding to the agenda of the Scientific and Technical Sub-Committee items on advances in space life science research, including space medicine; international co-operation in space science through geophysical and biophysical research programmes; advances in space science and applications particularly relevant to developing countries; and spin-offs from outer space programmes.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

For General Assembly action regarding space science and technology, see resolution 40/162, on p. 106.

Space law

The Legal Sub-Committee of the Committee on outer space held its twenty-fourth session in New York from 18 March to 4 April 1985.(22) It continued to consider three items: legal implications of remote sensing of the Earth from space, with the aim of formulating draft principles; the possibility of supplementing the norms of international law relevant to the use of nuclear power sources in outer space; and matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space and to the character and utilization of the geostationary orbit.

Legal aspects of remote sensing from satellites

On 19 March 1985, the Legal Sub-Committee re-established a Working Group, which continued, from then until 3 April, to consider the legal implications of remote sensing of the Earth from outer space, with the aim of formulating draft principles. The Group considered working papers submitted by Brazil, Chile, France and Kenya. It reviewed the 17 draft principles as they appeared at the conclusion of the Sub-Committee's 1984 session,(23) and then discussed principles I to IV, VI, VII and XII, concerning definitions of terms (I), objectives of remote sensing (II), international law (III), international co-operation (IV), technical assistance (VI), the United Nations role (VII) and access to data by a State whose territory was sensed (XII). The Chairman of the Working Group then presented a working document on the principles, as a basis for an agreement by consensus.

The Committee on outer space(4) held consultations with a view to finalizing the principles and, based on those consultations, Austria submitted a further working document(24) which the Committee felt could provide a basis for a future consensus agreement. The Chairman of the Group of 77 stated that, while that Group could not conclude consideration of Austria's document due to time constraints, it could be the basis for further consultations, and recommended that it be considered by the Legal Sub-Committee in 1986.

The Committee recommended that the item be retained on the Sub-Committee's 1986 agenda.

Legal aspects of nuclear power sources in spacecraft

A Working Group, re-established by the Legal Sub-Committee on 18 March 1985, continued to consider, from then until 4 April, supplementing the norms of international law relevant to the use of nuclear power sources in outer space.(22) The Group discussed two themes: notification prior to re-entry of a space object with nuclear power sources on board, and assistance to States. On the first topic, the Group formulated the principle that data distribution should commence with the notification of malfunctioning, and the updating frequency should increase as the time of the expected re-entry approached.

On assistance to States, the Group agreed on a formulation stating that upon notification of an expected re-entry of a space object with nuclear power sources on board, all States with space monitoring facilities should co-operate in monitoring that object. Additional information should be made available promptly to allow potentially affected States to assess the situation and take precautionary measures. After re-entry, the launching State should provide assistance to eliminate harmful effects; other States and international organizations should also assist. The Group felt that these formulations on the two themes could provide a basis for agreement by consensus in the near future.

The Committee on outer space(4) recommended that work on the agenda item be continued in 1986 and endorsed the Sub-Committee's recommendation to reformulate the item's title as the elaboration of draft principles relevant to the use of nuclear power sources in outer space.

Legal aspects of the geostationary orbit and definition of outer space

The Legal Sub-Committee continued to consider matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space and to the character and utilization of the geostationary orbit. On 18 March 1985, it re-established a Working Group, which examined the subject until 4 April.(22) The Group agreed to consider the two aspects of the item (definition and delimitation of outer space, and geostationary orbit) separately, but also to allow time to consider the item as a whole.

Discussing definition and delimitation of outer space, some delegations felt a multilateral agreement establishing a specific altitude as the upper limit of airspace and the commencement of outer space was the appropriate course. Some delegations referred to a 1983 USSR working paper, (25) proposing such an agreement, and noted the paper's proposals to establish the commencement of outer space at an altitude not exceeding 110 kilometres above sea-level. Other delegations said that establishing a boundary between airspace and outer space would be arbitrary; the lack of such a definition or delimitation had not given rise to difficulties, and its establishment might create problems for the development of space activities and the existing smooth relationship between activities in airspace and outer space; and space activities were being conducted in a way entirely compatible with State sovereignty, and it was incorrect to consider a definition or delimitation of outer space as necessary for securing that sovereignty. It was also suggested that, as the positions of delegations on the topic had not moved closer for many years, it might be useful to consider whether a definition of space activities, rather than of outer space, would not be the appropriate course. It was stated, however, that seeking both definitions was not incompatible.

On the geostationary orbit, some delegations felt it was a limited natural resource and a special legal régime should be established for it. Current ITU arrangements provided for the allocation of orbital positions and related frequencies on an unacceptable first come, first served basis. The orbit and related frequencies were approaching saturation, with positions and frequencies occupied by only a few countries. Thus, the United Nations should establish principles governing its equitable use by all countries. Some delegations emphasized that the equatorial countries had special rights and responsibilities with respect to the orbit, as it was on the equatorial plane and was a unique natural resource. Others disagreed, stating that the geostationary orbit as part of outer space was the common heritage of mankind.

It was also said that, while a legal régime for utilizing the geostationary orbit was necessary, discussions should be based on four points: the orbit was a part of outer space, subject to international law and not subject to national appropriation; all States had equal rights of utilization, and the positioning of a space object in the orbit created no right of ownership over that particular orbital segment; utilization should not be detrimental to the interests of other States, and account should be taken of developing countries' special needs; and States should co-operate in placing communications satellites in the orbit with due regard to ITU decisions on frequency utilization.

Still other delegations felt the 1985 and 1988 WARC's should formulate principles and that it was necessary to regulate the matter juridically, since ITU regulations could no longer cope with certain technological trends and monopolistic tendencies. Other delegations disagreed.

The Committee on outer space(4) recommended that the item be retained on the agenda of the Sub-Committee for further consideration in 1986.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Special Political Committee, adopted resolution 40/162 without vote.

International co-operation in the peaceful uses of outer space

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 39/96 of 14 December 1984,

Deeply convinced of the common interest of mankind in promoting the exploration and use of outer space for peaceful purposes and in continuing efforts to extend to all States the benefits derived therefrom, and of the importance of international co-operation in this field, for which the United Nations should continue to provide a focal point,

Reaffirming the importance of international co-operation in developing the rule of law, including the relevant norms of space law, for the advancement and preservation of the exploration and peaceful uses of outer space,

Gravely concerned at the extension of an arms race into outer space,

Recognizing that all States, in particular those with major space capabilities, should contribute actively to the goal of preventing an arms race in outer space as an essential condition for the promotion of international co-operation in the exploration and uses of outer space for peaceful purposes,

Aware of the need to increase the benefits of space technology and its applications and to contribute to an orderly growth of space activities favourable to the socio-economic advancement of mankind, in particular the peoples of developing countries,

Taking note of the progress achieved in the further development of peaceful space exploration and application as well as in various national and co-operative space projects, which contribute to international co-operation in this field,

Taking note also of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the recommendations of the Second United Nations Conference on the Exploration and Peaceful Uses of Outer Space,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space on the work of its twenty-eighth session,

1. Endorses the report of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space;

2. Invites States that have not yet become parties to the international treaties governing the uses of outer space* to give consideration to ratifying or acceding to those treaties;

3. Notes that the Legal Sub-Committee of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space at its twenty-fourth session, in its working groups, continued:

(a) Its detailed consideration of the legal implications of remote sensing of the Earth from space, with the aim of formulating draft principles relating to remote sensing;

(b) Its consideration of the possibility of supplementing the norms of international law relevant to the use of nuclear power sources in outer space;

(c) Its consideration of matters relating to the definition and delimitation of outer space and to the character and utilization of the geostationary orbit, including consideration of ways and means to ensure the rational and equitable use of the geostationary orbit, without prejudice to the role of the International Telecommunication Union;

4. Endorses the recommendations of the Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space that the Legal Sub-Committee at its twenty-fifth session should, taking into account the concerns of all countries, particularly those of developing countries, in its working groups:

(a) Continue its detailed consideration of the legal implications of remote sensing of the Earth from space, with the aim of finalizing the draft set of principles;

General Assembly resolution 40/162

16 December 1985 Meeting 118 Adopted without vote

Approved by SPC (A/40/1023) without vote, 6 December (meeting 46); draft by Austria, for SPC working group (A/SPC/40/L.30); agenda item 76. Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: SPC 37-46; plenary 118.

Following approval of the text in the Special Political Committee, the United States said it was gratified that paragraph 14 reflected the proposals by the United States and other Western countries to revitalize the Committee on outer space.(21)

The USSR interpreted the draft resolution as requiring the Committee on outer space to consider establishing an international arrangement, and referred to a proposal submitted by it to the Special Political Committee(26) on main lines and principles of international co-operation in the peaceful exploitation of outer space under conditions of its non-militarization.

The Assembly considered that question as a supplementary agenda item (see p. 79).

Spacecraft launchings

In 1985, four countries and an intergovernmental organization provided information to the United Nations on the launching of objects into orbit or beyond, in accordance with a 1961 General Assembly resolution(1) and the Convention on Registration of Objects Launched into Outer Space.(2)

Eighteen notifications of objects launched during 1985 and the latter part of 1984, and on the status of other spacecraft, were received in 1985 and distributed as United Nations documents.(3) Information was submitted by Japan on 3 launchings, by the USSR on 74, by the United Kingdom on 3, by the United States on 31 and by ESA on 2. (Some launchings involved multiple space objects sent aloft by a single carrier rocket. Launchings during 1985 but not reported to the United Nations until 1986 are excluded from the above count.)

Convention on registration of launchings

As at 31 December 1985, there were 33 States parties to the Convention on Registration, including Mongolia which ratified it on 10 April.(4)

Chapter III

Law of the sea

Ratifications to the 1982 United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea increased to 25 during 1985.

The Preparatory Commission, which had been mandated to set up the Convention's two major institutions—the International Sea-Bed Authority and the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea—continued its work. It declared that the only régime for exploring and exploiting the international sea-bed "Area" (the sea-bed beyond national jurisdiction) was that established by the Convention and other resolutions adopted in 1982 by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

In resolution 40/63, the General Assembly called on States to observe the Convention's provisions when enacting national legislation and called for early adoption of the rules for registration of pioneer investors.

Topics related to this chapter. Disarmament: naval arms race. Transport: maritime transport. Natural resources: marine resources. Environment: marine ecosystems. International Court of Justice: continental shelf delimitation (Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Tunisia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya/Malta).

UN Convention on the Law of the Sea

Signatures and ratifications

The number of ratifications to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea increased to 25 during 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> with the addition of Bahrain, Cameroon, Guinea, Iceland, Iraq, Mali, Saint Lucia, the Sudan, Togo, Tunisia and the United Republic of Tanzania. The Convention, adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea in April 1982,<sup>(2)</sup> was to enter into force 12 months after receipt of the sixtieth instrument of ratification or accession.

The Convention had closed for signature on 9 December 1984. At that time, 159 signatures had been received.<sup>(3)</sup>

Developments relating to the Convention

In response to a 1984 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(4)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on developments relating to the Convention and on implementation of that resolution.<sup>(5)</sup> He declared that even before its entry into force, the Convention was exerting a considerable influence on all aspects of the law of the sea, as well as on marine affairs in general.

The report was divided into two parts: part one contained an overview of the Convention's impact on State practice and on the mandates and activities of international organizations concerned with marine affairs, decisions of the International Court of Justice and other tribunals, and information on other developments relating to the law of the sea; part two outlined the activities of the Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Law of the Sea in the discharge of its mandate (see p. 112).

A number of States had adopted national legislation dealing with a variety of marine issues, particularly on determining baselines, breadth and status of the territorial sea, establishing exclusive economic zones, defining the continental shelf and delimiting maritime boundaries between States with opposite or adjacent coasts.

A large number of States had agreed to a 12-mile territorial sea as embodied in the Convention. Currently, 89 had a territorial sea of 12 nautical miles in breadth, while 22 had legislation establishing the limits of the territorial sea beyond 12 nautical miles. Seventy-nine States had promulgated laws or decrees establishing exclusive economic zones or exclusive fishery zones of up to 200 nautical miles.

With respect to the continental shelf, 16 nations had enacted legislation incorporating the concept of natural prolongation as embodied in the Convention.

Coastal States' expanded jurisdiction over adjacent maritime areas, a distinctive feature of the new legal régime for the seas, had created several potential conflicts among States. By providing a legal order for the seas, the Convention promoted the peaceful resolution of such disputes.

Several problems with respect to maritime delimitation had been resolved either by delimitation agreements or by international adjudication or other forms of peaceful settlement. Recent cases included the dispute between Argentina and Chile in the Beagle Channel, the delimitation of maritime boundaries between Guinea and Guinea-Bissau and the delimitation of the continental shelf between the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and Malta.

Among other developments relating to the law of the sea and reviewed in the Secretary-General's report were: peaceful uses; maritime law; environmental law; fisheries management and development; marine science, technology and ocean services; and marine resource development.

Throughout 1985, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) continued working towards preventing marine pollution and improving maritime safety (see PART TWO, Chapter XIV). It continued work on, among other things, amending the 1974 International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, the 1966 International Convention on Load Lines and a new convention to replace one of 1910 on salvage and assistance at sea. The first two projects were to be considered at a conference in 1988. The IMO Legal Committee continued preparing a draft revision of the Convention on salvage, which involved both private and public law. The 1979 International Convention on Maritime Search and Rescue entered into force on 22 June 1985, 12 months after 15 States had become parties to it. The Ninth Consultative Meeting of Contracting Parties to the 1972 Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter (London, 23-27 September 1985) adopted revised criteria for the allocation of substances to the Convention's annexes.

Other 1985 developments included the adoption on 21 June of a Convention to protect, manage and develop the marine and coastal environment of eastern Africa (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVI); and in July, the reaching by the United Nations Conference on Conditions for Registration of Ships of an agreed text on the contentious issues of national participation and management, manning and ownership of ships (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter V).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

For General Assembly action with regard to the Convention, see resolution 40/63 on p. 113.

Preparatory Commission

The Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea met twice during 1985.<sup>(5)</sup> It held its third session at Kingston, Jamaica, from 11 March to 4 April and meetings at Geneva from 12 August to 4 September.

The Commission received a letter from the USSR dated 10 June 1985,<sup>(6)</sup> in which it stated that the Soviet enterprise Yuzhmorgeologiya had received a letter from the consortium Ocean Mining Associates declaring that the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration of the United States Department of Commerce on 29 August 1984 had issued the consortium a licence to explore part of the international sea-bed Area of the Pacific Ocean. The licence granted the consortium exclusive rights to manganese nodules in the Area and priority in regard to other resources. Similar licences had been issued by the United States to other consortia. The Soviet enterprise had replied to Ocean Mining Associates that it did not recognize the validity of the licence, that its issuance was unlawful, and that it attempted to appropriate the powers of the Commission and to undermine the Convention on the Law of the Sea. Annexed were a TASS statement of 5 June and the Yuzhmorgeologiya reply.

On 30 August, the Commission, taking note of the USSR letter, adopted without vote a Declaration, by which it asserted that the Convention and related resolutions adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea<sup>(2)</sup> established the only régime for exploring and exploiting the Area and that any claim, agreement or action regarding the Area which was incompatible with them was illegal and should not be recognized.

At the time of its adoption, the Chairman stated that, after consulting delegations, it was his understanding that the Declaration commanded a large majority in the Commission; however, he noted, a number of delegations could not support it because of concerns about some aspects of its substance and effect.

In the light of the Declaration's adoption, the Group of Eastern European States did not press for a decision on its draft on the same subject.<sup>(7)</sup> By that text, the Commission would have rejected as illegal an agreement on sea-bed matters concluded in August 1984 by eight Western Governments<sup>(8)</sup> and would have decided not to recognize it.

The Chairman characterized the Commission's third session as encouraging, in that it had settled down to work on all substantive matters. The Commission was mandated to prepare for the establishment of the International Sea-Bed Authority (Assembly, Council, Legal and Technical Commission, Economic Planning Commission) and the Enterprise (mining arm); draft a mining code; study the possible impact of production of sea-bed minerals on developing countries which were land-based producers; prepare for the establishment of the international disputes settlement Tribunal; and administer the regime for registration of pioneer investors, under resolution II adopted by the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.<sup>(9)</sup> Pioneer investors were States and private consortia interested in exploring the Area before the Convention's entry into force; resolution II set out a scheme to enable them to qualify for registration by the Commission as pioneer investors and to protect investments made by them.

The Commission began its second reading of the draft rules of procedure of the Assembly of the Authority; the major outstanding issue was the status of observers. Another important issue was a proposal to establish a finance committee in the Assembly which would assist the Secretary-General of the Authority in preparing the budget and oversee financial affairs.

Consultations were undertaken informally by the Chairman among three pioneer investors—France, Japan and the USSR—whose claims overlapped in the north-east Pacific Ocean. (Four nations had submitted applications for registration as pioneer investors, the USSR in 1983,<sup>(10)</sup> and France, Japan and India in 1984.<sup>(11)</sup>) While it was possible to resolve provisionally the overlap between Japan and the USSR (see below), the overlap between France and the USSR created particular problems in that it was difficult to find a solution which would meet all the conditions of resolution II, paragraph 3, which provided that each application should cover a total area which need not be a single continuous area, sufficiently large and of sufficient estimated commercial value to allow two mining operations, a part of which was to be reserved for the Authority.

On 28 February 1985,<sup>(12)</sup> France, Japan and the USSR stated that negotiations (Paris, 11-16 January; Tokyo, 1-6 February; and Moscow, 22-28 February) had provisionally resolved the overlapping claims between the Japanese and USSR application areas. That solution would be finalized simultaneously with, and depending on, the outcome of the conflict between France and the USSR.

During the Geneva meetings, consultations continued on the overlapping issue and it was decided that they would be pursued during the inter-sessional period.

Also at Geneva, the Commission completed the second reading of the Assembly's draft rules of procedure and examined more than two thirds of those of the Council. The following issues remained outstanding: the question of subsidiary organs (whether main committees should be institutionalized in the rules of the Assembly); the status and extent of participation by States observers to the Authority; control over financial and budgetary matters (including a proposal by six industrialized countries to have a key role in a finance committee whose membership was to include the Authority's four largest contributors); and the majority required to elect the Authority's Secretary-General.

Other communications. A number of other communications were addressed to the Commission's Chairman on the subjects of the sea-bed mining regime and registration of pioneer investors. (No applications for registration as pioneer investors were submitted in 1985.)

On 19 March,<sup>(13)</sup> the Federal Republic of Germany pointed out that it had not signed the Convention because of its objections to specific elements of the sea-bed mining regime; however, it did not reject the Convention in toto and it was prepared to explore all avenues which might lead to general consensus on a mining regime.

Several States declared that overlapping claims among applicants for registration as pioneer investors could be satisfactorily solved only by agreements encompassing all potential claimants. Such statements were made by Belgium (2 April),<sup>(14)</sup> Canada (3 April),<sup>(15)</sup> Italy (2 April),<sup>(16)</sup> and the Netherlands (28 March).<sup>(17)</sup> In connection with those statements, the USSR on 28 June<sup>(18)</sup> and 10 July<sup>(19)</sup> said that the demand for resolving disputes among all potential applicants, irrespective of whether they had signed the Convention, was contrary to resolution II and could only be seen as reflecting a desire to nullify the Commission's work in implementing that resolution. France, in letters of 31 July,<sup>(20)</sup> also stated that it was unable to accept the views of the four States on solving overlapping claims, which would make Commission decisions subject to the goodwill of commercial undertakings unable or unwilling to benefit from resolution II.

On 15 August,<sup>(21)</sup> China, pointing out that a certain country had unilaterally issued licences to explore the resources of the international sea-bed, declared that any action which violated the Convention was illegal and would never be recognized by the international community.

In a 25 October letter,<sup>(22)</sup> referring to the August 1985 Declaration, the Federal Republic of Germany stated that, while parts of the Convention reflected already existing law, that was not the case with the part relating to deep sea-bed mining; pending its entry into force, the Convention could not create contractual rights and obligations for any country, and even when it came into force it would be binding only on States which had ratified or acceded to it.

The United Kingdom, in a letter of 4 November,<sup>(23)</sup> referred to the Commission Chairman's statement at the time the Declaration was adopted (see above) and said that, since that statement had not been followed by discussion, it wished to assert that, in the absence of a generally accepted deep sea-bed mining regime, a State must retain its rights and might exercise its freedom of action relating to deep sea-bed activities and resources.

Special Commissions

The Commission's four Special Commissions continued their work in accordance with their respective mandates. Special Commission 1 considered the problems of land-based producer States which would be most seriously affected by sea-bed mining production. Special Commission 2 took up a project profile for a deep sea-bed mining operation. Special Commission 3 examined draft regulations on the use of terms, scope, prospecting and procedure for submission and approval of plans for exploring and exploiting sea-bed minerals. Special Commission 4 studied draft rules of procedure for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea.

Developing land-based producer States

Special Commission 1 held 10 meetings during the Preparatory Commission's Kingston session, seeking to identify the developing land-based producer States likely to be most seriously affected by sea-bed mining. The Chairman of Special Commission 1 told the plenary Commission that substantial progress had been made in identifying the States, the possible effects and possible remedial measures.<sup>(24)</sup> In addition, a better understanding was reached of the studies that should be carried out in the following few years before the International Sea-Bed Authority came into being and of studies to be pursued by the Authority in the relatively long period that might be required before sea-bed production began.

The Enterprise

Special Commission 2, preparing for establishment of the Enterprise (the Authority's operational arm) which was to conduct sea-bed activities, had before it a project profile for a deep sea-bed mining operation, prepared by the secretariat, which marked a new phase in the work of the Preparatory Commission. That paper provided a basis for more concrete discussion of a mining operation compared to the somewhat philosophical discussions that had taken place at previous meetings. It indicated the various steps in establishing a sea-bed mining operation, spanning 14 years, before commercial production could begin. It outlined a number of operational options open to the Enterprise as well as the financial requirements under each option. The Chairman of Special Commission 2 informed the Preparatory Commission<sup>(25)</sup> that secretariat papers on an ad hoc expert group to assist in planning for the operation of the Enterprise and on the training needs and requirements of the Enterprise also had been considered. Special Commission 2 held 11 meetings.

Sea-bed mining code

Special Commission 3, charged with drafting the mining code, began to consider a draft regulation on prospecting, exploration and exploitation of polymetallic nodules in the Area. It particularly discussed the question of notification of prospecting and the submission of reports by prospectors to the Authority, the right to apply, the time of submission of approval of plans of work, the submission of applications and their form. The Chairman of Special Commission 3, which held 11 meetings during the Preparatory Commission's Kingston session, stated<sup>(26)</sup> that it had completed an article-by-article first reading of the provisions on scope and prospecting and began considering regulations on nationality of applicant, sponsorship and control by the sponsoring State.

International Tribunal

Special Commission 4, which was considering practical arrangements for setting up the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, examined the Tribunal's draft rules of procedure. It held 12 meetings. The Chairman of Special Commission 4, addressing the Preparatory Commission, said<sup>(27)</sup> it had taken up the draft rules article by article, including such matters as who might represent parties before the Tribunal, privileges, immunities and facilities that should be accorded to representatives of parties, agent and counsel, preliminary procedures intended to safeguard coastal States' exercise of resource rights in the exclusive economic zone against abuse by vexatious litigation, official languages of the Tribunal, provision of information by international organizations and provisional measures to protect parties' rights and to prevent damage to the marine environment. The Special Commission also considered draft rules dealing with procedure for the prompt release by a detaining State of vessels and crews; the procedure was of immediate concern to fishing States and maritime States.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

For General Assembly action concerning the work of the Preparatory Commission, see resolution 40/63 on p. 113.

Functions of the Secretary-General

Office of the Special Representative

The Office of the Special Representative of the Secretary-General was responsible for executing the central programme on law of the sea affairs and was the core office of the Organization for the law of the sea.<sup>(5)</sup>

In 1985, the demand from Governments, intergovernmental organizations, academic institutions and scholars for information on law of the sea developments continued to increase. There was a corresponding increase in requests for specialized information and technical advice on the content and effect of different provisions of the Convention and the significance of interrelationships between its provisions, particularly as regards the rights and obligations of States.

Several States sought advice on the implications of ratifying the Convention. Matters of concern included environmental protection, regional and subregional co-operation and finance. The secretariat was preparing a study on the financial implications of establishing the Authority and Tribunal.

Increased interest was noted in marine affairs at the regional and intergovernmental levels. For example, the Office was requested to be represented at a meeting of the Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP) natural resources committee and also its expert group on maritime legislation; an expert group on marine surveying technologies of ESCAP and the Ocean Economics and Technology Branch of the Department of International Economic and Social Affairs; an Indian Ocean conference on marine affairs co-operation; a United Nations conference on nickel; and an African intergovernmental expert meeting on exploring and exploiting sea-bed resources. In each case, the objective was to provide information on various aspects of the Convention and to promote its uniform application.

The Office proposed to supplement the advice and assistance already being given by it on purely legal and management aspects through the mechanism of technical advisory groups which would provide advice and assistance on technical matters, such as the continental shelf delineation in accordance with the Convention, the drawing of different types of baselines referred to in the Convention, and the establishment of guidelines on scales, geodetic system, projections and symbols in maritime charts for which the Secretary-General was the depositary.

Considerable effort was made to evaluate and strengthen the law of the sea information system, and to convert it from manual to electronic operation. Priority was given to the processing and entry of information on State practice in matters covered by the Convention, particularly national legislation and policy as well as international agreements and arrangements.

A list of multilateral treaties relevant to the law of the sea was published<sup>(28)</sup> as were further issues of the Law of the Sea Bulletin, and the law of the sea reference library continued to be updated. The Bulletin included extracts of national legislation, treaties and other multilateral instruments, recent decisions of international courts and tribunals and other modes for peaceful settlement of disputes; information required by States pertaining to the Convention; and developments in marine activities at all levels. The reference library collection was strengthened to include meeting and symposia working papers and proceedings, articles in journals from developing countries, and unpublished working papers of various institutions which were in the public domain.

The Office represented the Secretary-General in meetings and symposia of government officials, scholars and citizens to explain the Convention and its contribution to the rule of law and to international peace.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/63 by recorded vote.

Law of the sea

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/66 of 3 December 1982, 38/59 A of 14 December 1983 and 39/73 of 13 December 1984, regarding the law of the sea,

Taking note of the increasing and overwhelming support for the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, as evidenced, inter alia, by the one hundred and fifty-nine signatures as of 9 December 1984, the closing date for signature, and twenty-four of the sixty ratifications or accessions required for entry into force of the Convention,

Considering that, in its resolution 2749(XXV) of 17 December 1970, it proclaimed that the sea-bed and ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction, as well as the resources of the area, are the common heritage of mankind,

Recalling that the Convention provides the régime to be applied to the Area and its resources,

Further recalling the Declaration adopted by the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea on 30 August 1985,

Seriously concerned at any attempt to undermine the Convention and the related resolutions adopted at the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea,

Recognizing that, as stated in the third preambular paragraph of the Convention, the problems of ocean space are closely interrelated and need to be considered as a whole,

Convinced that it is important to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith and to refrain from any action to apply their provisions selectively, in a manner inconsistent with their object and purpose,

Emphasizing the need for States to ensure consistent application of the Convention, as well as the need for harmonization of national legislation with the provisions of the Convention,

Recognizing also the need for co-operation in the early and effective implementation by the Preparatory Commission of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea,

Noting the increasing needs of countries, especially developing countries, for information, advice and assistance in the implementation of the Convention and in their developmental process for the full realization of the benefits of the comprehensive legal régime established by the Convention,

Noting also that the Preparatory Commission has decided to hold its fourth regular session at Kingston from 17 March to 11 April 1986 and its summer meeting in 1986 at Geneva, Kingston or New York as it may decide,

Taking note of activities carried out in 1985 under the major programme on marine affairs, set forth in chapter

25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989, in accordance with the report of the Secretary-General as approved in General Assembly resolution 38/59 A.

Recognizing that the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea encompasses all uses and resources of the oceans and that all related activities within the United Nations system need to be implemented in a manner consistent with it,

Recalling its approval of the financing of the expenses of the Preparatory Commission from the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking special note of the report of the Secretary-General prepared in response to paragraph 10 of General Assembly resolution 39/73,

1. Recalls the historic significance of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea as an important contribution to the maintenance of peace, justice and progress for all peoples of the world;

2. Expresses its satisfaction at the increasing number of ratifications deposited with the Secretary-General;

3. Calls upon all States that have not done so to consider ratifying or acceding to the Convention at the earliest possible date to allow the effective entry into force of the new legal régime for the uses of the sea and its resources;

4. Calls upon all States to safeguard the unified character of the Convention and related resolutions adopted therewith;

5. Takes note of the Declaration adopted by the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea on 30 August 1985;

6. Calls upon States to desist from taking actions which undermine the Convention or defeat its object and purpose;

7. Calls upon States to observe the provisions of the Convention when enacting their national legislation;

8. Calls for an early adoption of the rules for registration of pioneer investors in order to ensure the effective implementation of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, including the registration of pioneer investors;

9. Expresses its appreciation for the effective execution by the Secretary-General of the central programme in law of the sea affairs under chapter 25 of the medium-term plan for the period 1984-1989;

10. Further expresses its appreciation for the report of the Secretary-General prepared in response to General Assembly resolution 39/73 and requests him to continue to carry out the activities outlined therein, as well as those aimed at the strengthening of the new legal régime of the sea, special emphasis being placed on the work of the Preparatory Commission for the International Sea-Bed Authority and for the International Tribunal for the Law of the Sea, including the implementation of resolution II of the Third United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea;

11. Approves the programme of meetings of the Preparatory Commission for 1986;

12. Calls upon the Secretary-General to continue to assist States in the implementation of the Convention and in the development of a consistent and uniform approach to the new legal regime thereunder, as well as in their national, subregional and regional efforts towards the full realization of the benefits therefrom and invites the organs and organizations of the United Nations system to co-operate and lend assistance in these endeavours;

13. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on developments relating to the Convention and on the implementation of the present resolution;

14. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Law of the sea".

General Assembly resolution 40/63

10 December 1985 Meeting 110 140-2-5 (recorded vote)

56-nation draft (A/40/L.33 & Add.1); agenda item 36

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: plenary 110, 111.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libya, Arab Jamahiriya, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Paraguay, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe

Against: Turkey, United States.

Abstaining: Germany, Federal Republic of, Israel, Peru, United Kingdom, Venezuela.

Two States explained their non-participation in the vote: Albania said that the text contained the same provisions it had rejected in previous resolutions; Ecuador noted that it had not signed the Convention because it did not reflect its rights and interests.

Turkey gave the same reason for its negative vote, while the United States maintained that part XI of the Convention, governing exploitation of sea-bed resources beyond national jurisdiction, ran contrary to its policy; both States opposed including the costs of the Preparatory Commission in the United Nations regular budget as they believed those costs should be borne by the Convention's signatories. The United States, moreover, felt that the Commission's Declaration was not in accord with international law.

Peru said its abstention did not prevent it from recognizing the Convention's historical value, and stated that its accession was still being studied. The Federal Republic of Germany declared that neither the resolution nor the Declaration was conducive to efforts to find consensus solutions to unresolved issues in the law of the sea. The United Kingdom spoke in like manner, adding that although it had been unable to accept the Convention's régime for deep sea-bed mining, it had continued to work for a universally acceptable régime.

Argentina interpreted the sixth preambular paragraph and paragraph 4 of the resolution to be in accordance with the statement made by it when it signed the Convention. Belgium said it was not entirely satisfied with the text which, it felt, contained elements likely to make the Commission's work more difficult. Canada agreed, citing the Declaration which it did not support and the reference to registering pioneer investors. Italy found that both the resolution and the Declaration contained divisive elements which would not encourage ratification of the Convention. Although strongly supporting the law of the sea régime, the Netherlands felt that the Declaration did not accurately reflect current international law.

Among other related actions, the Assembly, in resolution 40/19,<sup>1</sup> invited Member States seeking to recover artistic treasures from the sea-bed to facilitate the participation of States having a historical link with those treasures; in resolution 40/94 J, requested that further measures be taken to prevent an arms race on the sea-bed; and in resolution 40/97 A, endorsed a decision by the United Nations Council for Namibia proclaiming an exclusive economic zone for Namibia with a 200-mile outer limit.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1985/75, acknowledged that ocean resources represented an important contribution to the developmental process of States, and requested the Secretary-General to report to it in 1987 on the specific needs and problems encountered by countries, particularly developing ones, in managing and developing ocean resources in their exclusive economic zones.

Chapter IV

International peace and security

Ways of maintaining international peace and security continued to be the primary objective of the United Nations during 1985.

Expressing concern over the increasing recourse to the use of force, the General Assembly took action to try to improve the situation. It urged all States, particularly the Security Council's permanent members, to prevent the further deterioration of the international situation (resolution 40/158) and, in a solemn appeal to conflicting States to settle disputes peacefully, it invited the Council to act promptly in such cases (40/9). As the Ad Hoc Committee on the Implementation of the Collective Security Provisions of the Charter of the United Nations had still not been formed, the Assembly urged that 54 States be appointed as members (40/159).

On United Nations Day, 24 October, the Assembly proclaimed 1986 as the International Year of Peace (40/3), subsequently adopted a programme for the Year and decided to convene a second pledging conference for contributions to it (40/10). The Assembly also called for the implementation of its 1984 Declaration on the Right of Peoples to Peace (40/11) and renewed the mandate of its Special Committee on Peace-keeping Operations (40/163).

In his annual report to the Assembly (see p. 3), the Secretary-General recalled that 40 years previously it had been concluded that the old idea of achieving national security through a competitive armaments race led only to increasing general insecurity. Therefore, that concept was to be replaced by a collective system, involving particularly the most powerful nations, which would play a key role in the Security Council. Although that had not been realized for many reasons, the Council had time and again slowed the onrush of events, gained time for vital changes in direction, produced face-saving mechanisms and substituted talk for violent action. A system of conflict control, known as peace-keeping, had been pioneered, which had shown considerable effectiveness in 13 separate operations. Urging States to direct their will to the key function of maintaining international peace and security, the Secretary-General stressed that in the nuclear age, there was nothing more dangerous than failing to make the system work.

All aspects of the maintenance of international peace and security were also discussed by the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter IV).

Topics related to this chapter. Disarmament. Human rights: human rights and peace. Legal aspects of international political relations: peaceful settlement of disputes between States; good-neighbourliness between States; non-use of force in international relations; draft Code of Offences against peace and security; draft convention against mercenaries; prevention of terrorism. International organizations and international law: strengthening the role of the United Nations.

Implementation of the 1970
Declaration on international security

The General Assembly, in December 1985, after its annual review of the implementation of the 1970 Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security,<sup>(1)</sup> urged all States to prevent the further deterioration of the international situation and stated that the gradual military disengagement of the great Powers and their military alliances should be promoted.

In connection with the item, the Secretary-General submitted several documents to the Assembly. In an August report and subsequent addenda,<sup>(2)</sup> submitted pursuant to a 1984 request,<sup>(3)</sup> he forwarded 10 substantive replies to the Assembly's invitation to Member States for their views concerning the Declaration's implementation. Responding to a further 1984 Assembly request,<sup>(4)</sup> for him to report on its recommendation that the Security Council give priority consideration to the need for strengthening the collective security system provided for in the United Nations Charter, the Secretary-General stated that he had no further information to report.<sup>(5)</sup>

Communications. Letters were received from Member States during the year, concerning the review of the implementation of the Declaration.

On 17 June,<sup>(6)</sup> the United Kingdom transmitted a communiqué by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the North Atlantic Council (Lisbon, Portugal, 6 and 7 June), setting out the Council's policy on East-West relations and calling on the new USSR leadership to join the Ministers in seeking tangible improvements in those relations.

On 6 May,(7) Poland forwarded a communique adopted at a summit meeting of the States parties to the 1955 Warsaw Treaty of Friendship, Co-operation and Mutual Assistance (Warsaw, 26 April); participants signed a Protocol extending the Treaty for the coming 20 years, emphasized its importance in preserving peace in Europe, and declared that they favoured developing equitable and mutually advantageous international co-operation. In connection with the Protocol's signing, Mongolia, on 29 April,(8) stated that the current world situation required the continuance of the Warsaw Treaty Organization (WTO), although its members opposed dividing the world into military blocs and advocated the simultaneous dissolution of WTO and NATO.

The German Democratic Republic and the USSR in a joint communication of 2 April(9) gave the details of a visit to the USSR on 19 and 20 March by the German Democratic Republic Foreign Minister, and declared that the negotiations started at Geneva between the USSR and the United States could lead to reducing the threat of war.

An interview on international affairs with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, General Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the USSR, published on 8 April in Pravda (USSR), was transmitted by the USSR on 17 April,(10) while extracts from a statement also relating to foreign policy made by Mr. Gorbachev at Dnepropetrovsk, USSR, on 26 June were forwarded on 4 July. (11) In the interview, Mr. Gorbachev declared that there were possibilities 'for improving Soviet-American relations and the international situation; at Dnepropetrovsk, he stated that the task of the Geneva negotiations was to halt the arms race.

Four communications concerned the fortieth anniversary of the end of the Second World War. Madagascar, in an 8 May message,(12) stressed the need to strengthen the United Nations. Czechoslovakia transmitted on 17 May(13) a joint statement made at the Economic and Social Council's May/June session by Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Viet Nam, declaring that in memory of those who gave their lives for peace, it was necessary to improve the international situation. On 20 May,(14) Mongolia forwarded a 17 May statement by the Central Committee of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party, declaring that Mongolia joined with the USSR in a resolve to prevent another war. The USSR conveyed on 9 May(15) an address from the Central Committee of the Communist Party, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet and the Council of Ministers of the USSR appealing to peoples, parliaments and Governments to bar the way to another war.

On 19 July,(16) the USSR transmitted a message of greeting to the twenty-first session of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 18-20 July) in which it wished success to those participating, in the interests of peace and international security.

Other 1985 letters received under this subject heading dealt with disarmament (see p. 14) or specific situations, such as: Afghanistan, Angola-South Africa dispute, Central America, China-Viet Nam, Ethiopia-Somalia, Iran-Iraq, Kampuchea and Lao People's Democratic Republic-Thailand (see SUBJECT INDEX).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the First Committee, adopted resolution 40/158 by recorded vote.

Review of the implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Review of the implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security",

Taking note of the fifteenth anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security and the important role it has played in international life in strengthening and consolidating peace and security, as well as promoting co-operation among States on the basis of the purposes and principles of the United Nations,

Noting with concern that the provisions of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security have not been fully implemented,

Noting further with concern that the United Nations system of collective security has not been used effectively,

Recalling the duty of States not to intervene in the internal or external affairs of any State, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Bearing in mind the provisions of the Declaration on the Inadmissibility of Intervention and Interference in the Internal Affairs of States,

Recalling the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, Concerned by the continued escalation of tension in the world, accompanied by the policy of competition for spheres of influence, domination and exploitation in more and more parts of the world, the escalation to new levels of the arms race, particularly in nuclear weapons, and the danger of its extension into outer space, all of which pose a grave threat to global peace and security,

Profoundly disturbed by the increasing recourse to the use or threat of use of force, military intervention and interference, aggression and foreign occupation, by the aggravation of existing crises in the world, by the continued infringement of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of countries, by the denial of the right to self-determination of peoples under colonial and foreign occupation and by attempts to characterize erroneously the struggles of peoples for independence and human dignity as falling within the context of East-West confrontation, thus denying them the right to self-determination, to decide their own destiny and realize their legitimate aspirations, by the persistence of colonialism, racism and apartheid supported by the growing use of military force, by the intensification and expansion of the scope and frequency of manoeuvres and other military activities conceived within the context of big-Power confrontation and used as means of pressure, threat and destabilization, and by the lack of solutions to the world economic crisis 'in which the deeper underlying problems of a structural nature have been compounded by cyclical factors and which has further aggravated the inequalities and injustices in international economic relations,

Aware of the increasing interdependence among nations and of the fact that in the present-day world there is no alternative to a policy of peaceful coexistence, detente and co-operation among States on the basis of equality, irrespective of their economic or military power, political and social systems or size and geographic location,

Reaffirming the role of the United Nations as an indispensable forum for negotiations and reaching agreements on measures to promote and strengthen international peace and security,

Stressing the need for the main organs of the United Nations responsible for the maintenance of peace and security, particularly the Security Council, to contribute more effectively to the promotion of international peace and security by seeking solutions to unresolved problems and crises in the world,

Expressing its satisfaction with the resolute support for the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, which have proved to be of universal validity, and for the ideals of the United Nations, expressed in the context of the commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the Organization with the participation of a large number of heads of States or Government,

1. Reaffirms the validity of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security and calls upon all States to contribute effectively to its implementation;

2. Urges once again all States to abide strictly, in their international relations, by their commitment to the Charter of the United Nations and, to this end:

(a) To refrain from the use or threat of use of force, intervention, interference, aggression, foreign occupation and colonial domination or measures of political and economic coercion which violate the sovereignty, territorial integrity, independence and security of other States as well as the permanent sovereignty of peoples over their natural resources;

(b) To refrain from supporting or encouraging any such act for any reason whatsoever and to reject and refuse recognition of situations brought about by any such act;

3. Calls upon all States, in particular the nuclear-weapon States and other militarily significant States, to take immediate steps aimed at:

(a) Promoting and using effectively the system of collective security as envisaged in the Charter;

(b) Halting effectively the arms race and achieving general and complete disarmament under effective international control and, to this end, to start serious, meaningful and effective negotiations with a view to implementing the recommendations and decisions contained in the Final Document of the Tenth Special Session of the General Assembly, and to fulfilling the priority tasks listed in the Programme of Action set forth in section III of the Final Document;

4. Invites all States, in particular the major military Powers and States members of military alliances, to refrain, especially in critical situations and in crisis areas, from actions, including military activities and manoeuvres, conceived within the context of big-Power confrontation and used as a means of pressure on, threat to and destabilization of other States and regions;

5. Expresses its conviction that the gradual military disengagement of the great Powers and their military alliances from various parts of the world should be promoted;

6. Urges all States, in particular the permanent members of the Security Council, to take all necessary measures to prevent the further deterioration of the international situation and, to this end:

(a) To seek, through more effective utilization of the means provided for in the Charter, the peaceful settlement of disputes and the elimination of the focal points of crisis and tension which constitute a threat to international peace and security;

(b) To proceed without delay to a global consideration of ways and means for bringing about a revival of the world economy and for the restructuring of international economic relations within the framework of the global negotiations with a view to establishing the new international economic order;

(c) To accelerate the economic development of developing countries, particularly the least developed ones;

(d) To implement urgently measures agreed upon to ameliorate the critical economic situation in Africa which is the result, inter alia, of persistent inclement climatic factors;

7. Emphasises the role that the United Nations has in the maintenance of peace and security and in economic and social development and progress for the benefit of all mankind;

8. Calls upon all States, taking into account the views expressed at 'the commemorative session of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, to promote the role of the General Assembly and the Secretary-General in the strengthening of international security, in accordance with the Charter;

9. Stresses that there is an urgent need to enhance the effectiveness of the Security Council in discharging its principal role of maintaining international peace and security and, to that end, emphasizes the need to examine mechanisms and working methods on a continued basis in order to enhance the authority and enforcement capacity of the Council, in accordance with the Charter;

10. Emphasizes that the Security Council should consider holding periodic meetings in specific cases to consider and review outstanding problems and crises, thus enabling the Council to play a more active role in preventing conflicts;

11. Reiterates the need for the Security Council, in particular its permanent members, to ensure the effective implementation of its decisions in compliance with the relevant provisions of the Charter;

12. Considers that respect for and promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms in their civil, political, economic, social and cultural aspects, on the one hand, and the strengthening of international peace and security, on the other, mutually reinforce each other;

13. Reaffirms the legitimacy of the struggle of peoples under colonial domination, foreign occupation or racist regimes and their inalienable right to self-determination and independence, and urges Member States to increase their support for and solidarity with them and their national liberation movements and to take urgent and effective measures for the speedy completion of the implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples and for the final elimination of colonialism, racism and apartheid;

14. Calls upon all States, particularly the members of the Security Council, to take appropriate and effective measures to promote the fulfilment of the objective of the denuclearization of Africa in order to avert the serious danger which the nuclear capability of South Africa constitutes to the African States, in particular the front-line States, as well as to international peace and security;

15. Welcomes the continuation of the process within the framework of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe and expresses the hope that the Stockholm Conference on Confidence- and Security-building Measures and Disarmament in Europe, the continent with the greatest concentration of armaments and military forces, will achieve significant and positive results;

16. Reaffirms that the democratization of international relations is an imperative necessity enabling, under the conditions of interdependence, the full development and independence of all States as well as the attainment of genuine security, peace and co-operation in the world, and stresses its firm belief that the United Nations offers the best framework for the promotion of these goals;

17. Invites Member States to submit their views on the question of the implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security, and requests the Secretary-General to submit a report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the basis of the replies received;

18. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Review of the implementation of the Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security".

Approved by First Committee (A/40/1028) by recorded vote (102-0-25), 6 December (meeting 61): 21-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.88), orally revised; agenda item 72.

France abstained because the paragraph mentioning military disengagement dealt exclusively with the great Powers; it believed there were cases in which disengagement would be just as desirable where those Powers were not involved; also, the paragraphs concerning the roles of the Assembly and Security Council created thorny legal problems that should have been studied more carefully.

The United States felt that the text strayed into contentious regional issues, took positions prejudicing the outcome of negotiations, and blamed the deterioration of the international security climate exclusively on the super-Powers, ignoring other conflicts; noting that the text favoured the gradual military disengagement of those Powers from various parts of the world, it said it interpreted the language as calling again for withdrawal of the 118,000 USSR troops currently occupying Afghanistan.

Implementation of the security provisions of the UN Charter

Pursuant to a 1984 Assembly resolution,(1) the Secretary-General reported in August 1985(2) that five Member States had replied to his request for comments on implementing the collective security provisions of the United Nations Charter.

In accordance with the same resolution, the Assembly President consulted the Chairmen of the regional groups on the constitution of the Ad Hoc Committee on the subject, to be set up under a 1983 Assembly resolution.(3) However, differing views as to the distribution of seats prevented establishment of the Committee, the Secretary-General stated.(2)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1985, on the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/159 by recorded vote.

Implementation of the collective security provisions of the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security
The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 37/119 of 16 December 1982, 38/191 of 20 December 1983 and 39/158 of 17 December 1984 on the implementation of the collective security provisions of the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Reaffirming that the primary function of the United Nations, in particular through the Security Council, is the maintenance of international peace and security,

Stressing that the purposes of the United Nations can be achieved only under conditions in which States comply fully with their obligations assumed under the Charter,

Alarmed over the growing tendency of States to resort to the use of force, intervention and interference in the internal affairs of States, thus ignoring the Charter and the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Concerned that the Security Council has not always been able to take decisive action for the maintenance of international peace and for resolving international problems,

Recognizing that fundamental approaches to genuine security include, inter alia, the strengthening of the Charter system of collective security,

Conscious of the important role with which the Security Council is entrusted in enhancing the collective security provisions of the Charter for the promotion of peace and security in the world in accordance with the Charter,

Regretting that the provisions of the Charter relating to collective security measures have not been fully implemented,

Taking into account, in this connection, the reports of the Secretary-General on the work of the Organization to the General Assembly at its thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth, thirty-ninth and fortieth sessions,

Also taking into account the statement by the President of the Security Council at the commemorative session of the Council on 26 September 1985,

Recalling the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries, held at Luanda from 4 to 7 September 1985,

Also recalling the views of the Governments of the five Nordic countries on the strengthening of the United Nations,

Taking note of the note by the Secretary-General on the implementation of the collective security provisions of the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Having considered the item entitled, "Implementation of the collective security provisions of the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security",

1. Regrets that the Ad Hoc Committee on the Implementation of the Collective Security Provisions of the Charter of the United Nations which the General Assembly, by its resolution 38/191, decided to establish for the purpose of exploring ways and means of implementing the said provisions has not been constituted;

2. Requests the President of the General Assembly, as a matter of urgency, to appoint fifty-four Member States and on the basis of consultation already conducted to constitute the membership of the Ad Hoc Committee on the basis of equitable geographical representation and including the permanent members of the Security Council;

3. Requests the Secretary-General urgently to invite those Member States that have not yet done so to communicate to him not later than 30 April 1986 their views and comments on the matter and to transmit those views and comments to the Ad Hoc Committee as soon as possible;

4. Requests the Ad Hoc Committee, in considering the matter, to take due account of the views and comments of Member States, including their recommendations, and to submit a progress report to the Security Council for its consideration and comments and to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, and a final report to the Assembly at its forty-second session;

5. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Implementation of the collective security provisions of the Charter of the United Nations for the maintenance of international peace and security".

The USSR declared that in its provisions calling for the constitution of the Ad Hoc Committee, the text ran counter to the United Nations Charter, under which collective security questions fell within the purview of the Security Council.

The United States opposed establishing a committee to perform activities already provided for in the mandate of the Special Committee on the Charter of the United Nations and on the Strengthening of the Role of the Organization, whose progress could only be dangerously complicated by institutional duplication; expenditure of funds for that purpose was neither wise nor necessary.

The responsibility of the Council for maintaining international peace and security and its operations was the subject of a statement made by its President on its behalf at a 26 September Council meeting commemorating the United Nations fortieth anniversary (see Chapter XI of this section).

Settling disputes through negotiations

Under a new agenda item, requested by Romania on 6 September 1985,(1) the General Assembly solemnly appealed to States in conflict to end armed action and settle their disputes peacefully and through negotiations. Annexed to Romania's request was a draft which became the basis for the resolution adopted by the Assembly.

Meanwhile, work continued on legal measures for the peaceful settlement of disputes and on the non-use of force in international relations (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter II).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 8 November, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/9 without vote.

Solemn appeal to States in conflict to cease armed action forthwith and to settle disputes between them through negotiations, and to States Members of the United Nations to undertake to solve situations of tension and conflict and existing disputes by political means and to refrain from the threat or use of force and from any intervention in the internal affairs of other States

The General Assembly,

Deeply concerned at the persistence of armed conflicts, acts of aggression and situations of tension in different parts of the world, at the emergence of new sources of conflict and tension in international life and at the danger to the independence and security of States and to international peace and security posed by the threat or use of force in relations between States,

Convinced that all States should exert the utmost efforts to settle any conflict or dispute between them exclusively by peaceful means and that resorting to the threat or use of force against other States can only aggravate the international situation and make more difficult the solution of problems,

Considering that it is in the interest both of States involved in conflict and other States, and of the general cause of world peace and security, to put an end to armed conflicts and to encourage and assist the solution of problems through peaceful means,

Solemnly reaffirming, on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, the resolute commitment of Member States to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the obligations which they assumed as Members of the Organization, in particular their commitment to refrain in international relations from the threat or use of force against the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of any other State,

Reaffirming that all States shall settle their international disputes by peaceful means in such a manner that international peace and security, and justice, are not endangered,

Recalling the inherent right of all States to individual or collective self-defence, as enshrined in Article 51 of the Charter,

Reaffirming the Manila Declaration on the Peaceful Settlement of International Disputes, approved by the General Assembly in its resolution 37/10 by 15 November 1982,

Considering that the question of the peaceful settlement of disputes should constitute a central concern of all States and of the United Nations,

1. Addresses a solemn appeal to States in conflict to put an end to armed action forthwith and to proceed to the settlement of their disputes by negotiations and other peaceful means;

2. Calls upon all States to comply fully and consistently with the obligations they have assumed, in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, to resolve conflicts and disputes by peaceful means and to refrain from the threat or use of force and from any intervention in the internal affairs of other States;

3. Invites the Security Council, which has the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security, to act promptly in accordance with its functions under the Charter, in cases of conflict and dispute in different regions of the world, by recommending appropriate procedures or methods of adjustment, including designation of representatives of the United Nations, with a view to settling disputes between States by peaceful means, eliminating situations of tension and conflict, and establishing relations based on understanding, co-operation and peace among all the States of the world;

4. Reaffirms the important role as conferred by the Charter on the General Assembly in the areas of the peaceful settlement of disputes and the maintenance of international peace and security;

5. Encourages the Secretary-General to play an active role within the scope of his functions under the Charter with a view to promoting efforts for the peaceful settlement of disputes and conflicts between States;

6. Calls upon Member States to make full use, in accordance with the Charter, of the framework provided by the United Nations for the peaceful settlement of disputes and international problems;

7. Appeals to Member States to act resolutely, in view of the purposes and principles of the Charter and in accordance with their duties as Members, in order that the Organization may harmonize the combined efforts of States aimed at strengthening world peace and security, solving the major issues confronting humanity and ensuring conditions for the free and independent development of all peoples.

General Assembly resolution 40/9

8 November 1985 Meeting 69 Adopted without vote

Draft by Romania (A/40/L.12); agenda item 146.

Iran felt that political realism should have led to a solemn appeal acknowledging that there was a link between justice and peace; it supported the principle of peaceful settlement of disputes, but maintained that the concept made no sense after aggression had been launched.

International Year of Peace (1986)

At the conclusion of its special commemorative session on the United Nations fortieth anniversary (see Chapter XI of this section), the General Assembly on 24 October 1985—United Nations Day—proclaimed 1986 as the International Year of Peace (IYP).

Preparations for IYP, which was first declared by the Assembly in 1982,(1) continued throughout 1985. On 11 November, the Assembly adopted a programme for the Year.

Reports of the Secretary-General. Responding to a 1984 Assembly request,(2) the Secretary-General in August 1985(3) gave details of four regional seminars held to promote IYP objectives: African region (8-14 January 1985, Addis Ababa); Latin America and Caribbean region (25 February-5 March, New York); European region (6-10 May, Vienna, Austria); and Asia and the Pacific and Western Asia regions (20-24 May, Bangkok, Thailand). Participants included experts designated by 95 Member States and two non-member States as well as representatives of 20 United Nations organizations and of 76 non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Secretary-General pointed out that a consensus had emerged at each seminar on the adoption of a final statement; participants at all seminars had called for effective measures to stop the arms race, particularly the nuclear arms race, recognized the importance of preparing for life in peace, agreed that international economic co-operation was essential for the achievement of peace, and declared that IYP could contribute to peace-building on a truly global basis.

In September and November,(4) the Secretary-General summarized the preparations and outlined the draft programme for observance of IYP. As at 5 November, 29 States had responded to his request for comments, information and proposals. A pledging conference had taken place (1 March, New York), attended by 49 Member States. As at 31 December 1985, pledges totalled $334,457. The Secretary-General concluded that IYP provided a basis for renewed efforts to promote peace and that the potential of the United Nations must be fully utilized to resolve problems inhibiting the co-operation needed for the betterment of the human condition. A draft programme for the Year, including guidelines for activities and a calendar of events, and a list of 252 organizations that had expressed interest in the programme, were annexed to the report.

Planned activities of the United Nations system in 1986 included a meeting of the heads of all organizations at the first regular session of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination (ACC) in April; preparation of special bulletins, articles and reports; holding special meetings, seminars and lectures; organizing research projects, studies, international exhibits and competitions; presentation of awards to organizations and institutions making significant contributions to the observance of IYP; and issuing a peace medal. NGOs were to hold a conference, "Together for Peace", at Geneva from 20 to 24 January 1986.

Communications. A number of communications were received during 1985 regarding IYP. The majority also dealt with the observance of 1985 as the Year of the United Nations, as decided by the Assembly in 1984(5) in connection with the fortieth anniversary of the Organization (see Chapter XI of this section).

The USSR, on 27 March,(6) named the members of a commission established for both the Year of the United Nations and IYP, and on 5 April,(7) described the activities planned in observance of the Years.

The composition of similar bodies and activities for both Years were outlined by Mongolia on 26 April,(8) 3 June(9) and 30 August;(10) by the Byelorussian SSR on 26 April(11) and 3 May;(12) by Afghanistan on 9 May,(13) 11 September(14) and 23 December;(15) by Hungary on 30 May;(16) by the Ukrainian SSR on 5 June;(17) by the German

Democratic Republic on 12 June;(18) and by Czechoslovakia on 20 June.(19)

China, on 10 June,(20) listed the members of its committee for IYP, and Democratic Yemen, on 15 November,(21) detailed the formation of a similar body.

Other communications received in connection with IYP also dealt with other topics. They included letters from: the German Democratic Republic(22) and the Philippines(23) on the fortieth anniversary of the signing of the Charter; the Federal Republic of Germany,(24) transmitting a political declaration by seven Western nations on the fortieth anniversary of the end of the Second World War; and Poland(25) on the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations.

ACC consideration. ACC reported(26) that from May 1984 to April 1985 the IYP secretariat had maintained contact with all organizations of the United Nations system, and that at the second regular session of 1984 of the ACC Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Programme Matters), agency representatives had confirmed their support for the Year.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In 1985, the General Assembly adopted two resolutions on IYP.

On 24 October, it adopted resolution 40/3 without vote.

International Year of Peace

The General Assembly,

Recalling resolution 37/16 of 16 November 1982, in which it declared 1986 to be the International Year of Peace.

Considering that efforts and activities to achieve positive results in international co-operation for the promotion of peace must be intensified during the Year and for ever,

1. Approves the Proclamation of the International Year of Peace, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution;

Chapter V

Africa

The United Nations considered in 1985 a number of political questions concerning Africa, and, as in previous years, focused on South Africa's apartheid policies and its aggression against neighbouring States.

In regard to apartheid, the General Assembly adopted nine resolutions and, as the situation in South Africa deteriorated rapidly, repeatedly condemned that Government's mass arrests and violence against defenceless people, as did the Security Council in two resolutions.

Of special note in 1985 was the Assembly's adoption of the International Convention against Apartheid in Sports, preparations for which had begun in 1976.

In addition to the Assembly and the Council, the Special Committee against Apartheid, the United Nations Council for Namibia, the Special Committee on the Situation with regard to the Implementation of the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples (Committee on colonial countries), the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission on Transnational Corporations were the main bodies concerned with apartheid and the related issue of South Africa's relations with its neighbours. On several occasions, those bodies condemned South Africa's aggression against the so-called front-line States.

Following repeated South African aggression against and continued occupation of Angola during 1985, the Security Council adopted four resolutions condemning that action—in June, September, October and December. The Council also sent an investigative commission to Angola to assess the damage resulting from South Africa's invasion. It adopted two resolutions concerning Botswana's complaint that South Africa had attacked the capital city of Gaborone. In June, it condemned the attack and decided to send a Secretariat mission to assess the damage and make proposals on assistance; it endorsed the mission's report in September.

After Lesotho complained of aggression by South Africa, the Council in December condemned the violence and requested the Secretary-General to establish a civilian presence in Maseru to report any further development affecting the territorial integrity of Lesotho. Mozambique also complained of aggression by South Africa.

In January, the Council met at the request of Chad, which said that the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya was attempting to overthrow its Government, a charge the Jamahiriya denied. In September, Somalia complained that Ethiopia was occupying part of its territory, but Ethiopia replied that Somalia's problems were due to an internal conflict.

The Assembly reaffirmed the sovereignty of the Comoros over the Indian Ocean island of Mayotte, appealed for contributions to the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa which provided scholarships for students from the region, and called for continued co-operation with the Organization of African Unity.

South Africa and apartheid

Apartheid—South Africa's enforced system of racial separation—remained a major concern of the United Nations throughout 1985, with various bodies voicing particular concern about rising tensions, repression and violence in that country, as documented by the Special Committee against Apartheid.

On three occasions, the Security Council protested that repression as the situation deteriorated. On 12 March (resolution 560(1985)), it condemned the Pretoria régime for the killing of defenceless indigenous Africans protesting their forced removal from Crossroads township, near Cape Town, and other places, as well as for the arbitrary arrests of members of mass organizations opposed to apartheid. On 26 July (569(1985)), the Council condemned the mass arrests and detentions by South Africa and the murders which had been committed, as well as the imposition of the state of emergency in 36 districts where blacks resided. It called on Member States to adopt certain measures against South Africa, including suspending all new investment there, restricting sports and cultural relations, prohibiting new nuclear co-operation, and banning sales of computer equipment that could be used by the military and police. In a 21 August statement, the Council, alarmed at the worsening situation of the black majority since the imposition of the state of emergency, condemned the continued killings and the arbitrary mass arrests and called for the freeing of all political prisoners and detainees.

Citing the policy of apartheid in South Africa as an extreme instance of racial discrimination, the Secretary-General urged that the ominous and violent situation be averted through contacts and timely action (see p. 10).

Expressing shock over the situation, the General Assembly, in addition to condemning South Africa's oppression and violence, called for its isolation. In the first of a series of nine resolutions on apartheid adopted on 10 December, it condemned certain States' collaboration with the apartheid regime (resolution 40/64 A) and reiterated its call for comprehensive mandatory sanctions, particularly regarding military and nuclear collaboration, an oil embargo, prohibiting loans and investment, and a trade ban; pending action by the Council, States were asked to take such action individually.

Condemning Israel's collaboration with South Africa, especially military and nuclear co-operation (40/64 E), the Assembly demanded that Israel desist and called on those in a position to do so to try to influence it in that regard. The Assembly decided to organize, in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, a World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa, in June 1986 (40/64 C).

The Assembly reaffirmed its support for South African national liberation movements as the people's authentic representatives (40/64 B) and appealed for increased support for them in their just struggle for self-determination. To avert further tension and conflict, the Assembly requested the Council to consider the situation emanating from the imposition of the so-called new constitution and the state of emergency, demanding the latter's immediate lifting. It condemned the Pretoria regime for the killing of defenceless people protesting their forced removal from their homes as well as the arbitrary arrests of members of opposition organizations; it demanded that South Africa drop trumped-up charges and release those members, as well as all political prisoners and detainees. The Assembly again condemned the authorities for the killings, arbitrary arrests and detention of those opposing apartheid and demanded the immediate abrogation of discriminatory laws (40/64 I). It encouraged the Committee against Apartheid and the Secretariat's Centre against Apartheid to inform world public opinion of the South African situation; requested the United Nations system to disseminate information on the evils of apartheid, and appealed to others to join in the effort; and called for intensification of the international campaign for the release of political prisoners (40/64 D).

The Assembly also endorsed the recommendations of the Committee against Apartheid relating to its work programme (40/64 F) and adopted and opened for signature the International Convention against Apartheid in Sports (40/64 G).

It appealed for contributions to the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa and for direct contributions to the voluntary agencies assisting apartheid victims in South Africa and Namibia (40/64 H).

The Security Council issued two Statements—on 20 August and 17 October—urging South Africa to rescind the death sentence imposed on Malesela Benjamin Maloise, a member of the African National Congress of South Africa. The Assembly condemned his execution, carried out on 18 October (40/64 B).

As part of its attempt to isolate South Africa, the United Nations continued trying to reduce the activities of transnational corporations (TNCs) in that country. In September and October, public hearings on TNCs in South Africa and Namibia were held by an 11-member panel appointed by the Secretary-General which made recommendations on further limiting TNC activities, particularly in the military and nuclear fields, on monitoring those activities and on employment practices for TNCs remaining in the region. The Economic and Social Council welcomed the actions of certain home countries of TNCs to restrict further investments in and loans to South Africa (resolution 1985/72). Aspects of apartheid were considered also by the Commission on Human Rights, the Council for Namibia, the Committee on colonial countries and the Commission on TNCs.

General aspects

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid, in its annual report to the General Assembly and the Security Council adopted unanimously on 7 October,(1) described the situation in South Africa and the Committee's activities to intensify the international campaign against apartheid. The report, which included recommendations for further action and outlined the Committee's future work, covered the 12-month period beginning in October 1984; October-December 1985 was covered by its 1986 report.(2) The Committee proposed international action to eliminate apartheid, called for economic and trade sanctions and boycotts against South Africa and an end to military and nuclear relations, and urged the banning of foreign investment there and loans to Pretoria. The Committee also issued four special reports in 1985: on implementing the arms embargo against South Africa;(3) on developments concerning Israel-South Africa relations;(4) on further action to inform world public opinion and encourage public action in support of the oppressed people of South Africa;(5) and on international action to eliminate apartheid.(6) (For details on these subjects, see below, under relevant subject headings.)

According to the Committee, 1985 was marked by increased repression characterized by mass detentions, arrests and the banning of mass gatherings. Following increased opposition to the "constitution" put into effect by South Africa in 1948,(7) the regime on 21 July 1985 imposed a state of emergency on 36 magisterial districts where blacks lived, thereby empowering security forces to search homes without warrants, detain persons and declare curfews.

The Committee expanded its activities regarding consultations with Governments and organizations, dissemination of information on the situation in South Africa and the region, promotion of boycotts of South Africa, support for the liberation of political prisoners, and encouragement of artists, writers, sportspersons, religious leaders and others contributing to the campaign against apartheid. In the Committee's view, the effectiveness of the United Nations had been undermined by a minority of Governments that had failed to implement sanctions against South Africa as called for by the Assembly, and, in many cases, had increased their economic relations with that country. The Committee's purpose was to promote efforts to persuade those Governments, TNCs and others to desist from those policies.

The Committee urged States to denounce the manoeuvres of those who advocated so-called reforms by the apartheid regime or so-called power sharing or other arrangements that did not involve the total eradication of apartheid. Calling on the United Nations to affirm that no acceptable solution could be attained without the participation of the national liberation movements and apartheid opponents, it stated that South Africa's attempts to consult elements that had colluded in the implementation of apartheid should be denounced.

Noting the current grave situation, the Committee intended to intensify its activities in accordance with its mandate and to give particular attention to consultations with Governments and organizations in order to promote international support of the legitimate struggle of the South African people for a non-racial society, to promote assistance to the oppressed people and their national liberation movements and to increase public awareness of the situation.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. On 26 February,(8) the Commission on Human Rights reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa and its national liberation movements by all available means, including armed struggle, for the elimination of the apartheid system and the exercise of the right of self-determination. The Commission urged States to provide moral and material assistance to the oppressed people of South Africa and Namibia.

On the same day,(9) the Commission reaffirmed the inalienable right of those people to self-determination, independence and enjoyment of the natural resources of their territories, as well as their right to dispose of the resources for their greater well-being and to obtain just reparation for their exploitation.

Communications. During the year, the following countries addressed letters to the Secretary-General, or forwarded messages from organizations, expressing their opposition to apartheid: Indonesia, on 1 May, transmitting the Declaration of the Commemorative Meeting in Observance of the Thirtieth Anniversary of the Asian-African Conference (Bandung, 24 and 25 April);(10) Madagascar, on 13 May;(11) Morocco, on 19 August, transmitting the final communiqué of an extraordinary Summit Conference of Arab States (Casablanca, 7-9 August);(12) the USSR, on 28 and 30 August;(13) Viet Nam, on 30 August;(14) Cuba, on 3 September;(15) Israel, on 4 September;(16) Canada, on 17 September;(17) the Ukrainian SSR, on 17 September;(18) the Byelorussian SSR, on 1 October;(19) Brazil, on 11 October;(20) Yemen, on 15 October, forwarding the communiqué of a co-ordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 9 October);(21) Togo, on 14 October, transmitting the Declaration and Programme of Action of the Ministerial Regional Conference on Security, Disarmament and Development in Africa (Lomé, 13-16 August);(22) Canada, on 15 October, forwarding the resolutions adopted by the seventy-fourth Inter-Parliamentary Conference (Ottawa, 2-7 September);(23) the Bahamas, on 28 October, forwarding the communiqué adopted by heads of Government of Commonwealth States (Nassau, 16-22 October);(24) Democratic Yemen, on 1 November;(25) and Egypt, on 4 December, forwarding the resolutions adopted by the Conference of African Ministers of Information at its first extraordinary session (Cairo, 23-25 November).(26)

In those letters, the African Information Ministers, the Asian-African Conference, the Inter-Parliamentary Conference, the Islamic Conference, the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR called for the adoption of mandatory sanctions against South Africa. The Islamic Conference, the Byelorussian SSR, Canada, Cuba, the USSR and Viet Nam denounced the increased repression against protesters, and the Commonwealth States, the Byelorussian SSR and the USSR demanded an end to the state of emergency. Israel called for an end to the apartheid system. The African Information Ministers, the Commonwealth States, the Inter-Parliamentary Conference, Canada and the USSR demanded freedom for political prisoners. Among those condemning the United States policy of "constructive engagement" with Pretoria were the Inter-Parliamentary Conference, the Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR. The Asian-African Conference, the Byelorussian SSR, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR expressed support for the struggle of the national liberation movements.

Canada listed steps it had taken to foster peaceful change in South Africa, including a halt to all official support for trade and investment there. Brazil stressed that the participation of the leaders imprisoned by the regime was indispensable in negotiating a solution to the plight of the South African majority.

According to the African security conference, South Africa's policies were a leading cause for insecurity, aggression, economic destabilization and an arms race in Africa, and the collaboration between South Africa, Israel and some Western Powers in the development of the South African nuclear-weapon capability worsened the explosive situation in the region. The Commonwealth States called for further economic measures, such as a ban on all government loans to the South African Government, a ban on the sale of computer equipment capable of use by its forces, a halt on the export of nuclear technology to South Africa, and embargoes on oil and on all military co-operation.

Algeria and Burkina Faso stated that they would not participate in the commemoration of the United Nations fortieth anniversary since the South West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) had been excluded (see p. 403).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted nine resolutions on the apartheid policies of South Africa. Two of these dealt with the broader aspects-resolution 40/64 A on sanctions and resolution 40/64 I on international action to eliminate apartheid. Both were adopted by recorded vote.

Comprehensive sanctions against the racist régime of South Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling and reaffirming its resolution 39/72 A of 13 December 1984,

Recalling its relevant resolutions and those of the Security Council calling for concerted international action to force the racist regime to start eliminating apartheid by putting an immediate end to repressive practices against the black majority, releasing all political prisoners, abrogating all racist laws and regulations, dismantling bantustans and finding a political solution to the crisis in South Africa through the full participation of the black majority in determining their future,

Taking note of the declarations adopted at the following meetings organized by the Special Committee against Apartheid:

(a) The special session of the Committee in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Sharpeville massacre, held at Headquarters on 22 March 1985,

(b) The International Conference on Women and Children under Apartheid, held at Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania, from 7 to 10 May 1985.

(c) The International Conference on sports Boycott against South Africa, held in Paris from 16 to 18 May 1985,

(d) The International Seminar on Racist Ideologies, Attitudes and Organizations Hindering Efforts for the Elimination of Apartheid and on Means to Combat Them, held at Siofok, Hungary, from 9 to 11 September 1985,

Gravely concerned about the breaches of peace and the threat to international peace and security resulting from the escalation of violence against the oppressed people of South Africa by the apartheid régime, its acts of aggression against neighbouring African independent States and its continued occupation of Namibia,

Deeply shocked by the policy of extermination carried out by the racist régime towards the black civilian population of South Africa,

Reaffirming that apartheid is a crime against humanity, which should be eliminated without any further delay, and that the United Nations has a primary responsibility to assist in efforts to eliminate this threat to international peace and security,

Reaffirming its support to the struggle of the people of South Africa for the exercise of their right to self-determination and for the establishment of a democratic, united and non-racial South Africa where all the people participate freely to determine their destiny,

Reaffirming its conviction that comprehensive and mandatory sanctions imposed by the Security Council under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, universally applied, would be the most appropriate and effective and peaceful means by which the international community can assist the legitimate struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa and discharge its responsibilities for the maintenance of international peace and security,

Considering that political, economic, military, cultural and other forms of collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa bolster the régime in its attempt to break its international isolation, thus encouraging it to persist in its defiance of the world public opinion and to escalate its repression, aggression and destabilization,

Considering also that collaboration with the racist régime of South Africa, in particular in the political, economic, military and cultural fields, displays an utter insensitivity towards the prolonged suffering of the oppressed people of South Africa resulting from the criminal acts and policies of the racist regime of South Africa,

Expressing its grave concern at the continued violation of the arms embargo as well as nuclear collaboration by certain Western States and Israel with the racist regime of South Africa,

Deploping the attitude of those Western permanent members of the Security Council that have so far prevented the Council from adopting comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter,

Commending the Secretary-General for his efforts to ensure concerted action against apartheid by organizations within the United Nations system,

Taking note with appreciation of the resolution adopted on 27 September 1985 by the General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency on South Africa's nuclear capability,

Expressing its appreciation to Governments that have adopted measures and policies against collaboration with the apartheid régime of South Africa,

Welcoming action taken by legislators, municipalities and other government institutions as well as universities, churches, labour unions, student and women's groups and anti-apartheid movements to divest from corporations and financial institutions that are collaborating with South Africa,

Commending the decisions of those banks, financial institutions and other corporations that have withdrawn from South Africa and decided not to extend any loans or credits to it,

Urging Member States that have not yet done so to adopt legislative and other measures to ensure the total isolation of the racist régime of South Africa in political, military, nuclear, economic, cultural and other fields,

Commending athletes, entertainers and others who have demonstrated solidarity with the oppressed people of South Africa by complying with the boycotts of South Africa,

1. Endorses the report of the Special Committee against Apartheid;

2. Commends to the attention of all Governments and organizations the declarations adopted at the conferences and seminars organized or co-sponsored by the Special Committee;

3. Strongly condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its brutal oppression, repression and violence against the people of South Africa, its illegal occupation of Namibia and its repeated acts of aggression, subversion, terrorism and destabilization against independent African States;

4. Condemns the policies of "constructive engagement" and active collaboration with the apartheid régime followed by the Governments of certain Western and other States which give encouragement to the racist régime in its repression of the people's legitimate struggle, aggression against neighbouring States and defiance of the decisions and resolutions of the United Nations, and appeals to those Governments to abandon such policies and join in the concerted efforts to bring a speedy end to apartheid,

5. Condemns the activities of those transnational corporations and financial institutions that have continued political, economic, military and nuclear collaboration with the racist minority régime of South Africa ignoring repeated appeals by the General Assembly;

6. Again declares that it is the responsibility of the United Nations and the international community as a whole to assist the people of South Africa in eliminating apartheid through cessation of any form of collaboration with the régime;

7. Again calls upon the Security Council urgently to take action under Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations with a view to applying comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa and, in particular:

(a) To review the implementation of and to re-enforce the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa adopted by its resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977;

(b) To strengthen the voluntary embargo on the imports of arms from South Africa adopted by its resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984 by rendering it mandatory and extending it to cover the imports of related materials in addition to arms and ammunitions;

(c) To prohibit all co-operation with South Africa, particularly in the military and nuclear fields, by Governments, corporations, institutions and individuals;

(d) To impose a total ban on all forms of nuclear collaboration with South Africa, including effective embargoes on the imports of South African and Namibian uranium and on the export and supply of nuclear material, equipment or technology to South Africa;

(e) To impose an effective embargo on the supply of oil and oil products to South Africa and on all assistance to the oil industry in South Africa, particularly to the oil from coal industry;

(f) To prohibit financial loans and credits to and investment in South Africa;

(g) To ban all trade with South Africa;

8. Requests all States, individually and collectively, to take all appropriate measures to facilitate such action by the Security Council;

9. Requests all States that have not yet done so, pending action by the Security Council, to adopt legislative and/or other comparable measures to ensure the following:

(a) Strict implementation of the arms embargo against South Africa, including the prohibition of imports of arms from South Africa and the enactment of appropriate legislation to ensure such a ban;

(b) Prohibition of any form of collaboration with South Africa in the military and nuclear fields;

(c) Effective implementation of a ban on all trade with South Africa, in particular, the sale of krugerrands and the import of gold, uranium, coal and other minerals;

(d) Prohibition of the supply of oil and oil products to South Africa as well as technology to its oil industry;

(e) Prohibition of financial loans and investments as well as the withdrawal of investment in South Africa;

(f) Speedy accession to or ratification of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid,

(g) Observance of sports, cultural, academic, consumer, tourism and other boycotts of South Africa;

10. Requests all States concerned to take action against corporations and other interests that violate the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa and those that are involved in the illicit supply to South Africa of oil and oil products in spite of the embargo imposed on the supply of oil and oil products to South Africa, as well as those who persist in collaboration with the apartheid régime;

11. Calls upon States and organizations to support United Nations action for total isolation of the apartheid régime of South Africa and to co-operate with the Special Committee against Apartheid for the achievement of this goal;

12. Calls upon all organizations within the United Nations system as well as other international organizations that have not yet done so to exclude forthwith the South African régime from their membership;

13. Calls upon the Economic Commission for Europe to discontinue all contacts with the racist régime of South Africa and to terminate all co-operation with it;

14. Calls once again upon the International Monetary Fund urgently to terminate credit and other assistance to the racist régime of South Africa;

15. Calls upon all organizations within the United Nations system to take all necessary measures:

(a) To withhold any facilities from or investments of any funds in banks, financial institutions and corporations that are doing business with South Africa;

(b) To refrain from purchasing directly or indirectly products of South African origin;

(c) To deny any contracts or facilities to corporations collaborating with South Africa and not to invest any money in them;

(d) To prohibit any official travel by South African Airways or South African shipping lines;

16. Strongly supports the movement against conscription into the armed forces of the racist régime of South Africa;

17. Invites all Governments and organizations to assist, in consultation with the liberation movements, persons genuinely compelled to leave South Africa because of their objection on the ground of conscience to serving in the military or police force of the apartheid régime;

18. Further commends anti-apartheid movements, religious bodies, trade unions, student and women's organizations and other groups engaged in campaigns for the isolation of the apartheid régime and for assistance to the South African liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity;

19. Requests and authorises the Special Committee against Apartheid to redouble its efforts and intensify its activities for the total isolation of the apartheid régime, for promoting comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa and for mobilizing public opinion and encouraging public action against collaboration with South Africa;

20. Further requests the Special Committee to keep the matter of collaboration between South Africa and Israel and between South Africa and any other State under constant review and to report to the General Assembly and the Security Council as appropriate.

Concerted international action for the elimination of apartheid

The General Assembly,

Alarmed by the further aggravation of the situation in South Africa caused by the policy of apartheid, and lately in particular by the imposition of the state of emergency,

Convinced that the root-cause of the grave situation in southern Africa is the policy of apartheid,

Noting with grave concern that in order to perpetuate apartheid in South Africa the authorities there have committed acts of aggression and breaches of the peace,

Convinced that only the total eradication of apartheid and the establishment of majority rule on the basis of the free and fair exercise of universal adult suffrage can lead to a peaceful and lasting solution in South Africa,

Noting that the so-called reforms in South Africa, including the so-called "new constitution", have the effect of further entrenching the apartheid system and further dividing the people of South Africa,

Recognizing that the policy of bantustanization deprives the majority of the people of their citizenship and makes them foreigners in their own country,

Recognising the responsibility of the United Nations and the international community to take all necessary action for the eradication of apartheid, and, in particular, the need for increased and effective pressure on the South African authorities as a peaceful means of achieving the abolition of apartheid,

Encouraged, in this context, by the growing international consensus to this end, as demonstrated by the adoption of Security Council resolution 569(1985) of 26 July 1985 and the increase in and expansion of national and regional measures,

Convinced of the vital importance of the strict observance of Security Council resolution 418(1977) of 4 November 1977, by which the Council instituted a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa, and Security Council resolution 558(1984) of 13 December 1984 concerning the import of arms, ammunition and military vehicles produced in South Africa, and of the need to make these embargoes fully effective,

Commending the decisions of oil-exporting countries that have declared it their policy not to sell and export oil to South Africa,

Considering that measures to ensure effective and scrupulous implementation of such embargoes through international co-operation are essential and urgent,

Noting with deep concern that, through a combination of military and economic pressures, in violation of international law, the South African authorities have sought to destabilize the front-line and other neighbouring States,

Considering that contacts between apartheid South Africa and the front-line and other neighbouring States, necessitated by geography, colonial legacy and other reasons, should not be used by other States as a pretext for legitimizing the apartheid system or justifying attempts to break the international isolation of that system,

Convinced that the existence of apartheid will continue to lead to ever-increasing resistance by the oppressed people, by all possible means, and increased tension and conflict that will have far-reaching consequences for southern Africa and the world,

Convinced that policies of collaboration with the apartheid régime, instead of respect for the legitimate aspirations of the genuine representatives of the great majority of the people, will encourage its repression and aggression against neighbouring States and defiance of the United Nations,

Expressing its full support for the legitimate aspiration of African States and peoples, and of the Organization of African Unity, for the total liberation of the continent of Africa from colonialism and racism,

1. Strongly condemns the policy of apartheid which deprives the majority of the South African population of their citizenship, fundamental freedoms and human rights, in particular the right to self-determination;

2. Strongly condemns the South African authorities for the killings, arbitrary mass arrests and the detention of members of mass organizations as well as individuals, the overwhelming majority of whom belong to the majority population, for opposing the apartheid system, the so-called "new constitution" and the state of emergency;

3. Further condemns the overt and the covert aggressive actions of South Africa directed at the destabilization of neighbouring States, and those aimed against refugees from South Africa and Namibia;

4. Demands that the South African authorities:

(a) Release immediately and unconditionally Nelson Mandela and all other political prisoners, detainees and restrictees;

(b) Immediately lift the state of emergency;

(c) Abrogate discriminatory laws and lift bans on all organizations, news media and individuals opposing apartheid;

(d) Grant freedom of association and full trade union rights to all workers of South Africa;

(e) Initiate without preconditions a political dialogue with genuine leaders of the majority population with a view to dismantling apartheid without delay and establishing a representative government;

(f) Dismantle the bantustan structures;

(g) Immediately withdraw all their troops from

The other seven resolutions in the series dealt with the situation in South Africa and assistance to liberation movements (40/64 B), the World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa (40/64 C), public information and public action against apartheid (40/64 D), relations between Israel and South Africa (40/64 E), the work programme of the Special Committee against Apartheid (40/64 F), the International Convention against Apartheid in Sports (40/64 G) and the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa (40/64 H) (see below, under relevant subject headings).

When the Assembly adopted the nine resolutions on apartheid, some States explained their votes on all of them, while others cited the individual texts.

In explaining their votes on the resolutions in general, several countries expressed opposition to arbitrary or selective singling out of Member States for criticism. Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg (speaking for the 10 European Community (EC) countries, Portugal and Spain), the Netherlands, Norway (speaking for the five Nordic countries) and Turkey voiced such opposition. Belgium, for example, felt that treatment of the issue must not be influenced by East-West confrontations. Turkey did not approve of express mention when it was difficult to make definitive determinations of respective responsibilities.

Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg (for the EC countries, Portugal and Spain), the Netherlands and Norway (for the Nordic countries) affirmed their preference for a peaceful solution to the South African situation or expressed reservations on provisions endorsing the use of force or armed struggle.

According to Austria, Luxembourg (for the EC countries, Portugal and Spain) and Norway (for the Nordic countries), imposing sanctions was the prerogative of the Security Council not the Assembly. They also upheld the principle of universal membership in the United Nations system.

In regard to the call for comprehensive mandatory sanctions, Canada, Ireland, the United Kingdom and the United States questioned the wisdom of taking such action at the current juncture. Ireland reiterated its preference for the imposition of carefully chosen, graduated, mandatory sanctions by the Council; Canada also called for sustained pressure. The United Kingdom considered that mandatory sanctions would probably delay the abolition of apartheid, and the United States doubted that sanctions could contribute to a peaceful resolution of apartheid. Luxembourg (for EC, Portugal and Spain) said channels of communication should remain open so that the outside world could pressure South Africa for a democratic society. Due to their geographic situation, Botswana and Lesotho could not support mandatory sanctions against South Africa. However, Botswana was prepared to suffer the consequences if in the end a new South Africa could be brought into being with a minimum of violence; Lesotho asserted that its stand should not be used as an excuse for inaction against apartheid.

Belgium, Israel and the Netherlands said they would have preferred consensus texts to demonstrate international support for the cause. According to Israel, only consensus could give the resolutions the moral and international support that the struggle against apartheid deserved. France and Portugal regretted some wording of the texts. For the Netherlands and Portugal, South Africa was not a decolonization issue; the Netherlands regarded the African National Congress of South Africa (ANC) and the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania (PAC) as anti-apartheid movements, not liberation movements.

As to the report of the Committee against Apartheid, Belgium and Luxembourg (for EC, Portugal and Spain) regretted its depiction of the steps taken by the EC members to pressure South Africa and to promote the rights of the South African majority. Luxembourg said Western European countries regretted that the report questioned their determination to contribute to the abolition of apartheid.

In regard to resolution 40/64 A, Costa Rica, Israel and Turkey disagreed with singling out individual countries or groups of countries. Israel said apartheid was too great an evil to be manipulated as a tool of hatred for Israel. Costa Rica also had difficulties with such references. In Turkey's view, the eleventh and twelfth preambular paragraphs and paragraph 4 had not been drafted in a balanced way. The United States said it made no apology for its constructive engagement policy, which it believed had contributed to the limited improvements in the lives of oppressed South Africans; on that basis, it also opposed resolution 40/64 I.

Ireland and the Netherlands preferred graduated, selective measures by the Security Council rather than South Africa's total isolation through comprehensive mandatory sanctions. Ireland would have been able to support many of the specific measures in paragraph 7, but doubted the wisdom of comprehensive sanctions at that point.

Some countries expressed reservations about the Committee's report as endorsed by the Assembly in paragraph 1. France regretted the arbitrary and systematic criticism of countries, particularly the EC members. Italy said the report failed to reflect adequately EC's efforts, and presented in a misleading manner the EC mission to Pretoria, which had led to the adoption at Luxembourg on 10 September of certain restrictive economic measures against South Africa (see p. 135). The Netherlands felt the report contained unwarranted criticism of a particular group of countries. The United Kingdom rejected the report's distortion and criticism of the policy of the EC members, of the Luxembourg measures, of the visit to South Africa by three European Foreign Ministers and of the EC code of conduct for businesses operating in South Africa.

New Zealand questioned the wisdom of excluding South Africa from all international organizations, and of asserting that every country with any relationship with South Africa was guilty of aiding human rights violations.

Several countries also had reservations about sanctions as proposed in resolution 40/64 I. Italy and the Netherlands said that such mandatory action was within the exclusive competence of the Security Council. France agreed, adding that its support for the resolution should not be interpreted as a questioning of that competence; moreover, the voluntary measures recommended in paragraph 7 did not necessarily cover national ones which France might take to pressure South Africa. The Netherlands could not endorse certain aspects of that paragraph, such as subparagraphs (a) and (e), but believed that collective international action to curtail investment in South Africa could contribute to increasing pressure on that Government; to be effective, such action must be based on a mandatory decision of the Council. For Italy, the paragraph did not take account of the negative effect that the measures could have on victims of apartheid and on neighbouring States. Canada rejected the premise that individual relations supported apartheid and did not interpret paragraph 9 as endorsing termination of all contacts, which might make change more difficult. Portugal had reservations on formulations such as those in paragraphs 5 and 7, and in particular paragraph 1, since it did not consider the problem to be one of decolonization.

Italy and the Netherlands welcomed the efforts of the resolution's drafters to avoid controversial elements and to gain as broad a base of support as possible.

The Assembly took related action in resolution 40/25, in which it reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of peoples for their liberation from apartheid by all means, including armed struggle. In resolution 40/28, the Assembly condemned apartheid in South Africa and Namibia as a crime against humanity and urged Member States to adopt political, economic and other measures in conformity with the resolutions of the Assembly, the Council and other United Nations bodies. The Assembly commended the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination for its endeavours towards eliminating discrimination and welcomed a Committee decision on apartheid (see p. 159).

In accordance with an Assembly decision that organizations and individuals having a special interest in the item on apartheid would, at their request, be heard by the Special Political Committee, the following addressed the Committee in October.(27)

Beyers Naudé, South African Council of Churches; Wendell Foster, Council of the City of New York; Beatrice von Roemer, International Confederation of Free Trade Unions; Reverend Noel Enuma El-Mahmud-Okereke, El-Mahmud Mass Communication of Nigeria; Karen Talbot, World Peace Council; Vinie Burrows, Women's International Democratic Federation; Evelyn Lowery, Southern Christian Leadership, Conference; Roger Green, State Assembly of New York; Jeanne M. Woods, Afro-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Organization; Gora Ibrahim, PAC; Reverend Simangaliso Mkhathshwa, South African Catholic Bishops Conference; Yvonne Ismail, People's Organization for Progress; Lawrence Hamm, Commission for Racial Justice of the United Church of Christ; Frank Chapman, National Alliance against Racial and Political Repression.

The Committee also convened to hear Bishop Desmond Tutu, the 1984 Nobel Peace Laureate.

On 28 October, by decision 40/407, the Assembly, on an oral proposal by the President, took note of the Committee's report.

International action to eliminate apartheid

In February, the Chairman commended the action by non-governmental organizations (NGOs) in the United States and the Netherlands for their divestment from companies with South African holdings and the prohibition of the sale of krugerrands. Among those cited were New York organizations and municipalities, the Bank of Boston and Morgan Guaranty Trust, and the Danish Occupational Therapists' Association for its refusal to accept delegates from South Africa to a 1986 international congress.

In connection with the intensified international campaign in Western Europe and North America for divestment, the Committee, in a 17 April statement, welcomed steps further to isolate South Africa, noting that anti-apartheid movements, parliaments, local legislators, trade unions, religious organizations, political parties, students, academicians and individuals were effectively exposing the apartheid system to the public.

In the United States, concerted action had led to divestment, legislative action and other measures by states, cities and universities, and several anti-apartheid bills were introduced in the Congress. Seven states and more than 20 cities enacted divestment legislation, committing themselves to sell their holdings in companies operating in South Africa. In September, the President issued an executive order banning computer sales to South African security agencies, barring some types of loans to South Africa and terminating krugerrand imports to the United States. As a result of an anti-apartheid campaign in the Netherlands, its three major banks decided to stop the sale of krugerrands in February. On 10 September, the European Economic Community (EEC) adopted limited sanctions against South Africa, including an embargo on oil, arms and law enforcement equipment; a ban on military and nuclear co-operation; measures to discourage cultural and scientific links; and withdrawal of military attachés. In May, the Danish Parliament prohibited new investments in South Africa and Namibia, and the Swedish Parliament enacted a law limiting further Swedish investments. In addition, a Swedish law forbade the sale of vehicles and computer equipment to the South African military and police forces. Canada announced in July that it was curtailing trade with South Africa through such measures as ending export and investment incentives for Canadian companies doing business with South Africa and restrictions on high-technology sales.

While noting the advance in the world-wide movement of solidarity with the struggle for liberation in South Africa, the Committee urged that international action be comprehensive, rather than piecemeal, and considered that voluntary, unilateral and limited sanctions by individual Western Governments were inadequate. The Committee urged, pending the imposition of comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa, that national action be taken by Western countries (see below).

In an October addendum(6) to its annual report, the Committee issued replies it had received from 26 Governments and the 10 EC members in response to the Assembly's 1984 appeal(28) for consideration of national measures to increase pressure on the apartheid régime (see p. 138).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 40/64 A, the General Assembly commended anti-apartheid movements, religious bodies, trade unions, student and women's organizations and other groups engaged in campaigns to isolate the apartheid régime and to assist South African liberation movements recognized by OAU. The Assembly requested and authorized the Committee to intensify its activities to isolate the régime totally, to promote comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa and to mobilize public opinion and encourage public action against collaboration with South Africa.

Relations with South Africa

The General Assembly and the Special Committee against Apartheid continued in 1985 to lead United Nations efforts to have States and organizations break off all relations with South Africa as a means of pressuring it to abandon its apartheid policies.

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Committee monitored relations with South Africa in several areas, including military and nuclear relations (see p. 141), economic and trade relations (see p. 145) and cultural ties, and made recommendations concerning such relations.(1) It reported that anti-apartheid groups, trade unions, local authorities and cultural personalities had encouraged others not to perform in that country and to support the cultural boycott; there was a significant decline in the number of artists visiting South Africa during the year. Most of those who had visited it came from Europe, in particular the United Kingdom. Since the publication in December 1984 of the second register of entertainers, actors and others who had performed in South Africa during the previous four years,(29) many on the register had written to the Committee undertaking not to appear there again.

Anti-apartheid organizations and other NGOs had been effective in deterring entertainers from visiting South Africa and specific actions to that end were reported taken in a number of countries. Artists taking action to draw attention to the cultural boycott or the situation in South Africa included Stevie Wonder, a United States musician and singer, who accepted his Oscar Award in March in the name of Nelson Mandela, the imprisoned South African opposition leader; Woody Allen, a United States actor and director, who decided not to allow the release of his films in South Africa; and Albert Finney, a British actor, who directed and acted in

The Biko Inquest, a film based on the 1977 death of Steve Biko from head injuries while in the custody of the South African police. In a ceremony on 10 October, "Artists United against Apartheid", a group of popular musicians who worked together on a record, presented the first pressing of the record "Sun City" to the United Nations. It was produced in co-operation with the Committee and its message was that South Africa should be boycotted as long as apartheid prevailed.

Despite these developments, the Committee reported that there was some collaboration in the cultural field, and it named three musicians who had contacts with South Africa.

The Committee followed with particular attention the United States response to the calls for isolating the apartheid régime, because of the importance of its role as a major trading partner of South Africa and as a leader of the Western alliance (see p. 135). It noted that the United States reaffirmed its policy of "constructive engagement" with the régime and asserted that the executive order issued by the President in September demonstrated the Administration's opposition to legislative measures against apartheid under consideration by the United States Congress, and was designed to avoid pressure on the régime. The Committee called the measures announced by EEC in September (see p. 135) limited and ineffective. The Committee considered it essential that the international community persuade the United States, as well as the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany, to co-operate with the United Nations in international action against apartheid and desist from fraternizing with the régime.

Action by the Council for Namibia. In its Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted in June,(30) the Council for Namibia deplored, and called for an immediate end to, the assistance rendered to South Africa by the major Western countries and Israel in the political, economic, military and other areas. In particular, the Council condemned and rejected the United States policy of so-called constructive engagement for having emboldened the apartheid régime to intensify its repression of the peoples of Namibia and South Africa, to escalate aggression against the front-line States, and to continue its intransigence over the independence of Namibia. The Council urged those States that co-operated with South Africa to cease any form of collaboration with it and called on the international community to reject the United States policy.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. On 26 February,(8) the Commission on Human Rights condemned all collaboration, particularly nuclear, military and economic, with South Africa and called on the States concerned to cease forthwith.

The Commission, on the same date,(9) condemned the increased assistance rendered by the major Western countries and Israel to South Africa, particularly military assistance, stating that it constituted a hostile action against the peoples of South Africa, Namibia and the neighbouring States since it was bound to strengthen the régime's military capability, and demanded that such assistance be immediately terminated. The Commission called on Governments that had not done so to ensure that trading, manufacturing and investing activities in South Africa and Namibia were stopped.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. On 16 May(31) the Committee on colonial countries deplored the collaboration of certain Western and other countries with South Africa in the political, economic, military and nuclear fields, and reiterated that such collaboration undermined international solidarity against the apartheid régime and helped to perpetuate its illegal occupation of Namibia.

On 7 August,(32) the Committee condemned countries, as well as TNCs, which continued investments in, and supply of armaments and oil and nuclear technology to, South Africa, thus buttressing it and aggravating the threat to world peace. It called on States, in particular certain Western States, to terminate that collaboration and to refrain from entering into other relations in violation of United Nations and OAU resolutions. On the same day,(33) the Committee reiterated its call for the termination of all collaboration with South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly repeatedly called for termination of all relations with South Africa in 1985.

In resolution 40/25, it condemned the policy of those Western States, Israel and other States whose political, economic, military, nuclear, strategic, cultural and sports relations with South Africa encouraged that régime to persist in suppressing the aspirations of peoples to self-determination and independence.

In resolution 40/64 A, the Assembly condemned the policies of "constructive engagement" and active collaboration with the apartheid régime followed by certain Western and other States which encouraged the régime in its repression of the people's legitimate struggle, aggression against neighbouring States and defiance of United Nations decisions. It also condemned the activities of those TNCs and financial institutions that continued collaboration with South Africa, and again declared that it was the responsibility of the international community to assist the people of South Africa in eliminating apartheid through cessation of any form of collaboration with the régime.

In resolution 40/64 I, the Assembly appealed to Governments and organizations to cease academic, cultural, scientific and sports relations that would support the apartheid régime, as well as relations with individuals, institutions and other bodies endorsing or based on apartheid.

Similar calls for an end to relations in a wide variety of areas were also made by the Assembly when it dealt with the questions of decolonization and Namibia. These calls were contained mainly in resolutions 40/52, 40/56 and 40/97 A and in decision 40/415.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

By resolution 1985/59, the Economic and Social Council requested the specialized agencies and other United Nations organizations to isolate the apartheid régime totally.

Communications. Throughout the year, a number of countries forwarded letters to the Secretary-General regarding their relations with and policy concerning South Africa.

On 13 February,(34) the USSR rejected South Africa's 1984 "new constitution";(7) condemned the military and political support of the United States and other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) for South Africa; expressed support for the African countries' demand that the Security Council impose comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa; and affirmed its continued support to the national liberation movements in southern Africa. Expressing the same views on 26 February,(35) the Byelorussian SSR said it had no relations with South Africa and called on the United Nations to ensure the implementation of its decisions concerning apartheid. Similarly, the Ukrainian SSR affirmed on 5 March(36) that it had no relations with South Africa, denounced the policies of a number of NATO countries and Israel in regard to it, and supported the call for comprehensive and mandatory sanctions.

Iran on 17 April(37) stated that it had broken all ties with South Africa; had refused to issue trade permits to nationals dealing with it; had prohibited all cultural and economic relations; did not permit its nationals to travel there, nor had granted South African nationals visas to enter Iran; and had cut all air and sea transport between the two countries.

In a policy statement of 6 July on its relations with South Africa,(38) Canada announced additional measures as a response to the situation in that country, such as strengthening its voluntary code of conduct and employment practices for Canadian companies operating in South Africa, tightening the arms embargo by restricting exports of sensitive equipment such as computers for military and police use, banning the import of arms manufactured there, and terminating a number of official measures which lent support to trade with and investment in South Africa. Brazil forwarded a 9 August decree by its President(39) prohibiting: cultural, artistic or sports exchanges; the export of petroleum and its by-products to that country; the supply of arms to it, including sales or transfers of arms and ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, police equipment, or spare parts for those items; and shipment of such equipment through Brazilian territory.

On 19 August,(40) Australia announced measures taken against South Africa following its review of recent developments there. It affirmed its intention to work for the imposition of mandatory economic sanctions and announced it would close the Trade Commission in Johannesburg in September. It would prohibit exports of petroleum and petroleum products to South Africa, request Australian financial institutions to suspend new loans to South Africa and prohibit direct investment in Australia by the South African Government. Affirming that it had voluntarily imposed trade sanctions against South Africa since 1978, Thailand, on 29 August,(41) added that it had issued regulations prohibiting bilateral trade.

Madagascar transmitted on 18 September(42) the resolutions adopted by the forty-second OAU Council of Ministers (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 10-17 July). Noting recent action in the anti-apartheid campaign, OAU proposed convening a World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa in collaboration with the Non-Aligned Movement and the United Nations (see p. 140), to coincide with the tenth anniversary of the Soweto uprising of June 1976; supported the campaign for an oil embargo against South Africa; mandated the Group of African States at the United Nations to step up the campaign for the isolation of South Africa, especially through the convening of the Security Council to consider sanctions; condemned the United States policy of constructive engagement; and called on the international community to take measures against South Africa, including a ban on new investments, cessation of maritime and air links, the prohibition of the sale of South African coins, and a total boycott of sporting and cultural relations.

Japan stated on 9 October(43) that, in view of recent developments, it had taken additional measures against South Africa on top of the strict measures already in operation (no diplomatic relations, restricted investment and financing, limited sporting, cultural and educational interchanges, a ban on arms exports to South Africa); new measures included prohibiting the export of computers that could be used by the armed forces and the police, urging a voluntary halt in importing South African gold coins, and calling on companies with offices in South Africa to follow fair employment practices.

Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden forwarded their 18 October Programme of Action against South Africa,(44) adopted as a follow-up to their 1978 Programme. In the new Programme, they stated their intention to work for the adoption by the Security Council of mandatory sanctions, and described their national measures, including prohibition or discouragement of new investments in South Africa, negotiations to restrict Nordic enterprises' production in South Africa, recommendations to reduce trade, implementation of Council resolution 558(1984)(45) on refraining from importing arms from South Africa, prohibition of the importation of krugerrands, of new nuclear contracts and of the exportation of computer equipment which might be used by the armed forces and police, and a halt of government support for promoting trade with South Africa.

The Bahamas transmitted the Commonwealth Accord on Southern Africa, adopted by the heads of Government of Commonwealth States (Nassau, 16-22 October).(24) Calling on South Africa to dismantle apartheid, they outlined a programme of action opposing that system, including recommendations for: strict enforcement of the mandatory arms embargo against South Africa and a commitment to prosecute violators; reaffirmation of the 1977 Gleneagles Declaration, which called on Commonwealth members to discourage sporting contacts; a ban on new government loans; halting government funding for trade missions; a ban on the export of computer equipment; and discouragement of cultural and scientific events.

Democratic Yemen stated on 1 November(25) that imperialist circles, particularly the United States, continued to support South Africa in violation of international covenants and resolutions; it saw dangers arising from the close relations between South Africa and Israel and from their military co-operation, which extended to the nuclear field.

Sanctions and boycotts

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid(1) noted with satisfaction that the Security Council, for the first time, had urged Member States, in resolution 566(1985) of 19 June on Namibia (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III) and in resolution 569(1985) of 26 July on South Africa (see p. 158), to impose specific economic sanctions against South Africa. While recognizing that several Western countries had taken significant action, however limited, in the previous year, the Committee expressed disappointment that a number of Western Governments had failed to do so despite pressure by public opinion; in particular, it expressed distress that the United States, the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany, with a large responsibility for the situation in South Africa, had failed to take meaningful measures in response to Assembly and Council requests to isolate the apartheid régime and support the struggle of the oppressed people.

Since any delay in action would likely lead to wider conflict, the Committee said, it was essential that the United Nations ensure comprehensive mandatory sanctions without delay. It asserted that the economic difficulties encountered by South Africa owing to loss of confidence in Western financial circles should not cause complacency, and that pressure on South Africa should be sustained through effective governmental action to prevent foreign economic interests from resuming financial support.

The Committee expressed satisfaction at the increasing recognition by Western public opinion of the need for economic sanctions against South Africa as the main component of international action to eliminate apartheid. It rejected the arguments of those profiting from apartheid that sanctions would involve great sacrifice by the oppressed people and it denounced the use of "codes of conduct" for employment practices-which included those of the United States, known as the Sullivan Principles,-as a means of justifying continued collaboration with apartheid.

With regard to sports, cultural, consumer and other boycotts, the Committee noted with satisfaction significant advances and called for their promotion. It welcomed the actions of local authorities, trade unions, anti-apartheid movements and others against those who continued to play or perform in South Africa, and called for public opposition to apartheid collaborators, such as denial of facilities and patronage to them. It hoped that the General Assembly would adopt a draft instrument prepared by the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against Apartheid in Sports (see p. 165).

In an October addendum(6) to its annual report, the Committee issued the replies it had received to its Chairman's request for information on the implementation of the Assembly's 1984 appeal for measures to increase pressure on South Africa(28)—from Australia, Austria, China, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, the German Democratic Republic, Greece, Haiti, Ireland, Japan, Norway, Panama, Romania, Saint Lucia, Seychelles, Solomon Islands, Sweden, the Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Turkey, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United States, Yugoslavia and Zambia; a reply was also received from the 10 EC members. Czechoslovakia, Haiti, Solomon Islands, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yugoslavia said they had no relations with South Africa. Similarly, no relations were maintained by China, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR, which were joined by Norway in adding that they provided support to the South African liberation movements.

Australia referred to a statement of 18 April<sup>(46)</sup> (see p. 146), in which it introduced a voluntary code of conduct for Australian companies and subsidiaries operating in South Africa which applied the principle of equality of treatment in employment practices; it had placed an embargo on all new government dealings with majority-owned South African firms for contracts of more than $20,000. Australia also mentioned the actions it had outlined on 19 August.<sup>(40)</sup>

Cyprus said that since 1964 it had imposed comprehensive sanctions.

Denmark, a sponsor of the 1984 Assembly resolution,<sup>(28)</sup> said it had implemented the suggested measures, in co-operation with the other Nordic countries, as well as national legislative and executive steps to pressure South Africa to abandon apartheid; individual measures included the Government's request that companies importing coal from South Africa gradually liquidate such imports before 1990, discouraging Danish oil companies and shipowners from trading or transporting oil to South Africa, prohibiting new Danish investment there and in Namibia, and terminating air agreements with South Africa. Norway also adopted measures to reduce commercial and other relations, such as banning the sale of Norwegian-produced oil to South Africa, prohibiting Norwegian investments there, and denying credit guarantees for export to South Africa. The members of EC had also applied the mandatory measures decided on by the United Nations and they considered that their code of conduct for European enterprises having subsidiaries in South Africa was playing an important role towards the elimination of racial discrimination in work places. Ireland said it did not maintain diplomatic relations with South Africa, and had no companies with subsidiaries and no public investment there.

The German Democratic Republic expressed support for comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa, and urged the Committee to analyse the implementation of the Assembly's 1984 resolution. Norway, Sweden, the Syrian Arab Republic, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR also advocated such sanctions.

Greece said it had no collaboration in the military field, while Ireland said it would support a mandatory ban on imports of arms and related equipment.

Japan's policy included no diplomatic relations, no direct investment in South Africa and Namibia by Japanese nationals or corporations, and no military co-operation. Panama announced that in May it had ordered the closure of the South African Consulate in Panama and had severed consular relations.

Saint Lucia had adopted legislation to deny facilities to South African aircraft and vessels flying the South African flag, to prohibit transport companies registered in Saint Lucia from connecting with South Africa, and to deny entry to Saint Lucia of holders of South African passports. Seychelles had revoked South African Airways' landing rights in 1980 and had found alternative trading partners for most of its imported domestic goods. In addition to banning companies from expanding business in South Africa, Sweden in 1985 had prohibited loans and credits, financial transactions and financial leasing to it, and banned export of data processing equipment and cross-country vehicles. Thailand had imposed trade sanctions.

The United States said that in addition to the Sullivan Principles, followed by most of its companies in South Africa, many national and local laws and executive actions regulated its economic relations with South Africa.

Action by the Council for Namibia. The Council for Namibia, in its June 1985 Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action,<sup>(30)</sup> asserted that comprehensive mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter were the most effective means of ensuring South Africa's compliance with United Nations resolutions and decisions on Namibia. The Council resolved to promote the imposition of such sanctions by the Security Council, in order to ensure South Africa's compliance with the 1978 United Nations independence plan for Namibia,<sup>(47)</sup> and urged those permanent members of the Security Council that had shielded South Africa to display the necessary political will in that regard. It called on all States to apply voluntary sanctions unilaterally and collectively and urged NGOs, including in particular trade unions, to campaign in their countries in support of a comprehensive programme of sanctions and to monitor that programme.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. On 16 May,<sup>(31)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries recommended that the Security Council act decisively against any dilatory manoeuvres of the illegal occupation régime of Namibia, and that the Council, which had been prevented from discharging its responsibilities for maintaining international peace and security in the region owing to the opposition of certain Western permanent members, respond to the demand of the international community by imposing comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa. The Committee noted with satisfaction the pressures being exerted by NGOs in a number of Western countries to promote the severance of links with South Africa, and urged Member States to encourage those organizations to work for mandatory sanctions, as well as to impose voluntary ones. It called on those Governments which had not taken measures aimed at isolating South Africa to take action, pending the imposition of mandatory sanctions.

On 7 August,(32) the Committee called on States to terminate investments in Namibia or loans to South Africa, and to end financial and military assistance to south Africa—which used the assistance to repress the Namibian people and their national liberation movement—to isolate it and to discontinue relations with it concerning Namibia.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,(9) welcomed the Assembly's request that the Security Council consider complete and mandatory sanctions, particularly in the military and financial field. On the same day,(8) the Commission called for the application of sanctions as set out by the 1983 International Conference in Support of the Struggle of the Namibian People for Independence(48) and the 1981 International Conference on Sanctions against South Africa.(49)

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

In two 1985 resolutions, the Security Council, reacting to South Africa's installation of a so-called interim government in Windhoek (see TRUSTESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III) and to the increased repression in South Africa (see p. 152), made recommendations concerning sanctions against that country.

In resolution 566(1985) of 19 June, the Council, demanding that South Africa rescind its installation of the so-called interim government, warned that failure to do so would compel the Council to consider measures under the Charter, including Chapter VII (which deals with action with respect to threats to the peace, breaches of the peace and acts of aggression). The Council urged Member States to consider in the mean time voluntary measures against South Africa, including suspending new investments and applying disincentives to that end, re-examining maritime and aerial relations with South Africa, prohibiting the sale of South African coins, and restricting sports and cultural relations.

On 26 July, the Council, in resolution 569(1985), again urged the adoption of measures against South Africa, such as those specified in June, as well as suspending guaranteed export loans, and prohibiting new contracts in the nuclear field and sales of computer equipment that might be used by its forces.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/64 C by recorded vote.

World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa

The General Assembly,

Gravely concerned about the deteriorating situation in South Africa,

Recalling its resolutions concerning economic and other sanctions against South Africa,

Recalling also Security Council resolution 569(1985) of 26 July 1985,

Taking note of the resolution adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its forty-second ordinary session, held at Addis Ababa from 10 to 17 July 1985, and of the statement by the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of that organization of 21 October 1985, inter alia, for the convening of a World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa,

1. Decides to organize, in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, a World Conference on Sanctions against Racist South Africa in June 1986;

2. Authorises the Special Committee against Apartheid, in co-operation with the Organization of African Unity and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, to make all necessary arrangements for the organization of the Conference;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to provide all necessary assistance to the Special Committee in the organization of the Conference;

4. Invites all appropriate United Nations organs, the specialized agencies and other intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to co-operate with the Special Committee in the implementation of the present resolution;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report on the Conference to the General Assembly at its forty-first session.

Explaining their votes, Austria and Canada believed that the Security Council was the appropriate forum for discussing sanctions. Canada and New Zealand regarded the proposed cost of the Conference to be higher than necessary; the United Kingdom agreed, pointing out that the Assembly had devoted seven days to discussing sanctions, and views had also been expressed in the Special Political Committee, the Fourth Committee and the Security Council. Similarly, the Netherlands doubted that the Conference could contribute to the imposition of selective mandatory sanctions by the Council. The United States assumed that the Conference would focus on the unacceptable goal of mandatory sanctions and would be destined to condemn unfairly the United States and other permanent Council members; it believed that each State should be free to impose the peaceful measures it deemed most appropriate for bringing about change in South Africa.

The Assembly called for sanctions against South Africa in several other 1985 resolutions.

It called on the Council to take action under Chapter VII of the Charter with a view to applying sanctions, in particular, to re-enforce the arms embargo; and requested States, individually and collectively, to take measures to facilitate such action by the Council (40/64 A). The Assembly urged the Council to consider without delay the adoption of mandatory sanctions and commended States that had already adopted voluntary measures in accordance with the Assembly's 1984 request(28) (40/64 D). It also called for the application of sanctions as called for by the 1981 Conference on Sanctions against South Africa(49) (40/25).

Resolutions dealing with South Africa's occupation of Namibia also included calls for sanctions. The Assembly, in resolution 40/97 A, called on the Council to implement the recommendations contained in the 1980 report(50) of the Council Committee established in pursuance of resolution 421(1977),(51) which dealt with strengthening the Council's 1977 mandatory arms embargo.(52) In view of South Africa's refusal to comply with United Nations resolutions on Namibia, the Assembly urged the Council to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions. In resolution 40/97 B, the Assembly condemned the use of the veto by the two Western permanent members of the Council on 15 November (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III), resulting in the Council's being prevented from taking measures under Chapter VII of the Charter, and appealed to them to desist from further misuse of the veto.

The Assembly requested United Nations organizations to withhold from South Africa any form of financial, economic and technical assistance and to discontinue support to that régime until the people of Namibia had exercised their right to self-determination and independence in a united Namibia and until apartheid had been eradicated and a non-racial, united and democratic State had been established (40/52).

Military and nuclear relations

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid, citing various press and other reports, stated that South Africa continued its military buildup in 1985, its 1984/85 military spending went up by 21.4 per cent over 1983/84, and the 1985/86 figures increased by 8.1 per cent over the previous year. South Africa continued to develop new weapons, such as a semi-automatic grenade launcher for use in close combat situations and riot control weapons, and was proceeding with plans for the Overberg Missile Testing Range at De Hoop.

According to a British Anti-Apartheid Movement memorandum of July 1985, South Africa used "front" companies, fraud and falsehoods to sabotage the Security Council's 1977 arms embargo against it.(52) The memorandum added that the United Kingdom continued to supply South Africa with nuclear technology and personnel, radar equipment and computers, codified information from NATO, and aircraft and arms through third countries. South Africa had been able to circumvent the arms embargo because of loopholes in United Kingdom arms controls.

According to press reports, United States strategic exports to South Africa had risen steadily since it had lifted the ban on sales of commercial goods to the military and police and relaxed restrictions on sales of computers and aircraft in 1982 and 1983. Licences issued in 1984 for exporting aircraft, computers and communications equipment had increased by almost 100 per cent over the average of the three previous years. Nationals and corporations of the Federal Republic of Germany were also known to have violated the arms embargo in recent years, the Committee said. A French newspaper reported in November that South Africa was setting up a helicopter industry with French co-operation and five aerospace engineers were reported to have gone to South Africa for that purpose.

In the nuclear field, the Uranium Enrichment Corporation of South Africa announced that South Africa would expand the number of its nuclear reactors rapidly by the end of the century because the country's coal resources were limited. In January, the Electricity Supply Commission of South Africa (ESCOM) disclosed that it had recruited United States personnel to operate the nuclear power station in Koeberg. Approximately 20 United States citizens were working directly for ESCOM and an undisclosed number for United States-based companies that had contracted to work for ESCOM. In the same month, the South African Atomic Energy Corporation announced that the country would be self-sufficient in enriched uranium by 1987 when its first processing plant would become operative. Until then, South Africa would continue receiving supplies from abroad.

Noting the developments of the past year—particularly the use of armed forces in Angola and Botswana and repression against the people of South Africa—the Committee said that any form of assistance to the military, police, intelligence or other forces in South Africa constituted complicity in the crimes of the apartheid régime. It considered that Governments that opposed the strengthening and effective monitoring of the mandatory arms embargo, as well as corporations that supplied equipment and expertise for military and police use in South Africa, bore a grave responsibility. The Committee urged the Security Council to strengthen the arms embargo, prohibit all nuclear co-operation with South Africa and ensure the effective monitoring of such measures. In that connection, it attached special importance to the prohibition of supply of “dual purpose” equipment, such as computers and technology that could be put to military and police use. Furthermore, the Committee considered that an effective embargo on the supply of petroleum, petroleum products and other strategic supplies should be instituted without delay as an essential reinforcement of the arms embargo.

Report of the Secretary-General. In an August report to the Commission on Transnational Corporations,<sup>(53)</sup> the Secretary-General described the development of the military and nuclear sectors in the South African economy and the role played by TNCs in those areas.

The report identified some specific activities undertaken by TNCs, both before and after the mandatory arms embargo was imposed by the Security Council in 1977,<sup>(52)</sup> prohibiting the provision to South Africa of military supplies and licensing arrangements for their manufacture, as well as co-operation in the manufacture and development of nuclear weapons. It pointed to the wide range of essential ancillary inputs that were provided to the two sectors through the activities of foreign enterprises in other sectors. The report concluded that, while the various measures may have reduced the arms flow to South Africa considerably, they had not had any noticeable impact on the system of apartheid or on reducing the threat of war in the region.

According to the report, South Africa had developed the capacity to manufacture light aircraft, fast attack patrol boats and a range of land-based armaments (armoured personnel carriers, artillery, ammunition and electronic surveillance and communications systems); however, it was unable to produce sophisticated jet aircraft, helicopters or large naval vessels. If South Africa continued to be denied the assistance it needed to modernize and service its jet aircraft and to build helicopters, it could be left with an obsolete air force in a few years. However, South Africa continued to make clandestine purchases and was able to buy weaponry on the world market.

Activities of the Council for Namibia. In its annual report to the General Assembly,<sup>(30)</sup> the United Nations Council for Namibia said the support that South Africa received from Western TNCs and other financial interests that were collaborating with it in exploiting the natural and human resources of Namibia had helped it to entrench its illegal occupation there and to strengthen its military domination and apartheid system. To retain its occupation and to further its aggression, South Africa had continued to increase its military spending. The Council referred to the 1985/86 budget presented in March 1985 by the South African Minister of Finance, noting that spending had increased by 8.1 per cent over the previous year, to 4,274 million rand ($1.00 = R 1.98). It pointed out that the exact extent of military spending was unclear, since military and security costs were spread over a number of departments.

The acquisition and production of arms by South Africa were carried out under the aegis of the State-owned Armaments Development and Production Corporation (ARMSCOR), which relied heavily on manufacturing licences obtained from foreign entities. Besides its own production facilities, ARMSCOR depended on about 800 private sector contractors, including many local subsidiaries of United States and Western European companies, which produced a range of weapons, including naval equipment, armoured vehicles and heavy artillery, and operated under secrecy laws that covered military matters.

The Council, in its Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted in June,<sup>(30)</sup> condemned the continuing military collaboration with and assistance to South Africa by certain Western States and Israel, which it considered a breach of the 1977 arms embargo.<sup>(52)</sup> It called for the scrupulous observance of the 1984 Security Council resolution requesting States not to import armaments from South Africa.(45) The Council said the acquisition of a nuclear-weapons capability by South Africa had added another dangerous dimension to the grave situation, and condemned the collaboration of Israel and certain Western States, particularly the United States, with South Africa in the nuclear sector. It called on States to refrain from supplying South Africa, directly or indirectly, with installations that might enable it to use uranium, plutonium or other nuclear materials and reactors for military purposes. Furthermore, it called on the Security Council to ensure the total cessation of nuclear collaboration and contacts with South Africa.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,(9) condemned the continuing nuclear collaboration of certain Western States, Israel and other States with South Africa and urged them to cease. It called on Governments to end all technological assistance in the manufacture of arms and military supplies in South Africa and Namibia, in particular to cease all nuclear collaboration. The Commission welcomed the Assembly's request that the Security Council consider complete and mandatory sanctions against South Africa, including the cessation of all nuclear collaboration.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries, on 7 August,(33) considered that South Africa's acquisition of nuclear-weapons capability constituted an effort to terrorize and intimidate regional States while posing a threat to all mankind. The continuing assistance rendered to South Africa by certain Western and other countries in the military and nuclear fields belied their stated opposition to its racist practice. The Committee called on those countries to end the nuclear co-operation.

On the same date,(32) the Committee again condemned the nuclear collusion of certain countries and called on Governments to refrain from supplying South Africa, directly or indirectly, with installations that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium and other nuclear materials, reactors or military equipment.

Communications. In a letter of 3 July to the Secretary-General,(54) Iran stated that Iraq had purchased heavy artillery from South Africa, which had been developed by ARMSCOR and the American Space Research Corporation, and added that the co-operation between South Africa and the United States violated the 1977 mandatory arms embargo against South Africa and that the Iraqi purchase contravened the Security Council's 1984 request that States refrain from importing South African arms.(45) Two days later,(55) Iran forwarded an article from the magazine Africa Confidential of 10 April, reporting the alleged military transaction. On 26 July,(56) Iraq stated that the allegations were false.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On three occasions in 1985, the Security Council called for an end to military or nuclear collaboration with South Africa.

In resolution 569(1985), it urged Member States to adopt measures against South Africa, such as prohibiting new contracts in the nuclear sector and sales of computer equipment that might be used by its forces. Resolutions 571(1985) and 574(1985) included the Council's call for States to implement fully the 1977 arms embargo.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly took similar action in numerous 1985 resolutions.

It called on the Security Council to apply mandatory sanctions, including a total ban on all forms of nuclear collaboration, and embargoes on the imports of South African and Namibian uranium and on the export and supply of nuclear material, equipment or technology (40/64 A). It again called for Council sanctions, including the cessation of all forms of military, police or intelligence co-operation, in particular the sale of computer equipment, and an end to nuclear collaboration (40/64 I).

The Assembly, in resolution 40/97 A, declared that the acquisition of nuclear-weapons capability by South Africa constituted a threat to peace and security in Africa and a danger to all mankind. It called for an end to the military and nuclear collaboration, including refraining from supplying South Africa with materials that might enable it to produce uranium, plutonium or other nuclear materials or reactors. A similar request was also made in resolution 40/52. Similarly, in resolution 40/57, the Assembly condemned all such collaboration and asked that it cease.

In decision 40/415, the Assembly considered that South Africa's nuclear-weapons capability was an effort to terrorize and intimidate regional States.

In resolution 40/158 on strengthening international security, the Assembly called on States, particularly Security Council members, to fulfil the objective of the denuclearization of Africa. In resolutions dealing with the Declaration on the Denuclearization of Africa (40/89 A and B), the Assembly: condemned nuclear collaboration with South Africa and called for its end, in particular the granting of licences by some Member States to corporations to provide equipment and technology for nuclear installations in South Africa; demanded that South Africa refrain from manufacturing, testing, threatening to use or using nuclear weapons; and appealed to States to monitor South Africa's development of nuclear weapons.

Arms embargo

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid continued to emphasize the importance of an effective and comprehensive arms embargo and again urged the Security Council to strengthen it.<sup>(1)</sup> In an October addendum<sup>(3)</sup> to its 1985 annual report, the 'Committee provided information on legislation and other measures adopted by Governments to enforce the Security Council's 1977 arms embargo against South Africa.<sup>(52)</sup> As of 30 August 1985, information was provided by 25 Governments (Australia, Brazil, China, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, German Democratic Republic, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Japan, Lesotho, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Romania, Saint Lucia, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Turkey, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United States, Yugoslavia) in response to the Committee's request of 6 June.

Australia said that its recent measures included prohibiting exports to South Africa of petroleum and petroleum products, computer hardware and any other products of use to the security forces. By a Presidential decree, Brazil banned the supply of arms and related matériel to South Africa, including military and paramilitary police equipment. Denmark said its compliance with the embargo was based on a royal decree on certain measures against South Africa of 1978, as amended in 1982, which included the prohibition of licensing agreements for the manufacture or maintenance of military and paramilitary equipment. Greece said that it strictly enforced the embargo and had no military collaboration with South Africa. Iceland reported that no Icelandic citizen or firm had taken part in any sale or transport of arms to South Africa, which Iceland had banned, in 1969.

Irish legislation on the control of exports was embodied in a 1983 law which empowered its trade minister to approve the export of certain goods, including arms and related goods; since 1963 Ireland had voluntarily observed the embargo on the sale of arms and military equipment to South Africa. Lesotho stated it would not assist or facilitate arms acquisition by South Africa. Mexico had banned the sale of weapons and related equipment to South Africa and did not purchase such military materials originating there. The Netherlands had banned transactions involving military goods for South Africa. By royal decree of 1977, Norway had prohibited export or delivery of war material to South Africa. Saint Lucia said it fully supported the arms embargo. Together with the other Nordic countries, Sweden supported strict compliance with and a strengthening of the embargo, and it had prohibited exports of data processing equipment and related software, cross-country vehicles and fuel for the South African military or police authorities.

Thailand had issued regulations prohibiting trade with South Africa, which also applied to arms. Concerning the question of legislative measures adopted to uphold the arms embargo, the United States said it observed it fully and co-operated with the Committee established pursuant to the embargo.

China, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Romania, Togo, Turkey, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Yugoslavia said that they had no relations with South Africa. Japan said it had no military co-operation with it and had never extended any kind of nuclear co-operation. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said it opposed any relations with the régime.

Communication. On 15 January,<sup>(57)</sup> Denmark informed the Chairman of the Security Council Committee established by resolution 421(1977)<sup>(51)</sup> that its police authorities were investigating alleged violations of the arms embargo by a merchant vessel owned by a Danish citizen and the results of the investigations would be reported to the Committee; the owner and others involved in the shipments had been charged with offences against the 1978 royal decree.

Activities of the Council for Namibia. In its June Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action,<sup>(30)</sup> the Council for Namibia considered the continuing military collaboration with and assistance to South Africa by certain Western States and Israel to be a breach of the arms embargo, and called for all States to observe the 1984 Security Council request that they not import armaments from South Africa.<sup>(45)</sup>

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. Similarly, the Committee on colonial countries, on 7 August,<sup>(33)</sup> condemned the continued military, nuclear and intelligence collaboration between South Africa and certain countries, as a violation of the arms embargo and a threat to international peace and security.

Report of the Secretary-General. In December,<sup>(58)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on the implementation of the 1984 Security Council resolution requesting States not to import South African arms.<sup>(45)</sup> His report included the responses, some of which were also issued as separate documents, to a letter he had sent a year earlier to Governments. Australia, Belgium, Bolivia, Botswana, Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR,<sup>(59)</sup> Canada, Chile, China,<sup>(60)</sup> Cuba, Czechoslovakia,<sup>(61)</sup> Denmark,<sup>(62)</sup> Ethiopia,<sup>(63)</sup> the German Democratic Republic,<sup>(64)</sup> Ghana, Greece, India,<sup>(65)</sup> Indonesia,<sup>(66)</sup> Iran,<sup>(37)</sup> Iraq, Ireland, Luxembourg, Madagascar,<sup>(67)</sup> Mexico, Mongolia,<sup>(68)</sup> the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Peru,<sup>(69)</sup> the Philippines, Qatar, the Syrian Arab Republic, Sierra Leone, Spain, Suriname, Thailand,(70) Togo, Turkey, Uganda, the Ukrainian SSR,(71) the USSR(72) and the United Kingdom indicated that they complied with the terms of the resolution. Austria intended not to grant any requests to import South African military material. Brunei Darussalam said it did not wish to import arms produced in South Africa. Support was expressed for the implementation of the provisions of the resolution by the Dominican Republic. By ordinances issued in 1983, Sweden had prohibited the import of most arms and military material.(73) The United States enclosed documents detailing its measures taken in compliance with the resolution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly again demanded the immediate application of the mandatory arms embargo by all countries and more particularly by those that maintained military and nuclear co-operation with South Africa and supplied it with related matériel (resolution 40/25). It called on States to implement the embargo fully and to comply with Security Council resolution 558(1984) (requesting States to refrain from importing South African arms),(45) and on the Council to adopt measures to tighten the embargo and to ensure strict compliance (40/97 A). It called for the Council to apply comprehensive mandatory sanctions, including re-enforcing the 1977 mandatory arms embargo, strengthening the 1984 voluntary embargo(45) by making it mandatory and extending it to cover imports of related materials in addition to arms and ammunition, and prohibiting all military and nuclear co-operation. Pending Council action, States were requested to ensure strict implementation of the arms embargo and prohibition of all military and nuclear collaboration. States were also requested to take action against corporations and others that violated the embargo and those involved in supplying South Africa with oil, as well as those who persisted in collaborating with the régime (40/64 A). The Assembly again urged the Council to take steps for the strict implementation of the 1977 and 1984 embargoes and to secure an end to military and nuclear co-operation with South Africa and the import of South African military equipment (40/64 I).

The Assembly requested the Council to conclude its consideration of the 1980 recommendations(50) of its Committee established by resolution 421(1977) with a view to blocking the existing loopholes in the embargo so as to render it more effective, and prohibiting, in particular, nuclear collaboration (40/89 B). In decision 40/415, the Assembly urged that the Council consider, as a matter of urgency, the Committee's 1980 report, which contained recommendations on tightening the arms embargo, and suggested that it adopt further measures to widen the embargo's scope. The Assembly also called for the scrupulous observance of Council resolution 558(1984).

Economic relations

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid reported that South Africa was going through a severe recession, which began in 1984 and, as a result of the deterioration of the political environment and other factors, took a downturn in mid-1985.(1) The economic performance could also be attributed to the defiance by the country's growing black trade union movement and the régime's failure to contain the opposition. South Africa's imposition of the state of emergency in mid-1985 led to the loss of international confidence in the economy, sparking the worst financial crisis since South Africa was established in 1948. Major international banks did not renew their short-term lines of credit to the Government, causing the worst devaluation of the rand and prompting the régime to declare a moratorium on debt servicing. Even before this happened, the country's financial system was experiencing difficulties. In May, foreigners sold South African securities worth $40 million, and another $70 million was sold in July. The capital flight affected the economy by substantially reducing South Africa's foreign-exchange reserves and causing inflation to rise. To curb the capital flight and to attract more foreign investment, South Africa gradually reduced the prime rate from an all-time high of 25 per cent to 15.5 per cent.

In 1985, of the total foreign trade ($16.3 billion) excluding gold, arms and oil, South Africa's main trading partners were: the United States, with 21.3 per cent; the United Kingdom, 16.6 per cent; Japan, 16.3 per cent; the Federal Republic of Germany, 16.3 per cent; France, 6.3 per cent; and Italy, 6 per cent. Despite fluctuations in its price, gold remained the most important export; in 1985, it constituted 75 per cent of the aggregate exports. Nevertheless, gold exports were not able to pay for all of South Africa's imports, so the régime continued to rely on international financing. Platinum, coal and iron ore were also important exports. Foreign investments represented approximately 10 per cent of all investments, with the United Kingdom being the largest foreign investor.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. On 26 February,(9) the Commission on Human Rights called on Governments that had not done so to take measures in respect of their nationals and companies under their jurisdiction that owned and operated enterprises in South Africa and Namibia, in order to stop their activities there. The Commission welcomed the General Assembly's request that the Security Council consider prohibiting loans to, and investments in, South Africa and demanding the cessation of trade with it.

Communication. Australia transmitted to the Secretary-General an 18 April statement by its Foreign Minister,<sup>(46)</sup> introducing a code of conduct for Australian companies with commercial interests in South Africa; the code was based on the principle of equality of treatment in the work place irrespective of race.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 40/64 A, the General Assembly called on the Security Council to ban trade with South Africa and, pending such action, requested States to ensure such a ban, particularly on the sale of krugerrands and the import of gold, uranium, coal and other minerals. United Nations organizations were called on to refrain from purchasing South African products, to deny contracts or facilities to corporations collaborating with South Africa and not to invest any money in them, and to prohibit any official travel by South African Airways or South African shipping lines. The Assembly, in resolution 40/64 I, appealed to States, pending mandatory sanctions, to consider national measures to increase pressure on South Africa, such as an end to promoting and supporting trade with it and prohibiting the sale of its coins. In resolution 40/52, the Assembly again called on States to refrain from promoting trade or other economic relations.

Oil embargo

The International Conference of Maritime Trade Unions on the Implementation of the United Nations Oil Embargo against South Africa adopted on 31 October a declaration which was transmitted to the Secretary-General by the Chairman of the Committee against Apartheid.<sup>(74)</sup> Convened on the initiative of seafarers' and dockers' unions and organized by the Maritime Trade Unions against Apartheid in co-operation with the Committee, the Conference (London, 30 and 31 October) commended those Governments which had supported the United Nations oil embargo and called on others to implement it. It condemned shipowners and shipping management companies (including flag-of-convenience operators), shipping agents and oil companies violating the oil embargo, called for compliance with it, and warned them that, until assurance was received of their compliance, their vessels were liable to trade union action, including boycott.

The Conference resolved that seafarers and port, dock and other transport workers would urge Governments to make it illegal to supply or transport oil to South Africa, and take action against the vessels of companies involved. The Conference requested the United Nations to organize a conference of oil producers and transporters, with the participation of Governments, shipowners and trade unions, to lay down specific mandatory procedures to make the oil embargo effective.

On 26 February,<sup>(9)</sup> the Commission on Human Rights welcomed the request of the General Assembly that the Security Council consider an embargo on the supply of petroleum, petroleum products and other strategic goods to South Africa.

The Committee on colonial countries, on 7 August,<sup>(32)</sup> called on those oil-producing and oil-exporting countries that had not done so to take measures against the companies concerned so as to stop such supplies.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/64 A, called on the Security Council to apply an embargo on oil and oil products and on all assistance to the oil industry in South Africa, particularly to the oil-from-coal industry. Pending such action, States were requested to ensure prohibition of the supply of oil and oil products as well as related technology. States were also requested to take action against those involved in supplying South Africa with oil and oil products in spite of the embargo. Likewise, in resolution 40/64 I, the Assembly appealed to States, pending the Council's action, to increase pressure on South Africa by ceasing the export and sale of oil to it.

In resolution 40/52, the Assembly called on those oil-producing and oil-exporting countries that had not done so to act against the companies concerned so as to terminate supplies of crude oil and petroleum products to South Africa.

Foreign investments and loans

South Africa's total foreign liabilities, according to the Committee against Apartheid,<sup>(1)</sup> were around $60 billion in 1985, two thirds of which was in short-term loans repayable within the year. Loans by United States banks to the South African private sector increased to $4.2 billion in 1984 from $1 billion in 1980. United States investments in South Africa totalled approximately $2.3 billion, around 1 per cent of all United States overseas investment. Seventy per cent of the South African computer industry, 50 per cent of the petroleum industry and 30 per cent of the automobile industry were controlled by United States companies operating in and exporting to South Africa. United Kingdom interests continued to expand in South Africa despite the international campaign for divestment, and its investments were approximately 7 per cent of the total United Kingdom overseas portfolio. Short-term and medium-term South African stocks were marketed in the United Kingdom, and South African business groups were expanding their investments in the United Kingdom.

Citing South African press reports, the Committee said that the profitability of investments in South Africa had declined from 31 per cent in 1980 to 7 per cent in 1982 and to a loss of 9 per cent in 1985. In 1985, United States banks decided not to renew their short-term credit lines to South Africa, which amounted to $14 billion; British and other Western European banks followed suit. The largest creditors were British banks with a $5.5 billion exposure, United States banks with a $4.5 billion exposure and a group of banks from the Federal Republic of Germany, France and Switzerland with an aggregate short-term exposure of $4 billion to the South African private and public sector.

In October and November, South Africa met with representatives of 30 major banks for negotiations on rescheduling all short-term payments for five years and to start repayment of capital in 1990. On 22 October, the Chairman of the Committee sent a message to Fritz Leutwiler, the mediator of the banks, urging them to refuse the régime's request for an extension of its loans. He appealed for the withdrawal of existing loans and an end to new ones.

The Committee noted with satisfaction that the United Nations Joint Staff Pension Board had divested from corporations operating in South Africa. Acknowledging the contribution made by several United Nations agencies in this regard, it suggested that the General Assembly call on the Secretary-General and the specialized agencies to end any other deposits or investments in, or any contracts with or the provision of facilities to, any banks or corporations operating in South Africa. It recommended that the International Monetary Fund cease all forms of assistance to that country (see p. 150).

The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,<sup>(9)</sup> welcomed the Assembly's request that the Security Council prohibit loans to, and investments in, South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 40/64 A, the General Assembly called on the Security Council to prohibit financial loans and credits to and investment in South Africa. Pending that action, States were requested to ensure such prohibition, as well as the withdrawal of investment in South Africa. United Nations organizations were called on to withhold any facilities from or investments of any funds in banks, financial institutions and corporations doing business in South Africa. Pending Council sanctions, the Assembly, in resolution 40/64 I, appealed to States to increase pressure on South Africa by ceasing further investments in and financial loans to it. In resolution 40/52, the Assembly called on States to terminate, or cause to have terminated, any investments in Namibia or loans to South Africa.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Reacting to the deteriorating situation and repression in South Africa, the Security Council in resolution 569(1985) also urged States to suspend new investment and guaranteed export loans.

Transnational corporations

Commission on TNCs. The Commission on Transnational Corporations, at its eleventh session in April 1985, considered several reports on the activities of TNCs in South Africa and Namibia.<sup>(75)</sup>

In January, the Secretary-General, responding to a 1984 request of the Economic and Social Council,<sup>(76)</sup> submitted a report,<sup>(77)</sup> briefly describing recent economic developments there, with emphasis on direct foreign investment and the involvement of TNCs. The report, which contained a list of TNCs operating in South Africa and Namibia, said South Africa had a relatively open economy in that its exports constituted nearly 30 per cent of its gross domestic product (GDP). The industrial countries were the major buyers of South Africa's merchandise exports, with Western Europe accounting for nearly half of its total export market and the United States for over 15 per cent. Although all exports to South Africa of internationally traded crude oil were under embargo, it was estimated that approximately 15 million tons of crude oil, valued at about $3 billion, were not reported in world trade statistics because they were sold and shipped to South Africa, whose economy depended heavily on oil imports.

Gold, the most important South African export, accounted for nearly half of total exports and constituted more than 80 per cent of South Africa's international reserves. Other exports were chromite, manganese, platinum, diamonds and maize. Since 1981, weak external demand for non-gold exports, falling international gold prices and severe drought had devastated South Africa's economy, leading to a sharp depreciation of the rand vis-à-vis all major currencies and to a significant acceleration of inflation. Following a weak economic recovery in 1983, the rate of growth of real GDP for 1984 was estimated at 3 per cent, as against 4.75 per cent for the developed market economies for the year. The growth rate of real output was expected to be under 2 per cent in 1985 and business fixed investment was expected to continue to decline in real terms well into the year.

TNCs continued to play a key role, and major divestments in 1983 and 1984 were overwhelmed by the significant and growing presence of several hundred TNCs in the South African economy.

In February, the Secretariat issued a report<sup>(78)</sup> updating that of 1984<sup>(79)</sup> on the responsibilities of home countries with respect to TNCs operating in South Africa and Namibia in violation of United Nations decisions. In addition to the measures taken by the United Nations and others, the report analysed codes of conduct adopted by home countries concerning employment practices of TNCs and found them to have had only limited positive effects. The Secretariat noted that the home countries had in general affirmed their commitment to enforcing the mandatory arms embargo, and some had adopted national legislation to implement it; however, the operations of TNCs in strategic sectors of the South African economy, such as electronics and computers, energy including nuclear energy and petroleum, and machinery and equipment, had continued.

Having considered the reports, the Commission on TNCs adopted a draft resolution on TNCs and their collaboration with South Africa and a draft decision on organization of public hearings on TNC activities, which were then submitted to and subsequently adopted by the Economic and Social Council (see below).

The Commission also continued trying to resolve the main outstanding issues of a draft code of conduct on TNCs (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter VII).

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, on 26 February,(9) called on Governments that had not done so to take measures in respect of their nationals and the companies under their jurisdiction that owned and operated enterprises in South Africa and Namibia, with a view to stopping their trading, manufacturing and investing activities there. The Commission welcomed the 1984 General Assembly decision(80) to invite the Special Rapporteur of the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities to continue to update, subject to annual review, the list of banks, TNCs and other organizations assisting South Africa (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII). The Sub-Commission, in August,(81) welcomed the Commission's appeal.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 26 July, the Economic and Social Council, acting on the recommendation of its First (Economic) Committee, adopted resolution 1985/72 by vote.

Activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia, and collaboration of such corporations with the racist minority régime of South Africa

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling Security Council resolution 560(1985) of 12 March 1985,

Recalling also General Assembly resolutions 39/72 A to G of 13 December 1984, in particular resolution 39/72 G on concerted international action for the elimination of apartheid,

Reaffirming previous resolutions of the Economic and Social Council on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia and the collaboration of such corporations with the racist minority régime of South Africa,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia and the collaboration of such corporations with the racist minority régime in that area and the report of the Secretariat on the responsibilities of home countries with respect to the transnational corporations operating in South Africa and Namibia in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations,

Noting with grave concern the deterioration of the situation in South Africa as evidenced by the recent increased brutality, indiscriminate killings and mass arrests of innocent persons, including children, by the authorities of the racist minority régime of South Africa,

Regretting that the inflows of foreign direct investment to South Africa have risen significantly in recent years,

Affirming the need for intensified action at the international level by all Governments and non-governmental organizations, including trade unions, academic institutions, parliamentarians and public officials in various countries,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia and the collaboration of such corporations with the racist minority régime in that area, in particular the list of transnational corporations operating in that area, and the report of the Secretariat on the responsibilities of home countries with respect to the transnational corporations operating in South Africa and Namibia in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations;

2. Condemns the racist minority régime of South Africa and its brutal perpetuation of the inhuman system of apartheid and the illegal occupation of Namibia;

3. Reaffirms that the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa reinforce the racist minority régime in its perpetuation of the system of apartheid and its illegal occupation of Namibia;

4. Notes with appreciation the actions of those non-governmental organizations and academic institutions that have exerted pressure on transnational corporations collaborating with the racist minority régime for disinvestment of their assets and the proposals for legislative and other regulatory measures put forward by some parliamentarians and other public officials in various countries with a view to terminating the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia, and requests the Secretariat to transmit the text of the present resolution to all such organizations, parliamentarians and public officials;

5. Welcomes as a positive first step the measures taken by certain home countries of transnational corporations to place restrictions on further investments in South Africa and on bank loans to the racist minority régime;

6. Urges all transnational corporations to terminate their investments in South Africa and to end all forms of collaboration with the racist minority régime;

7. Reaffirms Security Council resolution 301(1971) of 20 October 1971, in which the Council called upon States to abstain from entering into economic relations with South Africa in respect of Namibia and declared that rights, titles or contracts granted to individuals or corporations by South Africa after the termination of the Mandate were not subject to protection or espousal by their States against the claims of a future lawful Government of Namibia;

8. Invites all States, non-governmental organizations and all transnational corporations operating in South Africa and Namibia to co-operate with the United Nations in organizing public hearings on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia so as to facilitate the conduct of fair, objective and balanced hearings on such activities with regard to the topics set out in Economic and Social Council resolution 1982/70 of 27 October 1982;

9. Requests the Secretary-General:

(a) To continue the useful work of the Secretariat on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia through the collection and dissemination of information;

(b) To provide more detailed information on the profiles of transnational corporations operating in South Africa and Namibia;

(c) To update, for submission to the Commission on Transnational Corporations at its twelfth session, the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of transnational corporations in South Africa and Namibia and the report of the Secretariat on the responsibilities of home countries with respect to the transnational corporations operating in South Africa and Namibia in violation of the relevant resolutions and decisions of the United Nations.

Economic and Social Council resolution 1985/72

26 July 1985 Meeting 52 35-2-8

Approved by First Committee (E/1985/146) by vote (34-2-8), 24 July (meeting 28); draft by Commission on TNCs (E/1985/28); agenda item 9.

Paragraphs 3 and 6 were approved by the Committee by votes of 28 to 5, with 8 abstentions, and of 28 to 3, with 10 abstentions, respectively. In the Council, paragraph 3 was adopted by a roll-call vote, requested by Zimbabwe, of 32 to 5, with 9 abstentions, and paragraph 6 was adopted by 32 votes to 3, with 10 abstentions.

In explanation of vote, Sweden, also on behalf of Finland and Iceland, said they had voted in favour of the draft but abstained in the vote on the paragraphs because their wording went beyond what the delegations could currently endorse. For similar reasons, Spain voted against paragraph 3 and abstained on the text as a whole. Luxembourg, speaking also on behalf of France, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom, said they had been unable to support the draft; they remained convinced that the progress made by European firms in applying the provisions of the EC Code of Conduct would contribute to solving the apartheid problem, thus encouraging, by means of existing economic relations, the possibility of a peaceful change in South African society.

Hearings on TNC activities in South Africa and Namibia

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Preparations for the Public Hearings on the Activities of TNCs in South Africa and Namibia met from 16 to 18 January and on 14 and 15 February 1985,(82) and submitted to the Commission on TNCs revised guidelines on the organization of the hearings as well as suggestions as to persons and organizations to be invited. The Committee recommended that the hearings should identify measures to bring about the eradication of apartheid and the cessation of South Africa's occupation of Namibia; promote greater awareness of the support by TNCs for South Africa and its apartheid system; and endeavour to identify TNCs involved in such collaboration and seek divestment of their investments in South Africa and Namibia. The recommendations were approved by the Economic and Social Council by decision 1985/127 of 28 May.

Also in accordance with the Committee's recommendations, the Secretary-General and the Chairman of the Commission jointly appointed an 11-member Panel of eminent international personalities to conduct the hearings. The hearings were held in New York from 16 to 20 September and the Panel, which reconvened on 10 and 11 October to consider its report, submitted its unanimously adopted report and recommendations to the Commission.(83)

In preparation for the hearings, the Centre on TNCs prepared reports issued by the Secretary-General on measures regarding TNC activities in South Africa and Namibia,(84) TNC activities and operations in South Africa and their contribution to apartheid,(85) the role of TNCs in the military and nuclear sectors of South Africa and Namibia(53) (see p. 142), employment practices of TNCs and their socio-economic impact, including effects on housing and family life-styles,(86) and TNC activities in Namibia(87) (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III).

In the first of the reports,(84) the Centre provided a compilation of action proposed in resolutions of the United Nations and other intergovernmental organizations, and legislation adopted by Member States, as well as measures by institutional investors (such as colleges, universities and pension funds), NGOs and TNCs. They included measures restricting economic, military and nuclear collaboration, and steps to establish an oil embargo. The Centre, in the second report,(85) described the role of TNCs in the South African economy and its key sectors (the automotive industry, banking, energy, mining, chemicals and electronics), assessed the importance of foreign investment in the economy, and discussed whether disinvestment or continued involvement of TNCs in South Africa would bring more rapid progress towards eradication of apartheid.

The report on TNC employment practices(86) reviewed the situation regarding the terms and conditions of employment of the black majority, pointing to measures by the Government to control the market for them. It also examined the codes of conduct that had been formulated in certain home countries to improve the terms and conditions of employment for black workers employed by South African affiliates of companies based in those home countries (EC, Australia, Canada and the United States had put forward such codes), and the employment practices in Namibia, where the codes did not apply. The Centre concluded that the impact of the employment practices of TNCs in South Africa, even where they had sought to improve the socio-economic conditions of the black majority, had been marginal at best. Ultimately, an assessment of the impact of TNCs would have to go beyond employment practices and focus on their contribution to the survival of apartheid. In Namibia, pressure from the home countries had compelled some TNCs, particularly the three large mining corporations operating there, to make concessions to black labour, including greater trade union freedom, better wages and improvements in housing, training and job advancement.

In preparation for the hearings, the Secretary-General outlined, in April,(88) a publicity programme to promote greater awareness on the part of Governments, particularly those of home countries of TNCs operating in South Africa and Namibia, of the support by TNCs to South Africa and apartheid.

The Panel determined that there were 1,068 TNCs operating in South Africa, 406 of them based in the United States, 364 from the United Kingdom, 142 from the Federal Republic of Germany and the remaining 156 from 16 other States or territories. TNCs transferred capital and technology to South Africa, provided markets for its exports and supplied imports, making a major contribution to its economy. Within South Africa, TNCs accounted for approximately one tenth of the country's capital stock and up to a quarter of its GDP.

While recognizing the steps that the business community had made to promote change, the Panel did not consider that the actions matched their public condemnation of apartheid. It recommended that all TNCs producing for the military, police and security sector disinvest immediately and that the mandatory arms embargo (see p. 144) be expanded to include dual-use items—items serving military and civilian purposes. The Panel also recommended that: all nuclear co-operation with South Africa and Namibia be prohibited; TNCs refuse to comply with South African legislation providing for the establishment of company militia that could be put under the authority of the Government; the voluntary oil embargo be made mandatory; loans to and investment in South Africa be banned; multilateral financial arrangements be conditional on the abolition of apartheid; new licensing of technology be banned; and imports of South African gold be prohibited. The Panel also recommended that TNCs remaining in South Africa adhere to certain standards of behaviour, such as not supplying the security forces with equipment that could be used to enforce apartheid. TNCs were urged to desegregate all work facilities, apply the principle of equal pay and benefits, allow their workers to live permanently with their families and ensure housing for all workers within a reasonable distance of the workplace, and pay an acceptable minimum wage. In addition, the Panel made suggestions for implementing its recommendations, monitoring the situation and follow-up to its report. The Secretary-General was called on to assume overall responsibility for monitoring the implementation, and the United Nations was urged to publicize a list of TNCs that did not comply.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

By decision 40/433 of 17 December, the General Assembly noted that the Commission on TNCs and the Economic and Social Council would in 1986 consider the Panel's recommendations and propose appropriate action.

In resolution 40/64 A, the Assembly condemned the activities of those TNCs and financial institutions that had continued collaborating with South Africa ignoring repeated Assembly appeals. By resolution 40/52, it condemned the TNCs which continued their investments in, and supply of armaments and oil and nuclear technology to, South Africa. The Assembly, in resolution 40/27, took note of the report of the Group of Three of the Commission on Human Rights, established in accordance with the 1973 International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid,(89) and drew the attention of all States to the Group's opinion that article III of the Convention could apply to the actions of TNCs operating in South Africa.

IMF and World Bank relations with South Africa

In 1985, several United Nations bodies called on the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank to terminate relations with South Africa.

On 26 February,(9) the Commission on Human Rights urgently requested all specialized agencies, particularly IMF and the World Bank, to refrain from granting any financial aid to South Africa.

The Committee on colonial countries took similar action on 16 May(31) and 9 August,(90) as did the Council for Namibia in its 7 June(30) Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action. The Committee regretted that the World Bank and IMF continued to maintain links with Pretoria, as exemplified by the participation of South Africa in the work of both agencies, and called on IMF to end such collaboration and not to grant new loans. The Committee recommended that the Assembly reiterate its proposal, under the Agreement between the United Nations and IMF, for the inclusion in the agenda of the IMF Board of Governors of an item on the IMF-South Africa relationship; the Fund was urged to discuss the subject in September 1985 and to report to the Secretary-General on any action.

The Committee's concerns and recommendations were incorporated into General Assembly resolution 40/53 and resolution 40/64 A, by which it called on IMF to terminate credit and other assistance to South Africa. It took similar action in resolution 40/97 A, calling on all specialized agencies, in particular IMF, to terminate collaboration with, and assistance to, South Africa, since such assistance served to augment its military capability, thus enabling it not only to continue the repression in Namibia and South Africa but also to commit aggression against neighbouring States.

Similarly, in resolution 1985/59, the Economic and Social Council deplored the persistent collaboration of IMF with South Africa and urgently called on the Fund to put an end to it.

Israel-South Africa relations

The Special Committee against Apartheid, in October 1985,<sup>(4)</sup> described recent developments concerning relations between Israel and South Africa. It said that over the previous 10 years, there had been increasing collaboration which threatened peace and security in southern Africa, the Middle East and the rest of the world; the two countries had always concealed the extent of their relationship and particularly their nuclear and military collaboration.

Since 1977, when the South African Prime Minister had visited Israel, officials of the two countries had frequently exchanged visits, including a November 1984 visit of the South African Foreign Minister to Israel for consultations with the Prime Minister and his Israeli counterpart.

Nuclear collaboration had been reported since 1977 when South Africa was spotted preparing a nuclear-test site in the Kalahari desert. Israel helped South Africa develop the technical expertise for nuclear weapons, and there was evidence that they had tested a nuclear bomb on 22 September 1979 in the South Atlantic. As for military collaboration, Israel supplied arms and ammunition, served as a conduit for arms supplies to South Africa and assisted in developing South Africa's arms industry. Although accurate statistics were unavailable, it appeared that South Africa had been acquiring as much as 35 per cent of Israeli arms exports in recent years, including gunboats and missiles.

Israeli-South African economic co-operation was increasing, and bilateral trade (excluding oil, arms, gold and diamonds) reached a record 280 million rand in the first 11 months of 1984, according to the South African press. South African investment in Israel also increased in spite of an economic crisis in Israel. Israel was one of the few countries that maintained political, military, economic and cultural relations with the bantustans; in 1984, for example, Ciskei opened the first of six Israeli factories due to be set up there.

The Committee called for international action against the collaboration, in particular the military and nuclear co-operation. It recommended to the General Assembly that there should be closer co-operation between the Department of Public Information and the Centre against Apartheid in disseminating information on that collaboration. It also recommended to the Assembly that all States, particularly Western ones, withhold assistance that enhanced collaboration between Israel and South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/64 E by recorded vote.

Relations between Israel and South Africa

The General Assembly,

Reaffirming its resolutions on relations between Israel and South Africa,

Having considered the special report of the Special Committee against Apartheid on recent developments concerning relations between Israel and South Africa,

Noting with appreciation the efforts of the Special Committee to expose the increasing and continuing collaboration between Israel and South Africa,

Reiterating that the increasing collaboration by Israel with the racist régime of South Africa, especially in the military and nuclear fields, in defiance of resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council is a serious hindrance to international action for the eradication of apartheid, an encouragement to the racist régime of South Africa to persist in its criminal policy of apartheid and a hostile act against the oppressed people of South Africa and the entire African continent and constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

1. Commends the Special Committee against Apartheid for publicizing the growing relations between Israel and South Africa and promoting public awareness of the grave dangers of the alliance between Israel and South Africa;

2. Again strongly condemns the continuing and increasing collaboration of Israel with the racist régime of South Africa, especially in the military and nuclear fields;

3. Demands that Israel desist from and terminate all forms of collaboration with South Africa forthwith, particularly in the military and nuclear fields, and abide scrupulously by the relevant resolutions of the General Assembly and the Security Council;

4. Calls upon all Governments and organizations in a position to do so to exert their influence to persuade Israel to desist from such collaboration;

5. Requests the Special Committee to continue to publicize, as widely as possible, information on the relations between Israel and South Africa;

6. Again requests the Secretary-General to render, through the Department of Public Information and the Centre against Apartheid of the Secretariat, all possible assistance to the Special Committee in disseminating information relating to the collaboration between Israel and South Africa;

7. Further requests the Special Committee to keep the matter under constant review and to report to the General Assembly and the Security Council as appropriate.

Israel said the false accusation of its support for apartheid was propagated by Arab States, which enjoyed immunity from public exposure of their trade with South Africa; according to Israel, Arab oil exports to South Africa reached $2.2 billion per year.

Costa Rica, stating that it would have voted against paragraphs 2 and 3, had separate votes been taken, did not favour singling out specific States in connection with situations where others were co-operating with South Africa. Austria and Ireland also opposed selective singling out of one Member State for condemnation. The United States agreed, adding that many African countries continued to co-operate with South Africa, especially in trade matters.

The Assembly took related action in resolution 40/64 A, requesting the Committee against Apartheid to keep the matter of collaboration between South Africa and Israel under review and to report to the Assembly and the Security Council as appropriate. In resolution 40/25, the Assembly denounced the collusion between the two and expressed support for the Declaration of the 1983 International Conference on the Alliance between South Africa and Israel.(91) By resolution 40/168 A, it condemned the increasing collaboration, especially in the economic, military and nuclear areas, which constituted a hostile act against the African and Arab States. The Assembly's condemnation of the continuing nuclear collaboration between the two countries was restated in resolution 40/93.

Situation in South Africa

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. South Africa's repression of the oppressed people increased dramatically in 1985 as the Government attempted to suppress the growing resistance to apartheid. According to the Special Committee against Apartheid,(1) the régime resorted to large-scale killings, detained thousands of people and subjected scores of its leading opponents to political trials in order to destroy opposition organizations. In February, South Africa attempted forcibly to remove thousands of blacks from Crossroads township near Cape Town to the newly created black township, Khayelitsha, situated in sand dunes several miles away. At least 23 people were killed and more than 200 injured when police fought with demonstrators protesting the removal of 65,000 inhabitants. Forced removals continued, and the Government announced in September that 42,000 blacks would be forcibly moved to the bantustan of KwaZulu.

South Africa deployed the army in and around 36 black townships and declared a state of emergency on 21 July. About 700 people were killed in clashes with the security forces. Deaths in detention and the torture of detainees continued, and assassinations, disappearances and banning of meetings were intensified. South Africa continued its policies of bantustanization (confining the homes of black people to certain areas known as bantustans), forced population removals and influx control under the "pass laws". Resistance to apartheid grew after the imposition in 1984 of the so-called new constitution,(7) under which the black majority was ignored in the new parliamentary procedures and merely advisory and segregated chambers were created for the so-called coloureds (South Africa's term for people of mixed race) and those of Indian origin.

The state of emergency did not bring peace or restore order, but heightened the unrest. By that proclamation, the Government gave unlimited powers to the army and the police in 36 magisterial districts to enter homes and search without warrant, detain persons, declare curfews and shoot at will. No one was allowed to enter or leave a township proclaimed a "demarcated area". The Commissioner of Police was empowered to impose total press censorship, and the police were allowed to seize property and move people from one location to another. Within six weeks of the proclamation, over 2,500 persons were detained and over 140 were killed. Despite the international protest, South Africa continued its repression of opponents of apartheid, including arrests, detentions and killings. Furthermore, in July South Africa banned outdoor funerals for victims of black unrest and forbade political speeches at the funerals, the last remaining legal forum for black meetings.

On 15 August, President P. W. Botha made a policy speech, confirming the régime's intention of not only perpetuating but further entrenching the apartheid system. He rejected the principle of one person, one vote and political rights for blacks in a democratic and unitary State, and threatened stronger measures against opponents of apartheid. With regard to the question of citizenship, he described the Government's intention of considering dual citizenship for blacks in the so-called "independent homelands" or bantustans and South African citizenship for all other blacks who would "be accommodated within political institutions" within South Africa. Mr. Botha did not, however, define those institutions other than referring to "participation in institutions on a regional and/or group basis". According to the Committee, this statement meant that blacks were expected to become South African citizens but without full citizenship and political rights. The statement was deplored even by South Africa's trading partners and friends. On 16 August, the Secretary-General stated that his concerns had not been allayed by the President's speech, which did not address the main issues raised in Security Council resolution 569(1985) (see p. 158).

In addition to police and army violence, the assassination and disappearance of apartheid opponents increased. Three leaders of the Port Elizabeth Black Civic Organization, an affiliate of the United Democratic Front (UDF), disappeared on their way to the airport in May. On 26 June, eight young Africans, most of them members of the Congress of South African Students, were killed in suspicious circumstances in three townships near Johannesburg. Also in June, four leading anti-apartheid activists and UDF members left Port Elizabeth by car but never arrived at their destination. UDF claimed that 27 of its members had disappeared in mysterious circumstances and that 11 others were assassinated. In August, riot police hurled tear-gas grenades into the house of Winnie Mandela, wife of ANC leader Nelson Mandela, who had been imprisoned for more than 20 years. Later, her house was burnt down during the night, an act she said was the work of the security forces. (The Committee against Apartheid collected $116,450 from countries and individuals for Mrs. Mandela and presented it to the Secretary-General on 30 October.) Under the state of emergency, hundreds of schoolchildren, some as young as eight years old, were arrested and taken to court on charges of boycotting their schools.

In October, police hid in containers on the back of a decoy truck and shot dead three youths in Athlone township, Cape Town. The next month they killed 19 people, including a baby, in Mamelodi township of Pretoria, when they fired on a crowd of women.

Resistance reached a new level, with blacks starting to boycott white-owned shops, and school boycotts by black students continued. The campaign to boycott the elections to the coloured and Indian Houses of Parliament was effective—as a result, only 17 per cent of the electorate voted and the régime-instituted local government system in African townships collapsed after many councillors resigned and several others were killed. Other anti-apartheid actions included rent and bus-fare strikes. From September 1984 to May 1985, about 1,500 cases of violent demonstrations took place, according to the police.

In March, a three-month ban, later extended to the end of the year, was imposed on all meetings by 28 organizations.

To ease domestic and international pressures for change, the Government announced its intention to consider so-called reforms, repealed some discriminatory laws of no real consequence to blacks and made a policy statement reaffirming its commitment to apartheid. After opening the new tricameral Parliament in January, the President announced his intention to establish an "informal" forum for blacks, who were excluded from the Parliament. Later, the régime repealed the Prohibition of Mixed Marriages Act and legislation which prohibited political parties from recruiting members of more than one racial group. Despite the change in the marital law, the lives of those involved would not be improved since, by law, a husband and wife of different races could not live in the same place and the schooling of the children would still be governed by other apartheid laws.

On 24 July, the Committee against Apartheid issued a statement drawing the attention of Governments and organizations to the explosive situation in South Africa and the need for urgent action by the international community. It condemned the imposition of a state of emergency as a desperate act by the apartheid régime, which had been unable to control rising popular resistance against oppression despite continuous killings and arrests. The constitutional fraud had only led, in the previous two years, to a greater mobilization of the people against the Government. The responsibility for the loss of life rested not only on the Pretoria régime, but also on those Powers that had continued to hinder international action to force it to abandon apartheid and repression, abrogate the racist Constitution and negotiate with the genuine leaders of the people for the establishment of a democratic State. In view of the situation, the United Nations had a responsibility to take all necessary action under the Charter to avert a wider conflict. As a first step, the Security Council must demand that South Africa end the state of emergency, cease its police and military terror, release all detainees, abrogate the Constitution and comply with United Nations resolutions. The Committee urged all Governments and organizations to exert their influence on those Governments, particularly the United States and the United Kingdom, that had frustrated attempts to impose sanctions.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights and its subsidiary bodies. The Commission on Human Rights, in a 26 February resolution(93) on human rights violations in South Africa (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII), condemned apartheid, the bantustanization policy, the forced removals of the black population, the policy of denationalization, the suppression of apartheid opponents, the use of violence in dealing with protests, and the inferior quality of education for blacks. It reaffirmed its rejection of the so-called constitutional arrangements in South Africa, as they served to perpetuate apartheid and denied the black population their full citizenship rights. The Commission called on South Africa to respect international standards on trade union rights in respect of black trade unions and to desist from maltreating black trade union leaders.

In related action, the Commission's Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts on southern Africa reported on allegations of infringements of trade union rights in South Africa, and, by resolution 1985/43, the Economic and Social Council took action on those rights.

Also on 26 February,(8) the Commission again rejected the so-called new constitution as null and void. It condemned South Africa for its repression, torture and killing of workers, schoolchildren and other opponents of apartheid, the imposition of death sentences on freedom fighters (see p. 163), and the policy of bantustanization.

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, on 30 August,(94) condemned South Africa for the terrorism carried out to suppress the mass movement for the human rights of the black majority and demanded the immediate lifting of the state of emergency and the cessation of brutality by South African police and military forces.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (March)

In 1985, as tension in South Africa mounted, the Security Council took action by adopting two resolutions—resolution 560(1985), on 12 March, and the second, resolution 569(1985), on 26 July—on the question of South Africa. In addition, the Council issued two statements—on 22 March and 21 August—expressing alarm at the continuing deterioration of the situation.

Egypt, on behalf of the Group of African States, on 28 February,(95) requested the President of the Council to convene a meeting to consider the situation in South Africa resulting from the murder of demonstrators protesting forced removals, the arrests and high treason charges against UDF officials and the continued repression. At the two meetings held, on 8 and 12 March, the Council invited, at their request, Democratic Yemen, Guinea, South Africa, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Republic of Tanzania and Viet Nam to participate, without the right to vote, in the discussion. The Council also invited, under rule 39a of its provisional rules of procedure, the Acting Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid.

South Africa said that the convening of the Council contravened the provisions of the United Nations Charter which precluded intervention in a Member State's domestic affairs. The February events at Crossroads township occurred because population drift to the cities had resulted in squatter camps and their concomitant problems, and, instead of bulldozing the camps or consigning the squatters to so-called re-education camps, as had been done elsewhere, South Africa was trying to alleviate the inhabitants' problems in a compassionate way through an urban renewal programme and orderly development. Those arrested were subject to due legal process and were arrested not for their political beliefs but for specific acts committed in contravention of the law.

Most speakers condemned the so-called constitutional reforms, massive repression, arbitrary arrests, detention without trial, killings and the forced removal of the inhabitants of Crossroads and other black townships. They were Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Egypt, Guinea, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and the United Republic of Tanzania. France, Madagascar and Thailand saw the forced removals as part of the policy of bantustanization.

Guinea, speaking for the African Group, condemned any collusion with the South African régime. India stated that the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries had met urgently on 6 March in New York and had condemned South Africa's actions of forced removal of defenceless people and called on the Council to implement its resolutions pertaining to apartheid. China fully supported the Non-Aligned Movement's position. Stating that in addition to the 4 million people already banished to the homelands, some 2 million more were threatened with being uprooted, the United Republic of Tanzania called for action under Chapter VII of the Charter. Democratic Yemen, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR also called for such action. According to Trinidad and Tobago, those with influence over South Africa ought not only to indicate their disapproval of the régime's policies but to pressure it to ensure an end to apartheid.

<sup>94</sup>Rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure states: "The Security Council may invite members of the Secretariat or other persons, whom it considers competent for the purpose, to supply it with information or to give other assistance in examining matters within its competence."

Australia hoped that recent statements of the South African Government concerning its intention to give leasehold rights to black people would be carried out. Egypt stressed that South Africa must withdraw the charges of high treason against UDF officials. While expressing disappointment at South Africa's statement, especially in view of the universal condemnation of its actions at Crossroads, the United Kingdom took heart at what it said were some significant developments taking place in South Africa, particularly the recent speech by its President indicating greater flexibility and commitment to a fuller dialogue between the Government and black opinion there. Denmark said the President's speech did not correspond with the latest wave of violence. Burkina Faso saw nothing in the current attitude of the Pretoria Government to suggest any hope of evolution in South Africa's internal situation.

The Acting Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid read a message from Bishop Desmond Tutu, who hoped that the Council would express abhorrence of South Africa's reactions to peaceful opposition and urged the Council not to remain indifferent to the serious threat to peace.

On 12 March, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 560(1985).

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 473(1980), 554(1984) and 556(1984), which, inter alia, demanded the cessation of the uprootings, relocation and denationalization of the indigenous African people,

Noting with deep concern the aggravation of the situation in South Africa resulting from repeated killings of defenceless opponents of apartheid in various townships all over South Africa and, most recently, the killing of African demonstrators against forced removals at Crossroads,

Gravely concerned by the arbitrary arrests of members of the United Democratic Front and other mass organizations opposed to the apartheid régime,

Deeply concerned by the preferment of charges of "high treason" on Mrs. Albertina Sisulu, Mr. Archie Gumede,

Mr. George Sewpershad, Mr. M. J. Naidoo, the Reverend Frank Chikana, Professor Ismael Mohammed, Mr. Mewa Ramgobin, Mr. Cassim Saloojee, Mr. Paul David, Mr. Essop Jasset, Mr. Curtis Nkondo, Mr. Aubrey Mokoena, Mr. Thomazile Qweta, Mr. Sisa Njikelana, Mr. Sam Kikine and Mr. Isaac Ngcobo, officials of the United Democratic Front and other opponents of apartheid for their participation in the non-violent campaign for a united non-racial and democratic South Africa,

Aware that racist South Africa's intensified repression and charges of "high treason" against leading opponents of apartheid constitute an effort further to entrench racist minority rule,

Concerned that repression further undermines the possibilities of a peaceful solution of the South African conflict,

Concerned over racist South Africa's policy of the uprooting, denationalization and dispossession of three and a half million indigenous African people to date, thus swelling the ranks of the other millions already doomed to permanent unemployment and starvation,

Noting with indignation that South Africa's policy of bantustanization is also aimed at the creation of internal bases for the fomenting of fratricidal conflict,

1. Strongly condemns the Pretoria regime for the killing of defenceless African people protesting against their forced removal from Crossroads and other places;

2. Strongly condemns the arbitrary arrests by the Pretoria régime of members of the United Democratic Front and other mass organizations opposed to South Africa's policy of apartheid;

3. Calls upon the Pretoria régime to release unconditionally and immediately all political prisoners and detainees, including Nelson Mandela and all other black leaders with whom it must deal in any meaningful discussion of the future of the country;

4. Also calls upon the Pretoria régime to withdraw the charges of "high treason" instituted against the United Democratic Front officials, and calls for their immediate and unconditional release;

5. Commends the massive united resistance of the oppressed people of South Africa against apartheid, and reaffirms the legitimacy of their struggle for a united, non-racial and democratic South Africa;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council on the implementation of the present resolution;

7. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Security Council resolution 560(1985)

12 March 1985 Meeting 2574 Adopted unanimously

6-nation draft (S/17013/Rev.1).

Sponsors: Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago. Meeting numbers. SC 2571, 2574.

Speaking after the vote, the United States, stressing its abhorrence of apartheid and the need for change in South Africa, expressed reservations on formulations in the resolution which, it felt, prejudged the South African judicial process and neglected to call for observance of judicial due process, including speedy trial and access to legal counsel; it also regretted the deviations from language proper to a Council resolution.

As the situation continued to deteriorate in South Africa, the President of the Council, on 22 March, issued the following statement:(96)

"The members of the Security Council have entrusted me to express on their behalf their grave concern over the rapid deterioration of the situation in South Africa resulting from the spate of violence against defenceless opponents of apartheid throughout the country and most recently in the town of Uitenhage on 21 March 1985, where the South African police opened fire on innocent people proceeding to a funeral, killing and wounding scores of them.

"The members of the Council strongly deplore such acts of violence, which can only further aggravate the situation in South Africa and make more difficult the search for a peaceful solution of the South African conflict.

"The members of the Council recall the provisions of resolution 560(1985), adopted unanimously on 12 March 1985, in which the Council noted with deep concern the intensification of repression in South Africa, commended the massive united resistance of the oppressed people of South Africa against apartheid, and reaffirmed the legitimacy of their struggle for a united, non-racial and democratic South Africa.

"The members of the Council urge the Government of South Africa to end violence and repression against the black people and other opponents of apartheid and to take urgent measures to eliminate apartheid."

Referring to the Council President's statement, South Africa, in a letter to the Secretary-General of 22 March,(97) expressed regret at the loss of life resulting from the 21 March events. It said the organizers of the march, on the anniversary of the Sharpeville incidents, bore heavy responsibility for what occurred. Describing the sequence of events, South Africa said a 19-man police unit had fired in self-defence after trying to halt the unlawful march of some three to four thousand people, armed with stones, petrol bombs and bricks. The President had appointed a commission to investigate the incident.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (July/August)

On 24 July, France, concerned at the continuance and worsening of the human suffering in South Africa, requested that the Council convene immediately.(98) The next day, Mali, on behalf of the African Group, made a similar request.(99) The Council debated the question at three meetings, on 25 and 26 July; at their request, it invited the Central African Republic, Cuba, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, Kenya, Mali, Senegal, South Africa, the Syrian Arab Republic, Yugoslavia and Zaire to participate without vote. It also invited, under rule 39 of the provisional rules of procedure,<sup>b</sup> the Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid.

During the debate, Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru and Trinidad and Tobago submitted an amendment<sup>(100)</sup> to a revised draft resolution sponsored by Denmark and France, which was eventually adopted as resolution 569(1985). By the proposed amendment, a paragraph would have been inserted, after paragraph 5, by which the Council would have warned South Africa that failure to eliminate apartheid would compel it to consider measures under the United Nations Charter, including Chapter VII, as additional pressure to ensure compliance with United Nations decisions. The amendment was not adopted, owing to the negative votes of two permanent members of the Council. The vote was 12 to 2 (United Kingdom, United States), with 1 abstention (France).

France believed that the provisions of Chapter VII of the Charter did not apply to the question before the Council.

Speaking on behalf of the amendment's sponsors, Burkina Faso regretted that permanent members had weakened the Council's position by sending Pretoria a false message.

Addressing the Council, South Africa said it was committed to political reform which would involve all the South African communities, was seeking to create structures of government without domination, and was ready to negotiate with representatives of black opinion to find an equitable solution satisfying the reasonable aspiration of all its peoples. South Africa urged that violence be forsworn as a means to achieve political ends. The unrest was intended to frustrate the reform process, and moderate black leaders were being intimidated by acts of assassination, murder, arson and threats to their lives to prevent their becoming involved in the negotiating process. The emergency measures were introduced to protect the lives and property of blacks and they would be lifted as soon as the violence diminished.

Nearly all speakers condemned the imposition of the state of emergency and said it only added to the tension and further violence. Many—including Australia, Cuba, Denmark, France, Mali (for the African Group) and the United Kingdom—said that the root cause of the tension was the apartheid system which must be eliminated. Australia said the introduction of the state of emergency had revealed how far South Africa was prepared to go to shore up the apartheid system; that situation would not provide a permanent end to violence but would more likely encourage people to feel that the only way to achieve progress was through confrontation. Thailand said the state of emergency would aggravate the sufferings of the black majority and exacerbate tension as well as threaten international peace and security. For India, the state of emergency amounted to a declaration of war on the oppressed. In China's view, the double tactic of deception and suppression exposed further the false nature of so-called reforms by South Africa, which was only trying to defend the apartheid system. The genocide of South African blacks had to be stopped, Cuba said, and there had to be a united effort to bring about the final elimination of apartheid.

Madagascar believed the state of emergency was intended to legalize the terror perpetrated by South Africa's forces, and reflected the disarray of the régime in the face of the increasing turbulence and the growing fervour of the demonstrators. Asserting that the non-aligned countries had consistently called for the elimination of apartheid, Yugoslavia said that to support the liberation struggle and the liberation movements in southern Africa was the most efficient way to eliminate apartheid.

Burkina Faso, China, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, India, Kenya, Madagascar, the Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Yugoslavia explicitly called on the Council to adopt comprehensive, mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter. The Syrian Arab Republic said the Council had to support the revolution going on in South Africa by imposing mandatory sanctions; to argue that sanctions would adversely affect the black masses belittled their struggle.

Burkina Faso, Denmark and Peru called for increased international pressure against South Africa as a means to force it to abandon apartheid. Burkina Faso said it was time to use the only language that South Africa understood—the language of force.

Affirming that the latest manifestation of the policy of repression demonstrated the need for increased international pressure against apartheid, Denmark stressed that South Africa must be made to understand that the system had to be abolished while it was still possible through peaceful means.

Peru stated that a combined force of both internal and external pressure—the latter in the form of specific measures—would have a decisive influence on South Africa and bring about conditions more favourable to the struggling people.

Mali, for the African Group, said South Africa's actions were encouraged by certain Western allies, and stressed that the Group condemned the policy of constructive engagement and all other collaboration with apartheid.

Kenya, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR made similar statements about the support of certain countries for South Africa. According to Trinidad and Tobago, policies of constructive dialogue had not only produced intransigence by South Africa, but had given the régime moral support for its violence. The Ukrainian SSR said South Africa had been able to act so brutally because it relied on its co-operation with the United States and several other Western countries and Israel, and felt secure that they would protect it from sanctions. The USSR condemned such support and the United States policy of "constructive engagement".

Australia, Denmark, Egypt, Kenya, the United Kingdom and the United States stressed the need for negotiations or peaceful means in order to achieve progress in eliminating apartheid. Australia said that only the removal of the grievances and the introduction of genuine reform, through consultation with the real representatives of the black community, could offer the prospect of lasting and peaceful solutions. Egypt said the Council ought to demand that South Africa embark unconditionally on a dialogue with the true leaders of the black majority to lay the foundations for a democratic, authentic government. Similarly, Kenya called on South Africa to embark on an immediate dialogue between the different races with a view to instituting a democratic system and to free all detainees, including Nelson Mandela.

Although supporting most elements of the resolution, the United Kingdom and the United States expressed reservations about certain measures against South Africa. The United Kingdom said it could not vote for the resolution and had voted against the proposed amendment because it would not be responsible to call for measures, such as those under Chapter VII of the Charter, that would not achieve the changes all sought in South Africa and which might prove counter-productive. The United States said totally isolating South Africa economically and politically would lead to more bloodshed, to increased autarky of the South African economy, to a curtailment of external influence to effect change, and to greater suffering for the very people all were trying to help; it added that it would maintain its policy of constructive engagement with South Africa.

India warned that, if the Council did not act decisively, the oppressed South Africans would act on their own through mass popular mobilization, and that the cycle of violence and bloodshed would intensify.

France announced that it was recalling its Ambassador to South Africa and suspending new investment there. France's decisions were welcomed by Zaire. The Central African Republic spoke in like manner and was joined by Ethiopia and Senegal in praising France for having requested the meeting.

The Chairman of the Committee against Apartheid believed that the minimum required of the Council was a determination that the situation in South Africa constituted a threat to international peace and security under Chapter VII of the Charter; he said the Council's previous failure to discharge its responsibility was due to the protection of the apartheid régime by certain permanent members.

On 26 July, the Security Council adopted resolution 569(1985).

The Security Council,

Deeply concerned at the worsening of the situation in South Africa and at the continuance of the human suffering that the apartheid system, which the Council strongly condemns, is causing in that country,

Outraged at the repression, and condemning the arbitrary arrests of hundreds of persons,

Considering that the imposition of the state of emergency in thirty-six districts of the Republic of South Africa constitutes a grave deterioration of the situation in that country,

Considering as totally unacceptable the practice by the South African Government of detention without trial and of forcible removal, as well as the discriminatory legislation in force,

Acknowledging the legitimacy of the aspirations of the South African population as a whole to benefit from all civil and political rights and to establish a united non-racial and democratic society,

Acknowledging further that the very cause of the situation in South Africa lies in the policy of apartheid and the practices of the South African Government,

1. Strongly condemns the apartheid system and all the policies and practices deriving therefrom;

2. Strongly condemns the mass arrests and detentions recently carried out by the Pretoria Government and the murders which have been committed;

3. Strongly condemns the establishment of the state of emergency in the thirty-six districts in which it has been imposed and demands that it be lifted immediately;

4. Calls upon the South African Government to set free immediately and unconditionally all political prisoners and detainees, first of all, Mr. Nelson Mandela;

5. Reaffirms that only the total elimination of apartheid and the establishment in South Africa of a free, united and democratic society on the basis of universal suffrage can lead to a solution;

6. Urges States Members of the United Nations to adopt measures; against South Africa, such as the following:

(a) Suspension of all new investment in South Africa;
(b) Prohibition of the sale of oil products and all other commodities mined in South Africa;

(c) Restrictions on sports and cultural relations;

(d) Suspension of guaranteed export loans;

(e) Prohibition of all new contracts in the nuclear field;

(f) Prohibition of all sales of computer equipment that may be used by the South African army and police;

7. Commends those States which have already adopted voluntary measures against the Pretoria Government and urges them to adopt new provisions, and invites those which have not yet done so to follow their example;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council on the implementation of the present resolution;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter and to reconvene as soon as the Secretary-General has issued his report, with a view to considering the progress made in the implementation of the present resolution.

Security Council resolution 569(1985)

26 July 1985

Meeting 2602

13-0-2

Draft by Denmark and France (S/17354/Rev.1).

Meeting numbers. SC 2600-2602.

Vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

Against: None.

Abstaining: United Kingdom, United States.

Speaking after the resolution's adoption, France said the vote was the gravest condemnation of South Africa for racial discrimination and violation of human rights.

On 21 August, the Council held a meeting at which the President stated that, as a result of consultations among members, he had been authorized to make the following statement on their behalf:<sup>(101)</sup>

Meeting number. SC 2603.

"The members of the Security Council, deeply alarmed by the worsening and deteriorating situation of the oppressed black majority population in South Africa since the imposition of the state of emergency on 21 July 1985, express once again their profound concern at this deplorable situation.

"The members of the Council condemn the Pretoria régime for its continued failure to heed the repeated appeals made by the international community, including Security Council resolution 569(1985) and, in particular, the demand made in that resolution for the immediate lifting of the state of emergency.

"The members of the Council strongly condemn the continuation of killings and the arbitrary mass arrests and detentions carried out by the Pretoria Government. They call, once again, upon the South African Government to set free immediately and unconditionally all political prisoners and detainees, first of all, Mr. Nelson Mandela, whose home has lately been subjected to an act of arson.

"The members of the Council believe that a just and lasting solution in South Africa must be based on the total eradication of the system of apartheid and the establishment of a free, united and democratic society in South Africa. Without concrete action towards such a just and lasting solution in South Africa, any pronouncements of the Pretoria régime can represent nothing more than a reaffirmation of its attachment to apartheid and underline its continuing intransigence in the face of mounting domestic and international opposition to the continuation of this thoroughly unjustified political and social system. In this context, the members of the Council express their grave concern at the latest pronouncements of the President of the Pretoria régime."

The Foreign Minister of South Africa, in a letter to the Secretary-General of 28 August,<sup>(102)</sup> referring to resolution 569(1985) and the Council's declaration of 21 August, stated that those actions violated the principle of non-interference in a Member State's internal affairs and that the criteria applied in the resolution were suspect in so far as the demand for a democratic society on the basis of universal suffrage was a test that could not be met by many United Nations Members. In addition, punitive measures called for could have damaging effects on the economy and stability of South Africa's neighbours. South Africa rejected the charge that the imposition of a state of emergency in certain areas constituted a grave deterioration of the situation. It was imposed to combat lawlessness of every kind in black townships, including large-scale intimidation by blacks against blacks.

Action by Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. On 20 August,(103) the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination condemned South Africa for crimes against the black people and appealed to States parties to the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination(104) to implement resolution 569(1985).

Communications. Throughout the year, States addressed letters to the Secretary-General or the President of the Security Council expressing concern about the South Africa situation—India, on 6 March,(105) 27 July(106) and 27 August,(107) all forwarding communiqués adopted by the Coordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries; China, on 23 March,(108) 29 July(109) and 24 December;(110) Saint Lucia, on 28 March;(111) Spain, on 29 March;(112) Italy, on 3 April(113) and 2 May,(114) forwarding declarations of 25 March and 29 April of EC ministerial meetings on European political co-operation; the USSR, on 9 April,(115) forwarding a statement by TASS; Argentina, on 3 June(116) and 30 July;(117) Australia, on 24 July;(118) Luxembourg, on 25 July(119) and 26 August,(120) forwarding a declaration adopted by an EC ministerial meeting and an EC press release, respectively; Brazil, on 26 July;(121) Tunisia, on 26 July;(122) Democratic Kampuchea, on 29 July;(123) Burkina Faso, on 29 July,(124) transmitting a letter from Oliver Tambo, President of ANC; Japan, on 5 August(125) and 27 December;(126) Senegal, on 5 August(127) and 16 August;(128) Indonesia, on 9 August;(129) Uruguay, on 12 August;(130) Thailand, on 19 August;(131) Jamaica, on 22 August;(132) Nicaragua, on 22 August;(133) Antigua and Barbuda, on 23 December;(134) and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on 31 December.(135)

Argentina, China, Democratic Kampuchea, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Nicaragua, Saint Lucia, Senegal, Spain, Thailand, Uruguay, EC and the Non-Aligned Movement denounced the violence by the South African authorities. Some mentioned, in particular, the killing of demonstrators at Uitenhage, Crossroads and other places. Spain condemned the large-scale uprooting and relocation of black people, as did the Non-Aligned Movement, which demanded that South Africa put an immediate and unconditional end to banishing the black people to artificially created “bantustans”.

The Movement condemned South Africa for the arbitrary arrests of UDF members and other apartheid opponents and for “high treason” charges against a number of UDF officials; reiterated its call for the unconditional release of all South African political prisoners, including Nelson Mandela, and for the release of Allan Boesak, a UDF leader; and admired Mr. Mandela’s rejection of an offer of conditional release made by South Africa (see p. 162). EC also called for Mr. Mandela’s release, ending detention without trial, discontinuing forcible removal, and abolishing discriminatory legislation, including the pass laws and the Group Areas Act. Democratic Kampuchea demanded the release of all political prisoners and detainees. Antigua and Barbuda, China and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya deplored the arrest of Winnie Mandela on 23 December. Antigua and Barbuda called on Governments which were able to influence South Africa and especially the United States to do all possible to secure her release.

The Movement, Senegal (for OAU) and the USSR urged the Security Council to deal with the grave situation by imposing sanctions against South Africa. Argentina appealed to the international community to halt all direct or indirect support for South Africa. Indonesia called for implementation of voluntary economic sanctions and the embargo on military supplies. Saint Lucia said the world must find the political will to act against South Africa. EC called for a dialogue leading to substantial reforms, with a view to responding to the legitimate aspirations of the black population. Also calling for comprehensive sanctions, ANC said that mere condemnation of the apartheid system would only serve to convince South Africa that the international community was unable to take firm action.

The imposition of the state of emergency was condemned by Argentina, Australia, Brazil, China, Democratic Kampuchea, Indonesia, Japan, Nicaragua, Senegal, Thailand, Tunisia, EC and the Non-Aligned Movement. Argentina said the problem’s definitive solution involved, at that time, lifting the state of emergency and halting repression. Australia was concerned that the state of emergency would encourage people to feel that the only way to achieve progress was through confrontation; Australia recognized that only the removal of grievances and genuine political reforms through consultation with the real representatives of the black community would offer prospects of lasting and peaceful solutions. In Brazil’s view, the emergency measures only aggravated the deplorable situation. Noting world outrage over those events, Tunisia was gratified at France’s response (see p. 157) and considered the United States attitude and actions as being of particular significance.

According to the USSR, the United States or imperialist circles that collaborated with South Africa also bore responsibility for its actions.

The Non-Aligned Movement condemned the 15 August policy statement by the South African President, which, it said, constituted further proof of the régime's refusal to renounce apartheid. Asserting that the statement did not meet their expectations, EC, joined by Spain and Portugal, urged South Africa to open a real dialogue with the authentic representatives of the black population; EC would undertake a mission to South Africa from 30 August to 1 September to appeal to it to do so.

In the current circumstances, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said, armed struggle had become the sole means of liberating the people in South Africa and of securing their rights and freedom.

By a letter of 14 November, (136) the Chairman of the Committee against Apartheid forwarded a statement from the Executive Committee of the InterAction Council—26 former heads of Government—on proposals for the rapid abolition of apartheid, including termination of the state of emergency, release of political prisoners, equal rights for all South Africans and elimination of media censorship.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/64 B by recorded vote.

Situation in South Africa and assistance to the liberation movements

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee against Apartheid,

Recalling its resolution 39/2 of 28 September 1984, in which, inter alia, it stated that South Africa's continued defiance of United Nations resolutions and its imposition of the rejected so-called "new constitution" will inevitably lead to further escalation of the already explosive situation in South Africa and will have far-reaching consequences for southern Africa and the world,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 473(1980) of 13 June 1980, 554(1984) of 17 August 1984, 556(1984) of 23 October 1984 and 569(1985) of 26 July 1985, in which it demanded, inter alia, the cessation of the uprootings, relocation and denationalization of the indigenous African people, and demanded the immediate lifting of the state of emergency in thirty-six districts in South Africa,

Recalling, in particular, its resolution 3411 C (XXX) of 28 November 1975, in which it proclaimed that the United Nations and the international community had a special responsibility towards the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movements,

Gravely concerned about the situation in South Africa, and in southern Africa as a whole, resulting from the policies and actions of the apartheid régime, in particular, its efforts to perpetuate and consolidate racist domination in the country, its policy of "bantustanization", its brutal repression of opponents of apartheid and its constant acts of aggression against neighbouring States,

Noting with indignation that South Africa's policy of bantustanization is aimed at further dispossessing the African majority of its inalienable rights and depriving it of citizenship and fomenting fratricidal conflict,

Gravely concerned at the continuing massacres, killings and other atrocities against defenceless opponents of apartheid perpetrated by the racist régime in Sharpeville, Soweto, Sebokeng and other black townships,

Alarmed at the massive arrests and detentions of leaders and activists of liberation organizations inside the country as well as the increasing number of deaths resulting from police brutality and torture during detentions, which have been confirmed by reports of international humanitarian organizations, and the Detainees Parent Support Committee in South Africa and the Institute of Criminology of the University of Cape Town,

Reaffirming the legitimacy of the struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa and their liberation movements by all available means, including armed struggle, for the elimination of apartheid, which is declared as a crime against humanity, and seriously violating international peace and security,

1. Again proclaims its full support of the national liberation movements of South Africa as the authentic representatives of the South African people in its just struggle for freedom;

2. Strongly condemns the illegitimate minority racist régime of South Africa for its policies and actions, in particular the imposition of the state of emergency in that country;

3. Condemns the South African racist régime for defying resolutions of the United Nations and persisting with the further entrenchment of apartheid, a system declared a crime against humanity and a threat to international peace and security;

4. Strongly condemns the Pretoria régime for the killing of defenceless African people protesting against their forced removal from Crossroads and other places as well as the arbitrary arrests of members of the United Democratic Front, National Forum and other mass organizations opposed to apartheid;

5. Condemns the execution of Benjamin Maloie in defiance of international calls for rescinding his execution order;

6. Reaffirms that freedom fighters of South Africa should be treated as prisoners of war in accordance with Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949;

7. Demands that the Pretoria régime withdraw the trumped up charges of "high treason" instituted against members of the United Democratic Front and other organizations and immediately and unconditionally release all of them;

8. Further demands that the Pretoria régime release unconditionally and immediately all political prisoners and detainees, including Nelson Mandela and Zephania Mothopeng;

9. Commends the massive united resistance of the oppressed people of South Africa against apartheid, and reaffirms the legitimacy of their struggle for a united, non-racial and democratic South Africa;

10. Demands the immediate lifting of the state of emergency in South Africa;

11. Demands that the racist régime:

(a) Withdraw all its troops immediately and unconditionally from Angola;

(b) Put an end to its illegal occupation of Namibia;

(c) Strictly observe the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of independent African States;

12. Appeals to all States, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations, anti-apartheid and solidarity movements, trade unions, religious bodies, student and other public organizations, mass media as well as city and other local authorities and individuals urgently to provide increased political, economic, educational, legal and other forms of support to the oppressed people of South Africa, as well as humanitarian and all other necessary assistance to the national liberation movements of South Africa in their just struggle for the exercise of the right of self-determination by the oppressed people of South Africa;

13. Reaffirms that only the total eradication of apartheid and the establishment of a non-racial democratic society based on majority rule, through the full and free exercise of adult suffrage by all the people in a united and unfragmented South Africa, can lead to a just and lasting solution of the explosive situation in South Africa;

14. Decides to continue the authorization of adequate financial provision in the regular budget of the United Nations to enable the South African liberation movements recognized by the Organization of African Unity—namely, the African National Congress of South Africa and the Pan Africanist Congress of Azania—to maintain offices in New York in order to participate effectively in the deliberations of the Special Committee against Apartheid and other appropriate bodies;

15. Requests the Security Council, as a matter of urgency, to consider the serious situation in South Africa emanating from the imposition of the so-called “new constitution” and the state of emergency and to take all necessary measures, in accordance with Chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations, to avert the further aggravation of tension and conflict in South Africa and in southern Africa as a whole.

Speaking in explanation of vote, Canada, Ireland, the Netherlands and New Zealand expressed reservations about the affirmation of the legitimacy of armed struggle although they supported such demands as the release of political prisoners and detainees and the lifting of the state of emergency. New Zealand added that it objected to some of the extravagant rhetoric in the resolution. The Netherlands said it could not subscribe to its general thrust, which postulated the existence of a colonial situation in South Africa. Uruguay agreed with the resolution in general, but its policy was to support the peaceful settlement of disputes.

The United States opposed the resolution because it failed to understand how the imposition of sanctions would lessen tension or promote dialogue and negotiations.

In resolution 40/64 I, the Assembly took similar action, condemning the South African authorities for the killings, arbitrary mass arrests and the detention of members of mass organizations as well as individuals for opposing apartheid, the so-called new constitution and the state of emergency. The Assembly demanded, among other things, that the authorities immediately lift the state of emergency; initiate a political dialogue with genuine leaders of the majority population with a view to establishing a representative government; and dismantle the bantustan structures. Similar provisions were contained in resolution 40/25, in which the Assembly also condemned the policy of “bantustanization” and reiterated support for the oppressed people of South Africa in its just and legitimate struggle against the racist minority régime.

In resolution 40/64 A, the Assembly supported the movement against conscription into the armed forces of South Africa, and invited all Governments and organizations to assist, in consultation with the liberation movements, persons compelled to leave South Africa for conscientious objection.

Political prisoners and other detained persons

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. The Special Committee against Apartheid continued to campaign for the release of political prisoners in South Africa and for an end to repression against the opponents of apartheid.<sup>(1)</sup> It reported that thousands of such opponents were arrested in 1985 on various charges under security legislation and the state of emergency regulations; over 11,000 people were detained without charge or trial, many were tortured, and 12 persons, including three children, died in detention.

Police arrested seven prominent black leaders in February and three more in April, mostly UDF leaders. South African authorities arrested more than 200 people on 26 March, as they marched to the South African Parliament in Cape Town to present a list of democratic demands. In June, hundreds were arrested in townships in the Eastern Cape and Orange Free State, and many community leaders of Port Elizabeth were detained under security laws. From July to mid-September, about 3,500 people were detained under the emergency measures, most of them leaders of political and community organizations such as UDF, the Azanian People's Organization, and youth, student and trade groups.

In a statement issued on 20 February, at the time South Africa was attempting to remove blacks forcibly from Crossroads township, the Committee's Chairman expressed alarm at the deterioration of the situation. He called on the international community to oblige South Africa to stop the violence and to ensure the immediate release of UDF leaders and other political prisoners. On 18 July, the Acting Chairman sent a message of greetings to Nelson Mandela on his sixty-seventh birthday and pledged intensified efforts towards the unconditional release of political prisoners.

At a special meeting held on 24 July, the Committee concluded that the state of emergency imposed on 36 communities constituted a declaration of war against the oppressed people and other opponents of apartheid, and called on the Security Council to demand that South Africa end the state of emergency, cease its police and military terror and release all detainees.

On 27 August, the Chairman issued a statement condemning the South African authorities for the arrest of Allan Boesak, President of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and a UDF supporter, who was to have led a mass protest march on Pollsmoor prison to present a message of solidarity to Mr. Mandela. The Chairman urged the international community to pressure South Africa for the release of those two men and all other political prisoners.

Some provisions of the Internal Security Act authorized detention without trial indefinitely, while others authorized periods specified in the order of the Minister of Law and Order, who could extend detention for an unlimited period by a review of the case. The detainee had no right to legal representation before the review committee. Reliable information on detention conditions was difficult to obtain, but the Committee against Apartheid stated in October that over the past year nine detainees had died in or as a result of detention. Amnesty International reported on 13 August that detainees—including students, trade unionists and clerics—held since the state of emergency was declared were being tortured by security forces. In September, a judge granted an order restraining the police from assaulting detainees after a Port Elizabeth district surgeon, Dr. Wendy Orr, told the court that she had found evidence of systematic abuse and assault. Dr. Orr was immediately transferred to another office where she would have no contact with detainees.

The number of political trials—on charges such as contravening the Internal Security Act, belonging to an unlawful organization, terrorism, subversion, treason or possessing ANC literature—increased in 1985, as did the number of political detentions. On 26 February, two ANC members, Siphso Bridget Xulu and Clarence Lucky Payi, were sentenced to death. In August, 48 people were awaiting trial for treason, a crime punishable by death. In December, six Sharpeville residents were sentenced to death in connection with the murder of the so-called Deputy Mayor of Sharpeville.

The Co-ordinating Bureau of the Non-Aligned Movement, in a 23 December communiqué,<sup>(137)</sup> condemned South Africa for passing death sentences on the six—Mojalefa Reginald Sefatsa, Oupa Moses Diniso, Reid Melebu Mokoena, Theresa Ramashamula, Duma Joshua Khumalo and Francis Don Mokgesi—and sentencing two others to eight years' imprisonment each. It also condemned the sentencing of five alleged members of PAC to a total of 33 years' imprisonment for furthering the aims and objectives of PAC and supplying its members with weapons and equipment.

Early in 1985, South Africa offered Mr. Mandela release from prison on condition that he renounce violence and accept the citizenship of Transkei. He refused, asking that South Africa itself renounce violence. Zephania Mothopeng, a PAC leader who was also offered conditional amnesty, rejected it and opted to serve his entire 15-year sentence.

The Committee against Apartheid held meetings in observance of the Day of Solidarity with South African Political Prisoners on 11 October.

Action by the Council for Namibia. The Council for Namibia, in its June Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action,<sup>(30)</sup> demanded the immediate and unconditional release of all Namibian political prisoners, including those imprisoned or detained under the so-called internal security laws, martial law, or any other arbitrary measures, whether they had been charged or tried, or were being held without charge in Namibia or South Africa.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Council's demand had also been made by the Committee on colonial countries in May.<sup>(31)</sup> The Committee further demanded that captured Namibian freedom fighters be accorded prisoner-of-war status under the August 1949 Geneva Conventions relating to the protection of victims of armed conflicts and Additional Protocol I,<sup>(138)</sup> pending their release, and that South Africa ensure that all Namibians in exile for political reasons be able to return without risk of arrest, detention, intimidation, imprisonment or loss of life.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission. On 26 February,(8) the Commission on Human Rights condemned South Africa for its repression and torture and killing of opponents of apartheid, and the imposition of death sentences on freedom lighters. It demanded that South Africa immediately release all people detained or imprisoned as a result of their struggle for self-determination and independence, and demanded full respect for their rights and the observance of article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,(139) under which no one was to be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

Also on that date,(93) the Commission expressed indignation at the continued violations in South Africa, including arrests and torture, violence in dealing with legitimate protests and demonstrations against apartheid policies, and the killing, torture and other ill-treatment of captured freedom fighters and others, including those held by the so-called independent homelands. It called for the unconditional release of all political prisoners and renewed its request to South Africa to allow the Commission's Ad Hoc Working Group of Experts to make on-the-spot investigations of conditions in the prisons in South Africa and Namibia and the treatment of prisoners.

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, in August,(94) demanded the immediate lifting of the state of emergency, cessation of all brutality by South Africa and the immediate release of all political prisoners.

Communications. Letters were addressed to the Secretary-General appealing for the release of Nelson Mandela, who had been in solitary confinement for 23 years in a South African prison. On 19 August,(140) India forwarded an appeal by its Prime Minister, stating that the only way South Africa could be made to release Mr. Mandela was to isolate that country totally, and urging Governments to sever all contacts with Pretoria. On 11 October,(141) the Day of Solidarity with South African Political Prisoners, Brazil stated its belief that no effective negotiation for a solution to the plight of the South African majority could be held without the participation of its imprisoned leaders, and again requested Mr. Mandela's liberation.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

In 1985, the Security Council again called for the unconditional and immediate release of all South African political prisoners and detainees. In March (resolution 560(1985)), it condemned the arbitrary arrests of members of UDF and other mass organizations opposing apartheid, and called on South Africa to release them, including Mr. Mandela. The Council called on the régime to withdraw "high treason" charges instituted against UDF officials, and called for their release.

In resolution 569(1985), the Council in July again condemned South Africa's mass arrests and detentions and the murders which had been committed and called for the freeing of all political prisoners and detainees, first of all Mr. Mandela. On 21 August, the Council issued a statement with a similar thrust,(101) after Mr. Mandela's home had been subjected to an act of arson.

In addition, the Council in October called on South Africa not to carry out the death sentence on an ANC member (see below).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly also made numerous demands for the unconditional and immediate release of the political prisoners and detainees. In resolution 40/64 B, it reaffirmed that freedom lighters of South Africa should be treated as prisoners of war in accordance with Additional Protocol I(138) to the 1949 Geneva Conventions. It demanded that the régime withdraw the trumped-up charges of "high treason" against members of UDF and other organizations, and release them as well as Nelson Mandela and Zephania Mothopeng. In resolution 40/64 D, the Assembly appealed for the intensification of the campaign for their release and that of all South African political prisoners and detainees—a demand repeated in resolutions 40/64 I and 40/25. In resolution 40/97 A, the Assembly demanded the immediate release of all Namibian political prisoners, including those imprisoned or detained under the so-called internal security laws, martial law or any other arbitrary measures, whether such Namibians had been charged or tried or were being held without charge.

Capital punishment of ANC members

Malesela Benjamin Maloise, an ANC member who had been sentenced to death in June 1983 for killing a policeman,(142) was scheduled to be hanged on 21 August 1985, after the South African President rejected his clemency appeal in mid-August. In a 16 August press release, OAU appealed to the international community to intervene and, on 19 and 20 August, respectively, the Committee against Apartheid and the Security Council issued statements in which they urged the South African authorities to rescind the death sentence.(1) Mr. Maloise was granted a 21-day stay of execution to allow new evidence to be brought before the court. In the mean time, ANC issued a press statement on 20 August, claiming responsibility for the act and stating that Mr. Maloise had not been involved in the crime. On 18 October, he was executed, despite another appeal by the Council on 17 October and other international calls for clemency.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 20 August, after consultations with the Security Council's members, its President issued the following statement on their behalf:(143)

"The members of the Security Council have learned with great concern the intention of the South African authorities to carry out shortly the death sentence imposed upon Mr. Malesela Benjamin Maloisse.

"The members of the Council recall Council resolution 547(1984), which, inter alia, called upon the South African authorities not to carry out the execution of Mr. Maloisse.

"The members of the Security Council once again urge the South African authorities to rescind the death sentence imposed on Mr. Maloisse, convinced that the carrying out of the execution, apart from being a direct defiance of the above-mentioned Council resolution, will result in the further deterioration of an already extremely grave situation."

The carrying out of the sentence was postponed until 18 October. At a Council meeting on 17 October, the President issued another statement on behalf of the members, as follows:(144)

Meeting number. SC 2623.

"The members of the Security Council have learned with indignation and the gravest concern of the South African authorities' intention to implement the death sentence imposed on Malesela Benjamin Maloisse, in spite of the Council's appeals in this regard.

"The members of the Council once again draw the attention of the South African authorities to the Council President's statement of 20 August 1985 and Council resolution 547(1984), which, inter alia, called upon the South African authorities not to carry out the execution of Mr. Maloisse.

"The members of the Council are convinced that the carrying out of the execution will only result in a further worsening of an extremely grave situation.

"Once again, the members of the Council strongly urge the South African Government to extend clemency to Mr. Maloisse and to rescind his death sentence."

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 40/64 B, the General Assembly condemned the execution of Mr. Maloisse in defiance of international calls.

Communications. A number of countries addressed letters to the Secretary-General concerning the death sentence.

On 20 August,(145) the President of Senegal said that South Africa was planning to take a new step in its repression by carrying out the execution of Mr. Maloisse, who had been falsely convicted of murder. Mexico, on 16 October,(146) expressed support for the efforts to persuade South Africa to commute the sentence. On behalf of the Non-Aligned Movement, India, on 17 October,(147) urging executive clemency, stated that executing the South African patriot would be a grave miscarriage of justice that would exacerbate the already explosive situation.

The next day,(148) India, again on behalf of the Movement, expressed indignation at the execution, which, it said, made a mockery of all norms of law and justice and constituted another instance of South Africa's defiance of international opinion. On 19 October,(149) Egypt condemned the execution in similar terms. Calling South Africa's action merciless, Israel, on 21 October,(150) reiterated its opposition to the racist ideology of apartheid. Expressing on 22 October(151) its regret that South Africa had carried out the execution, Japan appealed to South Africa to eliminate apartheid as early as possible so that such an incident would not happen again.

Apartheid in sports

The Special Committee against Apartheid continued to report on sports contacts with South Africa.(1) It said that, under international pressure, apartheid sport was further isolated in 1985 although contacts with South Africa by some individual sportspersons and teams occurred. The Committee continued to publish a semi-annual Register of such sports contacts, which included a list of sportspersons who participated in events in South Africa. Names of those who pledged not to engage in further sports events there were deleted from the Register. The Register showed that South Africa had lured some individuals and teams with international standing by paying large fees. South Africa continued its generous funding of apartheid in sports through tax concessions to private sector sponsors. Nevertheless, it continued to have limited access to international sports exchanges.

Among the signs of the growing international resolve to end apartheid in sports, the Committee noted that Australia and Canada informed the South African Women's Bowling Association in February that its representative would not be given a visa to either country. In July, Canada announced guidelines curtailing sports contacts with South Africa.

In April, the Chairman of the Committee, having learned of a proposed tour to South Africa by the All Blacks, a New Zealand rugby team, stated that the tour represented insensitivity to the great majority of South Africans and an encouragement to racist sports organizations, and could be used by the régime to boost its international image. He expressed appreciation to New Zealand for a Parliamentary resolution and statements by its Prime Minister and other officials affirming opposition to the proposed tour. Because of mounting opposition and following an interim injunction granted by the High Court of New Zealand, the New Zealand Rugby Football Union cancelled its tour. The national rugby team of the Federal Republic of Germany, under pressure from anti-apartheid groups, cancelled in July a planned 1986 tour of South Africa.

Another significant development in the campaign was the decision of the Association of National Olympic Committees in November 1984 to urge international federations to exclude South Africa from membership, in line with the policy of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) until that country renounced apartheid, a policy contravening the Olympic Charter.

The Committee, in co-operation with the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa and the South Africa Non-Racial Olympic Committee, organized the International Conference on Sports Boycott against South Africa (Paris, 16-18 May).(152) At the Conference, the Committee presented citations to athletes who participated in the struggle against apartheid. The Conference adopted a declaration(153) in which it appealed to States to bring the International Convention against Apartheid in Sports into force by speedy ratification, following its adoption by the General Assembly (see below). It supported the IOC position that South Africa should not be readmitted to the Olympic Movement until apartheid was ended, and it urged IOC to adopt a code of conduct to discourage sports contacts with South Africa and to take the disciplinary actions necessary to deal with any of its affiliates that transgressed the international campaign. The Conference welcomed the IOC rejection of a proposal that a commission of inquiry be sent to South Africa, on the basis that as long as apartheid existed there could be no normal sport in that country for a commission to investigate.

The Conference congratulated the Association of National Olympic Committees on its declaration of intent to campaign for the exclusion of South Africa from all remaining international sports federations. Associations of non-Olympic sports, particularly cricket and rugby because of their popularity, were urged to play a full part in the international campaign. The Conference applauded those cricketing countries which had disciplined cricketers for playing in South Africa. It welcomed the effects of the United Nations Register of Sports Contacts with South Africa which had resulted in a number of countries and sports organizations taking action against teams and individuals who had competed there, thus discouraging others from participating in South African sports events.

Convention against apartheid in sports

The Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against Apartheid in Sports, established in 1976,(154) submitted its final draft of the Convention to the General Assembly in August 1985.(155)

In order to hold follow-up discussions on the draft, the Committee's Chairman undertook a mission from 3 to 19 May to the USSR, China and the Philippines; while attending the Paris Conference (see above), he held further discussions on article 10, dealing with compliance with the Convention, and an understanding was reached which formed the basis for debate in New York by the Committee's Working Group. The Group, open to all Committee members, convened from 1 to 5 July. After further amendments, the text was circulated to Governments. Ireland and the Netherlands(156) informed the Committee that they would not be able to accept the Convention because it conflicted with their respective constitutions. After meetings on 10 July and 7, 12, 15 and 21 August, the Working Group completed its consideration and submitted the final draft to the Ad Hoc Committee, which forwarded it to the Assembly for approval.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the Ad Hoc Committee's recommendation, the General Assembly, on 10 December, adopted resolution 40/64 G by recorded vote, thereby adopting the Convention.

International Convention against Apartheid in Sports

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolution 32/105 M of 14 December 1977, by which it adopted the International Declaration against Apartheid in Sports,

Recalling also its resolution 39/72 D of 13 December 1984, by which it requested the Ad Hoc Committee on the Drafting of an International Convention against Apartheid in Sports to continue its work with a view to submitting the draft Convention to the General Assembly at its fortieth session,

Recalling further that the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid declares that apartheid is a crime violating principles of international law, in particular the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations,

Mindful of the special responsibility of the United Nations to eliminate apartheid and racial discrimination in sports and in society,

Convinced that apartheid still dominates sports and the society as a whole in South Africa and that all so-called reforms have not led to any meaningful change in sports and the society in that country,

Reaffirming its unqualified support for the Olympic principle that no discrimination be allowed on the grounds of race, religion or political affiliation and its belief that merit should be the sole criterion in sport activities,

Reaffirming the necessity to ensure an international concerted action to isolate the racist régime of South Africa from the field of international sports as well as all other fields,

Commending the efforts of the Special Committee against Apartheid to ensure the total isolation of apartheid in sports and, in particular, the publication of the Register of Sports Contacts with South Africa, and urging Member States, pending the entry into force of the Convention, to co-operate with the Special Committee on matters relating to the isolation of apartheid in sports,

Commending all sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen that have declared their determination not to engage in sports contacts with South Africa until the evil system of apartheid is abolished,

Convinced that the Convention would be an important instrument towards the isolation of the racist régime of South Africa and the elimination of apartheid in sports and that it should be signed and ratified by States at the earliest possible date and its provisions implemented without delay,

Considering that the text of the Convention should be made known throughout the world,

1. Adopts and opens for signature and ratification the International Convention against Apartheid in Sports, the text of which is annexed to the present resolution;

2. Appeals to all States to sign and ratify the Convention as soon as possible;

3. Requests all Governments and intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations to acquaint the public as widely as possible with the text of the Convention, using all the information media at their disposal;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure the urgent and wide dissemination of the Convention and, for that purpose, to publish and circulate its text;

5. Commends the efforts of the Special Committee against Apartheid and requests it to continue to publish the Register of Sports Contacts with South Africa until the establishment of the Commission against Apartheid in Sports.

ANNEX

International Convention against Apartheid in Sports

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Recalling the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, in which all Members pledged themselves to take joint and separate action, in co-operation with the Organization, for the achievement of universal respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Considering that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in the Declaration without distinction of any kind, particularly in regard to race, colour or national origin,

Observing that, in accordance with the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, States Parties to that Convention particularly condemn racial segregation and apartheid and undertake to prevent, prohibit and eradicate all practices of this nature in all fields,

Observing that the General Assembly of the United Nations has adopted a number of resolutions condemning the practice of apartheid in sports and has affirmed its unqualified support for the Olympic principle that no discrimination be allowed on the grounds of race, religion or political affiliation and that merit should be the sole criterion for participation in sports activities,

Considering that the International Declaration against Apartheid in Sports, which was adopted by the General Assembly on 14 December 1977, solemnly affirms the necessity for the speedy elimination of apartheid in sports,

Recalling the provisions of the International Convention on the Suppression and Punishment of the Crime of Apartheid and recognizing, in particular, that participation in sports exchanges with teams selected on the basis of apartheid directly abets and encourages the commission of the crime of apartheid, as defined in that Convention,

Resolved to adopt all necessary measures to eradicate the practice of apartheid in sports and to promote international sports contacts based on the Olympic principle,

Recognizing that sports contact with any country practising apartheid in sports condones and strengthens apartheid in violation of the Olympic principle and thereby becomes the legitimate concern of all Governments,

Desiring to implement the principles embodied in the International Declaration against Apartheid in Sports and to secure the earliest adoption of practical measures to that end,

Convinced that the adoption of an International Convention against Apartheid in Sports would result in more effective measures at the international and national levels, with a view to eliminating apartheid in sports,

Have agreed as follows:

Article I

For the purposes of the present Convention:

(a) The expression "apartheid" shall mean a system of institutionalized racial segregation and discrimination for the purpose of establishing and maintaining domination by one racial group of persons over another racial group of persons and systematically oppressing them, such as that pursued by South Africa, and "apartheid in sports" shall mean the application of the policies and practices of such a system in sports activities, whether organized on a professional or an amateur basis;

(b) The expression "national sports facilities" shall mean any sports facility operated within the framework of a sports programme conducted under the auspices of a national government;

(c) The expression "Olympic principle" shall mean the principle that no discrimination be allowed on the grounds of race, religion or political affiliation;

(d) The expression "sports contracts" shall mean any contract concluded for the organization, promotion, performance or derivative rights, including servicing, of any sports activity;

(e) The expression "sports bodies" shall mean any organization constituted to organize sports activities at the national level, including national Olympic committees, national sports federations or national governing sports committees;

(f) The expression "team" shall mean a group of sportsmen organized for the purpose of participating in sports activities in competition with other such organized groups;

(g) The expression "sportsmen" shall mean men and women who participate in sports activities on an individual or team basis, as well as managers, coaches, trainers and other officials whose functions are essential for the operation of a team.

Article 2

States Parties strongly condemn apartheid and undertake to pursue immediately by all appropriate means the policy of eliminating the practice of apartheid in all its forms from sports.

Article 3

States Parties shall not permit sports contact with a country practising apartheid and shall take appropriate action to ensure that their sports bodies, teams, and individual sportsmen do not have such contact.

Article 4

States Parties shall take all possible measures to prevent sports contact with a country practising apartheid and shall ensure that effective means exist for bringing about compliance with such measures.

Article 5

States Parties shall refuse to provide financial or other assistance to enable their sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen to participate in sports activities in a country practising apartheid or with teams or individual sportsmen selected on the basis of apartheid.

Article 6

Each State Party shall take appropriate action against its sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen that participate in sports activities in a country practising apartheid or with teams representing a country practising apartheid, which in particular shall include:

- (a) Refusal to provide financial or other assistance for any purpose to such sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen;
- (b) Restriction of access to national sports facilities by such sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen;
- (c) Non-enforceability of all sports contracts which involve sports activities in a country practising apartheid or with teams or individual sportsmen selected on the basis of apartheid;
- (d) Denial and withdrawal of national honours or awards in sports to such teams and individual sportsmen;
- (e) Denial of official receptions in honour of such teams or sportsmen.

Article 7

States Parties shall deny visas and/or entry to representatives of sports bodies, teams and individual sportsmen representing a country practising apartheid.

Article 8

States Parties shall take all appropriate action to secure the expulsion of a country practising apartheid from international and regional sports bodies,

Article 9

States Parties shall take all appropriate measures to prevent international sports bodies from imposing financial or other penalties on affiliated bodies which, in accordance with United Nations resolutions, the provisions of the present Convention and the spirit of the Olympic principle, refuse to participate in sports with a country practising apartheid.

Article 10

1. States Parties shall use their best endeavours to ensure universal compliance with the Olympic principle of non-discrimination and the provisions of the present Convention.

2. Towards this end, States Parties shall prohibit entry into their countries of members of teams and individual sportsmen participating or who have participated in sports competitions in South Africa and shall prohibit entry into their countries of representatives of sports bodies, members of teams and individual sportsmen who invite on their own initiative sports bodies, teams and sportsmen officially representing a country practising apartheid and participating under its flag. States Parties may also prohibit entry of representatives of sports bodies, members of teams or individual sportsmen who maintain sports contacts with sports bodies, teams or sportsmen representing a country practising apartheid and participating under its flag. Prohibition of entry should not violate the regulations of the relevant sports federations which support the elimination of apartheid in sports and shall apply only to participation in sports activities.

3. States Parties shall advise their national representatives to international sports federations to take all possible and practical steps to prevent the participation of the sports bodies, teams and sportsmen referred to in paragraph 2 above in international sports competitions and shall, through their representatives in international sports organizations, take every possible measure:

(a) To ensure the expulsion of South Africa from all federations in which it still holds membership as well as to deny South Africa reinstatement to membership in any federation from which it has been expelled;

(b) In case of national federations condoning sports exchanges with a country practising apartheid, to impose sanctions against such national federations including, if necessary, expulsion from the relevant international sports organization and exclusion of their representatives from participation in international sports competitions.

4. In cases of flagrant violations of the provisions of the present Convention, States Parties shall take appropriate action as they deem fit, including, where necessary, steps aimed at the exclusion of the responsible national sports governing bodies, national sports federations or sportsmen of the countries concerned from international sports competition.

5. The provisions of the present article relating specifically to South Africa shall cease to apply when the system of apartheid is abolished in that country.

Article 11

1. There shall be established a Commission against Apartheid in Sports (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission") consisting of fifteen members of high moral character and committed to the struggle against apartheid, particular attention being paid to participation of persons having experience in sports administration, elected by the States Parties from among their nationals, having regard to the most equitable geographical distribution and the representation of the principal legal systems.

2. The members of the Commission shall be elected by secret ballot from a list of persons nominated by the States Parties. Each State Party may nominate one person from among its own nationals.

3. The initial election shall be held six months after the date of the entry into force of the present Convention. At least three months before the date of each election, the Secretary-General of the United Nations shall address a letter to the States Parties inviting them to submit their nominations within two months. The Secretary-General shall prepare a list in alphabetical order of all persons thus nominated, indicating the States Parties which have nominated them, and shall submit it to the States Parties.

4. Elections of the members of the Commission shall be held at a meeting of States Parties convened by the Secretary-General at United Nations Headquarters. At that meeting, for which two thirds of the States Parties shall constitute a quorum, the persons elected to the Commission shall be those nominees who obtain the largest number of votes and an absolute majority of the votes of the representatives of States Parties present and voting.

5. The members of the Commission shall be elected for a term of four years. However, the terms of nine of the members elected at the first election shall expire at the end of two years; immediately after the first election, the names of these nine members shall be chosen by lot by the Chairman of the Commission.

6. For the filling of casual vacancies, the State Party whose national has ceased to function as a member of the Commission shall appoint another person from among its nationals, subject to the approval of the Commission.

7. States Parties shall be responsible for the expenses of the members of the Commission while they are in performance of Commission duties.

Article 12

1. States Parties undertake to submit to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, for consideration by the Commission, a report on the legislative, judicial, administrative or other measures which they have adopted to give effect to the provisions of the present Convention within one year of its entry into force and thereafter every two years. The Commission may request further information from the States Parties.

2. The Commission shall report annually through the Secretary-General to the General Assembly of the United Nations on its activities and may make suggestions and general recommendations based on the examination of the reports and information received from the States Parties. Such suggestions and recommendations shall be reported to the General Assembly together with comments, if any, from States Parties concerned.

3. The Commission shall examine, in particular, the implementation of the provisions of article 10 of the present Convention and make recommendations on action to be undertaken.

4. A meeting of States Parties shall be convened by the Secretary-General at the request of a majority of the States Parties to consider further action with respect to the implementation of the provisions of article 10 of the present Convention. In cases of flagrant violation of the provisions of the present Convention, a meeting of States Parties shall be convened by the Secretary-General at the request of the Commission.

Article 13

1. Any State Party may at any time declare that it recognizes the competence of the Commission to receive and examine complaints concerning breaches of the provisions of the present Convention submitted by States Parties which have also made such a declaration. The Commission may decide on the appropriate measures to be taken in respect of breaches.

2. States Parties against which a complaint has been made, in accordance with paragraph 1 of the present article, shall be entitled to be represented and take part in the proceedings of the Commission.

Article 14

1. The Commission shall meet at least once a year.

2. The Commission shall adopt its own rules of procedure.

3. The secretariat of the Commission shall be provided by the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

4. The meetings of the Commission shall normally be held at United Nations Headquarters.

5. The Secretary-General shall convene the initial meeting of the Commission.

Article 15

The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall be the depositary of the present Convention.

Article 16

1. The present Convention shall be open for signature at United Nations Headquarters by all States until its entry into force.

2. The present Convention shall be subject to ratification, acceptance or approval by the signatory States.

Article 17

The present Convention shall be open for accession by all States.

Article 18

1. The present Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the date of deposit with the Secretary-General of the United Nations of the twenty-seventh instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession.

2. For each State ratifying, accepting, approving or acceding to the present Convention after its entry into force, the Convention shall enter into force on the thirtieth day after the date of deposit of the relevant instrument.

Article 19

Any dispute between States Parties arising out of the interpretation, application or implementation of the present Convention which is not settled by negotiation shall be brought before the International Court of Justice at the request and with the mutual consent of the States Parties to the dispute, save where the Parties to the dispute have agreed on some other form of settlement.

Article 20

1. Any State Party may propose an amendment or revision to the present Convention and file it with the depositary. The Secretary-General of the United Nations shall thereupon communicate the proposed amendment or revision to the States Parties with a request that they notify him whether they favour a conference of States Parties for the purpose of considering and voting upon the proposal. In the event that at least one third of the States Parties favour such a conference, the Secretary-General shall convene the conference under the auspices of the United Nations. Any amendment or revision adopted by the majority of the States Parties present and voting at the conference shall be submitted to the General Assembly of the United Nations for approval.

2. Amendments or revisions shall come into force when they have been approved by the General Assembly and accepted by a two-thirds majority of the States Parties, in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

3. When amendments or revisions come into force, they shall be binding on those States Parties which have accepted them, other States Parties still being bound by the provisions of the present Convention and any earlier amendment or revision which they have accepted.

Article 21

A State Party may withdraw from the present Convention by written notification to the depositary. Such withdrawal shall take effect one year after the date of receipt of the notification by the depositary.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Solomon Islands, Spain, Sweden, United Kingdom, United States.

Speaking in explanation of vote, Austria, Belgium, Canada, France, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg (for the EC members, Portugal and Spain), the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway (for the Nordic States), the United Kingdom and the United States said that, although they supported the broad objectives of the Convention, they would be unable to vote for the resolution or accede to the Convention due to various legal or constitutional difficulties. Austria explained that it had taken measures aimed at further limiting sports relations with South Africa. Belgium stressed that its authorities would continue discouraging sports contacts and banning the entry into Belgium of South African sportspersons wishing to participate in competitions. Canada expressed support for the principle of sporting boycotts against South Africa. France pointed out that it had discouraged the sports contacts in question. Greece objected to certain elements of the resolution owing to constitutional constraints. Stating its intention to continue to discourage sports contacts, Italy found some unacceptable elements in the Convention, in particular articles 3, 4, 6, 7 and 10, but it would recommend that its national organizations implement articles 2, 5 and 9. Ireland, which had supported the drafting of a Convention and intended to prevent international sporting contacts, said articles 3, 6 and 10 were incompatible with the Irish Constitution.

Luxembourg (for EC, Portugal and Spain) observed that sports activities were organized in their respective countries on private initiative. The Netherlands believed that a sports boycott was an effective instrument towards eradicating apartheid and it had introduced visa requirements for South Africans to control their participation in sports events. New Zealand spoke similarly, adding that it had discouraged its sportspersons from having contacts with South Africa. Norway (speaking for the Nordic countries) noted their strict policy against sports contacts with South Africa. The United Kingdom also discouraged such contacts. The United States said it could not support a resolution that urged States to adopt legal measures contrary to its own laws.

Costa Rica said signature and ratification of the Convention would be subject to approval by its Legislative Assembly.

In resolution 40/64 A, the Assembly requested States that had not done so, pending action by the Security Council, to take legislative or other measures to ensure isolation of South Africa, including the observance of a sports boycott.

Aid programmes and inter-agency co-operation

United Nations aid to victims of apartheid was provided through national liberation movements or directly to individuals for educational and training purposes. The United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa provided legal assistance, relief and education grants to persons persecuted under repressive and discriminatory legislation of South Africa. Other assistance was provided for education by the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa.

National liberation movements

In 1985, several United Nations organizations continued to provide assistance to national liberation movements, particularly the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO). The United Nations Commission on Human Settlements also provided aid to victims of apartheid and colonialism in Africa (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVII), and educational assistance was provided by the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa (see p. 200).

UNDP action. In March 1985, the UNDP Administrator submitted a report to the Governing Council,<sup>(157)</sup> describing UNDP's 1984 assistance programmes to national liberation movements of southern Africa recognized by OAU—ANC and PAC of South Africa and SWAPO of Namibia—worth $2.9 million.<sup>(158)</sup> On 28 June 1985,<sup>(159)</sup> the Council endorsed the Administrator's plans to evaluate ongoing assistance projects to determine the thrust of development assistance over the 1987-1991 programming cycle. It requested him to continue to assist the movements flexibly, to ensure that such assistance was delivered expeditiously and that quality and effectiveness were maintained, and to report on trends and developments relating to the administration, management and effectiveness of the assistance.

UNDP in 1985 provided $2.4 million for technical assistance to national liberation movements recognized by OAU.<sup>(160)</sup> Nine of the 16 projects under way in 1985 were for education and training, accounting for 76 per cent of total expenditure. Other projects were designed to promote self-reliance in agriculture, health and education.

UNIDO action. UNIDO continued to provide technical assistance to the South African national liberation movements recognized by OAU (ANC and PAC), as reported by the Executive Director to the Industrial Development Board.<sup>(161)</sup> In 1985, assistance was provided for two projects—establishment in the United Republic of Tanzania of a mechanical workshop organized by ANC at Mazimbu, and of a women's garment manufacturing workshop for the benefit of PAC members located in Botswana, Lesotho, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe.

On 31 May,<sup>(162)</sup> the Board, mindful of the low level of UNDP resources during 1982-1984, which led to the exclusion of some UNIDO projects for assistance to the movements from the priority list of UNDP-funded projects, urged the UNDP Governing Council to ensure adequate funds for UNIDO projects. It appealed to member States, United Nations organizations and NGOs to provide assistance through the South African national liberation movements for the establishment and development of technical co-operation projects in the industrial sector aimed at enhancing the self-reliance of the oppressed black majority of South Africa. The UNIDO secretariat was requested to increase its technical assistance to those movements recognized by OAU and to report on technical assistance to them.

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid.

The Special Committee against Apartheid also appealed for more assistance to the oppressed people of South Africa and the South African liberation movements recognized by OAU, emphasizing the need for all possible political, moral, humanitarian, educational, material and other assistance.<sup>(1)</sup> It said there was an urgent need for direct assistance, as a demonstration, by action, of support to their legitimate struggle. The Committee urged the General Assembly to address an urgent appeal for such assistance.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights.

On 26 February,<sup>(9)</sup> the Commission on Human Rights appealed to States, specialized agencies and NGOs to extend all possible co-operation to the liberation movements of southern Africa recognized by the United Nations and OAU.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. The Committee on colonial countries, on 9 August,<sup>(90)</sup> expressed concern that the assistance extended so far by United Nations organizations to colonial peoples, particularly the people of Namibia and their national liberation movement, SWAPO, was inadequate.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 1985/59 of 26 July, the Economic and Social Council requested United Nations organizations, in view of the deteriorating situation in South Africa and the acts of aggression and destabilization by the régime against States in the region (see p. 178), to increase assistance to the liberation movements in South Africa. The Council noted with satisfaction the arrangements made by several United Nations bodies which enabled representatives of the movements recognized by OAU to participate as observers during discussions of matters concerning their respective countries, and called on those international institutions which had not done so to make the necessary arrangements, including defraying the costs of their participation.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly took action on many occasions in 1985 on assistance to the national liberation movements recognized by OAU.

It decided to continue authorizing financial provisions in the regular United Nations budget to enable the South African liberation movements—ANC and PAC—to maintain New York offices in order to participate in appropriate deliberations (resolution 40/64 B).

The Assembly reiterated its appeal to States, organizations and institutions for increased support for those movements (resolution 40/64 D) and called for an increase in assistance to the victims of apartheid through their movements (40/25).

United Nations organizations were urged to continue to expand their co-operation with OAU and, through it, their assistance to the movements it recognized (40/20). The Assembly recommended that a separate item on such assistance be included in the agenda of high-level meetings between the OAU General Secretariat and the secretariats of United Nations organizations with a view to strengthening co-ordination to ensure the best use of available resources for assistance to colonial peoples; it noted with satisfaction the arrangements made by several such organizations enabling representatives of the liberation movements recognized by OAU to participate as observers in matters concerning their countries, and called on those organizations that had not done so to follow that example (40/53).

UN Trust Fund for South Africa

In October 1985,<sup>(163)</sup> the Secretary-General reported that the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa, established in 1965<sup>(164)</sup> to provide voluntary assistance to persons persecuted under discriminatory legislation in South Africa and Namibia, made eight grants totalling $2,115,000 in 1985. The Fund received $2,309,081 in 1985 (see table below). As at 15 October, total income to the Fund since its inception, including private donations and interest, was $22,204,868 and the total amount of grants was $21,615,627, leaving a balance of $589,241.

United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Trust Fund for South Africa, to which is annexed the report of the Committee of Trustees of the Trust Fund,

Alarmed by the increasing number of political trials and detentions and the harsh sentences, including the death penalty, imposed on opponents of apartheid,

Other aspects

Public information

The Special Committee against Apartheid, in response to a 1984 request of the General Assembly,<sup>(165)</sup> issued in October 1985 a special report on its efforts to inform world public opinion and encourage wider action in support of the struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa.<sup>(i)</sup>

The Committee noted that over the years it had organized hearings with media representatives and other events to generate an understanding of the true character of apartheid. Further public information activities were needed since South Africa had been devoting more resources to propaganda, directed primarily at the United States and the United Kingdom. Because those two States had veto power in the Security Council, their continued support had been regarded by South Africa as crucial in its campaign against the imposition of economic sanctions. South Africa had been trying to convince public opinion, particularly in Western countries, that white-ruled South Africa was a valuable strategic ally of the West. Furthermore, South Africa had attempted to portray black South Africans as culturally, ethnically and politically fragmented into mutually hostile and diverse "tribes" and therefore unable to govern themselves. It had attempted to convince public opinion that the liberation movements were "Communist dominated" and that any political change in South Africa would endanger the West's sea route around the Cape and the supply of strategically important minerals.

The Committee's activities to counteract South Africa's efforts included publication of a biannual Register of Sports Contacts with South Africa (see p. 164) and an annual register of entertainers, actors and others who had performed in South Africa (see p. 135), as part of the sports and cultural boycotts. In May 1985, the Centre against Apartheid initiated an occasional News Digest to inform organizations of United Nations-related activities against apartheid, and to promote an exchange of information on the international campaign against it. Other Secretariat activities included the dissemination of information, including audio-visual material, by the Department of Public Information (DPI).

The Committee made a number of recommendations for further information activities. It called for co-operative arrangements with UNDP and specialized agencies for information distribution wherever United Nations information centres had not been established. DPI was called on to prepare, in co-operation with the Centre against Apartheid, special information kits on apartheid for use by the media and organizations. The Centre was urged to produce more information material for use by special groups, such as trade unions, churches, and women's, student and youth organizations, relating to specific aspects of the international campaign. The Committee recommended that DPI, the Centre and other Secretariat bodies produce and disseminate audio-visual material on apartheid. It stressed the need to expand liaison with the media, and suggested that a special supplement be prepared for insertion in wide-circulation newspapers during the observance of international days related to the struggle against apartheid. The Committee found that concerts and other events of a promotional nature involving prominent cultural and sports personalities and entertainers had been effective in drawing media attention. It suggested that the United Nations Postal Administration, as well as Member States, issue commemorative postage stamps publicizing the struggle against apartheid.

In the Committee's view, the Centre should be provided with greater resources to strengthen its dissemination activities. In order to carry out its recommendations, the Committee urged Member States to make larger contributions to the Trust Fund for Publicity against Apartheid.

On 7 November,<sup>(i)</sup> the Acting Chairman of the Committee condemned the restrictions imposed by South Africa to curb the reporting of unrest and repression, and called on journalists, academicians, liberation movements, Governments, organizations and individuals to combat South African attempts in that regard.

The Committee and the secretariat of the Commonwealth countries organized a Media Workshop on Countering Apartheid Propaganda (London, 20-22 May).<sup>(166)</sup> Participants, including representatives of Commonwealth Governments, the media, anti-apartheid and other organizations and liberation movements, as well as experts, discussed the nature and objective of apartheid propaganda, impediments to exposure of the truth about apartheid and possible future action. Among a number of recommendations, the Workshop called on the Commonwealth secretariat and the Centre against Apartheid to assist third world media in establishing direct access to news and events in southern Africa. It also recommended that an apartheid monitoring unit be set up within the Commonwealth secretariat, that a study be commissioned on how selected Western media handled South African and Namibian issues, and that educational exchanges be instituted between Commonwealth trade unions and emerging black trade unions in South Africa.

On 2 and 3 December, the Committee against Apartheid met with the Commonwealth Committee on Southern Africa to review their respective activities, and agreed on measures to generate and request increased television and radio coverage of resistance in South Africa and to counter propaganda. Further, they decided to co-sponsor events designed to promote media coverage of developments in southern Africa and international action against apartheid.

Other United Nations bodies also called for dissemination of information on apartheid. In its June Vienna Declaration,<sup>(30)</sup> the Council for Namibia noted with satisfaction the pressures being exerted by parliamentarians, NGOs and individuals in Western countries to promote the severance of economic and other links with South Africa as part of a concerted public campaign against apartheid. It urged the campaign to work for comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa (see p. 138).

The Committee on colonial countries, on 7 August,<sup>(32)</sup> appealed to mass media, trade unions and other NGOs, as well as individuals, to co-ordinate and intensify their efforts to mobilize international public opinion against the policy of the apartheid régime and to work for the enforcement of sanctions and for systematic divestment in corporations doing business in South Africa.

On 26 February,<sup>(9)</sup> the Commission on Human Rights called on States, specialized agencies, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to intensify their campaign to mobilize public opinion for the enforcement of economic and other sanctions.

The Conference of African Ministers of Information (Cairo, Egypt, 23-25 November) adopted a number of resolutions,<sup>(26)</sup> including one on the responsibilities of the Pan African News Agency (PANA) and the African press in the struggle against apartheid. By that text, it urged the African media, particularly PANA, to include among their priority objectives the sensitization of African and international public opinion to the struggle for freedom waged by the national liberation movements and the peoples of South Africa and Namibia; it directed the PANA Director General to assign competent journalists in southern Africa to inform Africa and the world about the struggle against apartheid.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/64 D by recorded vote.

Public information and public action against apartheid

The General Assembly,

Abstaining: Grenada, Israel, Malawi, United Kingdom, United States.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the United States said it did not believe that States' reactions to apartheid should be mandated by the Assembly. Ireland considered it important that information about apartheid practices have wide dissemination, and it expressed concern at the current restrictions on the media in South Africa in relation to their reporting of the situation there. Belgium voted for the resolution despite serious reservations on some paragraphs.

The Assembly took related action in resolution 40/64 E, in which it requested the Secretary-General to render, through DPI and the Centre against Apartheid, assistance to the Committee against Apartheid in disseminating information on the collaboration between Israel and South Africa. In resolution 40/52, it appealed to mass media, trade unions and other NGOs, as well as individuals, to intensify efforts to mobilize international public opinion against apartheid and to work for the enforcement of economic and other sanctions against South Africa and for systematic divestment in corporations doing business there.

By resolution 40/164 A, the Assembly urged DPI and the mass media world-wide to intensify their dissemination of apartheid information, taking account of recent measures and official censorship imposed on the media. The Assembly also approved the recommendations of the Committee on Information, among them a proposal that the Secretary-General be requested to intensify his efforts, within existing resources, to disseminate information on the struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa; another called for DPI to ensure a more coherent coverage of the United Nations, especially in its priority areas, including the struggle against apartheid.

Non-governmental organizations

The Special Committee against Apartheid reported that non-governmental organizations, in particular anti-apartheid movements, had intensified their activities in support of the liberation struggle in South Africa.<sup>(1)</sup> On 25 and 26 November 1985, the Committee invited several NGOs and anti-apartheid organizations to discuss the programme of action against apartheid. Their representatives and those of national liberation movements and some individuals concerned with the situation in southern Africa participated in the strategy session and adopted a statement setting out recommendations for action by NGOs.<sup>(167)</sup> The session agreed on the necessity for the Committee, in co-operation with anti-apartheid movements, to intensify the campaign to secure the imposition by the United Nations of mandatory comprehensive sanctions against South Africa in order to eradicate apartheid, halt South Africa's aggression against the front-line States, and compel it to end its occupation of Namibia. The session believed that the campaign should be aimed at exposing the role of the United States and the United Kingdom, which had blocked the adoption of sanctions, to end their support of the régime.

In addition to enforcing the mandatory arms embargo, the session called for mandatory embargoes on oil, nuclear collaboration and high technology exports, including computers and electronic equipment. It recommended a campaign to stop all air links with South Africa and Namibia, as well as sports, cultural, academic and similar boycotts. It requested the Committee to ensure monitoring and to develop co-operation with anti-apartheid movements.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/64 D, appealed to NGOs, among others, to co-operate with the United Nations in disseminating information against apartheid, and to intensify the international campaign for the release of all South African political prisoners and detainees (see p. 161).

Meetings, missions and observances

As part of its work to promote the international campaign against apartheid, the Special Committee against Apartheid organized or co-sponsored a number of meetings, missions and observances in 1985.<sup>(1)</sup> It was also represented at conferences, meetings and events throughout the world.

Meetings. The Committee, in co-operation with the Hungarian Solidarity Committee, organized the International Seminar on Racist Ideologies, Attitudes and Organizations Hindering Efforts for the Elimination of Apartheid and Means to Combat Them (Siofok, 9-11 September).<sup>(168)</sup> The Seminar adopted a declaration<sup>(169)</sup> in which it considered comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa to be one of the most effective and the only peaceful means to eradicate apartheid, and recommended joint action by Member States, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs to expose and combat apartheid and racism.

The Committee helped organize three international meetings in May—the International Conference on Women and Children under Apartheid (Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania) (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XIX), the International Conference on Sports Boycott against South Africa (Paris) (see p. 165), and the Media Workshop on Countering Apartheid Propaganda (London) (see p. 172).

On 7 May, the Committee invited several student leaders from the United States to discuss action against apartheid, and many made statements.

Missions. In preparation for the International Conference on Women and Children under Apartheid, the Committee sent a mission to Angola, Zambia and the United Republic of Tanzania from 3 to 16 April to evaluate the needs of assistance to women and children refugees as well as to the front-line States. Besides holding talks with representatives of those Governments and of ANC, PAC and SWAPO, it visited various projects operated by the national liberation movements: a settlement operated by SWAPO at Kwanza-Sul, an ANC construction site at Viana, near Luanda, and a SWAPO transit camp at Viana, all in Angola; a SWAPO transit camp, an ANC day-care centre, a printing shop and a farm at Lusaka, Zambia; and an ANC settlement at Morogoro and a PAC temporary work centre at Dar es Salaam, both in the United Republic of Tanzania.

On-the-spot inspection of the settlements revealed the intolerable conditions under which thousands of women, children and elderly refugees were living as a result of the invasions and aggression by South Africa. The mission found, however, that the settlements, in particular those of SWAPO and ANC, were efficiently run and well organized. Angola had been particularly affected, since occupation by South African forces had resulted in an increased movement of displaced persons towards the north. The mission commended Governments, in particular the Nordic and socialist countries, for having provided material support to the oppressed people of South Africa and Namibia. It called for increased assistance to the national liberation movements for their women's programmes and for opportunities to be made available for training women, listing specific assistance needs for those programmes.

In its report,<sup>(170)</sup> the mission concluded that women and children fleeing apartheid, who constituted the majority of the refugee population from South Africa and Namibia in the neighbouring countries, needed durable asylum, food, medical care and legal protection as well as education, training and employment. Short-term or emergency assistance was the first priority. There was an increasing need to mobilize public opinion on the plight of those refugees from South Africa and Namibia. The mission suggested that the International Conference on Women and Children under Apartheid urge the World Conference to Review and Appraise the Achievements of the United Nations Decade for Women (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XIX) to give priority to the question of assistance to women in southern Africa.

The Committee Chairman undertook three missions in 1985 to hold discussions with governmental leaders on international action against apartheid. He visited New Zealand, Vanuatu and India from 19 February to 8 March; the USSR and France from 24 to 30 May; and the Republic of Korea, Japan and China from 4 to 12 November.

The Chairman informed the Prime Minister of New Zealand of the Committee's appreciation for his Government's position in regard to apartheid, and particularly for breaking consular relations with South Africa and its statements of opposition to the impending tour of the All Blacks rugby team to South Africa (see p. 164). In Vanuatu, the Chairman was informed that the Government was mobilizing the support of the States of the South Pacific Forum for further action against South Africa. At New Delhi, the Prime Minister said that India would contribute to mobilizing the international community towards eliminating apartheid. The Supreme Soviet and the Foreign Ministry of the USSR expressed support for the Committee's activities in seeking comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa. In France, the Minister for External Relations and the Chairman agreed that there had been no meaningful change in South Africa and the Minister pledged his Government's support for the Committee's work. In the Republic of Korea, the Chairman called for the establishment of an anti-apartheid movement there. In Japan, he gave interviews to major media networks and met with anti-apartheid organizations to review their strategies for public action. After talks with Government officials in China, the Chairman addressed the Chinese People's Institute for Foreign Affairs under the sponsorship of the China United Nations Association.

Observances. In 1985, as in previous years, the Committee held solemn meetings in observance of the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (21 March), the International Day of Solidarity with the Struggling People of South Africa (16 June), the International Day of Solidarity with the Struggle of Women of South Africa and Namibia (9 August), and the Day of Solidarity with South African Political Prisoners (11 October).

In addition, the Committee held a special session on 22 March to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Sharpeville massacre, with the theme "Sharpeville, Soweto and Sebokeng: Struggle for Liberation in South Africa and International Response". In a declaration adopted at the conclusion of the session on 28 March,<sup>(17)</sup> the Committee condemned the killings and other atrocities against unarmed demonstrators by the régime, and the attack on mourners at the funeral procession in Uitenhage on 21 March. Pending the imposition by the Security Council of comprehensive mandatory sanctions, it called on States to adopt measures on boycotts and sanctions against South Africa. Furthermore, it rejected South Africa's attempt to create the illusion that it was introducing change and reform, for example, by creating the so-called new constitution.<sup>(7)</sup> The Committee reaffirmed the legitimacy of the struggle of the oppressed people of South Africa and their liberation movements by all available means, including armed struggle. It declared that freedom fighters captured during the struggle for national liberation were entitled to prisoner-of-war status and treatment in accordance with Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions of 12 August 1949. The Committee condemned policies of "constructive engagement" and active collaboration with the régime followed by the United States and certain Western States.

On 26 June, the Committee held a special meeting in observance of the thirtieth anniversary of the Freedom Charter of South Africa; the Acting Chairman pointed out that the Freedom Charter had served to foster in the international community a better understanding of the struggle of the oppressed people for their just cause.

Work programme of the Committee against Apartheid

In its annual report,<sup>(1)</sup> the Special Committee against Apartheid outlined its programme of work, stating its intention to give particular attention to consultations with Governments, intergovernmental organizations and NGOs in order to promote international action in support of the legitimate struggle of the South African people for a non-racial society, to promote increased assistance to the oppressed people of South Africa and their national liberation movements and to increase public awareness of the situation. It would continue to promote action by the public in all countries in the campaign against apartheid. Among its activities, the Committee would send missions, organize and support conferences and seminars, hold hearings and other events and commission and publicize expert studies. It would seek the advice and assistance of leaders of campaigns against apartheid, as well as of publicists and other experts, as special consultants. The Committee requested a special allocation of $500,000 from the regular United Nations budget for 1986 for special projects to be decided by it, as well as adequate resources for other activities.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 10 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/64 F by recorded vote.

Programme of work of the Special Committee against Apartheid

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Special Committee against Apartheid,

1. Commends the Special Committee against Apartheid for its vigorous efforts to promote concerted international action in support of the legitimate aspirations of the oppressed people of South Africa and in implementation of relevant United Nations resolutions;

2. Endorses the recommendations contained in paragraphs 400 to 404 of the report of the Special Committee relating to its programme of work and activities to promote the international campaign against apartheid;

3. Authorizes the Special Committee to organize or co-sponsor conferences, seminars or other events, to send missions to Governments, organizations and conferences and to assist campaigns against apartheid as it may deem necessary in the discharge of its responsibilities, within the financial resources allocated under the present resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to provide the necessary staff and services for such activities;

4. Decides to make a special allocation of $500,000 to the Special Committee for 1986 from the regular budget of the United Nations for the cost of special projects to be decided upon by the Committee in order to promote the international campaign against apartheid;

5. Again requests Governments and organizations to make voluntary contributions or provide other assistance for the special projects of the Special Committee and to make generous contributions to the Trust Fund for Publicity against Apartheid.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 58; plenary 51-57, 111.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Benin, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Canada, Cape Verde, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Kampuchea, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guatemala, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Honduras, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Mongolia, Morocco, Mozambique, Nepal, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Sao Tome and Principe, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: United Kingdom, United States.

Abstaining: Belgium, Belize, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, Portugal, Spain.

Speaking in explanation of vote, the Netherlands was concerned that the allocation for the Committee had been increased in spite of the pressing need for budgetary restraint. New Zealand expressed reservations about some aspects of the work programme and the funding approved. The United Kingdom regretted that the Committee had failed to heed the chorus of disapproval which had been expressed in the Assembly over the past few years and which led to the United Kingdom's inability to approve the Committee's work programme—the Committee's report was an example of that tendency. The United States opposed the text because it was unable to support a resolution that commended the work of a committee advocating mandatory sanctions; furthermore, it did not believe it was desirable to increase the allocation for the Committee's work programme during the current financial difficulties.

In other resolutions, the Assembly endorsed the Committee's 1985 report;(1) requested it to intensify its activities for the total isolation of the apartheid régime, for promoting comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa and for mobilizing public opinion and encouraging public action against collaboration with South Africa; and requested it to keep the matter of collaboration between South Africa and Israel and between South Africa and other States under review and to report to the Assembly and the Security Council as appropriate (40/64 A). The Assembly requested the Committee, with the assistance of DPI and the Centre against Apartheid, to continue to publicize information on Israel-South Africa relations (40/64 E).

The Assembly endorsed the Committee's recommendations to enhance the dissemination of information on apartheid and encouraged the Committee and the Centre to intensify their activities to inform world public opinion and promote action in support of the struggle of the oppressed people and United Nations objectives; United Nations organizations, and DPI in particular, were requested to co-operate with the Committee and the Centre in disseminating information on apartheid's evils (40/64 D).

South Africa and the front-line and other States of southern Africa

In 1985, South Africa carried out aggression against some neighbouring States, for which it was condemned by several United Nations bodies. The States of southern Africa which shared security concerns—Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, the United Republic of Tanzania, Zambia and Zimbabwe—were known as the front-line States. South Africa's aggression particularly against Angola, Botswana and Lesotho was condemned by the Security Council in several 1985 resolutions.

The situation in Angola was particularly serious, and the Council took action on South Africa's attacks against and occupation of that country on four occasions during the year—on 20 June, 20 September, 7 October and 6 December. It demanded that South Africa withdraw all its forces and decided to send a commission to evaluate the damage resulting from the invasion. After the commission visited Angola and made recommendations for assistance, the Council endorsed its report, demanded that South Africa compensate Angola for the damage to life and property, and requested Member States and international organizations to provide assistance for its reconstruction.

The Council reacted similarly on 21 June following South Africa's attack on Gaborone, the capital of Botswana. It demanded that South Africa pay compensation and requested the Secretary-General to send a mission to assess the damage. On 30 September, the Council endorsed the mission's report and called for assistance to Botswana.

Lesotho also complained about an attack by South Africa during which six South African refugees and three Lesotho nationals were killed. Condemning the violence for which it held South Africa responsible, the Council, on 30 December, demanded that it pay compensation, reaffirmed Lesotho's right to receive victims of apartheid, called on the parties to use established channels of communication on matters of mutual concern, and requested Member States to give economic assistance to Lesotho so that it could receive South African refugees.

In October, Mozambique complained that South Africa was assisting bandits in Mozambique, in contravention of a 1984 bilateral agreement to improve relations. South Africa responded that it was only acting to help Mozambique resist opposition forces.

Activities of the Committee against Apartheid. In its annual report to the General Assembly issued in October 1985,<sup>(1)</sup> the Special Committee against Apartheid said that South Africa, despite accords and understandings with some of its neighbouring States, had committed acts of aggression and destabilization against them, in its effort to counter the national liberation movements of South Africa and to extract the acquiescence of the neighbouring States to its policies. South Africa claimed that the unrest in South Africa was the work of revolutionary elements who were returning to the country illegally after undergoing military training in neighbouring countries, and that it was trying to ensure that the countries concerned refused bases to those fighters. According to the Committee, the agreements brought no peace, as they were ignored by South Africa; peace in southern Africa was not possible unless apartheid was eliminated and Namibia achieved independence.

Since gaining independence a decade earlier, Angola had been invaded more than 12 times by South Africa, which also supported the forces of the União Nacional para a Independência Total de Angola (UNITA), concentrated in southern Angola. Although Angola and South Africa had reached agreement in February 1984 on the withdrawal of South African forces from Angola (an agreement known as the Lusaka Understanding),<sup>(2)</sup> South Africa withdrew its forces only after a long delay, leaving behind about 60 soldiers, and continued to support UNITA forces.

In May 1985, Angolan troops killed two South African commandos and captured another during their attempt to sabotage oil installations at Malonga, Cabinda province, in southern Angola. The captured commando confessed that his unit had carried out several other attacks on strategic installations in Angola. In the same month, Angolan authorities intercepted two South African night parachute drops of weapons to UNITA in the northern part of the country. As a result, Angola called off scheduled talks with South Africa. South Africa sent ground and air forces into Angola on 16 September to support UNITA forces against an effective drive of Angolan troops towards southern Angola. It admitted that it had provided aid to UNITA. Further acts of aggression by South Africa took place in October and December.<sup>(3)</sup>

In Gaborone, Botswana, two South African refugees were injured in February when their house was bombed, and a leader of a black South African trade union was killed in a car bomb explosion in May. South African forces raided Gaborone on 14 June, allegedly to attack ANC bases; 12 persons were killed. The aggression was condemned by the Commonwealth Committee on Southern Africa at an emergency meeting on 24 June.

South Africa's destabilization efforts continued against Mozambique, despite a non-aggression agreement, known as the Nkomati Accord, signed with that country in March 1984.<sup>(7)</sup> Mozambique claimed that South African agents continued to supply the rebel National Resistance Movement (MNR) with arms and ammunition. Although South Africa denied giving support to MNR after signing the accord, Mozambique obtained evidence of South African involvement when its forces destroyed camps of the MNR forces. On 13 June 1985, the Presidents of Mozambique, the United Republic of Tanzania and Zimbabwe held a one-day meeting at Harare, Zimbabwe, to discuss Mozambique's security situation and to explore ways of increasing co-operation with it. The South African Foreign Minister said at a press conference on 19 September that South Africa maintained radio links with MNR, had constructed a landing strip for its forces, and dropped supplies.

South Africa also supported rebels in Lesotho—the so-called Lesotho Liberation Army. In October, Lesotho was shelled from South African territory. South African soldiers in December killed six recently exiled members of ANC and three Lesotho citizens in an attack against Maseru, Lesotho.

Action by the Committee on colonial countries. On 16 May,<sup>(4)</sup> the Committee on colonial countries paid tribute to the front-line and other African States for their commitment to an independent Namibia. It deemed it imperative that the international community increase its support to the front-line States to enable them to resolve their own economic difficulties, which were a consequence of South Africa's policies of aggression and subversion, and to defend themselves against South Africa's attempts to destabilize them. The Committee urged States to assist the Southern African Development Coordination Conference (SADCC) in its efforts to promote regional economic co-operation and development and to reduce the economic dependence of countries of the area on South Africa.

The Committee, on 7 August,<sup>(5)</sup> noted that South Africa had repeatedly committed armed aggression against neighbouring countries, particularly Angola and Botswana, causing extensive loss of human lives and destruction of the economic infrastructure.

On 9 August,<sup>(6)</sup> the Committee urged United Nations organizations to extend, as a matter of priority, material assistance to the front-line States to enable them to support the Namibian people's struggle for independence and to resist the violation of their territorial integrity by South Africa, directly or, as in Angola and Mozambique, through puppet traitor groups in the service of Pretoria.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission. The Commission on Human Rights also condemned South Africa's aggression against front-line and other neighbouring States. On 26 February, it called the acts wanton and unprovoked,<sup>(7)</sup> condemned South Africa for its military pressure on front-line States and for its support to bandits who sought to destabilize the States in question,<sup>(8)</sup> and demanded that South Africa cease its aggression aimed at undermining the economies and destabilizing the political institutions of its neighbours.<sup>(9)</sup>

On 30 August,<sup>(10)</sup> the Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities condemned South Africa for continued acts of international terrorism against those States.

Activities of the Council for Namibia. The United Nations Council for Namibia, in its 1985 report to the General Assembly,<sup>(11)</sup> said that the increased militarization of southern Africa and the aggression and destabilization perpetrated by South Africa had impeded the development of the front-line States. In its efforts to intimidate the people of Namibia and South Africa and their national liberation movements recognized by OAU, South Africa had subjected Angola, Botswana, Lesotho, Mozambique, Zambia and Zimbabwe to subversion, military aggression, incursions and other forms of destabilization. Furthermore, South Africa had recruited, trained, financed and equipped mercenaries to cause instability, and supplied puppet groups with military hardware and funds.

In its Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action adopted on 7 June,<sup>(12)</sup> the Council condemned South Africa's latest act of aggression against Angola and reaffirmed that the support of the front-line States for Namibia continued to be an important factor in efforts to bring about independence. It called on Governments to assist the States to enable them to defend themselves, and to support SADCC, with a view to reducing their economic dependence on South Africa and to enable them to resist its aggression and destabilization efforts.

Communications. A number of countries addressed communications to the Secretary-General in 1985 on South Africa's aggression (for letters dealing with aggression against a particular State, see also pp. 181, 183, 189, 193 and 196).

Spain forwarded its Foreign Ministry's 19 June communiqué on events in southern Africa.<sup>(13)</sup> Noting the 1984 Lusaka and Nkomati agreements, Spain condemned South Africa's covert mission to capture oil installations in Angola's Cabinda province as well as its military incursion into Gaborone, Botswana, and urged South Africa to settle disputes peacefully. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on 15 July,<sup>(14)</sup> called attention to the dangers arising from South Africa's aggression, particularly against Angola, in violation of the United Nations Charter and Security Council resolutions. On 18 September,<sup>(15)</sup> Madagascar forwarded the resolutions adopted by the OAU Council of Ministers (Addis Ababa, 10-17 July). In one, the Council condemned South Africa for the aggression against Angola and Botswana, during which scores of innocent civilians and refugees were killed under the pretext of hot pursuit of ANC and SWAPO fighters and the elimination of non-existent military bases; it commended the front-line States and Lesotho for their commitment and readiness to sacrifice for Namibia's independence and majority rule in South Africa.

The Bahamas forwarded a communiqué adopted by heads of Commonwealth Governments on 22 October.<sup>(16)</sup> Recalling that South Africa had entered into pacts with Angola and Mozambique in 1984, they said that South Africa had nevertheless continued to occupy Angolan territory, to launch attacks against it and to support rebel movements in those two countries; they condemned South Africa's attacks on those neighbouring countries which had refused to enter into pacts with it, and especially deplored the June attack against Botswana. The President of Senegal, current OAU Chairman, in a statement of 5 November,<sup>(17)</sup> condemned the attacks on Angola, Botswana and Mozambique, said UNITA had become a movement serving South African policies, and appealed to Governments to denounce South Africa's moves.

Angola, on 5 November,<sup>(18)</sup> forwarded the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September). They stressed the positive role played by the front-line States, condemned South Africa for the continued military occupation of Angola, decided to increase material support to Angola, expressed concern about the concentration of South African troops along the Angolan-Namibian border as well as destabilization efforts against Mozambique, condemned the repeal by the United States Congress of the 1975 Clark Amendment which was designed to terminate United States involvement in Angola's internal affairs, condemned the June 1985 meeting in Angola of subversive renegades and mercenary groups under the auspices of the United States which constituted interference in Angola's internal affairs, condemned the use of South African territory for the infiltration into Mozambique of armed bandits which attacked the defenceless population, called for assistance to Mozambique for defence purposes, and condemned the aggression against Botswana and Lesotho.

On 23 December,<sup>(19)</sup> China condemned the recent South African invasion of southern Angola and commando raid of Lesotho, which showed the regime's continued hostility towards the black masses.

and the acts of aggression and destabilization against States in the region, to increase assistance to the front-line and neighbouring States and to the liberation movements in South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In numerous 1985 resolutions, the General Assembly condemned South Africa's aggression, subversion, terrorism and destabilization against African States. It did so in resolutions 40/56, 40/64 A and 40/64 I, and in the last also condemned those actions aimed against refugees from South Africa and Namibia, demanded that South Africa immediately withdraw its troops from southern Angola and end the destabilization of front-line and other States, and appealed to States, organizations and institutions to increase assistance to the front-line States and SADCC in order to increase their economic strength and independence from South Africa.

The Assembly again urged the international community to increase support to the front-line States to enable them to resolve their own economic difficulties, caused largely by Pretoria's policies of aggression and to defend themselves better against South Africa's persistent destabilization attempts; Member States were also urged to assist Angola and other front-line States in strengthening their defence capacity, and South Africa was condemned for its use of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating acts of aggression against neighbouring States (40/97 A). Similar condemnations were contained in resolution 40/25 and the Assembly also condemned South Africa's use of armed terrorist groups with a view to pitting them against the national liberation movements and destabilizing the Governments of southern Africa; it called on the international community to increase assistance to the countries so that they could defend their sovereignty and rebuild and develop.

The Assembly again urged United Nations organizations to assist the front-line States to enable them to resist attacks by South African forces (40/53). Noting with concern that a critical situation prevailed in southern Africa, the Assembly stated that the régime had resorted to desperate measures in order to suppress by force the legitimate aspirations of the people of southern Africa and had repeatedly committed acts of armed aggression against neighbouring States, particularly Angola and Botswana, causing extensive loss of human lives and destruction of the economic infrastructure (decision 40/415).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

In resolution 1985/59, the Economic and Social Council requested United Nations organizations, in view of the deteriorating situation in South Africa

Angola-South Africa armed incidents and South African occupation of Angola

Following increased South African aggression against and occupation of Angola in 1985, the Security Council adopted four resolutions condemning that action—on 20 June (567(1985)), 20 September (571(1985)), 7 October (574(1985)) and 6 December (577(1985)). The Council also sent an investigative commission to Angola to assess damage resulting from South Africa's invasion; it endorsed the commission's report in December.

The Commission on Human Rights, the Council for Namibia and the General Assembly similarly condemned South Africa's aggression against Angola.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. On 26 February, the Commission on Human Rights demanded that South Africa put an immediate, total and unconditional end to its unprovoked acts of aggression and withdraw its forces from Angola,<sup>(7)</sup> and condemned South Africa for its persistent acts of subversion and aggression against Angola, including the continued occupation of parts of its territory in violation of Angolan sovereignty and all norms of international law.<sup>(8)</sup> Again on that day,<sup>(9)</sup> the Commission similarly condemned South Africa for aggression against Angola.

Action by the Council for Namibia. The Council for Namibia, in its June Vienna Declaration,<sup>(12)</sup> condemned South Africa's latest act of aggression against Angola, which it said exposed Pretoria's duplicity and bad faith, and rejected Pretoria's arrogated right to transgress the borders of front-line States. It also rejected the attempts by the United States and South Africa to establish a "linkage" between Namibia's independence and the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III).

Communications (April-June). In a letter of 15 April 1985 to the Secretary-General,<sup>(21)</sup> South Africa said that it remained ready, as had been agreed in November 1984 with Angola, to move the office of the Joint Monitoring Commission (Angola, Cuba, South Africa) to the Angola/Namibia border area, in order to complete the disengagement process. Ministerial talks on that move had not taken place; the move had recently been delayed due to the SWAPO annual rainy season offensive. Despite these activities, South Africa had instructed its forces to withdraw from southern Angola within a week; it trusted that this would be conducive to the withdrawal of Cuban forces from Angola, thus paving the way for a peaceful resolution of regional problems, including Namibia's independence. Over the previous 16 months, South Africa said, it had established a working relationship with Angola, having held five bilateral ministerial meetings, and it hoped the relationship would help in achieving a peaceful resolution of the problems in the region.

Angola addressed three letters to the President of the Security Council in June, reporting a deterioration in the situation. In a 6 June message,<sup>(22)</sup> Angola stated that on 21 May its forces had captured South African commandos intending to sabotage the Cabinda Gulf Oil Company compound at Malongo; their objective was to destroy the credibility of the Angolan Government with the Western Governments with which it had economic relations, and to destabilize Angola's economy and make those Governments believe that the UNITA puppet group was a valid party in a peaceful solution in southern Africa. The South African action was particularly reprehensible as it was in violation of the 1984 Lusaka Understanding.<sup>(2)</sup>

On 12 June,<sup>(23)</sup> Angola said that over the previous fortnight there had been an increased violation of its airspace as well as a concentration of South African motorized brigades and battalions along the Angolan border, leading Angola to surmise that the increased activity at the beginning of the dry season was a sign that a new invasion was being prepared.

The following day,<sup>(24)</sup> Angola requested that the Council convene to deal with the continuous acts of aggression and violence perpetuated by South African forces, resulting in the violation of Angolan territorial integrity and sovereignty.

On 20 June,<sup>(25)</sup> Brazil transmitted a 6 June telegram it had sent to Angola repudiating the South African incursion and the 8 June reply by Angola acknowledging Brazil's support.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

In response to Angola's complaint against South Africa, the Security Council held two meetings on 20 June. It invited Angola, Argentina, the Bahamas, the Congo, Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Liberia, Pakistan, Sao Tome and Principe, South Africa, the Sudan, the United Republic of Tanzania and Yugoslavia, at their request, to participate without the right to vote.

Angola recapitulated the May events surrounding the capture of the South African commandos, who it said were planning to attack the Cabinda Gulf Oil compound at Malongo, more than 2,000 kilometres from the Namibian border. The arms seized by Angola, including explosives, incendiary bombs and land-mines, showed the absurdity of South Africa's claim that the operation was intended to locate SWAPO and ANC bases. Some weeks earlier, even as Angola and South Africa were preparing a ministerial-level meeting on re-establishing peace in southern Africa, plans were being made for the commando operation and South Africa was funneling military aid to UNITA rebels. Despite South Africa's statements about withdrawing its troops from Angola, its forces remained there.

South Africa said the Angolan Government was providing facilities for thousands of ANC terrorists, actively assisting ANC in training, arming and planning for terrorism against the people of South Africa. South Africa had sought a peaceful resolution of its dispute with Angola, and had repeatedly urged it to remove ANC terrorists from its territory and to cease assisting them, but Angola had failed to respond. South Africa, which had acted in accordance with international law, would not apologize for having taken appropriate action to counteract the threat and would take whatever action was necessary to defend itself. South Africa had not recognized the Angolan régime because, among other things, it was not in control of the greater part of Angola, and because it would be incapable of maintaining itself without the support of foreign troops. South Africa called on all Council members to join it in calling for an international agreement for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Angola.

All speakers condemned South Africa's aggression against Angola. Many countries—Burkina Faso, China, the Congo, Cuba, Egypt, the German Democratic Republic, India, Liberia, Madagascar, Pakistan, Sao Tome and Principe (on behalf of African countries whose official language was Portuguese), the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Yugoslavia—urged the Council to adopt effective sanctions against South Africa to deter it from its acts of aggression. India, Peru and Thailand endorsed Angola's right to compensation for the losses it had suffered.

A number of countries said South Africa's attack was a threat to regional and international security and an attempt to destabilize neighbouring States. For example, the Bahamas (on behalf of the Latin American and Caribbean Group) said that for this reason, South Africa's unconstrained behaviour ought not to be tolerated by the international community. China said South Africa remained the root of the trouble in the region, and Denmark said its conduct not only threatened regional stability but had wider implications for international peace and security. The Sudan joined those condemning the acts as a threat to international peace and security. Sao Tome and Principe, speaking also on behalf of Cape Verde, Guinea-Bissau and Mozambique, said South Africa was a permanent source of destabilization in the region as proved by its terrorist acts against Angola and Botswana. Asserting that South Africa was pursuing a policy of brutal pressure against regional countries and striving to weaken their already shaky economies, France condemned such destabilization efforts.

According to Madagascar, South Africa was responsible for repressing democratic liberation movements, the illegal occupation of an international territory and acts of aggression against States in the region.

In view of South Africa's persistent aggression, Trinidad and Tobago believed that Angola would have to continue to rely on international support to preserve its sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Yugoslavia perceived the aggression against Angola as pressure against all non-aligned countries.

Some countries, such as Australia, condemned South Africa's actions as a violation of international law. Egypt said South Africa had decided to challenge the entire international community by its raids on sovereign States, and Peru described its actions as colonialist and racist.

Some States believed that South Africa's conduct had been encouraged by the support of certain countries. Among those expressing such a view, Burkina Faso said support came from countries which had opposed sanctions against South Africa. Cuba, as well as the German Democratic Republic on behalf of the Group of Eastern European States, spoke similarly. The latter added that South Africa's actions in Angola showed that its declarations of peace were null and void. The USSR said the provocative conduct and the challenging statements made by South Africa in the Council were the result of the support given to it by Western countries, particularly the United States and the United Kingdom, and of the alliance between Pretoria and the authors of the policy of so-called constructive engagement.

The United Kingdom regarded the involvement of South African military personnel in Cabinda as illegal and an unjustifiable act of force; however, it did not endorse every formulation in the resolution before the Council (see below). Also deploring the South African action, the United States was particularly disturbed by evidence that the action had threatened the lives and property of United States citizens and companies, and it added that such instances of violence in the region underscored the importance of moving rapidly to a negotiated settlement.

Liberia, on behalf of the African Group, deplored the fact that South Africa arrogated to itself the right to transgress the borders of front-line States in violation of the 1984 Lusaka Understanding. Argentina said South Africa's actions challenged the credibility of the United Nations, while the Congo perceived them as attempts to extend of bantustanization outside South Africa.

At the conclusion of the second meeting on 20 June, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 567(1985).

The Security Council,

Having heard the statement of the Minister for External Relations of the People's Republic of Angola,

Recalling its resolutions 387(1976), 418(1977), 428(1978), 447(1979), 454(1979), 475(1980), 545(1983) and 546(1984),

Gravely concerned at the renewed escalation of unprovoked and persistent acts of aggression committed by the racist régime of South Africa in violation of the sovereignty, airspace and territorial integrity of Angola, as evidenced by the recent military attack in the province of Cabinda,

Conscious of the need to take effective steps for the prevention and removal of all threats to international peace and security posed by South Africa's military attacks,

1. Strongly condemns South Africa for its recent act of aggression against the territory of Angola in the province of Cabinda as well as for its renewed intensified, premeditated and unprovoked acts of aggression, which constitute a flagrant violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of that country and seriously endanger international peace and security;

2. Further strongly condemns South Africa for its utilization of the international Territory of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating its armed attacks as well as sustaining its occupation of parts of the territory of Angola;

3. Demands that South Africa should unconditionally withdraw forthwith all its occupation forces from the territory of Angola, cease all acts of aggression against that State and scrupulously respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the People's Republic of Angola;

4. Considers that Angola is entitled to appropriate redress and compensation for any material damage it has suffered;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor the implementation of the present resolution and report to the Security Council;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Meeting numbers. SC 2596, 2597.

Communications (September-November). In late 1985, a number of countries addressed letters to either the President of the Security Council or the Secretary-General concerning South African aggression against Angola.

Angola, on 18 September,<sup>(26)</sup> said that South African forces had again crossed into Angola on 16 September and engaged in acts of destruction and brutality, under the pretext of countering non-existent pre-emptive strikes by Namibians. The next day,<sup>(27)</sup> Angola requested that the Council convene, in view of the South African invasion and its threat to regional and international peace and security. After the Council took action on 20 September (see below), Angola made a similar request on 1 October.<sup>(28)</sup>

Brazil transmitted a telegram it had sent to Angola on 17 September<sup>(29)</sup> expressing its solidarity with Angola following South Africa's latest aggression. On 19 September,<sup>(30)</sup> Botswana expressed concern over press reports about South Africa's land and air attack, condemned the invasion, called on South Africa to withdraw immediately from Angola and appealed to the United States to continue efforts to restrain South Africa from such aggression. Mongolia, on 20 September,<sup>(31)</sup> also demanded that South Africa withdraw its troops immediately, and called on the Council to put an end to the aggression and to condemn the States which encouraged South Africa in such acts.

Also condemning the South African aggression, the USSR, in a statement of 21 September,<sup>(32)</sup> said that South Africa, by its incursion into Angola, was attempting to save UNITA—the puppet organization used by South Africa and its Western supporters to destabilize the Government—from inevitable defeat. Noting that the invading forces had penetrated up to 190 kilometres into Angola, Viet Nam made a similar statement on 20 September,<sup>(33)</sup> demanding that South Africa immediately halt its aggression, which was aimed at aiding UNITA.

India forwarded a special communiqué adopted on 1 October by the Meeting of Ministers and Heads of Delegation of Non-Aligned Countries to the 1985 session of the General Assembly in which they condemned South Africa for its latest aggression against Angola.<sup>(34)</sup> Similarly, India forwarded a communiqué adopted on 25 November<sup>(35)</sup> by the Coordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries regarding the situation in southern Africa following the repeal of the 1975 Clark Amendment by the United States Congress. Noting that the Amendment was designed to terminate United States involvement in Angola's internal affairs, the Bureau expressed concern that its repeal indicated that the United States was contemplating assistance to Angolan rebels, and it urged the United States to refrain from assisting South Africa and rebels aided by it to subvert or overthrow Governments of southern Africa. Earlier, in September, the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries had also condemned the repeal of the Clark Amendment (see p. 180).

Angola forwarded on 20 November<sup>(36)</sup> a statement made by the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the MPLA/Workers' Party (Movimento Popular de Libertação de Angola-Partido do Trabalho) on the tenth anniversary of Angola's independence. The Bureau said that the developments in Angola, with direct South African intervention in support of puppet insurgent groups, were evidence of the imperialist forces' intention of thwarting Angola's revolution through South Africa to preserve their interests in the region. Encouraged by the United States, South Africa was developing a policy of open confrontation with and destabilization of countries in the region. The repeal of the Clark Amendment had neutralized any chance of success for the United States policy of "constructive engagement" towards South Africa.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (September-December)

September. On 20 September, the Security Council held two meetings on Angola's complaint.<sup>(27)</sup> At their request, the Council invited Angola, Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, Cyprus, Greece, Guyana, Qatar, Senegal, South Africa, Sri Lanka and Zambia to participate, without vote, in the discussion. The Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid was also invited, under rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure.<sup>c</sup>

Opening the debate, Angola said that on 17 September South African armed forces had launched a massive invasion of Angola, including air raids and attacks on Angolan military units in the provinces of Cunene, Cuando Cubango and Moxico, 275 kilometres from the border with Namibia. The attack was directed against Angola's forces which were advancing towards the UNITA rebel base in Cuando Cubango. On 19 September, South African Mirage jets had bombed the Mavinga area and vast quantities of arms, weapons and other military equipment had been air-dropped by the South African forces in the Cazombo area in eastern Angola. There were no SWAPO bases in Cuando Cubango and Moxico and South Africa's actions were intended exclusively to save the UNITA rebels who could not survive without such assistance. The attack was part of a pattern of similar aggression against Botswana and Mozambique. Appealing to the Council for assistance, Angola asserted that the continuation of such attacks might force it to take recourse under Article 51 of the United Nations Charter, granting States the right to individual or collective self-defence against armed attack.

South Africa said that since the disengagement of its forces as it had announced on 18 April, SWAPO forces had returned to the southern Angola border area in ever-larger numbers and had stated their intention to increase attacks on civilian targets in Namibia. Information was obtained from two SWAPO terrorists, part of a reconnaissance and sabotage team, and the tracks of some 30 others were followed to the border with Angola; South Africa then launched an operation into southern Angola, where further large arms caches for use in Namibia had been found. The contingents involved in that operation had been ordered to commence their withdrawal. South Africa remained willing to enter into discussions with Angola as soon as possible, since that dialogue was essential to resolve the region's problems, particularly the volatile Angola-Namibia border situation. According to South Africa, Cuban and Soviet combat elements were directly involved in fighting against opposition groups in southern Angola.

Several speakers rejected South Africa's justification of hot pursuit for its incursions. Burkina Faso said South Africa's pretext was fallacious. Also rejecting South Africa's pretext, France said its operations were linked to its illegal presence in Namibia and its refusal to accept the United Nations plan for Namibia's independence. India said South Africa had no business in Namibia in the first place. Madagascar, speaking on behalf of the African Group, said that South Africa's theory of preventive action was unacceptable in the framework of positive international law since South Africa was occupying Namibia illegally. Speaking for OAU, Senegal said South Africa's act of destabilization constituted undeniable aggression. Thailand said South Africa's incursions into a neighbouring country, on any pretext whatsoever, constituted a gross violation of international law and the United Nations Charter. Trinidad and Tobago said the international community should send a strong signal to South Africa that it would not allow Namibia to be used as a springboard for armed attacks against Angola. The United States said it was not sympathetic to South Africa's assertion of its right to pursuit stemming from its illegal occupation of Namibia. The USSR said South Africa was concocting inventions about a Cuban-Soviet danger in the area and it would not have the temerity to counter the will of the overwhelming majority of States without the support of a number of Western powers, primarily the United States. The Ukrainian SSR expressed a similar view. Australia, Brazil, Cyprus, Qatar (on behalf of the Arab Group) and Zambia also rejected South Africa's pretext of preventive attacks.

Brazil, Burkina Faso, China, Cuba, Egypt, Madagascar, Peru, Qatar, Senegal, Sri Lanka, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and Zambia called for strong measures by the Council against South Africa.

Touching on other aspects of the issue, Australia questioned South Africa's proclaimed wish for good relations in southern Africa in view of its policies of destabilization in Angola, Botswana and Mozambique. Burkina Faso and Egypt said South Africa's attack on Angola was an act of defiance against the Council. Asserting that South Africa had no intention of solving the problem of southern Africa through peaceful talks, China said it had to be compelled to implement all Council resolutions. Denmark expressed satisfaction that, within the white minority in South Africa itself, the country's policy of aggression against Angola was being questioned.

Peru said the source of weapons with which South Africa carried out its attacks had to be determined. Thailand stressed that Angola had to be fully compensated for the attack. Calling on South Africa to withdraw its troops immediately, the United Kingdom stressed that it did not accept paragraph 5 of the text before the Council (see below) as endorsing the intervention of combat troops from other countries in the region, since that risked widening the conflict and exacerbating regional problems. The United States cautioned all parties to act with restraint and urged South Africa to withdraw immediately its forces from Angola.

The Chairman of the Committee against Apartheid said South Africa, under the pretext of self-defence, was subverting and destabilizing the Angolan Government, and called on the Council to act under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter.

At the conclusion of the second meeting on 20 September, the Council, at the request of the United States, voted on paragraph 5 of the draft resolution before it. The paragraph was adopted by 14 votes to none, with 1 abstention (United States). The Council then unanimously adopted resolution 571(1985).

The Security Council,

Having considered the request by the Permanent Representative of the People's Republic of Angola to the United Nations, contained in document S/17474,

Having heard the statement of the Permanent Representative of Angola,

Recalling its resolutions 387(1976), 428(1978), 447(1979), 454(1979), 475(1980), 545(1983), and 567(1985), in which it, inter alia, condemned South Africa's aggression against the People's Republic of Angola and demanded that South Africa scrupulously respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola,

Gravely concerned at the further renewed escalation of hostile, unprovoked and persistent acts of aggression and sustained armed invasions committed by the racist régime of South Africa, in violation of the sovereignty, airspace and territorial integrity of the People's Republic of Angola,

Convinced that the intensity and timing of these acts of armed invasions are intended to frustrate efforts at negotiated settlements in southern Africa, particularly in regard to the implementation of Security Council resolutions 385(1976) and 435(1978),

Grieved at the tragic loss of human life, mainly that of civilians, and concerned about the damage and destruction of property, including bridges and livestock, resulting from the escalated acts of aggression and armed incursions by the racist régime of South Africa against the People's Republic of Angola,

Gravely concerned that these wanton acts of aggression by South Africa form a consistent and sustained pattern of violations and are aimed at weakening the unrelenting support of front-line States for the movements for freedom and national liberation of the peoples of Namibia and South Africa,

Conscious of the need to take effective steps for the prevention and removal of all threats to international peace and security posed by South Africa's military attacks,

1. Strongly condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its premeditated, persistent and sustained armed invasions of the People's Republic of Angola, which constitute a flagrant violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of that country, as well as a serious threat to international peace and security;

2. Strongly condemns also South Africa for its utilization of the international Territory of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating armed invasions and destabilization of the People's Republic of Angola;

3. Demands that South Africa withdraw forthwith and unconditionally all its military forces from the territory of the People's Republic of Angola, cease all acts of aggression against that State and scrupulously respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola;

4. Calls upon all States to implement fully the arms embargo imposed against South Africa in resolution 418(1977);

5. Requests Member States urgently to extend all necessary assistance to the People's Republic of Angola and other front-line States, in order to strengthen their defence capacity against South Africa's acts of aggression;

6. Calls for payment of full and adequate compensation to the People's Republic of Angola for the damage to life and property resulting from those acts of aggression;

7. Decides to appoint and send immediately to Angola a commission of investigation, comprising three members of the Security Council, in order to evaluate the damage resulting from the invasion by South African forces and to report to the Council not later than 15 November 1985;

8. Urges Member States, pending the report of the Commission of Investigation, to take prompt, appropriate and effective action to bring pressure to bear upon the Government of South Africa to comply with the provisions of the present resolution and of the Charter of the United Nations, to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola, and to desist from all acts of aggression against neighbouring States;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Security Council resolution 571(1985)

20 September 1985 Meeting 2607 Adopted unanimously

6-nation draft (S/17481), orally revised.

Meeting numbers. SC 2606, 2607.

On 30 September,<sup>(37)</sup> the Council President reported that agreement had been reached in consultations with Council members that the Commission of Investigation would be composed of Australia, Egypt and Peru.

October. Meeting again at the request of Angola,<sup>(38)</sup> the Security Council held four meetings on 3, 4 and 7 October. It invited, at their request, Afghanistan, Algeria, Angola, Botswana, Cameroon, Cuba, Ethiopia, Ghana, Iran, Kuwait, Morocco, Mozambique, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Senegal, South Africa, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia and Zimbabwe to participate, without voting rights. Under rule 39 of the provisional rules of procedure,<sup>d</sup> the Council invited, at Burkina Faso's request,<sup>(38)</sup> Peter Mueshihange of SWAPO and, at the request of Burkina Faso, Egypt and Madagascar,<sup>(39)</sup> Mfanafuthi J. Makatini of ANC.

South Africa on 3 October put forward a draft resolution,<sup>(40)</sup> by which the Council would have demanded that all foreign military forces withdraw unconditionally from Angola, called on all States to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola, requested the various Angolan factions to settle their differences through peaceful negotiation, and requested Member States not to intervene in the domestic affairs of Angola. No action was taken on South Africa's draft.

Angola said that from 28 to 30 September South African planes had violated Angola's airspace. Eight planes had bombed Angolan troops near Mavinga, 250 kilometres from the Namibian border, incurring more than 65 casualties, wounding hundreds and destroying six Angolan helicopters. The South African action had taken place just as Angola's armed forces were breaking through the last defensive position of UNITA.

South Africa said some Soviet pilots were flying Angolan planes and that the USSR was militarily involved in Angola, that it was commanding the current MPLA offensive, and that it was seeking to expand its influence in Africa. SWAPO was sending units southward as part of its terrorist campaign against the people of Namibia. South Africa would not shed its responsibilities for the region or for the security of the South African and Namibian people.

The other speakers called for the withdrawal of South African troops from Angola. Nigeria, speaking for the African Group, said there was no reason or circumstances that could justify South Africa's unprovoked aggression. It called on the Council to apply without delay comprehensive and mandatory sanctions and consider other measures against South Africa, including those specified in Article 42 of the Charter. Also calling for the application of mandatory sanctions were Burkina Faso, China, Cuba, Egypt, Ethiopia, Ghana, India, Madagascar, Nicaragua, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, the United Arab Emirates, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Egypt, saying South Africa had proved it would not abide by Council resolutions until the Council took the steps provided for in the Charter, urged the Council to act decisively. Nicaragua, while welcoming unilateral measures adopted by certain countries to increase pressure on South Africa, said that was not enough and urged the Council to act more forcefully. Peru said that while the draft resolution before the Council (see below) was significant, it was more important for the Council to adopt a qualitatively different position and make effective use of all recourse measures available under the Charter. Zambia urged the Council to go beyond passing resolutions of mere condemnation and adopt tougher, action-oriented resolutions.

A number of speakers agreed with Angola that South Africa's attack was aimed primarily at saving the UNITA rebels. They were Cuba, Denmark, Mozambique, Nigeria, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR, Viet Nam and Zimbabwe (for the African Group). Mozambique noted that South Africa had abandoned its justification of hot pursuit and had acknowledged that its aggression against Angola and Mozambique was aimed at propping up its puppets in those countries.

The USSR accused the United States of preparing to provide open support to the UNITA rebels and encouraging South Africa's aggressive behaviour in the region by adopting a policy of so-called constructive engagement with South Africa. According to Viet Nam, South Africa's actions resulted from the comfort it enjoyed from its North American ally.

The United States rejected claims that it was supplying arms to South Africa and reminded the Council that it had placed an embargo on such sales; it accused certain forces outside the region of fueling the conflict to further their own interests at the expense of peace and security in the region.

Among those condemning South Africa for its aggression, Australia said it could not condone the doctrine of tutorial or punitive aggression. Ghana took issue with some Council members' definition of South Africa's aggression as mere cross-border violence, and said those actions were a deliberate, systematic pattern of aggression aimed at destabilizing Angola. Thailand said South Africa, by maintaining forces in Angola, was defying the Council. The United Arab Emirates rejected South Africa's invoking the justification of the right of self-defence in attacking Angola as contrary to international law and called it nothing but a flagrant act of aggression.

Some countries saw South Africa's actions as a threat to international peace and security. Cameroon stated that South Africa had acquired a nuclear capability, thereby increasing the chances of escalating the arms race in the subregion and further endangering international peace and security. According to Madagascar, South Africa's latest incursion into Angola unquestionably constituted aggression as defined by the General Assembly.<sup>(41)</sup>

Botswana and Denmark emphasized the regional aspects of the issue. Botswana asserted that the problem in southern Africa was not the presence of Cuban forces in Angola but the illegal occupation of Namibia by South Africa and the tyranny of apartheid. Denmark, while urging Member States to take prompt and effective action to force South Africa to comply with Council resolutions, said the problem had to be approached not in an East-West context but in a regional one.

The United Kingdom said Angolans should resolve their internal affairs without intervention by foreign troops, and condemned South Africa's action as improper, illegitimate and counter-productive.

Several countries mentioned their support for Angola in resisting South Africa. Algeria said the non-aligned countries had consistently lent their support to southern Africa, as shown by holding their recent ministerial meeting in Luanda and by deciding to meet in 1986 in Zimbabwe at the highest level. China urged the Council to strengthen its support and assistance to Angola. According to Ethiopia, the front-line States could not alone cope with South Africa's repeated aggression and destabilization schemes and had to be assisted by nations committed to maintaining peace and security. India reassured Angola of its support and that of the Non-Aligned Movement in the face of continuing South African aggression.

Trinidad and Tobago called on the Council to reaffirm Angola's right, under Article 51 of the Charter, to defend itself.

Both Mr. Mueshihange of SWAPO and Mr. Makatini of ANC stated that certain permanent Council members had blocked the adoption of effective enforcement measures by the Council. The former singled out the United States for co-operating with South Africa to protect the UNITA rebels.

At the conclusion of the debate on 7 October, the Council, at the request of the United States, voted on paragraph 6 of the draft resolution before it; the paragraph was adopted by 14 votes to none, with 1 abstention (United States). Resolution 574(1985) as a whole was then adopted unanimously.

The Security Council,

Having considered the request of the Permanent Representative of the People's Republic of Angola to the United Nations contained in document S/17510,

Having heard the statement of the Permanent Representative of Angola,

Bearing in mind that all Member States are obliged to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the sovereignty, territorial integrity or political independence of any State and from acting in any other manner inconsistent with the principles and purposes of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolutions 387(1976), 428(1978), 447(1979), 454(1979), 475(1980), 545(1983), 546(1984), 567(1985) and 571(1985), which, inter alia, condemned South Africa's aggression against the People's Republic of Angola and demanded that South Africa should scrupulously respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola,

Gravely concerned at the persistent, hostile and unprovoked acts of aggression and sustained armed invasions committed by the racist régime of South Africa in violation of the sovereignty, airspace and territorial integrity of the People's Republic of Angola and, in particular, the armed invasion of Angola carried out on 28 September 1985,

Conscious of the need to take effective steps for the prevention and removal of all threats to international peace and security posed by South Africa's acts of aggression,

1. Strongly condemns the racist régime of South Africa for its latest premeditated and unprovoked aggression against the People's Republic of Angola, as well as its continuing occupation of parts of the territory of that State, which constitute a flagrant violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola and seriously endanger international peace and security;

2. Strongly condemns also South Africa for its utilization of the illegally occupied Territory of Namibia as a springboard for perpetrating acts of aggression against the People's Republic of Angola, as well as sustaining its occupation of part of the territory of that country;

3. Demands once again that South Africa cease immediately all acts of aggression and unconditionally withdraw forthwith all military forces occupying Angolan territory, as well as scrupulously respect the sovereignty, airspace, territorial integrity and independence of the People's Republic of Angola;

4. Reaffirms the right of the People's Republic of Angola, in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Charter of the United Nations, in particular Article 51, to take all the measures necessary to defend and safeguard its sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence;

5. Calls upon all States to implement fully the arms embargo imposed against South Africa in Security Council resolution 418(1977);

6. Renews its request to Member States to extend all necessary assistance to the People's Republic of Angola in order to strengthen its defence capability in the face of South Africa's escalating acts of aggression and the occupation of parts of its territory by the South African military forces;

7. Requests the Security Council Commission of Investigation established in pursuance of resolution 571(1985), consisting of Australia, Egypt and Peru, to report urgently on its evaluation of the damage resulting from South African aggression, including the latest bombings;

8. Decides to meet again in the event of non-compliance by South Africa with the present resolution in order to consider the adoption of more effective measures in accordance with the appropriate provisions of the Charter;

9. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

6-nation draft (S/17531).

November/December. On 15 November,<sup>(42)</sup> the Security Council President stated that the Chairman of the Council's Commission of Investigation had requested an extension of the deadline for submission of its report by one week, until 22 November. Following informal consultations among Council members, the request was granted.

The Commission stated in its report<sup>(43)</sup> that it had visited Angola from 13 to 23 October, stopping in six provinces including Cazombo in Moxico province (eastern Angola) where military operations had occurred in September. Because of ongoing hostilities, it was unable to visit Mavinga in Cuando Cubango province (south-eastern Angola), which had also been the subject of Angola's complaint. The Commission's reconstruction of the events surrounding the reported South African interventions in September and October was based mainly on accounts of Angolan government and military officials. As far as possible, they were verified against personal observation, individual interviews and other available information.

As a result of its observations in Cazombo, the Commission estimated that material damage attributed to the September events amounted to $604,000, which took into account damage to buildings, plants and equipment, the cost of repairing a bridge over the Zambezi River, restoring electricity and water supplies and repairing an airstrip. The Angolan Government provided information about losses in the Mavinga region, where South African forces had been engaged in September and October. The Government assessed the losses at $36,084,508, and the Commission believed that the assessment accurately reflected the situation.

The Commission stressed that the estimates did not fully reflect the extent of damage suffered by Angola and did not include compensation for losses to human life and injuries, as called for in Security Council resolution 571(1985). According to Angolan figures, 86 military personnel were killed and 83 wounded in the Mavinga region. Furthermore, the estimates did not include the consequences of the latest fighting because of lack of data, or the costs of maintaining displaced persons; therefore, the real cost of damage was substantially higher than the total estimate. The Commission believed international assistance was needed to alleviate the suffering of the people affected by South African aggression, as well as refugees from Namibia, South Africa and elsewhere. International organizations, including UNDP and UNICEF, had contributed, but further assistance was needed for rehabilitation and reconstruction. The UNDP Resident Representative in Angola submitted a list of the most urgently needed items for displaced persons, which the Commission annexed to its report.

South Africa, in a 27 November statement by its Foreign Minister,<sup>(4)</sup> rejected the Commission's report as one-sided and as misrepresenting the facts, and stated that it was part of the United Nations and Angola's propaganda against South Africa. According to South Africa, the situation in Angola was the result of the civil war being waged between MPLA and UNITA; instead of allowing the people to decide their own future, MPLA had imported more than 35,000 Cuban troops and thousands of Soviet surrogates. The Commission should have reported on the suffering inflicted on the Angolan people and the exploitation of its natural resources by those elements, and should have assessed the damage done in Namibia by SWAPO terrorists operating from bases in Angola. South Africa said it was regrettable that the Council did not send a fact-finding mission to the area to establish who was fighting whom, who was directing the operations, what armaments were being used and what the Angolans wanted for their country.

The Council, meeting on 6 December to consider the Commission's report, invited Angola, Burundi and South Africa, at their request, to participate in the discussion without vote.

Presenting the report, the Commission's Chairman, Egypt, said the Commission had interviewed some hospitalized Angolan military personnel whose helicopters had been shot down by South African planes at Mavinga, as well as refugees who had fled from there. The Commission concluded that the plight of the civilian population was one of the more tragic aspects of the situation, which called for further humanitarian assistance by the international community without prejudice to South Africa's obligation to pay compensation.

Rejecting the report, South Africa again asserted that the situation in Angola was the result of civil war and that the Commission's report was nothing more than an attempt to lend credence to Angolan propaganda against South Africa. It said the Commission had ignored the presence of thousands of foreign troops in Angola and the suffering they had inflicted. Furthermore, the Council had ignored South Africa's suggestion that a fact-finding mission be sent to the area (see above).

Angola urged the Council to demand that South Africa make full and immediate reparation to Angola and to indict, punish and penalize the aggressor; failure to do so would only embolden the South African régime to continue its aggression and to undermine all that the United Nations Charter stood for.

India and Burundi concurred with the Commission's conclusion that there was need for international aid without diminishing South Africa's responsibility fully to compensate Angola.

The United Kingdom said it supported the draft resolution before the Council (see below) because it condemned South Africa's incursions into Angola, but it did not interpret anything in the text as endorsing the intervention of foreign troops, as encouraging a policy of armed struggle or as falling within the provisions of Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter. Similarly, the United States also could not support any request for assistance to strengthen Angola's military structure.

At the conclusion of the meeting on 6 December, the Council voted on paragraph 6, at the United States request. The paragraph was adopted by 14 votes to none, with 1 abstention (United States). The Council then unanimously adopted resolution 577(1985).

The Security Council,

Having examined the report of the Security Council Commission of Investigation established under resolution 571(1985),

Having considered the statement of the Permanent Representative of the People's Republic of Angola to the United Nations,

Gravely concerned at the numerous hostile and unprovoked acts of aggression committed by the racist régime of South Africa violating the sovereignty, airspace and territorial integrity of the People's Republic of Angola,

Grieved at the tragic loss of human life and concerned about the damage to and destruction of property resulting from repeated acts of aggression committed by the South African racist régime,

Convinced that these wanton acts of aggression by the minority racist régime in South Africa form a consistent and sustained pattern of violations aimed at destroying the economic infrastructure of the People's Republic of Angola and weakening its support of the struggle of the people of Namibia for freedom and national liberation.

Recalling its resolutions 571(1985) and 574(1985) by which it, inter alia, strongly condemned South Africa's armed invasion perpetrated against the People's Republic of Angola and demanded that South Africa should scrupulously respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola,

Reaffirming that the pursuance of these acts of aggression against Angola constitutes a threat to international peace and security,

Conscious of the need to take immediate and effective steps for the prevention and removal of all threats to international peace and security,

1. Endorses the report of the Security Council Commission of Investigation established under resolution 571(1985) and expresses its appreciation to the members of the Commission;

2. Strongly condemns the racist South African régime for its continued, intensified and unprovoked acts of aggression against the People's Republic of Angola, which constitute a flagrant violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Angola;

3. Strongly condemns South Africa's utilization of the international Territory of Namibia as a springboard for armed invasions and destabilization of the People's Republic of Angola;

4. Demands once again that South Africa cease immediately all acts of aggression against the People's Republic of Angola and unconditionally withdraw forthwith all forces occupying Angolan territory as well as scrupulously respect the sovereignty, airspace, territorial integrity and independence of Angola;

5. Commends the People's Republic of Angola for its steadfast support for the people of Namibia in their just and legitimate struggle against the illegal occupation of their territory by South Africa and for the enjoyment of their inalienable rights to self-determination and national independence;

6. Requests Member States urgently to extend all necessary assistance to the People's Republic of Angola, in order to strengthen its defence capacity;

7. Demands that South Africa pay full and adequate compensation to the People's Republic of Angola for the damage to life and property resulting from the acts of aggression;

8. Requests Member States and international organizations urgently to extend material and other forms of assistance to the People's Republic of Angola in order to facilitate the immediate reconstruction of its economic infrastructure;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor developments in this situation and report to the Security Council as necessary, but no later than 30 June 1986, on the implementation of the present resolution and, in particular, of paragraphs 7 and 8 thereof;

10. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

6 December 1985 Meeting 2631 Adopted unanimously
6-nation draft (S/17667).

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On several occasions in 1985, the General Assembly condemned the repeated acts of aggression and the continued occupation of southern Angola and demanded the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of the South African troops. It did so in resolutions 40/25, 40/64 B, 40/64 I and 40/97 A.

Botswana-South Africa armed incidents

In 1985, the Security Council adopted two resolutions after Botswana complained that South Africa had attacked its capital, Gaborone. In June (resolution 568(1985)), the Council condemned the attack and requested the Secretary-General to send a mission to assess the damage and to propose how to strengthen Botswana's capacity to receive South African refugees. The Council endorsed the mission's report in September (resolution 572(1985)).

Communications. On 14 June,(45) Botswana informed the President of the Security Council that, during an attack on Gaborone that morning by South African forces, 12 persons were killed, including three women and a five-year-old child, and six injured, and four houses were demolished. The raiders apparently entered the country by road. Such violence was particularly deplorable considering Botswana's repeated assurances that it did not permit its territory to be used to launch attacks against neighbouring countries. On 17 June,(46) Botswana requested that the Council convene to consider the situation arising from the attack.

In a statement of 14 June,(47) South Africa provided its version of the events. It said it had repeatedly warned Botswana to curtail the activities of ANC members inside Botswana and in particular their planning and execution of terrorist activities in South Africa, and had provided Botswana with information on such activities. South Africa had no alternative but to protect itself from the increasing terrorist attacks emanating from Botswana.

Several letters were sent to the Council President or the Secretary-General condemning the attack. On 14 June,(48) Zimbabwe said the raid, following closely on the raid into Angola (see p. 180), showed that South Africa was ready to intensify its military aggression against and destabilization of regional

States and also showed the culpability of those nations which continued to support Pretoria. Democratic Kampuchea, on 17 June,(49) said the attack was another premeditated crime by South Africa and demanded that it end its aggression, destabilization and intimidation against its neighbours. Italy forwarded a 19 June EC declaration,(50) stating that South Africa's action ran counter to the continuation of a dialogue aimed at seeking peaceful solutions to the region's problems. Liberia transmitted a 20 June letter(51) from Oliver Tambo, President of ANC, stating that South Africa had undertaken the raid under the pretext of dealing with so-called terrorism, when all Botswana had done was to provide refuge to people in accordance with international law and morality; ANC urged the Council to impose comprehensive mandatory sanctions against South Africa. Brazil expressed solidarity with Botswana on 20 June,(52) as did the Sudan, on 21 June;(53) the latter also called on the Council to take deterrent measures such as comprehensive mandatory sanctions.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

The Council held two meetings on 21 June to consider Botswana's complaint. It invited the Bahamas, Benin, Botswana, the German Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, Seychelles, South Africa, the Sudan, Swaziland and the United Republic of Tanzania, at their request, to participate without vote in the discussion. It also invited, under rule 39 of its provisional rules of procedure,<sup>e</sup> a Vice-Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid.

Opening the debate, Botswana said that the invasion was the culmination of a progressively aggressive South African attitude towards Botswana that had intensified as agitation for change had grown inside South Africa. Botswana had never allowed and would not allow its territory to be used as a base for ANC guerrilla operations against South Africa, and South African commandos had not found one military camp or centre in Gaborone. However, Botswana gave political asylum to South African refugees and would continue to do so regardless of the consequences. Botswana believed that a solution to the region's problems lay solely in ending apartheid in South Africa.

South Africa said it had sent a message to Botswana expressing regret at the loss of innocent life in the operation against ANC targets. The operation was begun after repeated requests to Botswana to curtail ANC's terrorist activities against South Africa originating from its territory went unheeded. Botswana's failure to do so left South Africa no alternative but to take steps to prevent such acts from being planned and executed from Botswana and other neighbouring States. South Africa said that although it was committed to resolving differences with its neighbours peacefully, it would not hesitate to take whatever action was necessary for its defence.

All other speakers condemned South Africa's attack and several urged the Council to act effectively. They were Benin, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, the German Democratic Republic, India, Lesotho, Liberia, the Sudan, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and the United Republic of Tanzania.

Some countries drew a parallel between South Africa's attack against Botswana and other conflicts in the region. The Bahamas, for example, said South Africa's actions in Namibia, Angola and Botswana proved that it could not be coaxed into peaceful change. France said the attack, which coincided with developments in Namibia, underlined the close interconnection of the problems of southern Africa. According to the USSR, the events in Botswana and Angola showed that they formed an inseparable part of South Africa's policy of force and destabilization of the sovereign States of the region, to preserve apartheid at any cost. However, Australia believed that notwithstanding the coincidence of three consecutive Council debates in the previous few days on developments in Namibia, Angola and Botswana, the issues had to be stated clearly and unequivocally in response to each specific situation.

A number of countries raised questions about South Africa's sincerity in explaining its reasons for the attack. Denmark said South Africa's assertion that its attack against Botswana had been carried out after careful deliberations and calculations confirmed South Africa's hypocrisy when it declared its willingness to co-operate with its neighbours in controlling cross-border violations. Egypt saw it as ironic for South Africa to call on Botswana, which had no army, to enter into a non-aggression pact. Lesotho observed that the reasons given by South Africa for its attack were nearly identical to the reasons advanced for the attacks against its other neighbours. The Sudan said all military operations undertaken by national liberation movements were being planned and executed from within South Africa itself and not from the territory of front-line States. India rejected South Africa's invoking international law to justify its attack on Botswana, and Swaziland rejected its invoking Article 51 of the Charter which recognized the right of self-defence.

Benin criticized the lack of political will on the part of some Powers to act firmly in the face of South Africa's aggressive actions. Similarly, Liberia criticized certain permanent Council members for tolerating those actions. The German Democratic Republic accused imperialist circles of collaboration with the South African régime. The Ukrainian SSR believed that certain Western Powers shared responsibility for South Africa's acts. The United Republic of Tanzania called on countries providing support to South Africa to cease appeasing it.

While recognizing the complexities of the internal situation in South Africa, the United Kingdom remained convinced that apartheid had to be dismantled from within, not from without. Thailand agreed with Botswana's assertion that the region's salvation lay solely in dismantling apartheid.

China said South Africa's invasion, at a time when the Council was considering the question of Namibia, not only violated Botswana's sovereignty but also constituted an open provocation of the international community. Peru expressed concern that South Africa's repeated actions jeopardized the legitimate right of the countries of southern Africa to live in peace, independently and in equality.

Madagascar hoped that the mission to be dispatched by the Secretary-General to Botswana, as envisaged in the draft resolution before the Council, would enable the international community to provide assistance to Botswana to defend itself and to harbour refugees fleeing South Africa. Trinidad and Tobago said South Africa must make full reparation for its attack.

Pointing out that Botswana and South Africa had affirmed their willingness to control cross-border violence, the United States hoped that mechanisms already in place would be utilized and that the dialogue which had been under way before the raid would be resumed; it added that the draft resolution contained inappropriate language and reiterated the view that nothing in the text implied that action under Chapter VII of the Charter was contemplated. The United Kingdom said it did not interpret the text as falling within those Charter provisions or as a decision which had specific consequences under the Charter.

The Vice-Chairman of the Committee against Apartheid called on the Western Powers to join in the demands for effective, punitive action against South Africa, asserting that the Council's failure to adopt mandatory sanctions had encouraged South Africa's defiance of the United Nations and world opinion.

On 21 June, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 568(1985).

The Security Council.

Taking note of the letter dated 17 June 1985 from the Permanent Representative of Botswana to the United Nations and having heard the statement of the Minister for External Affairs of Botswana concerning the recent acts of aggression by the racist régime of South Africa against the Republic of Botswana,

Expressing its shock and indignation at the loss of human life, the injuries inflicted, and the extensive damage as a result of that action,

Affirming the urgent need to safeguard the territorial integrity of Botswana and maintain peace and security in southern Africa,

Reaffirming the obligation of all States to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the sovereignty and territorial integrity of any State,

Expressing its profound concern that the racist régime resorted to the use of military force against the defenceless and peace-loving nation of Botswana,

Gravely concerned that such acts of aggression can only serve to aggravate the already volatile and dangerous situation in southern Africa,

Bearing in mind that this latest incident is one in a series of provocative actions carried out by South Africa against Botswana and that the racist régime has declared that it will continue and escalate such attacks,

Commending Botswana for its unflagging adherence to the conventions relating to the status of refugees and of stateless persons and for the sacrifices it has made and continues to make in giving asylum to victims of apartheid,

1. Strongly condemns South Africa's recent unprovoked and unwarranted military attack on the capital of Botswana as an act of aggression against that country and a gross violation of its territorial integrity and national sovereignty;

2. Further condemns all acts of aggression, provocation and harassment, including murder, blackmail, kidnapping and destruction of property committed by the racist régime of South Africa against Botswana;

3. Demands the immediate, total and unconditional cessation of all acts of aggression by South Africa against Botswana;

4. Denounces and rejects racist South Africa's practice of "hot pursuit" to terrorize and destabilize Botswana and other countries in southern Africa;

5. Demands full and adequate compensation by South Africa to Botswana for the damage to life and property resulting from such acts of aggression;

6. Affirms Botswana's right to receive and give sanctuary to the victims of apartheid in accordance with its traditional practice, humanitarian principles and international obligations;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to enter into immediate consultation with the Government of Botswana and the relevant United Nations agencies on measures to be undertaken to assist the Government of Botswana in ensuring the safety, protection and welfare of the refugees in Botswana;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to send a mission to visit Botswana for the purpose of:

- (a) Assessing the damage caused by South Africa's unprovoked and premeditated acts of aggression;

- (b) Proposing measures to strengthen Botswana's capacity to receive and provide assistance to South African refugees;

- (c) Determining the consequent level of assistance required by Botswana; and to report thereon to the Security Council;

9. Requests all States and relevant agencies and organizations of the United Nations system urgently to extend all necessary assistance to Botswana;

10. Requests the Secretary-General to monitor developments related to this question and to report to the Security Council as the situation demands;

11. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

Report of the mission. In response to the Council's request, the Secretary-General sent a mission to Botswana from 27 July to 2 August. In its report,(54) the mission stated that the unprovoked military attack on Gaborone had resulted in the death of 12 people and injury to 7 others; several houses, believed by the South African attackers to be occupied by ANC members, had also been blown up. The mission underlined the precarious security situation of Botswana.

Under the circumstances, the Government felt it essential to increase its defence capacity to permit it to patrol its borders. It estimated its immediate defence needs at $5.9 million. In addition, as a result of the 14 June events, there was a pressing need to improve Botswana's capacity to receive, process and administer its refugee community. Botswana had proposed at the Second (1984) International Conference on Assistance to Refugees in Africa(55) to strengthen its administrative, technical and logistic support to facilitate the reception and screening of refugees, which was later revised in the light of changing circumstances. The revised proposal estimated the cost of strengthening that support to $5,885,000, which would cover needs for housing, education and vocational training, communication equipment, transport and health facilities.

In spite of the circumstances, Botswana was determined to keep its doors open to South African refugees. The mission said the international community should enhance its assistance to Botswana in order to ensure the refugees' safety, protection and welfare. It concluded that the right of refugee-asylum countries to be secure from attack or coercion by refugee-producing countries-a principle of international agreements on refugees-was at stake.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (September)

On 26 September,(56) Botswana requested that the Council convene to consider and adopt the report. Meeting on 30 September, the Council invited Botswana, at its request, to participate without the right to vote.

Addressing the Council, Botswana said the mission's report confirmed Botswana's 21 June charges and also that the attack was unprovoked and unwarranted. The fact that a state of emergency had been declared in South Africa proved that South Africa's problems were internal and not a consequence of external conspiracy. Botswana had a right to demand compensation for the damage caused to life and property. The 14 June attack was not only a serious challenge to Botswana but to the international community as a whole. Botswana called for international assistance in strengthening its security, if it was expected to provide security for the refugees residing there.

Madagascar, speaking for the African Group, expressed satisfaction with the mission's report and praised Botswana for providing assistance to refugees from South Africa despite its economic problems and geographical situation. In this connection, Madagascar emphasized Botswana's commitment to continue, as a party to the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees(57) and a signatory to the 1969 OAU Convention on specific aspects of the problems of African refugees, to honour its obligations as a State of asylum. Madagascar also welcomed the co-operation between the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and Botswana.

At the conclusion of the meeting on 30 September, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 572(1985).

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolution 568(1985),

Having considered the report of the mission to Botswana appointed by the Secretary-General in accordance with resolution 568(1985),

Having heard the statement of the Permanent Representative of Botswana to the United Nations expressing the deep concern of his Government over the attack by South Africa against the territorial integrity of Botswana,

Deeply concerned that the attack by South Africa resulted in the loss of life and casualties to many residents and refugees in Gaborone as well as the destruction of and damage to property,

Noting with satisfaction the policy which Botswana follows in regard to the granting of asylum to people fleeing from the oppression of apartheid as well as its respect for and adherence to the international conventions on the status of refugees,

Reaffirming its opposition to the system of apartheid and the right of all countries to receive refugees fleeing from the oppression of apartheid,

Noting further the urgent needs of Botswana to provide adequate shelter and facilities to refugees seeking asylum in Botswana,

Convinced of the importance of international support for Botswana,

1. Commends the Government of Botswana for its steadfast opposition to apartheid and for the humanitarian policies it is following in regard to refugees;

2. Expresses its appreciation to the Secretary-General for having arranged to send a mission to Botswana to assess the damage caused by South Africa's unprovoked and premeditated acts of aggression and for proposing measures to strengthen Botswana's capacity to receive and provide assistance to South African refugees as well as for determining the level of assistance required by Botswana to cope with the situation resulting from the attack;

3. Endorses the report of the mission to Botswana under resolution 568(1985);

4. Demands that South Africa pay full and adequate compensation to Botswana for the loss of life and damage to property resulting from its act of aggression;

5. Requests Member States, international organizations and financial institutions to assist Botswana in the fields identified in the report of the mission to Botswana;

6. Requests the Secretary-General to give the matter of assistance to Botswana his continued attention and to keep the Security Council informed;

7. Decides to remain seized of the situation.

Security Council resolution 572(1985)

30 September 1985 Meeting 2609 Adopted unanimously

7-nation draft (S/17503).

Sponsors: Botswana, Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago.

Referring to resolution 572(1985) in a letter to the Secretary-General of 21 October,(58) South Africa said it did not accept that it was under any obligation to pay compensation to Botswana, and rejected inferences in the resolution that it had carried out aggression against that country or that terrorist groups established in and operating from Botswana were synonymous with "refugees". South Africa had made its position clear as recently as 25 September during talks between the Foreign Ministers of Botswana and South Africa. South Africa added that it had exercised its right of self-defence in order to curtail further imminent violence in South Africa.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/25, condemned the unprovoked and unwarranted military attack on the capital of Botswana and demanded that South Africa pay full and adequate compensation for the loss of life and damage to property. In decision 40/415, the Assembly also called for the scrupulous observance of Security Council resolution 572(1985).

Lesotho-South Africa dispute

On several occasions in 1985, Lesotho complained of aggression or destabilization attempts by South Africa. Acting on such a complaint in December, the Security Council adopted resolution 580(1985), by which it condemned the violence and requested the Secretary-General to establish a civilian presence in Maseru to report any development affecting Lesotho's territorial integrity.

In its first 1985 complaint, made to the Council President on 9 September,(59) Lesotho expressed concern over statements broadcast from South Africa that Lesotho's general elections scheduled for 17 and 18 September had been cancelled. The facts were that the ruling Basotho National Party's candidates had been returned unopposed because opposition parties had failed to field or nominate candidates on 14 August, the day declared for their nomination. Lesotho also protested a South African radio broadcast by the leader of a splinter group of the Basutoland Congress Party of Lesotho that he would continue his acts of sabotage, murder and destruction in Lesotho; in addition, Lesotho accused South Africa of involvement in the subsequent murder of a Basotho National Party candidate, his wife, daughter-in-law and four others. Lesotho denied South African charges that it had allowed Oliver Tambo, President of ANC, to speak over Radio Lesotho.

Further letters were addressed to the Secretary-General. On 7 October,(60) Lesotho stated that the day before, Maseru had been attacked by mortar fire from South Africa which damaged property. Responding on 18 October,(61) South Africa said it had investigated Lesotho's claim and had determined that the attack did not originate from South African territory; it appeared that the attack was carried out by persons intending to harm relations between the two countries.

A series of telexes exchanged between South Africa and Lesotho from 13 to 19 December were transmitted by the latter.(62) As background, Lesotho said that the number of South African refugees flowing into Lesotho had increased as a result of growing unrest in South Africa. A plane carrying some refugees from Lesotho to Zambia was forced to return to Lesotho by South African authorities, but later they left on four smaller charter flights, under arrangements made by UNHCR. On 4 December, bandits entered Lesotho from South Africa and murdered seven innocent nationals before returning. Lesotho requested the Secretary-General to use his good offices to stop South Africa from carrying out a threatened armed attack against it.

By the first telex, South Africa requested clarification about claims that it was involved in the recent murders and responsible for supplying arms to Lesotho opposition forces. In reply, Lesotho said it had evidence of the murders being committed by terrorists from South Africa, who had been seen crossing the border. South Africa charged that ANC had a large number of trained terrorists in Lesotho, which indicated that it had not carried out its undertaking to prevent its territory from being used as a springboard for terrorist activities against South Africa; Lesotho's failure to address South Africa's security concerns was impeding South Africa's efforts to promote good relations between the two countries. Lesotho replied that it was not aware of the existence of any ANC organizations, and that political refugees were the responsibility of UNHCR. Rejecting that response as unacceptable, South Africa again urged Lesotho to ensure that its territory was not used for terrorist attacks, and added that if such actions took place, South Africa reserved the right to take whatever action might be necessary. Lesotho said it could not take meaningful action because South Africa had not provided sufficient information, such as who and where ANC terrorists were, nor had Lesotho learned of any planned attacks from Lesotho; furthermore, Lesotho reiterated that refugees who misused the privilege of asylum would not be allowed to remain. In regard to South Africa's reserving the right to take action, Lesotho said it preferred negotiation and exchange of information on all matters of mutual concern.

Lesotho, on 23 December,(63) requested that the Council convene to deal with the situation created by unprovoked armed aggression by South Africa on 19 December, when its forces invaded Maseru and murdered four registered refugees, two South Africans and three Lesotho nationals, all with ANC affiliation, who were lured into a would-be party and killed.

Cuba, condemning the attack on 24 December,(64) said Pretoria was attempting to intimidate the countries of the region and to make international public opinion believe that the difficult internal situation was due to external causes.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Security Council considered Lesotho's complaint against South Africa at two meetings on 30 December. At their request, the Council invited Burundi, Lesotho, Senegal and South Africa to participate in the debate, without vote. At the request of Burkina Faso, Egypt and Madagascar,(65) the Council invited Neo Mnumzana, ANC representative to the United Nations, under rule 39 of its provisional rules of procedure.<sup>f</sup>

Speaking about the December 1985 attack, Lesotho reminded the Council that in December 1982 South Africa had carried out a similar attack. Despite the Council's action,(66) South Africa had continued its destabilization campaign through the so-called Lesotho Liberation Army, which was based, trained and armed in South Africa. Prior to the 1985 attack, South Africa had alleged that ANC members were planning attacks from Lesotho and had stated that if such action took place, it reserved the right to defend itself; however, South Africa had no tangible evidence. Acknowledging that it received refugees from South Africa, Lesotho explained that UNHCR made arrangements for moving them to second countries of asylum. Due to the situation in South Africa, Lesotho believed it likely that more would arrive in the neighbouring countries, and unless South Africa was checked there was a risk that it would behave with increasing lawlessness towards the refugees and its neighbours. By creating transit problems for people and goods, South Africa was placing Lesotho's security and economic development in jeopardy. Stating its willingness to resolve differences through negotiation, Lesotho called on the Council to pronounce the unacceptability of South Africa's conduct.

Rejecting the charges, South Africa said Lesotho was attempting to deflect attention from its internal instability and from the alienation of part of its population from the Government, which had spawned armed resistance inside the country. There was also resentment at the presence of an organization funded, sponsored and organized by the USSR and imposed on the Lesotho people by their Government. Furthermore, elements within Lesotho's security forces were sympathizers and collaborators with ANC, and dissident groups in Lesotho viewed those pro-ANC elements as their enemies. Lesotho was endeavouring to exploit the situation by addressing appeals for financial aid to the international community. South Africa had on numerous occasions sought Lesotho's co-operation to address mutual security problems and had proposed a joint monitoring mechanism, but Lesotho was unwilling. South Africa had experienced terrorist violence emanating from Lesotho, where ANC was given sanctuary under the guise of refugee status. The real question at issue, according to South Africa, concerned terrorists operating from Lesotho. It called on the Council to prevail on Lesotho to co-operate with South Africa in order to eliminate terrorism in the region.

All other speakers condemned South Africa's aggression. A number of countries, including Burundi, China, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Senegal, the Ukrainian SSR, the USSR and the United Kingdom, remarked on the recent aggression against other neighbouring States, such as Angola (see p. 180). According to India, South Africa had been engaged in a series of actions of State terrorism under the pretext of hot pursuit of ANC activists and, on the basis of such arguments, justifying them in terms of its own security, but in reality it was another instance to pursue its policy of destabilizing Governments in front-line and other neighbouring States. Madagascar noted that to date the Council had adopted seven resolutions in 1985 condemning South Africa for maintaining apartheid and for its aggression against neighbouring countries, but South Africa continued to ignore United Nations resolutions; Madagascar did not recognize that South Africa had a right to justify its aggression against neighbouring States by alleging that terrorist activities had been launched from them.

Burkina Faso, Burundi, China, India, Madagascar and the USSR said that South Africa's action was a violation of international law and/or the United Nations Charter. In the view of Burundi, China and Senegal, that action was a threat to international peace and security.

Among those calling for the Council to demand compensation for Lesotho were Burundi, China, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Senegal and Thailand. Senegal, for example, said that Africa called for a mission to be sent to Lesotho to assess the damage resulting from the attack, and it added that compensation to Lesotho and the victims was the very minimum that the Council could determine. In addition to calling on the Council to demand adequate compensation, Burundi, speaking for the African Group, called on the international community to provide economic assistance to Lesotho, to resist South African aggression and to strengthen its ability to receive refugees.

China, India, Senegal, the Ukrainian SSR and the USSR believed that the Council should adopt comprehensive and mandatory sanctions against South Africa. The Ukrainian SSR said that two permanent members of the Council had blocked effective measures provided for in the Charter, thereby supporting and encouraging South Africa to continue its repression, aggression and State terrorism. Similarly, the USSR said that if the protection of the apartheid régime in the Council continued through use of the veto by certain Western permanent members, then South Africa would continue to threaten neighbouring States and to widen the scope of its terrorism against them. Burkina Faso said that despite repeated Council warnings, South Africa continued to ignore it due to those whose aid permitted it to defy the Council's resolutions without fear of punishment.

China said South Africa, in order to cover up its own crimes, was attempting to divert public opinion and to subvert right and wrong by drawing a parallel between the South African people against apartheid and the acts of terrorism elsewhere in the world.

India and Thailand praised Lesotho for its policy of accepting refugees. Thailand added that any humanitarian policy regarding refugees from apartheid could be maintained by the neighbouring States only at the risk of border incursions and armed attacks by South Africa. Egypt supported Lesotho's view that South Africa had implicitly and explicitly threatened Lesotho, and added that the Council had a responsibility to protect Lesotho and help it receive refugees.

Both the United Kingdom and the United States called for a dialogue as a means of finding a solution. The United Kingdom said it was clear that Lesotho harboured no aggressive designs against South Africa and therefore there could be no excuse for the violation of its sovereignty and territorial integrity; the United Kingdom and the other Commonwealth countries, as stated in the Bahamas in October, appealed for initiation of dialogue and the suspension of violence. The United States said it had made clear to South Africa that it could not accept the idea that South Africa might dispatch troops for military actions beyond its borders; the solution to South Africa's problems lay rather in the elimination of apartheid and in strengthening its dialogue with its neighbours through all channels and at all levels.

On 30 December, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 580(1985).

The Security Council,

Taking note of the letter dated 23 December 1985 from the Permanent Representative of the Kingdom of Lesotho to the United Nations addressed to the President of the Security Council,

Having heard the statement by the Honourable Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Lesotho, Mr. M. V. Makhele, Bearing in mind that all Member States must refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or acting in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the Charter of the United Nations,

Recalling its resolution 527(1982),

Gravely concerned at the recent unprovoked and premeditated killings for which South Africa is responsible, in violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Kingdom of Lesotho, and their consequences for peace and security in southern Africa,

Gravely concerned that this act of aggression is aimed at weakening the determined and unrelenting humanitarian support given by Lesotho to South African refugees,

Grieved at the tragic loss of life of six South African refugees and three nationals of Lesotho resulting from this act of aggression committed against Lesotho,

Alarmed at the fact that the continued existence of apartheid in South Africa is the root cause of increased violence both within South Africa and from South Africa against neighbouring countries,

1. Strongly condemns these killings and recent acts of unprovoked and premeditated violence, for which South Africa is responsible, against the Kingdom of Lesotho in flagrant violation of the sovereignty and territorial integrity of that country;

2. Demands the payment by South Africa of full and adequate compensation to the Kingdom of Lesotho for the damage and loss of life resulting from this act of aggression;

3. Calls upon all parties to normalize their relations and to employ established channels of communication on all matters of mutual concern;

4. Reaffirms Lesotho's right to receive and give sanctuary to the victims of apartheid in accordance with its traditional practice, humanitarian principles and its international obligations;

5. Requests Member States to extend urgently all necessary economic assistance to Lesotho in order to strengthen its capacity to receive, maintain and protect South African refugees in Lesotho;

6. Calls upon the South African Government to resort to peaceful means in resolving international problems in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations and the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

7. Further calls upon South Africa to live up to its commitment not to destabilize neighbouring countries nor to allow its territory to be used as a springboard for attacks against neighbouring countries and to declare publicly that it will, in future, comply with provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and that it will not commit acts of violence against Lesotho, either directly or through its proxies;

8. Demands that South Africa forthwith take meaningful steps towards the dismantling of apartheid;

9. Requests the Secretary-General to establish, in consultation with the Government of Lesotho, an appropriate presence comprising one or two civilians in Maseru, for the purpose of keeping him informed of any development affecting the territorial integrity of Lesotho;

10. Further request the Secretary-General, through appropriate means, to monitor the implementation of the present resolution and the prevailing situation and to report to the Security Council as the situation demands;

11. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, by resolution 40/25, condemned South Africa for its acts of destabilization, armed aggression and economic blockade against Lesotho and urged the international community to extend maximum assistance to Lesotho to enable it to fulfil its international humanitarian obligations towards refugees and to use influence on South Africa so that it would desist from such terrorist acts,

Mozambique-South Africa relations

In 1985, Mozambique complained of South Africa's attempts to destabilize the Mozambique Government by aiding opposition forces.

On 31 October,(67) it submitted photocopies of extracts from documents it said were seized from armed bandits at Gorongosa, in Sofala province of Mozambique, which confirmed the continuing support the bandits were receiving from South Africa in violation of the Agreement on Non-Aggression and Good Neighbourliness (the Nkomati Accord) signed by Mozambique and South Africa. in March 1984.(68) South Africa, responding on 6 December 1985,(69) reaffirmed its commitment to the Nkomati Accord, South Africa said that at a meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the two countries at Maputo on 16 September, Mozambique had submitted a list of alleged South African violations of the Accord, which South Africa had investigated. The allegations were in general correct, but they had arisen from South Africa's efforts, at Mozambique's request, to bring about a possible cease-fire between Mozambique and a rebel group. The results of the investigation were conveyed to Mozambique at a meeting at Komatiport on 19 September; since then, Mozambique had not communicated to South Africa any further allegations.

The Non-Aligned Movement condemned South Africa's use of armed bandits against Mozambique on 7 September(18) (see p. 180).

Chad-Libyan Arab Jamahiriya dispute

The territorial dispute between Chad and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya was again brought before the United Nations in 1985 (for other questions concerning the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, see p. 258 and LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter I). The two States again made charges against each other through letters to the President of the Security Council and at a Council meeting. In January, the Council met at Chad's request but took no action.

On 25 January,(1) Chad called for a Council meeting to resume consideration of its August 1983 complaint against the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya,(2) charging that the Jamahiriya was occupying 550,000 square kilometres of Chadian territory, that it refused to follow the terms of the Council's April 1983 statement(3) in which the two countries were called on to settle their differences quickly and peacefully, and that the Libyan Government was planning an attack on Chad's President, Hissein Habré. Three days later, Chad again called for a Council meeting to consider the situation,(4) reiterating its charges and adding that the Tripoli régime had plotted to eliminate physically the President and all members of the Chadian Government.

These claims were denied by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on 28 January.(5) It stated that it had no forces in Chad and that it did not wish to deal with the so-called Government of Hissein Habré, since it considered him a rebel with no right to speak for Chad, who was leading the opposition in a civil war against the legal Government there.

On 30 January, the Council met to consider Chad's complaint.

Meeting number. SC 2567.

The Council invited Chad and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya to participate in the discussion without the right to vote.

Chad said that over the previous 20 years the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya had attempted to annex Chad. Currently, the entire prefecture of Borkou-Ennedi-Tibesti was occupied. The Jamahiriya based its claim on the 1935 Laval-Mussolini Treaty, which had no legal validity since there had never been an exchange of instruments of ratification between France and Italy. Suffering from drought and hunger, Chad had limited resources and could ill afford the war imposed on it by the Tripoli régime. In Chad's view, President Habré was the main obstacle to the Jamahiriya's expansionist designs. Chad appealed to Member States to condemn the assassination plot fomented by the Jamahiriya. Chad hoped that its providing data on the plot, supported by a video tape showing what it described as an attempt to place an explosive device in the Chamber of Commerce in N'Djamena, would contribute to international efforts to foil terrorism.

Rejecting the allegations, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said it did not interfere in Chad and had no presence on its territory. What had been described by some as a presence of Libyan forces were only forces of the legitimate Government which controlled northern Chad and were present throughout the country. The purpose of Mr. Habré in convening the Council meeting was to slander the Jamahiriya by depicting it as an aggressor; to belittle the military power of the legitimate Government of Chad, headed by Goukouni Weddey; and to create justification for Mr. Habré to obtain more weapons, foreign forces and mercenaries to use against his opponents. Mr. Habré had impeded conciliation efforts between the warring factions in Chad by insisting on his being recognized as head of State. The only solution to the civil war was national reconciliation in accordance with the Lagos Accord signed by the 11 Chadian parties on 18 August 1979, under OAU supervision. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya remained ready to contribute again to reconciliation efforts within the OAU framework to achieve peace and security in Chad. The Jamahiriya asserted that the so-called Aouzou Strip was an integral part of its territory which it had inherited from Italian colonialism.

The President of the Council pointed out that the complaint under consideration came from the internationally recognized Government of Chad, whose legitimacy could not be challenged in the Council. It was at that Government's request that the Council President, speaking on behalf of its members, had made known in April 1983(3) the recommendations of the Council regarding the settlement of the dispute between Chad and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

At the end of the meeting, the President stated that the date of the next Council meeting to consider Chad's complaint would be decided during consultations with Council members. No further meetings on the subject were held in 1985.

The Lib an Arab Jamahiriya, in a letter of 1 February,(6) stated that the remarks made by the Council's January President (France) at the conclusion of the meeting represented the viewpoint of France alone. The Jamahiriya noted with regret that this was the second occasion on which a Council President has exceeded his/her power and used the presidency to express the view of his/her country. In that connection the Jamahiriya cited the April 1983 statement(3) made by the then Council President (United States). In response, France requested the Office of Legal Affairs of the Secretariat to give its opinion on the question, which France transmitted on 5 February.(7) The Office noted that the Credentials Committee of the 1984 General Assembly session had accepted, without dissent, credentials for Chad signed by President Hissein Habré, and therefore the Assembly had recognized the right of the Government concerned to represent Chad in the United Nations at that time.

On 4 February,(8) Chad transmitted a White Paper entitled "Kadhafi's terrorism in Chad", describing alleged attacks against it by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya.

The OAU Assembly of Heads of State and Government (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 18-20 July) adopted a resolution(9) renewing the mandate of the President of the Congo, in close collaboration with the current OAU Chairman, to pursue the search for peace and national reconciliation in Chad and appealing to all conflicting parties to co-operate fully. In the Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September),(10) the Conference expressed support for OAU efforts for national reconciliation and the establishment of a lasting peace in Chad without foreign interference, and urged the international community to contribute to Chad's national reconstruction.

Burkina Faso-Mali dispute

On 31 December 1985,(1) Senegal transmitted to the Secretary-General an appeal that its President, in his capacity as current Chairman of OAU, had sent to Burkina Faso and Mali, asking them to order an immediate cease-fire following serious developments on 25 December in the ongoing frontier dispute between the two countries. It was noted in the appeal that the International Court of Justice was already seized of the legal aspect of the dispute (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter I) and that the OAU Council of Ministers of the Agreement on Non-Aggression and Assistance in Matters of Defence was scheduled to meet on 28 December in order to take practical measures required in the disputed area.

Ethiopia-Somalia dispute

Somalia, in a 20 September letter to the Secretary-General,(1) said that on 15 and 16 September Ethiopian forces had carried out artillery and aerial attacks on the populated areas of Awdal, Mudugh, Abud-Waaq and north-west regions of Somalia, killing 23 people, wounding 36, and destroying houses. Ethiopia responded on 25 September,(2) rejecting the charges and stating that the people of Somalia who were opposed to the dictatorial regime of Siad Barre were engaged in armed rebellion; the reasons for the baseless allegations against Ethiopia could be understood only in the context of Somalia's attempts to divert world attention from its internal difficulties arising from the ongoing civil war.

Comorian island of Mayotte

The question of Mayotte—one of a group of four islands in the Indian Ocean Comoro Archipelago—remained before the United Nations in 1985. The issue was raised after a 1974 referendum, followed by France granting independence to the other three islands but not to Mayotte, whose inhabitants had voted to remain associated with France.

Secretary-General's report. The Secretary-General, as requested by the General Assembly in 1984,(1) reported in October 1985(2) on developments concerning Mayotte. In June, he had requested the Comoros and France, as well as OAU, to provide him with information and their responses, were included in his report.

The Comoros stated that, despite its many contacts with France, including consultative meetings at the highest level as recommended by the Assembly, no positive result had been achieved. Although it was willing to participate in a dialogue to find a speedy solution, the Comoros said that it had been confronted by a barrier of incomprehension on the French side and that the situation in Mayotte was deteriorating and affecting national unity.

In its reply, France said that since December 1976, Mayotte had been a territorial community (collectivité territoriale) of the French Republic. On 20 December 1984, France had submitted to the French Parliament a bill stating that the population of Mayotte would be consulted on whether or not it wished to remain part of France. France's policy continued to take into account the regional context of Mayotte; thus, it encouraged the development and normalization of relations between Mayotte and neighbouring States, particularly the Comoros. Action had been taken to establish good-neighbourly relations between the Comoros and Mayotte and to promote complementarity of aid supplied for the development of the two communities.

OAU responded that its Council of Ministers, in July 1985(3) had requested the OAU Ad Hoc Committee of Seven, in co-operation with the Comoros, to consider ways of implementing the Committee's 1981 recommendations on returning the island to the Comoros(4) and of accelerating the negotiation process between France and the Comoros, with a view to reaching a peaceful solution. No date or venue had been fixed for the Committee meeting, OAU reported, but Gabon, the Committee's Chairman, was consulting on the matter.

Communications. In 1985, three intergovernmental organizations conveyed to the Secretary-General their policy on Mayotte. OAU put forward its position in a July resolution (see above), included with others forwarded by Madagascar on 18 September.(3) The Organization of the Islamic Conference's policy, as stated in a resolution adopted by its Foreign Ministers (Sanaa, 18-22 December 1984), was forwarded by Yemen on 11 March.(5) The Conference reaffirmed the territorial unity of the Comoros and its sovereignty over Mayotte, reaffirmed support for a global application of the results of the 1974 referendum to the whole of the Comoro territory, rejected any proposal to carry out a referendum in Mayotte, urged France to reinstate Mayotte in the Comorian entity, and called on Islamic Conference members to urge France to engage in a dialogue with the Comoros. The non-aligned countries expressed their position in a Political Declaration adopted by their Conference of Foreign Ministers (Luanda, 4-7 September) and transmitted by Angola on 5 November.(6) They considered the island to be an integral part of the Comoros which was still under French occupation and regretted that France had not taken any initiative that could lead to an acceptable solution.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 9 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/62 by recorded vote.

Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte
The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 1514(XV) of 14 December 1960, containing the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, and 2621(XXV) of 12 October 1970, containing the programme of action for the full implementation of the Declaration,

Recalling also its previous resolutions, in particular resolutions 3161(XXVIII) of 14 December 1973, 3291(XXIX) of 13 December 1974, 31/4 of 21 October 1976, 32/7 of 1 November 1977, 34/69 of 6 December 1979, 35/43 of 28 November 1980, 36/105 of 10 December 1981, 37/65 of 3 December 1982, 38/13 of 21 November 1983 and 39/48 of 11 December 1984, in which it, inter alia, affirmed the unity and territorial integrity of the Comoros,

Recalling, in particular, its resolution 3385(XXX) of 12 November 1975 on the admission of the Comoros to membership in the United Nations, in which it reaffirmed the necessity of respecting the unity and territorial integrity of the Comoro Archipelago, composed of the islands of Anjouan, Grande-Comore, Mayotte, and Mohéli,

Recalling further that, in accordance with the agreements between the Comoros and France, signed on 15 June 1973, concerning the accession of the Comoros to independence, the results of the referendum of 22 December 1974 were to be considered on a global basis and not island by island,

Convinced that a just and lasting solution to the question of Mayotte is to be found in respect for the sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of the Comoro Archipelago,

Convinced further that a speedy solution of the problem is essential for the preservation of the peace and security which prevail in the region,

Bearing in mind the wish expressed by the President of the French Republic to seek actively a just solution to the problem,

Taking note of the repeated wish of the Government of the Comoros to initiate as soon as possible a frank and serious dialogue with the French Government with a view to accelerating the return of the Comorian island of Mayotte to the Islamic Federal Republic of the Comoros,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General,

Bearing in mind the decisions of the Organization of African Unity, the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries and the Organization of the Islamic Conference on this question,

1. Reaffirms the sovereignty of the Islamic Federal Republic of the Comoros over the island of Mayotte;

2. Invites the Government of France to honour the commitments entered into prior to the referendum on the self-determination of the Comoro Archipelago of 22 December 1974 concerning respect for the unity and territorial integrity of the Comoros;

3. Calls for the translation into practice of the wish expressed by the President of the French Republic to seek actively a just solution to the question of Mayotte;

4. Urges the Government of France to open negotiations with the Government of the Comoros with a view to ensuring the effective and prompt return of the island of Mayotte to the Comoros;

5. Requests the Secretary-General of the United Nations to maintain continuous contact with the Secretary-General of the Organization of African Unity with regard to this problem and to make available his good offices in the search for a peaceful negotiated solution to the problem;

6. Further requests the Secretary-General to report on this matter to the General Assembly at its forty-first session:

7. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Question of the Comorian island of Mayotte".

The Comoros called on France to honour its commitment to the unity of the Archipelago made prior to granting independence to the Comoros. In the view of the Comoros, the solution was not to be found in the repeated organization of a referendum in Mayotte; it could only be the result of dialogue between France and the Comoros.

France, stating that it shared with the Comoros a readiness for agreement on the question, said that it would consult with the population of Mayotte by referendum to ascertain whether or not it wished the island to remain a part of France. France did not exclude any development that was in keeping with international law and the French Constitution and respected the rights of the population concerned.

The United Kingdom said it had abstained in the vote because the resolution was silent on the rights of the inhabitants of Mayotte to self-determination and therefore implied that they should be considered an exception to the universal principle that all peoples have that right.

The Assembly took related action in resolution 40/25, by which it noted the contacts between the Comoros and France in the search for a just solution to the problem of the integration of Mayotte into the Comoros, in accordance with the resolutions of OAU and the United Nations. In resolution 40/223, the Assembly called for special economic assistance for the Comoros, a least developed country.

Malagasy islands question

In 1985, the General Assembly did not debate the question of the Malagasy islands of Glorieuses, Juan de Nova, Europa and Bassas da India (islands north and west of Madagascar), but decided to include the item in its provisional agenda for the following year. The Assembly had postponed debate in each of the previous four years, and had not taken action since 1980(1) when it reaffirmed its first action on the question (in 1979),(2) inviting France to negotiate with Madagascar on reintegrating the islands with Madagascar.,

The Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September),(3) in its Final Political Declaration, reaffirmed the need to preserve the national unity and territorial integrity of Madagascar and urged all parties concerned to initiate immediate negotiations in conformity with the resolutions of the United Nations, OAU and the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The Chairman of the Special Political Committee informed its members on 4 December that he had held consultations with the interested parties, in particular France and Madagascar. In view of discussions being held by the two countries, he proposed that the Assembly postpone consideration of the item until 1986. Subsequently, the Committee recommended that action to the Assembly(4) which, in turn, by decision 40/429 adopted without vote on 16 December, decided to include the item in the provisional agenda of its 1986 session.

UN Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa

The United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa, financed by a trust fund made up of voluntary contributions from States, organizations and individuals, granted scholarships to 929 persons in 1984/85. The Secretary-General described the Programme's activities in a report covering the period from 1 October 1984 to 15 October 1985.(1) Scholarships were given to 766 South Africans, 145 Namibians (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III) and 18 Zimbabweans. The Programme granted new scholarships only to students from South Africa and Namibia, but assistance was continued to students from Zimbabwe for a transitional period, while they completed courses for which grants had been made previously. During the reporting period, 318 new awards were granted while 611 awards were extended. New awards went to 218 South Africans and 100 Namibians. In addition to cash contributions, the Programme received offers of scholarships for training in their own countries from 29 States. The awards were granted for general university studies as well as a wide variety of professional, commercial and technical training programmes in 26 countries. Those receiving scholarships attended schools in the following regions: Africa (467 students), North America (276), Asia (155), Europe (30), and Latin America and the Caribbean(1).

The Secretary-General stated that due to inflation and rising scholarship costs, the 1985 contributions and pledges (totalling $3,124,430) represented, in real terms, a drastic decrease in resources over the previous year when they totalled $3,303,064. Given the worsening political situation and believing that there would be larger outflows of South African and Namibian refugees in search of educational and training opportunities, the Programme's Advisory Committee made recommendations to promote the expansion and development of the Programme. It proposed that arrangements should be made with the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Assistance to take advantage of Commonwealth countries' offer to provide placement facilities and administer scholarship awards at no cost to the Programme, and to expand a programme for South Africans in the United Republic of Tanzania. Other proposals included the use of the World University Service's large counselling network in Africa; co-operation with scholarship agencies in fund-raising, the search for applicants, and administration of scholarship awards; and promotion of co-financing and tuition waivers by universities.

Financial contributions

In 1985, 37 States contributed $3,246,427 to the Programme (see table following), as compared with $3,276,925 in 1984.

United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa

The General Assembly,

Recalling its earlier resolutions on the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa, in particular resolution 39/44 of 5 December 1984,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General containing an account of the work of the Advisory Committee on the United Nations Educational and Training Programme for Southern Africa and the administration of the Programme for the period from 1 October 1984 to 15 October 1985,

Recognising the valuable assistance rendered by the Programme to the peoples of South Africa and Namibia,

Noting with satisfaction that educational and technical assistance for southern Africa has become a growing concern of the international community,

Co-operation between OAU and the UN system

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity continued in 1985, as requested by the General Assembly in 1984.(1) The Secretary-General, in an August report to the Assembly,(2) described that co-operation.

The Secretary-General addressed the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of OAU (Addis Ababa, 18-20 July). The declarations and resolutions adopted at that meeting were forwarded to the Secretary-General by Madagascar on 18 September.<sup>(3)</sup> On 19 July, the USSR also forwarded its message to the OAU summit,<sup>(4)</sup> in which it stressed support for OAU efforts to strengthen its members' political independence and economic self-sufficiency.

At the meeting, the Secretary-General said that only through co-ordinated measures and international co-operation would it be possible to avert economic catastrophe and relaunch the process of long-term development in Africa. He described some activities undertaken by the United Nations Office for Emergency Operations in Africa (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter III), including ascertaining the critical needs of each country concerned and then mobilizing international aid. The March 1985 International Conference on the Emergency Situation in Africa had been successful in mobilizing additional resources for relief operations, although they were insufficient to meet the considerable needs. He emphasized that priority attention should be given to food and agriculture and called for the mobilization of additional resources to rehabilitate the devastated economies of Africa. As to the situation in southern Africa, he said that States there had to contend with externally supported acts of sabotage and destabilization and with violations of their territorial integrity. The interim government installed in Namibia by South Africa would not be recognized by the United Nations or any Member State, he added (see TRUSTEESHIP AND DECOLONIZATION, Chapter III).

In October, the OAU Chairman and its Secretary-General met with the United Nations Secretary-General in New York.

The proposed meeting between the United Nations system and OAU, as called for by the Assembly in 1984,<sup>(1)</sup> was postponed at the request of OAU due to unforeseen developments. Co-operation continued between OAU and United Nations organizations, including the Economic Commission for Africa, the Centre for Human Rights, DPI, FAO, IFAD, IMO, ITU, UNCTAD, UNIDO, UNCHS, UNHCR, UNESCO, UPU, the World Bank, WFP and WHO. UNDP provided assistance to the national liberation movements recognized by OAU (see p. 170).

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

The Economic and Social Council, in resolution 1985/59, recommended that an item on assistance to national liberation movements recognized by OAU be included in the agenda of high-level meetings of the OAU General Secretariat and the secretariats of the United Nations and other organizations within the system, with a view to strengthening existing co-ordination measures to ensure the best use of available resources for assistance to the peoples of colonial territories.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 21 November, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/20 without vote.

Co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity,

Recalling its previous resolutions on the promotion of co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity and the practical measures taken for their implementation, in particular resolution 39/8 of 8 November 1984, and its resolution 39/29 of 3 December 1984 on the critical economic situation in Africa and the Declaration annexed thereto,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions, decisions and declarations adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity at its forty-second ordinary session and by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of that organization at its twenty-first ordinary session, which were held at Addis Ababa from 10 to 17 July and from 18 to 20 July 1985, respectively,

Taking note also of the resolutions, decisions and declarations adopted by the Organization of African Unity on the promotion of co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity,

Noting, in particular, the Declaration on the Economic Situation in Africa and Africa's Priority Programme for Economic Recovery 1986-1990, annexed thereto, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its twenty-first session, which was devoted mainly to the critical economic situation in Africa,

Considering the important statement by the current Chairman of the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity of 21 October 1985, particularly with regard to the critical economic situation in Africa as well as other matters of concern to the two organizations,

Gravely concerned about the serious and deteriorating economic situation in Africa, in particular the effects of the prolonged drought, desertification and the adverse effects of the international economic environment on the African States,

Recalling, in this connection, the Lagos Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Monrovia Strategy for the Economic Development of Africa, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its second extraordinary session, held at Lagos on 28 and 29 April 1980,

Recognising the need for closer co-operation between the Organization of African Unity and all specialized agencies, organizations and bodies of the United Nations system in realizing the goals and objectives set forth in the Lagos Plan of Action,

Gravely concerned at the deteriorating situation in southern Africa arising from the continued domination of the peoples of the area by the minority racist régime of South Africa and conscious of the need to provide increased assistance to the peoples of the region and to their liberation movements in their struggle against colonialism, racial discrimination and apartheid,

Conscious of its responsibilities to provide economic, material and humanitarian assistance to independent States in southern Africa to help them cope with the situation caused by the acts of aggression committed against their territories by the apartheid régime of South Africa,

Deeply concerned at the gravity of the situation of the refugees in Africa and the urgent need for increased international assistance to help African countries of asylum cope with the heavy social, economic and administrative burden imposed on their fragile economies,

Recognizing the important role which the various information units and departments of the United Nations system can play in disseminating information to bring about a greater awareness of the grave situation prevailing in southern Africa as well as the social and economic problems and the needs of African States and their regional and subregional institutions,

Aware of the need for continuous liaison, consultations on matters of common concern, exchange of information at the secretariat level and technical co-operation on such matters as training and research between the Organization of African Unity and the United Nations,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General on co-operation between the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity and commends his efforts to strengthen such co-operation;

2. Notes with appreciation the increasing and continued participation of the Organization of African Unity in the work of the United Nations and the specialized agencies and its constructive contribution to that work;

3. Commends the continued efforts of the Organization of African Unity to promote multilateral co-operation among African States and to find solutions to African problems of vital importance to the international community and notes with satisfaction the increased collaboration of various organizations of the United Nations system in support of those efforts;

4. Reaffirms the determination of the United Nations to work closely with the Organization of African Unity towards the establishment of the new international economic order in accordance with the resolutions adopted by the General Assembly and, in that regard, to take full account of the Lagos Plan of Action for the Implementation of the Monrovia Strategy for the Economic Development of Africa and Africa's Priority Programme for Economic Recovery 1986-1990, adopted by the Assembly of Heads of State and Government of the Organization of African Unity at its twenty-first session, in the implementation of the International Development Strategy for the Third United Nations Development Decade;

Chapter VI

Americas

The situation in Central America was considered by the Security Council and the General Assembly in 1985. Both bodies addressed specific disputes between countries.

The Council held two series of meetings at Nicaragua's request regarding allegations of aggression against it. In May, the Council adopted resolution 562(1985) calling on all States to refrain from supporting any actions against any State in the region which might impede the peace objectives of the Contadora Group (Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela). In December, the Council considered what Nicaragua called the escalation of acts of aggression against it, but took no action.

The General Assembly, in December, adopted resolution 40/188 calling for an end to a United States trade embargo against Nicaragua. In an October report to the Assembly, the Secretary-General expressed regret that, despite the efforts of the Contadora Group, whose political initiative for peace and co-operation in Central America had begun in 1983, the situation in Central America had steadily deteriorated during the year. He urged the countries with interests in the region to support with deeds the Contadora Group's efforts.

An agenda item on the observance of the quincentenary of the discovery of America was not considered at the Assembly's 1985 regular session, but was among the items deferred, by decision 40/470, to its resumed session in 1986.

Topics related to this chapter. Disarmament: nuclear-weapon-free zones-Latin America. Regional economic and social activities: Latin America. Human rights: Latin America. Refugees and displaced persons: Americas. Other colonial Territories: Falkland Islands (Malvinas). International Court of Justice: military and parliamentary activities in and against Nicaragua.

Central America situation

Communications. The majority of communications addressed to the Secretary-General in 1985 on the situation in Central America concerned the Contadora Group's activities. These included either communiqués from the Group or comments on those communiqués by the Central American States. The meetings of the Contadora Group as well as joint meetings with the Central American countries were held at Panama City; the communications relating to such meetings were transmitted by Panama. Other communications dealt with a situation concerning political asylum and disputes between Nicaragua and several other States (see below under the relevant subject heading).

On 10 January,(1) Panama transmitted the text of a declaration issued by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Contadora Group at their meeting on 8 and 9 January. The declaration noted the accomplishments of the Group in establishing regional political machinery to facilitate dialogue and negotiations among the Central American Governments.

By a letter of 15 February,(2) Honduras transmitted the text of a joint communiqué issued at San José, Costa Rica, on 14 February by the Foreign Ministers of Honduras, El Salvador and Costa Rica. They stated that they had decided not to participate in a proposed February meeting of the Contadora Group, in support of Costa Rica's defence of the right of asylum violated by Nicaragua (see p. 208). On the same day,(3) Nicaragua conveyed a government communiqué asserting that the Contadora negotiating process was jeopardized by the United States policy of imposing its will through military force and that the negotiating process depended on countries being able to take decisions based on their national interests without intervention from third States. In a letter of 20 February, (4) Costa Rica stated that the joint communiqué of 14 February constituted a categorical reply to the unfounded statements of Nicaragua. In a further letter of 22 February,(5) Costa Rica transmitted the text of a communiqué it had issued the day before recounting the dispute between it and Nicaragua and stating its willingness to negotiate bilateral or multilateral agreements with any country that fulfilled its international legal obligations. A letter of 2 April(6) conveyed the text of a joint declaration by the Presidents of Costa Rica and Panama, issued after an 18/19 March meeting, in which the Presidents appealed to countries with interests in Central America to refrain from actions that would jeopardize the culmination of the Contadora peace effort.

The text of the "Statute of the Verification and Control Mechanism for Security Matters under the Contadora Act on Peace and Co-operation in Central America", drafted by representatives of the Governments of Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras during meetings in Costa Rica and Honduras in February and March, was forwarded to the Secretary-General on 15 April.(7) A bulletin issued at the end of a high-level meeting of the plenipotentiaries of the Contadora Group members and Central American countries in Panama City on 11 and 12 April was transmitted by Panama on 15 April.(8) The bulletin described an agreement reached to establish an Ad Hoc Committee for Evaluation and Follow-up of Commitments concerning Political and Refugee Matters, a Verification and Control Commission for Security Matters and an Ad Hoc Committee for Evaluation and Follow-up of Commitments concerning Economic and Social Matters.

On 9 May,(9) El Salvador conveyed an excerpt from the text of the "Declaration of San Salvador" issued on 7 May by the Foreign Ministers of Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras and the Deputy Minister for External Relations of Guatemala. The Ministers declared that to achieve peace in Central America it was indispensable to strengthen the political undertakings contained in the Contadora Act and to improve the verification mechanisms and rules of application that would ensure their strict observance.

By letters of 20 May(10) and 20 June,(11) Panama transmitted information bulletins issued following plenipotentiary meetings of the Contadora Group members and the Central American countries (Panama City, 14-16 May and 18 and 19 June). The first bulletin stated that all the working documents previously submitted to the Group were examined with a view to achieving balanced solutions to the different issues in the negotiations. The second contained the view of Nicaragua, expressed at the meeting, that there was an urgent need for the Group to concentrate first and foremost on containing the escalation of aggression against Nicaragua and against peace in the region. Honduras, on 24 June,(12) forwarded a press release it issued on 21 June expressing regret at the obstructionist attitude of Nicaragua at the plenipotentiary meeting in June.

Honduras, on 26 June,(13) transmitted a letter of 24 June to the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group, inviting them to send observers to witness the Honduran electoral process which would culminate in general elections on 24 November. Honduras and El Salvador, on 17 July,(14) transmitted a joint statement issued following meetings of their Presidents in Honduras on 10 and 11 July in which they expressed their grave concern over the deterioration of the Central American situation and called on Nicaragua to abandon its policy of confrontation and return to multilateral negotiations. A 22 July(15) letter from Honduras transmitted a note to the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group countries on the occasion of their 21 July meeting. Directed at stimulating the renewal of the Contadora negotiating process, which it said had been obstructed by Nicaragua's attitude at the plenipotentiaries' June meeting in Panama City, Honduras said three principal items depended on a clear reply from Nicaragua: commitments relating to security, commitments on national reconciliation and verification and supervision machinery.

On 23 July,(16) Panama conveyed a communiqué issued at the conclusion of the 21/22 July meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group, outlining steps they had decided to take to finalize the Contadora Act for Peace and Co-operation in Central America. On 2 August,(17) Honduras forwarded a letter of 1 August from its Acting Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Deputy Ministers for External Relations of Costa Rica and of El Salvador to the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group countries. Having met at Tegucigalpa on 1 August to appraise the negotiation process, the Ministers expressed their support for the Contadora process and urged other States to make fresh efforts to accelerate and conclude the negotiations.

Peru, on 10 August,(18) transmitted a communiqué of 29 July from Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, in which they said they were at the disposal of the Contadora Group for consultations on matters with which they might be helpful. On 12 August,(19) Peru transmitted the text of the Lima Declaration, signed on 29 July by Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela. It stated that the crisis in Central America must be settled by peaceful and negotiated means. On 12 August,(20) Panama circulated the text of a bulletin issued on 9 August by the Deputy Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group countries after their visit to the five countries of Central America between 3 and 8 August to seek views of Governments on pending matters in the Contadora Act. They stated that the visit made possible a more precise understanding of the regional situation and helped the Ministers gather comments useful for their efforts at diplomatic harmonization.

Panama, on 27 August,(21) forwarded a 25 August communiqué by the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group and the Support Group, composed of Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay, following a 24/25 August meeting at Cartagena de Indias, Colombia. The communiqué said the meeting had confirmed the serious concern among the Latin American countries regarding the Central American crisis and the decision to strengthen, in regional unity, the efforts at diplomatic negotiation promoted by the Contadora Group, and outlined the tasks of the Support Group to facilitate the conclusion of the Contadora Act.

On 5 September,(22) Costa Rica transmitted a joint declaration adopted on 4 September by the Foreign Ministers of Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras, giving notice of their intention to attend a 12/13 September meeting in Panama City of the Contadora Group and Central American countries to appraise the peace negotiations. On 16 September,(23) Panama transmitted a press release issued by the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group and Central American countries at the end of their September meeting. The Group had given the Central American Ministers the final draft of the Act on Peace and Co-operation in Central America, and decided to convene again in October to discuss armaments control and reduction, implementation and follow-up matters, military manoeuvres, and operational questions such as entry into force and budget. In appendices to the press release, the Ministers condemned the recent kidnapping of the daughter of the President of El Salvador and acknowledged the importance of the process towards democratic constitutionality taking place in Guatemala.

A letter from Nicaragua of 13 November(24) conveyed a note of 11 November from its President to the Presidents of the Contadora and Support Group countries, with an appendix of 8 November stating Nicaragua's position on the draft Contadora Act of 12 September. It insisted that minimum security conditions guarantee that any commitments entered into would not endanger its sovereignty. These minimum conditions implied the immediate cessation of aggression against Nicaragua and a commitment by the United States to desist from such acts.

Panama, on 22 November,(25) transmitted a communiqué issued by the Deputy Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group countries at the conclusion of plenipotentiary meetings held from 19 to 21 November, stating that their views had been heard at meetings held from 7 to 10 and 17 to 19 October; at the November meetings, they had made new proposals to their Central American counterparts designed to reconcile differences and make negotiations possible.

On 5 December,(26) Nicaragua transmitted a letter of the same date from its President stating that, as long as conditions guaranteeing its survival did not exist, the Contadora Group should suspend until May 1986 plenipotentiary meetings to negotiate pending aspects of the Contadora Act and take action to persuade the United States to end its aggression, the principal factor in the regional crisis, in order to create conditions for negotiation among the Central American countries.

On 13 December,(27) Luxembourg, on behalf of the 10 member States of the European Community (EC), and Spain and Portugal, transmitted the text of the Final Act of the Conference of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States members of EC, of Spain and of Portugal, and of Ministers for External Relations of the States of Central America and of the Contadora Group (Luxembourg, 11 and 12 November). Also forwarded were the texts of joint political and economic communiqués issued on that occasion. The political communiqué stated that the participants held a common conviction that their political dialogue and economic co-operation, particularly among the Central American States in the context of the Contadora initiative, would help support efforts to put an end to violence and instability in the region.

Report of the Secretary-General (October). Pursuant to a 1983 request by the Security Council(28) and resolution 562(1985) of 10 May (see p. 212), the Secretary-General, in October 1985,(29) reported on the Central America situation. He stated that since his December 1984 report(30) to the General Assembly he had maintained contact with the Contadora Group countries as well as the five Central American countries and other States with interests in the region. The Contadora Foreign Ministers had delivered the final draft of the Contadora Act on Peace and Co-operation in Central America to him on 26 September, after their Central American counterparts received it at the Panama City meeting on 12 and 13 September. The Ministers had told the Secretary-General that the final draft incorporated comments by some Central American Governments on the original draft of September 1984(31) as well as new proposals. The plenipotentiaries of the nine countries would meet in Panama beginning on 7 October for 45 days or less to discuss unresolved aspects of the Act, after which a conference would be convened to sign it.

The Secretary-General expressed admiration to the Contadora Group for its persistent efforts to find a comprehensive, negotiated solution to the crisis in Central America. He also expressed satisfaction at the creation of the Contadora Support Group, an action which reflected strong Latin American concern and would strengthen the political action of Contadora.

The Secretary-General regretted that, despite the efforts of the Contadora Group, the situation in Central America had steadily deteriorated during the year. There had been an increase in bilateral incidents between countries which hindered the Group's work. He deplored the border incidents, threats, instances of foreign intervention and the continued presence of military forces from outside the region, especially those involving loss of life.

The Secretary-General noted that although elections were held in El Salvador in March, armed conflict continued, while talks between the Government and the Frente Democrático Revolucionario-Frente Farabundo Martí para la Liberación National remained stalled. Talks between the United States and Nicaragua were also suspended. He reiterated his view that the roots of the Central American crisis could be found in unjust socio-economic structures and domestic policies and that the solution depended on the political will of the States in the region. It was imperative for countries with interests in the region to support with deeds the Contadora Group's efforts.

Annexed to the Secretary-General's report was a letter of 26 September from the Foreign Ministers of Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela to the Secretary-General recounting the peace efforts made by their Governments since the Secretary-General's December 1984 report. A second annex contained a bulletin issued in Panama on 13 February 1985 explaining the Ministers' decision to postpone a scheduled 14/15 February meeting of plenipotentiaries of the Contadora Group and to seek to create more favourable conditions for political understanding on peace and co-operation in Central America. A 28 June report of a fact-finding committee established by the Permanent Council of the Organization of American States (OAS) to investigate a complaint by Costa Rica of a border incident on 31 May, in which it said its civil guard was fired upon by Nicaraguan troops, resulting in the death of two Costa Rican guards, comprised a third annex. A fourth annex contained a resolution adopted by the OAS Permanent Council on 11 July following the investigation; Costa Rica and Nicaragua were urged to fulfil commitments undertaken in bilateral treaties. The Contadora Act on Peace and Co-operation in Central America was also annexed to the report.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 September 1985, at the close of its resumed thirty-ninth (1984) session, the General Assembly decided, by decision 39/462, adopted without vote on an oral proposal by its President, to include the item on the situation in Central America in the agenda of its fortieth (1985) session, which opened the next day.

The Assembly discussed the item at five meetings on 22, 25 and 27 November. It had before it two draft resolutions on the subject. One of them<sup>(32)</sup> was sponsored by Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Panama, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela, the other<sup>(33)</sup> by Costa Rica, El Salvador and Honduras. Both texts would have urged Governments of the region to continue negotiations on unresolved issues in the Contadora Act to achieve its early entry into force, urged the United States and Nicaragua to renew their dialogue with the aim of normalizing their relations, and urged Central American States to resolve their bilateral differences peacefully through mechanisms conducive to normalizing their relations.

On 18 December, the two sets of sponsors requested that the texts not be put to a vote at that time but that the item be kept on the agenda. Suspending its 1985 regular session on that day, the Assembly, by decision 40/470, decided to retain the item among those to be considered when its session resumed in 1986.

Nicaragua situation

Costa Rica-Nicaragua dispute and armed incidents

Costa Rica and Nicaragua continued to accuse each other of aggressive acts at various times throughout the year. A number of communications regarding the situation between the two States were addressed to the Secretary-General. The communications mainly transmitted letters exchanged between the respective Foreign Ministers or Deputies.

Communications. A charge was made that a citizen of Costa Rica who, in August 1984, was granted asylum in his country's Embassy in Managua, Nicaragua, was wounded in being taken from the Embassy on 24 December by Nicaraguan authorities. On 21 January 1985,<sup>(34)</sup> Costa Rica transmitted the text of a speech by its Ambassador to the Permanent Council of OAS saying that Nicaragua had been asked to return the political refugee to Costa Rica's diplomatic mission and Costa Rica would request the Council to appoint a special commission to investigate the incident. Nicaragua, on 4 February,<sup>(35)</sup> stated its willingness to discuss, within the framework of the Commission for Supervision and Prevention established at the request of the Contadora Group on 15 May 1984, any issues or incidents which the two Governments might wish to raise regarding the right of asylum in the two countries.

Nicaragua, by a letter of 15 June,<sup>(36)</sup> transmitted a letter to the Contadora Group Ministers asking them to appoint a delegation to conduct an on-site inspection of Nicaragua's frontier area with Costa Rica. A critical situation had arisen there, Nicaragua said, as a consequence of the presence of irregular forces as part of the interventionist policy of the United States. On 21 June,<sup>(37)</sup> Nicaragua transmitted a letter of 18 June to the Contadora Group Ministers describing a meeting held on 17 June at Liberia, Costa Rica, by the Deputy Minister for External Relations of Nicaragua with representatives of the Contadora Group countries and the Secretary-General of OAS, who made up a fact-finding commission in Costa Rica at that time. Nicaragua had stated at the meeting that tensions with Costa Rica arose from the presence of mercenary forces there and from their use of Costa Rican territory to launch military actions against Nicaragua.

On 21 June,(38) Nicaragua transmitted a 19 June letter it sent to Costa Rica referring to the deportation by Costa Rica of a captured mercenary, an action, Nicaragua said, that seemed to indicate that the capture had been a public relations stunt aimed at refurbishing the country's image of neutrality. On 26 June,(39) Nicaragua transmitted a letter of 25 June from its President to the Chairman of the Permanent Council of OAS formally inviting the OAS commission established on 7 June to carry out an on-site inspection of the Nicaraguan side of the border with Costa Rica in the area where the incident of 31 May occurred (see p. 208). On 27 June,(40) Nicaragua conveyed a note of 26 June by its President to the President of Costa Rica stating that Nicaragua considered it timely and necessary for both Governments to attempt to set up a demilitarized zone on their border and announcing that Nicaragua had decided to establish a neutralized zone under international supervision in its territory along the border.

In a letter of 27 June,(41) Costa Rica called for restraint on the part of Nicaragua in asking the Secretary-General to circulate statements, notes and official press communiqués.

In a letter of 5 July, (42) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 3 July to Costa Rica's Minister for External Relations and Worship protesting Costa Rica's open support for mercenaries attacking Nicaraguan territory. On the same date,(43) Nicaragua transmitted a note written on 4 July to Costa Rica protesting an attack on Nicaraguan troops that day by 200 mercenaries said to be operating from Costa Rican territory. Nicaragua, on 5 August,(44) forwarded a note of 2 August urgently requesting that Costa Rica immediately prevent attacks on Nicaragua from Costa Rican territory and capture the mercenaries responsible.

Also on 5 August,(45) Costa Rica transmitted a letter of 31 July from its President to the President of Nicaragua, following an alleged attack on Costa Rica by Nicaraguan aircraft on 26 July. The letter expressed indignation at what it termed Nicaragua's repeated attempts to extend into Costa Rican territory military activities aimed at ending its civil war.

On 28 August,(46) Nicaragua transmitted the texts of two notes verbales from its Acting Minister for External Relations. One, dated 23 August, was to the Costa Rican Foreign Minister and protested alleged attacks on frontier posts in Nicaragua on 21 and 22 August by mercenaries based in Costa Rica. The second, dated 27 August, was to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Honduras (see p. 210).

Further charges of attacks on Nicaragua by mercenaries based in Costa Rica constituted the subject of a number of notes from Nicaragua's Foreign Minister or Deputy Foreign Minister to their Costa Rican counterpart. On 30 August,(47) Nicaragua transmitted a note verbale of 29 August protesting an alleged mercenary attack from Costa Rican territory that day and calling on Costa Rica to give the Contadora Group the support needed to bring the peace initiative to fruition. Nicaragua transmitted another note verbale, dated 2 September, by a letter of 5 September,(48) in which it expressed concern at Costa Rican assertions that on 27 August the Sandinist People's Army had directed an attack against Costa Rica, a charge contradicted by a statement by the Commander of Costa Rica's civil guard that he did not know the source of the incident. Nicaragua affirmed that the Sandinist People's Army had at no time directed attacks against Costa Rican territory. Alleged attacks by rifle, machine-gun and mortar fire on 7, 8 and 9 September were protested in a letter by Nicaragua of 9 September, transmitted the following day.(49) A protest note dated 28 September charging three attacks on frontier posts on 27 September from Costa Rican territory was transmitted by Nicaragua on 30 September.(50) On 4 October,(51) Nicaragua transmitted a note of protest dated 3 October concerning alleged mercenary attacks on a Sandinist air force helicopter and on army troops on 2 and 3 October, respectively. A letter of 9 October(52) by Nicaragua transmitted a 7 October note protesting an alleged border-post attack that day by mercenaries operating from Costa Rica. The use of 57-millimetre cannon was an escalation of the aggression against Nicaragua, the note said.

On 9 October(53) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 7 October protesting an alleged attack earlier that day against it in which artillery, rocket launchers, cannon and mortars were said to have been used. Nicaragua said the incident reflected the absolute necessity for the Costa Rican authorities to deter constant attacks against Nicaragua. In a letter of 10 October,(54) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 8 October protesting an alleged attack on 7 October against its troops from Costa Rican territory. The fact that a Costa Rican civil guard post was located at the very place where the incident occurred, the note said, clearly demonstrated tolerance by Costa Rican authorities of counter-revolutionary groups quartered in the area. On 4

November,(55) Nicaragua conveyed a note of 1 November alleging two attacks on Nicaragua from Costa Rica on 30 October that were carried out, it said, despite the presence of a Costa Rican civil guard post.

Honduras-Nicaragua dispute and armed incidents

Letters were received from both Honduras and Nicaragua, throughout 1985, on alleged armed incidents between the countries. The letters were addressed to the Secretary-General or the Security Council President and generally contained communications exchanged between the Foreign Ministers of the two countries.

Communications. On 8 January,(56) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a note of 6 January to Honduras attaching a list of bases in Honduran territory which it said were operated by mercenary groups, known as Misura and Fuerza Democrática Nicaragüense, conducting attacks against Nicaragua. The note referred to a press conference statement by the Foreign Minister of Honduras that such forces should be expelled from its territory. On 2 April,(57) Honduras conveyed a note of the same date to Nicaragua protesting an alleged violation of Honduran national territory by 17 Nicaraguan soldiers and an army officer who crossed the border by truck. On 9 April,(58) Honduras circulated a protest note of 8 April describing an alleged incident in a Honduran village on 4 March during which two Honduran citizens were killed and two peasants of Nicaraguan origin were abducted. A letter of 19 April(59) transmitted a note sent by Honduras to Nicaragua that day protesting a reported Nicaraguan coastguard vessel attack on a Honduran ship in Honduran waters. Two notes of 19 April were transmitted by Nicaragua in a letter of 22 April.(60) One described an attack on two Nicaraguan coastguard vessels on 18 April by three Honduran air force fighter planes; the other referred to the presence of counter-revolutionary forces in Honduran territory dressed in uniforms similar to those of the Sandinist People's Army.

In a letter of 13 May,(61) Honduras conveyed a note of protest sent to Nicaragua on 10 May charging that the Nicaraguan army had been committing aggressive attacks with heavy weapons along the eastern border between the two countries. In response, Nicaragua transmitted on 13 May(62) the text of a letter dated 11 May to Honduras rejecting those charges and proposing that the two countries' armed forces draw up a joint plan to reduce and remove mercenary forces from the border areas. Honduras transmitted, on 15 May,(63) a press release stating that the deteriorating situation along the border with Nicaragua was a result of that country's internal political and armed conflict, which had spilt over to its neighbouring countries. On 17 May,(64) Nicaragua conveyed the text of a note it had sent on 16 May to the Contadora Group Ministers expressing serious concern about the critical situation existing in the Honduras/Nicaragua border areas and bringing to their attention Nicaragua's proposal that the Group establish a special commission to consider the situation in the area and carry out on-site inspections. It sent a letter on 17 May(65) containing a communiqué of 16 May issued by the Office of the President in which Nicaragua reiterated that proposal, made at a 15 May meeting of the Contadora Group.

On 6 June,(66) Nicaragua transmitted a protest note of 3 June charging that helicopters coming from Honduran territory that day had penetrated Nicaraguan airspace and attacked an observation post of the Sandinist People's Army. Honduras responded on 10 and 12 June,(67) in letters to the President of the Security Council and the Secretary-General, respectively, transmitting a note of 4 June rejecting the Nicaraguan protest as unfounded.

A letter of 5 July(68) from Nicaragua transmitted a 4 July note to Honduras rejecting reports broadcast by a Honduran radio station that the Sandinist People's Army had launched an artillery attack that day on Honduran territory. Honduras sent a letter dated 8 July(69) containing a note of 4 July stating that the broadcasting station was a private one, and that the Government had not and would not accuse Nicaragua without proof. Honduras, on 11 July,(70) transmitted a note of 10 July informing Nicaragua that its investigation had confirmed that an artillery attack had been launched against Honduras on 4 July.

On 12 July,(71) Honduras transmitted a note of 11 July describing a bombing attack the day before, during which a Honduran home was reportedly destroyed, and protesting Nicaragua's dangerous policy of provoking and harassing its neighbours. It transmitted on 24 July(72) a note sent to Nicaragua on 23 July protesting a series of seven alleged attacks on Honduran territory between 4 and 19 July by the Sandinist People's Army. On 16 August,(73) it transmitted letters of 15 and 16 August to Nicaragua alleging incursions into Honduran territory by troops of that Army on 12 and 14 August. The second annex of a letter of 28 August(46) was a note verbale from Nicaragua to Honduras in which Nicaragua denied Honduran allegations of entry into its territory by troops of the Sandinist People's Army.

Honduras, on 14 September,(74) transmitted two protest notes sent to Nicaragua on 13 September alleging a mortar attack on Honduran territory that day, killing one person and wounding eight, and four separate attacks on 6, 7, 9 and 10 September. Also annexed were press releases by Honduras issued on 13 and 14 September announcing the 13 September incident and others which occurred on 12 and 13 September along the border.

Nicaragua, on 19 September,(75) transmitted two notes dated 18 September to Honduras. In one, Nicaragua expressed concern about the presence of armed mercenaries in Honduras and called on that country to dismantle the force. The second note alleged an attempt by mercenary forces to infiltrate Nicaragua through Honduras on 18 September, supported by Honduran army artillery fire. Honduras responded on 19 September,(76) annexing two notes, one informing Nicaragua that it was forwarding its information on mercenaries to the military authorities for appropriate action, the other rejecting Nicaragua's charges as an incident artificially contrived for propaganda purposes.

On 3 October,(77) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 1 October containing the names of 17 of its citizens allegedly abducted and still missing after mercenaries from Honduras infiltrated into Nicaragua on 17 September. In a second letter of 3 October,(78) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 2 October charging that about 2,500 armed mercenaries were massing in Honduran territory near the Nicaraguan border. Honduras, on 4 October,(79) conveyed a note of 2 October rejecting Nicaragua's accusations as being part of a propaganda campaign and calling on Nicaragua to devote its energies to the Contadora Group negotiations.

In a letter of 3 October,(80) Nicaragua transmitted a note of 1 October to the Contadora Group Ministers calling on them to investigate the frontier areas between Nicaragua and Honduras where, Nicaragua said, a 2,500-man mercenary force was preparing to provoke a hostile confrontation between the two countries.

On 16 October,(81) Honduras transmitted a note of the previous day protesting an alleged attack on 10 October against a Honduran patrol by the Sandinist People's Army. On 23 October,(82) Honduras transmitted a note of the same day charging that that Army's troops had fired on a Honduran border patrol on 18 October, conducted raids into Honduras on 18 and 19 October, and attacked a patrol on 20 October. On 30 October,(83) Honduras forwarded a note it had sent to Nicaragua on 29 October recounting incidents it said involved the Sandinist Army, including the placing of a mine inside Honduras that killed a Honduran soldier on 28 October, attacks on a Honduran helicopter that day and firing on a patrol boat on 18 October.

Nicaragua, on 21 November,(84) transmitted a note of 20 November protesting a violation of Nicaraguan airspace and sea space in an attack on two coastguard patrols by aircraft and vessels coming from Honduran territory. In a letter of 30 November,(85) Nicaragua protested what it described as attacks by Honduran army soliders on 23 and 25 November on Nicaraguan army positions. On 6 December,(86) Nicaragua transmitted a note sent to Honduras that day alleging that on 2 December a Sandinist air force helicopter was shot down by a surface-to-air missile fired from Honduras by mercenaries in the service of the United States, killing 14 soldiers.

Nicaragua-United States dispute

Deteriorating relations between Nicaragua and the United States during 1985 were reflected in the exchange of communications between the countries and those addressed to the United Nations. Communications to the Secretary-General and/or the Security Council President mainly transmitted texts which had been exchanged between the Nicaraguan Minister for External Relations and the United States Secretary of State. Several other countries also transmitted communications expressing general concern about the situation. The Council met in May and December to consider Nicaragua's complaints of aggression against it. In May, the Council adopted a resolution which called on all States to refrain from carrying out or supporting political, economic or military actions against any State in the region which might impede the peace objectives of the Contadora Group. In December, the Council considered a Nicaraguan complaint about the escalation of acts of aggression against it but did not receive any proposal for action.

Communications February-May). Nicaragua, on 5 February,(87) transmitted the text of a 30 January note to the United States Secretary of State protesting the joint military manoeuvres called "Big Pine III", scheduled to be carried out from 11 February to 3 May by the armed forces of the United States and Honduras. Nicaragua charged that the exercise was aimed at intimidating and pressuring Nicaragua and constituted a direct attack on the Contadora peace negotiations. On 28 February,(88) Nicaragua transmitted a statement of 27 February by its President asserting Nicaragua's non-aligned status and announcing its intention to return 100 military instructors to Cuba beginning in May, declaring an indefinite moratorium on the acquisition of new weapons systems and fighter aircraft, and inviting a United States congressional delegation to visit the country and assess the defensive nature of its armed forces.

Cuba, on 5 March,(89) transmitted a government statement supporting the initiatives announced by Nicaragua on 27 February and stating that it would refrain, in March and April, from sending additional military and security collaborators to Nicaragua and would withdraw 100 such personnel from that country in May. However, if the United States persisted in its aggression against Nicaragua, Cuba would feel free to dispatch more advisers if Nicaragua requested it.

Nicaragua, on 12 April,(90) transmitted a letter sent on 11 April by its President to the heads of State of the Contadora Group countries and other countries stating that it could not agree to any ultimatum, such as the one it said the President of the United States had made public on 4 April, to bring its policies into line with the dictates of that country Nicaragua reiterated its support for the Contadora negotiating process and its demand that the United States resume bilateral talks begun in Manzanillo, Mexico, in 1984, which the United States had unilaterally suspended in January 1985.

Mongolia, on 25 April,(91) transmitted the text of a 22 April statement by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs supporting Nicaragua's struggle to defend its independence and demanding that the United States stop what it said amounted to an undeclared war against Nicaragua.

Several communications pertained to an announcement on 1 May by the United States of a suspension of its trade relations with Nicaragua and of air and sea transport between the two countries, effective 7 May.

On 7 May,(92) India forwarded a communiqué adopted that day by the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries strongly condemning the embargo and other coercive economic measures against Nicaragua, which undermined the efforts of the Contadora Group. It emphasized the need for political and negotiated solutions to the region's problems.

Uruguay on 7 and 9 May(93) transmitted to the Secretary-General and the President of the Security Council, respectively, a press release issued on 6 May by the Office of its President deploring recent economic sanctions by the United States against Nicaragua and calling for the reopening of the Manzanillo bilateral talks. Bolivia, in a note verbale of 9 May,(94) transmitted a government statement of 8 May stating that the decision of the United States to impose a trade embargo against Nicaragua was an additional obstacle to the efforts of the Contadora Group and the international community in their search for solutions to the Central American crisis. Brazil, in a note verbale of 8 May,(95) submitted a government statement of 6 May declaring that it did not support unilateral sanctions, which were against international law, and calling for the States involved in the Central American crisis to seek a negotiated settlement. On 9 May,(96) Suriname forwarded to the Security Council President a memorandum stating that the international community should appeal to the United States to nullify its trade embargo against Nicaragua and resume the Manzanillo dialogue. Venezuela on 10 May(97) forwarded a government communiqué of 6 May stating that it found the United States trade embargo against Nicaragua disturbing. However, Venezuela also felt that a recent trip by the President of Nicaragua to the Soviet Union had added to existing antagonisms and did not help promote understanding.

Democratic Yemen on 9 May(98) transmitted a statement of 8 May condemning the trade embargo which, it said, constituted a new escalation in attempts by the United States to destroy the Nicaraguan revolution and to interfere with the Contadora peace efforts.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (May)

On 6 May,(99) Nicaragua requested an urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider what it called the extremely serious situation facing the Central American region.

The Council considered the situation at four meetings between 8 and 10 May. At their request, Algeria, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Ethiopia, the German Democratic Republic, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Iran, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mexico, Mongolia, Nicaragua, Poland, Spain, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Republic of Tanzania, Viet Nam, Yugoslavia and Zimbabwe were invited to take part in the proceedings without the right to vote.

On 10 May 1985, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 562(1985).

6. Decides to remain seized of this matter.

Security Council resolution 562(1985)

10	May	1985	Meeting	2580	Adopted	unanimously
----	-----	------	---------	------	---------	-------------

Draft by Nicaragua (S/17172), amended by vote
Meeting numbers. SC 2577-2580.

The resolution was adopted after a paragraph-by-paragraph vote requested by the United States. The first, second, third, fourth, fifth and seventh preambular paragraphs were adopted unanimously; the sixth preambular paragraph was adopted by 14 votes to none, with 1 abstention (United Kingdom). An eighth preambular paragraph, which would have had the Council express serious concern about increased tensions in Central America, recently aggravated by the trade embargo and other coercive economic measures against Nicaragua that endangered the stability of the region and undermined the Contadora Group's efforts, received 13 votes to 1 (United States), with 1 abstention (United Kingdom), and was not adopted because of the negative vote by a permanent member of the Council.

The first two operative paragraphs of the Nicaraguan draft were not adopted, receiving, respectively, 11 votes to 1 (United States), with 3 abstentions (Egypt, Thailand, United Kingdom), and 13 votes to 1 (United States), with 1 abstention (United Kingdom). These paragraphs would have had the Council: express regret over the recent trade embargo and other coercive economic measures against Nicaragua which were inconsistent with the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of States and represented a danger to the stability of the region, and call for an immediate end to those measures; and call on the interested States to refrain from any action or intention to destabilize or undermine other States or their institutions, including the imposition of trade embargoes or other measures incompatible with the United Nations Charter, and in violation of commitments contracted multilaterally or bilaterally.

Votes were also taken on the provisions which became operative paragraphs 1 and 4, adopted, respectively, by 14 votes to none, with the United Kingdom abstaining, and 13 votes to none, with the United Kingdom and the United States abstaining. Paragraphs 2, 3, 5 and 6 were adopted unanimously.

Before the vote on the draft resolution, Thailand explained that, while it regretted the recent trade embargo and other coercive economic measures against Nicaragua as being inconsistent with the Contadora process, it could not go as far as to agree with the wording of operative paragraph 1 of the draft and would abstain in the vote on it.

After the vote, the United Kingdom explained that it had abstained on the sixth preambular paragraph and on what became operative paragraph 1 on the ground that the right to self-determination was one that belonged to peoples and not to States, and it deplored the distortion of that principle in the first paragraph. Nicaragua expressed satisfaction that the overwhelming majority of speakers had spoken out against the coercive measures taken by a major Power against a small non-aligned State and voiced the hope that the United States would comply with the terms of the resolution and allow Central Americans to find solutions to the problems confronting their region.

Debate on the item centred on the policies of the United States towards Nicaragua, particularly the imposition of the total trade embargo that went into effect on 7 May.

Nicaragua expressed concern that the United States had continued to present Nicaragua as a danger to United States security and had publicly avowed its intention to overthrow the Nicaraguan Government. The latest step towards this goal was the decision by the United States President to impose a total trade embargo. Nicaragua said that it was not and could never be a threat to the United States; rather, the contrary was true. The United States actions against Nicaragua were illegal, violating fundamental norms governing political and economic relations between States and the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of other States and of the peaceful settlement of disputes between States, and affected the peace process in Central America. Nicaragua stressed that a central pillar of its foreign policy, which was based on the tenet of non-alignment, was its complete support for the efforts of the Contadora Group.

The United States rejected the charge that Nicaragua was a victim of American aggression and asserted that the Sandinists were intent on converting Nicaragua into another totalitarian satellite of the Soviet Union; they were bent on intimidating, destabilizing and subverting their neighbours. The United States argued that its trade embargo did not violate the United Nations Charter, the OAS Charter, the United States-Nicaragua Friendship, Commerce and Navigation Treaty or the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT); such economic measures were commonly recognized and frequently used as legitimate instruments of foreign policy. Although the United States continued to support the Contadora process, it expressed scepticism about Nicaragua's commitment to the Contadora objectives because Nicaragua continued to increase its war-making potential and develop anti-democratic governmental structures.

Virtually every other speaker in the debate expressed the view that the problems in the Central American region could be resolved only through a peaceful, negotiated settlement based on the principles of international law and in conformity with the United Nations Charter. They expressed full support for the efforts of the Contadora Group.

India expressed the position of the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, which had condemned the trade embargo and other coercive measures against Nicaragua as contrary to the norms governing the international legal and economic order and which saw the measure as part of a larger plan to destabilize and overthrow the Nicaraguan Government, endangering peace and security in the region. The Ukrainian SSR agreed that the embargo was a violation of international law and Algeria added that it ran counter to the Contadora spirit of harmony. Zimbabwe said the embargo only aggravated tension in Central America and vitiated the efforts of the Contadora Group.

Many other States expressed the view that coercive economic measures were proscribed by international law and violated its fundamental principles. Among them were the German Democratic Republic, Guyana, Madagascar and the Syrian Arab Republic. Mexico said it had offered its own territory, at Manzanillo, for dialogue between the United States and Nicaragua and urged that this diplomatic activity be resumed. China agreed that the trade embargo violated the principles of the United Nations Charter and said the Central American question should be settled by the countries themselves through negotiations. The USSR condemned the imposition of a trade embargo as the latest link in a chain of lawless actions against Nicaragua and asserted that a solution to the problem in Central America would be found only through a peaceful, negotiated settlement which respected the sovereignty of the countries of the region. Bolivia cited a number of charters that prohibited the use of measures against a sovereign State that had chosen its own political and economic system. Mongolia asked the Security Council to condemn vigorously the illegal acts of the United States and demand an immediate end to all its aggressive acts against Nicaragua.

Viet Nam drew a parallel between the cases of Nicaragua and Viet Nam in the escalation of coercive measures and force by the United States and urged the Council to compel the United States to end its hostile acts.

Ethiopia deplored the embargo because it believed that it was inconceivable that Nicaragua, a small, developing country, could pose a threat to its neighbours, especially a super-Power. The Lao People's Democratic Republic saw the embargo as part of the United States intention, which it had expressed since Nicaragua's revolution, to topple that Government.

Costa Rica said it had concluded that it was legally impossible for it to participate in the economic measures against Nicaragua.

India believed that the cause of tension in the region lay in historical factors which had resulted in deep-rooted economic and social ills; peace would not be brought about by intervention, interference or intimidation. Several other States shared the view that long-existing economic and social imbalances were the root cause of the problems in Central America. Guatemala felt that the economic situation made the region particularly vulnerable to outside influences. Peru believed that to insist on attributing the conflicts in Central America solely to the East-West confrontation was detrimental to a more realistic view of the hemisphere that would enable proper assessment of the obstacles to the development of its peoples, which included a profound economic imbalance and the political corollary of instability generated by the accumulation of unsatisfied needs. Poland expressed a similar view and added that instability in the region was exacerbated by the intensified policy of interference and intervention through increased United States military activity in the region. Brazil stated that transplanting problems pertaining to the East-West confrontation to Central America could only postpone the establishment of peace and tranquillity there.

Among other countries which cited economic inequality as the main problem in the region and felt that the region's difficulties should not be drawn into the East-West context were Trinidad and Tobago and Yugoslavia. Argentina and Costa Rica saw East-West conflict as affecting the regional crisis. Guyana believed that the struggles of the people of Central America were aimed at improving their quality of life and at fuller participation in the political process, rather than securing a strategic advantage for outside Powers or proving or disproving any ideological world view. Colombia said that everything at this moment in history was subordinated to the need to ensure economic development in the region.

Honduras agreed that the crisis in Central America had its origins in economic backwardness and a lack of political, democratic and pluralistic development, but added that Nicaragua had not stayed within the boundaries of the legitimate exercise of its sovereign powers.

Cuba, which said it had been a victim of a 26-year blockade policy that had caused it great suffering, stated that the United States was using the Nicaraguan President's visit to the Soviet Union as the pretext for its criminal embargo.

Denmark asserted that just and durable solutions to social inequalities and economic underdevelopment, which were at the root of the situation in Central America, could not be achieved by armed force or any other form of coercion and expressed the view that economic sanctions, although not violating general international law, would not help solve the problems and reduce tensions in the region. France stated that economic measures would affect the lives of populations that had already been sorely tried and bore the seeds of further internal tensions.

While expressing understanding for United States concerns in the region, Australia did not consider the imposition of trade sanctions to be an appropriate action in the circumstances.

Ecuador said the principles of self-determination of peoples and non-intervention, which were the corner-stone of the international law system, could serve as a guide in the search for solutions to the problem. The Dominican Republic called for respect for those principles.

Colombia believed that it was of the utmost importance for the Government of Nicaragua to undertake a frank and open dialogue with the democratic opposition in its country to bring about national reconciliation, and urged the United States and Nicaragua to resume their talks.

The United Republic of Tanzania stated that, to remove tension in Central America in general and in Nicaragua in particular, it was important to end all interference and threats from outside.

Communications (May-December). On 10 May,(100) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a message issued by, the National Command of the Sandinist National Liberation Front and the Nicaraguan Government on the occasion of its National Dignity Day, 4 May 1985, in which it asserted that the United States economic boycott against Nicaragua was a step towards direct military intervention in Nicaragua. The text of a decision adopted by the Latin American Economic System urging the United States to rescind its trade embargo was conveyed by Nicaragua in a letter of 17 May.(101) On 20 May,(102) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a note verbale of 17 May to the United States Embassy in Managua proposing the resumption of bilateral talks at Manzanillo. Transmitted in a letter of 30 May(103) was a response to Nicaragua sent on 28 May by the United States stating that when, in January 1985, it had informed Nicaragua of its decision not to schedule further meetings at Manzanillo at that time, while making it clear it was not terminating the talks, it had described the circumstances under which it would consider it useful to schedule additional meetings.

Letters from Nicaragua of 13 and 14 June(104) to the Council President and the Secretary-General, respectively, circulated a 13 June Declaration by the Government of Nicaragua and the National Command of the Sandinist National Liberation Front expressing concern at what they called the successful efforts of the United States Administration to induce Congress to approve budget appropriations to finance mercenary forces which were launching terrorist attacks against Nicaragua under the direction of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). The Declaration outlined steps Nicaragua had taken to deal with the situation.

On 21 June,(105) Nicaragua transmitted a communique issued on 17 June concerning a recent decision by the United States Congress to approve $27 million to support what Nicaragua called mercenary forces trained, armed and directed by the United States Government. Nicaragua said this represented a decision to escalate the aggression and obliged it to suspend measures it had taken unilaterally as a gesture of good faith and willingness to comply with agreements that might be reached in the Contadora process. A letter of the same day(106) conveyed a communiqué of 20 June concerning what it said was an attack that day on Nicaragua's diplomatic mission in Washington, D.C., which Nicaragua saw as a result of the warlike rhetoric directed against it.

Responsibility for disrupting the Contadora peace negotiations was placed on Nicaragua by the United States in a State Department statement of 20 June, transmitted on 26 June,(107) which said it deplored Nicaragua's refusal to consider a Contadora Group proposal for agreement on key security issues at a meeting in Panama on 18 and 19 June.

On 22 July,(108) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a communication of 17 July from the United States Ambassador in Managua to the Nicaraguan Government and Nicaragua's reply to that communication in a note verbale of 18 July. The Ambassador's communication warned of serious repercussions if United States citizens were subjected to terrorist attacks supported by Nicaragua, as the United States said had been the case when six of its citizens were killed in El Salvador on 19 June. Nicaragua rejected the communication, which it said contained false accusations and intolerable threats, and confirmed its total condemnation of all forms of terrorism.

On 26 July,(109) India forwarded a communiqué adopted that day by the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, expressing grave concern at the deterioration of the situation in the region stemming from grave new threats against Nicaragua, including financial aid to counter-revolutionary forces. It called on all States to refrain from action that might exacerbate the situation and reaffirmed its support for the Contadora Group's efforts. On 29 July,(110) Nicaragua circulated a note of the same day to the United States Secretary of State charging that, on 27 July, a group of mercenaries in the service of the United States Government had ambushed two trucks, killing nine civilians and wounding 18 others.

On 8 August, Nicaragua transmitted a communiqué of 7 August concerning the alleged kidnapping that day, by a mercenary organization in Costa Rica, of about 50 people, including 29 United States citizens and approximately 18 Nicaraguan and foreign journalists travelling along the San Juan River on a Christian organization peace mission. A note of 12 August to the United States Secretary of State was transmitted by Nicaragua the same day,(112) calling on the United States to cease its support for mercenary organizations such as the one that had allegedly kidnapped the Witness for Peace mission travellers on 7 August, releasing the United States citizens the following day. In a letter dated 16 September,(113) Nicaragua circulated a presidential communiqué of 13 September charging that mercenary groups, supported by the United States, were engaging that day in new aggressive actions against Nicaragua from Costa Rican and Honduran territory with the aim of provoking a confrontation between the Central American Governments that would involve the participation of United States troops.

A letter by Nicaragua of 31 October(114) contained a government communiqué of the same date in which Nicaragua said it deplored the attitude of the United States in insisting that direct talks with Nicaragua were conditional upon its National Assembly being dissolved, and condemned its insistence that Nicaragua recognize as negotiating partners those directed by the CIA. Nicaragua proposed a high-level meeting in November between the two countries to discuss an agenda for subsequent meetings. Nicaragua, on 4 November,(115) transmitted a note of 2 November from its Minister for External Relations to the Foreign Ministers of the Contadora Group countries explaining that Nicaragua had recently proclaimed a state of emergency to give it the necessary legal instruments to defend itself in the face of the United States trade embargo and support for mercenaries.

The United States, on 6 November,(116) transmitted a report, " 'Revolution Beyond Our Borders': Sandinista Intervention in Central America", which it said described chronologically and geographically unlawful Nicaraguan activities directed against the neighbouring States of Central America and the collective response to Nicaraguan aggression. Nicaragua, in a letter of 19 November,(117) said the United States report was an attempt to justify military intervention in Nicaragua with a peculiar interpretation of Article 51 of the Charter, which speaks of the right of individual or collective self-defence. Annexed to the letter was: documentation relating to the case before the International Court of Justice (ICJ) concerning military and paramilitary activities in and against Nicaragua (see p. 1156); a section of a document concerning the intervention of Nicaragua before the Court on 30 April; the verbatim record of the testimony of David MacMichael, a United States citizen; and letters from the President of the United States National Committee for Peace in Central America. On 23 November,(118) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a letter of 20 November to the United States stating that a decision of the United States Administration to use additional funds, or to find new ways of applying those already approved, for directly supplying military equipment to the counter-revolutionary forces it supported was further evidence that the United States was preparing direct military intervention against Nicaragua.

On 6 December,(119) Nicaragua transmitted the text of a note sent the same day to the United States charging that the crash of a Sandinist helicopter on 2 December and the death of 14 soldiers was caused by surface-to-air missiles fired by mercenary forces supplied and supported by the United States.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (December)

On 6 December,(120) Nicaragua requested an urgent meeting of the Security Council to consider what it called the extremely serious situation created by the escalation of acts of aggression, repeated threats and new acts of provocation directed against it by the United States.

The Council held three meetings, on 10, 11 and 12 December, to consider the Nicaraguan complaint. Invited to participate, at their request, without the right to vote, were Costa Rica, Cuba, Honduras, Iran, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mexico, Nicaragua, the Syrian Arab Republic, Viet Nam and Zimbabwe.

Meeting numbers. SC 2633, 2634, 2636.

Opening the debate, Nicaragua asserted that, in the weeks immediately preceding the Council meetings, United States involvement in the war in Central America had escalated. Characteristic of that situation was the holding of joint military manoeuvres in Honduras and the supply to the counter-revolutionary forces of further sophisticated equipment. Nicaragua noted in particular the use by those forces of surface-to-air missiles supplied by the United States Government to bring down a Nicaraguan helicopter. That action, Nicaragua said, confirmed the disdain of the United States for international law and for the 10 May 1984 decision<sup>(121)</sup> of ICJ calling on the United States to halt its aggression against Nicaragua. The United States also continued to refuse to respond to the request of the Contadora Group to end its aggression against Nicaragua.

The United States said that the Nicaraguan Government continued to ignore the central fact that there was much domestic opposition to its policies and, instead, portrayed democratic armed resistance to its attempt to impose a totalitarian regime as a reactionary mercenary force organized by the United States. Rejecting Nicaraguan allegations concerning the supply of missiles, the United States asserted that it was the Sandinists who had upset the military equilibrium in Central America by receiving the sophisticated attack helicopter from the Soviet Union, and that Nicaragua's neighbours and its own people had suffered from Sandinist threats and intimidation. Regarding Nicaragua's reference to ICJ, the United States said that of the 15 Judges on that Court, 10 of the countries to which those Judges belonged, including some of Nicaragua's close friends, rejected the compulsory authority of the Court. Stating that Nicaragua had declined to attend OAS meetings in Cartagena, Colombia, to discuss the future of the Contadora negotiations, the United States said it continued to believe that the Contadora negotiating process offered the best prospect for achieving peace in Central America.

The majority of countries participating in the debate expressed concern at the deteriorating situation in Central America and deplored the coercive measures against Nicaragua as well as overt and covert attempts to interfere in its affairs. Costa Rica and Honduras joined other countries, including China, India, Madagascar, Peru, the Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago and the USSR, in expressing the conviction that the tensions in the region could be resolved only through negotiations among all concerned and through support for the efforts of the Contadora Group.

Honduras said the Sandinist Government had halted the Contadora negotiating process and continued to disregard the internal 'Central American causes of the conflict, trying to make them out to be foreign factors because Nicaragua believed its ideological and party interests were more important than the needs of the other peoples of Central America.

Costa Rica rejected the assertion by Nicaragua that counter-revolutionary groups were operating on Costa Rican territory, stating that it was neutral, had no armed forces and sought the establishment of peaceful and stable standards of coexistence with all countries of Central America regardless of their political or economic system.

In its capacity as Chairman of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, India reaffirmed its solidarity with the Government and people of Nicaragua, affirmed the sovereign right of every country to pursue its political, social and economic system, rejected policies of intervention and intimidation and called for further efforts by the Contadora Group and the Support Group.

Peru stated that it was untenable to try to bend by force the will of a people recently emerged from a genuine struggle for freedom and that imposing domination and dependence from outside was dangerous to third world peoples because attempts by the super-Powers to settle exclusively regional conflicts in the third world would repudiate the system of multilateral relations. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya saw the intervention by the United States as an attempt to impose hegemony on small nations struggling for freedom.

The USSR said that the main reason for the aggravation of the situation in Central America was the further escalation of the aggressive policy of interference and destabilization by the United States against Nicaragua.

Trinidad and Tobago deplored the use of force or the threat of force in the resolution of disputes and was concerned about the prospect of an arms race in Central America and the competitive use of increasingly sophisticated weapons. China opposed intimidation, interference and infiltration carried out by any outside force against the Central American countries and held that the sovereignty and territorial integrity of those countries, including Nicaragua, should be respected. Mexico reiterated its opposition to any violation of the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of States and advocated the establishment of dialogue and the adoption of constructive agreements. Repudiation of the use of force was also expressed by Burkina Faso and Madagascar,

Cuba and Viet Nam regarded the supply of surface-to-air missiles by the United States to the contras as a clear violation of the Charter and the norms of international law, and demanded an end to all assistance to the mercenary forces.

Zimbabwe stated that the way the United States had handled the Contadora and Manzanillo talks showed that it was not sincere about finding a settlement with Nicaragua, and that Nicaragua could not feel safe when military manoeuvres planned by the United States would put in place the necessary infrastructure for an invasion of Nicaragua.

The Syrian Arab Republic called on the Security Council to promote a peaceful settlement of the dispute and to persuade the United States to resume the dialogue with Nicaragua and cease its acts of aggression against that country.

Iran said that if the Contadora Group did not take timely and determined action it could be rendered ineffective because of the danger that the United States might try to influence the Group and its Support Group, consequently damaging the credibility and effectiveness of the Contadora process.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 17 December 1985, the General Assembly, on the recommendation of the Second (Economic and Financial) Committee, adopted resolution 40/188 by recorded vote.

Trade embargo against Nicaragua

The General Assembly

Recalling the relevant purposes and principles set forth in the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the fundamental principles that govern relations among the States of the international community,

Recalling the Universal Declaration of Human Rights,

Recalling Security Council resolution 562(1985) of 10 May 1985,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 2625(XXV) of 24 October 1970, in particular the principle concerning the duty not to intervene in matters within the domestic jurisdiction of any State, in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming that each country has the sovereign right to choose its own development policies and strategies,

Recalling all relevant articles of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade,

Recalling also General Assembly resolution 39/4 of 26 October 1984, in which the Assembly encouraged the efforts of the Contadora Group and all interested States, in particular those with ties to and interests in the region, to respect fully the purposes and principles of the Contadora Act on Peace and Co-operation in Central America of 7 September 1984,

Concerned that the unilateral trade embargo and other measures imposed on Nicaragua on 1 May 1985, which have been extended and broadened as from 1 November 1985, adversely affect the economy of the country, specifically its trade, and consequently its development plans,

Deeply concerned that the said measures will not contribute to the economic and social development of Nicaragua and to the goals and objectives of the Contadora process,

Recalling the widespread concern expressed by the international community about the situation in Central America, aggravated by the trade embargo against Nicaragua,

Considering that the international community is unanimous in contributing to the economic and social progress of the countries of the area and to the reinforcing of the process of economic integration of the area, in order to contribute to the quest for a negotiated political solution to the regional crisis,

Reaffirming the sovereignty and inalienable right of Nicaragua and the rest of the States in the region to decide freely on their own political, economic and social systems, to develop their international relations according to their peoples' interests, free from outside interference, subversion, direct or indirect coercion or threats of any kind,

Deeply concerned that the said trade embargo jeopardizes the principles of free trade and non-discrimination that should prevail among nations,

1. Regrets the recent trade embargo and other measures imposed against Nicaragua and requests that those measures be immediately revoked;

2. Invites all States to promote and take concrete actions of co-operation in the economic and technological spheres in Central America, in particular to help reduce the negative effects of the trade embargo and other measures imposed against Nicaragua and to contribute to economic and social development and to regional economic integration;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

General Assembly resolution 40/199

17 December 1985 Meeting 119 91-6-49 (recorded vote)

Approved by Second Committee (A/40/989/Add.3) by recorded vote (84-4-37), 5

December (meeting 48); 4-nation draft (A/C.2/40/L.89/Rev.1); agenda item 84 (c).

Sponsors: Algeria, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 2nd Committee 45-18; plenary 119

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Afghanistan, Albania, Algeria, Angola, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Benin, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Bulgaria, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Byelorussian SSR, Cameroon, Cape Verde, China, Colombia, Comoros, Congo, Costa Rica, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ethiopia, Finland, France, German Democratic Republic, Ghana, Greece, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Guyana, Haiti, Hungary, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Kenya, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Lesotho, Liberia, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Malaysia, Maldives, Mali, Malta, Mexico, Mongolia, Mozambique, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Norway, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Poland, Qatar, Romania, Sao Tome and Principe, Seychelles, Spain, Sri Lanka, Suriname, Sweden, Syrian Arab Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Uganda, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, Uruguay, Vanuatu, Venezuela, Viet Nam, Yemen, Yugoslavia, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Gambia, Grenada, Israel, Saint Christopher and Nevis, Sierra Leone, United States.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Brunei Darussalam, Canada, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, Dominica, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Fiji, Gabon, Germany, Federal Republic of, Guatemala, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kuwait, Luxembourg, Malawi, Nepal, Netherlands, Niger, Oman, Pakistan, Paraguay, Philippines, Portugal, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Singapore, Somalia, Swaziland, Thailand, Togo, Turkey, United Kingdom, Zaire.

The United States introduced several amendments(122) to the sponsor-revised version of the draft resolution, which incorporated some of the earlier amendments(123) by the United States and sub-amendments(124) by the sponsors. By the amendments to the operative provisions, in paragraph 1 the word "that" would have been inserted after the word "regrets" and the words "were considered necessary" would have been inserted after "Nicaragua"; the words "immediately revoked" would have been replaced with "kept under constant review with the view to their eventual revocation".

Paragraph 2 would have ended with the words "Central America" and paragraph 3 would have been replaced by one recommending that Nicaragua continue to receive treatment appropriate to its special needs until the economic situation returned to normal.

The United States proposed that a separate vote be taken on each of the amendments. Nicaragua counter-proposed that no action be taken on the United States amendments and that a decision be taken immediately on the revised draft resolution.

The Nicaraguan motion was carried by a recorded vote of 50 to 40, with 33 abstentions. Saint Lucia then proposed that no action be taken on the resolution, a motion rejected by a recorded vote of 73 to 25, with 27 abstentions.

The United States said it regretted that no discussion was permitted in the Second Committee on its amendments, aimed at creating a more balanced text. The resolution was potentially damaging to the Central American peace process and was an attempt by Nicaragua to achieve there what it had been unable to achieve in any other United Nations or hemispheric forum.

Honduras said the text dealt only with effects without treating causes, and went beyond the competence of the Second Committee and the bilateral approach that should be taken. It attempted to make the economic integration of the developing countries in the subregion subject to the interpretation of only one of them. Moreover, documentation, in the form of reports by the Contadora Group countries and the final Act of 1985, was ignored and only the Act of 1984 mentioned. Thus, it had not participated in the vote.

While it voted in favour, Costa Rica said it did not support certain elements of the text, which did not adequately reflect the subject or its implications for the critical situation in Central America.

Speaking on behalf of the EC members, France said they regretted the procedures followed in the Second Committee, a view also expressed by Australia, Barbados, Canada, Denmark, Greece, India, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Solomon Islands and the United Kingdom.

The Federal Republic of Germany and Israel felt the text was one-sided and regarded the Second Committee as not the appropriate forum for considering highly political texts. The latter view was shared by Australia, Barbados, Canada, the Philippines, Singapore, the United Kingdom and the United States.

France added that the resolution drew attention to only one aspect of a complex situation. Canada, Egypt, Singapore and Trinidad and Tobago also felt that it took a selective approach to a complex problem which should have been dealt with as a whole. Belize said its support of the text in no way reflected its policies in relation to the situation in Central America, but only in relation to the principle of embargo. Norway regretted the embargo, believing it would not help solve the problems or reduce the conflicts in the region. Pakistan considered unilateral trade embargoes to be in contravention of GATT principles; by its abstention, however, it did not wish to convey a lack of confidence in the Contadora process. Austria said the embargo went against the Contadora Group's efforts and would have preferred a bilateral solution.

Bulgaria, speaking on behalf of the Eastern European States, opposed the trade embargo and fully supported the Latin American countries' struggle for social and economic independence, as well as their right to choose their economic and social policy. Cuba said its affirmative vote was not only in solidarity with Nicaragua but also because Cuba had been the victim of a quarter-century blockade by the United States. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said the embargo and coercive measures used against developing countries were contrary to the Charter and threatened international peace. Nicaragua believed the adoption of the resolution represented a triumph for justice, peace and reason and would enable developing and developed countries to have more equitable economic relations.

Chapter VII

Asia and the Pacific

Matters relating to Korea, the situation in Afghanistan and that in Kampuchea, as well as the Iran-Iraq conflict, were prominent concerns in Asia brought before the United Nations in 1985.

The United Nations Command continued to monitor the 1953 Armistice Agreement between the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Korea. A relief operation from North Korea to flood victims in South Korea was the first such co-operative effort since 1948.

In South-East Asia, the situation in Kampuchea and border incidents affecting that country, China, the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Thailand and Viet Nam occupied the attention of the United Nations. The Secretary-General and his Special Representative visited the area in pursuit of a peaceful solution to the problems of the region. The Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea dispatched three missions to seven countries in pursuance of its mandate to assist in seeking a settlement of the situation. The General Assembly, in November (resolution 40/7), reiterated that a just and lasting solution required the withdrawal of all foreign forces, restoration and preservation of the country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the exercise of the people's right to determine its destiny, and a commitment by all States to non-interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

Armed incidents affecting Afghanistan and Pakistan continued to be reported, while the Secretary-General's Personal Representative maintained his contacts with the parties involved in the situation in Afghanistan in a format of separate, high-level "proximity" talks regarding a political settlement. The Assembly, in November, called on all parties concerned to work for the achievement of a political solution and expressed its support for the Secretary-General's efforts to that end (resolution 40/12).

Missions to investigate the treatment of prisoners of war in both Iran and Iraq and a mission to European hospitals to examine Iranian patients suffering from the effects of chemical weapons allegedly used by Iraq were undertaken in connection with the continuing conflict between Iran and Iraq. The Security Council considered the question of chemical weapons use and, in a declaration, appealed to both countries to cease violations of a 1984 undertaking not to attack purely civilian populations.

East Asia

Korean question

During 1985, the President of the Security Council received the report of the United Nations Command (UNC) concerning maintenance of the 1953 Korean Armistice Agreement. The Council President also received a communication from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea concerning the report.

Report of the United Nations Command. A report of UNC concerning the maintenance in 1984 of the 1953 Korean Armistice Agreement<sup>(1)</sup> was submitted by a letter<sup>(2)</sup> of 13 June 1985 from the United States on behalf of the Unified Command established pursuant to a 1950 Security Council resolution.<sup>(3)</sup>

The report stated that in 1984 the Korean People's Army (KPA) and the Chinese People's Volunteers (CPV) continued to conduct hostile acts against UNC and the Republic of Korea. These totalled more than 2,000 violations of the Agreement. An appendix gave details of two incidents which occurred in 1984 and were discussed by the Military Armistice Commission (ILIAC). The first one involved the recovery, on 9 April, of a boat of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea which had been sunk by the Republic of Korea navy after allegedly infiltrating two North Korean armed agents into the Republic on 3 December 1983, thus substantiating, the report said, a charge made that month of a violation of the Agreement.

The second incident, occurring on 23 November, involved what was described as an unprovoked North Korean armed attack on UNC security guards and a Soviet defector in the Joint Security Area. As a result of the incident, one UNC guard was killed, another wounded, and three North Korean guards were killed and an unknown number wounded. Subsequently, at a MAC meeting, UNC demanded from the KPA/CPV side the institution of control measures and procedures to preclude the recurrence of similar incidents.

UNC also reported taking a number of initiatives to reduce military tensions on the Korean peninsula. Among them was a proposal that mutual notification be given about major training exercises. UNC also invited the five members of the KPA/CPV component of MAC to observe the training exercise "Team Spirit-84" held from early February to mid-April, and proposed that closed-door meetings of MAC secretaries be convened to find mutually agreeable actions to reduce military tensions. According to the report, these proposals were ignored by the other party.

The report also mentioned an unprecedented humanitarian event which started on 8 September when the North Korean Red Cross Society offered relief goods to flood victims in South Korea. The deliveries of relief goods took place between 29 September and 3 October 1984. The multi-site relief transfer operation was a historical first since the 1948 establishment of the two opposing Governments in North and South Korea. Upon completion of this operation and at the suggestion of the heads of the respective Red Cross Societies, seven North-South meetings were held to discuss a variety of issues. Among these was the first North-South government-to-government-level economic meeting which took place on 15 November. UNC provided security, facilities and administrative support for these talks as well as for the relief goods-transfer operation.

The report asserted that North Korea had been unwilling to co-operate in enabling MAC to carry out its mission by refusing to investigate jointly violations of the Armistice Agreement and by disavowing responsibility for violations.

Communication. By a letter of 19 September 1985(4) to the President of the Security Council, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea described the UNC report as full of distortions and fabrications designed to veil the aggressive policy of the United States in South Korea. The letter stated that it was the United States which aggravated tension and increased the danger of a new war by introducing into South Korea various kinds of weapons of mass destruction, including nuclear weapons and means of nuclear delivery, in gross violation of the Armistice Agreement. The United States had also worked to introduce medium-range nuclear "Cruise" and "Pershing-2" missiles into South Korea.

The letter stated that during 1984 there were more than 21,500 violations of the Armistice Agreement by the United States and South Korea; during the period from 1 January to 31 June 1985, there were over 10,800 cases. "Team Spirit-85" was termed a combined preliminary war and nuclear war test aimed at attacking the Democratic People's Republic of Korea from the ground, sea and sky.

To remove the danger of war and ease tension in Korea, the Democratic People's Republic said it had proposed on 10 January 1984 that tripartite talks be held between it, the United States and South Korea.

Appended to the letter was an appeal dated 6 September 1985 to the Governments of all countries of the world actively to prevent war in Korea and realize at the earliest date Korea's independent and peaceful reunification after the withdrawal of United States troops.

South-East Asia

Kampuchea situation

The situation in and around Kampuchea—particularly border incidents, attacks which endangered refugees and civilians, escalation of tensions along the Thai-Kampuchean border and the possibility for peace negotiations, as well as Kampuchea's representation in the United Nations—continued to occupy the attention of the United Nations in 1985.

The Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea dispatched three missions in April, June and July to seven countries in pursuance of its mandate to assist in seeking a settlement of the situation. In November (resolution 40/7), the General Assembly reiterated that a just and lasting solution required the withdrawal of all foreign forces, restoration and preservation of the country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the exercise of the people's right to determine its destiny, and a commitment by all States to non-interference in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

Communications. Among the numerous communications received by the Secretary-General during the year on various aspects of the situation in Kampuchea and related issues, a number related to incidents on the common borders of Democratic Kampuchea, Thailand and Viet Nam.

In a letter of 3 January 1985,(1) Thailand charged that on 31 December 1984 a group of Vietnamese troops supported by heavy artillery entered Thai territory and ambushed Thai paramilitary troops on routine patrol near the Thai-Kampuchean border, killing four Thai soldiers and wounding two others. The Government condemned this act and reaffirmed its legitimate right to take measures to safeguard Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The Viet Nam New's Agency, in a statement of 5 January transmitted on 7 January,(2) rejected what it called Thailand's recent false news that Vietnamese army volunteers in Kampuchea crossed the border into Thai territory. Viet Nam declared that the slanderous contention was intended to cover Thailand's collusion with China against the revival of the Kampuchean people.

On 9 January,(3) Thailand transmitted a message from its Minister for Foreign Affairs, noting that the Government found it impossible to participate in a forthcoming plenary session of the Interim Mekong Committee to be held at Hanoi, Viet Nam, on 10 January because of sustained incursions into Thai territory by Vietnamese forces operating in Kampuchea.

In a second letter of 9 January,(4) Thailand condemned a series of acts of aggression allegedly perpetrated by Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea against Thailand from 4 to 8 January. These acts involved incursions into and shelling of Thai territory, border patrol clashes and firing on aircraft, and resulted in several deaths, injuries and the dislocation of villagers.

On 15 January,(5) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted excerpts from the New Year's message by its Vice-President in Charge of Foreign Affairs. The statement surveyed the military, political and international situation and condemned an alleged Vietnamese attack on a Kampuchean refugee camp on 25 December 1984. In a second letter of 15 January,(6) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a telegram dated 12 January from its President, Norodom Sihanouk, asking the Secretary-General to prevail upon Viet Nam to end the frequent attacks by its army he said were mounted against the Khmer civilian population living in the refugee camps on the Thai-Kampuchean border. He also appealed to the rich and liberal-minded countries throughout the world to take a larger number of Khmer refugees.

A letter from Democratic Kampuchea of 24 January(7) annexed a statement of 20 January by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea asserting the right of the people of Kampuchea to fight the Vietnamese aggressors and the right of the world to support the just struggle of the people of Kampuchea. Hanoi authorities, it said, must unconditionally withdraw their forces from Kampuchea. Democratic Kampuchea, to a letter of 29 January,(8) annexed a statement of 25 January from the Foreign Ministry condemning what it said was Viet Nam's deliberate policy of starving the people of Kampuchea so as to supply its forces.

Vietnamese attacks against Kampuchean refugee encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border were addressed in a 9 January statement, transmitted on 30 January, (9) by Malaysia's Foreign Minister in his capacity as current Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Association of South-East Asian Nations (ASEAN). The ASEAN countries (Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand) deplored the escalation of fighting along the border, which had led to the exodus of tens of thousands of Kampuchean refugees into Thailand. They called on Viet Nam to heed the desire of the international community for an early and comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean problem through negotiation and to abandon its policy of military occupation of Kampuchea.

On 5 February,(10) Democratic Kampuchea circulated a communique of 3 February from the Council of Ministers of its Coalition Government reviewing the subjects discussed at its meeting that day and condemning Viet Nam's manoeuvres to split the tripartite coalition and other actions, including genocide through its policy of starvation and levy of the population to clear jungles, attacks against the border refugee camps and the policy of "Vietnamization" through the massive influx of Vietnamese settlers.

Italy, on behalf of the 10 States members of the European Community (EC), circulated, in a letter of 31 January,(11) an EC Declaration on Viet Nam's offensive in Kampuchea and incursions into Thailand, adopted at a meeting on European political co-operation (Rome, 23 January). The States condemned violations of human rights and the principles of the United Nations Charter resulting from the increasingly intensive attacks by Vietnamese troops on refugee camps in the area, and appealed for a halt to military activities on the border and a political settlement.

Viet Nam responded on 15 February,(12) rejecting as fabrication the allegations by the EC States, which Viet Nam said only repeated the slanders by China and Thailand-the supporters of the Pol Pot gang who were destroying and sabotaging the Kampuchean people's revival.

Thailand, in a letter of the same day,(13) reviewed what it described as recent acts of aggression by Vietnamese forces in violation of Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity, including border incursions, clashes with troops inside Thailand and shelling; it demanded that Viet Nam immediately cease its hostile actions. On 19 February,(14) Thailand circulated a letter detailing alleged attacks on its territory by Viet Nam on 6 February, when it said four rounds of rocket shells containing toxic chemicals were fired into Thailand by Vietnamese forces; on 16 February, when five Thai villagers were killed and seven wounded by artillery shells; and on 16 and 17 February, when Vietnamese troops attacked a military position, killing three soldiers and wounding 16. On 29 March,(15) Thailand circulated eight photographs of the Thai villagers reportedly wounded or killed on 16 February.

Viet Nam, in a letter of 22 February,(16) rejected Thailand's allegations as slanderous fabrications.

In a letter of 20 February,(17) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted excerpts from the Directives of the High Command of its National Army to military units in all fronts in Kampuchea on 31 January. These reviewed and assessed the current military situation of the Vietnamese during the current dry season as well as Kampuchea's line of action.

China annexed to a letter of 19 February(18) statements of 6 and 18 February by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the situation in Kampuchea and on relations between China and Viet Nam. China saw no sincerity in the professed intention of the Vietnamese to settle the Kampuchean question, believed that the Coalition Government was expanding its political influence and military strength, and stated that tension along the Sino-Vietnamese border was solely the making of the Vietnamese authorities. China named Viet Nam the aggressor in Kampuchea and announced its intention to continue to support and assist the Kampuchean people in their just struggle against the Vietnamese invaders.

Democratic Kampuchea, on 7 March,(19) transmitted information on the situation in Kampuchea as at the end of February, as described in excerpts from the Directives of its National Army's High Command to all its military units.

On 8 March,(20) Thailand described alleged attacks on its territory by Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea: on 28 February, when three Thai soldiers were killed and several wounded by artillery shells, which also fell on 1 March; on 4 March, when a Thai soldier was killed in a clash inside Thai territory; and on 5 March, when 800 to 1,000 Vietnamese soldiers launched attacks. Thailand stated that it drove away the troops on 6 March, inflicting heavy casualties.

A letter of 12 March(21) transmitted a communique of 1 March following a meeting of the Co-ordination Committee for Defence of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea, attended by the Ministers of the Co-ordination Committee of the party of Norodom Sihanouk, the Khmer People's National Liberation Front and the party of Democratic Kampuchea, as well as military personnel of the three parties. The Committee stated its assessment of the politico-military situation in the field following the latest series of offensives by Vietnamese forces; it had also discussed maximum use of resources, especially in logistics and military intelligence. It observed that Viet Nam was still faced with enormous problems six years after its invasion of Kampuchea.

China, in a letter of 11 March,(22) condemned alleged attacks by Viet Nam on border towns and villages inside China, forcing counter-attacks. It demanded that Viet Nam cease infringing the territorial sovereignty of Thailand, withdraw its troops from Kampuchea and stop military provocations against China.

On 13 March,(23) Viet Nam forwarded the text of an 11 March statement by its Foreign Ministry rejecting what it called the slanderous charge that Vietnamese army volunteers crossed the Kampuchean-Thai border and trespassed on Thailand's territory. Viet Nam said the charge was a customary trick of Thai ruling circles aimed at covering their collusion with China in backing the genocidal Pol Pot clique and other Khmer reactionary forces.

On 14 March,(24) Thailand described alleged attacks by Vietnamese forces: on 4 March some 100 Vietnamese troops invaded and captured 62 Thai villagers; more than 7,500 Thai villagers had to be evacuated when threatened by heavy cross-border artillery fire from 5 to 10 March; and on 11 March Vietnamese forces resumed incursions into Thai territory, resulting in the deaths of 11 Thai soldiers and the wounding of 68. Responding on 25 March,(25) Viet Nam rejected the allegations as fabrications and claimed that Thailand was teaming up with China to sabotage Kampuchea's rebirth. Viet Nam also circulated on 26 March(26) a Foreign Ministry statement of the previous day on what it called the bellicose statements of Thai authorities, in particular references to the right of "hot pursuit". Viet Nam said the situation required urgent measures to establish immediately a safety zone under international supervision on either side of the Thai-Kampuchean border.

Democratic Kampuchea, on 2 April,(27) transmitted a statement of 29 March by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of its Coalition Government stating that a recent announcement by Viet Nam of a partial troop withdrawal from Kampuchea was deceitfully designed to mislead international public opinion. To a letter of 8 April,(28) Democratic Kampuchea annexed a communique of 8 April following a meeting in Kampuchea of members of all Co-ordination Committees of the Coalition Government, at which it was decided to set up a joint body to reinforce co-ordination among the three participating parties of that Government; they noted the increasing activities of their resistance forces around the capital, Phnom Penh. A letter of 19 April(29) from Democratic Kampuchea described the situation in Kampuchea as of mid-April through excerpts from an address by its Vice-President on 13 April, the tenth anniversary of the founding of Democratic Kampuchea. On 25 April,(30) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a document prepared by the Office of the Prime Minister of the Coalition Government alleging crimes committed by Viet Nam against the civilian population of Dangrek, one of several civilian encampments along the Kampuchea-Thailand border, on 24 January.

Seven alleged acts of aggression-incursions, mine-laying, rocket and mortar fire—by Viet Nam against Thailand between late April and 10 May, resulting in the deaths of nine Thai soldiers, were described in a Thai letter of 13 May.(31)

Viet Nam, on 8 May,(32) transmitted a statement of 6 May by the Viet Nam News Agency rejecting as false Thailand's recent news that Viet Nam had used helicopters to attack Thai fishing boats in international waters.

Information on the situation in Kampuchea from October 1984 to April 1985 (the seventh dry season), excerpted from the 30 April 1985 communiqué of its army High Command, was circulated by Democratic Kampuchea on 21 May.(33)

Viet Nam, on 20 May,(34) forwarded a statement of 17 May by its Foreign Ministry on what it termed serious violations of the territory of the People's Republic of Kampuchea by Thai troops, recounting airspace, sea space and troop intrusions, bombardments and firing incidents between 1 and 17 May. In response, Thailand, on 24 May,(35) transmitted a 22 May Foreign Ministry statement rejecting as groundless the accusation made by Viet Nam on behalf of what it called its puppet régime in Phnom Penh.

On 23 May,(36) the Lao People's Democratic Republic transmitted a 20 May statement by the People's Republic of Kampuchea recounting alleged bomb, rocket and artillery attacks on it by Thai aircraft on 1, 7, 8, 9 and 11 May and demanding that Thailand put an immediate end to its dangerous violations of Kampuchea's territorial integrity.

On 18 June,(37) a letter from Thailand described alleged acts of aggression against Thailand's sovereignty by Viet Nam on 7 and 10 June, charging troop incursions and clashes and the wounding of two Thai soldiers. Viet Nam rejected these accusations on 27 June,(38) questioning Thailand's rejection of initiatives by the People's Republic of Kampuchea, especially the proposal to establish a safe zone along the Thai-Kampuchean border.

On 19 June,(39) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a 14 June statement by its Foreign Ministry condemning Viet Nam for creating a shortage of food in Kampuchea in 1985.

A joint communiqué issued by the ASEAN Foreign Ministers on 9 July was annexed to a letter of 17 July(40) from the Philippines. The Ministers expressed deep concern at what they termed the continued illegal occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnamese forces, deplores Viet Nam's recent dry-season border offensive and aggression, and were of the view that Viet Nam's partial withdrawal of troops in April was mere troop rotation. They also reaffirmed the validity of their appeal of September 1983(41) for dependence and reiterated their call for a political settlement and their support for the Coalition Government.

Democratic Kampuchea, on 25 July,(42) transmitted a declaration of 6 July of the Democratic Kampuchea Party, following a 5/6 July meeting of cadres of the National Army and cadres of Democratic Kampuchea. The Party reaffirmed its position on several issues, including: the solution to the Kampuchea problem; the rounding up of several hundred thousand Kampuchean and the plundering of Kampuchean lands by Vietnamese settlers; Kampuchea's union of national forces against Viet Nam; the nature of the future régime in Kampuchea; its policy of independence, peace, neutrality and non-alignment; future relations between Kampuchea and Viet Nam; and relations between Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other countries of the Warsaw Pact. On 26 July,(43) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted the transcript of a radio interview on 10 July by a spokesman for the Department of National Defence of the Democratic Kampuchea Party commenting on a statement by Viet Nam's Foreign Minister on the Kampuchean problem.

On 21 August,(44) Thailand condemned alleged acts of aggression against it by Vietnamese forces on 18 August which involved troop incursions with heavy weapons, resulting in the deaths of three villagers, the wounding of six others and four soldiers, and property damage.

On 13 September, (45) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a memorandum, comprising excerpts from official statements and the media on the situation in Kampuchea in 1985, outlining the military situation, the strengthening of national unity within Kampuchea's Coalition Government, what it described as Viet Nam's manoeuvres and the real objective of its aggression, and proposals for a solution. On 23 September,(46) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a document entitled "The Vietnamization of Kampuchea: a process of absorption of a people and a nation"—a discussion using the same sources.

Thailand, in a letter of 26 September,(47) drew attention to alleged acts of aggression by Viet Nam: on 17 September, when mortar shells killed one Thai paramilitary person; on 19 September, when shelling was resumed; on 21 September, when a Thai military unit was attacked; and on 22 September, when mortar shells seriously wounded two Thai military personnel.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic, on 4 October,(48) circulated an 18 September message from the Chairman of the Council of Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary, of the United Nations. He referred to possibilities for solving the problems of that country mentioned at the tenth conference of the Foreign Ministers of Kampuchea, Laos and Viet Nam in January 1985 and reiterated at the eleventh conference at Phnom Penh in August: if the concerned parties could not reach a political solution, Viet Nam would continue its gradual withdrawal from Kampuchea and complete its total pull-out in 1990, or withdraw sooner if the parties could reach a political solution.

Democratic Kampuchea, on 14 October,(49) transmitted a document entitled "Vietnamese genocidal crimes in Kampuchea: a new process of extermination of the people of Kampuchea", which contained accusations that, to maintain its occupation at all costs, Viet Nam was employing increasingly barbarous methods against Kampuchea's civilian population.

On 5 November,(50) Angola forwarded the Final Political Declaration and the Final Economic Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, 4-7 September). In the Political Declaration, the Ministers warned that there was a danger of the tensions in and around Kampuchea escalating over a wider area and urged that the tensions be de-escalated through a comprehensive political solution which would provide for the withdrawal of all foreign forces. They reaffirmed the right of the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny free from foreign interference and hoped that a climate conducive to exercising that right would be created through negotiations.

Democratic Kampuchea, in a letter of 19 November,(51) transmitted a situation report on Kampuchea during the seventh rainy season (May-September), excerpted from a communiqué of its National Army High Command. On 25 November,(52) it brought to the Secretary-General's attention its latest information on the situation in the country at the beginning of the 1985/86 dry season, from late October to mid-November.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL ACTION

On 30 May 1985, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1985/155 on the right of peoples to self-determination, endorsed a February resolution of the Commission on Human Rights and expressed concern at the activities of the foreign forces in Kampuchea, particularly the continuing attacks on Kampuchean civilian encampments along the Thai-Kampuchean border.

Activities of the Committee of the Conference on Kampuchea. The 10-member Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea met in 1985 pursuant to a 1984 Assembly resolution,(53) and dispatched a mission to Beijing, China, and Bangkok, Thailand, in the second half of April, another to Buenos Aires, Argentina, Lima, Peru, and Port of Spain, Trinidad, from 2 to 11 June and a third to Amman, Jordan, and Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, from 2 to 8 July. These consultations underscored the continuing concern of the international community over the Kampuchean issue, seeking the widest possible support for the efforts towards a comprehensive political solution.

The report(54) on its 1984-1985 activities noted that the first two meetings of the Ad Hoc Committee in 1985 were devoted to considering the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border. The Committee issued statements on 17 January and 15 February expressing serious concern at the escalation of hostilities along the border, and deploring and calling for an immediate end to the military attacks by foreign forces against Kampuchean encampments in the area and their incursions into Thailand. It reiterated its conviction that the problem could be solved only through peaceful means in accordance with the Declaration(55) adopted by the 1981 International Conference on Kampuchea and the relevant General Assembly resolutions, and appealed to all parties to join efforts to create an atmosphere conducive to constructive dialogue and negotiations.

The missions, during their visits, held consultations with the Governments on prospects for a political settlement of the problem in the light of developments following the adoption of the most recent General Assembly resolution, particularly the hostilities along the Thai-Kampuchean border during the 1985 dry-season offensive.

The missions restated that a just and lasting settlement must be based on withdrawal of all foreign forces and the right of the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny, and should take account of the legitimate security concerns of the States of the region, including a commitment by all to non-interference and non-intervention in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

In the discussions with the Governments, China said that the key to the solution was the withdrawal of Viet Nam's troops from Kampuchea and restated its position as set out in its five-point proposal of 1 March 1983.(41) Thailand emphasized the united and continued determination of ASEAN to pursue its efforts towards a political settlement based on the total withdrawal of foreign forces, national reconciliation and self-determination for the Kampuchean people. Argentina, Peru and Jordan expressed support for the Committee's work and the principles laid down in the Declaration on Kampuchea, and indicated their willingness to contribute towards achieving a negotiated settlement. Trinidad and Tobago also supported the Committee's efforts and reaffirmed its commitment to the principle of non-intervention. Jordan viewed the problem as stemming from a violation of Charter principles, which could not be applied selectively; it would seek their implementation in the case of Kampuchea and other conflicts.

ASEAN Foreign Ministers in Kuala Lumpur urged the Committee to continue its consultations to keep alive public awareness and foster a better understanding of the problems involved.

The Committee again appealed to Member States which had not participated in the Conference to co-operate in efforts to attain the goals of the Declaration on Kampuchea and Assembly resolutions on the question. All parties concerned were called upon to pursue dialogue and refrain from action that would further complicate the situation.

Report of the Secretary-General. In an October report<sup>(56)</sup> to the General Assembly, submitted pursuant to a 1984 request,<sup>(53)</sup> the Secretary-General stated that he had continued, within the framework of his good offices, to seek ways of achieving progress towards a peaceful resolution to the problem and had paid official visits to Thailand, Viet Nam, Malaysia and Indonesia in January/February 1985 for that purpose. Discussions with the leaders of those countries had enabled him to assess the situation and obtain clarifications on the positions and concerns of the countries of the region. He reiterated his conviction that differences could only be bridged by a sustained dialogue on the basic elements for a comprehensive settlement.

The serious tension and hostilities which had developed along the Thai-Kampuchean border before the Secretary-General's visit and which continued throughout the dry season prevented any immediate progress towards that goal. However, all the interlocutors had expressed support and asked him to persevere in his efforts towards a political solution.

In July, on the Secretary-General's behalf, his Special Representative, Rafeeuddin Ahmed, attended the eighteenth annual <sup>ASEAN</sup> meeting at Kuala Lumpur, and subsequently visited Hanoi (10-12 July) for consultations with the Vietnamese authorities. Since then the Secretary-General had further discussions in New York with the President of Democratic Kampuchea, the Prime Minister of Thailand, the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the Deputy Prime Minister of Malaysia, the Foreign Ministers of China and of Indonesia, the Acting Foreign Minister of the Philippines, and the Minister Member of the Council of Ministers of Viet Nam.

The discussions that the Secretary-General and his Special Representative had held during the year suggested that there was a reasonable degree of agreement on the main elements of a comprehensive political settlement, including: withdrawal of all foreign forces from Kampuchea; non-return to the universally condemned policies of a recent past; promotion of national reconciliation; exercise by the Kampuchean people of the right to determine their own destiny; respect for the independence, territorial integrity and non-aligned status of Kampuchea; ensuring the security and sanctity of all States in the region; international guarantees for and supervision of the implementation of the agreements reached; and establishment of a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in South-East Asia. Significant differences still existed, however, on the interpretation of those goals and the modalities for achieving them.

A limited international conference involving parties concerned, the five permanent members of the Security Council and other mutually acceptable countries had been found implicitly acceptable among the various alternatives for the dialogue format, the Secretary-General said, preceded by exploratory discussions aimed at achieving a common understanding on the above elements. The main difficulty with proximity talks lay in designating mutually acceptable participants. He stood ready to assist in promoting the dialogue process.

The Secretary-General stated that he had continued to implement the programmes of humanitarian assistance to the Kampuchean people. Funded largely by voluntary contributions, they consisted mainly of operations within Kampuchea, at the border, and within Thailand. He noted with gratification that the number of Kampuchean refugees in Thailand had been reduced from the peak of some 175,000 in 1980 to some 21,000 as of 1 October 1985. He reiterated deep appreciation to the international community for its generous support of these humanitarian assistance programmes.

The Secretary-General remarked that recent diplomatic exchanges had improved the chances for progress towards the initiation of negotiations. He urged that those exchanges be pursued with a renewed vigour and sense of urgency and reiterated his own determination to continue exercising his good offices towards that end.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

The General Assembly, on 5 November 1985, adopted by recorded vote resolution 40/7.

The situation in Kampuchea

The General Assembly,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of General Assembly resolution 39/5,

Deploring that foreign armed intervention and occupation continue and that foreign forces have not been withdrawn from Kampuchea, thus causing continuing hostilities in that country and seriously threatening international peace and security,

Noting the continued and effective struggle waged against foreign occupation by the Coalition with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as President of Democratic Kampuchea,

Taking note of Economic and Social Council decision 1985/155 of 30 May 1985 on the right of peoples to self-determination and its application to peoples under colonial or alien domination or foreign occupation,

Greatly disturbed that the continued fighting and instability in Kampuchea have forced an additional large number of Kampucheans to flee to the Thai-Kampuchean border in search of food and safety,

Seriously concerned about reported demographic changes being imposed in Kampuchea by foreign occupation forces,

Convinced that, to bring about lasting peace in South-East Asia and reduce the threat to international peace and security, there is an urgent need for the international community to find a comprehensive political solution to the Kampuchean problem that will provide for the withdrawal of all foreign forces and ensure respect for the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and neutral and non-aligned status of Kampuchea, as well as the right of the Kampuchean people to self-determination free from outside interference,

Reiterating its conviction that, after the comprehensive political settlement of the Kampuchean question through peaceful means, the States of the South-East Asian region can pursue efforts to establish a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in South-East Asia so as to lessen international tensions and to achieve lasting peace in the region,

Reaffirming the need for all States to adhere strictly to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, which call for respect for the national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States, non-intervention and non-interference in the internal affairs of States, non-recourse to the threat or use of force and peaceful settlement of disputes,

3. Takes note with appreciation of the report of the Ad Hoc Committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea on its activities during 1984-1985 and requests that the Committee continue its work, pending the reconvening of the Conference;

8. Requests the Secretary-General to continue to consult with and assist the Conference and the Ad Hoc Committee and to provide them on a regular basis with the necessary facilities to carry out their functions;

9. Expresses its appreciation once again to the Secretary-General for taking appropriate steps in following the situation closely and requests him to continue to do so and to exercise his good offices in order to contribute to a comprehensive political settlement;

10. Expresses its deep appreciation once again to donor countries, the United Nations and its agencies and other humanitarian organizations, national and international, that have rendered relief assistance to the Kampuchean people, and appeals to them to continue to provide emergency assistance to those Kampucheans who are still in need, especially along the Thai-Kampuchean border and in the holding centres in Thailand;

11. Reiterates its deep appreciation to the Secretary-General for his efforts in co-ordinating humanitarian relief assistance and in monitoring its distribution, and requests him to intensify such efforts as are necessary;

12. Urges the States of South-East Asia, once a comprehensive political solution to the Kampuchean conflict is achieved, to exert renewed efforts to establish a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality in South-East Asia;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution;

15. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "The situation in Kampuchea".

In explanation of vote, Burkina Faso said that it had voted for the draft resolution, in keeping with its opposition to intervention by foreign forces in the internal affairs of another State and because of its desire to see peace restored among the South-East Asian States, but had reservations about the content of the fifth preambular paragraph. Ireland agreed with the general thrust of the resolution but said its vote did not imply agreement with the wording of that paragraph or a change in its position regarding Kampuchean representation. Brazil recorded reservations to the same paragraph because it could not subscribe to language that it said prejudged the outcome of the Kampuchean people's exercise of their right to determine their own destiny. 'Trinidad and Tobago and Sweden also expressed reservations about elements of the preambular paragraphs but agreed with the confirmation of the principles of sovereignty, self-determination and the withdrawal of foreign forces as the basis for a settlement to the Kampuchean conflict.

In consideration of its recognition of a clear need at the current juncture to give maximum support and encouragement to any genuine movement towards a political negotiated solution, Guyana said it would abstain.

Cuba held that the resolution was invalid since it was adopted without the presence in the United Nations of the genuine representative of the People's Republic of Kampuchea. The Lao People's Democratic Republic found the text a distortion of reality aimed at imposing on the People's Republic of Kampuchea a one-sided settlement. There was no fighting taking place in Kampuchea, it said, simply hotbeds of tension on the border due to terrorist activities of reactionary Khmer groups; nothing was said about the assistance being provided to those groups by certain circles hostile to the Kampuchean people, and the allegations of demographic change imposed on Kampuchea were based on dubious hearsay.

Morocco said its affirmative vote reaffirmed its support for the people of Democratic Kampuchea and other States of the region working to bring about a comprehensive solution with respect for basic Charter principles.

Participation and representation of Democratic Kampuchea in UN bodies

The question of Democratic Kampuchea's representation in United Nations bodies was again raised in 1985.

On 18 October, the Lao People's Democratic Republic conveyed a 17 October statement<sup>(57)</sup> from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, protesting the decision by the United Nations to allow what it called the genocidal Pol Pot clique, masquerading in the guise of the so-called "Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea", illegally to retain Kampuchea's seat in the United Nations by including in the agenda the so-called "Question of Kampuchea". The statement said the Pol Pot regime had been condemned by Kampucheans and all mankind, had no right to represent the Kampuchean people and should be expelled from the United Nations. The People's Republic said it was the sole genuine and legal representative of the Kampuchean people and any discussion at the United Nations without its presence constituted gross interference in its internal affairs and a flagrant violation of its independence and sovereignty.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic and Viet Nam issued a joint statement on 28 October, transmitted in a joint letter of the same day,<sup>(58)</sup> in which the two countries reaffirmed their position on the General Assembly's debate on the situation in Kampuchea, including their non-participation partly because of their support of the stand of the People's Republic of Kampuchea that discussions without its participation constituted interference in its internal affairs.

The validity of Democratic Kampuchea's credentials to the 1985 General Assembly was also questioned at an October meeting of the Credentials Committee.

The USSR opposed accepting the credentials of the representatives of what it termed so-called Democratic Kampuchea—a political ghost to which certain circles were attempting to give some semblance of material existence by allowing it to be represented. The Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, formed as a result of general elections, was exercising effective control over the entire country and its legitimate rights should be restored, the USSR said.

China felt that the General Assembly had taken correct decisions on the legitimacy of the credentials of Democratic Kampuchea, since the Coalition Government, headed by Norodom Sihanouk, was the sole legitimate Government of Kampuchea. Any attempt to bring the Heng Samrin régime, propped up by Viet Nam following its invasion of Kampuchea, into the United Nations would be an attempt to legalize aggression.

The United States stated that the credentials of the representatives of Democratic Kampuchea were in order and that the substance of the situation in the country would be debated at a later stage in an appropriate forum. The reference to popular elections could not obscure the fact that those elected were merely those brought in by Viet Nam when it had invaded the country. Canada believed that the Credentials Committee should concern itself with the technical aspects of documents; whatever it felt concerning the Coalition Government, the credentials of Democratic Kampuchea appeared to be in order.

Democratic Kampuchea's credentials were approved by virtue of General Assembly resolution 40/2 A, approving the first report<sup>(59)</sup> of the Credentials Committee.

International security in South-East Asia

A number of letters received by the United Nations in 1985 dealt with the general aspects of relations among the countries of South-East Asia.

In a letter of 18 January,<sup>(60)</sup> Viet Nam transmitted a communiqué issued at the close of the tenth conference of the Foreign Ministers of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Viet Nam (Ho Chi Minh City, 17 and 18 January). The countries reiterated their willingness to enter into negotiations for a solution encompassing: the withdrawal of Vietnamese volunteers from Kampuchea paired with exclusion of the Pol Pot clique, respect for the Kampuchean people's right to self-determination and the right to return to a life free from the threat of genocide, the holding by the Kampucheans of free general elections in the presence of foreign observers, building South-East Asia into a zone of peace and stability, respect by all external States of the national rights of South-East Asian countries, and the establishment of international guarantees and supervision of the implementation of the agreements.

Referring to their proposal to convene an international conference on peace in South-East Asia, to be attended by all States in the region and those outside directly concerned, the Ministers considered the best solution to be a negotiated one. They stated that the tension prevailing on the Kampuchean-Thai and Lao-Thai borders stemmed from the Thai expansionist policy and supported the policy of national unity of the People's Republic of Kampuchea. On 25 January,<sup>(61)</sup> Viet Nam forwarded a transcript of an interview by the Viet Nam News Agency with the country's Foreign Minister on 19 January on the results of the conference.

Malaysia, on 22 February,<sup>(62)</sup> transmitted a statement issued in Bangkok at an 11 February meeting of the ASEAN Foreign Ministers deploring the continuing military offensive launched by Viet Nam along the Thai-Kampuchean border which had resulted in renewed hardship and suffering for tens of thousands of displaced Kampucheans and Thai villagers. The Ministers reiterated their call on Viet Nam to seek a political settlement and for a direct dialogue between Viet Nam and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea.

On 15 February,<sup>(63)</sup> Viet Nam transmitted a statement of 14 February by a Foreign Ministry spokesman commenting on the ASEAN statement. Viet Nam said the ASEAN demand that Viet Nam talk with the Coalition Government was an attempt to legalize the country's disguised Pol-Potist leaders. Viet Nam believed that Kampuchea's internal affairs must be decided by the Kampuchean people. Viet Nam, Laos and Kampuchea, the spokesman said, supported dialogue with the ASEAN countries based on equality, mutual respect and consideration of each other's stand.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic transmitted several statements by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea or its spokesman. On 22 February,<sup>(64)</sup> it transmitted a statement of 20 February describing as a dangerous new step the appeal it said was made by the Thai Foreign Minister on 11 February calling on the United States, China and Western countries to increase military aid to the Pol Pot clique. The statement also rejected the Thai authorities' charges of violations of Thai territory and use of chemical weapons.

On 16 May,<sup>(65)</sup> Viet Nam transmitted a statement of 10 May by its Foreign Ministry rejecting as slanderous a statement attributed to Thai authorities that Viet Nam was planning to annex 17 Thai provinces in the north-east.

On 21 May,<sup>(66)</sup> the Lao representative transmitted a People's Republic of Kampuchea statement of 15 May also rejecting those allegations by the Thai authorities as part of an unrelenting campaign of slander against Kampuchea and Viet Nam. A 19 June statement, transmitted by the Lao representative on 15 July,<sup>(67)</sup> demanded that Thai authorities end their misleadingly termed "repatriation" of refugees who, it said, were used by Thai authorities, seasonally opening their borders to Pol Pot supporters and other reactionaries in the dry season, and driving them back in the rainy season to perpetrate crimes. Thailand, it added, should respond positively to the People's Republic of Kampuchea's proposals for direct or indirect negotiations. On 23 July,(68) the Lao People's Democratic Republic transmitted a 13 July message from the Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of the People's Republic of Kampuchea denouncing what was described as Thai authorities' manipulation of the Kampuchean refugee situation for their own strategic and pecuniary ends.

Viet Nam, on 8 July,(69) forwarded a statement of 5 July by its Foreign Ministry saying that a 3 July proposal by Thailand for indirect negotiations between Viet Nam and the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea was put forth when world public opinion was demanding elimination of that régime and was welcoming the proposal for dialogue, which Viet Nam supported, put forth on 18 January by the three Indo-Chinese countries.

The Philippines, in a letter of 17 June(70) on behalf of the Permanent Missions to the United Nations of the States members of ASEAN, transmitted a joint statement issued on 8 July at Kuala Lumpur by the ASEAN Foreign Ministers in which it was reported that the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea had informed them that it was ready to enter into exploratory indirect or "proximity" talks with Viet Nam, which could also be attended by representatives of the Vietnamese-installed Heng Samrin régime as part of the Vietnamese delegation, to discuss the basic elements of a comprehensive, political settlement: withdrawal of foreign forces from Kampuchea; establishment of a United Nations control and supervisory commission; national recognition; and organization of United Nations-supervised elections/exercise of self-determination. It called on Viet Nam to respond positively.

Thailand, on 26 July,(71) transmitted a statement of the same day by its Foreign Ministry urging Viet Nam to heed the ASEAN countries' call to respond positively to its proposal for indirect or proximity talks—and denying that its Foreign Minister had made a similar separate proposal—and to accept the reality of the Coalition Government of Democratic Kampuchea. Viet Nam's rejection of the proposal before it was delivered, the statement said, demonstrated its inflexibility.

Democratic Kampuchea, on 3 September,(72) transmitted a 28 August declaration of the Coalition Government's Council of Ministers endorsing the ASEAN proposal for proximity talks and urging Viet Nam not to delay in accepting it.

On 21 October,(73) Democratic Kampuchea transmitted a communiqué of 20 October, issued following a New York meeting of the Inner Cabinet of the Coalition Government, reaffirming the Cabinet's readiness to accept the ASEAN formula of proximity talks with Viet Nam and appealing to all peace-loving countries to continue to support the struggle of the Khmer people.

The Philippines, on behalf of the ASEAN countries, transmitted on 31 October(74) a letter of 9 October from the Chairman of ASEAN's Standing Committee reporting that Viet Nam had not responded positively to ASEAN's proposal for proximity talks with Democratic Kampuchea and calling for consistent and continued efforts by the United Nations to bring about a comprehensive political settlement.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic on 19 August(75) transmitted the text of a communiqué of the eleventh conference of the Foreign Ministers of Kampuchea, Laos and Viet Nam (Phnom Penh, 15 and 16 August), noting that a general understanding had emerged whereby a genuine dialogue had to be initiated to solve the question of peace and stability in South-East Asia and their proposals of 18 January provided a basis for such a dialogue. Regarding the ASEAN proposal for direct or indirect talks, the conference held it important to know who the interlocutors would be. It noted that the ASEAN States had nominated Indonesia as their representative and Indo-China had selected Viet Nam. It considered that Malaysia's proposal on proximity talks deserved examination. The conference also considered the time had come to resume China-Viet Nam talks towards normalizing relations. It was prepared to negotiate a treaty with Thailand based on mutual non-aggression, non-interference in internal affairs, respect for each other's sovereignty within existing borders, refusal to let one's territory be used against other countries, and peaceful coexistence.

By a letter of 6 December,(76) the Lao People's Democratic Republic transmitted copies of a book entitled Undeclared War against the people's Republic of Kampuchea, published by that country's Foreign Ministry in November.

On 9 December,(77) Thailand transmitted a statement of 22 November by its Foreign Ministry expressing the view that Viet Nam's claims that purported to subject the sea areas in the Gulf of Thailand and the Gulf of Tonkin to the régime of internal waters could not be justified on the basis of the applicable principles and rules of international law. Viet Nam's 1982 definition(78) of the baseline from which it measured its territorial sea and other maritime zones was also at variance with well-established rules of international law, it said, and claims(79) seeking to assert sovereignty over so-called "historical waters" in the two Gulfs and within the baselines were likewise rejected.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Following a discussion of the subject at two plenary meetings on 6 November, the General Assembly adopted that day, without vote, decision 40/408, by which it decided to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first (1986) session the agenda item "Question of peace, stability and co-operation in South-East Asia".

China-Viet Nam dispute

Between January and March 1985, the Secretary-General received several communications from China and Viet Nam, each charging the other with policies of annexation and aggressive acts along their common border and elsewhere.

China on 24 January(80) transmitted a Foreign Ministry statement of the day before asserting that since November Viet Nam had intensified its military provocations and incursions along the Sino-Vietnamese border, involving shelling, sneak attacks and armed incursions. In an appended background paper, China charged that Viet Nam was attempting to occupy Chinese territory, was causing heavy losses to local people's lives and property, and was dispatching spies to carry out sabotage activities.

On 10 January,(81) Viet Nam forwarded a communiqué of 25 December 1984 by the Commission for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists' and Hegemonists' War Crimes against Viet Nam which described alleged land-nibbling and shelling incidents along Viet Nam's northern border in November and December of that year, resulting in the killing and wounding of dozens of people and the destruction of houses and crops. In a statement of 18 January transmitted two days later,(82) Viet Nam's Ministry of Foreign Affairs described alleged land-grabbing attacks on Vietnamese territory between 15 and 17 January by Chinese troops. On 2 February, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry issued a statement, forwarded on 4 February,(83) condemning alleged acts of aggression—massing troops close to the border, stepped-up armed provocations—and warlike statements by China against Viet Nam.

China, on 19 February,(18) circulated Foreign Ministry statements of 6 and 18 February on the situation in Kampuchea and relations between China and Viet Nam. China stated that border tension would be relaxed only when Vietnamese troops stopped their armed provocation and intrusions (see also p. 223).

Viet Nam, in a letter of 4 March,(84) described the tense situation on the Sino-Vietnamese border as due to China's intensification of war preparations against Viet Nam; it asked the Secretary-General to exert his influence to contribute to halting these actions and to promote dialogue between the parties. On 11 March,(85) it forwarded an 8 March communiqué by its Commission for Investigation of Chinese Expansionists' and Hegemonists' War Crimes, charging that in 1984 China had reinforced its border garrisons, had escalated land-grabbing operations, and, together with the United States, had intensified spying, armed activities and psychological warfare to incite rebellions in Viet Nam. China, in a letter of 11 March,(86) stated that, while launching a frenzied offensive on the Thai-Kampuchean border, Viet Nam had intensified its military provocations along the Sino-Vietnamese border, bombarding villages inside China, shooting and kidnapping border inhabitants and dispatching secret agents into China's territory to sabotage production and economic installations.

Lao People's Democratic Republic-Thailand dispute

The Lao People's Democratic Republic and Thailand, between January and June 1985, transmitted to the Secretary-General a number of communications on their border dispute.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic, on 7 January,(37) transmitted a 5 January statement by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs, charging that Thai troops, stationed inside Lao territory, on 2 and 3 January, launched an attack aimed at encroaching on the area of three villages in Lao territory—proof, it said, that Thailand's 1984 statement(88) that it was undertaking to withdraw from the area of the villages was a cunning manoeuvre. On 30 April,(89) Viet Nam forwarded a Foreign Ministry statement of 20 April regarding Thailand's alleged hostile activities against the three villages since the beginning of April. Thailand's Ministry of Foreign Affairs issued a statement on 7 May,(90) denying the Vietnamese allegation that Thai troops violated Lao territory; such false charges, it said, could be refuted by the fact that Lao troops had opened fire against and made incursions into Thailand on 2 and 13 March and 3 April.

In letters sent on 31 May and 3 June(91) to the President of the Security Council and the Secretary-General, respectively, the Lao People's Democratic Republic rejected the 7 May charges as slanderous allegations, and charged that Thai police gunboats had entered Lao territorial waters on 18 and 19 May, Expressing scorn for manoeuvres aimed at camouflaging criminal activities by Thailand's ultrarightists, the Lao letter attached a Foreign Ministry statement of 25 April charging acts of aggression committed on 3, 9, 14, 18 and 22 April in the area of the three disputed villages and in other districts.

The Lao Foreign Ministry, by a 6 June statement transmitted the following day,(92) proposed to Thailand that it appoint a delegation to resume talks with the Lao Government delegation in Bangkok or Vientiane to solve problems of mutual concern, in order to improve and develop friendly relations between the two countries, including issues of guaranteeing security along the border, promoting implementation of agreements between them, and discussing economic, cultural, trade and other relations. The proposal was supported by Viet Nam in a Foreign Ministry statement of 8 June transmitted on 13 June,(93) which also demanded that Thailand respond positively.

Thailand, on 14 June,(94) observed that the Lao proposal for resuming talks was accompanied by slanderous accusations against Thailand. The Thai Government was always prepared to respond positively to a serious proposal for talks to promote economic, social and cultural relations, but the introduction of extraneous issues into the proposed bilateral talks cast serious doubt on the sincerity and readiness of the Lao Government to engage in meaningful talks. Thailand said that the machinery for promoting Thai-Lao relations had been available since a proposal by Thailand in a note by the Foreign Minister of December 1984, reaffirming that since 13 October 1984 there had been no Thai armed forces in the area of the three villages, and stating that, in order for the two countries to co-operate in normalizing their relations, the response from the Lao Government had to be continuously positive, forsaking efforts to intervene in Thailand's internal affairs through attempts to divide the Thai leaders, to create division between the Government and people, and to destroy its image through false accusation. Cessation of such activities would help create an atmosphere which would lead to normalization of relations.

Western and south-western Asia

Afghanistan situation and Afghanistan-Pakistan armed incidents

The General Assembly, in November 1985, again took up the situation in Afghanistan and its implications for international peace and security. By resolution 40/12, it again called for the immediate withdrawal of foreign troops, reaffirmed the Afghan people's right to determine their own form of government, renewed its appeal for relief assistance for the Afghan refugees and requested the Secretary-General to continue his efforts to promote a political solution.

The Secretary-General's Personal Representative travelled to the area in May and met with officials from Afghanistan and Pakistan. In June and August, the Foreign Ministers of both countries met with the Personal Representative in Geneva in proximity talks and established grounds for negotiating a solution to the situation.

Communications. The majority of communications addressed to the Secretary-General during 1985 relating to the situation in Afghanistan concerned allegations by both Pakistan and Afghanistan of violations of airspace and territory, shellings and other attacks by one against the other. Many of Afghanistan's communications reported on meetings between its Director or Officer-in-Charge of the First Political Department or the Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs and the Chargé d'affaires of Pakistan's Embassy in Kabul when the latter was summoned to Afghanistan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

In a letter of 2 January,(1) Afghanistan said that claims(2) by Pakistan authorities that Afghan aircraft entered Pakistan's airspace on 22 and 25 December 1984 were false. In a Foreign Ministry statement of 2 January, transmitted on 4 January,(3) Afghanistan accused Pakistan of conducting shellings from 24 to 29 December on its Barikot region, wounding 11 soldiers and eight civilians. Afghanistan warned that if such aggressions were not stopped immediately its security forces would resort to firm and reciprocal action. Afghanistan, in a letter of 7 January,(4) described a protest lodged that day of an armed band, 250 strong, including 50 Pakistan militia, which had entered Afghanistan from Pakistan on 28 December and repeatedly shelled a village and a frontier post, leaving a number of victims.

Pakistan, on 7 January,(5) reported that on 6 January four Afghan aircraft had intruded into Pakistan airspace, dropping bombs and firing rockets. Pakistan also rejected as baseless the allegations that there had been firing across the border towards Barikot from 24 to 29 December.

In a letter of 10 January,(6) Afghanistan transmitted a Foreign Ministry statement protesting three alleged shellings of the Barikot region on 5 and 6 January which resulted in the deaths of six civilians and three military personnel and the injuring of 14. In a letter of 14 January,(7) Afghanistan reported its formal denial the day before of Pakistan's charge of an Afghan air attack on 6 January and charged that on 10 January personnel wearing Pakistan frontier militia uniforms had participated in shellings on the residential areas in Chamkani and Bangash resulting in civilian and military loss of life.

Pakistan, on 10 January,(8) reported what it called two serious violations of its airspace and territory on 7 and 8 January, when it said three Afghan aircraft dropped two bombs which failed to explode in the Domandi area and four bombs in the Chitral district. Pakistan also rejected as false Afghanistan's allegations of a 28 December incursion. Pakistan's charges were rejected and condemned in an Afghan Foreign Ministry announcement of 15 January.(9) Pakistan, on 15 January,(10) claimed that on 11 January seven Afghan aircraft violated Pakistan's airspace in the Chitral district, dropping 12 bombs and firing rockets. At the same time, it rejected Afghanistan's charges of attacks by Pakistan on 5, 6 and 10 January. Afghanistan, in a 19 January-statement transmitted on 22 January,(11) denied what it called Pakistan's imaginary and baseless claims.

On 24 and 29 January,(12) Pakistan charged that on 21, 22 and 23 January Afghan aircraft had dropped six bombs in the Arandu area, at the same time rejecting as baseless an allegation by Afghanistan, whose protest was reported in a letter of 29 January,(13) that Pakistan armed forces had fired across the border towards Barikot between 19 and 21 January, resulting in 16 deaths and considerable damage to dwellings and two helicopters.

A letter from Afghanistan of 7 February(14) transmitted a note that had been presented to China on 31 January, protesting China's provision of arms and arms training to counter-revolutionary bands in Afghanistan and in counter-revolutionary camps, some in Pakistan, some of which had been moved to China. Afghanistan demanded that China stop its hostile actions, armed aggression and intervention in Afghanistan's internal affairs. China, on 19 February,(15) rejected the contents of Afghanistan's protest note as sheer fabrication. The Afghan question was entirely the result of the invasion and occupation of the country by foreign troops, it said. Afghan authorities were attempting to shift onto China and other countries responsibility for the continued presence of those troops which had impeded the implementation of resolutions on the issue adopted at six sessions of the General Assembly.

Pakistan, on 7 February,(16) charged that on 5 February four Afghan aircraft violated Pakistan airspace in the Arandu area and fired 20 rockets.

Afghanistan, on 12 February,(17) rejected the charges, and those of a 23 January air attack, as groundless accusations designed to conceal Pakistan's own repeated aggressions. Afghanistan, in a letter of 14 February,(18) reported delivery of a protest note the day before condemning the continuing and escalating number of raids against the residential areas of Barikot (where a helicopter was fired on on 7 February), Bangash (hit by some 200 rounds on 5, 7 and 8 February) and Chamkani, which had resulted in the deaths of a large number of people, including women and children, as well as in material losses.

Pakistan, on 19 February,(19) rejected as false Afghanistan's charges of raids by Pakistan armed forces from 5 to 8 February and reported what it termed a serious violation of its airspace and territory on 11 February when, it charged, two bombs were dropped on its territory near Kharlachi from three Afghan aircraft. Afghanistan rejected those charges on 19 February.(20) Afghanistan, on 27 February,(21) submitted a protest note it had lodged on 25 February, charging that Pakistan had recently expanded its aggression, and that, in addition to repeated shellings—on the Barikot area on 18 February, for instance—it had armed and dispatched murderous bandits for raids into Afghanistan, including a 400-man attack on the Barikot garrison on 23 February.

Pakistan, on 1 March,(22) rejected Afghanistan's 25 February protest, saying that the frequent repetition of baseless charges reflected Afghanistan's attempt to blame developments within the country on Pakistan. On 13 March,(23) Pakistan alleged two violations of its airspace on 7 and 12 March.

Afghanistan charged, on 18 March(24) expanded armed raids and provocations by Pakistan military units, including heavy-weapons firing and an attack on 6 March on the Barikot garrison. It rejected on 18 March an allegation that it had bombed and rocketed Pakistan territory on 12 and 13 March, reported in a letter of 19 March.(25)

Pakistan, on 19 March,(26) reported violations of its airspace and territory on 13 March, when Afghan aircraft were said to have dropped 37 bombs and fired rockets in the Arandu area; on 14 March when five bombs were reported dropped and one Afghan refugee and one Pakistani were killed; and on 16 March when two bombs were dropped. Concurrently, Pakistan rejected as baseless Afghanistan's charge of firing on Barikot on 6 March. Further such violations were reported by Pakistan in a letter of 25 March,(27) referring to bombing incidents said to have occurred near Arandu on 18 and 19 March. Pakistan noted its rejection, conveyed on 23 March to Afghan authorities, of charges of shelling attacks on 12, 13 and 14 March near Barikot and attacks on an Afghan border post at Torkham on 8, 14 and 15 March, described in a 25 March letter from Afghanistan.(28) That letter conveyed a 20 March, protest against continued heavy-weapons firing on Afghan frontier residential localities by frontier forces of Pakistan, resulting in a number of deaths. In recent months, it charged, the residential areas of the Barikot district had sustained attacks 29 times. Afghanistan also rejected as groundless Pakistan's allegations concerning the 14 March air attacks.

A letter from Afghanistan of 28 March(29) transmitted a statement of 25 March protesting Pakistan's expansion of its propaganda against Afghanistan, levelling baseless charges of bombing on 16, 18 and 19 March, it said.

Afghanistan, on 15 April,(30) charged that from 15 March to 9 April, residential areas of the Barikot district came under heavy fire 13 times. Women and children were killed in the attacks on 8 and 9 April, among others, residential property was destroyed and crops lost. Afghanistan again warned of the dangerous consequences if Pakistan did not stop its interference. It called Pakistan's charges of a bombing south-east of Arandu on 11 April groundless, a rejection it reiterated on 18 April.(31) Also on 15 April,(32) Afghanistan reported a protest it had lodged the day before of a Pakistan violation of its airspace in the Torkham area on 12 April and denied charges of an Afghan bombing in the Arandu and Darah areas on 14 and 15 April, rejecting the claims as malicious and groundless. On 18 April,(33) Pakistan charged that: on 10 April four Afghan aircraft dropped nine bombs in the Arandu area; on 11 April six aircraft dropped two bombs in the same area; on 14 April two more; on 15 April four more bombs and 20 rockets; and on 16 April two aircraft dropped two more bombs. Pakistan rejected as false Afghanistan's charges in its letters of 15 April.

Afghanistan, on 22 April,(34) reported its rejection on 20 April of Pakistan's charge of a 16 April attack as baseless and designed to increase tensions. In a letter of 25 April,(35) Afghanistan reported its denouncement on 22 April of a violation of its airspace by a Pakistan military aircraft on 17 April. On 29 April,(36) Afghanistan transmitted a message of its Loya Jirgah, or Grand Assembly, held in Kabul from 23 to 25 April. The message declared that the traditional friendly Afghan-Soviet relations were in full accord with national interests and expressed the Assembly's determination to defend Afghanistan from counter-revolutionary forces, trained by United States, Iranian, Chinese and Pakistan instructors, through mobilizing all of Afghanistan's people, strengthening its armed forces and safeguarding its borders.

Pakistan, on 26 April,(37) reported a violation of its airspace on 23 April by four Afghan aircraft which it said dropped two bombs south-east of Arandu. Pakistan also rejected as totally false Afghanistan's allegation of a 17 April airspace violation. On 2 May,(38) Pakistan alleged intrusions and bombings of the area around Chitral on 25, 26 and 29 April. These were denied by Afghanistan on 30 April, as reported in a letter of 1 May,(39) and on 6 May.(40) Allegations by Pakistan of an Afghan overflight on 3 May were rejected by Afghanistan on 8 May.(41)

Pakistan, on 9 May,(42) reported that on 3 May four Afghan aircraft dropped a bomb and 20 rockets in the Arandu area and that on 5 May six aircraft, in two separate incidents, committed similar violations.

Afghanistan charged on 9 May, as reported in a letter of 13 May,(43) that 12 Afghan and 12 Soviet military personnel were kidnapped by Afghan counter-revolutionaries and were imprisoned in a military camp in Pakistan controlled by Pakistan authorities. In an escape attempt towards the end of April, they had taken over the camp's ammunition depot and asked to be returned to Afghanistan or to their embassies in Islamabad. After refusing to surrender, all the captives were killed in an explosion of the depot during an attack on the camp by Afghan counter-revolutionaries, in which, Afghanistan said, Pakistan soldiers participated. Afghanistan protested this incident and the imprisonment of Afghan military personnel and citizens in Pakistan as contrary to international law, and demanded that Pakistan punish those responsible.

In a letter of 14 May,(44) Afghanistan reported charges it made the day before of repeated shellings by Pakistan with heavy weapons of the residential area of Barikot district on 8, 19 and 21 April, which resulted in death or injury to military personnel and local residents; it also rejected Pakistan's charges of overflights on 5 May.

On 20 May,(45) Afghanistan reported delivery of a note verbale of 12 May to the Kabul Embassy of the Federal Republic of Germany, bringing to its attention that an organization based in the Federal Republic had set up a short-wave radio station in Pakistan called the "Voice of Free Afghanistan" to support the Afghan counter-revolution. Afghanistan lodged a strong complaint against what it called open interference in its internal affairs.

Pakistan, in a letter of 23 May,(46) reported that it had, on 14 May, rejected as baseless Afghan allegations that it had carried out shellings against Barikot on 9, 10 and 11 May. Afghanistan, on 3 June,(47) said it had rejected on 2 June charges of airspace violations on 21, 26, 27 and 28 May and shelling of the Landikotal area on 24 May. Pakistan, on 4 June,(48) reported that, on 29 May, four Afghan jet aircraft allegedly fired rockets at and dropped two bombs near a refugee camp at Badini, and, on 31 May, Afghan aircraft dropped 15 bombs on a village, killing 11 persons and 25 livestock, wounding 32 persons and destroying houses. Afghanistan, on 10 June,(49) reported charges lodged on 6 June that Pakistan was responsible for shellings on 1 June on residential areas of Barikot, killing two and wounding three others, and, on the same day, firing on Afghan helicopters. The following day,(50) Afghanistan denied that Afghan aircraft had violated airspace over Chitral and Quetta on 3 and 4 June.

In a letter of 11 June,(51) Pakistan charged that on 7 June four Afghan aircraft intruded into the Arandu area dropping four bombs, firing rockets and seriously injuring one person. It rejected as false allegations that it had fired on Barikot on 31 May resulting in two deaths and a damaged helicopter. Afghanistan, on 24 June,(52) reported that Pakistan had been informed on 22 June that it considered Pakistan's allegations of airspace violations on 7 and 9 June and firing on the Spinboldak frontier post as devoid of truth. Pakistan, on 25 June,(53) reported a 22 June incident in which Afghanistan allegedly fired artillery from across the border, killing three civilians in Chaman, injuring four and starting fires. Afghanistan rejected this allegation on 30 June, as it noted in a letter of 1 July.(54)

A letter of 9 July(55) contained a Pakistan charge that from Afghanistan on 2 July four rounds of artillery were fired, killing one Afghan refugee girl.

Afghanistan, in a letter of 11 July,(56) reported a 10 July charge that the Spinboldak district was fired on on 3 July and on the next day Pakistan fired 300 artillery shells at the Khima area, killing one person and injuring three. It also rejected Pakistan's claim of an attack on 2 July. Pakistan, on 16 July,(57) rejected as baseless Afghanistan's charge of responsibility for those attacks. Afghanistan reported on 23 July(58) that on 21 July it had rejected claims by Pakistan of air aggression at Parachinar on 12 July and rocket firing on Landikotal on 16 July. In a letter of 31 July,(59) Afghanistan noted its protest lodged on 29 July that Pakistan had machine-gunned the Arandu residential area on 25 July which resulted in one death; two persons were injured. It also denied that an Afghan aircraft had violated airspace over Waziristan on 16 July. According to a 5 August letter from Pakistan,(60) charges by Afghanistan of attacks on Barikot the last week in July had been rejected on 4 August as false. Those charges, having been lodged by Afghanistan on 3 August, were contained in a letter of 9 August,(61) which reported that on 26 July four aircraft of the Pakistan air force overflew Afghan territory and that on 26, 27 and 29 July Pakistan military forces opened fire on residential areas of Barikot, killing three persons, injuring four and destroying several homes. Pakistan, on 14 August,(62) reported that on 10 August 13 rounds of artillery were allegedly fired into Pakistan south of Parachinar, killing one Afghan refugee; a protest had been lodged on 11 August. Afghanistan rejected these charges on 14 August, as it reported on 16 August.(63)

Pakistan, on 20 August,(64) charged that, on the day before, four Afghan aircraft dropped eight bombs on Khewas village in the Parachinar area, killing eight nationals and injuring 12. Afghanistan rejected these charges as false on 21 August, as noted in a letter of 22 August.(65) Pakistan described in a letter of 30 August(66) Afghan shelling on 26 August of Kurram Agency and south of Arawali, killing two persons. On 4 September,(67) Pakistan noted its protest lodged the day before charging that on 24 August Afghan shelling of the Teri Mangal area killed one person, and on 27 August shells fired into the Pekar Kotal area injured another. Afghanistan, on 8 September, as reported in a letter of 11 September,(68) rejected Pakistan's 30 August and 4 September allegations and called on it to end its fallacious charges.

According to Pakistan on 13 September,(69) four Afghan aircraft fired on the village of Faqiran Kalli on 9 September killing two and injuring 10, and on 11 September dropped six bombs and fired rockets at the border post of Punnu; a strong protest was lodged. Afghanistan rejected the allegations as provocative on 19 September.(70) On 23 September,(71) Afghanistan said attacks had taken place on 7 and 8 September south of Khost during which it said 50 members of the Pakistan militia forces were killed and 80 injured.

Transmitted in a letter of 23 September(72) was a message to the Secretary-General from the representatives who participated in the High Jirgah (Assembly) of the frontier tribes (Kabul, 14 September), stating that the Pashtun tribes wanted peace and security in their areas and supported the peaceful policies of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan, and attaching great hopes to the results of the sixth round of the Geneva peace talks on Afghanistan; the message said that they would foil the expansionist plans of the United States and China in the area as well as the reactionary régimes of Pakistan and Iran.

On 30 September,(73) Afghanistan charged that, on 22 September, 150 Pakistan militia penetrated into the area of Zhorah; on the same day, the residential areas of Barikot district received mortar and machine-gun fire, injuring three residents and destroying four houses. On 24 September heavy shellings there left four dead and five houses destroyed; on the same day firing on the frontier posts of Shamshad left two soldiers dead and two injured. Pakistan, on 30

September,(74) said it had rejected as baseless, on 17 and 24 September, an Afghan charge that on 6, 7 and 8 September Pakistan militia had attacked areas south of Khost. Afghanistan, on 7 October,(75) said that on 30 September the residential area of the Barikot district was subjected to heavy fire, leaving eight civilians dead and six houses destroyed. Pakistan, in a letter of 11 October,(76) noted that it had rejected as false, on 1 and 7 October, Afghanistan's allegations of attacks on 23, 25 and 30 September on Zhawara, Barikot and Shamshad Picquet. Afghanistan, on 14 October,(77) charged that from 1 to 4 October heavy shelling was conducted on the Barikot district; 14 residents died and 11 were injured.

On 15 October,(78) Iran stated that while its Government supported an early solution to the situation in Afghanistan that would meet the legitimate aspirations and interests of the Afghan people, it held that an active participation of the true representatives of the Afghan people was an inherent factor in the validity and legitimacy of such negotiations.

Pakistan, on 28 October,(79) reported protests lodged on 15, 20 and 28 October charging that on 14 October an Afghan round of artillery landed near Teri Mangal killing a woman, and that mortar shells were also fired towards the frontier corps of Havildar Picquet and Koh-E-Noor village. Pakistan also alleged that on 19 October artillery in the Chakhai district killed a woman and injured a man and that on 27 October Afghan artillery landed near Teri Mangal killing nine Afghan refugees and injuring three. Pakistan rejected as totally false the allegations of firing from the Pakistan side on the Barikot area on 1 and 4 October.

Shellings on the Barikot district on 16 October, which resulted in the death of one person and injury to 13, were brought to Pakistan's attention on 20 October, as stated in a 21 October letter from Afghanistan.(80) It rejected as baseless Pakistan's charges of shelling in its Mangal district and Koh-E-Noor area.

Afghanistan, in a letter of 28 October,(81) transmitted a statement by its Minister for Foreign Affairs commenting on a 24 October speech by the President of the United States to the United Nations. Afghanistan said the speech was meant to provoke further and instigate acts of armed aggression perpetrated against it from Pakistan while putting additional hurdles in the way of negotiations between the two countries. In a letter of 6 November,(82) Afghanistan transmitted a statement from its Government in reaction to the United States speech. The statement protested what it called malicious interpretations of the events and realities in Afghanistan and accused the United States of supporting aggression towards Afghanistan, including the allocation of more than $1.5 billion in recent years for training and equipping counter-revolutionaries. Afghanistan said that it enjoyed the support of its people and declared that normalization of the situation in the country was possible only through cessation by the United States and its followers of assistance to the counter-revolutionaries and through the guaranteed termination of the undeclared war and all forms of intervention in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Afghanistan, on 8 November,(83) forwarded information on aspects of Pakistan's policy regarding Afghan fugitives in Pakistan. Afghanistan said that Pakistan was inflating their numbers, using their camps to recruit bandits, and using the fugitive question to receive so-called humanitarian assistance in the form of weapons, equipment and money from reactionary countries and some organizations. It condemned the efforts of the Pakistan authorities to create obstacles to the return of Afghans residing in Pakistan in violation of international law.

Pakistan, in a letter of 15 November,(84) reported that its protests had been lodged on 7 and 13 November that on 6 November Afghan small-arms fire towards Arandu resulted in injury to one civilian, and on 12 November artillery fire in the Shilman area killed one girl. Pakistan said its rejection as totally false of an Afghan allegation that on 16 October its troops had fired rockets and missiles on the Barikot area had been conveyed on 21 October. Afghanistan rejected Pakistan's charges on 11 and 19 November, as noted in letters of 15 November(85) and 20 November.(86)

Afghanistan, in a letter of 29 November,(87) transmitted the text of a 19 November Declaration of its Revolutionary Council in which, among other policies, the goals of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan were elaborated. These included defending Afghanistan's independence, national sovereignty and territorial integrity, consolidation of the achievements of its revolution and ensuring vast participation of the people in the anti-imperialist national democratic transformations and the transformation of the country into a developed State.

Pakistan, in a 17 December letter,(88) reported that on 12 December Afghan artillery landed in the Nawa Pass area and on 13 December Afghan artillery near Pewar Pass killed four women and injured a child, against which a protest was lodged on 15 December. In a letter of 24 December,(89) Afghanistan said it had charged on 22 December that on 11 and 14 December helicopters and reconnaissance aircraft penetrated into the Ganjgul Pass area, and on 12 December two more helicopters flew over the Nawah Pass and opened fire on Sarkani.

On 31 December,(90) Afghanistan transmitted a translation of a resolution adopted on 21 November at the sixteenth plenum of the Central Committee of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan. It assigned various tasks to party organs and government departments towards expanding the social pillars of the revolution, strengthening the armed forces, developing the economy and normalizing the situation in the country.

Report of the Secretary-General. Pursuant to a 1984 General Assembly resolution,(91) the Secretary-General submitted in October 1985 a report(92) regarding the Afghanistan situation. He stated that he had pursued with determination his efforts to promote the search for a political solution to the situation because he had received repeated assurances that these were strongly supported by the international community. There was also a growing conviction on both sides that a negotiated settlement was the only possible way to achieve peace in Afghanistan.

Pakistan had requested postponement of the round of talks scheduled for February, as elections had been scheduled in that country. The Secretary-General's Personal Representative, Diego Cordovez, travelled to the area from 25 to 31 May. He met with Pakistan's President, Prime Minister and Foreign Minister at Islamabad and with Afghanistan's President and Foreign Minister at Kabul. Upon his return, he briefed the Permanent Representative of Iran in New York.

As a result of the negotiations conducted during these visits, an understanding had been reached between the parties concerned that a political settlement should include a bilateral agreement on non-interference and non-intervention; a declaration on international guarantees; a bilateral agreement on the voluntary return of refugees; an instrument setting out the interrelationships between each of those instruments; and the solution of the question of the withdrawal of foreign troops in accordance with an agreement to be concluded between Afghanistan and the USSR.

A subsequent round of talks was held at Geneva from 20 to 24 June. During these talks, the formulation of two draft bilateral agreements was virtually completed. One covered the principles of mutual relations, in particular non-interference and non-intervention, and the other contained arrangements for the voluntary return of refugees. A declaration on international guarantees was also concluded and the texts sent to the Governments of the United States and the USSR, the designated guarantors, for their comments.

The interlocutors met again at Geneva from 27 to 30 August. The Secretary-General noted that Afghanistan's position was that the instrument on interrelationships should be negotiated in direct talks between the parties, while Pakistan considered that a change in the format of the negotiations was not yet justified. The Secretary-General stated that the matter could not be resolved and a draft instrument on interrelationships could not be considered. The interlocutors agreed, however, to hold another round of talks from 16 to 20 December.

On 9 September, the written comments received from each of the designated guarantors were transmitted to the other. The Government of Iran was kept informed of the discussions.

The Secretary-General observed that the political import underlying the position of each side could not be underestimated. He hoped that the parties involved would bear in mind the overriding advantages for the peoples of the region of an effective settlement.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Against Afghanistan, Angola, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, Ethiopia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Madagascar, Mongolia, Poland, Syrian Arab Republic, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, Viet Nam.

Abstaining: Algeria, Benin, Cape Verde, Congo, Cyprus, Finland, Guinea-Bissau, India, Iraq, Mali, Nicaragua, Sao Tome and Principe.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya said it voted against the resolution because it did not believe it would help in solving the problem. Rather, it believed that the Afghan people should have an opportunity to choose the régime they wanted and needed without foreign intervention. The Syrian Arab Republic voted against the text on the basis of the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of States; the current discussion, it said, implied interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs.

Iran said it had reservations about the eighth preambular paragraph; no matter how successful the talks might be, they were devoid of validity because of the absence of the Afghan people, the main party to the negotiations. What were usually described in oversimplified terms as the internal affairs of Afghanistan, Iran said, did not seem to be so internal; 2 million Afghans who had taken refuge in Iran indicated that the overflow of these internal affairs had been affecting others considerably.

Because it considered the principle that States must refrain from the threat or use of force against any other State to be of universal validity and not subject to interpretations or exceptions, Mexico said it firmly supported the resolution and hoped that foreign troops would be speedily withdrawn.

The USSR said some countries had tried to use the discussion to camouflage the undeclared war they had been waging against Afghanistan, passing over in silence what their Governments were doing to undermine and overthrow the people's revolutionary system, arming and directing those who were destroying schools and were responsible for the deaths of hundreds of civilians, and preventing the Government from developing the economy and raising the standards of living of the people. They were trying to use the United Nations to interfere in the internal affairs of that country, the USSR said.

Afghanistan said it had consistently objected to the inclusion of the artificial question of Afghanistan on the agenda, firmly rejected any discussion of its internal matters in any international forum, and held that the resolution, whose submission was a gross violation of the Charter, would in no way be binding on Afghanistan. The sponsors had arrogated to themselves the right to advise Afghanistan on its form of socio-economic and political system and had fabricated numbers of refugees grossly at variance with the real ones. Afghanistan stated emphatically that the limited military contingent of the Soviet Union in Afghanistan was there at the explicit request and wish of its lawful Government. The debate and resolution could have harmful consequences for the prospects of negotiation, it said.

Iran-Iraq armed conflict

In the continuing hostilities between Iran and Iraq, communications from the two countries focused on violations of a 12 June 1984 undertaking(1) to refrain from attacks on purely civilian populations, the treatment of prisoners of war and interference with navigation. Iran also charged use of chemical weapons and an attack on its nuclear power plant.

In January, the Secretary-General dispatched a mission to investigate the conditions in prisoner-of-war camps in both countries; the mission's report was considered by the Security Council in March. He dispatched a medical specialist to hospitals in Europe to examine Iranian patients who were suffering from injuries allegedly caused by chemical weapons. The Security Council issued a declaration deploring the use of such weapons.

The Secretary-General reported on a visit he made to both countries in April and on efforts to promote a negotiated settlement to the conflict.

The General Assembly did not discuss at its 1985 session the agenda item on the consequences of the prolongation of the conflict, but deferred consideration to its resumed session in 1986.

The Assembly, the Economic and Social Council and the Commission on Human Rights expressed deep concern over the situation of human rights in Iran.

Communications (January-9 April). United Nations inspection teams stationed in Teheran and Baghdad were asked by the respective countries in January to investigate incidents of alleged violations of the 12 June 1984 undertaking to refrain from deliberate military attacks on purely civilian population centres. The teams had been set up in the two capitals to verify compliance. Charges of violations of this agreement drew several exchanges of communications during the year.

On 5 January 1985, the head of the inspection team in Teheran was requested by the Government to inspect the villages of Bardieh, Dehlavieh and Alavaneh, which Iran said had been subjected to Iraqi air attacks the day before. The Secretary-General forwarded the report(2) of the inspection carried out on 7 and 8 January, reviewing the procedures and findings of the team. The team concluded that Iran's allegations were credible. All three villages, which were civilian population centres, appeared to have been subjected to an aerial attack on the claimed date, although, in view of the relative proximity to Alavaneh of a military installation, the team was unable to determine whether that village itself had been the intended target.

What it described as Iraq's repeated violations of the June 1984 agreement were denounced in a 24 January letter from the Foreign Minister of Iran,(3) in which Iran also stated that it remained committed to full observance of the agreement.

Iraq requested an inspection of alleged shellings on the villages of Al-Jawaber and Saregah by Iranian forces on 26 January. The inspection was carried out on 28 January by the team in Baghdad and its report was contained in a note by the Secretary-General.(4) On the basis of the evidence examined, the team was unable to state that a deliberate attack on a purely civilian population centre occurred on 26 January.

Iran's Foreign Minister, by a letter of 9 February,(5) said Iraq's resort to unsubstantiated claims against Iran, in addition to manipulation of the United Nations inspection team in Baghdad, could not be considered as an excuse for the full-fledged violation of the June 1984 agreement, and charged Iraq with air attacks on civilian areas on 3 and 5 February.

On 8 February,(6) Iraq's Foreign Ministry rejected allegations made that day by Iran's President that Iraq was shelling Iranian cities. Iraq said it would not resort to shelling civilian centres except to retaliate for such actions. Iran responded on 19 February,(7) saying that Iraq's charges, which the investigation teams had proved to be lies, had disclosed the country's true criminal nature. If Iraq continued shelling Iranian civilian centres, Iran was left with no option but to retaliate strongly. Iraq, in a letter of the same day,(8) said it remained committed to the letter and spirit of the June 1984 agreement.

Iraq commented on the 7/8 January inspection of the team in Teheran in a letter of 21 February.(9) Despite the team's conclusion that the villages of Bardieh and Dehlavieh were purely civilian centres, Iran had been using these and other villages as assembly areas for concentrating its forces as a point of departure for attacks on Iraq, in violation of the 1984 agreement and the 1949 (fourth) Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War.

The Security Council President, on 5 March,(10) after consultations with Council members, issued the following statement:

"As President of the Security Council, I feel it my duty to express alarm over reports that the Governments of the Islamic Republic of Iran and of Iraq are attacking or preparing to attack civilian areas. I appeal to both Governments to exercise restraint and to continue to honour their undertakings to the Secretary-General, made last June, not to attack civilian targets which, until now, have saved thousands of innocent lives."

Iraq's Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs responded to the Council President's appeal in a letter of 6 March.(11) Iraq offered its assurance that it had adhered to the June agreement and charged that Iran had violated it in attacks on the city of Basra on 5 March, carried out on the grounds that Iraq had bombed areas within Iran; Iraq said the bombarded areas were not covered by the June agreement. In a letter of 5 March,(12) Iraq had accused Iran of shelling Basra that day with concentrated artillery fire. Iran's Foreign Minister the same day,(13) said that on 4 March two Iraqi jet fighters had attacked Ahwaz, leaving 11 civilians dead and 25 injured. An aerial attack on Bushehr on the same day had resulted in damage to the nuclear reactor installation in that city. In spite of its sincere attempts to preserve the authority of the June 1984 agreement, Iran said, as of that moment it would assume a retaliatory stance vis-à-vis all such Iraqi attacks, although the inhabitants of Iraqi cities would be informed prior to retaliation so they might evacuate.

On 6 March (14) Iraq said it had requested the United Nations mission stationed in Iraq to visit Basra to investigate the crimes of the Iranian bombardment, but had been informed that Iranian authorities were hindering the mission's task.

Iran, on 8 March,(15) transmitted a message from its Foreign Minister in response to an appeal by the Secretary-General of 6 March to Iran and Iraq to refrain from violating the June 1984 agreement. Iran charged that Iraq had recently intensified its attacks against civilian areas, for instance, Ahwaz and Bushehr on 4 March. Expecting international organizations to take effective measures to stop these attacks, Iran had refrained from retaliating, it said. However, in view of the absence of such international action, after the lapse of a 24-hour warning period, Iran was forced to target the cities of Dezful, Abadan, Sar-e-Pol-e Zahab and Masjid Solayman from the air and by missiles in a limited action intended to forewarn Iraq from continuing its attacks.

The Secretary-General, in a message(16) of 9 March to the Presidents of Iran and Iraq, declared that he was dismayed that an appeal he had made on 6 March had not brought a halt to the waves of attacks on both sides, each claiming to be acting in retaliation. Whatever the provocation, he said, the attacks must stop to spare further bloodshed of innocent civilians, and he called on both Governments to cease all attacks on purely civilian populations by 2359 hours GMT on 11 March 1985.

Iraq, on 10 March,(17) transmitted a letter from its Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs setting forth its view with respect to the Secretary-General's message. Based on Iran's conduct in the situation, Iraq said that, in spite of its desire to comply with the Secretary-General's appeal, it could not leave matters ambivalent and fluid so that violations might recur. Iraq urged the Secretary-General to establish direct contacts with authorized representatives of the two parties to draw up agreed principles, rules and guarantees for an agreement to prevent deliberate bombardment of purely civilian population centres and for establishing a modality for tackling other matters. Iran responded to the Secretary-General's message in a letter of 10 March,(18) stating that the appeal came at a time when Iraq had continued its missile attacks, aerial bombardments and artillery fire against several cities, inflicting great loss of life and property among Iran's civilian population. Iran said that, as always, it was willing to respect its June 1984 commitment and comply with the Secretary-General's latest appeal provided that Iraq also withheld attacks against Iranian civilians; it pointed to the need for effective measures against a violation of the renewed agreement.

On 12 March (19) Iraq claimed that on that day Iran began to launch an attack across the Hur-Al-Hoveizeh marsh. Iran, in a letter of the same day,(20) stated that, while it had complied with the Secretary-General's appeal, Iraqi forces had continued attacks against civilians by bombarding Marivan and Piranshahr and conducting aerial attacks on Ghassemabad, Hamadan and Bostan, where 16 people were killed, leaving Iran no choice but to retaliate. In a second letter of the same day,(21) Iran stated that Iraq's attacks had resulted in the deaths of 773 people and injuries to 2,747 between 5 and 11 March, and annexed to its letter a list of such attacks and casualties for that period.

Iran, in a letter of 14 March,(22) stated that after Iraqi bombing attacks on several cities, including Teheran and Isfahan, on 13 March, Iran was obliged to retaliate, after giving warning, by striking certain economic and industrial centres of Baghdad, launching a missile in a strike timed and targeted to cause the smallest number of casualties possible. Iran appealed to the Secretary-General to reiterate his appeal for the immediate cessation of military operations against purely civilian areas.

Security Council members again expressed their concern over the renewed hostilities between Iran and Iraq in a statement(23) issued on their behalf on 15 March by the Security Council President, following consultations:

"The members of the Security Council express their deep concern over the scale of the renewed hostilities in the conflict between Iran and Iraq, which have led to an alarming aggravation of the situation between the two countries, to the detriment of peace and security in the region.

"They believe that combatants and civilians will continue to suffer as long as the conflict, which has already imposed great sacrifices on the two countries in terms of human life and material resources, lasts. They emphasize a new the urgent necessity for a cessation of hostilities commencing with the implementation of the moratorium on attacks against purely civilian population centres with a view to finding a peaceful settlement to the conflict in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations and international law and acceptable to both parties.

"The members of the Security Council have decided to remain actively seized of the question and to pursue consultations with the two parties and with the Secretary-General with a view to finding an end to this tragic conflict, which has already lasted far too long."

Iraq welcomed the substance of the Council's statement in a letter of 16 March.(24) Charging that a large-scale act of aggression launched by Iran on 12 March was still continuing, Iraq proposed that the United Nations, and the Security Council in particular, take the necessary measures to bring about a comprehensive settlement by: arranging an immediate cease-fire and withdrawal of forces to internationally recognized frontiers, verified by a

United Nations observer group; direct contacts by the Secretary-General or the Council with the two parties to put those arrangements into effect; negotiations between the two parties, under his or the Council's auspices, to reach a comprehensive and just settlement; finding a speedy solution to the prisoner-of-war issue; and proceeding to consider arrangements for abstaining from attacks on purely civilian population centres.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, on 19 March,(25) transmitted a telegram from the Secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison reporting that the Libyan President had called on the leaders of Iran and Iraq to halt immediately the bombardment of civilian installations and populated areas. The telegram said Iran responded by affirming its readiness to cease attacking towns and civilian installations immediately upon Iraq's ceasing to do so.

Iran, on 21 March,(26) said that in the face of the silence of the international community regarding Iraq's announced intention to annihilate Ahwaz within 72 hours of its ultimatum to evacuate it, it was likely that Iran would be forced to retaliate. On 25 March,(27) Iran said it had been obliged to launch a surface-to-surface missile on Baghdad that day, following the resumption of Iraqi attacks on Iranian civilian population centres and commercial vessels. Iran, on 27 March,(28) declared that it would immediately stop the retaliatory measures it had been forced to take as soon as Iraq ceased its violation of international conventions concerning the conduct of hostilities, which it was the duty of the Council and other competent international bodies to condemn. On 1 April,(29) Iran said it had made it clear that the Iraqi holy cities of Karbala, Najaf, Kazemain and Samera would be spared from any retaliatory measures despite the fact that it had been informed that Iraq was planning sabotage activities in those cities that it would blame on Iran.

In retaliation for what it said were bombardments of its cities and civilian areas by Iraq on 31 March, Iran, on 1 April,(30) said it had launched two surface-to-surface missiles on Baghdad. On 3 April,(31) Iran announced that, the day before, its armed forces were instructed immediately to halt all retaliatory measures against Iraqi cities, inasmuch as Iraq had stopped its attacks against civilian quarters in Iran's larger cities. Iran would maintain this policy as long as Iraq continued to refrain from attacking civilian quarters, merchant shipping and civil aviation. Iran warned, on 4 April,(32) that it would have to take defensive retaliatory actions against Iraq after Iraq had resumed its attacks against Iranian civilian areas following a two-day interruption.

Iran maintained, in a letter of 4 April,(33) that the Security Council, with such a dark record of indifference and lack of commitment to its constitutional duties, had undermined the basis for its legitimacy to intervene in the conflict. Iran could not legally and constitutionally be deprived of its right to self-defence by the Council because of that body's failure to discharge its duties with regard to the Iraqi-imposed war of aggression.

Iran, on 9 April,(34) transmitted a letter it had sent to the Director-General of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization urgently requesting him to send a mission to Iran to verify the damage caused to its cultural heritage by aerial bombardments on the historic city of Isfahan on 13 March.

Report of the Secretary-General. The Secretary-General travelled to Teheran on 7 and 8 April and to Baghdad on 8 and 9 April to pursue proposals he had presented to the Foreign Ministers of both parties in New York in March, designed to reduce the level of conflict and promote an end to hostilities. In a report of 12 April,(35) the Secretary-General said that during his visits both Governments reaffirmed their desire for peace. However, it was clear that each harboured profound distrust of the other. Iran felt that since the beginning of the conflict the Security Council had not acted impartially or justly, particularly in failing to condemn Iraq as the aggressor and to counter violations of international humanitarian law, especially Iraq's use of chemical weapons. Iran felt that in order to start a process towards peace, the Security Council should rectify its past actions. The Secretary-General said he had reported these views to Iraq, and stressed that Iran should explain its position to the Council directly.

Discussions had also been held in both capitals on an eight-point proposal the Secretary-General had first presented to both parties in New York on 28 March. The underlying premise of the proposals was that, as Secretary-General, he was responsible under the Charter to seek an end to the conflict and, until that was achieved, to try to mitigate its effects. The proposals envisaged that both parties would enter into sustained discussion in all those respects with him.

He reported that Iran believed that the application of specific conventions and protocols to mitigate the effects of war could not be conditional upon a cease-fire. It was prepared to accept a comprehensive cessation of hostilities provided that two conditions were met: condemnation of the aggressor and payment of reparations. Iraq believed that specific mitigating measures must be linked to a comprehensive cease-fire within a timetable; measures envisaged should include a mutual withdrawal of troops, a comprehensive exchange of prisoners of war, and reactivation of all ports, reiterating that all issues must be dealt with in an integrated framework. Both parties agreed that his proposals could serve as a basis for further discussion.

The Secretary-General concluded that, although the positions of both parties remained wide apart, there existed a real basis for pursuing efforts to bring the prospect of peace closer. As a first step, the Security Council should extend an invitation to both parties to renew examination of all aspects of the conflict.

The Council considered the report at the same time it considered a report of a medical specialist dispatched to Europe to look into charges that Iranian patients there were suffering from the effects of chemical weapons and, on 25 April, adopted a declaration on the subject (see p. 248).

Communications (12 April-December). On 12 April,(36) Iraq forwarded a statement of 11 April by the spokesman for the Supreme Command of the Iraqi armed forces, saying that Iran was preparing a new attack against it. In a letter of 13 April,(37) Iraq said that a 12 April sermon by Iran's President, annexed to the letter, made it clear that Iran believed that the only means of settling the conflict was through the use of force and the continuation of the war.

On 22 April,(38) Iran rejected what it said were baseless allegations by Iraq that Mandali and Ghazanieh had been the targets of artillery fire by Iran. Iran warned that these allegations were pretexts for Iraq to resume its attacks against civilian areas in Iran.

Iraq responded to the Council's declaration of 25 April on 27 April.(39) It regretted that the Council had been dwelling on questions which it felt were secondary. Some members of the Council, it said, were attempting to attract the party that was boycotting it; contrary to the notion in some circles, the Council had not displayed a bias in favour of Iraq. Iran would negotiate with the Council and the United Nations only for propaganda purposes; it had never concealed its aim of invading Iraq or belief that force was the only means of settling the conflict. While the declaration called on the parties to co-operate with the Council, those who issued it were well aware that from the outset Iraq had consistently done so, while Iran not only failed to co-operate but constantly flouted and accused it. Despite its reservations about certain parts of the declaration, Iraq accepted the appeals contained therein because they constituted an indivisible whole, especially the appeals for an honourable settlement, if Iran accepted them on the same basis.

Iran, on 7 May,(40) said it was evident from a statement of 24 April by Iraq's President that Iraq was planning to resume its attacks against Iran's civilian populations after such action had been halted for 20 days as a gesture of respect for the Secretary-General's presence in Baghdad. Iran hoped it would not be forced to take retaliatory measures. On 13 May,(41) Iran rejected as baseless a claim by Iraq that Iran had shelled Mandali, the Shahabi district and the village of Ghazanieh on 9 and 10 May. Iran urgently forewarned, in a letter of 25 May,(42) that Iraq had announced on radio and television that it was about to resume strikes against various cities, including Teheran; Iran reserved the right to retaliate. The following day,(43) Iran charged that, as predicted, Iraq had bombarded Teheran and had made aerial attacks on Ilam, Gilan-e-Gharb, Karand and Baneh and missile attacks on Bakhtaran and Islam Abad, leaving many killed and injured and damaging property. Iran again called on the United Nations to condemn Iraq and take measures to stop these violations of international humanitarian law. On 28 May,(44) Iran charged that during strikes on Teheran that day, an Iraqi aeroplane attacked a prisoner-of-war camp, causing damage and casualties, failing to spare even Iraqi prisoners in its violations of international law.

A new dimension had been added to Iraq's violations of international law, the Iranian Foreign Minister charged in a letter of 29 May:(45) Iran said Iraq was using an abortive attempt on the life of the Emir of Kuwait, which it blamed on Iran, as a pretext to resume its attacks on Iran's civilian populations. On 3 June,(46) Iran announced that it had launched a second missile attack against Baghdad, contrary to its desire, but it was forced to by the inaction of the Security Council.

Iran charged, on 10 June,(47) that Iraq, on 9 June, had bombarded the Ziveh refugee camp, which housed Iraqi Kurdish refugees, killing 142 people, including 79 children, and wounding 300 others. Iran said it had asked the United Nations team in Iran to visit the site. Iran asked the Secretary-General, in a letter of 20 June,(48) to guard against Iraq's grave breach of the fourth Geneva Convention by ending the long years of detention and captivity of Khuzistanis (Arabic-speaking Iranians) and other civilian Iranians in Iraqi refugee camps and arranging their voluntary repatriation to Iran. On 13 August,(49) Iraq said that allegations that it was detaining civilian Iranians in captivity were false; those civilians had left their villages in Iran either from fear of oppression or in flight from combat, Iraq said; they had been given asylum in Iraq and were considered as refugees with absolute freedom of movement and action. Allegations by Iran on 23 June (see p. 246) that Iraq had executed certain repatriated Iraqi prisoners of war and had not handed others over to their families were also groundless.

In a message to diplomatic representatives at Teheran, transmitted on 25 June,(50) the Speaker for the Islamic Consultative Assembly and spokesman for the Supreme Defence Council of Iran deplored attacks against civilian targets, the use of chemical weapons and threats against civilian aviation, and stated that massive demonstrations which took place on 14 June, the day of Al-Quds, despite threats of increased attacks on cities by Iraq, proved that the Government enjoyed the resolute support of its people. If nations and international forums sought the implementation of justice and the observance of international law, and confessed their lack of responsible action in the past and thus gained the trust of the Iranian people, then the establishment of an international tribunal to determine the punishment of the aggressor and compensation for the victims would become possible and so would paving the way for ending the war. The lowest estimate of casualties resulting from Iraqi attacks on gathering places and demonstrations on the day of Al-Quds was 600, Iran charged in a letter from its Foreign Minister, transmitted on 27 June.(51)

Iraq, in a letter of 18 July,(52) recalled that on 14 June it had reported to Iran its decision to stop bombing selected targets inside Iranian cities; instead of taking the opportunity to scale down the fighting and prepare for peace, Iran had continued making statements announcing its intention to continue the war. Iraq charged that Iran had also launched continuous attacks against various points across the Iran-Iraq border and was entirely responsible for the escalation of the fighting.

Iraq's Foreign Minister, in a letter of 10 September,(53) said Iran had launched a new hostile action in the northern border area against Iraqi territory on 9 September in an attempt to violate Iraq's sovereignty and occupy its territory by force. On 15 September,(54) Iran reported that two of its jet fighters attacked an Iraqi tobacco factory outside Soleymanieh. Claiming that Iran had attacked civilian areas, Iraq had used this excuse to open artillery fire on population centres in Piranshahr, inflicting loss of life and property on civilians. Iran, on 30 October,(55) charged that on 29 October Iraq had air-raided areas of the city of Ilam. On 8 November,(56) it charged that Iraq had bombarded Ahwaz on 6 November, killing 30 and wounding 100 civilians. In a second letter of 8 November,(57), Iran said it had denied an Iraqi accusation that it had shelled the city of Al-Qurna on 5 November, an allegation Iran said Iraq had offered to pave the ground for its escalation of indiscriminate attacks on civilians in Iran. Iran reported on 10 December(58) that Iraqi forces had air-raided Hoveyze with cluster bombs that day, leaving 12 dead and 28 injured and destroying 13 residential units. Iran said Iraq would be severely punished for levelling the newly reconstructed city.

Iraq charged in a letter of 19 December(59) that Iran was planning to launch a large-scale offensive with the intention of occupying Iraqi territory; it appealed to the Secretary-General to induce Iran to enter, without pre-conditions, into negotiations for peace under his or the Security Council's auspices. On 31 December,(60) Iraq alleged that on 30 December Iranian aircraft attacked the town of Djuarta, causing the death of 21 civilians, wounding 15 others and destroying 38 dwellings, and, on the same day, attacked populated areas of Meisan, causing three deaths and the wounding of six others.

Treatment of prisoners of war

Communications (January-16 February). A number of communications to the Secretary-General from January through early March 1985 contained charges by both Iran and Iraq concerning the treatment of prisoners of war (POWs).

Iraq, on 22 January,(61) transmitted a report on what it described as the savage treatment of Iraqi POWs by Iran, accusing Iran of using threats of physical and psychological torture, sectarian isolation, coercive measures, hiding large numbers of prisoners from the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), changing the prisoners' locations, employing solitary confinement, placing agents among the prisoners' ranks, intimidating pilots, poisoning food, encouraging sexual assaults, conducting night raids and withholding letters.

Iran, on 31 January,(62) rejected Iraq's charges and regretted that such unfounded allegations by Iraq were circulated in the United Nations on the day that a mission sent by the Secretary-General to investigate the conditions of POWs in both countries had concluded its visits. Iran said Iraq was trying to divert the world's attention from the contents of the forthcoming report.

In a letter of 19 February,(63) Iran requested that the Secretary-General ensure the placement among their families of 31 handicapped Iraqi POWs whom, three weeks before, Iran had said it was ready to free, inasmuch as Iraq had not announced it was ready to accept them. In response, Iraq declared, in a Foreign Ministry statement of 16 February transmitted on 24 February,(64) that Iran was distorting the facts; Iraq had given consent to Turkey, as an intermediary, to receive 30 handicapped pows, and delivered a list of 20 Iranian prisoners to be handed over to Iran in return.

Report of the mission on POWs. Late in 1984,(65) Iraq had requested that the Secretary-General send a mission to Iran to investigate an incident which Iraq alleged took place on 10 October 1984 at a POW camp in Gorgan, Iran, when Iranian military authorities were said to have opened fire on prisoners, killing or injuring many. Iran had agreed to receive the mission on the condition that it also investigate Iran's concerns regarding Iranian POWs in Iraq. The Secretary-General stated, in a note of 19 February(66) transmitting the mission's report to the Security Council, that as an extraordinary measure and in the light of his humanitarian responsibility under the Charter he had decided to dispatch a mission to Iran and Iraq. The mission, composed of three qualified specialists constituted as an independent body, was mandated to inquire into the 10 October incident and to report to him on other concerns that the Governments of both Iran and Iraq had expressed regarding the situation of POWs and civilian detainees.

The mission visited Iraq from 11 to 17 January and Iran from 18 to 25 January and submitted its report on 9 February to the Secretary-General. He expressed dismay and concern that the unanimous findings of the mission indicated that the fundamental purposes the international community had set itself in adopting the 1949 (third) Geneva Convention relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War were not being fulfilled, and said that respect for its provisions must be restored. That could best be achieved if ICRC were enabled to continue the functions envisaged in that Convention for humanitarian organizations, on the basis of mutually agreed arrangements, in close co-operation with and under the scrutiny of Protecting Powers vested with the task of ensuring the observance of the terms of the Convention. He felt that an exchange of at least certain defined categories of POWs should be sought on the basis of understandings to be promoted with the two Governments concerned.

The mission had observed that in neither country were pows treated as badly as alleged by the Government of the other country, nor as well as claimed by the detaining Power. Prolonged captivity was the prisoners' greatest hardship. The mission said that the situation on both sides was cause for serious concern, and stated that it was not in a position to form definite conclusions about allegations regarding missing persons or mass killings of POWs. It concluded that the Gorgan incident had caused the death of at least nine prisoners, with 47 hospitalized and others less severely injured.

The mission offered recommendations that: prisoners' rights under the third Geneva Convention should be respected; corporal or collective punishment should be prohibited; living conditions should be improved; rights to send and receive mail should be given full effect; officers should be treated according to their rank; freedom of thought, religion and conscience should be respected, opposing groups of prisoners should be physically separated; ICRC should be enabled to carry out all its functions under the Geneva Conventions; information on the wounded, sick or dead should be provided to each Government by the other; lists of POWs and their state of health should be exchanged; consideration should be given to releasing as many prisoners as possible; and prisoners should not be used for propaganda purposes.

Communications (24 February-4 March). Iraq's Ministry of Foreign Affairs responded to the mission's report in a 24 February statement,<sup>(67)</sup> indicating that Iraq would request a meeting of the Security Council during the first week of March to discuss the report. Iraq said the mission had overlooked the fact that ICRC had been working in Iraq without interruption, while Iran had prevented it from working in Iran. Iraq also believed that the mission's recommendations regarding the conditions of POWs should be implemented.

Iran, on 26 February,<sup>(68)</sup> said Iraq was attempting to take advantage of the Security Council in order to divert attention from the country's crimes against the POWs in its custody. Iran questioned Iraq's sincerity in accepting the mission's recommendations, and set forth the objectives it felt should be pursued in the investigation of the situation of the POWs: extension of the mission's mandate; investigation of, and a framework for disclosing, the fate of missing persons; measures towards repatriation of civilian POWs and civilians forcibly removed from Iran to Iraq; guarantees to end physical and psychological ill-treatment of Iranian POWs; investigation into the situation of Iran's Minister of Oil; examination of the treatment of the injured, particularly in the war fronts, and their immediate release; measures to improve conditions in the camps; guarantee of religious freedom; uncovering clandestine camps in Iraq; and putting forward proposals for repatriation.

Iraq forwarded on 4 March<sup>(69)</sup> detailed observations on the mission's report, holding the view that the Security Council must establish means to put the recommendations into effect. On the same day,<sup>(70)</sup> Iran transmitted a report on the conditions of Iranian POWs in Iraqi camps prepared by the War Information Headquarters of its Supreme Defence Council. The report accused Iraq of, among other offences, ill-treatment of prisoners, improper care of the sick and wounded, providing inadequate living conditions, food, sanitation, work conditions and training and communications facilities, abandoning wounded Iranians to die, and hiding from ICRC the fact that numerous Iranian doctors, nurses, Red Crescent Society personnel and female relief workers had been captured.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (March)

The Security Council met on 4 March in response to a 24 February request<sup>(71)</sup> by Iraq that the President of the Council convene a meeting during the first week of March to discuss the report of the mission that investigated the conditions of POWs in Iran and Iraq.

Invited, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote were Iraq, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Yemen. The Secretary-General of the League of Arab States was also invited to participate under rule 39<sup>a</sup> of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, at the request of Qatar, in a letter of 28 February,<sup>(72)</sup> as Chairman of the Arab Group of States at the United Nations.

Meeting number. SC 2569.

Addressing the Council, Iraq stated that Iran's treatment of POWs was based on its primary political objective regarding Iraq: to change the country's political and social system. This was manifested in the murder of POWs who the Iranian authorities believed were affiliated with the legitimate political institutions in their country, in persecutions aimed at forcing the prisoners to renounce their political beliefs and commit treason, in dividing POWs according to their religious beliefs and subjecting them to intensive psychological indoctrination, and in entrusting the prisoners' supervision to political groups acting as agents of the régime. All these tactics forced the prisoners to choose between treason and death. Iraq, on the other hand, had no political objectives motivating it to mistreat prisoners.

Iraq said that, unlike Iran, it had always co-operated with ICRC. It had also handed over large numbers of prisoners without reciprocity. The United Nations mission, which visited all the POW camps in Iraq, was not able to visit all the camps in Iran and discover all the facts. Iraq said the mission's report reflected diplomatic considerations designed to encourage Iran to co-operate with the Security Council and participate in its discussions; thus, in an attempt to balance the report more emphasis was placed on elements relating to Iraq. Iraq was ready to implement all the recommendations of the mission. The Council should also adopt a clear resolution to ensure their implementation. Iraq urged the Council to force Iran to allow ICRC to resume its work there. The best way to put an end to the prisoners' sufferings, it said, was to exchange all prisoners.

The Secretary-General of the League of Arab States urged the Council to ensure strict implementation of the proposals put forward by the mission and to adopt a resolution that would speed measures likely to improve the condition of the POWs in accordance with international law and, particularly, the third Geneva Convention.

Yemen supported the resolutions of the League of Arab States calling for the establishment of a committee of seven to be charged with finding a just and honourable solution to the conflict, as well as the good-offices committee created in 1984 by the Organization of the Islamic Conference. Yemen, which endorsed the recommendations of the fact-finding mission, hoped the Council would adopt measures to force Iran to end military operations and turn to peaceful efforts to end its war with Iraq. Jordan agreed that there should be strict respect for the Geneva Convention and the role of ICRC, stressed that the freedom of thought, religion and conscience of the prisoners must be respected and called for a complete and comprehensive exchange of all POWs. Jordan called on the Council to adopt the recommendations of the mission, create a practical mechanism for their implementation and adopt a timetable for the release of all POWs. Egypt also called for a complete exchange of POWs and hoped that the recommendations of the mission would be implemented without delay.

Saudi Arabia expressed satisfaction with Iraq's positive response to the mission's recommendations and hoped that Iran would respond positively to the POW issue and to efforts aimed at putting an end to the war and all its tragedies. Saudi Arabia called on the Council to take a clear stand to secure implementation of the recommendations.

Communications (9 March-December). The issue of POWs was the subject of an Iraqi letter of 9 March, transmitted on 11 March,(73) responding to a letter to Iraq by the Secretary-General of 7 March. Iraq said it considered that the exchange of POWs should be full, comprehensive and without exceptions. It should take place either on a proportional basis, in accordance with the number of prisoners present in each country, over a maximum period of six months, or in stages with exchanges of, first, sick, disabled, elderly and child prisoners, second, prisoners who had spent two or more years in captivity, and third, the remaining prisoners. Iraq would welcome the Secretary-General's playing a role in the process in co-operation with ICRC.

On 1 May,(74) Iran asked the Secretary-General to pursue the answers Iran had asked of ICRC concerning POWs Iraq claimed it had released on 7 April. Iran asked if the prisoners were actually freed and had been handed over to ICRC, when Iran would be informed of their return to Iran and their identities, and what measures ICRC had taken to save their lives. On 2 May,(75) Iran said it had handed over to the Turkish Red Crescent 48 more disabled POWs on 29 April, in addition to the 27 repatriated through the same channel on 2 March. Despite Iraq's earlier announcements that 52 Iranian POWs would be released, Iraq had taken no such action, Iran said. Iran asked the Secretary-General to persuade Iraq to heed international principles concerning POWs, particularly relating to their repatriation.

Iraq, in a letter of 20 May,(76) circulated a summary of reports by ICRC on the situation of Iraqi prisoners in Iran after the ICRC mission in Teheran had visited a number of POW camps from 19 May to 18 October 1984. Iraq said Iran was to be condemned for the mistreatment of prisoners, including suspicious deaths, disciplinary punishment with electricity and beatings, insufficient hospital beds, mattresses and food, inadequate sanitation, religious and political indoctrination, solitary confinement, non-delivery of letters and preventing the sending of letters. Iran, on 30 May,(77) said that by publicizing the summary of the reports of ICRC, whose work and impartiality Iran had occasionally questioned, Iraq was trying to mislead public opinion and justify its crimes. It considered the report of the Secretary-General's mission to be a more valid and up-to-date account.

Iran, in a letter of 23 May,(78) urgently requested that the United Nations take measures to stop the continued subjugation of Iranian POWs to Iraqi violence and torture. For its part, Iran said, it had unilaterally repatriated two groups of prisoners and was preparing to repatriate 50 more. It had also unilaterally implemented visits by the families of POWs.

Iraq, on 30 May,(79) said Iran's letters were sent for propaganda purposes and self-praise and to release spurious statements against Iraq. Iraq recalled that it had handed over to Iran some 430 prisoners since August 1981, some without reciprocation, and planned in the next few days to hand over 89 more. These facts, Iraq said, proved the deception in Iran's statement that it had released prisoners unilaterally.

Iran reported on 12 June(80) that it had transmitted to the Turkish Red Crescent a list of 56 disabled Iraqi prisoners for their return to Iraq and another group was being prepared for repatriation. Iran drew the Secretary-General's attention on 23 June(81) to a report by the Islamic Republic News Agency from Damascus that repatriated Iraqi POWs who refused to say false things about Iran were liable to be executed by Iraq and that some of the recently released disabled POWs had not yet been handed over to their families. Iran asked the Secretary-General to investigate the matter to protect the lives of repatriated prisoners and those scheduled to be repatriated.

On 4 September,(82) Iraq denied a statement, said to have been made by an official of Iran's War Information Commission at a press conference on 11 August, that there were secret POW camps in Iraq for Iranian prisoners. Iraq also denied a charge that it did not hand over wounded who were taken behind the front and that there were civilians among the POWs, including women; it said that if Iran was truly concerned about its prisoners, it would comply with Iraq's 9 March suggestions for their release.

Iran, on 11 November,(83) transmitted a list of 199 Iraqi teen-age POWs being held there, prepared, it said, for the information of the Secretary-General and the peace of mind of their families.

On 12 November,(84) Iraq transmitted a letter of the same day from its Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs concerning a newspaper report that Iran had put seven Iraqis taken prisoner on 24 May 1982 on trial for inciting prisoners to rise up against guards in the Gorgan camp. Iraq said no accurate information was available regarding the fate of prisoners and requested the Secretary-General to use his good offices to obtain such information.

Iraq, on 20 November,(85) supplied information provided by returning POWs on the practices of Iran towards its prisoners. Iraq charged that Iran had employed physical and psychological torture, and ideological, religious, factional and racial pressure, deliberately neglected prisoners' health and maintained poor sanitary conditions in prison camps, applied unethical practices, and obstructed the work of ICRC.

Iraq reported, on 22 November,(86) that it had released to ICRC 17 Iranian prisoners on 20 November, bringing the total number of Iranian prisoners released unilaterally by Iraq to 592.

Use of chemical weapons

Communications (February-11 April). Allegations over the use of chemical weapons by Iraq in the conflict were forwarded in a series of communications from Iran to the Secretary-General.

Iran's Foreign Minister, in a letter of 5 February,(87) asked the Secretary-General to deal with the fact that, seven months after his appeal to the Governments of Iran and Iraq to refrain from using chemical weapons,(88) Iraq continued to use them while Iran did not. Iran, in a letter of 27 February,(89) asked the Secretary-General to provide it and the entire international community with any response that may have been received from Iraq concerning his 1984 appeal.

On 12 March,(90) Iran charged that Iraq was about to resume Chemical attacks on a large scale. Iran warned the United Nations that unless it prevented the recurrence of such violations of international and humanitarian norms, the international body, along with Iraq, would be held responsible for the consequences. On 13 March,(91) Iran transmitted a letter by its Foreign Minister charging that, as predicted, Iraq had again resorted to the use of chemical weapons on the war front. Iran urgently requested the Secretary-General to take steps immediately to stop this gross violation of, in particular, the Geneva Protocol of 1925, and expressed regret that the United Nations had not agreed to its request for the stationing of a permanent expert mission in Teheran to investigate the use of such weapons by Iraq. Iran alleged on 14 March(92) that chemical agents were used against its forces on two occasions in the southern war-front of Hur-Al-Hoveizeh, bringing the number injured as a result to 180. The President of Iran, in a letter forwarded on 18 March,(93) noted that more than a year had passed since Iraq began its deployment of chemical weapons. Iran had been the victim of two such attacks recently, and he questioned why the Secretary-General did not commission a team of experts to investigate these attacks. Iran warned that the continued use of chemical weapons and attacks on civilian populations would require retaliation.

In a letter of 20 March,(94) Iran reported that on 16 March a number of Iraqi planes allegedly dropped at least six large capsules on an Iranian position east of Majnoon Island. Iran believed these capsules contained cyanide, phosphorus and mustard gases. It charged that the attack had been preceded by four others since 11 March, leaving 200 Iranian combatants hospitalized. In a letter of 26 March,(95) Iran stated that international bodies concerned with upholding the authority of the relevant international instrument on the use of chemical weapons and those obliged to maintain international peace and security had been irresponsibly reticent since Iraq began using these weapons against Iran. It annexed to its letter a list of alleged chemical-weapon attacks and casualties.

In a letter of 8 April,(96) Iran claimed that that day the Iraqi régime used mustard and nerve gases at four points in the Badr operation region, including the Hur-Al-Hoveizeh area, despite Iraq's claim of a unilateral cease-fire during the Secretary-General's visit there. On 9 April,(97) Iran charged that Iraqi use of chemical weapons the day before had left 15 people dead and 200 wounded. Iran invited the Secretary-General to return to Teheran for further consultations on the issue, to visit the latest victims and immediately to dispatch an expert team to examine the evidence. In a letter of 11 April,(98) Iran charged that on 8 April mustard gas delivered through Iraqi artillery shelling was used in the Kushk area, killing and injuring more than 11 people, and on 8 and 9 April in the Gofair area, killing and injuring more than 28 people. Iran transmitted on 11 April(99) a table of chemical attacks that allegedly occurred between 13 and 20 March and resulted in the deaths of 32 people and injury to 2,231. Iran said the ease with which Iraq continued its campaign reflected the callousness and indifference of the Security Council in its unwillingness to take appropriate preventive measures against Iraq.

Specialist's report. The Secretary-General, in a letter to the President of the Security Council of 17 April,(100) transmitted a report of a medical expert, Dr. Manuel Domínguez, a specialist in atomic, biological and chemical weapons, whom he had dispatched to visit from 1 to 5 April Iranian patients hospitalized in Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom. The patients were allegedly suffering from the effects of chemical weapons. The report detailed symptoms affecting the patients, including lesions, blackened and detached skin, and bronchial pneumonia. Following his examination of the patients and their records, the expert concluded that chemical weapons were used during March 1985 in the war between Iran and Iraq, that yperite was used, affecting Iranian soldiers, and possibly hydrocyanic gas, and that the attacks were made by means of bombs dropped from aircraft, according to patients' statements. In an addendum to the report, Dr. Domínguez stated that some patients were poisoned by organophosphorated agents not used in agriculture.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (April)

With the Secretary-General's 12 April report(35) (see p. 242) and medical expert's report before it, the Security Council met on 25 April. The Council President stated that he was authorized to make the following declaration:(101)

Meeting number. SC 2576.

"The members of the Security Council, seized with the continuing conflict between Iran and Iraq, are appalled that chemical weapons have been used against Iranian soldiers during the month of March 1985 in the war between the two countries, as concluded in the report of the medical specialist appointed by the Secretary-General.

"They recall the statement of 30 March 1984(102) by the President of the Security Council on behalf of the members. They strongly condemn the renewed use of chemical weapons in the conflict and any possible future use of such weapons. They again urge the strict observance of the Geneva Protocol of 1925, according to which the use in war of chemical weapons is prohibited and has been justly condemned by the world community.

"The members of the Council condemn all violations of international humanitarian law and urge both parties to observe the generally recognized principles and rules of international humanitarian law which are applicable to armed conflicts and their obligations under international conventions designed to prevent or alleviate the human suffering of warfare. At the same time, they urge a cessation of hostilities and remain convinced that a prompt, comprehensive, just and honourable settlement acceptable to both sides is essential and in the interest of international peace and security.

"The members of the Council express their full appreciation and support to the Secretary-General for his report contained in document S/17097. They are ready to issue at the appropriate moment an invitation to both parties to take part in a renewed examination of all aspects of the conflict. They call on the parties to co-operate with the Security Council and with the Secretary-General in their efforts to restore peace to the peoples of Iran and Iraq."

Communications (25 April-December). Iran claimed, in a letter of 25 April,(103) that on 17 April Iraq shelled the city of Khorramshahr with a chemical cannon-ball, causing eye and throat irritation to a number of people. Iran said the international community was looking to the Council to condemn Iraq for its repeated use of chemical weapons.

In a letter of 2 May,(104) Iran reported that the total number of people injured in three Iraqi chemical attacks against Iranian soldiers on 8 and 9 April had increased to 201. On 13 May,(105) it charged that Iraq had again resorted to chemical warfare, using mustard gas in attacks on the north-western parts of Fakkeh and Sardasht on 7 and 8 May.

Iran's Foreign Minister, in a letter transmitted on 24 May,(106) said the work of the Security Council and the United Nations could not be confined to issuing statements and resolutions; they must mobilize all international means in their power to stop immediately violations of international regulations, such as Iraq's use of chemical weapons, which continued despite the Council's condemnation. In response to that letter, Iraq, on 30 May,(107) stated that Iran's position involved a gross inconsistency, on the one hand calling on the Council and the United Nations to take steps to maintain international peace and security, and on the other rejecting the jurisdiction of the Council and the United Nations in the conflict and their competence to pass judgement on it.

Iran, on 16 July,(108) called on the Secretary-General to take further necessary action to end the Iraqi use of chemical weapons, reporting that Iraq had allegedly shelled with chemical cannon-balls the north-east of Basra on 7 May and the Kenareh region on 8 May. On 4 November,(109) Iran charged that on 2 November Iraq had shelled Minou Island with chemical cannon-balls leaving eight people severely injured.

Iraq, in a letter of 6 November,(110) stated that on 5 November it had firmly rejected the charge that Iranian troops had been killed by chemical artillery shells. The purpose of Iran's allegations, Iraq said, was to justify continued Iranian shelling of Iraqi border towns. Iran, on 11 November,(111) pointed out that it had charged Iraq with injuring and not killing its troops with chemical weapons.

Other communications. Interference with commercial shipping and commercial air traffic was the subject of several communications.

On 25 January,(112) Iran transmitted a letter from its Foreign Minister expressing to the Secretary-General a shared concern over attacks, which Iran attributed to Iraq, on neutral mercantile ships in the Gulf. Iraq, on 20 February,(113) said the concern expressed by Iran was surprising since it was common knowledge that Iran had prevented by military might the exercise by Iraq of its legitimate right to free navigation in the Gulf. It had no alternative but to defend itself on the basis of the provisions of international law which authorized a State party to an armed conflict to impose a blockade on the ports of the adversary State in order to induce it to accept peace. Iraq said the activity of the so-called "neutral mercantile ships" was tantamount to supplying the Iranian military machine.

Iran had taken it upon itself to declare Iran's airspace unsafe for commercial aircraft, Iran said in a letter of 18 March,(114) asking all nations to condemn the act. On 25 March,(115) Iran said that, in the light of threats made by Iraq against innocent passengers, while it could not conceivably resort to retaliatory measures against civilian aircraft, should a civilian aircraft be shot down over its airspace, Iran would level the airport in Baghdad.

Kuwait and Iran exchanged charges stemming from the interception of a Kuwaiti commercial vessel in June. Kuwait, in a letter of 10 July to the President of the Security Council, reported that on 20 June the Iranian navy had intercepted the commercial vessel Al-Muharraq in international waters south of the Strait of Hormuz and ordered a diversion of its course to the Iranian port of Bandar Abbas, where it was impounded. The Gulf Co-operation Council, Kuwait said, had adopted a resolution on 9 July stating that the Iranian action constituted a flagrant violation of international law concerning navigation on the high seas as well as freedom of navigation in international waterways. Annexed to the letter was a communiqué from the United Arab Shipping Company, owner of the vessel, describing the commercial cargo and route of the vessel, as well as the events which overtook it.

Iran, in a letter of 19 July,(117) said its authorities had been informed that the Kuwaiti vessel carried logistical goods destined for Iraq. The Iranian navy had intercepted it on the basis of the 1907 Hague Convention respecting the Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers in Naval War and directed it to Bandar Abbas where it was inspected, 4,500 tons of logistical goods destined for Iraq were seized, and it was released.

Kuwait, on 20 September,(118) circulated a letter of 19 September from its Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs recounting the detaining by Iran of four Kuwaiti ships in 1984 and 1985, as well as, in September, an Italian ship and a Chinese ship chartered by Kuwait-all intercepted in international waters. Kuwait said it had called on Iran to end such acts. Iran, on 25 September,(119) said it had repeatedly announced that it would not allow the transport of arms from Gulf waters to the Iraqi aggressors and that, contrary to the principles of good-neighbourly relations, cargo ships destined for Kuwait had carried logistical goods and arms headed for Iraq via Kuwait. Iran said it would continue to inspect ships in the Gulf suspected of carrying arms to Iraq.

Iran expressed concern over alleged repeated military attacks by Iraq on its Bushehr nuclear power plant in several communications. An alleged attack on the power plant on 12 February by two Iraqi missiles, which killed one Iranian worker and caused significant damage, was the subject of a letter of 14 February,(120) in which the President of the Atomic Energy Organization of Iran requested that the Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) give his personal attention to the incident. Iran asked that the Director General's representative inspect the site to verify the losses. Iraq, in a statement by a military spokesman on 14 February conveyed on 24 February,(121) denied Iran's allegations of the attack; the statement said the spokesman had stated on 12 February that the Iraqi air force had attacked only two maritime targets near Kharg Island and troop concentrations on the Iraqi border.

On 26 April,(122) Iran circulated a letter of 17 March from the President of its Atomic Energy Organization to the IAEA Director General, stating that IAEA was either impotent in implementing its own resolutions or strongly biased in its dealings with the affairs of member States, because it had done nothing to halt Iraq from attacking Iran's nuclear power plant in March 1985, had not sent a mission to inspect the site as Iran had requested, and had not expelled Iraq from IAEA. Iran considered itself discriminated against by IAEA's argument that the plant was not completed and therefore not covered by Agency safeguards, since there was no fissionable material present, the release of which could be dangerous.

The Secretary-General, on 6 May,(123) circulated a 26 March reply to Iran by the IAEA Director General reiterating that the verification of reported war damage and losses in respect of a plant still under construction, not containing radioactive material and not yet subject to safeguards, was not appropriately a mission to be undertaken by him. The Agency's statute contained no provisions for the expulsion of a member State.

General comments about the conflict were recorded in several communications.

Iran, in a letter of 3 July,(124) charged that, according to reliable sources, Iraq had recently purchased 100 G-5 155-millimetre howitzers (heavy artillery) from South Africa, in blatant contravention of the Security Council's 1984 resolution(125) requesting Member States to refrain from importing arms produced in South Africa. In a letter of 5 July,(126) Iran transmitted the text of an article from the magazine Africa Confidential of 10 April about the weapons purchase. Iraq responded in a letter of 26 July,(127) in which it stated that Iran's charges had no factual basis.

On 25 September,(128) Iraq transmitted the text of an article from The Times of London of 20 September containing statements by an Iranian military intelligence officer, which Iraq said proved that Iran had sent children to fight its battles against Iraq and thousands had died.

Iran, on 22 October,(129) expressed objection to the address by the Iraqi Vice-President before the General Assembly on 18 October, which, Iran said, contained fallacious allegations against it.

Iraq, on 12 November,(130) announced that, on 6 November, 30 of its lighter aircraft destroyed the Noward iron and steel complex and the shipbuilding centre for Iranian warships.

Italy, on behalf of the 10 EC member States, transmitted on 6 May(131) a declaration on the Iran-Iraq conflict, adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Ten at the fifty-seventh Ministerial Meeting on European Political Co-operation (Luxembourg, 29 April). The Ten viewed with utmost concern the aggravation of the conflict, the escalation in military activities against civilian targets, the continued loss of life among the civilian population and the serious damage to the economy of both countries. They urged Iran and Iraq to agree to an immediate cease-fire, start a negotiating process and comply with the 12 June 1984 agreement.(1) They condemned the use of chemical weapons, whenever and wherever it occurred.

Morocco, on 19 August,(132) transmitted the final communique of an Extraordinary Summit Conference of Arab States (Casablanca, 7-9 August). The Conference noted with deep concern and great pain the continuance of the war and expressed strong disapproval at Iran's insistence on continuing it and launching attacks against Iraq aimed at violating the country's border and occupying territory, which could impel the Arab States to reconsider their relations with Iran.

Yemen, as Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, transmitted on 15 October(133) a communique of the co-ordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Conference (New York, 9 October), expressing appreciation for the efforts being undertaken by the Islamic Peace Committee during two sessions at Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, in May and September to bring about an honourable and just peace based on Islamic principles and international law.

Oman, on 20 November,(134) as President of the sixth session of the Ministerial Council of the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC), enclosed the final communique adopted by the GCC Supreme Council (Oman, 3-6 November). The Council called on Iran to abide by the principles laid down in Security Council resolutions of 1983(135) and 1984(136) which expressed the attitude of the international community with regard to the freedom of navigation in international waterways and freedom of passage to and from the ports of the GCC States. These States reiterated assurances that they were prepared to pursue efforts with the parties concerned to bring an end to the war.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 September 1985, at the close of its resumed thirty-ninth (1984) session, the General Assembly adopted decision 39/466, by which it decided to include the item "Consequences of the prolonga-tion of the armed conflict between Iran and Iraq" on the draft agenda of its fortieth (1985) session, which opened the following day. The item was not taken up at that session before year's end; however, when the session was suspended on 18 December, by decision 40/470, the Assembly decided to consider the item, among others, at its resumed session in 1986 at a date to be announced. These decisions were adopted without vote, on oral proposals by the Assembly President.

Other action. The Commission on Human Rights, in March 1985, expressed deep concern at alleged violations of human rights in Iran and urged it to respect and ensure the rights recognized in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Subsequently, the Economic and Social Council, by decision 1985/148, approved the Commission's decision to extend the mandate of its Special Representative on the human rights situation in Iran.

The General Assembly, in resolution 40/141 of 13 December, expressed deep concern over the allegations of human rights violations in Iran reported by the Commission's Special Representative and decided to continue examining the human rights situation in that country. ## Chapter VIII

Mediterranean

Political issues in the Mediterranean during 1985 continued to centre on Cyprus and the deteriorating relations between the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and other States, principally Egypt and the United States. With regard to security and co-operation in the Mediterranean, the General Assembly expressed concern over the increasing tension there and urged all States to reduce it and promote peace in the area.

Concerning Cyprus, the Secretary-General continued his contacts at the highest level with the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot communities, and after noting in February that the search for a solution had never been so narrow, at year's end he said he believed it possible to resolve the remaining issues provided both sides were willing to agree on a framework for an overall agreement.

Expressing its strong support for the Secretary-General's good offices mission, the Security Council twice extended the stationing of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus (UNFICYP).

Cyprus question

Owing in good part to the activities of UNFICYP, the situation in Cyprus continued to be calm in 1985.

The Security Council twice extended the mandate of UNFICYP—on 14 June (resolution 565(1985)) and on 12 December (resolution 578(1985))—which continued its peace-keeping and humanitarian tasks.

Throughout the year the Secretary-General continued his mission of good offices, entrusted to him by the Council. In January, a joint high-level meeting between President Spyros Kyprianou of Cyprus and Rauf R. Denktas of the Turkish Cypriot community was held under his auspices. The Turkish Cypriot side accepted a draft agreement contained in documentation presented by the Secretary-General. The Greek Cypriot side would accept the documentation only as a basis for negotiations.

To overcome those difficulties, the Secretary-General worked out a consolidated draft agreement with the incorporated components of the documentation prepared for the January meeting. He discussed the consolidated draft during a meeting with President Kyprianou in March and subsequently received an affirmative reply from the Greek Cypriot side. The Turkish Cypriot side informed the Secretary-General that due to a "referendum" and "elections" to be held in May and June it could not discuss the matter until that process was over.

In September, the Security Council President made a statement on behalf of its members expressing strong support for the Secretary-General's mission and calling on all parties to co-operate with him to reach an early agreement.

In December, the Secretary-General stressed that unless both sides were willing to work to an overall solution within an agreed framework, no further progress could be expected.

Although the Cyprus question was on the agenda of the General Assembly in 1985, it was not discussed.

Cyprus and Turkey addressed letters to the Secretary-General on various aspects of the situation throughout 1985. Those from Turkey forwarded letters from the Turkish Cypriot community signed by Rauf R. Denktas as "President of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus", by Necati Munir Ertekun as "Minister for Foreign Affairs and Defence" or by Ozer Koray as "representative" of that "Republic".

Report of the Secretary-General (February). On 2 February,<sup>(1)</sup> the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on the results of the joint meeting between President Kyprianou and Mr. Denktas, which took place in New York from 17 to 20 January 1985.

The parties considered the documentation for a draft agreement, presented by the Secretary-General and resulting from the 1984 separate high-level "proximity talks".<sup>(2)</sup> The Secretary-General noted that he made every effort to assist the parties in resolving their differences. He said that certain aspects of the substance of the draft agreement were touched upon and the gap between the respective positions in some cases appeared to be narrowing. He noted that the Turkish Cypriot side fully accepted the draft, while the Greek Cypriot side accepted the documentation as a basis for negotiations in accordance with the integrated whole approach aiming at a comprehensive and overall solution to the Cyprus problem.

Commenting that the gap in the search for a solution had never been so narrow, the Secretary-General appealed to both sides and to all those concerned with the future of Cyprus to ensure that nothing was done in the island or elsewhere that would make that search more difficult.

Communications (3 May-13 June). On 3 May,(3) Cyprus protested a decision by the Turkish Cypriot side to hold a so-called referendum for what was termed a constitution of the illegal entity calling itself the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus. Replying on 17 May,(4) Mr. Ertekun said the allegations of illegality were an attempt to discredit Turkish Cypriot actions in the eyes of the world.

Referring again to illegalities in the northern occupied territory, Cyprus, on 5 June,(5) drew attention to the colonization of that part of the island by Turks from the Turkish mainland which, according to Turkish Cypriot sources, had brought the total of such settlers in 1985 to between 60,000 and 65,000 in occupied Cyprus.

On 10 June,(6) Cyprus, stating that the Turkish side had held so-called elections the previous day for a "president" of its "Republic", said the illegal action had taken place in an area from which some 82 per cent of the indigenous population had been expelled. Responding on 12 June,(7) Mr. Koray stated that the alleged settlers from Turkey were Turkish Cypriots, forced over the years to leave because of Greek Cypriot oppression, who had returned after the north's liberation in 1974; the few thousand mainland Turkish workers were a normal importation of labour in a developing economy.

Mr. Denktas, in a 13 June press statement,(8) said that what hampered the solution of the Cyprus problem was not the elections by the Turkish Cypriots but the crisis of authority in the Greek Cypriot community following the January New York meeting.

Report of the Secretary-General (May/June). In a report to the Security Council on the United Nations operation in Cyprus covering 13 December 1984 to 31 May 1985, the Secretary-General gave details of UNFICYP activities(9) (see p. 256) and his good offices mission.(10) After summarizing the results of the January high-level meeting (see above), he said that, in order to overcome the difficulties which had arisen at that time, he had incorporated components of the documentation into a single consolidated draft agreement, which included clarifications of its elements and possible follow-up procedures.

During a meeting with the President of Cyprus on 11 March and then with its Foreign Minister on 3 April, the Secretary-General stated that he had sought the Greek Cypriot side's views on the consolidated draft and had subsequently received an affirmative reply. On 12 April, he had written to Mr. Denktas to seek his views, but was informed that due to the referendum and elections which his community intended to conduct in May and June, the Turkish Cypriot side was not in a position to engage in substantive discussions until that process was complete.

Concerning the so-called electoral process, the Secretary-General pointed out that on 6 May his spokesman had stated that the United Nations recognized no Cypriot State other than the Republic of Cyprus and therefore the Secretary-General could not condone any action at variance with that position.

Even though he was unable to report that the two sides had reached an agreement, the Secretary-General believed the documentation's substance, worked out through 10 months of strenuous effort, represented the formula for a just and lasting solution, which, provided both sides showed the necessary good will, could be arrived at without further delay. He intended to intensify his diplomatic action to that end.

In the search for a peaceful solution, the continued presence of UNFICYP remained indispensable. The Secretary-General therefore recommended that the Council extend the Force's mandate for a further six months. The Governments of Cyprus, Greece and the United Kingdom concurred with his recommendation, while Turkey and the Turkish Cypriot community indicated that their stand would be expounded in the Council.(11)

The Secretary-General also stated that, at his request, the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) was continuing to help the needy in the island (see p. 257). Details were also given about the Force's growing financial problems (see p. 258). With regard to the Committee on Missing Persons in Cyprus, the Secretary-General appointed, effective 28 April 1985, Paul Wurth (Switzerland) to succeed the late Claude Pilloud; the three-member Committee, established in 1981,(12) was expected to resume work in the near future (see p. 255).

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (June)

The Security Council met on 14 June to consider the Secretary-General's report and recommendation to extend UNFICYP's mandate. Cyprus, Greece and Turkey were invited, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. The Council also extended an invitation, under rule 39<sup>a</sup> of its provisional rules of procedure, to Ozer Koray.

<sup>a</sup>Rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure states: "The Security Council may invite members of the Secretariat or other persons, whom it considers competent for the purpose, to supply it with information or to give other assistance in examining matters within its competence."

On that day, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 565(1985).

The Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations operation in Cyprus of 31 May and 14 June and of 11 June 1985,

Noting the recommendation by the Secretary-General that the Security Council should extend the stationing of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus for a further period of six months,

Noting also that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions in the island it is necessary to keep the Force in Cyprus beyond 15 June 1985,

Reaffirming the provisions of its resolution 186(1964) and other relevant resolutions,

1. Extend once more the stationing in Cyprus of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force established under resolution 186(1964) for a further period, ending on 15 December 1985;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his mission of good offices, to keep the Security Council informed of the progress made and to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution by 30 November 1985;

3. Calls upon all the parties concerned to continue to co-operate with the Force on the basis of the present mandate.

Security Council resolution 565(1985)

14 June 1985 Meeting 2591 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17266).

After the vote, Cyprus pointed out that the peace-keeping functions of UNFICYP were made imperative by the situation prevailing in Cyprus and by the Secretary-General's delicate ongoing initiative for which Cyprus assured its full co-operation and support. Its voluntary contribution to UNFICYP, together with the assessed contribution for its maintenance, would exceed $1 million for 1985.

The January high-level meeting, Cyprus said, had not produced any progress, because of the negative attitude of the Turkish Cypriot side and its premeditated plans to ruin the meeting in order to proceed with further partitionist acts. According to the interpretation of the Greek Cypriot side, Cyprus noted, the meeting was to entail constructive discussion based on documentation presented by the Secretary-General. However, Mr. Denktas had insisted that the texts should be signed without discussion and that outstanding matters such as the withdrawal of non-Cypriot forces, the questions of guarantees and freedom of movement and settlement, and the territorial aspect be referred to working groups.

Cyprus said that after four days of intensive efforts to salvage the meeting, Mr. Denktas had not agreed to discuss anything and had left, having rejected a proposal by the Secretary-General for a new high-level meeting and after stating that none of the documents prepared in the three rounds of talks, even the non-papers, which included shifts in Turkish positions, was any longer valid.

Referring to the so-called referendum and presidential elections, Cyprus called them a mockery of democratic principles which violated United Nations resolutions on the island. It emphasized that the principle of self-determination could not be interpreted in such a way as to impair the unity of the people and the territorial integrity of any State. The results of the referendum showed that without the "votes" of the Turkish settlers, a majority in favour of the new "constitution" would not have been secured. In May, President Kyprianou had stated that there could be no solution of the Cyprus problem without the withdrawal of all occupation troops and all settlers, Cyprus stated.

Greece considered it imperative that the Force should remain with its current strength and noted that it had become an important component of a delicate balance. Greece observed that Cyprus had displayed political restraint and statesmanship, having accepted, with onerous sacrifices, all of the Secretary-General's proposals; it said the so-called referendum and elections ran counter to and defied United Nations resolutions. A viable solution to secure the territorial integrity and unity of Cyprus, based on justice and respect for human rights, should be found soon, Greece said, adding that any solution would be totally incompatible with the presence of any occupation or other foreign troops.

Speaking on behalf of the Turkish Cypriot community, Mr. Koray said that the Greek Cypriot side did not want a solution to the problem, based on bicomunal, bi-zonal federal principles, as envisaged by the draft agreement presented in January. He also stressed the necessity to ensure the continuation of the Turkish guarantee, which was indispensable for Turkish Cypriots.

Referring to the resolution, Mr. Koray said that it contained elements unacceptable to the Turkish Cypriot side and thus rejected it in toto. The text referred to the Government of Cyprus, which Turkish Cypriots considered illegal since the legitimate Government had been destroyed in 1963 by its Greek Cypriot wing. The Turkish Cypriot side had also previously rejected, or accepted with reservations, the other relevant resolutions mentioned in the current one. Further, Mr. Koray said, reference was made to the "present mandate" which his community believed was incompatible with the radically changed conditions. He reiterated Turkish Cypriot support for the good offices mission of the Secretary-General and his side's readiness to contact him after the 23 June elections.

Turkey, speaking of the January meeting, stressed that the Turkish Cypriot side had fully accepted the draft agreement while the Greek Cypriot side regarded the documentation as a basis for negotiations only, which meant that it was not ready to enter into reciprocal commitments with its counterpart. After the collapse of that meeting, a new situation had emerged in which both parties were free to re-formulate their negotiating positions and therefore a new negotiating process had to be initiated.

Turkey reiterated that the Greek Cypriots had never had any constitutional or legal right to represent Turkish Cypriots and hence the whole of Cyprus. In the absence of a joint federal Government, it was the inalienable right of the Turkish Cypriot people to be represented only by the authorities elected by them. Turkey pointed out that the Turkish Cypriot side had left the door open to a bicomunal and bi-zonal federal solution to be negotiated between the two sides with the purpose of establishing a partnership. It also stressed that the absolute prerequisite of the good offices mission was that the two sides be treated as equal political authorities representing the two peoples of the island.

With regard to the Council's resolution, Turkey gave similar reasons to those given by Mr. Koray as its objections, adding that the text did not rest on a legally or politically valid foundation and therefore did not enjoy the support of all the directly interested parties. However, Turkey would continue its traditional role of moderation and strive to facilitate the search for a bi-zonal federal solution.

Australia thought an early solution to the problem could be achieved only through negotiation and dialogue, and said it supported Council resolutions 541(1983)(13) and 550(1984)(14) which it felt outlined the path towards a just and lasting settlement. The Secretary-General's mission of good offices continued to present the best means of progress, and the international community should support further diplomatic activity; while those efforts continued, it was essential that no side should jeopardize them. Australia stated, adding that it would continue its contingent of civilian policemen in UNFICYP, and urging Member States to increase substantially their voluntary contributions to the Force.

Communications (18-25 June). In a letter of 18 June,(15) Sri Lanka expressed concern over the so-called presidential elections of 9 June, terming them but one in a series of secessionist measures which could only aggravate the situation in the island.

Cyprus, on 25 June,(16) drew attention to the "parliamentary elections" held two days earlier in the north of the island, which it said aimed at consolidating the illegalities created by the use of force; the Turkish side was continuing its negative attitude at a time when the Secretary-General's mission had reached a delicate and important phase.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (September)

On 8 August the Secretary-General received a reply to his 12 April letter from Mr. Denktas, setting out the views of the Turkish Cypriot side on specific aspects of the Secretary-General's efforts. After the two had further discussions on 12 and 13 September, the Secretary-General reported orally to the Security Council.

On 20 September 1985, the Council President made the following statement on its behalf:(17)

Meeting number. SC 2607.

The Security Council has been seized with the Cyprus question since 1964. The members of the Council have been kept informed of the efforts begun by the Secretary-General in August 1984 as part of the mission of good offices entrusted to him by the Council.

On 20 September 1985, the members of the Council heard an oral report from the Secretary-General, in the course of which he conveyed his assessment that his initiative had brought the positions of the two sides closer than ever before and expressed his conviction that what had been achieved so far should lead to an early agreement on the frame work for a just and lasting settlement of the Cyprus question in accordance with the principles of the Charter. Recalling their support for the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity, unity and non-alignment of the Republic of Cyprus, members of the Council expressed strong support for the mission of the Secretary-General under his mandate from the Council.

The members of the Security Council, therefore, called upon all parties to make a special effort in co-operation with the Secretary-General to reach an early agreement.

Communications (September-November). On 7 November,(18) Cyprus protested several violations of its airspace by fighter-planes of the Turkish air force which, it said, took place on 5 November. Responding on 20 November,(19) Mr. Koray stated that the overflights had taken place with prior notification to UNFICYP, within what he called the sovereign borders and airspace of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus.

In its Final Political Declaration, the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September)(20) deplored the separatist actions by the Turkish Cypriot leadership, including the so-called referendum and elections. A similar position was taken by the heads of Governments of Common wealth States (Nassau, Bahamas, 16-22 October),(21) who noted that no other country besides Turkey had recognized the illegal entity.

Report of the Secretary-General (November/December). In a report to the Security Council on the operation in Cyprus covering 1 June to 30 November 1985, the Secretary-General updated

UNFICYP activities<sup>(22)</sup> (see p. 256) and recapitulated events related to his good offices mission,<sup>(23)</sup> adding that he had met with President Kyprianou in October. During his discussions with the community leaders, he had stressed the vital importance of preserving what had been achieved since August 1984, since he believed that the two sides were within reach of an agreement whose details would have to be negotiated to their satisfaction. However, unless both were willing to agree on the framework for an overall agreement, no further progress could be expected. With an important opportunity at hand, the Secretary-General believed it possible to resolve the few remaining issues by working in co-operation with him. Referring to his recommendation that the Council extend the mandate of UNFICYP for a further six months,<sup>(22)</sup> he stated that Cyprus, Greece and the United Kingdom concurred, while Turkey and the Turkish Cypriot community would expound their position before the Council.<sup>(24)</sup>

Concerning the Committee on Missing Persons, the Secretary-General reported that it resumed its substantive work in June and had held two sessions of four and five meetings, respectively. Its investigatory work had reached an advanced stage in nearly one quarter of the cases before it, while initial work had been completed on nearly half of the cases.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (December)

The Security Council met on 12 December to consider the Secretary-General's report and his recommendation to extend the UNFICYP mandate. Austria, Cyprus, Greece and Turkey were invited, at their request, to participate without the right to vote. Mr. Koray was also invited to participate under rule 39<sup>b</sup> of the provisional rules of procedure.

The Council then unanimously adopted resolution 578(1985).

The Security Council,

Taking note of the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations operation in Cyprus of 30 November and 11 December and of 9 December 1985,

Noting the recommendation by the Secretary-General that the Security Council should extend the stationing of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus for a further period of six months,

Noting also that the Government of Cyprus has agreed that in view of the prevailing conditions in the island it is necessary to keep the Force in Cyprus beyond 15 December 1985,

Reaffirming the provisions of its resolution 186(1964) and other relevant resolutions,

1. Extends once more the stationing in Cyprus of the United Nations Peace-keeping Force established under resolution 186(1964) for a further period, ending on 15 June 1986;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to continue his mission of good offices, to keep the Security Council informed of the progress made and to submit a report on the implementation of the present resolution by 31 May 1986;

3. Calls upon all the parties concerned to continue to co-operate with the Force on the basis of the present mandate.

Security Council resolution 578(1985)

12 December 1985 Meeting 2635 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17680).

After the vote, Austria expressed on behalf of the countries contributing troops and civilian police-Australia, Austria, Canada, Denmark, Finland, Ireland, Sweden and the United Kingdom-deep concern over the financial situation of UNFICYP (see p. 258), emphasizing that the widening gap between voluntary contributions and the operation's real costs placed an ever heavier burden on those countries, which had always borne a large portion of UNFICYP's expenses; they appealed to States to increase or begin making contributions, to alleviate the serious financial situation.

Cyprus reiterated that a basic pre-condition for solving the island's problems was the withdrawal of Turkish occupation troops before the establishment of an interim Government. It recalled that the United Nations, in mandatory resolutions on Cyprus, had urged the speedy withdrawal of all foreign forces, the return of all refugees to their homes and lands, respect for the sovereignty and unity of Cyprus and non-interference in its affairs. Cyprus pointed out that Turkey had voted in favour of a 1974 General Assembly resolution,<sup>(25)</sup> subsequently endorsed by the Council,<sup>(26)</sup> containing such calls, but Turkey's record towards implementing those resolutions had been dismal; Turkish troops in Cyprus posed an insurmountable obstacle to genuine negotiations. The continued Turkish policy of militarization and expansion against Cyprus explained the positions taken by the Turkish Cypriot community in the intercommunal talks. Cyprus charged Turkey and Mr. Denktas with having admitted that the withdrawal of troops was non-negotiable and that they would remain in perpetuity.

Cyprus noted that after the high-level meeting's failure to produce results because of the refusal of Mr. Denktas to engage in meaningful dialogue and his rejection of compromise efforts, the Greek Cypriot side had accepted the Secretary-General's idea for a new high-level meeting. Cyprus accused Mr. Denktas of a series of illegal acts aimed at entrenching the unilateral declaration of independence. It was anxious, however, to reach a negotiated settlement in the framework of the Secretary-General's initiative.

Having emphasized that Greece was one of the guarantors of the Republic of Cyprus, Greece agreed that no solution to the question could be envisaged if it did not provide for withdrawing the Turkish army before any transitional machinery was set up in Cyprus; furthermore, a system of effective guarantees should be agreed upon.

Greece quoted its Prime Minister, who had said that Greece could not accept a transitional period or provisional Government before the last Turkish soldier had withdrawn; if Turkey became a guarantor Power, Greece would not agree to act likewise, since Greece's idea was to have guarantees from a group of States from East, West and the third world.

It would be dangerous for Greece to guarantee a constitutionally unworkable solution, providing for the Turkish army presence in the island under one form or the other, Greece explained; such a structure would probably collapse, leading to a major crisis threatening peace in the area. Reaffirming support for the Secretary-General's initiative and pointing to the important concessions made by President Kyprianou—which, in Greece's opinion, had gone beyond the safety limit for the Greek Cypriot community and the State of Cyprus—Greece stated that it was time for Turkey to take a decisive step.

Mr. Koray felt it was ironic that the side which had tried to destroy the bicomunal independence of the 1960 Republic of Cyprus and make it a colony of Greece was claiming to be the Government of Cyprus, capable of representing both sides. He believed that the choice was between peace through negotiations on an equal footing with the elected representatives of the Turkish people of Cyprus or the pursuit of unrealistic, one-sided, condemnatory resolutions harmful to reconciliation. Pointing out that the Greek Cypriot leadership had rejected the 1984 draft agreement in January 1985, he referred to the positions taken by the non-aligned countries<sup>(20)</sup> and the Commonwealth States<sup>(21)</sup> (see p. 252) and charged that the Greek Cypriot leaders had tried to internationalize the conflict further. Mr. Koray stressed that the Turkish guarantee had proved effective in bringing his community from the brink of destruction and colonization; the only element capable of safeguarding a Cyprus settlement was the establishment of a bicomunal, bi-zonal federal republic with guarantees of equal political status and the legitimate rights of both sides.

With regard to the current resolution, Mr. Koray stated that the Turkish Cypriot side rejected it completely because it would not help bridge the gap between the conflicting parties but would increase the intransigence of the other side. However, his community favoured the presence of UNFICYP on what he said was its territory. He reiterated that all aspects of co-operation between the "Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus" and UNFICYP should be based only on decisions taken by that "Government". The Turkish Cypriot side had preserved its faith in the Secretary-General's initiative and continued to give it full support, Mr. Koray added.

Turkey pointed out that UNFICYP's continued presence after 21 years had to be viewed in the light of the radically changed circumstances in the island and in the context of its role in support of peace-making efforts. Because of this role in particular, Turkey would have wished that the current resolution on UNFICYP enjoyed the support of all the directly interested parties. Turkey completely agreed with the position outlined by Mr. Koray, and had consistently supported the Secretary-General's mission. Stressing its support of an agreed settlement between the two communities, which had to reconcile their differences through negotiations in a manner which satisfied their legitimate concerns on the basis of political equality, Turkey added that it was incumbent upon Turkey and Greece to facilitate an agreement between the two through the good offices mission. Turkey emphasized that it would not support any other negotiating process and accused Greece of actively intervening in that process, with the objective of disrupting it.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY CONSIDERATION

On 16 September 1985, at the closing meeting of its resumed thirty-ninth session, the General Assembly adopted decision 39/464 without vote. By this decision, orally proposed by its President, the Assembly deferred consideration of the question of Cyprus and included it in the agenda of its fortieth (1985) session.

On 18 December, the Assembly, in decision 40/470 on the suspension of its fortieth session, again deferred the item, together with other agenda items, to its resumed fortieth session, at a date to be announced.

Other action. The Commission on Human Rights on 13 March postponed its debate on human rights in Cyprus to 1986 (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII).

Peace-keeping and humanitarian assistance

The United Nations Peace-keeping Force in Cyprus, established by the Security Council in 1964,<sup>(27)</sup> continued throughout 1985 to supervise the cease-fire lines of the Cyprus National Guard and of the Turkish and Turkish Cypriot forces. It also provided security for civilians in the area between the lines; discharged its functions with regard to the security, welfare and well-being of the Greek Cypriots living in northern Cyprus; regularly visited Turkish Cypriots residing in the south; and supported United Nations relief operations.

The area between the cease-fire lines was kept under constant surveillance by UNFICYP through a system of 141 observation posts, 60 of which were permanently manned. The number of cease-fire violations remained at a low level; the frequency of shooting incidents had decreased slightly and there were no exchanges of fire between opposing forces. UNFICYP continued to be successful in restoring the status quo ante. In Nicosia, however, the troops of both sides continued to be exposed to each other at dangerously close range, which continued to be of great concern to the Force since the overwhelming majority of cease-fire violations and other related incidents occurred in that area. Following an earlier UNFICYP initiative to abate the risk of destabilization of the cease-fire in Nicosia, the Force Commander had put forward to both sides on 10 July a proposal aimed at establishing mutually agreed military deconfrontation of the area of Nicosia on both sides of the so-called Green Line, where no operational and observation activities would be permitted and where no military-oriented construction or renovation work would take place. Further discussions of the proposal were envisaged during the mandate period from 16 December 1985 to 15 June 1986.

After new civilian construction projects close to the lines in Nicosia were protested by both sides, UNFICYP monitored the projects to confirm their civilian nature and alleviate concerns.

In the Famagusta area, a maritime security line restricting boat movement in the seaward extension of the United Nations buffer zone was accepted by both sides.

Overflights of the buffer zone continued, with 26 such flights by Turkish forces or civilian aircraft and 26 from the south; all overflights were protested.

Temporary visits by Greek Cypriots living in the north to the south continued through the good offices of UNFICYP and 1,236 such visits were made for family or medical reasons. Thirty-three Greek Cypriots transferred permanently to the south leaving 727 residing in the north. UNFICYP continued visiting Turkish Cypriots living in the south and contacting their relatives in the north; 10 reunions involving 38 persons were arranged. Two Turkish Cypriots moved permanently from the south to the north. Frequent contacts between members of the Maronite community residing on opposite sides of the lines continued and four Maronites transferred to the south; the number remaining in the north was 365. It was verified that all transfers were voluntary.

Emergency medical service was provided to both civilian communities. Turkish Cypriots were escorted to the south for treatment and medicines were delivered to them in the north. UNFICYP distributed 616 tons of food and other related items provided by Cyprus and the Cyprus Red Cross to Greek Cypriots in the north. Food continued to be provided by the World Food Programme to 22,000 children and to social welfare institutions on both sides.

As Co-ordinator of humanitarian assistance for Cyprus, UNHCR continued to assist the displaced and needy. The 1985 programme, providing for $7.5 million to finance 22 projects and co-ordinated by the Cyprus Red Cross Society, involved constructing a general hospital, overseas procurement of equipment and supplies for health, education and agriculture, and professional training. UNFICYP supported the programme by delivering 312.9 tons of supplies in the 12-month period.

Joint activities continued between the Greek Cypriot and the Turkish Cypriot communities in the framework of ongoing projects, assisted by the United Nations Development Programme, with the second phase of the joint Nicosia Master Plan project due to end on 31 December.

The UNFICYP Civilian Police continued to support UNFICYP military units and operated in liaison with both the Cyprus and the Turkish Cypriot police, contributing to the protection and movement of civilians between the cease-fire lines.

This information on UNFICYP was contained in two reports by the Secretary-General to the Security Council, covering 13 December 1984 to 31 May 1985,(9) and until 30 November 1985.(22) In both, he recommended that the Force's mandate be extended. The Council twice in 1985 extended the mandate for a six-month period, first until 15 December 1985 and then until 15 June 1986 (see pp. 252 and 255).

Composition of UNFICYP. As at 30 November 1985, UNFICYP had a strength of 2,328, including 36 civilian police, and was composed of contingents from eight States (see table below).

During the year ended 30 November 1985, five members of the Force died, bringing total fatalities to 138 since UNFICYP's inception in 1964.

UNFICYP financing

UNFICYP continued to be financed by voluntary contributions and by troop-contributing Governments. Contributions received in 1985 from 28 countries totalled $16,565,800 (see table below). Estimated costs, including United Nations operational costs and reimbursement of extra costs to Governments providing contingents, totalled some $28 million. The full 12-month cost was approximately $100.5 million, of which troop-contributing Governments absorbed some $72.5 million for such items as regular pay and allowances and normal matériel expenses.

As at 15 December 1985, the accumulated deficit since the operation's inception in 1964 was of the order of $133.9 million, an increase of some $12 million in 12 months. Consequently, the claims of the troop contributors had been met only through June 1978.

On 18 February(28) and 4 November 1985,(29) the Secretary-General made renewed appeals to States for voluntary contributions to finance UNFICYP. He again stressed its indispensable contribution in support of his efforts to promote a just and lasting settlement, and expressed his concern over its precarious financial situation, which continued to place an unfair burden on the troop-contributing countries. Annexed to his appeals were details on the Force's financing.

Other questions concerning the Mediterranean region

Tensions remained high in the Mediterranean region in 1985, particularly with regard to relations between Egypt and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya and between the latter and the United States. Letters sent by those States to the President of the Security Council or the Secretary-General concerned various aspects of the situation, and in December the General Assembly, by resolution 40/157, again urged all States to reduce tension and promote peace in the area.

Questions concerning the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya

Libyan Arab Jamahiriya-United States relations

On 4 April,(1) the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya referred to what it said were aggressive statements by United States officials against the Jamahiriya, specifically threats to commit military aggression. It also suggested that the symmetry between those threats and an announcement by Egypt of an alleged conspiracy against it hatched by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya showed that there was a United States plan for military action against the Jamahiriya.

On 28 June,(2) the Jamahiriya denied United States allegations that it had been involved in hijacking a United States civilian aircraft at Athens airport (see p. 304) and condemned international terrorism.

Directives issued by the United States President and published in Newsweek on 8 July showed, according to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, that the United States intended to attack civilian targets in several countries including the Jamahiriya, it stated on 3 July;(3) and, on 10 July,(4) it claimed that the United States President had two days earlier threatened the Jamahiriya militarily.

Egyptian-United States military manoeuvres currently being carried out in Egypt, the Jamahiriya stated on 6 August,(5) were a provocative act. That charge was rejected by Egypt on 11 August(6) when it said that the exercises had the goal of training its armed forces in defence of the country. Agreeing, the United States on 14 August(7) added that the training exercises, in which it was participating at Egypt's request, would enable both States to benefit from each other's expertise.

According to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya on 5 November,(8) an item in the The Washington Post on 3 November had quoted informed United States Government sources to the effect that the United States President had authorized the Central Intelligence Agency to undertake a new terrorist operation against the Libyan people. On 31 December,(9) the Jamahiriya charged that an attack was being prepared by Israel and the United States.

Egypt-Libyan Arab Jamahiriya relations

On 20 August,(10) Egypt claimed that a large number of its nationals, working in the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, were being arbitrarily expelled, having their funds and property confiscated or were being forced to adopt Libyan citizenship to remain there. Egypt said it reserved the right to safeguard its nationals' rights. Such language, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya countered on 23 August,(11) confirmed Egypt's involvement in continued aggressive acts against the Jamahiriya; it rejected Egypt's charges as slander, stating that no one had been treated arbitrarily.

On 29 November,(12) the Jamahiriya stated that Egypt had intensified its political, media and military provocations-particularly along the common frontier-further evidence that Egypt and the United States were collaborating to attack the Jamahiriya. Terming the charges propaganda, Egypt, on 12 December,(13) cited what it said were several examples of Libyan terrorist operations against Egypt, and said it would not relinquish its right to repel destabilization attempts.

For other questions relating to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, see p. 196 and LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter I.

Security in the Mediterranean

The views of 11 States on strengthening security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region were forwarded to the General Assembly on 21 August.(14) They had been submitted in reply to the Assembly's 1984 invitation for States' ideas on their potential contribution to strengthening peace in the area.(15)

The Final Political Declaration adopted by the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-7 September)(16) contained a call to States to respect the non-aligned Movement's 1984 Valletta Final Declaration,(17) particularly regarding adherence to non-use or threat of force.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

Acting on the recommendation of the First Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/157 without vote on 16 December.

Strengthening of security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/102 of 9 December 1981, 37/118 of 16 December 1982, 38/189 of 20 December 1983 and 39/153 of 17 December 1984,

Recognizing the importance of promoting peace, security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region and of strengthening further the economic, commercial and cultural links in the region,

Expressing concern over persistent and increasing tension in parts of the Mediterranean region and the consequent threat to peace,

Deeply concerned at the recent extension of military operations to new areas of the Mediterranean and the grave dangers which these create for peace, security and general equilibrium in the region,

Considering, in this regard, the urgency for all States to conform in their actions to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations, as well as to the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the need to promote security and to strengthen co-operation in the region, as provided for in the Mediterranean chapter of the Final Act of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe, signed at Helsinki on 1 August 1975,

Reaffirming the primary role of Mediterranean countries in the promotion of security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region,

Recalling, in this connection, the Final Declaration adopted at Valletta on 11 September 1984 by the Mediterranean members of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries, and the commitments assumed by the participants with the objective of contributing to peace and security in the region,

Taking note of the fact that a meeting of economic experts of the Mediterranean members of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries was held at Valletta on 13 and 14 November 1985, in the context of their efforts to strengthen regional co-operation in various fields,

Taking note of the debate on this item during the various sessions of the General Assembly,

Taking note also of the note by the Secretary-General and of the replies contained therein received in 1985 from Governments in accordance with General Assembly resolution 39/153,

1. Reaffirms:

(a) That the security of the Mediterranean is closely linked with European security and with international peace and security;

(b) That further efforts are necessary for the reduction of tension and of armaments and for the creation of conditions of security and fruitful co-operation in all fields for all countries and peoples of the Mediterranean, on the basis of the principles of sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity, security, non-intervention and non-interference, non-violation of international borders, non-use of force or threat of use of force, the inadmissibility of the acquisition of territory by force, peaceful settlement of disputes and respect for permanent sovereignty over natural resources;

(c) The need for just and viable solutions of existing problems and crises in the area on the basis of the provisions of the Charter and of relevant resolutions of the United Nations, the withdrawal of foreign forces of occupation and the right of peoples under colonial or foreign domination to self-determination and independence;

2. Welcomes any further communication to the Secretary-General, from all States, of proposals, declarations and recommendations on strengthening peace, security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region;

3. Urges all States to co-operate with the Mediterranean States in the further efforts required to reduce tension and promote peace, security and co-operation in the region in accordance with the purposes and principles of the Charter and with the provisions of the Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Encourages once again efforts to intensify existing forms and to promote new forms of co-operation in various fields, particularly those aimed at reducing tension and strengthening confidence and security in the region;

5. Renews its invitation to the Secretary-General to give due attention to the question of peace, security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region and, if requested to do so, to render advice and assistance to concerted efforts by Mediterranean countries in promoting peace, security and co-operation in the region;

6. Invites the member States of the relevant regional organizations to lend their support and to submit to the Secretary-General concrete ideas and suggestions on their potential contribution to the strengthening of peace and co-operation in the Mediterranean region;

7. Requests the Secretary-General to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session, on the basis of all replies received and notifications submitted in the implementation of the present resolution and, taking into account the debate on this question during its fortieth session, an updated and comprehensive report on the strengthening of security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region;

8. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Strengthening of security and co-operation in the Mediterranean region".

General Assembly resolution 40/157

16 December 1985 Meeting 117 Adopted without vote

Approved by First Committee (A/40/1027) without vote, 6 December (meeting 61); 8-nation draft (A/C.1/40/L.86); agenda item 71.

Sponsors: Algeria, Cyprus, Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malta, Morocco, Romania, Tunisia, Yugoslavia.

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 1st Committee 55-61; plenary 117.

In the First Committee, several States explained their position on the text. The United States said it had reservations, for example with regard to paragraph 1 (c) referring to previous United Nations resolutions, since it did not support all of those texts; it also considered the 1984 Valletta Declaration unacceptable. Despite reservations on textual inadequacies and references, Israel said it had joined the consensus to emphasize its commitment to strengthening regional security and co-operation. Bulgaria felt that the text would have gained substance by dealing more directly with the region's main security issue—curbing the arms race.

The Security Council also expressed grave concern at the threat to Mediterranean peace and security when it considered a 1 October 1985 Israeli bombing attack on Tunisia (see p. 285).

(For other questions concerning peace and security in the area brought before the United Nations in 1985, see next chapter.)

Chapter IX

Middle East

The search for a peaceful settlement to the conflict in the Middle East and its key issue, the Palestine problem, continued in 1985. The General Assembly, the Security Council and several other United Nations bodies considered various aspects of the situation, including the Palestine question—seen as the core of the conflict—incidents and disputes between individual Arab States and Israel, the situation in Lebanon and in the territories occupied by Israel, and Palestine refugees. The United Nations continued to maintain two major peace-keeping operations in the region, the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) in the Golan Heights and the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL).

The Assembly again endorsed the call for an International Peace Conference on the Middle East, stressing the need to convene it without delay.

The question of Palestine continued in 1985 to be a concern of the Assembly and its Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (Committee on Palestinian rights). The Assembly adopted resolutions asking for the situation relating to the question to be kept under review, inviting co-operation with the Committee and the Secretariat's Division for Palestinian Rights, and requesting the Department of Public Information to continue its special information programme on the question.

The Assembly also again dealt with the status of Jerusalem.

The Middle East situation, with particular emphasis on the Palestine question, was also considered by the Security Council at four meetings in October.

In July, a meeting of various United Nations bodies and funds assessed progress towards a co-ordinated assistance programme for Palestinians. Both the Economic and Social Council and the Assembly requested that the United Nations system intensify its efforts, in co-operation with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), to provide economic and social assistance.

PLO was accused by some Members of being involved in several terrorist attacks that took place during the year. In what it said was a retaliatory action, Israel bombed PLO headquarters in Tunisia on 1 October, killing and wounding many persons. The act was condemned by the Security Council. Palestinians, said to be members of a PLO faction, on 7 October hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, during which incident a passenger was killed and thrown overboard. Council members condemned the hijacking and all acts of terrorism.

Throughout the year, the Secretary-General continued consultations with the Lebanese Government and other parties involved in the ongoing conflict in Lebanon. Despite those efforts, the positions of the parties remained far apart. In January, Israel announced a three-phase plan for unilateral redeployment and withdrawal of its forces. During the third phase in May/June, Israel Defence Forces (IDF) withdrew progressively, handing their positions over to the "South Lebanon Army" (SLA), which was supported by IDF, in an area to be maintained as a "security zone"—a strip of land north of the international border.

During and after the withdrawal, both the number and intensity of attacks by Lebanese resistance groups against Israeli forces and Lebanese irregulars armed and controlled by them increased sharply. In part of its area of deployment, UNIFIL was confronted with many positions which overlapped those manned by IDF and/or local Lebanese forces, mainly SLA, in the security zone. Attacks by Lebanese groups gave rise to countermeasures by Israeli and associated forces and led to frequent and dangerous confrontations between those forces and UNIFIL.

The Security Council considered the situation in Lebanon in February/March and again in May. It called for an end to the violence against civilians and for measures to alleviate their suffering. During the year, the Council extended the mandate of UNIFIL twice, in April and October, each time for six months.

The 1981 bombing by Israeli aircraft of a nuclear research centre near Baghdad, Iraq, was again taken up in 1985. The Assembly requested the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to consider additional measures to ensure that Israel undertook not to attack or threaten to attack peaceful nuclear facilities, and reaffirmed that Iraq was entitled to compensation. The IAEA General Conference, in September, noted that Israel had committed itself not to attack peaceful nuclear facilities.

The Assembly, as well as the Commission on Human Rights, dealt with the situation in the Syrian Golan Heights since Israel's December 1981 decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on that territory. The Assembly again declared that decision to be illegal and that the decision and Israel's occupation constituted an act of aggression. UNDOF continued to supervise the observance of the cease-fire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights area. The Security Council twice in 1985 extended UNDOF's mandate for six months, in May and November.

The Assembly approved appropriations for UNDOF for operations from 1 June 1985 to 31 May 1986 totalling more than $36 million, and appropriated some $142 million for UNIFIL's operations from 19 April 1985 to 18 April 1986. It also authorized suspension of certain provisions of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations that would otherwise have required surrender of some funds to States.

The Secretary-General reviewed the rates of reimbursement to troop-contributing States. The Assembly retained the current rates, last revised in 1980, but asked him to review them at least every two years.

The United Nations Truce Supervision Organization continued to assist the two peace-keeping forces in the Middle East—UNDOF and UNIFIL—in the performance of their tasks, and maintained two observation groups of its own in Beirut, Lebanon, and in Egypt.

The situation in the territories occupied by Israel as a result of previous armed conflicts was again considered by the Assembly and its Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli practices). The Committee observed that there was a continuing deterioration in the respect for the civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights of the population of the territories.

The Assembly adopted seven resolutions dealing with specific aspects of the Committee's report. It condemned and demanded that Israel desist from a number of policies and practices, among them action that would change the legal status and composition of the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including the Syrian Golan Heights, and demanded that Israel comply with the 1949 Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, that it release Ziyad Abu Eain and other Palestinian prisoners, that it rescind the measures taken expelling Palestinians and that it ensure the freedom of educational institutions.

The Security Council considered the situation in the occupied territories during two meetings in September, but did not adopt any formal decisions.

In March, the Secretary-General organized a seminar on remedies for the deterioration of the economic and social conditions of the Palestinians in the territories. Affirming that Israeli occupation was contradictory to the basic requirements for their development, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to organize by April 1987 a seminar on development projects to improve their living conditions.

In June 1985, the Secretary-General submitted a study on Israeli economic practices in the territories and a progress report on lifting Israeli restrictions and on projects to facilitate the territories' economic development. The Assembly and the Economic and Social Council requested a report on Israeli financial and trade practices in the territories, and called for the lifting of Israeli restrictions and facilitation of the establishment of a seaport and citrus and cement plants.

The Secretary-General reported that in June Israel had ceased all work on a planned canal linking the Mediterranean Sea and the Dead Sea. The Assembly requested that he monitor any new development relating to the project.

Emergency operations in Lebanon dominated relief efforts in 1985 of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA). In addition, UNRWA continued to assist Palestinian refugees in Jordan, the Syrian Arab Republic, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, providing education, health and relief services.

UNRWA activities and various aspects of the Palestine refugee problem were addressed by the Assembly, which adopted 11 resolutions on assistance to Palestine refugees, the Working Group on the Financing of UNRWA, assistance to displaced persons, scholarships for higher education and training, Palestine refugees in the Gaza Strip, ration distribution, return of refugees displaced since 1967, revenues derived from refugee properties, refugee protection, refugees in the West Bank, and a proposed University of Jerusalem for Palestine refugees.

Middle East situation

The situation in the Middle East continued to be unstable and the search for a peaceful settlement of the conflict there remained elusive despite intensive efforts by the United Nations and individual Member States, the Secretary-General stated in an October 1985 report.<sup>(1)</sup> While the positions of the various parties to the conflict remained far apart, there was wide acceptance of Security Council resolution 242(1967)<sup>(2)</sup> which spelt out two important principles for a settlement: the withdrawal of Israel's forces from territories it occupied, and respect for and acknowledgement of the sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence of every State in the area and their right to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries. There was also wide agreement that there must be a satisfactory resolution of the Palestine problem based on recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, including self-determination.

Various peace proposals made in 1985 and in previous years contained important elements that could contribute to the formulation of a common approach, the Secretary-General stated. There were also some signs of flexibility with regard to the negotiating process. He believed that a new and determined effort should be made to explore and use United Nations machinery to enhance the search for a settlement in the Middle East.

The convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East was widely seen as one of these possibilities. The Secretary-General, in March,<sup>(3)</sup> reported on Security Council consultations on the question. The Committee on Palestinian rights, in its annual report to the General Assembly,<sup>(4)</sup> expressed the conviction that a conference would provide an opportunity for all the parties to participate in negotiations which should lead to a just and lasting solution.

By resolution 40/168 A, the Assembly dealt with a variety of issues related to the Middle East situation Reaffirming its conviction that the question of Palestine was the core of the conflict in the region, it declared once more that peace in the Middle East was indivisible and must be based on a comprehensive, just and lasting solution under United Nations auspices and on the basis of United Nations resolutions. By resolution 40/96 D, it again endorsed the call for the convening of a peace conference, stressing the need for additional constructive efforts to convene it without delay.

Communications. In connection with the Middle East situation, communications were addressed during the year to the Presidents of the General Assembly and of the Security Council and to the Secretary-General. By letters of 10 January<sup>(5)</sup> and 2 December,<sup>(6)</sup> Israel drew the Secretary-General's attention to what it called some of the extreme examples of anti-Semitic rhetoric in United Nations forums during November and December 1984, among them statements made before the Assembly by Iran, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, and by Bahrain and Iraq in committee. There was a trend emerging at the United Nations, Israel said, allowing such rhetoric to be practised with ever-growing impunity, traceable to the 1975 Assembly resolution<sup>(7)</sup> equating Zionism with racism. Israel urged the Secretary-General to condemn the recurrent outbreaks of anti-Semitic rhetoric and consider ways of preventing those breaches of the Charter of the United Nations and of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights.<sup>(8)</sup>

On 6 May,<sup>(9)</sup> Italy transmitted a declaration on the Arab-Israeli conflict, adopted by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the 10 member States of the European Community (EC) at the fifty-seventh Ministerial Meeting on European Political Cooperation (Luxembourg, 29 April). The Ministers stated that they welcomed recent moves towards a reactivation of the negotiation process in the search for a solution to the conflict, notably an agreement reached at Amman on 11 February between Jordan and the Palestinians which contained a commitment to negotiations in accordance with United Nations resolutions. Such initiatives, in their opinion, deserved encouragement and a positive response; no effort should be spared to facilitate a dialogue between all the parties. The Ten reconfirmed their willingness to contribute to a comprehensive settlement on the basis of the principles of recognition of the rights of all States in the region, including Israel, to existence and security, and the right of the Palestinians to self-determination.

On 16 May,<sup>(10)</sup> the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya transmitted to the Security Council President a letter of 15 May from the Secretary of the People's Committee of the People's Bureau for Foreign Liaison of the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. It charged Israeli deployment of nuclear missiles in the Syrian Golan and Negev Desert areas. That deployment, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya stated, was a serious threat to peace and security in the region and the world. It signalled an escalation in aggression against the Arab nation, laid the groundwork for occupation operations and posed the threat of attack against Arab cities and vital installations. The act was a flagrant violation of international treaties and United Nations resolutions, flouted repeated appeals to States to accede to the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,<sup>(11)</sup> heightened tension in the region, and placed the Arab nation in a position obliging it to exercise its right of self-defence under the United Nations Charter, as long as the Security Council did not take immediate steps to remove the threat of those missiles. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya reserved the right to request the convening of the Council.

On 19 August,(12) Morocco transmitted to the Secretary-General the Final Communiqué of the Extraordinary Summit Conference of Arab States (Casablanca, 7-9 August), which stressed the need for Arab solidarity and continued collective Arab commitment to the principles of the 1982 Twelfth Arab Summit Conference at Fez, Morocco.(13) By a letter of 28 August,(14) the Syrian Arab Republic pointed out that the Casablanca Communiqué did not express a unanimous Arab position owing to the fact that live Arab States, including itself, had not participated in the Conference and more than half of the Arab heads of State had been absent from it.

On 18 September,(15) Madagascar transmitted a number of resolutions adopted by the Council of Ministers of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) at its forty-second ordinary session (Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 10-17 July). By one of them, OAU affirmed total support for the Arab countries, victims of Israeli aggression; it recommended that member States renew their firm determination not to establish or re-establish diplomatic ties with Israel and urgently appealed to the international community to exert effective pressure on Israel in all fields to coerce it to comply with OAU decisions.

In a communiqué of the co-ordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Organization of the Islamic Conference (New York, 9 October), Israel's rejection of United Nations decisions was condemned. The meeting demanded that the international community take the necessary measures, including sanctions, to ensure that Israel abided by the Charter and international law. The communiqué was transmitted by Yemen on 15 October.(16)

Reports of the Secretary-General. In an October report,(1) the Secretary-General said that in recent contacts with leaders of the parties concerned, he had gained the impression that they were fully conscious of the dangers a further delay in finding an agreed settlement of the Middle East problem could entail for the region and beyond.

While the positions of the various parties to the conflict remained far apart, the Secretary-General noted that there was general acceptance of Security Council resolution 242(1967)(2) and wide agreement that the Palestine problem must be resolved satisfactorily, based on recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, including self-determination.

During recent years, a number of peace proposals had been put forward by Governments. They included the proposals made in September 1982 by the United States President,(17) by the USSR,(13) and by the Fez Summit Conference in its Declaration,(13), as well as the proposals of the USSR made in July 1984.(18) In addition, there was the peace initiative of Jordan's King Hussein based on an agreement reached in February 1985 with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, under which Jordan and PLO would move together towards a just and peaceful settlement and towards the termination of Israeli occupation of Arab territories. Although those proposals for various reasons were so far unacceptable to one or another of the parties, they all contained important elements that could contribute to the formulation of a common approach.

The Secretary-General also noted signs of flexibility with regard to the negotiating process. To enable the parties to embark on such a process, a generally acceptable procedure had to be found, with the full support of Governments in a position to help. He felt that, despite the existing difficulties, a new and determined effort should be made to explore the various possibilities of the United Nations machinery to promote progress in the Middle East peace process.

In this context, the Secretary-General reported that he had pursued his contacts with the parties and others concerned regarding the search for a peaceful settlement, including the convening of an international conference as recommended by the Assembly (see p. 268). In the evolution of a settlement, the Security Council could play a vital role, but other avenues of the United Nations could also be explored.

The Secretary-General annexed to another report(19) replies from 13 countries, received by 18 October 1985, on their implementation of three 1984 Assembly resolutions: in two of them,(20) the Assembly had called on States to adopt a number of measures concerning military, economic, diplomatic and cultural relations with Israel; by the third,(21) it had called again on States that had transferred their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem to abide by United Nations resolutions.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1985, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/168 A on the situation in the Middle East.

Reaffirming its resolutions 36/226 A and B of 17 December 1981, ES-9/1 of 5 February 1982, 37/123 F of 20 December 1982, 38/58 A to E of 13 December 1983, 38/180 A to D of 19 December 1983 and 39/146 A to C of 14 December 1984,

Recalling Security Council resolutions 425(1978) of 19 March 1978, 497(1981) of 17 December 1981, 508(1982)

of 5 June 1982, 509(1982) of 6 June 1982, 511(1982) of 18 June 1982, 512(1982) of 19 June 1982, 513(1982) of 4 July 1982, 515(1982) of 29 July 1982, 516(1982) of 1 August 1982, 517(1982) of 4 August 1982, 518(1982) of 12 August 1982, 519(1982) of 17 August 1982, 520(1982) of 17 September 1982, 521(1982) of 19 September 1982 and 555(1984) of 12 October 1984,

Taking note of the reports of the Secretary-General of 11 March 1985,(3) 24 September 1985(19) and 22 October 1985,(1)

Reaffirming the need for continued collective support for the resolutions adopted by the Twelfth Arab Summit Conference, held at Fez, Morocco, on 25 November 1981 and from 6 to 9 September 1982, reiterating its previous resolutions regarding the Palestinian question and its support for the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole, legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, and considering that the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East, under the auspices of the United Nations, in accordance with General Assembly resolution 38/58 C and other relevant resolutions related to the question of Palestine, would contribute to the promotion of peace in the region,

Welcoming all efforts contributing towards the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people through the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East, in accordance with the United Nations resolutions relating to the question of Palestine and to the situation in the Middle East,

Welcoming the world-wide support extended to the just cause of the Palestinian people and the other Arab countries in their struggle against Israeli aggression and occupation in order to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East and the full exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable national rights, as affirmed by previous resolutions of the General Assembly relating to the question of Palestine and to the situation in the Middle East,

Gravely concerned that the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, still remain under Israeli occupation, that the relevant resolutions of the United Nations have not been implemented and that the Palestinian people is still denied the restoration of its land and the exercise of its inalienable national rights in conformity with international law, as reaffirmed by resolutions of the United Nations,

Reaffirming the applicability of the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, to all the occupied Palestinian and other Arab territories, including Jerusalem,

Reaffirming also all relevant United Nations resolutions which stipulate that the acquisition of territory by force is inadmissible under the Charter of the United Nations and the principles of international law and that Israel must withdraw unconditionally from all the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem,

Reaffirming further the imperative necessity of establishing a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the region, based on full respect for the Charter and the principles of international law,

Gravely concerned also at the continuing Israeli policies involving the escalation and expansion of the conflict in the region, which further violate the principles of international law and endanger international peace and security,

Stressing once again the great importance of the time factor in the endeavours to achieve an early comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East,

1. Reaffirms its conviction that the question of Palestine is the core of the conflict in the Middle East and that no comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the region will be achieved without the full exercise by the Palestinian people of its inalienable national rights and the immediate, unconditional and total withdrawal of Israel from all the Palestinian and other occupied Arab territories;

2. Reaffirms further that a just and comprehensive settlement of the situation in the Middle East cannot be achieved without the participation on an equal footing of all the parties to the conflict, including the Palestine Liberation Organization, the representative of the Palestinian people;

3. Declares once more that peace in the Middle East is indivisible and must be based on a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the Middle East problem, under the auspices and on the basis of the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, which ensures the complete and unconditional withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, and which enables the Palestinian people, under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to exercise its inalienable rights, including the right to return and the right to self-determination, national independence and the establishment of its independent sovereign State in Palestine, in accordance with the resolutions of the United Nations relevant to the question of Palestine, in particular General Assembly resolutions ES-7/2 of 29 July 1980, 36/120 A to F of 10 December 1981, 37/86 A to D of 10 December 1982, 37/86 E of 20 December 1982, 38/58 A to E of 13 December 1983 and 39/49 A to D of 11 December 1984;

4. Considers the Arab Peace Plan adopted unanimously at the Twelfth Arab Summit Conference, held at Fez, Morocco, on 25 November 1981 and from 6 to 9 September 1982, and reiterated by the Extraordinary Summit Conference of the Arab States held at Casablanca, Morocco, from 7 to 9 August 1985, as well as relevant efforts and action to implement the Fez Plan, as an important contribution towards the realization of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people through the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East;

5. Condemns Israel's continued occupation of the Palestinian and other Arab territories, including Jerusalem, in violation of the Charter of the United Nations, the principles of international law and the relevant resolutions of the United Nations, and demands the immediate, unconditional and total withdrawal of Israel from all the territories occupied since 1967;

6. Rejects all agreements and arrangements which violate the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people and contradict the principles of a just and comprehensive solution to the Middle East problem to ensure the establishment of a just peace in the area;

7. Deplores Israel's failure to comply with Security Council resolutions 476(1980) of 30 June 1980 and 478(1980) of 20 August 1980 and General Assembly resolutions 35/207 of 16 December 1980 and 36/226 A and B of 17 December 1981; determines that Israel's decision to annex, Jerusalem and to declare it as its "capital" as well as the measures to alter its physical character, demographic composition, institutional structure and status are null and void and demands that they be rescinded immediately; and calls upon all Member States, the specialized agencies and all other international organizations to abide by the present resolution and all other relevant resolutions and decisions;

8. Condemns Israel's aggression, policies and practices against the Palestinian people in the occupied Palestinian territories and outside these territories, including expropriation, the establishment of settlements, annexation and other terrorist, aggressive and repressive measures, which are in violation of the Charter and the principles of international law and the relevant international conventions;

9. Strongly condemns the imposition by Israel of its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the occupied Syrian Golan Heights, its annexationist policies and practices, the establishment of settlements, the confiscation of lands, the diversion of water resources and the imposition of Israeli citizenship on Syrian nationals, and declares that all these measures are null and void and constitute a violation of the rules and principles of international law relative to belligerent occupation, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949;

10. Considers that the agreements on strategic co-operation between the United States of America and Israel, signed on 30 November 1981, and the continued supply of modern arms and matériel to Israel, augmented by substantial economic aid, including the recently concluded Agreement on the Establishment of a Free Trade Area between the two Governments, have encouraged Israel to pursue its aggressive and expansionist policies and practices in the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem, have had adverse effects on efforts for the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Middle East and threaten the security of the region;

11. Calls once more upon all States to put an end to the flow to Israel of any military, economic, financial and technological aid, as well as of human resources, aimed at encouraging it to pursue its aggressive policies against the Arab countries and the Palestinian people;

12. Strongly condemns the continuing and increasing collaboration between Israel and the racist régime of South Africa, especially in the economic, military and nuclear fields, which constitutes a hostile act against the African and Arab States and enables Israel to enhance its nuclear capabilities, thus subjecting the States of the region to nuclear blackmail;

13. Reaffirms its call for the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East under the auspices of the United Nations and on the basis of its relevant resolutions—as specified in paragraph 5 of the Geneva Declaration on Palestine and endorsed by General Assembly resolution 38/58 C of 13 December 1983;

14. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council periodically on the development of the situation and to submit to the General Assembly at its forty-first session a comprehensive report covering the developments in the Middle East in all their aspects.

General Assembly resolution 40/168 A

Before adopting the text as a whole, the Assembly adopted paragraph 10 by a recorded vote of 64 to 33, with 41 abstentions.

Reservations on that paragraph were voiced by several speakers. The United States found it particularly repugnant and regarded it as unwarranted interference in its internal affairs, totally outside the Assembly's jurisdiction; it rejected the allegation that its co-operation with and assistance to Israel threatened the security of the region and had an adverse effect on peace efforts. Turkey found the reference to the free-trade-area agreement unhelpful and stressed that its positive vote did not mean that it fully agreed with the paragraph's contents. Democratic Yemen, on the other hand, believed that the paragraph merely mentioned facts; among those facts was that the strategic co-operation agreements had encouraged Israel to commit acts of aggression. Democratic Yemen believed that the free-trade-area agreement encouraged Israel not to heed the international will on negotiations.

Strong reservations on paragraph 10, as well as on paragraph 11, were also voiced by Sweden. Peru objected to the interpretation that might be given to those paragraphs and to paragraph 6, none of which, it said, recognized the relevance of all the peace efforts initiated. Reservations on the same three paragraphs were expressed by Argentina.

Mexico reserved its position in particular on paragraph 6, Greece on paragraph 12. Albania had reservations on paragraph 13, as well as on the second and fifth preambular paragraphs. General reservations on some of the wording and provisions of the text were voiced by Ecuador and the Philippines; the latter added that resolutions on the Middle East situation should be balanced and should not prejudice the sovereign rights of States to conduct their own international affairs as they saw fit.

Nepal felt that elements in the text ran counter to the guiding principles for its Middle East policy, reflected in Security Council resolutions 242(1967)(2) and 338(1973).<sup>(22)</sup> Austria could not support elements in the text which, it felt, not only aggravated the existing situation but impeded the search for peace.

The Syrian Arab Republic stated that it had not joined the sponsors because it objected to the mention of the August Summit Conference of the Arab States in paragraph 4; at the same time, it emphasized its full support of the decisions taken at the 1982 Fez Summit.<sup>(13)</sup>

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya stressed its strong reservations against anything in the text that could be interpreted as recognition of the Zionist entity or of a fait accompli imposed by force in the territories.

Israel said that, rather than address in the resolution the real issues and major conflicts of the Middle East, the sponsors had averted any initiative towards their solution or even discussion and instead repeated false accusations.

Seeking to place the entire blame on one party to the Arab-Israeli conflict, said the United States, tended to widen rather than to reconcile the differences among the parties, thus making any peace process even more difficult.

New Zealand regretted that the text did not reflect the balance of principles embodied in Security Council resolutions and the measured approach essential to secure the co-operation of all parties.

Speaking on behalf of the 10 members of the European Economic Community (EEC), as well as Portugal and Spain, Luxembourg stated their serious reservations on the text, saying it contained aspects which were not in accord with their common stand on the principles for a comprehensive settlement; they could not accept formulations levelling criticisms against a permanent Security Council member for having exercised its rights in accordance with the United Nations Charter. Expressing agreement with that view, Greece declared its attachment to the Charter principle proscribing the threat or use of force, and to the Helsinki Final Act.

Peru would have liked explicit mention of Security Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973), which it considered an acceptable and just basis for an agreement. Mexico believed that a general framework for a Middle East solution might be found in Security Council and Assembly resolutions. It considered it urgent and necessary for the parties to take positions promoting accord on agreements; the possibility of negotiating an agreement under international auspices would be progress towards normalizing political relations in the area.

Brazil warned that the possibilities of achieving a solution should not be reduced by diplomatic isolation of one of the parties to the conflict, even if that party had been acting in a manner incompatible with international law; Israel should not be offered further excuses to act, because of its isolation, in further disregard for that law.

Singapore said it supported all efforts aimed at restoring the rights of the Palestinians and a return to a just and durable peace in the Middle East; however, it could not support texts that did not recognize the legitimate rights of Israel, were selective and unbalanced in their condemnation or impinged on the sovereign right of third countries having diplomatic relations with Israel.

In Egypt's view, the text included many principles for a settlement to which it adhered, foremost among them the inadmissibility of the occupation of the territory of others by force, the applicability of the 1949 Geneva Convention to the occupied Arab territories and the condemnation of the establishment of Israeli settlements in those territories.

Introducing the draft resolution on behalf of the sponsors, India stated that recent months had witnessed a deterioration in the Middle East situation resulting in further acts of aggression and intimidation by Israel; it was important to find an early solution on the basis of internationally recognized guidelines and principles and to support the early convening of an international peace conference under United Nations auspices.

Also on 16 December, the Assembly adopted under the agenda item on the Middle East resolution 40/168 B dealing mainly with the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights. In that resolution, the Assembly determined once more that Israel's policies and actions confirmed that it was not a peace-loving Member State, that it had persistently violated the Charter principles, and that it had carried out neither its obligations under the Charter nor its commitments as a United Nations Member. The Assembly called on all Member States to refrain from supplying Israel with any weapons and related equipment and to suspend any military assistance to it; to refrain from acquiring weapons or military equipment from Israel; to suspend economic, financial and technological assistance to and co-operation with it; and to cease, individually and collectively, all dealings with Israel in order totally to isolate it. It also urged non-member States to act in accordance with the resolution, and made a similar call on the specialized agencies and other international organizations.

In resolution 40/5, the Assembly requested the Secretary-General to continue to strengthen co-operation with the General Secretariat of the League of Arab States for the purpose of implementing United Nations resolutions relating to the Palestine question and the Middle East situation, in order to achieve a just, comprehensive and durable solution.

Proposed peace conference

In 1985, the General Assembly stressed the urgent need for constructive efforts by all Governments for the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East, as called for by the 1983 International Conference on the Question of Palestine.<sup>(23)</sup> The Secretary-General reported on ongoing consultations concerning the proposed conference, including the question of participants, and the Committee on Palestinian rights expressed the conviction that a conference provided an opportunity for all the parties concerned to participate in negotiations.

Communication. On 15 October 1985,<sup>(16)</sup> Yemen, as Chairman of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, transmitted to the Secretary-General a communiqué of the co-ordination meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of that organization (New York, 9 October). Among other matters, the communiqué condemned Israel's rejection of the Assembly's decision to hold an International Peace Conference on the Middle East, with the participation of all parties concerned, including PLO.

Reports of the Secretary-General. In March,<sup>(3)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on his continued efforts, in consultation with the Security Council, with regard to the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East, as the General Assembly had requested in 1984.<sup>(24)</sup> He stated that in January 1985 he had asked for the Council's views. The President had replied that he had held bilateral talks with all members, almost all of which were in favour of the principle of holding such a conference. Many felt that it should be convened as early as possible; others considered that the conditions for such a step had not yet been met. The Secretary-General said he intended to pursue consultations, as he had been invited to do by the Council members, and would inform the Assembly and the Council of any new developments.

In his October report<sup>(1)</sup> on the situation in the Middle East, the Secretary-General stated that he had pursued his contacts with the parties to the Middle East conflict and with others concerned regarding the search for a peaceful settlement, including the convening of an international conference. In commenting on the difficulties encountered, he had suggested on several occasions that the machinery of the Security Council be used to enhance that search. He had been kept informed of efforts made by Jordan's King Hussein to bring about negotiations within the framework of an international conference.

Recommendations of the Committee on Palestinian rights. In its annual report to the Assembly, 4, the Committee on Palestinian rights (see p. 273) expressed its conviction that an international conference would provide a comprehensive opportunity for all the parties concerned to participate in negotiations which should lead to a just and lasting solution of the Palestine question. The Committee was encouraged by the responses it had received in the course of its official visits so far to the capitals of a number of Security Council members. The Committee recommended that the Assembly renew the Secretary-General's mandate for contacts regarding preparations with a sense of urgency, and appealed to all countries to exert their best efforts for a successful outcome.

Also at the seminars and symposia of non-governmental organizations (NGOs) held under United Nations aegis (see p. 273), the view was strongly held that the convening of an international conference was a priority which offered the best and most comprehensive approach to a just and lasting solution to the Palestine question.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December 1985, under the agenda item on the question of Palestine, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/96 D by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 38/58 C of 13 December 1983 and 39/49 D of 11 December 1984, in which it, inter alia, endorsed the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East,

Reaffirming its resolution 39/49 D, in which it, inter alia, requested the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Security Council, to continue his efforts with a view to convening the Conference,

Having considered the reply of the President of the Security Council to the Secretary-General, dated 26 February 1985, in which he, inter alia, stated on the subject of the Conference: "In this context, members of the Council invite the Secretary-General to continue consultations on the subject in any manner he deems appropriate in the light of General Assembly resolution 39/49 D.",

Having considered again the reports of the Secretary-General of 13 March 1984 and 13 September 1984, in which he stated, inter alia, that it was clear from the replies of the Governments of Israel and the United States of America that they were not prepared to participate in the proposed Conference, and regretting the continued negative response of these two Governments and the lack of willingness to reconsider their position towards the Conference,

Having considered the reports of the Secretary-General of 11 March 1985 and 22 October 1985, in which he, inter alia, referred to the difficulties experienced in his efforts made the previous year with a view to convening the Conference,

Having heard the constructive statements made by numerous representatives, including that of the Palestine Liberation Organization,

Taking note of the positive positions of the concerned parties, including the Palestine Liberation Organization, and of other States on the convening of the Conference,

Taking note also of the position of the Palestine Liberation Organization which condemns all acts of terrorism, whether committed by States or individuals, including acts of terrorism committed by Israel against the Palestinian people and the Arab nation,

Reiterating once again its conviction that the convening of the Conference would constitute a major contribution by the United Nations towards the achievement of a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the reports of the Secretary-General;

2. Reaffirms again its endorsement of the call for convening the International Peace Conference on the Middle East in conformity with the provisions of its resolution 38/58 C;

3. Stresses the urgent need for additional constructive efforts by all Governments in order to convene the Conference without further delay and for the achievement of its peaceful objectives;

4. Determines that the question of Palestine is the root-cause of the Arab-Israeli conflict in the Middle East;

5. Calls upon the Governments of Israel and the United States of America to reconsider their positions towards the attainment of peace in the Middle East through the convening of the Conference;

6. Requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Security Council, to continue his efforts with a view to convening the Conference and to report thereon to the General Assembly not later than 15 March 1986;

7. Decides to consider at its forty-first session the report of the Secretary-General on the implementation of the present resolution.

Before voting on the text as a whole, the Assembly adopted paragraphs 2 and 5 by recorded votes of 111 to 6, with 29 abstentions, and 89 to 22, with 33 abstentions, respectively. Recorded votes were also taken on the fourth and eighth preambular paragraphs: the former was adopted by 84 votes to 22, with 38 abstentions; the latter, by 79 to 33, with 32 abstentions.

The United States found unacceptable the critical references to its opposition to an international conference as being an intrusion on government policy decisions and harmful to peace efforts. A conference as envisaged would neither yield a constructive examination of the Middle East question nor contribute to a lasting solution; instead, it would be an ideological and propagandistic exercise directed against Israel. The parties to the conflict should resolve the issues in direct negotiations among themselves. The United States also categorically rejected the charge in the eighth preambular paragraph which it said equated Israel with the perpetrators of the vicious acts of terrorism that marked the Middle East.

The one sure and tested road to peace, said Israel, was through direct negotiations, and it would welcome a genuine expression of support for that course by the international community; those who were not genuinely concerned with peace and who would like to arrange an international conference were actually defeating their own purposes, because they called for a conference with Israel and at the same time condemned it as a non-peace-loving State.

In Canada's view, a renewed appeal in constructive terms for a conference could have held promise of positive impact. The text, however, contained extraneous and unacceptable language; the inclusion of unsubstantiated controversial accusations and intemperate language would not contribute to an atmosphere propitious for peace talks.

Finland said it could not support the text as a whole because it contained new elements and unacceptable formulations. Similarly, Sweden believed that elements, particularly in the sixth, seventh and eighth preambular paragraphs, had created a bias which limited the constructive role the text might have played otherwise. In addition, Sweden felt that it could not be the intention of a resolution to force Governments to a conference or to convene one without their agreement. Austria reiterated its support in principle for convening a conference; however, it had difficulties with paragraph 5 and the wording of some preambular paragraphs and objected to the singling out of countries for criticism.

New Zealand was disappointed that the text failed to take cognizance of recent positive developments and did not reflect accurately the balance of principles in resolution 242(1967)(2) or provide a basis for the realistic settlement of the Palestinian problem; although it saw merit in the idea of a conference, it did not consider it timely to convene one until the parties demonstrated the will to resolve the dispute by peaceful means.

Norway said it could support the proposal to convene a conference if that was acceptable to all the parties that were supposed to take part in the negotiations. The text adopted, however, was unconstructive; paragraph 5 and the fourth preambular paragraph did not reflect the constructive steps taken by the United States and Israel during the preceding months, and the eighth preambular paragraph did not mention some of the most serious terrorist activities in the Middle East.

Speaking on behalf of the 10 EC member States, as well as Portugal and Spain, Luxembourg said that, although they had no objection in principle to the holding of an international conference, considerable preparatory work remained. Moreover, the text adopted seemed to lack balance, particularly because of the weight it placed on the views of one of the parties to the conflict. The eighth preambular paragraph was unacceptable as it did not reflect the balanced position adopted by all United Nations Members on terrorism in resolution 40/61 (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter II); the language in the fourth preambular paragraph and in paragraph 5 would isolate and criticize two of the proposed conference participants and was therefore not productive.

Reservations, especially on those provisions, were also expressed by Zaire. Malawi regarded the eighth preambular paragraph as provocative and the insinuation in paragraph 5 as not constructive. It believed that, as one of the parties to the dispute was not prepared to participate, another agreed method should be adopted. Haiti said the holding of a conference presupposed the co-operation of all parties, which meant a halt to rhetoric; the eighth preambular paragraph merely added grist to the mill of those who believed it was not currently appropriate to hold a conference.

Reservations on paragraph 5, as well as on the fourth and eighth preambular paragraphs, were also voiced by several others, among them Bolivia, Malawi, Peru and Venezuela. In Peru's opinion, they were not conducive to creating the best possible conditions to bring about a conference. Argentina felt that certain ideas in the fourth and eighth preambular paragraphs were not specifically relevant to the substance of the resolution; the former tended to prejudge the future attitude of two sovereign States. With regard to the eighth preambular paragraph, Venezuela felt that one particular State should not be singled out as being solely responsible for the terrorist activities in the region and that a more general statement of the problem was called for. It believed that a conference could contribute to peace, provided a number of conditions were met. Uruguay reiterated reservations previously expressed in connection with the documents adopted by the 1983 International Conference on the Question of Palestine.

Singapore suggested mutual recognition of Israel and PLO and said the international community should urge them to pursue a course of compromise.

Albania, which did not participate in the vote, felt the two super-Powers would try to manipulate the conference for their own interests, in rivalry with each other.

Iran took exception to the use of the term "Government of Israel".

Senegal, as Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, introduced the draft resolution on behalf of the sponsors, stating that the international community acknowledged that an international conference was the best way to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the Middle East problem and the Palestine question. In its work, the Committee had given priority to efforts to bring about the conference, and it was strongly encouraged by the positive replies from Governments.

In a statement after the vote, PLO remarked that Israel's terrorist acts against the Palestinians continued. Those who objected to the eighth preambular paragraph refused to take note of PLO's position, and those who were speaking about direct negotiations had it very clear in their minds that the Palestinians did not exist and that they had no right to self-determination.

Other action. Both the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, in resolutions on the Israeli-occupied territories adopted, respectively, on 26 February(25) and 29 August,(26) welcomed the call to convene an international peace conference under United Nations auspices with the participation of all parties on an equal footing and with equal rights.

United Nations Truce Supervision Organization

In his October 1985 report(1) on the Middle East situation, the Secretary-General provided an overview of the three peace-keeping operations in the Middle East: the two peace-keeping forces—UNDOF and UNIFIL (see below, under “Incidents and disputes between Arab countries and Israel”)—and one observer mission, the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization (UNTSO). Apart from assisting UNDOF and UNIFIL in their tasks, UNTSO maintained two observation groups of its own, the Observer Group in Beirut, set up in 1982(27) (see p. 297), and the Observer Group in Egypt, where about 50 observers have remained since 1979 with the agreement of the Government. In addition to a liaison office at Cairo, the Observer Group in Egypt maintained five observation posts in the Sinai.

Credentials of Israel

By a letter of 15 October 1985 to the General Assembly President,(28) 50 States conveyed their reservations on the credentials of Israel, citing instances where, they charged, Israel was continuing its flagrant and persistent violation of the United Nations Charter and international law, and its defiance of United Nations resolutions. The signatories cited the fact that Israel's credentials had been issued in Jerusalem, although the Assembly had determined that the 1980 proclamation of the city as the capital of Israel, among other Israeli legislative and administrative actions, was null and void (see p. 280). The Assembly had stated in 1982(29) that Israel's measures and actions confirmed that it was not a peace-loving State and that it had fulfilled neither its Charter obligations nor its commitments under the 1949 Assembly resolution(30) admitting it to United Nations membership. The Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, by a communiqué adopted in New York on 9 October 1985, had requested all Islamic countries to sign the letter.(16)

On 18 October,(31) Israel responded that the attack on its credentials—which had been found in due form and accepted by the Credentials Committee—was an attempt to abuse the credentials procedure. By trying to deny acceptance of Israel's credentials in the Assembly, the signatories persisted in efforts to violate the letter and spirit of the Charter and the Assembly's rules of procedure; Israel was pleased that the overwhelming majority of Member States recognized and rejected that irresponsible action.

Before adopting resolution 40/2 A approving the first report of the Credentials Committee,(32) the Assembly, by a recorded vote of 80 to 41, with 20 abstentions, decided not to act on an amendment to that report by Algeria, Bahrain, Democratic Yemen, Djibouti, Iraq, Kuwait, Lebanon, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Mauritania, Morocco, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen(33) to reject the credentials of Israel. The motion to take no action was tabled by Sweden on behalf also of Denmark, Finland, Iceland and Norway (see p. 396).

Voting procedures

Referring to a motion by the United States(34) in connection with the vote on a 1984 General Assembly resolution on the Middle East,(35) the United Arab Emirates, in a letter of 8 January 1985(36) to the Secretary-General, rejected the United States interpretation of the applicability to the resolution of Article 18, paragraph 2, of the United Nations Charter. According to Article 18(2), Assembly decisions on important questions—including those on the maintenance of international peace and security—were to be adopted by a two-thirds majority. On the basis of the two precedents cited by the Legal Counsel of the United Nations, the United Arab Emirates said, the impression might have been created that the Assembly's practice on resolutions dealing with the question of Palestine in all its aspects required a two-thirds majority, since they fell within the purview of Article 18(2). However, it said, there were contrary precedents emphasizing the applicability of paragraph 3 of Article 18, which stipulated that decisions on “other questions, including the determination of additional categories of questions to be decided by a two-thirds majority”, should be made by a simple majority of Members present and voting. The trend of the Assembly's general practice with regard to resolutions on the Palestine question had been adoption by a simple, rather than two-thirds, majority.

Replying on 11 January,(37) the Secretary-General recalled that the opinion given by the Legal Counsel did not contain an explicit or implicit statement to the effect that under Assembly practice all resolutions dealing with the Palestine question required a two-thirds majority. The practice had varied, a note attached to the letter said; many of the resolutions relating to the Middle East situation had received a two-thirds majority, so that the question had not arisen as to whether or not they had been adopted under Article 18(2). In other cases, decisions had been taken that individual resolutions came under that provision.

Palestine question

The question of Palestine continued in 1985 to be a concern of the General Assembly and its Committee on Palestinian rights. The Assembly, in December, adopted four resolutions on the question. By the first (resolution 40/96 A), it requested the Committee to keep under review the situation relating to the Palestine question as well as the implementation of the Programme of Action for the Achievement of Palestinian Rights, adopted by the 1983 International Conference on the Question of Palestine.<sup>(1)</sup> By the second resolution (40/96 B), the Assembly invited co-operation with the Committee and the United Nations Secretariat's Division for Palestinian Rights. By the third (40/96 C), it requested the United Nations Department of Public Information (DPI) to continue its special information programme on the Palestine question, and by the fourth (40/96 D), it reaffirmed its endorsement of the call for an International Peace Conference on the Middle East (see p. 268). The Assembly, in resolution 40/168 C, again dealt with the status of Jerusalem, having determined that Israel's 1980 decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City was null and void.

The Middle East situation, with particular emphasis on the Palestine question, was also considered by the Security Council during four meetings in October.

United Nations bodies continued to examine the situation in the Israeli-occupied territories (see p. 326) and to provide and encourage assistance to Palestinians (see p. 281). To assess progress towards a co-ordinated assistance programme and plan future activities in that regard, the Secretary-General convened in July a meeting of various United Nations programmes, organizations, agencies, funds and organs. Both the Economic and Social Council (resolution 1985/57) and the Assembly (resolution 40/170) requested that the United Nations system intensify its efforts, in co-operation with PLO, to provide assistance to the Palestinians, and that the Secretary-General take all necessary steps to finalize a co-ordinated programme.

PLO was charged with being involved in several terrorist attacks that took place during the year. In what it said was in retaliation for the murder of three Israeli citizens in Cyprus, allegedly carried out by PLO, Israel bombed PLO headquarters in Tunisia on 1 October, killing and wounding scores of people. The Security Council, in resolution 573(1985), condemned the bombing as an act of aggression and demanded that Israel refrain from such acts. Four Palestinians, said to be members of a PLO faction, hijacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on 7 October; during the incident, an American citizen, Leon Klinghoffer, was killed and thrown overboard. The members of the Security Council, by a statement of 9 October, condemned the hijacking and all acts of terrorism.

Communications. Throughout the year, Israel, in letters to the Secretary-General, accused PLO of attacks against its citizens. On 26 April,<sup>(2)</sup> it said that, on 19 April, an Israeli naval vessel on patrol had fired warning shots at an unidentified ship approaching Israel's coast. When the ship opened fire and tried to escape, the patrol boat sank it. One body was recovered and 19 apparently drowned. The eight crewmen rescued said they had set out from an Algerian port where they had received special training. They had been ordered by a Fatah deputy commander to attack civilian targets in Israel. The aborted attack was merely one of several recent PLO attacks, Israel said. With these acts, it added, PLO continued to espouse terror as its modus operandi and its raison d'être.

Charging another PLO attempt to attack Israeli cities from the sea, in a letter of 10 May,<sup>(3)</sup> Israel said that on the night of 8/9 May an Israel Defence Force (IDF) patrol boat had sighted a rubber dinghy painted in camouflage colours approaching Israel's coast from Tyre, Lebanon. Trying to escape, the boat was fired upon and sank. PLO, Israel said, had claimed "credit" for this act. Israel added that it would continue to defend its coast and citizens.

Two similar incidents, reported to have taken place during the night of 25/26 August and on 31 August, were described by Israel on 4 September.<sup>(4)</sup>

On 17 June,<sup>(5)</sup> Israel brought to the Secretary-General's attention a message made public by the PLO Chairman on 25 April at Bandung, Indonesia, in which he had praised two Palestinian leaders whom Israel described as notorious Nazi collaborators.

On 20 May,<sup>(6)</sup> Egypt transmitted a letter of 15 May from PLO, annexed to which was a 16 April memorandum by 35 Palestinians to the United States Assistant Secretary of State for Middle Eastern Affairs, calling for a change in the United States position with regard to the Palestine question and demanding that all dealings related to that question be conducted through PLO.

On 20 June,(7) Israel transmitted a summary of several PLO statements on activities of PLO constituent groups pertaining to attacks on civilian targets between 31 March and 19 June. The fact that most of those attacks either failed or were never launched was irrelevant, Israel said; what was significant was PLO's boasting of murdering, bombing and rocketing innocents on buses and in cars, hospitals, villages and cities.

The Acting Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, by a letter of 8 August,(8) expressed concern about reports of reinstated Israeli policies of detention without trial, censorship, and new legislation submitted to the Israeli Knesset which reportedly sought to bar any contacts between Israeli citizens and PLO, under penalty of gaol and fine.

On 21 August,(9) Israel drew attention to the murders of three women and the stabbing of five children which had taken place between October 1984 and the end of July 1985—acts for which PLO had boasted of its responsibility, Israel said.

On 9 September(10) and 27 September,(11) Israel charged further attacks by PLO against Israeli citizens in and outside Israel. During the previous 45 days, it said in its 27 September letter, there had been 32 PLO terrorist attacks on Israeli civilians, resulting in the murder of eight persons and the wounding of 25 women and children. One of the examples cited was the murder of three Israelis vacationing aboard a private yacht at Larnaca, Cyprus (see p. 285). In its 9 September letter, Israel charged that recently PLO had escalated its terror campaign by infiltrating terrorists and smuggling weapons and explosives from Jordan.

Jordan, by a letter of 12 September,(12) refuted that allegation; Palestinian resistance-carried out mainly with stones and knives originating in the occupied territories—was escalating as a natural reaction to Israel's occupation practices (see p. 328). The meaning of Israel's allegation was to sow confusion with regard to Jordan's efforts to consolidate with all parties concerned its February agreement with PLO.

On 6 November,(13) under the Assembly's agenda item on terrorism, Israel submitted a document which it called a record of the PLO terror campaign since its expulsion from Lebanon (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter II). On 5 December,(14) Israel submitted what it titled a "Calendar of Middle Eastern violence", listing bombings, kidnappings, assassinations, executions, coups, hijackings and border incursions during 1985, which Israel said had been taken mostly from Arab press reports.

Two further examples of what Israel termed PLO's unrestricted policy of murder were cited in a 2 December letter,(15) in which Israel also stated that PLO's admitted aim remained the liquidation of Israel, all of which it considered occupied territory.

On 12 December,(16) Yemen transmitted a 1 December statement by its Ministry of Foreign Affairs, rejecting what it called lies and allegations in Israeli information media according to which Palestinians had attacked a number of Yemeni citizens of Jewish faith.

Support for PLO was expressed by some States through protests or expressions of regret that PLO was not invited to address the United Nations fortieth anniversary commemorative ceremonies (see p. 403).

Activities of the Committee on Palestinian rights. The Committee on Palestinian rights continued in 1985 to follow developments in the Israeli-occupied territories and actions by Israel which the Committee regarded as violations of international law or of United Nations resolutions. The Committee brought such actions—including Israeli settlements in the occupied territories, exploitation by Israeli authorities of Arab-owned lands and other matters affecting the rights of the Palestinians (for details, see below, under "Territories occupied by Israel")—to the attention of the General Assembly and the Security Council.

In its annual report to the Assembly,(17) the Committee pointed out that the Palestine question had reached a critical phase; it urged a renewed, concentrated and collective effort to end the plight of the Palestinians and find a just solution under United Nations auspices on the basis of United Nations resolutions. It said its 1976 recommendations,(18) endorsed by the Assembly,(19) were designed to achieve that goal, as were the guidelines adopted by the 1983 Conference on the question of Palestine.(1) The Committee supported the convening of an international peace conference on the Middle East (see p. 268). It believed that it should continue its efforts to increase awareness and understanding of the Palestine question and of its recommendations, and was encouraged by the favourable reaction of non-governmental and other organizations through which public opinion was manifested.

Annexed to the Committee's report were its 1976 recommendations, as well as the Geneva Declaration on Palestine and the Programme of Action for the Achievement of Palestinian Rights adopted by the 1983 Conference on Palestine.(1)

With the Committee's participation, the tenth (Beijing, China, 22-26 April 1985), eleventh (Georgetown, Guyana, 17-20 June) and twelfth (New York, 8 and 9 July) United Nations seminars on the question of Palestine were held. Under the Committee's guidance, the Division for Palestinian Rights organized three regional NGO symposia on the question,—for NGOs in Asia (New Delhi, India, 1-3 May), in North America (New York, 10-12 July) and in Africa (Dakar, Senegal, 5-7 August)—and an international NGO meeting (Geneva, 9-12 September). The reports of the seminars and the declarations of the NGO meetings were annexed to the Committee's report.

SECURITY COUNCIL CONSIDERATION (October)

During four meetings held on 10 and 11 October, the Security Council considered the situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question. The Council met in response to a request from India of 30 September,(20) made in accordance with a decision of the Conference of Foreign Ministers of Non-Aligned Countries (Luanda, Angola, 4-8 13 September). Twenty-three speakers participated in the debate. The Council did not take formal action on the question at these meetings.

Meeting numbers. SC: 2619-2622.

The Council invited Afghanistan, Algeria, Bangladesh, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, the German Democratic Republic, Indonesia, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Morocco, Pakistan, the Syrian Arab Republic and Yugoslavia, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. It also invited the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States, at Kuwait's request,(21) the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, at Egypt's request,(22) and the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, at his request, to participate, under rule 39<sup>a</sup> of the Council's provisional rules of procedure.

At Egypt's request in a letter of 9 October,(23) the Council (decided, by 10 votes to 1 (United States), with 4 abstentions (Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom), that an invitation to participate be accorded to PLO. The President stated that Egypt's proposal was not made pursuant to rule 37<sup>b</sup> or rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, but, if approved, the invitation would confer on PLO the same rights as those conferred on Member States when invited to participate pursuant to rule 37.

Before the vote, the United States reiterated its consistent position that the only legal basis on which the Council might grant a hearing to persons speaking on behalf of non-governmental entities was rule 39. It opposed special ad hoc departures from orderly procedure and consequently opposed extending to PLO the same rights as if it represented a Member State. The Council appeared selectively to try to enhance the prestige of those who wished to speak there, through a departure from the rules of procedure, a practice which the United States considered to be without legal foundation and an abuse of the rules.

Opening the debate, India said the Council meeting should provide an opportunity for an in-depth discussion of all aspects of the Palestine question and the tense situation in the Middle East, with a view to analysing the major obstacles to a comprehensive, just and lasting solution, an essential element of which would be the establishment of an independent Palestinian State in Palestine. Israel's efforts to bring about permanent geopolitical and demographic changes at the expense of the Palestinians must be prevented. Israel should discontinue its settlements policy and withdraw unconditionally from Lebanon, as well as from all Arab and Palestinian territories occupied since 1967. The only viable course to achieve a comprehensive settlement was the early convening of an international peace conference in accordance with well-established guidelines endorsed by the United Nations.

Support for the convening of such a conference (see p. 268) was also expressed by Algeria, Bangladesh, China, the German Democratic Republic, Indonesia, Jordan, Morocco, Pakistan, Peru, the Syrian Arab Republic, Thailand, the USSR and Yugoslavia.

The United States said the serious situation in the Middle East was not improving and grew more violent daily. Terrorism, but one aspect of the situation, dominated all others and made the quest for peace even more elusive. The just and lasting peace in the Middle East that all desired would not be achieved by terrorists or through their actions, but only at the negotiating table.

According to Egypt, the United Nations should support the positions and initiatives taken by King Hussein of Jordan and the PLO Chairman, and continue to encourage any dialogue or negotiation aimed at reaching a just and lasting settlement. Peace required the affirmation of the right of all in the region to live in peace and security, recognition of the Palestinians' national rights, including their right to self-determination, Israel's withdrawal from all occupied territories, and establishment of normal relations between all parties to the conflict on the basis of equality and good-neighbourliness.

<sup>a</sup>Rule 39 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure states: "The Security Council may invite members of the Secretariat or other persons, whom it considers competent for the purpose, to supply it with information or to give other assistance in examining matters within its competence."

<sup>b</sup>Rule 37 of the Council's provisional rules of procedure states: "Any Member of the United Nations which is not a member of the Security Council may be invited, as the result of a decision of the Security Council, to participate, without vote, in the discussion of any question brought before the Security Council when the Security Council considers that the interests of that Member are specially affected, or when a Member brings a matter to the attention of the Council in accordance with Article 35(1) of the Charter."

The increase in terrorist acts on the one hand and in legitimate resistance on the other reaffirmed the seriousness of the absence of a comprehensive, just peace, Jordan believed, and made time a critical factor. In its search for the best path to peace, Jordan, in co-operation with its Arab brothers and in particular the Palestinians, had advocated the political option to solve the conflict on the basis of the principle that had become the foundation of international unanimity—that of territory in return for peace, an approach also manifested in the resolutions of the 1982 Fez Summit.<sup>(24)</sup> The 11 February 1985 Palestinian-Jordanian accord was an appropriate mechanism for fulfilling the Arab peace aspirations expressed in those resolutions. It affirmed the wish of the Palestinians to achieve self-determination, while maintaining relations of unity; it also dealt with the way in which the major Powers and the international community would participate in the achievement of peace and called for an international conference to be attended by all parties concerned, in addition to the Council's permanent members.

The situation in the region was developing in an unprecedented manner due to Israel's persistence in escalating its aggression and terrorism against the Arab people, the Syrian Arab Republic charged. Though pretending to advocate peace, Israel rejected true peace efforts and continued to expand at the expense of other peoples. Stressing the need for Arab solidarity and for a just, lasting and comprehensive peace, the Syrian Arab Republic rejected partial solutions, such as the 11 February Jordan-PLO agreement which it felt was tantamount to eliminating Palestinian rights; the renunciation of an independent Palestinian State would make the concept of self-determination devoid of meaning.

In Australia's view, a comprehensive settlement would prove possible only on the basis of a series of compromises, including Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories, recognition by the States of the region and by PLO of Israel's right to exist, their acceptance of Council resolutions 242(1967)(25) and 338(1973),<sup>(26)</sup> as well as the acknowledgement of the right of self-determination for the Palestinians, including their right to independence and the possibility of their own independent State.

Similar conditions for a settlement were enumerated by other speakers. Peru considered it impossible to envisage a solution that did not take into account the Palestinians' rights and Israel's withdrawal from all occupied territories, and ensure the right of all States to exist within secure and internationally recognized borders. Thailand similarly supported Palestinian rights, including the right to statehood. Without a settlement, it warned, the cycle of violence would continue and might worsen. Resolution 242(1967) remained the agreed basis for achieving a lasting peace.

Pakistan said demand for the recognition of Palestinian rights was seen by Israel as a threat to its expansionist ambitions. Responsibility for Israel's intransigence must be shared by its powerful allies, it added; failure to persuade Israel to accept the conditions for a just and durable peace would intensify the conflict and its attendant violence.

Whatever pretexts Israel might use to justify its acts of murder, aggression and invasion, said Morocco, the logic behind them was to subjugate the Palestinians and create a "Greater Israel" from the Nile to the Euphrates. The doors to peace were still closed because of Israel's flouting of international resolutions and its pursuance of a policy of fait accompli based on power, displacement and military occupation.

Pending a just settlement of the Palestinian issue, and as long as Israel continued its aggression, expansion and occupation of Arab territories by relying on the support and connivance of a certain big Power, there would be no chance for a comprehensive and durable Middle East settlement, China said.

The circle of the crisis continued to widen because of essentially centrifugal Israeli violence, said Algeria; it was a dangerous illusion to believe that the conflict could be kept within limits acceptable in the concept of world peace, when each new Israeli act of aggression was a threatening step towards the conflict's globalization.

It was Israel's incessant aggression against its neighbours, its stepped-up repression of the Palestinians in the occupied territories and its systematic attempts to destroy PLO, in the vain hope of extinguishing Palestinian nationalism and obliterating Palestinian national identity, that had kept the cauldron of enmity stirring, Indonesia believed. Terrorist acts against innocent civilians had grown into a menace of alarming proportions, it added, impeding the search for a just and comprehensive solution.

The Palestinians had been exposed to the most brutal acts of colonization and even annihilation, Yugoslavia stated, but the exercise of their sovereign will could not be thwarted; the right to existence could not be secured by force which denied that same right to others.

In the face of growing international consensus in favour of the Palestinian cause, said Bangladesh, Israel had again resorted to force to heighten tension in the region, with a view to frustrating current international efforts to resolve the Middle East problem peacefully.

Israel's policy of aggression formed the main obstacle to a comprehensive settlement, the German Democratic Republic stated; in defiance of

United Nations resolutions, Israel denied the Palestinians their rights, especially the right to establish a State of their own, and its policy of State terrorism against the Palestinians had been escalating. 'The USSR proposals of July 1984,(27) which coincided with the 1982 Fez peace plan,(24) were the way to a comprehensive, just and durable solution to the Palestinian problem.

Israel was trying to thwart any United Nations decision to create two States in Palestine and was attempting forcibly to remove the Palestine question from the agenda, the USSR alleged; it had raised to the level of State policy terror, violence and the flouting of the rights of other peoples. Attempts to prompt the Arabs to undertake separate agreements with the aggressor was a myopic policy and fraught with the danger of further complicating the situation. It was essential that the Palestinians were guaranteed their rights and that all States in the area, including Israel, were guaranteed a secure and independent existence and development; international safeguards should be provided for settling the problem.

The Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights believed that the possibility of a just and lasting Middle East peace would be increased if the Council adopted measures to implement the Committee's 1976 recommendations.(18)

In the opinion of the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States, the Middle East was at the boiling-point and every incident in any part of the Arab world was used by Israel to gloss over the central issue: the denial of the Palestinians' right to self-determination. If the Middle East conflict were resolved within the United Nations framework, it would no longer feed on an undermining of relations between the two super-Powers.

In the view of the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, the cycle of violence was a symptom rather than the cause of the conflict; the symptoms could not be removed without touching on the basic cause: the denial of Palestinian rights, including the rights to return, to self-determination and to establish an independent State in Palestine.

Attempts to deny the Palestinians their inalienable rights would never lead to the desired peace, PLO said. PLO's sincere and constructive efforts towards achieving peace had met only with further denial of Palestinian rights and with more suppression, murder and displacement. Allowing Israel's occupation to continue and maintaining the status quo could only worsen the situation; the right path to peace was the convening of an international peace conference. The Palestinian revolution would continue until the Palestinians—now totalling 5 million—returned to their homeland.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION (December)

Following consideration of the report of the Committee on Palestinian rights, the General Assembly, in December 1985, adopted four resolutions on the question of Palestine, dealing with the Committee and its recommendations (resolution 40/96 A), the Division for Palestinian Rights (40/96 B), public information activities (40/96 C) and the convening of an International Peace Conference on the Middle East (40/96 D, see p. 268).

Resolution 40/96 A was adopted on 12 December by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

2. Endorses the recommendations contained in paragraphs 163 to 172 of the report of the Committee and draws the attention of the Security Council to the fact that action on the Committee's recommendations, as repeatedly endorsed by the General Assembly at its thirty-first session and subsequently, is still awaited;

5. Requests the Committee to continue to extend its co-operation to non-governmental organizations in their contribution towards heightening international awareness of the facts relating to the question of Palestine and in creating a more favourable atmosphere for the full implementation of the Committee's recommendations, and to take the necessary steps to expand its contacts with those organizations;

6. Requests the United Nations Conciliation Commission for Palestine, established under General Assembly resolution 194(III) of 11 December 1948, as well as other United Nations bodies associated with the question of Palestine, to co-operate fully with the Committee and to make available to it, at its request, the relevant information and documentation which they have at their disposal;

Israel said that by its calculation more than $6 million of the United Nations budget was allocated for services involving the issue of Palestine, while for the question of apartheid only about $1.5 million was allocated. Arab oil producers, which had earned an estimated $100 billion in 1985, had thereby hijacked United Nations resources that could otherwise have been channelled to end hunger, to combat apartheid or to finance a number of other worthy causes.

The United States opposed the text, saying it endorsed the work of a body which propagated partial, partisan views of the Palestine issue; the United States had consistently opposed the Committee's work because of its inherent and blatant bias.

In Finland's view, the text failed to represent the prerequisite balance for a comprehensive, just and lasting Middle East settlement.

New Zealand deplored that for too long, and unjustly, the Palestinians had been denied their legitimate rights, in particular their right to self-determination and to national independence; at the same time, it recognized Israel's right to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries. Security Council resolution 242(1967)(25) established the principles for a just and lasting peace that would be achieved only through discussion, negotiation and conciliation.

Singapore appealed to both Israel and PLO to recognize each other's legitimate rights. It considered that Council resolutions 242(1967) and 338(1973)(26) established the fundamental basis for a stable and lasting Middle East peace, a view shared by Norway, which added that it must be up to the parties to the conflict themselves to determine which negotiating formula would serve progress towards such peace. Spain felt that those resolutions, a sound point of departure in the search for a solution, should be supplemented with a formulation expressing clear and unequivocal recognition of the rights of the Palestinians.

Zaire expressed support for the Palestinians' struggle to recover their right to independence and freedom and to have a State, in conformity with those two resolutions and the 1947 General Assembly resolution on the partition of Palestine.(28)

Bolivia believed that in order to achieve the exercise of Palestinian rights, including the right to self-determination, it was important that Israel and the Palestinians pursue steps towards peace through negotiation and without resorting to the use of force.

Uruguay voted in favour in view of its continuing concern for the achievement of a peaceful, just and lasting solution, but reiterated its reservations in connection with the Declaration and the Programme of Action adopted at the 1983 Conference on Palestine(1) which, it said, had essentially inspired the text. Such reservations were also reiterated by Peru.

Also on 12 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/96 B by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Noting the particularly relevant information contained in paragraphs 135 to 150 of that report,

Recalling its resolutions 32/40 B of 2 December 1977, 33/28 C of 7 December 1978, 34/65 D of 12 December 1979, 35/169 D of 15 December 1980, 36/120 B of 10 December 1981, 37/86 B of 10 December 1982, 38/58 B of 13 December 1983 and 39/49 B of 11 December 1984,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the action taken by the Secretary-General in compliance with General Assembly resolution 39/49 B;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to ensure that the Division for Palestinian Rights of the Secretariat continues to discharge the tasks detailed in paragraph 1 of General Assembly resolution 32/40 B, paragraph 2 (b) of resolution 34/65 D, paragraph 3 of resolution 36/120 B and paragraphs 2 and 3 of resolution 38/58 B, in consultation with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and under its guidance;

3. Also requests the Secretary-General to provide the Division for Palestinian Rights with the necessary resources to accomplish its tasks and to expand its work programme, particularly through additional meetings for non-governmental organizations, in order to heighten awareness of the facts relating to the question of Palestine and to create a more favourable atmosphere for the full implementation of the recommendations of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People;

4. Further requests the Secretary-General to ensure the continued co-operation of the Department of Public Information and other units of the Secretariat in enabling the Division for Palestinian Rights to perform its tasks and in covering adequately the various aspects of the question of Palestine;

5. Invites all Governments and organizations to lend their co-operation to the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People and the Division for Palestinian Rights in the performance of their tasks;

6. Takes note with appreciation of the action taken by Member States to observe annually on 29 November the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People and the issuance by them of special postage stamps for the occasion.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Solomon Islands, Sweden, United Kingdom.

The United States said it opposed the work of the Division because of its inherent and blatant biases; the text called for activities which in addition to being costly propagated partial and partisan views of the Palestine issue. Israel objected to what it felt was a misallocation of resources for matters relating to the Palestine question.

Speaking on behalf of the 10 EC member States, Portugal and Spain, Luxembourg said it regretted that the supplementary expenditures were several times the amounts reflected in the draft programme budget; given the difficult financial situation, all efforts should be made not to impose unnecessary burdens on the budget. In Finland's view, the text failed to represent the balance necessary for a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement. According to New Zealand, it did not represent the balance of principles in resolution 242(1967) or provide a basis for a realistic settlement of the Palestinian problem.

Uruguay said the text was essentially inspired by the Declaration and the Programme of Action adopted by the 1983 Conference, on which it had reservations.

In resolution 40/25, the Assembly strongly condemned the constant and deliberate violations of the rights of the Palestinians, as well as Israel's expansionist activities, which it considered an obstacle to the achievement of Palestinian self-determination and independence and a threat to peace and stability in the region. The Assembly called for immediate implementation of the declarations and programmes of action on Palestine adopted by international conferences. It urged States and international organizations to support the Palestinian people through PLO in struggling to regain their right to self-determination and independence.

Other action. The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, in a resolution of 29 August 1985(29) on the situation in the Israeli-occupied territories (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII), affirmed its support for the Declaration adopted by the 1983 Conference on Palestine(1) and expressed deep concern that, until a just and equitable solution to the Palestine problem had been implemented, the Palestinians would be exposed to grave dangers.

Public information activities

The Committee on Palestinian rights, in its 1985 annual report,(17) examined implementation of a 1984 General Assembly resolution(30) requesting DPI, in co-operation with the Committee, to continue and expand information activities relating to the Palestine question.

The Department's information programme included publications, audio-visual coverage, a fact-finding mission for journalists, and a series of national and regional journalists' encounters. DPI coverage of the Palestine question included radio news programmes broadcast in all the official United Nations languages, as well as in many others, and preparations for the production of a short film on the subject were under way.

A fact-finding mission to the Middle East, comprising a team of prominent media persons from around the world, visited Tunisia, Egypt, Jordan and the Syrian Arab Republic from 1 to 18 April, meeting with leading personalities and visiting refugee camps.

In 1985, DPI again organized two regional journalists' encounters, bringing together high-level journalists and experts on the Palestine question. An encounter for 15 such journalists from the North American-Caribbean region was held at Bridgetown, Barbados, in February, and another for 15 Asian journalists at Jakarta, Indonesia, in May.

As requested by the Assembly in 1984,(30) DPI began in 1985 to organize national encounters in which a team of expert panelists held in-depth press conferences with national journalists in various countries. Three African journalists' encounters were held between 24 July and 7 August, in Egypt, Madagascar and Senegal. European encounters were held in the United Kingdom, France and Czechoslovakia, between 21 and 29 August. United Nations information centres throughout the world continued to carry out information activities in connection with the question and disseminate United Nations publications; they also helped organize the world-wide observance of the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on 29 November.

DPI's coverage of policies and practices that frustrated the attainment and exercise of Palestinian rights, submitted pursuant to another 1984 Assembly resolution,(31) was summarized in a Secretariat note submitted to the Committee on Information in April.(32)

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 12 December 1985, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/96 C by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People,

Noting, in particular, the information contained in paragraphs 151 to 162 of that report,

Recalling its resolutions 38/58 E of 13 December 1983 and 39/49 C of 11 December 1984,

Convinced that the world-wide dissemination of accurate and comprehensive information and the role of non-governmental organizations and institutions remain of vital importance in heightening awareness of and support for the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination and to the establishment of an independent sovereign Palestinian State,

1. Takes note with appreciation of the action taken by the Department of Public Information of the Secretariat in compliance with General Assembly resolutions 38/58 E and 39/49 C;

2. Requests the Department of Public Information, in full co-operation and co-ordination with the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People, to continue its special information programme on the question of Palestine for the biennium 1986-1987 and, in particular:

(a) To disseminate information on all the activities of the United Nations system relating to the question of Palestine;

(b) To continue to update publications on the facts and developments pertaining to the question of Palestine;

(c) To publish brochures and booklets on the various aspects of the question of Palestine, including Israeli violations of the human rights of the Arab inhabitants of the occupied territories;

(d) To expand its audio-visual material on the question of Palestine, including the production of a new film, special series of radio programmes and television broadcasts;

(e) To organize fact-finding news missions to the area for journalists;

(f) To organize regional and national encounters for journalists.

Abstaining: Australia, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Solomon Islands, United Kingdom, Zaire.

In the opinion of the United States, the text called for activities by DPI which—in addition to being costly—invariably propagated partial, partisan views of the Palestine issue which did not advance negotiated solutions.

Israel pointed to what it called the distorted nature of the material, symposia and forums recommended in the text, and deplored what it felt was a misallocation of resources, including $1 million for public information on the question.

Luxembourg, on behalf of the 10 EC members, Portugal and Spain, hoped that DPI would continue to base itself on the principle of impartiality and would stick to its usual decision-making process. Luxembourg also objected to the budgetary implications of the resolution.

Zaire had reservations on paragraph 2 (c). Malawi said it realized the importance of disseminating information on Palestine, but hoped that the information would be as objective as possible.

Introducing the draft resolution, the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights said it enumerated the activities DPI had been performing for two years and of which the Committee, in its annual report, took note with satisfaction. The only new parts of the 1985 and 1984 texts were those regarding the production of new films and radio and television broadcasts on the Palestine question.

In resolution 40/164 A, the Assembly requested DPI to cover adequately those policies and practices which frustrated the attainment and exercise of Palestinian rights.

Jerusalem

In an October report(33) on the situation in the Middle East (see p. 264), the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly about implementation by 13 responding States of its 1984 resolution(34) deploring the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem and calling on them to abide by the relevant United Nations resolutions. The Assembly, by resolution 40/168 C, again determined that Israel's 1980 decision to impose its laws and administration on the city was illegal and null and void.

The closing of the Medical Facility Hospice in the Old City of Jerusalem, which had provided services to nearly 150,000 Arab patients, was the subject of several communications (see p. 281). The Assembly, in resolution 40/161 D, called on Israel to allow its reopening.

In several communications, Israel charged PLO with attacks on Israeli civilians in Jerusalem.

Communications. On 14 May 1985,(35) Israel brought to the Secretary-General's attention a bomb explosion at a hospital bus stop in Jerusalem on 12 May, adding that another bomb was left at the entrance to a park and two more were found that day at bus stops on busy streets in the town of Beth Shemesh. Two different terrorist groups, Israel said, had claimed responsibility. From whichever faction of PLO the would-be killers were sent, Israel added, their aim was the same—the deliberate murder of innocent civilians.

On 23 July,(36) Israel reported that on 19 July a young Arab man from Hebron had stabbed five children and their day-camp counsellor on their way to a swimming pool in Jerusalem. According to Israeli police, PLO had said that it was part of an "entrance examination" for PLO recruits.

On 27 September,(11) Israel cited a booby-trapped car in the Mea Sharim neighbourhood of Jerusalem and a bomb explosion at a bus station near Hadassah Hospital, injuring two, as further examples of PLO terrorist attacks against innocent Israelis.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, under the agenda item on the Middle East, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/168 C by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 36/120 E of 10 December 1981, 37/123 C of 16 December 1982, 38/180 C of 19 December 1983 and 39/146 C of 14 December 1984, in which it determined that all legislative and administrative measures and actions taken by Israel, the occupying Power, which had altered or purported to alter the character and status of the Holy City of Jerusalem, in particular the so-called "Basic Law" on Jerusalem and the proclamation of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel, were null and void and must be rescinded forthwith,

Recalling Security Council resolution 478(1980) of 20 August 1980, in which the Council, inter alia, decided not to recognize the "Basic Law" and called upon those States that had established diplomatic missions at Jerusalem to withdraw such missions from the Holy City,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 22 October 1985,

1. Determines that Israel's decision to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Holy City of Jerusalem is illegal and therefore null and void and has no validity whatsoever;

2. Deplores the transfer by some States of their diplomatic missions to Jerusalem in violation of Security Council resolution 478(1980) and their refusal to comply with the provisions of that resolution;

3. Calls once again upon those States to abide by the provisions of the relevant United Nations resolutions, in conformity with the Charter of the United Nations;

4. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly at its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Against: Costa Rica, Israel.

Abstaining: Antigua and Barbuda, Dominica, Grenada, Guatemala, Liberia, Malawi, Paraguay, Swaziland, United States, Zaire.

In the view of the United States, the status of Jerusalem could only be determined through negotiations among the concerned parties in the framework of an overall peace settlement; repeated resolutions on the question served no useful purpose.

Luxembourg, speaking for the 10 EEC members, Portugal and Spain, recalled the importance attached to the 1980 Security Council decision<sup>(37)</sup> not to recognize the "Basic Law" enacted by Israel that year proclaiming a change in the character and status of Jerusalem.

New Zealand reaffirmed that it did not recognize the validity of Israel's annexation of East Jerusalem.

Introducing the text, India said that Israel's total and unconditional withdrawal from all Arab territories occupied since 1967, including the Holy City of Jerusalem, should be a part of a just and comprehensive solution to the problems of West Asia.

Closing of the Hospice hospital

Communications. By a letter of 18 July,<sup>(38)</sup> the Acting Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights informed the Secretary-General of news reports of action taken by the Israeli authorities to close at the end of the month the Roman Catholic Medical Facility Hospice in occupied East Jerusalem—the only government hospital in the Arab part of Jerusalem caring for the poor. In the Committee's view, this was further evidence of Israel's failure to provide medical services in a manner acceptable to the local population.

The closing of the hospital was cited by the Committee on Israeli practices<sup>(39)</sup> (see p. 328) as an example of Israel's policy to de-Arabize Jerusalem. To protest the closing, all shops in East Jerusalem were closed on 24 July.

The evacuation of the hospital was also the subject of a cablegram from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Jordan, transmitted to the Secretary-General on 29 July.<sup>(40)</sup> The hospital had been caring especially for patients from Jerusalem and the West Bank of Jordan who for financial reasons had not been admitted to other hospitals, Jordan said. Israel had deliberately adopted certain measures against the hospital, including the withholding of funds, which had led to a deterioration of services. Jordan regarded those measures as illegal and called for immediate action by the international community.

Israel, on 2 August,<sup>(41)</sup> categorically rejected the allegations that the closure of the hospital was the result of a political decision. The reasons for its action, it said, was that the medical equipment was out of date, resulting in inadequate medical care, and the building structure did not allow room for a suitable elevator, so that patients had to be carried to and from the operating room by hand-held stretchers. The decision was in line with the Ministry of Health's policy of closing small hospitals and those with one category of patient (such as women), Israel continued. The assertions that its closure would deprive the residents of proper medical care was unfounded; they would receive care at Jerusalem's other hospitals. At the Hospice building, a first-aid station would continue to operate. Moreover, Israel added, increased medical supervision in Arab schools and municipal assistance to first-aid stations, along with health insurance and hospitalization, enabled Arab residents of Jerusalem to receive medical care on a par with that of the rest of Israel and far superior to that found elsewhere in the Middle East.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In a separately adopted paragraph of resolution 40/161 D on the occupied territories, the General Assembly called on Israel to allow the reopening of the Hospice so that it could continue to provide health and medical services to the Arab population in the city.

Assistance to Palestinians

Report of the Secretary-General. In June 1985,<sup>(42)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted a report on United Nations assistance to the Palestinians currently being carried out by United Nations bodies, as well as planned or proposed activities. As requested by the General Assembly in 1984,<sup>(43)</sup> United Nations efforts to provide economic and social assistance to the Palestinians, in co-operation with PLO and with the consent of Arab host Governments, had been intensified. Also as requested, the Secretary-General had utilized an inter-agency mechanism, the Consultative Committee on Substantive Questions (Programme Matters) (CCSQ (PROG)) of the Administrative Committee on Co-ordination, for consultations with the organizations of the system towards developing a co-ordinated assistance programme. CCSQ(PROG) considered the question in April 1985, agreeing to group future activities into three main categories: development activities; education and training; and health.

The Secretary-General convened a meeting of 21 United Nations programmes, organizations, agencies, funds, organs and Secretariat departments, in which PLO, the Arab host countries and inter- and non-governmental organizations participated (Geneva, 5 and 8 July). The meeting discussed current, future and proposed activities of the United Nations system. It noted that some progress had been made towards a co-ordinated programme and that the Secretary-General's report represented a modest advance in that direction, providing fuller information on proposed activities in a thematic framework. However, it was felt that the proposals before the meeting did not constitute such a programme in its final form as envisaged by the Assembly; given the complexity of the issues and circumstances, it was difficult to provide specific information on all aspects of the activities, with a detailed assessment of financial requirements. The meeting concluded that there was a need to ensure continuing review of the progress made in implementing the various activities and programmes, and that further efforts were needed to finalize the programme of assistance.

UNDP action. The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) programme of assistance to the Palestinians became operational in 1980. In accordance with 1983 Economic and Social Council(44) and Assembly resolutions,(45) UNDP set up a special programme to help the Palestinians improve their social and economic conditions. The programme was centred in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, except for one project in the Syrian Arab Republic. It was the only intergovernmental development programme with large-scale, continuing operations in those territories. The UNDP Administrator was directly responsible for the programme.

As of 1 March 1985, UNDP had 20 projects at various stages of implementation; 8 were already completed. Projects included development and strengthening of health institutions, health manpower development and training, agricultural training, and community services for youth.

After considering an April 1985 report on UNDP assistance to the Palestinians,(46) the Governing Council, in June,(47) reaffirmed UNDP's commitment to assist the Palestinians in their economic and social development. Expressing gratitude to Governments and funds which had made additional special contributions, the Council noted that unless further contributions were received it would not be possible to undertake effectively basic development projects for the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. It authorized an additional $2 million for assistance to the Palestinians.

UNIDO action. The Industrial Development Board of the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO), on 31 May 1985,(48) took note with appreciation of the 1984 report of the UNIDO Executive Director on technical assistance to the Palestinians(49) and of implementation of technical co-operation projects. The Board affirmed that Israel's occupation was detrimental to the basic requirements for the economic development of the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Additionally, its restrictive policies inhibited the development of the Palestinian industrial sector in those territories. The Board expressed its rejection of the Israeli settlements there and of the exploitation of Palestinian resources by the occupation authorities. It called for urgent repeal of the restrictions impeding the development of the Palestinian national economy, and regretted Israel's refusal to give UNIDO staff and experts access to the territories. The Board requested UNIDO to identify priority industrial development projects and to intensify its efforts, in co-operation with PLO, to provide technical assistance to the Palestinians. A further progress report on such assistance was requested.

UNICEF activities. The programme of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to assist Palestinian children and mothers in Jordan, Lebanon, the Syrian Arab Republic and the occupied Arab territories focused on child survival and development, pre-school services, promotion of income-generating activities for women, and water supply and sanitation. A programme co-ordinator, based at Amman, Jordan, was appointed.

In Jordan, the main thrust of the programme related to reducing infant and child mortality and enhancing institutional and non-institutional approaches to child care. UNICEF assisted in establishing live new kindergartens in various camps and in giving refresher courses to 20 kindergarten teachers. It also provided furniture and knitting- and sewing-machines for pre-vocational workshops.

In Lebanon, UNICEF supported the maternal and child health network run by the Palestinian Red Crescent Society and UNRWA by providing vaccines, oral rehydration salts, medical equipment and essential drugs. In co-operation with UNRWA and the Norwegian People's Relief Association, UNICEF had started a field survey to identify disabled Palestinians in the Beirut area, with a view to establishing small-scale physiotherapy centres and vocational training workshops and developing educational programmes.

A programme for assistance to Palestinian children and mothers in the Syrian Arab Republic, approved in 1984, supported child health, pre-school services, non-formal education, and water supply and sanitation.

A $1.7 million, three-year project (1984-1987) to be financed by the Federal Republic of Germany sought to enhance the survival, growth and development of Palestinian children, with particular emphasis on those up to 6 years of age. It concentrated on maternal and child health services, oral rehydration therapy, immunization, breast-feeding, early childhood stimulation, prevention and treatment of childhood disabilities, and rehabilitation. In addition, UNICEF supported pre-school activities and teacher training courses in the occupied territories.

Other activities. The Economic Commission for Western Asia (ECWA), on 24 April 1985, adopted a resolution(50) calling for the updating of a study it had commissioned in 1976(51) on the economic and social situation and potential of the Palestinians. A regional review concerning implementation of the 1979 Vienna Programme of Action on Science and Technology for Development,(52) undertaken by ECWA in co-operation with the Secretariat's Centre for Science and Technology for Development (Baghdad, 17-20 February 1985), led to the adoption of recommendations to enhance the ability of the Palestinians in developing their capacity for the application of science and technology.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations continued to provide training assistance, including an agricultural training centre project for refugee camps in the Syrian Arab Republic, and fellowships for specialized training in agricultural development. The World Health Organization provided technical advice for the review of existing environmental health facilities and programmes in the West Bank; work was also under way on the first of three planned health centres in the occupied territories, at Ramallah.

Against United States.

If the text's objective was truly to promote the interests and well-being of the Palestinians, the United States said, it would also have been necessary to refer to the attacks committed—and not by Israel—against Palestinian refugees in Lebanon. It did not believe, however, that such an essentially political question should be raised in the Council. The text could not provide a solution to the Palestinian problem but was in fact part of it.

Israel remarked that the text drew attention to the need for assistance to the Palestinians only; it should be noted that UNDP had stated in a 1985 report(46) that mobilization of additional funds was urgent, since the project pipeline approved by all parties concerned contained some $50 million worth of potential activities.

Jordan considered the text extremely important; it would provide an occasion for assistance particularly to the Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories whose authorities would not otherwise allow the channelling of any aid to that people. Canada said it favoured assistance designed to promote the Palestinians' economic and social development.

Speaking on behalf of the EEC members, Luxembourg said they attached great importance to humanitarian assistance to the Palestinians through tried and tested complementary instruments, i.e. food and emergency supplies as well as co-financing in collaboration with NGOs. The EEC members would continue, both directly and through the United Nations system, to provide the best possible response to the Palestinians emergency needs.

Before the Committee vote, Israel said the text was motivated by political rather than humanitarian concerns, was repetitious and was based on false pretences; it ignored the fact that Israel was currently promoting the well-being and socio-economic development of the Palestinian Arabs whose position, under its administration, was better than that of the people in most of the neighbouring countries. The ritual resolutions submitted each year were an effort to present Israel as opposing international assistance to the Palestinians. It opposed assistance to PLO, but welcomed assistance for constructive purposes through the proper channels, co-operated with UNDP and other international organizations and made every effort to assist the Palestinians while the countries that were most vociferous gave them little or no aid.

In the opinion of the United States, the text was not likely to advance the goal of peace or benefit the people of the area; the improvement in the quality of life that Israel had brought to the Palestinians should be acknowledged. The United States was opposed to channelling assistance through PLO, which it did not recognize as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians.

Speaking for the EEC members, Luxembourg said they would continue to provide assistance to the Palestinians, including food aid and projects co-financed with NGOs, directly and through United Nations channels. Though voting in favour, Japan reiterated its general position on aid to national liberation movements.

Jordan was convinced that the Palestinians had suffered under Israeli occupation and needed support to help them recover their legitimate rights; however, it had reservations on paragraphs 7 and 8, on the grounds that all activities and operations on Jordanian territory must be undertaken with Jordan's approval.

The USSR, speaking also on behalf of Bulgaria, the Byelorussian SSR, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Mongolia, Poland and the Ukrainian SSR, reiterated their support for Palestinian rights and stressed that all parties to the conflict, including PLO, should be allowed to participate in efforts to find a solution.

Israeli air raid on PLO headquarters in Tunisia

The murder of three of its citizens in Cyprus, allegedly carried out by a PLO group, was cited by Israel as the reason for its bombing of PLO headquarters in Tunisia on 1 October 1985, killing or wounding a number of Palestinian refugees and Tunisians. The Security Council, by resolution 573(1985) of 4 October, condemned the bombing as an act of aggression and demanded that Israel refrain from carrying out or threatening such acts.

The Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization, by a resolution of 18 October,(53) condemned the violation of Tunisian airspace by Israel which endangered international civil aviation.

Communications. By a letter of 27 September,(11) Israel charged that during the preceding 45 days PLO had carried out 32 terrorist attacks, among them a 10-hour siege of three Israelis vacationing aboard a yacht moored at Larnaca, Cyprus, who were then murdered on 25 September. Initial reports, Israel said, indicated that the act had been carried out by a personal bodyguard unit of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

On 1 October,(54) Tunisia reported to the President of the Security Council that on that day six Israeli military aircraft had penetrated Tunisian airspace and at 10.07 a.m. had bombed the civilian locality of Borj-Cedria, called Hammam Plage, in the southern suburbs of Tunis, dropping five 1,000-pound bombs. The operation, for which it said Israel had officially claimed responsibility, had resulted in the loss of many lives and material damage and destruction on a wide scale. Contrary to Israel's claims, Tunisia stated, the target was situated in an exclusively residential urban area which traditionally had been home to Tunisian families and a small number of Palestinian civilians who had fled from Lebanon following Israel's invasion of that country.

Tunisia regarded the raid as a blatant act of aggression against its territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence, and a flagrant violation of international law and the principles of the United Nations Charter. It requested an immediate meeting of the Security Council, calling on it to condemn the act in the strongest terms, to require fair and full compensation for all the damage and to take measures to prevent such acts from recurring.

A number of communications sent between 1 October and 20 November to the President of the Council or to the Secretary-General expressed solidarity with the Tunisian Government and people and condemned the air raid.

According to Democratic Yemen,(55) the attack confirmed once again Israel's policy of aggression and terrorism against the Palestinians in particular and the Arab people in general.

A special communiqué adopted by a 1 October Meeting of Ministers and Heads of Delegation of Non-Aligned Countries to the General Assembly at its current session, transmitted by India,(56) expressed grave concern at the act, the target of which, it said, had been the premises of PLO in a vain attempt to destroy Palestinian resistance.

The United Republic of Tanzania(57) charged that the attack had been premeditated to decimate the PLO leadership and to intimidate countries like Tunisia that extended humanitarian assistance and political solidarity to the Palestinians. It called on the international community to respond immediately to the humanitarian needs of the victims and demanded that those countries which had in multiple ways abetted Israel's policy of aggression prevail on it to cease such genocidal acts.

Viet Nam(58) said the criminal act challenged the Arab, African and non-aligned countries and peace-loving forces throughout the world; with the connivance of the United States and other reactionary forces., Israel was further intensifying its terrorism against PLO and its policy of threat and pressure designed to prevent the Arab countries from supporting the just struggle of the Palestinians for their national rights.

In Mongolia's view, (59) the provocative action proved that the United States and Israel were continuing to interfere in the internal affairs of the Arab States, and were attempting to undermine a political settlement in the Middle East and to annihilate PLO.

Spain(60) said the brutal attack on a sovereign State served only to aggravate tension and seriously undermine efforts to bring about a Middle East peace. Similarly, Brazil(61) saw no justification for such acts, which served only to increase tension and make more distant the day when all the nations in the Middle East would coexist peacefully.

A declaration adopted on 1 October by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the 10 EC member States, and of Spain and Portugal, transmitted by Luxembourg,(62) characterized the bombing as a new factor in the cycle of violence and counter-violence in the Middle East; terrorist acts committed against Israeli citizens, which they condemned, did not justify the action.

Argentina(63) affirmed that solutions to international problems must be sought through dialogue and negotiation and not through force. Yemen(64) said the international community demanded a halt to Israel's actions and the imposition of a boycott and deterrent sanctions; the attack on PLO headquarters, which threatened all Arab territories designated as targets for Israel's expansionist intentions, made it essential that the Arab States stand together. The United Arab Emirates(65) also believed that the Arab community must confront the aggression with a decisive and united stand.

In a statement of 1 October, transmitted by Kuwait,(66) an Extraordinary Ministerial Meeting of the Arab Group at the United Nations called on the international community to assist Tunisia in facing up to the Israeli aggression and its consequences and, supporting Tunisia's request for a Council meeting, urged the Council to adopt the necessary resolutions to condemn and curb that aggression.

Oman(67) called on the international community to stand firm against such acts. Peru(68) transmitted a motion of order of its. Senate dated 2 October, protesting the aggression and placing on record its agreement that such aggression should be punished. Burundi(69) called on the Security Council to take measures to prevent such behaviour, and reaffirmed the need to find an equitable solution to the Palestinian problem, in particular through the establishment of a Palestinian State.

A statement by the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs of Yemen, on behalf of the heads of delegation and the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the members of the Organization of the Islamic Conference participating in the current session of the General Assembly,(70) categorically rejected a statement issued by the United States which, the statement said, justified the bombing as an act of self-defence, and called for international support for Tunisia and for its right to just and equitable compensation.

To Malta,(71) it seemed impossible that the act was carried out by Israel alone from its own territory; everyone should help to apprehend the perpetrators. Malta wished to ensure that similar acts of international piracy were not repeated.

The President of Senegal,(72) as current OAU Chairman, expressed in messages to the Tunisian President and the PLO Chairman Africa's support and solidarity. The Supreme Council of the Gulf Co-operation Council, in the Final Communiqué adopted at its sixth session (Oman, 3-6 November),(73) also affirmed its support and solidarity with Tunisia and PLO.

In a letter of 16 November, transmitted by Yemen on 20 November,(74) the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference noted that the Conference's Governing Board, at its eighth session (Sanaa, 26-28 October), had approved a telegram to the United Nations Secretary-General characterizing Israel's action as a criminal act against Tunisia, against justice and against all mankind. The Board denounced the crime and condemned the Israeli authorities and those that had supported them.

In a statement of 24 October, transmitted to the Secretary-General the next day,(75) the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Tunisia, on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of the United Nations, said Israel's aggression was an undeserved blow against a country which had been the first to advocate dialogue in the Middle East conflict; the unanimous condemnation of the act by the international community revived Tunisia's hope in the United Nations as the custodian of international law and morality. Israel's aggression could only strengthen further Tunisia's support for the struggle of the Palestinians.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Security Council considered Tunisia's complaint at four meetings between 2 and 4 October. Afghanistan, Algeria, Bangladesh, Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Greece, Indonesia, Iran, Israel, Jordan, Kuwait, Lesotho, the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Malta, Mauritania, Morocco, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, the Syrian Arab Republic, Tunisia, Turkey, Viet Nam, Yemen and Yugoslavia were invited, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. Invitations under rule 39<sup>c</sup> of the Council's provisional rules of procedure were extended to the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States<sup>(76)</sup> and to the Under-Secretary-General for Political and International Affairs of that organization,<sup>(77)</sup> both at Kuwait's request in its 'capacity as Chairman of the Arab Group, and to the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, at Egypt's request.<sup>(78)</sup>

Also at the request of Egypt,<sup>(79)</sup> the Council decided, by 10 votes to 1 (United States), with 4 abstentions (Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom), that an invitation to participate be accorded to PLO. The President stated that Egypt's proposal was not made pursuant to rule 37<sup>d</sup> or rule 39 of the provisional rules of procedure, but, if approved, the invitation would confer on PLO the same rights as those conferred on Member States when invited to participate pursuant to rule 37.

Before the vote on that decision, the United States reiterated its opposition (see p. 274) to conferring such rights on non-governmental entities.

On 4 October, the Council adopted resolution 573(1985).

The Security Council,

Having considered the letter dated 1 October 1985, in which Tunisia made a complaint against Israel following the act of aggression which the latter committed against the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Tunisia,

Having heard the statement by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Tunisia,

Having noted with concern that the Israeli attack has caused heavy loss of human life and extensive material damage,

Considering that, in accordance with Article 2, paragraph 4, of the Charter of the United Nations, all States Members shall refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or acting in any other manner inconsistent with the purposes of the United Nations,

Gravely concerned at the threat to peace and security in the Mediterranean region posed by the air raid perpetrated on 1 October by Israel in the area of Hammam Plage, situation in the southern suburb of Tunis,

Drawing attention to the serious effect which the aggression carried out by Israel and all acts contrary to the Charter cannot but have on any initiative designed to establish an overall, just and lasting peace in the Middle East,

Considering that the Israeli Government claimed responsibility for the attack as soon as it had been carried out,

1. Condemns vigorously the act of armed aggression perpetrated by Israel against Tunisian territory in flagrant violation of the Charter of the United Nations, international law and norms of conduct;

2. Demands that Israel refrain from perpetrating such acts of aggression or from threatening to do so;

3. Urges Member States to take measures to dissuade Israel from resorting to such acts against the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all States;

4. Considers that Tunisia has the right to appropriate reparations as a result of the loss of human life and material damage which it has suffered and for which Israel has claimed responsibility;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council on the implementation of the present resolution by 30 November 1985 at the latest;

6. Decides to remain seized of the matter.

6-nation draft (S/17535).

Sponsors: Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Trinidad and Tobago. Meeting numbers. SC 2610, 2611, 2613, 2615.

Vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, United Kingdom.

Against: None.

Abstaining: United States.

The real threat all civilized peoples were facing was terrorism, said the United States in explaining its vote; the failure adequately to address the subject prevented it from supporting the text, which placed all the blame for the latest round of the rising spiral of violence in the Middle East on only one set of shoulders, while not also holding at fault those responsible for the terrorist acts which provoked it. The principle that a State subjected to continuing terrorist attacks might respond with appropriate force to defend itself against further attacks was an aspect of the inherent right of self-defence recognized in the Charter. It was the collective responsibility of sovereign States to see that terrorism enjoyed no sanctuary and that those who practised it had no immunity from the responses their acts warranted; moreover, it was the responsibility of each State to take appropriate steps to prevent persons or groups within its sovereign territory from perpetrating such acts. The incident should be an impetus for renewed efforts towards successful completion of the peace process.

Despite legal reservations that it felt stemmed from the concept of acts of aggression in the text, France said it had voted in favour not only because of its traditional friendly relations with Tunisia but also because it condemned all acts of violence, whatever their origin, that would compromise the search for a comprehensive, just and lasting Middle East peace.

Thailand remarked that no matter how deplorable and regrettable the situation in Tunisia, there was no state of war between the two countries involved; while the loss suffered by the Tunisian Government and people must be made good by those who had attacked them, the word "compensation" should have been used instead of "reparations" in paragraph 4.

Speaking before the vote, Israel said the resolution would propagate the notion that the victim could not defend itself and that the terrorist deserved sanctuary. The Council had been convened to attack a legitimate act of self-defence, Israel said. The allegation that Israel had engaged in an aggressive act against another country was a perversion of the truth. If anything could be defined as aggression, it was the actions against Israel; for the past year, PLO headquarters in Tunisia had organized and launched hundreds of terrorist attacks against Israel, Israeli targets and Jews everywhere. According to irrefutable evidence, the butchery at Larnaca had been perpetrated by "Force 17": the personal bodyguard unit of Yasser Arafat.

Israel's forces had taken special care to pinpoint the target-three buildings housing PLO headquarters. Any civilian casualties had been inadvertent and were the result of PLO's deliberate tactic of planting its bases among civilians. Israel could not accept the notion that the headquarters of terrorist killers should enjoy immunity anywhere, any time, and Tunisia, which knowingly harboured PLO and allowed it complete freedom of action, bore considerable responsibility. If the Council were to adhere to its true purposes, it would convene to find ways to combat international terrorism as the major threat to the international order.

Tunisia refuted the charge that it had become a terrorist base; no act of terrorism had been perpetrated from its territory and no Tunisian had been implicated in any such act. As for "Force 17": its headquarters were not on Tunisian territory. Contrary to what Israel claimed, Israel had attacked a clearly defined residential urban area, killing 68 civilians and wounding more than 100. Any attempt to justify that act could only set the seal of approval on and encourage aggression. The crime was particularly reprehensible because it was aimed at jeopardizing efforts to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Palestinian problem; everyone was aware that the hospitality extended by Tunisia to the Palestinian leadership fell within that framework. Tunisia called for firm condemnation of the illegitimate and unwarranted use of force by Israel, a clear affirmation of the firm will of the international community to prevent the repetition of such terrorist acts, and reparations for damage caused.

Virtually every speaker in the debate agreed that Tunisia's sovereignty and territorial integrity had been violated and that the attack was against international law and Charter principles. Israel had blatantly flouted the most fundamental tenets of the Charter, Indonesia said, namely, respect for the territorial integrity and sovereignty of States, the non-use of force, non-intervention and non-interference. In the opinion of the USSR, the events again showed the essence of Israel's policy against Arab States and peoples for almost four decades: a cynical disregard for the fundamental provisions of the Charter, international law and United Nations resolutions; a studied undermining of the recognized bases for inter-State relations; reliance on terror and naked force; and the complete absence of respect for elementary human rights, primarily the right to life. Burkina Faso said that, by violating the Charter once again, Israel had made it clear that it would never be prepared to fulfil its obligations thereunder or abide by United Nations decisions. Israel's flagrant violation of international law and Charter principles was all the more striking in view of the fact that it had struck against a country whose peace-loving nature was universally recognized, Cuba said.

Most speakers did not accept the justification given by Israel that the attack had been carried out in self-defence. It could not be justified as a reprisal raid, Turkey said. The United Kingdom said it could not accept the reasons put forward by Israel for its action. Under the Charter, Members committed themselves to settle their international disputes by peaceful means; arbitrary and disproportionate violence, even in retaliation, was a clear breach of that obligation. Bangladesh also rejected Israel's argument that it had the right to attack any State at any time on the basis of its self-conceived self-defence.

According to Australia, even if one were to accept Israel's version of the events, two wrongs did not make a right. It was a new and disproportionate application of the principle of an eye for an eye, carried out with arrogant disregard of others, Peru said. Denmark also did not believe that acts of terrorism against Israeli citizens justified the raid on Tunisia. Madagascar found it difficult to find a sufficient justification for that aggression, planned and carried out in cold blood. The slaying of Israeli nationals in Cyprus could in no way serve as an excuse for an attack on a third country, Greece stressed. There could be no justification for any country to take the law into its own hands in such a manner, or for any other to condone or excuse such aggression, Malta stated. The attack was illegal on all counts and could not be legitimized on the basis of any legal or moral criteria, Pakistan said. Wanton reprisals against innocent civilians had always been condemned by the international community since the Second World War, Morocco added; if self-defence consisted of bombing all territories where Palestinians lived, no country would be safe from Israel's destructive folly.

Madagascar rejected the argument that since Tunisia harboured PLO headquarters, it bore a responsibility for all hostile acts against Israel and its citizens, even if they were carried out by individuals and responsibility was not claimed by PLO; according to that reasoning, Israel could arrogate to itself the right to destroy all PLO offices wherever they could be found. Even if one were to entertain Israel's lame justifications, in the opinion of Indonesia, the magnitude of the action was wholly disproportionate to the so-called provocation. Despite one isolated opinion, Viet Nam said, international opinion unanimously viewed the act as criminal aggression and terrorism.

Egypt charged that the Israeli raid had been organized long before the incident in Cyprus. The Under-Secretary-General for Political and International Affairs of the League of Arab States also considered that the attack had been premeditated and carefully planned, in full awareness that it would inflict a heavy toll on innocent Tunisians and Palestinians. The USSR believed that the facts set forth by Tunisia demonstrated convincingly that Israel had carefully planned the action and executed it in cold blood.

Israel's crime fell into the category of official State terrorism, said Kuwait, speaking on behalf of the Group of Arab States. This view was shared by several other speakers, among them Afghanistan, Bangladesh, the German Democratic Republic, Indonesia, Lesotho, Nicaragua and Yugoslavia.

The attack was seen by many as one more link in a chain of repeated acts of Israeli aggression against Arab countries and as part of its expansionist designs. That position was held by the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the Syrian Arab Republic, the Ukrainian SSR, Yemen and Yugoslavia, among others. Speaking as Chairman of the Group of African States, Nigeria said the attack did not set a precedent; Israel had previously unleashed violence, terror and naked force not only against the Palestinians but also against its Arab neighbours under the pretext that they provided refuge to individuals and groups opposed to its existence. Malta warned of the dangers of allowing the conflict to spread to North Africa.

India described the attack as yet another glaring entry in the lengthy catalogue of Israel's aggressive policies and as one more manifestation of its desire to eliminate Palestinian resistance. In Indonesia's opinion, the assault on PLO headquarters must be viewed in the context of Israel's avowed war of annihilation against the Palestinians. Zionism, which meant desire for expansion and endless hegemony and the genocide of the Palestinians, had broadened its sphere of aggression, according to Algeria. Israel's expansionist designs could be realized only by destroying the institutions of the Palestinians, said Kuwait, speaking for the Arab Group.

Many speakers expressed the view that Israel's attack was an attempt to sabotage the Middle East peace process. The underlying motive for Israel's attack was undoubtedly to destroy recently improved peace prospects, Pakistan said, timed to take place when important proposals for negotiations involving the Palestinians were taking shape. It was not unreasonable to say that Israel's aggression was a preventive action against peace, Madagascar added.

According to the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, peace would foreclose Israel's expansionist designs and endanger the massive assistance it currently received; therefore, it systematically rejected and defeated every effort to promote peace in the Middle East. In Jordan's opinion, Israel was trying to delay a solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict as long as possible. In the face of growing international consensus in favour of the Arab and Palestinian cause, said Bangladesh, Israel had once again resorted to force to heighten tension and frustrate current international efforts to resolve the problems in the Middle East peacefully. Similarly, Yugoslavia believed that the attack was calculated to thwart efforts to seek a solution to the Middle East crisis and the Palestine question. A similar view was held by Indonesia, Morocco and Saudi Arabia. Nigeria, speaking for the African Group, believed that the raid reversed fruitful peace prospects that had just begun to glimmer. Trinidad and Tobago, holding a similar view, added that the attack could only militate against attempts to secure a just and lasting peace. By committing such a crime, PLO said, Israel reaffirmed its insistence on undermining international peace efforts; by justifying the attack, the United States revealed its lack of credibility in playing a constructive role in those endeavours.

Madagascar felt only one conclusion was possible, namely, that Israel wished to eliminate PLO physically in order to impose its own peace. The United States and Israel were attempting to impose on the Arabs their military and political diktat and to draw them into separate deals, said the Ukrainian SSR. Decisive action by the United States, Israel's principal ally, to ensure the fruition of current Arab peace initiatives and promote an international peace conference on the Middle East (see p. 268) was necessary to dispel the shadow cast on peace prospects by Israel's action, said Pakistan.

France expressed concern at the disastrous consequences the action would inevitably have on current efforts to bring about a resumption of the peace process. The United Kingdom called on Israel and all the parties concerned to reaffirm their commitment to seeking a peaceful solution and to abstain completely from violent and provocative actions which imperilled that objective.

Sanctions against Israel and measures under the Charter were called for by many speakers, among them the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, Nicaragua and the Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference. Afghanistan, Cuba and Morocco said the Council should adopt mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII of the Charter, with a view to restraining Israel. The Syrian Arab Republic added that such sanctions were necessary to eliminate the effects of aggression and punish the aggressor. Viet Nam called on the Council to adopt the measures at its disposal to prevent Israel from committing similar crimes in the future, a position also taken by Bangladesh, Mauritania and Pakistan. It was for the Council to make sure that Israel took account of its obligations under international law and the Charter and of United Nations resolutions, said Senegal. The Eastern European States, said the Group's current Chairman, the Ukrainian SSR, favoured the adoption of stern measures in conformity with the Charter. Saudi Arabia also hoped that the Council members would take a firm stand that complied with the Charter.

Madagascar and Burkina Faso wondered whether the time had not come, in view of Israel's repeated use or threat of force and its refusal to comply with its Charter obligation to accept Council decisions, to consider the adoption of measures provided for in the Charter. In line with the call by the non-aligned countries for comprehensive mandatory sanctions under Chapter VII, Yugoslavia said, the Council had to act and bring about respect for Charter principles and see to it that Israel's aggressive acts were met with adequate measures. Israel's perverted sense of immunity from international accountability was related to the Council's inability adequately to enforce its decisions, Indonesia believed; the Council should move beyond mere words to an effective exercise of its authority under the Charter.

China also called on the Council to adopt strong measures under the Charter and to see to it that Tunisia's demands were met: Israel should be condemned, should compensate Tunisia for the losses, and pledge not to commit any further similar crimes. It was imperative that Israel be compelled to give up its policy of aggression and expansion. Given the Council's limitations, Pakistan said, the least to be expected was that it condemn the attack, adopt a decision to prevent recurrence of such acts and promote the Arab initiatives for peace, especially those within the United Nations context. The victims also deserved to be fully compensated.

That Israel must pay compensation to Tunisia and the Palestinians for the loss of life and for the damages was a view shared by many, including Burkina Faso, Cuba and Yemen. Jordan said if the Council strongly condemned the raid and held Israel responsible for the losses, its prestige and credibility would be restored. A strong and unanimous condemnation of Israel, according to PLO, could convey the message that the international community would no longer tolerate its crimes and acts of aggression. The representative of the League of Arab States warned that failure to take the necessary measures would mean further disintegration of the Organization. Iran believed that any political action would remain impotent unless all Moslem nations, particularly in the Arab world, joined in a united Islamic front.

Report of the Secretary-General. As called for by the Security Council, the Secretary-General submitted in November, and revised in December, a report<sup>(80)</sup> on implementation of resolution 573(1985). He had transmitted the resolution to Israel, Tunisia and all United Nations Member States, drawing particular attention to paragraph 3. As of 30 November, he had received replies from Israel, Oman and Tunisia, substantive parts of which were reproduced in an annex to his report.

Israel, in its reply of 21 November, had categorically rejected all allegations that its action constituted an act of aggression, or that it had been directed against Tunisia's territorial integrity or political independence; it had been directed against PLO. Israel added that the 1970 Declaration on Principles of International Law concerning Friendly Relations and Co-operation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,<sup>(81)</sup> reaffirmed in the 1974 Definition of Aggression,<sup>(82)</sup> clearly spelt out that an act of aggression occurred when a country failed to fulfil its duty to refrain from organizing or encouraging the organization of irregular forces or armed bands for incursion into the territory of another State; they also required that States must not acquiesce in organized activities within its territory directed towards the commission of terrorist acts. Tunisia directly violated both instruments. To Israel, the Council resolution was unacceptable in its entirety, and it rejected in particular the improper use of the terms "acts of aggression" and "act of armed aggression".

Tunisia, by a reply of 27 November, had submitted a governmental commission report investigating the consequences of, and evaluating the damage caused by, Israel's aggression, as a basis for claim for reparations. It stated that the assessment was not complete, either in respect of individuals or corporate losses or in respect of property destroyed. In addition to the material damage, the effects of the feeling of insecurity engendered by the attack were bound to make themselves felt, in particular in the tourism industry and foreign investment. Tunisia reserved its right to return to the question when it had sufficient evidence to claim damages for violation of its sovereignty and impairment of its economic and social development.

Oman, by a reply of 13 November, said it considered that the Council was required to adopt more serious resolutions in order to prevent or halt repeated Israeli acts of aggression against Arab territories. With regard to paragraph 3, Oman believed that certain super-Powers with which Israel had special relationships were the States most qualified to play a greater role.

Hijacking of the Achille Lauro

On 7 October 1985, the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, with several hundred persons aboard, was hijacked and one of its passengers, the American citizen Leon Klinghoffer, was killed and thrown overboard. The Secretary-General, in a statement of 8 October, endorsed by the members of the Security Council the next day, condemned all acts of terrorism and noted that the hijacking was another escalation of violence in the Middle East; he urged those responsible to understand that their act was criminal and unjustifiable and should be ended without delay in a manner that would avoid further suffering by the innocent victims.

Communications. By a letter of 8 October,<sup>(83)</sup> Italy requested, following the events which led to the hijacking, that the matter be brought to the attention of the Security Council, with a view to condemning firmly such an act and appealing for prompt liberation of the hostages. On the same date,<sup>(84)</sup> Austria appealed to the Council President 'to undertake every effort to contribute to an early end of the tragedy; Greece, on 9 October,<sup>(85)</sup> also said it hoped that the act might be resolved as quickly as possible without loss of human life. Both countries understood that some of their citizens were aboard. On the same date,<sup>(86)</sup> Italy asked the Council President to inform the Council members that the hijackers had abandoned the Achille Lauro and released the hostages; therefore, no further consideration of the matter appeared necessary.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 9 October, the Council President made a statement on behalf of the Council members:<sup>(87)</sup>

"The members of the Security Council welcome the news of the release of the passengers and the crew of the cruise ship Achille Lauro and deplore the reported death of a passenger.

"They endorse the Secretary-General's statement of 8 October 1985, which condemns all acts of terrorism.

"They resolutely condemn this unjustifiable and criminal hijacking as well as other acts of terrorism, including hostage-taking.

"They also condemn terrorism in all its forms, wherever and by whomever committed."

Meeting numbers. SC 2618-2620, 2622.

During a Council meeting the following day on the Middle East situation, including the Palestine question, Israel gave an account of the killing of Leon Klinghoffer, saying he had been singled out from other passengers on the ship because he was Jewish, there being no Israelis aboard. The facts showed, Israel said, that the hijacking had been carried out by the Abul Abbas faction of PLO's Palestine Liberation Front (PLF), with the full prior approval of the PLO Chairman.

It had not been planned originally as a hijacking, Israel believed; the PLF men were to have travelled on the ship to the Israeli port of Ashdod, to have staged there a hostage-taking and then demanded the release of Al Fatah terrorists held in Israeli jails. However, when the terrorists were discovered, they hijacked the ship, demanded the release of 50 Palestinian terrorists and then shot Klinghoffer. Then, on orders from Arafat, acting through a lieutenant, the hijackers gave themselves up to Egyptian authorities, Israel said.

The Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference said the hijacking was an act of terrorism by individuals, which could not be condoned. Since then, he added, the aircraft carrying the four hijackers out of Egypt had been intercepted by the United States Air Force and forced to land at a United States military base in Sicily; they were currently in custody.

PLO contended that there was no proof that Klinghoffer was murdered. PLO had intervened in the hijacking, at the request of the Italian Government, to save the lives of the almost 400 passengers and crew. Its endeavours had helped put an end to the operation and saved the vessel and those on board from dire consequences. The hijackers were on their way to a Palestinian court, PLO went on; Chairman Arafat, who had expressed PLO's condemnation of the operation, had declared that PLO would interrogate them in co-ordination with the Egyptian and Italian authorities. The arrest of the four Palestinians would not put an end to violence and terrorism in the Middle East, because Israel was its primary source.

The United States said it felt relief-tinged with sadness and anger about the murder of Leon Klinghoffer—that the passengers and crew of the ship had been released and that the latest act of terrorism and violence had ended, and urged all peoples and Governments to renounce terrorism as inimical to the norms of civilization.

Australia considered Klinghoffer yet another innocent victim of the cycle of violence afflicting the Middle East.

Attack against the offices of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee

During an attack on 11 October against the offices of the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee (ADC) at Santa Ana, California, the west coast Regional Director of ADC, Alex Odeh, an American of Palestinian origin, was killed and six Americans were injured. By a letter of 17 October, @ @ Kuwait, as Chairman of the Arab Group, expressed members' concern over the climate of anti-Arab hostility in the United States which, it believed, had encouraged the attack. The Arab Group hoped that the perpetrators would be identified and brought to justice. Annexed to the letter was a telegram from the Secretary-General of the League of Arab States to the National Chairman of ADC stating that the murder of Mr. Odeh had shocked the Arab world; his work in fighting discrimination and his defence of Palestinian rights in particular had earned him high esteem. The Arab world hoped that the tragic episode would only lead ADC to redouble its endeavours.

The United States, on 18 October,<sup>(89)</sup> said its authorities were investigating the incident fully so that all responsible parties would be brought to justice. Annexed to its letter was a White House statement of 12 October deeply deploring the event and condemning in the strongest possible terms the criminal use of violence and terrorism to achieve political ends.

Hijacking of an Egyptian aircraft

On 23 November 1985, an Egyptian airliner bound from Athens to Cairo was hijacked to Malta by four Palestinians; during the incident, 60 people died. By a letter of 25 November, transmitted by Egypt on 27 November,<sup>(90)</sup> PLO said its Palestine Central Council, currently meeting at Baghdad, had issued a statement on 24 November expressing strong disapproval of the hijacking and condemning the perpetrators and parties behind it. The Council considered that the act gave the enemies of the Arab nation an opportunity to slander its reputation and damage it in the eyes of world public opinion. PLO announced that it was placing all of its capacities at Egypt's disposal so that it might take appropriate measures to cope with the situation and protect the lives of the passengers.

A spokesman for the Secretary-General, in a statement of 25 November, expressed deep sadness at the heavy loss of innocent life in the hijacking, adding that such tragedies reinforced the necessity for Governments to make concerted efforts to implement existing international agreements and consider what further measures could be effectively devised.

The hijacking was listed by Israel in its "Calendar of Middle Eastern violence, 1985". annexed to a 5 December letter<sup>(14)</sup> cataloguing press reports of violence in the area.

Attacks at Rome and Vienna airports

On 27 December 1985, terrorist attacks were carried out in the passenger terminals at the airports of Rome, Italy and Vienna, Austria; the perpetrators were said to be Palestinians.

A spokesman for the Secretary-General, in a statement of the same date, expressed shock at the news of the attacks, which had resulted in the loss of innocent human lives; the Secretary-General hoped that the unanimous position on terrorism adopted by the United Nations membership-General Assembly resolution 40/61 (see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter II)—would be followed up by determined efforts by all Governments and authorities concerned, so that all acts, methods and practices of terrorism might be brought to an end.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

Following consultations with the members of the Security Council, its President, on 30 December, read out a statement on their behalf,<sup>(91)</sup> strongly condemning the attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports as unjustifiable and criminal; they urged that those responsible for the killings be brought to trial and called on all concerned to exercise restraint and refrain from taking any action inconsistent with their obligations under the Charter and other relevant rules of international law. (For further details, see LEGAL QUESTIONS, Chapter II.)

Communication. Commenting in a letter of 31 December<sup>(92)</sup> on the events which had led to the Security Council President's statement of the day before, Israel said the Palestinian terror, inspired directly by PLO, constantly prided itself on its "armed struggle" against Israel and its citizens; in the most recent atrocities, that terror had resulted in the ruthless and deliberate killing of women, children and babies, intentionally during the holidays in order to maximize civilian casualties. Attacks on civilian air transportation had become PLO's trade mark. There was a blatant contradiction between the stance many countries had adopted against international terrorism and the permission some of them gave to the world's central terrorist organization to operate "missions" in their capitals, Israel stated. The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya had become the world centre of international terrorism, but criminal gangs also found shelter and backing in Iraq and the Syrian Arab Republic, it said. It was imperative that all countries which opposed acts of international terrorism united and took decisive action to fight that cancerous evil.

Incidents and disputes between Arab countries and Israel

Iraq and Israel

Armed incident involving Iraqi nuclear facilities

The 1981 bombing by Israeli aircraft of a nuclear research centre near Baghdad<sup>(1)</sup> was the subject of a 1985 report by the Secretary-General and a General Assembly request (resolution 40/6) that IAEA consider additional measures to ensure that Israel undertook not to attack or threaten peaceful nuclear facilities. The IAEA General Conference, in September, noted that Israel had committed itself not to attack peaceful nuclear facilities.

Communications. On 3 May 1985,<sup>(2)</sup> Iraq transmitted to the Secretary-General a statement made by the Israeli Minister of Industry and Trade, at a press conference at Haifa, Israel, on 26 March, saying that Israel had the right to strike against any nuclear reactor built by Iraq which constituted a danger to Israel's security.

In a letter of 15 May,<sup>(3)</sup> Israel stated that no one but the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister and their appointed representatives expressed authorized government policy on the issue. It reiterated its position stated in July 1984<sup>(4)</sup> declaring its support for international arrangements to ensure the status and inviolability of peaceful nuclear facilities, as restated recently to IAEA.

IAEA action. The General Conference of IAEA, on 27 September,<sup>(5)</sup> adopted a resolution taking note of Israel's declaration that it would not attack or threaten to attack peaceful nuclear facilities in Iraq or anywhere else.

Report of the Secretary-General. In October 1985,<sup>(6)</sup> the Secretary-General reported to the Assembly on steps taken with regard to implementation of a 1981 Security Council resolution<sup>(7)</sup> calling on Israel to refrain from attacks on nuclear facilities devoted to peaceful purposes and to place its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards. By a note of 7 February 1985, the Secretary-General had requested Israel to inform him of action it had taken or envisaged in response to the Council's demand, reiterated by the Assembly in 1984.<sup>(8)</sup> In reply, Israel transmitted on 24 October a 26 September statement by the Director-General of the Israel Atomic Energy Commission, according to which Israel held that all States must refrain from attacking or threatening to attack peaceful nuclear facilities, and that the IAEA safeguards system brought evidence of the peaceful operation of a facility. Israel reconfirmed that it would not attack or threaten any nuclear facilities devoted to peaceful purposes, in the Middle East or elsewhere, and that it would support action in competent forums convened to work out binding agreements protecting such installations from attack and threat of attack.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 1 November 1985, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/6 by recorded vote.

Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security

The General Assembly,

Having considered the item entitled "Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security",

Recalling the relevant resolutions of the Security Council and the General Assembly,

Taking note of the relevant resolutions of the International Atomic Energy Agency,

Viewing with deep concern Israel's refusal to comply with Security Council resolution 487(1981) of 19 June 1981,

Noting with deep concern the threatening statement made by an Israeli cabinet member on 26 March 1985, in which he stated, inter alia, "We are prepared to strike against any nuclear reactor built by Iraq in the future",

Deeply alarmed by Israel's failure to state without ambiguity its acceptance of the internationally recognized criteria for the definition of a peaceful nuclear facility and to acknowledge the effectiveness of the safeguards system of the International Atomic Energy Agency as a reliable means of verifying the peaceful operation of nuclear facilities,

Concerned that armed attacks against nuclear facilities raise fears about the safety of present and future nuclear installations,

Aware that all States developing nuclear energy for peaceful purposes need assurances against armed attacks on nuclear facilities,

1. Strongly condemns all military attacks on all nuclear installations dedicated to peaceful purposes, including the military attacks by Israel on the nuclear facilities of Iraq;

2. Considers that Israel has not yet committed itself not to attack or threaten to attack nuclear facilities in Iraq or elsewhere, including facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards;

3. Requests the Security Council to take urgent and effective measures to ensure that Israel complies without further delay with the provisions of resolution 487(1981);

4. Requests the International Atomic Energy Agency to consider additional measures effectively to ensure that Israel undertakes not to attack or threaten to attack peaceful nuclear facilities in Iraq or elsewhere, in violation of the Charter of the United Nations and in disregard of the safeguards system of the International Atomic Energy Agency;

5. Calls upon Israel urgently to place all its nuclear facilities under International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards in accordance with resolution 487(1981) adopted unanimously by the Security Council;

6. Reaffirms that Iraq is entitled to compensation for the damage it has suffered as a result of the Israeli armed attack on 7 June 1981;

7. Urges all Member States to provide necessary technical assistance to Iraq to restore its peaceful nuclear programme and to overcome the damage caused by the Israeli attack;

8. Calls upon all States and organizations that have not yet done so to discontinue co-operating with and giving assistance to Israel in the nuclear field;

9. Requests the Conference on Disarmament to continue negotiations with a view to an immediate conclusion of the agreement on the prohibition of military attacks on nuclear facilities as a contribution to promoting and ensuring the safe development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes;

10. Decides to include in the provisional agenda of its forty-first session the item entitled "Armed Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations and its grave consequences for the established international system concerning the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and international peace and security".

General Assembly resolution 40/6

1 November 1985 Meeting 59 88-13-39 (recorded vote)

The Assembly adopted by a recorded vote of 79 to 2, with 50 abstentions, an amendment by Iran, adding what became paragraph 1.

The United States said it strongly believed that the issue the text purported to address had been decisively resolved by the IAEA General Conference in September, after four years of difficult and painstaking consideration; the attempt to reopen the issue flouted the clear intention of the majority of the IAEA members.

In Canada's view, the IAEA resolution had fully responded to many of the points raised, yet this text did not take account of that and sought to have the issue taken up again in IAEA. Canada also could not support the request in paragraph 3 which, it said, implied the imposition of further restrictive measures against Israel, nor could it support the call in paragraph 7 which would have the effect of preventing organizations such as IAEA from co-operating with all their member States, including Israel.

Canada and Sweden supported the call on Israel to place its nuclear facilities under IAEA safeguards. Nevertheless, Sweden felt that the main thrust of paragraphs 3 and 5 and the sixth preambular paragraph, in particular, was in contradiction of the IAEA resolution.

Though strongly condemning Israel's 1981 attack, Austria said it did not consider the changes in the 1985 resolution made in comparison to the one adopted in 1984<sup>(8)</sup> to be conducive to achieving its aims.

Mexico said it regretted that the IAEA resolution was not properly reflected in the text. In Australia's opinion, the text called on IAEA to become involved in matters outside its area of competence. Ecuador believed that the text should not have been silent with regard to Israel's positive statements, such as the one contained in the Secretary-General's report; moreover it would not appear appropriate to reopen the question in IAEA, where it had been closed. Bolivia noted certain technical flaws pertaining to IAEA and no mention of the Secretary-General's report. Argentina said the question of safeguards was not covered to its satisfaction.

Brazil and Peru would have preferred mention of the Secretary-General's report. Peru also reserved its position with respect to certain technical concepts which, it believed, were not in conformity with IAEA resolutions. Brazil doubted whether anyone could tell what the internationally recognized criteria mentioned in the sixth preambular paragraph were. Paragraph 4 seemed to disregard the fact that the matter had been withdrawn from the IAEA agenda; paragraph 8 deserved some examination in connection with IAEA decisions; and paragraph 9 was imprecise.

The item under consideration was Israeli aggression against the Iraqi nuclear installations, Iraq stressed, and what happened in IAEA was a very small part of that. Israel refused to put its nuclear installations under the IAEA safeguards system, while there was never a question about Iraq's compliance with the system. If the United Nations did not make Israel commit itself not to repeat its act of aggression and perhaps submit its own facilities to international inspection, it was driving nails into the coffin of the 1968 Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons<sup>(9)</sup> and the safeguards system.

Lebanon situation

Reports of the Secretary-General. As requested by the Security Council in 1984,<sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on activities of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon from 10 October 1984 to 11 April 1985.<sup>(11)</sup> He had continued consultations with the Lebanese Government and other parties involved in the ongoing conflict in Lebanon. Following consultations with the Governments of Lebanon and Israel, their military representatives met, beginning on 8 November 1984,<sup>(12)</sup> for a conference which took place at UNIFIL headquarters at Naqoura. From the outset of the conference, Lebanon insisted on the full withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanese territory and the subsequent deployment of the Lebanese army together with UNIFIL down to the international boundary, in accordance with Security Council resolution 425(1978) establishing the Force.<sup>(13)</sup> Israel took the position that UNIFIL should be deployed in the entire area to be evacuated by the Israeli forces, with the positioning of the main forces of UNIFIL between the Zahrani and Awali rivers up to the border between Lebanon and the Syrian Arab Republic. Israel would accept a limited UNIFIL presence further south, but maintained that local forces should be responsible for security arrangements in the southernmost part of Lebanon. The Secretary-General said there was little change in those basic positions and the Naqoura conference, which lasted into January 1985 and adjourned sine die, had produced no result.

On 14 January, Israel announced a plan, formally presented to the conference on 22 January, for a unilateral redeployment of its forces in southern Lebanon in three phases. During the first phase, the Israel Defence Forces would evacuate the Sidon area and deploy in the Litani-Nabatiyah region in the western sector. In the second phase, IDF would deploy in the Hasbaniya area in the eastern sector, and in the third, they would deploy along the Israel-Lebanon international border while maintaining a zone where local forces, i.e. the South Lebanon Army (SLA), would function with IDF backing. The first phase would be carried out within five weeks of the Israeli Government's decision. The timing of the subsequent phases, tentatively scheduled to be completed in the spring and summer of 1985, would be decided by Israel. Throughout all the phases, efforts to achieve political arrangements would continue.

On 24 January, at the conference, Lebanon announced that the Israeli redeployment plan did not satisfy its demand for a detailed plan and timetable for complete Israeli withdrawal from Lebanese territory.

The Secretary-General observed that, as a result of increasing confrontation between Israeli forces and Lebanese resistance groups, the situation in southern Lebanon deteriorated. Both the number and the intensity of attacks by resistance groups against the Israeli forces and Lebanese irregulars armed and controlled by IDF increased sharply after IDF started preparing for its evacuation from the Sidon area, which was completed on 16 February. IDF carried out frequent cordon-and-search operations in villages in the UNIFIL area-assembling the men in a village for interrogation and searching houses for weapons and ammunition, sometimes demolishing them if they were thought to serve as shelter for members of resistance groups or if weapons were found in them. From February on, 32 such operations had been carried out and the demolition of 33 houses was recorded. Fourteen bodies were found after such operations, a number of persons were injured, and more than 700 persons were arrested.

On 18 February, the report continued, IDF had imposed restrictions on the movement of civilians, including a curfew, restrictions on the movement of vehicles, a ban on motorcycles, and prohibition of parking along major routes. On 4 March, an explosion in a meeting hall at Ma'rakah (south of the Litani River near Tyre) had killed 12 Lebanese and injured more than 30 (see also p. 298). Since then, villagers had frequently asked UNIFIL to search their houses for explosives following Israeli cordon-and-search operations. UNIFIL had reported that the economy of the area also suffered severely owing to the spreading violence as well as restrictions affecting the movement of people and goods.

In a statement of 27 February (see below), the Secretary-General had referred to the new situation that had developed in southern Lebanon since early February as the result of the restrictions imposed on civilians and the increasing number of attacks on the Israeli forces by Lebanese resistance groups, leading to strong countermeasures, including new cordon-and-search operations reported in the UNIFIL area since 6 February.

The Secretary-General noted in his report that in recent weeks, there had been indications that the Israeli withdrawal programme was being speeded up. His efforts and those of his colleagues had been directed to trying to bring together Israel's and Lebanon's positions. The main problem, he concluded, was to reach a situation in Lebanon south of the Litani after the Israeli withdrawal in which peace and security could be assured and normal conditions progressively restored. The best means of achieving that, the Secretary-General believed, would be an orderly take-over from the Israeli forces, perhaps in the first instance by UNIFIL with elements of the Lebanese army, with the ultimate aim of restoring the complete authority of the Lebanese Government and army. Some form of consultative mechanism under United Nations auspices would be essential. If the Naqoura talks or the 1949 Israel-Lebanon General Armistice Agreement<sup>(14)</sup> were not acceptable to the parties, for one reason or another, he would be prepared to consider convoking a new conference of military representatives of the two Governments.

Lebanon, in a 27 March 1985 letter,<sup>(15)</sup> stated its understanding of UNIFIL's role; the whole of southern Lebanon should be under the exclusive authority of the Lebanese army, assisted in its task solely by UNIFIL, since Lebanon would not assign any role to any military force which was not a legal force, nor would it accept buffer zones or security zones of any kind. UNIFIL's deployment area should not become a disengagement zone between illegal armed forces on Lebanese territory and UNIFIL posts would be determined by agreement with the Lebanese Government alone.

Israel had stated, according to the Secretary-General's report, that it had two principal objectives-complete withdrawal of its forces from Lebanon and security for Israel's northern border. Those objectives, it believed, could be achieved either by agreement with the Lebanese authorities or, failing that, by unilateral security arrangements made by Israel.

The second phase of redeployment of IDF, carried out gradually during March and April, was described in the Secretary-General's report covering the period from 12 April to 10 October.<sup>(16)</sup> The Israeli forces withdrew from the Nabatiyah area on 11 March, while the Jezzine area and north-eastern sector, including the Bekaa valley and the strategic position at Jebel Baruk, were evacuated on 14 April. On 29 April, they withdrew from the Tyre pocket and from positions they had established in the western sector of the UNIFIL area. At the end of the second phase, they were redeployed in a strip of land north of the international border extending from the Mediterranean Sea to the Hasbaniya area with a depth varying between about 2 and 10 kilometres. In accordance with the Israeli plan, that strip of land, which extended into part of the UNIFIL area, was to be maintained as a "security zone" where SLA and other local militias armed and controlled by the Israeli forces were to function after completion of the third and last phase of Israeli redeployment.

After the Security Council in April (resolution 561(1985)) asked him to continue consultations, the Secretary-General initiated new efforts through his personal representatives and the Commander of UNIFIL to work out, in consultation with the Lebanese and Israeli authorities, arrangements leading to the full withdrawal of the Israeli forces, the deployment of UNIFIL to the international border and the establishment of peace and security in the area. Those efforts were inconclusive, however, and IDF proceeded with the third phase of its redeployment, without change, in May and early June. During that period, the Israeli forces withdrew progressively from positions in the security zone, handing them over to SLA. By 10 June, Israel announced that the third phase had been completed. It indicated that, while all combat units had been withdrawn from Lebanese territory, some Israeli troops would continue to operate in the security zone for an unspecified period of time and act as advisers to SLA. Part of the security zone overlapped with UNIFIL's area of deployment, which led to frequent and dangerous confrontations between the irregulars and UNIFIL personnel. There were three positions manned by IDF, 16 by SLA and two jointly (SLA withdrew from three positions in July following negotiations with Israel by the UNIFIL Commander). In the remaining part of the security zone, which included the former enclave and the Hasbaiya area, Israeli forces had continued to operate with elements of SLA and other local forces controlled by them.

The situation in the security zone was very tense, the Secretary-General said. Lebanese resistance groups had launched 250 attacks since May on Israeli troops and the Lebanese irregulars associated with them throughout that zone, both within and outside the UNIFIL area of deployment, as well as a number of suicide bomb attacks. IDF and SLA elements carried out a number of cordon-and-search operations against Shiite villages, nine of them in the UNIFIL area, during which 16 houses were demolished and 73 persons arrested. On some occasions, SLA also shelled Shiite villages; following two June attacks, about 2,000 persons sought temporary refuge near Qana where the Fijian battalion of UNIFIL was headquartered. Leaders of Amal—the Shiite organization—and other Lebanese resistance groups had generally co-operated with UNIFIL in the area Israeli forces had evacuated.

The Secretary-General continued his contacts with Israel and Lebanon concerning security arrangements following completion of the Israeli withdrawal and to promote a steady return to normality, pointing out that the security zone manned by SLA assisted by IDF elements contravened Security Council resolutions and violated Lebanon's sovereignty and was certain to give rise to increasing opposition and a new round of violence.

After the Council renewed UNIFIL's mandate for six months in October (resolution 575(1985)), the Secretary-General held discussions with the parties concerned, including the Lebanese President and the Prime Minister and Minister of Defence of Israel. In addition, Jean-Claude Aimé, Director in the Office of the Under-Secretaries-General for Special Political Affairs, undertook a mission to the area for discussions with those concerned.

In spite of those efforts, the Secretary-General noted in a December interim report,<sup>(17)</sup> the positions of the parties remained far apart. Israel announced that it would continue to rely on the security zone to ensure the security of its northern settlements and that UNIFIL would not be allowed to deploy to the border. Lebanon was strongly opposed to Israel's continuing presence and the concept of the security zone, and insisted that UNIFIL should deploy to the border and fully implement Security Council resolution 425(1978).<sup>(13)</sup> The situation was not acceptable, the Secretary-General continued, and could well deteriorate; he noted that the leader of Amal had recently stated his intention to step up activities against SLA and Israel if there was no change in the situation by the end of the year.

The situation in and around Beirut, with particular emphasis on developments involving Israeli forces and Palestinians, was monitored by the Observer Group in Beirut, with observers from UNTSO, set up in 1982<sup>(18)</sup> following the first incursion of Israeli troops into West Beirut. The Secretary-General reported in October 1985<sup>(19)</sup> that, since the withdrawal of the Israeli forces from the Beirut area in September 1983, the Group's strength had been brought down from 50 to 18.

Communications (January-March). By a letter of 16 January 1985, transmitted by Egypt on 17 January,<sup>(20)</sup> PLO characterized Israel's plan to withdraw from Lebanon as a unilateral decision that did not take into consideration the 1978 Security Council resolutions on the establishment of UNIFIL<sup>(21)</sup> or its 1982 resolutions calling for immediate cessation of all military activities in Lebanon<sup>(22)</sup> and withdrawal of Israeli forces to the internationally recognized boundaries of Lebanon<sup>(23)</sup>

On 12 February,<sup>(24)</sup> Lebanon informed the Secretary-General that that morning the Israeli army had attacked the village of Toura, in UNIFIL's area of operation, surrounding it with more than 90 tanks and military vehicles. Lebanon feared that a massacre could take place. The Israeli army had prevented the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) from entering the village and was preventing all citizens from leaving it. Lebanon considered it necessary to intervene quickly.

On 21 February,<sup>(25)</sup> Lebanon protested Israeli practices in southern Lebanon, the western Bekaa and the Rashaya district, which it said included a series of raids, arrests, killings and repression that had resulted in many casualties. Recent information from the area indicated that a great number of Israeli soldiers in military vehicles and bulldozers had made their way to the villages of Deir Kanoun and Tair Dibbah, north-east of Tyre. Annexed to the letter was a listing entitled "Report on the abusive practices of Israel in southern Lebanon: 12 to 20 February 1985". On 25 February,<sup>(26)</sup> Lebanon transmitted two further reports for the periods 21 to 23 February and 23 to 25 February, and, on 26 February,<sup>(27)</sup> another covering 25 and 26 February.

By a letter of 4 March,<sup>(28)</sup> Lebanon informed the Secretary-General of what it charged was a massacre perpetrated by over 800 Israeli soldiers in the village of Ma'rakah on 4 March. On 2 March, 350 citizens had been locked up in the village school after being interrogated, Lebanon said; 17 of them were later taken away to an unknown destination. Before leaving the village, the Israeli forces had planted explosives at the mosque and blew it up when as many as 200 villagers gathered there on 4 March; the number of victims had not yet been determined. Israeli forces had prevented ambulances and other emergency vehicles from entering the village; they surrounded the hospital in Jebel Aamel, the village closest to Ma'rakah, and prevented the wounded from being taken inside. Lebanon condemned the act as criminal and reiterated its call for condemnation of Israel's abusive operations and practices and for an immediate end to them.

Israel rejected those charges on 6 March,<sup>(29)</sup> stating that it had no involvement in the explosion near the mosque and that there were no IDF units in the village at the time of the incident. It appeared that the explosion had taken place when terrorists mishandled the triggering device and caused it to detonate. Also, IDF had not prevented emergency vehicles from entering the hospital; on the contrary, they had cleared a path and assured access by dispersing a violent demonstration in front of it and apprehending some demonstrators who had fled inside. Israel had acted responsibly to prevent further terrorism; IDF had uncovered large caches of weapons and explosives, whose use would have killed many Lebanese civilians in the south as well as Israeli forces. Lebanon not only attacked Israel for defending its own forces as they were leaving the country, but had fallen into the habit of blaming Israel for every outbreak of internal violence, which reflected its inability to enforce law and order.

On 6 March,<sup>(30)</sup> India transmitted a communiqué adopted that day at an urgent session of the Co-ordinating Bureau of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries regarding the situation in the Israeli-occupied areas in southern Lebanon, the western Bekaa and the Rashaya district. The Bureau condemned Israel's practices and measures against the civilian population there as a violation of international law, in particular the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (fourth Geneva Convention) of 12 August 1949, and demanded that Israel desist from those practices and immediately lift all restrictions and obstacles to the restoration of normal conditions in the areas under its occupation. The Bureau called on the Security Council to ensure Israel's immediate and unconditional withdrawal to the internationally recognized borders.

On 23 March,<sup>(31)</sup> Lebanon informed the Secretary-General of what it called further inhuman acts of aggression by Israel against the inhabitants of southern Lebanon, citing, among other operations, an incident of 21 March when Israeli forces bombarded two villages and besieged 10 in the district of Zahrani. Israeli forces advanced to within 7 kilometres of Sidon, besieging, on their way, three Lebanese army posts in areas they had previously evacuated, leaving 22 people killed and several wounded and causing material damage. In other towns, they destroyed houses and police posts and took prisoners. Lebanon emphatically condemned those acts of aggression, drawing the Security Council's attention to their gravity and inhuman character. Because the Council was unable to perform its tasks, Israel was tacitly encouraged to pursue its inhuman policy towards the population of the Lebanese territory it occupied.

In a letter of 28 March,<sup>(32)</sup> the 10 countries contributing troops to UNIFIL (see p. 305) took note of Israel's declaration that it would fully implement the withdrawal of IDF from Lebanese territory. They called for strict observance of the fourth Geneva Convention and deplored all acts of violence in the area.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (February/March)

Following a request from Lebanon dated 25 February,<sup>(33)</sup> the Security Council considered the situation in southern Lebanon at four meetings on 28 February and 7, 11 and 12 March.

Meeting numbers. SC 2568, 2570, 2572, 2573.

In addition to Israel and Lebanon, the Council invited Afghanistan, Algeria, Bangladesh, Cuba, Cyprus, Czechoslovakia, Democratic Yemen, the German Democratic Republic, Indonesia, Iran, Jordan, Nicaragua, Nigeria, Pakistan, Poland, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, the Sudan, the Syrian Arab Republic, the United Arab Emirates, Viet Nam and Yugoslavia, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. The Council also invited the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States, at Qatar's request,<sup>(34)</sup> to participate under rule 39<sup>e</sup> of its provisional rules of procedure.

At the request of Democratic Yemen,<sup>(35)</sup> the Council decided on 11 March, by 10 votes to 1 (United States), with 4 abstentions (Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom), that an invitation to participate be accorded to PLO. The President stated that the proposal was not made pursuant to rule 37<sup>f</sup> or rule 39 of the provisional rules of procedure, but the invitation would confer on PLO the same rights as those conferred on Member States when invited to participate pursuant to rule 37.

Before the vote, the United States reiterated its opposition (see p. 274) to granting such rights to non-governmental entities.

Denmark said the procedure followed, designed to grant PLO a status similar to that of a Member State, did not reflect PLO's true relationship to the United Nations. In Australia's view, PLO should properly be invited to participate on the same basis as other organizations or bodies which were not States.

On 12 March, the Council voted on a draft resolution by Lebanon.<sup>(36)</sup> The vote was 11 to 1, with 3 abstentions.

In favour: Burkina Faso, China, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Denmark, United Kingdom.

Owing to the negative vote of a permanent member, the draft was not adopted.

By the draft, the Council would have: (1) condemned Israeli practices and measures against the civilian population in southern Lebanon, the western Bekaa and the Rashaya district; (2) reaffirmed the urgent need to implement Council resolutions on Lebanon,<sup>(37)</sup> which demanded that Israel withdraw all its military forces unconditionally to the internationally recognized boundaries; (3) reiterated its call for strict respect for Lebanon's sovereignty, independence, unity and territorial integrity; (4) affirmed that the provisions of the fourth Geneva Convention applied to the Israeli-occupied territories in southern Lebanon, the western Bekaa and the Rashaya district, and that the occupying Power was duty-bound to respect and uphold those provisions and other norms of international law; (5) demanded that Israel as the occupying Power desist from its practices against the civilian population in those territories and immediately lift all restrictions and obstacles to the restoration of normal conditions in the area under its occupation; (6) requested the Secretary-General to establish a fact-finding mission to report to the Council on Israel's practices and measures there; and (7) asked him to keep the situation under review, to consult with the Lebanese Government and, to report to the Council.

The United States said the text was unbalanced, applied double standards and did not accord Israel fair treatment. It would have preferred a consensus resolution committing the Council to a sincere effort to deal with Lebanon's problems while respecting the rights of all United Nations Members; it was ready to join in a statement reflecting the Council's dismay at the escalation of violence in the country, expressing sympathy to the victims, urging restraint on all parties, affirming the application of the fourth Geneva Convention to the occupied areas, and reaffirming the commitment of all Members to full restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity. The United States supported the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon and the enjoyment of full sovereignty by Lebanon, but did not currently believe that a Council resolution was the best way of achieving the common objective of confirming the Lebanese Government's authority.

Despite the draft's positive aspects, such as paragraphs 2 to 4 and 7, the United Kingdom believed that the text took insufficient account of the need to dampen the cycle of violence and to promote the peaceful diplomatic solution so urgently needed. In particular, there was no mention of the role of UNIFIL or of the need to assist the Secretary-General's efforts in pursuance of Council resolution 555(1984)<sup>(10)</sup> and encourage the immediate return to the Naqoura talks.

Israel said adoption of the text would not stop it from defending its citizens against terrorist attacks, but would encourage the forces of fanaticism and extremism in southern Lebanon.

Lebanon said if some Council members had been true to themselves, they would have condemned the arbitrary and inhumane practices of the occupying army, which were inevitable results of the Israeli invasion they had condemned. By failing to meet its obligations, the Council left the population of Beirut, the Rashaya district and western Bekaa victims of that army and encouraged Israel to proceed with its brutal policies and defiance of the Council. However, that stand would not affect Lebanon's insistence on liberating the parts of the country occupied by Israel.

Trinidad and Tobago, noting that Israel had approved the second phase of its withdrawal, expressed concern over reports of increased violence accompanying that withdrawal. It would have liked to see incorporated in the text an appeal to all parties to exercise restraint and refrain from violence during the withdrawal, as well as an appeal to demonstrate some mutual forbearance. It believed that Israel and Lebanon could usefully engage in consultations aimed at ensuring a peaceful withdrawal-consultations which might also yield insights into requirements for maintaining law and order in the evacuated areas and indicate possibilities for an enhanced role for United Nations peace-keeping operations.

Thailand regretted that the text did not refer to the initiatives of the Secretary-General and his representative, as well as their good offices to have the Naqoura talks resumed, and noted with regret the absence of a reference to UNIFIL. In paragraph 1, all practices and measures against the civilian population which violated international law and the fourth Geneva Convention should have been condemned.

Peru believed that if there had been a specific reference to the objective of finding the minimal machinery to stabilize and systematize the withdrawal of the occupying forces, the text would have been less narrow. Also, it felt that condemnations should be in keeping with facts that were suitably corroborated at the international level.

Algeria, Democratic Yemen, India and the Syrian Arab Republic fully supported Lebanon's demand as outlined in the draft resolution. India said the Council must act decisively to halt Israeli aggression and intransigence and to put an end to the tragedy of Lebanon. Democratic Yemen said the Council would thereby affirm the credibility of its resolutions and its responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security.

Cyprus said adoption of the draft would demonstrate a clear determination by the international community to ensure respect for Lebanon's sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and unity and profound solidarity with and sympathy for its much-tormented people.

Saudi Arabia felt that a draft reinforcing the Council's 1982 resolutions on Lebanon represented the minimum the Council could adopt to keep its credibility. Senegal believed that the draft contained all elements to restore peace to Lebanon and enable it to regain its independence and territorial integrity. Pakistan said the least the Council could do was to remind Israel of its demand for immediate and unconditional withdrawal and strict compliance with the 1949 Geneva Conventions; adoption of the text would serve that purpose and send a clear message.

Speaking as Chairman of the Arab Group, Qatar said the Council should reaffirm its 1982 resolutions calling for respect for the rights of the civilian population and an end to acts of violence against them;<sup>(38)</sup> Israel must be compelled to commit itself to respect the Charter, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>(39)</sup> and other international agreements, especially the fourth Geneva Convention. The Council's resolution must include provisions ending Israel's determination to disregard Council resolutions.

Iran said the draft contained two very important points: condemnation of the Zionist aggressor for its recent crimes and its illegal occupation of Lebanese territory; and immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from all the occupied territories.

Czechoslovakia and the Syrian Arab Republic called on the United States not to stand in opposition to the other Council members and all peace-loving forces. Obstruction of the draft resolution would not protect Israel from rising resistance to its occupation, Pakistan cautioned, but would only deal a blow to the current peace effort.

Opening the debate, Lebanon charged that Israel's military operations and inhuman practices in the areas under its occupation were daily becoming more severe; if Israel had committed itself to comply with the Council's resolutions, the situation would not have deteriorated to such an extent. The third stage of redeployment, in accordance with the decision of the Israeli Government, did not constitute a true withdrawal as long as it set out a security belt in which Israel arrogated to itself the right to maintain nominal forces and re-enter any region from which it had withdrawn. Lebanon declared it had sincerely attempted to bring about a successful outcome to the Naqoura talks; however, despite repeated demands for a detailed timetable for withdrawal, Israel refused to present one or to give any role to the legitimate Lebanese army.

Israel stated that it had agreed to meet at Naqoura to negotiate security arrangements which, among other things, would facilitate its withdrawal, but Lebanon, under Syrian pressure: refused. After that last Lebanese abrogation of responsibility, Israel had chosen to act on its own. It had decided to withdraw its forces in three phases to the international border; now, entering the second phase, it was seeking the widest co-operation to complete it in as orderly and peaceful a manner as possible. The Lebanese Government had not agreed to arrange an orderly transfer of authority as a way of minimizing violence in the areas evacuated by Israel; after unusual restraint in the face of countless provocations during its withdrawal, Israel had taken action necessary to protect its soldiers and prevent terrorists from attacking them and organizing a safe haven for future attacks. The withdrawal was expected to take from six to nine months; specifying a more exact timetable was not practical, since conditions changed with each phase and terrorist attacks might require modifications in timing and procedures.

There was almost unanimous agreement among the countries speaking in the Council that Israel's practices and measures against the civilian population in Lebanon violated international law, in particular the fourth Geneva Convention. Like all States that signed the Convention, France said, Israel must scrupulously implement its provisions. Implementation of Council resolutions on Lebanon-especially those<sup>(37)</sup> mentioned in paragraph 2 of the Lebanese draft, calling for a cessation of all military activity and demanding Israel's unconditional withdrawal to the internationally recognized boundaries-was seen by most as necessary and a pre-condition for normalization of the situation. Poland and the USSR, for example, saw in the immediate and unconditional implementation of the 1982 resolutions the only reliable key to a solution of the Lebanese problem.

The United Arab Emirates believed that the current situation in southern Lebanon was a direct result of their non-implementation. Others, including Algeria, Bangladesh, Egypt, Indonesia, Jordan, Madagascar, Nicaragua and Nigeria, specifically mentioned in this respect the 1978 resolution<sup>(13)</sup> establishing UNIFIL, which called for strict respect for Lebanon's territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence.

Egypt regarded as the only option Israel's complete and unconditional withdrawal, in order to enable Lebanon to regain true sovereignty over all its territory, protect its population and restore security and order. China said that under no pretext should Israel continue its occupation, pursue its "iron-fist" policy and bully the local inhabitants. In Yugoslavia's opinion, any other approach but Israel's immediate and unconditional withdrawal undermined the basis of international peace and security envisaged in the Charter. Australia observed that it had consistently called for withdrawal of all foreign forces, except those in Lebanon at the Government's request.

Many other speakers viewed Israel's practices as a threat not only to Lebanon but to the Middle East as a whole, endangering even international peace and security. Among them were Czechoslovakia and Qatar on behalf of the Arab Group. The escalation of Israel's aggression, Cuba said, greatly increased the danger that another war would break out in the region. Considering the Lebanese problem in isolation from the general explosive situation in the region was impossible, according to Bangladesh, the German Democratic Republic, India, Senegal and the Ukrainian SSR. Viet Nam added that the problems in Lebanon could be solved only through a comprehensive Middle East settlement which guaranteed Palestinian rights and respect for the legitimate interests of all countries in the region, including an independent State of Palestine.

The increase in violence in Lebanon made it necessary to ensure that there was a new movement towards peace, said Senegal, which also noted recent diplomatic developments that could make such a movement possible.

The necessity to resume the Naqoura talks was widely recognized. To find practical ways to implement the second and third stages of Israel's withdrawal, the United States urged that both countries return to Naqoura; the violence accompanying the withdrawal and the counter-reaction to it only worked against Lebanon's interest. Burkina Faso said resumption of the talks, under the Secretary-General's auspices, had become necessary. Thailand joined in the appeal for their resumption as soon as possible, hoping for an agreement to enable Israel to withdraw unimpeded, with an expeditious timetable; while the withdrawal was under way, the civilian population and refugees must be spared from repressive measures. Denmark urged Lebanon and Israel to show flexibility in establishing security arrangements in southern Lebanon. For Peru, it was a matter of greatest priority to make use of the machinery existing for a dialogue between the parties and to work for the speedy resumption of contacts.

A clearly spelt-out timetable had become absolutely necessary for the success of resumed talks, the representative of the League of Arab States said. Israel's refusal to provide a time-frame for its withdrawal to the international borders and its practices against the people in the area were proof that it wanted them to leave their lands so that it might usurp those territories, the Syrian Arab Republic charged. Israel's actions were genocidal and an alarming indication that it was planning to perpetuate its control and create a "buffer State", as originally envisaged in its plans for the 1982 invasion of Lebanon, Cuba stated.

Measures to compel Israel to comply with the Council's resolutions and completely withdraw from Lebanon were called for by many speakers. Among them, the Sudan said it was incumbent on the Council to live up to its duties enshrined in the Charter and to put an end to Israel's persistent aggressive practices. In the search for suitable measures, Czechoslovakia believed, each Council member must be guided by the fact that Israel was an aggressor in the terms of the 1974 Definition of Aggression.<sup>(40)</sup> The Syrian Arab Republic called on the Council to take measures to eliminate acts of aggression against Lebanese territory and restore it to its rightful owners.

Communications (April/May). By a letter of 4 April,<sup>(41)</sup> Lebanon informed the Secretary-General that on 3 April Israel had transferred 1,131 Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners from the Al-Ansar detention camp in Israeli-occupied Lebanese territory to some prisons inside Israel, in violation of the fourth Geneva Convention. At the same time, Israel had released 752 prisoners to palliate the reaction of international public opinion, which was unanimous in condemning the transfer. Information from ICRC indicated, it said, that Israel intended to retransfer the prisoners to a detention camp within Lebanon's borders and inside the security zone. Lebanon vehemently condemned Israel's action, saying that it violated international law and custom and endangered the lives and future of the prisoners; it was incumbent on the international community to bring Israel's persistent violations to an immediate halt.

In its reply of 17 April 1985,<sup>(42)</sup> Israel said Lebanon had totally misrepresented the truth concerning the transfer. The 752 detainees had been released because they no longer represented a danger to IDF units currently withdrawing from south Lebanon. The temporary transfer to Israel of detainees who still constituted a danger to the security of IDF had become imperative because of the particular circumstances in south Lebanon. That such a temporary transfer violated the fourth Geneva Convention was equally groundless, since the Convention authorized such measures when for material reasons it was impossible to avoid such displacement. Keeping the detainees at Ansar would have complicated and prolonged Israel's ongoing withdrawal; releasing them would have added to the instability and bloodshed and the likelihood of attacks against IDF; and building alternative detention facilities in the area being evacuated had not been possible in the time-frame of the ongoing withdrawal. Efforts were being made to establish a smaller facility at Majidiyah, in south Lebanon, to hold some of the detainees pending withdrawal from the area. The detainees temporarily transferred to Israel were given suitable facilities and medical care, access to ICRC representatives and entitlement to petition an Appeals Board. Several had already been released.

On 12 April<sup>(43)</sup> and 16 April,<sup>(44)</sup> the United Arab Emirates, as Chairman of the Group of Arab States, transmitted three letters from PLO, dated 10, 11 and 15 April, charging Israeli occupation forces and their allies with heavy bombing on 10 April of the city and area of Tyre, including three Palestinian refugee camps. Israeli tanks and armoured vehicles had supported what PLO called Fascist isolationist elements in the assaults; hundreds of civilians, including Palestinians, had been arrested and taken to Israel. For the twelfth consecutive day, Israeli occupation forces and their allies had shelled two Palestinian refugee camps; four children and three men had been killed that day and 15 others had been seriously injured. Daily life in Tyre had been brought to a standstill by an endless artillery barrage. PLO believed the objective was to impose a military siege by land and sea against the Palestinian refugee camps at Sidon and Tyre to uproot the Palestinians as a pre-condition for the success of Israel's plan to establish a so-called safe-border zone-the fulfilment of its aspiration to establish a sectarian, Fascist mini-State in south Lebanon. On 11 April, PLO said, Israeli troops in south Lebanon and their allies had resumed heavy artillery bombardment of Palestinian refugee camps in the Sidon area. On 15 April, it said that, for the past few days, Israeli occupation forces in the Tyre area had besieged four Palestinian refugee camps and had conducted house-to-house searches, arresting 270 Palestinian civilians and taking them to unknown destinations. PLO deemed it clear that the Israeli occupation forces were hoping through terror and panic to facilitate the mass exodus of Palestinians from the Tyre area, as they had attempted in the Sidon area. Israel's strategy aimed at emptying southern Lebanon of all Palestinian presence. PLO reiterated its call on the United Nations for adequate measures to end Israel's crimes immediately and provide protection for the Palestinians in southern Lebanon.

On 3 May,<sup>(45)</sup> Italy transmitted a declaration adopted on 29 April by the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the 10 EC member States, stating that they continued to view with concern the deterioration of the situation in Lebanon, in particular the consequences for the civilians in the south subjected to unjustifiable acts of violence. They looked for the early, orderly and complete withdrawal of Israeli and other forces which were not in Lebanon at the Government's request. They considered it important that appropriate security arrangements be reached between Israel and Lebanon, and appealed to all the parties to facilitate the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty, unity, territorial integrity and independence. They expressed deep concern for the suffering of the Lebanese and the kidnapping of foreign nationals, and called on all parties to co-operate fully with UNIFIL.

On 8 May,<sup>(46)</sup> the Secretary-General submitted to the Security Council a 7 May letter by Pope John Paul II warning that the ever more tragic events in Lebanon could become fatal for the survival of the country, and that a widening gap between the different communities-Christians and Moslems-could lead to a disappearance of all national identity. The Pope was confident that the United Nations would do everything in its power to co-ordinate the initiatives that such a complex crisis demanded; it was a particularly suitable forum for appealing to all nations not to abandon Lebanon and to help its people lay the foundations of a dialogue aimed at building a renewed country.

On 14 May,<sup>(47)</sup> Australia transmitted an 8 May statement by its Prime Minister expressing concern at the continued violence in Lebanon, particularly in Beirut, and at the recent events in the southern part of the country where as many as 20,000 Christians were reported to have sought refuge in Jezzine and other towns in the area. The Prime Minister lamented that Lebanon should have become the battleground on which foreign forces conducted their battles openly or by proxy. Australia called for maximum restraint by all parties and for an end to all external interference in the country's affairs; agreement among the warring factions was the only basis on which Lebanon's independence and sovereignty would be respected.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (May)

On 24 May, after consultations with the Council members, the Security Council President issued the following statement on their behalf:<sup>(48)</sup>

"The members of the Security Council express their serious concern at the heightened violence in certain parts of Lebanon in the past few days.

"They take note of and fully support the statement issued on 22 May 1985 by the Secretary-General, which also refers to the situation in and around the Palestinian refugee camps, and his appeal to all concerned to make every possible effort to put an end to violence involving the civilian population.

"They reaffirm that the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon must be respected.

"In response to their humanitarian concern, they strongly appeal for restraint, in order to alleviate the sufferings of civilians in Lebanon."

Following Egypt's request of 30 May,<sup>(49)</sup> the Council met on 31 May to consider the situation created by the continued escalation of violence involving the civilian population in and around Beirut, affecting the safety and security of the Palestinians in the refugee camps.

The Council invited Lebanon, Malta and the Syrian Arab Republic, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. It also decided, by 10 votes to 1 (United States), with 4 abstentions (Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom), that an invitation should be accorded to PLO.

The President stated that an Egyptian proposal to invite PLO<sup>(50)</sup> was not made pursuant to rule 37<sup>e</sup> or rule 39<sup>h</sup> of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, but the invitation would confer on PLO the same rights as those conferred on Member States when invited to participate pursuant to rule 37.

Before the vote, the United States reiterated its position of principle (see p. 274) opposing granting such rights to non-governmental entities.

On 31 May, without prior debate, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 564(1985).

The Security Council,

Recalling the statement made by the President on 24 May 1985 on behalf of the members of the Council on the heightened violence in certain parts of Lebanon,

Alarmed at the continued escalation of violence involving the civilian population, including Palestinians in refugee camps, resulting in grievous casualties and material destruction on all sides,

1. Expresses anew its deepest concern at the heavy costs in human lives and material destruction affecting the civilian population in Lebanon, and calls on all concerned to end acts of violence against the civilian population in Lebanon and, in particular, in and around Palestinian refugee camps;

2. Reiterates its calls for respect for the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon;

3. Calls upon all parties to take necessary measures to alleviate the suffering resulting from acts of violence, in particular by facilitating the work of United Nations agencies, especially the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East, and non-governmental organizations, including the International Committee of the Red Cross, in providing humanitarian assistance to all those affected and emphasizes the need to ensure the safety of all the personnel of these organizations;

4. Appeals to all interested parties to co-operate with the Lebanese Government and the Secretary-General with a view to ensuring the implementation of this resolution, and requests the Secretary-General to report to the Security Council thereon;

5. Reaffirms its intention to continue to follow the situation closely.

Security Council resolution 564(1985)

31 May 1985 Meeting 2582 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17232).

Egypt said the United Nations bore a clear historical responsibility for the safety and welfare of the Palestinians; there was a need to look for practical means to ensure their protection, security, tranquillity and welfare in the context of full sovereignty of Lebanon. The unanimous adoption of the resolution was evidence of the continued United Nations commitment to the search for a comprehensive and just Middle East settlement, in all its political and humanitarian aspects.

Lebanon opposed the Council's meeting without its consent and on what it considered interference in its internal affairs; the Palestinian camps were on its territory and it could not agree to give up its sovereignty over a single inch. The convening of the Council was a dangerous precedent that could at any time affect any State in whose territory conflicts between local groups took place; the Council's mandate was confined to situations threatening international peace and security and it was not useful for it to consider internal situations that were dealt with on both the regional and internal levels.

Though expressing understanding of Lebanon's concerns, France said the international community had, for humanitarian reasons, a particular responsibility in the light of the human tragedies stemming from the conflict; the victims were again piling up inside and around the Sabra and Shatila camps in Beirut which had been the scene of massacres in 1982.<sup>(51)</sup> The resolution attested to the determination of the Council and its concern fully to assume its responsibilities.

Proceeding from humanitarian concerns, the USSR stated that it regretted that Lebanon's position was not taken into account by the initiators of the meeting. The situation in Lebanon was an integral part and a direct result of Israeli occupation and the continuing Middle East conflict. Events in Lebanon once again confirmed the urgent need to attain a just and comprehensive Middle East settlement in the context of which the Palestinians would be able to exercise their right to self-determination and establish their own State.

In the opinion of the Syrian Arab Republic, the resolution would not help Lebanon. Instead of maintaining its sovereignty and independence, it would do exactly the opposite and might even lead to an escalation of the fighting in the camps. The Council's consideration of an internal Lebanese question was interference in its affairs and, in the light of Lebanon's objection, in direct contravention of the Charter. Egypt's move to internationalize an internal problem was aimed at thwarting Syrian-Lebanese efforts to restore peace and security and was motivated by a desire to divert attention from surrender agreements imposed by Washington, from Israeli practices in the occupied territories and from the fact that Israel was trying to perpetuate its occupation.

Malta appealed to all to desist from further fighting and hoped that reconciliation would follow. It pledged to assist in any humanitarian way and to continue working to convince all concerned that an overdue solution could be delayed only at the expense of the chances for a lasting Middle East peace.

The urgency of the situation in Beirut demanded no less of the Council than unanimous adoption of the resolution, the United States said; it hoped the Council's humanitarian calls would be heeded as well as its call to honour Lebanon's sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity.

What was happening in Beirut was not strictly a domestic issue, but affected the fate of Palestinian refugees whose safety and welfare were a historic responsibility of the United Nations, PLO said. The vindictive bombardment had the clear aim of eliminating the Palestinian presence in the Beirut area and probably the rest of Lebanon. Expressing appreciation at the adoption of the resolution, PLO added that the immediate task was to rebuild the destroyed houses and buildings; it appealed to the Council members to authorize immediate action to provide shelter for the refugees. The Lebanese Government and PLO could reach an agreement, as they had in the past; the current main concern was the security and safety of the inhabitants, including those in the camps.

Australia believed that the meeting was an appropriate response to the sombre situation in Lebanon which had caused widespread loss of life and property. It hoped that the Council resolution would be respected and adhered to and would contribute to strengthening Lebanon's hand in dealing with its difficulties.

Communications ('June-December). By a letter of 1 July,<sup>(52)</sup> Israel again rejected the assertion that the transfer of detainees from southern Lebanon to Israel in April (see p. 301) violated the fourth Geneva Convention; their detention as well as their displacement, which had been necessary because they had participated in acts of violence against IDF, were permitted under the Convention's articles 78 and 49, respectively. Since the transfer, several hundred detainees had been released and those remaining would be released as soon as the conditions in southern Lebanon enabled IDF to do so.

On 5 July,<sup>(53)</sup> Lebanon transmitted to the Secretary-General a government note concerning a United States announcement on 2 July that it had decided to take measures to isolate Beirut International Airport, to call on foreign airlines to suspend their flights to Beirut, to prevent Lebanese aircraft from using American airports and to urge other States to take similar measures; the United States Government had justified this action on grounds that it represented a response to the recent hijacking of a Trans 'World Airlines (TWA) aircraft. Lebanon regretted that course of action as a step that would have negative consequences for both countries and that might further complicate matters. The following should be taken into consideration, Lebanon said: the hijacking was only another manifestation of ongoing conflicts in Lebanese territory; for more than 10 years, the Lebanese had been subjected to suffering and hardship which in ferocity and impact went far beyond the seizure of an aircraft or the kidnapping of passengers. Though condemning interference with civil aircraft and the kidnapping of innocent people, Lebanon nevertheless considered that the TWA hijacking had political roots and underpinnings and was not merely a criminal or terrorist act. The most successful way of confronting such acts lay in understanding those roots and dealing with them on that basis. The hijackers' demands stemmed from positions which were part of Lebanese and Middle East political reality; the demand for release of Lebanese civilians detained by Israel without legal cause was a legitimate demand. Isolating Lebanon and preventing its national airlines from operating normally was not proportionate to the damage caused and punished not the perpetrators but a Government that had condemned the hijacking and a people and companies that had not been involved; the kidnapping and the introduction of weapons into the aircraft had not taken place at Beirut airport, and the aircraft landed there in spite of the opposition of the Lebanese authorities. Lebanon stated that it was making efforts to control the security at the airport and was prepared to take part in any international initiative aimed at combating acts contrary to international law. It also considered violation of that law by States to be more serious than by irregular groups. It requested the international community to bolster Lebanon's sovereignty and not to support decisions adverse to it. It reserved the right, if necessary, to call for a Security Council meeting.

In a letter of 24 July,<sup>(54)</sup> the United States said Lebanon's note revealed a serious misunderstanding of United States policies and goals. The aim in bringing the problem to the attention of the world community was not to punish Lebanon. Beirut International Airport had become a haven for hijackers. In 1985 alone, there had been six hijackings involving that airport; in the past 15 years, 36. Nowhere else had air pirates enjoyed such a permissive atmosphere, moving with total freedom to and from hijacked aircraft that landed there. Though encouraged by actions recently announced by Lebanon to meet those deficiencies, the necessary measures went beyond those announced to date. Although Lebanon was party to international conventions setting standards of behaviour towards hijackings, it had not demonstrated that it could enforce its commitments. The United States initiative should be understood as a first step in the corrective process.

The Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, by a letter of 31 July,<sup>(55)</sup> brought to the Secretary-General's attention newspaper reports that tanks had been delivered that might affect the rights and lives of the Palestinian refugees living in Lebanon and amplify tension in the area. Lebanon, on 9 August,<sup>(56)</sup> stated that the subject dealt with in the Chairman's letter was entirely outside the Committee's competence.

On 5 December,<sup>(57)</sup> Lebanon transmitted what it said was a list of Israeli acts of aggression against Lebanese territory since the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Sidon to south of the Litani River, as well as supplementary information on such acts in southern Lebanon between 28 November and 4 December. Lebanon said Israel's expansionist policy and continual arbitrary practices were contributing to the worsening of the situation in southern Lebanon in particular, were hampering peace efforts and were the cause of an explosion of violence which threatened peace and security regionally and internationally.

Israel, on 26 December,<sup>(58)</sup> characterized Lebanon's letter as yet another attempt to divert attention from its inability to enforce law and order. It appeared that the fate of the country—which was controlled by the Syrian Arab Republic—was of concern to the Lebanese Government only when southern Lebanon was involved. Israel's activity along the border was carried out entirely in self-defence, it said; its only aim was to guarantee the safety and welfare of its citizens living in northern Israel and it would continue to defend its people. Since June 1985, 790 attacks and attempted attacks had been carried out by terrorist elements in Lebanon against targets in southern Lebanon and Israel. One day's violence in the streets of Beirut or Tripoli accounted for a considerably higher number of casualties than the total casualties from incidents in the border area since then. Unlike the civilians in Beirut or Tripoli, the people of southern Lebanon lived under normal conditions, free from the endless cycle of violence that was destroying the rest of the country. Israel had consistently attempted to guarantee peace and security to its citizens through mutual arrangements with Lebanon. In November 1985, another attempt had been made to renew contacts through a special emissary of the Secretary-General; Lebanon, initially showing interest, had retracted again under Syrian pressure. Israel continued to be willing to negotiate with any Lebanese element that could guarantee suitable security arrangements for northern Israel.

By a letter of 26 December,<sup>(59)</sup> the Syrian Arab Republic stated that overflight of Lebanese territory by Israeli fighter aircraft was not only a violation of the sovereignty of a fraternal United Nations Member but also a direct threat to the Syrian forces in Lebanon at its request and in accordance with a decision of the League of Arab States. Any threat to the security of the Syrian forces in Lebanon also constituted a threat to the security of the Syrian Arab Republic (see also p. 313).

Other action. Both the Commission on Human Rights and the Economic and Social Council asked the Secretary-General to monitor the human rights situation in southern Lebanon (see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII).

Peace-keeping operation

In 1985, the Security Council twice extended the mandate of UNIFIL, on 17 April and 17 October, each time for six months. The Force, which was deployed in southern Lebanon, was established by the Council in 1978.<sup>(13)</sup> Its terms of reference were to confirm the withdrawal of the Israeli forces as called for by the Council, to restore international peace and security, and to assist the Lebanese Government in ensuring the return of its effective authority in the area.

The authorized strength of UNIFIL was 7,000, but because of its reduced activities it had in October 1985 some 5,700 troops, provided by Fiji, Finland, France, Ghana, Ireland, Italy, Nepal, the Netherlands, Norway and Sweden. A group of UNTSO observers assisted the Force in the performance of its tasks.

Communications. By a letter of 27 March 1985<sup>(60)</sup> Lebanon requested the Security Council to extend UNIFIL's mandate, due to expire on 19 April, for another six months, without a change of its mandate as laid down by Council resolutions. In Lebanon's understanding, UNIFIL's area of deployment extended from the Litani River southward to the internationally recognized boundaries of Lebanon; that area should be under the exclusive authority of the Lebanese army, assisted solely by UNIFIL. In no circumstance would Lebanon accept "buffer zones" or "security cordons" of any kind inside its territory; the area of deployment of UNIFIL should not become a disengagement zone between illegal armed forces within Lebanese territory, and the posts which the United Nations forces were to occupy would be determined by agreement with the Lebanese Government alone. In spite of the difficult conditions in south Lebanon, Lebanon added, UNIFIL's presence continued to be a necessary and important factor of stability and an international commitment to upholding Lebanon's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

On 29 March,<sup>(32)</sup> the Secretary-General transmitted to the Security Council President a letter of the previous day from the 10 troop-contributing countries, expressing deep concern at the recent events in southern Lebanon which, they said, not only had made it more difficult for UNIFIL to fulfil its mandate but also posed serious security risks to its members. For more than two years, they added, UNIFIL had carried out interim tasks entrusted to it following the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon,<sup>(61)</sup> when the Force had been unable to carry out its original mandate. In spite of the difficulties under which UNIFIL operated, the troop contributors were convinced that it had had a stabilizing effect on the situation in southern Lebanon and had played a useful humanitarian role.

Recalling the Force's original mandate, approved by the Council in 1978,<sup>(62)</sup> which spoke of three essential conditions<sup>(63)</sup> that must be met for UNIFIL to be effective, the troop contributors considered it incumbent on the Council to insist that all parties respect the Force's integrity, and stressed that UNIFIL could hope to fulfil its mandate only on the basis of an understanding between the parties on the role of the Force in an area that formed an uninterrupted whole up to the international boundary.

The troop-contributing countries urgently called on Israel and Lebanon to meet the requirements necessary to ensure security in the area in the wake of a full Israeli withdrawal and continued to support the Secretary-General's efforts to that end. They indicated their willingness to continue to support UNIFIL on the basis of their expectation that events in the near future would allow UNIFIL to play its originally envisaged role.

Report of the Secretary-General (April). On 11 April,<sup>(11)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on the activities of UNIFIL since 10 October 1984 (see also p. 295). During that period, it had continued to operate check-points and conduct patrols with a view to maintaining order and ensuring the security of the local population. The deteriorating situation in Lebanon was reflected also in the UNIFIL area of deployment, where attacks were carried out almost daily against IDF fixed positions. Roadside bombs and car-bomb attacks had inflicted heavy casualties on IDF. The activities by the Lebanese resistance against the Israeli forces and Israeli countermeasures had created a difficult situation for UNIFIL.

UNIFIL closely monitored the movements of IDF within its area, the Secretary-General reported. During the cordon-and-search operations carried out by IDF in villages in the UNIFIL area, it was present to prevent, within its means, acts of violence against the population and the destruction of property. The Force also continued its efforts to contain the activities of Lebanese irregulars armed and controlled by IDF. There had been a number of incidents in which such irregulars fired close to UNIFIL positions, and in a few cases fire was returned; there had also been a few incidents, protested to the Israeli authorities, in which Israeli troops fired close to UNIFIL personnel.

During the period under review, UNIFIL had maintained contact with the Lebanese Government, Lebanese regional authorities and Israeli authorities. It co-operated with the Lebanese authorities, UNRWA, UNICEF and ICRC in assisting the local population. A number of Lebanese civilians were treated in UNIFIL medical centres.

In a statement of 27 February on the role of the Force, the Secretary-General had said that, owing to the restrictions imposed on the civilians in southern Lebanon by the Israeli occupation, the increasing number of attacks on Israeli forces and strong Israeli countermeasures, UNIFIL's position was becoming increasingly difficult. For obvious reasons, UNIFIL had no right to impede Lebanese acts of resistance, nor did it have the mandate or means to prevent countermeasures. To withdraw UNIFIL would not be in the interest of Lebanon, while to involve it actively in the current violence would further complicate an already difficult situation. It seemed that the only course for UNIFIL was to maintain its presence and continue within its limited means to carry out its functions, while efforts continued to put an end to the current difficulties.

Following Israel's announcement in January that it intended to withdraw from Lebanon in three phases, the report continued, the Secretary-General's representatives had held extensive discussions with the Lebanese Government, which, however, had not agreed to any role for UNIFIL in the Israeli withdrawal process north of the Litani River. Brian Urquhart, Under-Secretary-General for Special Political Affairs, visited the area and discussed matters relating to UNIFIL's future; he also visited Lebanon and Israel in April, as well as the Syrian Arab Republic. During the consultations, he stressed the importance of securing a speedy, orderly and complete withdrawal of Israeli forces, of the establishment of peace and security in southern Lebanon, and of a proper context and basis for the future functioning of UNIFIL. The best means of achieving such conditions after Israel's withdrawal would be, in the Secretary-General's opinion, an orderly take-over from the Israeli forces, perhaps in the first instance by UNIFIL with elements of the Lebanese army, with the ultimate aim of restoring the complete authority of the Lebanese Government and army.

It was essential to establish, under the authority of the Security Council, conditions in which UNIFIL could function effectively in co-operation with the Lebanese authorities and army. There had to be a clear understanding that no armed military or paramilitary personnel of any kind could be allowed to operate in the area, other than the Lebanese army and UNIFIL, and that all parties and elements publicly declare their co-operation with the Lebanese authorities and UNIFIL.

The Secretary-General believed that the presence of UNIFIL was essential in the current circumstances and recommended an extension taking into account Lebanon's request;<sup>(60)</sup> he stressed again that it was essential to secure at least the minimum conditions for the Force's effective future work.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (April)

The Security Council met on 17 April to consider Lebanon's request and the Secretary-General's report. The Council invited Israel and Lebanon, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote.

On the same date, the Council adopted resolution 561(1985).

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978), 501(1982), 508(1982), 509(1982) and 520(1982), as well as all its resolutions on the situation in Lebanon,

Having studied the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon of 11 April 1985, and taking note of the observations expressed therein.

Taking note of the letter of the Permanent Representative of Lebanon addressed to the Secretary-General of 27 March 1985,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon,

1. Decides to extend the present mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon for a further interim period of six months, that is, until 19 October 1985;

2. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

3. Re-emphasizes the terms of reference and general guidelines of the Force as stated in the report of the Secretary-General of 19 March 1978, approved by resolution 426(1978), and calls upon all parties concerned to co-operate fully with the Force for the full implementation of its mandate;

4. Reiterates that the Force should fully implement its mandate as defined in resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978) and all other relevant resolutions;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report to the Council thereon.

Security Council resolution 561(1985)

17	April	1985	Meeting	2575	13-0-2
----	-------	------	---------	------	--------

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17100).

Vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, United Kingdom, United states

Against: None

Abstaining: Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

The USSR emphasized that it was the Council's duty to ensure respect for UNIFIL; it would be desirable for the Secretary-General to continue his practice of informing the Council of any instances when the forces could not perform their functions. Though not objecting to the renewal of UNIFIL's mandate, in the light of Lebanon's request, the USSR reiterated its fundamental position with regard to the Force, including the method of its financing.

Australia declared itself to be a strong supporter of the United Nations peace-keeping role. It recognized the dangers and difficulties under which UNIFIL operated, and hoped that the parties involved could create the conditions necessary for the Force's effective operation. Australia would support new consultations between the two parties to consider UNIFIL's future role as Israel withdrew from southern Lebanon, and hoped that they would agree to such discussions.

Denmark believed that UNIFIL should be assigned important tasks during the take-over from the Israeli forces, with the ultimate aim of restoring the Lebanese Government's and army's complete authority, taking into account the security interests of all parties, and thus finally allowing the Force to play the role originally envisaged for it. UNIFIL had demonstrated its ability to reduce considerably the violence in its area of operation, and even to bring about complete quiet when all parties supported and co-operated with it.

The United Kingdom agreed that the best means of achieving peace and security in the area and restoring Lebanon's authority and sovereignty up to the international border was an orderly take-over from the withdrawing Israeli forces by UNIFIL, with units of the Lebanese army. All concerned, particularly the Lebanese and Israeli authorities and the population of the area, had a duty to support and co-operate with UNIFIL to ensure its effective operation. No armed military or paramilitary personnel other than UNIFIL or the Lebanese army should be allowed to operate in UNIFIL's area. The United Kingdom believed that the Council should be prepared during the next six months to give further thought to UNIFIL's mandate; for the time being, the Force could continue to play a helpful role in the area while a way was sought for it to fulfil its original mandate.

France also agreed that despite the difficulties it had encountered, UNIFIL had been able to limit the scope of incidents; however, it must as soon as possible be put in a position fully to carry out its mandate. France wished by its vote to demonstrate again its commitment to Lebanon's unity, territorial integrity and independence; it hoped that the Secretary-General would continue to study and foster all necessary measures to ensure the full discharge of that mandate.

The United States believed that UNIFIL could help create stable conditions in southern Lebanon if all the parties agreed to co-operate. It strongly supported the Secretary-General's suggestion that a consultative mechanism be created under United Nations auspices such as perhaps renewal of the Naqoura talks--to effect the needed co-operation of the parties. As UNIFIL's current restricted role was both inappropriate and unsatisfactory, a clarification of that role, agreed upon by the parties concerned, must be achieved soon to adapt to the situation after Israel's withdrawal. The United States urged all parties to redouble efforts during the coming mandate period to achieve an agreed role for UNIFIL which utilized its potential and assigned to it an important task in the continuing international effort to restore Lebanon's sovereignty and peaceful conditions in the south.

Trinidad and Tobago firmly believed that UNIFIL's presence could be an essential factor of stability in the region, contributing to the maintenance of Lebanon's sovereignty and political independence and the return of effective State authority. However, to attain the objectives of UNIFIL's original mandate, full implementation of resolution 425(1978)<sup>(13)</sup> was necessary. Israel's withdrawal to the international borders, currently under way, was an essential prerequisite to peace. In addition, the security of the peace-keeping forces and all United Nations personnel in the area must be safeguarded, all parties had to co-operate and acts of violence had to cease.

Lebanon reiterated its position on UNIFIL, as expressed in its 27 March letter (see P. 305). It was convinced that the Force's presence was an essential and basic factor for stability in southern Lebanon and that a minimum degree of security for UNIFIL's work was also basic and necessary. Israel, which had consistently refused to assign any role to UNIFIL, must abide by the Council's resolutions to allow UNIFIL to carry out its mandated tasks.

Israel said it welcomed the Secretary-General's call to reconvene a forum of consultations. With regard to a suggestion that UNIFIL fulfil the police function of stopping cross-border attacks that the Lebanese army was not equipped to do, Israel pointed out that the task of policing a border strip was not merely a peace-keeping function but a peace-enforcing function, which an international force by its very nature and inherent structure was not organized to carry out. Israel did not expect others to take upon them the security of northern Israel and the prevention of terrorist attacks; that function would be assumed by IDF.

Communications (April-October). In a declaration on Lebanon (see p. 302), adopted on 29 April and transmitted on 3 May,<sup>(45)</sup> the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the 10 EC member States reaffirmed their support for UNIFIL and called on all parties to the conflict in Lebanon to respect the Force's role, avoiding all incidents, co-operating fully with it and ensuring the safety of its personnel.

The 10 troop-contributing States, by a letter of 10 June to the Secretary-General,<sup>(64)</sup> expressed deepest concern at recent developments in southern Lebanon, in particular the taking as prisoner of members of the Force. They supported the use of the Secretary-General's good offices to arrange their immediate release, and appealed to Governments to exert their influence so that the prisoners would be released without delay and unharmed.

On 3 October,<sup>(65)</sup> Lebanon requested that the Security Council extend UNIFIL's mandate, due to expire on 19 October, for another six months. Despite the current circumstances in the southern part of the country, UNIFIL continued to be an important factor in providing stability, Lebanon said; at the same time, increased efforts were needed to allow it fully to implement its mandate.

Report of the Secretary-General (October). On 10 October,<sup>(16)</sup> the Secretary-General reported on the activities of UNIFIL since 12 April (see also p. 296). He stated that the greater part of the UNIFIL area had been relatively quiet since its evacuation by the Israeli forces. UNIFIL had continued to maintain liaison with the local leaders of Amal and other Lebanese groups, which had generally co-operated with the Force. The leaders, however, had made it clear that the Lebanese resistance would continue to attack the Israeli forces and associated Lebanese irregulars in the security zone where the situation had been very tense. IDF and SLA carried out a number of cordon-and-search operations against Shiite villages in the UNIFIL area. UNIFIL monitored them closely with a view to preventing acts of violence and destruction of property, and dispensed humanitarian assistance, providing emergency food, supplies and bedding to displaced persons and later facilitating their return. UNIFIL strongly protested demolitions, arrests and other incidents as well as the indiscriminate shelling of population centres.

The activities of SLA and other irregulars armed and controlled by IDF were limited essentially to the security zone. Where that zone extended into the UNIFIL area of deployment, the Force continued its efforts to contain those activities, which led to frequent and dangerous confrontations. Most of the incidents related to firing at or near UNIFIL positions and attempts to break through UNIFIL check-points, at times using tanks and armoured personnel carriers. At check-points controlling entry to the security zone, SLA and other irregulars from time to time imposed on UNIFIL personnel restrictions of movement, which were usually of short duration and lifted after negotiations. The increasing number of attacks by Lebanese resistance groups on those check-points led to their frequent closure to all traffic, including that of UNIFIL, and indiscriminate firing at approaching vehicles, including ambulances. On 1 October, a French officer had been shot and wounded at an SLA check-point. A number of confrontations occurred when UNIFIL denied passage through its check-points to unauthorized armed personnel.

On 7 June, following the defection of 11 SLA personnel, 23 members of the Finnish battalion were detained by SLA. After lengthy negotiations between the Force Commander and the Secretary-General on one side and Israel on the other, they were released unharmed on 15 June.

Following Israel's withdrawal and establishment of a security zone, UNIFIL had not been able to extend its deployment to the border. In the part of its area that overlapped with the zone, it was confronted with 21 positions manned by IDF or SLA or both. After completion of Israel's redeployment in June, the UNIFIL Commander continued negotiations with the Israeli authorities, only partly successful, to get IDF and SLA to evacuate those positions.

During the period under review, the UNIFIL Commander and staff maintained contact with the Government of Lebanon and the Lebanese regional authorities, as well as with Israeli authorities on matters pertaining to the functioning of the Force. Under-Secretary-General Urquhart held discussions with government officials in the region in June and October.

UNIFIL continued to treat Lebanese civilians in UNIFIL medical centres and to co-operate with the Lebanese authorities, UNRWA, UNICEF and ICRC in assisting the local population.

The Secretary-General believed that the level of violence in southern Lebanon had been limited to some extent because of UNIFIL's presence. However, the current situation was not only unsatisfactory but dangerous, as UNIFIL found itself once again between hostile forces and was precluded from deploying right up to the international border in accordance with its mandate. Also, Israel's continued presence in the security zone could lead to escalating and spreading violence. Such a situation could well develop into a new and serious international crisis, he warned.

The Secretary-General hoped that the Israeli authorities would conclude that, of all the options available, the effective implementation of UNIFIL's mandate would in the long run be the least hazardous for all concerned. In the light especially of Lebanon's request, he recommended a further extension of UNIFIL's mandate. However, extending the mandate must not be understood to mean that UNIFIL would be allowed to become an open-ended commitment for the troop-contributing countries and for the United Nations if the requisite conditions for its effective operation continued to be absent.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (October)

The Security Council met on 17 October to consider the Secretary-General's report. It invited Israel and Lebanon, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote.

On the same date, the Council adopted resolution 575(1985).

The Security Council,

Recalling its resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978), 501(1982), 508(1982), 509(1982) and 520(1982), as well as all its resolutions on the situation in Lebanon,

Having studied the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon of 10 October 1985 and taking note of the observations expressed therein,

Taking note of the letter of the Permanent Representative of Lebanon addressed to the Secretary-General of 3 October 1985,

Responding to the request of the Government of Lebanon,

1. Decides to extend the present mandate of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon for a further interim period of six months, that is, until 19 April 1986;

2. Reiterates its strong support for the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Lebanon within its internationally recognized boundaries;

3. Re-emphasizes the terms of reference and general guidelines of the Force as stated in the report of the Secretary-General of 19 March 1978, approved by resolution 426(1978), and calls upon all parties concerned to co-operate fully with the Force for the full implementation of its mandate;

4. Reiterates that the Force should fully implement its mandate as defined in resolutions 425(1978), 426(1978) and all other relevant resolutions;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to continue consultations with the Government of Lebanon and other parties directly concerned on the implementation of the present resolution and to report to the Council thereon.

Security Council resolution 575(1985)

17 October 1985 Meeting 2623 13-0-2

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17567).

Vote in Council as follows:

In favour: Australia, Burkina Faso, China, Denmark, Egypt, France, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, United Kingdom, United States

Against: None.

Abstaining: Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

The USSR said that if Israel would withdraw and cease its interference in Lebanon's affairs, that would create conditions in which UNIFIL could carry out its mandate; with that in mind and taking into consideration Lebanon's request and the Secretary-General's recommendations, the USSR said it did not object to extending the Force's mandate for a further interim period.

China said it hoped that in the coming six months UNIFIL's situation would be fundamentally improved. The elimination of the aftermath of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, including the dismantling of the security zone and the total withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanese territory, was a prerequisite for the normal functioning of the Force, the recovery of Lebanese sovereignty and the restoration of peace and security. China shared the Secretary-General's position that UNIFIL's extension should not be allowed to become an open-ended commitment, a view also shared by France, which insisted on comprehensive application as soon as possible of resolutions 425(1978)<sup>(13)</sup> and 427(1978)<sup>(66)</sup> through negotiations with the parties.

The United Kingdom also agreed with the Secretary-General that the balance of advantage lay in renewing the mandate, but that the current situation was both unsatisfactory and dangerous; by maintaining a security zone and preventing UNIFIL from carrying out its mandate, Israel's policy damaged the chances of restoring stable and peaceful conditions in southern Lebanon.

Denmark pointed out that the so-called security zone was contrary to Council resolutions and meant that UNIFIL found itself in the midst of mutually hostile forces. It hoped Israel would conclude that the effective implementation of UNIFIL's mandate would in the long run be the least hazardous for all. The Force should be allowed to carry out its mandate.

Lebanon believed that UNIFIL was an important expression of the Council's commitment to helping it cope with continuing violations of its sovereignty and restore its authority over all its territory.

In Israel's view, the purpose of UNIFIL was to ensure that there was no cross-border violence and no continuous problem involving international peace and security, namely, the problem of terrorist attacks continuously launched against Israel. UNIFIL could not stop terrorism, because it could only serve as a buffer between two Governments and there was no sufficiently strong Government on one side.

Report of the Secretary-General (December). In an interim report of 16 December on UNIFIL<sup>(17)</sup> (see also p. 297) the Secretary-General stated that the situation in the UNIFIL area of deployment had remained basically the same since October. The part that the Israeli forces had evacuated in the spring had remained quiet and the Shiite organization, Amal, and other Lebanese resistance groups had generally co-operated with the Force. But the other part, the security zone, had been very tense. That zone overlapped UNIFIL's area and included the whole Norwegian battalion sector in the east, areas adjacent to the border and the Christian enclave around Marjayoun. In those areas, UNIFIL had only isolated positions and was restricted in its freedom of movement. Access to the zone was controlled by fortified positions, road-blocks and check-points, manned by IDF and local Lebanese forces it armed and controlled, mainly SLA.

During the previous two months, the Secretary-General continued, Lebanese resistance groups had launched almost daily attacks, usually at night, against Israeli troops and associated local forces in the security zone. The attacks had been particularly frequent in the southern parts of the Nepalese and Irish battalion. On the night of 14/15 November, a building billeting UNIFIL personnel was seriously damaged by an errant rocket. Military observer teams of UNTSO also received evidence of attacks in the border area south of the UNIFIL deployment area.

IDF and associated local forces carried out a number of search operations in the overlapping security zone. The most important ones took place on 22 and 25 November at Chebaa, where five persons were arrested, and on 28 November, when an IDF unit sealed off and searched Yatar and its vicinity, following reports that two rockets had impacted on Israeli territory.

UNIFIL continued its efforts to contain the activities of SLA and other irregulars in its area, which led to frequent confrontations. The irregulars often attempted to break through UNIFIL check-points. From time to time, SLA and other irregulars restricted the movement of UNIFIL personnel, affecting in particular the Norwegian battalion. Incidents of firing close to UNIFIL positions continued, although their number decreased and all incidents were protested to the Israeli authorities.

Since May 1985, the Secretary-General and his colleagues had been trying to promote agreement on security arrangements in southern Lebanon which would be in line with UNIFIL's mandate and take into account Lebanon's and Israel's concerns. However, the positions of the parties remained far apart: Israel announced that it would continue to rely on the security zone to safeguard its northern settlements and that UNIFIL would not be allowed to deploy to the border; Lebanon insisted that the Force should deploy to the border and fully implement its mandate.

Despite UNIFIL's stabilizing presence, the current situation was not acceptable and could well deteriorate. In the case of further escalation of violence, UNIFIL would find itself in a difficult position. The Secretary-General shared the concern of the troop-contributing countries at probable developments if conditions were allowed to persist.

The most effective means to minimize risks and preserve the Force's credibility would be a change in Israel's position. Were UNIFIL withdrawn, the Secretary-General had no doubt that there would be a disastrous increase in violence in southern Lebanon and that the concept of United Nations peace-keeping would be weakened. On the other hand, if the Force remained in place in a deteriorating situation, it would become increasingly difficult for it to limit violence, assist and protect the civilians and establish peace and security in the area.

The Secretary-General did not make any recommendations to the Council for future action, but expressed the hope that the Council members would ponder on what action they might take, individually or collectively, to implement resolutions on UNIFIL and bring about peace and normality in southern Lebanon.

Palestinian refugees in Lebanon

While much of the violence in Lebanon affected Palestinians and Lebanese citizens indiscriminately, in many instances Palestinians were the specific target, according to the UNRWA Commissioner-General in reports covering the periods 1 July 1984 to 30 June 1985<sup>(67)</sup> and 1 July 1985 to 30 June 1986.<sup>(68)</sup>

The lives of Palestinian refugees continued to be threatened everywhere in Lebanon. In the year preceding 30 June 1985, the UNRWA field office in Lebanon reported over 800 violent deaths, over 2,500 woundings, 500 arrests, 27 kidnappings and nine disappearances.

Until February 1985, all Palestinian refugee camps in the southern part of the country were subject to searches as the Israeli army reacted to attacks from local groups. After the Israeli withdrawal from Saida on 16 February to the Litani River, the frequency and severity of the searches intensified in the Tyre area. Many refugees left the camps and sought refuge elsewhere.

Fighting erupted on 18 March, during which the Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh camps suffered extensive damage from shelling by militias in the surrounding hills; 60 refugees were killed, 314 were wounded and some 40,000 people were displaced.

During fighting in April, almost all shelters at Mieh Mieh camp were destroyed or damaged, as well as many at Ein el-Hilweh.

Fierce fighting in and around Beirut camps rapidly escalated from 19 May. Violent clashes between Amal militiamen and Palestine refugees resulted in heavy loss of life, as did sporadic Israeli air raids. In the Saida area, at Tripoli and at Beirut, the refugee camps of Shatila and Burj el-Barajneh were the targets of repeated attacks, with an estimated toll of 635 dead and 2,500 wounded.

As a result of fighting around and in the Beirut camps in June, some 18,000 refugees fled to other parts of Lebanon. In spite of intensive efforts sponsored by the Lebanese Government, including the formation of a special force to take charge of security in West Beirut, fighting continued in and around the two main Beirut camps. In mid-September, fierce fighting broke out at Tripoli and lasted three weeks. In spite of these difficulties, UNRWA continued to function in Lebanon.

The situation of Palestine refugees in Lebanon was also dealt with in a report of the Secretary-General on refugee protection (see p. 358).

Communications. By a letter of 16 January, transmitted by Egypt the next day,<sup>(20)</sup> PLO reiterated its view that, in view of Israel's planned withdrawal, the United Nations was fully responsible for providing adequate protection and safety to the Palestinians in southern Lebanon and specifically in the refugee camps.

By a letter of 6 February, transmitted by Qatar as Chairman of the Arab Group,<sup>(69)</sup> PLO charged that Israeli occupation troops had opened fire on Palestinians near the Burj Ash-Shamali refugee camp on 5 February, wounding several, sealing the camp off, cutting off electricity, imposing a curfew and carrying out mass arrests. On 6 February, PLO alleged, Israeli troops in an armoured vehicle passing through the Tyre area opened fire and seriously wounded six Palestinian civilians in a car. The situation in and around the camps in southern Lebanon was extremely tense, PLO said, with mounting anxiety that it was Israel's aim to liquidate or terrify into flight the remaining Palestinian civilians there. PLO insisted that the United Nations do everything in its power to guarantee their safety and security.

The Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, by a letter of 12 February,<sup>(70)</sup> called attention to those and other incidents and expressed utmost concern at the mounting tension in the refugee camps in southern Lebanon and the West Bank (see also p. 327).

By letters of 1 and 3 April, transmitted by the United Arab Emirates as Chairman of the Arab Group,<sup>(71)</sup> PLO gave an account of shelling by Israeli artillery and Lebanese elements, beginning on 29 March, of the camps of Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh, resulting in a number of casualties, and forcing 75,000 Palestinians (25,000 of them from the camps), most of them women and children, to leave the area. Meanwhile, the Israeli navy had imposed a sea blockade on Sidon and Beirut and abducted six Palestinians from a Lebanese ship. PLO called again on the United Nations and specifically the Security Council to take the necessary measures to put an end to such criminal acts.

Heavy artillery bombardment of Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon was reported in two other letters from PLO, dated 10 and 11 April, also transmitted by the United Arab Emirates.<sup>(43)</sup> In bombarding three camps in the Tyre area on 9 and 10 April, several houses were destroyed and hundreds of civilians, including Palestinians, were arrested and taken to Israel (see p. 302). For the twelfth consecutive day, Israeli forces and their allies had shelled Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh; on 10 April, seven persons were killed and 15 injured. On 11 April, bombardment of and search-and-arrest operations in camps in the Sidon area were carried out. The aim, PLO believed, was to uproot the Palestinian presence in south Lebanon to establish a so-called "safe border zone" and a sectarian, Fascist mini-State in south Lebanon.

The United Arab Emirates, again for the Arab Group, transmitted another PLO letter, dated 15 April,<sup>(44)</sup> informing the Secretary-General that for the past few days Israeli occupation forces in the Tyre area had besieged four camps and arrested 270 Palestinian civilians, taking them to unknown destinations. PLO said it was clear that the Israeli forces were attempting to break the will of the Palestinians, create an atmosphere of terror and panic, and facilitate their mass exodus. PLO called again on the United Nations to take adequate measures to end Israel's crimes and protect the Palestinians.

The Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, on 23 May<sup>(72)</sup> expressed profound concern at the tragic developments in and around the camps of Sabra, Shatila and Burj el-Barajneh in Beirut, the object of armed attacks. He urged the Secretary-General to do all in his power to put an end to the violence against the camps and promote a durable solution of the Palestinian question.

On 31 July,<sup>(55)</sup> the Committee Chairman brought to the Secretary-General's attention newspaper reports that tanks had been delivered that might affect the rights and lives of the Palestinian refugees living in Lebanon and that amplified tension in the area. Lebanon, on 9 August,<sup>(56)</sup> stated that the subject was outside the Committee's competence, having nothing to do with the Palestinians' exercise of their inalienable rights.

UNRWA activities

Emergency operations

For most of 1985, emergency operations launched in the aftermath of the 1982 invasion of Lebanon<sup>(61)</sup> continued to predominate in UNRWA's relief efforts. The year brought widespread hardship for tens of thousands of refugee families in Lebanon, the Commissioner-General stated.<sup>(67)</sup> Due to the fighting that persisted almost without interruption in one part of Lebanon or another, thousands of refugees were displaced and lost their homes and possessions; many were killed or injured. The programme of reconstruction, begun in previous years, had to be postponed because of continuing hostilities.

Despite the difficulties, the Agency continued to function, distributing food, water, medical supplies and other benefits. Normal education, health and welfare programmes were carried out to the extent that circumstances permitted.

Following the fighting around and in the Beirut camps in June 1985, UNRWA provided food, blankets and household items to the 18,000 refugees who had fled the camps and to those who remained, numbering some 25,000 altogether. Later in the year, the Agency gave some $1,406,233 in direct cash aid to the residents of those camps to help them repair their shelters.

Due to prevailing security conditions, supplies could be transported from Beirut to south Lebanon only with great difficulty and after much negotiation, despite an agreement that had been reached between UNRWA and Israel.

The chaotic situation in Beirut had an increasingly serious impact on UNRWA's ability to supervise certain operations from its field office. In an effort to ease that problem, the Commissioner-General decided to open a small sub-office at Larnaca, Cyprus, with two international and 12 area staff, to improve the carrying out of basic administrative and financial services for refugees in Lebanon.

Relief measures

Like its emergency measures, UNRWA's relief operations in Lebanon continued with great difficulty. Discontinuation of emergency food rations in March 1984<sup>(73)</sup> still caused consternation among the refugees, many of whom were unable to find steady work and were cut off from other sources of income. In Tyre, refugees refused to accept special-hardship-case assistance in support of their contention that all refugees should be so classified; they began to accept assistance again in May 1985 after withdrawal of the Israeli forces. Similar protests had been made in the Saida area and part of the Bekaa sub-area in January and February, so rations were issued only in the Beirut and Tripoli areas.

Rations to special hardship families were disrupted in the Beirut camps when fierce fighting broke out on 19 May and continued for three weeks; supplies were finally allowed into the camps the second week of June. UNRWA assisted thousands of refugees to obtain or renew travel documents issued by the host Governments through close co-operation between its staff and government offices.

Economic problems, particularly loss of employment, continued to have particularly severe impact on the refugees, though the economic situation in the south improved marginally after the Israeli withdrawals, which allowed for a precarious restoration of the agricultural economy. UNRWA continued its co-operative efforts with the Young Men's Christian Association and UNESCO to alleviate the unemployment situation.

Restoration of regular services

The difficulty of travel in Lebanon compelled UNRWA to change some of its hospital arrangements, referring to the Syrian Arab Republic some patients who normally would have been referred to the American University Hospital in Beirut, and subsidizing private hospitals in south Lebanon that treated patients who could not be referred out of that area. The Agency and the Norwegian Refugee Council agreed to continue operating jointly a rehabilitation centre in Tyre when the situation permitted.

Agreements effective 1 January 1985 were concluded with the Hammoud Hospital (25 beds) in Saida and the al-Sahel Hospital (20 beds) in Beirut for the hospitalization of refugees, and two with Sidon hospitals were cancelled in February; one centre in Saida became inaccessible after April.

As health services inside the camps were often paralysed by the heavy fighting in March/April in Saida and in May/June in Beirut, UNRWA launched emergency medical services and established mobile medical teams. Due to local clashes, the UNRWA polyclinic at Beirut was closed on 29 April and the staff were relocated to the Mar Elias camp. An agreement between UNRWA and the International Rescue Committee, which had a health care unit in Saida, was extended to the end of June. Two dental units were installed at Ein el-Hilweh. Some 20 refugee patients were receiving haemodialysis in local hospitals at UNRWA expense.

UNRWA schools were able to operate for much of the 1984/85 school year, although their reopening was delayed in the north and in Beirut. Schools in the Sabra Quarter and Mar Elias and three schools in the Shatila camp remained inoperative for long periods and were unable to complete their curriculum until well into the following school year. From July to November 1985, Agency schools at Beirut were inoperative, seven of them occupied by displaced refugee families. Elsewhere in the country, interruptions in school operations during the second half of 1985 were mainly due to local strikes.

Food and other benefits were distributed to special hardship cases, damaged Agency buildings were repaired, roads relaid, water supply installations repaired or replaced and electricity supplies restored.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

The Security Council met on 31 May to consider the escalation of violence in and around Beirut, affecting also the safety and security of the Palestinians in the refugee camps (see p. 303). By resolution 564(1985), the Council called for an end to acts of violence against the civilian population in Lebanon, in particular in and around Palestinian refugee camps. It also called on all parties to facilitate the work of United Nations agencies, in particular UNRWA.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In resolution 40/165 I on the protection of Palestine refugees, the General Assembly urged the Commissioner-General to provide housing, in consultation with the Lebanese Government, to those refugees whose houses had been demolished or razed by the Israeli forces. It called again on Israel to compensate UNRWA for the damage to its property and facilities resulting from Israel's invasion of Lebanon, without prejudice to its responsibility for all damages resulting from that invasion.

Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic

In 1985, the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights dealt with the situation in the Syrian Golan Heights in the light of Israel's 1981 decision<sup>(74)</sup> to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Israeli-occupied territory (see p. 340).

The United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, with some 1,300 troops in October 1985, provided by Austria, Canada, Finland and Poland, was deployed between the Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights in accordance with the Agreement on Disengagement of Forces between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic, concluded between the two countries in 1974.<sup>(75)</sup> A group of observers from UNTSO assisted UNDOF in its tasks.

The main functions of UNDOF continued to be to supervise the observance of the cease-fire between Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic in the Golan Heights area and ensure that there were no military forces in the area of separation. The Security Council extended UNDOF's mandate twice during the year, in May and November, by resolutions 563(1985) and 576(1985). The Force's headquarters was at Damascus.

In a September report<sup>(76)</sup> on the Middle East situation (see p. 264), the Secretary-General transmitted replies from 13 States regarding their implementation of the General Assembly's 1984 resolution<sup>(77)</sup> on Israeli policies in the Golan Heights, by which Member States were called on to refrain from supplying Israel with weapons, to refrain from acquiring weapons from Israel, to suspend economic, financial and technological co-operation with Israel and to sever diplomatic, trade and cultural relations with it.

Communications. In a letter of 6 November 1985 to the Secretary-General,<sup>(78)</sup> Israel stated that a reporter for a magazine published in the Federal Republic of Germany had interviewed and photographed a Nazi war criminal, Alois Brunner, who, Israel charged, the Syrian Arab Republic had sheltered for 30 years. When asked on 30 October to explain Syria's action, a Syrian representative to the Assembly's Third (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural) Committee had claimed no such person lived in Syria, Israel said. Despite being a party to the 1948 Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide,<sup>(79)</sup> the Syrian Arab Republic refused to try or extradite Brunner; if it continued to do so, Israel said, the international community should demand that he be handed over to an impartial international tribunal.

On 20 November,<sup>(80)</sup> the Syrian Arab Republic charged that on the previous day two Israeli fighter aircraft had violated Syrian airspace. They clashed with Syrian aircraft before withdrawing. That provocative act, it stated, was one further element in a series of acts of aggression in which Israel persisted in violating international law with serious consequences for international peace and security.

On 26 December,<sup>(59)</sup> the Syrian Arab Republic stated that it regarded overflight of Lebanese territory by Israeli fighters as a flagrant violation of the sovereignty of a fraternal United Nations Member and a deliberate threat to the Syrian forces in Lebanon at that country's request and in accordance with a decision of the League of Arab States; any threat to the security of the Syrian forces in Lebanon also constituted a threat to the security of the Syrian Arab Republic. Israel's threats were designed to sabotage Syrian efforts to contribute to national reconciliation and restoration of normal life in Lebanon. The Syrian Arab Republic reaffirmed its determination to exercise its legitimate right to defend its security and protect its armed forces. The international community must adopt a firmer position in the face of Israel's provocations.

Peace-keeping operation

UNDOF activities

Reports of the Secretary-General. Prior to the expiration of the six-month extensions of the mandate of UNDOF, on 31 May and 30 November 1985, the Secretary-General submitted reports on the activities of the Force for the periods from 17 November 1984 to 13 May 1985<sup>(81)</sup> and from 14 May to 13 November 1985.<sup>(82)</sup>

In both reports, the Secretary-General stated that UNDOF had continued to fulfil its tasks, with the co-operation of the parties and facilitated by the close contact maintained by the Force Commander and his staff with the military liaison staffs of Israel and the Syrian Arab Republic. The cease-fire had been maintained and no complaints concerning the UNDOF area of operation had been lodged by either party.

Supervision of the area of separation was carried out through static positions and observation posts manned 24 hours a day, patrols operating at irregular intervals on predetermined routes, and temporary outposts. Under a Syrian programme, civilians had been returning to the area of separation.

UNDOF continued fortnightly inspections of armament and forces in the area of limitation, assisted by liaison officers from the parties. It received the co-operation of both parties, although restricted in movement and inspection in certain areas by both sides.

Because mines posed a threat to the Force and the growing population, UNDOF continued its efforts, in consultation with the parties, to make the area mine-free. Intensified patrolling and a security fence had helped prevent or reduce incidents involving Syrian shepherds. UNDOF also assisted ICRC with facilities for handing over mail and prisoners of war and for the passage of students across the area.

Despite the quiet in the sector, the Secretary-General stated, the situation in the Middle East as a whole continued to be potentially dangerous. He hoped that determined efforts would be made to tackle the problem in all its aspects, with a view to arriving at a just and durable peace settlement, as called for by the Security Council in 1973.<sup>(83)</sup>

In the circumstances, he considered the continued presence of UNDOF to be essential and recommended the Syrian Arab Republic having given its assent and Israel having expressed agreement in each report that the Council extend its mandate for a further six months.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION

On 21 May 1985, without debate, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 563(1985), extending UNDOF's mandate until 30 November.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force,

Decides:

(a) To call upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973);

(b) To renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for another period of six months, that is, until 30 November 1985;

(c) To request the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

Security Council resolution 563(1985)

21 May 1985 Meeting 2581 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17202).

On 21 November, again without debate, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 576(1985), extending UNDOF's mandate until 31 May 1986.

The Security Council,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force,

Decides:

(a) To call upon the parties concerned to implement immediately Security Council resolution 338(1973);

(b) To renew the mandate of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for another period of six months, that is, until 31 May 1986;

(c) To request the Secretary-General to submit, at the end of this period, a report on the developments in the situation and the measures taken to implement resolution 338(1973).

Security Council resolution 576(1985)

21 November 1985 Meeting 2630 Adopted unanimously

Draft prepared in consultations among Council members (S/17642)

After adoption of each resolution, the President, made the following statement on behalf of the Council:<sup>(84)</sup>

"As is known, the report of the Secretary-General on the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force states, in paragraph 26 (25 in the November report): 'Despite the present 'quiet in the Israel-Syria sector, the situation in the Middle East as a whole continues to be potentially dangerous and is likely to remain so, unless and until a comprehensive settlement covering all aspects of the Middle East problem can be reached.' That statement of the Secretary-General reflects the view of the Security Council."

Composition

As at 13 November 1985, the composition of UNDOF was as follows:

Austria	533
Canada	226
Finland	411
Poland	153
United Nations military observers (detailed from UNTSO)	8
Total	1,311

In addition, UNTSO observers assigned to the Israel-Syria Mixed Armistice Commission assisted UNDOF as required.

Change of Commander

In April,<sup>(85)</sup> the Secretary-General informed the Security Council that the Commander of UNDOF, Major-General Carl-Gustav Stahl (Sweden), was resigning and that he intended, subject to consultations, to appoint Major-General Gustav Hägglund (Finland) as Commander, effective 1 June. Major-General Stahl had assumed command of the Force in June 1982.<sup>(86)</sup>

The President of the Council responded on 3 May.<sup>(87)</sup>

"I wish to inform you that your letter dated 29 April 1985 concerning your intention to appoint Major-General Gustav Hägglund of Finland to the post of Commander of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force has been brought to the attention of the members of the Security Council. They considered the matter in informal consultations on 1 May and agreed with the proposal contained in your letter."

Major-General Hägglund assumed command of the Force on 1 June.

Financing of peace-keeping forces

United Nations peace-keeping operations in the Middle East comprised two peace-keeping forces—UNDOF and UNIFIL—and one observer mission, UNTSO.

The General Assembly, following the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions (ACABQ) and the Fifth (Administrative and Budgetary) Committee, approved appropriations for UNDOF for operations from 1 June 1985 to 31 May 1986 totalling more than $36 million (resolution 40/59 A), and for UNIFIL's operations from 19 April 1985 to 18 April 1986, some $142 million (40/246 A).

In each case, the Assembly apportioned the expenses for the Forces among all Member States in accordance with a special scale used for this purpose<sup>(1)</sup> since the establishment of the second United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF II) in 1973. According to that arrangement, the permanent members of the Security Council were assessed more than they would have been under the scale of assessments for the United Nations regular budget, while most developing countries were assessed 80 per cent less and the least developed countries 90 per cent less than under the regular scale.

In view of the difficult financial situation of the two Forces, the Assembly authorized suspension of certain provisions of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations to enable UNDOF and UNIFIL to retain a "surplus balance" of about $3 million and $9 million, respectively (40/59 B and 40/246 B).

Although the last revision of standard rates of reimbursement to countries which contributed troops to the Forces had taken place in 1980, the Assembly decided to retain the current rates of reimbursement (40/247).

UNDOF financing

Report of the Secretary-General. In an October 1985 report on the financing of UNDOF,<sup>(2)</sup> the Secretary-General noted that, as at 30 September, $665.1 million in contributions for UNDOF together with UNEF II had been received since the latter's inception in 1973 to 30 November 1985. The unpaid balance due from Member States was $73 million, of which $30.8 million represented amounts apportioned among Member States which had stated that they did not intend to pay, and $36 million in contributions due from China which had been transferred to a special account in accordance with a 1981 Assembly resolution.<sup>(3)</sup>

According to the Secretary-General, there was a shortfall of approximately $7.2 million in the UNDOF Special Account for the period from 25 October 1979 to 30 November 1985. The shortfall for periods prior to 24 October 1979 together with UNEF II until its liquidation in 1980 was some $59.6 million. In the circumstances, troop contributors had not been paid on time, nor had they been reimbursed fully in accordance with the rates agreed upon; they had again conveyed to the Secretary-General their serious concern over the situation which, they said, placed a heavy burden on them.

For the operation of UNDOF from 1 December 1985 on, the Secretary-General estimated monthly costs of $3,047,000 gross ($2,989,083 net). For the period 1 June to 30 November 1985, an appropriation of $17,852,496 gross ($17,592,000 net) would be required.

ACABQ recommendations. ACABQ, in November 1985,<sup>(4)</sup> recommended that the Secretary-General's estimates be approved and that he be permitted the usual flexibility to transfer credits between items of expenditure, should it be necessary for good management and efficiency.

ACABQ also recommended acceptance of the Secretary-General's proposal to establish one new Field Service post for property and inventory control which would bring the total UNDOF posts to 155 (8 at the Professional level and above, 10 General Service, 31 Field Service and 106 local level). The Committee noted his statement that the Force continued to explore the possibility of relocating UNDOF headquarters to just outside Damascus; should additional funds be required, the matter would be brought to the Committee's attention for action.

ACABQ also noted information that the 1984-1985 interim accounts indicated a "surplus" balance of $3,250,131 in the Special Account for UNEF and UNDOF as at 31 December 1984, representing an excess of income over expenditure due to interest and miscellaneous credits which had accrued. However, "income" included "assessed contributions" irrespective of collectability. In consequence of the withholding of contributions by certain Member States, the "surplus" had in effect been drawn upon to its full extent.

Introducing ACABQ's report in the Fifth Committee, the Chairman of ACABQ added that it also approved UNDOF costs from 1 December 1983 to 30 November 1985, as detailed by the Secretary-General.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly, acting on the recommendation of the Fifth Committee, adopted two resolutions—40/59 A and B—dealing with the financing of UNDOF.

On 2 December, it adopted resolution 40/59 A by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolutions 350(1974) of 31 May 1974, 363(1974) of 29 November 1974, 369(1975) of 28 May 1975, 381(1975) of 30 November 1975, 390(1976) of 28 May 1976, 398(1976) of 30 November 1976, 408(1977) of 26 May 1977, 420(1977) of 30 November 1977, 429(1978) of 31 May 1978, 441(1978) of 30 November 1978, 449(1979) of 30 May 1979, 456(1979) of 30 November 1979, 470(1980) of 30 May 1980, 481(1980) of 26 November 1980, 485(1981) of 22 May 1981, 493(1981) of 23 November 1981, 506(1982) of 26 May 1982, 524(1982) of 29 November 1982, 531(1983) of 26 May 1983, 543(1983) of 29 November 1983, 551(1984) of 30 May 1984, 557(1984) of 28 November 1984, 563(1985) of 21 May 1985 and 576(1985) of 21 November 1985,

Recalling its resolutions 3101(XXVIII) of 11 December 1973, 3211 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974, 3374 C (XXX) of 2 December 1975, 31/5 D of 22 December 1976, 32/4 C of 2 December 1977, 33/13 D of 8 December 1978, 34/7 C of 3 December 1979, 35/44 of 1 December 1980, 35/45 A of 1 December 1980, 36/66 A of 30 November 1981, 37/38 A of 30 November 1982, 38/35 A of 1 December 1983 and 39/28 A of 30 November 1984,

Reaffirming its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by such operations, a different procedure is required from that applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards peace-keeping operations involving heavy expenditures,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council in the financing of such operations, as indicated in General Assembly resolution 1874(S-IV) of 27 June 1963 and other resolutions of the Assembly,

I

Decides to appropriate to the Special Account referred to in section II, paragraph 1, of General Assembly resolution 3211 B (XXIX) the amount of $17,852,496 gross ($17,592,000 net) authorised and apportioned by section III of Assembly resolution 39/28 A for the operation of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force for the period from 1 June to 30 November 1985, inclusive;

Decides further, as an ad hoc arrangement, without prejudice to the positions of principle that may be taken by Member States in any consideration by the General Assembly of arrangements for the financing of peace-keeping operations, to apportion the amount of $18,282,000 among Member States in accordance with the scheme set out in Assembly resolution 3101(XXVIII) and the provisions of section II, paragraphs 2 (b) and 2 (c), and section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 3374 C (XXX), section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 31/5 D, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 32/4 C, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 33/13 D, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 34/7 C, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 35/45 A, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 36/66 A, section V, paragraph 1, of resolution 37/38 A and section V, paragraphs 1 and 2, of resolution 39/28 A: the scale of assessments for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 shall be applied against a portion thereof, that is $3,047,000, being the amount pertaining on a pro rata basis to the month of December 1985, and the scale of assessments for the years 1986, 1987 and 1988 shall be applied against the balance, that is $15,235,000, for the period thereafter;

3. Decides that there shall be set off against the apportionment among Member States, as provided in paragraph 2 above, their respective share in the estimated income of $10,000 other than staff assessment income approved for the period from 1 December 1985 to 31 May 1986, inclusive;

the said amount to be apportioned among Member States in accordance with the scheme set out in the present resolution;

IV

1. Stresses the need for voluntary contributions to the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, both in cash and in the form of services and supplies acceptable to the Secretary-General;

2. Requests the Secretary-General to take all necessary action to ensure that the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force is conducted with a maximum of efficiency and economy.

General Assembly resolution 40/59 A

2 December 1985 Meeting 99 96-2-13 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee (A/40/957) by recorded vote (78-2-18). 2 December (meeting 51): 9-nation draft (A/C.5/40/L.4, part A1: agenda item 126 (a)).

Meeting numbers. GA 40th session: 5th Committee 50, 51; plenary 99.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Cyprus, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Greece, Guyana, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Madagascar, Malaysia, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Romania, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Kingdom, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Viet Nam,<sup>a</sup> Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Albania, Syrian Arab Republic.

Abstaining: Afghanistan, Algeria, Benin, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Iraq, Morocco, USSR, Yemen.

Iraq and Yemen said the aggressor alone, not Member States, should pay for UNDOF's operations. Iran did not participate in the vote for similar reasons. Maldives also announced its non-participation. 'The United Arab Emirates, expressing a similar view, said it cast a positive vote out of solidarity with the international community and support for international peace and security. Jordan emphasized that its vote in favour did not mean that it condoned Israel's continuing occupation of Arab territories; peace-keeping operations should play a temporary role only and the United Nations should go beyond that and bring about a lasting peace in the Middle East. Albania said its negative vote was cast not out of financial considerations but out of respect for certain principles.

Since Israel's aggression had been identified clearly in United Nations resolutions, Israel, not Member States, should finance UNDOF; funding should at best be voluntary, Algeria believed. Since UNDOF had proved incapable of halting the Zionist aggression, a more appropriate solution was required.

The USSR said it could not understand why the costs of peace-keeping forces in the Middle East were so high, and agreed with ACABQ on the need to economize and make expenditures more cost-effective.

Peace-keeping operations could not be a substitute for peaceful settlement, Israel said. The prolongation of such operations in the Middle East reflected the complexity of the problems there.

Introducing the text, Canada said the success of peace-keeping operations was linked to respect for the principle of collective responsibility for their financing, and the permanent members of the Security Council had a special responsibility in that connection.

The Controller, in response to an inquiry by Canada on the approaching end of the authorized expenditure period for UNDOF, said that even if, according to the regulations, financing for UNDOF should cease on 30 November, steps could be taken to ensure uninterrupted financing until the following week.

Also on 2 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/59 B by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having regard to the financial position of the Special Account for the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, as set forth in the report of the Secretary-General, and referring to paragraph 5 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Concerned that the Secretary-General is continuing to face growing difficulties in meeting the obligations of the Forces on a current basis, particularly those due to the Governments of troop-contributing States,

Recalling its resolutions 33/13 E of 14 December 1978, 34/7 D of 17 December 1979, 35/45 B of 1 December 1980, 36/66 B of 30 November 1981, 37/38 B of 30 November 1982, 38/35 B of 1 December 1983 and 39/28 B of 30 November 1984,

Recognising that, in consequence of the withholding of contributions by certain Member States, the surplus balances in the Special Account for the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force have, in effect, been drawn upon to the full extent to supplement the income received from contributions for meeting expenses of the Forces,

Concerned that the application of the provisions of regulations 5.2 (b), 5.2 (d), 4.3 and 4.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations would aggravate the already difficult financial situation of the Forces,

Decides that the provisions of regulations 5.2 (b), 5.2 (d), 4.3 and 4.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations shall be suspended in respect of the amount of 43,250,131, which otherwise would have to be surrendered pursuant to those provisions, this amount to be entered into the account referred to in the operative part of General Assembly resolution 33/13 E and held in suspense until a further decision is taken by the Assembly.

UNIFIL financing

Report of the Secretary-General. In a November 1985 report<sup>(5)</sup> on the financing of UNIFIL, the Secretary-General stated that, as at 30 September, he had received $833.6 million for the operation of UNIFIL, out of $1,084.8 million apportioned among Member States for the periods from the inception of the Force in March 1978 to 18 October 1985. The balance due—$251.2 million—included $204.4 million that Members said they did not intend to pay and $19.6 million due from China, transferred to a special account in accordance with a 1981 General Assembly resolution.<sup>(3)</sup> Only $27.2 million of the unpaid balance was considered collectable, leaving a shortfall of $224 million.

This situation posed a serious problem for the financial management of the Force, the Secretary-General said. Obligations could not be met on a current basis, particularly those due to troop-contributing countries, payments to which had never been made in full in accordance with agreed rates. Voluntary contributions to a Suspense Account established in 1979<sup>(6)</sup> to alleviate the financial burden on the troop contributors amounted to only $18,356.

For UNIFIL operations from 19 April to 18 October 1985, commitments amounted to $70,446,000 gross ($69,445,998 net), as authorized in 1984;<sup>(7)</sup> the costs for the period 19 October 1985 to 18 April 1986 were estimated at $71,745,000 gross ($70,575,000 net), based on an average Force strength of 5,860. The Secretary-General requested ACABQ concurrence for commitments of $23,482,000 gross ($23,148,666 net) for the period 19 October to 18 December 1985. From 19 April to 18 December 1986, should the Security Council renew UNIFIL's mandate, appropriations of $11,957,500 gross ($11,762,500 net) a month would be required.

Expressing extreme concern about the shortfall burden on troop-contributing countries, particularly on the less wealthy ones, and which might jeopardize UNIFIL's functioning, the Secretary-General appealed in the strongest terms to all Member States to pay their assessments without delay; he also appealed for voluntary contributions to the UNIFIL Suspense Account.

ACABQ recommendations. ACABQ, also in November 1985,<sup>(8)</sup> recommended approval of commitments entered into from 19 April to 18 October 1985. It also recommended appropriations of the amount of the commitments for 19 October to 18 December, and of $48,263,000 gross ($47,426,334 net) for the remaining four months of the mandate, 19 December 1985 to 18 April 1986, with the Secretary-General having the usual flexibility to revise apportionments between objects of expenditure.

ACABQ also recommended that, for the period from 19 April to 18 December 1986, the Secretary-General be authorized to enter into commitments at a rate not to exceed $11,957,500 gross ($11,762,500 net) per month.

The Committee said it had been informed that, as a consequence of the increase in estimated average Force strength (5,550 in April 1985; 5,860 for April 1986), with no increase in the authorized commitment, it would be necessary to allocate increased resources for such items as reimbursement to troop contributors, daily allowance to troops and rotation costs, while at the same time, in order to remain within the limits set by the Assembly in 1984,<sup>(7)</sup> to reduce and defer expenditures in other areas, particularly construction, adaptation of premises and purchase of transportation equipment. Bearing this in mind, and noting that the estimate for the October 1985-April 1986 period was 1.6 per cent more than that for each of the two previous mandates, ACABQ had no objection to the estimate.

ACABQ said it had been informed that the interim accounts for 1984-1985 indicated a "surplus" balance of $8,868,174 for the UNIFIL Special Account as at 31 December 1984, representing excess of income over expenditure due to interest and miscellaneous credits. "Income" included assessed contributions irrespective of collectability. In consequence of States' withholding contributions, the "surplus" had, in effect, been drawn upon to its full extent.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

In December 1985, the General Assembly adopted two resolutions—40/246 A and B—on the financing of UNIFIL.

On 18 December, it adopted resolution 40/246 A by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the financing of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon and the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Bearing in mind Security Council resolutions 425(1978) and 426(1978) of 19 March 1978, 427(1978) of 3 May 1978, 434(1978) of 18 September 1978, 444(1979) of 19 January 1979, 450(1979) of 14 June 1979, 459(1979) of 19 December 1979, 474(1980) of 17 June 1980, 483(1980) of 17 December 1980, 488(1981) of 19 June 1981, 498(1981) of 18 December 1981, 501(1982) of 25 February 1982, 511(1982) of 18 June 1982, 519(1982) of 17 August 1982, 523(1982) of 18 October 1982, 529(1983) of 18 January 1983, 536(1983) of 18 July 1983, 538(1983) of 18 October 1983, 549(1984) of 19 April 1984, 555(1984) of 12 October 1984, 561(1985) of 17 April 1985 and 575(1985) of 17 October 1985,

Recalling its resolutions S-812 of 21 April 1978, 33/14 of 3 November 1978, 34/9 B of 17 December 1979, 35/44 of 1 December 1980, 35/115 A of 10 December 1980, 36/138 A of 16 December 1981, 26/138 C of 19 March 1982, 37/127 A of 17 December 1982, 38/38 A of 5 December 1983 and 39/71 A of 13 December 1984,

Reaffirming its previous decisions regarding the fact that, in order to meet the expenditures caused by such operations, a different procedure from the one applied to meet expenditures of the regular budget of the United Nations is required,

Taking into account the fact that the economically more developed countries are in a position to make relatively larger contributions and that the economically less developed countries have a relatively limited capacity to contribute towards peace-keeping operations involving heavy expenditures,

Bearing in mind the special responsibilities of the States permanent members of the Security Council in the financing of peace-keeping operations decided upon in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations,

I

Decides to appropriate to the Special Account referred to in section I, paragraph 1, of General Assembly resolution S-812 an amount of $70,446,000 gross ($69,446,000 net), being the amount authorized with the prior concurrence of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions and apportioned under the provisions of section IV of Assembly resolution 39/71 A for the operation of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon from 19 April to 18 October 1985, inclusive;

Introducing the text, Ireland called on all Member States to look to their responsibilities for maintaining peace and to support the peace-keeping efforts. No operation could be expected to function efficiently if it was deprived of nearly a quarter of its revenue, regarded as uncollectable. The extent to which the troop-contributing countries could continue to absorb an unacceptable proportion of the cost of UNIFIL was not unlimited; the responsibility for funding rested on all Member States and any shortfall must be shared by all.

Lebanon said it had always regarded as incontrovertible the principle of collective financial responsibility; the withholding of contributions was particularly unfair, both to those developing countries which contributed and to the countries which supplied troops and assumed the financial burden of UNIFIL as well. The Member States which had participated in the vote on Assembly resolution 181 A (II) in 1947,<sup>(9)</sup> to which the current tragedy in Lebanon could largely be ascribed, bore a heavy responsibility. UNIFIL's mission was the most urgent and challenging: its function was not merely to observe, but also to assist the Lebanese Government in ensuring the return of its effective authority.

The USSR explained that it did not participate in the financing of UNIFIL because of its position of principle that the consequences of the armed aggression against Lebanon should be borne by the aggressor. The view that the aggressor should bear the financial burden was shared by several others, including Democratic Yemen, Iraq and the Syrian Arab Republic.

Iran did not participate in the vote because it said it believed that the cost of United Nations activities in the Middle East should be borne by the Zionist entity and its supporters. Benin voted in favour for essentially humanitarian reasons, but considered that UNIFIL ought in fact to be financed by those responsible for the situation.

Among those which did not take part in the vote for similar reasons were Algeria and the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya. Algeria added that it hoped that the financial arrangements for all peace-keeping operations could be reviewed in the near future since it had serious doubts as to their usefulness and the propriety of financing them from the regular budget.

Jordan stressed that its vote in favour should not be interpreted as condoning or accepting the continued Israeli occupation of Lebanon.

Also on 18 December, the Assembly adopted resolution 40/246 B by recorded vote.

The General Assembly.

Having regard to the financial position of the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, as set forth in the report of the Secretary-General, and referring to paragraph 7 of the report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Mindful of the fact that it is essential to provide the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon with the necessary financial resources to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities under the relevant resolutions of the Security Council,

Concerned that the Secretary-General is continuing to face growing difficulties in meeting the obligations of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon on a current basis, particularly those due to the Governments of troop-contributing States,

Recalling its resolutions 34/9 E of 17 December 1979, 35/115 B of 10 December 1980, 36/138 B of 16 December 1981, 37/127 B of 17 December 1982, 38/38 B of 5 December 1983 and 39/71 B of 13 December 1984,

Recognizing that, in consequence of the withholding of contributions by certain Member States, the surplus balances in the Special Account for the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon have, in effect, been drawn upon to the full extent to supplement the income received from contributions for meeting expenses of the Force,

Concerned that the application of the provisions of regulations 5.2 (b), 5.2 (d), 4.3 and 4.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations would aggravate the already difficult financial situation of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon,

Decides that the provisions of regulations 5.2 (b), 5.2 (d), 4.3 and 4.4 of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations shall be suspended in respect of the amount of $8,868,174, which otherwise would have to be surrendered pursuant to those provisions, this amount to be entered in the account referred to in the operative part of General Assembly resolution 34/9 E and held in suspense until a further decision is taken by the Assembly.

*Later advised the Secretariat it had intended to vote against.

Algeria emphasized that, out of solidarity with Lebanon, it had refrained from participating in the vote instead of voting against the text; it reiterated its reservations regarding the usefulness of UNIFIL.

Cuba also doubted the usefulness of UNIFIL which, it said, was not respected by Israel and its supporters; the cost of the operations should be borne by the aggressor.

Jordan reiterated that its vote in favour should not be interpreted as condoning or accepting the continued Israeli occupation of Lebanon.

Review of reimbursement rates to troop contributors

Report of the Secretary-General. In a November 1985 report,<sup>(10)</sup> the Secretary-General reviewed the rates of reimbursement to troop-contributing States, as requested by the General Assembly in 1984.<sup>(11)</sup> Standard rates had been first established in 1974<sup>(12)</sup> and were revised twice in 1977<sup>(13)</sup> and 1980.<sup>(14)</sup>

The two main factors that could change the level of compensation based on the reimbursement rates effective December 1980 were inflation and currency exchange-rate fluctuations. At the end of 1984, the value of the United States dollar-the currency of reimbursement-in relation to the national currencies of the 13 troop contributors had increased by an overall average of 50.4 per cent. With regard to troop costs, the Secretary-General for various reasons considered it not possible to determine their escalation.

Concluding, the Secretary-General stated that the changes in the currency exchange rates had been such that in most cases they had offset the adverse effects of inflation; it appeared that the current standard rates continued to provide a fair and reasonable compensation to troop contributors for troop costs and that a basis did not exist to warrant for the time being an adjustment to the rates of reimbursement.

At the time of the initial establishment of standard rates, it was recognized that certain States would not be fully reimbursed for their entire expenses of providing troops; all troop contributors, however, should receive at least that portion paid to their troops as actual overseas allowances. Based on the data provided by the 11 troop contributors included in the review, 10 were currently absorbing between 11.7 and 72.2 per cent, for an average of 34.3 per cent, in respect of pay and allowances.

The Secretary-General proposed that a review of the rates be undertaken as and when changes in the currency exchange and/or inflation rates drastically affected compensation for troop costs.

ACABQ consideration. In its November 1985 report<sup>(8)</sup> on UNIFIL (see p. 320), ACABQ noted the Secretary-General's conclusion that it would appear that the current standard rates were fair and reasonable and that currently no basis existed to warrant an adjustment. It also noted his statement proposing a review of the rates as and when changes dictated.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 18 December, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/247 by recorded vote.

Review of the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States
The General Assembly,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General on the review of the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States, submitted pursuant to General Assembly resolution 39/70 of 13 December 1984, as well as the related report of the Advisory Committee on Administrative and Budgetary Questions,

Recalling its decision of 29 November 1974, taken at its twenty-ninth session, by which it established, as from 25 October 1973, standard rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States for pay and allowances of their troops serving in the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, and its decision 32/416 of 2 December 1977, by which it revised those rates of reimbursement as from 25 October 1977,

Recalling also its resolution S-8/2 of 21 April 1978, by which it applied the same standard rates of reimbursement in effect for the United Nations Emergency Force and the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force to those Governments of States contributing troops to the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon,

Recalling further its resolution 35/44 of 1 December 1980, by which it established new standard rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States of $950 per person per month for all ranks, plus $280 per person per month for a limited number of specialists (up to 25 per cent of logistics contingents and up to 10 per cent of other contingents), with effect from 1 December 1980 in the case of the United Nations Disengagement Observer Force and from 19 December 1980 in the case of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon,

Recalling further its decision of 15 December 1975, taken at its thirtieth session, by which it approved the principle of reimbursing the troop-contributing States for the usage factor for personal clothing, gear and equipment and personal weaponry, including ammunition, issued by Governments to their troops for service in the United Nations peace-keeping forces and in which it requested the Secretary-General to negotiate a settlement thereof, pursuant to which a reimbursement rate of $70 per person per month was agreed upon,

Recognizing that, in consequence of the shortfall of financial contributions, troop-contributing States are not being reimbursed to the full extent of the established rates and are thus bearing considerably larger portions of the costs for their troops serving in the United Nations peace-keeping forces than those indicated by the Secretary-General in his report,

1. Takes note of the conclusions and recommendations of the Secretary-General as outlined in paragraphs 12 to 15 of his report;

2. Decides to retain the current rates of reimbursement of $950 per person per month for all ranks, plus the specialists' allowance of $280 per person per month for 25 per cent of logistics contingents and 10 per cent of other contingents, as well as $65 per person per month for the usage factor for personal clothing, gear and equipment and $5 per person per month for personal weaponry, including ammunition;

3. Also decides that the rates of reimbursement to the Governments of troop-contributing States shall be reviewed by the Secretary-General, in consultation with the troop-contributing States, and requests the Secretary-General to report thereon to the General Assembly, at least once every two years, if, in the light of inflation and currency-exchange fluctuations or other factors brought to the attention of the Secretary-General, these rates appreciably affect the absorption factor of two or more of the troop-contributing States.

General Assembly resolution 40/247

18 December 1985 Meeting 121 120-14-7 (recorded vote)

Approved by Fifth Committee A/40/1037 by recorded vote (97-11-7), 12 December (meeting 60); 18-nation draft (A/C.5/40/L.6); agenda item 126 (c).

Sponsors: Austria, Canada, Denmark, Fiji, Finland, France, Ghana, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Lebanon, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Papua New Guinea, Samoa, Sweden.

Recorded vote in Assembly as follows:

In favour: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bhutan, Bolivia, Botswana, Brazil, Brunei Darussalam, Burkina Faso, Burma, Burundi, Cameroon, Canada, Central African Republic, Chad, Chile, China, Colombia, Congo, Costa Rica, Cyprus, Democratic Kampuchea, Denmark, Djibouti, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Egypt, El Salvador, Equatorial Guinea, Ethiopia, Fiji, Finland, France, Gabon, Gambia, Germany, Federal Republic of, Ghana, Greece, Grenada, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Iceland, India, Indonesia, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Ivory Coast, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Lesotho, Liberia, Luxembourg, Madagascar, Malawi, Malaysia, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Mexico, Morocco, Nepal, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Niger, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Panama, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Qatar, Rwanda, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Samoa, Saudi Arabia, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Somalia, Spain, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Suriname, Swaziland, Sweden, Thailand, Togo, Trinidad and Tobago, Tunisia, Turkey, Uganda, United Arab Emirates, United Republic of Tanzania, United States, Uruguay, Venezuela, Yugoslavia, Zaire, Zambia, Zimbabwe.

Against: Afghanistan, Albania, Bulgaria, Byelorussian SSR, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mongolia, Syrian Arab Republic, Ukrainian SSR, USSR, Viet Nam. Abstaining: Algeria, Benin, Democratic Yemen, Iraq, Maldives, Romania, Yemen.

Explaining its vote, the USSR said it considered that the position in regard to the expenses borne by the United Nations for peace-keeping troops and reimbursement was not clear-cut; there was a considerable element of increase in those expenditures.

Introducing the text, Sweden said the established standard rates of reimbursement consisted of average figures, per person per month for all ranks, used as factors to determine the troop costs, which constituted approximately half of the budgets for UNDOF and UNIFIL. They were also meant to correspond to certain portions of the troop-contributing countries' national costs for maintaining their troops in the service of the United Nations. Since 1980, those costs had increased significantly, in some cases by more than 40 per cent.

Territories occupied by Israel

During 1985, the situation in the territories occupied by Israel as a result of previous armed conflicts in the Middle East was again considered by the General Assembly and its Special Committee to Investigate Israeli Practices Affecting the Human Rights of the Population of the Occupied Territories (Committee on Israeli practices). The Committee observed that there was a continuing deterioration in the respect for the human-civil and political, as well as economic, social and cultural-rights of the civilian population of the territories, which comprised the West Bank of the Jordan River (including East Jerusalem), the Golan Heights and the Gaza Strip.

The Assembly, in December, adopted seven resolutions dealing with specific aspects of the Committee's report: it demanded that Israel desist from certain policies and practices in the territories (40/161 D); that it comply with the 1949 Geneva

Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (fourth Geneva Convention) (40/161 B); that it desist from any action which would change the legal status and composition of the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied since 1967 (40/161 C), including the Syrian Golan Heights (40/161 F) that it release Ziyad Abu Eain and other Palestinian prisoners (40/161 A); that it rescind the expulsion of Palestinians, some of whom had been in public office (40/161 E); and that it ensure the freedom of educational institutions (40/161 G).

The Security Council considered the situation in the occupied territories at two meetings on 12 and 13 September. It voted on a draft resolution in which it would have called on Israel to stop repressive measures against the civilian Palestinian population and abide by the fourth Geneva Convention. The draft was not adopted owing to the negative vote of a permanent member of the Council.

In March, the Secretary-General organized a seminar on remedies for the deterioration of the economic and social conditions of the Palestinians in the occupied territories. Affirming that Israeli occupation was contradictory to the basic requirements for the social and economic development of the Palestinians, the Assembly, by resolution 40/201, requested the Secretary-General to organize by April 1987 a seminar on priority development projects to improve their living conditions.

In June 1985, the Secretary-General submitted a study on Israeli economic practices in the territories and a report on progress made in the lifting of Israeli restrictions on their economy and on projects to facilitate their economic development. The Assembly (decision 40/432), as earlier the Economic and Social Council had done (decision 1985/177), asked him to report on Israeli financial and trade practices in the territories. The Council (resolution 1985/58) and the Assembly (resolution 40/169) called for the urgent lifting of Israeli restrictions on the territories' economy, and called on all concerned to facilitate the establishment of a seaport and a citrus plant in the Gaza Strip, as well as of a cement plant in the West Bank.

The Secretary-General reported that in June Israel had given instructions to cease all work related to a planned canal linking the Mediterranean and the Dead Sea. The Assembly, by resolution 40/167, requested him to monitor any new development relating to the project.

Communications. By a letter of 5 February,<sup>(1)</sup> the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights brought to the Secretary-General's attention what he termed another instance of intensification of the planned policy of annexation of the occupied territories of the West Bank by Israel. According to December 1984 reports in Israeli papers, a plan for the establishment of a national road grid for the entire West Bank had been promulgated, greatly increasing the integration of the West Bank road system into that of Israel. According to a recent study, the road system would serve none of the 20 major Palestinian towns and cities in the West Bank. About 78 million square metres of private Palestinian land would have to be expropriated. The Chairman expressed utmost concern at the plan which, in the Committee's view, had ominous implications for the future of the territories and international peace efforts.

On 12 February,<sup>(2)</sup> the Chairman expressed the Committee's concern at the growing tension in and around Palestinian refugee camps in southern Lebanon (see above, under "Lebanon situation") and in the West Bank. It was reported that at Dheisheh, near Bethlehem, all roads into the camp had been blocked, affecting the provision of services to the camp and aggravating the atmosphere of living under siege caused by almost daily incidents of provocation and harassment against the camp residents by Israeli settlers. On 1 February, the police, reinforced by military troops, had arrested scores of residents in the camp and villages in the vicinity.

By a letter of 6 March, transmitted by Democratic Yemen,<sup>(3)</sup> PLO charged that on 5 March Israeli troops had surrounded the Palestinian town of Saeer in the Al-Khalil (Hebron) area, breaking into several Palestinian homes, razing two of them, and injuring about 30 persons. Those injured could not be transferred to hospitals as a curfew was imposed and the area declared an Israeli military zone. The troops also arrested a number of Palestinians and took them away for interrogation. A request by the Red Cross to visit the area was denied. PLO called on the United Nations to assume its full responsibility, spelt out in General Assembly resolutions calling for adequate protection of Palestinians living under Israeli military occupation and for a guarantee of their safety and security and their human and legal rights.

Renewed acts of Israeli repression against Palestinians in the West Bank were charged by the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights in a letter of 19 March;<sup>(4)</sup> the Committee expressed profound concern at news reports of measures against Bir Zeit University, the treatment of student detainees and the continued establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied territories (for details, see p. 338).

By a letter of 11 April, transmitted by the United Arab Emirates,<sup>(5)</sup> PLO accused Israel of implementing exceptional military measures, among them curfews, collective punishments, and attacks on students and refugee camps. The PLO Chairman called for international condemnation of the continued Zionist aggression, to deter Israel from further crimes against the Palestinians.

The Acting Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, on 2 May,<sup>(6)</sup> brought to the Secretary-General's attention further incidents in the territories which, in his view, indicated a continuing pattern of repression by Israel aimed at stifling Palestinian opposition. Demonstrations and strikes between 30 March and 21 April had been met by hundreds of arrests, the forcible reopening of shops, heavy censorship of Arabic language newspapers, the closing of schools, and the shooting of demonstrators. As long as the Palestinians were prevented from exercising their rights and their territory remained illegally occupied, tension and violence would continue, the Acting Chairman stated; the Committee remained convinced that a peaceful solution under United Nations auspices was possible and continued to call on all concerned to co-operate.

On 12 July,<sup>(7)</sup> the Acting Chairman called attention to press reports that Israeli forces had demolished on 18 June seven villages in the Hebron area, displacing some 200 families, in order to convert their land into a military training zone. The press also had reported proposed new laws to allow for rapid deportation of Palestinians who took part in "anti-Israeli activity" and for imprisonment without trial or charges for an unlimited period. Such proposed action, the Acting Chairman stated, directly contravened basic human rights principles and could not but aggravate tension; positive action by the Security Council on the Committee's 1976 recommendations(s) and on the proposed international peace conference on the Middle East (see p. 268) would advance peace prospects and help preclude such inequities.

On 8 August,<sup>(9)</sup> he quoted further press reports, according to which the Israeli Cabinet on 4 August had decided to reinstate its policies of "administrative detention" (see p. 336) and deportation of those considered security risks, and to authorize the closing down of newspapers which violated censorship regulations or were considered to have incited terrorist attacks. New legislation was also reported to have been submitted to the Knesset to bar contacts between Israeli citizens and PLO, under penalty of gaol and a fine. The Acting Chairman also reported the recent temporary closing of Al-Najah University at Nablus, repeated closings of a theatre in East Jerusalem, and a decision to dismiss all Arab employees of the town of Kiryat and accord preference to businesses employing Jews only. Those measures, he said, were designed to stifle political, economic and cultural activity, and to pressure the Palestinians into emigrating with a view to annexation of their land.

Qatar, as Chairman of the Arab Group, transmitted letters of 6, 9 and 10 September from PLO.<sup>(10)</sup> PLO reported the arrest of Palestinians under the reimposed administrative detention law and other repressive measures by Israeli forces which, it was charged, had blown up several Palestinian homes at Al-Khalil (Hebron), placed the town under curfew, declared the area a military zone, and fired on Palestinians, injuring several. In the opinion of PLO, such acts and the continued deportation of Palestinians only exacerbated an already explosive situation, and required an immediate practical response from the Secretary-General and the Security Council. Alleging that Israeli repression had intensified in recent days and that additional military forces had been deployed throughout the territories, PLO also charged that Israeli officials had threatened to take military action against PLO offices at Amman and elsewhere if Palestinians continued to challenge the Israeli occupation. Israeli paratroopers, employed instead of the regular border guards who had been withdrawn, had rampaged through Jenin and Nablus, indiscriminately beating up Palestinian men, women and children. At Al-Khalil, they had shot and wounded four children.

The Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, by a letter of 11 September,<sup>(11)</sup> charged that Israel, according to press reports, had engaged in a massive campaign of detention of Palestinians, holding over 50 in the West Bank and several others in Gaza. Curfews were imposed in a number of towns and refugee camps. At least three Palestinians were threatened with deportation from the West Bank. Those and other actions, the Chairman said, were taking place in an atmosphere of growing provocation by Jewish settlers in the territories, clearly aimed at pressuring the local population to emigrate.

On 12 September,<sup>(12)</sup> Jordan refuted an allegation made by Israel on 9 September<sup>(13)</sup> (see p. 273) that PLO had recently escalated its campaign of terror on innocent civilians by infiltrating terrorists and smuggling weapons and explosives from Jordan. That accusation, Jordan said, was contrary to the truth, as the resistance arose from within the territories and was escalating as a natural reaction to Israeli practices, involving oppression, injustice, suppression of freedoms, detention of innocent people, expulsion and deportation, confiscation of land and property, the establishment of settlements and the bringing in of immigrants.

In a 23 September letter, transmitted by Qatar,<sup>(14)</sup> PLO reported that Israeli occupation authorities had deported 29 Palestinians, had closed the Palestinian newspaper Al-Darb and had issued a three-day closure notice for another, Al Sha'b. Israeli demonstrators outside the Jerusalem offices of Al-Fajr had demanded that the paper be immediately closed, and threats had been made against the newspaper's employees.

In a 24 October letter, transmitted by Kuwait,<sup>(15)</sup> PLO reported an attack on 13 Palestinians by Israeli settlers, increased detentions, destruction of houses, expropriation of land, and closure of the Palestinian weekly Al-Bayader Al-Siyassiya. The PLO Chairman called on the Secretary-General to use his good offices to take immediate measures to end the intolerable and inhuman situation in the territories.

Kuwait transmitted a 30 October letter from PLO,<sup>(16)</sup> apprising the Secretary-General of the arrest on 28 October and probable deportation of four Palestinians. The alarming number of Palestinians being deported, PLO said, raised the possibility that Israel intended to eliminate forcibly all Palestinian presence from the territories, and required an immediate practical response by the Secretary-General and the Security Council.

On 13 November,<sup>(17)</sup> the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights quoted press reports that on 25 October Israeli forces had placed the town of Yatta under a 60-hour curfew, conducted searches, destroyed two houses and arrested several people. Also in October, there had been reports of a two-week ban on the distribution of Al-Bayader, the closure of the Al-Manar press office and the newspaper Al-Darb and the administrative detention or town arrest of eight journalists. In the Committee's view, such measures were in violation of human rights instruments and United Nations resolutions, and posed a serious obstacle to international efforts to achieve a just and lasting solution to the Palestinian question. Other charges made in the letter related to the detention of Palestinians (see p. 336).

Referring to reports of PLO's alleged intention to limit terrorist attacks to the occupied territories, Israel said in a letter of 2 December<sup>(18)</sup> that nothing justified terrorism, and that PLO's definition of "occupied territory" meant all of Israel, the liquidation of which remained PLO's admitted aim.

Several communications dealt with the closing of the Medical Facility Hospice in East Jerusalem, which served the Arab population of the city and the West Bank (see p. 281).

Action by the Commission on Human Rights and its Sub-Commission. Violations of human rights in the occupied territories were the subject of four resolutions<sup>(19)</sup> adopted by the Commission on Human Rights in February 1985. By the first, it condemned a number of specific practices; by the second, it condemned Israel's failure to acknowledge the applicability the fourth Geneva

Convention; by the third, it called on Israel to rescind its decision to impose its laws and administration on the Syrian Golan Heights and to cease its acts of terrorism against Syrian citizens; and by the fourth, it condemned Israel's occupation of the Palestinian and other Arab territories, and reaffirmed Palestinian rights.

The Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities, by a resolution of 29 August,<sup>(20)</sup> also reiterated elements that it considered Palestinian rights should include, and strongly affirmed that the perpetuation of the Israeli occupation of the Palestinian and other Arab territories, including Jerusalem, could only be a source of increasing human rights violations and increasing tension. It also recommended that the Commission adopt a resolution condemning Israel for its continued occupation of the Palestinian and other Arab territories, for its persistence in colonizing them and for its policies against the inhabitants, and calling for immediate withdrawal from those territories. (For details, see ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL QUESTIONS, Chapter XVIII.)

Report of the Committee on Israeli practices. In its annual report to the General Assembly,<sup>(21)</sup> approved on 30 August 1985, the Committee on Israeli practices, established in 1968,<sup>(22)</sup> presented information on Israeli policy in the occupied territories and on various aspects of the situation there, including information on annexation and settlements, treatment of civilians and detainees, prison conditions, and judicial remedies sought by the population.

To examine information on the situation since adoption of its previous report in September 1984,<sup>(23)</sup> the Committee held three series of meetings: from 21 to 25 January at Geneva to review its mandate, examine communications and decide on its organization of work; between 13 and 31 May at Geneva, Damascus, Amman and Cairo to undertake hearings for recording information or evidence; and from 22 to 30 August at Geneva to examine information on the situation in the territories between May and August.

The Committee had before it a number of communications addressed to it by Governments, organizations and individuals; it also heard testimony from persons living in the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and the Golan Heights. At Damascus, the Committee was presented with an updated report on the human rights situation in occupied Syrian territory by an official of the Syrian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. At Amman, it was presented with ministry reports on the situation in the occupied territories, discussed various aspects of its mandate, and met with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. In the Syrian Arab Republic, the Committee observed the occupied village of Majdal Shams and met with a number of persons from the Golan Heights. At Cairo, it met with PLO officials and the Chairman of the Palestine Red Crescent Society.

On the basis of the information and evidence before it, the Committee concluded that Israel continued to follow the same policy in the territories as in previous years, based on the concept that the territories constituted a part of Israel. Measures affecting the security of person and property and, in general, every aspect of life continued to be taken. New settlements continued to be established and planned, and considerable funds allocated for that purpose. The conditions for some 3,000 Palestinians in overcrowded Israeli prisons gave rise to much suffering.

The Committee observed that there was a continuing deterioration in respect for the human-civil and political, as well as economic, social and cultural-rights of the civilian population. The relevant provisions of the fourth Geneva Convention continued to be disregarded and all sectors of life were constantly pervaded by Israel's relentless annexation and settlements policy. At the same time, hundreds of thousands of Palestinians outside the territories were denied the right to return and their property was taken over for the establishment of Israeli settlements.

Confirming the view that the cycle of violence was bound to continue and that the grave situation would remain explosive, the Committee stated that the international community must adopt measures to reverse the deterioration. The parties must change their attitude in regard to the overall political aspects of the problem and give priority to safeguarding fundamental rights.

Report of the Secretary-General. In August 1985,<sup>(24)</sup> the Secretary-General reported to the General Assembly on the implementation of its 1984 requests<sup>(25)</sup> that he provide the Committee on Israeli practices with necessary facilities and staff, and ensure widest circulation of its reports and of information on its activities and findings. The Secretary-General stated that, as in previous years, he had provided the facilities and additional staff required by the Committee. Its report was given coverage in various United Nations publications, press releases and radio and television programmes and disseminated through United Nations information centres, whose Geneva and Cairo offices provided press coverage and other assistance during the Committee meetings there.

SECURITY COUNCIL ACTION (September)

The Security Council held meetings on 12 and 13 September 1985 to consider the situation in the occupied territories, as requested by Qatar on behalf of the Group of Arab States at the United Nations.<sup>(26)</sup>

Meeting numbers. SC 2604, 2605.

The Council invited Iran, Israel, Jordan, Qatar and the Syrian Arab Republic, at their request, to participate in the discussion without the right to vote. Also invited to participate, under rule 39<sup>i</sup> of the Council's provisional rules of procedure, were the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights, at his request, and the Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States, at Qatar's request on behalf of the Arab Group.<sup>(27)</sup>

Also at Qatar's request in a letter of 12 September,<sup>(28)</sup> the Council decided, by 10 votes to 1 (United States), with 4 abstentions (Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom), that an invitation to participate be accorded to a representative of PLO. The invitation, though not made pursuant to rule 37<sup>j</sup> or rule 39 of the rules of procedure, conferred on PLO the same rights as those conferred on Member States when invited to participate pursuant to rule 37.

Before the vote, the United States restated its position in opposition to the granting of hearings to persons speaking on behalf of non-governmental entities, except on the basis of rule 39 (see p. 274).

On 13 September, the Council voted on a draft resolution,<sup>(29)</sup> submitted by Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, and Trinidad and Tobago, by which it would have: (1) deplored Israel's repressive measures since 4 August 1985 against the civilian Palestinian population, especially in the West Bank and Gaza, and expressed concern that persistence in applying such measures would lead to further deterioration of the situation; (2) called on Israel to stop those measures, release all detainees and refrain from further deportations; and (3) abide scrupulously by the provisions of the fourth Geneva Convention. The voting was as follows:

In favour: Burkina Faso, China, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, Ukrainian SSR, USSR.

Against: United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Denmark, France, United Kingdom.

Owing to the negative vote of a permanent Council member., the draft was not adopted.

The United States said it could not support a text which singled out for condemnation Israeli policies in the West Bank and Gaza without equally condemning and calling for a halt to the terrorist acts against Israeli civilians and officials there which had provoked those policies. One-sided resolutions encouraged the spiral of violence by hardening attitudes; the draft undercut the Council's ability to play a positive role in resolving the problems by exacerbating an already volatile situation.

Australia would have preferred recognition in the draft of the regrettable escalation of violence in the territories rather than a focus solely on the actions of one party. The draft also contained unbalanced and in some cases less than fully accurate reflections of the situation in its relation to the fourth Geneva Convention.

Denmark feared that the draft might hamper moves towards negotiations on the Arab-Israeli conflict; in its view, it did not take adequately into account that a continuation of the cycle of violence and countermeasures could only undermine the necessary basis of dialogue and trust essential for constructive negotiations.

The United Kingdom indicated that, although it was unhappy about certain aspects of Israel's conduct, it was not satisfied that paragraph 2 conformed with the occupying Power's legal obligations and would have welcomed a balanced reference calling for an end to violence by all parties. Only if calm was restored to the West Bank would it be possible to move the peace process forward; however, suggestions on those lines, it said, were not taken up.

France deplored the constraints which the revived special legislation dating from the time of the British Mandate imposed on the population of the territories; nevertheless, only a cessation of violence, from whatever source, would make it possible to restore the climate of confidence indispensable to dialogue. France also remarked that, according to information at its disposal, some of the recent Israeli measures were not in keeping with the fourth Geneva Convention; the draft, however, suggested that all those measures were contrary to the Convention.

The USSR rejected any attempt to equate the occupiers with the inhabitants of the territories who were resisting occupation; any talk of a cycle of violence was out of place. It was Israel that had established conditions of terror, opening fire on defenceless Palestinians, carrying out mass arrests, imposing curfews and threatening deportation. It was high time that the Council took the strictest measures to put an end to such activities.

Although the draft had failed of adoption, stated Qatar for the Arab Group, it had given support to the Palestinians in the territories and would encourage them.

The Syrian Arab Republic stressed that the right to struggle for liberation was legitimate and enshrined in the Charter; all countries under occupation were obliged to use that right. The draft resolution was not commensurate with the gravity of the situation; it should have explicitly condemned Israel for its acts of individual terrorism, mass punishment and killing of innocent people.

The measures called for in the draft were the least the Council could expect of any State,

Burkina Faso and Jordan believed. Adoption of the text should be a reflection of the Council's concern over the worsening of security in the area, Peru said.

PLO said the occupied territories had been witnessing a marked escalation of Israel's "iron list" policy, designed to suppress Palestinian mass resistance since 4 August, when Israel had adopted a set of oppressive laws and procedures. The deportation law gave the military governor absolute authority to deport whomever he wanted and for any reason he deemed fit. Although additions to those laws granted appeal rights before the military courts, they were not binding on the military governor, and invoking them so far had failed to have rescinded any expulsion decisions. Since 28 August, administrative detention had been imposed on dozens of Palestinians, especially trade unionists and university students. Most of the territories were subjected to a curfew and armed settlers intensified their aggression against Palestinians, destroying their homes and property. At Al-Khalil (Hebron) and Gaza, groups of Palestinians had been fired on and large numbers attacked, beaten and arrested. That escalation was preceded by Israeli statements threatening PLO headquarters and offices, including those at Amman and in Tunisia. The occupation authorities also closed down a press office in Jerusalem, and on 12 September the Israeli Supreme Court expelled freedom fighters. A legislative bill was soon introduced to execute Palestinian freedom fighters. Israel's recent oppressive practices called not only for condemnation and denunciation by the Council but for measures to end them and redress their consequences.

In Israel's view, the Council had been convened not merely for an absolutely preposterous and irrelevant reason, but with a distortion, because those very people who had been engaged in mass killings and attacks, in deliberate and systematic murder, were usurping its meaning and purpose. It was not a mighty Israel attacking defenceless Palestinians, but it was defenceless Israeli civilians who were being remorselessly attacked by PLO terrorists, Israel responded. In the past year, PLO murderers had attempted dozens of times to blow up, shoot, stab and mutilate Israeli citizens. Israel had made it clear that it would not tolerate the establishment of new terror bases on its borders; it had taken steps to apprehend the killers and their collaborators and to prevent them from committing further atrocities. The steps included the detention of suspected terrorists and, in a few cases, selective deportation; contrary to the allegations, those actions were fully legal under the fourth Geneva Convention.

Opening the Council debate, Qatar, for the Arab Group, charged that Israel's recent practices- which Israel justified as a response to Palestinian resistance-were but one link in a chain of crimes against the Palestinians, aimed at emptying their territories in order to create a Jewish State on Palestinian soil.

Several speakers, among them Egypt, India, Madagascar, Qatar for the Arab Group, Thailand, Trinidad and Tobago, and the Ukrainian SSR, believed that Israel's "iron list" policy was responsible for the worsening situation in the territories and that it was not in accordance with international law, in particular the fourth Geneva Convention. They called for Council action to end that policy which, they believed, threatened international peace and security. Persistence in that policy, Egypt, Jordan and others warned, obstructed peace efforts under way and would lead to even more tension and turmoil.

India said the situation could assume tragic proportions unless the international community restrained Israel and made it discharge its obligations under international conventions that dictated civilized behaviour for occupying Powers towards the people of occupied territories.

Rather than implement its avowed intention to respond to the activities of Israeli extremists, Egypt said, Israel expelled, arrested, oppressed and persecuted the peaceful inhabitants of the territories. Israel must punish the settlers for their actions and remove them from the territories. One of the basic conditions for a settlement of the problem was a feeling of trust among the Palestinians; unfortunately, the conduct of the occupying authorities failed to provide the framework for such a settlement.

Recent Israeli actions could frustrate the attainment of a settlement, Trinidad and Tobago feared; if those actions were considered within the context of expropriation of land and the establishment of settlements, that would seem to indicate that the Israeli authorities were instituting a programme to change the very character of the territories and further frustrate the just aspirations of the Palestinians.

Israel's decision to carry out administrative detentions and deportations was in violation of the fourth Geneva Convention and should be repealed immediately, said China. Israel must stop its repression and intimidation against the Palestinians and other Arab peoples and ensure them their right to existence, and the Council should support them in that regard.

The Syrian Arab Republic called on the Council to reaffirm that, under the fourth Geneva Convention, expulsion and deportation, whether individual or collective, were war crimes, as was, under the Convention and its Additional Protocol I, the transfer of foreign settlers to the occupied territories.

With its repressive measures in the territories and threats of military action against countries harbouring PLO offices, Burkina Faso said, Israel was seeking totally to destroy the will of the population to resist.

The escalating provocation against the Palestinians had reached such a level that groups of Israeli fanatics, led by a member of the Knesset, had called publicly for the expulsion of all Palestinians from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, Jordan stated; the only solution to their suffering was an end to occupation and the establishment of a just and comprehensive peace.

Madagascar said the Israeli authorities, rather than confining themselves to police measures to keep peace and maintain order, chose faithful to their policies of escalation and expansion-military or paramilitary operations. No imperatives of security or public order could legitimize Israel's practices, since the incidents invoked to justify those practices derived from Israel's persistence in intensifying its settlements policy; Palestinian opposition to military occupation could not be described as terrorism except by the occupying Power itself.

Peru urged an end to the measures against the civilian population and called on the occupying forces strictly to observe the fourth Geneva Convention.

In Thailand's opinion, the burden of proof should not rest on the territories' population, but on the occupying authorities; Israel had to prove beyond doubt that no measure prohibited by the fourth Geneva Convention had been taken against the Palestinians. The prolonged occupation was responsible for the actions cited by Israel as the cause for its repressive measures.

Of the adult population in Palestinian refugee camps, 87 per cent had been subject to arrest or detention, the Ukrainian SSR charged; the most recent wave of repression was aimed at creating an atmosphere of terror among the Palestinians, forcing them to leave their ancestral homes to create so-called living space for the Israeli settlers.

Iran called for a united Islamic front to defeat the Zionist enemy.

The Permanent Observer of the League of Arab States said the prospects for a just and comprehensive peace in the area were undermined if there was a certain level of permissiveness for one single settler. Inherent in the situation were incalculable dangers, with crisis-management becoming more and more difficult and ultimately impossible, and with polarization reaching acute dimensions which could threaten not only peace in the region, but the basic rights of peoples everywhere.

Israel's measures were taken in an atmosphere of growing provocation by Jewish settlers, provocation that had even been denounced by some of the occupying authorities and was clearly aimed at forcing the local population to emigrate, said the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights. Violence would only increase and the situation would continue to deteriorate until the rights of the Palestinians had been fully recognized. The United Nations had the responsibility to ensure the fulfilment of those rights, as well as the physical protection of the Palestinians and other peoples of the region. It was up to the Council to give effect to the Committee's 1976 recommendations(s) and the recommendations adopted at the 1983 International Conference on the Question of Palestine.<sup>(30)</sup>

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Special Political Committee, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/161 D on the report of the Committee on Israeli practices.

8. Strongly condemns the following Israeli policies and practices:

(a) Annexation of parts of the occupied territories, including Jerusalem;

(b) Imposition of Israeli laws, jurisdiction and administration on the Syrian Golan Heights, which has resulted in the effective annexation of the Syrian Golan Heights;

Against: Israel. United States.

Abstaining: Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Cameroon, Canada, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Fiji, Finland, France, Germany, Federal Republic of, Grenada, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Ivory Coast, Japan, Liberia, Luxembourg, Malawi, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Swaziland, Sweden, United Kingdom, Zaire.

Paragraphs 6 and 21 were adopted by separate recorded votes both in plenary meeting and in Committee. The Assembly adopted paragraph 6 by 85 votes to 19, with 37 abstentions, and paragraph 21 by 136 to 1, with 7 abstentions; the respective Committee votes were 79 to 18, with 23 abstentions, and 117 to 1, with 3 abstentions.

Israel said the charges in the text were unfounded and in certain cases mere figments of imagination. Paragraph 9, for example, gave a wholly distorted picture of the educational system in the Golan Heights. The most shocking aspect of the whole text was paragraph 6; breaches that were war crimes and an affront to humanity might be the proper terms for PLO crimes but to use them against the Israeli people was an abominable offence.

The United States considered that such unbalanced texts served only to widen differences and inflame an already embittered situation. The United States also objected to the expense imposed on the budget as an unwise diversion of scarce resources. Paragraph 21, on, which it had abstained, lacked due regard for the fact that the Hospice was the property of the Austrian Catholic Church, whose wish to return it to its original function as a pilgrims' hostel had been one of the factors in the decision to close it.

Austria supported particularly paragraph 21, but could not accept certain formulations in the text overall, though it agreed with its basic thrust.

Sweden believed that the text went beyond the Assembly's competence, and it was not convinced that all the formulations in paragraph 8 were fully justified by proven facts.

Since Israel had challenged what had been stated in the Special Committee's report, Mexico believed it would be a good idea for it to grant the Committee all the facilities necessary to discharge its duties in an impartial and objective way, and permit it to visit the territories.

Fourth Geneva Convention

The General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights reaffirmed in 1985 that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949 (fourth Geneva Convention), was applicable to the Israeli-occupied territories.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. In a 19 February 1985 resolution on human rights violations in the occupied territories,<sup>(31)</sup> the Commission on Human Rights condemned Israel's failure to acknowledge the applicability of the Convention to the occupied territories, including Jerusalem, expressed deep concern at the consequences and urged all States parties to ensure Israel's compliance.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, on the recommendation of the Special Political Committee, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/161 B on the report of the Committee on Israeli practices.

The General Assembly,

Recalling Security Council resolution 465(1980) of 1 March 1980, in which, inter alia, the Council affirmed that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem,

Recalling also its resolutions 3092 A (XXVIII) of 7 December 1973, 3240 B (XXIX) of 29 November 1974, 3525 B (XXX) of 15 December 1975, 31/106 B of 16 December 1976, 32/91 A of 13 December 1977, 33/113 A of 18 December 1978, 34/90 B of 12 December 1979, 35/122 A of 11 December 1980, 36/147 A of 16 December 1981, 37/88 A of 10 December 1982, 38/79 B of 15 December 1983 and 39/95 B of 14 December 1984,

Bearing in mind the provisions of the Geneva Convention,

Noting that Israel and the Arab States whose territories have been occupied by Israel since June 1967 are parties to that Convention,

Taking into account that States parties to the Convention undertake, in accordance with article 1 thereof, not only to respect but also to ensure respect for the Convention in all circumstances,

1. Reaffirms that the Geneva Convention relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, of 12 August 1949, is applicable to the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

2. Condemns once again the failure of Israel, the occupying Power, to acknowledge the applicability of that Convention to the territories it has occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem;

3. Strongly demands that Israel acknowledge and comply with the provisions of that Convention in the Palestinian and other Arab territories it has occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem;

4. Urgently calls upon all States parties to that Convention to exert all efforts in order to ensure respect for and compliance with its provisions in the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem;

Paragraph 1 was adopted separately in the plenary Assembly and in Committee, by a recorded vote of 139 to 1, with 4 abstentions, and of 117 to 1, with 2 abstentions, respectively.

The United States said it had requested a separate vote to reiterate its view that the Convention, a landmark in ameliorating for civilian populations some of the rigours of war and military occupation, applied to the Israeli-occupied territories; the Convention's provisions must be fairly and consistently applied, without regard to the nature and causes of the underlying conflict that had resulted in the occupation. With regard to the text as a whole, however, the United States believed it to be another instance where condemnation of Israel retarded rather than promoted a solution; in addition, it considered the phrase "Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967, including Jerusalem", which appeared also in the other texts under the agenda item, as being merely demographically and geographically descriptive, and not indicative of sovereignty.

Israel said its position concerning the applicability of the Convention had been made clear; it abided by its humanitarian provisions and by the Hague Regulations annexed to the Hague Convention of 1907 respecting the laws and customs of war on land.

Sweden expressed the firm conviction that the fourth Geneva Convention was fully applicable to all Israeli-occupied territories.

Iran noted that the text contained certain phrases implying recognition of the Zionist base occupying Palestine which were inconsistent with its official position.

Palestinian detainees

Communications. In a letter of 16 January 1985 mainly dealing with Israel's plan to withdraw from Lebanon (see p. 297), transmitted by Egypt,<sup>(32)</sup>

PLO expressed grave concern for the future of the detainees at the Al-Ansar detention camp in southern Lebanon, where Israeli occupation forces were detaining more than 300 Palestinians.

In a letter of 19 March<sup>(33)</sup> charging Israel with acts of repression against Palestinians in the occupied territories, the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights expressed concern at reports of the continued detention and treatment of 35 youths arrested on 31 January during a raid on the Dheisheh refugee camp in the West Bank. In addition, some 300 Palestinians from the West Bank had been detained at Fara's prison since January.

By a letter of 1 April<sup>(34)</sup> dealing mainly with attacks on the Palestinian refugee camps Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh in Lebanon (see p. 312), transmitted by the United Arab Emirates, PLO charged that on 30 March six Palestinians on board a Lebanese ship had been abducted and taken to Israel.

By a letter of 4 April,<sup>(35)</sup> Lebanon condemned the recent transfer of more than 1,000 Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners from the Al-Ansar detention camp to some prisons inside Israel (see p. 301). Concern about the transfer was also expressed by PLO in a letter of 3 April, transmitted by the United Arab Emirates.<sup>(36)</sup> The PLO Chairman stated that he would appreciate hearing from the Secretary-General about the fate of the six Palestinians abducted from the Lebanese vessel.

By a letter of 8 August,<sup>(9)</sup> the Acting Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights expressed utmost concern at recent Israeli policies affecting the rights of the Palestinians. According to press reports, the Israeli Cabinet had voted on 4 August to reinstate administrative detention without trial and deportation of persons considered "security risks". The Cabinet also had decided to expand prisons in the occupied territories.

Qatar, as Chairman of the Arab Group, transmitted letters of 3, 6 and 10 September from PLO,<sup>(37)</sup> charging that since 28 August Israel had been carrying out a massive campaign of arrests against Palestinians from all areas of the territories. Three of the 56 arrested as of 3 September—two trade unionists and a student leader—had been served with deportation notices. By 6 September, the number of Palestinians arrested under the reimposed detention law was well beyond 100, among them 50 trade unionists, with 15 facing detention, PLO said. On 9 September, 20 more had been detained. If 15 others who had been served with deportation notices were deported, it would be in flagrant violation of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights,<sup>(38)</sup> the 1949 Geneva Conventions and United Nations resolutions. It was all part of Israel's 4 August decision to reintroduce administrative detention without trial and deportations to maximize repression of the Palestinians. Such laws were in contravention of international law and civilized behaviour, PLO said.

By a letter of 11 September,<sup>(11)</sup> the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights stated that, according to recent press reports, Israel had engaged in a massive detention campaign, holding over 50 persons in the West Bank and several in the Gaza Strip. At least three were threatened with deportation. Four Arab youths had been shot and wounded by Israeli soldiers at Hebron. Curfews had been imposed in a number of towns and refugee camps. Those developments, the Chairman stated, could not but further exacerbate tensions and obstruct international efforts to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting solution to the Palestine question.

Qatar for the Arab Group transmitted a PLO letter of 23 September<sup>(39)</sup> listing 29 Palestinians deported by Israel; 11 of them had appealed to the Supreme Court which, however, had upheld a decision of the military governor. 'The 18 others were deported without recourse.

Further cases of administrative detention and deportation orders for Palestinians were reported by the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights on 13 November.<sup>(17)</sup> He said an estimated 104 people were being detained without charge. Protesting such detention, all Palestinian administrative detainees had gone on hunger strike on 14 October, according to press reports, and on 25 October their relatives had held sit-in protests at three Red Cross offices in various towns, expressing concern over prison conditions and demanding that the orders be cancelled; those complaints were supported by four Knesset members.

Kuwait transmitted letters of 24 October<sup>(15)</sup> and 30 October<sup>(16)</sup> from PLO, reporting that currently there were 186 Palestinians in various Israeli prisons, that Israel had carried out wide-scale arrests in the Bethlehem area and that four more Palestinians had received deportation orders.

Action by the Commission on Human Rights. The Commission on Human Rights, in a 19 February resolution on human rights violations in the occupied territories,<sup>(40)</sup> strongly condemned Israeli practices such as annexation, mass arrests, establishing new settlements, collective punishments, administrative detention, deportation, expropriation, torture under detention and the inhuman conditions in prisons. It called on Israel to release all Arabs detained as a result of their struggle for liberation of their territories and, pending their release, to accord them protection under international instruments concerning treatment of prisoners of war, and to cease torture and ill-treatment of Arab detainees and prisoners.

Condemning Israel for its continued detention of Ziyad Abu Eain, the Commission called on Israel to implement fully an agreement concluded in 1983 between ICRC and Israel for the exchange of prisoners between PLO and Israel, and to release Ziyad Abu Eain and others it continued to detain at Al-Ansar camp, which must be closed under the 1983 agreement.

Report of the Secretary-General. In a September 1985 report on Ziyad Abu Eain and other Palestinians detained by Israel,<sup>(41)</sup> the Secretary-General said that on 29 March he had requested information from Israel concerning implementation of a 1984 General Assembly resolution<sup>(42)</sup> demanding that prisoners registered with ICRC be freed immediately. On 1 July, Israel had replied that in the light of recent developments, it considered any reference to that resolution as not being pertinent to the Special Political Committee's work.

As reported by the international press, the Secretary-General added, Abu Eain was released on 20 May 1985. According to further reports, he was taken into custody on 31 July and issued with an order of administrative detention.

Report of the Committee on Israeli practices. The annual report<sup>(21)</sup> of the Committee on Israeli practices also contained information relating to the treatment of detainees, including information on prison conditions and individual prisoners. As an illustration of detention conditions over the entire period of Israeli occupation, the Committee cited the case of Abdul Aziz Shahin from the Gaza Strip who had spent 15 years in Israeli prisons; upon completion of his sentence, he was released but put under house arrest and eventually expelled while proceedings were still under way in an effort to protect his right to live in his homeland.

The Committee also examined the situation resulting from the release of 1,150 prisoners in May 1985, a large number of which were Palestinians held in Israeli prisons. Some 600 of those released remained in the occupied territories, which provoked a concentrated campaign of violence and harassment by Israeli settlers.

Following a series of attacks on Jewish civilians in Israel and in the territories, the Attorney General was asked on 25 July to consider ways of imposing harsher penalties on persons responsible for terrorist acts against civilians. Among the measures considered were increased patrols and road-blocks, searches of suspects' homes and special actions by security services, police and civil defence units. On 29 July, the Israeli Cabinet set up a ministerial team headed by the Defence Minister to examine legal aspects of the possibility of imposing the death penalty on terrorist-murderers, deporting inciters and resorting again to administrative arrests.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December 1985, on the recommendation of the Special Political Committee, the General Assembly adopted resolution 40/161 A on the report of the Committee on Israeli practices, by recorded vote.

The General Assembly,

Recalling its resolutions 38/79 A of 15 December 1983 and 39/95 A of 14 December 1984,

Taking note of the report of the International Committee of the Red Cross of 13 December 1983,

1. Calls upon Israel to release all Arabs arbitrarily detained and/or imprisoned as a result of their struggle for self-determination and for the liberation of their territories;

2. Notes the initial release of Ziyad Abu Eain, among others, from prison on 20 May 1985;

3. Deplores the Israeli subsequent arbitrary detention of Ziyad Abu Eain and others;

4. Demands that the Government of Israel, the occupying Power, rescind its action against Ziyad Abu Eain and others and release them immediately;

5. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the General Assembly as soon as possible and not later than the beginning of its forty-first session on the implementation of the present resolution.

Israel said the text deserved nothing but rejection. Abu Eain was a convicted murderer who, after his release on 20 May within the framework of the 1983 agreement between PLO and ICRC, had been placed under administrative detention for plotting to commit new criminal acts. Furthermore, under paragraph 1, convicted criminals, even murderers, should be released if they claimed to have fought for self-determination.

Austria also expressed reservations on the wording of paragraph 1, as did Canada and Sweden.

The United States felt that the text appeared implicitly to condone violence; though opposing practices such as administrative detention, it could not support the effort made in the text to excuse acts of terrorism.

Greece and Spain believed that the wording of paragraphs 1 and 4 was vague and could lead to misinterpretation incompatible with international law.

Iran remarked that certain paragraphs contained phrases which implied recognition of the Zionist philosophy on recognition of Israel and, therefore, was inconsistent with its position.

The Libyan Arab Jamahiriya had reservations about any reference that could be interpreted as implying a willingness to recognize Israel or its occupation of the territories.

Argentina expressed concern that some references could give rise to erroneous interpretations. Mexico also believed some paragraphs might have been better worded.

Introducing the text, the Sudan said the increased number of detainees, a large number of whom were held in custody for long periods without charge or arraignment in court, and the circumstances under which they lived made it imperative that the international community attach due importance to the issue.

Israeli settlements policy

Israel's policy of establishing settlements in the occupied territories and incidents involving Israeli settlers were the subject of several communications. According to information before the Committee on Israeli practices, Israelis continued to establish settlements, expropriate Palestinian property and encourage directly or indirectly the Palestinian population to leave the territories. A number of speakers during the Security Council's consideration in September of the situation in the occupied territories (see p. 329) held the settlements policy, among other Israeli practices, to a large degree responsible for the escalation of violence.

Communications. On 15 January 1985,<sup>(43)</sup> the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights brought to the Secretary-General's attention reports of action taken by Israel aimed at annexing the occupied territories of the West Bank. On 10 January, Israel had approved sites for six new Jewish settlements, each said to cost $1 million, in the northern part of the West Bank, the Hebron area, the Jordan Valley and the Jerusalem area. As on previous occasions, the Committee noted, there had been public and parliamentary questioning of the decision within Israel itself. In December 1984, the Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Israel reportedly had requested the establishment of 20 others. During the previous six years, the Committee noted, some 100 new settlements had been established in the territories notwithstanding their illegality and the censure of numerous United Nations resolutions.

By a letter of 15 March,<sup>(44)</sup> Jordan informed the Secretary-General of Israeli settlement activity, including confiscation of Arab lands, in the occupied territories during the last three months of 1984. Jordan reported such activity from January to May 1985 in a 9 July letter;<sup>(45)</sup> during that period, nine settlements were established in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip and some 40.3 million square metres of land were confiscated. According to published information, settlers in the West Bank amounted to 42,600 by the end of 1984, distributed over 114 settlements.

By a letter of 19 March charging Israel with renewed acts of repression against Palestinians,<sup>(4)</sup> the Chairman of the Committee on Palestinian rights also expressed grave concern at the continued establishment of Israeli settlements in the occupied territories. According to a press report, the Israeli Housing Ministry had begun the construction of three permanent settlements: Azmona, on the Gaza shore; Kaddim, in the northern West Bank; and Na'an, in the Jordan Rift Valley. Settlers were already living in all three.

By a letter of 29 March,<sup>(46)</sup> the Committee Chairman drew attention to statements by Israeli officials concerning settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, as reported in the Israeli press. On 21 March, the Defence Minister had assured Jewish settlers in the Katif area in the Gaza Strip that the area must remain an inseparable part of Israel, having been always part of the biblical Land of Israel. A similar statement with regard to the Jordan Valley was attributed to the Israeli Prime Minister. Such statements, the Committee said, were yet a further confirmation of Israel's annexation policy which violated its Charter obligations and the fourth Geneva Convention, endangered peace and security, and undermined international peace efforts.

Kuwait transmitted a letter of 24 October from PLO,<sup>(15)</sup> charging that Israeli settlers on 22 October had attacked 13 Palestinian motorists between the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. In the Gaza Strip, 16 Palestinian homes were destroyed under the pretext of having been built without planning permission and 20 acres of agricultural land belonging to Palestinians had been expropriated in Khan Younis to establish a new settlement; a government decision disclosed plans to do the same with lands from the village of Bidya in the West Bank.

Report of the Committee on Israeli practices. Israel's settlements policy and the activities of its settlers in the occupied territories were also dealt with by the Committee on Israeli practices.<sup>(21)</sup> According to information before the Committee, measures continued to be taken to establish settlements, expropriate Palestinian property and encourage directly or indirectly the Palestinian population to leave the territories. Among those actions, the Committee cited the occupation during August 1985 by Israeli government members of a Palestinian house at Hebron, with the express purpose of asserting the pretended Israeli right to settle and take over the occupied territory. Considerable amounts continued to be allocated: in May, the Finance Committee of the Knesset set aside approximately $146 million for the creation of two new settlements in the West Bank and about $375 million to strengthen the infrastructure of existing ones in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The Israeli trade union, Histadrut, up to May, had invested $100 million for construction and infrastructure in West Bank settlements. It had been reported that, by April 1985, Israeli authorities had gained control over 52 per cent of the land in the West Bank.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY ACTION

On 16 December, on the recommendation of the Special Political Committee, the General Assembly adopted, by recorded vote, resolution 40/161 C on the report of the Committee on Israeli practices.

The General Assembly,
