- 18. This represents an increase in net appropriations of $33.6 million over the revised biennial budget approved by the Governing Council at its thirty-fifth session in June 1988, 6/ and of $51.9 million over the original biennial budget approved by the Governing Council at its thirty-fourth session in June 1987. 7/
- 19. Detailed information on the gross expenditure incurred during the year ended 31 December 1989 against the revised gross and net appropriations for the biennium 1988-1989 is given in schedule 6 in respect of the costs met from the resources of UNDP, and in schedule 19 in respect of the costs met from the resources of the United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF), the United Nations Revolving Fund for Natural Resources Exploration (UNRFNRE), the United Nations Sudano-Sahelian Office (UNSO), the United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development (UNFSTD) and the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM), respectively.

- 33. At 31 December 1989, the unspent allocations amounted to $231.4 million, inclusive of an amount of $7.2 million in respect of loan commitments. Unspent allocations exceeded total available resources by $131.6 million at 31 December 1989. This reflects the decision made by the Governing Council at its twenty-ninth session to continue the partial funding system 9/ and at its thirty-fourth session to modify the formula covering the ceiling on commitments. 10/
- 34. Under authority of financial regulation 5.1, the Administrator established in 1989 the UNCDF sub-trust fund, "Suspension Bridges (Phase II)", for which the Government of Switzerland is the donor. The status of all sub-trust funds is reflected in statement XXVII.

This trust fund was established by the General Assembly in its resolution 3167 (XXVIII) of 17 December 1973, in which it recognized the need to extend and intensify the activities of the United Nations system to meet the need for natural resources exploration in developing countries in order to accelerate their economic development. Governments receiving assistance from this trust fund have undertaken to make replenishment contributions to the Fund, when the projects financed by the Fund lead to commercial production.
- 36. During 1989, agreements were signed between the Fund and the Governments of Honduras and China for management services to be provided by the Fund and financed by the Government of Italy. The balance of this account at 31 December 1989 was $511.062.

UNSO acts as the primary United Nations contact with the Permanent Inter-State Committee on Drought Control in the Sahel (CILSS) and, in consultation with CILSS and the Governments concerned, selects and implements priority projects contained in the CILSS programme of medium-term and long-term recovery and rehabilitation in the drought-stricken Sahelian countries.

The General Assembly, by its resolution 34/218 of 19 December 1979, decided to establish a United Nations Financing System for Science and Technology for Development, to finance activities intended to strengthen the indigenous scientific and technological capacities of the developing countries, and decided that the Financing System should be a vehicle for the mobilization, co-ordination, channelling and disbursement of financial resources related thereto. By the same resolution, the General Assembly also decided to create a United Nations Interim Fund for Science and Technology for Development, pending the establishment of the long-term arrangements for the Financing System. The Interim Fund was established for a two-year period ending 31 December 1981 and responsibility for its administration was delegated to UNDP.
- 43. The Governing Council, at its twenty-eighth session, authorized the Administrator to make arrangements to ensure an orderly transition from the Interim Fund (termination date 31 December 1981) to the Financing System, operative as from 1 January 1982. 11/ By its resolution 36/183 of 17 December 1981, the General Assembly decided that the year 1982 would be considered the transitional period of the Financing System, during which time institutional arrangements should be determined, inter alia, in the light of the magnitude of the financial resources and the nature of operations of the Financing System. By the same resolution, the General Assembly also decided that the general operational provisions of the Interim Fund, including its resources, organization and management, as well as the procedures established in the annex to General Assembly resolution 34/218, would apply and be transferred to the Financing System during the transitional period.
- 44. During 1980, a programme reserve was created by transferring from the unexpended resources an amount equal to 2 per cent of the contributions received; this was done in accordance with the operational procedures established for this Fund by the General Assembly in its resolution 34/218.

^{11/} Ibid., 1981, Supplement No. 11 (E/1981/G1/Rev.1), decision 81/9.

This programme reserve was to be used by the Administrator at his discretion for purposes consistent with the Vienna Programme of Action on Science and Technology for Development 12/ and with the guidelines established by the General Assembly and the Committee, to ensure the flexibility and innovative capacity of the Financing System and its ability to provide catalytic support.
- 46. Based on the recommendations of the Intergovernmental Committee on Science and Technology for Development to the General Assembly, 13/ the Governing Council at its thirty-third session decided that the Administrator should establish a facility in the form of a trust fund for science and technology for development with effect from 1 January 1987, on the understanding that, in the event that the decision of the General Assembly differs significantly from that proposed by the Committee, the Administrator would again consult the Governing Council at its February 1987 session. 14/

The General Assembly, by its resolution 41/183 of 8 December 1986, decided to terminate the United Nations Financing System for Science and Technology for Development as at 31 December 1986 and to transfer its responsibilities and resources to a facility, entitled "United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development", to be established as a trust fund within UNDP.

- 52. The United Nations Council for Namibia designated the office of the United Nations Commissioner for Namibia as the co-ordinating authority for the Nationhood projects, under the direction of the Committee on the United Nation Fund for Namibia. - 54. At its thirtieth session, held in 1975, the General Assembly decided that the voluntary fund for the International Women's Year should be extended to cover the period of the United Nations Decade for Women, 1976-1985. 15/ In pursuance of that decision, the resources of the voluntary fund for the International Women's Year were transferred to the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women, which was established by the Assembly by its resolution 31/133 of 16 December 1976. - 55. In June 1980, a memorandum of understanding between the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Administrator of UNDP established a supplementary trust fund entitled "UNDP Trust Fund for Projects financed by the Voluntary Fund for the United Nations Decade for Women" and delegated the responsibility for its administration and management to the Administrator of UNDP.

- 59. As shown in statement XV, total income in 1989 amounted to $3.9 million and expenditure to $3.7 million. At the end of 1989, the balance of the Fund was $5.8 million, of which unspent allocations amounted to $1.5 million.

II. REPORT OF THE BOARD OF AUDITORS

Introduction

- 1. As required by General Assembly resolution 74 (I) of 7 December 1946 and article XVII of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the Board of Auditors has audited the accounts of UNDP for the year ended 31 December 1989.
- 2. The examination was made in accordance with article XII of the Financial Regulations of the United Nations and the annex thereto and with the common auditing standards adopted by the Panel of External Auditors of the United Nations, the specialized agencies and the International Atomic Energy Agency. The examination was carried out at UNDF headquarters in New York and at field offices in Jamaica, Malaysia and Pakistan.
- 3. The Board of Auditors continued its normal practice of reporting the results of specific audits in the field and at headquarters and of issuing management letters containing detailed audit observations to the Administration. This practice once again helped in maintaining a continuous dialogue with the Administration. Pursuant to regulation 12.9, the Board engaged the services of a commercial public audit firm for specific assignments.
- 4. The following sections deal with matters which, in the opinion of the Board, should be brought to the attention of the General Assembly. We have discussed all our observations with the Administration and, where appropriate, its views have been reflected in the present report.
- 5. The report is divided into two parts covering the audit of financial statements and management issues, respectively.

Summary of recommendations

- 6. We recommend that the following corrective action, presented in order of priority, be taken:
- (a) Further efforts are needed to obtain audited statements of UNDP expenditure incurred by executing agencies in time for the issuance of the audit opinion on the financial statements of UNDP (see paras. 58-60);
- (b) Guidelines to ensure correct delineation between programme and operating expenditure should be issued and existing guidelines being pertinent revised (see paras. 47-53);
- (c) More detailed and clearer instructions should be issued to keep all UNDP personnel aware of their personal responsibility and financial liability (see paras. 137-143);
- (d) The aspect of general deterrence in the prevention of fraud should be given more consideration (see paras. 148-152);

- (e) Before the establishment of new trust funds or sub-trust funds, the impact on the administrative work-load and efficiency of management should be taken into account (see paras. 120-123);
- (f) An up-to-date strategy for temporary employment needs to be developed (see paras. 164-168 and 169-174);
- (g) Two-year project budgeting should be practised by a more representative proportion of field offices and executing agencies and more positive results should be obtained before implementation of this concept is considered (see paras. 109-113);
- (h) The accounting policy regarding the recording of unliquidated obligations at year-end by executing agencies, as well as by headquarters units, should be clarified in order to remove the uncertainty in reported expenditure outlined in the present report (see paras. 85-95).

Summary of findings

- 7. Guidelines to ensure correct delineation between programme and operating expenditure have not yet been issued, existing guidelines being pertinent need further revision (paras. 47-53).
- 8. Efforts to ensure better documentation and to justify exceptions to the stated policy of cost-sharing apportionment have so far been initiated on a trial basis for a limited number of field offices only (paras. 54-57).
- 9. Improvements were noted in 1989 with respect to the timely audit of programme expenditure reported by executing agencies. However, the proportion of unaudited programme expenditure to total programme expenditure remains too high to authorize the expression of an unqualified audit opinion (paras. 58-60).
- 10. The return on audit confirmations of Government-executed programme expenditure did not allow the expression of an unqualified opinion (para. 60).
- 11. The outstanding balance of advances to Governments could not finally be assessed, although substantial improvement has been noted on the return of the Governments' disbursement reports as of year-end 1989 (paras. 61-64).
- 12. The qualification on the 1988 financial statements relating to cash-counterpart contributions is withdrawn for the 1989 statements (para. 65).
- 13. Using year-end exchange rates in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles, a foreign exchange gain of $US 19.2 million, as shown in note 1 (c) to the financial statements, would have to be recorded as 1989 income (para. 66).
- 14. The accrued interest listing was not reconciled to the investment listing for correct source data (paras. 67 and 68).
- 15. Bank confirmations were not reconciled to the general ledger to document and adjusted for differences (paras. 69-70).

- 16. Accrued interest on bonds is calculated manually, since the electronic data-processing system does not support the method of calculating interest on these bonds (paras. 71 and 72).
- 17. Agencies' status-of-funds reports were not promptly reconciled to the UNDP operating fund statements in all cases (paras. 73 and 74).
- 18. The balance of certain projects where funds had been advanced to Governments had not changed during the year 1989. Those accounts have to be examined more closely to seek, if necessary, missing information or documentation from Governments, and to enable an accounting on a more timely basis (paras. 75 and 76).
- 19. Suspense accounts were not reviewed and cleared of old outstanding balances on a timely basis (paras. 77 and 78).
- 20. The criteria for reporting unliquidated obligations with respect to both administrative and programme expenditure need to be reviewed. In addition, such policies deviate from generally accepted accounting principles in the case of equipment and sub-contract expenditure (paras. 85-95).
- 21. There is a reasonable probability that a liability of $US 1.226 million exists, which is not set out in statement II (paras. 96 and 97).
- 22. As recommended by the Board, the contingent liability resulting from termination benefits to be paid to staff members in future years is disclosed in the notes to the financial statements (para. 98).
- 23. The accounts receivable and deferred charges of the United Nations Capital Development Fund showed considerable uncleared amounts (para. 102).
- 24. The increase in programme delivery slowed down to +8.6 per cent as against +18.7 per cent in 1988; agency support costs rose by 2.4 per cent as compared to 23.2 per cent in 1988. The ratio of operating costs to total expenditure remained at almost the same level as in 1988 (para. 103).
- 25. An improvement in budgetary discipline has been noted in parts, but further efforts are deemed necessary in others (paras. 104-108).
- 26. Two-year project budgeting is not yet practised sufficiently on a trial basis to decide on the permanent implementation of this concept (paras. 109-113).
- 27. Costs for temporary personnel replacing personnel on established, but vacant posts are charged to the budget line for established posts. Thus, more resources are allocated to temporary assistance than allowed for in the approved budget (paras. 114-116).
- 28. Several recommendations had to be made on how to amend the UNDP guidelines on cash and investment management so as to limit exchange transactions and improve efficiency in management (para. 117).
- 29. The average maturity of investments seems rather short and should be reconsidered (paras. 118 and 119).

- 30. The number of trust funds and sub-trust funds increased to a total of 113 at the end of 1989. The impact of that increase, as far as administrative work-load and overall efficient y of management are concerned, needs to be taken into consideration before new funds are established (paras. 120-123).
- 31. A better scale of efficiency in the management of trust funds could be reached by co-ordinating transactions of cash and investments on a day-by-day basis (paras. 124-127).
- 32. It was found that the balances of the major trust funds reviewed revealed a sustained, partly high, liquidity (para. 128).
- 33. At the end of 1989, a number of sub-trust funds were still in deficit, resulting from the fact that some donors were not meeting their commitments (paras. 129-132).
- 34. Sub-trust funds without income and expenditure were not closed as soon as possible (paras. 133-136).
- 35. More detailed and clearer instructions need to be issued to keep all UNDP personnel aware of their personal responsibility and financial liability (paras. 137-143).
- 36. There was not always evidence in the cases of write-offs reviewed that the financial liability of a staff member had been scrutinized as stipulated in financial rule 114.15 (b) (paras. 144-147).
- 37. The aspect of general deterrence was not given sufficient consideration in cases of fraud to create an environment that is adverse to the perpetration of frauds (paras. 148-152).
- 36. The functional title system with more than 1,300 functional titles is overinflated and needs to be reviewed in order to match titles and grades (paras. 153-157).
- 39. In several cases job classifications have not been updated or not been drawn up at all (paras. 158-160).
- 40. Personnel appointment procedures for both internationally recruited and locally recruited staff are cumbersome (paras. 161-163).
- 41. There is no adequate contractual device at hand to engage the services of contractors for a limited amount of time and without a career perspective. An up-to-date strategy for temporary employment is deemed necessary (paras. 164-174).
- 42. Financial completion of projects needs to be speeded up (paras. 175-177).
- 43. In a considerable number of the cases reviewed, the reporting and evaluation requirements were not adhered to and a more consistent approach to project monitoring is needed (paras. 178-181).
- 44. The guidelines on project reporting and evaluation have to be simplified and streamlined (paras. 182-185).

- 45. A long-term electronic data-processing strategy has not yet been developed (paras. 186-190).
- 46. The administrative instructions on procurement are not in line with the financial rules and amendments to the guidelines are deemed necessary to enhance regularity and competition in procurement activities (paras. 191-195).

Part I: Financial statements

Expenditure

Accounting delineation between programme, programme support and operating expenditure

- 47. According to statement I, a distinction has to be made between three elements: programme expenditure, programme support costs accruing to executing agencies, and UNDP biennial budget expenditure. The final category of expenditure consists of administrative and programme support costs incurred by UNDP and is being referred to as operating costs in the present report.
- 48. The Board is cognizant of the fact that correct delineation between those three categories of expenditure is bound to be difficult. Nevertheless, to avoid misclassification of expenditure to the extent feasible, the dividing line between them should be drawn with the utmost diligence. Therefore, instructions are called for that would provide adequate guidance on all crucial issues of delineation.

Programme Logistical Support Projects

- 49. According to commitments made in previous years in response to audit observations, as well as in document DP/1990/76 of 31 January 1990 (p. 4), which was submitted to the Governing Council, the current guidelines for Programme Logistical Support Projects were supposed to have been revised. So far, the 1984 guidelines for them have only been revised once (in 1988), but the amendments were only marginal and of an editorial nature. Apart from other issues raised previously, we consider it urgent at least to amend the guidelines in such a way as to stipulate that revisions of Programme Logistical Support Projects require a new clearance procedure and that the Budget Section is to be involved in these revisions.
- 50. The Administration gave assurances that action would soon be taken in that respect.

Umbrella projects

51. No guidelines exist so far for umbrella projects; the Programme and Projects Manual contains only a definition. Accordingly, there is no clearance procedure and no safeguard whatever against any possible misclassification of costs. Moreover, umbrella projects are only vaguely defined as "means of rapidly financing certain activities intended to promote the achievement of specified immediate and development objectives, but which activities it may not be possible to identify in detail at the time the project is financed". We are of the opinion that such a definition is not sufficient to prevent administrative costs from being charged to projects and, moreover, that it is no sound basis for the approval of projects.

Therefore, we reiterate our opinion that it is a matter of urgency to issue appropriate guidelines.

52. The Administration concurred with our observation and confirmed that the draft quidelines - dated 20 August 1984 - would soon be finalized.

Project-funded posts at headquarters

- 53. The establishment of project-funded posts at headquarters is another matter of concern, for the following reasons:
- (a) In trying to confirm the total number of project-funded posts at headquarters, it turned out that it was difficult to reconcile the information given by the units with that given by Budget Section. Two more posts had to be added to the number of project-funded posts and some uncertainties remained that should be clarified. Moreover, it is a matter of concern that such a clarification process proved necessary, since the units should know which of their posts are related to a specific project and therefore project-funded. This could even be regarded as a symptom for the fact that the units do not differentiate diligently enough between their administrative and their project-related functions, or that such a distinction is not always possible. Further, the units are supposed to inform the Budget Section of any changes in the basis for the delineation of posts in order to make sure that post classification is solid and reliable at any given time. The Administration confirmed our findings, but emphasized that it should be noted that, since the establishment of the quidelines on project-funded posts in October 1988, a concerted effort had been made to set up a reliable data base. The accuracy of that data base was an ongoing concern and a review of whether the location of such posts could more easily be identified from the payroll records was currently under way. Supporting the efforts made, we believe that the problem should also be dealt with by the units concerned. At least they should be in a position to identify their project-related - and therefore project-funded - posts correctly. Otherwise their ability to ensure that project-related functions are adequately delimited from programme-related or administrative functions would seem questionable.
- (b) With some reservation, due to the above-mentioned uncertainties, the total number of project-funded posts totalled 92 at the end of the year 1989, but reached 111 during that year. Moreover, the project-funded posts with a duration of up to three months are not included in this number, since the Budget Section is not involved in their approval and no overview is available there. Given the fact that in 1987, the total number of project-funded posts was only 48, a considerable increase is to be noted since. The office space costs pertaining to such posts are also charged to project funds, and the administrative budget is being discharged accordingly. The total amount of funds involved is conservatively estimated at $US 5.3 million. Even though the sharpest rise in project-funded posts took place before the guidelines were issued, as noted by the Administration, a further increase had to be recorded since then, despite the new instructions.
- (c) The retroactive clearance procedure that was scheduled for the years 1988/89 brought about no results in terms of a reduction of project-funded posts that had been established before the guidelines were issued in October 1988. No post was reverted to core budget, even in cases where the justification given by the respective unit seemed dubious. Neither was any follow-up action or further investigation recorded in the file. The Administration did not anticipate an immediate reduction in the number of project-funded posts resulting from the retroactive clearance exercise in 1988/89, since in its view such posts were of a temporary nature and the incumbents were not performing core budget functions. It believed that the issue to be reviewed was only to determine whether these project posts should be located in New York. We, however, maintain that the clearance process should have led to a reduction of project-funded posts, as mentioned above. In one case, it was found that the post was not adequately project-related and, therefore, funding by project resources was not justified.

(d) The fact that the clearance procedure did not result in a reduction of project-funded posts and that, instead, a further increase in the number of those posts is to be noted is, in our opinion, at least partly due to the wording of the quidelines, which leaves considerable room for discretion and interpretation. In particular, regarding the category "Project implementation unit" of project-funded posts, such a post is considered sufficiently justified when the staff member is dedicated to the implementation of a single project or a cluster of projects in contrast to "more general" programme management. To draw a clear line between more or less general management should be difficult in itself, but it becomes virtually impossible in cases where the project itself is designed on such a general level that it does not stand out against "more general" programme management. Some cases in point are projects such as "Technical support for intercountry programming" (RAS/85/006), "Co-ordination of international agricultural research" (GLO/87/009) or "Seminar on project management and UNDP procedures for international organizations in Africa" (RAF/88/039). With regard to the category entitled "Technical support services", the guidelines only specify that "special justification" would be required for locating such a post at headquarters without giving a clearer picture as to what might be considered an adequate justification in this respect. Therefore, in our view, the quidelines in their current wording will not provide the means to stop any further increase in the number of project-funded posts at headquarters and, more importantly, to draw a clear line between project and operating expenditure. Accordingly, an attempt should be made to specify them further, i.e., by introducing examples. If such a revision does not lead to more clarity, project-funded posts at headquarters should only be established following consideration and a decision taken by the Governing Council that relates not only to the project as a whole, but also to specific posts. Sharing our concern, the Administration will review and appropriately amend the current guidelines.

Apportionment of programme expenditure to cost-sharing

- 54. The two largest components of total programme expenditure shown in statement I are "indicative planning figures" (IPF) and "cost-sharing". The apportionment of programme expenditure to cost-sharing affects, in turn, the balances of unexpended cost-sharing and general resources, shown in statement II, as well as of miscellaneous and extrabudgetary income, to which interest income derived from the investment of the balance of general resources and of unexpended cost-sharing resources, respectively, is credited.
- 55. The administrative instructions of UNDP as laid down in the Programme and Projects Manual stipulate that, in general, the year-end apportionment exercise should be based on the available balance of cost-sharing resources and the annual instalment of the project budget. The circumstances that would warrant exceptions are not specified. The Board had previously observed numerous exceptions to the stated policy and had, therefore, requested that deviations be adequately documented and justified. Furthermore, we suggested, that a revision of the stated policy to include multi-year project budget apportionment, instead of referring to the annual instalment, should be considered. Upon reviewing the subject again, we found matters basically unchanged.

- 56. The Administration explained that new procedures had been introduced on a trial basis and that they would subsequently be reviewed. The proposal to apply the proportion of cost-sharing financing in the multi-year project budget had not been implemented, since it was felt that such a practice could be difficult in view of changes that occur in projects over their lifetime and the fact that cost-sharing apportionment is dependent on available income. All apportionment figures are verified by the Bureau Finance Officers and deviations are justified and documented.
- 57. The new procedure might prove helpful, since it will require field offices to provide an explanation every time the apportionment requested deviates from the stated policy. However, the trial period might need to be extended since, according to our observation, the new forms have not been widely used in the 1989 apportionment exercise.

Audit of programme expenditure

Programme expenditure incurred by United Nations executing agencies

- 58. As explained in our previous reports, we have to rely on the work of other external auditors to gather adequate audit evidence regarding programme expenditure and programme support costs reported by UNDP. The fact that audited statements submitted by United Nations executing agencies were not received before the closing of the UNDP accounts, nor before the issuance of our opinion, led us to qualifying our opinion on the 1988 accounts.
- 59. For the year-end 1989, again, we did not receive sufficient audited statements of such executing agencies to allow us to express an unqualified opinion on the matter.

Government-executed programme expenditure

60. At its thirty-fifth session, in June 1988, the Governing Council approved the revised accounting, auditing and reporting procedures for Government-executed projects recommended by the Administrator. In terms of audit requirements, the purpose was to implement a new procedure allowing for Government-executed projects to be properly audited at year-end, which was not the case in prior years. Efforts were put into the receiving of audit reports on Government-executed projects. However, at the time of the audit, only 161 projects were audited, which relates to an expenditure of $US 22.8 million, compared to a total of $US 100.1 million. The process of receiving and reconciling such reports was not finalized at the end of our audit. Although we recognized major improvements compared to prior years, the coverage of approximately 23 per cent of expenditure still presents a limitation for the expression of an unqualified opinion.

Accounting for government-executed programme expenditure

- 61. Government-executed programme expenditure reported in statement I was based on the status of funds and project delivery reports certified and sabmitted by the Governments concerned. Prior to and including 1988, all direct payments made by UNDP on behalf of Governments (expenditures directly executed by UNDP headquarters and field offices or co-operating agencies) were recorded as a receivable on statement II if the delivery reports were not received, although those amounts might have been already disbursed. The reporting of project delivery by Governments was rather low before the closing of the UNDP books in 1988. As a result, the balance of "Operating funds provided to Governments" included advances to Governments in relation to 1988 programme expenditure and advances made in 1988 and prior years that might have been speut but could not be cleared because the relevant project delivery document had not been received. Therefore, we were not in a position to quantify precisely the overstatement of the receivable in the 1988 financial statements.
- 62. In 1989, UNDP changed its procedure used to record such government-executed programme expenditure by revising its accounting instructions, as follows:
- (a) Payments by UNDP field offices not being advances to the Government will be recorded as expenditures;
 - (b) Payments by UNDP headquarters will be recorded as expenditures;
- (c) Co-operating agency payments will be recorded as expenditure from the agency reports;
- (d) Project delivery reports will be generated directly by headquarters for confirmation purposes.
- This is expected to result in a more up-to-date recording of expenditures on government-executed projects.
- 63. For the year-end 1988, this change was retroactively applied and resulted in a correction of expenditure of $US 5,249,677. In 1989, the expenditures were finally reconciled with a further adjustment of $US 4,871,804 to programme expenditure (see note 10 (a) to the financial statements).
- 64. Substantial progress was made in 1989 on the return of the Governments' disbursement reports, but further improvement is still needed in the timely reporting by Governments to assess finally the outstanding balance of advances to Governments. We also refer to paragraph 60.

Accounting for cash-counterpart contributions

65. Executing agencies were requested to submit information indicating, project-by-project, local currency expenditure charged to Government cash-counterpart contributions. The information received was reconciled to the 1988 financial statements. We have reviewed the reconciliation and are satisfied with the supporting documentation. Therefore, the qualification on the 1988 financial statements relating to the subject matter is withdrawn.

Assets

Investments

- 66. Our review of exchange rates used to convert foreign currency investments to United States dollars at year-end revealed that the rates used, although being the official United Nations rates, differ somewhat from rates used by financial institutions. In accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, the proper year-end exchange rates as of the last trading day in such currencies should be adopted. The non-compliance with generally accepted accounting principles results in foreign exchange gains of $US 19.2 million to be recognized in 1990, although relating to 1989. UNDP did disclose the difference in valuation of non-United States dollar investment holdings resulting from differences between the United Nations operational rates of exchange and actual market rates in effect on 31 December 1989 (note 1 (c) to the financial statements).
- 67. We recognized during the review of the accrued interest calculation that the listing used for the calculations was not finally reconciled, which resulted in the fact that, in some cases, the amount of the investment, as well as the interest rate, was wrongly entered. This occurred because the listing of investments was corrected after year-end, after certain incorrect entries that had been made were revealed. However, the accrued interest listing was not rerun based on the corrected data. It should be clearly established that all electronic data-processing listings used are based on the same source data and that, in case of changes to the master file, all listings have to be corrected and subsequently reconciled to the first version, with differences documented and approved.
- 68. The Administration agreed with the audit observation. Measures would be taken to ensure that the same source data were used in producing various statements, and changes to the original version would be documented as suggested.
- 69. We reviewed bank confirmations circularized as of year-end. It was revealed that certain differences between the confirmations received and the accounting records had not been followed up in all cases, nor had the follow-up that had been taken been properly documented. In order to have proper control over custody of assets, it should be a clearly established rule that the existence of investments must be verified by confirmations with the related custodian and that there be follow-up on differences resulting from such confirmations.
- 70. The Administration replied that procedures had been established to reconcile all investment records against individual confirmations received from the investment banks. In those instances, the error had not been detected. Such errors were infrequent. However, the confirmation was sent to the correct bank and follow-up was established with the bank to obtain corrected year-end confirmation.
- 71. Accrued interest on bonds is calculated manually although a computer system for interest calculation is available. However, the electronic data-processing system does not support the method of calculating interest on these bonds. An examination should be carried out as to whether the system can be adjusted to avoid cumbersome manual work for the calculation.
- 72. UNDP agreed with the audit comment. Measures would be taken to ensure that this procedure was included in future computer system enhancements.

Accounts receivable: Operating funds with other executing agencies

- 73. In one agency file, it was noted that no correspondence from that agency was kept, and that no attempt had been made to reconcile amounts per the operating fund statement to that agency's status of funds report. While in this case the amounts involved were relatively immaterial, it is an important and necessary control function that each agency's figures be reconciled to the UNDP operating fund statement. We also noted that the reconciliation between the operating fund statement and the agency's status of funds had been performed at the end of November, and in some cases, at the end of October. In the case of one agency, the reconciliation had been performed even earlier. It is essential that these reconciliations be performed promptly, and that the various agencies be requested to respond in a timely manner. Certain differences occur between amounts reported by UNDP and by the other agencies. These differences are due mainly to timing differences, whereby one records information well before the other (by a period of one or more months). Later, reconciliations between the figures per UNDP and figures per each agency are performed.
- 74. The Administration indicated that there is an established procedure for reconciliation of operating fund statements to be carried out on a quarterly or monthly basis, as appropriate. The one agency referred to became an executing agency in February 1988, had little activity in that year, and submitted its first report in 1990.

Operating funds provided to Governments

- 75. During our audit, we noted that the balances of certain projects where funds were advanced to Governments during 1988 had not changed during the year ended 31 December 1989. The most likely cause of this is given as being that the Governments involved had received the funds and spent them on the relevant project, but had not prepared the necessary paperwork or submitted it to UNDP. We believe that this problem should be addressed earlier, so that the financial statements of UNDP will more accurately show the expenditure on projects. Any accounts showing no movement should be examined more closely, an explanation should be sought, and, if necessary, relevant Governments should be contacted and asked to provide the necessary information or documentation. This will result in accounting on a more timely basis and in providing more accurate information in the financial statements.
- 76. As to the Administration, investigations of all outstanding balances had been made as part of UNDP efforts to clear all project operating funds as of 31 December 1988. Some difficulties had, however, been revealed in getting the reports from the Governments concerned. Resident representatives had, therefore, been requested to follow up those cases in order to ensure that such reports were received.

Other accounts receivable and suspense accounts

77. It was revealed within this accounts section that various balances remained unchanged since the previous year. Proper documentation and follow-up on such amounts was not performed timely. These amounts, although not substantial individually, accumulate in total to a considerable sum. More efforts should be made to clear such accounts or write off uncleared differences. Accounts concerned are mainly:

- (a) Travel Service Section accounts;
- (b) Field Accounts Unit suspense accounts field offices;
- (c) Payroll advances education grants and salaries;
- (d) Inter-field office payments made by one field office on behalf of another.
- 78. The Administration confirmed that existing procedures provided for the regular analysis, reconciliation and follow-up of all outstanding balances. The clearance of many balances required detailed research in field offices and entities outside the organization, and other balances related to rental advances, which in some countries, have to be paid years in advance.

Liabilities

Travel accounts

- 79. A review of the unprocessed travel costs of 1987 and prior years showed an amount of $US 1.7 million for unprocessed travel costs. This amount is mostly due to over-obligations, since the estimator never knows the exact amount of all invoices to be processed after or during a staff member's travel. A time-lapse between the receipt of an invoice and the actual travel might extend to one-and-one-half years because the travel account is not received promptly. We noted that, during the first three months of 1990, only an amount of $US 78,000 was used against the total balance of $US 1.7 million. It seems that this account represents a kind of cushion and should be brought to a lower level by reversing all amounts not used.
- 80. The Administration is of the opinion that not the whole balance was due to over-obligation. However, procedures would be reviewed to clear the account.

Clearing accounts

- 81. The above-mentioned accounts show various outstanding items, including entries from 1985 and prior years, that have not been cleared. Efforts should be made to identify the transactions or reverse uncleared items.
- 82. As to the Administration, timely follow-ups with payees, where identifiable, were made by means of communications with Governments and missions following receipt of funds, and on a continuing basis thereafter. A list of unidentified payments was also sent to field offices on a quarterly basis for local follow-up with respective Governments as to the purpose of payments. When the payee was not known, UNDP's banks were requested to initiate investigation through the banking system. Effective in 1990, and for subsequent years, unidentified receipts held in suspense for three years or longer would be transferred to the miscellaneous income accounts.

Overpayments made by Governments

83. The account shows unidentified payments as well as overpayments from Governments. An amount of $US 2 million relates to 1988 and prior years (some even eight or more years ago). The Governments did not specify where these funds were to be applied. We feel that efforts should also be made to identify and apply those payments to outstanding obligations, and we recommend in future an ongoing review of such payments with a proper and timely follow-up with the Governments concerned. Those items which cannot be identified should be cleared by reversing them to income.

84. The Administration will identify uncleared balances as well as overpayments received by means of communications, both written or oral, with Governments and missions. In addition, a list of unidentified payments or overpayments is sent to field offices on a quarterly basis for local follow-up with the respective Governments. Effective in 1990, and for subsequent years, unidentified payments and/or overpayments received from Governments for which no response has been received from the Government involved, and which have been held in suspense for three years or longer, will be transferred to the miscellaneous income account.

Unliquidated obligations

- 85. UNDP Financial Regulations and Rules, as well as the guidelines for executing agencies, specify the applicable accounting policy by type of expenditure (see footnote 1 (b) to the financial statements). These accounting principles for recording unliquidated obligations depart from generally accepted accounting principles in the case of purchases of equipment, where the issuance of an order is already treated as expenditure, while delivery has not yet taken place. This is also the case for sub-contracts in the area of travel on official business, where an unliquidated obligation is posted on demand of the originating office, even if the travel is not finalized.
- 86. In order to verify proper handling of such obligations, we reviewed the unliquidated obligations for the year-end 1989, as well as the savings on the unliquidated obligations for 1988 for the Office for Project Services. Our overall analysis showed savings against 1988 unliquidated obligations of approximately 34 per cent. We examined the reasons for such savings and discussed the issue with the appropriate officials of the Office.
- 87. In general, the Administration agreed with the points made by the Board. However, it considered that the figure of 34 per cent savings against prior years' obligations, which had been delivered from a computer-assisted exercise at the year-end to lapse all outstanding 1988 obligations, did not take the following factors into account: In accordance with UNDP accounting procedures, the balances of 1988 obligations were reviewed individually and, where valid, re-established. In addition, since some 1989 inter-office vouchers were only processed in early 1990, before the closure of the 1989 accounts, but subsequent to the above exercise, those expenditures reported therein which related to 1988 were charged directly to the 1989 accounts.
- 88. It was also noted that savings arose because travel authorizations were still recorded, although the travel had subsequently been cancelled. The Administration agreed with the observation and will ensure that the originating offices in the Office for Project Services cancel the travel authorizations in a timely manner.
- 89. Obligations in respect of equipment purchases are generally liquidated on receipt of the related equipment and payment voucher. However, in certain instances, the field offices do not indicate the appropriate obligation number on the payment voucher, so that, instead of a reversal of the obligation taking place when payment is posted, the expenditure is recorded twice. This, however, is corrected at year-end when the unused obligations are reversed. The reversal is then shown as a saving, although rather than being a saving, it is really a correction of expenses recorded twice. Further, in 1989, owing to time constraints, payments close to year-end were posted against the obligations rather than against the project. Therefore, at close of business, the obligation is liquidated and shows savings, although they are not real savings. We recommended the establishment of guidelines that would secure processing of payments only if the field office is matching the payment authorization with the related unliquidated obligation. Efforts should be made to get the field office staff involved in understanding the importance of such handling. In addition, at year-end, payments should only be made against the obligation.

- 90. The Administration recognized the problems caused by field offices not reporting the appropriate obligation number on the inter-office vouchers. In this regard, it had taken steps to minimize the problem by ensuring all instructions to the field office contain references of the obligation number to be included in the voucher. In addition, the staff in the Office for Project Services Division for Finance and Information Resources has been instructed accordingly and increased their monitoring of such disbursements when processing inter-office vouchers. It is also noted that the Automated Field Office Accounting System provides for a module to validate and directly upload such transactions into the General Ledger Financial Reporting System, and that additional instructions will be issued by the Division of Finance to the field offices regarding the liquidation of obligations.
- 91. In certain instances, blank authorizations were issued (the unliquidated obligation is recorded although not detailed by expenditure). These mainly resulted in savings, since the authorization was higher than the expenditure that was actually incurred. We strongly recommended that such unliquidated obligations should only be recorded if detailed and proven by expenditure details. The management of the Office for Project Services, however, indicated that appropriate action had already been taken.
- 92. The Administration concurred with the Board's observation that obligations should be recorded only when supported by details of foreseen expenditures. Following the Board's observations, and in line with the policy of increased decentralization, the Administration has issued stricter guidelines with the purpose of minimizing the problems and ensuring compliance with UNDP Financial Rules.
- 93. It was revealed that foreign currency obligations are posted at the exchange rate of the period entered into. In order to record correctly changes in foreign currency rates, such obligations should be revalued at the year-end rate to properly match foreign exchange gains or losses with the related period.
- 94. The Administration indicated that, although financial rule 114.3 (b) does not require an amendment to an obligation because of fluctuations in exchange rates, the Office for Project Services was in the process of implementing a new procurement system that would allow the recording of obligations, both in local currency and in the United States dollar equivalent, and that would also automatically adjust the outstanding obligations to reflect the latest United Nations operational rates of exchange.
- 95. The practices of recording unliquidated obligations at other agencies were not reviewed by us.

Disclosure in the notes to the financial statements

- 96. According to note 8 to the financial statements, there is a liability to be met by UNDP of approximately $US 1,568,676. However, in statement II, only $US 342,163 is shown as liability. Under generally accepted accounting principles, the whole amount has to be accrued if the probability of liability exists. We, therefore, recommended that, based on generally accepted accounting principles, additional accrual be effected for the difference of $US 1,226,513.
- 97. The Administration considered that, since most of the estimated future benefit payments were for widows and that they ceased when the widows died or remarried, it was more appropriate to report this as a contingent liability. We, however, feel that, if a reasonable probability exists, a liability of the whole amount should be shown in statement II. The estimated liability was calculated in accordance with appendix D of the United Nations Staff Rules. It is based on actuarial tables.
- 98. We also reviewed the notes to the financial statements in terms of compliance with internationally accepted accounting principles. Generally, the notes provide sufficient information as to such requirements. The disclosure of the contingent liability resulting from termination benefits that UNDP will have to pay to its staff members in future years was made in the 1989 statements in note 7, as recommended in our 1988 report.

Presentation of financial statements

- 99. Given the nature and the amount of savings in prior years' unliquidated obligations, they should be disclosed in the notes to the financial statements, since currently, the practice is to net those savings against the current year's expenditure.
- 100. Note 1 to the financial statements indicates that income is accounted for on a cash basis. UNDP shows a letter of credit in the amount of $US 2.2 million in statement II. The income from this was not accounted for on a cash basis. Although the total amount is not considered material, thought should be given to disclosing such differences from the cash principle in the notes to the financial statements.
- 101. The Administration explained that the letter of credit was irrevocable and as such is considered as equivalent to cash, thereby complying with the principle of accounting for income on a cash basis. The Administration did subsequently disclose subject matter in note 3 to the financial statements.

United Nations Capital Development Fund

102. As in the case of our review of UNDP accounts receivable and suspense accounts (see para. 77), we found considerable uncleared amounts when auditing the accounts receivable and deferred charges of the United Nations Capital Development Fund. The amounts originated in 1988 and prior years. Intensified efforts should be made to clear the accounts in question or to write off amounts that cannot be cleared. The Administration replied that intensive efforts were commenced in 1989 to clear the balances, but could not be completed because this required detailed research with field offices. Completion was, however, expected in 1990.

Part II: Management issues

Budget

Trends in the use of UNDP resources

103. Our audit included a review of changes in the use of UNDP resources (see table below). We referred to figures prepared by the Budget Section for the last 10 years, which were not audited. However, the amounts disclosed were reconciled to statement I. The figures show a clearly lower increase in programme delivery in 1989 than in 1988 (8.6 per cent as against 18.7 per cent). Agency support costs increased by 2.4 per cent as against 23.2 per cent in the prior year. The summarized administrative and programme support costs increased nearly at the same rate as in 1988 (13.4 per cent as against 13.2 per cent in 1988). As a result, the ratio of operating costs to total expenditure is 15.2 per cent and remained at almost the same level as in 1988 (14.6 per cent). Since future trends in programme delivery and the impact on administrative ratios were discussed at length at the Governing Council in conjunction with the presentation of the 1990-1991 biennial budget, we intend to continue observing these trends in future years.

Budgetary control

- 104. Reviewing budgetary discipline in 1989, improvements have been noted in parts, but further efforts need to be made in others.
- 105. As in 1988, five headquarters units exceeded their allotments in 1989. These overruns amounted to 10.3 per cent of total budget funds allotted to them as against 8.1 per cent in 1988. The Administration stated that a thorough review of the budgetary performance in these cases had been conducted to avoid a repetition in future years.
- 106. In the case of field offices, results regarding expenditures related to field activities controlled by headquarters differ from those against field office allotments. The former account for 44 per cent and the latter for 56 per cent of total field office related expenditure. Overruns of expenditures over field office allotments were found in five field offices as against 35 in 1988. This constitutes a considerable improvement in this respect. The Administration intends to review these five cases in order to identify the reasons for over-expenditure and take corrective measures accordingly.
- 107. However, expenditures exceeded headquarters-controlled allotments in 68 field offices, i.e., in more than 50 per cent of all field offices. The overruns amounted to 15.8 per cent of the allotments in the field offices concerned. The Administration explained that this over-expenditure pertained essentially to salaries and common staff costs items and that the emphasis in this area was on authorized post management rather than on "dollar management". At the same time, the records showed that these items had always been managed well within the authorized appropriations for staff costs. The allotment figures for these expenditure lines were system generated and, therefore, the over-expenditure was not related to budgetary control and discipline. The Administration would, however, examine ways of improving the system at a detailed level.

108. The Board expects that budgetary control will be facilitated and budgetary discipline enhanced after the allotment control module of the Automated Field Office Accounting System, which is scheduled for 1991, becomes operational. The Administration should endeavour to make the new system viable by that time and to provide for the appropriate training of the users to ensure that the benefits anticipated can be realized.

Two-year project budgeting

- 109. Beginning on 1 July 1987, the Administration introduced procedures relating to the concept of a two-year project budget cycle for a three-year experimental period. The Board of Auditors was requested by the Governing Cour.il in its decision 89/61 particularly to review these newly implemented procedures.
- 110. We therefore analysed the reports of 11 executing agencies and 19 field offices, which had answered a questionnaire sent by the Administration to 18 agencies and 20 field offices, in order to evaluate the results of the experiment. Our review revealed that six agencies, or about 55 per cent of those that had replied, stated some benefit in using two-year project budgeting, but only four agencies, or 36 per cent, assessed the effects of this concept as positive without qualification. Of the 19 field offices that responded 10, or almost 53 per cent, did not or could not use two-year project budgeting. Another four, or 21 per cent, stated only little use, and none of the nine, or 47 per cent, of the field offices that used this method at least to some extent indicated unqualified approval of the system.
- 111. Considering the fact that UNDP has 114 field offices and deals with 30 executing agencies of the United Nations system, leaving aside all the Governments and non-governmental organizations that act as executing agencies, we are of the opinion that the replies of 11 agencies and 19 field offices are not sufficient to provide the Administration with a reliable overview of the benefits and disadvantages involved in two-year project budgeting procedures. Therefore, the study undertaken cannot be regarded as a solid basis for a decision on the final implementation of the new concept. Two-year project budgeting should be practised by a more representative proportion of field offices and executing agencies and more positive results should be obtained before such a decision can be considered. It would be particularly important to encourage agencies to apply the concept. The experience gained this way should be used to enhance necessary improvements for more widespread acceptance. Apart from that, intensive training of all field office and agency staff involved in budgeting procedures is considered an indispensable prerequisite to make two-year project budgeting workable.
- 112. The Administration acknowledged that the conclusions drawn by the Board were consistent with their own analysis of the available data. Furthermore, it agreed that an extension of the experimental period was needed before a more definite conclusion could be reached as to the usefulness of the two-year project budgeting alternative. It felt that an extension for two more years would allow for a wider use by agencies as well as field offices. The necessary instructions to this effect would be issued and arrangements would be made with the Training Section to include this subject in their programmes.
- 113. The Administration is obviously aware of the problem and agrees with the Board that further experience is necessary and that appropriate training of staff will be indispensable for the success of the experiment. We will keep the matter under review.

Costs for temporary assistance

- 114. Costs for temporary personnel replacing personnel on established but vacant posts are currently charged as costs for established posts instead of temporary assistance. The Board cannot agree with this practice since, in our opinion, it is not a true and fair representation of costs.
- 115. The Administration pointed out that temporary assistance was made available to meet the needs envisaged for extended sick leave, maternity leave and peak work-load periods. It was stated to be, in principle, a budgetary provision used to assist the units in replacing, on a short-term basis, staff members who had not vacated their posts. The Administration believes that the expenditure pattern would be distorted, especially in regard to distinguishing between staff costs for core/permanent and temporary functions, if the current practice were discontinued.
- 116. In our opinion, however, there is no material difference between temporary personnel replacing staff members on non-vacant posts as against vacant posts, since in both cases the assignment is temporary. Such temporary assistance costs should be represented as such in the budget and in the financial statements. By charging costs for temporary assistance to the budget line for established posts, these costs are not revealed to the extent that they are actually incurred. The Administration is therefore in a position to allocate more resources to temporary assistance than is allowed for in the approved budget.

Cash and investment management

- 117. The Board reviewed the cash and investment management of the Administration in a comprehensive manner. The UNDP guidelines on this subject were in the process of being redrafted at the time. With respect to the revision of the guidelines, the Board made several suggestions. In general, the Administration concurred with the recommendations, which related to the following subjects:
- (a) The UNDP investments and currency management guidelines do not provide for means such as matching the availability and utilization of different currencies (netting), leading (disposing) or lagging (withholding) of currencies. By using these means exchange risks could be minimized. Accordingly it was proposed that these procedures be written into the guidelines as a requirement. The Administration agreed and incorporated the netting principle into its draft of new guidelines. It explicitly stated that this was seen as a requirement, but that the principle had already been practised before. At our request, the Administration also confirmed that the investment of convertible currencies was not an independent objective of the utilization of funds;
- (b) So far, the guidelines stipulate that a currency should not be sold and repurchased. We recommended that the guidelines contain a mandate for currencies to be sold to the extent that they are not needed. The draft guidelines now authorize the Treasury Section accordingly. In addition, the Administration confirmed that the authorization provided by the new guidelines would be used, indicating that the timing of such sales would be guided by market trend analyses and reviews:
- (c) We observed that, since 1979, the "Operational reserve" is held with 50 per cent United States dollars and 50 per cent non-United States dollars.

However, the United States dollar accounts for only approximately 45 per cent of expenditures, currencies of developing countries, for approximately 39 per cent, and those of developed countries other than the United States dollar, for approximately 16 per cent. This disbursement profile has remained the same for the past five years. The ratio between United States-dollar and non-United States dollar holdings should be adjusted so as to reflect the present disbursement profile of UNDP as far as United States dollars and the currencies of developed countries are concerned. Thus, the number of exchange transactions and the exchange risk involved could be reduced. The Administration stated that, in the revised cash management guidelines, provision had been made for a review of the composition of the operational reserve in terms of currencies to be included. The recommendation of the Board had been noted and would be discussed with the Investment Committee in due course;

- (d) In 1987 and 1988, UNDP obtained bids in 70 to 80 per cent of all currency transactions. That percentage increased to almost 90 per cent during the period from January to September 1989. In our view, bidding is a fundamental requirement for exchange transactions and, therefore, a waiver of bidding should be limited to exceptional cases. The guidelines should clearly specify the circumstances under which bidding may be foregone in order to restrict the margin for discretion. The Administration agreed with this recommendation and incorporated it into the draft quidelines;
- (e) UNDP currently deals with 70 banks for investment accounts and 68 banks for foreign exchange transactions. Therefore, it was recommended that the number of banks be reduced in order to provide a more economical and more competitive environment for all transactions. UNDP intends to decrease the number of banks used for investment accounts;
- (f) The current investment and currency management guidelines require, inter alia, that investments placed with individual banks be restricted to a limit of $US 25 million (or equivalent currency). However, a significant increase in the UNDP budget has taken place since the guidelines were issued in 1985. We therefore recommended raising the ceiling accordingly in order to concentrate and rationalize the financial activities of UNDP and improve the environment for its transactions. The Administration assured us that the final version of the new guidelines would incorporate a significant increase in the authorized level of funds to be placed with creditworthy banks;
- (g) According to the current guidelines, short-term maturities must be sufficient to cover a minimum of three months' operational requirements. Since major donor countries have stabilized the terms for paying their contributions and the disbursement profile has remained about the same in the past five years, UNDP is able to calculate revenue and expenses very accurately. With respect to this development and the excess of regularly paid contributions over disbursements in the same local currency, the guidelines curtail management flexibility more than is considered necessary. We therefore recommended that the guidelines be revised so as to make it the responsibility of the Treasury to judge the appropriateness of the terms of maturity. UNDP agreed to this proposal, and the draft guidelines allow for more flexibility, as suggested;
- (h) An overview of the month-end availability and utilization of currencies for the period from January to October 1989 revealed call account balances (United States dollars and United States-dollar equivalents) from $US 70.2 million to $US 152.2 million, averaging at $US 107.1 million. The anticipated expenditure for each month is $US 100 million. For five months, the call account balances exceeded the monthly expenditures. In addition, UNDP keeps time deposits amounting to more than $US 1 billion. We therefore recommended shifting the excess funds to time deposits. Should short-term interest rates come close to overnight rates, it might prove even more efficient to keep excess amounts of funds in longer-term deposits. The new guidelines should enable management to prevent an undesirable accumulation of funds on call accounts. The Administration agreed with the Board's recommendation that the level of balances held in interest-bearing call accounts be reduced. It was, however, noted that such accounts were often used to hold funds pending sale or investment and, as such, might occasionally reach higher levels. We expect that a considerable reduction of the level of balances in call accounts will materialize.

Liquidity position of UNDP

118. Our audit included a review of the liquidity position of UNDP as of 31 December 1989. The investment portfolio of UNDP is aged as follows:

	Thousands of United States dollars	Percentage
Maturity less than half a year	924 187	81
Maturity less than one year	101 174	9
Maturity more than one year	113 750	10
	1 139 111	100

The total investments cover disbursements of approximately eight to nine months, not taking into consideration income received during that period. In order to ensure consistent interest income and avoid unplannable variances in interest ratios, the maturity of investments should be significantly increased.

119. The Administration agreed to a shift to longer-term maturities to the extent that it was consistent with the cash requirements of the organization and to the benefit of UNDP. The total of investments cited included funds held for reserves and subsidiary programmes totalling $US 499.1 million. Consequently, the balance held for general resources of $US 640.0 million would cover approximately five months of disbursements, not taking into consideration income received during that period. Although it was reasonable to take into account the ongoing nature of contribution income, the timing of such contributions might be subject to considerable variation.

Trust funds and sub-trust funds

General developments

120. UNDP currently manages 62 trust funds. Given the fact that 19 of these were established by the Administrator in 1989 (see DP/1990/68 of 13 March 1990), a considerable increase is to be recorded. Apart from the trust funds, UNDP had to manage a total of 51 sub-trust funds. This was an increase of five funds, since nine new sub-trust funds were established during the year 1989 and four existing funds were terminated as against the year 1988.

- 121. In this respect, it should be noted that each additionally established trust fund or sub-trust fund implies an increase in the administrative work-load. Given the current number of 113 trust funds and sub-trust funds, it can easily be seen that the overall impact might be considerable, particularly when taking into consideration that almost one third of the total number of trust funds, as well as nearly one fifth of the number of sub-trust funds, were established during the year 1989 alone, so that a further sharp increase in the total number may be expected for future years.
- 122. The Administration explained that the trust fund modality was authorized by the Governing Council to enable donors to fund specific activities or projects in co-operation with recipient Governments. The costs for the administrative work-load involved were offset by increasing the support cost rate. The Administration indicated that all trust funds are established at the request of Governments and that UNDP would have difficulty in rejecting the additional resources.
- 123. The Board recognizes that there might be some difficulty on the part of UNDP to turn down funds that are offered to the organization as described. It should, however, be seen that the increase in the number of funds will have an adverse effect as far as the efficiency of management is concerned. It is obvious that the same amount of resources could be managed much more efficiently if it were not split up into a large number of mostly small, but separately established, administered and phased-out funds. This assessment is not affected by the fact that, according to the Administration's comments, the administrative costs involved are recovered through an increase in the support cost rate. On the contrary, this illustrates that the total share of expenditure allocated to cover operating costs, as against project costs, is rising.

Cash and investment management of trust funds

- 124. An analysis of financial statements VI to XXVI for trust funds revealed that there are several trust funds with only small amounts of cash and of investments (ranging between nil and $US 5 million). All these funds are managed separately.
- 125. The Board recommended co-ordinating transactions on a day-by-day basis in order to reach a better scale of efficiency. Furthermore, the revised UNDP cash and investment management guidelines should also be applied to the investment of funds.
- 126. The Administration pointed out that, given the limited number of investment transactions involved in managing these funds, it was felt that a significant increase in efficiency could not be obtained in this way. Nevertheless, a review of the overall impact of such a co-ordination effort would be undertaken.
- 127. Even though the effects of the suggested measures, as far as efficiency is concerned, would necessarily be limited, since separate custody of the funds would have to be maintained, we are of the opinion that every effort should be made to streamline the management of trust funds to the extent possible to nomewhat reduce the adverse effects of having to deal with a large number of funds, as described in paragraphs 129 to 132 below.

Liquidity of major trust funds

128. Out of the total number of 62 trust funds currently managed by UNDP, we reviewed the 11 largest funds, having an income of $US 119 million and expenditures of $US 95 million in the year 1989. We found that the balances of the largest trust funds revealed a sustained, partly high, liquidity. The ratio of total net assets (balances as at 31 December 1989) to the expenditures of the year 1989 ranged between 1.6 and 4.6 for eight trust funds. Only the United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development had a ratio of below 1.0 (0.8); the Pérez-Guerrero Trust Fund had a ratio of as much as 22.07. These judgements are based on the "Unspent allocations" as shown in the corresponding statements. We reserve reviewing the reasons for, and the value of, these payable allocations until later.

Payment of contributions for sub-trust funds

- 129. As reported previously by the Board, a number of sub-trust funds were in deficit. At the end of 1989, the situation had only slightly improved. The number of sub-trust funds in deficit had decreased from eight to six, the accumulated negative balance amounting to $US 3,566,336, showing a minor reduction of $US 78,778 as against the 31 December 1988 balance. The three trust funds affected by this were the United Nations Capital Development Fund (three sub-trust funds), the United Nations Trust Fund for Sudano-Sahelian Activities (one sub-trust fund), and the United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development (two sub-trust funds). The deficits recorded resulted from the fact that some donors were not meeting their commitments. In two cases, the commitments had already been entered into in 1988 or in prior years.
- 130. UNDP financial regulation 5.2 and financial rule 105.4 stipulate that trust funds shall be accepted only on a fully funded basis and that UNDP shall enter into commitments only when it has received funds sufficient for financing such commitments from the donor. This should also apply to sub-trust funds. Therefore, the Administration should negotiate with the Governments concerned, inducing them to fulfill their commitments and to pay their contributions on a timely basis in the future.
- 131. The Administration explained that negotiations with non-paying donors had been ongoing. In one case, the problem had been identified in the autumn of 1989, but, after negotiations, assurances were received that this was temporary and that outstanding contributions would be forthcoming. Therefore, the Administrator felt it inappropriate to stop project activities with the inherent cost implications and resultant impact on recipient Governments. In the first quarter of 1990, all outstanding amounts had been paid and some projects had been phased down.
- 132. We take note of the progress that has been made and suggest that the Administration continue its efforts to resolve similar problems in other cases as well.

Closure of sub-trust funds

133. We observed that there were 17 sub-trust funds without any expenditure in 1989; in 10 cases, there had also been no expenditure in 1988. Moreover, 16 of the above-mentioned sub-trust funds had not received any income in 1989. The sub-trust funds concerned belonged to the following trust funds: United Nations Capital

- Development Fund (8), United Nations Trust Fund for Sudano-Sahelian Activities (6), United Nations Fund for Science and Technology for Development (2), United Nations Volunteers programme (1).
- 134. The Board recommended closing all those sub-trust funds without income or expenditure. Since each sub-trust fund was established to implement just one project, the instructions laid down in the Programme and Projects Manual, stating that all projects are to be financially completed within 12 months after the month in which they are operationally completed, should also be taken into consideration.
- 135. According to the Administration, the trust funds involved have been advised that the sub-trust funds should be closed and the balance of resources returned to the donors or transferred to other activities. It was found that such negotiations tend to take time, in some cases, as much as two years. In addition, it was pointed out that all sub-trust funds of the United Nations Capital Development Fund were joint financing arrangements between the main Fund and the sub-trust fund. As such, it was not considered prudent to close the sub-trust fund financed portion of the project until the general resource portion was operationally complete.
- 136. We note that action is being taken and expect that the Administration will continue its efforts to close all 17 sub-trust funds mentioned above. In particular, cases in which the respective donors have not yet covered a deficit incurred in project implementation will need to be followed up.

Personal responsibility and financial liability of UNDP officials

UNDP administrative instructions issued in implementation of financial rule 103.2

- 137. Pursuant to paragraph 24 of General Assembly resolution 44/183 of 19 December 1989, the Board reviewed the administrative instructions issued in implementation of UNDP financial rule 103.2 as far as its adequacy and efficacy are concerned.
- 138. Financial rule 103.2 corresponds to United Nations financial rule 114.1 and states that all UNDP officials are personally responsible for the regularity of actions taken in the course of their official duties and that they may be held financially liable for the consequences of irregular actions. This principle of personal responsibility is reiterated in conjunction with the write-off of losses of cash, accounts receivable and notes receivable that are deemed to be irrecoverable (financial regulation 14.4, rule 114.15). It is stipulated that a full investigation has to take place, which shall in each case fix the responsibility, if any, attaching to any official of UNDP for the loss. Such official may be required to reimburse the loss, either partially or in full.
- 139. Pursuant to the above-mentioned financial rules, administrative instructions have been included in the Finance Manual and in the Personnel Manual, as well as in a circular of 3 October 1988 (UNDP/ADM/87/77/Rev.3). In the Finance Manual (sect. 302, sub-sect. 3.0), as well as in the circular, which deals with the responsibilities of certifying officers, financial rule 103.2 is accurately repeated and thus reiterated.
- 140. In sections 20104 and 30103 of the Personnel Manual for locally and internationally recruited staff, respectively, it is laid down that:

- "A staff member may be required to reimburse UNDP either partially or in full for any financial loss suffered by UNDP as a result of his negligence or violation of any regulation, rule or administrative instruction."
- 141. Other sections of the Personnel Manual deal with the types of action that may be taken in the event that a staff member does not conform to the standards expected (e.g. disciplinary action), but any further, more detailed instructions to keep staff members aware of their responsibilities and give them a clearer picture, for instance, of what might be considered a case of negligence, have not been issued so far.
- 142. The Administration acknowledged that it would be useful to remind staff of their personal responsibility and accountability and emphasized that this issue was highlighted in various training courses given by the Divisions of Finance and Personnel, in particular those provided to certifying officers. In addition, the Administration would issue a circular in this regard. However, it was believed that more detailed instructions could not be provided since it was not possible to define, or give examples of, negligence covering all cases.
- 143. The Board is of the opinion that it is important to address not only certifying officers, but all staff members, and to illustrate the practical demands and repercussions of financial rule 103.2 in a clearer manner. Simply to repeat this provision in another circular is not deemed sufficient. In this respect, it has to be pointed out that it would certainly be neither necessary nor feasible to cover all conceivable cases of negligence or personal liability in general by giving examples, but that it should be outlined more plainly what circumstances would constitute a case of personal liability.

Personal liability in cases of write-off

- 144. In order to assess the adequacy and efficacy of the provisions enacted by the Administration we reviewed the cases of write-offs (cash and receivables) for the last two years. We found that in none of the 27 cases recorded in 1988 and 1989 was a UNDP official held personally responsible. Moreover, the documentation supporting the requests for the authorization to write-off did not even indicate in any of the cases reviewed that personal responsibility had been considered during the investigation, as stipulated by financial rule 114.15 (b), although it was intimated in many cases that the losses might be the result of negligence.
- 145. We are of the opinion that the matter of personal responsibility of staff members needs to be more closely examined in the future to encourage their compliance with rules and instructions as well as diligence in the fulfilment of their duties. In this respect, it would seem helpful if instructions, as mentioned above, could be issued to keep staff members aware of the provisions of the Financial Rules.
- 146. The Administration maintained that each item written off by UNDP was carefully reviewed for a determination of personal responsibility. In future, a specific notation would be included in the files to document that this question had been investigated.
- 147. We take note of the Administration's statement that personal accountability had been reviewed in each case of write-off. Since this cannot be verified for the cases in the past, we would appreciate appropriate documentation in the future that would also reveal the reasons for refraining from claiming for compensation.

Action in cases of fraud

- 148. Apart from the write-offs, we reviewed the cases of fraud or presumptive fraud that were reported between 1984 and 1989. A total of 83 cases were recorded and the amount of money involved totalled almost $US 1.1 million. Since recovery action is still pending in several (16) cases (among them one case involving $US 368,000), the loss to UNDP can only be estimated. It may be anywhere between $US 40,000 and almost $US 500,000. In 56 cases, there were either no financial implications, or the funds could be recovered fully by UNDP. Full or partial write-offs took place only in a few (11) cases.
- 149. As for disciplinary or similar action (such as issuing a written reprimand), it is to be noted that active UNDP staff members were involved in only 68 of the incidents reported. In 46 cases some action was taken, whereas in 22 cases, a decision is still pending. A total of 19 staff members were dismissed (mostly summarily dismissed for serious misconduct), and another 14 employees were separated without dismissal. Criminal proceedings took place in only four cases, three of them concerning staff members.
- 150. The Board is certainly not in a position to assess the personal responsibility of the staff members involved, as this is exclusively within the discretion of the Administration. However, more consistency in this assessment is deemed desirable, in particular, regarding dismissals as against other forms of separation or other action taken. In our view, consistency in this respect is of special importance to attain some effect of deterrence, since in the vast majority of cases UNDP refrains from legal proceedings of any kind. This renunciation of legal proceedings is certainly a matter of policy, yet the Administration should be fully aware that this policy is likely to have an adverse effect as far as general deterrence is concerned. In our view, it would be important to create an environment that would discourage the perpetration of fraud. It should also be taken into consideration that staff members in the United Nations system are, in this respect, privileged as compared to other citizens.
- 151. In this regard, it was pointed out by the Administration that the question of whether to pursue legal action in local courts was evaluated on a case-by-case basis and that it was at the discretion of the Secretary-General to determine whether it was in the interest of the Organization to pursue criminal proceedings. In most cases, either recovery was effected, or the amounts in question were considered too small for legal action to be regarded as practical or cost-effective.
- 152. The Administration's reply does not, in our view, give due consideration to the aspect of general deterrence, which is our major concern. As pointed out, it would be of particular importance to create an environment that is adverse to the perpetration of fraud. One means would be to strive for more consistency in the sanctions imposed. Another aspect of general deterrence would be to take legal action of some kind. In this respect, we are of the opinion that the amount involved in the case under consideration and whether or not it has been recovered, or the cost-effectiveness of the action with regard to the single case in question only, should not be the exclusive criteria of decision. An evaluation on a case-by-case basis only is bound to neglect the overall effects of that decision.

Personnel management

Functional title system

- 153. UNDP uses more than 1,300 functional titles for its staff in the Professional and L (holders of contracts under the 200 series Staff Rules in the Professional level) categories. This is due to a change in UNDP appointment guidelines, which has led to a new set of titles, thereby inflating their number. Consequently, titles are no longer attached to grades and the variety of titles is likely to impair the clarity and efficiency of personnel management.
- 154. We suggested reviewing the UNDP title system with the objective of substantially reducing the number of functional titles. This could be achieved by (a) adhering to United Nations Staff Rules as a general principle and
- (b) restricting the authorization of titles deviating from the United Nations system to cases where no equivalent is available. We also recommended that an effort be made to match titles and grades.
- 155. The Administration agreed with our observation and informed us that the Division of Personnel was in the process of carrying out a review aimed at the establishment of a uniform system. It explained that the number of titles might have been somewhat inflated owing to duplications resulting from computer tabulations of abbreviations of the same title.
- 156. We also observed that the number of functional titles for staff in the General Service category has increased considerably in recent years. A comparison between the UNDP administrative instructions and the functional titles actually applied revealed that, in using titles that should be discontinued and unit descriptors that cannot be regarded as essential UNDP does not fully comply with its own rules, thereby unnecessarily inflating the number of titles as compared to United Nations Staff Rules. In particular, the need for using unit descriptors has not been explained sufficiently. In our view, the advantages of a clear structure of the functional title system outweigh any illustrative effects the use of descriptors may have. Therefore, the General Service-level functional titles should be included in a review of the title system.
- 157. The Administration shared our concerns and stated that it had commenced work on an appropriate functional title structure that would eliminate duplication or non-essential unit descriptors and/or titles.

Job classifications

- 158. Our review of UNDP job classifications revealed a number of cases where they have either not been updated for several years or not been drawn up at all. In particular, job classifications are missing in the recently established Inter-agency Procurement Services Unit at Copenhagen.
- 159. The Administration explained that the Division of Personnel is currently not adequately staffed to manage a comprehensive professional job classification system. In the future, it would give due consideration to meeting the requirements of this function.

160. Since job classifications are an important means of keeping personnel management transparent and to provide for adequate staffing, it should be a matter of major concern for management. Accordingly, it is within its responsibility to reallocate resources as needed.

Personnel appointment procedures

- 161. According to UNDP Personnel Manual regulations, internationally recruited Professional staff members, as well as locally recruited General Service staff members, appointed to serve on established posts, are required to serve a minimum period of four years on fixed-term appointments prior to being eligible for consideration by the relevant appointment and promotion bodies for conversion to probationary appointment, normally of six months' duration, after which the permanent appointment is granted. Whereas 8,788 staff members of both categories were permanently appointed between June 1986 and June 1989, there was no instance recorded in which a probationary appointment was not converted into a permanent appointment.
- 162. Therefore, there is no evident need for having a probationary appointment in addition to four years of fixed-term contracts. Management should be in a position to assess the performance of staff members without a probationary period that is not likely to reveal new findings. Consequently, we recommended that the Administration either:
- (a) Forego an additional probationary period after a fixed-term appointment of specified duration, thereby also aiming at a reduction in the number of fixed-term contracts; or
- (b) Apply United Nations staff rules 104.12 (a) and 104.13 (a), granting permanent appointments without prior fixed-term appointments.
- 163. The Administration agreed that the contractual status of UNDP staff members should be simplified, thereby being in favour of the alternative that would eliminate the requisite period of service under propationary appointments prior to granting permanent appointments. There are still several options under review, but it is expected that a new policy will be implemented in July 1990.

Special Service Agreements

- 164. According to the UNDP Personnel Manual, Special Service Agreements are used to engage the services of part-time workers only. During one of our field audits, we found, however, that they are used to employ staff where no other contractual means seemed appropriate. In the cases reported, Special Service Agreements were granted to full-time workers who could not (then) be employed as regular staff members. The 300 Series of the United Nations Staff Rules would not have been applicable either in cases where the period of service exceeded six consecutive months. Further, as indicated by the title of these Staff Rules, the 300 Series predominantly aim at meeting special needs, such as for conferences.
- 165. Apart from the fact that the field office concerned tried to circumvent existing rules, we are of the opinion that the issue is a more general one, since there is no adequate contractual device at hand to engage the services of contractors for a limited amount of time and without a career perspective. Currently, the benefits otherwise related to service in the United Nations, such as allowances, social security and annual leave are withheld from the incumbents, even though they basically perform the same duties as staff members, at times, for several years. We believe that there is a strong need to review the traditional system of contracts, which has not been adjusted so far to fit current demands for flexibility. This is also part of the problem related to the hiring of consultants.

- 166. For the time being, it should, however, be ensured that the United Nations Staff Rules are complied with at field office level.
- 167. The Administration agreed with our observation that there is no adequate contractual device at hand for hiring short-term staff and has commenced a review of the contractual system in UNDP with a view to responding to the needs of a changing labour market. With respect to monitoring the compliance with United Nations Staff Rules, it was pointed out that local personnel officers would be trained intensively and that monitoring visits of personnel officers to field offices, as well as internal audits, would be undertaken.
- 168. Since we believe that the tendency to bypass existing rules will prevail as long as there is no adequate contractual device to be used, we consider the development of a new system a matter of urgency and will keep the subject under review.

Consultants

- 169. In its report for the year ended 31 December 1988, $\frac{1}{2}$ the Board observed that, in contradiction to the quidelines:
- (a) Consultants are often engaged for long periods of time (instead of for temporary needs);
- (b) Consultants are hired in cases where the work could have been done by regular staff members;
 - (c) No adequate evaluation of consultants is carried out;
- (d) The Division of Personnel plays only a formal role in the recruitment of consultants.
- 170. These findings have now been confirmed in an interim report prepared by two external consultants. However, except for the hiring of a Consultancy Manager, decisions to improve the situation have not yet been made.
- 171. As already emphasized with regard to the issue of Special Service Agreements (paras. 164 to 168 refers), the Board considers it a necessity to develop an up-to-date strategy for temporary employment, considering the fact that over one half of the human resources hired by headquarters processes are temporary employees. Apart from the problems mentioned in the consultants' report that are awaiting adequate solution, it is considered to be of special importance that:

^{1/} Official Records of the General Assembly, Forty-fourth Session, Supplement No. 5A (A/44/5/Add.1).

- (a) The employment of consultants or other temporary staff does not lead to bypassing the UNDP staffing table by hiring additional manpower to deal with the scheduled tasks of headquarters units;
- (b) New responsibilities of the Administration that can be expected to last for more than a specified short period of time not be dealt with by short-term employees, since apart from being a matter of fairness regarding the employees concerned this would eventually amount to a circumvention of staffing tables;
- (c) The units hiring temporary assistance be required to report regularly those employees and the respective sources of funding (administrative budget, extrabudgetary resources, project funds) as a prerequisite to monitoring the staffing situation of each unit and the overall situation at headquarters, as well as recent developments;
- (d) The new guidelines clearly outline the responsibilities of the units concerned, and in particular those of the Division of Personnel.
- 172. In its reply, the Administration quoted from the observations of the Administrator on the 1988 report of the Board of Auditors concerning paragraph 106, as follows:

"The principle guiding the use of consultants is that they are used to bring in special expertise for periods less than six months. From time to time, however, incremental work-loads or peak pressures of work necessitate recruitment of consultants to assist staff in operational functions.

"Owing to the dynamic nature of UNDP, situations also arise where, at the time of recruitment, the exact duration of the assignment cannot be accurately estimated, therefore, leading to an eventual longer duration.

"The Administration does not agree with the statement that no evaluation of consultants is carried out. The Division of Personnel requires each user to rate the satisfactoriness of each consultant at the end of the project or assignment. In some instances, consultants have been rated unsatisfactory and therefore these names were deleted from the central roster for consultants.

"The appointment of a consultancy manager is under consideration to further streamline the consultancy service." 2/

In addition, the Administration emphasized that, apart from the hiring of a consultancy manager, as mentioned above, the Division of Personnel did not have the resources to implement the improvements suggested, although they were believed to be necessary.

173. In view of the results of the study carried out by the external consultants, we cannot share the Administration's opinion as reiterated by repeating its previous statement. The report reveals that only a small part (about 5 per cent) of all temporary staff is hired as recognized experts providing advice and opinion, whereas about the same percentage will provide professional services, such as project implementation and internal assistance of some kind, thereby carrying out tasks of staff members. Moreover, the largest share of all temporary staff is employed as development generalists, involved in project or programme design and evaluation, or project implementation. With regard to performance assessments, the report confirms that adherence to evaluation requirements is irregular in terms of evaluations actually submitted, and that those that are submitted are virtually useless in terms of providing objective evaluation and, therefore, guidance as to whether to hire the person again.

174. Considering the extent to which consultants and other temporary assistance staff are hired by UNDP, we still regard it as a matter of urgency to commence implementation of our recommendation, as outlined in paragraph 171 above.

Project management

Financial completion of projects

- 175. According to the Programme and Projects Manual, all projects are to be financially completed within 12 months after the month in which they have been operationally completed. It was found, however, that this requirement has not always been complied with by the Office for Project Services. A comparison of the print-out listing for field work completed in 1987 with the 1988 record of financially completed projects revealed that at least 30 major operationally completed projects had not been completed financially so far.
- 176. The Administration agreed with these findings and pointed out that the necessity to complete all outstanding revisions was appreciated. The Office for Project Services intends to launch a comprehensive review of all completed projects in 1990 and will take the necessary steps to issue the final project revisions. In order to enhance its control over project budgets in general, a Budget Control and Financial Analysis Section has recently been established within the Office.
- 177. Since timely financial completion is considered a prerequisite for effective project management, and problems similar to those reported are likely to occur in the future, the action already taken or still planned is imperative.

Project monitoring, reporting and evaluation

- 178. In reviewing a random sample of files from the Office for Project Services, we found that the requirements for project monitoring, reporting and evaluation, as stipulated in the Programme and Projects Manual, are not always adhered to. For instance, we observed that fixed-term reports were missing in a considerable number of cases. Therefore, no analysis and utilization of those reports could take place in order to provide the Administration with a realistic view of actual project implementation as compared to the Country Programme Management Plan. Moreover, when examining a sample of 30 project files of the Office for Project Services, we found that, in 7 out of those 30 projects, important documentation was missing. Neither project performance evaluation reports nor tripartite review reports were to be found in the files. In addition, the terminal assessments were lacking.
- 179. Since all these omissions are material and substantive for the process of project monitoring and evaluation, we recommended that the files should be completed wherever feasible and reasonable at this point. For future cases, the development of a more consistent approach to project monitoring seems to be indispensable. Up to now, it has been left to the discretion of the officer in charge how to ensure that the guidelines are complied with. As this approach has proved to be insufficient in a considerable number of cases, it was, for example, suggested that more use be made of technical devices, such as electronic data-processing. In addition, projects should be formulated more carefully, in particular, with regard to programme support projects, which create specific problems in this field, since — as explained by management — their project documents tend to be vague, with the result that performance cannot be measured clearly and field offices are inclined to give low priority to reporting requirements.

- 180. The Administration concurred that the lack of compliance with UNDP monitoring and reporting requirements is a matter of concern. In order to remedy the situation, field offices would be consulted by the Office for Project Services with a view to ensuring better compliance. As for programme support projects, the possibility of adapting the guidelines to suit the particular features of this category of projects and a change of current procedures was taken into consideration by UNDP. The Administration would also pursue the Board's suggestion for greater care in project formulation. In the mean time, following the Board's recommendation, the Office for Project Services was continuing to encourage the use of computers by its staff to enhance the monitoring capacity of the individual project management officer.
- 181. The success of the measures initiated will have to be evaluated at a later stage. We would, however, appreciate being kept informed about any amendments to the current guidelines in respect of monitoring or reporting requirements.

Reporting and evaluation quidelines

- 182. According to the present guidelines, a terminal tripartite review should be made for every project in the last month of project operations, in order to consider the implementation of the project as a whole, as well as the draft terminal report. However, such a terminal report is not required in every case. The parties concerned can agree in advance that other documentation generated by the project would serve the same purpose as the terminal report.
- 183. In our opinion, the terminal report is of paramount importance in displaying the principal results of the project and in summarizing the experience gathered from project implementation. It is also a prerequisite for the preparation of a terminal assessment. Therefore the decision as to whether or not such a report is prepared should not be left to the discretion of the parties concerned, in particular, since we observed that, in many similar cases, no other documentation could be found in the sample of files we reviewed. Moreover, in looking at the difficulties that the implementation of the guidelines on reporting and evaluation seems to generate (see para. 178), we recommended that they be streamlined and simplified and that a table containing the most relevant information (prerequisites, deadlines) and displaying it in a clear manner be provided for the users of the Programme and Projects Manual.
- 184. The Administration agreed with our remarks and gave assurances that the new guidelines for terminal reporting, which are in the process of being drafted, would clearly determine when a full terminal report was required. As suggested by the Board, the new guidelines would also include a summary table with the most relevant information for reporting and evaluation purposes. It was also pointed out that the implementation of the guidelines was kept under continuous review and that the difficulties reported were addressed and would be further pursued.

185. While acknowledging the efforts that have been made so far, we expect that the revision of the guidelines will enhance clarity about the requirements for terminal reporting. It is still left to be seen, however, whether the special problems related to the Office for Project Services and programme support projects will be solved in the near future.

Electronic data processing

186. Following up on observations made in previous audit reports, we reviewed the progress that had been made concerning the following issues:

- (a) Utilization of an integrated information system by the Office for Project Services;
 - (b) Utilization of an integrated financial information system;
- (c) Outlining of an overall long-term strategy in electronic data-processing planning.

187. We were informed that:

- (a) Plans for meeting short-term project financial requirements of the Office for Project Services had either been implemented or were undergoing acceptance testing, whereas a number of operational problems were still awaiting solution and plans for further enhancements to the system had not yet been put into effect. Other more long-term functions envisaged in the integrated information system were supposed to be included in the Financial Systems Review Project;
- (b) The Financial Systems Review Project itself had drawn up detailed requirement specifications for an integrated financial information system that would be used to evaluate requirements presently being prepared by the United Nations to ascertain the feasibility of the United Nations and UNDP developing a common system. In addition, it was agreed to expand the Financial Systems Review Project considerably;
- (c) A number of activities had been initiated to update appropriately the existing strategic plan for information systems during the next biennium.
- 188. The Board stated that, whereas some progress could be noted in all fields, none of the objectives had been achieved so far. In particular, the development of a long-term strategy still seems to be impeded, owing to the fact that the users must first outline their needs in accordance with the organization's policy. In order to improve current and future planning processes, it is considered indispensable to provide the Division of Management Information Services with a clear picture of the demands that it is supposed to meet at the earliest possible stage.
- 189. The Administration pointed out that during 1989 the users, in conjunction with the Division of Management Information Services, had developed initial plans for a comprehensive management information system. The Administration intends for this process to continue and be improved during 1990, with the overall objective of providing the Division with the necessary inputs for developing a long-term strategy in 1991.

190. In due course, a review will be conducted of whether the Administration's plans have been implemented, as intended.

Procurement quidelines

- 191. When auditing procurement activities, we found that the instructions in the General Administration Manual do not comply with financial rule 114.23 (a). According to this rule, bidding for contracts involving commitments below $US 20,000 may be foregone "provided there has been an assessment of competitive quotations, based on conformity with specifications, delivery schedules and prices or comparative prices, where available". This reservation is missing in the Manual.
- 192. Moreover, we are of the opinion that the limit for purchases subject to bidding requirements should clearly be below $US 20,000. A general exception to bidding requirements to the extent stipulated would only be justified for items for which the Inter-agency Procurement Services Office procurement catalogues provide the most competitive prices and on the condition that the use of the catalogues is obligatory. The guidelines would have to be amended accordingly, especially since we could find no evidence during our audits in the field that the catalogues are being used, except for vehicles, where this is a requirement.
- 193. Furthermore, the instructions provided in the General Administration Manual should not only reiterate the principles already mentioned in the Financial Rules, such as efficiency and economy, but should also provide the user with more concrete quidance on how to achieve them. For instance, a review of the procurement activities in field offices suggested that the staff was quite unaware of the fact that it is more efficient to combine several purchase orders. We therefore recommended improving the guidelines in such a way as to stipulate explicitly that (a) standard supplies should be purchased in bulk and that (b) current and foreseeable procurements and purchases of similar items or items procured from the same source should be combined.
- 194. The Administration pointed out that action had already been taken to revise the General Administration Manual to reflect the Financial Rules and to give field offices clearer procedures and more detailed advice on procurement activities. It is expected that the draft will soon be finalized. It was further explained that the Administrator took into account the effects of inflation, saving staff time, simplification of procedures and his desire to delegate further responsibility to field offices, when he increased the limit up to which formal invitations to bid or requests for proposals are not required, from $US 10,000 to $US 20,000.
- 195. Although we still believe that the limit was risen too sharply, we consider the measures initiated to bring the General Administration Manual in line with the Financial Rules of UNDP as a first step and a prerequisite to achieve a higher degree of regularity and competition in procurement activities. The practical repercussions of the amendments will have to be closely observed by the Administration. Our recommendation concerning more practical advice as to how to enhance efficiency in procurement has not yet been incorporated into the draft guidelines.

Cases of fraud and presumptive fraud in 1989

196. The Board was informed of nine cases of fraud in 1989. In four cases, there is no indication that a UNDP staff member was involved. In most cases, the loss incurred by UNDP was small or could be recovered by way of salary deductions or refunds from banks. In some cases the recovery is still pending. As for the general aspects of fraud cases, we refer to paragraphs 148 to 152 above.

Comments on matters dealt with in the previous year's report

197. Those changes introduced in 1989 which comply with recommendations contained in the previous year's report have been reported in the appropriate heading in the present report, where considered necessary.

III. AUDIT OPINION

We have examined the following appended financial statements, numbered I to XXVII, properly identified, and the relevant schedules of the United Nations Development Programme for the financial period ended 31 December 1989. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of the accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances, except as explained in paragraphs 59 and 60 of our report.

In our opinion, except for programme expenditure and programme support costs expenditure, which are not supported by adequate audit evidence, the financial statements present fairly the financial position of the organization as at the end of the period and the results of its operations for the period then ended.

The financial statements were prepared in accordance with the stated accounting policies, which were applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding financial period.

As described in paragraph 96 in our report, stated accounting policies differ in some respects from generally accepted accounting principles.

Transactions were in accordance with the Financial Regulations and legislative authority.

NOTES TO THE FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Note 1. Summary of significant accounting policies

The financial statements reflect the application of the following significant accounting policies:

(a) Income

Interest income is accrued as income in the year to which it relates. All other income is accounted for on a cash basis. Government contributions receivable for the current and prior years are shown as notes on the balance sheets of UNDP (statement II) and the trust funds (statements VI to XXVII). Contributions pledged for future years are reflected in detail in schedules 1 to 3 for UNDP, and in schedules 14 to 16 for trust funds administered by UNDP.

At its thirty-first session, the Governing Council authorized the establishment, with effect from 1 January 1985, of an accounting linkage between voluntary contributions (including contributions to voluntary programme costs), and contributions to local office costs in such a manner that contributions are first accounted for against any shortfall in contributions to local office costs. The total amount of $5,584,545, which was transferred from voluntary contributions (statement I) in respect to such linkage, is included in schedule 6 and shown in note 16.

(b) Expenditure

All expenditure of UNDP is accounted for on an accrual basis, except for that relating to staff entitlements and projects executed by Governments, which is accounted for on the basis of case disbursements only. Project expenditure includes unliquidated obligations raised by the executing agencies (other than Governments) and the following criteria are generally applied:

Experts and other project personnel	Costs relating to the period of contractual service between 1 January and 31 December of the current year;
Travel on official business	Costs of travel taking place in the current year and travel that commences before the end of the current year, but extends into the next year;

Subcontracts	Payments falling due in the current year according to the terms of the contract or payment schedule;
Pallowshins	Cost of the fallowship from the entiringto

 Fellowships	Cost of the fellowship from the anticipated
	date of commencement of study, or 1 January of the current year to completion of study, or 31 Deck Der of the current year, whichever is earlier;

Group training	full cost of any training activity held in
Group training	the current year, or beginning in the current year and ending in the next year;

Equipment

Full cost of contractual agreement or firm order placed with the supplier prior to the end of the current year up to the amount provided in the current year's budget;

Miscellaneous

Costs of events occurred (for example, hospitality), goods or services delivered or firm orders placed for delivery in the current year.

Commitments may be incurred in the current year against future years' budgets. These are recorded as forward commitments and reflected in a footnote to the statement of assets and liabilities (statement II).

Certain flexibility provisions may be applied to expenditure. In any given year, expenditure may exceed an approved project budget for that year by $20,000 or 4 per cent thereof, whichever is the higher, provided the executing agency does not incur overall expenditures for that year in excess of 2 per cent of the total allocations made to it. In addition, executing agencies are also authorized, for an experimental period for three years, beginning 1 July 1987, to record obligations in the current year up to 20 per cent of the project budget of the following year.

(c) Exchange rates

Voluntary contributions received from Governments are translated into United States dollars using the United Nations operational rate of exchange in effect on the date of payment.

Exchange adjustments of $499,753 arising from the receipt of contributions from Governments have been recorded as a reduction to these contributions, and are shown on statement I accordingly. All other exchange adjustments have been recorded as miscellaneous income (expenditure) and are shown in schedule 4.

For the purposes of accounting for assets, liabilities and transactions, and the maintenance of other financial records, other currencies are translated into United States dollars at the United Nations operational rate of exchange in effect on the date of the report or transaction.

In the light of this, the investments totalling $1,139.1 million reported in the balance sheet and schedule 10 include the United States dollar equivalent of investments in other currencies using the United Nations operational rate of exchange in effect since 1 December 1989. At the United Nations operational rate of exchange in effect from 1 January 1990, which more closely reflects the market rate of exchange as at 31 December 1989, the value of these investments would amount to approximately $19.2 million more than that shown in the accounts.

(d) Capital expenditure

The full cost of non-expendable equipment is charged to the UNDP biennial budget or to the appropriate project in the year in which it is purchased. An inventory is maintained of all non-expendable equipment (defined as items of equipment valued at $500 or more per unit and with a serviceable life of at least five years, and items of equipment included in any special lists for which formal inventory records are maintained).

(e) Commitments of the Reserve for Field Accommodation

The total amount of loan commitments reflected in schedule 11 relates to Joan and investment agreements signed with the respective Governments for construction of offices and housing, as well as the authorized level of funds for the Household Appliances Rental Scheme and the repair and rehabilitation of housing.

(f) Change in the presentation of UNDP biennial budget

In accordance with Governing Council decision 89/55, the format of the UNDP biennial budget has been revised, resulting in a change in presentation with respect to UNDP programme support activities in schedule 6. In addition, the expenditures for the United Nations Volunteer programme are now reflected as UNDP programme support costs in statement I and schedule 5. For the biennium 1988-1989, these costs amounted to $9,857,300 for 1989 and $7,250,932 for 1988. Comparative balances for 1988 have been restated in statement I and statement V.

Note 2. Special Programme Resources

The Governing council, at its thirty-third session in June 1986, authorized the carry-over of the unspert balance of the special programme resources as at 31 December 1986 as an addition to the authorized level of the special programme resources for the fourth indicative planning figure (IPF) cycle (1987-1991). In accordance with this authorization, the unspent allocations of the special programme resources, amounting to $20,983,102 as at 31 December 1986, have been added to the resources approved for the fourth IPF cycle, amounting to $186,400,000. The status of this account as at 31 December 1989 was as follows:

Since UNDP accounts for its income from contributions on a cash basis, these amounts are not reflected in the financial statements.

The amounts in respect of cost-sharing and cash counterpart contributions are based on estimated expenditure for the year and will be adjusted in 1990 with regard to actual 1989 expenditure.

Note 7. Contingent liability - termination benefits

The contingent liability resulting from the termination benefits that UNDP will be required to pay to its staff members in future years is estimated, at 31 December 1989, to be $15,544,000 with respect to repatriation grants, and $2,299,000 with respect to termination indemnity.

Note 8. Estimated liability in respect of the air crash in the United Republic of Tanzania

On 5 December 1980, four UNDP staff members died in an air crash in the United Republic of Tanzania.
